County Candidate Questions Commissioner Compassion

George Wallace hands television viewers a choice in the May 1 Democratic presidential primary. Wallace was in town last week to solicit votes for his campaign. During his brief Lubbock visit, the governor of Alabama appeared at a local television studio to tape an interview program. He dismissed statements that he was out of the presidential race, claiming he had received the second highest popular vote total in the Democratic primaries so far.

FCC Decisions Could Decide Future of Telephone Service Here

Bills recently introduced in both houses of Congress could decide the future of telephone service in Lubbock and throughout the country. Rep. Barbara Jordan is co-sponsoring the House version.

Bob Dunbar, division manager for Southwestern Bell in Lubbock, said recent decisions by federal regulators will have significant adverse impact on the cost and quality of service to the average consumer.

"These decisions by the Federal Communications Commission were designed apparently to inject competition into two markets—communications equipment and intercity private line business service," Dunbar said. "What has developed instead is a government-imposed division of responsibility for service and a pricing structure that will hurt 'the little guy'."

Bills introduced in the U.S. Senate and House in March to protect the interests of the average telecommunications user.

These measures are also supported by virtually the entire telephone industry, including labor unions, independent telephone companies and the Bell System, Dunbar said.

"The legislation would reaffirm the principles of the Communications Act of 1934 and ensure that decisions made on national telecommunications policy are in the public interest," Dunbar said. "To that end, this is clearly a consumer interest issue that deserves full and wide public debate."

Dunbar said the American public is largely unaware of the economic and service consequences of decisions now being made.

"For example, telephone company competitors in intercity private line business services can pick and choose which customers and calling routes to serve," Dunbar explained.

In contrast, Dunbar said, (Continued On Page Eleven)

A candidate for county commissioner last Friday said that unless compassion is brought into the county government, the present turmoil in the county jails will spread to other sections in the county.

Roger Settler, currently running for Precinct Three on the Commissioners Court, said he would "answer needs before they reach the boiling point" if he was elected.

"What we need is a turn from benign neglect to a system which emphasizes compassion," Settler told media representatives in a Hilton Inn press conference. "We simply cannot elect new faces; we need a new philosophy on the commissioner's court."

As part of that philosophy the Texas Tech graduate student said he would "vigorously push" for a juvenile detention center and a new county jail.

"In 1976, juveniles are still confined on the 5th floor of the county jail, and they are confined to numerous religious homes," he stated. Since 1970, the League of Women Voters and various high school groups have been pushing for a detention center, Settler noted.

He told the media that he was "opposed on principle" to detaining juveniles in the county jail or in private homes. They should not be confined in "homes of religious indoctrination" either, he said.

Settler labeled the county jail an "antiquated facility" which "promotes unrest, disorder, and a desire to escape." Communications within the jail are substandard, the plumbing is 30 years old, and the lock system has been used for 40 years, he said.

"The current system is set up for abuse."

The candidate said it would be "phenomenally expensive" to pursue current jail renovation plans.

"For the same expense, we could build a new one," he said. That facility would include a closed circuit television system to monitor the prisoners, be built on one or two stories, and have jail cells facing an open courtyard so cell activity could be centrally monitored by a sheriff's deputy.

The present county cash reserves were adequate to cover the costs for the facility, Settler said. Methods for financing both the jail and the detention center could include a bond issue. He said he was "confident the voters would approve both."

Roger Settler said the current county government does not represent members of the minority communities in the county.

"We need a minority representative," he said. As a Nez Perce Indian and a member of the Texas Tech community, Settler said he could address the issues affecting minorities in the county.

Among other issues discussed by the Lubbock County resident were tax reform and the need to eliminate root causes of crime. Lubbock county residents were being overtaxed while special groups such as farmers and businesses—including the shops at the South Plains Mall—received special tax breaks, he noted.

The best way to break the cycle of crime, he stated, was to spend more money on the "right social programs." Settler also took issue with the role of capital punishment in deterring crime.

"Capital punishment is not a deterrent to murder. It never has been," he said. "We've got to

19th Annual Meeting Set at Ford Memorial Church of God in Christ

The 19th annual setting of the ministers and workers meeting of the Church of God in Christ, Northwest Jurisdiction of Texas, is now convening through Saturday, April 24, at the Ford Memorial Church of God in Christ, 1602 Quirt Avenue. The Right Reverend J.E. Alexander, Presiding Bishop, is blessed to have one of the few remaining Bishops who was consecrated to the bishopship by our late founder and chief apostle, Bishop Charles Harrison Mason.

The executive members of the district are thankful for such an illustrious leader as Bishop Alexander. Under his leadership, the state has grown from six districts to twenty, at the present time.

The state has maintained peace and tranquility throughout these past 19 years. The staff and executive members hope God will continue to bless Bishop Alexander with longevity and health to lead them on to victory.

The public is invited to our services. Each service will begin each day at 11 a.m. with Bible and doctrinal teaching. Prayer will be offered for the sick in any service.

Friday, April 23, will be Women's Day. This special program will be arranged by the Women's Department with our State Supervisor Mother, Myrtle Brooks.

Monday evening was "Homecoming Night," with the program under the supervision of Mrs. J.E. Alexander. She presented choirs from throughout the area.

The state executive committee members are State Bishop J.E. Alexander; E.N. Givens, first vice president; Supt. M.J. Alexander, second vice president; H.W. Cortez, state chairman; Y.B. Brooks, treasurer; C.S. Johnson, financial secretary; W.C. Kenan, state public relations; and J.B. Mason, state executive secretary.

Towards A Representative City Government

Attempts to change the system of electing representatives to city government in this city are not new to this area. What is new, of course, is the attempt to do it by law. But that is the result of the council's failure to take action itself to make the system of government more representative of the people in this city. Often the federal government imposes its own method of making local areas comply with Constitutional ideas when these areas neglect to take the action themselves.

In the past, the council has made only a half-hearted effort to explore changes in the system of electing council representatives. At the urging of the minority communities and the League of Women Voters, city council appointed a blue ribbon committee to study proposals for change. A less than satisfactory plan was presented in January 1975 and voted down by Lubbock citizens. Now it appears that a federal court will impose its plan on the city.

A different proposal from the original blue ribbon plan which called for a six member council with three members voted on within a geographic district and three members plus the mayor elected at large, was proposed by members of the minority community then. It called for a 7 member council (including a mayor) with each of the six council candidates required to reside in one of six districts in the city.

Someone running for Place V on the council would need to reside in district five. All of the districts would be equal in population. The mayor could reside anywhere within the city limits. Members on the council would be subject to an at-large vote by the general populace, a provision which was included to guarantee against the alleged corruption of the ward system.

This method produces a voice on the council who represents a section or a group of city neighborhoods.

The Times endorses the second plan for renovation of the council. Until the council is made to conform with the provisions of the 1972 Voting Rights Act—either by its own will and volition, or lacking the desire—through the action of a federal court, the neighborhoods in the northern and eastern sections of the city will not be represented.

There are many examples how these neighborhoods are often outvoted, but a recent one will suffice. Last week, the council okayed for sale a $1.58 million bond issue voted on by the general public for paving roads SOUTH of the loop and WEST of University Avenue. The entire city is taxed for the paving.

"We only pave the roads that need it," a city official said of the bond issue. The next time you have a chance, look out of your windows into the street that runs through your neighborhood. And next Sunday take a drive through southwest Lubbock. Sunday night ask yourself, if there is a voice from your neighborhood on the city council.

"As I See It"

by T.J. Patterson

It's always a pleasure to see people working with young people in our community. Last Sunday evening at Bethel A.M.E. Church, Mrs. Lillian C. Struggs, retired school teacher from the Lubbock Public School System following forty years of service, was using her talent to help young people in their annual Easter program.

She is still a master of the piano. This writer hopes she will continue to help young people in the primary and intermediate levels of the church.

People like Mrs. Struggs made it possible for a lot of young people to get started in Lubbock. There are Lubbockites who received her teachings in grade one at Ella Iles Elementary School.

Mrs. Struggs, this writer wanted you to know that what you are doing is beautiful. Keep on helping our young boys and girls.

Dr. Don Davis, assistant professor in the government department of the University of Texas at Austin, was right when he pointed out the fact that blacks of today are concerned with more substantive human rights, such as being able to have a good job and provide for their families.

"Much of this was presaged by a statement made by Martin Luther King just prior to his death when he commented that the social revolt was finished and what had to be done now was economic in nature. We've found that it helps very little to be allowed to enter restaurants if one has not the cash to purchase a meal," said Dr. Davis.

His point is well taken. Blacks must find a way to move up the socio-economic ladder in order to be able to provide for themselves and their family. This is especially true for blacks in Lubbock and the South Plains of Texas.

Did you know that there was a reduction in joblessness among blacks as their rate fell 1.2 percentage points to 12.5 percent in March, according to the U.S. Labor Department's Bureau of Labor Statistics. The biggest improvement, however, was among black adult women.

