The plant, which operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week, processes about 300,000 pounds of flour per day. And, at 300,000 pounds per day, the plant is operating at capacity.

Panhandle Milling: a success story

By Don Cooper

What began in 1965 as a grain elevator with less than a nine farmers has grown into a multi-million-dollar, interstate company, producing wholesale flour.

Harold Dillehay, one of the founders of Farmers Elevator near Dawn, later launched Panhandle Milling as a "value-added product."

Construction on Panhandle Milling began in 1985, with the plant beginning operations in August 1987.

The plant was designed and built by Oerim, an Italian company which is one of the world's largest and most experienced firms in the milling industry.

Randal Robinson, general manager of Panhandle Milling, said the company has reached the level where it has to consider possible expansion. Because of the design of the plant, he said, expansion can be handled without the added expense of construction of a new building.

When Oerim designed the plant, it left available space for the addition of new equipment within the current facility, Robinson said.

As a result, any expansion will involve installation of equipment, which itself will be expensive but the cost will be held down because of the available space, Robinson said.

The milling operation carries the area wheat industry to the next step. The wheat is purchased from the growers, stored and processed at the same site.

Although nearly all of the Panhandle Milling products are manufactured for the wholesale market, general manager Randal Robinson said the company is beginning to make some products for the retail market.

Now the voters will get their turn to talk.

After months of listening to political candidates hurl charges and countercharges, endure hours and hours of television campaign spots, the voters will go to the polls and decide who will be their representatives in Washington, Austin and in the county courthouse.

Polls will be open from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. Tuesday for the general election.

Although there have been several hotly contested statewide races, for Deaf Smith County voters, there are only three contested local races on the ballot.

Democrat Darla Hale and Republican Jean Schumacher are vying for the 222nd District Court Clerk's position, which is being vacated by long-time clerk Lola Faye Veazey; Democrat Sammy Gonzales Sr., who defeated incumbent Lupe Chavez in the March primary, will face Republican Steve Hoffman for the Precinct 2 commissioner's seat; and incumbent Johnny Latham, a Democrat, is challenged by Republican Jerry O'Connor for the Precinct 4 seat.

The race in the 19th Congressional District (which encompasses Deaf Smith County) has been low-key, with incumbent Larry Combest, a Lubbock Republican, the overwhelming favorite over Democratic challenger Sidney Blankenship, an Adrian environmental activist.

On the state ballot, incumbent George Bush, who is seeking to be the first governor re-elected to a four-year term and the first Republican to win a second consecutive term, is the overwhelming favorite over Garry Mauro, who vacated the land commissioner's office to challenge Bush.

Hotly contested statewide races pit Comptroller John Sharp, a Democrat, against Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry, a Republican, in the race to succeed retiring Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock.

Also, Democrat Jim Mattox is battling Republican John Cornyn, a former Supreme Court justice, in the race for attorney general, a post formerly held by Mattox; and former Secretary of State Tony Garza, a Republican, is challenging Democrat Joe B. Henderson for the railroad commissioner's seat being vacated by Carole Keeton Ryland.

the GOP nominee for the comptroller's office vacated by Sharp. Ryland's Democratic foe is Paul Hobby, son of former Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby.

Hereford students' art chosen for Christmas card selection

By Dianna F. Dandridge

Hereford Brand Staff Writer

Education takes many forms and comes from a variety of sources, including from drivers of big rigs. Like the varied methods and forms of education, recognition also comes from unusual sources.

Six local students, all now freshmen, will have their Christmas postcards displayed and sold all across the country, thanks to a program called Trucker Buddies.

The challenge began as a project to give students a reason and purpose for their letter-writing lessons.

Myrna Buckley, a former

Hereford Junior High English teacher, last year decided to get her classes involved with the Trucker Buddy program.

The program is designed to allow truck drivers, who are frequently away from home, the opportunity to participate in education.

Students write letters to members of the Trucker Buddy organization; in return the drivers write or send post cards about the places they have traveled and seen and the type of loads they carry.

"The students get more than just writing skills from these lessons," Buckley said. "They get geography, and math and a little bit of personal attention."

As part of the program, Trucker Buddies decided to hold a Christmas card contest among the students who they wrote to.

Students nationwide participated in a chance to display their art in the first edition of Trucker Buddy Christmas Card Collection, printed and distributed by Ramblin' Prose Card Co.

That's where six local students outdistanced all the others. Out of 15 cards chosen for the collection, five were chosen from Hereford, as well as one runnerup.

"The cards didn't have to Hereford students participating in the Trucker Buddies' art contest were Becky Fuller, Leticia Flores, Diego Hernandez, Armando Montano and Elisha Huseman. Another student, Maria Gonzales, no longer lives in the area.

Hereford getting ready for holiday

The annual retail Holiday Open House will be 1-5 p.m. Sunday.

The event is sponsored by the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Retail Association and participating merchants, including retail and floral. It is a way for area residents to get some ideas for Christmas gifts.

Also, the chamber will initiate its Holiday Winter Gala, which replaces the annual "Eat-Your-Heart-Out Nieman-Marcus" fun breakfast. The gala will be a dinner with a preview of retail offers, a raffle for Hereford Bucks and the Bullchup presentation.

For more information, read the Holiday section inside today's Brand.

Christmas Stocking Fund

Local charity organizers have begun making preparations for a new fast-approaching holiday season.

Volunteers for one of this community's most prominent charities, the Christmas Stocking Fund, have recently announced they are seeking volunteers for this year's drive.

The charity provides assistance to less fortunate community residents through food boxes, or through expense vouchers which help families defray utility, medical or clothing expenses.

CSF is composed of anonymous volunteers representing a broad cross-section of the community, and is not affiliated with another charitable organization or government entity.

Applications for assistance are thoroughly screened by an anonymous committee that administers CSF, and are typically prioritized to help the greatest number of needy children and the elderly.

Anyone who is interested in becoming a volunteer for this year's CSF effort may call The Hereford Brand at 364-2030, or stop by the Brand office at 313 N. Lee.

Book fairs

Tierra Blanca and Northwest Primary Schools will hold book fairs Monday-Friday in the school libraries. The fairs will run from 8:30 a.m.-4 p.m. Monday-Thursday and 8:30 a.m.-noon on Friday.

Book fairs offer students, parents and faculty a chance to find old favorites as well as recent works and encourages young readers to read every day. Everyone is invited.

Football Raffle

Tierra Blanca Primary School is raffling football memorabilia as part of a fund raiser being conducted by the students. Items being raffled include a football bearing autographs by members of the 1998 Hereford Whiteface football team, which will be given away at halftime at the Nov. 6 game against Caprock High at Whiteface Stadium. Raffle items are displayed at the school office.

City commission

The Hereford City Commission on Monday will conduct public hearings on zone change requests. The zone changes are requested for properties located at 227 Ave. A, South Main and Austin Road, and 509-519 E. Park Ave.

The commission will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the commission chamber at City Hall, 224 N. Lee.

Harold Dillahey (above) launched Panhandle Milling Co. more than a decade ago. Before the milling company began operations in 1987, Dillahey had been one of founders of Farmers Elevator, which purchases wheat from area growers. The elevator is adjacent to the mill. hours a day, seven days a week, processes about 300,000 pounds of flour per day. And, at 300,000 pounds per day, the plant is operating at capacity.

Panhandle Milling started out as a wholesale flour producer; however, Robinson said the company has added new equipment in the last few months that enables it to produce flour for a retail market.

"Right now, our only retail customer is Taylor & Sons (grocery stores) in Hereford and Canyon," Robinson said.

Panhandle Milling produces about a dozen different types of flour, ranging from tortilla flour, baker's patent, high gluten (manufactured from wheat brought in from the Dakotas), whole wheat, and flour for pizzas, bagels and pastries.

Although many of the 50-pound bags of flour moving out of Panhandle Milling's sprawling warehouse bear private labels, it's "all the same flour," Robinson said.

Among Panhandle Milling's customers is Arrowhead Mills of Hereford, which brings in certified organic wheat.

"Because we're certified in organic milling, we can store it, then mill it here," Robinson said.

In the past, flour was shipped to Arrowhead Mills in 50-pound bags. At the Arrowhead Mills plant, workers would transfer the flour into 5- and 10-pound bags for retail sales — a "very labor-intensive process," Robinson said.

Now, the flour will be shipped to Arrowhead Mills in the 5- and 10-pound bags.

Eighteen employees are used to operate the plant, which is heavily computerized and automated.

"Most of the labor force works days," Robinson said, with small staffs operating the other two shifts.

There is enough equipment in the mill to bag in eight hours what takes 24 hours to mill.

The milling and bagging process takes about three days, he said. When wheat is brought into the plant, it is cleaned and then tempered for 15-18 hours to make it soft enough for the milling.

Robinson said the new equipment, which also is of Italian manufacture, is enabling the company to diversify its operation, particularly in the direction of production of the smaller bags for retail sales.

"We do as much (milling) as possible during season, so we utilize the local growers," Robinson said, noting the base of Panhandle Milling's flour is local wheat, with grain brought in from Kansas and Oklahoma for blending.

Robinson said one reason for the growth enjoyed by Panhandle Milling has been the good rapport with local growers.

A native of the Dalhart area, Robinson said he knows how important it is to have good relations with the growers.

"So many niche markets have so many restrictions, we try to be the exception to the rule. We try not to dock growers for every little thing," he said, referring to some companies which dock growers for a variety of flaws.

One reason for this is because the company officials are residents of the area, so "when you go to town, you have to face everyone of them (growers)," he said.

Robinson said the company's growth has been mirrored by some of its customers, noting a tortilla manufacturer in Albuquerque originally purchased about three truckloads of flour, but over the years the company's tortilla production has expanded and it now purchases five to six loads per week.

To put it into perspective, Robinson said the company can produce 660,000 tortillas per truck load of flour, resulting in production of 3.3 million tortillas per week — "and they're selling them," he said.

"We've seen four to six companies grow with us," he said.

One reason for such success is refusal to speculate.

"If a customer wants to lock in a price, all I do is call up the day's Kansas City market and lock in the price," Robinson said. "We don't speculate."

Dillahey added another reason why the company he launched more than a decade ago is successful:

"I've surrounded myself with good people," he said.

News in brief

Republicans hope governor's wearing very long coattails

GEORGETOWN (AP) — When the votes are tallied Tuesday night, Republicans hope Gov. George W. Bush's popularity will stretch far down the ballot.

Williamson County Clerk Nancy Rister hopes it will go even farther — to the back side, where her name is printed.

"We want to push the Republican ticket all the way from the top to the bottom. Actually, it's all the way to the other side. We want to make them vote both sides of the ballot," said Ms. Rister, whose race is the 25th one listed.

As a GOP candidate in this fast-growing suburban Austin county, Ms. Rister believes the governor's popularity — a 45 percentage point lead over Democrat Garry Mauro in last week's Texas Poll — will help all Republicans.

In her race against write-in candidate Joan Green, campaign phone calls tell voters: "Nancy Rister is a George Bush conservative ... When you vote to re-elect Gov. Bush, vote to keep hard-working Nancy Rister as our county clerk."

Democrats scoff at such connections. They say Texans are too independent to tie themselves to straight party voting and look instead at individual candidates.

Accusations fly following
Routier appeal hearing

DALLAS (AP) — A short appeals hearing for convicted child killer Darlie Routier turned into a ruckus outside the courtroom, with one of her attorneys accusing a prosecutor of waging a smear campaign and the prosecutor facing off with her mother-in-law.

Steven Losch accused Dallas County Assistant District Attorney Greg Davis of implying that Mrs.

Routier's dead sons, Damon, 5, and Devon, 6, had been sexually abused because the boys were photographed bare-chested and wearing leather vests.

Losch's comments followed a Friday hearing in which a state district judge ruled that court transcripts from the 1997 capital murder trial of the former Rowlett housewife must be reviewed for accuracy. Mrs. Routier, 28, is on death row for the June 1996 killing of Damon in the family's suburban home, about 20 miles east of Dallas.

"There's no evidence of sexual abuse in this case," Losch told The Dallas Morning News. "When I read this, I said, 'What's going on?' It has nothing to do legally with the case."

The photograph was one of many from the photo studio Glamour Shots, Losch said, which has a corporate policy that won't allow sexually suggestive pictures.

Candidates' mothers play role in election ads

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trying to handle a tough question about whether there was anything in his past that could hurt his political future, Texas Gov. George W. Bush looked out in the direction of his mother.

"That is baloney," former first lady Barbara Bush exclaimed.

"He said one time he wasn't perfect growing up," she said of her son during his appearance at a dedication for a middle school in San Antonio. "Maybe he wasn't. His mother and father did not have a worry about him. That's just crazy."

Bush is just one of this year's political candidates who have developed a new campaign strategy: When the going gets tough, bring in Mom.

In several of this year's races, candidates' mothers have been visible, in both campaign appearances and advertisements.

Actor 'a little sore'
after polo accident

HOUSTON (AP) — Oscar-winning actor Tommy Lee Jones was sore but otherwise unscathed after a horse threw and trampled him during a polo match.

Jones remained hospitalized for observation overnight but was expected to go home today.

"I'm not hurt, a little sore," Jones said in a statement from his Los Angeles publicist.

The 52-year-old said he was playing polo about 45 miles west of Houston when his horse stumbled while running down a straightaway. He launched over the horse's head and the horse stepped on him, Jones said.

Dr. Drue Ware, an emergency room doctor at Hermann Hospital, said the actor reported losing consciousness for a short time after the accident, but there was no evidence of neurological injury.

pertain to trucks," said Stan Scofield, a representative of Ramblin' Prose and a former Trucker Buddy. "We were just looking for a way to get the kids involved with other Trucker Buddies."

Among the work sent in from Hereford students included Becky Fuller's "Christmas Puppy"; Leticia Flores' "Tis the Season"; Diego Hernandez' "Building a Snowman"; Armando Montano's "Snowman with Cardinals"; and Elisha Huseman's "Joy."

Runnerup was Maria Gonzalez, who has since moved away from the area.

The winners won a scale model of a 1953 Kenworth bull-nose truck and will have their cards sold in truck stops all across the country.

Choosing the winners was no easy task, Scofield said. "We had some really good art come in from all over the country. My wife and I got to see all of them, but then we had to choose the best. We were really surprised to get so many winners from one small town."

Plans are already in the works for a second edition that will have sections for both truck-related cards and nontruck-related cards.

Trucker buddies correspond with children in Grades 2-8, with more than 500 drivers writing to more than 130,000 students.

Scofield says he hopes that through projects, such as the Christmas card collection, they can encourage more drivers and more teachers to get involved with the program.

Pavarotti shaping up in Italian spa

NEWYORK (AP)—Luciano Pavarotti is shaping up at an Italian spa near Austria. "I feel very, very well. I was just out to walk in the mountains; I just returned," he said Thursday from Merano, Italy. "I used a cane. If you walk in the mountains, go up and down, you must have the cane." Rumors of retirement swept the opera world last week when Pavarotti canceled three Met appearances in November, citing more recuperation time needed from hip replacement and knee replacement surgery over the summer. Pavarotti, 63, told The Associated Press he hopes to do without the cane Nov. 22, when he'll perform at a gala marking the 30th anniversary of his Metropolitan Opera debut. The superstar tenor plans to spend 10 days at the spa, where he arrived Wednesday, taking walks and exercising in a pool.

Today's Hereford Brand includes our annual Holiday Section, which highlights Open House parties by local businesses from 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday, and articles on local Christmas events and projects. Coming up next will be a "Winter Gala." The latter event replaces the old "Eat-Your-Heart-Out Neiman-Marcus Fun Breakfast." We were pleased to see the name change — the other was too long to fit in a headline!

One of my old schoolmates in Lamesa recently celebrated his 70th birthday, so I looked back in the old high school yearbook to get some fodder for a birthday note. While looking through the book, I noticed the notes my schoolmates had written to me along side their pictures.

It was apparent that "swell" was the most-used adjective to compliment someone back in the '40s. That aroused my curiosity, so I checked my wife's yearbook. Her schoolmates described her as "keen" and "sweet", and there were a few "swells", too. I continued my research and checked with staff members in The Brand office. The '60s featured "cool", "groovy" and "neat." The '70s bunch remembered "funky" and "cool."

That's as far as I got, but surely "awesome" would be a top adjective for today's teens.

Before the rains came the past week, you might recall one of the old Texas sayings: It's so dry the Baptists are sprinkling, the Methodists are spitting, and the Catholics are giving rain checks.

A new book of Texas sayings, "Bubba Speaks," was recently published by W.C. Jameson. We lifted a few items about the weather.

When there is a big rain, or too much... it's a duck drowner, a toad strangler or a fence lifter.

And concerning the heat:

—It feels like hell ain't half a mile away and the fences are all down.

—It's as hot as a run-down billy goat.

—It's hotter than a revival in July.

—It's hot enough to fry spit.

—It's as hot as a black Cadillac in July.

Another category concerned thrifty folks:

—He wouldn't loan you a dollar unless the Lord co-signed.

—He's so cheap he wouldn't pay nickel to watch an ant pull a freight train.

—He crawls under the gate to save the hinges.

And a few about the lack of common sense:

—He's got the brains of a cockroach in a bathtub.

—He ain't got much north of his ears.

