"IF ONLY"

The aftermath of accidental death has always been a chorus of: "If only. . ."
 If only the gun hadn't been loaded — we'd been home when the fire started — when they got into the medicine cabinet — found the scissors — turned on the gas.

 Most shocking to us today is the anguished cry: "If only I'd known they'd gotten into those plastic cleaner bags!" or "If only I hadn't given the baby that plastic bag to play with!"
 The current number of deaths due to the attraction this ultra-thin, shiny transparent material has for youngsters, especially infants, and its property of clinging to little faces on inhalation, has shocked the nation. It has produced a hysteria that is reflected in a rash of proposed legislation at community, state and even Federal levels.

That something should, and must be done about such a menace is obvious. But we do not think laws or ordinances or other publically administered controls can ever prevent, or even minimize the tragedies inherent in the playful, heedless, and to a large degree, helpless years of early youth. Under such an approach to the problem, our ancestors would have had to legislate against cutlery and shears. The perils of the coal oil lamp would have precluded its use, gas and electricity would be unheard of. Nor could we have had the protection of germicides, or even household cleaners.

On careful reflection, most of us will have to agree with US Public Health Service and the National Safety Council that this sort of responsibility must remain with parents and cannot be assumed or met by regulation.

"We believe," says the National Safety Council, "the problem of child deaths from polythelene film is primarily an educational problem, not legislative." And to assist in meeting this challenge, the Soc. and its members, who include the producers of plastic film, have already printed and distributed millions of easy to understand warning leaflets. Assisting in the preparation of such material as well as in its distribution are the American Academy of Pediatrics, the American Academy, General Practice, the National Institute of Drycleaning as well as the US Public Health Service and National Safety Council.

The composite advice is: Don't let your children play with these bags. Don't leave them where children can get them. Destroy them as soon as they have served their initial, intended and useful purpose. Don't try to use them for something else. Implicit, also, is the plea that parents make every effort to know what their children are doing.
 If they only would!

 Cong. 17th Texas District

Washington, D. C.— A measure which has been before the Congress off and on during the past five years was again passed by the House of Representatives this past week. It is known as H. R. 3.

THE LEGISLATION IS designed to redefine and clarify a basic rule of law regarding States' rights. In simple language, the effect of the bill provides that, in the absence of a Congressional declaration, by the Supreme Court by reason of State laws and Federal laws governing the same subject. Legally, it is generally known as the doctrine of Pre-emption.

THE MEASURE PASSED IN THE House of Representatives last week is practically the same as passed by the House during the last session of the Congress, but which died in the Senate. Should the Senate approve the bill, it will go a long way toward limiting some of the decisions and power of the Supreme Court which have been so distasteful in more recent months and years.

IT IS WITH SOME PRIDE AND SATISFACTION that I worked with Judge Howard Smith of Virginia, the author of the bill in drafting its provisions.

OUR FEDERAL - STATE HIGHWAY PROGRAM is definitely in trouble. Unless ways and means are found to finance road building, the program will come to a stop in several States in next year and 1961.

THE PRESIDENT HAS ASKED that Congress impose an additional 1-2 cent tax per gallon on gasoline, which the Congress is not at all likely to do. The law as now written prohibits financing directly from the Treasury, but that provision has been temporarily set aside in order that advances can be made. Unless money is raised otherwise, an attempt will be made to continue this temporary provision.

WHEN THE HIGHWAY BILL was originally passed, it was thought then by many of us that the method of financing was on unsound ground. In the first place, the estimates proved to be too low, in addition to inflation increasing the cost. Also, revenue from special excise taxes, levied or self-financing, proved to be ambitiously estimated.

AS A MATTER OF FACT, the current budget estimates are proving to be incorrect in many respects.

IN JANUARY OF 1958 the Bureau of the Budget estimated that the income for this year would be approximately $74.4 billion. By January 1, 1959 with six months of actual figures to go on, this revenue figure was revised downward by over $6 billion. Now, after another six months, we see actual receipts of about $67 billion. This figure of lower income than was estimated, plus no increase in the gasoline tax and no increase in postage rates, and with an extra half billion dollar increase on the public debt, obviously unbalances the budget this year.

AS FAR AS APPROPRIATIONS are concerned, the Congress has thus far appropriated less money than the President's request in every appropriation bill except one, which was exactly the amount recommended.

It's The Law In Texas

DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE REFLECTS BASIC AMERICAN PRINCIPLE

What do we mean when we say that in the U. S. we have a "government of law" and not a "government of men"? Basically we mean that we have certain individual rights, guaranteed by our federal and state constitutions and laws, which may not be denied by any governing body.

The early American colonists had their fill of government by men, and the Declaration of Independence, signed 183 years ago, set out their complaints against that type of government and revealed their charged him with numerous violations of that principle. Among the complaints enumerated are the following:

"He has dissolved Representative House repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people."

