Water supply

Residents back native plants as a landscaping alternative

Special to The Brand

CANYON -- A survey conducted by students at West Texas A&M University found that a majority of area residents would consider using native plants for landscaping if it would help preserve the region's water supply. Even more people, the survey found, would support development of native landscape demonstration zones in Canyon and Amarillo.

Students in Jim Rogers' Environment and Man class -- a course offered through the Department of Life, Earth and Environmental Sciences -- interviewed 345 Panhandle residents, asking 16 questions related primarily to the water supply and environmental pollution. They found that 64 percent of respondents are "concerned about water availability in the Texas Panhandle," and an even higher percentage (78 percent) would consider landscaping with native plants if it would conserve water.

Moreover, 292 respondents -- 85 percent of those surveyed -- said they would support development of the native landscape demonstration zones.

"The survey indicated that as a whole, Panhandle people have a good awareness of environmental issues," Rogers, instructor of environmental science, said. "I was surprised by the willingness of so many residents to support these kinds of demonstration zones."

Rogers said he will consider using results of his students' survey as the basis for launching an integrated project among WTAMU disciplines to plan demonstration zones that utilize native plants. The plan might then be shared with local bodies of government, he said.

One such demonstration zone is already in the works on the WTAMU campus. Horticulture students have designed a landscaping proposal for the 300-square foot planter located in front of Cornette Library. Scheduled for implementation during the spring semester, the proposal calls for plants that are native to the Panhandle, as well as an irrigation system that conserves water.

Native plants include a variety of tall and short grasses, trees, shrubs and wildflowers, according to Dr. Clay Robinson, assistant professor of plant science.

"Many of the plants used in the library project will be plants you might find in Palo Duro Canyon," Robinson said.

Tornadoes hammer South

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) -- Tornadoes ripped across the South for the second time in less than a week, killing at least seven people in two states and leaving thousands of people without power early today.

Wave after wave of twisters hit central Arkansas late Thursday afternoon and evening, collapsing roofs, knocking down power poles and leaving trees strewn about the grounds of the governor's mansion. Six people died.

"The lights flickered a couple times, then it went black," said Derrick Stallworth, who was shopping in the Harvest Foods grocery when the storm struck. "I decided to hit the floor, then I saw the roof coming down."

In Tennessee, a tornado touched down in Clarksville this morning, ripping roofs off buildings. No deaths were reported there but one person died elsewhere in Tennessee.

Seven in two states killed; power out

Just last Sunday, tornadoes killed nine people in the state.

Severe weather also pounded parts of Mississippi and Louisiana late Thursday, but there were no reports of serious injuries.

Two people were killed in the Little Rock area when trees fell on them, and a 67-year-old pharmacist at the damaged supermarket died of his injuries this morning. In Beebe, 30 miles to the northeast, a 2-month-old baby was blown out of a home and killed and another woman was found dead at her home.

At Center Hill, Searcy school board member Wanda Wilson died when her mobile home was hit, Superintendent Tony Wood said.

"We're just lucky to be alive," Kelton Keathley said after a tornado wrecked his lot in Beebe.

"It swept everything up," said Lulynn, his daughter.

Arkansas utilities said the storms left 72,000 customers without power, and authorities opened five shelters from the Little Rock area to Newark, 90 miles to the northeast. Forecasters said perhaps as many as 30 tornadoes hit the state, though it will be days before field checks can confirm an exact number.

The storm that hit Little Rock began southwest of the city, passed near the state's Fair Grounds and entered a residential area that includes the governor's mansion. Gov. Mike Huckabee, who was dining in a nearby home at the time, said he and his family were fine.

"I'm going out to help my neighbors," he said.

The storm passed through a section of town that includes some of the city's oldest homes,

Senators to ask questions

The Associated Press

Senators are preparing written questions for White House lawyers and House prosecutors in President Clinton's impeachment trial, possibly the last act of bipartisanship before crucial decisions next week on dismissing the case and calling witnesses.

The questions will be submitted to Chief Justice William Rehnquist, who will ask the two sides to respond in trial sessions today and tomorrow. Alternating between Republicans and Democrats, the procedure will be as awkward for senators as the requirement that they sit silently at the trial "on pain of imprisonment."

The examination will try to narrow the conflicts in the record that were highlighted by House prosecutors and the White House.

tary, Betty Currie, to pick up presidential gifts from Ms. Lewinsky -- the president or Ms. Lewinsky herself? Did Clinton try to coach Mrs. Currie for possible testimony the day after his deposition in the Paula Jones sexual harassment case against him?

Republicans are in a political bind once the question period is complete. The GOP's 55-45 majority will not be enough to remove Clinton by the required two-thirds vote. Meanwhile, the president's popularity continues to soar while the GOP's call for witnesses could extend the trial that -- according to polls -- is widely unpopular.