Concerning skinny cowpokes:

—He's as thin as Depression soup.

—He could stand under a clothesline during a rainstorm and not get wet.

—She could take shade under a barb wire fence.

—He's as thin as a piece of boarding house pie.

The November issue of "Texas Co-Op Power" magazine paid tribute to the late Raymond Higginbotham of Hereford, who died Sept. 28. The memorial listed highlights of Higginbotham's life and noted that his wife also died in April of this year.

It ended: "The passing of Raymond and Nedra Higginbotham leaves a void in the community that will not be easily filled. Our sincere condolences to the Higginbotham family."

One prediction makes a reputation

Here's a prediction: George W. Bush won't have to call the movers. His lease on the Texas Governor's Mansion will be renewed for another four years — or until Jan. 20, 2001, if things go the way some of his supporters want.

OK, so I've made my prediction, although perhaps predicting a Bush reelection in Tuesday's general election really qualifies more as a statement of fact than as a look into the crystal ball.

I'm not really an astute political prognosticator; I let my emotions sway my thinking. In 1968, I really, really thought Hubert Humphrey would beat Richard Nixon; I even thought the tide had turned and George McGovern would eke out a win over Nixon in '72.

In October 1991, when Bill Clinton announced his bid for the Democratic presidential nomination, I was asked about Clinton's chances.

"Not a ghost of a chance," I replied flippantly.

Now, given my track record at being wrong when it comes to political prognostication, it's amazing that in one small corner of the world I am considered a political expert, one who can make a prediction and you can take it to the bank.

My one moment of prediction glory can in 1970 when I was a less-than-enthusiastic student at Henderson State University in Arkadelphia, Ark.

(An aside: HSU was probably the only college campus in the United States during the late '60s and early '70s that apparently didn't know the Vietnam War was going on, much less that it was somewhat controversial. There were no antiwar rallies, or pro-war rallies for that matter; there were no protest marches about anything.)

(In fact, about the only anger demonstrated by the student body was at a football game. It was cold, wet and windy — just a miserable night. The stadium lights went out during the third quarter with HSU trailing by a couple of touchdowns. The maintenance crew restored the power before the chilled spectators could get to the exits, causing a mass groan.)

But, back to the subject.

During the first days of the 1970 primary elections in Arkansas, I had seen several of the candidates, but the only one who stood out to me was Dale Bumpers, an obscure lawyer from the northwest part of the state making his first run for public office. All of the other candidates were professional politicians, men who were holding or had held state offices.

I was visiting with my friend, Dennis Byrd, now chief of Donrey Media's Little Rock bureau.

The news came on and there was Dale Bumpers speaking to a sparse crowd.

"Bubba," I said. "There's the next governor."

Byrd had a paroxysm of laughter. After regaining his breath, he said, "No one even knows him. You're out of your mind."

Well, Bumpers won the Democratic nomination for governor, trounced the incumbent, Winthrop Rockefeller, and went on to become the most popular politician in Arkansas history.

He never lost an election, never even being seriously challenged. After two terms as governor, he challenged U.S. Sen. J. William Fulbright and sent that Washington fixture back to the Arkansas hills.

Reflections

Now, after four terms in the U.S. Senate, Dale Bumpers is retiring. He leaves the Senate to the accolades of his colleagues, Democrat and Republican, conservative and liberal. Bumper was praised for his integrity, fair-mindedness, independence and decency.

Maybe I've only had one prediction that was on the money, but it's one in which I can take pride.

Debate by slogan

on the use of the budget surplus, which their congressional leaders want earmarked for tax cuts as well as Social Security financing.

There are exceptions to the generality rule on both sides.

Broadly put, Republicans favor an overhaul that would put increasing shares of Social Security money into private investments, an idea that gained headway when the stock market was soaring but has been shaken by its declines.

The administration opposes

Republicans know the risk of tinkering with the cost-of-living increases; they counted it the issue that cost them Senate control in 1986.

Clinton framed this Social Security debate in his State of the Union message, declaring that every penny of projected budget surpluses should be saved until the future financing of the system is settled. "Save Social Security first," he said, in what has become an eight-month refrain, to counter Republicans seeking tax cuts with part of the surplus.

Republicans are using much the same slogan. Their campaign committee produced a television commercial for House candidates saying they delivered the surplus and they want to

Checks and balances are what makes our system work

Systems of checks and balances, regardless of how much we dislike them, are sometimes a true necessity.

Take the three branches of the American government — legislative, executive and judicial — and look at the checks and balances which keep any one branch from attaining excessive power.

Each branch and each twig is answerable to another entity. Ultimately, all elected officials will have to answer to the voters who put them there, but each branch performs a series of checks on the other branches.

This sometimes makes getting things done somewhat more difficult, but in the end it is designed to work the best for most people.

Congress, the legislative branch, may make and pass a bill, but it still has to be signed by the president before it becomes a law.

Even if the chief executive chooses not to sign the bill,

DIANNA F. DANDRIDGE

The Hereford Brand

The real world

lawmakers have options to override a veto or even the pocket vetoes. Should the new law be challenged, the judicial branch is in the position of determining the legality of the questioned law.

It's complicated, but for the most part it works.

Most other groups and organizations also have built in systems of checks and balances.

Civic groups have boards and committees and panels which oversee everything from financing and fund raisers to meeting times and places.

Banks, industries and businesses are subject to internal audits from outside sources. These audits guarantee owners, stockholders, and employees are not being cheated or cheating the company.

Audits sometimes even determine needed safety precautions or violations which could endanger humans or the environment.

Just imagine the chaos if law officers were actually allowed to act as they are portrayed through Hollywood's eyes!

Most officers are fairly decent people, but there are some, I'm sure, who would allow the power of a gun and a badge to go to their heads.

Just imagine what it would be like if officers were allowed to use the excessive tactics — no backup, shootouts with multiple deaths, and all the martial arts moves — without having to answer to internal affairs, the district attorney and of course the public.

"Walker," "Hunter," "Baretta," "Charlie's Angels" and "Starsky and Hutch" watch out, 'cause it's never going to happen in real life.

But, then there are a few renegade agencies — in desperate need of a system of checks and balances — which seem to grow more and more arbitrary, and yet apparently are untouchable.

I deal with people on regular basis who have dealt with an agency which proclaims to be family-oriented, but which I believe does more harm in families than good.

Families are disrupted by investigations, parents are accused of gross negligence and horrible abuses. Heaven forbid if a kid has a racing stripe across their rump or can tell the investigators that a parent yelled.

...(T)here are a few renegade agencies — in desperate need of a system of checks and balances ...

Any of these can give the organization the authority to separate the children from the family and have them placed in a safe home.

A home, which may be safe, but which usually does not require a child to adhere to the real family's rules.

If and when the kids return home, all they can think about is getting back to the much more permissive "home" they left.

Parents are then blamed for not being able to bend with the kids and let them be themselves.

There seems to be no recourse for the parents.

They can, of course, file a complaint with the ombudsmen's office, for all the good that does.

The complaint is lodged; a few weeks later someone calls and says there is no justification for the complaint and all actions taken so far are completely appropriate.

On top of their acts of family demolition, they then have the audacity to go to funding regulators and say, "We need more money to do what we need to do."

To stop this agency from getting more funds to do more demolition, concerned parties need to let the powers that be know the problems that exist.

Stop this madness. Contact legislators, senators, congressmen and judges, who are answerable to others, and say enough is enough.

District Judge Scott McCown wants citizens' input.

You can contact him at P.O. Box 1748, Austin 78767 or e-mail him at <http://www.austin360.com>.

Help provide a system of checks and balances to this destructive system.

Children's teeth may suffer from bottled water boom

BOSTON (AP) — In the minds of some parents, bottled water has become the equivalent of sunscreen or vitamins: extra protection in a sometimes dangerous world.

The elixir — which has gone from labeled luxury to supermarket staple in the past decade — markets itself as a healthful alternative to tap water because it contains minimal amounts of lead, pesticides, coliform and foul-tasting chlorine.

But bottled water also contains minimal amounts of fluoride, the mineral dentists say helps develop stronger teeth in children and helps prevent tooth decay in adults.

With consumption of bottled water at an all-time high nationwide, dentists are concerned about the long-term impact on children's teeth.

"This is a big problem, because we always depended on children drinking fluoridated water," says Dr. David Harte, a dentist in nearby Milton. "We are seeing more cavities across the board than we saw in the 1980s."

Last year, Americans consumed an estimated 3.4 billion gallons of bottled water — 12.7 gallons per person — and the figure is expected to increase in 1998 by nearly 10 percent.

The issue may prompt the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to start collecting data as early as next year, said Dr. Kit Shaddix, Fluoride Team Leader at the CDC's Division of Oral Health.

Shaddix said he believes many parents are unwittingly depriving their youngsters of fluoride, although precise figures are scarce.

"We know that 60 percent of water consumed in Orange County and L.A. is bottled and that some kids are denied the benefits of fluoride," he says. "We have no hard statistics at all. I wish we did."

Fluoride, a natural substance that is added to nearly 60 percent of the nation's water systems, has been the subject of debate for more than three decades. Opponents of fluoride say the mineral is dangerous and should not be added to public water supplies.

But nearly all public health experts say that consumption of fluoride in tap water — at levels of about 1 part per million — strengthens the developing teeth of children.

On a daily basis, fluoride is taken in through water or other foods, processed by the body and re-secreted in saliva where it aids in remineralizing teeth under attack from acid-producing bacteria.

According to the American

Dental Association, fluoride prevents between 40 percent and 60 percent of cavities in children and adults who live in fluoridated communities. Research shows an estimated half of all American children now reach their 18th birthdays without a cavity.

But Harte and other dentists who work with children in fluoridated communities say tooth decay is resurfacing among young patients.

"Thanks to fluoride and sealants (in the 70s and early 80s) we had kids with perfect teeth," he says. "That's changed."

Also, dentists say, adults who are "long in the tooth" from receding gums should be keeping better track of their fluoride levels.

"Older people who live in fluoridated communities have much less decay and tooth loss," says Shaddix, adding that too much reliance on bottled water "could be detrimental for kids and adults."

But the perception of bottled water as a healthy, stylish and pollution-free drink seems to be overpowering public enthusiasm for municipal water.

Ask Gary Hemphill, vice president of Beverage Marketing Corp., a research and consulting firm based in New York. He predicts that the country's fifth most popular beverage may eventually outsell all non-soft drink beverages — including beer, milk and fruit juices.

"We don't see any reason why consumer attitudes would shift," he says, adding that the market for bottled water of 1.5 liters or less had jumped 25 percent in the last year.

It's not all there in the numbers

NEW YORK (AP) — More important than the numbers in those ubiquitous economic surveys is the interpretation put on them. They may forecast bad times. They may not. It's how you view them.

"Growing anxiety about the financial markets, combined with political concerns and recent layoff announcements, have given consumers the jitters," says Lynn Franco of The Conference Board.

"There is little fear in the hearts of Americans," says economist William Dunkelberg, who conducts monthly and quarterly surveys of business owners for the National Federation of Independent Business.

Both surveys share the same finding — that confidence in the economy's future is eroding. But Dunkelberg reminds us that the declines are from a very high level and still remain high by long-term standards.

Richard Curtin, who directs the University of Michigan's consumer surveys, tends to agree with Ms. Franco. He says consumers are beginning to feel nervous about the stock market and are more cautious in spending.

Based on historical evidence that a confidence decline precedes a drop in retail sales, Ms. Franco comments that "any further decline in the Confidence Index could spell a bleak season for retailers."

Curtin has a similar outlook, observing that sentiment changes precede significant changes in actual spending by six to nine months. Based on his latest survey, that would mean a decline sometime early next year.

What makes such surveys especially pertinent at the moment is that all year long retailers had focused their hopes on a strong holiday shopping season, based on a strong stock market, rising wages and low inflation.

Now, they fear that stories about waning consumer confidence, and especially about the forecasting claims by surveyors, could spread fear among consumers and thus become self-fulfilling.

Dunkelberg, a Temple University professor, isn't certain of that. Although his own survey shows views of future economic growth are the lowest since 1993, he says, "because we think the economy won't grow doesn't mean we won't spend at Christmas."

His rationale for saying so is based on evidence from other parts of his federation's survey showing record high employment and paychecks. The highest-ever percentage of respondent businesses said finding qualified workers was their biggest business problem. They reported the numbers of job openings were extremely high.

He concedes that the "meat and potatoes" number are falling, but he observes that "people think the economy is very good and cannot get much better," a comment that puts findings in a different context.

In short, jobs, good wages and continued low inflation could cushion the economic slowdown at the consumer level.

Overall, he says, owner assessments of growth have turned decidedly negative, but not critically so. Ironically, he finds a major impediment to growth in the fact that companies can't find workers to staff growth.

And so, he summarizes, independent businesses are likely to be canceling job openings before they begin canceling jobs themselves.

District judge cites 24 instances of leaks; possible link to Starr

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge cited 24 instances of alleged grand jury leaks to the news media in ordering an investigation of whether prosecutor Kenneth Starr's office violated secrecy rules, newly unsealed court documents revealed today.

U.S. District Judge Norma Holloway Johnson found "a prima facie violation" of grand jury secrecy rules starting Jan. 21, the day the Monica Lewinsky scandal erupted in news reports.

Some of the reports over the following five months referred to "federal law enforcement sources" and "sources close to independent counsel Kenneth W. Starr" as providing the information.

Johnson noted that a television network news report "explicitly identifies 'prosecutors' as disclosing evidence gathered as part of the grand jury investigation."

The story was a Jan. 22 account on NBC of the "talking points" document that Ms. Lewinsky said she wrote so that friend Linda Tripp could provide testimony in the Paula Jones case that would be helpful to President Clinton.

"This evidence, the 'talking points' document, was likely to be presented to the grand jury," Johnson wrote. "The law in this circuit makes it perfectly clear that government attorneys may not reveal documentary evidence that is likely to be presented to the grand jury."

In the Sept. 24 decision, made public today, Johnson ordered that an outside expert be appointed to assist her investigation into whether Starr's office illegally leaked grand jury evidence.

"Due to serious and repetitive prima facie violations" of grand jury secrecy rules, "a complete and thorough review of these allegations must be undertaken," the judge wrote.

— YOUR EYES —

Are you at risk for Glaucoma?

In the United States, chronic glaucoma is one of the leading causes of blindness. If detected and treated early, it need not cause blindness or even severe loss of vision. Unfortunately, most people do not notice any symptoms (a gradual loss of peripheral vision is the biggest sign) or chronic glaucoma until there is permanent damage. For this reason, it's important to be aware of the following risk factors.

- Age. After the age 40, your chances of developing glaucoma increase.
- Family History. Glaucoma runs in families.
- Diabetes. Diabetes are at greater risk of developing glaucoma.
- Ethnicity. Certain ethnic groups have a greater chance of developing glaucoma. Be sure to check.

If you have any or several of these risk factors, be sure to get an annual eye exam after the age of 35.

"I Want Every Single Child In Texas to Read, Every Child."

George W. Bush
Governor George W. Bush

Bush's Education Plan

- Teach every child to read by the 3rd grade
- End the automatic promotion of children who can't do the work
- Give these children the extra help necessary to get up to grade level (cost: $203 million)
- Send $1 billion more to districts without strings to use as they see fit— for teacher pay raises or more teachers
- Build more classrooms by having the state spend $200 million to help pay the debt costs of $3 billion in bonds for new school construction.
- Expand after-school programs for at-risk middle school kids ($25 million)
- Expand the Advanced Placement Program ($18 million)
- Pay for new textbooks, geared to Texas' new back-to-basics reading curriculum ($166 million)

"Last year, more than 40,000 students failed the 3rd grade minimum skills reading test. And you know what happened to them? Most were passed to the 4th grade.

"It's unacceptable so many children can't read."

"What they need is extra help.

"We're going to test our children early to make sure they can read. If they can't, we'll give them extra help to catch up and more chances to pass the test.

"State government should pick up the extra cost of this early intervention — $203 million — but leave it to local districts to decide what programs to bring these kids up to grade level.

"There is no question that when our children learn to read, the math scores will go up, the science scores will go up, and the discipline problems will go down."

"We're focusing on the basics and teaching every child to read. It is a goal I know we can achieve."

Hot line provides guidance to lost punctuation souls

AUSTIN (AP) — They are usually frantic telephone calls in the middle of the day. Should I use a preposition here? How about a comma? A semicolon, maybe?

Elisabeth Piedmont-Marton tries to unravel the punctuation predicaments calmly and precisely.

"When you have spent hours arguing over whether it is correct to say 'It is I' or 'It is me,' you have to wonder if they shouldn't be exploring something else about their relationship," she said.

The grammar hot line generally fields one or two calls a day, with an occasional flurry when college students are writing term papers, Ms. Piedmont-Marton said.

But most of the calls are from secretaries and paralegals who are writing business letters. Although the grammar hot line is based at the University of Texas' Undergraduate Writing Center, few students actually call, Ms. Piedmont-Marton said.

It's one of at least four such hot lines in the state and more than 60 across the nation.

One of her most faithful — and most frantic — callers has been Susan Hammack with the Texas Department of Health. Ms. Hammack said that when she started editing "Disease Prevention News" for the agency two years ago, she ran into an immediate roadblock.

