Japan is slaughtering each other's soldiers for now. It has been called a war. The present crisis may serve to bring out into the war that, like the Spanish and panese conflicts, has never cleared, but just started. Also years ago an observer said a panese war would be the popular he could "imagine, ody," he said, "would be for both sides to lose." The WEEK AT A TIME page 4)

FOR THE WEEK

Inasmuch we have done it into the least of these, ye have done it unto me.

Local Millman Is Promoted

Horace Hawkins To Plainview

Horace Hawkins, for ten years manager of the local plant of the West Texas Cotton Oil Company has been promoted to the Plainview Plant of the company, where he will be manager of that mill and will supervise the three Westex plants of the company. Roy Mack, Winters manager will come to Slaton in Hawkins' place as soon as both men can make arrangements for living accommodations in their new posts. Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins have many friends in Slaton who will rejoice with them over the promotion earned and received, but will regret to see them go from our city to live.

Good Old Days A Myth Declares Magazine Writer

The "good old days"? They never were. That, at least, is the opinion Donald Hough, American author, sets forth in the current Rotarian Magazine.

"Men change, but time goes on," he says. "Tests prove that the apple of today is a better apple than that of 50 years ago. The Weather Bureau finds that over a period of 50 years there has been a change of a small fraction of one degree in the mean temperature of a certain small area in the Southeastern part of the United States, otherwise all is the same as before. The snow lies just as deep, the winters are just as cold, the summers are just as hot—or vice versa."

To this, Hough adds the verdict that the best cooking is found not on the farm of yesterday, but in the restaurant of today. Cooking in America—once enslaved to the frying pan and boiling pot—is one of its newest arts, he indicates. The food is better now, perhaps the appetites aren't. "Not all the people in America live in three-room kitchenette apartments, most politicians are honest, the average policeman cannot be bought, the country is full of young people who really do know more than their elders, money as a barometer of human worth is losing its grip, the cooking is getting better, people live longer, the whole history of man still can be summed up in one short word: 'advance'." So says the author. "The 'good old days'?" he asks. "Which ones?"

UNCLE GEO. MARRIOTT CALLS

Uncle George Marriott was in from Elm Grove Ranch Monday to have us send the Slatonite to him regularly. He protested that he had missed getting some numbers lately just depending on somebody to bring him a copy after it was half way out. Uncle George complained a bit about the hot weather and the fact that his old feet aren't as gay as they used to be. But his stout old heart carries him along among us so we know he is the kind of fellow the poet meant when he wrote of a man "of pleasant yesterdays and confident tomorrows."

HOLT GETS SUNTAN

J. D. Holt, manager of the Red Cross Pharmacy, returned this week from New Mexico where he caught a couple of fish and approximately a half-acre of suntan. J. D. thinks he could have bought a couple of trout from the market or even a can of salmon cheaper, but the relaxation and the exposure to the hardships of the mountains were probably a worthy change from his air-conditioned store.

CARD OF THANKS

For the lovely flowers offered, for gracious ministrations to those who walked in sorrow, for words of comfort brought, for every word and deed to lighten our grief, we thank those whose sympathy was manifest at the death and burial of our loved one, C. J. Wolfskill.

Mrs. C. J. Wolfskill, Barbara Jean and Lyle Anthony Mr. and Mrs. Allen Ferrel Rowland Anderson of Albuquerque is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Anderson of South Fifteenth street.

More Than Quarter Million In Money Orders Issued Here

Postmaster Scudder announced this week that the local postoffice had been doing a steady business for the past twenty-seven years. All this year each month has shown an increase over each month of last year.

The money order department has issued the quarter millionth money order this month. Young Harley Mansker bought the one numbered 250,000. Tass Bruner has issued most of the money orders that have gone out of here, having been employed since before the time number 75,000 was issued. He is still scribbling off the little blue slips that are good money anywhere in the world.

Tahoka Rot'ry Meets With Slaton Club

Thursday evening of last week the Rotary Club of Tahoka met in an intercity meeting with local Rotarians. Rotaryans of both clubs were present.

With a bushel and a half of fried chicken and all the other adjuncts to a picnic supper, the hundred-odd attendants at the meeting were well filled and in a mood to enjoy the short program given at the old bath house and then the band program at the New Pavilion.

Mrs. Darwin Burned In Gasoline Fire

Mrs. Fred Darwin was painfully burned last Monday when gasoline she was using for some cleaning ignited. She sustained first degree burns on one hand and on both legs below the knee, but quick work on the part of her daughter, Emily, was credited with saving her and the whole house from a serious fire.

Mrs. Darwin was cleaning some curtains in the washing machine, and thought just a little stirring with the machine would not be dangerous, but the ever present static electricity fired the vapor, and now another community realizes that gasoline should not be used in a washing machine. The fire department answered the alarm, but no extensive loss was suffered in the house.

Local Merchants Buy Fall Goods

Mr. and Mrs. Abe Kessel and Julian returned last week-end from the fall showing of merchandise at Dallas and Fort Worth. They purchased fall stocks, which are arriving daily. Mrs. Kessel reports the showings as unusually beautiful and perhaps the largest ever shown in Texas.

OPEN AIR REVIVAL

An open air revival was begun last Sunday at the Assembly of God church in East Slaton.

Pastor McGinn and his father will do the preaching.

Alvin R. Allison

Thanks Voters

Words cannot express my appreciation for the vote of confidence the people placed in my candidacy last Saturday at the polls. I want you to know that I am going to do all I can to merit that confidence which the voters of this great district have placed in me.

Local Men Gain Safety Ranking

Wilson And Stevens Are Instructors

Fire Chief Elbert Willson and Joe Bob Stevens returned last week from the State First Aid School at A. & M., each having qualified as instructors under the regulations set out in the State Course.

Stevens will hold a school of instruction at the Planview plant of the West Texas Cotton Oil Company some time late in this month or early next month. Therefore he will be available at the local West Texas plant for emergencies or accidents, as Chief Willson is always in the city.

The training of these two men is a valuable asset to the community, for no one can know when their specialized training will save a life or the lives of several, or train others to do the same.

Rube Goldberg Comic To Appear Regularly In This Newspaper

Rube Goldberg, one of America's highest paid and most popular comic artists, will be a regular contributor to The Slatonite, starting in this issue.

This newspaper has secured rights to the comic strip "LaLa Palooza," Goldberg's latest creation. The Countess LaLa Palooza, central figure in the comic, has been acclaimed one of the great humorist's most amusing characters, taking rank with his famed "Boob McNutt," "Mike and Ike, They Look Alike" and "Professor Lucifer Butt's Inventions."

We are proud to be able to present this outstanding feature for the entertainment of our readers. The first installment of "LaLa Palooza," by Rube Goldberg, starts in this issue. Don't miss it!

Kessel's Variety Has New Manager

George Haltom, recently of Odessa is the new manager of Kessel's variety store since the first of this month.

Haltom has lived in Odessa and Midland for a good many years. He has a wife and two sons who will come to Slaton when he can get a house to live in.

He is impressed with the location of his store and with the apparent opportunities for his business in Slaton.

MARRIOTT HOME REMODELED

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Marriott, Sr., have moved back home after being out for weeks during a complete renovation of their home at 120 Third street. Besides the renovation and redecoration, the partition between living room and dining room was arched, the floors were refinished, the entire building stuccoed, and the home made completely modern and in perfect taste in all its appointments.