Democrats were buoyed by Thursday's defense speeches on the president's behalf, but Sen. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., said today he is counseling his fellow party members not to become smug and declare victory.

"I think we need to give our Republican colleagues a dignified retreat out of this case," he said on NBC's "To-

USDA claims new inspection program reduces salmonella

WASHINGTON (AP) -- The incidence of salmonella is decreasing in the nation's chicken, beef and pork supplies, the Agriculture Department says, despite criticism from government inspectors that the food inspection system is not working.

In a nine-month progress report on the Hazard Analysis and Critical Control Point program, the department said salmonella had decreased by 50 percent in chicken. The report, released Thursday, found that 20 percent of chicken carcasses tested positive for the bacteria before the program, known as HACCP, compared with 10.7 percent under HACCP.

For pork, there was a drop of more than 25 percent with 8.7 percent of swine testing positive before the new system and 6.2 percent afterwards. With ground beef, 7.5 percent tested positive before and 4.3 percent afterwards -- a decline of more than 40 percent.

"The system really does improve food safety," said Catherine Woteki, USDA's undersecretary for food safety.

The hazard analysis program was put into use last year by 300 of the largest processing plants. Nearly 3,000 smaller plants begin implementing it on Monday. The smallest plants will join the system next year.

With institution of HACCP, plants replaced the long-time system of poking carcasses for visual signs of disease with a method that involves checking meat throughout the food production system for such things

Hereford telephone bills likely to rise

Hereford telephone customers could be seeing an increase in their telephone bills, thanks to a decision by the Texas Public Utilities Commission.

The PUC decision, which was announced Thursday, agreed to a Southwestern Bell request to raise local telephone rates in 23 cities, including Hereford.

Under the rate increases, which range from 20 cents to $1.05 per month, SW Bell could collect an additional $1.1 million annually.

The rate increases were requested because there are more telephone lines in the affected areas, a telephone company spokesman said.

Gary Stevens, area manager for Southwestern Bell's Amarillo office, was reported as saying Hereford moved from Rate Class 1, which is for cities with up to 8,000 telephone units, to Rate Class 2, which is for cities with 8,001-30,000 units.

Hereford has more than 9,000 telephone units, Stevens said. The monthly bill will jump from $8.15 to $8.35 per month for residential customers; business rates will increase from $19.15 to $19.60 per month.

The rate increase still must be submitted to the PUC for approval, which means the new rates likely would not become effective until late spring or early summer.

News in brief

Pope setting down new policy

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Twenty years after beginning his jet-age papacy, Pope John Paul II is again traveling far from the Vatican to set down church policy — this time in the Americas, where he intends to renew his close relationship with the Mexican people.

John Paul was scheduled to take off early this morning aboard a special Alitalia jetliner on a 13-hour flight to Mexico City. He will also visit St. Louis.

Invited by bishops from both North and South America during a special assembly in Rome in the fall of 1997, the pope will answer some of the concerns they raised in a document to be released Saturday.

He is expected to address economic injustice and the burden that foreign debt places on poor countries, as well as introduce proposals to give the church a greater role in culture and public policy.

El Paso's serious crime rate declines

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Despite a 20 percent growth in population, the number of serious crimes reported to police in El Paso has dropped in six of the past eight years, according to a survey by the El Paso Times.

The newspaper said the 35,787 serious crimes reported last year in El Paso works out to about 5.6 per 100 residents, half the rate in 1990.

The categories of homicide, robbery and auto theft all saw declines of more than 20 percent between 1997 and 1998.

Last year's 35,787 serious crimes reported was one-sixth below 1997. It's the lowest number of serious crimes reported to El Paso police since 1985.

SWB Pioneers provide reading initiative

Special to the Brand

Third grade students in Hereford schools received an extra educational tool Wednesday when representatives of the Southwestern Bell Pioneers distributed almost 300 books designed to promote literacy throughout the country.

"Squeaky's Secret," a book published by the Pioneers, is being distributed throughout the state, with 291 of the 400 books in the Panhandle going to Hereford students.

Three members of Pioneers visited Northwest, Tierra Blanca and Aikman schools Wednesday and delivered books to students at each campus.

The book is about a family of two adults and two children. Squeaky is a mouse the children find when the boy knocks a hole in the wall of one bedroom.

The children ask their parents for help on their homework, but are always told they are too busy. The children don't know their parents can't read.

Accidents occur at work when both parents mishandle products, due to their inability to read.

With Squeaky's help, the children realize their parents can't read. The children then engage the help of the employers, and local literacy volunteers who help the parents learn to read.

