SHOO YOUR CHICKENS IN THE YARD OR ELSE THEY WILL BE COPPED

The days of "free range" in Slaton are over, according to an order recently passed by the city council. A motion was made by that body that the chicken ordinance be enforced in every portion of the city. The city marshal has been instructed to see that all chickens are kept in the owners' yards and not permitted to roam over their neighbor's garden.

Not only will all stray chickens be taken up by the city marshal and held for ransom, but owners who persist in letting their property perambulate over the city will be haled into court and fined, the order says.

This order was made in order to protect gardens and shrubbery, as there have been numerous complaints that stray chickens have been injuring them in various parts of the city.

CATES SENTENCED TO 14 YEARS ON MURDER CHARGE

Woman Who Married Defendant to Save Testimony Fails to Aid.

Lubbock.—Mrs. Mary Cates will have to wait fourteen years for her honeymoon.

Her husband, Sam Cates, whom she married fifteen minutes before she was called to appear as the prosecution's star witness in his trial for murder, was found guilty of killing Judge Burton of Crosbyton, and sentenced to fourteen years by a jury.

The jury deliberated for eighteen hours. Although stunned by the blow, the newly married couple at once made plans to have their attorneys appeal the case and get bond for Cates pending action of the appeal, which would mean a honeymoon.

Judge Burton was killed in 1920. Cates was charged with the murder and sentenced with 99 years imprisonment at the first trial. The court of appeals ordered the new trial which was started Wednesday.

Mrs. Cates was considered the State's star witness at the first trial. A few minutes before she was called to testify at the second trial she gained admittance to an adjoining room where Cates was being held. They were married by Justice Smith. When she was called to the stand a dramatic scene ensued until she said, "I am Mrs. Cates."

A wife cannot testify against her husband. Her testimony was therefore ruled out. It was believed her action would result in an acquittal for Cates at the time.

Today Mrs. Cates, who is only 22, is leaving the fight for her husband's release on an appeal. She is allowed to see him only when a deputy sheriff accompanies her to the cell. Cates is also twenty-two.

Blair-Wilson Marriage.

An important item that was overlooked last week was the marriage of H. W. Blair and Miss Frances Wilson, both of Southland, at the home of Judge Paul P. Murray, the judge officiating in his usual impressive manner. The Slatonite extends congratulations and best wishes.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

The time of the year is here when sanitary ordinances must be observed and I am directed by the Council to enforce these ordinances. Therefore, in order to give the people an opportunity to meet the requirements of these ordinances I beg to call your attention to them.

All closets within the city limits where in an unsanitary condition must be filled up and new pits dug, with the use of plenty of lime to keep flies from breeding and habitating.

Hog pens within the built-up sections of the town must be removed. Weeds must be cut on vacant lots.

The attention of the business part of town, especially to the closet situation, is called.

You are given until July 10th to prepare for inspection by the marshal, and places found in an unsanitary condition will be reported and complaints filed against the owners.

D. C. Hoffman has been appointed marshal, with instructions to absolutely enforce the sanitary ordinances.

It is the wish of the Council to receive the co-operation of the citizenship in protecting the public health.

The groom in this happy event is a brakeman for the Santa Fe out of Slaton. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Haney. After graduating from the high school she taught in the public schools, but later was an employe of the Slaton Drug Co.

Sunday School Class Entertains.

Last Sunday marked the close of a contest in the Methodist Sunday School between the girls of Mrs. K. C. Scott's class, and the boys of Mr. Shackelford's class, in which the girls were defeated. Last night they entertained the boys at a lawn party at the home of Dr. and Mrs. S. H. Adams. A few invited guests were also present. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

Missionary Society.

We had a very interesting meeting of the society Monday. The topic, "Recreation and Education in the Rural Communities," was discussed by Mesdames Peavy, George and Adams, making us to feel thankful for this universe, our home and the opportunities that are ours in having a part to help improve conditions in our town and community, and for our senses by which we can see the splendor of the morning of a better day dawning. May each one have a heart wide open to all this and save our souls from being so steeped in care or so darkened that we cannot see the needs of the people and that we will be awakened to our sense of duty while time and opportunity is given us. Open the eyes that dimly look for light to see the day star in Christ; open the minds of the people that they may know God that He is above and over all, that He rules and reigns supreme. Lift up the gates and let the King of Glory and the Prince of Peace come in.

FOSTER'S WEATHER BULLETIN.

(Copyrighted)

Washington, June 22.—Near June the northern Rockies and all the northern parts of the continent west of meridian 90 will be covered by a great warm wave moving southward. When west of the great lakes near June 26 the center of this great wave of warm air will turn southeastward and, in a few days, will cover all the cotton States and southern Rockies east of the Mississippi. It will then turn northeastward and by June 29 will cover all the Atlantic States.

A radical weather change will fall behind that great warm wave and nearly all kinds of Summer weather will march over the wide swath made by the previous warm wave. You should have a care about that storm; it looks ugly on my June weather chart, but I regret that I cannot tell you exactly the kind of a storm it will be nor the exact spot where it will strike hardest. I repeatedly told you that the greatest storms of the Summer would strike east of Rockies early in June. That set of storms was so great that three tornadoes resulted. One of these tornadoes was called a cloud burst which caused the immense loss of life and property near Pueblo. The latter was so great that little damage resulted to eastern sections. The coming storm will not be so great but it will be dangerous and somewhere along the wide path of the early June storms.

It is time for our race to war no more and devote the time and money fed to the war god in studying Nature's laws then we could save all these millions of lives now destroyed by the elements, because then we could give positive advice when and where to run to shelter. Watch for those dangerous storms during the week centering on June 28.

Next storm period will occur during week centering on July 5. It is not expected to be so severe as the two great storm periods in June but you should not get careless about it. The storms destroy more lives and property than war; principally because people do not hide from the storms behind breastworks. The warm wave of this July storm will cross meridian 90, west of the great lakes, and its general path eastward will pass near or a little south of the great lakes not far from July 5. I expect the most dangerous storms near that date along that path.

Just now the markets are in a chaotic condition, particularly for grain and cotton. The grain markets are almost wiped out. But do not be discouraged; there is a rift in the clouds and this probably is the darkest hour just before the dawn. A great battle is on between the Chicago board of trade and the farmers. As I see it this is the beginning of the end. Agriculture has sent forth the tones of its liberty bell. Foreseeing this I advised those who could not hold a month or more to sell their grain and cotton. Now I advise all who can to wait on the markets and put their time in on their crops. Everything comes to those who work and wait. Dealers who are friends of my work are advised to go slow or wait till they hear from me. The depression storm is nearly over.

June 25 a hurricane will organize near west coast of Africa will reach Gulf of Mexico about July 1. Particulars in next bulletin.

The Bond Record for Slaton's $35,000 waterworks system and $55,000 sewer system was prepared by Hon. R. A. Work will start as soon as possible after the bonds are approved and sold. Several engineers are planning to make bids to the City Council to do the work of supervising the construction.

FOSTER'S WEATHER BULLETIN.

Washington, June 30.—July 5, an important storm will have come into telegraphic sight west of the great lakes, where it is expected to cross meridian 90 on that date. This will be the opening storm of July crop-weather which promises well for corn but threatens the small grain harvests. Second of these storms will cross meridian 90 near 16 and third near 23. These triplets will have much to do with the small grain crops of 1921 as they are coming during the harvest times of the Winter wheat sections east of Rockies. These storms will be of a nature calculated to produce hail, hurricanes, tornadoes, cloudbursts. The average time for these storms to pass from meridian 90 to Atlantic coast is near three days; from this the reader may estimate the dates when each of these storms will reach any vicinity on the continent. In some places oats will be in bloom and easily damaged by severe weather. I am expecting the most dangerous dates to be near July 5, 16 and 23. Near these dates you should watch for the thunder heads, the dark and angry clouds and the zig-zag lightning.
 Last Bulletin gave the wrong date for the expected hurricane on the west coast of Africa. July 5 is the date. That hurricane will move westward but it is very difficult to say how rapidly it will move. The best evidence I have is the exceedingly cool weather that appears on my chart for the upper Mississippi and Red River of the North valleys for near July 10, indicating that the hurricane will be on the Gulf of Mexico at that time. The greatest force of the storms on the Earth is estimated for July 16. It is only a guess as to where that hurricane will be at that time and I would guess that it will be in vicinity of Cuba on July 13 and the Bahamas on 16. If I could only give more time to the study of these problems great benefit to our race might be derived. Great earthquakes, tornadoes, cloudbursts, hurricanes are possible at those times, but not all of them; a great earthquake or a great tornado would kill the hurricane. Great electro-magnetic force accumulates in the Earth, as a magnet; that force must pass on to the Sun and it may be through a tornado, a hurricane, or an earthquake, but one of these is sufficient to relieve the force. South Dakota has found it out; found the method by which to give relief to the terribly depressed financial condition of agriculture. Great hopes had rested in the splendid new banking law enacted under the last national administration but the Federal Reserve Board ruined that hope and never more will any confidence be placed in that banking law as a financial relief to agriculture. Several states took up the question and South Dakota has made a success of it. The state loans the money to farmers after selling state bonds to raise the money. It works and is rapidly giving relief. The state will not demand that the farmers pay the mortgage next harvest time. One addition seems necessary. The national government should use its more than three billions of gold now idle in the treasury as a base for loaning money to the states. This would prevent the profiteers from accumulating the state bonds. Bankers are paying three per cent to depositors. The national government could loan to the states at three and a half and the states to the farmers at four. Real wealth of the country would be benefited but capitalism would fight this.

