COEDS FIGHT FLAMES
Fifty Wellsey Girls Carry Out Valuable Property As Big Building Burns

WELLSLEY, Miss., March 7. (AP)—Fifty Wellsey college girls, far from frightened by the smoke which billowed through the laboratory where they were working, today saved much apparatus and valuable botanical specimens before flames destroyed their hall.

Although the fire raged through the four-story brick building and burst through the roof within half an hour of its discovery, the girls continued their salvage operations until the college police refused to let them continue because of the danger. A few minutes later blazing windows burst crashed in the ground a few yards from the burning edifice. The cause of the fire was determined by college authorities, but give no estimate of the damage tonight.

'Drowned' Man Dies 10 Years Afterward

BELLEVILLE, Ont., March 7. (AP)—A letter received here today notified relatives of Captain John Wesley Smith that their kinsman had not been drowned ten years ago as they had believed, but that he had escaped when his vessel, the "Harrish," came to Harrah, Okla., and built up a prosperous business. The letter announced the death of Captain Smith, February 22, this year.

Ben Wilson, master of the Muskegon lodge of Harrah, who wrote the letter, was quoted as having said that Captain Smith had told him "some of the events of his life" and had asked to "notify the folks back home when he died."

ELECTION LAWS IN TEXAS ARE INVALID

SUPREME COURT RULING SAYS NEGROES HAVE RIGHT TO VOTE WITH DEMOS

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, March 7.—Negroes under the federal constitution have the right to participate in state primaries and cannot be deprived of that privilege by state laws, the supreme court in an unanimous opinion declared today in a case from Texas. It was brought by L. A. Nixon, who under a state statute was prevented from voting in a democratic primary at El Paso at which both federal and state candidates were selected.

The decision, delivered by Justice Holmes, is deemed closely studied by congressional leaders for its effect upon the much-discussed question of federal jurisdiction over primaries raised in Smith and Vane cases from Illinois and Pennsylvania. Senator Borah, rep. Idaho, construed it as meaning, when carried to its logical conclusion, that congress had control over primaries.

Private Damage Probable
It has been well established, the court's opinion declared, that private damages could be caused by deprivation of political rights. The Texas law is described as a direct and obvious infringement of the 14th amendment, which it was declared had been adopted "with a special intent to protect the blacks from discrimination against them." That amendment, it is added, "not only guarantees citizenship and the privileges of citizens to persons of color, but it denied to state the power to withhold from them the equal protection of the laws."

"This meant," the court stated, "that the law of the states shall be the same for the black as for the white; that all persons, regardless of color, stand equal before the laws of the states; and that no discrimination shall be made against negroes because of their color."

The Texas law was declared an invalid discrimination against the negro because of color alone, the court holding that color cannot be made the basis for a statute affecting the right to vote.

Highway Cop Is Busy Lubbock Drivers Pay

John C. Keller, the new state highway license inspector for this section means "business."

With sixty-five arrests to his credit since starting to work last Tuesday, he has plenty of proof that he is sincere. Sixty-five careless motorists have paid fines of $11.75 each, and are thoroughly convinced that he is serious in his work of enforcing the highway laws. The arrests were made mostly against cars which had only one license tag while a few machines with no tags at all were brought in.

Keller, in closing his day's work yesterday with a total of ten arrests in Lubbock, said that he was "out after the highway law violators," and he intended to get them. He explained that the number of arrests did not reflect his pay as he was on a straight salary and only the counties and the department got the money from the fines.

JAP EARTHQUAKE CAUSES LOSS OF LIVES, PROPERTY

REPORTS INDICATE MANY ARE DEAD IN SECTION AROUND OSAKA

BUILDINGS DAMAGED

NO ACTUAL FIGURES ARE YET AVAILABLE; FIRE FOLLOWS SHOCK

(By the Associated Press)
TOKYO, March 8. (Tuesday)—The cities of Osaka and Kobe in central Japan were shaken by an earthquake lasting three minutes last evening, causing considerable property destruction. Only fragmentary reports of which had been received here early this morning. Circumstantial reports from Osaka said that more than 100 persons had been killed or injured there, but the figures reported differed considerably. Many buildings there, including four factories, were reported to have been destroyed.