"I had no authority with these doctors," she said.

Despite her bachelor's degree in English and master's in health education, many doctors refused to let her edit their work without a call to the hot line and confirmation from Ms. Piedmont-Marton, Ms. Hammack said.

"I had the background. I was an expert, but they refused to budge," she said. "They were all Ph.D.s and didn't want my advice."

It took several months for her to tackle the jargon the doctors were used to, she said. "You would just die if you just picked up some of the stuff" doctors write, she said.

"But the hot line helped me get some authority," she said. "Now I just go (to Ms. Piedmont-Marton) if I'm really stumped."

Ms. Hammack said she's put together a support group for other editors in her position, which Ms. Piedmont-Marton has counseled.

People who staff grammar hot lines are as dedicated to their subject as volunteers who answer other types of hot lines, Ms. Piedmont-Marton said.

"We aren't stopping arterial bleeding, giving instructions for CPR, or delivering babies over the phone, but we do offer a calm, competent response to anonymous callers buffeted by the shifting winds of grammar and usage," she said.

The story seems to be about the same at other grammar hot lines around the state.

Lydia Yznaga, supervisor of San Antonio College's hot line, said she answers callers from around the country, many of whom are "truly confused" and send the staff of the English Learning Lab Coordinator into a frenzy.

"I've settled bets before — tiebreakers," she said. "But most are very straightforward people looking for information."

Ms. Piedmont-Marton said she does occasionally get cranky callers.

"Some people who call in get mad at my answers and question my credibility," said Ms. Piedmont-Marton, who has a doctorate in English.

So what question stumps the experts? Is hot line one word or two?

According to the Grammar Hotline Directory published by Tidewater Community College in Virginia Beach, Va., it's one.

Initially, Tidewater adjunct professor Marshall Ellis said he did not know how his college arrived at its conclusion. "I can't see that it exists as 'hotline' in any dictionary."

But after leafing through three dictionaries, Ellis found that the American Heritage Dictionary says both ways are acceptable.

Ms. Piedmont-Marton disagrees. "It's two words," she said.

Then after some consideration, Ms. Piedmont-Marton added, "I think it's an example of those questions that people want a definitive answer to and there isn't one."

Halloween candy is recalled — peanuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Packets of Halloween candy sold in 31 states including Texas are being recalled because they contain peanuts — which can cause serious allergic reactions in some people — that are not listed on the label.

Bitterman Family Confections of Kansas City, Mo., said about 3,100 6-ounce packages of Pocketsnacks assorted filled pumpkin faces were sold in retail stores across the country.

Each packet contains 14 chocolate candies that contain peanuts, peanut butter or peanut flour that are not listed on the label.

People who are allergic to peanuts run the risk of serious to life-threatening reactions if they eat the nuts.

The company announced the recall after a consumer noticed the presence of the unlabeled peanuts and complained.

Consumers may return the candy to the store where purchased for a full refund, the company said. People with questions can contact the company at 1-800-532-2639.

There is no identifying code on the candy, the company said. Pocketsnacks are packed in clear cellophane bags with one of three labels — a black cat on an orange pumpkin, a dark witch with a pumpkin broom or a cat with a man-in-the-moon face. The candies are wrapped in foil that is either orange, yellow-gold or gold with a pumpkin face.

States where the candies were sold are Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Texas, Utah and Virginia.

Court reverses Chrysler safety recall

WASHINGTON (AP) — Overturning a recall order for 91,000 Cirrus and Stratus cars, an appeals court said Friday the Chrysler Corp. would have needed "the aid of a psychic" to correctly comply with safety rules for auto seat belts.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia ruled that the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration failed to give Chrysler fair and reasonable notice of its standards for auto safety belts when it ordered the recall in June 1996.

The court also said the government's rules on anchoring rear-seat safety belts were exceedingly confusing.

"Chrysler might have satisfied NHTSA with the exercise of extraordinary intuition or with the aid of a psychic, but these possibilities are more than the law requires," the court ruled in an opinion drafted by Chief Judge Harry Edwards.

CONGRESSMAN LARRY COMBEST

COMBEST CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE
P. O. Box 10667
LUBBOCK, TEXAS 79408

October 23, 1998

Dear Fellow Texans

Very soon, we will return to the polls and cast our ballots in what will be, I believe, a very important election. I hope and pray our citizens will weigh the issues very carefully.

When I first ran for Congress, back in 1984, I promised the people of this District I would faithfully try to uphold the Constitution, and represent, to the best of my abilities, the people who live and work here in West Texas. I have tried to do that. I have tried to make you proud of my service on your behalf.

You have expressed your confidence in my service by sending me back to Congress to continue that service. I am most grateful for your support, and ask for it again. I promise you now only what I promised you in the beginning, that I will continue doing my best to fulfill the trust you have placed in me. Trust, truthfulness and the rule of law are, to me, the bedrock of our system of representative government.

Although much remains to be done, we have managed to make some much needed changes in our government. We have balanced the budget, we have overhauled the IRS, we have reduced some, but by no means all, of the burdensome taxes and regulations enacted by previous Congresses and Administrations. We have tried, and are still trying, to make the rule of law apply more fairly to all our citizens, no matter what their station in life is.

I want you to know that I am deeply honored to be your Congressman. If you see fit to keep me as your Congressman, I will do my best to honor the trust between us.

Sincerely

Democrats must battle history to overcome gap

WASHINGTON (AP) — To regain control of the House, Democrats need to reclaim only 11 seats now held by Republicans in next week's midterm elections. The problem for Democrats, of course, is in the "only."

Despite the narrow gap—one of the thinnest in recent history—and the optimism of a handful of congressional Democrats, it's still a huge reach.

Since World War II, the party holding the White House has lost an average of 27 seats in midterm elections.

House Speaker Newt Gingrich last week forecast Republican gains of anywhere from 10 to 40 House seats—the higher number "if everything breaks for us." Republican Party chief Jim Nicholson predicts somewhat more modest gains of 8 to 20.

Some Democratic leaders are suggesting any smaller loss than the norm be construed as a victory for their party.

The Democratic National Committee's co-chairman, Gov. Roy Romer of Colorado, used a 25-seat loss as an off-year benchmark.

"We are going to gain a whole lot more than that. You are going to be surprised how well we are going to do," he told NBC's "Meet the Press." But that wasn't enough to avoid a blast from Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., finance chairman of the party's Congressional Campaign Committee.

TOM RAUM The Associated Press Inside Washington

"You get on television and you become an expert," Rangel told The New York Times. "He should just shut up."

The House now has 228 Republicans, 206 Democrats and 1 independent.

Polls find only a slight overall GOP advantage among likely voters, suggesting it is doubtful one party or the other will score a blowout.

Ninety four House incumbents are without major-party opposition, and only 40 to 50 races are viewed as truly competitive, about half the usual number.

Also, there is no overarching national issue. The economy remains in good shape and Republicans seem unlikely to get any political boost from President Clinton's Monica Lewinsky problems. The controversy has been a non-issue in nearly all congressional races.

In the Senate, Republicans hold a 55-45 majority. Most analysts expect a modest gain in Republican seats, but probably not enough to give the GOP the 60 votes they theoretically need to block Democratic delaying tactics.

In the House, the numbers are closer—and the stakes more immediate.

Large Republican gains could be viewed as a referendum favoring Clinton's impeachment.

Tom Mann, director of governmental studies at Brookings Institution, said recent events such as the budget agreement, Clinton's brokering of a Middle East peace agreement and generally adverse public reaction to the House impeachment vote might give "a slight nod to the Democratic Party."

"If I am surprised and this turns out to be a banner Republican year, it will be impossible to stop the impeachment process," Mann said.

By the same token, he suggested, slight GOP gains could hasten the House hearings while Democratic gains could embolden the president and his Democratic allies in Congress.

James Thurber, a political scientist at American University, predicts slim GOP gains, in the range of 5 to 15 seats, would slow the impeachment process.

Norman Ornstein, an analyst at the American Enterprise Institute, predicts Democratic losses of 8 to 10 seats. If Democrats lose fewer than 10 seats, he says, Gingrich and other House GOP leaders might find it harder to control increasingly assertive conservatives in the next Congress.

"There will be a lot of hair pulling and shirt ripping" among Republicans in the face of tiny GOP gains or preservation of the status quo, Ornstein said.

As narrow as the present majority is, the GOP grip on the House is not as tenuous as it was in November, 1954, when Republicans ruled by a slight 218-213 margin.

A big difference between that midterm election and Tuesday's: this time, history is on the side of the Republicans.

Then, a Republican, Dwight Eisenhower, was also in the White House. Out of power Democrats regained the House 232-203.

Tom Raum has covered Congress, the White House and politics for more than 20 years.

We're Putting Our Names On The Line For Gov. Bush.

Governor Bush is pushing policies that promote personal responsibility—in education, welfare reform, juvenile justice and right choices for our children. His goal in his second term is to teach every child to read. He has laid out a responsible plan for dealing with the state's surplus—meet basic needs, invest $1.6 billion in our schools and return $3.6 billion in tax cuts. He's earned our vote by doing in office what he said he'd do in 1994. We're backing this able, activist conservative Governor who puts Texas first. Join us in voting for this good man and our friend, Governor George W. Bush, on November 3.

Ex-Fort Worth coach vastly underestimated his popularity

By Whit Canning
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

FORT WORTH — When Bill Allen began contemplating the inevitable recently, he had a simple plan.

"He told me to just find a small chapel somewhere for the service," said his wife, Dorothy. "He said, 'So many are gone now, there aren't many left. You'll only need a place big enough to hold somewhere between seven and 10 people.'"

For Allen, 86, who died of a heart attack last week at his youth camp in Florissant, Colo., it was a rare miscalculation. The man who coached Paschal High School's football teams to 12 district titles in a 24-year career (1945-68) severely underestimated the turnout.

He was buried Monday at Greenwood Memorial Park in Fort Worth after a service at First Presbyterian Church attended by an estimated 500 friends, family and former players.

They came to say goodbye to one of the most successful coaches in local history. Mostly, they came to say goodbye to a friend.

"He loved young people," said his daughter, Suzie Graf, who has helped her parents run the Blue Mountain Ranch youth camp, where Allen has devoted his time since retiring from the Fort Worth school district in 1972.

"He was always such a wonderful father and one of the very best friends I ever had," Graf said. "He was always there for us, throughout our lives, and he was always willing to do anything possible to help the young people who were so much a part of his life. He would even preach to them."

"He lived his life the way he wanted other people to live, and I don't know of anyone who didn't like him... except maybe some of the coaches he used to beat on Friday night."

Those were certainly in ample supply. Succeeding Abe Martin as the Paschal coach in 1945, Allen won nine outright district titles, tied for three more, and compiled a 159-89-8 overall record. He won five bi-district championships, and his 1960 and '61 teams reached the state semifinals.

"He was often criticized for being too nice a guy," said former city athletic director Jack Billingsley. "They would say he wasn't tough enough.

"But in the years since he's been gone, they've discovered just how good a coach he really was." An assistant coach on a state championship team at Wichita Falls in 1941, Allen was a coach who stressed sound fundamentals, but he was also adaptable.

Allen's teams were also often noted for confounding the experts. The '56 team, led by Bubba Gauntt and Roy Lee Rambo, opened at 1-4, including a 36-7 loss to Joe Kerbel's seemingly invincible Amarillo team.

But the Panthers rolled through district undefeated, including a memorable 47-33 upset of a high-scoring Arlington Heights team. In bi-district, they met Amarillo again and pulled a stunning 13-7 upset. They finally lost in the quarterfinals to an Abilene High team that was in the midst of a 49-game winning streak.

"In that era, they would often start slowly and gather strength as the season progressed," said John Naylor, then a Heights assistant. "By the time they played Amarillo the second time, they were a very good team."

"They always had talent, but the thing that impressed me about Bill was that he was such Cowboys, Eagles always put on a spectacle

By Ken Berger
AP Sports Writer

PHILADELPHIA — Troy Aikman wouldn't miss this for the world.

When the Cowboys and Eagles get together, especially in prime time, it's usually a game to remember.

Barry Switzer's infamous fourth-and-1 calls that were stopped by the Eagles on consecutive plays in 1995 come to mind. So does James Willis' interception of Aikman's pass in the end zone and lateral to Troy Vincent for a decisive touchdown return in 1996.

And no one could ever forget Tom Hutton's fumbled snap that led to Chris Boniol's botched game-winning 22-yard field goal attempt in the Cowboys' 21-20 victory on Monday Night Football last year.

Aikman, who missed five weeks with a fractured shoulder, is back at quarterback for the NFC East-leading Cowboys (4-3) just in time for another Monday night meeting in Philadelphia. The only question is, are the Eagles (1-6) so bad that even a prime-time game against the rival Cowboys can't shake them out of it?

"We don't really look so much at what's going on in Philadelphia," Aikman said. "We've got some things that we've got to work through ourselves. I don't think anybody here has really given a whole lot of consideration to their record."

For everyone who's been involved in this rivalry, it's as much about history as anything.

Dallas has won the last four games against Philadelphia on Monday night, including the 21-20 game last year in Dallas that will always be remembered for the Eagles' botched field goal attempt with four seconds left.

The Cowboys, then 1-3, came to Philadelphia, then 3-1, on a Monday night in 1996 and beat the Eagles 23-19. Philadelphia hasn't beaten the Cowboys on Monday night since a 31-7 victory at Veterans Stadium in 1992.

Still, the one thing Eagles coach Ray Rhodes has done in three-plus seasons is beat the Cowboys at least once each year. With little else to motivate his team during its dreadful start, the Cowboys coming to town is plenty for him.

"When you're a native Texan, it's always special when you play your home-state team," Rhodes said. "I've got a lot of family and friends who are diehard Cowboy fans. This is always a special game."

It has almost always lived up to the hype. The last three regular season games have been decided in the final minute.

Before that, the Eagles stopped

McGwire named Player of Year

Sosa wins honors for outstanding NL player, Molitor voted MLB man of year

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Mark McGwire, who broke Roger Maris' record and went on to hit 70 home runs, was chosen Player of the Year by his peers and presented the Players Choice Award on Friday night.

McGwire's rival for the home run record, Sammy Sosa of the Chicago Cubs, was named outstanding player in the National League. Sosa hit 66 homers, also breaking Maris' record of 61 set in 1961.

Eight other awards were presented at the seventh annual Players Choice Award ceremony, which was televised live from Walt Disney World. The awards are sponsored by the Major League Baseball Player's Association, the players' union.

McGwire

"We both had unbelievable years," McGwire said at a news conference with Sosa before the black-tie ceremony. "No one in the game of baseball has done what he and I did."

Added Sosa: "I always say that he was the man and he motivated me. We had no jealousy."

It was the first time since the end of the season last month that they saw each other. They said they were still amazed at the public's fascination with the home run race and how it brought many embittered fans from the 1994 strike back to the sport.

One question the players avoided was about a report in The Toronto Globe and Mail that baseball plans to ban the use of androstenedione, a muscle-enhancing supplement used by McGwire.

"It's simple. I've already made my comment on that. That's all I have to say," the St. Louis Cardinals first baseman said.

Other winners Friday included Oakland's Ben Grieve for American League Outstanding Rookie; Seattle's Alex Rodriguez for AL Outstanding Player; and Baltimore's Eric Davis for AL Comeback Player. Toronto's Roger Clemens and Boston's Pedro Martinez tied for AL Outstanding Pitcher.

In the National League, pitcher Kerry Wood of the Cubs was voted Outstanding Rookie; Atlanta's Greg Maddux Outstanding Pitcher; and San Diego's Greg Vaughn Comeback Player.

Lightning forces postponement of Borger-Hereford District 3-4A clash

The Borger-Hereford District 3-4A game Friday night at Whiteface Stadium was postponed due to lightning.

Hereford coach Craig Yenser and Borger coach Marty McClintock made the decision to postpone the game at about 9 p.m. Friday night.

The game was rescheduled to be played at 3 p.m. Saturday afternoon contingent upon the weather and the condition of the field.

Stars, Ducks tie at 3-all

DALLAS (AP) — With a two-goal lead and less than a minute left in regulation, the Dallas Stars seemed all but certain of victory over the Mighty Ducks of Anaheim.

But Steve Rucchin and Teemu Selanne scored over a 26-second span as the Mighty Ducks rallied for a 3-3 tie Friday night.

"They thought the game was over but we didn't stop believing we could get a point out of it," said Selanne. "Dallas is a good team, but we were challenging them, winning the battles."

Dallas had built a seemingly safe 3-1 advantage with 1:40 to play on Jere Lehtinen's wrist shot from the right circle.

But the Mighty Ducks, with an extra attacker for goaltender Guy Hebert, narrowed the deficit to 3-2 on Rucchin's second goal of the season at 19:22.

Selanne sent the game into overtime by scoring his fifth with 11.2 seconds left from in front of the net, sweeping Paul Kariya's pass out of the corner past Stars goalie Roman Turek.

"I was set up at the back post just hoping someone would get the puck to me," Selanne said. "Paul made a great pass and it was easy. Paul has such great vision. He knows where I am out there."

After losing their first three games, the Mighty Ducks are unbeaten in their last five (4-0-1).