COOPERATOR USES BATHING UNITS

Mrs. W. S. Grinstead, a cooperator in the Posey home demonstration club, has bathing centers in each of the upstairs bedrooms. In one she has an old-fashioned wash stand but in the other she built one of orange crates. The boxes are nailed to the wall at the top of the baseboard and have an unbleached curtain around them. The partitions in the boxes give space for storing towels, washcloths, soap, and pan. Since they are upstairs rooms she has a slop jar in each unit the lids of which are covered with percale to eliminate noise.

Mrs. Grinstead thinks that the bedrooms in homes without bathrooms should have a bathing unit to aid in cleanliness and health.

COMPRESS TANK OVERHAULED

L. C. Kurtz of the Southwestern Tower Tank Service of Amarillo has just completed a complete overhaul job of the tower tank at the Congress. The tower was painted and the tank inside and out, and the riser pipe was re-wrapped and re-insulated against frost.

F. A. Drewry and family with J. I. Drewry went to Dallas and Sherman last week to visit their mother and other relatives.

West Texas Mill Opens Early

Making Space For New Crop of Seed

The West Texas Cottonoil Mill has opened up earlier than usual to clean out the seed house in time to have room for the 1938 crop of cotton seed. The mill had a tremendous run last fall and winter, and laid off for the hot weather when all seed outside the house had been milled. But prospects for early seed from the South Plains makes it necessary to get house room for the new crop, it being inadvisable to store cotton seed outdoors in the early fall.

Safety Campaign Reduces Deaths

Bicyclists Warned by Highway Department

AUSTIN.—Texas streets and highways are definitely safer for the motoring public as shown by a steady decline in fatal traffic collisions, state police reported today.

Final tabulations of casualties in June revealed that 115 persons were killed in 1,026 accidents, a saving of 44 lives if compared with June, 1937, a total saving of 130 lives during the first half of 1938 compared with the same period of last year. There was a sharp drop in the number of crashes recorded in June compared with 1,417 reported in that month last year, when Texas' final death toll reached the unprecedented high mark of 2,043 fatalities.

A selective enforcement program—the placing of state patrolmen at strategic points where surveys show the largest number of fatal collisions taking place—which was put into effect recently, is the reason for the diminishing death rate, safety officials believe. With 300 mounted officers patrolling death stretches of highways there are authoritative predictions that Texas will rank as a safe state of the nation by the end of the year.

Encouraging to the recorders was the continued decrease in the number of pedestrians who met death under the wheels of vehicles, in most instances when pedestrians crossed streets at places other than intersections. The pedestrian death toll has steadily declined from 40 in January to 21 in June.

The fatal smash-ups involving bicycle riders brought a sharp warning from Captain Homer Garrison, Jr., assistant state police director, who pointed to the four death crashes of this type last month as examples of carelessness. He urged that riders of cycles carry lights and abide by traffic regulations that guide motorists. In addition to the four deaths there were 27 bicycle riders severely injured in collisions.

The following list shows the ten leading causes of fatalities on Texas highways in June:

- Driver or pedestrian had been drinking 99
- Did not have right of way 84
- Driving too near center or on wrong side 78
- Driving too fast for conditions 72
- Improper left turn 47
- Driver asleep or sleepy 35
- Improper passing 32
- Pedestrian (or bicyclist) ran into path of vehicle 31
- Driver disregarded traffic control sign or signal 26
- Tire blow out 26

Post Pioneers Honored

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Babb of Post were honored last Sun. at the home of their daughter Mrs. J. N. Power, Sr., also of that city, on the occasion of their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

The couple came to Garza County in 1901 and have lived there ever since. Hundreds of friends called in the course of the afternoon to greet them and join their family in honoring these pioneers who have walked so long and so graciously life's pathway together.

SANNER HOME IMPROVED

R. C. Sanner is doing extensive improvement on his home at 830 West Lubbock. A new roof has been put on, the house has been redecorated inside, hardwood floors have been laid and the stucco has been re-dashed.

Local Scouts Have Outing At Post

Scoutmasters Odie Hood and Dayton Eckert took their troops 28 and 29 to Camp Post last week-end. O. N. Alcorn solved the transportation problem by lending his truck for the trip. G. E. Welch, local commissioner called at the Camp during the day.

Twentyone scouts were in the party as follows: A. W. Rice, J. G. Harper, James Thornton, Samuel Phillips, Clyde Gentry, Wallace Cooper, Bruce Mackey, Hyden Edmondson, Bobby Edmondson, Kirby Scudder, Jr., Briggs Robertson, Jr., Jordan Nash, Terrel Nash, James Eubanks, Malcolm Sanders, Harley Mansker, Paul Melton, Bobby Stotts, and Emory Clifton. Guests in the group were John and Fred Schmidt and Marion Rushing of Huntington Park, California who is visiting his cousin Kirby Scudder, Jr.

Sunday school was held at the regular hour Sunday morning and in the afternoon all went for a swim at Two-Draw lake, after which they rode the truck back home.

Scouting events eagerly awaited by local scouts are the installation of lights this week in the Scout Hall; a swimming meet at Lamesa August 8, and a district track and field meet of this section of the South Plains Area Council to be held here about the middle of September.

Smiths Still Ahead Social Security Rolls Show Name is Popular

AMARILLO.—Claims of the American branch of the Smith family to numerical superiority over all other family groups are supported by a survey the Social Security Board has made of the 39,000,000 social security account numbers it has assigned.

According to Dewey Reed, manager of the Amarillo office of the Board, account numbers have been issued to approximately 470,190 Smiths. Next in order are the Johnsons with 348,530, the Browns with more than 253,750, the Williamses with 249,312, and the Millers with 238,980. The Joneses stand in sixth place with 232,540. All variations in the spelling of a name are grouped together. For instance, Schmidt, Schmitz, and Smythe are considered part of the Smith family.

When the old-age insurance system was planned, statisticians estimated that accounts would have to be set up for about 26,000,000 persons. On the basis of this estimate filing space was provided for the accounts of 294,000 Smiths, 227,000 Johnsons, 165,000 Browns, 156,000 Williamses, 147,000 Joneses and 137,000 Millers.

Mr. Reed cited the high registration of workers in these largest name groups as an added justification for the Board's requirement that every worker have an individual account number. Without such an identifying number, it would, he pointed out, be difficult, and in many cases impossible, to keep accounts straight.

The Board's survey of its millions of listed workers also discloses that the shortest family name in the records is "E". Whether "E" is a man or a woman was not disclosed, in conformance with the policy of holding files confidential. The longest name yet located is Xenegianekopoulos.

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 42), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells. SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL
By Carter Field
FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON.—A very prominent New Dealer, Thurman W. Arnold, now the official trust buster of the administration, frequently expresses amazement at the morals and sense of civic duty and mental processes which permit big corporations to cut wages or lay off help if they have a surplus at the time. The curious element about this statement is that it comes from the official trust buster. It involves a very simple question in economics, which anyone who has ever been in business, even if it were a peanut stand, can follow.

