A democratic exchange says that there are evidences of a reaction in favor of President Wilson in several of the woman suffrage states. Maybe they resent Mr. Hughes' ostentatious display of whiskers; feeling that such display is an unnecessary and humiliating reminder of their inability to grow similar adornment.

Remember that the crop exhibits shown at the Hall County Fair next week will also form the Dallas Fair exhibit and that the greater variety of crops shown the more interesting the exhibit will be; lend your assistance in bringing or causing to be brought, anything out of the usual line, vegetables, fruits, etc., will be short because of the hot dry summer and your help to make a good display will be appreciated.

From Hall County, Texas.

Hall County is a beautiful country, except the water, which is gippy.
We have cisterns here, but sometimes not enough rain to catch much water.
We have had about six inches of rain the last eleven months. Crops are short. There is lots of cotton that I don't think will make anything at all. The best cotton, maybe, will make a bale to ten acres on the average. I have a family of five. Worked sixty-five acres in cotton, and now I am waiting a place to pick cotton this fall.

Just a few cattlemen own most of the land here, and they came here years ago, when they could buy the land for little or nothing. Very good for cattle when it rains very much.
The wind blows badly here. Sand and dust are terrible. (Signed)

S. A. LOGAN, Parnell, Hall Co.,
Texas.—Dallas News.

We wish to state that the above statement is false. This man had sold this sixty-five acres of cotton for $240.00 before he wrote this letter to the Dallas News. Farmers who live near this crop say that it will make between twenty and twenty-five bales. The cattlemen do not own all the land, they only have land that it would be impossible to cultivate.
This man moved to Harrold in Wil-barger county, and the sand blows just as bad there as it does here and the water is just as gippy. We really think that this man was just too lazy to gather his crop after he had raised it.—Estelline News.

Carry A Spade

It is always possible for people to learn from others, whoever they may be, and Wilbarger County motorists have an opportunity just now to learn from their sister county on the east.
It is reported that every man owning a car there carries a spade and when he finds a rough place in the road he gets out and uses his spade and makes the way easy for the next motorist coming that way. Now this is a fine lesson and if all car owners would learn it at once it would not take many days to get our chug holes filled and the rough places made smooth.—Vernon Record.

FASHION DEPARTMENT

Latest Styles in Dresses and Fabrics and Millinery Compiled by Famous New York Fashion Authority

THE SILHOUETTE OF THE HOUR

STRAIGHT LINES PREDOMINATE AND SKIRTS FALL SOFTLY.

Autumn Colors are Rich and Warm.

From the earlier Paris openings, many shipments of suits and gowns have already come to New York, making it quite clear to what the general trend of the fashions is to be.

The silhouette has not undergone any revolutionary change. There is a quiet dignity and simplicity about the styles, in which we notice that Fashion has taken Moderation to be her watchword. At least for a while—who can say for how long?—she seems to have given up everything that savors of exaggeration. Having realized that the extreme shortness of the skirts was too exaggerated, she ordained that skirts shall be longer. The average length of the skirt today is about six inches from the floor.

any length of time. There have been not a few examples of the low waist of the Moyen Age and this seems to be gaining popular favor at a great rate. A good many one-piece dresses are made with the skirt attached at a low waistline, and a girdele is either tied loosely at that point or arranged at the normal line.

Navy Blue Serge for Autumn
The dark blue serge dress for autumn is ubiquitous, and when it is not trimmed with colored beads or embroidery it is the exception. Some of the beaded and embroidered designs are quite elaborate, but in others it is just a simple touch here and there that gives character to a dress and furnishes the correct spot of color.

Although it is evident that navy blue and black are the favorite autumn colors, still there is quite a large range of other colors to choose from, and they have the advantage over the two former in that they are newer. One gets tired of dark blue and black, so the new colors are welcome not only for the sake of the variety but because they are in themselves very beautiful. Plum and purple have been adopted by Paris, probably on account of their being the colors that are used for second mourning, and the same is true of gray also. Among the other fashionable colors are the rich, warm burgundy, bark green and mustard yellow. In addition to these, brown in several lovely shades is favored.

The Straight Lines of the New Silhouette

There are some Paris houses which have gone to the other extreme, however, and have made dresses with skirts that reach the floor, but the majority of them have struck a happy medium, and it is not at all likely that the days of trailing skirts will come back again. Dresses, too, are free from that extravagant flare which characterized them before, and for the attainment of which we often had to resort to artificial means. This season the flare is conspicuous for its absence, one might say, for most of the dresses hang in straight, soft folds. Nothing has been taken from the width of the skirts. They are just as ample, and the skirt that measures from three to three and a half yards around the hem is still considered a conservative width.

