byse City, Caddo Mills scenes of fatal accidents

ie Jean Coppedge

accident between mile markers 74 and 75 on I-30 near Royse ound 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Oct. 6, is thought to be possibly the cause of another fatal accident at mile marker 82 near ills, east of Royse City High School.

epartment of Public Safety Director Brian Griffeth said the dent happened just inside the jurisdiction of Royse City, Fate DPS also was called out to help work the accident. said the accident, which was not in the construction area iterstate, is being investigated by the Royse City Police investigation is ongoing, the exact cause of the accident has determined. Royse City Police Officer Sgt. Tim West is the ting officer for the accident. None of the names of those have been released, he said; however, he did confirm that vehicles were involved in the accident.

The Royse City Fire Department was also on the scene. Fire Chief Ricky Bell said it appeared that a car hit an 18-wheeler, then several other vehicles, possibly five or more, followed by another 18-wheeler. He also said this is still under investigation to determine the cause of the first automobile hitting the truck.

Rumors had originally been floated that one fatality involved a child, but Bell said it was not a child, but an adult male.

"Everyone was alive when they were taken from the scene to various hospitals. All I know is that I was told that it was a male," he said. "I have not heard if any others involved in the accident have died."

West affirmed that the accident did involve multiple automobiles.

"We haven't gotten the final report back from the investigating officer, so we don't know exactly how many cars were involved yet," he said. "We transported nine people and I assume they were transported to Dallas and area hospitals. It is too early to determine the cause of the accident thus no charges have been filed. "

Bell said that shortly after the Royse City accident, another fatality was reported at an accident at mile marker 82, east of the Royse City High School, also on I-30 headed west. Traffic from the first accident had backed up when the second accident occurred.

West said that the cause of the Caddo Mills accident is also still under investigation. Royse City's coverage area ends with mile marker 81 and the accident occurred at marker 82; therefore, the police department is not handling the case. "We originally responded to the accident, but DPS is handling the investigation," he said. "I'm not sure the accident was related to the Royse City accident. The driver may have rear-ended a guardrail. The cause of that accident has not yet to be determined either.

The investigation for both accidents will take weeks if not longer,

West said.

by Danette McNew, D.D.S.

BLINDED BY THE WHITE

As sales of tooth-whitening products in the United States have risen by 300 percent since 1996, Americans' desire for pearly whites goes unabated. However, there has been a downside to this fondness for white teeth that leads increasing numbers of women in particular to become so obsessed with tooth-whitening that it has become an integral part of their daily beauty routine. This overuse of over-thè-counter tooth-whitening products (known as "bleachorexia") leads to sensitive/painful teeth, swollen gums, and eroded enamel. In some cases, bleachorexics use highconcentration bleaches and/or dental trays that do not properly protect their gums. These unsafe and unhealthy practices contrast with the safety and effectiveness of tooth-whitening procedures and products provided in the professional dental office.

Are you using safe tooth-whitening products? At McNEW DENTAL, we are trained in the most advanced dental methods and take pride in paying full attention to all facets of dentistry. We're located at 1300 E. Ralph Hall Pkwy., Suite 114. To schedule an appointment, please call 972.771.2213. Smiles are our business.

'Smiles are contagious and best when shared" P.S. There is a point after which tooth-whitening agents no longer exert a whitening effect and they begin to degrade tooth enamel.

On God's Word by Timothy W. Burnett

Call upon the name of the Lord and be saved ...

Romans 10:9-10 is the foundational scripture used to explain how to get born-again and obtain salvation.

Yet, when pulled out of context, people are left wondering what it means what happens that results in righteousness, and what it means to call upon the name of the Lord.

In the accounts of Acts and the Epistles, the phrase "call upon the name of the Lord" is used a number of times in describing what to do to be saved. Repeated use of the command is like an exclamation point in God's word, trying to grab our undivided attention.

The phrase is first used in Acts 2:21 where Peter was explaining what the others saw and heard. He finished the quote from the prophet Joel, "... whosoever sall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved."

The word "call on" was translated from the ancient Greek word epikaleo, which meant to invoke anyone as a helper; or to appeal to one; to invoke the Lord Jesus the Messiah. The word saved meant to be rescued from danger.

In most cases, to "call on" or "call upon" are put for words spoken in the speakers own understanding. This is common sense. But, considering 1Cor. chapter 14, we know it's available to also speak with the spirit of God by speaking in tongues.

In Acts 2:11, what did everyone see and hear?

RCOSA wrapping up Open Space Master Plan

For a small group of local volunteers, there is a heightened awareness that Rockwall County stands the very things that attracted residents in the first place: green spaces, rural character and the traditional life. As development and demand for housing grow, they believe the people of Rockwall County must whether to protect and preserve the county's natural heritage.