To dismiss all questions of morality, loyalty to one's employees, and that sort of thing, assume that the Ford Motor company has a huge cash surplus, which it actually has, but that none of its competitors has, which is not true. Also assume that Henry Ford is deeply imbued with the thought that Mr. Arnold thinks he should have. (The writer does not know that Mr. Arnold has ever applied his theory to the automobile industry. He talks mostly about steel when he is discussing it.)

What would happen when the normal situation, which results in cutting pay or laying off workers, develops? Obviously Ford, having a big surplus, would go on producing cars at top speed, while his competitors, in this illustration not having any surplus on which to draw, would have to close down.

Lead to Monopoly

There being no demand for cars, that being the cause of the situation, Ford would be forced to do one of two things. He could either store his product in the hopes that a revival of buying would eventually take them off his hands, or he could slash prices in order to force the cars out. If he did the latter, he would eventually put all his competitors out of business. He would be selling cars below cost, using up his surplus, in order to keep his workers employed. But the moment that times became better he would have a tremendous advantage. His plant would be going under full steam. Big production would have cut his costs way down. Operation, instead of idleness, would eliminate the wastes of a shutdown. He would be able to slash prices still more in order to continue going full blast.

Meanwhile, especially if the depression were of some duration, this very activity would have made the resumption of selling by his competitors more difficult. There would not be the piled up demand that usually ends a depression. There would not be hundreds of thousands of persons who had run their old cars a few years too long. They would have bought new Fords at the reduced prices.

Food for Thought

One of the spokesmen for the New Dealers has just written a short article predicting government ownership of the steel industry. The article attracted singularly little attention merely because nobody believed it! Actually there is considerable food for thought in it. It was far from the half-baked statement most readers thought. It showed a study of the steel industry had been made by some of the informants of the writer, and it was remarkably accurate in predicting the probable course, as seen by men inside the steel industry.

For instance, the government has been seeking for several years to break down the so-called basing-point system. Actually the basing-point system was a lifesaver for the smaller steel companies. It forced the quotation of prices as of certain places, the basing points, the price always being the fixed amount plus freight from this basing point.

Naturally, being the biggest of the steel companies, and a merger of many original units, the U. S. Steel company has plants in more localities than its competitors. Therefore, with basing-point bidding eliminated, and with all bids submitted providing for delivery on freight cars at the steel mill, the company with the most widely separated plants has a tremendous advantage.

Buyers patronizing it would have to pay only the freight rate from the mill of that company closest to the point where they proposed to use the steel.

In view of this situation, it is difficult to understand why the trust-busting section of the government has been so anxious to break up a practice which actually helped maintain competition, or at least it was until this article by a comparatively unofficial spokesman. He states the only answer that has been made which appeals to the logic of those who have been wondering about the government's course.

The answer, of course, is that the government is looking ahead of the immediate developments, and planning to take over the steel business just as it has been moving in on the electric business now for several years.

All-American Waterway

Development of an all-American waterway in lieu of the St. Lawrence seaway is urged in a letter to Secretary of State Cordell Hull by Commander Eugene F. McDonald Jr. McDonald was a member of the MacMillan polar expedition. "Many years' experience," McDonald wrote Secretary Hull, "in navigation of the salt and fresh waters of the world, from within 11 degrees of the North pole to and beyond the equator, prompts this letter to you.

"Recently, while returning from a 12,900-mile winter cruise through the Caribbean and as far as South America, I brought my 185-foot Diesel yacht Mizpah through the St. Lawrence waterways to Lake Michigan and then on to Chicago. I have made this same trip many times before, but my recent experience brought again rather forcibly to my mind the St. Lawrence system as it exists today.

"Born in Syracuse, N. Y., I have known the Erie and Barge canals since boyhood. For 25 years I have explored the waters of the Great Lakes and their tributaries, and have a deep interest in their development as waterways. I have no personal or commercial interests of any kind at stake.

"I hope I am, therefore, able to consider the problems presented by the proposed Great Lakes-to-ocean waterways with an informed, but detached and objective, viewpoint.

Enlarge Barge Canal

"The conclusions that have forced themselves upon me are the following:

"1. A deep waterway—a ship canal—between the Great Lakes and the Atlantic ocean is, unquestionably, to be desired. Especially is this true when we consider that, in years of normal crop movement, some 12 per cent of the total United States foreign trade clears through the Great Lakes—even with our present inadequate waterways.

"2. Why build this great waterway through Canada, either wholly or partially with American money, when the more logical, more economical, shorter route can be wholly an American waterway? I am speaking of enlarging the Barge canal, through New York state, to the proportions of a ship canal.

"3. New York city, as a seaport, is closer than the mouth of the St. Lawrence to all the world markets, with the exception of Labrador, Greenland, Iceland, Newfoundland, and northern Europe.

"By this all-American waterway route Buffalo, Cleveland, Toledo, Port Arthur, Fort William, Toronto, Detroit, Milwaukee, Duluth, Chicago, and all the other Great Lakes ports—whether Canadian or American—and their tributary territory, will be 1,559.3 miles closer to New York and to all the seaports of the world than they would be by the St. Lawrence route, with, of course, the few exceptions named above. From Buffalo to New York, via the Welland canal and the St. Lawrence, is 2,066 land miles. Yet it is only 506.7 miles from Buffalo to New York via the Barge canal.

"The Hudson river is already dredged, and available for ocean-going ships, from New York to Albany, with a 27-foot draft channel. The all-American route would merely entail the deepening and widening of the Barge canal, the installation of new locks, and the removal of fixed bridges over a distance of 362.5 miles, from Buffalo to Albany.

Another Suggestion

"A still more practical, economical, all-American route can be made by merely enlarging the Barge canal from Buffalo, or Tonawanda, to Lockport, and creating a new canal, of a length of 12 miles, from Lockport to Olcott, which is on Lake Ontario. The route then to go through Lake Ontario to Oswego, and enlarging the Barge canal from Oswego to Albany. This latter route would entail the deepening of the Barge canal for a distance of only 213.8 miles, and the creation of a new canal of 12 miles.

"In my opinion, either of these shorter, all-American routes can be constructed for less than the proposed deepening of the St. Lawrence waterways. In case of emergency, we would then have an all-American waterway to move our much needed vessels from the Great Lakes to the Atlantic ocean.

"If a plan such as I have outlined were adopted, it would not be necessary, in order to get some of our vessels to the seaboard, to dismantle them and, in fact, actually cut them in two, as was the case during the last emergency because of the inadequacy of the present waterways.

"Last, but not least, it should be borne in mind that because of the more favorable southern latitude of the all-American route, it would be open a number of weeks longer each year than would the Canadian waterway. The low cost of transportation by the all-American waterway is bound to increase business and create jobs for the unemployed."

SIX GUNS and CARPET TACKS A Gallos County Story © McClure Newspaper Syndicate, WNU Service.

MOST times, here in Gallos county, a six gun's a-got just a leetle the best of the argument, but there was one time when the difference between two gun toters was a box of carpet tacks.

See that tree a-standin' out there, there at the bend in the road. Well, that's where they finally lynched Butch Manton.

Folks just heard that some of Butch's friends was a-plannin' to ride in to town and take him out o' jail. And Butch a-bein' a cow thief like he was, they just up and taken him out and strung him to that there tree. And Butch'd been livin' right, like as not, if it wasn't for them carpet tacks.