These books are distributed to students with the understanding that each student will read the book to five adults. Each book is signed by Marsha Cockrell, president of the Pride Chapter of the Pioneers, and there is a place for each student to sign the pledge.

In addition, when the book is read to an adult, a tear off coupon is removed from the book and given to the adult. It informs them that Pioneers distributed the book and also provides the literacy hotline telephone number.

The Pioneer groups' efforts to promote literacy have been endorsed by Gov. and Mrs. George W. Bush and former President Bush and the former First Lady, Barbara Bush.

Pioneers is an organization of telephone company employees dedicated to service in the communities they serve. The group is not part of Southwestern Bell, but receives support from the company and conducts its own fund raising operations to support club projects.

Gary Stevens, area manager for External Affairs for Southwestern Bell, and incoming president of the Pioneers, spoke to each group and was assisted in distributing the books by Cockrell and fellow Pioneer member Carol Pounds.

Accepting the gift — Brian Shelton has a big smile on his face as he receives a copy of "Squeaky's Secret" from Gary Stevens, SWB Pioneer, while fellow Pioneers Marsha Cockrell and Carol Pounds look on.

Prison officials expect demotions

Thanksgiving day escape leads to disciplinary actions

HOUSTON (AP) — State prison officials say they'll begin work immediately to implement recommendations of a special investigation panel that found negligence by some corrections officers at Texas' death row led to the Thanksgiving night escape of seven condemned killers.

The Texas Board of Criminal Justice, meeting today in Houston, formally was receiving the 59-page report of the probe into the breakout by inmate Martin Gurule and six others from the Ellis Unit prison northeast of Huntsville.

"This was a wake-up call of the first magnitude," Allan Polunsky, the chairman of the prison board said. "We are very sensitive to what took place at Ellis."

As prison system administrators were releasing the findings of the investigation to reporters Thursday, heads began rolling at Ellis.

The warden, Bruce Thaler, was demoted and transferred. The 26-year veteran of the corrections department had been warden at Ellis for about seven years. His two assistant wardens were transferred.

"Failure to make sure policies and procedures were followed," Wayne Scott, the department's executive department, explaining why the prison's management was ousted. "If the staff on duty had performed correctly, this wouldn't have occurred."

And disciplinary actions, which could be as severe as firing, were being started against at least three uniformed officers.

"Obviously, this was an egregious breakdown in security and procedures at that particular unit and there is no way to describe it otherwise," Polunsky said. "I don't wish to rationalize what took place there, to apologize for what took place there. It's unfortunate this incident took place but I think in all sense of the word, it was an aberration. I do not feel something like this will ever happen again."

More than 50 recommendations were made by the panel, which conducted more than 300 interviews over three weeks following the escape.

Gurule, 29, condemned for a Corpus Christi robbery in which two people were killed, was the only one of the prisoners to scale two 10-foot-high fences topped with razor wire and flee into the night. His accomplices surrendered when guards in towers opened fire.

Gurule, however, drowned a few hours later in a flood-swollen creek a couple of miles away although his body wasn't found for a week. During that time, prison authorities had waged an intense manhunt in response to the first escape from Texas death row in 64 years.

Rules violations by officers, poor supervision, inadequate staffing and excessive privileges for some inmates contributed to escape, the investigation found. Other factors were inadequate lighting, insufficient fencing and physical design problems at the 34-year-old Ellis Unit.

"How they did it — in a nutshell — human error," Mac Stringfellow, a prison board member who was on the investigation panel, said in explaining how the escape could happen. "When employees are negligent or don't perform duties at all, systems break down."

According to the report, the staff was below minimum requirements because sergeants had allowed too many officers to have the night off, then allowed others to leave early.

Investigators said inmates were able to hide on the roof of the prison because officers did not perform their duties correctly and did not count "living breathing bodies" during their regular count of inmates.

Officials also determined that one of the guards who fired at the inmates from a tower was smoking a cigarette, forbidden by prison rules, when he spotted the fleeing prisoners. The officer threw his cigarette down a toilet first before grabbing his AR-15 rifle, officials reported.

Among more than 50 recommendations by the panel was for a look at criminalizing tobacco possession on prison property, because so many prison employees use tobacco products and because a "black market" trade in the products was thriving in prison.

Other recommendations included construction of higher light poles, new guard towers for recreation yards, increased fencing, additional razor wire and more restrictions on recreation time for inmates.

Pantex officials discuss safety

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Following three accidents, workers at the Pantex Plant stopped disassembling nuclear weapons for an hour to discuss safety.

"We make a tremendous commitment to safety out here. It is a top priority at Pantex," Hoag said. "Except for critical security people, everyone on the plant was asked to get together as a department and talk about safety."