"This was a huge point," Anaheim coach Craig Hartsburg said. "It's not going to happen in Dallas too many times. We were a nice man — a gentleman. I don't think he ever intended to roll the score up on anyone. Sometimes, he just couldn't stop it."

His two greatest teams were the '60 and '61 state semifinalists, the latter of which was 12-0 before losing to eventual state champion Wichita Falls. Those were also James Cox's first two years as a Paschal assistant.

"I had come from Mason, where we had all these rawboned kids from the surrounding ranches and a coach with a real hard-nosed attitude," recalled Cox, who later became the head coach at Southwest. "We took it real serious, and those kids were tough as boot leather."

"One of our first practices at Paschal, I was working those guys out in the sun, and after we took a water break, one kid was passed out on the bench."

"I got him revived, and sent him back out there, although he wasn't much in favor of it."

"After the practice, Bill called me in and sat me down, and he just kinda smiled and said, 'Coach, none of these guys has been out roping calves or bulldogging steers. They've been laying around on the sofa watching TV, and driving around in convertibles chasing girls. You gotta treat 'em a little differently than you did in Mason.'"

Gus Bates, who played on the '60 team, recalled Allen as, "Just a very nice guy — the thing that always impressed me about him was, he seemed to me to be a person of great integrity."

"He cared about us very much, and he would let coach (John) Harville or the other assistants do the mean stuff. Back then, you pretty much did what you were told. But if the principal told me something, I might forget to do it. If coach Allen told me, I didn't forget."

Reflecting on 40 years of friendship, Cox said, "In all these years, I have never heard him say a derogatory word about another human being."

Traveling around the Panhandle as a youth, Allen — born in 1912 — went to "more than a dozen schools," said his wife, Dorothy.

"We met in Amarillo in 1930," she said. "He had been recruited to come there and play football; they gave his father a job as a policeman. Well, maybe I shouldn't say that... but they did things like that back then."

"He was something. He was working in the wheat fields, and we met at a dance, and he told me to call him. I told him I didn't call boys, so he called me."

"We were married in 1935, and then he started coaching at Wichita Falls. He was in the Army during the war, but he didn't go overseas. He went to Mineral Wells instead, and won the war from there. You know, they never invaded Mineral Wells, because they knew Bill was there."

"We opened the camp in Colorado in 1946. His football boys went up there and built the first buildings. We still have some really old buildings there, but Bill would never let them be torn down because they were built by Frank Ryan and the other boys."

"He loved football, and he loved the young people on his team and up at the camp. And he dearly loved cars."

"The day he died, we were sitting in the kitchen and he was trying to get me to go with him to Canyon to look at a new pickup truck. I left the room for a while, and when I came back he had died of a heart attack."

"I am truly thankful that he went that way... because he was the most wonderful man who ever lived."

Maybe there was a plan for that, too. A poem composed by Allen's other daughter, Gail Carpenter, reads in part: "He had love in his heart, and a pact with God."

AREA HAPPENINGS

Borger holds off Hereford rally

From staff reports
BORGER — Borger scored 13 points in the opening quarter and then held off Hereford in the second half to take a 26-21 victory over the Whitefaces in junior varsity football Thursday. The Bulldogs took a 19-0 lead into the third quarter before Hereford quarterback Travis Nash and Tim Dudley hooked up on a 10-yard scoring toss to get the Whitefaces on the board. Nash got Hereford's second touchdown on a 15-yard run and Nash and Dudley connected again in the fourth quarter from 40 yards for the Whitefaces' final touchdown.

The Hereford junior varsity will play its final game on the road Thursday at Amarillo Caprock. Kickoff is set for 4:30 p.m.

Tech sets baseball camps

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech will conduct the Red Raider Holiday Baseball Camps 1998-99 in various sessions beginning Dec. 19, according to a release from the university.

Four sessions will be offered in December and January and are open to anyone from age 14 through high school seniors. There will also be a session Jan. 24, 1999, for players ages six to 13.

The first session will be Dec. 19 and will be for hitters; a session for pitchers and catchers will be Dec. 20.

There will be a two-day camp on offensive and defensive skills Jan. 2-3, 1999.

All sessions will be conducted at Dan Law Field. For more information concerning registration and fees, call Texas Tech coach Greg Evans at (806) 793-3319.

Wayland to fete basketball 50th

From staff reports
PLAINVIEW — Wayland Baptist University will celebrate the 50th anniversary of Wayland basketball Nov. 6-7.

The festivities will get under way Nov. 6 with an all-school pep rally at 7:30 p.m. in Hutcherson Center. The Pioneers and the Flying Queens will tip off their 50th season of play Nov. 7 following a pregame brunch and an Athletic Hall of Honor ceremony.

The induction ceremony will be at 11 a.m. in the McClung University Center.

The season-opening double-header will begin at 2 p.m. Nov. 7 when Wayland hosts Huston-Tillotson. The Pioneers will host Langston at 4 p.m.

in awe of them in the first period, but not in the second. We regrouped."

Dallas' Joe Nieuwendyk continued his strong start after six months of rehabilitation from double-knee surgery with two goals, including the 400th of his career. Nieuwendyk became the 51st player in NHL history with at least 400 goals when he scored his third in the second game he's played this season. He had a goal and an assist in his return to the lineup, a 2-1 decision over the San Jose Sharks on Oct. 24.

Spectacle

Emmitt Smith twice on fourth-and-1 plays in Philadelphia's 20-17 victory at the Vet in 1995. The defensive stand helped the Eagles make the playoffs in Rhodes' first season. Switzer never lived it down.

"We've had some wild plays," Rhodes said. "It's always an exciting game."

After the Eagles tied it at 17 on a field goal in the fourth quarter, Switzer decided to go on fourth-and-inches at the Dallas 29. Smith was stopped in the backfield, but the refs said the play didn't count because they'd stopped the clock for the two-minute warning.

Switzer called the same play, and the Eagles stopped it again before winning with a 42-yard field goal.

Dallas went 6-10 last season, and Chan Gailey replaced Switzer for the job of leading the Cowboys back to the Super Bowl. After going 3-2 with Jason Garrett at quarterback, Gailey gets to see what his offense can do with Aikman back. Aikman hasn't played particularly well at Veterans Stadium, and the rock-hard turf can be a nightmare on injuries.

"It's not going to be completely healed really until the season's about over," Aikman said.

With the Eagles off to their worst start since going 1-7 in 1975, Aikman knows to expect the notoriously mutinous Philly crowd to be in rare form.

"Our media has said, 'Hey, what about Philly? They do this, they do that,'" Aikman said. "Every opponent you get ready to play, you can sit there and say there are reasons why it may not be a particularly good time to come back. At some time you just say it's ready to go, and let's do it."

Thank You

On behalf of the Hereford Elks Lodge No. 2269, I would like to thank each and every one of the following for their efforts in making this year's "Hoop Shoot" such a huge success!!

Even a little rain perks-up Texas deer hunting prospects

Fall showers over a widespread area of Texas have erased some of the "gloom and doom" outlook for the 1998-99 deer season that is coming up fast.

While body and antler growth of bucks may not be quite as good as the past couple of seasons, a green-up in much of the state's deer country after the rains means deer should be in decent shape.

General deer season opens November 7 and runs through January 3 in North Texas. The South Texas season is November 14 through January 17. Fall turkey hunting, where allowed, also spans November 7, through January 3.

In the Panhandle, the mule deer season will span November 21 through December 6. For the first time, Sherman and Dallam counties will be offering a whitetail season to run concurrently with the two-week long mule deer season.

Floyd County boy Danny Swebston, Texas Parks & Wildlife biologist based at Canyon, says conditions for deer in the Panhandle are "looking pretty decent," all things considered.

"Body weights and antler development are not as good as last year, due to the hot, dry summer, but it should still be a good year," says Swebston.

Given the late-fall showers that have fallen over much of the Panhandle lately, winter wheat, triticale, and oat patches ought to post some good growth, and that could be a positive factor for deer hunting, especially in fields adjacent to canyon country.

Swebston says grazing provided by small grains should be an asset for deer, particularly for mule deer, and those adventurous whitetails that slink from cover to venture into the fields.

The Edwards Plateau is easily the state's foremost deer range, having the largest herd.

Max Traweek, a one-time Canyon waterfowl biologist who even did some goose trapping and banding in Deaf Smith County in the early days of his career, is now based at Kerrville as a big game guru with TP&WD. Max says the Edwards Plateau should again provide a lot of opportunity for deer hunters this year.

The Sportsman's Den

Jim

With the deer opener coming up, Max says the Plateau is "shining" after all of the prospective negatives in the midst of the summer's drought.

"Deer habitat in the Hill Country, especially in the western part, is looking real green," says Traweek.

"The deer are in fairly good shape for having been through a tough drought. I wouldn't expect to see outstanding antler production in the western portion of the Plateau because the rains came a little late for that, but it's certainly not the doom and gloom that was being predicted," says Traweek.

Even with recent flooding, and a general dousing of much of the South Texas region in August and September, damage from extreme heat and drought that occurred in the previous six months will be hard for this region to overcome.

"Drought hit this region hard," says Joe Herrera, TP&WD biologist at Pleasanton. "The drought may mean some of the older-age class bucks won't reach their full antler growth potential."

Herrera says this year's fawn production in South Texas is slightly below average.

"Those animals that survived are in very good shape because range conditions are now good," Herrera says.

A fair crop of acorns and availability of new fall forbs may keep South Texas deer from moving around as much in the early part of the season. That may make things a little tougher for hunters working food plots and feeders.

Butch Young, white-tailed deer program leader with TP&WD, says some good bucks were taken in South Texas during the archery season and antlers observed during spotlight and aerial surveys have shown to be much better than what was expected in this drought year. Young predicts that the area between Laredo and San Antonio will be excellent for whitetails this season.

"They caught an awful lot of rain, and some are saying this area's in the best shape it's ever been. The deer there are not going to have to come to feeders."

In addition to deer, a myriad of other hunting seasons are suddenly upon us in Texas.

Despite the summer's drought, quail populations have also managed to hang on tenaciously in part of the High and Rolling Plains. This won't be any banner year, but amazingly, there will be decent numbers of quail out there to hunt in some places. The season opened statewide on Saturday and will continue through February 28, 1999.

Duck season in the High Plains Mallard Management Unit is now open and will continue through January 17.

The Western Zone goose season opened Saturday and continues through February 14.

Pheasant season is just more than a month away, opening December 12, and continuing through December 27.

Sandhill crane season in Zone A is set to go November 7, and will continue through February 7, 1999.

The ubiquitous Oliver Platt

Actor still enjoying relative anonymity

By Douglas J. Rowe
The Associated Press

With five movies out this year, it's a wonder Oliver Platt can still enjoy the relative anonymity of a character actor.

When he walks through his neighborhood in New York City's Greenwich Village, some people inevitably say, "Loved your last movie." But he also gets: "Are you on the Fresno State judo team?"

Anyone who would ask him that, though, hasn't been to the movies much lately.

The tall 38-year-old actor with a Pillsbury Doughboy body has appeared this year in "Dangerous Beauty," "Bulworth," "Dr. Dolittle," "Simon Birch" and "The Impostors." And he has been in more than 20 movies since his debut in the 1988 Mike Nichols film "Working Girl," including "A Time to Kill," "Benny and Joon," "Diggsdown," "Flatliners" and "Married to the Mob." He had the starring role in the critically acclaimed "Funny Bones."

Getting parts has never been a problem for Platt, and he can sound as though he's trying to straddle the line between self-aggrandizement and mock self-effacement in explaining why. He makes three false starts before taking off:

"I started to make a living at it before ...
"I mean, that's the weird part — I don't want to sound ungrateful or anything like that — but it all happened for me pretty ...
"I got very, you know ...

"Look, I think I'm a talented guy, but I was very lucky, you know. I really was. And I met the right people who introduced me to the right people and I was in a position where I could take advantage of my breaks."

His professional success, however, doesn't mean he lives without struggle.

"I struggle with other parts of my humanity," he says. "You know that expression, 'When God wants to punish us he answers our prayers'? I mean in a way, that's when you start to focus on the other aspects of your life."

So Platt's foremost focus is on his family. He and wife Camilla have two children, Lili, 4, and George, 1, and another on the way.

When he's off filming, he always insists on being given an open plane ticket so he can frequently return home.

"I put a lot of energy into it and I'm tired a lot but that's what keeps me sane, my family," he says. "The more work I put into that the more stability I get out of it, the better I feel as a husband and father."

While Platt travels a lot (he's now in Vancouver, British Columbia, filming a creature feature titled "Lake Placid"), he wants his family to be stable and stationary — mainly because he moved around so much as a child.

The son of a career diplomat, Platt grew up in Asia, the Middle East and Washington, D.C., attending at least 12 schools by age 18.

At the time he thought such a peripatetic existence was normal. "In retrospect I definitely got tired of it," he says.

Platt has two brothers, and one of them became a travel writer. The other, a financial publisher, also travels a lot.

He majored in drama at Tufts University.

Senior center actors stampede into holiday festival melodrama

The Hereford Senior Center will be hitting the show circuit again when it turns the lights on "Here Come the Cows or...Never Say Moo in Mesa", a production set for two separate showings during the center's Festival of Trees celebration.

The play will debut at the center Thursday, November 19 beginning at 7:30 p.m. and will return for a final performance Saturday, November 21 at 7:30 p.m.

Both presentations, which will also offer meals, will be performed in the Ball Room of the Senior Center located at 400 Ranger St.

The play, billed as an "udderly" ridiculous melodrama, takes place in the gallopin' community of Mesa, Arizona.

The dust-ridden, one-horse town has at least one proprietary establishment — a quaint dive proudly proclaimed as the Mesa Soup Shack and Trading Post.

And it is at the soup parlor where all the action takes place.

The cast consists of; Carole McGilvary who plays Molly Hopkins, the owner of Collectors say Mexican art figures charming, not ghoulish

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — There's something about Catrina.

Maybe it's her impish smile. Perhaps the umbrella-sized hat adorned with feathers and vibrant flowers that she wears. Or could it be Catrina's slender figure and sexy pose as her hand rests on her hip?

At the same time, there is something off-putting about her maybe it's the fact that the lovely clothes cover a skeleton and the extravagant hat sits atop a skull. But in the folk art world, Catrina is a captivating ceramic figure from Mexico that has become a popular collectible the past several years, especially as Dia de los Muertos (Day of the Dead) approaches Nov. 2.

Catrina, which can also be spelled with a "K," owes her existence to Mexican artist and caricaturist Jose Guadalupe Posada who poked fun at the upper class with his drawings in the late 1800s and early 1900s.

Richard Lee, owner of San Angel Folk Art in the Blue Star Arts Complex, says Posada combined the idea of using calaveras (skulls) with satire to produce his famous drawing of "Calavera Catrina," a grinning, woman's skull wearing a large hat with flowers and ostrich feathers.

"That's when it became this folkloric image," he says.

Artists later transferred the image into the hand-made ceramic pieces. Like snowflakes, no two Catrinas are alike.

Catrina is a Spanish term for an upper-class person (i.e., the rich elite). There are also Catrins, the male version of Catrinas, although they aren't as numerous.

Because the females outnumber the males, they're usually referred to as Catrinas.

What differentiates them from traditional calaveras are their elaborate and detailed clothing drawn from the fashions of the late 1800s and early 1900s.

"They have beautiful, flashy hats with long dresses. Some wear gloves," Lee says. "They have these expressions on the skeletons' faces which makes them so beautiful."

Some carry (with grace, of course) a cigarette between their index and middle fingers.

For the past decade, Lee has bought them from an artist who lives in Michoacan and makes them only once a year.

This year, Lee purchased 25 Catrinas, standing 2 feet tall. Only five remain.

Catrinas range in height from 1 to 2 feet and cost from $100 to $400 at San Angel.

The taller Catrinas appear more elegant because of their thin figures and elongated necks, arms and fingers, Lee says.

Margie Shackelford is one Catina collector.

The San Antonian has been collecting folk art for two decades, but had not seen a Catrina until five years ago.

"They're just so interesting. It was a form of folk art I hadn't seen before," Shackelford says. "Each piece has its own characteristics. Some are seductive. Others are fun."

Thank You

We would like to express our sincere gratitude for all of the love and support shown to us during the illness and loss of our husband, father and grandfather Ventura Coronado.

Thank you for the flowers, phone calls, food, cards, and prayers. A very special thank you is expressed to Brother Jesse Rincones for the beautiful service and to Primera Iglesia Bautista and Guadalupanas of San Jose for the comfort and hospitality during this difficult time. Your kindness and thoughtfulness will never be forgotten.

May God bless all of you.

UT begins program to ease freshman year

AUSTIN (AP) — A problem that has dogged the University of Texas for years slapped freshman Cristina Maas in the face when she walked into a philosophy class of 160 students.

"The first week, I was, like, scared to death," Maas said. "I walked into class and there were all those faces that I didn't recognize. It was a really intimidating situation."

Auditorium-size classes have long been the standard freshman fare at UT — the nation's largest university — and are believed to be one culprit keeping students from graduating. They also have thwarted the school's efforts to attain a stellar ranking nationally. On a campus with almost 50,000 students, UT's 6,744 freshmen often get lost in the shuffle.