It was right here in the Happy Hour where things was a-beginnin'. Butch was at the bar when Johnnie Rucker comes in and was a leetle slow when he said somethin' 'bout Butch stealin' 50 head of steers from Johnnie, but Johnnie did nick Butch's right foot as the lead from Butch's gun went a-tearin' through his own heart. Course, Butch'd shot Johnnie without givin' him a chance, but Butch still had that gun in his hand when he backs out of the Happy Hour.

'Fore long after the shootin', Sheriff Tom rides into town and hears 'bout the shootin'. It kinda hits him hard on account of Johnnie bein' a pal of his'n, and he don't wait for reason why there ain't been no posse after Butch. He lights out for the Diablo canyon country down close to the border where Butch and his gang has holed up for years.

Butch oughta gone right on to the border, but he don't. He stops by the shack, sends them riders of his'n on with them steers he stole from Johnnie and waits back to see if he can't do somethin' 'bout that foot of his'n.

He's a doin' a leetle doctorin' of his own when Tom rides up. Tom ain't never been a fool 'fore, but a-thinkin' 'bout Johnnie musta got him off, 'cause Butch gits the drop on him and takes Tom's gun but Tom does manage to kick a table over and put out a candle,

Along the Highway

Don't let ownership of an automobile rob you of your politeness.

Probably the worst fault in driving a car is believing you haven't any fault.

In these days, on the roads, it's a case of the survival of the fittest.

Thinking about one thing while doing another causes accidents.

the only light that's in the room.

No sir, Butch don't get away from Tom and Tom lives to bring Butch Manton right to the jail from which he was taken and hung on that tree at the bend of the road, down yonder.

You see, Tom, he's been out a-tackin' up signs when Johnnie was shot. Well he'd just brung them tacks long with him, and them tacks is how he caught Butch.

He just spread them on the floor quiet-like while he was movin' around there in the dark and a-fore long Butch steps on one with his foot that ain't got no boot on.

Butch's kinda surprised and lets out a hoop and Tom just grabs in the direction of that hoop.

MEET MR. TEAGUE

Meet Mr. Teague. Mr. Joe Teague.
Well, then Joe Teague, Sr. . . . Oh, you've already met him. So have we.
He came whistling along the street last week and we just held him up to find out something about him, and how he gets that way. It seems to be a simple matter of a fellow who lives with himself and others with a sane and wholesome philosophy of life that is good to meet.

Week before last when we carried the picture of the Lubbock County the photo. It was only an oversight that caused us to fail to acknowledge

COTTON IS A MESS

Cotton carryover double what it was last year. Acreage down. Prices down. Spirits of cotton growers down.
Investigations planned! Protests planned! Cotton is a mess!

There are several possible answers to the question of what to do. We can go on and take whatever happens to us. We can cry for the government to help us and complain at whatever the government does to us. Or we can do some looking back and some looking forward and some thinking and planning. Some farmers are going to keep on making a living and some are going to make some money.

We never saw a better time for Lubbock county farmers to set out to grow a few head of livestock on the farms.
We have had to plant feed far in excess of our needs. Big feeding projects sometimes make money, but the surest money in livestock for the average farmer is that made from stock raised and finished on the farm.

Cotton is a mess. But there is still opportunity for Lubbock and other Plains farmers to make a living on the farms.

Blanton Family Holds Reunion

One Hundred and Four Meet at Ballinger

Descendants of the late Jim Blanton of Old Pine Springs, now known as Mixon, Texas, met at Ballinger, Texas, July 30th and 31st in what they plan to make an annual reunion.
This is the first time in forty years that the members of the family have been together.

Only two sons of this old East Tex.
pioneer survive. They are J. F. Blanton, Troup, Texas and D. Y. Blanton, of Ralls. These brothers met in Ballinger for the first time in nearly forty years.

One hundred and four relatives and friends attended. From this section of the country were Mr. and Mrs. D.
Y. Blanton of Ralls and all their children and families, as follows: Mr.
and Mrs. H. T. Wiley of Slaton and their three children. Mrs. Victor Hud-man of Post, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Blanton of Ralls, and David Blanton also of Ralls.

Perhaps the best known of the family in Texas today is Mrs. Luther Blanton of Raymondville whose husband and son disappeared in the King Ranch nearly two years ago and of whom no trace has ever been found.

Mrs. W. L. Jones Honored Tuesday

At the home of Mrs. C. F. Anderson at five o'clock last Tuesday afternoon, a garden party was given honoring Mrs. W. L. Jones, who is leaving this week-end for Tracy, California. Mr. Jones has purchased a business there and the family will will make their home in the Western State.

The hostesses were Mrs. Anderson, her daughter, Miss Claudia, and Mrs.
Lawrence Kent. Thirty-five guests were received and games were played after which simple refreshments were served. The house and garden were profusely decorated with summer flowers.

In behalf of the Art Club, of which
Mrs. Jones is a past president, Mrs.
J. R. McAtee, president-elect, presented the honoree with an artist's set. Other guests brought a varied array of beautiful gifts among which was a guest register in which the guests registered.

GLAD TO BE HOME

O. Z. Ball and family are returned from their Western trip, happy to be all in the original packages. It seems to be about like this: On their way home a few miles south of Dumas, they met a truck. Really met it—not just passed it.

The meeting was quite a shock to the left side of O. Z.'s car as witness the condition it was in when he came into Slaton. Both fenders and the running board were wrecked. A front tire was laid open and the rear wheel folded up. Only presence of mind on the part of the driver could have saved the car from overturning;
it swerved into the barrow ditch, crossed it, went through a five-wire fence and was finally stopped in a field.

The O. Z. Ball's are glad to be home.

OLD FISH LADDER LAW.

There is an old law on the statute books providing that fish ladders shall be constructed at all dams in Texas. The law, said Will J. Tucker, Game Department secretary, was passed about 50 years ago, when the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries stocked Texas' warm-water streams with Salmon.

Rainbow Trout and Shad, all of which are cold-water fish and which expired as soon as they were planted in Texas. These fish are "climbers". In the spawning season they go upstream to bring on their young. Hence the fish ladder law.

There are still fishermen who believe fish ladders should be erected for bass and crappie. But those fish, it has been determined, are not climbers, Tucker said. A bass won't climb over two feet.

The State of Texas now ranks fourth in milk production and dairy cattle, according to the latest figures. Out-ranking Texas is Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Iowa. The United States Department of Agriculture census shows that the number of dairy cattle has increased from 1,202,000 in 1930 to 1,322,000 in 1938.

Hoffman of Michigan Will Test Freedom of the Press . . . Texas Democrats Nominate a Yankee

SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

Hoffman Dares N.L.R.B.

CLARE E. HOFFMAN, Republican congressman from Michigan, has challenged the National Labor Relations board in the matter of constitutional guaranties of freedom of speech and of the press.

"This speech," Hoffman's letter said, "was republished, with illustrations, by the Constitutional Educational League of New Haven, Conn.

"I am now offering, and intend to continue to offer, to furnish to any and all interested persons, including employees, employers, or others, copies of this address for circulation at the actual cost of printing, and to recommend that employees might well read this address before joining the C. I. O."

Commenting on the letter, Representative Hoffman said that the board's ruling would preclude the distribution of newspapers containing news items or editorials critical of any organization or of activities of the labor board.