Dispatches from the airport of Kobe, which was described as the center of the quake in one report, said that a gang-plank collapsed while a number of American tourists were boarding a steamer during the tremors and that some were injured. The extent of the earthquake area could not be definitely determined because of the fragmentary and sometimes contradictory reports received.

Some of the accounts from the area received by the Tokyo press indicated that the casualties were numerous and the destruction great but confirmation of this was lacking. Serious fires were reported to have broken out in several of the great earthquakes of 1923, but caused no damage although creating considerable alarm.

Theatre Collapses
The partial collapse of a motion picture theatre was reported by the Nippon Shinbun-Hungo news agency at Osaka and several persons were injured.

MODERN USES OF ANCIENT CEREAL

Rice has been known for twenty-two centuries. Small wonder that in that time over three hundred ways of preparing it have been found.

Of course, rice can be combined successfully with soups, meats, vegetables, salads, desserts. It is a digestible, absorbent, the flavor of whatever it is cooked with.

For the best results in cooking, rice depends upon the regularity in the size of rice. Comet Rice is sifted again and again so that no small particles and broken seeds remain to cook first and become a gummy mass. That accounts for Comet's delicious, dry flakiness.

Fanned clean and machine packed, Comet Rice reaches you so pure that it needs no preliminary washing.

The Woman's Day

By Allene Summer

A girl student, a senior of 23, and student assistant to one of the faculty added her death to the sum total of student suicides sweeping the country. She was Edith Stewart, of Elgin, college. She had just been permitted to leave the campus to visit a friend, but had gone to a nearby city, possibly to have a date and go to a show. It was found out and fearing suspension, she took poison.

Many people will write black marks, of course, after the college's name. They will wonder what can all a school permit a girl to be a suicide and get her so little reluctance to criticism. Many will argue the case as an indictment against the school campus rules. Facts are, probably, that the thing began long years ago—possibly before Edith Stewart was born, and if she had happened to be a file clerk instead of a college student, and had happened to lose her job, she would have done the same thing.

ANOTHER GOED
Another case? Miss Beatrice Anthony, 23, erstwhile of Syracuse university, is suing that school because she was expelled as "not the type of girl wanted on the campus." It would be interesting if Syracuse or any other school would list exactly those qualities which make a desirable "type of girl," and those which do not. In our observation, the best-rounded "types" seem to be those who contain a certain per cent of qualities generally listed as "undesirable."

HARD ON BABIES
Good news for babies of Great Britain! Since January 1, 1927, babies born out of wedlock may be legitimated by the later marriage of their parents, although previous to that date, no matter how soon the babies' parents married after their birth, they are still illegitimate children, devoid of rights of inheritance, and so on. And even under the new law, no illegitimate babies born before January 1, 1927, can be legitimated.

It seems a little harsh, but perhaps Britain has hit upon an effective control of illegitimacy. Perhaps it is working in so the concealed power of the protective parental instinct. Parents might not mind social ostracism for themselves, but when their babies get hurt, that's "something else again!"

OLD-UNS, YOUNG-UNS!
Young women do not vote. Only the older women are doing their civic duty according to a certain state. He says:

Members of the party were especially impressed with the textile department of the college, being shown through the several sections of the department by E. W. Camp, head of the department.

McMahan and other members of the party met last night with members of the City Commission in informal session, when the situation was outlined in full, including the various obstacles that the former has met in bringing the project to a reality. The commissioner will be asked for an extension of time. It was said, so that the line may be constructed without too much rush. Under completed plans the line will be 18 inches from the field into Amarillo, 14 inches from Amarillo to Plainview, 10 inches from Plainview to Lubbock, eight inches from Lubbock to Slaton, and auxiliary lines from Plainview to Lockney and Floydada, six inches, Mr. McMahan said.

What Has Gone Before

Death strikes GARRETT FOL-SOM while bathing at Ocean Town, N. J. After being sur-ficially examined by a doctor, the body is brought to the Hotel Majestic, where an inquiry is started.

Folsom's bathing companions had been ROSS, WALLE, MRS.
HELEN BARNARD, and CAR-MELITA WALDON. It is established that Folsom, just before his death, had been standing next to ROSS BARRON, known as the copper king.