Mother-in-law is bound to find out about pregnancy when baby is born

Ann Landers
Syndicated Columnist

Dear Ann Landers: Please help me figure this out. I am seven months pregnant, and my husband still hasn't told his mother. She lives in another city. We already have one child, so it's not as if she doesn't know we are sleeping together.

My husband obviously doesn't have a close relationship with his mother, but this example of poor communication makes me uncomfortable. I wanted to tell her, but he said he wanted to do it himself. Meanwhile, he keeps putting it off. My mother-in-law phoned the other day, and I didn't know what to say when she asked, "How are you doing?"

Should I tell her I'm p.g. or just wait until the baby is born? I'm pretty sure my husband won't have any trouble telling her then. — Infanticipating in Berkeley, Calif.

Dear Berkeley: Tell her yourself, and the sooner the better. Apparently, your husband has some kind of hang-up about his mother. So, my dear, out with it.

Dear Ann: You have printed several letters from nurses who said their job is difficult, back-breaking and unrewarding. While I agree this is not the easiest work in the world, I feel privileged to be a nurse because I can make a difference in the lives of people when they need it most. I am honored to be a member of this noble profession and am sure there are thousands of others like me. — Becky in Charleston, S.C.

Dear Becky: Thank you for your touching letter. I recently received this poem from the Faxton Hospital Foundation in Utica, N.Y., which the nurses in my reading audience will find inspiring: What Is a Nurse? by Ann E. Coupe

A nurse is a very special person, who Never fails to place the needs of patients first, whose

Unique gentleness and depth of love are selflessly given: a

Radiant and humane person, dedicated to caring for the sick; that Special bridge between physician and patient so vital to recovery.

Ever loving, ever giving, a nurse is the orchid of God's flowers.

And now, dear readers, what follows is the last corsage I am pinning on the nurse's shoulder for several months to come. Here it is:

Dear Ann Landers: You recently printed a job description for nurses dating from the 19th century. The writer gave the erroneous impression that nursing is a lot easier today than it was then. He is wrong.

After 20 years as a nurse, I've seen tremendous changes in both duties and ethics. Today, nurses must be educated and continue to keep up-to-date on technical advances and procedures. There are discoveries almost daily that affect how illness, wounds and trauma are treated. Nurses must learn how to operate newly invented devices that improve the care of patients.

Today, a nurse must be a facilitator, educator, caregiver, confessor and manager. She must also have intelligence, compassion and intuition. Years ago, the nurse fulfilled the role of what would be a nurse's assistant today. Now, nurses handle more duties so the physician can concentrate on the more complicated situations. We are no longer menial servants, as that century-old job description would indicate, but highly educated, highly skilled medical professionals working to bring the best care to each person who seeks our help.

I do not claim that nurses are one rung down from sainthood, but we're close. — New Jersey R.N.

FELLOWSHIP

OF BELIEVERS

"The Naivete of FOB." That is the title of Pastor Stone's sermon based on the suggested lectionary epistle of I Corinthians 1:10-18. But that is more than a title. FOB really is naive. Imagine a church believing it can operate on the basis of consensus.

Indeed, at the close of worship on Sunday, FOB will accept suggestions (not nominations) for the positions of administrator and secretary. The administrator (relying on the help and support of the secretary) will make most of the routine decisions for the church in 1999. The church will choose (not elect) those two leaders next Sunday, Jan. 31, at the close of worship. The church will "know" who those persons are to be - and there will be a consensus on the matter. This approach to "doing" church is a sacred tradition at FOB. It just works. No further questions need to be asked.

At 9:15 the church gathers for coffee, Sunday morning snacks and neighborly conversation. "Forum," FOB's answer to adult (and youth) Sunday school, is an open-discussion session that meets at 9:30. The current study of world religions and pluralism will be set aside for a special dialogue called, "No Easy Answers: Ethics for Ordinary People." This will be an examination of one's own moral code: where does it come from and how does it work?

The children have their own unique Sunday school at 9:30. A supervised nursery is available at all services.

FOB is a daring yet naive church: interdenominational, ecumenical, independent and non-cursillista. The Fellowship is a work in progress that never intends to arrive.

Next door to Hereford Care Center at 245 N. Kingwood is where all of this consensus and naivete takes place.

Quayle ponders White House bid

Ex-vice president sees 2000 as his best opportunity

WASHINGTON (AP) — After sitting out the 1996 presidential campaign, former Vice President Dan Quayle is taking the first step toward seeking the top spot on the Republican ticket in 2000.

"I've thought about this for a long time. I've wanted to be president for a long time, and the year 2000 is looking like my opportunity," Quayle said Thursday night on CNN's "Larry King Live."