The American Federation of Labor charged in its official organ, the American Federationist, that maladministration of the Wagner act is threatening American democracy.

"Every agency of the government that gives status to the C. I. O. gives the same recognition," it continued.

"Surely this is not freedom for workers to choose their own unions and representatives for collective bargaining, but union development under government patronage."

Texas Picks a Yankee

TEXAS Democrats in their primary selected a Yankee to be the next governor of the state. W. Lee O'Daniel, born in Ohio and raised on a Kansas farm, received a clear majority over 11 other candidates for the nomination which is equivalent to election.

O'Daniel is a flour jobber. He campaigned with a hill-billy band and a platform that included the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule, ridicule of professional politicians, promise of a business administration and more liberal pensions for the aged.

More important nationally was the fact that Rep. Maury Maverick, leader of a considerable bloc in congress, was defeated for renomination by Paul Kilday, a San Antonio attorney. Maverick is an enthusiastic New Dealer. Kilday says he will not be a rubber stamp.

Third Term Boost

GOV. FRANK MURPHY of Michigan told Democratic leaders of the state that Michigan must keep its mind open on the possibility of a third term for President Roosevelt. Said he: "The welfare of the nation and continued success of the New Deal must come first. If the success of the New Deal depends on President Roosevelt running for a third term, then we must be prepared for that."

Murphy's statement is only another indication that the third term movement is growing rapidly. Various groups have petitioned the President to run again in 1940, and Republican National Chairman Hamilton says WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins launched a third term boom the other day when he asserted that 90 per cent of those receiving relief would vote for Mr. Roosevelt again.

Of course Mr. Roosevelt says nothing about all this, but political observers seem to agree that if the 1940 convention does not appear ready to get together on a candidate who would and could carry on the New Deal, the President might well consider it necessary for him to accept another nomination. Breaking a precedent wouldn't worry him.

To Expand Business Loans

CHAIRMAN JESSE JONES of the Reconstruction Finance corporation announced a new policy for forcing the expansion of business loans, by which competitor banks will be pitted against each other. When a loan applicant approved by the RFC is turned down by his local bank an RFC agent will contact the bank and try to persuade it to participate in the loan. If it refuses the RFC agent then will contact a competitor bank.

In its most optimistic monthly business survey of the year, the federal reserve board said industrial production is on the increase and available data indicate that in July the index will show a considerable rise.

The business summary particularly pointed out healthy business signs, noting that activity in many industries was on the increase contrasted with last year.

Hull Prods Cardenas

SECRETARY OF STATE HULL, out of patience with Mexico, sent to President Cardenas a sharp note protesting Mexico's failure to pay for American owned farm lands that the Mexican government has seized. Mr. Hull asked that the matter be submitted to arbitration. The secretary has in this the full approval of President Roosevelt, for the administration feels that Cardenas is endangering the "Good Neighbor" relations between the two countries.

Sen. Key Pittman of the senate foreign relations committee also backs up Mr. Hull, asserting that if Mexico refuses to arbitrate she will be subject to economic penalties. "Mexico," he said, "then would forfeit all the financial and other voluntary aid we have given her through our spirit of friendship and desire for peace, prosperity, and upbuilding of that country."

Spanish Rebels Gain

SPANISH insurgents started a drive in Estramadura region in the southwest as a feint to prevent reinforcement of the loyalist eastern front, and found the loyalist defenses were astonishingly weak. So they went ahead in a whirlwind attack that gave them possession of 23 important towns and villages.

The Barcelona loyalist government announced acceptance of the international plan to purge Spain of its foreign forces. Insurgent General Franco was expected to follow suit shortly and accept the plan framed by Great Britain and sponsored by the 26-nation nonintervention committee.

RUTH: ADVENTUROUS FAITH

LESSON TEXT—Ruth 1:6-18. GOLDEN TEXT—Thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God.—Ruth 1:16. PRIMARY TOPIC—A Girl Named Ruth. JUNIOR TOPIC—The Story of Ruth. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Ruth's Wise Choice. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—An Adventurous Faith.

Out of the dark fastnesses of an underground dungeon into the brightness and warmth of God's sunshine—such is the transition we make when we turn from the moral and spiritual failures of Samson to consider the lovely story of Ruth. She lived in the midst of the travails and the sorrows of life, in fact we find her at the beginning of the book which bears her name, a widow who has lost all that the world would hold dear. Yet she, because of her purity of life and devotion to God rises higher and higher, while the one of whom we spoke last week, starting with every advantage, slipped lower and lower because of his sin.

Ruth was the great-grandmother of King David, and thus this Gentile woman became one of the ancestors of Jesus. (See Ruth 4:22 with Luke 3:22.) Many folk are greatly concerned about their ancestry—one could wish that more were concerned about living such lives and developing such characters as will make them good ancestors.

Teachers and classes will do well to read and study the entire book of Ruth—only about three pages long in most Bibles—and give attention to the full story of her life, especially the picture of the kinsman-redeemer, to be later fulfilled in the Lord Jesus Christ. We must confine our comments largely to the printed portion which reveals Ruth first as a loyal and thoughtful daughter-in-law, then as one whose love was not to be denied by sorrow or circumstance, and finally as one so bound to her mother-in-law in unity of spirit that she became one with her and her people.

I. Commendable Loyalty (vv. 6-10).

Tragic misfortune had visited Naomi, who with her husband and two sons had gone from Bethlehem to Moab in a time of famine. Not only had her husband died but also her two sons, who had married Gentile women, leaving three widows in one family to mourn together. Naomi craved the fellowship of her own people in her hour of trial and arose to return to her own land.

Her departure brought out in the two daughters-in-law the expression of kindness and loyalty which should exist in every family, but which is all too often lacking. Her own testimony concerning these girls of Moab is that they had dealt "kindly" with her and with the dead. That word speaks volumes. There is so little genuine kindness in the world. Both Orpah and Ruth went with her on the way—protesting their loyal purpose to go with her all the way. Thus far the two sisters were not differentiated—but the next incident reveals Ruth as the one who had an

II. Undeniable Love (vv. 11-14). No one could for a moment condemn Orpah for yielding to her mother-in-law's entreaty that she return to her own people. She affectionately kisses Naomi and in tears turns away. "But Ruth clave unto her."

Such love cannot be denied. It is the most precious possession that a man can have, apart from his fellowship with God. The love of a devoted father or mother, of a noble helpmate, or of a little laddie or lassie, these are the things that really make life worth while, that stand out as an oasis in the desert of life, as a light in the darkness.

But Ruth takes one more step. Her kindness and loyalty, her unswerving love lead on to a confession of her faith in the true God, and the declaration of an

III. Inseparable Unity (vv. 15-18). Literature knows no more beautiful gem than verses 16 and 17. It was the Great Commoner, Bryan, who said, "We cannot hope to contribute to literature a sentence so exquisite and thrilling as that into which Ruth poured the full measure of a noble heart, but we can imitate her devotion."

The story is told of a fine young Englishman who left his betrothed sweetheart to go to California during the great gold rush. He was going to make a fortune and then send for her. He sent her his first gold nugget. But alas, there were none to follow and soon he became not only poverty stricken, but ill. In noble sacrifice he decided to release her from her promise, and wrote to tell her so. She (and one could almost believe her name was Ruth) took the treasured nugget, had it made into a ring engraved as a gift from her to him, with the additional words "Ruth 1:16, 17." In due time it reached the young man with its tender and inspiring message—"Treat me not to leave thee," and the assurance of her devotion until death.