Straight Lines Favored

Although the straight effects predominate in the more practical styles, in afternoon and evening dresses there are some soft draperies to be seen. Apron effects, too, in the form of soft pleated or gathered bits of the material, hang loosely in front of some of the dresses.

The waistline in the new fashions is generally in the normal position where nature meant it to be, but will probably not be stationed there for

An Attractive Afternoon Frock

The silhouette of the hour is well depicted in the illustration of the one-piece frock shown here. The design is such that it may be developed in two materials if desired. The gathered side sections of the skirt, as well as the sleeves and side body, might be of satin and the remainder of the dress of serge. Bone buttons form a straight unbroken line down the front from collar to hem. The collar is open at the throat, for women seem to prefer the open neck to the high even for autumn wear.

Another frock typical of the style of the season is seen in the second illustration. It shows the close bodice, which ends in front in a pointed tab falling over the deep crush girdele. A tassel finishes the tab. This lends a fashionable touch often introduced in this season's frocks. On the skirt the large pointed pockets are the novelty. The points are embroidered to match the front of the waist.

WE CAN SAVE YOU MONEY!

On your fall bill and we ask for it strictly on the quality of our goods and the extremely low prices we are making

If you recall our advertisement during the early part of March of this year, we told our friends and customers that all goods were advancing rapidly in price and advised them to buy their wants in staple dry goods and shoes for at least the next six months. If you have bought anything in any line recently, you will realize the wisdom of our advice. We again want to advise our friends and customers to buy their fall dry goods early and to buy sufficient goods to last them for the entire season. Prices are high and are still advancing, and unless something unusual occurs, when the present stocks of goods in the merchants hands are sold out, and they have to buy again, you are going to have to pay much more than you are paying at the present time.

We realized the conditions last February when we were in market and we began to buy our fall goods early in all lines. Lots of the goods that we have just received and are receiving today were bought as early as last February and March, as a consequence we own a good many lines of goods as cheaply or practically as cheap as we did last spring. We own them right; we are going to sell them right, as a consequence you will find that

20,000 Leagues Under the Sea

BY JULES VERNE

First and Greatest Story of a Submarine

Soon forms of objects outlined in the distance were discernible. I recognized magnificent rocks, hung with a tapestry of zoophytes of the most beautiful kind and I was at first struck by the peculiar effect of this medium.

It was, then, ten in the morning; the rays of the sun struck the surface of the waves at rather an oblique angle, and at the touch of their light, decomposed by refraction as through a prism, flowers, rocks, plants, shells, and polypi were shaded at the edges by the seven solar colors.

All these wonders I saw in the space of a quarter of a mile, scarcely stopping and following Capt. Nemo, who beckoned me on by signs. Soon the nature of the soil changed; to be sandy plain succeeded an extent of slimy mud. We then traveled over a plain of sea weed of wild and luxuriant vegetation. We had quitted the Nautilus about an hour and a half. It was near noon.

At this moment Capt. Nemo stopped he waited till I joined him, and then pointed to an obscure mass looming in the shadow at a short distance.

"It is the forest of the Island of Crespo," thought I—and I was not mistaken.

CHAPTER XVI. A Submarine Forest.

We had at last arrived on the borders of this forest, doubtless one of the finest of Capt. Nemo's immense domains.

This forest was composed of large tree plants, and the moment we penetrated under its vast arcades I was struck by the singular position of their branches.

Not an herb which carpeted the ground, not a branch which clothed the trees, was either broken or bent, nor did they extend horizontally all stretched up to the surface of the ocean.

In about an hour Capt. Nemo gave the signal to halt. I, for my part, was not sorry, and we stretched ourselves under an arbor of alarines, the long thin blades of which stood up like arrows.

After four hours of this walking I was surprised not to find myself dreadfully hungry. But, instead, I felt an insurmountable desire to sleep, which happens to all divers. And my eyes soon closed behind the thick glasses, and I fell into a heavy slumber, which the movement alone had prevented before. Capt. Nemo and his robust companion, stretched in the clear crystal, set us the example.