When the startling announcement is made that Folsom had been stabbed to death in the water, ROSS, his valet, is questioned, as are Barron and his wife, but no light is shed on the mystery.
ANASTASIA FOLSOM, eccentric master of the sister of the dead man, arrives and takes command.
At the request it is established that the death weapon was a pistol, an Oriental knife, and that it and its scabbard had been purchased on the boardwalk.

Some suspicion attaches to one CRUYDON BEARS, who is a collector of curious blades weapons, and Anastasia asks TITUS RIGGS, an architect, to try to solve the murder.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XX
"That's all right, then," said Anastasia Folsom to Riggs, "we'll wait no more time over it just now. First of all, have you the slightest idea of any individual whom you consider responsible for my brother's death?"

"No, I haven't, except to say that any one near him in the ocean that morning might be the murderer."

"But we can't hale to court all the bathers in the ocean at that time. We must get it some other way."

"And perhaps the logical way is through the motive."

"Now that's a sensible remark. Of course we must work through the motive. And that's just what I want to conceive of. How could any one want to kill my brother? Why, Garretts was the best man in the world. The finest character, the kindest, dearest brother."

"Now, now, dear lady, I make all allowances for the devotion of an affectionate sister, but you mustn't idealize the man."

"But it's true. Every one who knew him will tell you the same. He was a remarkable man—a man of a thousand."

"Miss Riggs had heard much about Garrett Folsom since the unfortunate man's death, and most of what he had heard was greatly at variance with his sister's opinions. Yet he felt a hesitancy about disturbing her ideals too readily.

"It stands to reason, Miss Folsom, that somebody must have looked upon your brother with a less kindly eye than your own. Unless Mr. Folsom was killed by mistake."

"Do you think that probable?"

"Frankly I don't. Though it is possible if we're to find out the truth we can't depend on imaginations or vague suppositions. We must get down to fact; to true evidence and proved testimony."

"That's just it," and Anastasia's face brightened. "But, so far as I can see, we have no account."

"That's pretty nearly true. First of all, what about the man, Ross? Is he absolutely unsuspectable?"

"Absolutely I wish, in one way, I could suspect Ross. I mean it would be a logical way to look. But he can't possibly be at fault. He is utterly respectable and quiet-lived; he has always been devoted to Garrett's well-being, and he is, in all respects, the ideal servant, with no underhand ways or ulterior motives."

"Does he gain anything from Mr.
Folsom's will?"

"There is a bequest to him of a thousand dollars. But that would never tempt him to murder his master, for I happen to know Ross has a good-sized bank account of his own.
My brother gave him a generous salary even to clothes and a small motor car. No Ross had nothing to gain by Garrett's death, and much to lose."

"What about other servants?"

"They are all at our home in Chicago."

"They receive bequests under Mr.
Folsom's will?"

"Two or three do. But they are small legacies. Oh, the servants are out of the question."

"Who does benefit by the will?"

"Only myself, Mr. Pelton, my nephew, and Mr. Roger Neville. We each get about one-third of Garrett's estate."

"And I exclude you, because you love your brother, and I exclude Mr.

Pelton, because you tell me he was in New York at the time, that leaves only Mr. Neville to be discussed. What about him?"

"I can't believe Roger Neville killed Garrett—I've no reason to think he did—but that is one of the things we must find out. As you know, the man who did kill him must be some one who knew him, and for some reason wanted to put him out of the way.
Now, I know of no reason for Roger Neville desiring Garrett's death, yet I suppose that side of it must be looked into."

"She suspects Neville," Tite Riggs assured himself, but aloud he said:

"That's right, Miss Folsom. We must view it from every angle. Had your brother any romance in his life—especially any unhappy one?"

"Not to my knowledge," she replied, after a moment's hesitation.
"He may have had. There again, is a road to be followed."

"Yes, certainly. Now—but I'm sure Mr. Folsom was in no way financially embarrassed or wanting for money."

"He positively was not. He had plenty and of late had had some good fortune of some sort that had, it was about to bring him in an immense sum. All these things you can find out when you investigate his business, but I feel sure our way does not lie in such paths. I think it was some personal enemy or some miserable coward who killed him in some spirit of petty revenge or imagined injury."