EULOGY ON THE DOG.

The "Eulogy on the Dog," one of the most famous speeches ever made by the late Senator George G. Vest of Missouri, was at the trial of a man who had wantonly shot a dog belonging to a neighbor. Vest represented the plaintiff, who demanded $200 damages. When Vest finished speaking the jury, after two minutes deliberation, awarded the plaintiff $500. The full text of the speech, which was handed in by Col. L. A. H. Smith, follows:
 "Gentlemen of the Jury: The best friend a man has in this world may turn against him and become his enemy. His son or daughter that he has reared with loving care may prove ungrateful. Those who are nearest and dearest to us, those whom we trust in our happiness and our good name, may become traitors to their faith. The money that a man has he may lose. It flies away from him, perhaps when he needs it most. A man's reputation may be sacrificed in a moment of ill-considered action. The people who are prone to fall on their knees to do us honor when success is with us may be the first to throw the stone of malice when failure settles its cloud upon our heads. The one absolutely unselfish friend that man can have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful nor treacherous, is his dog. Gentlemen of the jury, a man's dog stands by him in prosperity and in poverty, in health and sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground, where the wintry winds blow and the snow drives fiercely, if only he may be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer, he will lick the wounds and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world. He guards the sheep of his pauper master as if he were a prince. When all other friends desert he remains. When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces he is as constant in his love as the sun is in its journey through the heavens. If fortune drives the master forth an outcast in the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him to guard against danger, to fight against his enemies, and when the last scene of all comes, and death takes the master in his embrace and his body is laid away in the cold ground, no matter if all other friends pursue their way, there by his graveside will the noble dog be found, his head between his paws, his eyes sad but open in alert watchfulness, faithful and true even to death."

YOUNG MAN! YOUNG WOMAN!
 HERE IS THE PROOF!

Here are a few extracts from letters of the prominent business men who have had the proof as to the ability of our students.
 "Having employed several of your graduates, I think your institution the best of its kind in this country."
 "Of the seven young men you have sent us, six remain in our service and the other has just joined the Navy. All are making good."
 "As you know, I have had a number of your students in my office. I take this opportunity of saying that every student that I have had from your school shows superiority of training over students that I have had from other schools."
 "We have one of your graduates as stenographer in our legal department at a handsome salary, giving entire satisfaction. The work is extremely difficult, requiring the greatest skill and accuracy. She reads her notes like print. We wish to commend your school for turning out such excellent graduates."
 "If all of your graduates are as proficient as the three young men we have in our office, you are certainly doing a great work for not only the young people, but the business men as well."
 "We have several of your students and all of them understand their business. Your courses are thorough or they could not take hold as they have done for us."
 "If the several graduates of your school that have been in our office are fair samples, I cannot recommend your school too highly."
 Following are the names of some of the many prominent people who have visited our school and their comment. Many of these men have given free lectures to the student body:
 Mrs. Curtis, ex-president Texas W. C. T. U. "Wonderful institution."
 Mr. Edmond C. Peters, International Y. M. C. A. Secretary from Russia. "I wish to compliment your school on magnitude, cleanliness and discipline; the best I have ever seen."
 Mr. Rothwell, Govt. Inspector Vocational Education. "It is wonderful."
 Dr. Bizzell, President Texas A. & M. College. "A great institution."
 Mr. Fogleman of the Chautauqua, from Sheldon School of Salesmanship, Chicago. "A most wonderful business training institution."
 Dr. Hardy, President Baylor College, Belton, Texas. "The most magnificent mixed student body I have ever seen."

NEGRO THREATENS BOY SCOUT; $10 FINE IN COURT

Amarillo.—A negro boy, 18, was fined $10 in corporation court for riding a bicycle on the sidewalk. One of the members of the Junior police made the arrest. According to his story he called at the negro but he did not stop but began to move faster. The Scout followed and in a few minutes the negro returned and noticing the size of the policeman told him that if he dared to turn him in that he would beat him to death. Like a true officer the Scout came to corporation court and reported the case.

The negro was severely lectured by Judge McKinnon who told him that if he or any other negro or any white man as much as laid hands on one of the Junior police that he would regret it as long as he lived. He said that Junior police were officers and that they must be respected and that the city officials will see that they receive the proper respect from all citizens.

WOODPECKER TAPS MAKE
 "BOOZE" PIG RUN LEGS OFF

Dallas, June 30.—East Texas woodpeckers put the everlasting kibosh on the trained booze pig of the local dry enforcement officers, Claude Handley said today. Incidentally, the red-headed birds shattered dreams of unusual conquest in the illicit liquor line.
 Handley said the pig had been raised on corn mash and that he was to be starved a couple of days, then turned loose in the vicinity of a still and the officers would follow him to it. During the training period, Handley knocked on the side of the barn with his knife to let the pig know when his mash was ready.
 This week the pig was taken to the scene of activity. The woodpeckers knocking on the tall pine of East Texas caused the pig to run himself to death, Handley said.

FROM REMOTEST PARTS OF GLOBE

Tanlac Elements Come From Many Lands Far Away From Here.

The ingredients from which the celebrated medicine Tanlac is made, come from remotest sections of the earth, and are transported thousands of miles over land and sea to the great Tanlac Laboratories at Dayton, Ohio, and Walkersville, Canada.

The Alps, Apennines, Pyrenees, Russian Asia, Brazil, West Indies, Rocky Mountains, Asia Minor, Persia, India, Mexico, Columbia and Peru are among the far away points from which the principal properties of this remarkable preparation are obtained.

What is said to be the largest pharmaceutical laboratory in the United States has been completed at Dayton, Ohio, for the manufacture of Tanlac, which, according to recent reports, is now having the largest sale of any medicine of its kind in the world, over 20,000,000 bottles having been sold in six years.

The new plant occupies 60,000 square feet of floor space and has a daily capacity of 50,000 bottles. Uniform quality is guaranteed by a series of careful inspections by expert chemists from the time the roots, herbs, barks and flowers are received in their rough state from all parts of the globe, until their medicinal properties have been extracted by the most approved processes. The finished medicine is then bottled, labeled and shipped out to tens of thousands of druggists throughout the United States and Canada, to supply a demand never before equaled by this or any other medicine.

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Advertisement.

What She Could Do.

The charlady, who had been brought in person from the labor exchange by the harassed master of the house, looked the front doorsteps up and down and declared that her lumbago prevented her from kneeling. Nor would her rheumatics allow her to scrub, and she didn't like washing, anyway.

"Well," said the prospective mistress, "what can you do?"

The charlady considered a moment. "I think," she said, "that I can just about get 'ome comfortable."—Tit-Bits.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription. Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

ST. LOUIS HONORS SCOUTS

St. Louis celebrated the week of April 4 to 9 as Boy Scout week, to the great interest of the community. The mayor of the city issued the following proclamation in connection with the event:

Whereas, The American boy embodies the hope of civilization and progress of our country, our state and our city, as the boy of today is the man of tomorrow, and

Whereas, Every citizen has a responsibility to encourage all efforts that have for their purpose influence and training of boys, so they may develop to the stature of manhood, safe, clean and prepared to undertake their individual parts in the work of the world with an understanding of their obligations as citizens, husbands and fathers; and

Whereas, The president of the Boy Scouts of America, Collin H. Livingstone of Washington, D. C., a man of large affairs, is making a special trip to St. Louis at personal sacrifice to encourage and counsel with the local boy scout organization; and

Whereas, The boy scout movement in this community has been given gratifying impetus during the last two years, resulting in many forward steps such as the purchase and full payment for a wonderful camp site in the Ozarks, a broadening of the scope of the work in St. Louis, participation in the Francis Home for Boy Scouts, and Junior Chamber of Commerce; and

Whereas, The citizens of St. Louis are obligated to the boy scouts for valuable service rendered on numerous occasions, such as the various campaigns during the war, the very efficient handling of the ushering at the Municipal opera, and in fact every public function where their services are needed;

Therefore, As mayor of the city of St. Louis, I hereby proclaim the week of April 4 to 9, 1921, as Boy Scout week, and request the mothers and fathers and all other citizens of St. Louis to give special thought, attention and encouragement to the boy scout activities and organization during that week, as evidence of their love for boys and their genuine appreciation of a movement which has been defined as "a process of making real men out of real boys with a real program," and which leads the boy in early life to do his duty to God and country, to help other people at all times and to keep physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight.

