Parents Urged by C. of C. Officers To Visit Schools

At the regular meeting of the board of directors of the Slaton Chamber of Commerce and Board of City Development, held Tuesday night, a resolution was unanimously adopted urging patrons of the Slaton public schools to make frequent visits to the schools during the coming year in order to observe the work being done, to encourage the pupils and the teachers in their work, and to foster a greater interest in educational matters in this city and community.

Announcement of the resolution being passed was made yesterday with the explanation that it is the desire of the board to co-operate in every possible way to make Slaton schools better than they have ever been, and that the board wishes to encourage a more personal interest in the schools on the part of the patrons than has ever been shown in the past.

"Teachers and school officials will welcome your visits, and the cause of public education will be benefitted by your keeping in close touch with your school system," the announcement said.

Snow Bound Sierras Background of Fine Film 'High Voltage'

Framed in a background of the snowbound Sierras in California tense drama in its richest form will be presented at the Palace Theatre beginning on Friday next, when "High Voltage", William Boyd's first all-dialogue production, opens a two day run.

Advance reports on the picture indicate that it is one of Boyd's best, and reviewers who have seen "High Voltage" declare that his voice adds immensely to the effectiveness of his personality.

"High Voltage" is the story of six human beings who face death in a deserted meeting house, marooned from the outside world by snow, and who find the real valuations of life and the beauty of romance in their very fight for existence.

Lena Klattenhoff Weds Marion B. Benton Tuesday, Aug. 13

Miss Lena Klattenhoff, daughter of M. F. Klattenhoff, and Mr. Marion B. Benton, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Benton, were united in marriage Tuesday evening, August 13th, at 8 o'clock at the lovely country home of the Klattenhoffs, located three miles west of Slaton.

The bridesmaid, Miss Eunice Florence, preceded the bride in descending the flight of stairs as the notes of Lohengrin's "Wedding March" swelled into the air.

The bride entered on the arm of her father and was met at the altar by the groom, who was accompanied by Mangus Klattenhoff, brother of the bride. The Rev. C. N. Roth, Lutheran minister of Wilson, performed the impressive ring ceremony, in the presence of some sixty relatives and friends of the bride and groom.

Miss Maggie George performed at the piano, playing the wedding march as the bridal party entered and "Traumerlei" by Schumann during the ceremony.

The bride was lovely in a white georgette model with a beautiful real lace veil held in place at the head with a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried an arm bouquet of cream rosebuds.

The bridesmaid was dressed in a pink georgette with maline headdress to match. She carried an arm bouquet of pink rosebuds.

Miss George was dressed in a pale green georgette and lace combination and wore a corsage of pink rosebuds.

Miss Mildred Johnson presided at the punch bowl and served the guests with delicious punch as they entered. She was dressed in orchid and blue and wore a corsage of pink rosebuds, while Miss Edda Bell Benton, cousin of the groom, was at the bride's book and was dressed in a lovely green georgette and wore a corsage of cream rosebuds.

Following the ceremony the Rev. Roth gave two beautiful violin numbers, accompanied by Miss George at the piano.

The bride's cake was cut and served with pink and white ice cream molded in heart shapes, with a miniature bride and groom as plate favors.

Mrs. Benton changed into a beautiful black and white traveling suit before the happy couple left for a wedding trip which will include various points of interest in New Mexico and Colorado. They will return in some two weeks and will make their home near Dimmitt, Texas, where Mr. Benton has lived for the past year.

Mr. and Mrs. Benton are graduates of Slaton High School and have many friends in Slaton and the surrounding communities who join The Slatonite in wishing for them a long and prosperous married life.

Charming Theatre Romance Shown in "Molly and Me"

A love story you can't help loving is told by Belle Bennett, Joe E. Brown, Alberta Vaughn and Charles Byer in "Molly and Me," at the Palace Theatre, Slaton, Sunday and Monday.

It is about a pair, Molly and Jim Wilson, who have loved truly through ten years of one night stands only to nearly founder when they reach the success of Broadway stardom. There is nothing ugly, sordid or cruel in their story—just human, real and tender.

Jim gets a New York engagement, but without Molly, who finds life too empty merely as his wife and goes back to the burlesque troupe. Jim's pretty little partner in the act he and Molly used to do, is a practiced pettee—she pets everyone everywhere. But Jim takes her petting so seriously that he decides to break with Molly and marry Peggy. When he finds Peggy is engaged to someone else he has to eat humble pie before Molly, but he does it most engagingly and Molly is, as he realizes, an angel; Dialogue and singing by the principals enhance the film, which Albert Ray enchantingly directed.

Fannie Brice Tells How She Holds the Crowds, in Film

To the world at large Fannie Brice is forever bubbling over with humor, and no wonder, for there does not seem to be a serious strain in her mental make-up. For all that, however, the comedienne can be extremely serious and, particularly, when it comes to her work.

All this was made apparent during one of the waits in the filming of "My Man," the Warner Bros. special production coming to the Lindsey Theatre, Lubbock, next Sunday for a run of four days.

The conversation had turned on acting.

"Every actor to succeed," said Miss Brice, "must possess two requisites—confidence in himself and the power of concentration. To hold an audience the actor must never permit himself a moment of doubt or uncertainty, or show a lack of confidence.

"He must be sure of himself, not with any idea of conceit, but solely in the spirit of self-preservation. Once an audience senses the actor's lack of confidence in himself he is lost.

"On the stage everything must be definite, regardless of how impromptu certain actions may appear to be. Often in trying to put over a new act my feeling of doubt regarding its value invariably goes straight out to the audience with the effect that I lose something.

"In comedy work I find the feeling of confidence as absolutely necessary as it is to get the audience in a rollicking mood. In the more serious moments, however, concentration is necessary if one is to command attention.

"For this reason I think the best effects are to be obtained in a darkened theatre with a spotlight on the actor. There is nothing then to distract attention from the performer.

"In 'My Man,' which is my first screen effort, I feel that my theories are even more perfectly demonstrated as the pantomime required for effective picture interpretation requires even more sureness and concentration."

The production was directed by Archie Mayo, and includes in its cast such well-known players as Guinn Williams, Edna Murphy, Andre de Ceguro, Richard Tucker, Billy Seay, Ann Brody, Arthur Hoyt, and Clarissa Selwynne. The scenario was written by Robert Lord, from an original story by Mark Canfield.

Four Hurt in Car Collision Here Wednesday Night

Four persons were injured Wednesday night about 11:30 o'clock when a Ford coupe driven by Leon Jones, with Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Glover and a brother of Mr. Glover as occupants of the car, collided with a Ford delivery truck from Southland at the intersection of Ninth Street and West Lynn Street.