"It's very possible, but was Mr.
Folsom ever, to your knowledge, a victim of blackmail?"

"I am not offended—never hesitate to speak frankly to me. So far as I know he never was annoyed in that way, but it may have been. Innocent men are blackmailed, I've no doubt."

"They surely are. So we must try every trail we can think of. Mr. Folsom has traveled a lot, hasn't he?"

"Yes, and he had lately spent three years abroad. He had been back from that trip only a short time."

"Then, for all we know, this tragedy may be the result of some episode or trouble that happened while he was abroad."

"It will may be. But that seems to render it hopeless, doesn't it?"

"Oh, maybe not. That may help to simplify matters. Perhaps Ross can tell us something."

"Yes, I've asked him. If he knew anything he'd tell. But I'm hoping you can pin the crime on to someone in America—someone down here."

"At any rate we must try to do so.
There's the danger, you know."

"That ought to be a clue. But these things don't here are run. I mean these little sales of unimportant goods, if that had been a really valuable Oriental curio, of course, a record would have been made of the buyer and the price and all that. But these are things of cheap items sold at auction that are not recorded, and no record anywhere should be."

"All true enough. And with the ocean to clean it, there's no chance of any finger prints on the knife. No, it doesn't seem to me as if there are the first principle of detection is investigation of the weapon used."

"Well, it's been investigated, I'm not unreasonable, Mr. Riggs. I don't expect you to work miracles. But I do want you to use your common sense, which is more than many detectives do, and I've asked you to see if you can't succeed."

"I'll do that. I accept your proposition, Miss Folsom, and we'll leave your very generous offer as to salary open for the time being. When I prove to you that some real use, as you have said, as you do, that it seems absurd for a man to try detective work without any training or experience of any sort. But you can also employ skilled detectives, and if I fall down on the job they may be able to carry on."

"I see how you get on. But of course if the police continue the search I shall be interested. Also the hotel detective here is rather a clever sort.
And rest assured I shall be able to help you in any way that I can. I shall be glad to do a man's work, but there are kinds of detection where a woman's intuition and quiet experience may be of service."

"That's certainly so. Now, first of all, Miss Folsom, I want a look into Mr. Folsom's luggage and papers."

Folsom's nephew arrives on the scene, and more is learned about the strange dolls in the dead man's room. Read the next chapter.

WATSON URGES DIVERSIFICATION

LOCKNEY CIVIC LEADER SAYS PLAN WILL MAKE FARMER INDEPENDENT.

Special to The Avalanche LOCKNEY, March 7.—Diversified crops and intensified farming will make South Plains and Texas farmers independent, is the opinion of W.
C. Watson, farmer, land-herd and member of commerce worker, of this city. Mr. Watson has not always been an advocate of diversification and intensified farming, nor has he spent the major portion of his life on the plains. He lived in East Texas for many years and thought constantly and wrote about all a farmer should be interested in.

"I bought a 60-acre farm, the first year he did not realize any great profit, but he hung on. The farm was quite a distance from the city so he sold it and bought another farm closer in. This time conditions were better, the country was settling up, rain was more plentiful and he learned that the Plains section was truly an agricultural section. He was, in a way, sold on the country, but not to the extent of forsaking all others, so he moved back to his East Texas home.

"Didn't stay But he did not stay. He had been on the Plains long enough to appreciate its true value, so in 1916 he returned. This time he came to stay, and if there is a farmer on the South Plains who has been successful it is W. C. Watson.

He appreciated the fact that one could not hope to raise a bumper crop every year, but figured that the average crop on the plains was better than in any other section, and he has not been disappointed.

Alfalfa was a new crop on the Plains when he came here, but he decided to plant a few acres for his horse, anyway. It was strictly a dry farming propagation, but the crop did exceedingly well. The seed was sown in September, 1915 and in 1924, when Mr. Watson plowed it up, he said he had a pretty good stand. During all this period there was never a time that he did not have stock grazing in the field, and quite a little hay was harvested as well; some of it he still retains. He plowed it up because he felt that in a period of nine years the plants had done their best, and that by replanting he could get better crops.

