'If Hereford doesn't want dump, we'll take that, too'

Deaf Smith salt could go to Carlsbad

HEREFORD, Texas (AP) — A proposal to dump more than 11 million tons of salt from the proposed Deaf Smith County nuclear waste storage facility into abandoned potash mines could be an economic windfall for job-hungry Carlsbad, N.M., officials said.

Linda McClain, a spokeswoman for the U.S. Department of Energy, confirmed that trucking salt from the proposed deep excavation in the Panhandle to Carlsbad 300 miles to the south is among alternatives for disposal.

Opponents to the proposed high-level nuclear waste dump site near Hereford have long objected to the Texas location, contending that above-ground storage of the excavated salt would contaminate miles of nearby rich farmland.

Ms. McClain said if the Hereford site were selected, workers would excavate enough salt rock for the shaft alone to cover a five-acre plot at least 20 feet high.

Total excavation for the subterranean caverns would produce 11.3 million tons of excess salt — enough to cover 200 acres 25 feet high.

The Hereford site is among three locations being considered for the nation's first high-level nuclear waste repository. The other sites are at Hanford, Wash., and near Yucca Mountain, Nev.

Carlsbad already is the site of DOE's Waste Isolation Pilot Plant, a $2.1 billion project that will begin storing low-level radioactive wastes from defense plants next year. The site also will store high-level experimental wastes in salt domes 2,000 feet below the surface.

Carlsbad Mayor Bob Forrest said his city would welcome the option to store the Hereford salt in some of the area's abandoned potash mines.

"I think it's a good idea," he said. "Geologically, we're more receptive to it. By the time DOE is ready to dispose of the salt, we'll be ready for it. I see no problem in using the potash mines. In fact, there are a couple (of speculators) already trying to get licenses for storing wastes in the mines."

Forrest said if Carlsbad were selected as the terminal for the Hereford salt, other commercial options might be found, including the processing of rock salt for de-icing streets in major northern metropolitan areas.

Forrest said that while DOE has suffered an avalanche of criticism elsewhere around the nation, Carlsbad has found its relationship with the federal energy agency to the community's liking.

"We're probably the only friends DOE has got," he told the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal. "In fact, if Hereford doesn't want the (high-level) nuclear waste dump, we'll take that, too. We've got something going for us."

Forrest said Carlsbad's double-digit unemployment rate — attributable to declines in the potash market — welcomed the 600 jobs provided by WIPP.

Hereford Mayor Wes Fisher remains skeptical that the Hereford repository will ever be built, but said salt excavations are among the concerns of local farmers and cattlemen.

"Anything that could be done with the salt would make people feel somewhat better," he said. "... That is if it (the Hereford selection) ever happens."

Ms. McClain, a Vega, Texas-based DOE spokeswoman, said in addition to overland shipping of Hereford salt excavations to Carlsbad, the agency also is looking at an alternative of trucking the salt 800 miles to the Gulf of Mexico, loading it aboard barges and dumping it at sea.

Other options include trucking much of the salt waste to an unspecified desert landfill or adding it to tailings at some unspecified mining operation, she said.

Under the current schedule, if the Hereford site were selected for the nuclear waste repository, shaft excavation could not begin before the third quarter of 1989, she said.

MICHELLE HARDER ...with cornhusk creations.

Harder's crop nets profit from corn husk dolls

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

Beauty, it is said, is in the eye of the beholder. A farmer gazing at his fields of corn a few short weeks before harvest sees a hopeful profit to provide his family with the necessities of life. He also sees beauty in the fields representative of his long hours of labor and a graceful God who gave favorable weather.

It is from this bounty that Michelle Haddad Harder creates another beauty. Using the corn husks and silks her husband, J.D., gathers for her each season just prior to harvest she creates dolls which constitute a supplemental source of income for the family.

Corn husk dolls are one of the oldest forms of American folk art but Harder has added a new dimension to the art form through the creation of intricately detailed period pieces.

"I began making corn husk dolls three and a half years ago," she says. "My mother-in-law asked me to make centerpieces for a Thanksgiving time family reunion."

Harder found the directions for an Amish doll fashioned from corn husks in an old issue of Better Homes and Gardens. The first dolls she made were simple and plain colored but captured the attention of the family and, encouraged by their favorable response, Harder began producing dolls to sell.

"I had been looking for something to do which would allow me to stay at home with my child," she explains. Her daughter, Megan, has since been joined by a sister, Sarah, and the busy mother continues to enjoy a career which enables her to work at home.

As the family has grown so has the business, Harder now uses original designs for customizing her creations and even custom crafts dolls gowned in replicas of wedding dresses. She explains, "You put up wedding dresses and pictures but a replica of the dress is something which can be displayed and enjoyed."

A popular gift item, the bridal dressed dolls make a treasured memory. Harder copies the gowns and hats from pictures and pays close attention to details.

Other than the custom designed dolls, Harder creates elaborate styles from fashions of the past and adds details with soft colors, feathers and trims. A touch of whimsy enters the collection with the addition of cornhusk lions, elephants, horses and clowns.

From the beginning to the final processing Harder spends from a few hours to several days on each creation. The signed and dated dolls sell for $65 to $275 for those with extensive details.

J.D., who works for Tri-State Chemical, does all the bookkeeping for the booming family business with Michelle selling dolls about as fast as she makes them. The dolls are offered in some juried art shows such as the Texas State Arts and Crafts Fair in Kerrville and the Jubilee of Arts in Amarillo and though she has turned down an offer to have the dolls sold at market, in Dallas, Harder recently signed with Minton-Corley Antiques to sell her creations through a shop they will be opening in Santa Fe, New Mexico.

"I'm very honored and excited by this," she says, "because it will provide a wide market for my work but I will still be free to spend much of my time with my family."

Drugs don't make addicts, priest says

The "Junkie Priest" is in town telling parents and kids his philosophy on drug abuse: That all the drugs in the world don't make a drug addict, it is more the daily choice between needs and wants.

Fr. Dan Egan will speak in the schools and churches as part of a Drug Awareness Week and on Wednesday evening will join Mrs. Lonise Bias, mother University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias who died from a dose of cocaine, for a parent and adult rally at 7:30 p.m. in La Plata Gym. Mrs. Bias, arriving Wednesday, also will speak to students during school hours on Thursday.

Kicking off the week, a youth prayer service for 5 p.m. Sunday in First Christian Church is planned.

Fr. Egan arrived in Hereford Friday for speaking engagements with churches and to visit his brother, Fr. Joe Egan of St. Anthony's Catholic Church.

The "Junkie Priest," which is Fr. Egan's nickname on the East Coast and the title of a book about his early work, wasn't prepared for the ministry he got into, nor did he have any particular attraction to it. His first encounter was with a young woman crumpled in the back of his church. He asked if he could help, and she told him she was a junkie and needed to go to the hospital. At the time in the mid 1950s, Fr. Egan didn't even know what a junkie was. He stayed with helping the junkies and became involved with intensive rehabilitation. In 1980, he switched his efforts to prevention after contemplating whether he was "too old" (he will turn 72 soon) for the job.

Part of his contemplation was with a group of 21 youths from 13 to 15-years-old. "The things they shared shocked me," he said. "Good parents are the last to find out" because the kids are so good at deception.

From the group, all but two started drug use at age 9. Every one of the girls, once into drugs and alcohol and not in control, had been raped at least twice.

He decided to go into prevention.

Fr. Egan says talking about drugs themselves can be done by a policeman or a pharmacist. He believes there is something under the addiction that boils down to the search for happiness — but that happiness is often confused with pleasure and that needs are mixed up with wants.

"I think we're raising a race of moral slobs," he says. "Kids are soft and we don't know how to say no."

Fr. Egan says the pleasure has become an end in itself, and that society has lost the value of pain, struggle and of difficult things.

"I don't think there's any community today that can be vaccinated from the danger of drug abuse," Fr. Egan told The Brand Saturday.

"It's a good time, before the proms, for parents to take the bull by the horns — I guess in Hereford that's a good term — about drinking and drugs," he said.

Parental responsibility for providing needs instead of all the wants of a child are top on Fr. Egan's list. He said his talk Wednesday night will be upbeat and hopeful, and refer to the problems underneath drugs.

Mrs. Bias is traveling the U.S. as a lecturer and consultant and challenges youth across the country to wage war against drugs.

She is an active member of the Pilgrim AME Church in Washington, D.C. and lives in Landover, Md. She and her husband James Sr. have three children in addition to the late Len Bias.

The program is sponsored by local civic clubs, law enforcement agencies, the Ministerial Alliance, The Chemical People, and businesses.

Domestic violence cases on rise

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

Domestic violence is more common than most people realize. The Hereford Police Department reports a 158 percent increase in domestic violence calls over the previous three years.

In 1985, HPD officers received 243 calls relating to domestic violence. State and national statistics estimate only 10 percent of domestic violence incidences are ever reported. The FBI estimates that half of all women will at some time be a victim of domestic violence.

Bonnie Barrick of the HPD says, "Domestic violence calls are considered one of the most dangerous types of calls we have to answer."

This is in part due to the unpredictable reaction of the wife when she sees her husband being arrested and because of the violent nature of the husband.

Barrick, who has received special police training in handling domestic violence calls, says, "It is not our intention to go out there and make an arrest, we go out with the goal of diffusing a violent situation."

Because of potential danger to the officers, HPD policy requires they team up with backup cover for any officer answering a domestic violence call. When the police enter the home they do so with the intent of preventing more violence. In many cases the wife is bleeding and battered, the husband is in a rage and often other family members are present adding to the confusion.

Into this bedlam police officers try to inject some sanity. Barrick describes the tense situation, "Untrained as counselors, sometimes we are just referees out there."

The law dictates the officers cannot leave the scene unless, in their personal assessment, they believe the situation is diffused.

Trained not to take sides and not to always assume the man is in the wrong, the officers attempt to separate the participants and restore order. In some instances they get the man and wife to agree to spend the night apart and allow tempers to cool. As a last resort arrest becomes the officer's option to ensure the safety of the victim.

In 1985, HPD reports 93 domestic assaults with only seven arrests. Historically police are unlikely to make arrests in domestic violence cases. In the event an arrest does occur, the matter becomes a concern for the District Attorney's office.

Report says North arranged Communist arms sales to Contras

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lt. Col. Oliver North helped arrange for communist countries, including China and Poland, to sell Russian-made arms to Nicaragua's Contra rebels, according to a published report today quoting congressional investigators.

On another matter involving the fired White House aide, an FBI document shows that he received a tip about a bogus Saudi prince's desire to contribute money to the Nicaraguan Contras from a man who operated as a freelance intelligence operative.

The New York Times reported that congressional committees investigating the Iran-Contra scandal have found that North persuaded China to sell Soviet-made SAM-7 anti-aircraft missiles to the Contras but such sales were cut off in 1985.

The Times quoted an unidentified official as saying he believed that the deal had been made through contacts with the Chinese military and that it was possible the Chinese political leadership was initially unaware of the sales.