How long I remained buried in this drowsiness I can not judge; but when I awoke the sun seemed sinking toward the horizon. Capt. Nemo had already risen, and I was beginning to stretch my limbs, when an unexpected apparition brought me briskly to my feet.

A few steps off a monster sea-spider, about thirty-eight inches high, was watching me with squinting eyes, ready to spring upon me. Though my diver's dress was thick enough to defend me from the bite of this animal I could not help shuddering with horror. Capt. Nemo pointed out the hideous crustacean, which a blow from the butt-end of the gun knocked over, and I saw the horrible claws of the monster writhe in terrible convulsions.

Capt. Nemo continued his bold excursion. The ground was still on the incline, its declivity seemed to be getting greater and to be leading us to greater depths. It must have been about 3 o'clock when we reached a narrow valley, between high perpendicular walls, situated about seventy-five fathoms deep. At ten paces not an object was visible. I was groping my way, when I suddenly saw a brilliant light. Capt. Nemo had just put his electric apparatus into use; his companion did the same, and Consell and I followed their example. By turning a screw I established a communication between the wire and the spiral glass, and the sea, lit by our four lanterns, was illuminated for a circle of thirty-six yards.

At last after four hours, this marvellous excursion came to an end. A wall of superb rocks, in an imposing mass, rose before us, a heap of gigantic blocks, an enormous steep granite shore, forming dark grottoes, but which presented no practicable slope; it was the prop of the Island of Crespo. It was the earth! Capt. Nemo stopped suddenly. A gesture of his brought us all to a halt; and however desirous I might be to scale the wall, I was obliged to stop. Here ended Capt. Nemo's domains, and he would not go beyond them.

The return began. I thought we were not following the same road to return to the Nautilus. The new road was very steep, and consequently very painful. We approached the surface of the sea rapidly. Very soon light reappeared and grew, and the sun being low on the horizon the refraction edged the different objects with a spectral ring. At ten yards and a half deep we walked amidst a shoal of little fishes of all kinds, more numerous than the birds of the air, but no adequate game worthy of a shot had as yet met our gaze, when at that moment I saw the captain shoulder his gun quickly and follow a moving object into the shrubs. He fired; I heard a slight hissing, and a creature fell stunned at some distance from us. It was a magnificent sea otter, an enhydrus, the only exclusively marine quadruped. This otter was five feet long and must have been very valuable. Capt. Nemo's companion took the beast, threw it over his shoulder and we continued our journey. For one hour a plain of sand lay stretched before us.

On this occasion I was witness to one of the finest gunshots which ever made the nerves of a hunter thrill. A large bird of great breadth of wing, clearly visible, approached, hovering over us. Capt. Nemo's companion shouldered his gun and fired, when it was only a few yards above the waves. The creature fell stunned, and the force of its fall brought it within the reach of the dexterous hunter's grasp. It was an albatross of the finest kind.

Our march had been interrupted by this incident. I saw a glimmer of light, which for a half mile broke the darkness of the waters. It was the lantern of the Nautilus.

I remained some steps behind, when I presently saw Capt. Nemo coming hurriedly toward me. With his strong hand he bent me to the ground, his companion doing the same to Consell. At first I knew not what to think of this sudden attack, but I was soon reassured by seeing the captain lie down beside me, and remain immovable.

I was stretched on the ground, just under shelter of a bush of algae, when, raising my head, I saw some enormous mass, casting phosphorescent gleams, pass blustering by.

My blood froze in my veins as I recognized two formidable sharks which threatened us. They passed without seeing us, brushing us with their brownish fins. Half an hour after, guided by the electric light, we reached the Nautilus. The outside door had been left open, and Capt. Nemo closed it as soon as we had entered the first cell. He then pressed a knob. I heard the pumps working in the midst of the vessel, I felt the water sinking from around me, and in a few moments the cell was entirely empty. The inside door then opened, and we entered the vestry.

CHAPTER XVII.

Under the Pacific.

The next morning, the 18th of November, I had quite recovered from my fatigues of the day before, and I went up to the platform just as the Second Lieutenant was uttering his daily phrase.

I was admiring the magnificent aspect of the ocean when Capt. Nemo appeared. He did not seem to be aware of my presence, and began a series of astronomical observations. Then, when he had finished he went and leant on the cage of the watch-light and gazed abstractedly on the ocean. In the mean time, a number of the sailors of the Nautilus, all strong and healthy men, had come up on to the platform. They came to draw up the nets that had been laid all night. These sailors were evidently of different nations, although the European type was visible in all of them. I recognized some unmistakable Irishmen, Frenchmen, come Sclaves and a Greek or a Canadian. They were civil, and only used that odd language among themselves, the origin of which I could not guess, neither could I question them.