The unemployment rate for black women was 10.1 percent, compared with 12.2 percent in February. For black males, the unemployment rate was 10.3 percent in March, and 11.2 percentage in February.

Classes are almost out for the public schools again. This writer hopes next year a crossing guard will be placed in the area of Ella Iles Elementary School. There are too many young people walking across East 23rd Street

JACK ANDERSON'S WEEKLY SPECIAL

HOWARD HUGHES AND THE MILITARY

by Jack Anderson with Joe Spear
(Copyright, 1976, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

Washington—The death of Howard Hughes may have a major impact on America's military preparedness.

The late, eccentric billionaire made most of his money doing contract work for the Pentagon. Hughes' military business, moreover, has been growing in the last several years.

In 1973, Hughes' total contracts with the Pentagon ran to $546.7 million. By last year that figure had jumped dramatically to $1.026 billion. Many of these projects are crucial to the future national defense. Some military experts fear that the billionaire's death and the resulting disorganization in his empire will delay the work.

Other Hughes companies, meanwhile, have also won key government contracts from other agencies. They have worked for the Justice Department, the Interior Department, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, the Federal Aviation Administration and, of course, the Central Intelligence Agency.

While it is impossible to ascertain the exact figure, knowledgeable sources insist that Hughes' secret contract work for the CIA alone has run into the millions in the last eight or 10 years. His Glomar Explorer Project, for example, cost Uncle Sam upwards of $350 million.

It will take months, and probably even years, to sort out the tangled financial web of Hughes' empire. Meanwhile, Hughes corporate officials insist that it is as busy as usual.

But if Uncle Sam is able to assess high inheritance taxes on Hughes' estate, the company's work for the Pentagon and other agencies could be in jeopardy.

Corporate assets would have to be liquidated, which almost surely would mean job layoffs. This, of course, would delay or even halt production of vital defense systems.

In short, the Internal Revenue Service is not the only agency worried about the state of Howard Hughes' estate.

After the Fall: Washington Post reporters Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein have caused a controversy with their publication of "The Final Days," chronicling Richard Nixon's last days in the White House.

But we have been keeping up with Nixon since he left 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue.

It was a defeated, distraught Richard Nixon who went into seclusion at San Clemente. One source with access to him described him as "totally weary, terribly depressed and completely despondent."

Another source was struck by Nixon's "stark loneliness." The former president was "absolutely alone within himself," the source said. These were his worst days. His nerves were frayed; his conversation sometimes wandered, and he had to take Seconal to sleep.

Nixon's psyche was so "delicate," according to our sources, that loyal aides would take visitors aside and caution them not to mention Watergate. Nixon even developed a strange inability to repeat the name of the special Watergate prosecutor, Leon Jaworski.

Yet all our sources agree that Nixon always had complete control of his faculties. Slowly, he began to come out of his shell. It helped him to talk things out with his wife, Pat. Sources who overheard some of their conversation tell me Nixon began to pour out his feelings to his wife.

When he came close to death in the hospital, she was constantly at his side. But once she was away for two hours, Nixon plaintively asked for her. Let me quote one source directly on this. "If it hadn't been for Pat," this source said, "Dick would not have survived. Her presence pulled him through."

The former president is now engrossed in his memoirs. Like Woodward and Bernstein, he has tried to reconstruct his final days. He has questioned former aides to help him recall the agonizing details.

Nixon has indicated, of course, that his account will be quite different than the Woodward-Bernstein version. But he hasn't yet committed it to writing, because he hasn't reached this point in his manuscript.

Incidentally, his researchers furnish him with detailed memos, but he is writing his own book . . . in longhand on legal-size yellow pads. Sources who have had access to the unfinished manuscript say it is painfully frank in some places. He blames himself for mishandling Watergate. But most of all, he blames his former chief of staff, H.R. Haldeman.

Today, Richard Nixon's leg pains him when he is on his feet more than an hour. He takes anticoagulants three times a day. And he still requires Seconal to sleep at nights.

But he talks confidently of the future. He believes history will treat him kindly because of his efforts as a peacemaker.

Pistol Packers: On April Fools' Day, a 42-year-old woman tried to walk into the House of Representatives visitors' gallery with a loaded pistol.

It was no prank. She was stopped by the police, who took a .22 caliber automatic from her.

There is no evidence that she planned to shoot up the House of Representatives, as Puerto Rican terrorists did in 1954. She voluntarily surrendered the pistol from her purse. She explained to the police that she was a widow and that a friend had given her the automatic for protection.

But unfortunately for her, the law bans private firearms on the Capitol grounds. So the woman was booked for carrying a concealed deadly weapon.

The new X-ray devices in congressional offices have turned up eight guns. Capitol Police Chief James Powell says all eight were carried by "misguided people," not potential assassins.

Clarence Reed White

Scientist

Clarence Reed White was born November 8, 1907, in McKamie, Arkansas. He received a scholarship in Amherst College in Massachusetts and enrolled there in 1924, graduating four years later, receiving a M.A. Degree. While with the U.S. Army Signal Corps, he was assigned to work with a team of scientists experimenting with methods to determine the distance from the earth to the moon. They successfully beamed radar to the moon and received a signal back. Mr. White was one of the first scientists to consider the possibility of sending a man to the moon.

On June 26, 1951, he received a copyright on his design of a two-dimensional slide rule. It made possible the addition and subtraction in addition to the usual operations of the slide rule. Other scientific contributions for which copyrights were issued include: nomographic computers as a two-dimensional slide rule, network impedance calculator, and a proposal for dynamical and theoretical astronomy.

Clarence Reed White was cited in "American Men of Science", "Who's Who in American Education" and "Who's Who in the South West".

Boy Scout Sustaining Membership Committee Reports Progress

A recent report meeting of the South Plains Council, Boy Scouts of America, Sustaining Membership Steering Committee, brought the total of the goal now reached to $177,000, reported Dr. John Bradford, Chairman.

Several deviations are over their goal and it is anticipated that the Council will reach its total goal by April 26th.

Plans are being made for a Victory Dinner to be held on Tuesday, April 27th. Most encouraging reports are coming in every day and we are confident that our Council goal will be reached on our report date so that we may celebrate a great success of April 27th, Bradford stated.

Max Tidmore, Council President, stated that it is most gratifying to see the great number of people who have worked so enthusiastically to make this membership enrollment successful. Thousands of our youth and Scout leaders will benefit from this successful venture with the help, program and facilities made available to them as a result of enrollment, Tidmore stated.

People who hurry through this life meet death that much earlier.

Few people complain about being over-rewarded by life's fortunes.

Have you ever met anyone who had nothing to complain about?

Looking Back Over The Years . . .

"No Way Will East Lubbock Die," Says Charles Frederick Cooke, Jr.

by T.J. Patterson

(Editor's note: This is part two of an interview with Charles Frederick Cooke, Jr., a native of Waco and resident of Lubbock since 1951. "We need qualified blacks running for political office, state, county and city," he says.)

Mr. Cooke, how do you feel about blacks in politics in Lubbock?

"You know, politics is where the action really is. I feel as though we (blacks) should have representation in city, county and state government. The way it is now, we don't know what is happening. We're just going to have to find some way to put someone where the action is. As a matter of fact, we are a part of Lubbock and unless we get some representation, we'll continue to be left out of what's going on in Lubbock."

How do you feel about the suit being filed by Gene Gaines?

"You know, he is absolutely right. If you look at it, there are just a few people out there in southwest Lubbock who represent the entire city. They don't know our problems over here in east Lubbock. We have more problems over here than they have over there. They don't know what's happening. So, Gene Gaines is right in what he is doing. I feel that we should have some representation."

Do you see a black being elected to any public office in Lubbock in the near future?

"Well, yes, I do. We will need qualified blacks running for office in order for a black to be elected."

What do you mean by qualified?

"We need blacks who are civic minded and have participated in community activities. We need someone elected who really knows what's going on in our community. In other words, we need some people who are for the community as a whole. We don't need anyone running for public office just because he can. We need black people who are involved in the community and willing to work for the entire city of Lubbock. I feel as though a person like this will have a better chance to be elected."

Will blacks vote in the run-off election between Carolyn Jordan and Roy Middleton?

"Yes, I believe blacks will make a difference in the race. As you know Carolyn Jordan has her following and Roy Middleton has his. Blacks will determine who will win the election."

Mr. Cooke, did Lubbock help you to grow?

"You know, when I first came here, there were only about 50,000 people. Out there on East 34th Street, there was nothing but farms and cotton. Lubbock has grown since then, and I've been fortunate to grown with it. I'm proud of the new airport we've just constructed here, as well as the civic center. I've seen Lubbock come a long way and I'm proud of this growing, because Lubbock has helped me to grow."

