County Federation Meet Draws Large Attendance Here Friday

A large crowd of interested club women of the county attended the first quarterly meeting of the year held by the Deaf Smith County Federation of Women's Clubs at the Baptist Church, Friday.

Mrs. Elmer Patterson, extension chairman, was in charge of the program, which had for its theme, the organization of a Garden Club. "Texas, Our Texas" was sung in unison under the direction of Mrs. A. J. Schroeter.

An address, "The Value and Organization of a Garden Club," was given by Mrs. E. B. Wright, president of the Dimmitt Garden Club. She stressed the value of Garden Club work to the community and to the individual, and told of the lasting benefits derived from shared enjoyment and co-operation.

In concluding her talk, Mrs. Wright said, "There is no part of the nation so in need of beautification as is the Panhandle of Texas, and there is no part of the nation that will respond more readily to an endeavor of that type."

Mrs. O. Stephens of Dimmitt, sang "O Little Pink Rose," by Carrie Jacobs Bond, accompanied by Mrs. A. J. Schroeter.

Mrs. Jack Miller, also of Dimmitt, talked of "Projects of the Dimmitt Garden Club." Programs and projects of that club were described in detail.

Wiley Roberson and Mrs. Louie LeGrand, Mrs. Cecil Guseman, Mrs. H. E. Weathered and Mrs. Hall Beavers.

CLUB CONTINUES STUDY OF "OUR AMERICAN HERITAGE"

A continuance of the study course, "Our American Heritage," furnished the lesson for the Lone Star Study Club Monday afternoon when members met at the home of Mrs. Lawrence Wombie.

Mrs. Pat Lawhon was leader of the program which dealt with the Westward Movement in the early days. She gave a paper on "Through the Wilderness Trace With Daniel Boone."

Mrs. A. R. Posey discussed "The End of the Trail." She told of the first overland party of Americans to California and gave a condensed account of the first wagon train in 1826, led by Zedekiah Shalh.

LONDON BRIDGE CLUB ENTERTAINS GUESTS

Guests played with London Bridge Club members Thursday afternoon, when Mrs. Emmitt Milburn entertained at her home. Appointments for the games were in seasonal colors suggested by the bouquets of late fall blossoms.

Mrs. R. R. Willis scored high for members and Mrs. Ralph Roden for guests. Mesdames J. W. Wither- spoon, Ralph Roden, W. M. Emmons, Grant Fuller, W. L. Davis and Miss Mabel Gass were the special guests.

HALLOWEEN PARTY IS GIVEN

Mrs. Drew Ridgway and Miss Olive Ramey were co-hostesses Friday evening at a Halloween masquerade party at the home of Mrs. Ridgway, in north Hereford.

The guests were greeted by Halloween apparitions in the form of ghosts and goblins who led them through horror chambers where ghosts and skeletons lurked.

"You Can't Have Everything"

MRS. JESS CALDWELL

H. H. Miller and Tom Fleming made a business trip to Claude, Thursday.

Mrs. C. C. Gammill arrived the first of the week from Lubbock, to join her husband. They are making their home here.

A number of young people surprised and chivalried Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Gammill, Thursday night.

Miss Vera Crawford and niece, Miss Alma Miller of Canyon, visited in the H. H. Miller home, last Thursday evening.

Mrs. Jess Caldwell and daughter, Sammie Jean, visited in the home of her brother, Otto Samuelson, at Canyon, last Thursday. Mrs. Otto Samuelson, who has been quite ill for the past five weeks, is much improved.

Mrs. William Wimberly, who underwent an appendicitis operation at St. Anthony's Hospital in Amarillo, last Monday, is reported to be doing nicely. She will be removed to her mother's home in Canyon, Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Smith were in Amarillo, Friday. While there, they called on Mrs. William Wimberly at St. Anthony's Hospital.

Grandpa Smith was taken to Amarillo, Thursday, to have his eyes treated. He spent Thursday night at St. Anthony's Hospital.

Obed Caraway attended a Halloween Class party at the W. T. Training School at Canyon, last Thursday.

Spooks were seen about Dawn, Saturday night. Results of their sandwork were seen next morning, but no serious disturbance occurred.

Those attending singing at Progressive Sunday night, included Messrs. and Mesdames L. A. Smith and daughters, Ella and Sarah, A. A. O'Neal and Jess Caldwell and daughter.

Rev. Gilpin will preach at the Dawn school house, Sunday morning. Everybody is invited.

Miss Ella Smith spent Monday night with her friend, Miss Lorene Crawford, at Wayside.