The Contras were also buying arms from Poland, the Times reported, adding that North was said to have told associates he helped arrange that effort. The report said one associate recalled that North was amused because ships bearing arms destined for both the Sandinistas and the Contras were docked in the same Polish port.

The FBI document, written by an agent who interviewed North at his National Security Council office on July 18, 1985, stemmed from an investigation of a case in which a fake Saudi Arabian prince, Mousalreza Ebrahim Zadeh, defrauded a Philadelphia bank of $210,000.

North, who was fired from his NSC job last November for his role in the Iran-Contra affair, allegedly was involved in raising private money for the Contra rebels seeking to overthrow the Sandinista government.

In his interview with the FBI, North said he first learned about the "prince's" offer to help support the Contras from Kevin Katke, a maintenance engineer from Freeport, N.Y., in 1984.

"The prince was allegedly interested in placing a large sum of money as the disposal of the Nicaraguan freedom fighters," the FBI memo said.

North told Katke that since use of government funds to aid Nicaraguan insurgents was illegal, the contact with the Saudi "prince" would be Richard Miller, a public relations consultant who worked on contract to the NSC and the State Department, the memo said.

"Miller's work concerns the funneling of private funds to Nicaraguan freedom fighters who oppose the Sandinista government," the memo said.

Congress barred the United States from providing military aid to the Contras between October 1984 and October 1986. The "prince" apparently never made any donation to the Contras.

Katke, who has an unlisted telephone number and could not be reached for comment Friday, was involved in setting up a private organization on Long Island known as the National Freedom Institute.

Katke told Newsday in March that the institute was made up of private citizens who collected information about international developments and fed that data to government agencies.

Ted Bishop, a Texas businessman who knows Katke, said the Long Island man and his friends were involved in a number of deals, including plans to sell "crude oil and coffee and tobacco — that sort of thing."

In other developments Friday:

—White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Friday he didn't know why David Fischer, a former personal aide to Reagan until April 1985, was allowed to keep his White House pass until Nov. 24, 1986. After he left the White House job and became a private consultant, Fischer arranged meetings between the president and Contra aid contributors, according to Jane McLaughlin, who worked with Fischer.

—A Contra official said Friday that during the congressional ban on U.S. aid to the rebels, the Contras had devised their own bond-sale project in 1985 to generate income from wealthy individuals.

The Contras set up a Delaware corporation called Central America Investment Corp. which collected $100,000 from only two individuals to launch the war-bond effort, said rebel official Bosco Matamoros, the corporation's president. One of the investors got his money back and the rest went for administrative expenses, Matamoros said.

—Sen. William Cohen of Maine, a Republican member of the Senate Iran-Contra committee, said he expected "significant revelations" when the House and Senate panels begin their joint hearings Tuesday with testimony from retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord.

—A source familiar with the Senate investigation said late Friday that former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane had made plans to commit suicide in case he was kidnapped or held prisoner by Moslem extremists during his secret mission to Iran a year ago.

McFarlane took large quantities of the tranquilizer Valium with him on the trip, during which he sought to free the American hostages in Beirut, the source said. Back in the United States, McFarlane attempted suicide Feb. 9 by taking an overdose of Valium after becoming despondent over the failure of the Iran overture and the international uproar it created.

Webster gains CIA post approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — William Webster has the unanimous approval of the Senate Intelligence Committee to become head of the CIA, while a spokesman for Dick Thornburgh says the former Pennsylvania governor turned down an offer to replace Webster as FBI director.

The intelligence committee voted 15-0 Friday to recommend Senate approval of Webster, ending three days of close questioning about the bureau's involvement with fired White House aide Oliver North.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said the confirmation hearings raised serious questions about the FBI's relationship with the former National Security Council official. North was fired last November following disclosure of the apparent diversion of funds to the Nicaraguan Contras from U.S. arms sales to Iran.

Committee Chairman David Boren, D-Okla., and Vice Chairman William Cohen, R-Maine, refused to discuss details of a one-hour closed-door session Friday with the FBI director to discuss a classified document pertaining to North supplied by the special Senate panel investigating the Iran-Contra affair.

The memo dealt with an issue concerning the Contras, said an administration source, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Meanwhile, Thornburgh spokesman Dave Runkel said the former two-term Republican governor had called Attorney General Edwin Meese III to turn down the FBI post.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, asked about the report that Thornburgh had been offered the job, said only that he "has been a leading candidate and I know the job has been discussed with him." But Fitzwater said he couldn't confirm that an offer had been made.

Thornburgh spoke by telephone Friday evening with Meese and "told the attorney general that he was extremely honored to have been offered the position," said Runkel.

"He told him that he has great respect for the bureau ... but that earlier this year, he made certain commitments to his family, to his law firm — Kirkpatrick & Lockhart — and to the Institute of Politics at Harvard," Runkel said.

Thornburgh is to become a director of the institute at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government on June 1.

The Pittsburgh Post-Gazette today quoted an anonymous source familiar with the discussions as saying that Thornburgh "was reluctant to take a 10-year appointment."

Webster's hearings have shown that FBI agents in the Washington field office had evidence nearly two years ago that North was operating a private assistance network to the Contras. The information never got to FBI headquarters on the other side of town because of problems with the bureau's communication system, Webster testified.

On a related matter, last Oct. 31, nearly a month before the Iran-Contra affair was disclosed, Webster initialed an internal FBI memorandum which cautioned against distributing information to North because of the possibility he could become a target in future criminal investigations.

Testimony suggests that "the FBI, and to some extent Judge Webster himself, would not respond to clear warnings to stop Lt. Col. North's improper, if not illegal activities," Specter said after the vote.

Webster said he forgot about the internal document until it surfaced in preparation for his confirmation hearings.

Bakker's preaching days are over

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Evangelist Jim Bakker says it would take a miracle for him to resume preaching after a sex scandal forced him out of his PTL ministry, and says he will write a book to tell his side of the story.

Bakker, in his first news conference since his resignation as PTL chairman, said he has not tried to return to the TV ministry that paid him and his wife, Tammy Faye, $1.6 million last year.

"Tammy and I are alive. We may not be too well," a smiling Bakker said Friday as he and his tearful wife came out of their home to talk with reporters.

"We have no future plans," Bakker said. "Right now, without a miracle of God we will never minister again. We don't know what the future holds. We really don't. That's in God's hands."

Bakker, who has acknowledged the 1980 liaison with church secretary Jessica Hahn that led to his downfall, denied all other allegations of sexual misconduct that have emerged since his resignation.

"I have never been involved with wife swapping. I am not a homosexual and I've never been to a prostitute. That's not important. We've were filed but that in most cases the wife doesn't follow through.

Hope says, "The problem occurs when wife's drop charges because they file when they are mad and upset, then we lock their husbands up and they have no place to go, no income, so they drop the charges."

Nine cases have been filed in the D.A.'s office this year.

Penalties are given according to the degree of the assault and range from a $200 fine and a short jail term to a $10,000 fine and 20 to 99 years in jail in felony cases where a deadly weapon has been used to inflict injury.

It is in part the fines and jail terms which encourage battered wives to drop charges. The general consensus of those who work with victims is that the woman is usually financially dependent on the man. When he is in jail and unable to work, or when he must pay a fine because the wife has pressed charges, she is unable to provide for her children.

Some say the legal system effectively encourages the battered wife to return to the violent home situation by removing the bread winner from productive society.

Financial pressures are often supplemented by fear in determining the woman's decision to remain in the marriage. For interviews concerning the factors involved in domestic violence and the community's recent efforts to address the issues see Tuesday's edition of The Hereford Brand.

Survey shows hunger exists

In this second half of the 20th Century, most Americans think of hunger as something foreign, something depicted in television and magazine ads collecting aid for African or Asian famine victims.

Hunger may not be a visible, day-to-day presence in our society, but the Texas Department of Health (TDH) completed a survey in 1986 which shows that some among us, often women and children, sometimes go without food because they have no money for basic nutrition.

The survey, conducted among clients of public health clinics, showed that:

-In nearly a third (31.7 percent) of the 3,072 responding families from 44 Texas counties, the mother had skipped one or more meals, or eaten less, in the previous month because the family lacked food. In 17 percent of these families, children also had to skip meals or eat less.

-The incidence of skipping meals and eating less increased as the families' income levels decreased.

-The greatest incidence of hunger was reported among families participating only in the federal Food Stamp Program. These families also reported the greatest extent of poverty—51 percent having annual family incomes less than $5,000.

-Families participating both in the Food Stamp Program and the TDH Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC), or participating only in WIC, suffered less hunger than those participating only in the Food Stamp Program.

MODERATION IS BETTER

NEW YORK (AP) — Moderation in exercise is better for you than running marathons or trying to set fitness records, says the Reebok Aerobic Information Bureau.

According to a recent study of 17,000 male Harvard alumni by Dr. Ralph S. Paffenbarger Jr. of Stanford University, men who engaged in a modest exercise program, like a brisk three-mile daily walk, had death rates one-quarter to one-third lower than the sedentary alumni.

No new taxes

Gov. Bill Clements was in Amarillo the other day on his 17-city swing around the state to preach his gospel of no new taxes.

The governor has proposed a $36.9-billion budget for Texas, compared to a Senate proposal of $40 billion. The House will debate a $39.4-billion spending plan Monday. So, the governor and the legislature are apart by a couple of billion or so. Some of the lawmakers might not notice, but a billion dollars is a lot of money.

Gov. Clements has told his audiences around the state that his budget will not cut the funds for education. It will reduce the funding for human services and will reduce funding for a number of state agencies.

The problem is that those services and agencies are accustomed to an increase every year. When there is no increase, they complain about a budget cut. No one is willing to take a cut, and all have sad stories about not being able to exist with a cut in funds.

Can Texas get by with a $37-billion budget as the governor is proposing? No doubt it can if people are willing to do without some state services they have been enjoying under a rich oil economy. It is never easy to cut expenses and it's never done without some painful self examination. A number of companies and businesses here in Hereford have had to cut expenses to survive, and employees have had to face the prospect of no pay increases.

The state has a source of funding that private companies do not have—taxes. The test seems to be whether or not Texas taxpayers really want the state services that call for $40 billion.

The governor believes Texans are not willing to pay the higher taxes necessary to fund an ever-increasing budget. We don't think his trip around the state will change his commitment to a lower budget.

Tunnel vision

A school warehouse employee in Dallas, who was fired after complaining about working conditions, has been given a federal court victory.

The federal court in Dallas ruled that the Dallas school district owed Peggy Smith $97,000 in damages and back pay for violation of her First Amendment rights.

Mrs. Smith worked in the food warehouse. The school district required that all employees in the warehouse wear safety shoes. Mrs. Smith said the shoes were uncomfortable and took them off. She said that supervisors didn't have to wear them. The school fired her.

She then found a lawyer who filed suit for restoring her job and back pay, not on the grounds that safety shoes were uncomfortable but on sex discrimination, a much more friendly basis for a lawsuit.