But UT administrators hope a new program started this fall and designed to better assimilate freshmen into university life will change that. Freshmen Interest Groups, or FIGs, aim to make UT feel smaller by grouping students in similar majors in the same set of classes. The program would be one of the university's largest efforts to solve its freshmen retention problem on a grand scale.

Because of the groups, Maas said, she quickly became as comfortable on campus as in her hometown neighborhood.

"Now I walk in and I see at least 20 people I know," she said.

"I have a better sense of home."

That comfort level is key to keeping freshmen in school and, more important, to helping them succeed. Only 30 percent of UT freshmen graduate in four years. In five years, that number rises to about 63 percent. Administrators say that's not high enough.

King's Manor sets Founder's Day Dinner

King's Manor Founders Association has announced plans for the 33rd Annual Founders' Day Dinner, Thursday, Nov. 12 7 p.m. in the Lamar Room of King's Manor, located at 400 Ranger Drive.

Dr. Clifford Trotter will be the keynote speaker for the event.

Dr. Trotter is a former pastor of First United Methodist Church in Hereford. He has also ministered in Dumas and as pastor of United Methodist Church in Amarillo.

He has served in other professional capacities including; Church Relations Director for McMurry University, District Superintendent of the Amarillo district, and was the Development Officer of Texas Methodist Foundation.

The program for the evening will also include entertainment and a special tribute to donors who have supported King's Manor Founders' Association.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Think you've heard everything? Well, I thought so, too, until I ran into this. A friend of mine told me she is taking her dog to a camp and is happy to pay the fee — $750 a week.

For $750, your dog (and you) get organized activities, companionship with other dogs, the best food (there are menus), doggie square dancing, weenie-retrieving contests, bathing-suit pageants and competitions in which energetic dogs chase a white bag that resembles a bunny on a motorized pulley.

Camp Gone to the Dogs, which is located in Vermont, has been going strong for nine years. If this sounds weird, please be aware that there are other camps for dogs. At Camp Winnaribbon on Lake Tahoe in Nevada, dogs and their masters hike together through rugged forests all day and enjoy marshmallow roasts around a campfire in the evening. There are swimming contests, kissing contests, canine costume parties and classes in obedience, nutrition, first aid and good manners. Canines can take the Good Citizen Test, and for this, they receive diplomas.

My friend, "Bonnie," has been taking her Shetland sheep dog to the camp in Nevada for four years, and she says it beats any vacation she has ever had. I love my dog, Ann, but when I want a really good, restful vacation, I put my standard poodle in a kennel, and it doesn't cost $750 a week. Am I too critical, Ann? What are your views on this?

— Dog Lover in New York
Dear Lover: I'm with you. I have known many people who are perfectly sane in every other aspect of their lives, but when it comes to their dogs, they go off the deep end. There is no way to reason with these folks. It's purely emotional.

I did not grow up with dogs, so I cannot be a fair judge, but I remember my grandmother saying, "Dogs should be with dogs, and people should be with people." After hearing about these doggie camps, I think maybe my grandmother had the right idea.

Dear Ann Landers: Those mean folks who wrote to you criticizing people who snore made me mad. Snoring is what happens when a person is unable to breathe through the nose, so the poor soul has to sleep with the mouth open. Nobody snores on purpose.

My father's snoring was so loud, I could hear him two floors away. We used to laugh about it, but it wasn't funny. He was tested for sleep apnea and now wears a device that helps him breathe normally when he sleeps. When my ex-husband snored, he would suddenly stop breathing for several seconds, and it used to scare the daylights out of me. I thought he had died.

I later learned that allergies, sinus problems and sleep apnea, all of which cause people to snore, can be helped with medication and breathing appliances. Please, Ann, let your readers who complain about snoring spouses know that their partners don't need ridicule or criticism, they need help. — Self-Educated in Staten Island, N.Y.

Dear Staten Island: I HAVE told them, but because you wrote, I am telling them again. Sleep apnea can be life-threatening and should be treated by a physician. This advice is a lot better than some of the suggestions sent in by readers who were sleep-deprived and intent on punishing the "perpetrator." The most unusual "cure" was sent in by a woman a few years ago. She sewed a tennis ball in the neck of her husband's pajamas. This prevented him from sleeping on his back. The snoring stopped after that.

Gem of the Day: When the late J.P. Morgan was asked what he considered the best bank collateral, he paused for a second and replied, "Good character."

HJH Roundup

"In education we are striving not to teach youth to make a living, but to make a life."—William A. White.
Eighth graders are beginning science fair procedures. These procedures will lead to projects that may be done individually or in pairs. Much planning and research must be done to have successful projects. An intensive review of the scientific method is also being conducted in these classes.

The technology classes will prepare for their six-week rotation this week. Mr. Rudd's classes will transfer to Mr. Nall; Nall's classes to Mr. Rowe and Rowe's classes to Rudd. Rudd's classes are finishing their bottle lamps as they complete their six-week units of study and activities.

American history classes are beginning the colonial period. Mr. Farr will show slides of Williamsburg, which portrays life in colonial America.

Eighth Grade Choir and the Boys Choir went "Pumpkin Caroling" to Kings Manor and Westgate on Thursday and Friday. This was their way of sharing Halloween with the residents there.

English classes of Mrs. Bone and Mrs. Larremore are completing "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" which is timely for the Halloween season. Mrs. Bone's classes listened, by jack-o-lantern light, to a recording of the story and began an illustration for the story as they completed review paperwork.

All HJH students have the opportunity to improve their reading skills through reading classes, reading done in each subject area and in the Accelerated Reading Program. After reading "AR" books, the students do a self-test on the computer which enables them to also improve their computer skills as they test their reading skills. Of course, family members setting the example of reading will further enhance these reading skills.

Many Noon Study Hall assignments are given for lack of homework. Parents, you can help with this situation by stressing to your child the importance of using available time at school to finish assignments and of not waiting until the last minute to do the assignments. Each class offers some class time to work on assignments and most eighth graders have HAT time to complete their work.

WELCOME TO THE WORLD

New Product Idea? Before you get excited...

Charlie asked me to sign a confidentiality form. It was a written promise not to steal his idea or tell anyone else about it. I signed, then Charlie told me about the details.

As he described his idea, I remembered seeing or reading something about a very similar product. We found it in a four-month-old National automotive magazine. Charlie's idea was already patented and on the market.

Sally's new idea was clever and cute. Sally thought so, her mother thought so and all her friends agreed. Sally knew this was her ticket to early retirement.

Sally grew defensive as I began to ask questions. Who might buy her product? How much will it cost to build and package the product? How much might a buyer be willing to pay for it?

Sally didn't want to deal with these or any other questions. She wanted to get a loan and begin manufacturing right away.

Charlie and Sally are real. I've changed their names and the situations for the sake of confidentiality.

I've seen hundreds of new product ideas over the years. Some are on the market today doing nicely, while others never made the grade. If you have an idea for a new product and aren't sure how to proceed, read on.

Successful Product Characteristics

- The best products are desirable. It should be fascinating and compelling. It may fill a need, but you'll sell more if it satisfies a "want" as well.

- The products with the highest potential are simple, but obvious. The benefits your products offer should be self-evident. If you have to spend a lot of time explaining how it works and why everyone should have one, it may not sell.

- The best products have a positive image. If your product is harmful or degrading to individuals or the environment, don't expect instant success.

- Your new product needs a highly definable target customer. If you feel everybody will want one, you probably won't appeal to anyone.

- Your product needs to be innovative. If you are trying to solve a common problem, you must solve it better than anyone else has. Is your approach fresh and innovative?

- Your new product shouldn't be far ahead of the accepted curve. Innovative yes, far-out no. Beware of faddish, futuristic trends.

- The best products are "stand alone" products. Don't tie your success to another's wagon.

- Your new product should utilize established channels of distribution. Getting a new product ready for the market is enough of a challenge. You don't want to blaze a new path to the market as well.

- The best products are targeted at specific price points. One of the most clever new products I ever saw violated this principle and never sold. Market research indicated a price point of about two dollars. The client was so sold on his own idea that he got a little greedy and tried to bring it to the market at four dollars. No sale. With careful cost control it could have netted its owner nearly 40 percent and still sold for $1.99.

- The best products use easily available materials and manufacturing processes. It helps if tooling and start-up costs are low. The higher the entry level costs, the higher the risk factor.

- Your product needs to be safe to use. Product liability is a critical issue for businesses. More often than not, manufacturers will be drawn into court even if a product is misused. Keep it simple and keep it safe.

- Your product needs to be original. Check industry publications, patent depository libraries and all available literature. Don't waste your time and money reinventing the wheel.

Some Books Worth Reading

Between the covers

By Rebecca Walls

What is your definition of traditional library service? How do you feel about non-traditional library service? These were two of the questions I was asked this week and had to answer on the spot.

I cannot really say I have not thought about this before, because I have had to decide what services our library should offer. On the traditional side the lists are books, newspapers, magazines, reference materials, a place to come to read and study.

Non-traditional services would include story time for children, computer access to the Internet, computer availability for word processing, videos books on tape, piano lessons, special programs available upon request, music collection; equipment checkout and nursing homes, summer reading programs and interlibrary loan and reciprocal borrowing agreements with other Panhandle libraries, and that probably is not everything.

I feel that traditional and non-traditional service is what keeps libraries alive and operating in this modern world. It takes these services to meet the informational and recreational needs of the people living in our community.

Can you imagine how far behind we would be in the world if the citizens of our community did not have access to computers and faxes. For many citizens the library is the only place where they can have access to computers, the Internet and faxes.

I am proud and pleased the county government, the citizens, the Friends group and the library staff work together to make the library an asset to the community. I really believe the Deaf Smith County Library is something to be proud of. Give yourselves a pat on the back.

As part of the library service, we try to offer a group of new books each week. This week the new book titles include: The Wages of Fame, Heartlight, Catfish Café, Shed 10 Years in 10 Weeks, Clean It Fast Clean It Right and others.

Welcome to the World, Baby Girl is written by Fannie Flagg, the same author of Fried Green Tomatoes at the Whistle Stop Café. In her new book, Fannie's heroine is from urban America.

Dana Nordstrom is a brainy, beautiful, ambitious rising television star of the 1970's. If you read Fried Green Tomatoes, you know Fannie does an excellent job of developing her characters.

Sookie is Dana's exuberant college roommate from Selma, Alabama. Sookie is a mom, wife and a Kappa forever and is very proud of Dana's success and sings her praises.

Aunt Elner Warren and cousins of Elmwood Springs, Missouri are endearing, loyal and wise in their own way. Dorothy Smith is the neighbor who speaks to the whole community through her radio show that is broadcast from her own living room. These are just a few of the characters that make this a fun book to read.

Heartlight is written by Marion Zimmer Bradley, the author of The Mists of Avalon. This is a contemporary fantasy set in the later half of the twentieth century America.

Beginning in the Kennedy era, the story continues through the Reagan years. Colin MacLaren is a ghostbuster, exorcist, psychic investigator and student and teacher of the Mystic Arts.

The story opens with Colin's return to America following the end of WWII. Colin meets Claire Moffat who becomes his best friend and companion when he saves her from a cult that practices human sacrifice.

Toller Hasloch, the leader of the cult becomes one of their greatest enemies. Colin spends his life saving people from evil and teaching and training the next generation of psychic warriors.

When Colin is no longer young, he finds himself confronted with his old enemy Hasloch, who has grown in his evil strength. Colin is the only one who can find his weakness and stop Hasloch's evil from destroying the light.

The Wages of Fame by Thomas Fleming tells the epic story of the Stapleton family beginning in the pre-Civil War years. George is Hugh Stapleton's grandson living on the east coast. Caroline is the beautiful, strong-willed woman who will marry George.

John Sladen is one of George's closest friends who had an affair with Caroline before she and George married. John moves to Louisiana and becomes involved in politics, George becomes a senator from

New Jersey and all three of them meet again in Washington, D.C.

Just as war with Mexico approaches. Can you guess what will happen? You may be surprised.

Pretense by Lori Wick is the story of the Bishop sisters, Mackenzie and Delancey. Mackenzie is dark-headed with a determined nature, an infectious sense of humor, a gift of imagination and reserved manners.

Delancey is a radiant blond and sees the world with an artist's eye and wide-sweep of emotions. Her trusting and charming personality easily wins friends but leaves a sensitive heart vulnerable.

As the sisters mature and encounter unexpected difficulties, their life changing experiences threaten to tear them apart. It is the tender bond of sisterhood and God's promise that will help them find the love they seek.

You will have to come in to find out more about the other titles that were mentioned in the first part of this column.

Family finds hidden miracle

In birth of Down's Syndrome baby

CONROE, Texas (AP) — To pull from a contemporary Christian tune, sometimes miracles hide.

For Adrienne Walsh, her hidden miracle appeared in the world Nov. 22, 1993, in the form of her sixth child, Havilah.

Just three hours after giving birth to the little girl at Memorial Hospital-The Woodlands, Mrs. Walsh and her husband, Patrick, got the news. Havilah, unlike the Walshes five other children, was born with Down's Syndrome, a genetic disease caused by a chromosome abnormality and characterized by moderate to severe mental retardation.

At first, the Walshes were devastated, nervous and uncertain of their youngest child's future, confused by a condition they knew little about and maybe even a little bitter at the situation that had befallen them. They agonized. They cried. They wondered. But their fears and anxiety soon would turn to joy for the gift — the hidden miracle — they had been chosen to receive.

Nearly five years later, Mrs. Walsh recalls how she felt in the early days with disbelief — almost unable to comprehend the range of emotions that had temporarily taken over her life. Since that time, she has learned that children with Down's Syndrome want just one thing, the same thing every child wants — to be happy and safe, to love and be loved. And she thanks God every day for Havilah, a bright-faced, cheery little girl who has never met a stranger.

"When she was born, we were very eager to find out about our child, and I didn't know I was carrying a Down's Syndrome child," said Mrs. Walsh, who lives in the Cut and Shoot area. "We were told, and it shocked me. It was a scare. Even though I had raised five other children, I was afraid that I wouldn't know how to take care of her," she said.

"We cried a lot. We had lost the child we thought we were going to have. And we were facing with having to deal with a child with special needs."

Confronted with something she knew practically nothing about, Mrs. Walsh began to gather information about the disease. She contacted a Down's Syndrome group in Houston, which sent her a packet of information that started her down a path to understanding. Mrs. Walsh attended one of the group's meetings, but soon realized driving to Houston at night was inconvenient at best and hazardous at worst.

"So I thought surely there's got to be other families locally that have Down's Syndrome children," she said. "So I began getting involved with the ECI program and asked them if they would put us together with other parents with Down's Syndrome children, and they did, and we started meeting once a month."

About a year later, as Mrs. Walsh and other group members tried to think of a name for their group that would differentiate it from other groups, Mrs. Walsh remembered a song she had heard on the radio called "Sometimes Miracles Hide."

From that song, a musical assertion that God wraps his blessings in disguise, sprang the group Hidden Miracles. But choosing a name for the organization wasn't nearly as easy as choosing a name for her latest edition. It was an Epiphany of sorts.

Annual convention highlights industry needs and concerns

Cattle feeders discuss challenge, commitment, and change

Texas and Oklahoma cattle feeders met this past week in Ft. Worth for their annual Texas Cattle Feeders Association convention for the primary purpose of meeting the challenge of the beef industry in the coming year.

This year's theme - Challenge, Commitment and Change - focused on the need for cattle feeders to challenge themselves to meet the ever changing needs of consumers, commitment to provide a quality product and receive a fair price, and the drive to change the status quo of the industry.

Bob Sims, past president of TCFA, in his closing speech, compared the beef industry to the age old cliché of building a better mouse trap.

"In cattle feeding, a better mousetrap is more money for fed cattle," said Sims. "But how can cattle feeders get the mousetrap built?"

This according to Sims is the major question facing cattle feeders.

Sims told the audience that most market challenges faced by cattle feeders in the past year have been self inflicted, because the feeders can't agree on what type of trap to build.

He is doubtful that group marketing is the answer and the lack of commitment to the idea confirms his suspicions. Sims pointed out that all the talk of 'packer control of inventory' is a misconception, because in reality cattle feeders control the majority of the supply.

"The problem is we have not been aggressive in marketing cattle and we have allowed the packer to fragment us to the point where he has control over enough of our supply to use it to his advantage," said Sims.

Sims said the dynamics currently at work in the cattle market have forced changes on everyone and there will be more to come if the feeders fail to meet the necessary challenges of the consumer market. Include in these changes, Sims said feeders need to encourage packer to change from a margin operator to a processor of a desirable product, which he is willing to put his name on.

For this cattle feeders will need to form a more unified group with a commitment to doing business differently.

Individuals will not be able to impact the packer or the buyer, but together, as a working unit, working through programs such as the beef check-off, there is hope of a better market.

In other business Jim Schwertner of Austin was elected chairman of the board; Paul Hitch of Guymon, Okla. was chosen chairman-elect; and Jim Waterfield of Canadian was elected vice chairman. Richard McDonald, TCFA's chief staff officer is now president and CEO.

Cattle feeders elected to a one-year term were Steve Adams, of Wichita, Kan.; Dick Chumley of Dalhart; Mike Heard of Hereford; Feller

Hughs of Friona; Chip Newell of Hooker, Okla.; David Owen of Amarillo; Mike Smith of Amarillo; Johnny Trotter of Hereford; and Harold Wooderson of Blackwell, Okla.

