Raising Ol' Glory

As a prelude to the Veterans Day holiday, which was observed across the United States today, members of Hereford Boy Scout Troop No. 52 raised a flag presented to Hereford Care Center by Bessie Mathews. The flag was presented to Mrs. Mathews following the funeral of her husband, Henry Mathews, a World War II veteran who died Oct. 12. The Boy Scouts who participated in the flag-raising ceremony were Cameron Caraway, Clinton Gilmore, Seth Laing, Jeremy Blakely and Scout Leader Randy Laing. Also attending the ceremony were Mrs. Mathews' nephew, Jim Cranford of Wichita, Kan., and niece, Darlenda Marquis, and her husband, Jimmy, of Floydada.

Texas Tech honors local agri leader

Shirley L. Garrison

A Hereford agribusinessman is among four Texas Tech University graduates recognized as distinguished alumni by the Ex-Students Association and the university.

The recipients will be honored during a reception at 6:30 p.m. Friday at the Merkel Alumni Center on the Tech campus.

The annual Distinguished Alumni Dinner will begin at 7 p.m.

The recipients are Shirley Leon Garrison of Hereford, agribusiness and banking; Jimmie Ruth Wittenberg Evans of San Antonio, partner in Wittenberg Co. and senior vice president of the San Antonio Livestock Committee; William M. "Bill" Sims of San Angelo, a retired state senator; and Will D. Jarrett of Dallas, a retired journalist and former president of Westward Communications.

The recipients are chosen on the basis of their significant contributions to society through their lives and work, and the distinction they have brought on the university.

"I was surprised and naturally pleased to be selected," Garrison said Tuesday.

Garrison, who was born in Detroit, Texas, is a graduate of Idalou High School. He has devoted his life to agribusiness and farming. He received a bachelor's degree in agriculture education in 1940.

In 1944, he entered the Army. He spent two years in Germany, working in a military program to help restore agriculture, which had been devastated by the fighting in World War II.

Returning to the family farm near Idalou in 1948, he has operated farms and grain elevators in Lubbock, Castro and Parmer counties.

In 1954, he purchased land in the Easter community, which was part of the Hereford Independent School District and his three children graduated from Hereford High School.

He also was among a group of Hereford area residents who helped bring major industries to Deaf Smith County, was a charter stockholder in Southwest Feedyards and started Garrison Seed Co.

In 1986, Garrison moved into finance by opening banks in Lubbock, Dimmitt, Earth and Seagraves. He served a three-year term as director of the Texas Cattle Feeders Association, and was chairman of the Hereford Economic Development Corp.

In 1990, Garrison was named Distinguished Alumnus of the Tech College of Agriculture Sciences and Natural Resources.

In 1992, Garrison was named the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce's Ag Man of the Year.

He also was among the community leaders who worked to establish the Hereford Senior Citizens Center. He was president of the Senior Citizens Association board during the $500,000 expansion several years ago, was co-chairman of the Deaf Smith County Centennial Celebration (1990), has served as a trustee for McMurry University in Abilene, and is an active member of First United Methodist Church.

Although he has slowed down, Garrison said he is still involved in his enterprises, "but at this stage in life, you just want to keep your health and be comfortable in your living conditions."

Term limits among bills introduced for session

AUSTIN (AP) — Although the start of the 1999 Legislature is still two months off, lawmakers Monday started the process that will see thousands of new laws proposed by mid-March.

On the first day to pre-file bills for the 140-day legislative session that convenes Jan. 12, lawmakers proposed everything from tougher treatment of criminals to term limits for themselves.

"Our constituents don't send us here to be professional politicians who never come home," said Sen. Jane Nelson, R-Flower Mound, in offering the term limit proposal.

"This will ensure that elected officials have to go home and live under the laws they passed," she said.

Her bill would limit members of the state House and Senate to six sessions; statewide officeholders and members of most state boards, commissions and other governing bodies would be limited to 12 years.

She also proposed allowing citizens to take lawmaking into their own hands through a process called initiative and referendum. Initiative lets citizens put proposed new laws on the ballot by petition; referendum allows them to repeal laws already passed.

"It gives taxpayers a tool to keep their government limited and accountable," Ms. Nelson said.

Rep. Burt Solomons, R-Carrollton, introduced a bill to allow counties to charge jail inmates for some of their room and board. A similar proposal was filed by two other lawmakers.

Solomons said his measure would let counties charge inmates up to $25 a day to help defray the costs of their incarceration. The charges, which would be similar to court costs assessed on criminals, would be determined by judges, he said.

He said 16 other states have such laws. If counties collected 8 percent to 12 percent of jail costs from inmates, that could save millions of tax dollars a year, he added.

A bill introduced by Rep. Norma Chavez, D-El Paso, would prohibit the state from constructing toxic waste dumps within 60 miles of the Texas-Mexico border.

Her bill follows a controversial proposal to build a radioactive waste disposal facility near Sierra Blanca in West Texas.

Impeachment

Republicans gear up to defend Ken Starr

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans are gearing up to defend Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr when he testifies before a House committee next week about his impeachment probe of President Clinton.

Judiciary Committee Republicans who signaled this week that they were pressing a case with their investigation of Clinton's affair with Monica Lewinsky headed to the home districts Tuesday with a staff memo in hand emphasizing the prosecutor's "pos points."

"Judge Starr is one of our country's premier lawyers," begins the two-part memo viewed by The Associated Press. The second part of the document focused on "response to recent attacks" on Starr by Democrats.

The memo was handed out during a meeting Tuesday with the committee's chairman, Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., at which GOP members were apprised of the latest plans for impeachment hearings set to begin in nine days.

Members who attended the meeting said Hyde laid out the same schedule as he did

Since the adoption of the Constitution, only one president, Andrew Johnson (1868), has been brought to trial in the Senate on charges voted by the House. The Senate failed by one vote to convict Johnson. In 1974, the House Judiciary Committee voted three charges of impeachment against President Richard M. Nixon, but he resigned from office before the charges could be voted upon by the House.

last week, which begins with Starr on Nov. 19 and includes only one other witness. But they added that the committee still was discussing whether to call additional witnesses, such as Clinton confidant Bruce Lindsey.

Starr's appearance will mark the first time he has been quizzed publicly about his probe, which began four years ago as an investigation of Clinton's Whitewater land dealings in Arkansas and was expanded to include several other matters, including allegations of perjury and obstruction of justice regarding the president and Ms. Lewinsky.