Are black kids getting a quality education as compared to the time you came here?

"Oh, yes, I think they're getting a better education now. When I first came to Lubbock, the schools were not like they are now. A lot of things they didn't teach then, they are teaching now. I think integration had a lot to do with the upgrading of the black schools in Lubbock."

Are the schools really integrated in Lubbock?

"They were not integrated when I first came here. The schools have been greatly upgraded. I would say they are integrated more so now than when I first came here. Because of integration, they did improve Dunbar High School a lot. When they integrated Dunbar, the school board gave Dunbar things it never had before. They improved the building and other facilities. Seemingly, they even found more money for Dunbar to work with. According to some of the former black teachers, most of the departments have at least ten times more money to work with than they did when the school was all black. So from that perspective, integration did help the once all black schools in Lubbock. At Dunbar today, they offer courses that I didn't have in high school. I must confess that integration has improved schools quite a bit. All the schools in east Lubbock have been upgraded."

Mr. Cooke, are black kids getting qualified teachers?

"When white teachers come into out community (east Lubbock) and teach our children as they would any other child, without regard to any special problem, our black children's don't have any less or any more problems than other children in the city or country. They are children and they must be treated as such. These kids must be taught with the attitude that children need to learn."

Will east Lubbock survive?

"Oh, yes, it will survive. Let me tell you something about the situation. I could move out of east Lubbock anytime I wanted to do so. Now, I think that east Lubbock has a lot going for it. In my opinion, east Lubbock will move up with the rest of the areas. Actually east Lubbock will never die."

Are you sure it won't die?

"There's no way it will die. East Lubbock is not dead by a long shot. Look, man, you see those Canyon Lakes they are constructing at the present time. Well, the largest lake will be in east Lubbock. Look out my front door and you can see how large this lake will become. This will, itself, help east Lubbock to grow."

Do you think the city of Lubbock will develop this lake to its full potential?

"Well, after going down to city hall last week, I became happy with what the city is doing. There will be a large dam in this area also. If I have anything to do with it, the city will develop this lake to its full potential."

How do you feel about black people moving out of east Lubbock?

"I think black people should have the right to live wherever they choose to live. If that's what they want to do, then it's alright with me."

Mr. Cooke, do you feel as though black businesses will live in east Lubbock?

"Oh, yes, if they are managed like they should be. Black businesses will need to offer first class service and a first class product. If black business people do this, they will survive."

Do we have first class black businesses in east Lubbock?

"Oh, yes, I know we do."

What kind of advice can you leave the young people in Lubbock?

"I would advise every black boy and girl to reach for the stars. If you reach for the stars, you might catch one of them. You must set your goals real high and then start working on it. Don't go through life looking for something for nothing. Just be willing to put forth a maximum amount of effort to achieve what you want in life. All of this can be done by reaching for the stars. It's highly possible that you might get one of them if you reach high enough."

TIPS FOR OUTDOORSMEN

by Vern Sanford

Fly fishing is often referred to as a lost art.

How could this be true when so many anglers have never found it? You can't lose something you don't have, any more than you can come back from some place you haven't been.

But those who don't fly fish sure miss a lot of fun.

Many an expert fisherman was brought up with a fly rod and reel in his hand. He knows the thrill that comes from popping a little bug on top of the water at a far distant spot, or dragging a fly across a quiet area in the lake, or the sudden tug of a trout as it tags that insect in a fast moving stream.

Fly fishing is an art. It takes time to master the technique, but it is a most rewarding outdoor pleasure.

Perhaps the reason why so few anglers are fly fishing today is development of the closed-face spinning reel. This device, which came into being in the late 40's has so simplified angling, and particularly the accuracy of artificial bait casting, that seldom do people try to master the art of fly fishing.

A beginner, with little or no experience and a very short period of training, soon becomes an adept angler with the spinning reel—especially the closed-face model. It seldom permits a backlash and/or

"birdsnest" and casts easily and accurately.

The open-face, bail-type spinning reel (which came to this country from France in the 50's) did much to introduce thousands to the pleasure of angling. But because it virtually simplified everything the closed-face gear tempted many to give it a try.

Seasoned fresh-water fishermen who have learned by experience to properly handle the old standby—the spool-type bait-casting reel—are in most cases "the lunker landers." The reason is two-fold. They have the expertise, the experience and also the gear that is designed to handle the larger fresh water fish with ease.

If you are dubious as to what rig you might like best, start with the least complicated—the closed-face spinning reel. It's the easiest to master, possibly the cheapest to buy, and can be used for most everything from the tiny perch to a five or six pound bass—and even does a pretty good job of landing the little speckled trout and the small kings in the Gulf of Mexico.

One thing we would heartily recommend is—when you make your decision as to the outfit you want to learn to use—stick with it until you master it well. Don't try to learn them all at once. You'll find that very frustrating. Keep in mind the old saying "Jack of all trades and master of none."

SPORTS

by Joe Kelly

Texas Tech completed three weeks of spring grid drills last Saturday and there was marked improvement over the second week's scrimmage. And that's the way it should be.

The contact was harder and you could hear the action in the stands. Also, the offense looked a little more polished and the defense looked a little stronger. You must remember, though, that it was the No. 1 offense and No. 1 defense going against the rest.

The encouraging thing is that, when you put the squad together, there is somewhat more strength than a year ago. The starting backfield is almost certainly set and Saturday's scrimmage did nothing to make it look weaker.

Despite the score, the offense wasn't consistent enough, but one pleasing thing was a punt return for a touchdown, along with three TD passes.

The defense has a way to go, although there were bright spots. It indicates that this phase, which was weak last year, should be stronger, although still not of the overpowering variety.

Don Roberts, who started at quarterback and then was shifted to flanker last year and to defensive halfback at the start of drills this spring, impressed again at a cornerback. For two weeks now he has stood out.

Tommy Duniven and Rodney Allison continued on an even-Stephen basis at quarterback, but it was Duniven who took his squad on a long sustained march for a TD. The drive looked strong.

Duniven's passing was adequate, although he overshot receivers a couple of times and he also had passes dropped. Coach Steve Sloan wants to bring a third quarterback along and put Allison on the red shirt list and he may be able to do that.

A week from tomorrow will be the spring game and a big crowd isn't anticipated. Unfortunately, spring games at Tech never have drawn well, although they usually are interesting.

But the real football fan will get his money's worth, because the players will go all out and you can't hide individual ability. The players who look good in the spring game are the ones who will be stars next fall.

I'm not a member of the National Rifle Association, or any other group interested in preserving the freedom of American citizens to bear arms, but I'm sympathetic.

Legislation to control handguns, or any other firearms, seems to me to be a waste of time and money. The criminal element is going to get any guns it wants, while law abiding citizens would be forced, under proposed laws, to give up the ones they have.

Prohibition didn't keep people who wanted liquor from obtaining it; banning of firearms wouldn't prevent people wanting guns or obtain them, either.

In a way, the featured story in Sunday's Easter morning edition of the local advertising bird cage litter gave support to how ridiculous gun control is. The story featured a murderer, whose method was decapitation with a scalpel, knife, or some other sharply honed instrument. No bang! bang! for him.

They're playing baseball in the major leagues and despite Saturday's 17-1 and 18-16 games, most of the battles have gone about the way most "normal" baseball games go.

West Texas fans probably didn't even raise an eyebrow over the 17-1 and 18-16 scores, not if they used to watch WT-NM League games on Sundays. They almost called for a saliva test in those days if the scores were 2-1, or anything like that.

It isn't too late to salute Willie Mays for observations he made at the time of the lockout, the quasi-strike and the general who-shot-John disagreement.

Willie remarked that his biggest concern was for the fans who didn't give a tinker's dam about who was right or wrong, but who wanted to see baseball. Willie said that he always put the fan first, and that's the way he did play baseball.

The poor slob making $10,000 a year or less and who sees taxes eat heavily into that isn't going to sit around spilling tears in his beer over players demanding $1 million a year or over three years.

That guy, who pays hard earned money, where he can, to see a major league game isn't going to be concerned for either side. All he wants is baseball and to heck with the rest of the world.

THE ROUNDUP—The All America game is only two months from this past Monday . . . Donny Anderson said, at the Red Raider Club dinner t'other night, that his greatest joy is working with young boys . . . I sat sandwiched between Dr. and Mrs. Wally Hess and the Jackie Sullivans, while across the table were Pete West and Herman Brown. And I came out of alive! . . . Bobby Knight, who obviously is successful, came through as a somewhat irreverent young man with slightly more self confidence than most. But there was meat on the bone in his talk if you listened . . . and then there's my neighbor who thought that an Aggie was a prize marble.

telephone companies are obligated to serve all customers, regardless of where they are or what it costs to provide them service.

"We average our rates regardless of our costs, so everyone can afford a telephone. But the new competitors have been permitted to concentrate their efforts on just the high-profit routes. Since costs on those routes are lower they can undercut prices of existing carriers," Dunbar said.

