Discrimination Charges Against LISD Set January 6

Final arguments of racial discrimination charges against Lubbock school officials are scheduled for Jan. 6.

In a Dec. 15 brief, the U.S. Justice Department asked U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward to order local officials to adopt a comprehensive system-wide desegregation plan. They asked that the plan be adopted no later than the 1978-79 school year.

The Justice department has objected to the proposed building of new schools in white residential areas outside Loop 289.

The department contends that construction of four new elementary and a junior high school outside the loop would have an adverse effect and "lock in the pattern of existing segregation."

Federal government attorneys want school officials to use existing available space in predominantly minority inner city and east-side schools, as a means to foster integration while eliminating overcrowding in Southwest Lubbock.

According to government figures 94 percent of Lubbock's white students attend schools at least 70 percent Anglo and that 90 percent of all black and 64 percent of all Mexican-American students attend schools where enrollment is more than 80 percent minority.

The Justice Department has also charged that during years of growth and migrating populations nothing was done by the Lubbock Independent School District to mix students of different ethnic groups despite the 1954 Brown decision to desegregate schools.

However, school officials say the placement of schools even before the U.S. Supreme Court struck down school segregation in 1954, attempted to encourage a racial mix in several areas.

The school district argued in earlier hearings that students attending overcrowded schools should not be "indiscriminately bussed to the few facilities within the district which are not fully utilized."

Some school officials argue that busing as an alternative would not be a solution.

Judge Woodward is expected to make a ruling in the case sometime after Jan. 6.

Bergland Sees Brighter Future For Black Land Grant Colleges

Tuskegee Institute, Ala. — Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland told delegates to the Professional Agricultural Workers conference here recently that the nation's black 1890 agricultural land grant colleges will be funded on a basis equal to other land grant colleges under the new farm bill.

In the past, he said, the federal budget had always treated these schools, designated land grant colleges by Congress in 1890, different from those designated in 1862, which are predominantly white.

"The new farm legislation will place black land grant colleges on the same funding level as all other land grant colleges," the Secretary declared. "And, we will work to develop those kinds of programs to strengthen these schools."

The Secretary outlined a number of changes in the U.S. Department of Agriculture designed to strengthen rural development efforts, particularly in the South. They include: the transfer of the Rural Development Service to the Farmers Home Administration; a strengthening of the Department's budget for research and development and development of initiatives to help shift the Department's efforts of problem solving from the Mid-West to the South.

Mr. Bergland said that for too long USDA had given attention to solving problems the Mid-West had faced with corn and wheat production to the detriment of the South.

"Unfortunately, the U.S. Department of Agriculture has been more interested in corn and wheat of the Mid-West," he said. "We will change this and put together a program that will give you the tools to improve this area of the nation."

He said the department must examine land use policies and make such a study in cooperation with local officials "for no one knows better than local authorities the kinds of uses agricultural land must be put to."

An effort must be made to reduce agriculture's dependence on petroleum, a resource that will not last forever, Secretary Bergland explained. There is a need to increase research efforts of the department in the area of kinetic engineering.

He said the next 12 months would be interesting, and that the department would be doing a great many things that are important, affecting millions of people world-wide. Mr. Bergland said the department's rural development efforts must be geared to give people a chance to stay in the South, rather than move to other sections of the country.

President, Black Leaders Meet

President Jimmy Carter heard his administration come under strong attack last week for failure to include an adequate number of Blacks in his regional appointments.

The attack, levied by the Rev. Dr. Joseph E. Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, came during a meeting at the White House between the president and Black leaders from across the country.

Dr. Lowery pointed out that the responsibility for implementing all programs related to employment, urban policy and affirmative action is largely at the regional level, and, for that reason, it is very important to have Blacks in these positions.

President Carter urged Dr. Lowery to work directly with presidential assistant, Hamilton Jordan, and with heads of department in regard to the addition of Blacks being named for regional positions.

The leaders met for more than an hour, talking with the president and with members of his staff. They called upon him to address three of the most critical problem areas: Black unemployment, especially as it pertains to youth, the administration's national urban policy and affirmative action.

"We urge a major expansion now in funding, incentives and targeting to provide jobs and relevant training in the private and public sectors," the leaders said in a prepared statement.

The president assured the group of increased resources for the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, a body vital to affirmative action in reorganization of civil rights programs on the federal level.

Another issue of concern for the group was in allowing the balancing of the budget to take priority over unemployment. The president advised the group that, for the next two years, he would not sacrifice his commitment to human needs in order to balance the budget.

Dr. Lowery said after the meeting that he remained confident of the president's personal commitment to address the issues of reducing unemployment, and commended him for his support of the Humphrey-Hawkins Bill. But, he said, "I am concerned that the advice he is receiving from some of his closest economic advisors has weakened and will continue to weaken the president's sense of urgency."