In the same room where articles of impeachment against Richard Nixon were approved a quarter-century ago, Starr will face Democrats who repeatedly have accused him of conducting a politically motivated probe of Clinton's

News in brief

Prominent criminal defense attorney slain

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A prominent criminal defense lawyer was shot to death as he slept in his home in northwestern Bexar County, police say.

Police said Leslie Vaughn, 44, was shot in the back of the head about 1:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Lawyers, judges and others at the Bexar County Justice Center expressed shock.

"When something like this happens, it strikes so close to home," said Cornelius Cox, a criminal defense lawyer and one of Vaughn's close friends.

"We work with it every day; we work with victims, with people accused of crimes, and sometimes people feel we aren't affected by the tragedies," said Cox, a past president of the San Antonio Black Lawyers' Association. "But today we're all feeling a great sense of loss."

Dragging death suspect denies racial killing

DALLAS (AP) — One of three white defendants accused of beating and dragging a black man to death in East Texas says the crime was not racially motivated.

Rather, accused killer John William "Bill" King says in a seven-page letter released to The Dallas Morning News, the murder stemmed from drug ties between one of his cohorts and the victim, 49-year-old James Byrd Jr.

Jasper County District Attorney Guy James Gray said he knew of no evidence to support King's claim of drug ties between suspect Shawn Berry and Byrd. Gray declined further comment.

King, Berry and Russell Brewer all face capital murder charges in the June murder of Byrd in the deep East Texas town of Jasper.

In his letter, which court-appointed defense attorney C. Haden Cribbs called "a terrible, terrible mistake," King blamed the slaying solely on Berry, who initially cooperated with police.

Dive team to scour lake for missing boy

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — A police dive team will scour the murky bottom of a small lake for a boy missing since he rode away from home on his bicycle more than two weeks ago.

Police Chief Jerry Neal, desperate for clues in the Oct. 26 disappearance of Dorian Thomas, decided Tuesday to allow the department's diving team search the bottom of Martin Road Lake.

"I made that decision based on some of the information we've heard about him spending time around there, and you just never know," Neal said.

Dorian's family said the boy often played at the lake while riding his bike in the area. The Bivins Elementary School student was reported missing more than 24 hours after he vanished near his apartment.

Neal said diving into the northeast Amarillo lake won't be an easy undertaking.

Group questions TAAS difficulty

HOUSTON (AP) — By the time a Texas student gets out of grade school, he should be able to make change for a $20 bill, educators say.

A private taxpayer advocacy group asked several out-of-state professors to grade the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills. Too easy, they said.

Here's a math question from the 10th-grade exit exam: "At a restaurant Steve ordered food totaling $6.85. If he paid with a $20 bill, how much change should he receive?"

"Certainly every high school graduate should be competent at solving problems of this nature," the report said. "However, these items do not reflect the kinds of skills and knowledge that are grade-level appropriate for high school students."

Using California math standards as a guide, the researchers said that most of the TAAS questions on the high school exit exam were geared to the fifth- and sixth-grade level.

The Tax Research Association of Houston and Harris County issued the analysis Monday and asked whether our educational standards are too low.

"The purpose is not to attack, it is not to slash and burn, it is not to hold people culpable for anything because I believe that everyone in this state wants children to learn, they want children to advance," said TRA President George Scott.

The TAAS is given to students in grades 3-8, and in high school.

Students must pass the high school TAAS to get a diploma. The test also is used to rate schools and school districts.

The Texas Education Agency, which administers the TAAS, cited a study by the National Education Goals Panel that lauded Texas and North Carolina for having the greatest gains in the National Assessment of Educational Progress.

"The fact that the Texas test is too easy cannot be the case if you look at how well Texas students are doing on national tests," said Ann Smisko, associate commissioner for curriculum, assessment and technology. "They are scoring very well."

The TAAS questions are designed to test students on how well they know the curriculum standards that are set by the State Board of Education, said Elliott Johnson, manager of assessment services for National Computer Systems, the company that contracts with TEA to design the test.

The TAAS that will be given in the spring of 2000 will reflect more rigorous standards that the state board adopted last year, officials said.

Obesity effects genders differently

DALLAS (AP) — Obesity is a heavy burden for the heart.

While experts have long known that too much weight raises the risk of heart trouble and increases the cost of health care, doctors from Harvard Medical School set out to learn what this means for the individual.

An analysis by Dr. Graham Colditz shows that the effects of too much weight can be dramatic.

His study calculates that an man of ordinary weight between 45 to 54 faces a 35 percent chance of coronary heart disease at some point during his life. That goes up to 38 percent for the mildly obese, 42 percent for the moderately obese and 46 percent for the severely obese.

For a normal-size woman in the same age range, the lifetime risk is 25 percent. This rises to 29 percent for the mildly obese, 32 percent for the moderately obese and 37 percent for the severely obese.

"This is clearly an important clinical and public health problem, especially considering how obesity is increasing," Colditz said Tuesday at a meeting of the American Heart Association.

The National Institutes of Health this summer said that about 55 percent of American adults — 97 million people — are overweight or obese, up from 43 percent in 1960.

Doctors often measure body mass index to judge obesity. The BMI can be calculated by dividing weight in pounds by height in inches squared, and multiplying the result by 704.5.

For example, a 5-foot-4 person weighing 140 pounds would have a BMI of 24. For someone 5-foot-10 weighing 188 pounds it would be 27. In this study, a BMI of 27.5 was considered mild obesity, 32.5 moderate obesity and 37.5 severe obesity.

The Harvard researchers calculated that the lifetime health costs of heart disease for a man who is not obese is $10,500. This goes up to $12,000 for the mildly obese, $14,000 for the moderately obese and $16,400 for the severely obese. For women, the cost rises from $5,800 for someone who is not obese to $6,700 for the mildly obese, $7,900 for the moderately obese and $9,400 for the severely obese.

The study was based on data from the Third National Health and Nutrition Examination Survey and the Framingham Heart Study.

Officials offer reward for wolf killer

Biologists consider sabotage of restoration program

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The suspected shooting death of a fourth Mexican gray wolf has biologists worried that someone is trying to sabotage a federal program to restore the wolf in the wild.

The latest death was that of a yearling discovered Saturday near the New Mexico-Arizona line.

"We're viewing this apparent shooting as an attempt to sabotage wolf recovery," Nancy Kaufman of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said Tuesday. "We're going to hit this investigation hard."

Fish and Wildlife is offering a $10,000 reward for information leading to a conviction. The penalty for shooting a wolf is a $100,000 fine and a year in prison.