He said telephone companies have reluctantly departed from average pricing in the intercity private line business market. "Reluctantly because small town users, such as newspapers, are hit with higher rates.

"But we have to do it or lose all our profitable private line business to cream skimmers. And even our efforts to make our rates competitive have been delayed or stymied by federal regulators."

Dunbar said that losing business to the competitors ultimately places a burden on small telephone users—especially residence customers.

"If we lose private line business revenue, we lose its revenue contribution to local service, which helps keep basic rates low. The heaviest impact falls on people with low or fixed incomes, small businesses and smaller communities where service is more expensive to provide."

Dunbar added that recent FCC decisions permitting the direct connection of customer-owned equipment will ultimately lead to poorer service.

"Telephone service in the United States is the best in the world. One reason for that is Congress decided long ago that one company should have total responsibility for service in a given area. That concept has worked well.

"Dividing that responsibility can only lead to a deterioration in quality of service. At the same time, telephone company losses in revenues from specialized equipment and services eventually will result in higher rates for basic service. Again, the average consumer loses."

Dunbar acknowledge that not everyone will agree with the telephone industry viewpoint.

"But we strongly believe that the public—through their elected representatives—should have a chance to decide what the future direction of our national telecommunications policy will be."

FEATHER BEDS

At the first sign of cold weather it was time to get out the feather beds. They were kept rolled up with a strap around them in closets or attics. Regular cotton mattresses stayed on the beds year round and the feather mattresses were unrolled right on top of them. They were inspected and mended if necessary. Then the mattress was fluffed up and several blankets and quilts were put on top.

In the early days of gas heaters it was dangerous to leave them on at night so they were turned off. Fires in wood stoves and fireplaces would burn down before morning and the house would get very cold. Bedrooms were usually not heated at all and were closed off from the rest of the house all day. The extra cover and feather bed were absolutely necessary if one was to stay warm. The covers were icy cold when you first got into bed so you snuggled up in a little ball and soon got warm. Grandmother showed us how to heat ordinary bricks on the stove once. When they were hot enough she would wrap them in a towel or part of an old blanket then put them under the covers at the foot of the bed. It made the bed nice and warm when you went to get in it and the warmth of the bricks lasted for hours.

Feather beds were very soft and when fluffed up just right you could just sink down in them and let the sides sorta come up around you to keep you warm. They were made mostly of goose down, the feathers from the breasts of geese. Geese were plucked at certain times of the year and the feathers were saved. When enough were collected a large sack was made out of ticking. It was filled with the down and stitched up tight. Just about everyone had them, one for each bed.

Come spring and warm weather the feather mattresses were removed, usually the day "spring cleaning" took place. All the mattresses (including the cotton ones) were taken out in the yard to sun. They were laid on boards or saw horses and left there all day so that they could air out and the sunshine could kill all the vermin and odors that might be hiding there. That was a good idea unless it happened to come a sudden shower or sand storm. After soaking up sufficient sunshine the cotton mattresses were taken back to the bedsteads and the feather beds were rolled up for summer storage.

What The Candidates Are Saying

Democracies were a source of unending puzzlement to Plato, the Greek political philosopher. After years of careful study, Plato came to understand what most Greeks knew by right of birth—that human beings are motivated by self-interest. This presented a problem to Plato, though. Why would anyone governed by reason want to give up looking after his own affairs and interests to look after the affairs of someone else.

That idea was easy enough to reconcile philosophically; they wouldn't. But while Plato was thinking about this problem, he witnessed citizen after citizen willing to lie, cheat, and bribe his way into political office. That was one of the notable features of a democracy, he felt. Another was that it tended to be among the worst forms of government, though it certainly displayed a lot of variety.

The best society, Plato finally reasoned, was one in which each citizen did what he was most talented for. By doing that, citizens could best look after their own interests. Farmers would farm, shoe salesmen would sell shoes, and philosopher kings would run the government.

With this in mind, we contacted candidates for public office and asked them to send essays concerning themselves and their campaign. We did not receive answers from all the candidates, but the ones we received are published here for your consideration.

We thought you would be interested in reading why these people want the opportunity to look after your affairs, county-wide, state-wide and nationwide.

You can look after your own self-interests by voting in the May 1st primary.

Candidates for State Representative, District 75-B

Bruce Barrick

In selecting our representative, we must find the one who will be the best equipped to serve us. I have served in some capacity in public service for almost eleven years. I believe that I represent our best chance, among those running, for a strong progressive voice in the House of Representatives. This new district allows us to elect for this position either a possible demagogue or a truly concerned citizen. Because this district is a combination of different economic and cultural groups, this situation demands that the next Representative be open and receptive to the concerns of all. He should be able to see the commonalities while still appreciating the differences of each group.

It is incredible that we continue to vote for those politicians who do not help find the solutions, but actually add to the problems. This time it can be different—a new election, some new faces, and, most important of all, a new district, a district where we start with a fresh slate and go forward. We need to elect someone who does not promise that which he cannot produce, who does not say "I understand a little and am willing to learn more," a person who can use his intelligence and experience in public service, a person who can treat every issue with foresight and compassion.

The first representative we elect must use presented facts, statistics and data for ultimately working out the solution for every issue. Our goals should be simple. We demand from whoever is elected that we hear and see him, not just every two years at election time, but throughout his elected term. We demand that the district office be open to all citizens, so when there is a problems, no matter how small, someone will be available who will be sympathetic and will attempt to help solve that problem.

My aims would be: Helping the Social Service programs become more efficient, in order to better serve the people; encouraging our jails and prisons to start rehabilitation, rather than being only institutions for retention; The elimination of discrimination, the aiding of the growing Eastern-Lubbock businessman; the slowing-down of the increasing utility rates; increasing the effectiveness of our education and training programs; the increased control of the citizens over their daily lives; the development of an environment (i.e., Parks and Recreational facilities) so that all can reach their fullest potential as human beings; and, finally, the restoration of confidence in our elected officials.

Our system is basically good and our citizens can, with the aid of intelligent and compassionate leadership, work better in solving the problems that plague us.

Froy Salinas

I was born and reared in Lynn County and have lived at 1306 49th St. for 11 years. I am 36 years old and a senior sales representative for a life insurance company. I am married to the former Olivia Chapa of Tahoka and we have 4 children.

I have served on various advisory committees to the Lubbock Public Schools, Goals for the 70's, Advisory Council of the SBA, Community Planning Council United Fund, Goodwill Board of Directors, and for the past three years served on the city and school Board of Tax Equalization. I am a member of Our Lady of Grace Catholic Church, LULAC and Toastmasters.

My immediate goal is to be the first elected representative of District 75-B. I plan to represent all the people fairly and equally. Several problems face the legislature in 1977 including public school financing, efficiency in state government, water importation for West Texas, crime, and various other issues.

Quality education is a must because our children and their education is of utmost importance to all of us. As a member of the legislature I would favor legislation that would assure every child in the State an equal educational opportunity.

The crime problem in Lubbock continues to increase. There is no simple solution for the prevention of crime. Some possible solutions I would propose would be an additional district court to insure quicker trials, mandatory sentences for convicted armed robbers, and tighter controls on probation for 2nd and 3rd offenders.

The importation of water for the West Texas farming industry is vital to the continued economic growth of this area and I plan to work hard for the importation of water.

I don't claim to know all the answers nor all the problems in our area. No one does. But I do believe this; the average person knows his own problems, and if he just had somewhere to go where he knew someone really wanted to know his problems and would really listen, I think the entire district would be better represented. For this reason, I intend to establish an office within my district where the average voter can come and get an effective hearing for his problems and gripes. I think this office will do two things; it not only will let the voters present their problems, but it will make me a much better informed and more effective representative.

Bobbie Williams

Bobbie Williams is a candidate for State Representative of District 75B. He attended Texas Tech University School of Mechanical Engineering and has worked 9 years as a Design Engineer. He also studied real estate, finance and insurance and owns and operates Bobby Williams Real Estate and Insurance Agency. He hopes to carry to Austin ideas such as conservative fiscal policies, mandatory sentences for hardened criminals, tightening of parole guidelines, de-centralization of government, and interstate highways and freeways for the Lubbock area.

He wants a quality education for all students and a highly specialized vocational school for Lubbock. He is against personal state income taxes and feels that it is imperative that we put God back in our schools and government.

Bobbie feels that inflation, unemployment, crime in the streets and a feasible importation water plan are a few of the major issues facing the voters. He resides here in Lubbock with his wife Cassie and two children, Bobby Jr., age 7 and Monica, age 3.

Ralph Page is a 29 year old candidate for the State Representative District 75-B. He is a former Tech student and served with the U.S. Navy for 3 1/2 years. He is currently employed by Lubbock Swine Breeders, Division of Dekalb Ag Research. Civic Clubs with which he is associated are Lubbock County Chairman, Independent Cattleman Association and the Red Bud Lions Club.