Herbert Miller was in Canyon, Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Leake were Amarillo visitors, Friday.

Students attending W. T. S. T. C., enjoyed a vacation, Friday afternoon, because of the football game.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Caraway and Obed, and Mr. and Mrs. Seigner called on Mrs. John Higgins at Ward, Sunday evening.

J. G. Coe, who has been on Santa Fe relief duty at Woodward, Okla., arrived home last week, and is back at work here.

Don't forget Cal Farley's "Stuttering Sam," which will appear at the Dawn school house, Thursday night, November 4. Let's have a good crowd.

MRS. R. H. JOHNSTON

Rev. Huff of the Church of Christ at Tucumcari, preached morning and afternoon at Bellview, Sunday. Mrs. Huff and two singers from the Tucumcari Church were with him. Rev. Huff is an able preacher and gave us two wonderful lessons.

Messrs. and Mesdames Paul and Hubert Collins of Grady were visitors in the George Messenger home, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Price of Clovis, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rose, Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Lacey and children were business visitors in Clovis, Saturday.

Several from this community have gone to the mountains for the hunting season. We who are left at home are looking forward to their home coming.

The Bellview gym was the scene of wild hilarity, Friday and Saturday nights. A Halloween party was given Friday and a Carnival, Saturday night.

There will be no school here, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week, as the teachers will attend a teachers meeting in Portales.

Charles Ward, mother and father, and sister, Maxine, of Endee, were in Bellview, Sunday afternoon.

Some in this community are having trouble with their threshed grain heating. E. O. Rutherford had to pile his out of the granaries on the ground to keep it from ruining. Others have piled the grain in the open wind row fashion or sacked it and left it in the open until it thoroughly dries.

Most everyone in this community is about through harvesting their row crops. Wheat looks well but will need rain soon.

COPYRIGHT WILLIAM BYRON MOWERY . . . W.N.U. SERVICE

If Craig and these Resurrection men went under and if Craig's great project was destroyed—"The guilt will lie with you." She could not escape this truth. She could not deny that if she refused Warren's offer she would be gambling with Craig and these men and CRAIG'S huge undertaking. A few hours ago she would have laughed at the very notion of her ever leaving Craig. Now she did not laugh. The same convictions of righteousness and duty which had led her into this Resurrection fight were now, ironically, pointing her down across the wilderness latitudes to her Chicago home.

CHAPTER XV

In their tent at the edge of the pitchblende lake, Craig and Poleon were testing samples of the radium ore which they had blasted out that morning.

Using an empty dynamite case as work table, Craig was making the tests with a crude little instrument which he had rigged up at the Bay and which, in lieu of precise laboratory methods, gave him a rough idea of the ore's radium content.

For three weeks now he and Poleon had been driving themselves to the limit—15, 18, even 20 hours a day. Every morning they were out on the lake at the earliest gray of dawn. At noon they came in for a hasty "mug-up," then hurried back to their work, kept at it till dusk, and finally trudged in to camp at nine or ten in the evening, so weary that they hardly paused for supper before crawling into their bunks.

At any other season of the year the job that they were doing, prospecting the bed of the lake, would have been impossible, because of the water; but at the end of winter the little "plover pond," shallow as a teaspoon, was frozen to bottom; and at any point they chose they could blast a hold down through the ice and take samples from the lake bed itself.

Their job now was nearly over. Two more holes, and they would be done. Craig was hurrying through his assay work, at this noon mug-up, in hopes that they could finish that afternoon.

He picked up a hunk of the blackish mineral, laid it on the dynamite case and touched the two poles of his apparatus to the specimen. On the instrument's dial the needle moved up to .15, indicating only a trace of radioactivity.

"Here," he handed Poleon the fragment—"stick a label on this. Mark it: 'Content .15, Moring No. 62, fifty yards out from west bank.' Then put in our box."

While Poleon was doing that, he tested a sample from Boring No. 63, two hundred and fifty yards out in the lake. The needle flipped up to 4.60 and quivered there. Thirty times as much radium as from No. 62!

Poleon came back and looked at the jiggling needle.

"Sacrebleu!" he exclaimed. "Wit a lakeful of dat stuff in our pocket, Craig, I guess we keep on eating, hein?"

"Hope so," Craig grunted, absorbed in his testing. "Yes, I guess that you and I and Patricia and Sam and the whole beggarly outfit of us will keep on eating. Poleon—provided I can find some mining company that'll believe my figures about this deposit and advance us some hard cash. But you hurry up with those labels. We've got to finish this, swallow our tea and jerky, and get back out to our work."