The occupants of the truck included Ray Spence and a brother from Southland and a Slaton boy.

Leon Jones received two broken ribs and minor bruises and Mrs. Glover was slightly injured on the back and probably received internal injuries.

Ray Spence lost two front teeth and received slight abrasions about the face and head, and his brother only received minor scratches about the face and head, while the Slaton boy and the two Mr. Glovers escaped uninjured.

Both cars were badly damaged.

Athletic Park to Be Talked Again At Mass Meeting

A second mass meeting to consider the problem of securing a city athletic field for Slaton will be held Monday night at the city hall, in the Chamber of Commerce office, at 8:15 o'clock, it is announced by those taking an active interest in the matter.

The first meeting was held last Monday night, at which time suggestions were made approving the plan of making a football field of the northeast corner of the county park here. A committee was appointed to circulate petitions among Slaton citizens, asking the commissioners' court to grant the use of that section of the park as a football field, giving a long-term contract upon it. This action was designed to determine the sentiment of citizens with reference to the plan, and, if favorable, to proceed with the plan. A good quality wire park fence was to be erected around the park, if a final decision was made to use it as a football field.

Further discussion of the question will be held Monday night, and it is hoped that if there are any citizens who would oppose the plan that they will be present at the meeting Monday night and voice their objections, it has been announced. All who are in any sense interested in the matter are invited to attend the meeting Monday night.

Mrs. Armes Hostess To S. S. Class

Mrs. W. H. Armes was hostess to the members of the Homemakers Sunday school class of the Baptist church and their husbands, on Wednesday evening, August 14, at her home.

The husbands were the invited guests for the evening and the evening was spent strictly as a social hour.

Those attending were Messrs. and Mesdames Ward, Davis, Cummins, Gassaway, Mesdames Keys, Coleman, Evans, Lee, Tucker and her mother.

Horse Fails in Jumping Attempt

An unusual accident occurred on the highway near Southland, when a horse apparently tried to jump a car driven by B. F. Polson, of this city.

At the time of the accident the car happened to be directly opposite a road intersection, which lead to the home of the horse's former owner, when the horse, a high spirited racer, bolted for this road.

The horse, which was owned by Mr. Stotts of Southland, was ridden at the time by one of the younger Stott boys, who was thrown over the car by the force of the impact but is said to have escaped injury except for skin abrasions.

The car, a Chevrolet sedan, had a door broken in and a glass shattered. The horse received various lacerations and while it is unreported, doubtless Mr. Polson had a "nervous shock."

Mrs. T. F. McCormick and grandchildren, Mary Ann, Ella and Betty Ruth, of Belen, New Mexico, left Monday for their home after a visit with the latter's uncle, R. H. Gear, and family.

The following Slaton people registered new cars in Lubbock, Wednesday: J. S. Waldrep, a Ford Sedan; Floyd Fausett, a Ford Roadster, and J. V. Bickerstaff, a Chevrolet coach.

Mr. and Mrs. M. W. King and daughter, Gertrude, returned Tuesday from Sherman, Dallas and points of interest in Oklahoma, where they have been spending a short vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Thornton and grandson, L. B. Thornton, Jr., spent last week in Abilene visiting Mr. and Mrs. G. K. Taylor and family. They returned home Monday, accompanied by Larry and Margaret Taylor.

"It is the Best Medicine in the World," he Says

"I SUFFERED 12 YEARS BUT ORGATONE HAS GIVEN ME HEALTH," SAYS LUBBOCK MAN

"At last I am on the road to perfect health again, after I have spent lots of money trying to get relief from my troubles," said T. J. Teal, of Lubbock, Texas, who is in the poultry business here and has been a resident of this city for a number of years.

"I got to the place where I nearly had to live on nothing for I couldn't eat anything but what would disagree with me, and cause me to suffer terribly. All of the food I ate, would cause gas to form on my stomach, until at times I would feel so puffed up and have such a bloated feeling I thought I would burst. No matter what I tried in the way of medicine nothing helped me a bit and it seemed as if there were no relief for me.

"My kidneys were in a very bad condition, and I would have intense, sharp shooting pains in my back and sides. I had a bad case of constipation and was very nervous and could not sleep at night. I was extremely restless at night and would roll and toss and couldn't get enough sleep, always felt tired and worn out.

"When a man has been in the shape I have, it sure seems wonderful to be able to eat anything he wants and have no trouble from it. That's just what I can do since taking Orgatone. I began to pick up in a hurry after I started using it and have been getting better ever since. I am now a well man and am feeling stronger every day. All of my troubles are gone, and I eat things now I haven't for years. I sleep fine at night and all the pains in my back and sides have disappeared.

"I'm sure glad I got hold of Orgatone when I did, and there's nothing I could say for it that would be too much. I hope my case will be the cause of others who have the same trouble finding the same relief as I have. I sincerely think it is the best medicine in the world."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called patent or secret remedy but a new scientific bile treatment containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs and is sold in Slaton by the Teague Drug Store who are direct laboratory agents. Adv.

STOP!!! GRADE CROSSING!

When you come to a railroad crossing, STOP. This means not merely to hesitate but really to stop your car, and wait until you are sure that no train is near by. Be your own STOP sign, ringing bell, red light and flagman.

No avenue is left open to recover damages from railroads for lives lost in crossing accidents as a result of a decision of the United States Supreme Court which places the entire responsibility on the motorist.

Furthermore, this decision holds that the motorist is expected to take every care to learn whether the way is clear, even, when necessary, to the extent of getting out of his car for a look up and down the track.

According to the reports of the Interstate Commerce Commission, there were 2,165 auto railroad crossing fatalities in 1928. There are 207,231 unprotected highway-railway grade crossings in the United States. They are being done away with as fast as the states can find the resources with which to build bridges and tunnels, but in the meantime it is up to the motorist to be careful.

Saturday and Sunday are the most fatal days of the week. The highest number of fatalities result from trains traveling, not 60 miles an hour, but at a speed of ten to nineteen miles an hour. Three times the number of accidents of this character occur during the daytime than at night.

Ten times as many accidents occur when men are driving than when women are driving.

Women invariably use greater care than men, who will take a chance.

Never take a chance in a moving vehicle, least of all at a grade crossing. It may be your last.

For the Week-end Wardrobe

Summers full of week-ends mean lots of informal clothes suited to everything from a tennis or golf game to the Saturday night dance.

With versatile cotton now at the height of fashion, it is possible to have a week-end wardrobe both inexpensive and complete. And, besides, the smartest possible.

Make the train in a traveling suit of some cool, light-weight, smart material. For this a short jacket and skirt of elovur pique is up-to-the-minute, both cool and serviceable.