Lee is a Republican; Moderate Conservative and is a member of St. Lukes United Methodist Church. He resides at 1313 65th Drive, Lubbock.

States Mr. Page, "it is my aim to work towards fostering the faith of the people in our election process by: (1) to encourage participation by all citizens; (2) to call or write their suggestions to me; (3) to answer those who ask, "How does the election process work on local, state and Federal levels?"

With regard to the social and economic problems of this city let us go forward to work for positive solutions which benefit ALL the citizens. With the talents of the men and women of this city and the State of Texas, the problems can be solved by working together.

Let us not forget in the heat of the coming campaign the Christian values that have made Lubbock a good and decent place to live.

Platform

1. Tax relief for over 65 age group; i.e., freeze taxes on homestead at age 65.
2. Oppose state income tax.
3. Support more trade schools in the state.
4. Oppose land use legislation.
5. Back to the balanced budget philosophy.
6. Oppose anti-gun legislation.
7. Increase building of water reservoirs in West Texas. Other water programs.
8. Work toward goal of Lubbock as a "Convention City."

progress, and dreamers unafraid of action.
Do we have this same kind of courage?

I am a candidate for state representative, District 75-B. I have lived in Lubbock twenty-five years. I received my entire public school education in Lubbock and I am a graduate of Texas Tech University. Having lived in Lubbock all my life, I feel I can truly represent the people of this district in the state legislature.

Major issues in this campaign, I feel, are taxation and school finance. Concerning taxation, I would support new taxation only where it can be applied to the areas that are not paying their fair share of taxes. I would oppose any new taxes or increases in taxes that fall on the consumers or average taxpayers. I specifically would favor a progressive corporate profits tax because Texas is one of only four states that does not yet have one, and also because it is one form of taxation that by its structure, discourages its being passed on to the consumer. A corporate profits tax would also help alleviate the problems arising in school finance. It is a shame that although Texas is one of the largest and richest states, it ranks among the lowest in per pupil expenditures for public and secondary school pupils. Texas also ranks low in teaching salaries. Considerable revenue could be obtained from the corporate profits tax in order to insure an equal quality education for all our children. There is no reason why Texas should not rank among the top five states in education.

Other key issues in this campaign I think are: (1) Revision of the state constitution; (2) equal rights amendments; (3) increasing crime rate; (4) with the governor's stand on no new taxes, how are we going to maintain the present services now provided by the state at the present rate of inflation.

On the above issues, as well as all others presented to the legislature, my priorities would be to address myself to them in a manner which would best represent my constituents and the betterment of the state as a whole.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

Oh, Alfred baby, I love you! That may start this column with what might seem a bit of irrelevancy but, believe me, I meant every word I said. The "Alfred" to whom I have publicly ascribed my affection is, of course, the 70ish motion picture director-producer Alfred Hitchcock whom the Lord has spared so that he keeps on turning out his singular and fascinating films.

His newest effort, "Family Plot," which is unspooling daily at Showplace 4, is, happily, one of his best. The old boy whose work I have been admiring since his early British days of "The 30 Steps" and the likes, has come up with a brilliant comedy-suspense story that is the epitome of what that old line used to say "Movies are your best entertainment." Entertainment his film is, from start to finish. And, too, the film shows that Hitchcock has moved along with the times, for some of today's language is there, not the bombastic kind of "Cuckoo's Nest," but common garden variety vulgarisms that fit the character and the place. There is a nod to today's sexual mores, too, not underscored, just admitted.

You take an old weathy grande dame who is troubled by the fact that she engineered the giving away of her sister's illegitimate baby years back, who finds her end coming and wishes to locate that baby and give him the family name and fortune. She seeks out a medium (phony) to contact her sister in the beyond.

She engages the medium to help the search, who in turn enlists her unemployed actor boyfriend, quondam taxi driver, and they eventually find themselves involved with the real missing heir, who is engaged in some high activities in kidnapping for diamonds for ransom, along with his expert-in-disguise and unwilling paramour and his henchman, a dedicated "hit" man. From then on the fun is tops and the thrills and intrigues abound.

You'll love "Family Plot," I did. But, be sure to see it from the beginning.

The cast is superb all the way. The medium and cab drive are Barbara Harris and Bruce Dern, ideally matched; the con artists and kidnapers are perfect, William Devane and Karen Black. Cathleen Nesbitt, from the stage's "My Fair Lady" original, as old Mrs. Rainbird, is a gem, while Ed Lauter as the balding hit man is menacing. There is a raft of lesser roles, all excellent. They all spell "Family Plot," ace number one.

While waiting for the above to start, I stepped into the next booth to watch about 20 minutes of a comedy called "The Duchess and the Dirtwater Fox," a pseudo western type. This is the film that award presenters Goldie Hawn and George Segal kept intrusively mentioning on stage during the recent Oscar ceremonies. The film is pleasant, shallow and with good western photography. Like so many of its kind these days, even though it's a PG-rated film, the crude language is there and, in the mouth of Miss Hawn particularly, it is not exactly an asset. Everybody in the film does creditably with what they have to work with (from what I saw) but the film is somewhat lackadaisical and never achieves that belly-laugh level that somebody along the way had obviously intended.

I want to touch base again about last week's mention of "The Bad News Bears," the Walter Matthau-Tatum O'Neal comedy at the Fox. (I called it "The Big Bad Bears" last week, which probably gave an indication of my private, subconscious thinking.) I saw the whole in the interim and found it occasionally, funny, the whole concept marred by the little league baseball team of misfits mouthing some pretty rocky language which proved disturbing and witless, to me. Matthau is good as the drinking coach, a somewhat standard Matthau stint, while O'Neal has past the sharpness of the "Paper Moon" days.

The Lubbock Theatre Centre opens the fourth and final production in its current Bicentennial season plays with Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse's mild comedy, "The Great Sebastians" at 8:15 p.m. tomorrow, Friday, at the LTC Playhouse, 2508 Avenue P. The play repeats at 8:15 p.m. Saturday, Monday and Tuesday, with a 2:15 p.m. matinee on Sunday.

The comedy about a married mind-reading act behind the Iron Curtain, their involvement over a collector's stamp and international intrigue served as a vehicle for the great Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne.

We'll talk about the cast in the follow-up; the play is directed by Wayland Winstead.

Ticket information can be gotten by calling Lubbock Theatre Centre, 744-3681.

This is the first night of the two-night benefit dinner premiere preview of Texas Tech University drama, music and dance departments production of Alan Jay Lerner-Frederick Loewe musical about King Arthur's court, "Camelot," first performed on stage in 1961.

The regular performances of the ambitious show start at University Theater Saturday and plays daily at 8:15 p.m. through May 2.

The director is Joseph B. Kaough, with John Gillas as associate director, Peggy Willis the choreographer and Ron Williams as music director.

As in the aforementioned LTC play, we'll deal with the lengthy cast, in our summary in next week's item. For ticket reservations, give Tech's University Theater a ring.

Four Texas Tech bands will join in a Bicentennial concert, open to the public without charge, at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday in the Municipal Auditorium, and the Air Force Academy Band takes the same stage at 8:15 p.m. Thursday.

There is an engrossing book at the Public Library, just out. If you like movies and remember back when, I think you'll like it. It's by the man who wrote "The Last Detail" and "Cinderella Jones" and bears the provocative title "Tom Mix Died for Your Sins."

Indeed, this is the biography of the famed movie western star, former Oklahoma (from Pennsylvania) cowboy Tom Mix, told in fiction form, with the narrator a fictional companion Kid Bandera. Through this device we follow the rises and falls of Mix and Tony and Bandera through Oklahoma, Montana, Calgary Stampede, New York, Washington, D.C. (for a meeting with President Theodore Roosevelt), Hollywood and Arizona where Mix met his death in an auto accident.

His enormous popularity with fans in the United States and in Europe, the unfortunate passages of his personal life, his libertine habits and his headstrong and winning manner, his ventures after his movie days had slackened with Sells Floto and other circuses, including his own, are all here, told disarmingly and fascinatingly. The term "Tom Mix Died for Your Sins" came from a graffiti painted on an old water tank somewhere in the old West that Mix so loved. Watch for the book; it's worth your time.

Inflation-Fighting HOUSEKEEPING TIPS

How You Can Keep Appliance Papers Together

If you've ever needed to find your washer's warranty or your dryer's operating instructions in the middle of a laundry room crisis—and you haven't the foggiest idea where you stashed them—then you know how important it is to keep such necessary papers together in a readily accessible place.

Everyone who buys a new appliance starts out with a fistful of important papers—warranty letter, parts lists, operating instructions, installation instructions—and the most common practice is to glance over them quickly and stick them into the closest drawer or that favorite catch-all, the "junk drawer."