The school contended that Mrs. Smith circulated a petition against the wearing of safety shoes and took time from her work to circulate the petition. This disrupted the work of other employees, the school said. But the court ignored this argument.

In addition to the charge of sex discrimination, Mrs. Smith's lawyer added another sure fire complaint, racial prejudice. Mrs. Smith is black.

The Texas State Teachers Association hailed the verdict as a victory for school employees who want to file grievances or complaints about working conditions in the schools.

The attorneys for the Dallas schools tried to get the issue of sex and race discrimination removed, citing many instances where females and blacks worked in various positions without incident. They were unsuccessful in doing this.

The TSTA may regard this as a great victory, but perhaps it is merely another example of a court system with tunnel vision. All a plaintiff has to do to insure victory is to present sex or race as the determining issue and everything else is ignored.

Deficit spending

Last week the U.S. House of Representatives voted to eliminate all $651 million in foreign aid from its $8.5 billion supplemental spending bill for the current fiscal year.

The House did so because of legitimate concern over deficit spending and a growing feeling among voters that the United States has enough to worry about at home. While those reasons are understandable, they are not necessarily convincing.

If the House were serious about deficit reduction, it would also have adopted some of the domestic cuts recommended by the administration, all of which were rejected. In an $8.5 billion shopping list that will bring federal spending to the outer limits of its $1.09 trillion budget for the year, a good deal of fat was available to be trimmed.

Bootleg Philosopher

Editor's note: The Bootleg Philosopher on his Johnsongrass farm on Tierra Blanca Creek gets bogged down in some statistics this week.

Dear editor:

Population experts estimate there are now 5 billion people on earth, counting as best they could bushmen, aborigines, Congressmen, British Lords, FBI agents, Russian KGB agents, un-jailed Wall Street stock brokers, Republicans, Democrats, splinter groups and protest marchers whose numbers are arrived at by estimating how many there are per square yard.

What got me thinking about this was another world-wide estimate I read about. That estimate claims there are now 1 million insects for each human being now on earth.

I've turned those figures over in my mind and can find no use for them, although I guess they're something to think about while Sec. Schultz is talking about arms control. You can get in a lot of thinking between each of his words.

If all 5 billion of us humans each has 1 million insects apiece, then, even with nuclear bombs and two new aircraft carriers under construction, the odds are against us. They've got us outnumbered by a million to one. It just bears out my contention that every time man comes out with a new insecticide, the insects come out with a new insect.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

U.S. Chamber Voice of Business

By RICHARD L. LESHNER
President

In 1914, the assassination of Austrian Archduke Franz Ferdinand set off a chain of events that engulfed the world in an unprecedented catastrophe.

Looking back, it all seems so unnecessary. There were no great fundamental ideological differences between the superpowers. But one thing led to another and World War I ensued.

Likewise, today there are no great fundamental differences between the United States and Japan. Both nations embrace democratic politics and free enterprise economics. Perhaps most important, our economies are closely intertwined with capital and goods moving back and forth constantly. Any major disruption of that flow would be catastrophic for both nations.

Yet that is the specter that confronts us. Japan's lopsided trade advantage over the U.S. fosters bad feeling and ill humor that easily could get out of hand. The current controversy over semi-conductors could spark a chain reaction of sanctions and retaliation escalating quickly out of control.

Of particular interest in Congress is a reported statement by a senior Japanese official that the U.S. would be wasting its time trying to sell supercomputers to Japan. Comments like that reinforce widespread convictions in this country that the Japanese are engaging in predatory trade practices and are not affording the U.S. fair access to Japan's domestic market.

For political reasons alone, the Reagan administration would appear to have little choice but to retaliate against Japan in some way. But the Japanese are unlikely to accept such action with good grace. They have cooperated in the dramatic decline of the dollar against the yen, a development that has led to great difficulty and unrest in Japan. The Japanese point out, correctly, that they are losing jobs while we continue to create them by the barrelful.

There can be no denying that the U.S. has legitimate grievances against Japan. At the same time, however, we must keep in mind that the Japanese have troubles of their own, and that both our countries have a powerful interest in avoiding an escalation of the trade dispute. In 1986, the U.S. exported almost $400 billion worth of goods and services. An outbreak of protectionism would destroy millions of jobs in this country and cut Americans' real incomes by up to 20 percent.

If there were ever a time for political leaders on both sides of the Pacific to demonstrate some cool, this is it. We must keep a lid on this thing. We dare not permit it to become the economic equivalent of the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand.

The Penultimate Word

TOO GENTLE TO LIVE AMONG WOLVES

James Kavanaugh has a great title for a book. It is called There Are Men Too Gentle To Live Among Wolves. I love the title, as well as the book. It says to me that there are men who can fight battles and there are men who cannot. I think there are areas in our world far too serious to turn over to politicians, not that politicians are too gentle. Matter of fact, very few of them could ever be accused of gentleness at all. There are men too political to ever be able to do anything except be political.

The very nature of the job demands that they never say what they really think or feel. They learn how to be experts at almost saying something. Every issue must be weighed in light of how votes will be affected. Every issue must be put in the best light. If an atomic bomb dropped on New York the first issue would be how to report the event to the people and not get blamed in any way. The next issue would be choosing the scapegoat to catch the flack.

I don't mind these folks making laws. Will Rogers said that every time Congress makes a joke it is a law. But they somehow don't do much harm with this exercise in futility. Every time they write one someone else writes another one to offset the results of the first one. It is sort of like the weather in Texas, if you don't like the weather just drive a mile or wait a minute. Laws change that fast, also.

We need somebody besides politicians to face the big issues. I shudder to think that politicians are going to negotiate the arms agreement. What we need at the conference table are some hard nosed West Texans. Some of those tough, honest, straight shooters who will put a chew in their mouth, spit when they need to, and let it all hang out.

I even have some names for the committee. I would send Tom Draper. Tom would get them all to laughing and, while they laughed, he would steal their shoes. Or Bobby Owen. Bobby would convince them he was dumb and innocent and, while they weren't looking, he would load up their bombs and go home. How about Ray Cowser? Ray would charm them with his West Texas drawl, and they would have an irresistible urge to cuddle him. He may look cuddly, but watch out in the clinches. We could send Clint Formby to talk them to death, Gladys Caviness to wow them, or Jim Witherspoon to out fox them.

These folks aren't too gentle to live among wolves. They aren't too political to tell the truth either.

Warm Fuzzies,
Doug Manning

Capitol Report

Summary of legislation

By Rep. John Smithee
Summary of legislation passed during the week of April 27:

The House Appropriations Committee passed a bill providing total appropriations of approximately $39.4 billion, $600 million short of the Senate version, and about $2.5 billion over the Governor's original plan. The House proposal would maintain education funding at current levels while substantially boosting funds for human services and prisons.

The Senate approved Monday a bill allowing law enforcement officers to get a search warrant by telephone. Under the bill, officers could obtain warrants by making a taped telephone call to the proper authority under oath. Probable cause that an offense has been committed is still required. The bill now goes to the House for debate.

A bill passed the Senate making it illegal for motorists to consume alcoholic beverages while driving. The law would not apply to passengers in the vehicle, and police must see a driver drinking an alcoholic beverage before they can enforce the law. Conviction would subject the driver to a fine of up to $200.

House members passed a bill requiring the destruction of dogs that engaged in repeated attacks on humans. The bill would require owners of vicious dogs to restrain the animal and buy $100,000 in liability insurance to cover damage done by the dog. Penalties of six months in jail and a $1000 fine could be levied against owners who fail to comply with the statute.

Preliminary approval was given to a bill that would require state agencies to give preference to U.S. products when awarding contracts. A U.S. product is one in which at least 51 percent of its component parts were produced in the U.S.

House Bill 289 by Smithee passed the House on Second reading Wednesday. The bill makes it an offense to threaten to tamper with a consumer product with the intent of causing fear, affecting sales or causing bodily harm. Such threats will be a third-degree felony. The bill also raises the penalty for tampering to a second-degree felony (maximum penalty of 20 years and a $10,000 fine) unless bodily injury results. Tampering resulting in bodily injury will remain a first-degree felony.

The Senate approved a bill that would ban children under the age of 12 from riding in the open beds of pickups and flatbed trailers that are travelling at more than 30 miles per hour.

The State of Texas has avoided fines of $800,000 a day by making satisfactory improvements in its prisons. The fines were charged by U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice on December 31, 1986. Since then, the Texas Department of Corrections has worked to bring the prison system into compliance with Justice's orders. The ruling is only temporary, however. Another hearing is set for October 1 to determine if the state is in full compliance.

House Bill 1566 by Stanwallis regulating subsurface excavations passed the House with an amendment by Representative Smithee to control the blowing of excavated waste materials onto adjacent land. The bill would give state water and agriculture officials some regulatory power over surface storage of salt excavated as part of the site study for the nation's first high level nuclear waste dump.

Peekaboo booze bill

Ooh, the courage it must have taken. The Texas House has voted to make it against the law for a driver to drink.

Courage? Well, let's not be too charitable. The House action delivers about as much kick as near-beer. The only way it would be enforced is if an officer actually witnessed a driver consuming an alcoholic beverage.

Give the House a silver of credit. It finally had the gumption to repudiate drinking while driving, actually making it illegal.

Unfortunately it approved a bill so weak it is unlikely to impact the problem. It is simply a challenge for Bubba to improve his eye-hand coordination.

Quinceanera held for local youth Saturday

A quinceanera was held early Saturday afternoon in St. Anthony's Catholic Church for Tammie Pacheco, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Juan Puento of 924 Irving. She was escorted by Jerry Pacheco, son of Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Pacheco of Amarillo.

During the Mass, which was officiated by Father McGory of the church, the main altar was decorated by a large spring floral arrangement. Featured vocalist was Raul Guerrero.

The Sunshiners band entertained during the reception and dance held at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

The honoree was attired in a full-length white satin dress which featured a portrait neckline, fitted bodice and short-puffed sleeves adorned at the shoulders with wide lace bands. The full three-tiered skirt, also enhanced with lace, was caught at the front of the waist with red and white satin bows and ribbon streamers. Red bows also decorated the first tier of the skirt.

She carried a white lace parasol accented by red and white pearls, and her flowers consisted of red and white roses entwined by cut-crystals and red ribbon. Her attendants wore red and white satin roses in their

REDUCE THE RISK
By Bob Wear

WE CANNOT SEE into the future with any degree of certainty, except as it may concern our spiritual destiny; and there are some who do not think that we can even do this. It is not the purpose of this writing to advance any sensational theories, but remind us of the things we know which will help us reduce the risk and some of the uncertainty in the living experience.

ALL OF US are moving rapidly into an uncertain future, and this unrelenting movement into the future involves great risk for us. Even though we cannot know exactly what the future holds for us, we can reduce the risk.

TO SOME EXTENT, we can control our destiny. This will be done by the wise application of the constantly working law of 'sowing and reaping'. Nothing has happened in the past or is happening now to destroy the fact that 'the reaping is according to the sowing'. This means that the way we use the present, with its opportunities and obligations, will be a big factor in what our future will be. Intelligence, wisdom and wholesomeness in our sowing will reduce much of the risk.