"He has obstructed the administration of justice, by refusing his assent for laws for establishing judiciary powers."

"He has made judges dependent upon his will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries."

"He has refused his assent to laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good."

"He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his assent to their acts of pretended legislation: . . . For depriving us, in many cases, of the benefits of trial by jury; for transporting us beyond seas to be tried for pretended offences; . . . For taking away our charters, abolishing our most valuable laws, and altering fundamentally the forms of our governments; . . . For suspending our own legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever."

Our forefathers who subscribed to the principles of the Declaration of Independence were willing to fight for their beliefs. The Revolutionary War followed, dragging through weary years of suffering and suspense. Each of us takes pride in their eventual triumph over gigantic obstacles.

In 1787, when the framers of our Constitution met at Independence Hall in Philadelphia, where the Declaration of Independence had been signed 11 years previously, they set to work to create a system of checks and balances in government which was to perpetuate the fundamental theory mentioned in the preamble of the earlier document.

"We hold these truths to be self-evident: That all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; . . ."

Some five years later, the first ten amendments to our Constitution were adopted at one time, specifically detailing various basic civil rights stemming from the underlying theory of the Declaration of Independence.

Our courts day by day guard these rights for us.

HOT ROLLS AND COLD CUTS— UNBEATABLE SUMMERTIME COMBINATION

Even when the temperature is 90 in the shade, most of us homemakers find that our families want something hot along with that standard meal of cold cuts and salad. And hot rolls invariably win the nod.

And do you know that you can make your very own yeast-raised rolls for supper in just a little over an hour? It sounds impossible, doesn't it? It used to be, but with this new quick recipe, it's true. The secret is active dry yeast and biscuit mix, combined with water. The mixing and kneading time has been cut down to nothing. And the best thing of all is that these home made hot rolls give that short-cut cold meal a real appetite appeal, especially when you make these rolls with a sharp cheese flavor.

CHEESE POCKET-BOOKS

3/4 cup warm water (not hot— 105° to 115°) 2 1/2 cups biscuit mix 2 tablespoons soft butter Cheddar cheese 1 package active dry yeast

Dissolve yeast in warm water. Mix in biscuit mix. Beat vigorously. Turn dough onto surface well dusted with biscuit mix. Knead until smooth, about 20 times. Roll dough into circle about 1/4" thick. Cut into rounds with 2 1/2" cookie or biscuit cutter. Crease circles with dull edge of knife to one side of center. Brush with butter. Put small slice of Cheddar cheese on smaller half. Fold larger side over smaller side so edges just meet. Place on greased baking sheet. Cover. Let rise in warm place (85° F.) 45 minutes to 1 hour. Bake at 400° F. for 10 to 15 min.

"I Give You Texas"

By Boyce House

I GIVE YOU TEXAS

Next year will mark the 100 anniversary of the birth of William Jennings Bryan, the only man ever nominated three times by a major political party for the presidency of the United States and the greatest orator of his generation.

No other man in American history exerted as much influence on national affairs for so long a time. Besides being the candidate himself in 1896, 1900 and 1908, Bryan was — more than any other — responsible for the nomination of Woodrow Wilson in 1912 and he played a decisive part in Wilson's re-election in 1916. At the conventions of 1920 and 1924, Bryan was still an outstanding figure.

For almost 30 years, the spot light shone upon him and not one act ever marred his good name. He was a man of integrity, of nobility, of deep religious conviction.

Only Clay and Blaine—in all the long sweep of American politics—rival Bryan in the enthusiasm which he inspired, a devotion which successive defeats could not shake. Known first as "the Boy Orator of the Platte", he was called "the Great Commoner" and "the Peerless Leader". The mention of his name was all that was needed to set off a demonstration.

As a young reporter, I once interviewed him. He was friendly, modest, human. Twice I heard him speak and he fully justified his great renown.

Bryan was born in Salem, Ill., March 19, 1856; graduated from Illinois College in Jacksonville and the Union School of Law in Chicago; began the practice of law in Jacksonville, then moved to Lincoln, Neb., the city with which his name is most closely associated, although he was editor (1894-96) of the Omaha World-Herald and, during his last years, lived in Florida. It was in Chicago that he delivered his "Crown of Thorns and Cross of Gold" speech, which won him the first presidential nomination.

It is hoped that the 100th anniversary of this great American will be fittingly observed.

Another Great Value . . .

. . . in the field of many values is the abstract. Years ago when the records were few there was not so much need for an abstract. But today, with multiplied thousands of important title items already of record and new ones being added every day, the preparation of your abstract is not only an undertaking of great responsibility, but one that requires an institution possessing all the records and a long history of achievements behind it.