The meeting with the president was the first in a series of meetings the Black leadership forum hopes to hold. Others will include sessions with leaders of the business community, the Congress, labor, religion and the media.

Lubbock City-County Library to Show Films

Starting January 7, the Lubbock City-County Library will continue its free Saturday Film program at 3:00 p.m. The project, entitled Saturday Film Mosaic and sponsored by the library's Adult Service Department, has as its goal the encouragement of reading. Each film program will last approximately one hour and consist of films selected for both entertainment and educational value. Materials relating to the films are available at the library by consulting one of the Reference Librarians.

The presentations during the months of January, February and March will be a Time-Life production of Jacob Bronowski's Ascent of Man. This is a thirteen part series, explaining the development of man as seen through the history of science.

Some of the titles that appear in this series are: Lower Than the Angels, the Hidden Structure, the Ladder of Creation, and Generation Upon Generation. Complete schedules for these programs are available at the library.

The films will be shown in the Community Room of the Lubbock City-County Library, 1306 9th Street, Lubbock, at 3:00 p.m. every Saturday. Again, there is no admission charge.

Mrs. Joan Y. Ervin will serve as mistress of ceremonies for a New Year's Musical Extravaganza at Christ Temple, Sunday, Jan. 1, 1978. Various soloists, and groups are expected to perform during this New Year's Celebration. The public is invited. For more information call 744-5334.

Housing Plan Submitted

The Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission's draft housing plan, which will be submitted to the Department of Housing and Urban Development in early 1978 will be discussed at the meeting of the Regional Development Review Committee on Thursday, December 29 at 2:00 p.m. The housing plan is the guide by which HUD will evaluate the region regarding progress that has been made in providing adequate housing for all residents regardless of race or income.

Emphasis is placed by HUD on how the region has provided units for low income, minorities and elderly people. The committee will take action based on its own evaluation and comments from local member constituent governments regarding the validity of the data.

The meeting is open to the public and any citizens who are interested are welcome to attend. It will be held in the conference room of the PBRPC at Midland Air Terminal.

Peace Corps Volunteer Teaches Math In Kenya

When Janice C. Bowden first started teaching math in Kenya more than a year ago, her students "were very inquisitive and very excited about me being black and not being from Africa. They wondered what my tribe was, and I didn't know how to explain that I was from New York and didn't belong to a tribe," said the 24-year-old Peace Corps volunteer from Albany.

A 1975 mathematics graduate of the State University of New York at Albany, Ms. Bowden is assigned to teach math at the Coast Girls' Secondary School in Mombasa, a large port in southern Kenya. She will complete two years of Peace Corps service in the East African country in August, 1978.

Ms. Bowden is one of about 260 Peace Corps volunteers and trainees serving in Kenya. More than 6,900 Peace Corps volunteers serve in 63 developing nations around the world. The Peace Corps is part of ACTION, the federal agency for volunteer service.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,

I take issue with the Dec. 19 article in Newsweek magazine, "The Tractor Rebellion." As a woman who is an active farmer, I resent the term, "annual subsidy checks." In reality, these checks are necessitated by the government embargoing our "free, supply and demand" market, and placing an effective ceiling in the form of loan and target prices on our crops. These ceilings are not even our costs of production. When the middleman and buyers won't even give us these ceiling prices, the government makes up the difference. In effect, the government is paying some of our loss (that they caused), and we, the farmers, are subsidizing your food! I might add that I don't want any thanks, for it's not freely given!

Also, the American Farm Bureau has not ever, in my opinion, been for the farmer.

You may sign me: A Fed Up Farmer, On Strike For: "HUMAN RIGHTS FOR FARMERS TOO!"

Embattled Intelligence Community

The Watergate scandal is fading from public memory, but its effects on the American intelligence community are still being felt. During the long unfolding of Watergate, various abuses and questionable practices of the CIA and the FBI came to light. As a result, the nation's two chief intelligence agencies came under a cloud of suspicion from which they have yet to emerge.

Two recent cases illustrate the agencies' continuing difficulties. Richard Helms, former director of the CIA, pleaded no contest Oct. 31 to two misdemeanor charges of failing to testify "fully, completely and accurately" before a Senate committee. Testifying before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee in 1973, he was questioned about CIA efforts to block the election of the late Salvador Allende as president of Chile. Helms replied that the CIA had not covertly supplied money to opponents of Allende. Subsequently a Senate investigation concluded that the CIA had, in fact, covertly funded Allende's opponents.

Helms' no contest plea on the misdemeanor counts was the product of a plea-bargaining agreement between him and the Justice Department. Critics of the CIA argued that he should have been tried for perjury. A trial on such a felony charge might have forced the disclosure of confidential information that could have compromised U.S. national security.