May this dizzy and bemuddled world have many more characters like Ruth

Cool, Slim-Waisted Frocks

THESE last few hot weeks will be a whole lot easier to bear if you have some fresh new dresses to wear around the house—cool, slim-waisted styles that are finished enough for shopping and porch wear too. We've picked out two that we know you'll like, one for slim figures and one for large. Both are very, very easy to make, for of course nobody wants to undertake laborious sewing these days. And both are easy to wash and iron. A detailed sew chart comes with each pattern.

Day Frocks for Slim Figures. This little dress is right at the top of new fashions, with its gored skirt and shaped square neckline. Notice that the skirt seams are extended above the waistline, to give a little bosom fullness, which makes the dress more becoming. Very short kimono sleeves, just covering the shoulders, give a much prettier line than sleeveless frocks do, and they're just as cool. The skirt has a charming flare. Make this in linen, dotted Swiss, dimity or organdie in a pretty flower print, and you'll love it.

Day Frocks for Large Figures. You'll find this straight, well-cut dress one of the most becoming, most slenderizing, you ever put on. It has a deep v-neck and short pleated sleeves for coolness and comfort. It's very easy and unhampering in line, so that you can work in it comfortably. Darts on the shoulders and at the waistline give it an unusually trim, slimming fit. A touch of prettiness is added by ricrac braid and the pointed closing. This is a diagram design that you can make in a few hours, and you'll want several dresses made just like this—in dimity, calico, percale and seersucker.

1558 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20 and 40. Size 14 requires 4 1/4 yards of 35-inch material; 9 yards of ribbon or braid to trim. 1533 is designed for sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50. Size 36 requires 4 1/2 yards of 35-inch ma-

HOW to SEW

HAVE your door space going to waste? There is always the inside of a closet door—even in the tiniest apartment. A pocket like the one shown here gives a place for shoes, whisk broom, hat brush, shoe brush and even a dust cloth to have within easy reach when tidying up the bedroom. A large pocket at the bottom takes care of small pieces of laundry.

This door pocket may be made from 2 1/4 yards of 35-inch-wide cotton material. All the dimensions as well as suggestions for making are given here in the diagram. There are other doors in every house where pockets of various types and sizes may be used to good advantage. The broom closet door offers a place for cleaning brushes and bottles of furniture polish. Two large pockets on the pantry door—one for clean dish towels and one for soiled ones, have been in use in my kitchen for years. A large pocket of heavy ticking on the inside of the door leading to the basement makes a place for old newspapers that are so useful for many purposes. Pockets on the inside of a door leading to the attic often make a place to keep small cleaning equipment. And here is another thought—even a small wall space in your closet may be used for a series of pockets for pairs of stockings. This is neater than keeping them in a drawer. NOTE: Every house should have a copy of Mrs. Spear's book, SEWING, for the Home. Forty-eight pages of directions for making lampshades and many other useful articles for the home. 25 cents postpaid. Ask for 1, and address Mrs. Spear S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

More Meringue.—A teaspoon of cold water added to the white of an egg before beating will give a double quantity of meringue.

Keep Peas From Burning.—If a slice of bread is put in the kettle when making pea soup the peas will not sink to the bottom and burn.

Don't Wrap Ice.—It is poor economy to save ice by wrapping it in heavy paper or cloth; such a covering insulates the ice from the rest of the refrigerator.

In the Bathroom.—Don't keep an array of bottles and jars out on view on window sills and shelves. An inexpensive medicine cabinet will take care of these things and prove just as convenient as when exposed to view.

Covering for White Cake.—Mashed ripe bananas, sweetened to taste, added to whipped cream, makes a good coating for white cake. This can be served as a dessert and is tasty when accompanied by coffee.

"There's only one thing to do with us," Ruth said. "You can take us to Tall Holt and leave us at Ma Presnall's. We'll be safe there. You'll have us under your eye all the time."

"All right," Lee assented. "I'll take you with me—both of you. I wouldn't if I could help it, but there's nothing else to do, as you say. You and Nelly fix up your war-bags. We may be there two or three days. While we're at Tall Holt you'll stay right in the house every minute. Understand?"

Ruth said she understood.

They took the road two hours after midnight.

Steadily they rode, through a lovely night of stars that softened the harsh and desiccated face of Arizona to a strange, ghostly loveliness. Even the sahuaros, with their intimation of age-old decay, were like magnificent candelabra waiting to be lit. Peace reigned over the land.

Jeff Gray was a light sleeper. Awakened by the furious barking of the blacksmith's dog, almost instantly he was out of the bunk and at the window. Silhouetted in the moonlight on the brow of the little hill in front of the cabin were a number of men. They were moving toward the cabin. The marshal counted eight of them.

He called to his companion: "Wake up, Hank, and come here." Ransom struggled to consciousness. "Lord love ye, man, what are ye doing at the window?" he asked.

The dog was still barking savagely at the intrusion of so many night visitors.

"They've found out where I am and are coming to get me," Gray replied.

The blacksmith joined him. "The scallawags are scattering to cover more ground." He lifted his Winchester from the wall.

"Any chance for me to slip out of the back door down to the rocks in the creek?" Jeff inquired.

"Not a chance," Ransom said grimly.

"Then I'll have to surrender. They'll only hold me prisoner, if Sherm Howard is running the show. His son is out at the L. C. I'll step out with my hands up."

"Wait a minute," the old Indian fighter objected. "I'll go out and make a bargain with them. Better tie them up to an agreement. If there weren't so many, I'd say for us to stand 'em off, but I don't reckon we can do that."

A gun cracked. The dog no longer barked.

The leathery face of the blacksmith twitched. "Some damned scoundrel has killed Laddie," he said.

"Yes," Gray was thinking that a man who could shoot down a faithful dog was a villain and not to be trusted. "I'm going to wave the white flag and make terms, Hank. You're not in this. I'm the man they want. First thing is to get you out of this."

He sat down on the bed, pulled on his boots, and buckled round his waist the gun-belt lying on a chair.

"I'm not in this, ain't I?" the blacksmith blazed. "After they've killed my Laddie?"

The marshal returned to the window. The men outside were about sixty yards from the house. Jeff put a hand on the shoulder of his friend. "We've got to play our cards the way they are dealt us, old-timer. I'm going out with my hands up. You stay under cover. After they have me they won't bother you."

Gray unbolted the door and whipped it open. He stepped into the moonlight and lifted a hand, palm out.

There was a yell of rage. A bullet knocked a dirt chip from the adobe wall back of the officer. Another dusted his hat. The roar of a rifle deafened him. From just back of him Ransom had fired.

Lead spattered against the building. Hank lurched against his shoulder and fell.

"I'm hit!" he cried, and caught at his right leg.

Jeff snatched the rifle from him. "Crawl back into the house," he ordered.

"Come on, boys, we've got him!" a voice shouted.

The line of attackers moved forward. The marshal fired and missed—fired again and hit. A running man cried out and stopped abruptly. The others faltered. Their guns barked angrily.

Gray stepped back into the house and slammed the door.

"Get any of 'em?" his companion asked.