This was the situation facing the Rockwall County Open Space Alliance, a coalition of representative the Cities of Heath, Royse City, Fate, Rockwall, Rowlett, and McLendon-Chisholm and the unincomparts of Rockwall County. Feeling the urgency to this mission as greenbelts disappeared, they asked the to develop a master plan to coordinate open space on a countywide level

In late 2014, the Rockwall County Commissioners Court contracted with the planning team Ver WRT. After several months of intense work including onsite visits, a survey of county residents and two lic meetings, a first draft of the Open Space Master Plan is nearing completion and will soon be available

An additional public meeting will be scheduled in the near future.

To learn more about the meeting or participate in an online discussion about open space needs and pri visit rockwallosa.org or email information@rockwallosa.org. The latest information can be found at fac com/rockwallopenspace.

No one in Congress is pushing for a mission to examine the human costs of US militarism, Rockwall County the instream media has largely ignored Doctors Without lers cusation that the bombing constitutes a war crime.

alition of represent he reaction of representation of representati sholm and the unician prefer to focus on events they can "politicize" to increase ppeared, they ask uncomfortable questions about US foreign policy.

If the political and media elites were really interested in preventing future mass shootings, they would repeal the federal "gun-free" schools law, for example. By letting shooters know that their intended victims are defenseless, the gun-free schools law turns schoolchildren into easy targets.

Even some who oppose gun control are using the shooting to justify expanding federal power instead of trying to repeal unconstitutional laws. Some opponents of new gun control laws say Congress should expand the federal role in identifying, tracking, and treating those with "mental health problems," This ignores the fact that many shooters were using psychotropic drugs prescribed by a mental health professional when they committed the horrible acts. Furthermore, creating a system to identify and track anyone with a "mental health problem" could deny respect for individuals' Second Amendment and other rights because they perhaps once sought counseling for depression while going through a divorce or coping with a loved one's passing.

While our political and media elites are eager to debate how much liberty people must sacrifice for safety, they are desperate to avoid debating the morality of our foreign policy. To admit that the US military sometimes commits immoral acts is to admit that the US government is not an unalloyed force for good. Even many proponents of our recent wars support using the US military for "humanitarian" purposes. Thus they are as reluctant as the neoconservatives to question the fundamental goodness of US foreign policy.

Anyone who raises constitutional or moral objections to the US use of drones, bombs, indefinite detention, and torture risks being attacked as anti-American and soft on terrorism. The smear of "terrorist apologist" is also hurled at those who dare suggest that it is our interventionist foreign policy, not a hatred of freedom, that causes people in other countries to dislike the United States. Which is a more logical explanation for why someone would resent America a family member killed in a drone attack launched by the US military or rage over our abundance of liberty?

The disparate reactions to the Oregon school shooting and the Afghanistan hospital bombing shows the political class is unwilling and unable to acknowledge that the US government cannot run the world, run our lives, or run the economy. Clearly, politicians will never stop expanding government and give us back our lost liberties unless and until the people demand it.

According to the gress al Budget Office (CBO), the Federal government ended its il yea on September 30, 2015 with a budget deficit of a "mere" 5 bill. Total Federal expenditures for the fiscal year were nearly trillie, while Federal tax receipts came to around $3.3 trillion.

his now pushed the Federal government's debt level to over .4 tril n. In calendar year 2014, U.S. Gross Domestic Product)P) w $17.42 trillion. That means if the American people were o go off bond evote st year's entire national income to paying off the Federal ernme 's accumulated debt, it would still fall short by nearly one

nerica's Debt Burden will Keep Growing

Vith a estimated population of around 320 million people, the per ita fin cial burden of the national debt comes to around $57,500 per son in e United States.

About If of the U.S, population submits and pays some amount of to the ederal government. This means that the per capita burden of nation debt for those submitting and paying Federal taxes is almost 2,670 or taxpayer.

Of cot e, in reality, many pay no or little net taxes to the Federal 'ernme, while others pay far more. But this number at least gives a se of at it would cost each of us, on average, if we were to try to off the national debt in one lump payment. Further ore, it is only going to get worse. In its most recent estimate, CBO ojects that over the next five years, 2016-2020, the Federal will add an additional $2.5 trillion to the national debt, and years, 2016-2025, the accumulated additional debt will be r the re tha 7 trillion.

So the stal national debt owed by the Federal government will be rillion in 2020 and about $25.5 trillion by 2025.

course, presumes that the estimates for government revenues expe itures made by the CBO for the next decade turn out to be if anything has a relatively high degree of certainty, it is ment ends up spending more than originally projected and the deficits and debt estimates can easily turn out to be on by the time we reach 2020 and 2025

Spilling Over the Statutory Debt Limit

tory debt limited set by Congress earlier in 2015 was $18.1 U.S. Treasury Department has been using accounting tricks 3 shuffles to cover additional deficit spending that already ceeds 300 billion more than Congress authorized.