Five of 11 Mexican gray wolves reintroduced in the wild and a pup born to one of them are either dead or presumed dead. One was shot by a camper who felt threatened by the animal. Three were believed to have been shot, while two others, including the pup, have not been found.

Only three of the 11 wolves remain in the wild. Three others were recaptured — two because they wandered outside the reintroduction area, one because she was the mate of a shot male.

The recovery program begun this year is designed to build a self-sustaining population of about 100 wild wolves. The Mexican gray wolf, or lobo, was hunted to near extinction about 50 years ago.

Some Southwestern ranchers had grumbled about the reintroduction effort, fearing the wolves would feed on their cattle. But Fish and Wildlife spokesman Hans Stuart said federal biologists have enjoyed a good working relationship with ranchers.

"We don't have a suspect or even a group that we suspect," he said.

Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt said the recovery had been progressing well until the shootings.

"All of these losses are tragic because the wolves were displaying all the right behaviors in the wild," Babbitt said in a statement. "Each of them was successfully hunting elk and avoiding livestock."

Stuart said two female wolves will be released in a week or so in hopes they will mate with surviving male wolves. Biologists plan to release three or four more family groups early next year.

"It is a terrible loss," Stuart said of the latest death. "However, even with all these losses, we're optimistic about the wolves — if people would just leave the wolves alone."

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I don't know how to handle this problem and hope you can give me some ideas.

Ann Landers My husband appears to outsiders as mild-mannered and easygoing. Everyone says he is such a nice, pleasant person. They don't see what I see. Whenever we have a disagreement, he blathers on for hours, sometimes for an entire night. Then, he blames me because he doesn't get any sleep.

It starts like this: We have a small, inconsequential difference of opinion. He accuses me of interrupting him while he is trying to explain his side. He yells at me to keep quiet, so I don't talk. Then, HE talks — anywhere from 20 minutes to two hours. While he is talking, he is also asking me questions. When I try to answer, he gets mad at me for interrupting him. If I don't answer, he says, "You are not paying attention to me." If I leave the room, he follows me and continues to yell. If I close a door, he opens it. If I lock a door, he becomes furious and screams, "You have no right to lock a door in my face. This is my house, too."

This scene can go on for three or four hours or longer. If I say, "I'm going to bed," he will say, "Fine," and he keeps on talking. I have stashed earplugs between the mattress and the box springs so I can block him out and get some rest. Sometimes, I sleep with a pillow over my head.

I would leave this man, but I have a 15-year-old son from another marriage and am reluctant to disrupt his life again. My husband's talking marathons occur about once a month. After a few hours of this torture, I would confess to anything just to get him to shut up. What can I do to stop this? — Sleepless in Little River, S.C.

Dear Little River: Your husband is severely neurotic and punitive, as well. You are his whipping post. Your best bet is to beat him at his own game. No matter what he says, agree with him. Practice saying, "Honey, you are right," and be sincere. It won't take long before he discovers there is nobody around to fight with, and he might shut up. Joint counseling would be useful. If he won't go, go yourself.

Dear Ann Landers: Recently, a friend of mine traveled to another state to take part in a wedding. Before the ceremony, she had her hair done. As the hairdresser combed through her hair, she asked if my friend had a birthmark on her scalp. My friend was not aware of one (who examines the top of her head?), and the beautician suggested she have it checked by a dermatologist.

It turned out to be melanoma in the early stages, but the prognosis is good. That beautician saved my friend's life.

Inform your readers that hair is not enough protection from the ultraviolet rays of the sun when they are on the beach or simply walking about. They should wear hats or other head coverings. And please, Ann, tell the hair stylists who read your column to be on the lookout for any suspicious-looking moles on the scalps of their clients.

They, too, might save a life. — A Friend in Phoenix

Dear Friend: Your friend was lucky to have such an observant beautician. I have received many letters from readers saying they went to a dermatologist with their suspicious moles, and sure enough, the diagnosis was "malignant melanoma." The mole was removed, and they lived to tell about it. Thank you for giving me yet another opportunity to help my readers.

Gem of the Day (Sent in by Herman Katz of Sierra Vista, Ariz.): If it weren't for the fact that the TV and the refrigerator are in different rooms, some of us would get no exercise at all.

What can you give the person who has everything? Ann Landers' booklet, "Gems," is ideal for a nightstand or coffee table. "Gems" is a collection of Ann Landers' most requested poems and essays. Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $5.25 (this includes postage and handling) to: Gems, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. Oakland's Grieve wins AL rookie award

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — From the beginning of the season, Ben Grieve heard the chatter about his chances for AL Rookie of the Year.

Even fans seeking his autograph often asked him to add the notation "rookie of the year" after his name.

"I wouldn't do that. I didn't want to jinx myself," the Oakland Athletics right fielder said. He should have no problem meeting that request now.

On Tuesday, the former first-round draft pick and minor league player of the year added another honor to his blossoming career when he easily won AL Rookie of the Year honors.

"I'm excited to win this award, but I'm not going to let it give me a big head," Grieve said. "You enjoy it for a couple of weeks and then you move on."

The 22-year-old right fielder was the only candidate named on all 28 ballots. Grieve received 23 first-place votes and five seconds to finish with 130 points in balloting by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

Grieve, whose father Tom played in the major leagues and was the former general manager of the Texas Rangers, led AL rookies with 168 hits, 18 home runs, 94 runs, 41 doubles and 89 RBIs. He led the club in on-base percentage, at-bats, hits, doubles, walks and was second in runs. He batted .288 and made just two errors in the outfield.

"Baseball-wise, it went surprisingly well this year," Grieve said. "I wasn't so shocked by anything that happened on the field, but more by the amount of attention that was paid to me by the fans."

"I never said to myself during the season that it comes easy. You have to work for it all. I know in my mind what I have to do to improve upon this season. My defense needs work. I have to learn how to position myself better and get the most out of my throws."

Grieve was the fifth A's player to win the award and the first since Walt Weiss (1988), Mark McGwire (1987), and Jose Canseco (1986) earned the distinction in successive seasons. Harry Byrd was the A's first rookie honoree in 1952.

Tampa Bay pitcher Rolando Arrojito earned four first-place votes and 61 points. Chicago shortstop Mike Caruso was third with 34 points, followed by New York's Orlando "El Duque" Hernandez, who finished with 25 points and the other first-place vote.

Grieve built his rookie campaign off his eye-catching debut late in the 1997 season. He hit .312 with three homers and 24 RBIs as a September call-up.

"That gave me extra confidence, knowing I could succeed against big-league level pitching," he said.