Then, when it's time to doublecheck them, for whatever reason, it's time to start hunting. There are other complications, too. Perhaps the "closest drawer" was in the kitchen, and the laundry appliances are now in the basement...or was it the catch-all drawer which received those papers? While searching, you may come across papers for appliances you no longer own, but not the ones you are seeking. These annoying problems have plagued homemakers for years, making most of us feel disorganized, inefficient and irritable.

Now, however, there is a solution to the aggravating problem of missing appliance literature. Whirlpool Corporation has introduced a new concept in laundry room convenience—the "Bac-Pak" Laundry Information Center on its '76 washers and dryers. The "Bac-Pak" is an information holder located at the back of each machine to keep all important laundry papers in one place...right with the appliance...where they are needed most.

New laundry room idea keeps papers in one place.

Another convenience feature is the printed instructions on the inside of all the porcelain lids on Whirlpool washers. This lid information guide includes; operating procedures, a list of cycles, wash times, wash and rinse temperatures and agitation and spin speeds. Types of clothes or fabrics for each cycle are listed also to provide a handy quick-check for the correct treatment of each laundry load.

All these new features can help you save on time, confusion and energy while doing the family wash.

CAROLYN JORDAN COUNCILWOMAN

Candidates for State Representative, District 75-A

Xen Harris Oden

Roy Ward

I am a housewife and businesswoman seeking to serve in the Legislature because of my continuing interest in our community's affairs and its economic welfare.

The issues of crime, education and honesty in government are of prime concern to me. With respect to crime, if I'm elected I plan to be involved in the development of legislation aimed at helping us feel safer in our homes and on our streets. Part of this would involve a re-evaluation of the punishments levied for various crimes and possibly the proposal of changes in the penal code in order to better fit the penalty levied to the crime committed.

Education has always been of great concern to me as I'm sure it is to all people, particularly parents. I would support legislation designed to continually improve the quality of education in Texas. The fact that the scores achieved by students on their college boards the past few years have been dropping nationwide and in Texas greatly disturbs me. If elected I intend to make an intense effort to find out why this is happening and explore ways to remedy this situation.

I believe that honesty in government is of great concern to all citizens. Unfortunately much has happened in government in the past years that has caused citizen confidence in their government to diminish to a deplorable level. I want to help eliminate this feeling by citizens, restore confidence in government and hopefully give my constituents a personal representative in Austin. It is also my intention to propose legislation designed to expand the constitutional definition of conflict of interest in order to totally eliminate the possibility of a legislator profiting financially or otherwise because of the position he or she holds in Austin.

At no time in Lubbock's history has the choice of who shall represent it in the Texas House of Representatives been more important and critical than it is this year. The dedicated and loyal service by those who presently hold or have held this position in the past must be continued and built upon.

Lubbock is the eighth largest city in the State. And, with such a large percentage of the Texas House being comprised of members from the more populated metropolitan centers, Lubbock needs more than a vote—the need is for the kind of representation that will work endlessly for the best interests and improvements of this district, without thought of personal gain or gratification. The only reward should be in a job well done.

Lubbock's representation must combine several qualities. Among them I would list the need to be articulate, knowledgeable, congenial, cooperative, sensitive, progressive and farsighted. At the same time, these qualities must be balanced with the ability to make hard, tough, and perhaps sometimes unpopular decisions which would over the long term be in the best interests of, not only the district, but the entire State. Many issues will exist whereby the solution reached will affect not only those of us here, but also people elsewhere in the State. Therefore, our thinking on many occasions must overlap district lines and seek broader horizons.

Certainly in this day and age, the west Lubbock representative must possess a keen sense of the nature of fiscal responsibility, and then act accordingly. My thinking at this point includes not only the need to live within a balanced budget (something with which all thinking people are more acutely aware), but it also includes the ability to choose among the many varied proposals that come before the legislature and decide which are necessary priorities.

The challenge which stands before the next session of the legislature lies not with how much money can be spent before we reach the limits of expected income, but rather the challenge is to pass quality legislation that will be beneficial, positive and progressive for the entire State.

An item high on the minds of many voters I have talked with is a concern for personal freedom—that the rights of the individual will not be taken away at any level of government. The government should exist for the purpose of providing the kind of conducive atmosphere whereby the individual citizen can work and produce to the best of his or her ability, without fear of governmental encroachment. The free enterprise concept without unnecessary governmental controls is something which we should strive to maintain at all costs, at every level of government.

An issue of extreme importance to me is the ever increasing need on the part of all elected officials for integrity and forthrightness. A recent Louis Harris poll points to this fact. Mr. Harris' question to those being polled us, "What are the two or three biggest problems facing people like yourself which you would like to see the next president do something about?" Integrity in government ranked third behind the economy and taxes and spending. Harris' poll was concerned primarily with national priorities, but I believe that thoughtful people are concerned with integrity in government at all levels.

I see our effort during the campaign as one whereby we provide the voting public with a truthful, constructive perspective of where we are and where we can go with effective, articulate leadership. My desire is to make sound points about real programs.

I believe that my background, my present business relationships, my understanding of the governmental process, my knowledge of business and its fundamentals, my interest in people and my genuine desire to serve the constituents of District 75-A in enabling us all to move toward realistic and attainable goals places me in an imminently qualified position to serve as the State Representative.

District 75-B

Jim Teaver

I would like to thank the West Texas Times for the opportunity to express my views on issues which are of importance to the people of District 75B. The service of providing information to the voters is essential if we are to maintain a responsible government.

As a candidate for the House of Representatives I feel that the main issues facing Lubbock and its citizens, on a state level, are directly related to funds that support many programs we have in Lubbock.

I am in total support of all educational programs that continue to better the quality of education our young people receive. From elementary to state colleges and universities I will work to see that needed funds are forthcoming.

The people living in District 75B are, for the most part, wage earners. The taxes a man pays on his house has doubled in the last few years. The same can be said for his light and gas bills. People on fixed incomes are having an extremely hard time making ends meet. If relief is not provided, they are not going to be able to maintain a decent standard of living.

There is a new Public Utilities Commission in Austin, created for the purpose of protecting the working man from excessive utility charges. There has also been a lot of money spent examining the fairness of taxes a man pays on his home. I will work and support every effort to see that the cost of living is held to the absolute minimum. Relief must be given to our senior citizens and low income wage earners if he is to provide food, clothing and shelter for his family.

District 75B, with the concentration of people of all races, each having a different problem, require a representative who will listen. I intend to establish an office in the heart of the district, with regular hours, so that everyone will have an opportunity to come and talk to me about these problems and what, as a state representative, I can do to help. In this way I hope to accomplish my main goal and that is to be an effective representative for all the people of District 75B.

Candidates for Lubbock County Sheriff

T. W. Kirkpatrick

I am running for sheriff because Lubbock County needs a change. I will not promise to end crime in 1976, nor will I keep things as they are, because a rising crime rate is not as it should be.

What I will do is work to bring professionalism to the sheriff's office. I am not unqualified to do this. For five years I was a member of the Texas Department of Public Safety, and I have more than 180 hours of instruction with the Lubbock Police Department. While with the DPS, I attended field service training schools sponsored by the agency.

In the complex society we have today, sophisticated training is necessary for the police fighting crime.

As sheriff, I will free my deputies to attend crime prevention seminars offered by the DPS and field service training schools sponsored in this region by the FBI. A trained agency is an effective one.

I will also work to provide adequate equipment for my deputies. More money is spent now on prisoner's razor blades than on deputy's equipment. The department lacks uniforms, adequate salaries, badges, and even red lights for the sheriff's cars. As a result morale is low. By training and equipping the department, by making it professional, county residents will get results.

In this campaign, the issue of the county jail has been raised. I, too, intend to make changes in the facility, but changes towards better security. Jail is not a nice place. It wasn't meant to be. I will install a closed circuit television system to monitor the jail's five floors. Better surveillance will prevent the unrest which keeps deputies off the roads where they

I will also work to establish a county detail where prisoners jailed for lesser crimes can work for the county in return for lighter sentences. The detail will save the county money, and use those who acted against society in rebuilding it. Also, the detail will relieve the boredom and the lack of recreation which results frequently in jail beatings.

Finally, the department will assist prisoners finishing their sentences in finding employment. Employment ends the cycle of crime.

I will also work with county judges to establish a duty officer present on the weekends to accept afixed traffic fines. People arrested for minor weekend offenses now must either post a bond or wait until the magistrate office opens on Mondays.

Professional law enforcement benefits you. I would appreciate your vote Saturday, May 1st.