He intends to file a formal statement of candidacy next week, the first step in his bid for theesible candidates are millionaire businessman Steve Forbes, former Cabinet secretary Elizabeth Dole, former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander and activist Gary Bauer.

"Polls are quite frankly irrelevant. You don't make decisions on whether you are running for president on a poll, on your poll or someone else's poll. You consult yourself; you talk with your family; and if you are convinced that you are the best person to lead the country, then you make a go of it; and that's what I have done," Quayle said.

Quayle said he believe it will take $20 million to run a campaign. "I am convinced I can raise it. I know I can raise it," he said.

Former Vice President Quayle is taking first step toward seeking the Republican presidential nomination in 2000.

Texas tobacco lawyers contributed $1.8 million to the Democratic Party

HOUSTON (AP) — The five law firms who were awarded $3.3 billion for representing the state in the lawsuit against the tobacco industry gave $1.8 million to the Texas Democratic Party last year, according to a published report.

The Houston Chronicle reported today that the money represented about one-third of the political funds that the Democratic Party raised last year in Texas.

Records at the Texas Ethics Commission show the same lawyers and their spouses contributed an additional $767,000 in the closing weeks of the fall campaign to the losing Democratic candidates for attorney general and lieutenant governor, the Chronicle reported.

Democratic Party Chairwoman Molly Beth Malcom praised the lawyers' generosity at a time when Texas Democrats have been losing offices — and fund-raising capability — to strong Republican gains.

"It seems to me they're encouraging a two-party system," she told the newspaper.

The battle over the lawyers' fee is still raging.

Republican John Cornyn, who opposed the fees, was given a large donation by the Houston-based Texans for Lawsuit Reform (TLR). That group advocates limits on civil lawsuits and damage awards.

Leaders of the TLR also have been outspoken in their opposition to the large tobacco-related lawyers' fees, which Cornyn fought during his campaign and is now investigating.

Cornyn received a total of $191,000 from TLR's political arm; from Houston developer Richard Weekley, who heads the organization; and from members of Weekley's family during the general election campaign in which he defeated Democrat Jim Mattox, a former attorney general.

One contribution of $100,000 to Cornyn came from TLR's political action committee on Oct. 26, eight days before the election.

Mattox supported the legal fee arrangement that the five private lawyers — Walter Umphrey and Wayne Reaud of Beaumont, John O'Quinn and John Eddie Williams of Houston and Harold Nix of Daingerfield — worked out with former Attorney General Dan Morales.

Mattox also got $217,000 in direct donations from some of the lawyers.

Republicans look forward to Philadelphia

WASHINGTON (AP) — Beachfront hotels and warm weather welcomed Republicans to San Diego in 1996. Four years later, the Liberty Bell and other historic sites will greet GOP activists headed to Philadelphia.

The 165 Republican National Committee members were to vote today to choose Philadelphia as the site of their 2000 presidential nominating convention, marking their first return there in 52 years.

Although delegates to the RNC's winter meeting said they enjoyed San Diego's resort offerings, they believe they will like their visit to Philadelphia as well.

"I like San Diego, but who doesn't?" said Arlene Ellis, a delegate from Utah. "The weather was beautiful and warm. You don't have the beaches in Philadelphia, but it has more of a historic atmosphere that California didn't have."

A GOP selection committee recommended Philadelphia over Indianapolis, New Orleans, New York and San Antonio. The 1996 Republican National Convention took place in San Diego.

John Miller, a Connecticut delegate, said San Diego may be a "big resort city, but you don't get a feeling of an all-American city."

Philadelphia Mayor Edward G. Rendell, a Democrat, said he felt no inferiority complex following in San Diego's footsteps.

"It's a different type of experience," Rendell said. "Philadelphia can be warm and muggy or warm and great. It has more real icons of American history than others."

Zahn to leave CBS for Fox News

NEW YORK — Paula Zahn is leaving CBS News to anchor a one-hour nightly newscast on Fox News Channel, beginning March 1.

Zahn, 42, has most recently anchored the "CBS Evening News" Saturday edition and filled in for Dan Rather during the week. She was co-host of "CBS This Morning" for six years.

"The Fox Report," the network's evening newscast, was anchored by Catherine Crier and Jon Scott until they left to host a newsmagazine for the Fox network. Zahn will take over, and she also will anchor another hour of Fox News Channel programming on weekdays.

Zahn worked for local news broadcasts in Chicago, Houston, Dallas, Los Angeles, San Diego and Boston before joining ABC News in 1987. She jumped to CBS in 1990.

Charlie Sheen

LOS ANGELES — Charlie Sheen wants to be taken seriously.