Grieve scorched his way through the first half of this season, batting .311 with 11 homers and becoming the first Oakland player since McGwire to play in the All-Star game. After that, he slumped, hitting just .258 in the second half before finishing strong in the final month.

"I was able to survive a long slump this year, which was really tough for me," Grieve said. "I was able to get out of it in the last month and put up some good numbers, which gives me a nice start for next season."

Arrojito and Hernandez, both Cuban defectors, were the top rookie pitchers in the AL. Arrojito, who defected during the 1996

Lady Whitefaces to meet Dumas, take 2nd-ranked Denton in two

Big block

Team avenges earlier loss to advance in Region 1-4A volleyball finals

From staff reports

VERNON — Tori Walker had 16 kills and two blocks to lead Hereford to a 15-13, 15-7 win over 2nd-ranked Denton Tuesday in a Region 1-4A semifinal volleyball match at Vernon High School.

And the win set the stage once more for a battle between two fierce rivals — rivals which have grown accustomed to war between themselves at the crossroads of the regional finals.

Dumas also advanced in Vernon Tuesday night by taking a three-game match from Springtown. The District 3-4A foes will meet for the third consecutive year in the Region 1-4A final set for 7 p.m. Friday at Amarillo Caprock's Activity Center.

"I think our kids on most occasions have risen to the challenge," Hereford coach Brenda Kitten said. "It's almost a relief to have gotten the first two playoff rounds out of the way."

The Lady Whitefaces had struggled in area and regional quarterfinal matches against El Paso Bowie and Pampa, respectively.

However, Kitten has always seemed to prefer the underdog roll for her teams, claiming it offers a comfortable edge to Lady Whitefaces used to brutal district competition.

"If you compare the level of play we enjoy in our district or in the Panhandle to others across the state, you've got to figure that gives our players a great advantage when they get in the playoffs," Kitten said. "Our district pushes us to be better than maybe we really are at times, and I like the way we play when we're underdogs."

Hereford jumped out to a 6-2 lead in the first game forcing a Denton time out. The Lady Broncos then rallied and kept

By Joseph Witt

CHANTILLY, Va. — Baseball's last pair of 400 eyes can barely see across the room. The legs that circled the bases for 521 home runs now rest in a wheelchair.

But the mind is sharp, the wit remains. Get Ted Williams talking about baseball, and the stories flow with vigor. The right index finger flies in the air as he makes his point, and the voice bellows with authority.

"Joe Jackson got the big, big-for-life penalty, and he served his sentence," Williams said. "I think he belongs in the Hall of Fame."

Appearing at a reunion of the 1969 Washington Senators and at a promotion for a National Sports Gallery exhibit of great home run hitters, Williams clearly was thrilled to be among old friends.

The 80-year-old Hall of Famer, making one of his increasingly rare public appearances, signed autographs and traded stories about everything from John Glenn — with whom Williams served in the Korean War — to the 1998 home run duel between Mark McGwire and Sammy Sosa.

"The McGwire-Sosa thing was so super-great," Williams said. "McGwire is the closest thing to gargantuan at the plate."

Williams, weakened by several strokes, spends much of his time watching television at home in Citrus Hills, Fla. He says the biggest regret of his later years is that he can no longer indulge his lifelong passion for fishing. He's selling his home in New Brunswick, where people still remember the young Williams coming north to wade the Canadian waters when he played with the Boston Red Sox from 1939-1960.

But many of Williams' thoughts these days are with longtime New York Yankees rival Joe DiMaggio, who is fighting pneumonia in a Florida hospital. Williams speaks frequently with Dom DiMaggio, Joe's brother, to keep informed on the condition of the "Yankee Clipper."

"I respected him," Williams said. "He was a great example for any young player to follow. I'm just sorry that as we talk today that he isn't very well."

Williams, a 344 lifetime hitter, is the last major leaguer to break the 400 barrier. He went 6-for-8 in a doubleheader on the final

In baseball, rich win, poor lose

NEW YORK (AP) — While the rich won in baseball this year, the poor bombed out.

Only one team with a payroll of more than $48 million had a losing record — the Baltimore Orioles, who went 79-83 despite spending a record $74 million on players, according to figures compiled by management's Player Relations Committee.

Conversely, only one team with a payroll of less than $47 million had a winning record. The Toronto Blue Jays were 88-74 and spent $37.3 million, according to the report, which was circulated Tuesday at the general managers' meeting in Naples, Fla., and obtained by The Associated Press.

"It's quite significant," commissioner Bud Selig said. "I've been spending a lot of time thinking about it, talking about it. I'll have some things to say in the coming weeks and months."

The eight playoff teams all were among the top 12 in payroll. Missing out on the postseason among the big spenders were Baltimore, Los Angeles, the New York Mets and Anaheim.

The New York Yankees, who won the World Series for the second time in three seasons, were less than $200,000 behind the Orioles, coming in at $73.8 million. That includes $8.2 million in termination pay; $2.5 million to Oakland for Kenny Rogers, $1.6 million to San Francisco for Charlie Hayes, $1.6 million to the released Dale Sveum and $2.5 million to Minnesota as part of the Chuck Knoblauch trade.

Texas, eliminated by New York in the first round of the playoffs, was third at $62.2 million, followed by Atlanta ($61.8 million), eliminated by San Diego in the NL championship series. The Padres were 10th at $53.0 million.

Teams that spent less than $37 million not only lost — they lost big. All 12 teams under that figure lost 88 games or more and only three of them finished within 20 games of first place — Oakland (14 games back with an $18.6 million payroll), Kansas City (16 1/2 games back with a $35.6 million payroll) and Minnesota (19 games back with a $22 million payroll).

Montreal had the lowest payroll at $8.3 million, the least a team has spent since the 1990 Baltimore Orioles were at $8.1 million.

Ties between spending and winning have increased since the 1994-95 strike. Last year, the postseason teams were all among the top 14 in payroll and in 1996 they were among the top 12.

Florida, which had the fifth-highest payroll in 1997 at $52.5 million and won the World Series, got rid of nearly all its stars, slashed its payroll to $19.1 million (27th among the 30 teams) and finished with the worst record in baseball at 54-108, 52 games behind first-place Atlanta.

Figures are based on Aug. 31 rosters and include pro-rated shares of signing bonuses and earned performance bonuses, but not postseason award bonuses.

Baseball's average salary increased 4.8 percent, from $1.31 million to a record $1.38 million, according to the PRC. The median — the amount where an equal number of players earn above and below — went up from $400,000 to $427,500, still short of the record $450,000 set in 1994 before the 232-day strike.