THE FIGHTING SPIRIT.

A statement by an Eagle scout: Many a person has proved himself an utter failure in life because he lacked the pep and the push that compel success.

Why? Simply because he hadn't been brought up to put his shoulder to the wheel. He lacked that great virtue so vitally important, so necessary for a successful career—fighting spirit!

One of the objects of the boy scout organization is to teach self-reliance and persistency; to stick to a proposition till it is accomplished; to use discouragement as an impetus toward that accomplishment. What finer lesson could there be? The boy scout is taught to carry his own load without a murmur, without "pulling a long face" or falling by the wayside and to carry it with a smile. Each and every scout is taught to meet the turning of fate without a flinch.

Though the boy scouts' motto is "Be prepared," we might supplement it with still another: "Don't give up till the whistle blows."

Take the average scout; what is failure to him? He is taught to smile at defeat. He hits in all the harder, more determined than before to attain his goal. He takes pride in this spirit and climbs the hill under his own power, not under the powers and doings of others. He puts full faith in himself and builds his castle on the foundation of persistency. He stands for the square deal, for all that is just in life, and in standing for these principles he stands for what his entire organization represents.

BOY SCOUT FRIEND TO TREES.

Every boy scout is a pledged conservationist. He will not only run the risk of being responsible for a forest fire himself, but he will preach the hows and whys of forest fire prevention wherever he goes. He will not willfully hack or injure trees in any way, and he will interest himself in fighting tree enemies of all sorts like the pine blister and the tent caterpillar. The trees are his friends and he is ready to do them a good turn whenever opportunity offers.

A FEW LITTLE SMILES

OLD HEN'S YARD STICK.

Irene and Helen, two little sisters, went to visit their grandmother in the country. It was their first visit away from the city and they were surprised and delighted at everything. They were especially interested in the chickens and loved to look for the newly-laid eggs.

Their grandmother cautioned the children never to take away the nest egg. Their strife to see which could find the most eggs was great. One morning Irene reached a nest first. Seizing the forbidden egg, she started for the house.

"Oh, grandmother!" shouted Helen, hurrying after her sister. "Irene's got the egg the old hen measures by!"

DODSON KILLING USE OF CALOMEL

Says Drug Is Mercury and Acts Like Dynamite on Your Liver.

Dodson is making a hard fight against calomel in the South. Every druggist has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason, Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it, while Dodson's Liver Tone is perfectly safe and gives better results," said a prominent local druggist. Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist. A large bottle costs but a few cents, and if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, you have only to ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day's work! Take Dodson's Liver Tone instead and feel fine, full of vigor and ambition.—Adv.

Little Too Long.

A bishop was making a gramophone record of his most famous sermon for the benefit of posterity.

It ended: "And then we shall all go to heaven."

At its conclusion, oblivious of the still running machine, the prelate turned to the manager with the words: "I don't think that will be too long, do you?"

Result, when the record was put on for a test hearing: "And then we shall all go to heaven, I don't think."—Tit-Bits.

Spanish Note in Milady's Gowns

Fashion is much maligned. She ever has been reputed to be extremely capricious. Makers of fashions, observes an authority on styles, are obliged to offer their ideas and their wares many times over and in various guises in order to gain favor with a capricious public.

Take, for instance, fringes and ribbons. They have been subtly and cleverly offered in dozens of different ways over a period of two or three years, during which time they have met with but indifferent favor. Now they are shown in the most ostentatious way. Dresses bristle with bunches and cockades of ribbons artistically and inartistically employed. In many instances art is abandoned in the effort to pile on quantities of this trimming. The same is true of fringes.

Perhaps the liking for these modes of trimming so violently evinced at the present time has been of slower growth than appears upon first thought. Tastes are slowly developed in dress as in other things. For a long time artists and designers worked with Spanish effects and slowly the Spanish influences in dress came about. Fringes are distinctly Spanish.

Fringe on Blouses and Dresses.

Attention has been gained for fringe through the vast quantities of it used. It would have to make its appeal in some such way as this, as it does not lend itself to a variety of modes of application as does ribbon.

Gabrielle Chanel, of Paris, is a maker who is a staunch advocate of fringe, and is anything but niggardly in its use. She makes a charming frock of gray crepe de chine—a silk which is still her favorite—and trims the skirt with three rows of wide gray fringe. The front of the bodice supports two narrow rows of matching fringe, and the neck and sleeves are finished with fringe of the same width. The treatment of the back of the bodice is quite different. Here wide fringe is used to give the effect of a deep cape collar made of these twisted silken threads.

Fringes are quite as much in evidence on blouses as on dresses, wraps and hats. An example of a fringe-trimmed blouse in appearance is somewhat complicated, but in reality it is not, being nothing more than a Spanish shawl slightly draped to the figure. To a famous French dressmaker well versed in the art of simple drapery we are indebted for this model.

The plain crepe de chine wrap trimmed with fringe or ribbon this year vies with the summer furs of other seasons. It is a welcome change and, it must be admitted, much more sensible for a midsummer day than a wrap or scarf of fur, which, for some unexplainable reason, has held a place not only in the sun of fashion but in the hot, blazing sun of summer for a longer time than there was any reason for its so doing.

Very lovely are the fringe-trimmed hats. Taffeta or crepe de chine models are made with softly-draped rather high crowns and drooping brims, the latter supporting irregular tiers of fringe. There is a simple elegance to such a hat which could never be attained in a ribbon-trimmed model.

Reams have been written on ribbons, and from all indications much perfectly good white paper has yet to be consumed before the subject is exhausted. Even ribbon manufacturers themselves thought last year that they were at the height of their power as persons who made one of the real essential things required by the modern fashionable dressmaker and the well-dressed woman. Great must be their astonishment this spring at the avalanche of orders that pour into their offices daily.

Ribbon on Wraps and Dresses.

Ribbons are something to be reckoned with when one woman will wear fifty or sixty yards of it on her simple black crepe de chine dress. At the Ritz at luncheon hour on one of these balmy spring days just before the exodus to the country, one may see several hundred yards of black ribbon in the dining room and cloak room, for wraps are just as lavishly adorned with it as dresses.

How long this craze for black clothes will last is impossible to say. The simple black dress is extremely smart, but so much of this somber hue is likely to pall in a short time. Not only will we become tired of seeing every woman walking about like a smartly-dressed widow, but we will feel the need of the cheer of bright colors in our clothes.

American women have accorded considerable favor to the ribbon-trimmed French model gown of the ever-present black crepe de chine. The ribbon is moire. Innumerable little tufts are caught to the bottom of the dress to form a wide band.

Ribbons in Vivacious Effects.

This frock is part of a very versatile costume, for both a cape and coat have been made to accompany it. The cape is perfectly straight, falling from a shallow yoke with a rather narrow standing collar, and the bottom of the wrap is trimmed exactly like the dress.

The coat is made like a chemise dress. It fastens down the front slightly to one side and is girdled with a string belt which draws it in rather snugly to the figure. It, too, has the fantastic ribbon trimming at the bottom and also on the long, flowing sleeves.

There are innumerable ways of applying ribbons, but space permits mention of only the unusual ones. All of the old-time methods are retained and to them are added effects that are unusual almost to the point of being erratic. It would seem that to be in keeping with their history—and they have a history—that ribbons should trail, and a way of permitting them to run true to form, as it were, is through the use of fluted streamers or ribbon panels with loosely-pressed pleats in accordion effect.

This treatment is applied to a great many evening dresses of the similitar type which, in contrast to the black frocks, are of bright-colored crepe de chine. The skirt of such a frock may carry many fluted panels of fallie ribbon all hanging several inches below the hem of the dress itself. If the waist has any trimming at all it may take the form of wheels made of the fluted ribbon.

Bouquets of ribbon flowers are not unusual, but there is rather a novel way of placing them over a tiny hollow wire frame to make a corsage ornament from which fall many long ribbon streamers of various lengths. These frames are like the shade of a small reading lamp and are covered with tiny blossoms and buds compactly conventional, but of exquisite workmanship. The most beautiful hues are introduced in these flowers. They are placed at the waistline of the frock just as one would wear a corsage bouquet. The clusters of ribbons which fall from the bouquet are of all lengths.

High collars and lacy jabots will be worn with severely cut tweed suits.

CHOOSING COAT FOR CHILD

Taffeta ideal material for Late Spring or Summer Wrap for the Little Girl.

Taffeta is the ideal material for a late spring or summer coat for a little girl of one to three years, and quite the thing to do is to have a hat or bonnet to match the coat. A little wrap made of rose-colored taffeta is lined with white washable silk, and a very thin inner lining may be used if desired. The collar and sleeves are finished with ruffles, and the set-in pockets are framed in ruffles. The bonnet is fashioned of fine white leghorn or straw braid, and taffeta ruffles form the brim.

For the baby boy, when a silk coat is desired, faille is usually selected and very tailored manish lines followed in cutting and fashioning it. Ruffles are taboo for the baby boy. He may have his coat trimmed with cording or stitching, and his little dresses with fine tucks and perhaps lace or embroidery insertion.