His next specimen came from Boring No. 64, five hundred yards out in the lake. When he touched it with the poles, the needle jumped violently, whipped back and forth, and quivered around 7.10. Poleon stopped his labeling and craned his head to see what the needle registered.

"Nom de Nöm!" he swore. "Sept un-dixieme!" He thumped Craig on the shoulder and gave a little jig dance. "Hey, how much dollar wort?"

"A devil of a lot! I haven't figured it out exactly myself. You quiet down and keep busy on those labels."

"My goodness," Poleon remonstrated, "don't you ever get excited, feller? Dis stuff, she run mebbe 'tween 'tousand dollar a ton, and you don't say 'Whoop!' or 'bat eye' or 'nutting'."

"We counted our chickens once and they didn't hatch," Craig reminded. "When I've pried a hundred thousand dollars out of some hard-balled mining company, then I'll say 'Whoop,' not till then."

After entering his assay figures, he reached for his map of the lake and plotted the three last borings on it. Except for a small area near the center, he had a detailed picture, backed up by sixty-odd borings and hundreds of samples, of the underlying pitchblende deposit. Close to the shore the deposit was thin, often no thicker than a piece of paper, sometimes only a blackish stain in the old "country-rock"; and its radium content was practically nil. But as one went farther out from the shore the lense steadily got thicker and richer till at mid-lake it was a foot thick and its radium content, in which the priceless radium occurred, ran as high as 50 per cent at places.

Though Craig could only guess roughly at the lode's total tonnage and at the accuracy of his testing apparatus, he knew beyond all doubt that he had a lifetime strike in his hands. At the lowest possible estimate, a gold $2,000,000 was lying out there under that innocent-looking "plover pond." Hidden by water in summer, hidden deep under snow and ice in winter, the treasure had gone unmissed at, though a hundred experienced prospectors had combed that region thoroughly.

It was only through his alert-eyed curiosity as a scientist that he himself, on a field trip last summer, had suspected the secret of the lake. Along the landwash he had noticed pitchblende stains in the frost-fractured rock, and he had also observed that they were more numerous and pronounced at the water edge than farther back. Taking his cue from that, he had waded out knee-deep, grubbed under the water, mucked away the silt, and turned up a half-inch sheet of the blackish ore. On out, as far as he could wade, the deposit was two inches thick.

Those were the samples which he had carried in his pack and which had ruined his photographic films.

After he and Poleon had eaten dinner, they took their hand drill, shovels and half a case of dynamite, and hurried out toward the center of the lake. A stiff cold wind was blowing down from the Arctic ocean, but the apple-green sky was cloudless, the sun hot; and high overhead a wedge of blue geese, earliest of the migrants, were winging north toward their rookery grounds in Baffin Land.

They came to the little area, in the exact middle of the lake, which they had not yet prospected. In the center of the area Craig selected a spot for pit No. 65.

They picked up their shovels and began scooping away the snow over a space 15 feet square. It took them an hour to lay the ice bare. Poleon fetched the drill and oiled it. Taking turn about, one of them steadied the wobbly contraption while the other spun the big raspy wheel. After boring down five feet into the ice, they pulled the drill out, prepared two dynamite cartridges, lowered them into the hole with a string, and then tramped out across the snow to a safe distance.

The explosion lifted a cloud of ice and big chunks high in the air. When the cloud had settled, they trudged back, shoveled out the loose debris, and drilled on down to the lake bed.

Craig dropped in four sticks that time. "To make a good job of it," he remarked, looking at his coloused and blistered hands, "we can spare dynamite better than our strength. Let's clear away. This is going to be a big puff."

When they came back, after the bellowing explosion, Craig stepped up on the edge of the little crater and looked down at the bottom. There it was, the foot-thick stratum of black pitchblende. As at all the other mid-lake borings.

Poleon clambered into the pit, picked up several fragments, stuck them into the specimen bag.

"Well, dat's nummer sixty-five,"

Craig glanced again at the black-bottomed crater, glanced around the lake at the dozens of other pits. What good would another pit do? He already had pages of scientific data, hundreds of specimens from this pitchblende lense. If all that mass of proof would not convince a mining company—

"Nunaber sixty-five can go to hell! We're hitting for the Bay!" He tumbled the drill and shovels into the pit, unpeakably glad to get rid of them. "Come on! Let's be traveling. We've got our lode. Our battle now is to raise money on it."

Lupe Chiwaugini stepped into Warren's cabin late one afternoon. "Tariton is back," he announced. "Heem and dat Poleon."