The players' association, which has a slightly different method for computing salaries, will release its figures next month.

Payrolls most likely will grow even more next year. Atlanta (with just 12 signed players) and Cleveland (with 18) already have committed more than $62 million in 1999 payroll. The Braves have agreed to $55 million in salaries for 2000 and have a total future commitment of $166 million.

Cleveland is second in future commitments at $165 million, followed by Boston ($159 million), the New York Mets ($146 million, including $91 million to catcher Mike Piazza) and Los Angeles ($139 million). Minnesota has the lowest commitment at $12 million and Kansas City has agreed to just $13 million.

In all, teams already have spent $934 million on 275 players for next year. This year's payroll total was a record $1.23 billion for 894 players.

Also Tuesday, owners and the

KSU-Nebraska game has plenty at stake

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Kansas State needs to beat Nebraska to keep its national title hopes alive and legitimize its claim as a big-time program. The Cornhuskers have a lot at stake, too.

"Everybody knows what's riding on this game, as far as making a statement that our program is not going downhill," Nebraska linebacker Jay Foreman said of Saturday's showdown in Manhattan, Kan. Strange as it seems, the No. 11

Cornhuskers (8-2, 4-2 Big 12) are looking up this week at No. 2 Kansas State (9-0, 6-0), which hasn't beaten Nebraska since 1968. The spoiler's role has given Nebraska an unusual perspective.

"We haven't been in this position in a long time," fullback Joel Makovicka said. "In my career here, we've been the ones on top and people have always taken their best shots at us."

Before the season, many expected Saturday's game to be a battle of unbeaten. But the Huskers stumbled along the way, losing 28-21 at Texas A&M and 20-16 at home to Texas. Those defeats in October nearly matched the three games Nebraska lost from 1993-97.

"I don't think it needs to be said. Everybody on the team is disappointed about the way we played in those two losses," Foreman said.

Meanwhile, Kansas State has rolled through a soft schedule en route to its big test against Nebraska, which is a 10-point underdog despite its long domination of the Wildcats.

A victory over the Cornhuskers would give the Wildcats a boost in the Bowl Championship Series standings, which uses strength of schedule as one factor in determining its rankings. Kansas State is currently third in the BCS behind Tennessee and UCLA, and that's significant because the top two teams will day of the season to finish at .406 in 1941. He was at .3996 at the start of the day — .400, when rounded off — and manager Joe Cronin suggested Williams sit out the games.

"I walked all over Philadelphia that night worried about not hitting .400," Williams said, "but not even thinking about not playing."
Williams, a member of the Old-Timers Committee for the Hall of Fame, is also one of the leading advocates for the reinstatement of Jackson, one of eight Chicago White Sox kicked out of baseball for throwing the 1919 World Series.
"He played great in the series. He hit the only home run in the series," Williams said. "Let them look at all the records. Get it together where they're making a real honest attempt to be fair."
Williams would also like to see baseball return to Wash-ton, which lost its team when the Senators moved to Texas in 1971. In 1969, Williams managed the last Senators team with a winning record.

"Those years are the most gratifying moments of my life," Williams said. "Every single player on the Washington Senators had the best year they ever had."
Two of Williams' favorite non-baseball topics right now are former wrestler and Minnesota governor-elect Jesse Ventura — "I think he's great. ... He says it honestly without too much thinking about it, but he says it right" — and 77-year-old astronaut Glenn, who was Williams' operations officer in Korea. On hand when Discovery launched Glenn into space last month, Williams closed his eyes to feel the power of the moment.
"I had never in my life even comprehended the monstrous power that thing went up into the air with," Williams said. "My God, is that a sight?"

players' association agreed on the 13 players with less than three years' of major league service who will be eligible for salary arbitration in February.

rates second baseman Tony Womack.
Helling, in a four-way tie for the major league lead in wins, figures to win a raise from $216,500 to more than $3 million, and Wagner ($280,000) also should get a hefty increase.
Three of the so-called Super 2s already have signed: Detroit infielder Tony Clark ($2,262,500), Montreal catcher Chris Widger ($900,000) and Expos closer Ugueth Urbina ($2.2 million).
The Super 2 designation stems from the 1990 lockout settlement. By service time, the top 17 percent of players with between two and three years in the majors are eligible for arbitration.

meet in the Fiesta Bowl.
In addition, a win over Nebraska would confirm Kansas State's status as a national power and possibly signify a changing of the guard in the Big 12.
Just don't expect the Huskers to hand over the torch without a fight.

"We won't pass along anything to anybody," said Nebraska coach Frank Solich. "Everybody's got to earn what they get, whether it's through us or through somebody else. So far, they've (Wildcats) earned everything they've got."

the game close, tying the game at 13-all.
The second game again saw Denton hang close to the two-time defending Class 4A champions. The teams traded sides out and points with neither team pulling away from the other until Hereford got out to a 10-7 lead, forcing another Denton timeout.
Hereford then scored the final five points behind the serve of senior Sarah Matthews. Matthews had two aces in the run.
"We didn't necessarily make any adjustments," Kitten said. "We just reminded our kids to be still and to really focus on reading their hitters."
"I'm very proud of the way they kept hanging in there," she said. "Our strength in this program has always been that we have a 'number of weapons' to call upon in our matches, not just one or two standouts that do everything. Every kid has to be good at what they're doing."
Lyndi Carlile had five kills for Hereford and also had a pair of blocks in the match. Christy Schumacher contributed three kills and six digs, and Kristin Fangman had a pair of kills as well and a block and three aces for the Lady Whitefaces.

Makesha Rives led Hereford with eight digs and had one kill. Audra Witkowski led the Lady Whitefaces with 18 set assists.
The victory over Denton added ointment to a wound suffered when Denton beat Hereford 15-11, 15-6 earlier this year.
But more importantly, the regional semifinal win also marked the program's 19th consecutive playoff victory, brought the Lady Whitefaces total playoff win-loss record to 21-22 and added a 38th gold volleyball trophy to its growing collection of laurels.
"All things considered, I would have rather won this one than the earlier one," Kitten laughed. "Now we have to be careful not to let emotion carry us away from the task of preparing for Dumas."
"It's real easy to wear yourself out emotionally when you get to this point in the season," she said.