The child up to two years of age is usually clothed entirely in white except for the coat and cap or bonnet, which may be any color desired. Certainly dark-colored dresses or rompers for a baby of two or under would be most unattractive. Very light colors sell just as easily as white, so why not have white and be done with it?

Hand-Printed Suits.

A New York designer is offering suits and gowns embellished with what appears to be hand painting, but which is in reality a process of hand printing. This makes possible the working of any design in any color on woven fabric. The designer expects it to replace embroidery to a large extent.

Chintz Good.

Chintz stands out as a fabric medium for children's frocks. The lovely blending of colors makes other ornamentation unnecessary.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

FINAL TRIUMPH FOR MAURICE

Small Boy Endured Much, but in the End He Made Strong Point Over Rivals.

Ten-year-old Maurice was in love with the pretty new teacher and did everything in his power to get ahead of the others in winning her affection. Monday morning he was distinctly out of humor when he walked John and gave the teacher a ticket. "It's to the entertainment at our church," he said proudly. "I bought this ticket for you so that you could come and hear me sing."

A few days later he was more provoked when he came Helen bearing a ticket. "It's to our dancing-class party. I want you to come and see me dance," she smiled.

He scowled and scowled. But later in the week his turn came to smile above all the rest. He, too, bore a ticket to teacher, but his speech was different. "Here's a ticket for you, Miss G.," he smiled. "It's to the Masons' supper, and I want you to come and eat with me, not watch me eat."

MERELY CHANGE THEIR TUNE

Members of Great and Noble Army of Croakers Are Never Permanently Discouraged.

Orville Wright was talking at a Dayton dinner about the new Caproni bi-plane which carries 100 passengers. "What will the scientists say now?" he laughed. "When my brother and I were trying to fly the scientists proved time after time that flight was impossible to man. Afterward, when flying was actually accomplished, they proved that airplanes would never be more than dangerous toys—big, stable ones couldn't be made—they'd be too heavy to rise."

"Those scientists were like the old lady who was taken to see the first trolley car to start in her village. She looked at the car and sniffed: "It'll never go."

"But the car did go. It went beautifully. Then the old lady, staring after it shrieked: "It'll never stop!"

HOGVILLE LOCALS.

Dan Hocks has had to close down his blacksmith shop during the past few hot days, as he needed all the air that was stirring. There seemed to be no surplus for his bellows.

Miss Rosy Moseley has made herself two inches taller by placing some upright chicken feathers in her hat.

Zero Peck has had to give up his position at the postoffice as he was in the corner where the stove sets when taken down in hot weather.

Dag Smith witnessed a pistol fight at Bear Ford Saturday evening. Not having his pistol with him he remained neutral throughout.

Isaac Helwanger has made his will and has had the Hogville coroner to place his official seal on it. The will provides that if his wife marries after he dies the home place on Musket Ridge goes to her second husband.

It is believed that if some good financial opposition could be found, the Assistant Constable could be defeated this time. He has always managed to get a big vote on the very cheapest possible plan, and male voters are beginning to grow tired of this. It has been decided by the men here that the ladies will not be allowed to vote, and they feel that in case any financial assistance should be offered for votes they would deliver the vote too cheap, owing to their lack of experience in the election business.

Prof. Gape Allsop, who began taking a census of the stars last week lost out on his count and will have to start all over again.

Alexander Barlow got up off the grass under the shade tree in his yard yesterday to let a snake pass.

Clab Hancock's watch has just undergone extensive repairs, and he is now prepared to tell about what time it is at all hours of the day and night.

The Old Miser has been saving up the potatoes that are stuck on the spout of his oil can by Bub Smothers, the grocer, and will soon have enough for a mess.

Dan Hocks wishes to let his many customers understand that he makes a specialty of shaving necks when working in the barber shop department of his establishment. He has been for some time working on a patent barber chair in which the customer can easily turn over in when being shaved.

Dag Smith's roan cow has strayed. The last seen of her she was entering the high weeds near the postoffice, and he fears he will not be able to find her until we have a killing frost and the weeds die.

Dag Smith is making all necessary arrangements for the building of himself a house near the moonshine still on Petunia Ridge. To determine the size house to build he took his family and stood them on the site where he expects to build and then measured around the group.

Alexander Moseley's hound dog followed him to church last Sunday and went inside, but got up and left before the sermon was over.

The Hogville Fiddling Bnad has been practicing every night for the past several weeks for the magic lantern show at the Wild Rose school house in the near future. Bill Helwanger, who resides near the scene of the disturbance, has had to drink a quart of "white mule" each night to drown the noise.

$400,000,000 To Be Lopped Off Pay Roll

Chicago, June 27.—Employees on virtually every railroad in the country will feel the 12 per cent cut in wages, ordered by the United States railroad labor board to take effect July 1, following a supplemental decision today extending the order to nearly 100 additional roads.

The wage slash authorized by the board on June 1 to take effect Friday, July 1, originally contemplated 104 railroads, although not all employees were affected on all roads. Today's addendum to that decision included 210 roads, many of which were parties to the original decision but which returned to ask reductions for classes of their employees not covered in the first order.

The reductions authorized today were identical with those of the original order, the only change being the addition of rates for marine workers in certain harbors and of a section covering restaurant and dining car employees, whose wages were ordered reduced by 60 per cent of all increases received since February 19, 1920.

With the exception of a few subsidiary lines, whose parent owners filed petitions for reductions, every railroad in the country is affected. Occasion number two, the labor board's six hundred million dollar award of July, 1920, has now been authorized to reduce wages an average of 12 per cent. Most of them have received such permission for all classes of employees. In addition nearly two score other roads which voluntarily applied the increased scale fixed by the board in 1920 also have received authorization to make a similar cut.

The labor board recently estimated that its 12 per cent reduction would lop off approximately four hundred million from the nation's railroad wage bill, if applied to all employees. Comparatively few roads now have a full quota of employees, but restoration of normal conditions and application of the board's cut to all employees of the larger roads will make the four hundred million dollar reduction a reality.

Overtime Pro Rata Rate.

Chicago, June 28.—Railway employees of the country will be paid for all overtime work in excess of eight hours daily at the pro rata rate instead of receiving time and one-half, under a temporary decision of the United States Railroad Labor Board today.

The order effective July 1, applies to all employees except those who have reached an agreement with the roads regarding payment for overtime, or those, mostly in the South, who were being paid time and one-half after eight hours before federal control of the road.

The ruling was made pending the settlement of numerous disputes now before the board and if it is later decided that the punitive rate for overtime is justified, the roads will be directed to pay back to their employees the amount to be deducted after July 1 under the present decision.

Today's decision also provides for the continuation "of rules established by or under the authority of the United States Railroad Administration until such time as such rules are considered and decided upon by the board," with the further exception of rules agreed upon at individual conferences which are to become effective July 1.

By its order of April 14, which, in effect, abrogated the national agreements the railways were given until July 1 to draw up new agreements on each individual road, the new rules to be negotiated between each road and its own employees. In case of disagreement over any rules, the dispute was ordered remanded to the labor board for settlement. The flood of disagreements which has poured into the board this week and the delay in hearing them brought up the prospect that many roads would be left without any working agreements after July 1. The old rules were therefore continued temporarily to avoid further complication of the controversy.

Result of Shopmen's Vote not Certain.

Chicago, June 28.—Reports of an overwhelming vote for rejection of an average of 8 per cent reduction recently ordered for all railroad shop employees by the United States railroad labor board, were branded as misleading and unreliable today by B. M. Jewell, head of the shop crafts organization.

Only about two-thirds of the vote has been counted, according to Mr. Jewell, who added that "a few votes might swing it either way."

"The ballots are coming in by every mail and we have not begun to complete the tabulation. The result at this time is unknown," Mr. Jewell said.

Unofficial compilation of votes from various locals which announced the results of their ballots to show approximately 355,000 against the proposed reduction and 48,000 in favor of it. There are approximately 600,000 shop employees in the country. Mr. Jewell declared that no figures had been given out from his office.

A meeting here of the general chairmen of the shop crafts had been called for July 1. The completed report on the vote may be withheld until that date.

All other unions, including the clerks, telegraphers, switchmen and maintenance of way employees and the four engine and train service brotherhoods will also meet here on the same date to canvass the situation and determine further action.

"Oh Boy! Aint this the life!!"

I LIKE my job.
BUT DAYS do come.
WHEN SKIES are blue,

THE PAPERS on my desk.
AND THEN I think.
WHAT I would do.
IF I were boss.
I'D OPEN shop.
AT TWELVE o'clock.
AND CLOSE at one.
WITH ONE hour off.
FOR LUNCH, and I.
WOULD GET old Sam,
TO RUN me out.
IN HIS big six.
AND DROP me off.
UNDER A greenwood tree.
BESIDE A babbling brook.
AND THERE I'd lie.

AND EVERY once.
IN A while.
ROLL OVER.
OR MAYBE sit and think.
BUT MOST likely.
JUST SIT.
AND EVERY once.
IN A while I'd light.