Among the quilted cotton costumes in the sports ensemble illustrated by Schiaparelli. The frock of pink biege material and finished with a novel tan and brown buckle. Brown and gilt wooden beads and a brown cotton cardigan complete the ensemble. A smart choice for the week-end wardrobe.

And for the inevitable sports—the sleeveless tennis dress is good for all of them. For this, a broadcloth of soft texture and flattering pastel tone, growing more lustrous the more it is washed, will be more practical.

The sports frock may be cut low in the back with a little strap-and-bow across the back to hold it in place in the excitement of the game. Group pleats at the side, perhaps, stitched low to preserve the snug hip-line and to give a low sare.

A soft lisle sweater and matching lisle socks—and there's an adequate sports outfit, including the velour pique skirt to wear occasionally with the lisle sweater.

Of such is a successful week-end!

MANUSCRIPT OF "HOME SWEET HOME" COMES HOME TO CONGRESSIONAL LIBRARY

It is not our custom to think of the ballad "Home Sweet Home" as a popular hit, even though a raggy version has been known to wind up many a modern dance. Yet the presentation of the manuscript copy of the song in the handwriting of the author to the Congressional Library by Leander McCormick-Goodhart, commercial secretary of the British embassy, has brought the entire history of this old ballad to light. From it we learn that "Home Sweet Home" became the song-hit of the day over a century ago, when it was given as part of the opera "Clari" by John Howard Payne. The Covent Garden Theatre in London was the scene of the presentation, and all of London hummed the melody afterwards, even though the other songs that composed the opera were soon forgotten.

The music was composed by Henry Bishop, director of music at the Covent Garden Theatre, and Payne tells that he first heard it in unadapted form from a Sicilian peasant girl and that he called it to Bishop's attention when the opera was being discussed.

The manuscript given to the Library is dated September 18, 1829. It will be exhibited in a prominent place in the Library. Herbert Putnam, Librarian, has called attention to the fact that the author himself was buried in Oak Hill Cemetery, Washington, at the end of long, homeless wanderings, and that his grave is well known to tourists.

Mother Chases Child Domiciled in Tire

"Hot footing it" through the streets and alleys of Turkey last week end, shedding tears as big as horse apples, in her stocking feet, screaming for help and inspecting all classes of vehicles as they ran through streets and darted into alleys, a mother attracted considerable attention.

Soliciting assistance from bystanders and peace officers the maternal ancestor finally explained the cause of the origin of the excitement and the foundation of her grief.

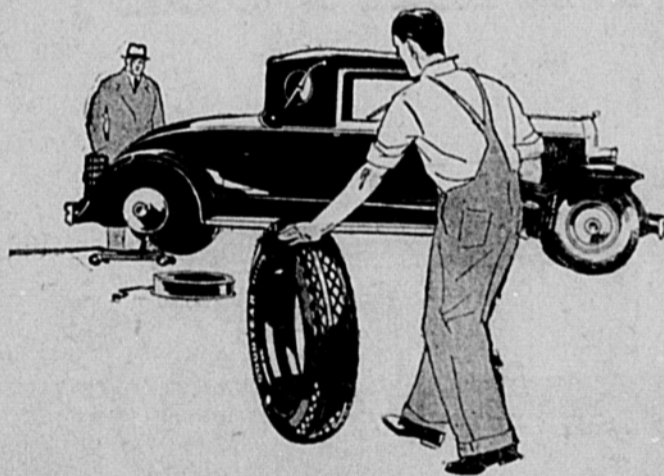

The details of the incident run something like this:

a convenience place in the city, the young offspring cozily domiciled itself in the spokes of the spare tire. In the meantime the car owner was possessed with a desire of the necessity, of using his machine. Unaware that he had a "stowaway" as a passenger, he stepped on the gas and went about his business.

The mother had seen the child climbing onto the fifth wheel of the car and when decision was reached that the baby had played long enough she turned to arrest its attention when lo and behold the child, the automobile and the driver were gone. Without waiting to put on her shoes, which she had removed to rest her tired "paddies", the mother chased out to search for her heir, running through the streets, highways and hedges, inspecting the rear end of every moving vehicle.

When the alarm was given searching parties were formed and within a short time the "lost was found", and there was rejoicing in the household.

Only a few minutes expired during the duration of the show. Since no one was hurt the incident developed into much amusement, and the proceedings would have furnished a good subject for an excellent comic moving picture reel.—Turkey Enterprise.

SHOULD FOREIGN NATIONS
CONTROL OUR TARIFF POLICY

The government at Washington is literally being flooded with propaganda to the effect that this nation and that one are opposed to our proposed tariff and they threaten reprisals of one kind and another.

Some how or other threats do not set well and neither are they acceptable to the people of this country. We are not usually bulldozed or cowed by threats from outsiders, we are of the opinion that the United States will not permit other countries to tell us what we shall or shall not do in regard to the tariff.

It is within the legal and moral right of this country to establish whatever tariff we think justifiable, this being done without any ill-feeling or enmity to other countries, but merely for our own national protection. No threats of reprisals by higher tariffs or embargoes should cause Congress to shape its legislation to the desires of other countries.

It is recognized that the United States is the greatest consuming market of the world. We actually produce and consume over 50 percent of the leading products of the world, such as iron, steel, oil, automobiles, and many other products. Naturally, other nations are envious of this situation, and should do all in their power to break down our tariff wall in order that they may flood our markets with goods produced at low rates of wages.

The high level of wages paid in the United States should be maintained not merely for laborers individual good, but for the world's good. When we maintain these wages, we naturally stimulate the people of other countries to seek and to demand higher wages.

We must recognize that world wide prosperity will never come until wages in other countries advance to such a point that the masses of the people can buy more freely of things needed.

With higher wages would come an increased demand for foodstuffs, for manufactured products, for better dwellings, and for all the comforts that help to lift the material side of life to a higher plane; with this higher plane of living would come broader educational and greater cultural advancement.

In conclusion we can but state that desperate poverty begets far more crime and far greater mental and moral depression than boundless wealth can ever do, even though wealth may at times be unwisely used.

ORGANIZATION NEEDED

Adaptability to modern conditions requires the ability to work effectively in organizations. No community, no business no industry is well equipped to meet the exacting requirements of modern times without strong and effective organization.

It is in this respect, perhaps, that we find the greatest weakness of Slaton. Too many of our citizens are a bit behind the times in the realization that effective organization and cooperation alone will enable them individually and collectively to attain success.

Scarcely a day goes by that we do not read of a new bank merger, a new industrial consolidation or a great public utility combination. Business in general has learned that the only way to meet the competition of big business organizations is through organization.