I recognized that the haul had brought in more than nine hundred weight of fish.

During the days and weeks that passed Capt. Nemo was very sparing of his visits.

26, the Nautilus crossed the tropic of Cancer at 172 degrees longitude. On the 27th instant it sighted the Sandwich Islands. We had then gone 4,860 leagues from our starting point. In the morning when I went on the platform, I saw two miles to windward, Hawaii, the largest of the seven Islands that form the group. The direction of the Nautilus was still to the southeast. It crossed the equator Dec. 1, and on the 4th of the same month, after crossing rapidly and without anything particular occurring, we sighted the Marquesas group. I saw three miles off, Martin's peak in Nonka-Hiva, the largest of the group that belongs to France.

During the daytime of the 11th of December, I was busy reading in the large drawing room. Ned Land and Consell watched the luminous water through the half-open panels. The Nautilus was immovable.

Consell interrupted me. "Will master come here a moment?" he said in a curious voice. "I want master to look."

I rose, went and leaned on my elbows before the panes, and watched.

In a full electric light, an enormous black mass, quite immovable, was suspended in the midst of the waters. I watched it attentively, seeking to find out the nature of this gigantic cetacean. But a sudden thought crossed my mind. "A vessel!" I said half aloud.

"Yes," replied the Canadian, "a disabled ship that has sunk perpendicularly."

Ned Land was right; we were close to a vessel of which the tattered shrouds still hung from their shains. I counted four men, out of whom was standing at the helm.

What a scene! We wore dumb; our hearts beat fast before this shipwreck, taken as it were from life, and photographed in its last moments. And I saw already, coming towards us with hungry eyes, enormous sharks.

The Nautilus, turning, went round the submerged vessel, and I read on the stern—"The Florida, Sunderland."

CHAPTER XVIII. Vanikoro.

This terrible spectacle was the forerunner of the series of maritime catastrophes that the Nautilus was destined to meet with in its route. As long as it went through more frequented waters, we often saw the hulls of shipwrecked vessels that were rotting in the depths, and deeper down, cannons, bullets, anchors chains and a thousand other iron materials, eaten up by rust. However, on the 11th of December we sighted the Pomotou Islands, the old "dangerous group" of Bougainville, that extend over a space of 500 leagues at E.S.E. to W.N.W. from the Island Ducie to those of Lazareff. These are coral islands.

Toward evening Clermont-Tonnerre was lost in the distance and the route of the Nautilus was sensibly changed. After having crossed the tropic of Capricorn in 135 degrees longitude it sailed W.N.W., making again for the tropical zone.

On Dec. 15 we left to the east the bewitching group of the Societies and the graceful Tahiti, queen of the Pacific. On the 25th of December the Nautilus sailed into the midst of the New Hebrides.

I had not seen Capt. Nemo for a week when, on the morning of Dec. 27th, he came into the large drawing room, always seeming as if he had seen you five minutes before. I was busily tracing the route of the Nautilus on the planisphere. The captain came up to me, put his finger on one spot on the chart, and said this single word—

"Vanikoro."

The effect was magical! It was the name of the islands on which La Perouse had been lost! I rose suddenly. "The Nautilus has brought us to Vanikoro?" I asked.

"Yes, Professor," said the captain.

"And I can visit the celebrated islands where the Boussole and the Astrolabe struck?"

"If you like Professor. We are there now."

Followed by Capt. Nemo, I went up on to the platform and greedily scanned the horizon.

To the northeast two volcanic islands emerged, of unequal size, surrounded by a coral reef that measured forty miles in circumference.

Under the verdant shade of some mangroves I perceived some savages, who appeared greatly surprised at our approach.

Under the crustations of coral, covered with fungi, syphonules, alcyons, madrepores, through myriads of charming fish—grelles, glyphidridi, pompherides, diacopes and holocentres—I recognized certain debris that the drags had not been able to tear up: iron stirrups, anchors, cannons, bullets, capstan-fittings, the stem of a ship—all objects clearly proving the wreck of some vessel, and now carpeted with living flowers. While I was looking on this desolate scene, Capt. Nemo said, in a sad voice:

CRYING FOR HELP

Lots of it in Memphis But Daily Growing Less.