I GUESS that wouldn't.

$250,000 FIRE WIPES OUT SAN ANGELO PROPERTY

Ballinger, June 28.—Fire at San Angelo at 2 o'clock this afternoon caused a loss estimated at a quarter of a million dollars, according to brief telegraphic dispatches here. The blaze started by the explosion of oil tanks at the Pierce Oil Corporation's station and scattered to adjoining property. At 3:30 it was reported the flames were under control.

It was reported the San Angelo telegraph office was among the destroyed property. Five oil tanks, the Pierce company's office building, several freight cars, warehouses and wholesale business establishments were burned, it was said. The heaviest loss was to the Martin-Glover company, a wholesale grocery concern—$100,000, according to reports.

"Got There Just the Same."

Peggy Joyce was a country girl. Her father was a modest barber in a little town in Virginia. Out of the woods came Peggy. She conquered the hearts of three multi-millionaires, a lumber king, two princes, a lord, a duke, an earl and a newspaper man and is running Mrs. Stillman a close race for first place in the newspapers as the heroine of one of the most sensational divorce suits of the hour. Mrs. Stillman was born with a golden spoon in her mouth; Peggy was born within speaking distance of a razor strop, but she "got there just the same."—Ft. Worth Record.

Poor Peggy! It's possible that had her father divided the strop more equally between Peggy and his razor her life might have been more useful and not quite so sensational.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOL APPROPRIATION.

The Governor wants the Legislature to provide means of raising additional revenues and appropriating same in aid of the public schools. The Governor vetoed the bill for this purpose last winter on the ground that there was not available revenues. A storm of protest went up, which is no doubt responsible for the Governor's second recommendation to the coming session of the Legislature. A tax of one to two cents a gallon on gasoline will probably be the source of the additional revenue.

From the standpoint of West Texas, this recommendation should not be a popular one under existing conditions. At present, nearly every West Texas county pays more taxes into the State school fund than it receives back, while most East Texas counties receive back from the State fund more school money than they pay in state taxes of every kind. Therefore, when West Texas pays a dollar into these appropriations, she receives back an average of about sixty cents, and we are coming to the conclusion that we had just better vote our own local taxes and keep all we vote instead of donating from twenty to forty percent to East Texas. The Slatonite is not encouraging or preaching sectionalism, but we do favor a square deal for West Texas in taxation, and we are not over enthusiastic about the Governor's school appropriation proposal; yet, we are second to no one in Texas in support of common school education.

WAGES AND FREIGHT RATES.

The United States Railroad Labor Board has ordered a reduction of 12 per cent in the wages of employees of nearly every railroad in the country, effective today, July 1. The Slatonite does not believe that the wages of these employees should be cut unless the roads are willing to grant a reduction in freight and passenger rates, which the public as a whole is compelled to pay.

However, the greatest injustice that we see to the railroad employees is the order of the labor board cutting the pay of overtime to the pro rata rate. This order simply gives the roads the power to lengthen the working hours of the men at the same rate of pay and does not distribute the work equally among employees.

HEARD AROUND TOWN.

When a boy gets to be
 Five or six years old
 He begins to resemble
 In more ways than one
 A human question mark.
 And the other day
 Judge and Mrs. R. A. Baldwin
 Were conversing
 About something or other
 And the word "relic"
 Was brought up in the talk
 And right away
 Little "Zeke" wanted to know
 What the word meant.
 And the Judge assumed
 His most learned expression
 And explained to his son
 That a relic was something
 That was handed down
 From father to son.
 And little "Zeke" was satisfied
 With the explanation
 And filed it
 In the back of his mind
 For future use.
 And yesterday morning
 "Zeke" was out playing
 With some of the other boys
 In his block
 And he came home for lunch
 And during one course
 Of the meal
 He made the remark
 That one of the boys
 Was out playing
 In a pair of relics.
 And Judge and Mrs. Baldwin
 Stopped eating
 And wanted to know
 What he meant.
 And little "Zeke"
 Looked down upon them
 From the plane
 Of superior knowledge
 And loftily explained
 That the boy in question
 Was out playing
 In a pair of pants
 That had been made over
 From another pair
 Which his father had worn
 Some time before.
 And Judge and Mrs. Baldwin
 Looked at each other
 For a moment
 And then everybody joined in
 And finished their meal
 And nothing more was said.

Mrs. Ed Tonn Entertains.
 Mrs. Ed Tonn was hostess Saturday afternoon to the Civic and Culture Club, this being the social meeting for the month of June. The home which has but recently been remodeled, was made even more attractive by the use of many pretty flowers. Soon after their arrival, the guests were refreshed with fruit punch served by the hostess. The game of "42" was the entertainment for the afternoon. Delicious almond cream and cake was served. Beside the club members present, invited guests were Mesdames Brannon, Murray, Hood, Levey, Paek, Rowley, and Walters. Upon their departure the guests declared Mrs. Tonn a most charming hostess.

R. J. Murray, Jr. Give Birthday Party.
 Little R. J. Murray celebrated his third birthday Tuesday afternoon with a party for nineteen of his little friends. The pretty home of Mayor and Mrs. R. J. Murray was made lively by these little tots while they enjoyed games in the yard and on the porch. R. J. was the recipient of many toys and gifts. Mrs. Murray delighted the children with a pretty birthday cake, decorated with candles symbolic of the occasion. The children were also served with fancy cookies and ice cream cones. The little tots departed at 6 o'clock wishing R. J. many happy returns of the day.

Missionary Society.
 We had a very interesting Bible study Monday led by Mrs. W. H. Proctor. Many helpful lessons were brought to us in the study of the eleventh, twelfth and thirteenth chapters of St. Mark. Faith was the keynote. Oh! that we might have more, for Jesus said: "What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that receive them, and ye shall have them." Next Monday is the regular business and social meeting. However, after a short business session we will spend the remainder of the hour in prayer service.

"E. E." Club Organized.
 Monday afternoon eight girls met at the home of Miss Dorothy Levey and organized themselves into the "E. E." Club. Dorothy Levey was elected secretary-treasurer, and Faye Tucker reporter. Every Tuesday was decided upon as the day for meeting. The club will meet next week with Miss Pauline Lokey. After the business session was completed the members were served with delicious punch and cake.

ROBERTSON'S

The Voice of the Pack

By EDISON MARSHALL

SYNOPSIS.

Warned by his physician that he has not more than six months to live, Failing sits despondently on a park bench, wondering where he should spend those six months. A friendly squirrel practically decides the matter for him. His blood is pioneer blood, and he decides to end his days in the forests of Oregon. Memories of his grandfather and a deep love for all things of the wild help him in reaching a decision. In a large southern Oregon city he meets people who had known and loved his grandfather, a famous frontiersman. He makes his home with Silas Lennox, a typical westerner. The only other members of the household are Lennox's son, "Bill," and daughter, "Snowbird." Their abode is many miles from "civilization," in the Umpqua divide, and there Failing plans to live out the short span of life which he has been told is his. His extreme weakness in the face of even a slight exertion convinces him that the doctor had made a correct diagnosis of his case.

CHAPTER II—Continued.

Yes, Steele knew Bill. Bill weighed two hundred pounds, and he would choose the biggest of the steers he drove down to the lower levels in the winter and, twisting its horns, would make it lay over on its side. Besides, both of the men assumed that Dan must be only in the first stages of his malady.

And even as the men talked, the train that bore Dan Failing to the home of his ancestors was entering for the first time the dark forests of pine and fir that make the eternal background of the Northwest. He was wholly unable to understand the strange feeling of familiarity that he had with them, a sensation that in his dreams he had known them always, and that he must never go out of the range of them again.

Dan didn't see his host at first. For the first instant he was entirely engrossed by a surging sense of disappointment—a feeling that he had been tricked and had only come to another city after all. He got down onto the gravel of the station yard, and out on the gray street pavement he heard the clang of a trolley car. Many automobiles were parked just beside the station, some of them foreign cars of expensive makes, such as he supposed would be wholly unknown on the frontier. A man in golf clothes brushed his shoulder.

Dan looked up to the hills, and he felt better. He couldn't see them plainly. The faint smoke of a distant forest fire half obscured them. Yet he saw fold on fold of ridges of a rather peculiar blue in color, and even his untrained eyes could see that they were clothed in forests of evergreen. Over the heads of the green hills Dan could see a few great peaks; McLaughlin, even and regular as a painted mountain; Vagner, with queer white gashes where the snow still lay in its ravines, and to the southeast the misty range of snow-covered hills that were the Slickeyous. He felt decidedly better. And when he saw old

Silas Lennox waiting patiently beside the station, he felt he had come to the right place.

It would be interesting to explain why Dan at once recognized the older man for the breed he was. Silas Lennox was not dressed in a way that would distinguish him. It was true that he wore a flannel shirt, riding trousers and rather heavy, leathern boots. But sportsmen all over the face of the earth wear this costume at sundry times. Mountain men have a peculiar stride by which experienced persons can occasionally recognize them; but Silas Lennox was standing still when Dan got his first glimpse of him. The case resolves itself into a simple matter of the things that could be read in Lennox's face.