Secretary Jacob Lew has warned that the accounting gimrun out by the end of October of this year and the U.S. govil not be able to legally meet his financial obligations, thus eateni. Federal government will failure to pay its bills.

rising, therefore, both Secretary Lew and President Barack

Obama have called for raising the debt limit, or even place a moratorium on any limit on how much the Federal government may continue to borrow and spend over and above what is collected in taxes.

If the President and the Treasury keep asking for increases in the national debt limit, and if Congress, in turn, after handwringing and gnashing of teeth about fiscal irresponsibility, continues to raise that debt limit there will clearly be no end to the deficit spending.

A Frozen Debt Limit Means a Balanced Budget

But there is a simple and straightforward way to bring the fiscal hemorrhaging to an end. Don't raise the debt limit. In one legislative act, in this case, a non-action, the Federal government will have to operate within the confines of a balanced budget.

With no increase in the debt limit, the Federal government will be legally restrained to spend only what it takes in, in taxes and other revenue sources. This, in itself, makes the case for not increasing the debt limit very appealing.

Of course, this would mean that the government could not cover a part of those expenditures that it has contracted or legislatively committed itself to in previous years. This is what generates most of the outcry about needing to raise the debt limit.

The Congressional Budget Office estimates that in Federal government's fiscal year, 2016, that began on October 1, 2015, Uncle Sam will spend nearly $4 trillion and collect in taxes about $3.6 trillion, leaving a budget deficit again in the neighborhood of $400 billion.

To stay within the current statutory budget limit during the new fiscal year, all that the Federal government would need to do is to cut spending across the board by about ten percent. Given the mismanagement and waste that virtually everyone admits goes in every bureau, agency, and department run by the Federal government, a ten percent "trimming" does not threaten any of that "cutting to the bone" that the budget busters among both Democrats and Republicans constantly warn about. Either You Spend Your Money or Government Does

But we should also realize that if the government is prevented from anymore borrowing, it would become crystal clear that the government does not possess an unlimited financial horn-of-plenty from which to satisfy every conceivable ideological and special interest demand for which an appeal is made to Washington.

If any of these demands for government spending above what can be covered by current government revenues were to be satisfied, it would then compel politicians and bureaucrats to tell the American public that which they avoid admitting like the plague: there is an inescapable trade-off between the people spending their own money and government taxing it away and spending for them.

In other words, no longer could there be the illusion of a "free lunch," in which the Federal government makes it seem that something can be had for nothing, or at less than its real full cost. Every additional dollar of higher government spending above what is currently collected in taxes would require one less dollar left in the hands of private citizens who had produced and earned it, because that extra dollar of government spending would require an extra dollar of taxes taken out of the taxpayer's pocket.

This would require the citizens and the taxpayers of the United States to ask themselves exactly what it is they want the government to spend money on, and for which they will have to make the hard choice to have less money in their own pockets to pay for it.

In other words, the American people would be reminded that there is a thing called "scarcity," that the resources and financial means to obtain all that we would like to have is limited and insufficient relative to our wants and demands for things.

Balancing the Budget Means Accepting Trade-Offs

We each make such trade-offs and hard choices in our own personal, daily lives. Out of our take-home pay we decide whether we are willing to sacrifice going on that desirable but more expensive vacation so to put more money in our savings account to have the means to repair the roof on our home or to have more money put aside to pay for our child's education when they are ready to go off to college.

Or if we put that new flat-screen television on our credit card, we know it may mean planning to go out to dinner less frequently for a while, since our monthly payment will be higher while we are paying it off, including more interest on that borrowed money.

A balanced budget for the government means having to prioritize what it can afford to spend, and on what - just like you and me.

Would the burden of cuts have to fall on "discretionary" government spending - including defense - if "entitlements" remain off the table? Yes, but that in itself would impose hard thinking on the American people as to whether or not they were willing to face the fact that it is the entitlement programs like Social Security, Medicare, and now ObamaCare that are sucking up the greatest amount of what the government takes in as taxes now and will be even more so in the future.

Deciding on the Role of Government in Society

The American citizenry would be forced to look themselves in the face, and ask whether they are willing to pay the higher taxes to cover these rising entitlement costs, or whether they are finally going to accept the fact that real entitlement reform must be undertaken - including ending government responsibility and involvement in people's retirement and health care costs altogether through full privatization and real free market alternatives.

These are tough choices, given the increasingly embedded psychology of government paternalist dependency, and the politics of trying to live at other people's tax expense for things we want government to do

But we either face this reality and reevaluate what is and should be the role of government in society, or we go on "busting the budget" with continuing deficit spending and growing national debt, and face potential financial ruin for ourselves and our children and grandchildren further on in the 21st century.

The inescapable and inevitable choice is ours.