Today he has one of the best farms in Floyd county, and it pays every year. Cotton prices have been very unfavorable during the past season, and Mr. Watson hires all his work done, still he says he made a fair return from his cotton.

Wheat Main Crop
Wheat has always been the main crop, but he will tell you that the farmer with a few acres of land, properly cultivated, will make more money than the one with many acres half cultivated. Even the renter may proper under the plan of Mr. Watson, who says that a man with 100 acres, three cows and a brood sow is independent.
A renter may keep these without object to his landlord, and if he does he can pay his bills, even the hardest years.

During recent years Mr. Watson has been giving considerable attention to berries, fruit and similar crops, and after working these plants and studying them he is of the opinion that there is no other section in America where berries are more prolific than on the South Plains of Texas. Strawberries, especially, do well, and he figures that the day is not far off when the South Plains of Texas will be furnishing other sections of the state that now depend solely upon Florida, California and the Rio Grande valley for fruit.

Ordinarily one does not think of fruit and berries without thinking of candy soil. Usually this is deep sand and good only for berries, fruits and similar crops, but in this instance a very striking difference is noted. There is some sand in this county (very little) and that it is usually termed "sandy land." It is mixed with clay in sufficient quantities to make it safe from "blow storms" and at the same time hold its richness.

With the coming of the new Denver railroad, Mr. Watson feels that South Plains farmers will be in position to compete with those in other sections. Already they are probably growing cotton, corn, oats, wheat, alfalfa and similar crops but when railroad facilities are adequate they will have an even pull on berries, fruits and vegetables. It is just a matter of intensified farming.

STOCK FARMING IS "TRUMP CARD"

SEIGLER RANGH IN DEER SMITH COUNTY SHOWS VALUE

Special to The Avalanche HEREFORD, March 7.—A trip to the T. E. Seigler ranch in Deer Smith county, will convince the man who is an observer that stock farming is a "trump card" that can be played for any farmer who wants to solve the problem of low feed prices. Mr. Seigler says that the Panhandle is an excellent feeding area in the famous corn belt of the north, and this rancher is practicing stock farming in a large scale. He keeps approximately 450 high grade cows, and keeps nothing but registered Angley bulls, with them and the farms about 1,500 acres of land. No grain is sold, and none of the spine calves are placed on the market. During the fall these youngsters are converted into baby beefers, and thus the home-grown grain are marketed at a good figure.

Lots Of Pens
Mr. Seigler has really fixed his place for feeding. He has three or four large pens; two cow sheds that are 250 feet each; and several hundred feet of wind breaks, besides his sheds for calves, hogs, and chickens. He invested about fifty cents per acre in improvements and has one of the best equipped farms for the feeding of cattle and hogs that can be found in this section.

On hundred eighty yearling calves are being fitted for the market. These will be fed on home grown grain until they weigh around 800 pounds. At present market prices he will receive nearly double the money that values paid in the fall would bring. Mr. Seigler has about 200 baby calves, and his foreman, Chas. Boyd has fixed a creep and keeps feed ground in the for the youngsters. They are now getting their calves ready for next Christmas, and we figure that a portion of feed for them now be worth as much as two or three next fall," Mr. Boyd said.
A ration consisting of ear corn,

Have a Look, Reducers!

ground with the same job and still and then mixed with cotton seed and fed to the calves. Mr. Seigler says that maize or kaffir could be used as well as the corn.

Sixty Pigs
Sixty young pigs, all within twenty four hours of the same age will be used in like care of the waste in the feed, but just as soon as they are old enough, eleven brood sows are kept on the farm now, and Mr. Seigler plans to increase this number to 25 with in the next few weeks. He will fence 150 acres back proof, and will have sudan, sweet clover, Indian corn, and various sorghum crops for pasture.

Five hundred acres of exceptionally fine wheat is now being used for pasture. Mr. Seigler is breaking out some new land, and will have 1,000 acres of wheat next fall, and about 600 acres in row crops. A common mistake some farmers in this section make is to plow their soil too shallow, according to this man. He thinks all of his ground six inches before putting it in wheat. Several old timers thought he was ruining the soil, and vowed that it would be two years before anything could be grown there. "No better wheat can be found in the county."