Jackie Sullivan

Platform—Initiate a workable

jail improvement plan to encourage better inmate behavior: Better mail and visiting conditions, prisoners to have access to cell bunks in the daytime, designate a tank boss (same as trusty), trusty on 3rd floor to eliminate contraband being smuggled into jail, prisoners separated by age and charge, no 1st offenders in cell with hardened criminals, one or three inmates to a cell (but never just two), jailer to make cell checks every 30 minutes, book-in on 2nd floor, some lights are to be left on at night, all prisoners going to court will be taken through the tunnel, newspapers and some magazines permitted.

Fight the rise in crime by answering promptly any and all citizens' complaints, curtail the constant turnover in personnel, strive to encourage the County Commissioners to supply proper funding for needed reforms to bring the jail and the Sheriff's Department up to legal State and Federal standards, pursuant to the Revised Civil Statutes.

Will assume full and total responsibility for the County Jail and the entire operation of the Sheriff's Department.

GOALS—Provide and maintain an improved workable operation of the jail, stay on top of the job by designating qualified and dedicated personnel as departmental heads, be aware of the duties and responsibilities of each employee and follow through to see that the responsibilities are being performed with efficiency and dignity and bring respect to the Sheriff's Department.

Patrol the county roads day and night and answer all calls promptly. Organize a county CB Auxiliary to aid in the prevention of violations and to assist in reporting possible violations. Initiate the necessary precautions to eliminate jail breaks and inmate disturbances and abuse. Curtail the turnover of personnel. Strive to bring the standards of the county jail upward in regard to the provisions of the Revised Civil Statutes of Texas.

The issues affecting your potential constituents are: the rise of crime in this county; the operation of the jail; the constant turnover of personnel; and the investigatory procedures to solve murder and crime.

Bill Webb

As a candidate for the office of County Sheriff in Lubbock County, Texas, I offer over 6 years experience in law enforcement. I have been a resident of Lubbock for 15 years and am a Certified Texas Peace Officer with approximately 400 hours of study in law enforcement and jail management with the Texas Law Enforcement Commission.

My goal is to raise the standards and efficiency of the County Sheriff's Office as the senior law enforcement agency in the county. This can be partly accomplished through the use of the Sheriff's power to exercise bonding rights which would increase the difficulty for repeating felons to post bonds. There is a need for better communications between the members within this agency and also between the county and city agencies.

I will inaugurate an Auxillary Deputy Program which will increase manpower without additional expense to the taxpayer. A person appointed as such would ride with a regular deputy during peak crime hours. These auxillary deputies would normally be currently involved in the full time study of law enforcement and would work on a voluntary basis, giving them valuable on-the-job experience.

There should be a separate branch within the County Sheriff's Office for processing civil papers. This work is presently tying up the full time of several deputies and could be done much less expensively by regular office-type employees, thereby allowing an immediate increase in trained manpower with which to protect our county.

The rising crime rate along with the increasing population of our county demands an on-going expansion of the County Sheriff's Office in like proportions. Complete cooperation with the County Commission will insure their full understanding of the needs of the County Sheriff's Office in order that they may make appropriate decisions for the good of all citizens.

VEGETABLE GARDENING
IN CONTAINERS

The warm weather the Lubbock area has been receiving lately is a definite indication that spring is here. And with the season people are coming out of the woodwork, and into the garden!

But if your vegetable gardening is limited by insufficient space or an unsuitable area like mine is, why not try raising nutritious, fresh vegetables in containers! A window sill, a patio, a balcony or a doorstep will be a great place for a productive mini-garden.

Almost any vegetable that will grow in a typical backyard garden will also do well as a container grown plant. Tomatoes, peppers, green onions, beans, lettuce, squash, radishes, and parsley are good suggestions for this area.

Synthetic "soils" are best suited for vegetable container gardening. These mixes may be composed of sawdust, wood chips, peat moss, perlite, vermiculite or almost any other type of media. It must be free of disease and weeds, hold moisture and nutrients, but drain well and be lightweight.

If you would like to mix your own, the Extension Horticulture Specialists suggest the following:

To one bushel each of horticulture grade vermiculite, and peat moss add 10 tablespoons of limestone, 5 tablespoons of 0-20-2 superphosphate and 1 cup of garden fertilizer such as 6-12-12 or 5-10-10.

Mix well adding a little water to reduce dust. Wet the mix thoroughly prior to seeding or transplanting.

The sky is almost the limit in choosing containers. Try using bushel baskets, drums, gallon cans, tubs or wooden boxes. The size varies according to the crop selection and available space.

Six to ten inch pots are satisfactory for green onions, parsley and herbs. Five gallon containers are the most suitable for vegetable crops such as tomatoes, peppers and eggplant.

Remember—adequate drainage is very necessary! Add about one inch of coarse gravel in the bottom of the container to improve drainage. The drain holes are best if located along the side of the container 1/4 to 1/2 inch from the bottom.

For more information on seeding and transplanting, fertilizing, watering, light, disease and insects, and harvesting, call the Extension office (763-5351, Ext. 235) and ask for the "Vegetable Gardening in Containers" booklet.

Beef is A Bargain In Supermarkets Now

If you're after a bargain at the supermarket—and who isn't—buy a supply of beef this week. Stock up, fill your freezer, get ready for the barbecue season, because beef is likely to be higher priced during the summer months, according to information provided by the Texas Cattle Feeders Association.

In mid-January, the average price of Choice beef stood at $1.48 per pound, but this week, the average price of Choice beef dropped to a low of $1.31 per pound—a 13% reduction in price.

Why the sudden drop in price? "Cattle slaughter during the first quarter of 1976 is 11% above last year and calf slaughter is running 25% ahead of last year," says Jim Gill, market analyst for TCFA.

But things don't look as rosy for the consumer during the second quarter of the year (April-June). "Fed cattle marketings during the second quarter will be sharply lower than the first quarter of this year," Gill added.

Why? "Placements in feedyards last fall and winter dropped as much as 25% to 30%. Also fewer cows and calves will be moving to slaughter as pastures begin to "green up" and provide grazing," Gill says.

What about competition from other meat? Won't they bring the price of beef down? "Not likely," Gill explains. Pork production is nearing last year's level, but is not likely to show any added increases until next fall. Thus, there will not be any increased competition from pork during the second quarter of this year.

Gill says there will be less beef on the market in the next few months and prices will begin a gradual upturn this week.

So, now is the time to stock your freezer with Choice beef before prices begin their upward trend. "Beef prices may now have reached their low point for the entire year," Gill added.

Poor health is an alibi more often than a fact.

Candidates for County Commissioner, Precinct 3

Adolphus Cleveland

My firsthand experience in the fields of education, law enforcement, community outreach, mental health and civic and institutional leadership, uniquely qualify me for the duties and responsibilities of Lubbock County Commissioner, Precinct Three.

If elected I will support: 1) A continuation of the pay-as-you-go policy currently established in county government; 2) A commitment to guarantee the funding of the juvenile probation department, at least, at its present program level; 3) Having a designated and announced time each month to meet with precinct constituents to receive requests, answer questions, and inform them regarding the situation in county government; 4) Improved and more harmonious city-county cooperation on shared services; 5) Giving maximum feasible support to the Lubbock County Hospital District; 6) Continuing a high quality of road maintenance and highway improvements; 7) A constant effort to support programs which promote strong and responsive local government; 8) The establishment of a plan to purchase voting machines for Lubbock County; 9) And participation in all available programs that are beneficial as spurs to the economic development of Lubbock County.

Jim Lancaster

I have lived in Lubbock County for 36 years and in Idalou for 8 years. I am 46 years of age. I am committed to sound county government, and I enter this race because I want the opportunity to serve the people of Lubbock County as Commissioner, Precinct 3. Sissie, my wife, and I have two children: Melinda, 16; and Butch, 10. Both attend Idalou Public Schools. I have worked as an engineer for Santa Fe Railway for 28 years. I am Chairman of the Board, Idalou United Methodist Church; Past President, Idalou Baseball (now on the Board of Directors), active in Boy Scouts and other community and area activities. I am a Korean veteran. My platform is sound—representative and responsible—county government. County commissioners must represent the people and be responsible to the people. Sound government means, to me, providing the people with needed services within the scope of sound financial policies.

A major goal, if elected, is the development of harmony between municipal and county governments so that there is as little duplication of services and waste of financial resources as possible. I will work with the Lubbock County Hospital District, Texas Tech University, and other concerned agencies to complete the work on the teaching hospital.

A major concern is to work with the District Judges and Sheriff's Office to assure the adequacy of the juvenile detention facilities and to bring that question to a responsible resolution.

We must be concerned with both agricultural and industrial growth in our area. That means that we will need to continue to explore the question of water importation to this area, not only for agricultural support but for industrial support as well.

I believe that by following sound—representative and responsible—principles of government, we can keep Lubbock County free of debt and provide needed services.