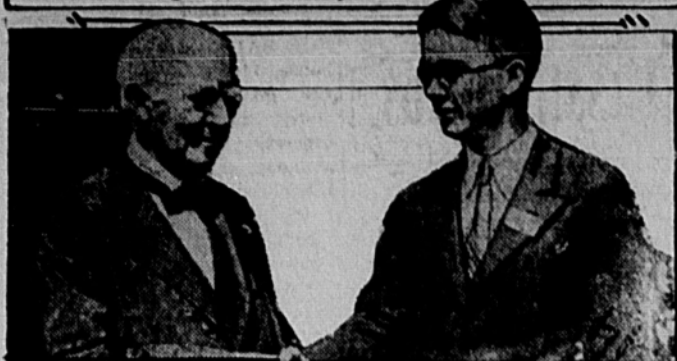

This same tendency is exhibited in the cities and towns that are forging to the front. It is only where the great mass of citizens are able to work with each other, where business men realize the necessity of setting aside petty personal grievances, where the big problems are tackled by many minds and many hands working in harmony that we find the signs of real progress.

Frequently we feel that Slaton is losing out in the race because of the inability of its leaders to work together. Most of our readers will agree with us.

But are you doing your part to overcome this condition? Perhaps you too are partially responsible for the lack of cooperation locally.

WHO BUYS OUR EXPORTS?

The world's greatest source of sugar bought $155,383,000 worth of United States exports in 1928. It offered, a few months ago, to establish a preferential trade union with the United States which would aim to establish eventual free trade between the two countries. The United States turned the offer down rather indifferently, and now is proceeding to raise a tariff on sugar. Cuba is not so vociferous yet, but it, like the Philippines, depends on the United States tremendously, and a rebuff is not helpful.

DECORATING OUR HOMES.

It is a fine thing to build a substantial looking town with handsome business blocks, and good looking dwellings. But it takes more than bricks and concrete and wood and stucco to make a high class looking place. There needs to be some touch of beauty.

Some towns with handsome places which have cost a lot of money, look forbidding, because the general run of people have not seen the desirability of adding any touch of beauty to their places.

How much a little bed of flowers with their jolly and cheerful color adds to one of these places! Or a line of shrubbery makes the place look like a home. In a city where most of the homse add these touches of beauty, the community takes on a new tone of charm. A few dollars and a little labor put into such touches of decoration, may count for more in creating an attractive community than thousands put into a costly but unadorned building.

THAT it is said that milk is man's first food and probably his last.

When Nature undertakes anything, she does it well. In producing milk, which is a drink and food combined, Nature gave mankind a masterpiece unmatched.

For rich and poor, sick and well, fresh, sweet and wholesome milk is the one thing doctors agree is best for us, and we may safely drink all the milk we want, provided it is good milk. Now, of course, the doctors mean by good milk that which is

WHAT DR. CALDWELL
LEARNED IN 47
YEARS PRACTICE

A physician watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the system and is not habit forming. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for anybody's system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly.

Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to the nearest druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. H, P. O. Box 100, Chicago, Illinois, for free trial.

bought from dealers who have complied with all the laws of city and state in offering it to the public.

Milk should come from healthy cows and be handled with the most sanitary methods from the time it leaves the cow until it is delivered.

There is an old saying, "Drink milk and grow young". The modern way should be, "Drink milk and stay young." It seems that all the women in American drink milk, because they all look young—no matter what their age.

Dealers in milk should advertise in local papers the source of their milk supply and how it is handled from the cow to the purchaser so people may know from whom to buy the best milk.

WHERE CHILDREN REALLY LIVE.

You'll see them these days as you drive along the highways—tanned and freckled, rosy cheeked, dirty faced, healthy youngsters, with grins of happiness brightening their countenances. What wonderful days are these for children in the country— romping in the fields, riding the horse before the cultivator, climbing trees for the season's first ripe apples, playing with nature like happy little savages.

No such sight will you find in the city. There the youngsters must play in dirty alleys, enjoying themselves as best they can amid garbage cans and refuse piles. Everywhere they are in the way, the heavy traffic endangers their lives, and the happy shouts are serious nuisances to crowded apartment dwellings. When the weather turns hot there is little and no green grass. They swelter in sun baked canyons called streets, getting relief only when the fire tap is opened.

Which of these two environments produces the healthier bodies, the cleaner minds, the finer outlook upon life? Which produces the better citizenship?

Our intelligent readers can answer this question readily for themselves.

There are many things that the farmers collects in the way of good living that cannot be listed on his account books and that are denied to his city cousin.

POLITICS THIS WEEK.

We wish Republican members of the Senate Finance Committee well, but personally we do not envy one of them right now. The ask of holding hearings is over, of course—but that was a simple prelude to the masterpiece now engaging them. A tariff bill must be rigged for the Senate when it reconvenes next month.

When even the "hardest working man on the Hill," Chairman Smoot, weakens to the point of admitting that the bill probably won't be ready by August 19, we can look for the worst. Maybe Senator Smoot recalls that the Fordney-McCumber Bill emerged from the Senate Finance committee with more than 4,000 changes. More probably he is oppressed by the necessity of doing something to Mr. Hawley's document that will appease an aroused country and knows that he can do it in any one of a thousand ways that will merely serve to appease one small portion and infuriate the remainder.

teeman sweltering through July and August while special privilege shrieks in his ear, "Higher!" and the voice of the consumer with growing vociferousness cries, "Justice!" is not one to make the Democrats weep over their exclusion from the sacred work-room.

If you keep an accurate record of gasoline costs, you know that every extra mile you get from a gallon is so much velvet. HOW ABOUT "MACHINE" HATCHING?

The Question Whether or Not to Use Incubators is no Problem—To Others This Discussion May Give Valuable Assistance in Determining Whether to Switch to Artificial Incubation or Stick to Time Honored Methods.

Editor's Note—This is another story in a series of 52 stories on poultry raising written by the well known national poultry authority, Dr. L. D. LeGear, V. S., of St. Louis. The entire series will appear in this paper. Our readers are urged to read them carefully and clip them out for future reference.

I once overheard a rather animated discussion of the relative merits of natural and artificial means of hatching eggs. Each side of the question had its ardent champions, each of which was absolutely sure that his view was the only one possible for any person of good judgment. In the course of the debate, one young fellow remarked that you couldn't depend on hens because they were too darned temperamental. "W-a-a-l", drawled one rather ancient defender of nature's methods, "if you kin find anything more temperamental than one of them there inykewbaters, I'd like to see it!"