Fulmer: Vols not done with No. 1 ranking

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee coach Phillip Fulmer is determined to stomp out complacency in his lifetime. Actually, he would like to have it done by Saturday.
"I know the team feels the same as I do," he said Tuesday as the No. 1 Volunteers (8-0, 5-0) prepared for Saturday's visit from No. 10 Arkansas (8-0, 5-0).
"We're pleased but not satisfied. There's still a lot to do out there."
Fulmer and his players are all dealing with being the nation's No. 1 team for the first time in their lives. It might be a habit in some corners of the college football world, but it's a rarity in Knoxville.

phone calls or anything like that, no. We've just done our thing. We have a good routine, we've had it for a long time. We just don't get out of it."
Keeping the Volunteers' attention focused on the next game is made much easier by the Razorbacks, resurrected from a dangerous but inconsistent team to the leader of the SEC West by rookie coach Houston Nutt.

Also, in looking back at his career in agribusiness, Garrison said he believes his real achievement has been in doing something to help young people.

Garrison and his wife, Mildred, established three graduate endowment fellowships, agriculture education/communication, agronomy and animal husbandry, at Tech and also at McMurry.

"We've been able to help some kids" with the fellowships, Garrison said. "It's not just about being a 'dirt farmer' anymore, there's so much technology. Agriculture has lots of aspects because it's 20-30 percent of the U.S. economy."

Garrison also commented on a change in the face of agriculture since he was a student at Tech in the late '30s.

"About half of the students there now are girls. When I was there, I guess there weren't more than three girls in" the agriculture program, he said.

The Garrisons have three children, Harvey, Sharon Walker and Pamela Carrothers; five grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren.

The other recipients:

Wittenberg Evans received a bachelor's degree in 1971 in elementary education. A native of San Antonio, she taught school at Randolph Air Force Base until 1975. She now is a community volunteer and a promoter of agribusiness education and research. She serves as senior vice president with the San Antonio Livestock Committee and is finance committee of the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce International Agritech Center.

It's not just about being a 'dirt farmer' anymore, there's so much technology. Agriculture has lots of aspects because it's 20-30 percent of the U.S. economy.'

- Shirley L. Garrison of Hereford, Texas Tech Distinguished Alumnus

Sims received a bachelor's degree in animal husbandry in 1955. He was elected to the Texas Senate in 1983, where he served as chairman of the Administration Committee and the Natural Resources Committee. He also has served on several state and national agriculture committees. In 1984, he received Tech's Gerald Thomas award in agriculture; in 1990, he was named a Distinguished Alumnus of the College of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources. He operates a ranch in Concho County.

Jarrett received a bachelor's degree in journalism in 1958. His 40-year journalism career began as sports editor of The Toreador, forerunner of The University Daily, and concluded as co-founder/president of Westward Communications, a company operating about 40 community newspapers in four states. Also during his career, Jarrett served as an editor at the Santa Fe New Mexican, Miami Herald, Philadelphia Inquirer, Dallas Times Herald and Denver Post. While attending Tech, Jarrett was Mr. Sneed Hall and the university's representative to the Cotton Bowl.

Study: Election news drops dramatically on evening news

NEW YORK (AP)—Network evening newscasts were not the place to turn for election news this fall.

Between Labor Day and Election Day, the number of campaign stories on the ABC, CBS and NBC evening news was down a startling 73 percent from the last mid-term election in 1994, the Center for Media and Public Affairs said Tuesday.

By contrast, the Monica Lewinsky story, Hurricane Georges and John Glenn's return to space all received more attention than the election, which led to Newt Gingrich stepping down as House speaker because of the GOP's poor showing.

"Local and national broadcast news programs were sort of missing in action in this campaign," said Paul Taylor, a former reporter who is executive director of the Alliance for Better Campaigns.

In 1994, when Republicans took over Congress, the evening news programs produced 268 stories during the fall campaign.

The study said there were just 72 stories this year.

Evening newscasts did eight stories on the battle for the U.S. Senate seat in New York between Charles Schumer and Alfonse D'Amato, the most covered campaign. The contest that generated the third most stories was the Tennessee state Senate race where one candidate was jailed for allegedly murdering his opponent.

Evening news programs ran 426 stories on the Lewinsky scandal between Labor Day and Election Day, the study said.

The study did not take into account cable news channels, which have gained sharply in viewers over the past four years. It did not measure political stories on newsmagazines, which have become the dominant news programs on the networks.

Many of the Lewinsky stories also discussed the scandal's impact on the fall campaign, said Barbara Levin, a spokeswoman for NBC News.

"The networks make the argument that people who really want this stuff can get it on cable," said Robert Lichter, director of the center. "What's lost is the inadvertent audience — people who turned on the news and learned about public affairs even if they didn't go there for it."

A random survey of 1,008 voters commissioned by the National Association of Broadcasters on Election Day found that more than four in five voters thought there was just enough or too much political news on TV during the campaign.

It certainly calls into question the suggestion that there's not enough coverage.

'X-Files' has seen better days

NEW YORK (AP) — "The X-Files" has seen better days.

The Nielsen rating for Sunday's season premiere of the Fox mystery was 26 percent lower than last fall's season-opener, Nielsen Media Research said.

"The X-Files," which had a motion picture spinoff this summer, may have lost viewers because it has been in reruns since May, said Marc Berman of the television analysts company Seltel.

"It probably reached its zenith last year," he said Tuesday.

NBC's 9.6 rating and 16 share last week enabled it to narrowly defeat CBS, during the second week of November "sweeps," when ratings are watched closely to set advertising rates for local television.

Led by "ER," NBC's Thursday lineup had its usual strong showing. Part two of "The Temptations" movie finished in eighth place for the week,

Nielsen Ratings

a significant boost for NBC's sagging Monday schedule. And a special two-hour "Law and Order" movie on Sunday did well, particularly in competing with CBS's "Mamma Flora's Family."

Movies are the biggest battleground this month. Networks are relying less on specials and more on regular series during the November "sweeps." An exception is Fox, which scored strong Thursday ratings with its doubleheader of "World's Wildest Police Videos" and "Shocking Moments: Caught on Tape."

ABC's teen-oriented Friday schedule is mounting a comeback this fall. "Sabrina, the Teenage Witch" was the most-watched network show among children aged 2-17 last week.

For the week, CBS had a 9.4 rating and 15 share, ABC had an 8.4 rating and 14 share and Fox had a 7.6 rating and 12 share. The WB was at 3.4 and 5, UPN had a 2.0 and 3 and Pax TV was at 0.6 and 1.0.

CBS's one-hour election night coverage beat its rivals last Tuesday. NBC narrowly came in second over ABC. Each was among the least-watched prime-time shows of the week on the top four networks.