The kidneys often cry for help. Not another organ in the whole body more delicately constructed. Not one more important to health. The kidneys are the filters of the blood. When they fail the blood becomes foul and poisonous. There can be no health where there is poisoned blood. Backache is one of the frequent indications of kidney trouble. It is often the kidneys' cry for help. Heed it.

Read what Doan's Kidney Pills have done for overworked kidneys. Read what Doan's have done for Memphis people. J. W. McIntosh, 8, Sixth St., Memphis says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills off and on for a number of years with excellent results. My back gets weak and lame, sometimes so bad that I can hardly lace my shoes in the morning. I fell tired out and languid and have dizzy spells. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at Tomlinson's Drug Store never fail to relieve me in a short time."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. McIntosh had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

STEALS CAR, SENDS CHECK

Texas Man Wants Dodge Brothers Car so Much That He Drives Off Demonstrator.

Dodge Brothers motor cars are in great demand, to say the least, down in Texas. In the Panhandle, for instance, they steal them, if they can't get the cars by other means. An Amarillo paper tells it:

"In the midst of prosperity many are unable to get cars even after they have been ordered for several weeks. Every shipment of cars unloaded in Amarillo finds many buyers ready with the hard cash and eager to drive away. Last week, according to W. E. Groendycke, Dodge Brothers customer from Panhandle wanted a Dodge Brothers car badly but could find none in stock except Groendycke's demonstration car. He watched his chance. While the dealer wasn't looking he drove away with the only car remaining in the place. Officers were scouring the country but no trace of 'anxious buyer' called by long distance telephone and informed Groendycke that he had 'bought' the car and was sending a check for it.

"What else could I do?" asked the purchaser. "I had to have it."
 "What else could I do?" asked the dealer. "I had to let him keep it."

Prosperity Pointers for Farmers.

In the interest of further developing and upbuilding the territory through which their lines are operated, the Fort Worth & Denver City and Wichita Valley Railway Companies have issued an attractive thirty page booklet entitled "Prosperity Pointers for Farmers" and containing valuable information regarding soil conditions and the money-making crops to which same is best adapted as proven through the production of the numerous bumper crops which have produced generally prosperous conditions and are constantly making it possible for 'Renters' to become prosperous 'Home Owners.' A few of these booklets are still available for those whom it may be possible to interest in the question of locating in Northwest Texas. If, therefore, you have any friends that you desire to interest, and will send us their names and addresses, we will find pleasure in mailing them copies of the issue referred to. If you have friends to whom you would like to send copies yourself, instead of having us to do so, we will be glad to send you the booklets desired free of cost.

The Shepherd of the Hills.

"The Shepherd of the Hills," the dramatization of Harold Bell Wright's novel, which holds the record for the largest sales of any American work of fiction, which has been made by Mr. Wright, with the assistance of Elsbury W. Reynolds, opens its first engagement at the Dixie Theatre on Tuesday, October 3.

The scenes of the play are laid among the Ozark mountains of Missouri. It is a story of the hills and the simple life, yet it has plenty of excitement and an air of mystery that will hold the auditor from beginning to end.

The story has to do with the father of an artist, who, tired of city life, goes into the Ozarks for peace and quietude. He learns of a grievous sin committed by his son, whom he mourns as dead. The son had visited the hills some years before, when he fell in love with a simple country girl. He painted her picture and when he went back to the city, deserting the girl, he earned fame because of the canvas. The girl deserted and broken-hearted, dies, leaving behind her a half-witted son.

It is to the home of this dead and wronged girl that the father of the artist comes, and here he is employed to watch the sheep. He grows to love the country and its people, and he and the half-witted boy, Pete, become friends. Then there is a love story running through the play that adds to its attractiveness. It is the love of a young giant of the hills for "Sammy Lane," a girl of unusual qualities.

There are several characters whose quaint humor is a decided novelty. Taken as a whole, the play promises to prove a refreshing change from the general run of dramatic attractions this season.

He Was Worried and Hopeless

"For ten years I was bothered with kidney trouble," writes T. F. Hutchinson, Little Rock, Ark. "I was worried and had almost given up all hopes. I used five boxes of Foley Kidney Pills and am now a well man." Foley Kidney Pills drive out aches, pains, rheumatism and all kidney trouble symptoms.—Fickas Drug Co.