ANOTHER WAY to reduce the risk is to make ourselves strong, in every way we can become strong, as we move along from day to day. If we do this, and we can do this, we are going to be better equipped to cope with the experiences that the future brings. "The best preparation for the future, is the present well seen to, and the last duty done."—G. McDonald

OUR CONCERN for the future can be either a sensible concern or an anxious concern. A sensible concern reduces the risk, but the anxious concern increases the risk. Therefore we must establish a knowledgeable and substantial 'faith', in harmony with the best available value system. "We must look forward with confidence and courage, and not backward with regret. If we are fair with ourselves, we shall find as much pleasure and happiness as grief. The same should be true of the future, if we approach it as we should."—W. Ross.

LIVING IN ALL of the light available to us will be the best for us in the present and in the future.

Plan ahead for elderly care

Open communication and planning between adult children and their aging parents can ease the transition of dependency in a family, says gerontologist Dr. Judith Warren.

"Increasing frailty can be a daily reminder of a parent's mortality," says the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service home economist. "It's not always easy to accept that a parent is no longer the strong person you used to depend upon."

"Remember, parents probably feel the same way," she adds. "It's difficult for most people who have been self-sufficient to accept any level of dependency. Loss of independence and control can be a blow to an older person's self esteem."

The best way to deal with this situation is to talk with parents before a crisis occurs, says Warren. Discuss future "what ifs" because tentative plans can provide some insurance against making unsatisfactory decisions.

The gerontologist advises adult children to talk with parents about their individual relationships, the problems in their own lives, and how much they can contribute to parents' care. This may help avoid later undermining of a decision by either parents or other family members.

"Try to work out a compromise between your parent's needs and your own capabilities," Warren suggests. "Focus on their remaining strengths and abilities as well as limitations when making any type of arrangements for housing or care."

Contact local agencies on aging and senior citizen centers for information about available options. It's important not to have preconceived ideas about what is the best solution, she emphasizes.

The first train robbery in the United States was carried out in 1865 near North Bend, Ohio.

Girl of Year

Why drink bottled water?

Water, your body's most essential nutrient, flows "free" from a tap inside your home, so why buy it in a bottle?

"Bottled water can be an alternative to the off-taste of hard tap water, the additives in sodas and other beverages, and can replace alcohol," says Mary Kinney Sweeten, a nutritionist with the Texas A&M Agricultural Extension Service.

"Some people on restricted diets will also find bottled water helpful, because some minerals in tap water, like sodium, may be too concentrated for their dietary recommendations."

No. 1 draft choice, 290-pound lineman from Nebraska

Cowboys coach optimistic about Noonan

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Danny Noonan stood there, all 290 pounds of him, standing in combat boots, coatless with his shirt-tail out and his tie askew. He didn't wear a coat because he didn't have one that would fit his massive 6-foot-4 frame. He answered questions with a quiet confidence, saying he couldn't fathom the Dallas Cowboys being losers.

"I'm used to winning myself," he said.

He talked almost in a self-conscious way about his work habits, which include bench-pressing 500 pounds of weights, six days a week.

He looked and acted like another defensive lineman named Randy White did over a decade ago.

If this Nebraska Cornhusker can play like White then the Cowboys may have found themselves a catalyst to rebound from their poorest season in two decades.

Dallas Coach Tom Landry, not noted for his optimism on NFL draft day, said he thought "very definitely" Noonan could become an impact player, the kind who can stop the run cold, turn on the pass rush heat, and get the Cowboys back on top in the NFC East.

"I know this," Landry said, "he's so powerful it will take two people to block him."

White has been double-teamed for years, but Cowboys' opponents won't be able to double-team both White and Noonan.

"I like what I see in this guy," White said. "I saw him play some games on television. I saw him go through three guys one time."

White is legend for his weight room activities but Noonan is thinking about his next workout when he's working out.

During the Kodak All-American week activities in Dallas during December, Noonan used the Cowboys' training facilities while other players were partying.

He was in the weight room on draft day when his wife, Donna, told him he had been drafted by Dallas.

"I'm not a finesse player, I'd rather run through them than around them," he says.

It's been a long time since the Cowboys drafted a player with Noonan's determined attitude.

Defensive coordinator Ernie Stautner flew to Nebraska and visited with Noonan before the draft.

"He didn't say a lot," Stautner said. "I like quiet guys. They are the confident ones who let their actions on the field do the talking. He's tough and I'm looking for tough players."

Even after the first round, the Cowboys hit some good licks in the draft.

Cornerback Ron Francis of Baylor could develop into a second round steal and 320-pound offensive lineman Jeff Zimmerman, a third round pick, could provide the pass protection the shell-shocked Cowboys' quarterbacks yearn.

Consider this woeful statistic: The Cowboys surrendered 60 sacks last year. Of the 28 NFL teams, they were 26th in this dismal department.

"You can't move Zimmerman," said Landry. "He's very powerful."

Tuesday's Herd baseball game starts at 5:30

Tuesday's District 1-4A baseball game between the Hereford Whitefaces and Lubbock Estacado Matadors will start at 5:30 p.m. at the Hereford High School baseball field.

Tuesday's contest is the final district home game for the Whitefaces, who will close out the district season at Dumas on Saturday, May 9 at 1 p.m.

Dallas drafted two other offensive linemen, Joe Onosai of Hawaii (sixth round) and Kevin Gogan (eighth round) of Washington as longshots.

The Cowboys also did wonders for their pitiful specialty teams by getting Kelvin Martin of Boston College, a dynamite return man.

Texas' Jeff Ward, an 11th round pick, could be just the placekicker the Cowboys are looking for to replace the released Rafael Septien. Ward made a lot of critical kicks for the Longhorns. He must prove he can do it in the pros without the collegiate kicking tee.

If there was one big disappointment, it was Dallas' waiting until the 10th round before it drafted a linebacker, Dale Jones of Tennessee.

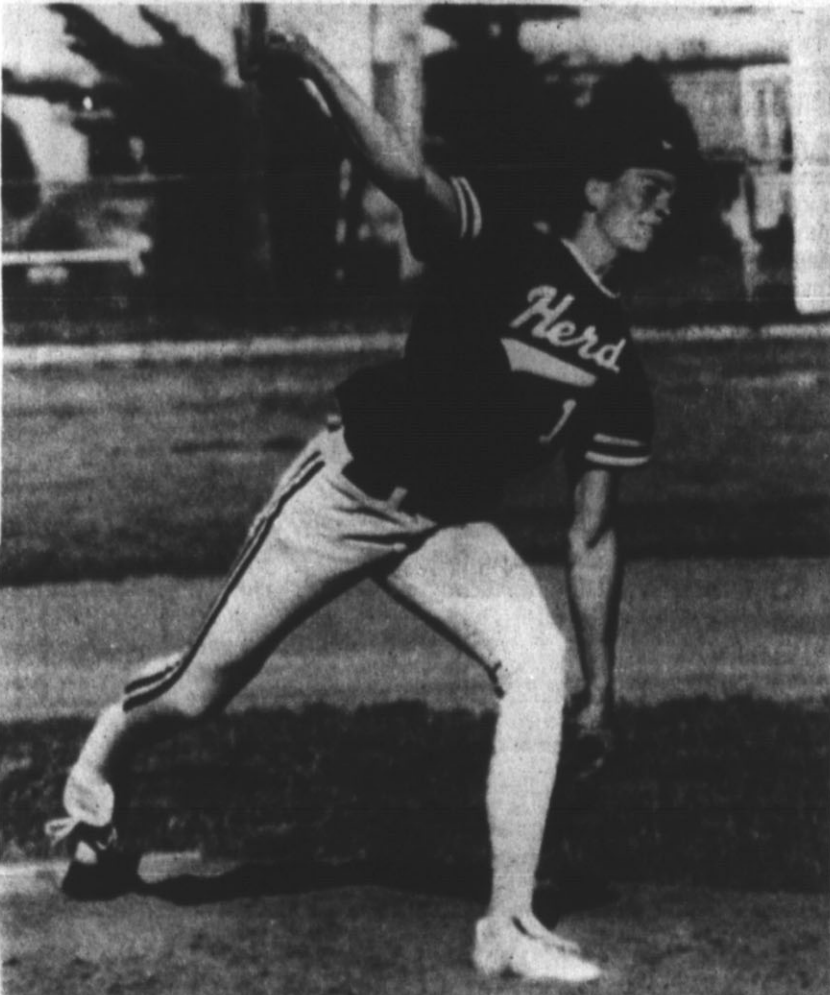

All in all, Tuesday's draft could go down as the best in the 1980s for the Cowboys.

Quick help is what the Cowboys needed and quick help just might be what they got.

Combines horsemanship of polo, strategy of lacrosse

Polocrosse is new sport in America

By A. PHILLIPS BROOKS
Austin American-Statesman
AUSTIN (AP) — It is a sport that bears a striking resemblance to polo. Men and women are on horseback, clad in riding attire, converging on a ball.

Then, it starts to look like lacrosse. Players scoop up the ball in nets on the end of long sticks, heading for the goal.

Polocrosse borrows from both sports. It combines the horsemanship of polo, the strategy of lacrosse and the action of both.

"That's what makes it especially suitable for Texans," said Clinton Whitehead, a resident of the Austin suburb of Oak Hill and president of the young Polocrosse Association of the United States. "Traditionally, horses played an important role in the development of Texas, and lacrosse is a sport native to American Indians."

Whitehead said the sport originated in England more than 50 years ago as an exercise for riders. It was played indoors, with the ball bouncing off marked walls and elongated basketball nets on end walls serving as goals.

In 1938, the Australians, under the guidance of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hirst, adapted the sport to the outdoors and developed rules for the game. The couple called the new game polocrosse and sponsored the first game in Sydney in 1939.

The sport migrated to the U.S. four years ago and the Polocrosse Association of the U.S., headquartered in Phoenix, Ariz., was formed in 1983, Whitehead said. "Since then the sport has spread to various other states and generated a lot of interest in many others," he said.

Whitehead, who was born in the African nation of Rhodesia, now known as Zimbabwe, has assembled about 15 riders in preparation for polocrosse coaching and a teaching tournament in late May.

The tournament will be played at a 50-acre playing field northwest of Austin near Cedar Park and Leander. The event will feature internationally acclaimed players, Whitehead said.

The newly formed Texas branch of the Polocrosse Association of the U.S. meets each Sunday to practice the sport.

Unlike polo, it is not a sport of kings. Whitehead said each player uses a single horse during a match, and that makes it more affordable for everyone.

"What I am finding out is the quarter horse is more suitable for the game," he said. "Because of the twisting and turning and the quick starts and stops, this horse, indigenous to the U.S., is especially good for the sport."

Thoroughbred horses — bred for stamina, speed and endurance — are used for polo Whitehead said.