Hollywood's bad boy, whose public persona has been shaped by his wild partying as well as his movie career, has put out the word: He wants to be called Charles.

Sheen, 33, decided about a year ago to go the way of Rick Schroder, said Sheen publicist Jeff Ballard. Schroder, who went by Ricky when he was a child star on television's "Silver Spoons," is now plain old Rick and a star on "NYPD Blue."

Sheen stars in Friday's HBO movie "Under Pressure" and credits list him as Charles — a more serious-sounding name, Ballard said Thursday.

"On screen he's going with the credit Charles. I still call him Charlie but I've known him since he was 16," said Ballard, who coincidentally represented Schroder when he was on "Silver Spoons."

Larry Flynt

LOS ANGELES — Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt has been released from the hospital after a bout with pneumonia.

Flynt is recuperating at his home, spokeswoman Kim Dower said Thursday.

The publisher, who left the hospital Wednesday, had been scheduled for surgery this week for a urological problem but his illness has postponed the operation.

Flynt's medical problems also have delayed his Cincinnati obscenity trial to April 5.

Flynt, 55, and his brother, Jimmy, 49, were indicted last year on charges of pandering obscenity, disseminating material harmful to a juvenile, conspiracy and engaging in a pattern of corrupt activity.

They were charged after a 14-year-old boy allegedly bought a sexually explicit video at the Hustler Magazine & Gifts store managed by Jimmy Flynt.

John McLaughlin

NEW YORK — John McLaughlin fans who are hooked up to cable can get more bang for the buck: He apparently is heading to MSNBC.

The ringleader of the combative pundits on "The McLaughlin Group" will be host of a new nightly public affairs program, an MSNBC executive who spoke on condition of anonymity told The Associated Press on Thursday.

"The McLaughlin Group," in its 16th year, is aired weekly on 320 PBS stations across the country and will continue.

McLaughlin's new 30-minute show will air weeknights at 8:30 p.m. EST, part of a juggled prime-time schedule for NBC's cable affiliate. Like "The McLaughlin Group," it will feature panelists debating the news of the day.

John Hockenberry, recently named as host of an hourlong program at 8 p.m., will move the show to 10 p.m. nightly. That will replace MSNBC's show, "White House in Crisis," presumably looking forward to a day when the crisis ends.

"Interright," with host John Gibson, will run from 7 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.

Peyton Manning

JACKSON, Tenn. — Peyton Manning put aside thoughts of football when he visited tornado victims in a hospital, saying he had more important things on his mind.

Manning, the former University of Tennessee star who now is quarterback for the Indianapolis Colts, visited with victims at Jackson-Madison County Hospital on Thursday.

Manning also donated $5,000 to the Red Cross.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.
 For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:
 • Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.
 • Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.
 • Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.
 • Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

knocking down trees, some of them 100 years old. "It was a real one, in the sky and coming down. Black and white. So many different colors," said Michelle Johnson, describing the tornado after it hit the Harvest Foods store.

The front of the grocery collapsed inward while 15 or so customers, including Stallworth, shopped inside. Seconds later, the storm had passed and he was pulling others to safety.

"Some aisles you couldn't even see down," Stallworth said. Firefighters used scent-seeking dogs to make sure no one was missed.

At least 60 people were injured, including 45 in Little Rock. Parts of the state also reported grapefruit-size hail.

In Clarksville, Tenn., a city of 89,000 about 40 miles northwest of Nashville near the Kentucky state line, a twister hit about 4:15 a.m. today, heavily damaging the downtown and causing a dozen minor injuries.

The roof was ripped off the Montgomery County courthouse, much of a historic church was knocked down, trees and utility poles were blown over, and about 25,000 customers were without power.

"It looks like somebody walked through with a broom and knocked over whatever was loose enough to knock down," said Fred Dye, photo editor at The Leaf-Chronicle of Clarksville, whose building was heavily damaged.

"The newsroom is gone," Dye said. "My department, I've got one wall standing."

The Tennessee Highway Patrol said one person died in Big Sandy in Benton County, about 50 miles southwest of Clarksville.

On Sunday, the hardest-hit town was Jackson, about 100 miles southwest of Clarksville.

In Alexandria, La., an apparent tornado ripped apart businesses and downed electrical lines, cutting power to hundreds of residents.

"It was something you could just feel it encircling you," said Rhonda Baker as she surveyed the damage to a mall where she was working late processing tax loans. "My ears started popping as everything went black I couldn't see nothing — and I could feel the building shaking."

Mobile homes, trees and power lines were also damaged by high winds in Mississippi. In Greenville, just across the Mississippi River from Louisiana, Lori Wilkins recalled the storm.

"It was just like when you watch TV and these big funnel clouds pick up every kind of debris," she said. "It was just like watching something like what I see on 'National Geographic.'"