Mr. Seigler gives his foreman, Chas. Boyd credit for much of the success of his plant. Before things began to get ahead and this foreman knew how to take care of both the livestock and the farming end of the game. Last fall 90,000 bushels of grain were stored in the feeding pens for the cattle, and 50,000 bushels were left in the field for feed, and "don't forget the 750 bushels of Indian corn," Mr. Seigler said.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, March 7. (AP)-The cotton market moved into new high today under the influence of favorable Liverpool cables, heavy spot sales and a good spot demand, unmet by the heavy exports.

The close was 11 to 12 points higher than that of Saturday.

First trades showed gains of five to nine points on the strength of cables, reaching 2 to 4 points higher, better than the Liverpool and spot sales there of 12,000 bales.

Continued gains during the morning brought March up to 14.25, May 14.45 and July 14.55; 17 to 18 points above the previous close.

Realization and hedge selling cut down the gains five points in mid day, but a fresh rally again carried the price level into the highs where it again encountered hedge selling.

Late trading, however, saw it making fresh strides forward and the close was steady, a little under the day's highs.

Exports totaled 24,331 bales.

DAILY MARKET

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, March 7. (AP)-The cotton market was quiet but steady today in response to the firm showing of Liverpool, encouraging reports from the cotton goods market, and the apparent absence of selling pressure from the south.

May contracts advanced to 14.45 or 20 points above Saturday's closing quotations and closed at 14.33, the general market closing steadily at net advances of 11 to 12 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 4 to 5 points in response to the relative firmness of Liverpool. There was some southern selling, but it was readily absorbed, the market trading higher during the day.

Trade buying and covering, while there also seemed to be some re-buying by traders who had sold out long contracts on the advances of last week.

Reports of rains in the southwest, which would suggest further delays to farm work, may have contributed, but the factors mainly discussed were the showing of Liverpool, reports of a continued active business in the domestic markets for cotton goods, and the absence of southern selling in sufficient volume to suggest any general weakening of the spot situation.

The advance extended to 14.28 for March, 14.58 for July and 14.72 for October contracts, or about 18 to 20 points net higher. At these prices, there was a little more realizing which was reflected in closing reactions of 4 to 8 points from the best. Trading was only in moderate volume during the day with the rather reactionary sentiment noted here toward the end of last week still in evidence, although selling was checked by reports of a continued steady spot situation in the south.

Private cables claimed the advance in Liverpool was due to trade calling and French buying, and said home demand for cotton cloth was improving and that there had been a fair turnover in yarns made of Egyptian cotton.

Exports for the day were 21,527 bales, 1,361,243 sq ft for this season. Port receipts 47,912 U. S. Port stocks 5,112,845.

COTTONSEED OIL

NEW YORK, March 7. (AP)-Cottonseed oil was less active and lower today under selling by cotton and commission houses and refiners, prodded by the gasoline of crude oil and lard. Final prices were up 2 to 6 points from the lowest on covering, but still 1 to 10 points below the previous close. Sales 16,800 barrels, prime crude 7.75; prime summer yellow spot 9.25; March closed 9.35; May 9.37; July 9.56; September 9.63; October 9.44.

COTTON GOODS REPORT

NEW YORK, March 7. (AP)-Cotton goods printers announced that prices named last October would be continued unchanged through the first of 1927. Cotton is 2 cents up from the low point at which previous bids were filed, and it is explained that this move to stabilize values. Raw silk was unchanged in the primary market but advanced here. Trade remaining quiet.

Warm weather, regarded as disadvantageous for handling low grade corn, tended to impart late firmness to the corn market. Liberal receipts and 2,234,000 bushels increase of the corn visible supply were helpful factors earlier. Cuts followed corn. Provisions were firm, chiefly owing to dearth of offerings.

WHEAT REPORT CHICAGO, March 7. (AP)-Favorable conditions for the new domestic crop, together with price breaks at Winnipeg, led to weakness here late today in wheat. Despite an early advance, Chicago wheat closed heavy, 3-8 cent to 3-4 cent net lower, with corn unchanged to 3-8 to 1-2 cent higher, oats unchanged to 1-8 cent up, and provisions varying from 7 cents decline to a rise of 15 cents.