That reply indicates a point of view that was once quite a bit more general than it is now. There was unquestionably a time, not so long ago at that, when the incubator was not the reliable machine that it is today. Nowadays, a good up-to-date incubator that is run according to instructions is equally as dependable in its own way as the family clock. It is hardly an exaggeration to say that a good modern incubator practically runs itself. If there are any temperamental interferences with the progress of artificial hatching, it is more usually shown in the operator than in the machine.

I realize that the question as to which is better, the hen or the incubator, is still a debatable one to many people. I can best answer that question by saying that when the use of by hens are more likely to be infested with lice and other vermin than those hatched in incubators.

Now let us take a look at the other side of the question. When is the use of hens more desirable?

Generally speaking, however, I should say that any one who goes in for chicken raising on any considerable scale will find the incubator more nearly a necessity than a mere convenience. It gives absolute control of the hatch, reduces labor, insures chicks at any season and provides large flocks of practically the same age. The machine is always ready for use at any season and no waiting for it to go broody. The cost of operation is very small; there is little mess connected with the operation, and with relatively little care it can be kept free from vermin and disease germs.

In conclusion, let me add just a word of caution. If circumstances justify the purchase of an incubator and you decide to get one, don't make the mistake of buying one too cheap. At best, you will save only a few dollars and losses due to inferior construction may soon eat up the saving many times over. Whether you buy a hot-air type or hot-water type is not important. I have had equally good results from both. It also makes little difference what make you buy, although I counsel buying some well known make that you can count on as being all it is represented.

When you have made your purchase, set it up carefully and run it strictly according to the manufacturer's directions. If you do that, you will find your incubator both a time saver and a money saver—a welcome and even necessary adjunct to the raising end of your flock.

THE SAME OLD WORLD—A WONDERFUL STORY OF PROGRESS—RURAL EXTRAVAGANCE

A recent magazine writer contends that friendship is passing. . . . It is the same old world—so far as friendship is concerned, and in nearly everything else, except that we have more tops to play with. . . . The modern man, when time hangs heavily, turns on the radio, to see what sort of devilment is going on in other parts of the world; in an older generation, a bored man shouldered his rifle, and went out to shoot an Indian.

I have observed that literature is unfriendly to men. Yet, in all fairness, and justice, the most marvelous thing is the progress men have made. Tell me, if you can, a tale as wonderful as the growth of man from barbarism or worse to his present state.

A writer in a farm publication says: "No century has ever seen such a thing as rural extravagance." . . . Extravagance is as common in the country as in the towns. When a farmer buys more machinery than he needs, and lets it stand out in the weather when not in use, what is that but extravagance?

When he over-borrows at the bank, that is extravagance. When he spends more time in town than is necessary or profitable that is another exhibition of it. Farmers live too economically so far as food and housing go, and are too extravagant with agents, and in the use of their working hours. We sympathize with farmers because their calling is not very profitable. This is true of many others. Teachers and preachers are worse paid than farmers. There are millions of clerks not so well paid as farmers, and factory employes everywhere are appealing to the government and public for help. And in all the hullabaloo the fact remains that citizens of all classes may do pretty well in this fat country if they accept generous opportunities, and handle them with reasonable intelligence and efficiency. And the fact remains that those who chose to appeal for aid cannot be much helped by public appropriations or taxes. We can no more make everybody prosperous than we can make everybody healthy; there are elements entering into the problem going back to heredity, individualism: general preaching, general prayers, bulk sympathy will not do; life is a problem to each individual, and we can only treat him as well as he treats us.

I lately heard a woman talk of a male relative who had been a drunkard all his adult life, and she made one statement that interested me. She said all the man's relatives, friends, and acquaintances were in league to keep him away from whiskey but that he could go into any strange community anywhere on earth without funds and within a few hours secure all the whiskey he wanted, and be howling drunk. . . . Often the needful things may not be had for love or money, but whiskey and pistols seem to be within reach of anyone wishing to use them.

I often hear of what mothers should "tell" young daughters. The first should be the agony and danger the best of wives suffer, the second the inevitable disposition of men to be less thoughtful as husbands than as lovers. Such information is gross and material, but young girls are entitled to know what they are stepping into when they put on wedding dresses.

But many new trades have sprung up unknown in those days. Millions of people for instance, are employed by the automobile industry.

As a rule the people who go from the farms to the cities and towns find work. They are not the kind who lie around idle. They have been trained to labor industriously, and their powers of observation have been developed, so they look intelligently at their tasks, and are apt to give satisfaction, and people like to employ them.

The decline of a healthful country life is to be regretted, and many people who have gone to the cities are no better off, because they live in congested quarters at large expense. What we need is some plan by which more factories can be started in country towns, where people earn good pay, yet enjoy the healthful conditions of such rural villages as we have here in Slaton.

REASON FOR AMERICAN TARIFF.

The gospel of an American tariff that seeks fair competition at home for American manufacturers, as opposed to an exclusion policy, was presented by American delegates to the fifth general congress of the International Chamber of Commerce in Amsterdam.

All that America's tariff policy contemplates, according to Julius H. Barnes, American vice-president of the organization, is "an adequate protection of American living standards and an equalization which gives our manufacturers and agricultural producers the opportunity to sell in our home markets without the handicap of destructive competition from abroad." In denying the "exclusion" argument, he added that since 1921 imports had shown an increase of 100 per cent with a substantial growth in exports. "It is of far more service to the world to preserve American standards as a goal for other peoples than to permit these standards to be reduced through opening up our markets to an unrestricted current of goods produced by cheaper labor.

"Our problem is to employ the tariff as a factor for the adjustment of differences here and abroad until the rest of the world can measurably catch up with us and consequently reduce the margin of security which a protective tariff affords."

One day a nice, elderly lady came into our office and asked "How much do you charge for death notices?" "35 cents an inch," answered the clerk.

RURAL NEEDS.

One of the ideas of former Secretary of Agriculture Jardine, was that more must be done to provide the rural districts with good schools, libraries, and hospitals. Here are three great needs of the country districts, and rural life will not be on a sound basis until every country town has good schools, a library, and a hospital within a reasonable distance.

This means help from more populous centers, for the country districts lack the funds to provide all these facilities. The cities draw a good part of their workers and leaders from the

DECLINING FARM POPULATION.

The U. S. agriculture department reports the fact, that there are now about 27,500,000 people living on farms, where 20 years ago, when the farm population was at its peak, there were 32,000,000 on farms. During these years the population has increased nearly 30 per cent, while the farm population has fallen off about 15 per cent. Thus 15 per cent less people are producing enough food to feed 20 per cent more persons.