Race still most frequent motive for hate crimes

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than half the 8,049 hate crimes in 1997 reported to the FBI were motivated by racial prejudice, the bureau said.

As in 1996, racial prejudice was the most common motivation for hate crimes, accounting in 1997 for 4,710 incidents.

In order of magnitude, other reported motivations were 1,385 incidents attributed to prejudice about religion, 1,102 sexual orientation, 836 ethnic or national origin, 12 to disability and four to multiple prejudices, the FBI said Thursday.

Athelst continues crusade for religious commandments

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — An 88-year-old atheist trying to get marble tablets displaying the Ten Commandments off a courtroom wall contends the court system is waiting for him to pass away.

"To put it frankly, they're just waiting for me to die," Richard Suhre said. "Obviously if I die, there is no case and he doesn't have to rule."

George Daly, Suhre's lawyer, has asked the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., to compel U.S. District Judge Lucy Thornburg to expedite the case.

Thornburg has twice ruled against the atheist, only to be overruled each time by a three-judge panel. The case was heard in July but Thornburg has not ruled.

Suhre says the 20-by-31-inch tablets violate his right to freedom of religion. The court says the tablets are a historical part of the Haywood County courthouse and should stay.

Daly's nine-page brief includes a series of letters from last year in which Daly pressed Thornburg for a ruling. Several times, the judge wrote back saying the case had not been neglected.

A clerk in Thornburg's office said Thursday the judge was trying a murder case and would have no argument.

Pinochet

Amnesty International: Arrest should stand

LONDON (AP) — The House of Lords can rely on either British law or international law when deciding the fate of Gen. Augusto Pinochet, but neither will bring the former Chilean dictator any relief, Amnesty International argued.

The human rights group got its chance to speak before Britain's highest court on Thursday, after lawyers for Britain and Spain wrapped up arguments seeking to uphold the 83-year-old general's arrest on charges of crimes against humanity.

Pinochet was arrested in London on Oct. 16 on a Spanish warrant alleging that he ordered murder, abduction and torture during his 17-year-reign. The Spanish magistrate seeking his extradition says Spaniards were among those slain after he ousted elected Marxist Salvador Allende in 1973.

Pinochet's lawyers, who will present their case next week before the seven-judge panel, contend that Pinochet is entitled to immunity from arrest in Britain as a former foreign head of state. The hearing resumes Monday.

Ian Brownlie, a lawyer representing Amnesty International, other human rights groups and relative fit into that definition, Brownlie said.

Additionally, he contended that a convention against torture, adopted by Chile in 1988, makes torture a crime under international law that excludes no one from potential charges.

"Neither a former head of state nor the current head of state have immunity to international fore the House of Lords once before. But the court threw out its own 3-2 decision denying the general immunity after one of the judges who ruled against Pinochet was shown last month to have a long-standing relationship with Amnesty International.

If Pinochet loses again, the lengthy extradition process will begin. But if the law lords uphold the Nov. 25 High Court decision giving him immunity, he would be free to return to Chile where he is protected by an amnesty law he passed.

An official Chilean government report says 3,197 people were killed or disappeared at the hands of his secret police.

Pinochet, who is not attending the proceedings, is currently under police guard in a mansion west of London.

"He is the same man you all know," his wife, Lucia Hiriart, told Radio Agricultura of Santiago when she addressed supporters in England on Thursday. "And he is prepared for whatever may come."

Ex-president's brother draws 50 years

TOLUCA, Mexico — The brother of an ex-president has been convicted of masterminding a rival's murder and sentenced to 50 years in prison in the highest-profile murder case in modern Mexican history.

A judge sentenced Raul Salinas de Gortari on Thursday following a blockbuster criminal trial that lasted four years. The trial broke Mexico's long-standing taboo against prosecuting the relatives of powerful politicians.

Shortly after his brother's arrest, former President Carlos Salinas de Gortari left the country and now lives in self-imposed exile in Ireland. "It couldn't have been any worse," Juan Velazquez, an attorney for the Salinas family, said of the verdict.

Raul Salinas' lawyers filed an immediate appeal and said corrupt prosecutors framed their client, who was convicted and sentenced to the maximum penalty for the 1994 murder of Jose Francisco Ruiz Massieu.

"Raul Salinas de Gortari and his defenders will fight wholeheartedly and tirelessly to recuperate the freedom that today was denied," lawyer Mariano Albor said in a statement.

The appeal challenges Judge Ricardo Ojeda Bohorquez's ruling that there was sufficient circumstantial evidence linking Raul Salinas to the crime, although there was no confession or direct evidence.