The Justice Department has come under fire also for its handling of the case against John J. Kearney, a former supervisor in the FBI's New York field office. Kearney was indicted in April for illegally opening mail and tapping phones in a search for fugitive members of the Weather Underground in 1970-72. FBI Director Clarence Kelley, noting that FBI morale had been "seriously affected" by the indictment, said he had asked Attorney General Griffin B. Bell "to review the matter again with the thought of considering the past problems of the FBI in the same light that was afforded the CIA."

BEN SARGENT
©1977 The Austin American Statesman

It is not known whether Bell acceded to Kelley's request. But the Attorney General recently announced that the five Justice Department attorneys in charge of the Kearney investigation had resigned because of a "disagreement in principle." The attorneys had recommended that five other present or former FBI officials be prosecuted for the same offenses of which Kearney is accused. Bell reportedly decided to await the resolution of the Kearney case before deciding whether to seek additional indictments.

Bringing Kearney or other FBI officials to trial would entail the risk inherent in the Helms case: exposing to public view information that might prove damaging to national security. Kearney's attorney, Edward Bennett Williams, also acted as counsel for Helms. Thus, there is speculation that Williams will seek the same kind of deal in the current case as he did in the earlier one.

Meanwhile, legislation is pending in Congress that would require the Attorney General to appoint a temporary special prosecutor to handle any case involving the President, the Vice President, or other high officials of the executive branch. The Senate passed such a bill on June 27. A similar measure was referred to the House Judiciary Committee, which thus far has taken no action on it. If the legislation is enacted, investigation of criminal charges against top administration officials may become easier if no less politically embarrassing.

GI Bill Changes

by Pat Towell

(Copyright 1977, Congressional Quarterly Inc.)

WASHINGTON—Veterans faced with high tuition costs will have to look to their home states for some of their benefits in the future.

For the first time since the GI Bill was enacted in 1944, some education benefits for veterans will depend on the states putting up part of the money.

Congress recently sent the President a bill allowing a veteran attending a high-cost college or training school to borrow up to $2,500 a year to supplement his monthly payment from the Veterans Administration. Two-thirds of the amount borrowed could be forgiven if the veteran's home state paid half.

The bill was a compromise between the Senate and House. The Senate version would have allowed veterans facing high tuition costs to boost their regular benefits by drawing ahead of time VA payments that normally would come later in their education careers.

'Equal Benefits' Dispute

But the leadership of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee was adamantly opposed to any change that would violate the principle that veterans should receive "equal benefits for equal service."

This runs counter to those who argue that giving the same monthly payment to all veterans with the same number of dependents does not, as a practical matter, provide them with equal opportunities for an education preparing them for a civilian career.

Many states in the East and Midwest, these critics argue, have higher public college tuitions and fewer public junior colleges than states in other regions. As a result, while veterans in some parts of the country can pay their tuition and still have a substantial portion of their VA payment to meet living expenses, veterans in the East and Midwest have very little left over for living expenses, according to the critics.

They maintain that this accounts for the wide disparity from state to state in the proportion of eligible veterans who attended college under the current GI Bill (passed in 1966). More than 50 per cent of the eligible veterans in California, Arizona and Hawaii have used their benefits for college training, compared with 20 per cent or less in Pennsylvania, Indiana and Vermont.

Tuition Link Opposed

But most members of the House Veterans' Affairs Committee, including Olin E. Teague (D-Texas), its former chairman and current chairman of its Education Subcommittee, strongly opposed linking benefits to tuition costs.

They maintained that tuition at most schools in the country could be paid by a veteran who, with the 6.6 per cent cost-of-living increase included in the compromise bill, would be eligible to receive $13,950 over 45 months and additional loans of up to $2,500 a year. Veterans who were married or had children would receive even higher payments.

Vietnam-era veterans have, in addition, many other federally funded education aid programs that were not available to the veteran of World War II or Korea, Teague and his supporters point out. These include VA work-study programs, special VA payments for tutorial assistance and various programs administered by other federal agencies.

Supporters of the current program were suspicious that proponents of a tuition-based approach were less interested in helping veterans than in helping colleges that charge high tuitions and states that don't invest enough of their resources in low-cost public education.

They also warned that a tuition-based approach would tempt the sort of massive fraud that Teague had uncovered in 1952 when as a young congressman he chaired a select House committee studying the operation of the 1944 GI Bill.

Last-Minute Bargaining

Proponents of a tuition-based approach charged that Teague and his supporters refused to hold a formal conference of House and Senate members on the expectation that the Senate would cave in to the House in order to enact the 6.6 per cent increase in benefits that was included in both versions of the bill.

The compromise agreement, they maintained, was a sham since the required state payments might be unconstitutional in some states and would surely be politically unpopular. "They set up a program knowing full well that very few states would be willing to participate," said one House staff member.