This decline is not in all ways unfortunate. It indicates that farm production has become nearly 50 per cent more effective than 20 years ago. The framers may think they suffer under present conditions, but with all the modern machinery they now use, they probably don't have to work so hard as they would have had to 20 years ago.

It is a problem to take care of these millions of people who quit farm life.

What Happened Before
Remember Steddon, a pretty unsophisticated girl, is the daughter of a kindly, but narrow-minded minister in a small mid-western town. Her father Rev. Doctor Steddon, violently opposed to what he considers "worldly" things, accepts motion pictures as the cause for much of the evil of the present day. Troubled with a cough, Remember goes to see

Dr. Bretherick, an elderly physician, who is astonished at the plight in which he finds her. Pressed by the doctor, Remember admits her unfortunate affair with Elwood Farnaby, a poor boy, son of the town sot. As Remember and Dr. Bretherick discuss the problem a telephone message brings the news that Elwood has been killed in an accident. Dr. Bretherick accordingly persuades Remember to go West, her cough serving as a plausible excuse; to write home of meeting and marrying a pretended suitor "Mr. Woodville", and later to write her parents announcing her "husband's" death before the birth of her expected child. Unable alone to bear her secret, Remember goes to her mother with it.

Her mother agrees with the plan of the doctor. Mem leaves town. On the train Mem accidentally meets Tom Holby, movie star traveling with Robina Teele, leading lady in the movies, who are cynosure of all eyes. The train comes to an abrupt halt, a disaster having been narrowly averted, and the passengers get out and walk about.

At Tucson Mem meets Dr. Galbraith, a pastor, who knows her father and takes an interest in her. She miscalls Tom Holby "Mr. Woodville" in order to make her fancied suitor seem more real. While the Galbraiths are away, she writes them as well as her parents that she has married "Mr. Woodville" and that they are to live in Yuma—for which place she buys a ticket.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

At her boarding house in Yuma, she met an old man who told her of his partner of prospecting days—the name Woodville reminded him of his friend's which was Woodward "or something like that," as he remembered it—and how he had died in the desert.

His story offered her the way, possibly, to get rid of "Mr. Woodville." She would take him into the desert and let him "die"—of thirst!

She had found the way to be rid of her husband for the satisfaction of her people.

Now if she could only find a way to be rid of herself.

And that way came to her before the long day had burned itself away, for she heard two waitresses talking in the dining room below as they sat the tables for supper.

"Who was that letter you got, from? some feller?"

"Nah! It was from a lady up to Palm Springs, askin' me was I comin' back up there this season?"

"Are you?"

"Nah! Too quiet for me. Yuma ain't no merry-go-round, but Palm Springs—my Gawd! It's just a little spot of shadder in the desert."

"This lady offer you a job?"

"Yes. She's on her knees to me. Mrs. Randles her name is. Husband's got a ranch. How'd you like to go there and take the job?"

The other voice moaned: "Me? Not much. I run away from home to git love and excitement!"

Mem had never heard of Palm Springs, but she was looking for just such a place. And a ranch! She had always wanted to see a ranch. She wanted to get away from everybody that had ever known her. She wanted to find some deep, dark cave.

Heat and fatigue whipped her into hysteria. She found energy enough for one last desperate letter home. Then she would declare her soul bankrupt and face the world free of responsibilities to the past.

Darling mama and papa:—By now you have probably ceased to be surprised at anything I do. You'll think I have gone clean crazy and I guess I have, but as long as I'm getting better and happier every day you won't mind.

I've been too busy to write you all about John as I promised. He is out here scouting for a famous mine and is going prospecting for it right away. It is the famous lost mine that got abandoned on account of some litigation and was nearly forgotten. So he's on the hunt for it and we're going out to hunt for it together. It means losing ourselves in the desert and the mountains for a long while—there's no telling how long—but it will be terribly romantic and fine for my health and when you hear from me I may be so rich I'll send you a solid gold sewing machine, mama, and papa a solid gold pulpit.

There's no mail delivery where we are going and no way of reaching us, but don't worry. If anything happens I'll let you know. If you don't hear from me for a long while you'll know everything's all right. You can send your letters to me here and I'll find them when I get back. Don't send me any more money.

So goodbye and blessing on your darling heads. John sends his love. Your loving, loving, loving,

Mem.

To be a chambermaid or a waitress was a dismal come-down, but, Mem decided, she must accept it! What right had she to pride?

And so she fared into the desert to become a "widow"—as she had become a "wife." She went there to find obscurity and concealment.

But everything went by contraries, and from that oasis she was to be caught up into a fiery chariot, for all the world to behold as it rolled her round and round the globe on an amazing destiny.

Mem was deposited at the lonely station of Palm Springs, and fear smothered her as she watched the train vanish into the glare. But a rancher, almost as shy as she, offered her the hospitality of his wagon. He said he was going past the Randles' ranch anyhow, and would leave her there.

After a time, Mem saw ahead of her a shimmering lake and trees and a waterfall.

"That's Palm Springs, I suppose," she said.

"No, ma'am, that's a mirage—a 'maginary mirage. They's nothin' there at tall—no ma'am."

And now that Mem had learned her own eyes could lie to her with convincing vividness, suddenly, as the road lead them within eyeshot of two vast hills of said unspotted with vegetation, she saw what she was sure was pure mirage—a scene that must have come from her memory of a picture in an old volume of Bible stories. She would almost have sworn that she looked into the desert of Araby, for she seemed to see a train of camels in trappings, and, perched upon their billowy humps, men in the garb of Bedouins.

The ranchman's horses seemed to suffer from the same delusions, and terrified by the camels they carried the wagon into the ditch, and overturned it.

Mem found herself gently spilled in the soft sand, so little injured that her only thought was for pulling down her skirts.

She lay still, reclining, not in pain but in wonderment, as the wagon slid on its side, the driver stumbling along and still clinging to the lines as if he tried to hold giant falcons in leash.

The caravan grew restive, too, and Mem was consumed with perplexity, as she saw one of the animals forced to his knees not far from her. The shiek, or whatever he was, tumbled from the saddle and ran to her.

A brown face looked out from the hood, and from the scarlet lips surrounded by a short beard came a voice startling un-Arabic.

"Miss Steddon! Miss Remember Steddon!"

She was so dazed that she could only stare into the mysterious face. The Arab smiled and laughed. "I'm Tom Holby—a common movie actor out on location."

He lifted her from the sand, brushed her off, and went for her suitcase, which had been dumped into the cactus.

"Have you come here to be with parents or friends or relatives?" he asked.

"No. I'm looking for a position as a chambermaid."

"My God! You!"

Her eyes were amazed at his horror. He cried, again: "You with your beauty! Oh, no."