Because of the frequent collision of the horses and the longer length of the field, polo players must change mounts frequently during a match.

Polocrosse is played on a field similar to a football field with goal posts on each end of the field. The object is to get a small sponge-rubber ball between the goal posts by passing it from racquet to racquet.

The bamboo racquets are long with a small cupped net on the end. Each game consists of four to eight eight-minute periods called chukkas, Whitehead said.

There are six players on each team with only three members from each team on the field at any given time. Only one designated player can score by tossing the ball into the goal-scoring area, Whitehead said.

"The sport has an international flavor and is competitive but it is not dangerous," Whitehead said. The lightweight equipment, protective head gear, and strictly enforced rules make it a sport safe enough for 12-year-olds and stimulating enough for 65-year-olds, he said.

Whitehead said most people can start playing after about six to eight weeks of practice.

Woman umpire has goal to work in major leagues

By KEN KUSMER
Associated Press Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Pam Postema hopes major league baseball will be ready for a woman umpire within the next few years. She hopes she'll be the one chosen.

Postema, who has advanced further than any other woman umpire in professional baseball, is in her fifth year of calling balls and strikes at the Class AAA level. But she realizes that if she doesn't soon take the final upward step to the big leagues, her career will probably end.

"You can't stay in AAA forever, so I'm really at a place where it's serious," she said. "I figure if I'm good enough, I'll make it. If I'm not, I won't."

And, at age 33, she admits, "I'm not getting any younger."

On the field, Postema is nearly indistinguishable from the rest of the crew with her short hair, grey slacks and blue sweater. The voice that grunts strike calls may be of a higher pitch, but the hand signal is just as decisive when, with great flair, she winds up and jabs her right arm through the air.

It's all part of maintaining control of the game, she said.

"Big, tall and strong umpires can get away with not being as aggressive," she said, while smaller umps have to fight a meek-and-mild image. "You have to counteract that thinking by looking and acting aggressive out there."

Sometimes, however, the players and managers aren't convinced. Larry Bowa, the firebrand manager of the Pacific Coast League Las Vegas Stars, was suspended twice last year following run-ins with Postema.

"It warranted a suspension," PCL President Bill Cutler said. Bowa, he said, kicked dirt, called Postema incompetent and offered a few other choice comments, like "she should be home in the kitchen, and all that."

"I think he picked on her because he thought she was a weakling," Cutler said. "She'll stand her ground better than some of the men."

"It's just another incident," Postema said. "I don't even think about him."

Bowa moved to San Diego this season to manage the Padres while Postema, after four years in the PCL, went to the American Association as part of baseball's regular umpire rotation.

Joe Sparks, manager of the Indianapolis Indians, watched her work home plate during a 6-5 victory over the Omaha Royals on Tuesday.

"I was impressed seeing her for the first time. I thought she handled herself real well," he said.

It's all in the spraying technique... when it comes to getting those blasted weeds. Using contact herbicides requires efficient spraying coverage, according to herbicide specialist, Dr. Robert McLaughlin. He believes the key is to get good coverage of the plants which need to be controlled. "Nozzle selection, spray pressure and volume, boom height and ground speed are the most critical factors", says Dr. McLaughlin. Combine this with pre-season checking of sprayer calibration and consistency across the boom, and growers are on the right path. Watching ground speed is important and should be kept as slow as possible. Pressure and volume, traveling too fast, reduces effective spray coverage. Dr. McLaughlin believes boom height should usually be measured from the height of the weed, overlapping the spray pattern at the average height of the weed. "By focusing attention on just a few techniques in the spraying process, favorable weed coverage, resulting in economical weed control, can be achieved," says Dr. McLaughlin.

Frye agriculture aviation president

By DEBE GRAVES
Staff Writer

A Hereford resident for 35 years, Ray Frye is an authority on aerial spraying. He is a previous owner of American Dusting Company Inc. of Hereford and still owns interest in American Sprayers, Inc. of Dalhart.

His expertise in the area is exemplified by the confidence others have displayed in electing him the 1987 President of the National Agricultural Aviation Association.

The NAAA offices in Washington, D.C., and is an affiliation of state and regional associations whose members are agricultural aviation operators and pilots.

According to NAAA bulletins, the purpose of the association is to coordinate industry matters among members and to provide representation for the industry on the national level in matters pertaining to legislation and federal regulations.

The NAAA also takes an active interest in alerting members to new technology in the field of ag aviation and in educating outsiders in the role of ag aviation in the chain of food and fiber production.

Changes in the industry are a topic Frye is well qualified to talk about. As a young man he entered the crop dusting business in his father's footsteps.

"My dad was an ag pilot," he recalls, "He got into it after World War II and I joined him when I came out of the service."

Frye gave up ag flying in 1949 and since that time has served the industry as an on-ground manager.

In his early years in the industry Frye notes it was literally crop "dusting" the advent of today's spraying compounds is one big change he has noted. Another major change is the development of aircraft specifically designed for ag aviation.

"Back then service aircraft was converted to be used for crop dusting," he remembers, adding that newer aircraft designed with specialized equipment has provided an increased level of safety for ag pilots.

He and his wife Mary moved to Hereford "from Oklahoma by way of Childress, Texas." The couple has four daughters, Anne Reiter and Shawn Gearn both of Hereford, Janet Keisteron of Lubbock and Beth who is a student at West Texas State University in Canyon.

Frye is a past president and past director representative of the Agriculture Aviation Associations of both New Mexico and Texas.

A&M field day scheduled May 27-28

AMARILLO — May 27 and 28 are "Red Letter" days for people interested in research with wheat varieties and integrated production practices involving cattle.

The annual field day at The Texas A&M University Research Field at Etter will be shifted from late August to May 27. Dr. G.B. Thompson, Director of Research for the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station in Amarillo, said the change will enable people to see expanded wheat research started in 1986. The event will start at the station headquarters at 12 noon with a dutch lunch.

The regularly scheduled wheat field day at the USDA Conservation and Production Research Laboratory at Bushland will start at 1 p.m. on May 28, according to Dr. B.A. Stewart, research director at the facility. Both dryland and irrigated small grain nurseries will be featured at Bushland. Dr. Kenneth Porter, Texas Agricultural Experiment Station wheat breeder says several new varieties and hybrids are being evaluated. He also points out that tolerance of wheat varieties to the late freeze will be easy to observe.

Research with livestock grazing, limited tillage, wheat diseases, and control of Russian aphid will be discussed on the tours at both locations. Drs. Stewart and Thompson invite everyone in the area to the two field days. "New varieties and integrated production methods including livestock that are being developed will help farmers to maintain profits during tough economic times," they said.

In 1971, a hijacker who had identified himself as "Dan Cooper" parachuted from a Northwest Airlines Boeing 727 over Washington state, carrying with him $200,000 in ransom. The hijacker, popularly and erroneously known as "D.B. Cooper," was never heard from again.

Upward surge boosts price index

WASHINGTON (AP) — An upward surge in the cattle and hog markets helped boost the government's index of prices farmers got for raw products in April by 1.6 percent from the March level.

Lower prices for lettuce, milk, tomatoes and strawberries were reported Thursday by the Agriculture Department, but those failed to halt the overall upward swing in the April index. Overall, the index was up 3.3 percent from a year ago.

John Buche of the department's National Agricultural Statistics Service said the preliminary figures for April and revised figures for March pushed the price index above year-earlier marks for the first time since last September.

The April index also was the highest since last August but still was far below the record high reached three years ago when prices of many commodities soared as the result of the 1983 drought and massive government acreage programs ordered to reduce production. Bumper harvests since 1983, lagging export demand and lower government support prices for many commodities have pushed crop prices down the last few years.

Crop prices were unchanged from the March index but still averaged 11 percent below April 1986. But prices for livestock and livestock products jumped 4.2 percent in April and were 17 percent higher than a year ago, the report said.

"Both cattle and calf prices were at their highest levels since August 1980," the report said.

New quarterly figures showed prices paid by farmers to meet expenses increased 1.9 percent from January and also were up 1.9 percent from April 1986.

"The feeder livestock index was the highest since November 1980," the report said. "Prices also rose for fuels, autos and trucks, feed and farm machinery. Agricultural chemicals was the only (category) showing a decline."

Prices paid commercial vegetable growers dropped 8.2 percent from March and were down 1.4 percent from a year earlier. Lower prices for lettuce and tomatoes were partly offset by higher prices for onions.

According to the preliminary April figures, based mostly on mid-month averages, fruit prices dropped 1.8 percent from March but still averaged 15 percent more than a year earlier. The April decline was due mainly to lower strawberry prices.

Prices of dairy products were down 1.6 percent from March but averaged 2.4 percent more than in April 1986, the report said.

The index for poultry and eggs was up 0.9 percent from March but was 2.6 percent below a year earlier.

Net farm income was estimated by USDA at around $29 billion last year, down from $30.5 billion in calendar 1985. Economists are forecasting an increase to about $32 billion in 1987.

Consumer food prices are expected to continue rising, perhaps averaging 2 percent to 4 percent higher than in 1986, when they gained 3.2 percent.

April commodity prices averaged 125 percent of a 1977 base used for comparison, according to the preliminary figures, up from the revised mark of 123 percent in March. A year ago, the April index averaged 122 percent.

The quarterly parity ratio was reported at 52 percent in April, up one point from the revised January reading of 51 percent. A year ago, the parity ratio was 50 percent. In September 1985, the ratio dropped to 49 percent, matching the all-time low set in June 1932 in the depths of the Depression.

Although many economists say the old parity standard is outmoded because it doesn't take into full account changes in farm productivity, others contend the ratio is useful in comparing year-to-year changes.

Under the parity formula, prices farmers get for commodities are compared with prices they pay to meet expenses. It then uses a 1910-14 measurement to express what happened. At 100 percent, the indicator would theoretically mean farmers had the same buying power as they had in 1910-14.

For example, the average price of corn in April was $1.49 per bushel at the farm nationally, according to the preliminary figures. That was 31 percent of the quarterly parity price of $4.87 per bushel reported in April.

The report also said: —Cattle averaged $63.20 per 100 pounds of live weight nationally, compared with $59.30 in March and $50.30 a year earlier. Those are averages for all types of cattle sold as beef.

—Hogs averaged $50.70 per 100 pounds, compared with $47.40 in March and $39.70 a year earlier.

—Corn, at $1.49 a bushel, was up from $1.47 in March but still below the $2.30 of a year earlier.

—Wheat prices at the farm, according to preliminary figures, averaged $2.59 per bushel, up from $2.58 in March but below the year-earlier level of $3.37.

—Rice averaged $3.52 per 100 pounds, compared with $3.68 in March and $5.32 in April 1986.

—Soybeans were $4.82 per bushel, compared with $4.73 in March and $5.23 a year earlier.

—Upland cotton was reported at 50.8 cents per pound, compared with 50 cents in March and 59.2 cents a year earlier.

—Eggs were 55.6 cents per dozen, compared with 54.4 cents in March and 56.9 cents a year earlier.