"One." The officer was at the window. "For right now they've had enough and are hunting cover. I've sure got you in a fine jam, Hank. You hurt bad?"

"My leg is plugged. It's not bleeding bad. I reckon the bullet missed an artery."

"Look after you in a minute,"

Jeff said. "Got to fix the fort so we can hold it."

He found an axe and knocked a bunk to pieces. Ransom told him where to find nails. The window he boarded up, leaving an inch or two for a loophole. Both doors he barricaded as best he could. Meanwhile, Ransom crawled across the floor and with a hatchet cut a spy-hole in the adobe wall. He made it large enough for shooting purposes.

"I'd like first-rate to get that bull rattle Morg Norris," Ransom said. "I've a notion if we picked off that slit-eyed cabron, and maybe one or two more, the rest of the lads would drag it."

Gray was of another opinion. By this time the whole village would know what was going on, and the attackers would be recruited if necessary by others. Reinforcements were likely to come in from the hills. Having gone so far, Sherm Howard would feel that safety lay in finishing the job. But the marshal did not say what he thought.

"I certainly picked me a top hand for a partner this trip," he said trapped men did not escape by the back door. The man was probably crouched back of a rock some distance from the cabin. He might or might not have seen the door open, since the sky was now overcast. Gray wished he knew whether he had been observed. If he moved from the shelter of the woodpile, he was likely to find out.

He crept up the hill, taking advantage of every rock and bit of cactus that would give him cover. From the front of the house came the occasional crack of a gun. This was good news, since it told him the attackers were not rushing the house yet, but were waiting for the rock-rolling brigade to drive out the doomed men.

He was close to the top when a sound brought him to rigid stillness. A man was standing on the crest just above him. He was striking a match to light a cigarette. For a moment the flare of light showed Jeff a face he did not recognize, yet one that seemed oddly familiar. In an instant the man would look down and see him. The marshal did not wait for discovery.

"Gimme a hand, pardner," he drawled.

The match went out. "Who in hades are you?" a heavy voice rasped.

"Bud Taylor," Jeff said evenly. "Sherm sent me with a message."

The man above lent a hand to pull the climber over the edge. Looking at the iron-gray hair, the scarred cheek, the shifty eyes, Jeff remembered where he had seen that face before. It had been in a sheriff's office in Texas, on a photograph beneath which had been written the caption, "Clint Doke, Wanted for the robbery of the Texas and Southern Flyer."

A fraction of a second later the light of recognition began to dawn on the hairy face of the outlaw. He had seen this man once in San Antonio, had had him pointed out as the famous man-hunter, Jefferson Gray.

Doke opened his mouth to let out a cry. Already Gray's fist was traveling in a powerful short-arm jolt toward the drooping chin. The cry materialized as a strangled groan, and the outlaw pitched down as if he had been hit with the back of an axe.

Jeff did not dare to leave him to recover in a minute or two. He pistol-whipped the fallen man across the temple. His gun he kept for immediate use.

Someone called, "Come here, Clint."

Jeff stepped behind a boulder. He could see three men grouped together against the skyline. With Doke's gun he fired three times rapidly above their heads.

One of the men gave a yell of consternation. He started to run. Another fired in the direction of the marshal. Jeff pumped lead at him.

"Let's get out, Mile High," the third man shouted shrilly. "We're being bushwhacked."

It might be true. Mile High did not wait to find out. In another moment it might be too late to escape. He flung one last defiant shout and followed his companions into the darkness.

Jeff started to descend the rimrock. It was time for him to get back to Ransom. As soon as Morg Norris learned of the fiasco above, he would rush the cabin. At the foot of the rimrock Jeff broke into a jog-trot, reckless of being seen by the watcher at the back.

Abruptly he stopped. Four or five figures came into the open, as if from the creek bed, and ran toward the cabin. He heard shouting, but could not make out the words. There was the crack of a gun. The figures vanished into the lightly. "They're beginning to close in on us. I better discourage that."

He took aim at a dodging figure and fired.

"Get him?" asked Ransom, scraping the dirt out of the hole he had dug.

"No. Some of them are moving up the hill. Going to take us in the rear, I reckon."

The rifle of the blacksmith boomed. Hank gave a yell. "One of 'em won't take us in front or rear. He's down."

A bullet tore through the window and the plank with which Jeff had shuttered it. It broke a glass in the cupboard. The defenders could hear others showering dirt from the adobe wall.

Ransom dragged his wounded leg across the room to his loophole in the rear.

"Where did those fellows go?" he asked after a time. "No sign of them back here."

"That's funny. They headed toward the rimrock. Four or five of them. Must be figuring to work back of us, don't you reckon?"

"Love of Moses!" the old soldier cried. "They're going to crash boulders down on us."

The marshal knew at once that Ransom was right. The cabin lay in the path of an old slide. At the edge of the rimrock, a hundred feet above them, lay hundreds of loose boulders large and small. A half ton of rock, hurtling down that precipitous slope, would crash through the soft adobe wall as if it were paper.

"I've got to stop that, Hank," the younger man said. "The firing down here is a bluff to keep our minds busy. They won't charge the cabin till those above have smashed it. I'm going up to stop their game if you don't mind sticking it out here alone."

"They'll pick you off before you've gone a dozen yards, boy," the blacksmith told him.

"Maybe not. The moon is under a cloud now. For one thing they won't be expecting me up there."

"They must have someone watching the back door."

"Not near enough to see in this darkness. See you later, old-timer." Jeff tore down the planking with which he had reinforced the back door.

Ransom said "Sure," and did not believe that either of them would be alive an hour from then.

"Bolt the door after me. I may come back on the jump. Be ready to let me in pronto." The marshal opened the door and slipped out.

Clouds were scudding across the sky. Jeff lay behind a woodpile, eyes and ears alert. Someone must have been sent to make sure the house. From inside it came the crash of revolvers.

Jeff Gray's heart died within him. He knew that Ransom had been killed. The old soldier had come to his death after he had apparently deserted him. If he had stayed in the cabin, they might have driven back the attack. In any case he could have gone down fighting with his friend.

Sick with despair, Jeff turned to the left, reached the foot of the slope, and dropped down into the creek. He could neither see nor hear anybody. Through the brush he made a circuit and reached the cottonwood grove. Occasionally he could hear the spitting of guns.

The best thing he could do was to get down to the Alamo corral and force Reynolds at the point of a gun to lend him a horse. If possible, he must ride back to the L. C. and get the reinforcements Lee Chiswick had promised. He knew that Lee could stir up some of the other cattlemen and that a large fighting force could be organized.

That excitement in the village had reached a high point he could see. Many men were in the street, most of them farther uptown in the little business center. He had to wait for a chance to get across the road unobserved. More than once someone appeared just as he was about to start.

He took the street at a run, and swarmed over the same wall he had gone over on the night of his adventure with Frank Chiswick. He passed the blackened site of the stable that had been burned, crossed the creek, and moved down along its bank.

Another burst of gunfire filled the night. Jeff could not understand this, unless the victors were setting off fireworks in celebration of their victory. The officer's jaw set grimly. They had better wait until they had finished the job. He intended to make them pay for what they had done to Hank Ransom, if they did not get him before he could slip out of town.