A House committee staffer insisted that with less than two weeks in which to produce a bill before the start of the congressional recess there was no time for a formal conference. He conceded there had been no detailed analysis of how many states would or could participate, but added, "If they can't, they can't; if they don't want to, they don't want to."

And he reiterated the committee's basic position that the existing programs are adequate for most tuition costs. "Those aren't peanuts we're talking about," he said.

Teague's Upper Hand

A Senate staffer said that the final version of the bill was better than the Senate would have gotten out of a formal conference. "Had we gone to conference, (Teague and his allies) would have controlled the House conferees," so the House position would have remained unchanged.

In the end, the compromise bill sailed through Congress in the last two days before it recessed. Supporters of the tuition-based approach registered their protest in both houses. But they were unwilling to risk delaying the cost-of-living increase and various administrative reforms in the bill for what would have been a grueling battle with the House committee.

Police Beat

Leon Anderson, owner of Gateway Conoco, said 32 gallons of gasoline were allowed to run into the street when someone entered his station by breaking out the front windows. Anderson said after the individuals entered the building, the gas pumps were turned on.

No other items were reported missing.

A young woman reported to police that she was awakened Friday night by someone in bed with her. She said the man told her he had been waiting a long time for a chance to be with her.

The victim said the man bent one of her arms behind her and forcibly raped her. She told police she struck the man in the face and scratched him several times.

She said when she tried to use the phone to summon help the man wrapped the telephone cord around her neck and proceeded to strangle her.

She said the man then locked her in the bathroom and told her to stay or he would kill her.

She said she came out of the bathroom just in time to see the man make his exit—in the nude.

A dog may be man's best friend, but there may be some question about man being dog's best friend. Wilber Loyd Berry of 712 Zenith told police that someone shot his German shepherd with an air rifle.

Berry said the suspect or suspects did the shooting through a crack in the fence.

The dog may lose his right eye.

KELLY'S HEROES

by Joe Kelly

HAPPY NEW YEAR!

I hope that all your wishes for 1978 come true and that the year will be the best ever.

May all your resolutions be good ones and may you keep each and every one!

As for me, I make them and break them, just like athletic records, because records are made to be broken.

First of all, though, congratulations to Keith Samples on being named SID at Texas Tech to replace Ralph Carpenter. He has big shoes to fill, but Keith has good feet for the job.

Next, before the old year wafts out the window, congratulations to Scott Alford of Monterey for being selected to the high school All America team. That's a great honor and good for Lubbock.

Then, best wishes to Steve Sloan. We hope he takes the injury bug with him, as well as the Raider susceptibility to having the long pass completed on it. Neither loss will be missed. If Steve had had his druthers, we've been informed he would still be here.

Best wishes, also, to Rex Dockery. He takes over a tough situation, but he has one thing in his favor. No one, apparently, expects much from him, which is a switch. Thus, he has every opportunity to have a brilliant career at Tech.

To J.T. King, much happiness in retirement, when it comes in August. Some day students, faculty, alumni and fair weather friends will look back on your record and realize what a tremendous job you did as football coach and athletic director.

And last, but not least, much success to the administration, new athletic council and regime. We hope that it will be a successful one and that a few years from now the nickname "Red" will still be in front of the word "Raiders," and not the nickname "Pink."

I'm glad that the Raiders had such a good time in Orlando, a trip they earned for having such a brilliant season. Shades of Jim Carlen! Boy, that exposure was really needed, something like a compound headache for a man with a major hangover. The Raiders played with the same enthusiasm as a wallflower at her first dance.

Jimmy the Greek isn't bad at picking winners. As of Sunday night, he had picked four out of five winners. His only loss? Why, Texas Tech over Florida State—and I've said all I'm going to say about that humiliation and embarrassment.

By the time this hits the streets I'll have been in Big D, working with Wilbur Evans, Jim Brock and Bill Morgan in making the Cotton Bowl continued to be the nation's finest bowl. No other one comes close to the Cotton in providing entertainment and pleasure for visiting teams, coaches and followers.

Really, only the big games remain—the Cotton, Sugar, Orange and Rose. All the rest are attractions, but they don't have the glamor or recognition of the big four. And Dallas, once again, comes up with the No. 1 battle, Notre Dame and Texas.

This will be a real test for the Longhorns, who haven't tasted defeat all season. They could fall to the Irish, but it isn't likely. There's too much pride on this year's team. Notre Dame is good, but not that good, and besides, Texas has Earl Campbell.

The big question is at Arkansas, where Lou Holtz has disciplined three stars and others have indicated that they will support them and not play against Oklahoma. All things being equal, the Razorbacks could play the Sooners a close game and could, under normal circumstances, win. Now, they are a questionmark.