Cattle feeders from Texas, Oklahoma, and Kansas met last week to discuss the challenges faced by the cattle feeding industry, the commitment of individuals to producing a quality product and the needed changes if the beef feeders are to make a profit in the coming year. Present at this year's meeting were past president of TCFA, Bob Sims of Hereford; president Jim Schwertner of Austin; and president-elect Paul Hitch of Guymon, Okla.

Hog prices hit 26-year low

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Hog farmer Bryan Black's recent dinner of marinated pork chops wasn't just tasty. It was a way of boosting his own industry.

Hog prices hit a 26-year low this week, with hogs selling at $21 to $23 per hundredweight nationally and lower in some regions Wednesday. Analysts look to 1972 to find lower prices, said Glenn Grimes, a retired University of Missouri professor and national expert on hog farming.

Black, who raises 6,000 hogs a year on 500 acres about 20 miles southeast of Columbus, said low prices are hitting most producers hard.

"We're tightening our belts," he said. "Some smaller producers will take the opportunity to get out of the business."

Some parts of northwest Ohio have seen prices as low as $17 per hundredweight, said Robyn Callicoat of the Columbus-based Ohio Pork Producers Council.

Cost cycles are common in the hog business, but the swings have gotten worse recently, said Steve Meyer, director of economics for the National Pork Producers Council in suburban Des Moines, Iowa. "Producers expected a down cycle, they did not expect one this severe," Meyer said.

There's a glut of pork, beef and poultry on U.S. markets now, he said.

Slaughterhouses are at capacity, meaning there's limited competition among meatpackers for products. The hog industry is slaughtering 2.06 million hogs a week now, close to the record of 2.08 million, Meyer said.

Exports to Asian countries are up over last year but could probably be stronger if the ongoing financial crisis hadn't hurt those countries' purchasing power, Meyer added.

The pork council is running a national ad campaign called "The Other White Sale" to kick start consumption of pork, dubbed "the other white meat" in similar campaigns.

Hog farmers in Iowa, the country's largest hog state with 20,000 producers, aren't panicking but want to know how long the low prices will last, said Rich Degner of the Iowa Pork Council.

Producers in North Carolina, the country's second-largest hog state, will likely cut costs by moving to specialized production, said Walter Cherry of the North Carolina Pork Council.

That means one farmer might raise piglets, another young pigs, a third older pigs ready for market.

The country's top producers of hogs are, in order: Iowa, North Carolina, Minnesota, Illinois, Missouri, Indiana, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Ohio.

Randy Brown, who has 8,000 hogs on 1,000 acres 50 miles north of Columbus, said he is optimistic that pork supply and demand will even out. How optimistic?

He had clam chowder for lunch Wednesday.

Texas Agriculture Commissioner

When it comes to that long list of Texas myths and truisms, there's one about food that's hard to dispute: Texans do love beef.

But in this day of health consciousness, there are some folks who may be passing up a good thing for no real reason at all. Now the Texas Dietetic Association—a group that knows all about a healthy menu—is letting everyone know that beef does have a place on a dinner plate and in a balanced diet.

The association promotes what it calls Back to Basics. Back to Basics means eating a variety of foods from each of the food groups while also balancing what you eat with physical activity.

This approach embraces beef because it fits within the umbrella of a healthy diet. All foods can fit—just don't overdo it on any one. Balance a variety of choices from each food group and be sure to make smart choices about what you eat.

In response to consumer demands, the industry has worked to provide beef that is leaner than it was just 10 years ago. Finding that lean beef in your supermarket is as simple as looking for the words "round" or "loin" in the name of the cut (such as "top round" or "sirloin").

Proof that when it comes to eating right, you can have your steak and eat it too.

FARM & RANCH

Pumpkin-corn mazes delight children, young and old

TRACY, Calif. (AP) — Cornstalk mazes are nothing new to farmer Ron Dell'Osso, but he decided this year to add a few more twists and turns — five acres' worth more.

Dell'Osso's family farm has one of the largest pumpkin yields in California, producing about 2,500 tons a year.

When October rolls around, his family sets aside a few acres for the public, in the form of "U-pick" pumpkin patch. To attract customers, Dell'Osso began to cut a few narrow paths in a small cornfield.

"I used to have little corn mazes, very little, nothing to really talk about," Dell'Osso said.

But this year his family went all out, enlisting the Boys and Girls Club of Tracy, local schools and volunteers from nearby banks and businesses to build a monster maize maze and other attractions.

In a 10-acre plot, Dell'Osso has built three cornstalk mazes, a mini-maze made from bales of hay for small children, a hay-bale pyramid for climbing, a pony ride ring with two ponies, free hay rides and of course, a pumpkin patch.

It costs $3 to try one cornstalk maze. For all three, it is $6. For an unlimited day-pass for an entire family, it runs $20. And pumpkins? Twenty cents a pound. Everything else is free.

For most people, it takes about 45 minutes to negotiate the three corn mazes.

"I had a kid run through here real fast and sweaty, saying he did it in 10 minutes," said Sue Bryant, administrative assistant for the Boys and Girls Club. "Then there was a woman who took two hours. We were getting a bit worried about her."

Scores of families and school-age children have been running through the mazes since Oct. 1. Dell'Osso thinks by the end of the month, about 15,000 people will have tried the mazes, raising roughly $90,000.

A third of that will be donated to the Boys and Girls Club of Tracy and another third to 19 area schools that participated by selling admission tickets. The Dell'Osso family will keep the last third.

"I figured it would be a nice fund-raiser for the club and the school. They needed a fall fund-raiser," said Dell'Osso, a third-generation grower whose family has farmed for more than 80 years in the area. "It's just a way for me to help out the community."

It also has been a way to showcase his main crop in the month of October: pumpkins.

The Manteca-Tracy area in the northern San Joaquin Valley is the pumpkin capital of the world, producing about 25,000 tons a year, Dell'Osso said. Most of the pumpkins, mainly for carving, end up in markets in California.

"You have to time it: If the crop is ready in September or November, you're pretty much messed up," Dell'Osso said.

Frog genes boost chestnut resiliency

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Scientists hope to rescue one of the country's most prized hardwoods from the brink of extinction with an unlikely source of assistance: the African clawed frog.

Researchers at the State University of New York's College of Environmental Science and Forestry are counting on a genetic engineering breakthrough to help resurrect the American chestnut.

The scientists have successfully transferred synthetic frog genes that show signs of helping the trees resist the fungus that has almost killed them off.

"Some people don't like it because genetic engineering scares them, but I'm 100 percent behind it," said Herbert F. Darling Jr., of Buffalo, president of the state chapter of the American Chestnut Foundation.

"We lost a really wonderful timber resource," he said. "It's one of the most rot resistant woods available, and for a hardwood it's fast growing. It also provides lots of food for wildlife."

The American chestnut dominated Eastern forests early this century, with 4 billion trees.

The trees grew 100 feet high and 5 feet wide and were used for telegraph poles, shingles, furniture, paneling and musical instruments.

The nuts, in high demand around Christmas and New Year's, were a major cash crop for many Appalachian families and a staple for squirrels, chipmunks, wild turkey, bears, and deer.

By the 1950's, the American chestnut had been decimated by a blight accidentally imported from Asia and first detected at the Bronx Zoo in 1904.

The fungus infested the bark, creating sores that choked the trunk so food could not reach the treetops.

For decades, researchers have been trying to develop a blight-resistant chestnut tree to replace what was lost.

Scientists at the University of Tennessee-Chattanooga have reported progress in developing a resilient species by cross-breeding the blight-resistant Chinese chestnut with the American chestnut.

At SUNY, scientists have been trying to genetically engineer and grow a disease-resistant chestnut in their laboratories since 1991 when they began searching for fungus-resistant animal genes.

They had limited success with escargot and the Cecropia moth before finding the African clawed frog the most effective, said professor Charles A. Maynard, one of the chief project researchers at SUNY.

A breakthrough came in April, when synthetic frog gene were transferred into cells that subsequently produced chestnut tree shoots, Maynard said.

Having perfected the gene transfer process, scientists now are growing dozens of transformed chestnut shoots in sterile petri dishes under fluorescent light in their laboratory.

The next hurdle scientists must clear is growing the shoots into saplings, Maynard said. They hope to be able to plant saplings for testing by late 1999, he said.

"Our goal is by July 4, 2000, to know whether the gene research has worked or not," said Darling. "It's an American tree, so it seemed like a good date to make our announcement."

WTO opens markets

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States hopes a finding by the World Trade Organization will open access to Japanese markets for American exporters of apples and other agricultural goods.

Administration officials applauded a WTO report issued early this week, which concluded that Japan's testing requirement for its imports of apples, cherries, nectarines and walnuts is not backed by scientific evidence and is too restrictive. The United States had charged that the testing requirements were an attempt by Japanese officials to block U.S. exports into their country.

"This case shows the WTO distinguishes between legitimate science-based testing versus thinly veiled protectionist measures," said U. S. Trade Representative Charlene Barshefsky. "We fully expect that Japan will honor its WTO obligations and open its market to U.S. apples and other produce."

Japan mandates repeated testing of quarantine treatments each time a country attempts to export a new variety of an approved commodity. Japanese officials say the goal is to protect the health of its plants from the codling moth.

The United States claimed Japan was using the rule to block access of competing U.S. products and said the requirement had no scientific basis. The testing, which takes at least two years, also is costly to the government and producers, the Clinton Administration said.

Japan has 30 days to determine whether to appeal or comply with the terms of the decision, which asks that Japan bring its rules into conformity with trade agreements on testing requirements.

Recent rains prompt pasture growth

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Recent rains have prompted pasture growth and it may be just enough to ease cattle producers into the winter, according to the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Dr. Joe Paschal, extension livestock specialist in Corpus Christi, said some areas in South and Central Texas will not have the winter forage shortage producers feared this summer.

"San Antonio to Corpus Christi and over to Eagle Pass have had good general rain," he said. "In the past two weeks, five inches has fallen just east of Hondo and Laredo has had eight inches in the past month. So the cattle are in good better body condition than I've seen in a long time and there is sufficient grass as well."

Paschal said producers who had hay stacked along the flooded Guadalupe, San Antonio and Colorado rivers had a lot of it washed away, but a hay shortage generally will not be a large concern.

"It's important to remember that much of the region was not flooded," he said.

Dr. Bruce Carpenter, extension livestock specialist in Fort Stockton, said the outlook for West Texas doesn't look as good.

"A lot of areas haven't had significant amounts of rain and pastures and ranges in those areas don't have much grass to go into the winter with," he said.

Carpenter said some producers culled their herds early, but those who didn't may have a tough winter ahead of them. There is a general lack of forage across West Texas, he said, and feed is relatively expensive when compared to the value of cattle.

Dr. Ernest Davis, extension livestock economist, said recent rains in some areas have helped the cattle market in Texas.

"The rains have allowed several producers to hold onto more calves, he said. "We will see the fed cattle market trend up from now until the end of the year and on into the first part of next year."

Dr. Bob Robinson, extension director in Amarillo, said cattle are in good condition, but supplement feeding is under way and will increase as winter conditions approach.

"Range conditions in the district are very poor to fair," he said. "Winter forage will be short for a lot of producers."

Galen Chandler, extension director in Vernon, said recent rainfall has been a welcome relief on the Rolling Plains.

"Nearly every county reported rainfall," he said. "All of the rain came slowly and the cooler temperatures have provided a great relief as well."

Joe Pena, extension economist in Uvalde, said cool, clear weather returned after almost two weeks of turbulent weather.

Flood losses in some counties will amount to millions of dollars, he said. But the vast majority of the region received 2 to 4 inches of slow drizzling rain, which he said will have a very positive effect on agricultural production this winter.

Pena said fall vegetables in the Winter Garden are making good progress. The peanut harvest resumed in areas outside the flooded region, and harvesting of fall cabbage and cucumbers continues.

The following specific livestock, crop and weather conditions were reported by area district extension directors:

PANHANDLE
Soil moisture very short to short. Seasonal temperatures and light showers welcomed. Cotton is poor to good; striping continues. Sorghum is fair to good; harvest 50 percent complete. Soybean harvest nearly complete. Wheat planting under way.

SOUTH PLAINS
Soil moisture short. Cold nights, cool days. Pasture poor to fair; need moisture. Corn harvest nearly complete. Cotton fair to good. Sorghum and soybeans fair to good. Wheat needs moisture. Peanuts good, harvest progressing.

ROLLING PLAINS

WASTE WATER AND YOU COULD GET SOAKED.

If you do your part to conserve water by saving water outside your home, you will also save money:

- Water lawn only when needed;
- Do not over-water. One and a half inches of water applied once a week in the summer will keep most Texas grasses alive;
- Water early in the morning or late at night to avoid evaporation;
- Plant native plants;
- Use drip irrigation systems instead of sprinklers or set sprinklers at low angles;

- Do not cut your grass very short during the summer;
- Use a broom to sweep sidewalks - not your hose; and
- Use a bucket of soapy water to wash your car and turn on the hose only for rinsing.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

--Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

--Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

--Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

-- Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

HINTS FOR HOMEOWNERS

For AP Special Features
 You can reduce or lessen the toll that winter will take on your house by making a fall inspection - inside and out.

On the outside, start from the top:
 - Inspect your chimney for cracks or loose mortar. If the bricks are beginning to deteriorate, have the surface sealed. If the flashing is loose - the metal strip that seals the roof section around the chimney - secure it and seal it with roof cement. Check the condition of the rain guard or chimney cap.
 - If you have an outside television antenna, check the mounting straps, screws and bolts. If it's attached to the chimney, make sure it hasn't damaged the bricks.
 - Clean the gutters and downspouts. If you don't have leaf strainers, install them. Make sure there are no leaks at the gutter seams. Check the gutter pitch; it should slope toward the downspout one-fourth inch every 4 feet.
 - Also check for damage and paint failure at the points where the gutters are attached to the house.
Use Binoculars to Check For Broken Shingles
 - Check for broken shingles. Use binoculars so that you don't have to climb onto the roof. If your roof is more than 15 years old, check it for possible replacement.
 - Replace any broken screens in vents and louvers.
 - Trim overgrown trees and shrubs that rub against the house. They can damage the siding in a storm as well as clog drains and harbor pests.
 - Check for old birds' nests.
 - Fill masonry cracks in outside walls.
 - Check weather stripping. If necessary, recaulk around windows and doors and in the joints between siding and other materials.
Wash and Put Up Storm Windows and Storm Doors
 - Wash and put up storm windows and storm doors. Add weather stripping where needed.
 - Check the house foundations for signs of termites.
 - Rake the lawn. Store lawn equipment, outdoor furniture and the barbecue grill.
Then check the inside of the house:
 - To reduce energy costs, close off any unused rooms or areas such as the attic. Turn off the heat and make sure that the door closes tightly.
 - Remove and store room air conditioners if possible. Cover and seal any remaining units.
 - If you have a ceiling mounted attic fan, seal the attic side with plastic and cover it with insulation batting.
 - If you have humidifiers, clean the filters and the reservoirs.
 - Inspect weather stripping at the door to an unheated garage.
 - Check your furnace; have it cleaned before the winter season. Remove any debris or flammable material - such as cardboard boxes - that may be near the furnace. If you have a forced-air system, vacuum the duct openings and lay in a supply of air filters. Make sure you have sufficient fuel.
 Fall is also a good time to make an annual fire safety check:
 - Make sure that your smoke detectors are in working order.
 - Check that your fire extinguishers are fully charged. Place them near the kitchen stove, furnace, fireplace and other possibly hazardous locations.

Trimming some very special trees

The ninth annual Festival of Trees will be held Nov. 18-22 in the Hereford Senior Citizen's Center located at 426 Ranger.

The festival agenda, which was expanded to five days two years ago, will continue again this year.

Continuous festival activities and children's programs will begin at 8:30 a.m. Wednesday, Nov. 19.

A preview of this year's trees is scheduled for 5 p.m. to 8 p.m. on Wednesday, providing extra viewing time for anyone interested in bidding on one of the 24 beautifully decorated trees.

The Festival Gala, followed by the annual Festival Auction, is set for Friday, Nov. 20 from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

Traditionally, the trees included in the auction are 6-1/2' to 7' tall artificial trees. One tree though, a nine-foot tall Super Tree, is included in the auction.

The trees are sponsored by local and area businesses for $500 per tree. Some are sponsored by one company, while others have two firms splitting the cost.

The Super Tree is sponsored for $1000.

All trees are provided by the Senior Center. Decorations for the trees are provided by individuals, businesses, school groups and service clubs.

Decorators determine what they will be used for a specific tree.

The Memorial Tree, offered for the first time in 1994, will be featured again this year. The lighted, wooden Christmas tree serves as a tribute where people may honor loved ones through monetary contributions.

Donor levels and corresponding tree light colors are:

- Green Light - $10 - $99
- Blue Light - $100 - $249
- Red Light - $250 - $499
- Gold Light - $500 - $1,000

All proceeds benefit the Hereford Senior Citizen's Association which offers services to area senior citizens that include; congregated and home-bound meals, transportation and a modern and multi-functional senior center.