Warren was writing a wireless to Russell Parkes about the federal investigation. He stopped short at Lupe's news.

"Over in de Deu," Lupe added, "dere's a lot of excited talk 'mong dese men. dey say Tariton has made a big radium strike."

Warren's pencil dropped from his hand. "Hiyu beeg radium strike"—the words thoroughly jolted him. For weeks he had been, doubtfully afraid that Tariton would come back from his secret trip with some rich lode in his pocket. The fellow was an uncanny geologist, with a miraculous nose for mineral; and he knew this Resurrection territory like an open book.

If he did have a radium strike, he'd sell to these Vanguard people or some other concern; he'd hold the men together, he'd have this whole field in his power. And Patricia would stay on, working with him.

After a moment's swift thinking he ordered Lupe: "Go down to DeCarie's cabin and ask him to step up here. Then you get back across to that community house and scout around and pick up any information you can."

When DeCarie came in, a few minutes later, Warren told him about the radium rumor.

"D'you believe there's anything to this?" he asked the geologist.

"Possibly," DeCarie said. "All the pitchblende occurrences that I've personally examined here have been merely stains or extremely thin laminations with so steep a strike in the hard-rock that mining would be unprofitable; but it's certain that there are richer concentrations—"

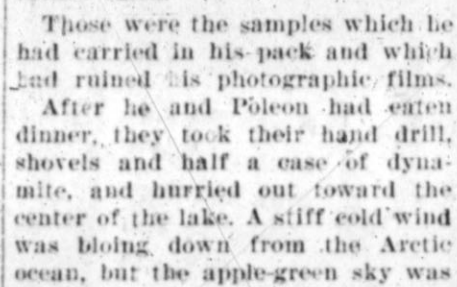

"Omit the technical details. Tell me, yes or no—could Tariton have found a radium property that he can raise quick money on?"

"Yes."

The Economy Champion

To keep your car from growing old too soon... to make it run with that wonderful smoothness and pep it used to have when it was new... pay a lot of attention to the crankcase. That's where a motor's hardening-of-the-arteries starts.

So drain the crankcase—NOT your pocketbook, by refilling with Phillips 66 Motor Oil. It is Phillips finest, made from a costlier 100% paraffin base crude.

It meets the higher requirements of today's modern motors because it has high-degree oiliness. Refined into it by Phillips painstaking modern process. Besides, it is extra clean and extra thrifty. No wasteful light parts to cook out or burn out. Hence the film is tougher and longer-lasting.

Next time, drain and refill with Phillips 66 Motor Oil. It's concentrated! This year's big value in car lubrication. Look for the Orange and Black 66 Shield.

In the home, on farms, and along highways. Toward this end 256,384 persons were given courses in first aid, and 81,291 completed the classes in life saving. First aid was taught to 49,909 CCC men and life saving to 3,900 enrollees by Red Cross instructors.

In the movement to eliminate accidents on highways, 1778 first aid stations had been established along the nation's principal highways, with 3,283 stations being organized for early opening as the year closed. Mobile first aid units, have also been organized, and hundreds of trucks and automobiles belonging to utility companies, highway departments, police patrolmen, and others frequenting the roads have been equipped with Red Cross first aid kits, and their personnel trained in first aid.

Red Cross chapters administered civilian relief in 745 communities, and 54,830 women and girls were given certificates upon completion of courses in home hygiene and care of the sick. During that same period seven million homes were self-checked by school children and parents in an effort to lessen the number of accidents that occur in our so-called "havens of safety."

Regular services to disabled veterans and their dependents, and to men in active service continued. Thousands of volunteer Red Cross workers made garments for the needy, and hundreds of books in braille for blind readers were printed and bound for distribution.

"Every man and woman who joins the Red Cross during our annual Roll Call November 11 to 25 supports these services," Mr. Olson said. "The Red Cross is working for the preservation of life and health, for the needy and those in distress, and the assistance of everyone in our community is needed."

Mr. R. P. Conaway will be the Roll Call chairman this year, and the Ireland Motor Company building on Main Street, will be Roll Call headquarters. Organizing a staff of workers throughout the county will be the main job of the committee for the next few days, and it is hoped that by getting a good start on Monday morning, Nov. 15, every man and woman in the county will be given the opportunity of joining the Red Cross and the campaign completed in one week. It is the aim of the local committee to make this year's Roll Call the most successful in the history of the chapter.

Mrs. Glen Weber of Brownfield, spent a few days this week with her brother, Doug Fox and other relatives.

State health departments in several states now designate suitable areas as being free of pollen that causes hay fever.