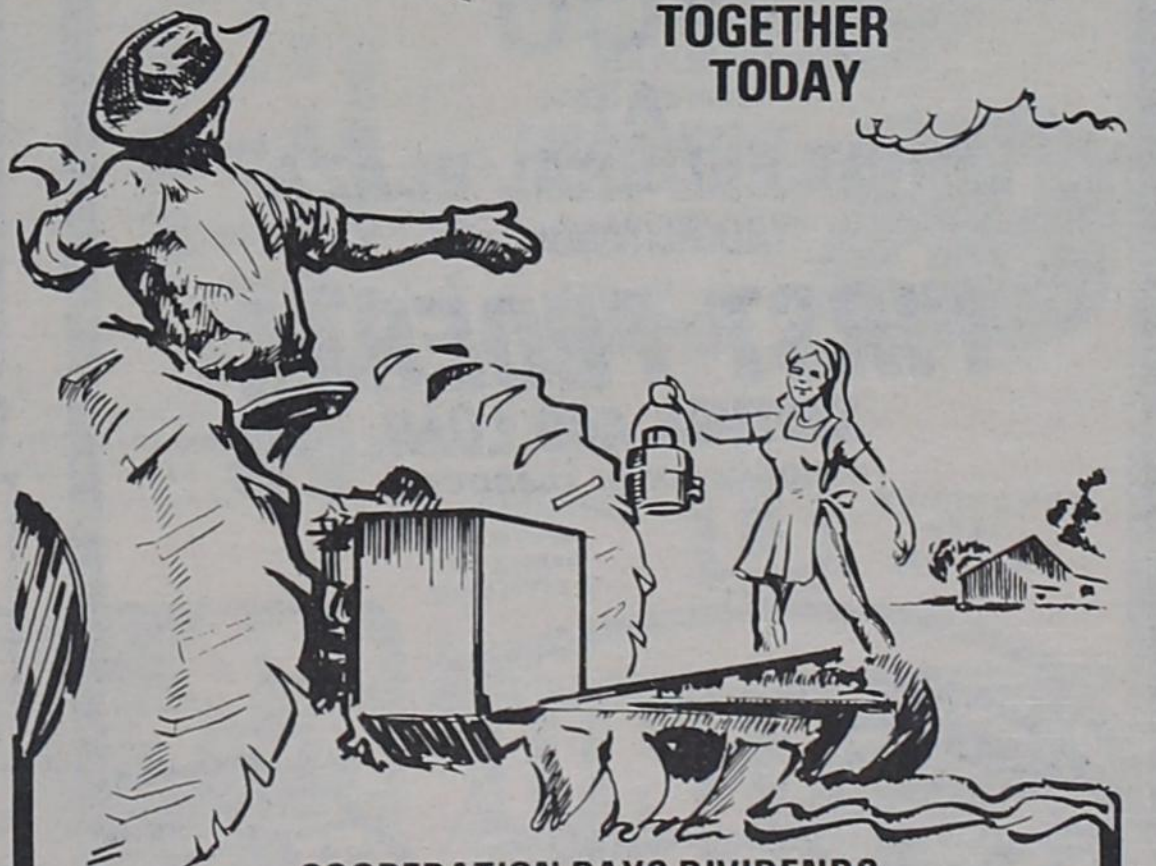

As for Holtz, power to him! I don't know what the circumstances were, but it boils down to one thing. He thought the players were wrong and he thought that he must have discipline. If he doesn't have it, he doesn't have control of his football fortunes.

Frankly, I can't understand why any lawyer would enter such a case. He ought to tell any football player that it is an inside case over which he has no jurisdiction. Instead, he is threatening to take it to court. If he succeeds, it's just one more step in calling college athletics professional and making a farce of collegiated athletics.

I hope Tech closes out 1977 on a successful note, which could happen if it wins in the Hawaii Classic. The competition is fast and it will take a heckuva effort for the Raiders to come out on top. But they could leave Tech fans with a pleasant taste in their mouths and anticipation for a successful conference race.

Food Stamp Allotments To Increase On January 1, 1978

Food stamp allotments for low-income families will be increased Jan. 1 to keep pace with rising food costs, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Carol Tucker Foreman announced today.

Monthly net income eligibility standards also will rise for most households on Jan. 1 because, under current regulations, income limits in most cases are tied to the size of food stamp allotments. Under the regulations, income eligibility limits rise when food stamp allotments are increased.

Assistant Secretary Foreman said monthly stamp allotments in the continental 48 states and District of Columbia will increase by at least two dollars for all households except single persons. For example, the allotment for a family of four will be increased from $170 to $174. Food stamp allotments are based on the cost of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's thrifty food plan.

Net income cut-offs also will be higher, except for one and two-person households. The monthly net income limit for a family of four, for example, will rise from $567 to $580. However, the income limits for the one and two-person households will not change. These income standards ($262 and $344 respectively) will remain at USDA's poverty guidelines. Food stamp regulations currently in effect require USDA to use either allotment-based calculations or the poverty guidelines, whichever is higher, in setting income eligibility limits.