According to the Hereford Senior Citizen's Association, more than 2,000 senior citizens were assisted in 1997.

Also included in this year's festival, is the always popular melodrama. This year's presentation, "Here Come the Cows," or "Don't Say Moo in Mesa" will play on two separate occasions; Thursday, Nov. 20 and Saturday, Nov. 21 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. on each performance.

Finger foods will be served at the first melodrama performance for a cost of $10.00 per person, and the Saturday evening performance will include a full dinner for $15.00 a person.

The bazaar is famous for its holiday gift baskets which are assembled, filled and wrapped by members of the SCA. Each basket contains an assortment of items built around a central theme and each basket is unique.

The train display has been lengthened this year. Festival-goers will be able to see it in action Nov. 18 - Dec. 11.

There is something for everyone, every age and every budget at the Festival of Trees.

Included in this year's fare are; the Herd Restaurants, Bake Shop, children's programs, children's crafts. There is no admission cost for continuous festival activities, tree auction, preview of trees, lionel train display or children's programs.

The final day of activities will include a Holiday Turkey Buffet served from 12 noon to 2 p.m. The cost is $7.50 for adults and $3.50 for children. Advance tickets are required for the melodrama showings due to limited seating. Reservations can be made by coming to the center or calling 364-5681.

'Tis the season for seasonings

Crumble their willpower with spicy holiday feasts

Gingered Pumpkin Crumble

Filling:
 1 15-oz. can pumpkin
 1 14-oz. can sweetened condensed milk
 2 tblsp. brown sugar
 1 tsp. cinnamon
 ½ tsp. ginger
 ½ tsp. nutmeg
 2 eggs

Topping:
 2 tblsp. chopped crystallized ginger
 1 pkg. butter yellow cake mix
 ¾ c. chopped walnuts or pecans
 ½ c. butter, melted

Garnish:
 Whipped cream or topping

Heat oven to 350 degrees F. Spray 13x9-inch pan with nonstick cooking spray. In large bowl, combine all filling ingredients; beat until smooth. Pour into sprayed pan. In medium bowl, combine all topping ingredients; mix well. Sprinkle evenly over filling. Bake at 350 degrees F for 40-50 minutes or until top is golden brown. Cool at least 30 minutes before serving. To serve, cut into squares; place on individual dessert plates. Top each serving with whipped cream. If desired, sprinkle with additional chopped ginger. Store in refrigerator.

Home for the Holidays Brunch Casserole

1 lb. bulk breakfast sausage
 4 lrg. eggs, beaten
 1 c. milk
 1 c. reduced-fat or regular sour cream
 1 tsp. ground cumin
 2-1/2 c. buttermilk biscuit & baking mix
 1 10-oz. pkg. frozen whole kernel corn, thawed
 1 4-oz. can chopped green chilies
 ½ c. chopped roasted red bell peppers
 1 tsp. finely chopped jalapeno pepper (optional)

2 c. (8 oz.) shredded Mexican-style or cheddar cheese

In large skillet, cook and stir sausage until brown. Drain well; cool. Meanwhile in large bowl, stir together eggs, milk, sour cream and cumin; stir in biscuit & baking mix until smooth. Gently stir in sausage, corn, green chilies, roasted peppers and jalapeno. Pour into 13x9x2-inch baking dish coated with cooking spray. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes or until center is nearly set. Sprinkle cheese on top. Bake 5 minutes more or until cheese is melted. Serve with Christmas Salsa.

Makes 8-10 servings.

Christmas Salsa

Once you taste this fresh festive salsa, you'll want to make it throughout the year. It tastes great on burgers, chicken and seafood, too!

1 red bell pepper, chopped
 1 green bell pepper, chopped
 ¼ c. sliced green onions
 2 tblsp. fresh lime juice
 1 tblsp. chopped fresh cilantro
 1 tblsp. vegetable oil
 ½ tsp. salt

In medium bowl, combine all ingredients; mix well. Makes about 1-1/2 cups salsa.

Merry Cherry Rolls

Bake these as individual rolls or in the shape of a Christmas tree for a festive appearance.

3-1/2 c. buttermilk biscuit & baking mix
 ¼ c. granulated sugar
 1 c. half and half
 ¼ c. (½ stick) butter or margarine, melted
 ½ tsp. almond extract
 1 6-oz. jar red maraschino cherries, chopped and drained well (about ½ cup)
 1 6-oz. jar green maraschino cherries, chopped and drained well (about ½ cup)
 1/3 c. chopped pecans or almonds, toasted.
 Icing

In large bowl, stir together biscuit & baking mix, sugar, half and half, butter and almond extract. Turn out dough onto surface dusted with additional biscuit & baking mix. Knead 7 to 10 times. Roll out dough to a 12x9-inch rectangle. Sprinkle cherries and nuts over dough. Beginning at 12-inch side, roll up like jelly roll; pinch ends together. Cut into 12 1-inch slices. Place 1 inch apart on baking sheet coated with cooking spray. Bake at 400 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes or until golden brown. Cool on rack 10 minutes. Drizzle with icing. Makes 12 servings.

Icing: Stir together ¾ c. powdered sugar, 4 tsp. half and half and 1 tblsp. melted butter or margarine until smooth. Or, use ready-to-spread frosting to frost the rolls.

Crowd pleasers — Gingered pumpkin crumble, Christmas salsa and merry cherry rolls

Tour of Homes

Committee makes plans — The La Madre Mia Study Club publicity and ticket committee members met recently to plan the club's annual Christmas Tour of Homes scheduled for Dec. 6. Four Hereford homes will be decorated for this year's tour. Members of the publicity committee, left, Lavon Nieman and Mary Herring, are shown discussing tour plans with Betty Taylor, ticket chairman.

Study club fund-raiser, a highlight of season

La Madre Mia Study Club will highlight the onset of the Christmas season with its annual Tour of Homes from 1 to 4 p.m. on Dec. 6.

Featured in the popular tour this year will be the homes of Buster and Cynthia Miller, 230 Ranger; Mick and Tommy Stevens, 408 E. 5th; Herschel and Ruth Black, 143 Quince, and Dwayne and Cindy Cassels, 142 Pecan. Tickets for the tour are $5 per person. They may be purchased from any La Madre Mia Study Club member or at any of the featured homes on the day of the tour. Susan Robbins is chairman of the home tour committee for 1998.

Those attending the tour this year will see antiques and unique Christmas decorations, as well as numerous decorating and remodeling ideas.

They will also have a chance of winning a special door prize.

Cindy Cassels is president of the club. Home hostesses for the tour will be Carolyn Baxter and Mary Beth White for the Miller home; Kay Hall and Betty Taylor for the Black home; Nancy Paetzold and Myseida Smith for the Cassels home, and Nicky Walser and Susan Robbins for the Stevens home.

Other committee chairpersons include Lavon Nieman, publicity; Betty Taylor, tickets; Judy Williams, name tags; Tricia Sims, signs; and Glenda Marcum, gifts.

The annual tour serves as the principal fund-raiser for the club. Proceeds stay within the community for scholarships and other worthy causes.

Project offers different twist for sending your very best

Project Christmas Card could the solution to all your greeting card dilemmas.

If the busy holiday season seems to overwhelm you and there isn't enough time to get it all done, consider skipping the practice of sending individual Christmas greetings to local friends.

L'Allegra Study Club sponsors Project Christmas card, which offers individuals a way to make monetary contributions in the amount they would typically spend on Christmas cards and stamps.

Contribution canisters will be placed at several locations in the community, such as banks, grocery stores, retail businesses and The Hereford Brand in late November.

The club provides envelopes on which contributors are asked to write their name as they would like it to appear in the newspaper.

The names of contributors will be printed in a full page ad appearing in the annual Christmas Greetings edition of the Brand. Everyone listed in the ad is sending a collective greeting to the whole community.

Proceeds from Project Christmas Card benefit Hereford Regional Medical Center. The project was started in 1956 by a group of doctors and dentists' spouses who wanted to offer local residents an opportunity to support specific needs of the local medical community. L'Allegra Study Club has sponsored the project since 1986.

With the generous support of the community in past holiday seasons, L'Allegra Study Club has used proceeds raised by the project to purchase; a colposcope, a gazebo, a mammogram grid, an oxygen monitor for obstetrics, a fetal monitor, a blood pressure monitor, a cardiac enzyme monitor and a wide variety of laboratory equipment.

City schedules annual holiday park lighting

Dazzling display signals holiday is fast-approaching

Community fellowship, holiday spirit and an appearance from Santa Claus will combine in one meeting at 7 p.m., Monday, Nov. 30 as the City of Hereford hosts the 3rd Annual "Christmas-in-the-Park" celebration of lights.

The popular event, set in the heart of the downtown area at Mother's Park on the corner of Main St. and Park Ave., marks the beginning of a bright and dazzling holiday light display in the park.

Musical entertainment is tentatively planned, and the Hereford Pilot Club will serve hot chocolate during the event. If tradition holds, Santa Claus will very likely receive the honor of turning on the lighted 45-foot red cedar Christmas tree in the center of the park, and additional lighting and displays will be turned on in parks adjacent to Mother's Park.

All surrounding streets to Mother's Park, with the exception of Park Ave., will be closed to through-traffic until the conclusion of the ceremony.

Turkey casserole: holiday treat

A hearty dish loaded with heartwarming ingredients, perfect for cold nights

In medium bowl, stir together biscuit & baking mix, bacon and parsley; stir in milk to form ball. Turn out onto surface dusted with additional biscuit & baking mix; knead 8-10 times. Roll out to 1/4-inch thickness. Using a 3-inch tree-shaped cookie cutter, cut into 8 biscuits, re-rolling dough as needed.

- 1/4 c. (1/2 stick) butter or margarine
- 4 c. frozen country-style hash brown potatoes, thawed
- 1/2 c. chopped onion
- 1/2 c. diced celery
- 1 Tbsp. olive oil
- 4 c. cubed cooked turkey
- 1-1/2 c. water
- 1 pkg. country gravy mix
- 1 c. milk
- 1-1/2 c. shredded Swiss cheese
- 1/4 c. chopped red bell pepper
- 1/4 c. chopped green bell pepper
- Tree-shaped Biscuits (see below)
- 1-2 Tbsp. butter or margarine

Melt 1/4 c. butter in 13x9x2 baking dish; top with thawed potatoes and stir to coat. Bake at 400 degrees for 20 minutes.

Meanwhile, in large skillet, cook and stir onion and celery in oil over medium-high heat for 5 minutes. Add turkey and water; bring to a boil. Dissolve gravy mix in milk; stir into boiling mixture until thickened and bubbly. Remove from heat; stir in cheese until well blended. Stir in bell peppers.

Pour turkey mixture over hot potatoes. Prepare biscuits and place on top of turkey mixture. Bake 12-15 minutes more or until biscuits are golden brown and sauce is bubbly. Brush biscuits with melted butter. Makes 6-8 servings.

Tree-shaped Biscuits

- 2 c. buttermilk biscuit & baking mix
- 3 Tbsp. real bacon bits
- 2 Tbsp. finely chopped parsley
- 2/3 c. milk

Christmas stocking fund helps needy

Anonymous volunteer group brings food, clothing, hope and compassion to residents

Hereford's home-grown holiday charity, the Christmas Stocking Fund, will be accepting applications for assistance from the 1998 program November 10-12.

Sign-ups will be held for only three days this year, but daily hours will be extended. Applications will be accepted in the west end of the Community Center from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. each day. The Tri-County chapter of the American Red Cross, although not affiliated with CSF, will be providing volunteers to handle CSF applications.

Those registering for assistance must provide some form of personal identification and proof of Deaf Smith County residence. If applicants are seeking help with water, gas, or electric bills, copies of those bills and appropriate account numbers are required. CSF will enter its eighteenth season of operation in Hereford and Deaf Smith County this year. This year's fundraising campaign will mark a dozen seasons of grass-roots operation within the community following restructuring of CSF in 1986.

The Christmas Stocking Fund is run by a committee of anonymous volunteers representing a broad cross-section of the community.

CSF is a holiday charity based strictly on the generosity of the residents of Hereford and Deaf Smith County. It is not affiliated with any governmental entity, nor with any other organization. The charity assists the less fortunate of Hereford and Deaf Smith County during the Christmas season.

CSF volunteers screen applications and make the tough calls on assistance to be extended, keeping in mind that they must operate within a budget that is dictated by the sum of donations. Priority is given to the needs of children and the elderly.

The local charity assists with food, clothing, utility and medical expenses, and other special needs. CSF is funded strictly by the caring and sharing of the local community.

The Hereford Brand serves as the official collection point for CSF funds, and periodically publishes listings of CSF donors. The Brand will begin accepting donations immediately after Thanksgiving.

Donations may be made in person at The Brand at 313 Lee Avenue, or they may be mailed to CSF in care of The Brand at Box 673, Hereford.

Donors wishing to remain anonymous should notify The Brand at the time that they give their gift. The Brand will maintain a running tally of CSF contributions.

CSF made the holiday a little brighter for 140 families in 1997. Contributions to CSF hit a new record high last year of $21,772, eclipsing the old record of $21,451 that was set in 1993.

CSF's third-highest fundraising total came in 1989, when donations hit $20,718.

Among the less-fortunate families that got help from CSF in 1997 were eight households coping with cancer. Help also went out to homes burdened with Alzheimer's disease, blindness, domestic violence, heart disease, paralysis, and parents in prison.

Food baskets, including a ten-pound turkey and a variety of staples, were delivered to 45 families that included 72 adults and 94 children, including 11 elderly and six disabled recipients.

Vouchers for new clothing were provided to 83 households that included 196 children and 19 elderly or disabled persons. Five clothing voucher recipients were nursing home residents.

Utility assistance from CSF helped 39 households with their electric bills, with those households including 59 adults and 70 children. Forty households got help with natural gas or propane payments, the assistance touching 60 adults and 74 children. Another 35 households got assistance with water bills, helping 48 adults and 58 children.

Eight households got help with pharmacy bills, and CSF aided two households with hospital or clinic payments.

"The numbers involved are much more than statistics. They represent help for homes in our community that would have gone without some basic necessities if not for the Stocking Fund. We're confident that Hereford and Deaf Smith County will respond in their typically-generous manner again this holiday season," said a spokeswoman for the charity.

Christmas tea planned at DSC Museum

An open house and Christmas tea will be held from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 6 at the Deaf Smith County Museum.

The Deaf Smith County Historical Society hosts the festive event annually.

The open house has been scheduled to coordinate with La Madre Mia Study Club's annual Christmas Tour of Homes. Residents are encouraged to view museum decorations and enjoy holiday refreshments following the conclusion of the tour of homes.

All Deaf Smith County residents are invited to attend. Members of the historical society decorate the Deaf Smith County Library and the E.B. Black House each year in observance of the holiday season.

The tea, which is held alternately at the museum and the Black House, is sponsored by the historical society as a special thanks to county residents for their support.

The historical society will also offer demonstrations on making Christmas arrangements, wreaths and bows during this year's tea.

Annual Christmas project — Project Christmas Card donations will be accepted again this year by L'Allegra Study Club. Contribution canisters are placed throughout the community for residents who would prefer to donate to the fund in lieu of purchasing and mailing individual greeting cards for Christmas. The club places an collective holiday greeting ad in The Hereford Brand, featuring all donor names, as a trade-off for the donations.

Better not pout — There is little doubt that Santa Claus has been working overtime lately as he makes his list and checks it twice. He usually makes a few dry runs into our community beginning in November, stopping to make some brief appearances at special holiday events, before his eventual return Christmas Eve. He was photographed here last year during a Hereford Kiwanis Club Christmas party.

Chamber of Commerce sets new venue for local holiday gathering

Holiday Winter Gala replaces long-running 'Eat Your Heart Out Neiman-Marcus Fun Breakfast and Preview

The Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce will provide a new venue for entertainment and holiday shopping when it hosts the Holiday Winter Gala, Monday, Nov. 16, from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. at the Hereford Community Center.

The first-year Gala is replacing the long-running "Eat Your Heart Out Neiman Marcus Fun Breakfast and Holiday Preview" traditionally hosted by the women's division of the chamber of commerce and participating Hereford retailers.

"The Hereford Retail Business Association just felt like it was time to make a change," said Don Cumpton, executive vice president of the Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce.

"The earlier version was always deemed a great success, but the association wanted to offer men in the community a better opportunity to join their wives at the event," he said. "We think the timing and setting is better suited for male attendance."

The Gala will feature a vast array of booths representing Hereford's finest retail establishments, a holiday style show to be emceed by well-known conversationalists John Stagner and Tom Simons, free baby-sitting, a visit from Santa Claus, presentation of the Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce Bull Chip Award, door prizes and a drawing for $100 Hereford Bucks.

The price of admission is $15 per couple and persons interested in attending are encouraged to make advance reservations since seating is limited.

Local and area holiday bazaars offer shoppers gift-giving ideas

Handmade items make a welcome gift for nearly anyone on your Christmas list. Annual arts and crafts bazaars are an excellent source for such items.

If you are an artist or craftsman, the bazaars offer opportunities to display your handiwork and perhaps increase your income as well.

WESTWAY COUNTRY CHRISTMAS BAZAAR

The Westway Country Christmas Bazaar is scheduled for Nov. 14 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Hereford Community Center.

