Mondale describes talks with Gromyko as 'failure'

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Walter F. Mondale, well behind in the polls midway through the general election campaign, is describing President Reagan's meeting with a Soviet official as an "apparent failure" and depicting it, along with the latest bombing in Lebanon, as evidence of inadquate leadership.

The two events "have really in a profound way exposed to the nation what I've been trying to say in the past," Mondale said Sunday.

"We have a president who's not really in charge. He's not mastering the details. He's not leading on the central questions," the Democratic presidential candidate said of the president's meeting with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko and the fatal terrorist bombing of the U.S. Embassy annex in Beirut.

Mondale's only public campaigning Sunday came in his weekly radio broadcast, although he took questions from reporters afterward.

He was making a quick trip to New Jersey today and one to Arkansas on Tuesday, the beginning of a week that aides have structured to give him plenty of time to prepare for next Sunday's televised debate with Reagan in Louisville, Ky.

Reagan was returning to the campaign trail today, starting a three-day trip to Michigan, Mississippi and Texas.

He was stopping first in Detroit for a swearing-in ceremony for new citizens and a luncheon of the Economic Club. From there he was flying on to Biloxi, Miss., and from there to a three-city tour of Texas, ending in Houston with Vice President George Bush on Tuesday night.

Bush, back from a trip Sunday to Parma, Ohio near Cleveland, was campaigning today in Athens, Ga.

Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine Ferraro, after spending Sunday at home in Queens, N.Y., was stopping in Ohio before flying on to Greensboro and Raleigh, N.C.

An Associated Press survey of all 50 states released over the weekend shows Reagan maintaining a healthy margin over Mondale. The president is leading in 43 states with 444 electoral votes — and Mondale is clearly ahead in only the District of Columbia with its three electoral votes.

But Mondale is hoping that a strong showing in next week's debate can propel him into a closer race. He gave a hint about his debate preparations Sunday, when a reporter asked him whether he had been watching videotapes of Reagan.

"I may have," Mondale said.

Mondale linked the Reagan-Gromyko meeting and the bombing in Lebanon as he delivered his paid, weekly radio speech and answered questions.

Many public opinion polls indicate that while voters side with Mondale on many important issues, they find Reagan a more compelling leader, and thus support him for a second term. Mondale and Ms. Ferraro, have both been trying to puncture that belief, and have lately been using the Beirut bombing and now the Reagan-Gromyko meeting as ammunition.

Mondale said the Reagan-Gromyko meeting was an "apparent failure in arms control," and demanded that Reagan provide the public with an account of what happened.

"I believe the president has a duty to hold his own news conference, to tell the American people what to make of this," he said.

"What did they try?" he asked of the U.S. side. "What did the Soviets respond with? And did we do what we could honorably have done to move forward" with arms control.

Mondale renewed his own suggestion for a temporary moratorium on development of space weapons, and for re-proposing an informal agreement that negotiators worked out on medium range weapons that the United States and Soviet governments both rejected.

Reagan says opponent's predictions inaccurate

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

DETROIT — President Reagan, returning to the campaign trail in a partisan mood, charged today that Walter Mondale inaccurately predicted that inflation would go up before it went down and that any economic recovery would be "modest or anemic."