—Milk was $12.30 per 100 pounds, compared with $12.50 in March and $12.10 a year earlier.

—Broilers were 29.6 cents per pound, live, compared with 29.1 cents in March and 29.5 cents a year ago.

Josserand attends beef promotion board meeting

ATLANTA — Bob Josserand of Hereford recently attended a meeting of the Beef Promotion and Research Board in Atlanta.

State board election set

TEMPLE — The regular election of a member to the Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board to represent State District One is scheduled for May 5, in the Senate Room of the Student Union Building, Texas Tech University. The election will begin at 6:00 p.m.

The Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board, an agency of government, was created in 1939. Unlike many state agencies and commissions whose policy making bodies are gubernatorial appointees, the State Board consists of five elected members.

State Board members are elected in a convention type election by delegates from soil and water conservation districts within the state district the member is to represent. Qualified delegates voting in the election must be an eligible voter of the conservation district and actively engaged in farming or ranching.

Josserand represents Texas on the board.

At the meeting the board approved a consumer marketing budget for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, 1987. The budget includes expanded efforts in beef promotion and research that are financed by the $1-per-head check-off.

The $30.5 million consumer marketing budget includes a continuation of the national beef advertising, whose theme is "Beef, Real Food for Real People." It also includes expanded consumer beef information programs aimed a key influence groups such as doctors, school teachers, dietitians and health-care professionals. The board approved over $1 million for research and development on new products.

Families find moving a stress filled time

By Hereford Board Of Realtors

Although it's a job most people would rather avoid, each year thousands of Americans pack up their belongings and move to a new home. Sometimes it's a move to a nicer home across town; other times it's a major excursion to another city or state. Regardless of the distance, though, moving is a stressful, tiring undertaking, and one that requires a lot of patience and a little outside assistance.

Your local Board of REALTORS is there to help in any way possible. A real estate agent who is a REALTOR can ease the uncertainty of moving to a new city by providing information about the school system, transportation, taxes and other areas of concern. And if you're simply moving across town, a REALTOR can help you find a home that's the ideal price, size and location.

Once moving begins, it's inevitable that you'll feel you've forgotten something. To help out in this area, the Hereford Board of REALTORS offers this checklist of important "pre-moving" tasks:

- Notify the post office of your move and send change of address cards to all important contacts (utility companies, credit card companies, magazines, clubs and associations, friends, relatives, etc.).
- Arrange for the connection and cancellation of utilities.
- Transfer stocks, bank accounts and items in safety deposit boxes.
- Visit grocery and liquor stores for boxes.
- Get recommendations for and estimates from moving companies.
- Store all medical, dental, birth and marriage records in a special envelope.
- Defrost and clean refrigerator; clean the stove.
- Use up perishable food.

- Have car prepared for trip, or arrange for transport.
- Sell or give away unnecessary items.
- Leave house clean for new occupants.

Even under the new tax bill certain moving expenses are tax deductible. Save receipts for your company/or the IRS and consult with a tax expert on what you can and cannot deduct.

There are numerous other items to take care of, but hopefully these tips will help movers get started off right. Relocating is a big job, but it can be done efficiently. And once it's over, the result is often favorable: a better job, a more luxurious home and a new set of friends.

If you have questions about moving, don't hesitate to call a REALTOR. You'll get the answers you need to make your move a successful one.

Plastic storage containers make excellent caddies for carrying tools in the house or yard. Almost any kind will do, but those which have partitioned compartments and drawers are best for keeping tools separated.

Most of the troubles with heavy doors can be eliminated by placing a third hinge midway between the regular top and bottom hinges. The extra hinge takes the strain off the two others and you are less likely to have loose hinges after a period of time.

When making a pathway of flagstones or wood rounds, it is important that they be imbedded properly so that the lawn mower can cut the grass between them without the blade hitting the flagstones or rounds.

Homebuyers seminar today

The Hereford Board of Realtors will sponsor a seminar for homebuyers from 1:30-2:30 p.m. today in the Energas Flame Room. The public is invited to attend. Bill Harris of Security Federal Savings and Loan Association and Pat Newton of Hereford State Bank will present the program. Hereford realtors will host open houses from 2:30-5 p.m. following the seminar.

First impressions make big difference

By Hereford Board Of Realtors

Everyone knows a good first impression means a lot. It can make your home stand out from the crowd of similarly-priced, competitively-financed houses in your neighborhood. But, you're unwilling to add mega-bucks to the home since there's never a guarantee that those dollars will come back to you at the time of sale.

Here's some ideas for improving that "first-impression" by spending more time and "elbow grease" than money:

CURB APPEAL

Since your buyer will see the outside of your home first, let's start there. Is the lawn trimmed? Shrubs pruned? Firewood stacked neatly? Outdoor furniture clean and inviting? Driveway free of clutter? Flower pots neatly arranged? Windows washed? Front door clean of fingerprints and dirt?

WELCOME HOME

As your buyer steps into your home, will he or she feel welcome and expected? Are enough lights on for easy viewing? Are the toys put away? Beds made? Dishes clean? Rugs vacuumed? Floors swept? Bathrooms sparkling? Is the dog on a leash in the backyard? Is the kitty litter fresh? Have the baby's diapers been laundered? A nice touch is to have bread or cookies baking in the oven; it adds a pleasant homey smell to the whole house. In a pinch place a touch of vanilla on a warm light bulb. Ummm!

ROOM TO GROW

As your buyer views your home, he or she will be wondering how they will fit their six kids, two dogs and three sets of living room furniture in your home. Short of moving all your belongings into storage and camping out in the park, there are a few things you can do to make your home seem extra roomy. Are your closets well arranged? Books neatly shelved by size and/or topic? Clothes hung straight and shoes lined up in a row? Dishes stacked neatly? Pantry not overflowing? Trash cans placed in cabinets? Chairs pushed up to the table? Are all family members away from the home? Or, at least sent outside to play? Yes, even you should leave. Give your buyer the opportunity to view your home leisurely, to ring the doorbell, peek in closets, try the disposal, and check the amount

When you see a professional house painter suddenly slap the brush against a particular area and then go over the spot with the bristles, he hasn't lost his temper. It means he has found a nail hole. The best way to cover it is to jab the brush against the hole, then wipe off the excess with a gentle stroke.

Diagonal-cutting pliers are meant only for cutting. Never use them for gripping.

Bathroom remodels gain popularity

By The Associated Press

Many people who have decided to remodel their homes one drop at a time are choosing to start in the bathroom, with everything from faucet fixtures to tubs and toilets.

Whirlpools, exercise equipment, tubular glass showerstalls — all exemplify some new ideas in bathroom designs.

Some bathtubs in high-rise apartments, for example, are being placed directly next to the window, giving bathers a panoramic view of the skyline. In some country homes, showerstalls have one side opening into the surrounding woodlands. And, where possible, some new bathrooms feature irregularly shaped tubs in the center of a mosaic-tiled room surrounded by palms and cactus.

Interior designer David Frye, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., recently created a turn-of-the-century bathroom that used traditional fixtures but incorporated untraditional bathroom colors, including rich greens and muted yellows to suggest a Victorian parlor more than a powder room.

His design includes a tub with brass-plated claw feet, a sink with gold-plated faucets and fittings and a centerpiece — an early 20th century barber's chair, upholstered in green Naugahyde fabric. Modern luxuries in it include a reading lamp, telephone and stereo speakers.

Frye says spacious bathrooms were something of a status symbol in the 1890s.

"Most new houses of that era were built with bathrooms of a generous size, with many containing stained glass, paneled woodwork, rugs and armchairs," he says. "It's simple to create a contemporary reflection of this theme."

National Music Week

Mayor Wes Fisher signs a proclamation declaring the local observance of National Music Week which begins today and concludes Sunday, May 10. The Hereford Music Study Club is sponsoring the local observance and has made arrangements with KPAN Radio Station to broadcast special music throughout the week. Witnessing the signing are Cheryl Betzen, president (seated), and (from left) Kay Lynn Caviness, first vice president; Peaches Reinauer, reporter-historian;

Rosie Griffin, treasurer; and Ann Myer, chairman of the project. National Music Week is sponsored by the National Federation of Music Clubs. This year is the 64th observance of the event which has a theme of "Music-A-Never-Ending Joy". The National Federation is made up of state federations which are divided into district federations. Texas has 12 districts and Hereford is in District I which is composed of the top 20 counties of the Texas Panhandle.

DAR chapter honors residents

Several individuals, as well as the Hereford High School Key Club, were honored with a tea and reception recently by the Los Ciboleros Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Chapter Regent Mrs. Joe F. Reinauer Sr. welcomed and introduced guests before the special ceremonies began.

Mrs. Charles Bell announced the 1986 DAR Good Citizens. They included Jacalyn Thompson of Dimmitt High School and Dale West of Hereford High School. Thompson presented "Our American Heritage and My Responsibility to Preserve It." West will receive his award during the high school annual awards ceremony this month.

Two awarded scholarships

The West Texas State University College of Business and Technology convened its annual Spring Convocation on April 23 in Mary Moody Northern Recital Hall. Each year scholarships and awards earned by students in the college are announced at this event.

A $200 departmental scholarship for accounting was given to Cindy L. Garth, junior accounting major and wife of Matt Garth. A $200 departmental scholarship in finance was awarded to Gary Wayne Rahlfs, junior finance major and son of Roger and Alice Rahlfs.

In 1778, France allied herself with the rebellious American colonies against Britain.

Members of the Key Club were given special recognition by Mrs. Reinauer. Casey Daniel, president, and Gene Brock, club sponsor, were introduced and Brock received a plaque in appreciation for his many years of service to the community. Key club members are responsible for distributing American flags to local businesses on designated holidays. The flags are donated by members of the American Legion.

Mrs. Bell presented a book to N.D. Kelso who was cited as the American History Teacher of the Year. He is chairman of the HISD secondary schools social studies department.

American history essay winners were announced by Mrs. Austin Rose, who is co-chairman with Ruth Newsom of the American History Month Essay Contest. It was reported that 209 essays were entered into competition.

Receiving bronze medals for first place were Janice Duncan, sixth grader at Shirley Elementary School, and Shambryn Leigh Wilson, fifth grader at West Central School. Others were Lynn Ray Hand and Christy Killough, both of Dimmitt Middle School.

Second place winners who received certificates of award were Melissa Joe Riley, fifth grader at West Central, Landon B. Collard, sixth grader at West Central, and Trey Skiles, fifth grader at Bluebonnet Elementary. Those from Dimmitt included Matt Allen Sims and Susan Elizabeth Waggoner.

Denise Detten, pianist, played "God Bless America" and Sylvia Khuri led the "Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America." Mrs. Khuri, who is a new United States citizen, was presented a flag by the DAR members.

Mrs. Rose led "The American's Creed" and read "The Preamble to the Constitution."

Refreshments were served from a table decorated with red, white and blue.

Residential education crusade begins

This afternoon American Cancer Society volunteers will be bringing good news to women of Deaf Smith County as part of the Society's 1987 residential education and fund-raising crusade.