New food stamp legislation recently signed by President Carter changes the procedures for setting income limits. The new legislation is not yet in effect. USDA is now developing proposed regulations to implement the new law, and plans to put them into effect next summer.

The table below lists net income limits, effective Jan. 1, for the 48 states and the District of Columbia:

one-person households	...$262
two-person households	...$344
three-person households	...$460
four-person households	...$580
five-person households	...$687
six-person households	...$827
seven-person households	...$913
eight-person households	...$1047
for each additional household member over eight, add	...$133

The Food Stamp Act requires USDA to adjust stamp allotments twice a year, in line with food price changes as reported by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. These price changes are reflected in the cost of the thrifty food plan. Allotment adjustments take effect Jan. 1 and July 1.

Services Held For Rosetta Jackson

Services for Rosetta Jackson were held at 2:30 p.m. Saturday in the South Plains Funeral Home Chapel.

The Rev. A.L. Davis, pastor of the Greater St. Luke Baptist Church, officiated. Burial followed in Peaceful Gardens Cemetery under the direction of South Plains Funeral Home.

Mrs. Bailey, 69, of 1813 Ave. B, Apt. A, died Tuesday in Methodist Hospital.

Survivors include a son, Sam of Denver, Colo.; three daughters, Hulla Mae Johnson of Lubbock, Iola M. Walker of San Diego, Calif., and Helen Bory of Lancaster, Pa.; 10 grandchildren and 15 great-grandchildren.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

And so the year 1977 slowly dribbles down. It is, I think, fitting that the whole thing comes to a close at midnight Saturday. For Sunday is the bright and shining start of a new week and this time a new year, to boot.

I don't know how your 1977 has been in the scheme of things. Each of us helps ourself to a portion and only the passing of days can tell us whether we have gotten the fat or the lean.

In my personal life these past months there have been moments of great sadness, of loss, more strongly underlined in the months just gone than ever before. Friends have been taken, close ones, friends in the community and out in that broader, more spacious plain that is the national and international world it has been my privilege to know over the years.

I think now in fondness and blessed memory of Ethel Waters, of Joan Crawford, of Bing Crosby, of Peter Pan's Captain Hook, Cyril Ritchard, whom I met in London, with his late wife, Madge Elliott, away back during the bombastic days of a World War II London. All of them were fine people and I am grateful that our paths crossed along the way during my lifetime.

Closer to home, it has been a sparkling year in the fields in which I am most closely connected, music, movies, theater, art—in the confines of the city of Lubbock.

We have seen the local productions of such outstanding musicals as West Side Story and "South Pacific" in the new Memorial Civic Center, and an equally beguiling Lubbock Theatre Centre version of Cole Porter's "Kiss Me, Kate."

We have had a rollicking introduction of the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra in a gala summertime Pops Nite that returned the genial Roger Williams and his piano to our midst, and we have introduced the orchestra to its new home in the regular subscription season in that same Center.

The Hayloft Dinner Theater got itself a brand new look with the interior all done over as a shining background for its dinner-with-play performances.

The Texas Tech Music Theater and the University Theater, the University Center series of talks and performances continue on an upgraded quality rise and, truly, the past year has provided everything from rock groups to serious drama and music live, so that the average theatergoer or concert fan could not attend all of them if he so wanted or could afford the tariffs.

The movies during the year have ranged through the whole spectrum, some good, some bad, some excellent (such as the Disney "The Rescuers" and some just plain phenomenal, such as the long run of the nation's top box office champion, the delightful and wonderful "Star Wars."

With seven or eight new movies just taking over the city's silver screens for the Holiday Season, it's a bit too early to evaluate the "bests" from the Hollywood studios as yet. In the weeks to come there will be word on all of the newcomers and that will culminate in our hazardous guess of which the onslaught over the long year are thought to be the toppers of the crop.

Even the library lists have provided us with some of that rare but previous reading-at-home time, if we can salvage it from the hurdy-gurdy daily existence.

I cite Colleen McCullough's big, fat, very successful novel of a family in Australia's Outback, "The Thorn Birds," very highly recommended, indeed. And the absorbing, tragic life of Scarlett O'Hara, Vivien Leigh, in Anne Edward's beautifully done biography of that name.

If your tastes run to sex and slop, we even have a new Harold Robbins book (he wrote "The Carpetbaggers"). This one is called "Dreams Die First" and it will be successful in that computerized manner that characterizes any Robbins book.