For the week of Nov. 2-8, the top 10 shows, their networks and ratings were: "ER," NBC, 20.2; "Friends," NBC, 16.8; "Frasier," NBC, 15.8; "60 Minutes," CBS, 15.2; "Touched By an Angel," CBS, 14.7;

"CBS Sunday Movie: Mamma Flora's Family, Part One," CBS, 14.3; "Jesse," NBC, 14.2; "NBC Movie of the Week: The Temptations, Part Two," NBC, 14.0; "Jesse," NBC, 14.6; "Veronica's Closet," NBC, 13.8; "Monday Night Football: Dallas at Philadelphia," ABC, 13.2.

CLIFF GOLDEN
HHS Career Specialist

The bottom line

What do they want from me?

The Hereford High School Career & Technical Education (CTE) Advisory Committee had its first meeting last Thursday night at the "old administration building." The CTE advisory committee consists of professionals from 14 occupational career clusters, as well as representatives from the HISD school board and Hereford Economic Development Corp.

Over the last few months, I've visited with these folks and asked a lot of questions about which skills they look for in a new employee. Every one of them said pretty much the same things.

Now, before you go guessing what they all said, let me tell you. In the process of gathering applications from many different companies for a classroom presentation, I also got one from our local McDonald's. McDonald's application puts it all in black and white.

Our crew members (employees) are expected to report to work on time, neat and clean.

The most important thing our crew members do to help our customers receive safe food is wash their hands often. (This may change according to the job.)

Training will provide you the skills you'll need to perform your job. (Be willing to learn.)

Crew members follow standard operational procedures so customers always receive exceptional quality and service. (All businesses sell a product or service and are customer-oriented.)

Our crew members rely on teamwork and high energy to get the job done. (Teamwork)

Spotless, tidy, sparkling. Our customers expect every McDonald's will be clean. (Job safety and a safe working environment is always important.)

Crew members make each customer feel like a welcomed guest. (That's how repeat business is done - customers want to return.)

We depend on our crew members to deliver fast, accurate and friendly service with a smile.

In summary, employers are looking for someone who is ready to work and arrives to work on time or a little early. You must dress appropriately for the job. If you have a question about what is appropriate dress, ask your supervisor. A willing attitude will go a long way toward getting and keeping a job. You may know everything, but you don't have to act like it. You'll need to develop "people skills" with both your fellow "crew members" and customers. Remember, you're depending with people. Each customer has different needs and it's up to you to meet them. After all, as the company's representative you know more about the services you offer than the customer does, but you don't have to make them feel foolish - especially if you want them to come back. Your job may depend on it.

Bottom line: Your employer has a product or service to sell and customers make that happen. You ARE representing your employer as you deal with customers. Hamburgers, insurance or clothes - dress and conduct yourself appropriately regardless of where you work. Your boss and customers will appreciate the service and you'll feel good about the service you provide.

private life, then leaking details to the press. Starr has denied the allegations.

Two Democratic officials close to the committee said their chief counsel, Abbe Lowell, will lead the questioning of Starr. Democratic committee aides have analyzed Starr's voluminous report to Congress on the Lewinsky matter, his methods and conduct and those of his staff, said the officials, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Democratic committee spokesman Jim Jordan said no "attack manual" had been crafted.

"Members and staff both will be restrained and respectful to Starr," Jordan promised. "But there are some serious and legitimate questions regarding the conduct of his investigation that speak directly to the credibility of his referral."

Democratic members of the Judiciary Committee met Tuesday with House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt.

Officials familiar with the Republican meeting, speaking on condition of anonymity, said committee aides were still discussing whether to expand the hearings to include witnesses other than Starr, even though Hyde has indicated he is not inclined to do so.

Hyde confirmed Monday night that Republicans were talking about calling Clinton's closest White House adviser, Lindsey. The possibility arose after the Supreme Court on Monday refused to shield the aide from questioning by prosecutors on what conversations he had with Clinton about Ms. Lewinsky.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said the House should drop the impeachment inquiry, to avoid tying up the government for months, and that Clinton be prosecuted after he leaves office in 2001.

"This course - no impeachment proceeding, which the president would be certain to win, and a criminal prosecution, which the president might well lose with a jail sentence - might even induce the president to consider resignation," Specter wrote in an opposite-editorial piece in today's New York Times.

News in brief

Smoking linked to impotence

It's a warning label that you won't read on a pack of cigarettes in the United States: "Smoking can ruin your sex life."

For years, scientists have warned that smoking can contribute to impotence as well as fertility problems in men. Anti-smoking forces have now seized on the finding in a bid to get people to kick the habit.

In California, a $21 million campaign launched in June includes a commercial showing a cigarette drooping limply. The message: "Cigarettes. Still Think They're Sexy?"

In Thailand, the health ministry ordered the nation's tobacco monopoly to print a new warning on cigarette packs: "Cigarette smoking causes sexual impotence." However, it appears only on a fraction of the packages.

In England, public health activists are lobbying for a similar warning label.

The impotence risk - and strategy - are attracting media attention, too. Last Sunday, CBS's "60 Minutes" devoted a segment to the subject.

By the next day, reporters in many cities were confronting smokers-on-the-street with a blunt question: Are you willing to give up your sex life for cigarettes?

Tipper Gore helps out in Honduras

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras - After a long day of shoveling mud and making tortillas, Tipper Gore rested in the same school yard where dozens of refugees were living because their homes had been swept away by Hurricane Mitch.

The wife of Vice President Al Gore had pitched in Tuesday to help clean up the school and feed hungry children in the Honduran capital of Tegucigalpa.

More importantly, she arrived with medical supplies, congressmen and a promise of an additional $10 million in U.S. aid to hurricane-devastated Central America.

"This is a tragedy of Biblical proportions," Mrs. Gore said after meeting with residents of Tegucigalpa's El Chile neighborhood, which was ripped apart by a torrent of mud. "They're telling me stories of entire villages being washed away."

Mrs. Gore's visit did much to heighten spirits in El Chile. Hundreds of children followed her through the streets. A few pushed past security to hold her hand.

"The important people never come to this neighborhood," said 27-year-old Claudia Boquin, who put her daughter on her shoulders for a better view.

Mrs. Gore delivered an aid shipment that included blankets, sheets and 500 gallons of drinking water for residents who have had little since Mitch killed an estimated 6,600 Hondurans last month.

Workers protesting forced overtime

WASHINGTON - After 24 years of fixing phone lines, Joseph Bryant was dismissed by Bell Atlantic Inc. last year for refusing overtime work. The divorced father had sole custody of his two children and needed to pick them up after school.