Dan disbelieved wholly in a book that told how to read characters at sight. Yet at the first glance of the lean, bronzed face his heart gave a curious little bound. A pair of gray eyes met his—two fine black points in a rather hard gray iris. They didn't look past him, or at either side of him, or at his chin or his forehead. They looked right at his own eyes. The skin around the eyes was burned brown by the sun, and the flesh was so lean that the cheekbones showed plainly. The mouth was straight; but yet it was neither savage nor cruel. It was simply determined.

Lennox came up with a light, silent tread and extended his hand. "You're Dan Failing's grandson, aren't you?" he asked. "I'm Silas Lennox, who used to know him when he lived on the Divide. You are coming to spend the summer and fall on my ranch."

The immediate result of these words, besides relief, was to set Dan wondering how the old mountaineer had recognized him. He wondered if he had any physical resemblance to his grandfather. But this hope was shot to earth at once. His telegram had explained about his malady, and of course the mountaineer had picked him out simply because he had the mark of the disease on his face. As he shook hands, he tried his best to read the mountaineer's expression. It was all too plain: an undeniable look of disappointment.

The truth was that even in spite of all the Chamber of Commerce head had told him, Lennox had still hoped to find some image of the elder Dan Failing in the face and body of his grandson. Because of the thick glasses, Lennox could not see the young man's eyes; but he didn't think it likely they were at all like the eyes with which the elder Failing saw his way through the wilderness at night. Of course he was tall, just as the famous frontiersman had been, but while the elder weighed one hundred and ninety pounds, bone and muscle, this man did not touch one hundred and thirty. Evidently the years had brought degeneracy to the Failing clan. Lennox was desolated by the thought.

He helped Dan with his bag to a little wiry automobile that waited beside the station. They got into the two front seats, and a moment later were starting up the long, curved road that led to the Divide.

During the hour that they were crossing over the foothills, on the way to the big timber, Silas Lennox talked a great deal about the frontiersman that had been Dan's grandfather. A mountain man does not use profuse adjectives. He talks very simply and very straight, and often there are long silences between his sentences. Yet he conveys his ideas with entire clearness.

Dan realized at once that if he could be, in Lennox's eyes, one-fifth of the man his grandfather had been, he would never have to fear again the look of disappointment with which his host had greeted him at the station. But instead of reaching that high place, he had only—death. He knew what his destiny was in these quiet hills. And it was true that he began to have secret regrets that he had come. But it wasn't that he was disappointed in the land that was opening up before him. It fulfilled every promise. His sole reason for regrets lay in the fact that now the whole mountain world would know of the decay that had come upon his people. Perhaps it would have been better to have left them to their traditions.

He had never dreamed that the fame of his grandfather had spread so far. For the first ten miles Dan listened to stories—legends of a cold nerve that simply could not be shaken; of a powerful, tireless physique; of moral and physical strength that was seemingly without limit. Then, as the foothills began to give way to the higher ridges, and the shadow of the deeper forests fell upon the narrow, brown road, there began to be long gaps in the talk. And soon they rode in utter silence, evidently both of them absorbed in their own thoughts.

Dan did not feel oppressed at all. He merely seemed to fall into the spirit of the woods, and no words came to his lips. Every mile was an added delight to him. Not even wine could have brought a brighter sparkle to his eyes. He had begun to experience a vague sort of excitement, an emotion that was almost kin to exultation, over the constant stir and movement of the forest life. Once, as they stopped the car to refill the radiator from a mountain stream, Lennox looked at him with sudden curiosity. "You are getting a thrill out of this, aren't you?" he asked wonderingly.

It was a curious tone. Perhaps it was a hopeful tone, too. He spoke as if he hardly understood.

"A thrill!" Dan echoed. He spoke as a man speaks in the presence of some great wonder. "Good Heavens, I never saw anything like it in my life."

"In this very stream," the mountaineer told him joyously, "you may occasionally catch trout that weigh three pounds."

But as he got back into the car the look of interest died out of Lennox's eyes. Of course any man would be somewhat excited by his first glimpse of the wilderness. It was not that he had inherited any of the traits of his grandfather. It was absurd to hope that he had. And he would soon get tired of the silences and want to go back to his cities. He told his thought—that it would all soon grow old to him; and Dan turned almost in anger.

"You don't know," he said. "I didn't know myself, how I would feel about it. I'm never going to leave the hills again."

"You don't mean that?"

"But I do." He tried to speak further, but he coughed instead. "But I couldn't if I wanted to. That cough tells you why, I guess."

"You mean to say—" Silas Lennox turned in amazement. "You mean that you're a—goner? That you've given up hope of recovering?"

"That's the impression I meant to convey. I've got a little over four months—though I don't see that I'm any weaker than I was when the doctor said I had six months. Those four will take me all through the fall and the early winter. And I hope, you won't feel that you've been imposed upon—to have a dying man on your hands."

"It isn't that." Silas Lennox threw his car into gear and started up the long grade. And he drove clear to the top of it and into another glen before he spoke again. Then he pointed to what looked to Dan like a brown streak that melted into the thick brush. "That was a deer," he said slowly. "Just a glimpse, but your grandfather could have got him between the eyes. Most like as not, though, he'd have let him go. He never killed except when he needed meat. But that—as you say—ain't the impression I'm trying to convey."

He seemed to be groping for words. "What is it, Mr. Lennox?" Dan asked.

"Instead of being sorry, I'm mighty glad you've come," Lennox told him. "It's not that I expect you to be like your grandfather. You haven't had his chance. But it's always the way of true men, the world over, to come back to their own kind to die. That deer we just saw—he's your people, and so are all these ranchers that grab their lives out of the forests—they are your people, too. And you couldn't have pleased the old man's old friends any better, or done more for his memory, than to come back to his own land for your last days."

The words were strange, yet Dan intuitively understood. It was as if a prodigal son had returned at last, and although his birthright was squandered and he came only to die, the people of his home would give him kindness and forgiveness, even though they could not give him their respect

CHAPTER III.

The Lennox home was a typical mountain ranch-house—square, solid, comforting in storm and wind. Bill was out to the gate when the car drove up. He was a son of his father, a strong man in body and personality. He too had heard of the elder Failing, and he opened his eyes when he saw the slender youth that was his grandson. And he led the way into the white-walled living room.

"You must be chilly and worn out from the long ride," Lennox suggested quietly. He spoke in the tone a strong man invariably uses toward an invalid. Dan felt a curious resentment at the words.

"I'm not cold," he said. "It's hardly dark yet. I'd sooner go outdoors and look around."

The elder man regarded him curiously, perhaps with the faintest glimmer of admiration. "You'd better wait till tomorrow, Dan," he replied. "Bill will have supper soon, anyway. You don't want to overdo too much, right at first."

"But, good heavens! I'm not going to try to spare myself while I'm here. It's too late for that."

Dan Failing is introduced to "Snowbird," who proves to be a decidedly interesting member of the Lennox family, and Dan shows new interest in life in the next installment.

HUMOR SUPERIOR TO WIT

Former Quality Always Kindly, While the Latter is Inclined to Be Caustic.

Both wit and humor, like art, poetry and love, are quite indefinable. But humor is the more elusive of the two. There are national types of wit, an English wit, a French wit, a German wit, an Irish wit, and—yes—a Scottish wit.

But humor is something universal, the curious and blessed gift that man has, all the world over, of discerning the incongruous in most things, remarks a writer in the Edinburgh Scotsman. Wit is related to the superficial, but humor dwells deep down in the inmost heart of us. Wit may be caustic; humor is kindly. Wit is the accompaniment of comedy and draws forth the loud guffaw of the top gallery of the music halls. But humor is not divorced from tragedy, and its laughter may be very close to tears.

Scottish "wit" is not English wit, but a sense of humor is the same in kind all the world over. Scottish wit, of both the deliberate and the accidental kind, consists very largely in a certain dry way of saying something so simple and obvious that it is least expected.

Crowning Triumph.

Little Norman and his two playfellows were boasting about their parents and their belongings. "My father," said Norman, "is going to build a fine house with a steeple on it."

"That's nothing!" exclaimed Willie scornfully. "My father has just built a house with a flagpole on it."

Conrad, who had been listening intently, was silent for a moment, then burst out triumphantly: "Oh, that's nothing! My father is going to build a house with a mortgage on it!"

Watch Expenditures.

If he who is always hard up will but keep a record of his expenditures he may find that he is more lacking in sense than in dollars.

Or a "Situation."

When a statesman runs into a brick wall and sees no way to get over or under, he emits a few sharp yelps and calls it a crisis.—Baltimore Sun.

The wives of Siamese noblemen cut their hair so that it stands straight up on their heads. The average length is about one inch and a half.

MUTE FOR THIRTY-TWO YEARS

French Beggar, Breaking Long Silence, Voices Poor Opinion of Majority of Fellow Men.