"Breast cancer, one of the most feared diseases among women, can be one of the easiest cancers to cure if it's found early," said Carolyn Andrews, President of the Society's local unit. "The good news is that there is a tool to detect breast cancer when it is too small to be felt. This is made possible by mammography."

"We had tremendous response in March when the mobile mammography unit came to Hereford," Andrews said. "Of the 50 women who received mammograms, one was diagnosed as needing a biopsy while several others had thickening masses that will require further diagnostic studies."

According to Andrews, mammography is the use of a low-dose X ray to detect minute changes in breast cancer tissue. "A mammogram can single out a malignant tumor years before it becomes large enough to be felt by even the most experienced physician," Andrews added.

Andrews said the purpose of this year's Crusade is to inform as many residents of Hereford and outlying areas as possible about cancer prevention, early detection, early treatment, as well as the Society's many service and rehabilitation programs. Every year, the Society's Crusade takes place in April, Cancer Control Month.

According to Andrews, studies show that early detection of breast cancer through mammography can not only better one's chances of survival—it also can result in less extensive surgery for the patient. "There's no question that mammography can save a woman's life," she added. "It can also save the breast."

Local volunteers will canvas the neighborhoods for donations, which Andrews hopes will exceed 1987's goal of $3,500 from residents, $2,000 from businesses. Information packets will be distributed by the volunteers at this time.

For further information, call Andrews at Deaf Smith General Hospital at 364-2141.

Parent Leaders to meet

The Deaf Smith County 4-H Parent Leaders Association will hold their quarterly meeting on Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the evening at the Hereford Community Center, west side banquet room.

Each parent/leader is asked to bring a covered dish for the event. Following the supper will be the election of officers for 1987-88, adoption of budget and committee recommendations. Each parent of 4-Hers as well as any person desiring to work with the 4-H organization is asked to be present.

Local women saved via kidney transplants

By GAYE B. REILY
Staff Writer

Life: the most significant gift a person can give to another.

Perhaps no one understands this sentiment better than Hereford residents Tracy Hargrove Warren and her mother, Janie Young, each of whom received successful kidney transplants within a six-day period.

"We're so grateful that two people generously donated their kidneys to us—it saved our lives while improving the quality of both of our lives," said Ms. Young, 35-year-old mother of two. "I am very proud to tell my age; I often thought I would never live to be this old."

"I can't believe how much better I feel since the transplant," added daughter Tracy, age 20 years. "None of my family knew anything about the donor program until our kidney problems; now we all have donor cards ourselves!"

Born with smaller than normal kidneys, Tracy was always tiny for her age and had increasing health problems as she grew older. When she was 12 years old, an extreme bout of nausea accompanied a red-dish rash seen beneath her skin. Her problem was first diagnosed as a form of scarlet fever, then tests were done when spinal meningitis was suspected. It was finally determined that she was experiencing kidney problems, and the youth went on dialysis briefly after Christmas, 1978.

The 60 lb. adolescent then went to a Galveston hospital where she was given medication to facilitate better function of her kidneys. It was in June 1982 that her overworked kidneys ceased functioning properly and she was forced to go on dialysis again.

One month later, her mother's kidneys also failed, ironically, for reasons totally unrelated to Tracy's problems. Ms. Young's diabetic condition, treated since childhood, was blamed as the culprit for her kidney failure.

"Our family had no medical history of kidney problems, yet within one month, my daughter and I suddenly were candidates for kidney transplants," said Ms. Young. Although placed on a transplant list, mother and daughter had to go to an Amarillo dialysis center three times per week for almost two years before suitable donors were found.

Tracy dialyzed every other night for three to six hours each time while her mother dialyzed on opposite days. "We seldom saw each other; Sundays were the only days we could do anything together," said Tracy.

"I got alot of homework done during these sessions," laughed Tracy. "Each of the 21 dialysis stations had televisions and magazines, so there were other things to do. I took dialysis pretty well, but Mom was always so tired."

Tracy managed to continue her education throughout the ordeal but fell behind in the sixth grade. "A tutor was provided and I managed to graduate from Hereford High School in 1985," said the slight woman.

Meanwhile, Ms. Young not only had a household to run, she also had a six-year-old son that needed attention. "Thank goodness Tracy felt good enough to do housework and care for her little brother. I was too exhausted to do much," said Ms. Young.

A search among relatives for a suitable kidney was fruitless as the only potential donor, an uncle, was rejected because of high blood pressure.

Finally, the waiting was over. The Methodist Medical Center in Dallas called on April 18, 1984, stating that a seven-year-old boy had died in a motorcycle accident and his kidneys were a good match for Tracy. Mother and daughter hastily packed and flew to Dallas, knowing that kidneys must be used within 48 hours. Tracy received her transplant April 20 at the Dallas hospital, going into surgery at 5 p.m. and coming out five-and-a-half hours later.

While Tracy was recuperating, kidney specialist Dr. Pedro Vergne-Marini saw Ms. Young and thought she looked much more ill than Tracy. "He told me that I would have a transplant before I left the hospital; I thought he was joking!" laughed Ms. Young.

"Tracy was doing so well that I planned to go back to Hereford, but she began to have seizures, indicating that she was rejecting the kidneys. So I stayed and was relieved to find Tracy finally stabilized. She was being given cyclosporine, an anti-rejection drug, and it took awhile for the doctors to determine

"The doctors then told me they had found a kidney for me. I was reluctant to have the transplant, but the doctors convinced me that it might be a while before I had this opportunity again."

This time the donor was an 18-year-old male who also died in an unrelated motorcycle accident. Ms. Young received her transplant on April 26, 1984.

"Tracy and I were prepped in the same room in the same bed, had the same doctor and transplant team, and both would affect the other one," Ms. Young continued. The duo left the hospital in late May but stayed within commuting distance in Kennedale with an aunt. "The doctors told us we could not do three things: play tackle football, go horseback riding, or ride motorcycles. Needless to say, that wasn't too limiting!" said Ms. Young.

The only discomfort the twosome experienced were bruises and a swollen abdominal areas. "It took some time before we could fit into our pants and jeans," said Tracy. "I even grew 1-2 inches in height!"

"My vision improved and I felt so much better. Apparently, kidney failure affects all organs, making them worse off than normal," said Ms. Young.

Mother and daughter returned home to Hereford in June, 1984. "There's so many nice and helpful people here in Hereford. It's a shame we had to get sick before we figured that out. My mom and brothers tended to my house and a men's Sunday School class at First Baptist Church, led by Bobby Owen and called the Sweathog Drivers, took me to Amarillo for my dialysis. Tracy rode to Amarillo for her dialysis with Kody Ruland, also a kidney patient, and Medicare and Medicaid helped pay the bills."

Both women celebrated their third year recently with their new kidneys with minimal problems. "Tracy had a ballooning artery in her kidney in April, 1986; surgery this past March tied off an artery in her kidney."

"We will have to take medication for the rest of our lives and go in for medical exams periodically," said Tracy. "At least we are now taking cheaper medication than the original cyclosporine, which costs $168 per bottle. Between the two of us, we were taking six bottles a month, from April, 1984, til January, 1985," noted Ms. Young.

"I'm glad to tell our story if it will help someone make a decision to become an organ donor," said Ms. Young. "It was hard going through our kidney problems, but maybe it was worth it if it alerts others to the need for organ donors."

The National Kidney Foundation of Texas may be contacted at 1-800-441-1281 or 13500 Midway Road, Suite 101, Dallas, Tx. 75244. More information on donating organs can be received from The Living Bank, P.O. Box 6725, Houston, Texas, 77265, phone 1-800-528-2971.

Call soon and make some future organ recipient glad you did.

Hereford man awaits third transplant

By GAYE B. REILY
Staff Writer

While some may be discouraged after the failure of two kidney transplants, such is not the case with Hereford resident, Kody Ruland. The 19-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Ruland is awaiting his third kidney transplant. He is one of approximately 25,000 Americans appearing on a waiting list for such an operation and hopes to be one of 7,500 lucky patients who will receive the needed transplant.

Although organ transplants are a relatively new form of surgical miracles, they have become quite commonplace to the young parts department employee at Hereford's Stagner-Orsborn Buick-Pontiac-GMC dealership. "I'm excited about the prospect of having my third kidney transplant," said Ruland. "The doctors tell me that since I am young and healthy, I am strong enough to handle the surgeries.

"I am currently going to Amarillo three times a week for dialysis since I have no kidneys. Since only my left arm is used in the process, I can watch TV, read, or play chess with other patients. The doctors said I could live a long life using dialysis alone, but it's such a hassle spending 12 hours a week on that machine!"

"A new kidney is clearly superior to dialysis since the three-year patient survival rate for dialysis is about 60 percent," said Wadi N. Suki, M.D., chief of the Renal section of The Methodist Hospital in Houston, in an interview with that hospital's quarterly publication, "The Journal". "In addition, people on dialysis have to watch their diets and activities very carefully, spend three to four hours three times a week hooked to a machine, and then they still don't feel very good."

Ruland agrees with Dr. Suki, pointing out that he must constantly be alert as to the types of food he eats. "I have to watch the amount of liquids I drink and can have no salt while I am on the dialysis machine. When I have a functioning kidney, I am still on a restricted diet, but some salt is allowed."

The young man's ordeal began in 1983 when he suddenly began experiencing symptoms including swelling and stomach aches. "The first doctor I went to said I only had allergies; the next doctor said I was experiencing kidney failure and needed a transplant. No one else in my family had kidney problems, so this was a surprise to everyone," he said.

After being on dialysis for a year, Ruland received his first kidney from his mother, Karen, in August, 1984. He soon rejected that kidney, and Methodist Central Hospital in Dallas put him on the transplant waiting list.

"I was on the list for only three months and waited for a phone call from the hospital, telling me they had a kidney for me," said young Ruland. "The hospital had to find a kidney which had a blood type and tissue type matching my own, so it took some time."

The second transplant occurred on Jan. 7, 1985, in the Dallas hospital. "I had to remain in the hospital 14 days to a month after each transplant, then went for checkups three times a week, then once every two weeks. Soon afterward, this second kidney failed and I was put on the list again."

Luckily for the Rulands, kidney transplants are now so well accepted they are the only transplant routinely covered by medical insurance. "Medicare, insurance, and a kidney help program have relieved the financial burden on us quite a bit," said Kody's mother. "All these surgeries are still pretty expensive since we fly to Dallas pretty often."

Although the transplants and setbacks put Kody back a year in school, he went on to graduate in 1986. "It was hard, but I managed to pull through," he said.

Ironically, neither Kody nor his family knew anything about the organ donor program. "After I got sick, the doctors referred us to the National Kidney Foundation and we learned about their transplant program. Now we all have donor cards!"

According to the National Kidney Foundation of Texas, April 27-May 3 has been designated as National Organ and Tissue Donor Awareness Week. "The purpose of the week has been to focus attention on the serious shortage of organs for transplantation and the need for Americans to become organ donors," said Jim Donald, president of the National Kidney Foundation of Texas. "Over 20 million Americans suffer from diseases of the kidney and urinary tract, with 80,000 dying each year due to these diseases."