A Christmas Card that carried a special nostalgic meaning and a touch of sadness came out of Dallas this past week. It was from a Mrs. Dusty Taylor, who was the mother-in-law of Renee Meeks, that sparkling, gifted actress, known at the Hayloft dinner theaters around the country. It was just a year ago that this vivacious, vibrant gifted young woman was taken from us suddenly and shockingly. What a waste of life that was—and is!

It was interesting, too, to receive cards from some of the men in the 100th Bomb Group (H), 350th Bomb Squadron (H), Eighth Air Force, World War II, cards making their way to my address across the miles and, certainly, across the lengthening years since the time of our association, 32 years of remembering.

And so, as I said, 1977 dribbles down. What's done is done now and the Sunday morning sun will usher in a bright and shining new day and a new year. May 1978 be what each of us long and pray for, whatever it might be. May it be a time of peace, of joy and of accomplishment.

A valuable research guide for genealogists and historians alike is the Directory of Historical Societies and Agencies in the United States and Canada compiled by Donna McDonald. Softbound, 434 pps., indexed, 10th ed. Order from the American Association for State and Local History, 1400 8th Avenue South, Nashville, Tenn. 37203, $20. Listed alphabetically under each state or Canadian province are the towns which presently have a historical (and sometimes genealogical) organization. Information generally included on each such institution is the full name and mailing address; area code and telephone number; the year it was founded; name of the paid director or elected officer to whom mail should be address; number of members; whether the organization has a dues paying membership; number of paid full-time and part-time employees; number of volunteer staff members; listing of major programs in which the society is engaged (for example, newsletters, books, library, educational programs, etc.); and the time period covered in its collections. If the agency publishes a periodical, its title also appears.

A "General Index" lists the names of the societies themselves alphabetically. The "Special Interest Index" arranges the organizations under such headings as agricultural, ethnic or racial, military, religious, etc.

State, territorial, and special censuses are also available to the genealogical researcher. They sometimes contain additional information to that appearing on the federal schedules. These censuses were generally taken between the regular federal reports, although some of the special ones were taken at the same time. Thus, they can be particularly helpful in locating an ancestor who moved elsewhere between the regular federal reports.

In addition to the mortality schedules, special federal enumerations included agricultural censuses, 1860-1880, and the 1890 veteran schedules (previously discussed). The federal government also took special schedules at various times for such territories as Minnesota and Arizona. State censuses were sometimes taken for special purposes, too, such as the 1906-1907 Alabama census of Confederate veterans. Free black special reports generally included the name, age and sex of all family members.

For further information on the availability of such censuses, check the pamphlet, State Censuses: An Annotated Bibliography of Censuses of Population Taken After the Year 1790 By States and Territories in the United States by Henry J. Dubester. A list of the dates in which state and territorial censuses were taken also appears on pp. 36-37 of Black Genealogy: How to Begin by James D. Walker. Unlike the federal reports, state censuses have not been centralized, so many remain in state historical societies and libraries. Many of these have been published in historical or genealogical society quarterlies, territorial papers, and history books. Microfilm copies of these, as well as the federal special enumerations, may also be found in large libraries and special collections.

ORDINANCE NO. 7586

An ordinance amending Zoning Ordinance No. 7084 and the Official Map of the City of Lubbock so as to make the following change: Zone Case No. 2007-B; change tracts "A" through "G", Avalon Addition, City of Lubbock, Lubbock County, Texas, from R-1 to C-3 Zoning District; subject to conditions; providing a penalty; providing a savings clause and providing for publication.

Subject to the following conditions:
1. That development of these tracts be in conformance with the site plan approved by the City Council on December 8, 1977.

2. The owners agree to appoint an architectural review committee, with Dewey D. Rogers appointing one member and with Tim Hatch and John D. Abney collectively appointing a second member. The two members so appointed shall appoint a third member. In the event of a vacancy on such committee, whoever appointed the member who has vacated shall appoint his successor. Such review committee shall approve in writing by a majority vote the design of any structure placed on Tracts A, B, C, D, E, F, or G as such tracts are shown on the plot.