Silently, for he was rated as a deaf-mute, he stood about in the shadows of old Notre Dame, in Paris, and asked alms of passers-by. He was a beggar, but a keen observer and a bit of a philosopher also. Tall and gaunt, he left a lasting impression on all who passed. Thus in the 32 years during which he worked at his trade of beggar in the same neighborhood he became a widely-known character, although he had never done anything except ask alms with a gesture.

From time to time the police arrested him and charged him with mendicancy, but each time the doctor's examination indicated that he was deaf and dumb.

The other day a new policeman was put on the beat. He did not know the beggar's reputation and so he arrested him. But the inspector promptly ordered his release. "We know him well," he explained to the new policeman. "The poor fellow is deaf and dumb."

To his amazement, the beggar replied to him, saying:

"I am sorry to contradict you, inspector, but I can speak and hear as well as you. During the 32 years that I have kept silence and earned my livelihood by maintaining this deception, I have seen and heard so many lies and so much harshness and hypocrisy that I am determined for once to give vent to my feelings, even if I have to go to prison for it. I shall at least be able to say that I have told the truth once during my life. And that is the last thing I shall ever say."

The man then resumed his silence and nothing has induced him to break it again. Inquiries showed that during his 32 years of silence he had "earned" a comfortable little fortune and was on the point of retiring.

Farmer Takes Wild Ducks.

As a rule, it is difficult to wean wild life from its love of wild environment, and the wild instinct is handed down to several generations of descendants. That fact makes rather notable the successful experiment of Mr. W. F. Smith, a farmer of North Vancouver, B. C. He has captured wild ducks that make his farm their home, although they have enjoyed freedom for some time, and their young are even more domesticated than ordinary domestic ducks.

Three years ago Mr. Smith bagged two Mallard ducks in a wounded condition and nursed them back to health. The ducks returned the kindness with regular contributions of eggs, and Mr. Smith has been in a position to enjoy, irrespective of closed seasons and game laws, Mallard duck and Mallard eggs as a regular item of his family bill-of-fare.

The birds require no particular care and no yatching nor enclosed runs. In fact the descendants of the original birds have become more domesticated than the ordinary domestic duck, never making any attempt to fly. Although being free to roam in the woods they always return home at sundown.

Don't Waste Sympathy.

As a big twin-six pulled up alongside a rail fence in one of the poorest counties in a certain state, the driver asked the farmer who was plowing in the field: "Am I on the right road to the county seat?"

The farmer had no more than answered "yes" when there came another question from one of the seven passengers: "My good man, are you able to make a living off land like this?"

As the farmer wiped the sweat off his brow, he replied: "Yes, and now before you start to pity me, I just want to tell you don't waste your sympathy on me. There is a fellow on the next farm who needs it. He owns 240 acres just like this, and I only own 100 acres."

Origin of "Strut."

A stiff piece of wood used as a support is called a strut; so also a person who walks stiffly and pompously about is said to strut. Both words are of Scandinavian origin and the Middle-English word was "strouten" to swell or spread out. There was a German word, strotzen, to be puffed up.

Easy to Locate.

Adv.: "Wanted—Man to run car and wife." This reminds us, "Which do you find it the harder to manage, your car or your wife?" a man was asked. "Oh, my car," he replied. "You see I always know where the 'knocking' comes from with my wife."

Contact Disastrous.

"Motoring is said to bring one in closer touch with nature." "Well, that's all right, so long as nature isn't represented by a big rock or a stout tree."

Worse!

With the spring the rhyme wave is almost as bad as the crime wave.—Washington Post

Jerry Cured of the Wanderlust

By R. RAY BAKER

© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"The wanderlust is on me again," said Jerry Fourwinds, sitting before Fred Calder's grate-fire. "I can feel it tugging, and the tug is stronger every succeeding day. Don't you ever feel it—you who used to travel up and down and across this old world with me?"

Fred shook his head, and smiled as he lighted his pipe.

"No more" he sighed, but the sigh was expressive of contentment. "Not since Hazel came into my life have I felt the call. You should be married, too, and then you could settle down and defy the fates that seek to send you to far places. I liked the old life, the adventures we went through together. I remember our tilt with polar bears and I recall our tiger hunt in the jungles, and our wrestle with hunger in the Rocky mountains, and they have become bright spots in my memory, because of the thrills and comradeship connected with them, but love is a greater adventure than any or all of them. I'm satisfied and I thought you were, too, now that that very desirable young lady has a place in your scheme of existence. I'll be frank and say that it wouldn't be a square deal to go and leave her now, when she has come to care for you. Besides, a rolling stone, you know, doesn't become plastered with greenbacks."

The flickering light of the flame in the fireplace reached out and brought Jerry's face into bold relief. It was a young face, with some lines, but otherwise no evidences of cares. It was a good face, too, and handsome, with eyes that burned with life.

"I'm sorry," he said after a pause, while he puffed on a calabash, "but I can't give up. I think a lot of Carrie, but I can't resist the call of the long trails. I'm rightly named. The four winds have woven a spell about me that I can't shake off. I've kept this job as an auto salesman for two years, and that's the record for me. I've saved up some cash—about four hundred dollars—and I'm going to Brazil. I may not gather the greenbacks, but I'll have adventure, which my system requires. I thought once I'd marry Carrie—if she'd have me—but it's no use. I told her last night when I felt her that I was going away for a week, and foolishly I made an engagement with her for a week from tonight. I'll have to break that engagement, that is all. I have a favor to ask of you. Will you go to her the next day, after the engagement that I won't keep, and explain to her what a worthless fellow I am?"

There was a serious look on Fred's countenance as the light from the fire turned his attention to him.

"I'll do it if you insist," he said, "but it's the wrong way. I'm disappointed in you, I confess, but I'm your friend, of course, just the same, and will try to make satisfactory explanations. You had better think it over, though, before you take the step."

"I leave tomorrow morning," Jerry answered. "My mind is made up."

And he did. An early train bound for the south took him out of Waverly, his eyes shining with the excitement of once more "hitting the trail," and perhaps a little with regret over some one he left behind.

"No girl is going to tie me down," Jerry muttered as he watched the outskirts of the city flash past. "I'm leaving just in time. She was getting a pretty strong hold on me. Poor Fred! He's settled for good."

Jerry settled himself in the smoker and tried to pass the time with magazines, but somehow he couldn't get interested in the printed page as he used to when traveling. He was unable to account for this disturbed condition of the mind, but finally decided it was the two years spent with his nose to the grindstone, as he phrased it. He would overcome it in a short time, he was confident.

In the afternoon the car became crowded and Jerry shared his seat with a young traveling man. They discussed business and reconstruction and bolsheviki and other matters, and before long the talk turned to personal matters. The traveling man seemed inclined to be sentimental, and finally admitted he was in a joyful mood because he was returning to his home in the West and never was going to leave it again.

"At last my firm has given me a city territory," he said, "and now I can stay with my wife and kids. What do you think of this?"

"That's the wife and kids," he said proudly. "What's the verdict?"

"Fine!" said Jerry, with real admiration. "The traveling man lapsed into silence and appeared lost in reflection. So was Jerry.

In the diner that evening Jerry sat across the aisle from a young couple, who continually smiled at each other and patted each other's hands in what was intended to be a surreptitious manner, neglecting their food shamefully. "Honeymooners!" grunted the fat man across the table from Jerry. "Act crazy, don't they?"

"Oh, I don't know," Jerry demurred, and was surprised at himself, because ordinarily he would have held the same opinion. When darkness was settling the train stopped at a small town—one of those places which uses the station as a public assembly hall. Young couples were strolling about the platform, arm in arm, chatting gayly and laughing. Jerry felt a lonesome feeling creeping over him. Never before had he experienced anything of the kind, and he could not explain it.

"It can't be I'm homesick," he growled, and turned from the window, drawing the blind.

Jerry had a lower berth in the center of the sleeper, but he failed somehow to sleep well. Things didn't seem natural to this lover of adventure who was more at home on the trail than in a house. The next morning he had to change trains at a small town, and also to purchase a new ticket. He didn't believe in continuous passage tickets, because he might want to change his mind about where he was going.

Soon he was ensconced once more in the seat of a rushing coach. It was warm and he divested himself of his coat. Later he went to the end of the car to remove some traveling grime from his face and hands, and when he returned to his seat he was unable to find his coat. While he was searching for it the conductor came along calling, "Fares, please."

"My coat's lost," Jerry explained, "and it contains my ticket—yes, by George! And it also contains all my money except these three nickels."

"Old stall," the conductor scoffed and pulled the whistle cord. The train stopped and Jerry was put off, protesting and fuming in vain.

Philosophically he started walking the ties, in the direction from which he had come. About a mile down the track his nostrils detected the odor of frying bacon, and he paused because he was hungry.

A dirty-faced man, garbed in tatters, sat beside the track preparing food over a small fire he had kindled from brush.