She had been brought up on a motto, "Praise to the face is open disgrace." She snubbed him with a fierce toss of the head.

A man in a pitch helmet, dark goggles, and a riding suit drove up and was complaining:

"Say, Holby, do you realize you're keeping the whole company waiting in this ghastly heat?"

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Folger," said Tom, and walked beside the director. "Just a moment, old man. That girl is a friend of mine and beautiful as a peach. She's just lost her husband and come out to this hell hole to be a chambermaid! It's too outrageous to think of. Give her a chance, won't you?"

The director twisted in his saddle and stared at Mem with expert eyes, then laughed at Holby.

"All right," he said. "I'll take a chance. Two of the extra women keeled over this morning from the heat. I'll have my assistant take her to the wardrobe woman and get her fitted out and made up. She can appear in the famine scene."

The caravan resumed its plodding advance, and Holby turned back to say to Remember:

"I've taken a great liberty. I can't bear the thought of your working as a servant when there may be a big career before you in the pictures. There is a shortage in the company for the big scene, Mem listened to Leva: "That's and you'd be a godsend. To please me—I mean the director—do this, won't you?"

"Well, of course, if it would be doing you a favor—"

"An immense favor!"

"I don't know anything, you know."

"That's all the better. You have nothing to unlearn. Here's Mr. Ellis, the assistant director. He'll take care of you. I've got to go."

Mrs. Kittery, the wardrobe woman, and Leva Lemaire (who in private life was Mrs. David Wilkinson) helped Mem into one of the cars after she had made explanations and said farewell to the curious ranchman. While Mrs. Kittery found a costume for her, Mrs. Wilkinson, who was an "extra woman," took the job of making her up.

Watching a scene being taken Robina Teele on that biggest camel. She's earning her money today by the sweat of her whole system. She's sweet on Tom Holby and as jealous of him as a fiend. Mighty nice boy—not spoiled a bit by being advertised as the most beautiful thing in the world. I was in a scene with him once; he was just as considerate as if I had been Norma Talmadge or Pauline Frederick."

In a heat that drove the desert Indians into the shade and idleness, dainty actresses and actors invited sunstroke, and after a time the extras were called forth from the comparative shelter of the tents to the scene of action.

Mem could not believe that this was she who stumbled across the sand twitching her skirts out of the talons of the cactus, carefully dabbing the sweat from her face with a handkerchief already colored like a painter's brush rag, and jingling, as she walked, with barbaric jewelry.

The mob went forward slowly and she recognized Tom Holby on a camel. She hoped that he would not recognize her, but he studied all the faces and being used to disguises, made her out and hailed her with the password: "How you standing it?"

She called up to him:

"All right, thank you."

There was vast interest in her from now on. The leading man had singled out an extra woman for special attention, and the gossip went round with a rush as of wings.

The director divided the extras into groups, with business assigned to each.

Beauty clear and fair . . .

—John Fletcher.

Many a woman is urged unfairly by the condition of her hands. If they appear rough and red; coarsened by housework, the nails in bad condition—the smartest costume cannot hide this defect which stamps her as below par in grooming.

But fortunately it is no longer necessary for women to submit to the inevitable results of constant immersion of the hands in hard or soapy water, for there are many simple rules and home remedies that can be used to keep the hands soft and white, the nails free from bruise-marks and hang nails.

I think all who are blessed with common sense realize that it is well worth the small extra amount it costs in the space of a year to purchase pure and non-alkaline soaps for all household purposes. The dish mop and the handled scrubbing brush have completely superseded the old wet rags and hand mops that once spelled early age to the housewife's hands. And last, but not least, we must not overlook the importance of the kitchen beauty shelf which should be hung in a convenient place so that she may minister daily to her beauty.

Chief among the articles on this shelf we should find the hand lotion bottle, the little jar of hand cream and perhaps, just for the sake of good looks, a foundation cream which brings instant beauty to overworked hands and arms.

My advice to every beauty-loving woman is: Cultivate the habit of using these aids regularly and frequently. Determine not to be guilty of that little sin of neglect which sends you out in the open air with wet hands. After every dish washing, rub a little of the hand lotion into the palms and back of your hands and when your kitchen is ready to be closed up for the night, take one more extra moment and massage a little hand cream well into the skin and—if it is not too inconvenient—allow it to remain on overnight.

Let us not for a moment forget the important part that hands play in the ensemble of perfection. A poorly cut garment or passe bonnet is easily forgiven; for them there may be reasons not directly traceable to one's own neglect. But upon us rests the sole responsibility for unlovely, work-worn hands. Chemists and beauty specialists have provided means for their protection; to tend them faithfully, shaping the tips of fingers after washing and drying the hands; softly pushing back the cuticle with the towel; preventing dryness by putting back through good preparation the oils that too long and frequent immersion in soapy water removes from the skin.

HELENA RUBENSTEIN.

The limiting factor in the profitable production of milk is protein, or rather the lack of protein, in our regular farm grains, such as corn and oats.

Grains such as these produce carbohydrates and material for fat, but the feeder is forced to go to market to secure the right protein to properly balance his home-grown grains. A high-protein product, such as linseed meal, contains the food material necessary to furnish the missing parts.

The cheapest milk is produced when cows are on pastures, if the pastures are of the right quality. But pastures alone are not sufficient. Milk production is bound to suffer if cows must depend on grazing alone.

From the time the grass ripens until the cows are taken into winter quarters, pastures should be considered nothing more than exercising ground. They are no longer a source of feed. Grass at this time has lost its valuable protein content, and cows must have feed from other sources.

Good feeders supplement their pastures with a grain ration thruout the summer season. A mixture of ground corn and oats is satisfactory when grass is lush. As the pasture season advances, a mixture of about 10 per cent protein should be supplied. Later on when grass is dry and scanty, a mixture of about 20 per cent protein should be fed. This is necessary not only from the standpoint of milk production, but also to get cows in condition for winter quarters.

A mixture containing about 20 per cent protein suitable for feeding with late summer pastures may be made up from 300 pounds ground corn, 200 pounds ground oats, 100 pounds wheat bran, and 370 pounds linseed meal. Feed one pound per day for each 4 or 5 pounds of milk produced.

Building Wall Around U. S.

The suggestion that tariff adjustments were in order as a part of the program to place agriculture on an economic basis with other industries has resulted in a wild scramble on the part of manufacturers for greatly increased protection for their products. When it was suggested that a small tariff be placed on hides, manufacturers immediately asked for a large increase on leather, shoes, harness, and other leather goods. It was figured that with this compensatory tariff, the farmers would be paying out an average of $2.65 per year and getting in return the sum of 15¢.