WASHINGTON — In Nebraska, patients wait for nearly a year and eight months for a liver transplant. In neighboring Iowa, the wait is just 46 days.

Disparities like this stretch across the country, according to a sweeping, seven-volume government report being released today and obtained Thursday by The Associated Press.

The differences in waiting times were found among all types of transplants. Federal officials said it was fresh evidence of how arbitrary geographic barriers make for an unfair system. They said that in New York City, patients waited nearly 10 times as long as similar patients across the Hudson River in New Jersey.

Why the gap? In some communities, people are more likely to donate organs, creating a larger supply there. Also, the best transplant programs tend to attract large numbers of patients, creating longer waits in those areas. Nebraska, for instance, is home to a large liver transplant program, as is Pittsburgh, where the wait for a typical patient with type O blood lasted 721 days.

Hoping to equalize waiting times, HHS has ordered a change in the way scarce organs are allocated. It is crucial to thousands of American families: Some 4,000 people die each year awaiting a transplant.

Pontiff leaves on trip to Mexico, U.S.

VATICAN CITY — Twenty years after beginning his jet-age papacy, Pope John Paul II is again traveling far from the Vatican to set down church policy — this time in the Americas, where he intends to renew his close relationship with the Mexican people.

John Paul left today aboard a special Alitalia jetliner on a 13-hour flight to Mexico City. He will also visit St. Louis.

Invited by bishops from both North and South America during a special assembly in Rome in the fall of 1997, the pope will answer some of the concerns they raised in a document to be released Saturday.

He is expected to address economic injustice and the burden that foreign debt places on poor countries, as well as introduce proposals to give the church a greater role in culture and public policy.

Food Impeach

as fecal contamination and proper temperature. "For almost 100 years neither law nor regulation required meat and poultry companies to produce clean, safe products. We've come a long way," said Carol Tucker Foreman, coordinator for the Safe Food Coalition.

But government inspectors say problems remain. They say the agency wants to phase out inspectors and allow the industry mostly to regulate itself. At a news conference Wednesday, they complained of being powerless to stop problems with meat, including an instance of meat tainted with diesel fuel.

Thomas Billy, administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service, said there are no plans to eliminate the inspectors. But the agency is seeking ways to move some inspectors from the plant and into other areas of the food chain such as distribution warehouses.

Billy said the goal is to make "a net improvement in food safety while at the same time maintaining the other consumer protections."

Even one of the House managers prosecuting the case indicated that the defense seemed likely to prevail. Clinton's lawyers have succeeded in "challenging every phase of the case we made," Rep. George W. Gekas, R-Pa., told the Lancaster (Pa.) Intelligencer Journal. When the trial is over, Clinton will still be president, the newspaper quoted Gekas as saying.

Democrats generally oppose witnesses. Most would likely vote for an expected motion to dismiss the case without voting on charges of perjury and obstruction of justice regarding Clinton's efforts to cover up his affair with Ms. Lewinsky.

Even some Republicans seemed undecided about the need for witnesses. "I'm more apt to cast a vote, yes, the deposition should be held, than I am to cast a vote the witnesses should be called. But we'll wait and see," Sen. Robert Bennett, R-Utah, said this morning on "Today."

The motion to dismiss and votes on witnesses, probably Monday, probably would end the bipartisanship that has sustained the trial inside the Senate, although political unity already has evaporated in front of television cameras stationed just outside the chamber.

"There's so much acrimony in Washington, tragically, and so much division over issues and personalities. ... You may dislike Bill Clinton, and God knows he's given us all some reasons to be disappointed. Rise above it," Torricelli added today.

Former Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., in a closing White House presentation Thursday that was praised for its eloquence by Republicans and Democrats alike, asked senators to give the public a break.

"The American people are now and for some time have been asking to be allowed a good night's sleep. They're asking for an end to this nightmare. It is a legitimate request," he said.

After Bumpers spoke, not all Republicans were echoing the party line on witnesses or the strength of the case presented last week by the all-Republican House prosecution team.

Sen. Gordon Smith, R-Ore., said the White House "created reasonable doubt for me and many of my colleagues" on a majority of the contested issues. "It doesn't mean they can't be reclarified to the comfort of all of us," he said, holding open his ultimate judgment.

Sen. Richard Shelby, R-Ala., said, "I don't think we ought to hear witnesses unless they will add a lot to the case. I would want to know what they would say over and above what they already said" in testimony that is now part of the written record developed by Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr.

Bumpers' folks, storytelling style contrasted sharply with Clinton lawyer David Kendall, who stood before the senators Thursday to make strict legal arguments. Kendall recited Ms. Lewinsky's testimony that "no one ever asked me to lie and I never promised a job for my silence."

He asked senators: "Is there something difficult to understand here?"