Dr. Suki concurs, stating that "the only limiting factor to kidney transplants is the lack of donors. This is an operation with a record of proven success, but in any given year only half the patients waiting for a kidney will get one. Many of them die waiting."

All interested citizens between the ages of 18-65 may sign an organ donor card, as may children aged six months to 18 years with legal guardian consent. Uniform organ donation allows for the donation of the following organs: heart, lung, kidney, pancreas, liver, skin, corneas, bones, bone marrow, and blood.

For more information, call the Foundation at 1-800-441-1281 or contact The Living Bank at 1-800-528-2971.

"I'm really glad that some people unselfishly donate their organs," said young Ruland. "I'm glad if my story will encourage others to generously give their organs for transplantation."

SENSE OF SELF WORTH
BLOOMSBURG, Pa. (AP) — The next time you are considering taking your child's pet back to the animal shelters, consider recent research made at a university here. It was found that male college students who had dogs as children have a stronger sense of personal self worth and better social skills than children who lacked canine companionship. This effect was even stronger for females. Women who grew up with pets also became more self-reliant and flexible.

A Flair for Design

Wallpaper can be the most interesting and dramatic single item in any room, and does not necessarily have to be the most expensive. There are a number of lines available in wallpaper that have a lot of style without a high price tag. Be aware, however, that you will never achieve the full effect if you skimp on the number of walls you paper just to save a few dollars initially. There are many cases, though, where it may be more beneficial to the effect to paper only one or two walls. Much depends on architectural features in the room.

Accent on Health

"Texas Buckle Up Week," part of the national "All-American Buckle Up Week," is set for May 18-25, just in time for Memorial Day weekend and summer vacation driving. The Texas observance is sponsored by the Texas Department of Health (TDH) Safe Riders Program.

Although state law requires all front seat passengers to buckle up, only about 59 percent of Texas drivers fasten their safety belts, according to the latest survey by the Texas Transportation Institute of Texas A&M University. Compliance is down from 66 percent in 1986.

Texas law also requires children less than age two to ride restrained in child passenger safety seats, and youngsters from two to four years of age to ride in safety seats or restrained by safety belts. In 1986, two years after the child passenger safety law was passed, only half of the children observed in surveys by the Texas Transportation Institute were properly restrained.

According to David Zane, coordinator of the Safe Riders Program in TDH's Public Health Promotion Division, said overall death totals on the highways are declining.

"Safety belt laws, combined with the 55 mph speed limit and stricter enforcement of drunk driving laws, have helped reduce traffic accident deaths in Texas to the lowest number in ten years," he said.

In 1986, 3,568 persons died in vehicle accidents, down 3.1 percent from 3,682 in 1985.

"But we know that further compliance with the law could make a more dramatic reduction in deaths," Zane said. He added that drivers and their passengers can protect their lives by buckling up, refraining from drinking while driving, and by driving defensively.

The Texas Safety Belt Survivors' Club, operated by the Safe Riders Program, honors persons who were spared injury or death because they were buckled up. Children who were restrained in a saety seat when a vehicle accident occurred also may become members. Members are awarded a certificate and recognition pin. For an application, contact the Safe Riders Program at 1-800-252-8255.

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I think it is time I told you that a letter I read in your column changed my life. It was from the man who never was able to say to his father, "I love you." He realized what a hole there was in his life when his father was lying in his casket in the church. At that moment, for the first time he said, "I love you, Dad," but it was too late because his dad couldn't hear him.

I am a 34-year-old woman. I was never told by my mother that she loved me and I was never able to say those words to her. After I read that letter I went to my mother's house with your column in my purse. I handed it to her and said, "Mom, I love you." She read the column, took me in her arms and held me as if I was a little child. Then she said, "I love you, too." We both cried. It was the happiest moment of my life.

Since that day things have been wonderful between us. It changed our relationship completely. Thank you for making such a difference in my life.—Grateful in Michigan

DEAR GRATEFUL: How nice of you to let me know. And now if any of you readers see yourselves, please take a cue from "Grateful."

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I recently learned a painful and expensive lesson. May I pass it on to others?

I used to be one of those drivers with a bad habit of doing a million things while driving my car. I would talk to people in the back seat, eat a sandwich or drink coffee, put on makeup and fool with the radio.

Last summer my brother helped me move across the country. The longer we were on the road, the less attention I paid to my driving. Despite my brother's protests, I continued to study the map behind the wheel. While he was asleep I was doing just that and suddenly luck ran out. I lost control of the car. We went off the road into a ditch and rolled over twice. My brother and I escaped with minor injuries, but the car was totaled. We were so lucky I can't believe it.

If my story isn't enough to make people pay attention to their driving, maybe another one will. It happened near our home. A 17-year-old girl ran over and killed four bicyclists—two couples who had young children. How did it happen? The girl was looking in the back seat of the car for a cassette tape. Because of her carelessness, four children are not orphans.—Lesson Learned in L.A.

DEAR L.A.: Thanks for shaking us up. And now, anyone who is reading this column while driving, for heaven's sake, put the paper away and give full attention to the task at hand.

I hope those of you who are accustomed to eating, drinking, applying makeup and so on while behind the wheel will clip this column and tape it to the dashboard.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I wouldn't miss your column for anything. I love it when you print a snappy comeback. How do you like this one? It really happened.

While traveling in the Midwest, I met a man who, when he learned I was French, asked, "is it true that all you Frenchwomen have loose morals?"

I replied, "I wouldn't know. I came to this country when I was 16. My morals got loosened up in San Francisco."—A CALIFORNIAN

DEAR CALIFORNIAN: Beautiful. And just what he deserved.

Exemplar Rituals

Exemplar Rituals were taken by three members of Beta Sigma Phi Sorority members recently at the Hereford Com-

Club recognizes two new members

Mary Edwards installed Jerry Taylor and Kim Leonard as new members of Hereford Pilot Club when the group met for their monthly program Tuesday at the Hereford Community Center.

President Donna West introduced Betty Sue Worthan who presented an informative program on time management.

Following the program, the president reported on the recent district convention held in Houston. Linda Minchew, Wanda Cobb and Trish Workman also attended. Sixty-nine of the seventy Pilot Clubs in the Texas district were represented with over 400 in attendance. Hereford Pilot Club won third place in projects competition for their adopt-a-cop safety program.

Plans were finalized for the Mexican stack supper planned from 5-8 p.m. May 8 in the Hereford High School cafeteria. Tickets may be bought in advance from any Pilot member for $4 (adults) and $2 (children 12 and under). Tickets purchased at the door will be for sale at $4.50 for adults, and $2.25 for children. Proceeds will go to finance Pilot service projects.

Flora Brown and Nikki Walsler were introduced as guests by the 36 members present.

Zipper

According to "The Twentieth Century: An Almanac," Gideon Sundback of Hoboken, N.J., obtained a patent for a "separable fastener" — meshed teeth on parallel tapes — in 1913. Sundback's device was soon manufactured by the Talon Slide Fastener Company. In 1922, the B.F. Goodrich company coined the word "zipper" for the slide fasteners of their rubber boots.

Spring Fling Participants

Some of the participants in the Spring Fling Car Rally pose at their final destination, The Barn House, following the treasure hunt-style event. Sponsored by First Methodist Church of Hereford, the recent rally used church couples as providers of six complex clues located throughout Hereford. Teams were denoted by color and each car was decorated with streamers, balloons, and signs. The orange team of Christy Burford (driver), Tiffany LeGate, Blake Confer, and Steven Sims came in first and will receive a surprise award today. A snack supper was served to rally participants at the Barn House and the program included a study of the Book of James. According to Robin Roth, director of youth ministries, approximately 35-40 senior high youths enjoyed the rally.

Pageant scheduled in Fort Worth June 10-14

The 1987 Miss Rodeo Texas and Miss Rodeo Texas Teen Pageant is scheduled June 10-14 in Fort Worth. The annual event will be headquartered at the Holiday Inn North. The Round-Up at Will Rogers coliseum will be the site of the June 13 coronation.

The contestants, aged 18-24 for Miss Rodeo Texas and 13-17 for Miss Rodeo Texas Teen, will be judged in three categories: horsemanship, personality and western attire.

The new Miss Rodeo Texas will receive a $2,000 scholarship and a $1,000 scholarship will be awarded to Miss Rodeo Texas Teen. Each will receive a trophy, a hand-tooled saddle, an engraved belt buckle and a complete western wardrobe.

Winner of the Miss Rodeo Texas and Miss Rodeo Texas Teen Pageant also earn the opportunity to travel throughout the state to numerous rodeos and special events. Goodwill trips, however, are not limited to Texas or the United States. The current Miss Rodeo Texas, Stacey Cook of Spearman, participated in the National Finals Rodeo in Las Vegas in December and previous winners have traveled as far as Australia and Europe.

The reigning Miss Rodeo Texas Teen is Diana Rothwell of Rockwall.

Candidates interested in participating in the pageant must be legal residents of Texas and never have been married. Each contestant must have a sponsor and a current title.

Information and entry forms can be obtained by writing to the Miss Rodeo Texas Pageant, 3500 Oak Gate Drive No. 2064, San Antonio, Texas 78230. Deadline for entries is May 20.

How much money do you spend at the supermarket? People often use their supermarket sales receipts to gauge the cost of food, but that's not always a fair measure.

Supermarkets stock thousands of non-food items, including toothpaste, school supplies and cosmetics. But we tend to remember only the total amount we spend at the supermarket, because our primary purpose for going was to buy food.

Actually, the percentage of income we spend for food has fallen over the years. How much an individual or family spends on food depends on family size and composition, income level and what food items are actually purchased. In general, the higher the income, the lower the percentage of total family budget that is spent for food.

Home economics researchers at the U.S. Department of Agriculture publish periodic figures to help people plan food purchases. The figures show the cost of food at home at four cost levels: the thrifty plan, the low-cost plan, the moderate-cost plan and the liberal plan.

A childless couple can plan to spend $40 to $70 per week. Single people can budget from $19 to $30 per week. Families with school-age children need to budget the most money for food. A family of four with two school-age children can plan to spend from $55 to $115 each week. The figure sat the lowest end of the scale will buy just as much nutrition as the figures at the upper end of the scale.

So the next time you go to the supermarket, plan your purchases carefully and sort out the non-food items from the food items before you make judgments about the cost of food for your family.

Pilot club to feature supper

The Pilot Club of Hereford will host a Mexican Stack Supper May 8 from 5-8 p.m. in the high school cafeteria.

The supper will also feature desserts, coffee, and tea.

Proceeds from the event will benefit local club projects.

Advance tickets are available from any Pilot Club members.

Tickets cost $4 for adults, $2 for children under 12. Tickets bought at the door will cost $4.50 for adults, $2.25 for children under 12.

Table Tour competition open portunity to set a table depicting their own individuality. Prizes will be awarded for different categories.