"Come and join me in my repast," the tramp invited. "Help me celebrate my good fortune—the first in ten years. Look at this," and he held up an object that caused Jerry to gasp. The object was his coat.

"Just my luck!" grumbled the knight of the road, but good humoredly, when Jerry explained the situation and proved his rights to the coat by indicating what the pockets contained. "I've had misfortunes ever since—since I lost my—my sweetheart, long ago. It's a sad story, and that's no josh, ho."

"Let's hear it," said Jerry, as he accepted some bacon and bread and seated himself.

"Well, I've always been a rover," declared the tramp, as he masticated a big mouthful of sandwich, "but one time I settled down for a spell and fell in love with a girl. I was going to marry her, but the four winds of freedom lured me away. Her love was so strong that I went back some time later, but she had married another man. If I'd stayed settled I'd be happy now. I was a fool; the four winds blow nothing but sorrow for rolling stones."

Jerry finished his frugal meal and handed his host twenty-five dollars.

"For my dinner—and some good advice," he said, as he set off down the track. At the next town he bought a ticket for Waverly.

"A one-way ticket, please," he told the man at the window. "I'm going to stay there—the rest of my life."

Macaulay's Odd Habit.

Macaulay (like Shelley, with whom he had little else in common) was in the habit of reading as he walked the London streets. According to his biographer, "he could neither swim, nor shoot." He seldom crossed a saddle, and never willingly. The only exercise in which he can be said to have excelled was that of threading crowded streets with his eyes fixed upon a book. He might be seen in such thoroughfares as Oxford street and Cheapside walking as fast as other people walked, and reading a great deal faster than anybody else could read.

Precaution.

You'll be rambling in the country with your little brood these fine days, and so the little fellows won't get lost, provide each one with a whistle. Then when they get too far away, the whistle can tell you where they are.

The Trumpeter Swan.

The trumpeter swan is almost extinct. It is somewhat larger than the ordinary swan, and derives its name from its loud, trumpetlike call. It flies at a great height, and often at a speed of 100 miles an hour.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNEK

DICK, THE DOG.

"What were you making such a fuss for?" asked Master Pig of Dick, the dog.

"I heard you just now," Master Pig continued, "and I didn't see why you were making such a noise and such a fuss on a hot day like this."

"I will tell you," said Dick. "I was protecting the house and the people in it."

"Some one came along, some stranger, you see."

"I didn't see the stranger," said Master Pig.

"But you see what I mean?" asked Dick.

"Oh yes, oh yes, grunt, grunt," said Master Pig.

"I didn't know whether this stranger was going to be friendly or not and I always want to protect the house and the people. They are good to me and I want to be good to them."

"You're very noble," grinned Master Pig. "I suppose you enjoy being so noble."

"That is a way creatures have of talking to others who do something unselfish and which they want to excuse themselves of doing anything unselfish on the ground that they aren't conceited enough to want to be proud of being noble. It is very curious."

"When you tell me I enjoy being noble I can't quite agree with you. I like to do nice things for the family and for my good friends. It isn't because I enjoy being noble. That is an unkind way of putting it.

"It is because I like to be friendly."

"Oh well," said Master Pig, "what's the difference? I don't care. Such things don't interest me, grunt, grunt."

"Do you want me to go on with my story?"

"I do, grunt, grunt," said Master Pig. "Beg pardon for the interruption."

"Oh, that is all right," said Dick, the dog, politely wagging his tail.

"Then I heard the stranger call out and ask if this was the right road which led to the place he was bound for."

"You see I stood out in front of the house ready to protect the house, and to have a good look at the stranger."

"I then knew that the stranger was all right and was only asking a question."

"And then my mistress called out and said that this was the right road."

"Then I wagged my tail at the stranger to show that I was friendly. And to show that I knew the stranger meant no harm I kissed the stranger's hands as he patted me so nicely."

"And when he was on his way off I wagged my tail as he left to tell him I wished him a pleasant journey."

"The fuss I was making was the barking I was doing at first in case the stranger wasn't friendly."

"Oh I see," said Master Pig. "So you made friends, did you?"

"Yes," said Dick, the dog. "And I like friends! Bow-wow, I like them immensely."

"I like food," said Master Pig. "I also enjoy a rest on a hot day. I've been having a nice cool sleep under this big apple tree and the ground was nice and cool too. You woke me up, Dick, by barking."

"Bow-wow, I am sorry," said Dick.

"Oh no matter," said Master Pig. "It was time for me to get up to have my mid-afternoon meal."

"What is that?" asked Dick.

"That's the meal I have in the middle of the afternoon of course, grunt, grunt," said Master Pig. "I feel nice and refreshed and ready for it now. But you can do the work of guarding the house and the people. Master Pig has other things to think about and cannot be bothered like that."

"Bow-wow, you have another thing to think about," grinned Dick, the dog. "And that thing is food!"

Sunday School Lesson

LESSON FOR JUNE 26

REVIEW: THE SOCIAL TASK OF THE CHURCH.

GOLDEN TEXT—He shall dwell with them, and they shall be his people.—Rev. 21:3.

DEVOTIONAL READING—Rev. 21:1-14.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Way Jesus Wants Us to Live.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Some Things Jesus Wants Us to Do.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Challenge to Boys and Girls.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Challenge to the Church.

Revelation 21:1-14 is the passage of Scripture selected for devotional reading. Instead of attempting to review the lessons of the quarter it would be of great interest and profit to enter into a detailed study of this Scripture. The following outline may be helpful. I. The New Heaven and the New Earth (vv. 1, 2); II. The New People (vv. 3-8); III. The New Jerusalem (vv. 9-14).

Another way would be to assign the Golden Texts to different members of the class asking them to give the part of the particular lesson which illustrates the teachings of the text.

Still another way would be to summarize the different Scripture passages, giving the leading lessons of each. The following is given by way of suggestion:

I. The believer's supreme obligation is to present himself as a living sacrifice to God. The grand reason for so doing is that he has received the mercies of God. The one so yielded will love his fellow believer sincerely.

II. The believer's body is God's property—the temple of the Holy Ghost; therefore we are under solemn obligation to use it for His glory.

III. Since God the Father and Jesus Christ work, it is incumbent upon all to work, and the man who will not work should not eat.

IV. God hates the greed that moves men to dishonest methods in order to get rich. His judgment shall fall upon such.

V. True education will lead one to Christ. The one only book which tells about him is the Bible. No one can call himself educated who is ignorant of the Bible.

VI. God rested when His work of creation was done. On this basis He has established the law of labor and rest. The obligation to cease from labor is that one may remember God.

VII. The church is an organism as the human body. In order that there may be real helpful co-operation there must be membership in that body.

VIII. Jesus should be welcomed as a guest into every home. He is an example of an obedient son in the home.

IX. The most important question is not "Who is my neighbor?" but "To whom can I be a neighbor?" Being a neighbor is seeing those about who need help and rendering such help in loving sympathy.

X. The Christian is a citizen as well as a church member. Intelligent Christians will show proper loyalty to the state.

XI. When Christ shall reign as King there shall be peace all over the world between animals and men. The supreme business of the believer in this dispensation is to preach the gospel to all the world as a witness.

XII. Jesus came and preached the gospel to the poor, but shall come again to judge the world and reign as King.

Since the whole of man's duty is summed up by Christ in duty to God and duty to man (Matt. 22:36-40), it would be profitable to go through the quarter's lesson—and set down the teachings under

I. Duties to God; II. Duties to Man.

House Divided Against Itself.

He who sits above the waterfalls is still working out His ways, and man's extremity is, as ever, God's opportunity. But if we are to be real sharers in this task of divine reconstruction, and fulfilling of God's purposes for the human family, it behoves us to do our utmost by prayer and effort to repair the breaches which human waywardness has wrought in that instrument which He has designed, and through which He has chosen especially to work out humanity's salvation—the church of the living God, the One, Holy, Catholic and Apostolic Body of Christ. For until these wounds are healed the church must present herself as a house divided against itself; and, because the Savior's prayer for a unity in the "one fold" remains unfulfilled, His enemies continue to triumph, and the forces which make for righteousness are thwarted.—Bishop Hovden.

SUFFERED ALL A WOMAN COULD

Mrs. Meyer Finally Found Relief and Health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Orange, Cal.—"I always feel very grateful to you, as some twenty years ago three doctors said I had to have a serious operation. I had a tumor, and ulcers which would gather and break. I had displacement so badly that I could hardly sit down at times, and it seemed as if I suffered everything that a woman could suffer. Then some one advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I took it until I was cured and saved from the operation. I have told women of your wonderful medicine times without number, and I am willing that you should use these facts and my name if you like. I also used your Compound during the Change, and I can do all my own work by the heavy part, and can walk miles every day as I help my husband in the office."—Mrs. J. H. Meyer, 412 South Orange St., Orange, California.

Wonders of Science.

"Are you sure you can prove my client is crazy?"

"Why, certainly," replied the eminent alienist. "And what is more, if you are in trouble and need my services I'll do the same thing for you."