The bazaar will feature about 55 booths selling a wide variety of mostly-handmade merchandise.

Proceeds from the bazaar benefit Deaf Smith County 4-H and other community projects. For more information, call Carolyn Evers at 364-4739 and leave a message.

ANNUAL FESTIVAL OF ARTS AND CRAFTS

Wesley United Methodist Church will host its 18th Annual Festival of Arts and Crafts from Dec. 5 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Hereford Community Center.

Booth rentals are available until Nov. 26 and cost $10.00 per booth. All items are screened to determine their handmade authenticity.

Applications may be obtained from Ellen Collins, 801 N. Miles

CANYON CHRISTMAS DELIGHTS ROUNDUP

The Heritage Woman's Club of Canyon will hold a holiday bazaar Sunday, Nov. 8, 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. at the Cole Community Center located at 300 16th street in Canyon.

The bazaar, "Canyon Christmas Delights Roundup" will feature exhibitors from the entire Panhandle area.

The bazaar will also offer a bake sale featuring a wide assortment of homemade food which can be eaten at the bazaar or as take-out for another occasion.

Booth space is available and anyone interested may contact Linda Cotter at 499-3746, or Stephanie Parker at 655-1512.

HOLIDAY ARTS AND CRAFT BAZAAR

The Nazareth Art Club is sponsoring the annual Holiday Arts and Craft Bazaar Sunday, Nov. 22 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Nazareth School Cafeteria.

Booth space is available until Sat. Nov. 14 and costs $20.00 per booth. Booths are 8' x 10' and include one table and tow chairs. Interested persons should specify preference for either a wall or center booth.

The bazaar will also feature a "Turkey Dinner" Nov. 22 at noon at the Nazareth Community Hall.

More information about the bazaar and booth rentals may be obtained from Lucille Drerup, Box 3, Nazareth, Tx. 79063, (806) 945-2562; or Rose Mary Wilhelm, HCR2 Box 13, Nazareth, Tx. 79063, (806) 945-2583.

Pep community plans 53rd annual Thanksgiving Festival and feast

The Pep Community is currently making plans for its 53rd annual Thanksgiving Festival scheduled Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 26 at St. Philip Neri Parish Hall in Pep.

Pep is located in Hockley County on Highway 303.

The festival will feature german sausage, turkey, dressing and all the trimmings, served from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Cost for adults will be $7.00 and plates for children under 10 will be $3.00.

A bake sale offering homemade bread, cakes, pies, candy, and cookies will also be available.

Homemade crafts will be sold at the Country Store, and a fish pond will be open throughout the day for children.

Other festival activities will include; an auction set to begin at 2 p.m., and a raffle drawing for numerous cash and merchandise prizes. Raffle tickets will cost $5.00.

More information about the festival may be obtained by contacting; Ida Simmacher, 806-933-4344; Anna Belle Walker, 806-933-4696; or Dianna Dolle, 806-385-3387.

Christmas tea planned at museum open house

An open house and Christmas tea will be held from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday, Dec. 6 at the Deaf Smith County Museum.

The Deaf Smith County Historical Society hosts the festive event annually.

The open house has been scheduled to coordinate with La Madre Mia Study Club's annual Christmas Tour of Homes. Residents are encouraged to view museum decorations and enjoy holiday refreshments following the conclusion of the tour of homes.

All Deaf Smith County residents are invited to attend.

Members of the historical society decorate the Deaf Smith County Library and the E.B. Black House each year in observance of the holiday season.

The tea, which is held alternately at the museum and the Black House, is sponsored by the historical society as a special thanks to county residents for their support.

The historical society will also offer demonstrations on making Christmas arrangements, wreaths and bows during this year's tea.

An old-fashioned Christmas—Christmas displays and decorations from holidays past will be offered for viewing to Hereford residents during a Christmas tea and museum open house sponsored by the Deaf Smith County Historical Society.

The Christmas tree is usually the focal point of holiday spirit in the home, and every tree reflects the traditions of the family that decorated it.

In the Victorian era, people reveled in rich colors and textures. So, they adorned their Christmas trees with nosegays, silk tassels, paper and fabric fans, ornate glass ornaments, ropes of pearls and gold beads, and cornucopias. During the winter evenings before Christmas, Victorians would create these beautiful ornaments and place them on their trees.

To bring a 19th-century holiday into their home this year, people can create their own authentic Victorian decorations with these instructions from "365 Ways to prepare for Christmas" (HarperCollin), by David E. Monn.

Nostalgic Nosegays

Fabric rose
12 inches of ribbon that matches the rose, 1/2 inch thick
Tape

Stick the hem of a fabric rose into the center of a small gold or white doily, pinch it so it gathers around the flower, then turn it over and secure tightly with tape. Tie a 12-inch length of 1/2-inch matching ribbon once around the tape, and leave the ends as streamers. Use the stem to attach to the tree.

For a more romantic look, use a red heart-shaped doily. You also could use a larger doily and wire to gather bunches of dried flowers, like tea roses, baby's breath, heath and statice. For a seasonal touch, add some cinnamon sticks.

Victorian Jewel Ornament

3-inch Styrofoam ball
Gold paint
4 inches gold wire
White glue
Gold beading pins
36 inches gold braid, 1/4 inch wide
Assorted gold and crystal beads and pearls
Gold beading

Beaded or gold tassel

Paint the Styrofoam ball gold, and let dry overnight. Form a double loop of gold wire, and insert the ends into the top of the ball; glue to secure. With a glue gun and the gold pins, attach the gold braid around the ball twice to create four sections.

Create a design with the loose beads, making each of the sections the same or completely different. Work very slowly to allow each piece to dry.

Attach the gold beading in loops around the bottom of the ornament. Finish off with a tassel at the very bottom of the ball.

Ornamental

Decorating the Christmas tree is a time-honored tradition enjoyed not only in the United States, but in many other countries as well. Local residents will have an opportunity to see many variations of the Christmas tree ornament theme during the Hereford Senior Citizen's annual Festival of Trees. Proceeds from the week-long festival, which is highlighted each year with a large tree auction, are used to sustain activities and services provided to local and area senior citizens.

Browsing — Bub Sparks of Hereford strolled past numerous holiday retail booths during last year's Neiman-Marcus Holiday Preview at the Community Center. The Deaf Smith Chamber of Commerce has announced a few changes, including a name change, to this year's event.

When the holidays are not happy

While the holidays can be the happiest time of the year for many, for some, it is a time of dread. For individuals who feel alone, images of ideal "happy families" can heighten the feeling of loneliness. Those who have suffered a bereavement often feel a resurgence of grief at the holiday season. Those with family members spread across the country may have to make hard "choices" of whom to spend the holidays with, creating hurt feelings and guilt.

Even for individuals who enjoy the holidays, there are increased demands on time, energy and finances that can cause additional stress. In families where both parents work, there may be guilt that traditional holiday preparations cannot be made for their children, as was made for them when they were young.

With all these stressors in action, it is important to distinguish between the "holiday blues" and clinical depression. While they share some of the same symptoms and people use the term "depression" loosely in conversation, the two are very different entities and require different strategies to alleviate the depressed mood.

Clinical depression is a mood disorder that is caused by a chemical imbalance in the brain. While its cause and treatment lay in the brain's neurochemistry, life events may trigger a bout of depression in a susceptible individual. The stresses and strains of the holidays might trigger a true clinical depression.

Holiday blues are just what they sound like: feelings of sadness, anger and tiredness coming at a time when people are supposed to be filled with joy. And, because they are supposed to be filled with the holiday spirit, add guilt to the above list. It is a transient feeling that does not require medical treatment and may be minimized by following a few simple strategies.

A case of the holiday blues will pass, but the National Foundation for Depressive Illness (NAFDI) offers some suggestions to minimize the stresses of the holidays:

Do not take on more activities than you can handle; be realistic about what additional holiday responsibilities you can comfortably accept.

Maintain your normal sleeping, eating and exercising patterns as much as possible.

Helpful suggestions for coping with the holidays and the stress they bring Plan a holiday budget and stick to it; do not over extend or run up large credit-card bills.

Keep your alcohol intake moderate; alcohol is actually a depressant. If you have a drinking problem, get the support you need during this especially difficult period.

Far more serious than the holiday blues is when the stresses of the holiday season trigger or worsen true clinical depression. Those who have had depression before should watch for the symptoms; those who are a family member or friend of that person should watch for the signs. These include:

- Depressed mood
- Loss of interest in things you used to enjoy
- Changes in appetite and/or weight (more or less)
- Changes in sleeping patterns
- Fatigue
- Feelings of worthlessness
- Recurrent thoughts of suicide

If you know you are susceptible to clinical depression, follow the above guidelines, and look for the symptoms. If you are experiencing these symptoms, go to the doctor. If you are experiencing these symptoms for the first time in your life, your doctor can assess whether you are suffering from clinical depression and advise you on effective treatments. Clinical depression is treatable in 80 percent of cases.

Is it Just the Blues?

"The blues" are a normal reaction to unhappy or stressful life events. Depressive illness is not. It's a serious debilitating condition that can lead to suicide. Use the following checklist to help determine if you or a loved one may be suffering from depressive illness.

SELF-TEST FOR DEPRESSIVE ILLNESS

I feel extremely sad all or most of the time.

I seem to have no energy.

I've lost interest in most of the activities I used to enjoy.

I sleep much more (or much less) than usual.

I eat much more (or much less) than usual.

I have trouble concentrating, remembering and making decisions.

I feel hopeless about the future.

I feel worthless.

I feel anxious.

I think about death and suicide.

The Holidays will soon be here.

★ Hughleys trumps race card with family issues

By John Crook
©TVData Features Syndicate

More than two decades after TV icon George Jefferson started barking at his white neighbors, ABC turns to another fish-out-of-water black father in the new Tuesday sitcom The Hughleys.

While Norman Lear's The Jeffersons used its central characters to make pointed statements about racism in the United States, The Hughleys is casting its lot with a more traditional topic: family.

D.L. Hughley stars as Darryl Hughley, a successful businessman who moves his family from central Los Angeles to a predominantly white suburb. His wife, Yvonne (Elise Neal), and their two young children (Ashley Monique Clark, Dee Jay Daniels) instantly make themselves comfortable in their new home, but Darryl's initial pride is diminished after his lifelong friend Milsap (John Henton) plants a dreadful notion in his mind: Darryl is "on the slippery slope to losing his blackness."

Viewed from this perspective, Darryl becomes almost comically paranoid, especially after he meets his almost impossibly white neighbors, Dave and Sally Rogers (Eric Allan Kramer, Marietta DePrima). It falls to sensible Yvonne to rescue her thin-skinned husband from his ongoing battle with foot-in-mouth disease.

"Because he's coming into the neighborhood, (Darryl) has to confront race first," executive producer Matt Wickline acknowledges. "It's the first thing that's mostly different to him when he moved in, (but) it's not going to be (in) every show. What we want to do is a show that's true to (D.L.'s) life, a really funny family show."

As the shared last names suggest, The Hughleys is directly based on the actual experiences of its leading man, a stand-up comic who recently moved his family from south central Los Angeles to the suburb of West Hills. Kramer's character, Dave, is based on Hughley's real-life neighbor, Jim.

Hughley says he actually lived through the same kind of disorientation that his character faces. "I grew up on 135th and Avalon," Hughley says of his old neighborhood, "and I never even knew white people lived in Los Angeles. I watched The Price Is Right and they would say, 'We live in L.A.' and I'd go, 'I've never seen you around here!'"

"When Jim tried to come over (after we moved), this big white guy, I had never had a white friend that wasn't an agent," he says with a laugh.

Comic Chris Rock, whose award-winning HBO show is often singled out for its stinging but genuinely witty comments on race relations, signed on as an executive producer to help get Hughley's project the green light. Rock has acknowledged that it is finding its way creatively, but there already are signs that the series is moving from its initial broad comedy into a more subtle show.

The characters of Dave and Sally, for example, were downright saintly in the pilot, but a recent episode had Dave bonding over football with Darryl and Milsap, only to quickly pull out of a dinner trip with the two when he found out the restaurant was in the heart of the 'hood.

"We don't wrap it up with a neat bow, have them shake hands and be pals," Wickline says of Dave and Darryl's evolving attitudes toward each other. "We're going to take our time getting that relationship started."

In its cushy time slot, The Hughleys just may get all the time it needs.

TV PIPELINE

By Taylor Michaels

©TVData Features Syndicate

Q: Are the producers of Touched by an Angel concerned that their lead character, Monica (Roma Downey), has the same first name as the former White House intern who is currently all over the news? Or does it not bother them? Your thoughts, please. —Stephen V. Gilmore, Charlotte, N.C.

A: "Gee, I doubt they've even made that correlation," CBS Angel publicist Pam Gorode says. "Our Monica is just Monica, and there are a lot of very nice Monicas in the world."

My thought, after thanking you for giving me a big laugh, is that the Angel producers aren't losing any sleep over the current reluctant "heroine" of Zippergate.

Q: On Frasier, I have noticed a framed poster in the back hall of the set with the word "Schoenberg" on it. What is its significance? —Chuck in Port Charlotte, Fla.

A: It's a nice character touch on the part of the show's set decorators. Arnold Schoenberg was an Austrian composer who created a school of composition called "twelve tone," in which melodies were structured according to a complex formula. Many of his works are dissonant and demanding — in short, exactly the kind of music an intellectual snob like Dr. Frasier Crane would enjoy.

Q: The new Mr. Roarke on Fantasy Island looks very familiar, but I can't place him. Is he just a busy actor who does a lot of things, or was he in a series? —Joan Lindsay via e-mail.

A: Yes to both questions, Joan. Malcolm McDowell, 55, is an internationally known actor whose work includes Stanley Kubrick's disturbing 1971 classic A Clockwork Orange.

Oddly, however, everyone who has asked me this question since the new Fantasy Island premiered has recalled McDowell from his recent series role as Rhea Perlman's cantankerous college professor in the CBS sitcom Pearl.

Q: Whatever happened to the Dark Shadows that was on TV in the early '90s? It was excellent. —Andrea Lair-Kirby, Trumbull, Conn.

A: Despite an excellent cast that included Ben Cross (Chariots of Fire) and Jean Simmons (The Thorn Birds), NBC's 1991 revival of the campy daytime serial pulled anemic ratings that would have starved its chief vampire, Barnabas Collins. The show premiered on Jan. 13 and was canceled two months later, on March 22.

Q: What happened to Whose Line Is It Anyway? —Heather via e-mail.

A: Line was scheduled for only a trial run last summer but pulled strong enough ratings that it probably will return later to ABC as a midseason replacement.

HIGHLIGHTS

Grizabella (Elaine Paige) sings the Andrew Lloyd Webber show-stopper "Memory" in the Great Performances telecast of the Tony Award-winning musical Cats Monday on PBS (check local listings).

Start spreadin' the mews! Cats slinks its way onto PBS

©TVData Features Syndicate

Cats is a paradox. Andrew Lloyd Webber's musical adaptation of 14 poems in Old Possum's Book of Practical Cats by T.S. Eliot is the longest running musical in Broadway history - and possibly the most derided show of the past two decades.

"Cats isn't an opera! I'm not even sure it's music!" snapped Joe Pinoni (Nathan Lane) in an episode of the NBC sitcom Encore! Encore! Several TV shows have used the Cats reference as a kind of hip comic shorthand for "a show only a tourist could love."

Whether it's treasure or trash, the Tony Award-winning musical arrives on PBS Monday, Nov. 2 (check local listings), in a Great Performances production sure to please most viewers. The cast includes Elaine Paige, who originated the role of the glamorous Grizabella, and Ken Page, Broadway's first Old Deuteronomy. Oscar winner John Mills, 90, takes the role of Gus the Theatre Cat.

Adapted by Lloyd Webber and original director Trevor Nunn from Eliot's poetry collection, the musical takes place on the night of the Jellicle Ball, when one lucky feline will be selected for a mystical rebirth into another life.

Essentially, Cats is plotless, a lively revue of "specialty acts" by its kitty corps. Some numbers are rousing, many are forgettable, and one - "Memory" - is truly haunting.

The Great Performances telecast is a bit of a mixed bag. The frequent close-ups allow viewers to appreciate designer John Napier's stunning makeup and costumes, although his misty moonlit set looks far more striking from a distance.

David Mallet, who directed the telecast, favors MTV-like editing, and his frequent cuts tend to disrupt the flow of Gillian Lynne's canny choreography.

Still, Paige's poignant Grizabella is more than ready for her close-up, and when she soars into the climax of "Memory," all of the evening's occasional dull patches are, well, forgotten. In short, it's the kind of moment Great Performances was created to capture.

G
Gambling Lady (1934) Barbara Stanwyck, Pat O'Brien. A gambler's daughter finds a way to beat the odds when her husband becomes a murder suspect. 1:30. November 5 8am.

SATURDAY

THE BUCK STARTS HERE.

Newspaper is usually the first place people go when considering a purchase. It's their primary source of advertising information.

Newspaper helps spark the local economy by putting dollars into circulation. And that's good for everyone, not just the retailer.

Because a strong local economy means lower property taxes, more jobs, tax support for community services and a better place to live.

THERE'S MORE Hereford IN THE BRAND.