Roger Settler

Platform

- 1) Build a modern juvenile detention facility for Lubbock County, in which juveniles will be able to receive proper medical, psychiatric and rehabilitative care and counseling;
- 2) Construct a new County jail according to Texas State standards, emphasizing decent and humane treatment of prisoners, proper supervision, and medical and recreational facilities;
- 3) Devise a fair and equitable system of taxation for Lubbock County, with reasonable assessments and equal treatment for all taxpayers;
- 4) Budget County taxation in a fashion which will not tax citizens more than is necessary for planned expenditures . . . the current County surpluses represent overtaxation, not fiscal restraint;
- 5) Review all County agencies and personnel, in order to eliminate waste, overstaffing, and duplication of facilities and services;
- 6) Develop better rapport with the Lubbock City Council, and more cooperation in shared services and programs;
- 7) Eliminate any graft or corruption which may exist in County agencies;
- 8) Represent the minority sectors of the Lubbock County population which have been methodically and maliciously excluded from participation in, and consideration by County government.

Goals

- 1) Bring compassion and sensitivity to County government, so that the needs and desires of the people will be the highest priority;
- 2) Strive to regain the trust and respect of the people;
- 3) Enforce the laws fairly and humanely for all citizens, regardless of race, religion, or economic status;
- 4) Oversee and regulate all agencies, boards, and elected officials under the control of the County Commissioners so that these goals may be accomplished in reality.

Ordinances or Legislation

The County Commissioners do not have ordinance-making powers, and cannot pass legislation; however, their power resides in appointment, regulation, and budget allocations for a wide range of agencies, boards, and elected County officials.

Issues

The major problem facing us are taxation; jail and juvenile detention facilities; waste, corruption and inefficiency; lack of minority and student representation; Council-Commissioner disputes; and reactionary attitudes in government.

Bill Skirlock

I am 46 years of age and a native of the Lubbock area, I am married and reside in Idalou.

I have been in business in Idalou since 1968, a member of the Church of Christ and the Lions Club.

I served as Justice of the Peace of Precinct 3 from July 1971 until December 31, 1975. The Justice of the Peace post acquainted me with many areas of county government and I feel this would help to more efficiently handle the job of county Commissioner. Running my own business since 1968 in Idalou, I feel has given me

Ringling The Bell

with Bob Tieucl

From a Black Perspective: Black students were recently urged by a prominent black journalism educator at Michigan State University to consider careers in journalism in order to put an end to the exclusion of blacks by the media and to make the media more responsive to the needs and concerns of the black community.

Samuel Adams, associate professor of journalism at the University of Kansas, stated that the Gannett Newspaper Foundation and the Association of Education in Journalism are sponsoring nation-wide projects to interest black students in pursuing journalism as a full time career.

Blacks comprise 11 percent of the population in the United States, he stated, but there are only 1.9 percent blacks involved in print media. Adams characterized the media as a neutral-animal controlled by the elite for the elite. "Until we do something to change that, you and I will be in serious trouble," Adams asserted.

Adams attributed the lack of black participation in the media to several factors. Among them: many black students in high school are "counseled away" from journalism and students often are not aware of the diversified employment opportunities open to students with a journalism background. He stated that too few black students make a great enough effort to gain experience in journalism while in college.

Adams noted that in his travels to colleges across the country he has found campus dailies to "Be as lilly-white as anything you will find." Black students often use the rationale that they cannot deal with "those racist editors on the campus dailies." His response: "If you cannot make it with those boys in the campus, how are you going to make it with those men out there?"

Blacks who are considering careers in the electronic media also need to develop disciplined writing skills, the black journalist concluded.

Chimes: Prison inmates in the United States generally receive inadequate job training, according to a national survey of 560 correctional institutions made by the U.S. Labor Department. The study found that the number of training programs in each prison was generally inadequate to meet the diversity of inmate training needs. Over half the inmates interviewed wanted types of training that were unavailable in their institutions.

Black Journal (Educational TV) seen in area regularly, recently featured black clairvoyant Lillian Cosby who stated that President Ford will not be elected in November and that "if Teddy Kennedy really makes up his mind to run, he will be elected without a doubt."

"Black Child Care" is the title of a new book, with Dr. James P. Comer, M.D., associate professor of psychiatry and director of Yale University Child Study Center and Dr. Alvin Poussaint, M.D., associate professor of psychiatry, associate dean of students at Harvard Medical School, as authors. Check with your local library for details.

From a Black Business Point of View: "Smokaroma" recently won the best booth award at a recent show of the Wisconsin Restaurant Exposition. The award was given to "Smokaroma" over approximately 175 other exhibits, bellringers report. The Smokaroma is a unique new barbeque cooker which cooks under pressure electrically. It forces the hickory smoke into meat under pressure. It cooks, smokes, and browns, inside the kitchen without air pollution. Smokaroma is manufactured by Gordeo-Lee Company of Boley, Oklahoma. The equipment will be on display at the Annual Birthday and Rodeo celebration of the town on May 28-29-30, when thousands of visitors from over the nation will return to Boley to join Flip Wilson and other celebrities for the annual observance.

the experience needed to handle the job from a business attitude.

I will be a full time commissioner, which is necessary to effectively serve our county.

I favor the pay as you go basis which has worked effectively for our county, and advocate efficient operation will bring no new taxes. I would hope and would work to maintain an effective relationship between the city bodies of government and the county bodies of government, and believe this would improve and help the people of Lubbock County.

When guidelines are established, I support improvement of our county jail. I pledge to serve all of the people of Precinct 3 in a fair and impartial manner, and would give careful consideration to all proposals presented to the Commissioners Court.

It's just as well not to yell for help until you need it.

general election. I plan to offer the voter of Lubbock County an alternative. There are many issues that need to be addressed in order to elect a qualified and responsible candidate that will represent all citizens of Lubbock County.

The most important issues that will be addressed by the County Commissioners in the following years are: 1. Cooperation between the City and County for services. 2. Renovation of detention center, both adult and juvenile. 3. Participation of the County in SPAG.

These are but a few of the problems that need to be solved in the following term of office. I plan to work on each point in the following manner:

1. It is a shame that the question of cooperation between the city and county is again an issue as it has been for the past 5 years. The main reason for this lack of cooperation between them is because there is no communication except when they get together to hassle. We never see county commissioners attending city council meetings on a regular basis or vice-versa and both cannot continue to ignore each other. The health and safety of all residents whether it be within or outside the city limits should be a priority in dealings between city and county officials. Officials should cease to argue about how much money the county or city is going to spend when the real issue is providing fire prevention services to anyone in the county or insuring health and welfare facilities to both city and county residents. I plan to develop communication. I know that I cannot solve problems of fire, medical, library and welfare services by myself but I plan to work to foster cooperation among councilmen and commissioners so that we can solve these problems together.

2. Detention center, especially for juveniles has long been an issue in past elections. My opinion is that we have talked about it long enough. The Juvenile Detention Center has to be built now, no ands or buts about it. Juveniles should not be thrown in jail with repeat criminals. A detention center would better serve the needs of the juveniles in that professional caseworkers could work in more suitable atmosphere to prevent juveniles from becoming repeat offenders. Although a detention center is certainly an issue, we must not let the question cloud the primary objective. That primary objective is to work to eliminate and prevent crime among children. The solution for this problem is between the Commissioners and SPAG is the same one discussed earlier between the city and county communication. The main reason that Lubbock County withdrew from SPAG was because the Commissioners did not want "the federal government dictating to them." In my opinion it was not a coincidence that the Commissioners most strongly objected to putting minorities on the SPAG board. The closed mindedness of the Commissioners must be stopped. We must work toward cooperation and I plan to do everything within my power to acquire it. I would appreciate your support.

Help Flowers Enjoy Beautiful Longevity

It's not just a lot of flowery talk but good gardening sense to help your flowers live to a ripe old age. Here are some suggestions to help you keep your garden looking lovelier longer.

Don't overcrowd. Learn how tall and how wide each plant will grow and seed accordingly. If you have to thin them later, they'll have a better chance of surviving if you do so just after the seedlings have sprouted.

Do plant taller flowers behind shorter ones. It will help heighten your garden's appearance.

Don't plant too deeply. This slows germination and could nip growth in the bud. The seeds should be covered but not buried.

Do protect your plants from pests. The average garden is crawling with creatures that feast on your flowers. You can control many different kinds of insects by spraying Spectracide® Rose and Flower Spray. It contains Diazinon, an effective insecticide that kills most of the chewing and sucking insects that are likely to cause you trouble.

Do use the right fertilizer. The food that makes your grass grow greener may produce anemic-looking flowers. Green thumbs agree that fertilizers with a high percentage of phosphorous are best for your blooms.

Don't pick your posies in full bloom. Select a cutting just before it reaches its prime, and your flowers will look lovelier longer.

Do mass colors rather than mixing them. A pretty garden should leave you with an impression of soft-petaled harmony.

By following these good-gardening suggestions, that lovely little corner of the world—your garden—will stay wreathed in beauty a lot longer.