"I was just trying to balance the overtime," he said. "When you've got kids, you can't just leave them."

The company argued before an arbitrator that Bryant's child care "excuse" wasn't reasonable because he could have made alternative plans for the children on days he was assigned to work late.

But Bryant won his arbitration 18 months after he was discharged from his job in Baltimore. His plight illustrates the increasing pressures felt by workers whose bosses require them to put in extra hours.

There are no hard statistics on forced overtime, according to academics, but overtime hours are on the rise and mandatory overtime is increasingly seen as an issue in labor negotiations.

The issue has come up in contract disputes in a variety of industries and companies, including General Motors Corp., United Parcel Service, CP&I Steel and several communications companies.

Some employers say they must demand longer hours from their workers because tight labor markets make it impossible to hire enough employees.

House Republicans stressing cooperation

WASHINGTON - Would-be House GOP leaders are stressing a common theme: Republicans must learn to work together next year in a chamber where they will dominate by just a six-vote majority.

"Maybe I'm optimistic, but it may be easier" than it was this year, said Rep. Mike Castle, R-Del. "There will be more evidence that we do have to work together now."

Rep. Bob Livingston, R-La., who seems certain to be the next speaker of the House, and other rivals for top leadership jobs all have been calling for Republicans to avoid intraparty splits in the 106th Congress, which convenes in January.

But the real question is with just a six-vote majority, can they remain united on tough issues like tax and spending cuts, boosting defense spending and strengthening Social Security. And what if conservative pro-family groups begin pressing GOP leaders for votes on abortion and other social issues that often split Republicans?

"There's plenty of incentive for them to unite, but I'm skeptical they can find the right vehicles," said Ronald Peters, director of the Carl Albert Congressional Research and Studies Center at the University of Oklahoma. "When they become specific, there are still disagreements."

Stamps honor WW II servicemen, home front

WASHINGTON (AP) - Struggling to hold back tears, World War II veteran Roger Durbin recalled the bitter cold of the Ardennes forest during the 1944 Battle of the Bulge, when a wounded man could be dead and frozen in a few hours.

Surrounded by friends and admiring strangers, Durbin helped unveil three new postage stamps Tuesday recalling the fighting men of World War II and those who supported them on the home front.

Rosie the Riveter of poster fame wasn't there, but Mildred Crow-Sargent, who also was a riveter in a war factory, was present.

"It wasn't easy to work 54 hours a week. It wasn't easy to deal with ration stamps and shortages. But those inconveniences were minor," compared to the hardships of those in combat, she told a packed audience at the National Postal Museum.

Report: Lewinsky gets in spat at restaurant

NEW YORK (AP) — Former White House intern Monica Lewinsky chewed out the staff and some patrons during lunch at a chic Manhattan restaurant, the Daily News reported today. Witnesses said Ms. Lewinsky was furious when the couple at the next table began laughing Tuesday while she talked on her cell phone at Gino's, an Italian restaurant on the Upper East Side. "Do you find this funny?" Ms. Lewinsky reportedly barked at the pair. "As a matter of fact, I do," the neighbor reportedly replied. Ms. Lewinsky and her luncheon companion, a woman believed to be her mother, Marcia Lewis, then tried to leave, the newspaper said. When she noticed a photographer at the door, Ms. Lewinsky turned around, marched back inside and upbraided the staff, witnesses said. "She came storming back in the restaurant," said Cindy Bulson, 30, a fellow diner. "She brushed by me and said, 'Excuse me!' and headed straight toward the manager." While Ms. Lewinsky's fit may have raised hairs and eyebrows, it satiated the curiosity of those who had never heard her voice.

U.S. eyes larger force on Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pentagon planners have prepared deployment orders that could put tens of thousands of U.S. ground troops, a hundred more warplanes and additional ships into the Persian Gulf should President Clinton order sustained attacks against Iraq, knowledgeable officials said. "If we do something, it's not going to be a pinprick," said one senior official, who spoke on condition of anonymity. "This is serious business." Defense Secretary William Cohen has not yet signed the deployment orders, which, if approved, lay out a "fairly steady" flow of forces into the region, the official said Tuesday. And Clinton has not decided whether he's going to respond to Iraq's defiance of U.N. weapons inspections.

"We have no doubt many governments are conveying that message," Ruben added. Cohen announced he'd ordered the aircraft carrier USS Enterprise and a Marine task force to speed their move to the Gulf. He told reporters he ordered the moves in the event Clinton decided to attack. That could put two aircraft carriers and two Marine expeditionary units in the region by Thanksgiving. Each carrier has about 70 warplanes, which would allow for more sustained strikes against Iraqi targets, particularly if nations in the region are loathe to allow U.S. aircraft to mount attacks from their soil. Increased numbers of Marines or Army units on the ground in Kuwait would provide increased security, as well. Kenneth Bacon, speaking at a Pentagon briefing, said the current force could be bolstered in short order with a large number of troops left on alert following the last go-round with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein in February. At that time, there were 44,000 troops, 430 aircraft and 34 ships in the Gulf region. The latest standoff began after Iraq announced Oct. 31 it was halting cooperation with the U.N. Special Commission.

There's a lot that could happen, including the option of a short-notice attack that would not require a new buildup of forces, the official said. There are hundreds of cruise missiles already in the region for just such a strike. Against that backdrop, 11 buses and other vehicles carrying more than 100 U.N. arms inspectors and other workers pulled out of Baghdad today, headed for Jordan. Eric Falt, spokesman for U.N. humanitarian programs in Iraq, told reporters in Baghdad that the move was "precautionary" and taken "solely with the safety of U.N. staff in mind." At present, there are 23,500 U.S. troops in the Gulf region. The new orders could double that number, returning the Gulf force to the size it was in February during the most recent standoff over weapons inspections. There also are 23 ships and 173 aircraft in the area. Eight Navy ships are loaded with long-range Tomahawk cruise missiles, believed to be a top choice for hitting potential Iraqi targets, should a strike be ordered. Clinton met Tuesday on Iraq with his national security team, and should he opt for additional forces, the ground troops would be flown into Kuwait to defend that country against a potential threat from Iraqi army units. There are some 2,000 Army soldiers there now on a regularly scheduled exercise. As the military planning progressed, meanwhile, a State Department official said diplomacy had its limits. "What is not needed, and there is no plan for it, is negotiations with Saddam Hussein," spokesman James P. Rubin said.

It would be somewhat pointless to be gloating over it or critical at this juncture. I don't want to be that kind of person." — Jim Wright