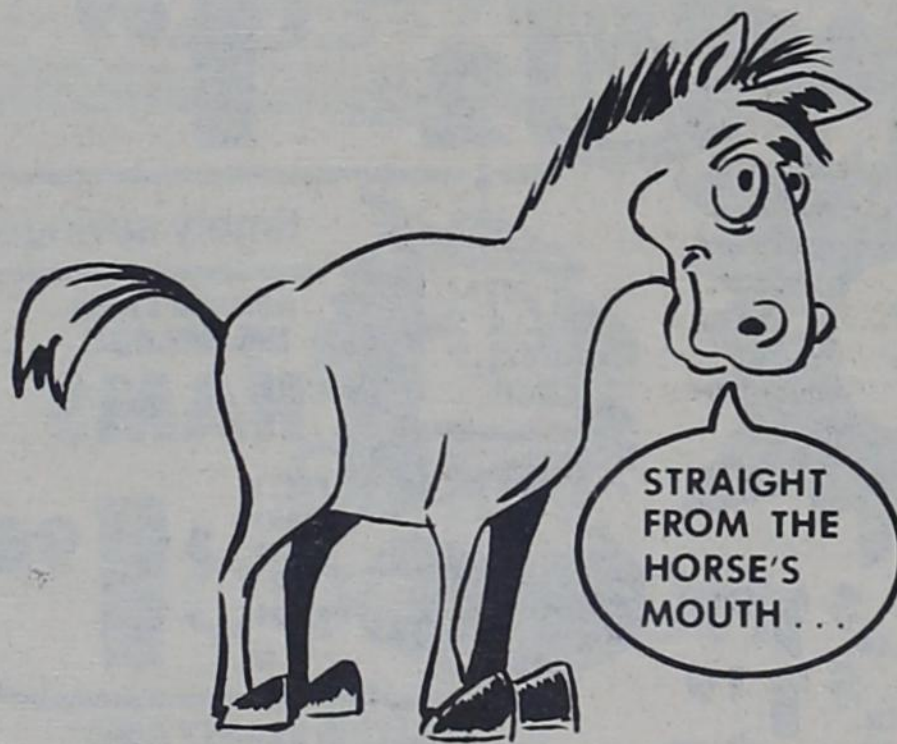

3. Service areas for deliveries and garbage collection shall be screened as may be specified by the architectural review committee; provided, however, that such screening shall not be required on Tracts C, D, E, and F as shown on the plot if delivery and garbage collection is from the adjacent alley.

4. No car wash, service station, or drive-in restaurant shall be permitted on any of the properties.

5. On Tracts A, B, and G as shown by the plat, one-half (1/2) of all landscaping required shall be between the building built on such lots and York Avenue as shown on the plat.

development of the total property will not be impeded by barriers between the respective tracts, no fencing or barriers may be placed on Tracts A, B, or G of such nature as to prohibit vehicular traffic across the property. This provision is not intended to prohibit or limit construction of buildings as herein provided for or the provision for normal parking spaces for use in connection with the development of such tracts.

7. To insure both access to and visibility of the property designated as Tracts C,D,E, and F, only that portion of Tracts A,B, and G as shown by the plat may be covered with buildings. The amount of buildings placed on Tract A may not exceed 240 linear feet of building; buildings placed on Tract B may not exceed 390 linear feet of building; and buildings placed on Tract G may not exceed 300 linear feet of building. In the event two or more buildings are built on a tract, the collective length of such buildings shall mean the frontage length of the first building plus the length of the second or an additional building by which the length of such second or additional building extends beyond the end of the first building.

8. Tracts C,D,E, and F may be replatted into more tracts; provided, however, that no combination of tracts or parts of tracts may be used as a building site unless the total frontage on York Avenue of such building site equals or exceeds one hundred (100) feet. Tracts A and G as shown may not be replatted; and Tract B may be replatted into not more than two (2) tracts.

9. Tract B shall have a minimum of a one hundred (100) foot setback on improvements measured from York Avenue as shown on the plat. Tracts A and G shall have a minimum of a fifty (50) foot setback on improvements from York Avenue as shown on the plat.

10. The alley is to be paved, with a six foot (6') screening fence to be located six inches (6") inside of the east side of alley.

11. Maintenance of the screening fence located on private property other than these tracts shall be subject to City Council approval.

12. Site drainage on all tracts shall be designed to flow into the streets and not the alley.

13. Easements shall not be fenced or otherwise obstructed to the passage of vehicular traffic.

14. All utility lines are to be underground except section, half-section, and feeder or major transmission lines.

15. A six foot (6') screen fence shall be located along the southeast property line from the alley to the Loop 289 access road right-of-way.

16. A six foot (6') screening fence shall be located along the northeast property line to run parallel to the alley that intersects with York Drive.

17. There shall be no access off the development lot onto 66th Street.

18. All required screening fences shall conform to the definition of the same in the Zoning Ordinance.

19. Proponents shall secure a drainage easement by separate instrument to get drainage onto York Drive.

20. Six foot (6') sidewalks are to be provided as required by City Ordinance.

21. No driveway openings on 62nd between Slide and York Avenue shall be permitted.

22. All dumpsters that are not located in the alley must be architecturally screened.

SECTION 3. THAT any person, firm or corporation owning or operating the subject property failing to comply with the conditions imposed by Section 1 hereof shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof, shall be subject to a fine not to exceed TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS and each and every day's violation thereof shall constitute a separate and distinct offense.

The failure of any corporation owning or operating the subject property to comply with any of the conditions imposed by Section 1 hereof shall render the President, Vice-President, General Manager, Local Manager and Local Agent liable to the penalty prescribed in this section.

And It Is So Ordered.