European countries are very much dissatisfied with the proposed increase in the tariffs of this country and are protesting. In a diplomatic manner they have intimated that unless they can sell in this country they will not buy, therefore our tariff wall, if raised to the height proposed, will injure rather than benefit American industry.

Europe is getting on an industrial basis and adopting American methods of mass production. Many American manufacturers are constructing plants in European countries for the purpose of supplying their foreign demands. Thus we are taking from American labor the opportunity to work, and the tariff, supposed to be for the protection of labor in this country, is back-firing.

If the tariff is a good thing, let us use it moderately and within reason. There is such a thing as taking and overdose of good medicine.—Exchange.

"Milk is a mixture of fats, carbohydrates, proteins, salts plus intangible almost impalpable and relatively mysterious substances, such as vitamins, enzymes, oxydases, and reductases besides albumins, globulins, and perhaps an animal principle or energy which at the present time is unknown. It may be that there are also protective substances which prevent the growing child or animal from contracting certain infections. At any rate, we know that milk undergoes a very marked alteration in its composition when it is subjected to heat, even heat far short of boiling."—Selected.

Less than eight months have elapsed since the first Chevrolet Six was delivered into the hands of an owner—and already there are more than a million six-cylinder Chevrolets on the road! And the reasons for this overwhelming success are easy to understand.

Into a price field that had hitherto been occupied exclusively by four-cylinder cars—Chevrolet has introduced a six-cylinder car of amazing quality and value. Not only does it offer the smooth, quiet, velvety performance of a great six-cylinder valve-in-head motor—but, from every standpoint, it is a finer automobile than was ever before thought possible at such low prices! ENCLOSED DELIVERY CARS ARE POPULAR

"The three panel bodies provided among the large number of Ford commercial cars and trucks are attractive in appearance and possess the clean-cut lines desired by the efficient, progressive business houses for its vehicles that may be seen daily on the streets," said Mr. Stokes, Ford dealer in this city.

In describing the panel bodies, Mr. Stokes pointed out that two are mounted on the Model A chassis, while the third is one of the Model AA Ford truck types. The de luxe delivery, on the Model A chassis, has exterior lines that follow closely those of the Ford Tudor Sedan.

"The trimness and neatness of this car make it an ideal delivery unit for the shop that wishes to convey through its delivery equipment an impression of the high quality of its products," Mr. Stokes added.

"When a more commodious body is desired, it may be found in the Model A line. The regular panel body is built with wood interior, with large double doors at the rear, each door having an individual window. The exterior is given an attractive pyroxylin finish. Many types of business organizations find this an ideal motor vehicle because of its reliability, pleasing appearance and low operating cost.

"For the hauling of heavier materials the Model AA truck with Panel Body has proved its place. The interior of the truck body is of wood and the exterior is of metal. As with the other panel bodies, access to the carrying compartment may be obtained with such ease that packages or loads may be handled quickly.

"These three vehicles serve to show how thoroughly the line of Ford trucks and commercial cars meet the transportation requirements of business and industry."

HOT WEATHER SUGGESTIONS.

Everybody has a little advice to give on how best to endure the hot weather that is with us now. In conformity with this universal custom the editor has a few remarks.

First forget all about the thermometer. It is the greatest known producer of discomfort at this season. Second, get interested in your work. The greater your enthusiasm in your work the fewer thoughts you can give to the temperature.

Third, eat moderately, exercise moderately, and watch the general state of your health. It is when you are ill that hot weather is most unbearable.

Discomfort from heat is partially a state of mind. Busy people who have many other things to occupy their minds rarely fret about torrid weather.

ONE MILLION CHEVROLETS PLACED ON MARKET SINCE FIRST OF YEAR

DETROIT.—One million six cylinder Chevrolets have been placed on the road since the first of the year.

This sensational announcement, indicating as it does the great popular appeal of the new six cylinder car, was made at the central offices of the company here today as assembly plants in various parts of the country were operating on the biggest summer production schedule in the history of Chevrolet.

Never in the history of the industry has any other manufacturer equalled the achievement of placing a million six cylinder cars on the road in less than eight months. In fact, according to observers, this is more than three times as many six cylinder cars as were ever produced by a manufacturer during a like period.

The record-making model, probably the most famous of all Chevrolet record cars, rolled off the assembly line at the huge Flint, Mich., plant on August 5. It happened to be a sedan—the new Imperial sedan, introduced a few weeks ago. The glistening record-breaker was welcomed at the end of the assembly line by W. S. Knudsen, president, and other high Chevrolet officials.

Without any ceremony the car left the plant for Detroit where it will be presented as one of the interesting exhibits that are to be a part of the mammoth Chevrolet sales convention in Detroit, August 14-15-16. The entire Chevrolet sales supervisory force of nearly 2,000 men will be on hand for the biggest convention of its kind ever held by the company.

The rapidity with which Chevrolet marched on to the record of a million sixes in less than eight months will be noted from the following tabulation of the dates when the various epoch marking sixes were on the road:

First Six ----- Jan. 1.
250,000th Six ----- March 6.
500,000th Six ----- April 24.
750,000th Six ----- June 12.
1,000,000th Six ----- August 5.

Nearly every state in the Union had a share in the building of the million sixes. Pennsylvania, Ohio and Michigan furnished the steel; the South and the West supplied the wood; the South and the Northeast provided the cotton and wool; the rubber came from Ohio, Illinois and California; the glass from Pennsylvania, Ohio and Illinois and the Duco and enamel from New Jersey and Michigan. More than 85,000 carloads of material were used to produce the million sixes.

As officials point out, the achievement is even greater than during the same period of 1927 or 1928, during which years the Chevrolet Motor Company was the world's largest builder of automobiles. Furthermore, the change made by Chevrolet January 1 from four-cylinder production to six-cylinder production has upset all previous precedents in the low priced field by causing the production of six-cylinder cars to exceed the production of four-cylinder cars for the first time in automotive history.

It is also significant to note, from automobile registrations, that since January 1, 1927, the Chevrolet Motor Company has built and produced to date more automobiles than any other manufacturer in the world. Also, Chevrolet sales for the first time in

Run-Down

"ABOUT seven years ago, I was all run-down, worn-out and never felt good," says Mrs. Harry Cantrell, of Cape Girardeau, Mo. "A chair would be more welcome any time than my work."

"I was so tired when I would arise in the morning. Instead of being rested, I felt terrible."

"At last, mother told me to take Cardui, and I did. After the first bottle, I could tell a difference, and when I had taken five bottles the tired feeling was all gone. I felt like a different person, thanks to Cardui. I hope that other mothers will try Cardui. I have been wonderfully benefited by it."

Try Cardui for your troubles.