There were too many people about. As he made a circle around the Presnall boarding-house, three men carrying rifles walked toward him. He did the only thing possible, dodged into the same door he had entered some hours earlier when he had been looking for Curly.

The men stopped to talk for a moment at the door. One of them was coming into the house, Jeff gathered from what he said. Gray went gingerly up the stairway. He heard a crisp "See you later," and knew that the man was coming upstairs too.

Jeff had no time to pick and choose. He whipped open the first door he saw, walked into a room, and closed the door behind him. On the table there was a lighted lamp.

At the window a woman stood, clean-limbed and slender. She turned toward him a haggard face, eyes shadowed and fear-filled. For an instant she looked at him incredulously. Her amazement was no greater than his own. The woman was Ruth Chiswick.

A dressing-gown, open at the throat, was wrapped tightly around her lithe long body. Beneath the edge of it here bare feet peeped out. Jeff was aware, without giving the matter any weight, that Nelly lay asleep in the bed.

"You!" she cried. "I thought—I was afraid."

Her tremulous voice broke, quivering with emotion.

"What are you doing here?" he asked.

"I made Father bring me. He came to help you—after Lou Howard got away."

"Got away?"

meats, but liver is also much richer in this vitamin than muscle tissue. Vitamin B is present in lean meat, especially lean pork, which has a considerably higher content than lamb, mutton or beef.

Meat contains small amounts of extractives. It is partly because one misses their savory flavor that a meal without meat often fails to tempt or satisfy the appetite.

The extractives indirectly aid in the digestion of meat proteins because they stimulate the flow of the digestive juices. Experiments have demonstrated that meat induces a flow of gastric juice in direct proportion to the amount consumed.

This calling forth of great physiological activity of the stomach is one reason why meat is said to be the most satisfying of all foods, and to "stick to the ribs" longest.

In considering the nutritive worth of any food it is necessary not only to analyze its contributions to the diet, but to determine how well its nutrients are utilized by the body. Meat has a high food value because its protein is digested rapidly and thoroughly. Tests show that 97 to 98 per cent of meat protein is digested and absorbed. The length of time meat remains in the stomach will depend upon various factors, such as the amount of fat present, the method of cooking and the degree of mastication. But there is no marked difference in the thoroughness with which the different kinds of meat are digested.

Since it is so completely digested, however, meat supplies little bulk, and it is therefore essential that an abundance of leafy vegetables and fruits should be eaten at the same time.

There has been considerable discussion regarding the place of meat in the child's diet.

There are the same good reasons for using meat in the diet of the child as in the diet of the grown-up. Moreover, the child's protein requirement is greater than that of the adult, in proportion to his body weight.

At the beginning of the second year, many authorities advise that small servings of tender and finely minced beef, chicken, lamb or liver may be given about three times a week. As the child becomes older, he may have meat more often and as his ability to chew increases, he may be given larger pieces.

Many people believe that veal is less completely digested than other meats. But it has been demonstrated that even very young veal digests as rapidly and as completely as beef. It has also been held that red meats are less digestible and, therefore, less desirable than white meats. There is no evidence to support this point of view.

Someone with a gift for concise expression once remarked: "No meat—no man!" His point was well taken. For considering its delicious flavor, essential food values, and ease of preparation, it is easy to agree that THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR MEAT.

Plants of the little country with more varied vegetation than any area of its size in America—a country with about 6,000 varieties of flowering shrubs and trees, including more than 1,000 different kinds of orchids—are described in "Flora of Costa Rica," published by Field Museum Press. No other area of its size in North or Central America has a flora so rich and varied as Costa Rica. In area, the country is about the size of West Virginia, but its flowers and plants are about three times as numerous as those of that state. Few tropical countries anywhere in the world can rival Costa Rica in the variety of its orchids and ferns.

A drought producing the same results as the modern dust bowl of the Middle West may have driven a cultured race of Indians from the region of northern Arizona more than 700 years ago, according to Dr. Ralph L. Beals, instructor of anthropology at the University of California at Los Angeles, says the Los Angeles Times.

The cliff dweller ancestors of the Hopi and Zuni Indian tribes began building their huge communal homes around the year 1250. A southern exposure was apparently as desirable for the home at that time as it is at present, since only huge cliff caves opening to the south were used for building. The cliff home was used only during the winter time, the tribe moving to the valleys for summer.

Suddenly, around the year 1300 the dwellings were abandoned, probably all at the same time, according to Doctor Beals. The time of the evacuation was established by rings on timber used in repairing the buildings.

A drought of about 25 years laid waste the land. Like the present situation in the Midwest, water was scarce and men and animals could not live on the scanty vegetation.

Cornucopia in the bottom of trash piles at the beginning of the drought were very large, while at the end of the period, the ears had become very small, according to Doctor Beals. The people migrated from the district in much the same manner as refugees are leaving the dusty Middle West.

WHAT to EAT and WHY ★

C. Houston Goudiss Interprets the Modern Conception of Meat

Nationally Known Food Authority Explains Why It Rates As a Top-Notch Food.

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York City

AMERICANS spend from one-fourth to one-third of their total food budget for meat. In order to discover whether this expenditure is justified, let us examine the nutritive value of meat, and consider its contribution to the diet.

Almost everybody likes the flavor of meat, from the man who considers that no meal is complete without it, to the child who instinctively eats the meat on his plate before he touches the other foods. The desire for meat is one of the strongest human appetites.

For centuries, man accepted this craving for meat as an indication that it was essential to his well being. But with the advance in civilization, there was an increase in many diseases, and for a period of years, meat was blamed as being a contributing cause to kidney trouble, rheumatism, high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries and gout.

In recent years, there has been a careful investigation of the possible association between meat and disease. In the light of our newer knowledge, the old notions have been discarded. And in many cases, meat now has a place in the treatment of the diseases that it was once believed to cause!

C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

Meat is a protein food of the highest type. It is useful both for repairing the millions of cells that are worn out daily and for building the new tissues that are necessary for growth in childhood. The proportion of protein varies with the kind of meat, and the cut. In beef, lamb and veal, it comprises between 14 and 26 per cent of the edible portion.

The other constituents of meat are fats, water, minerals, extractives, enzymes and pigments.

The amount of fat present is an important factor in determining the fuel value of meat. And the more fat it contains, the less protein will be found in a given unit of weight. The different cuts of pork contain less protein than corresponding cuts of beef and lamb, with the exception of lean ham, lean pork chops and tenderloin.

Meat as a Blood Builder

Both glandular and muscle meats are rich in the blood-building mineral, iron, and meat also contains copper. The glandular organs, particularly liver, have great value in the prevention and treatment of anemia. Pernicious anemia baffled physicians for many years until, in 1926, two noted American scientists discovered that liver contains a principle which stimulates red blood cell formation. This discovery has been ranked with the discovery of insulin as one of the greatest in our times.

Meat also contains a high percentage of phosphorus. It is poor in calcium, however, and this necessary substance must be obtained in adequate amounts from milk, cheese and green leafy vegetables.

The Vitamins of Meat

Lean muscle meats cannot be considered as an important source of any vitamin except G. This vitamin is necessary for the prevention of pellagra, and also helps to prolong the vigorous middle years and to ward off old age. Beef, pork and lamb muscle contain approximately the same amounts of vitamin G, but liver has been found to contain approximately 10 times as much as muscle tissue.