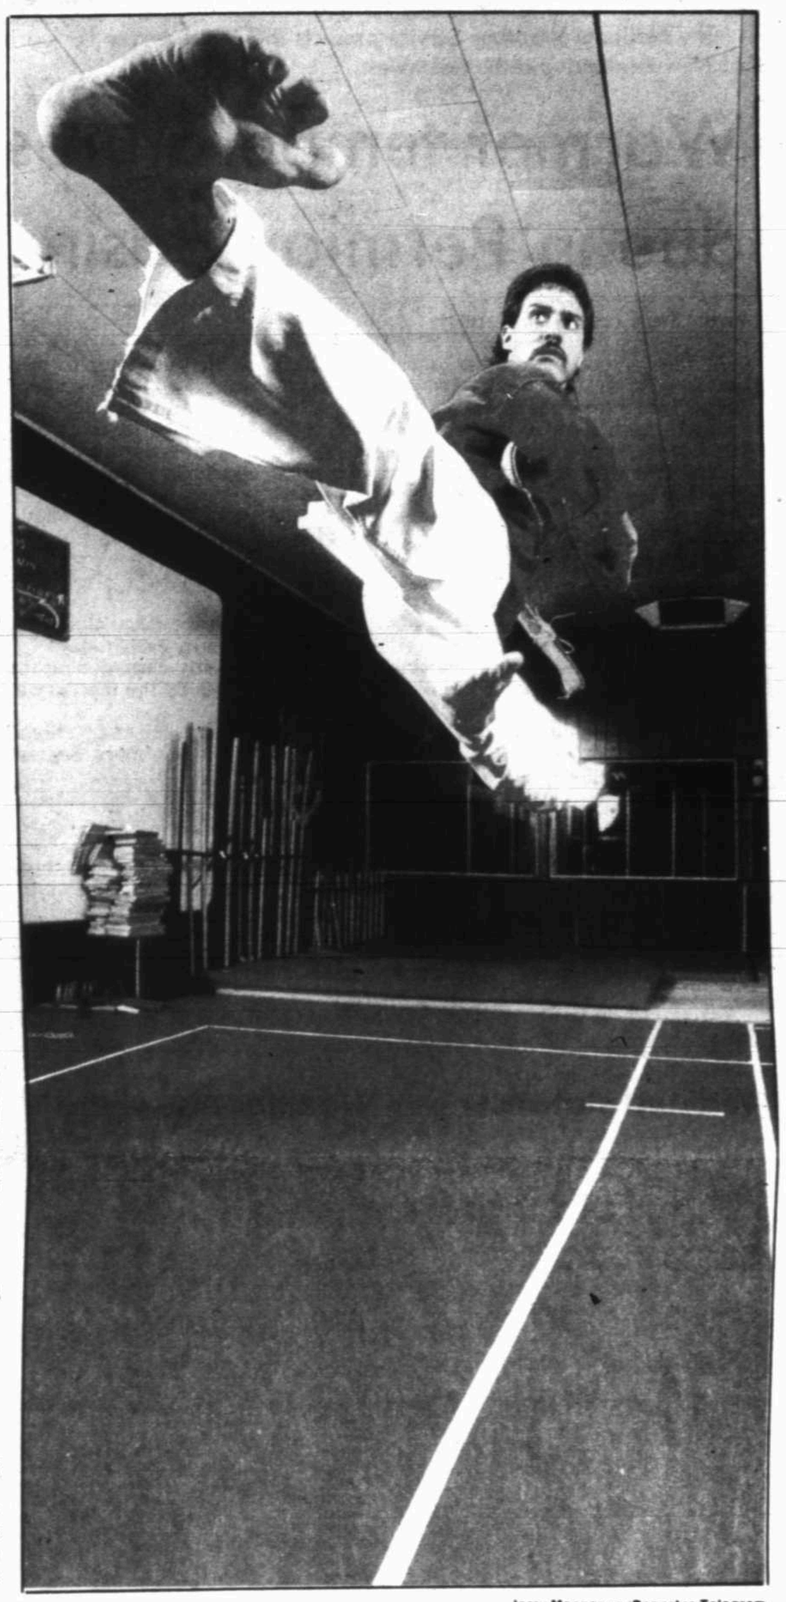

"I don't question my opponent's good intentions," Reagan said of the Democratic presidential candidate he still never names.

"I would simply suggest all of us remember — given the track record — that there is a well-known road paved with good intentions, but no one wants to go where it leads," he said in remarks prepared for delivery to the Economic Club of Detroit.

Reagan quoted Mondale as saying in August 1980, during the presidential campaign, that Reagan's plan to reduce income tax rates was "based on a two-cent theory ... It is obviously murderously inflationary."

He quoted economists Lester Thurow and John Kenneth Galbraith — but not Mondale — as saying during the recession in 1982 that Reagan's economic program had failed and that no recovery was likely for some years.

Chances 'good' for negotiations

By R. GREGORY NOKES
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George P. Shultz says chances are now "reasonably good" that the United States and Moscow can establish constructive negotiations aimed at improving superpower relations.

But Shultz said Sunday it would be incorrect to say that the talks between President Reagan and Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko last week were very positive.

"Not very positive — sober and intense," Shultz said in an appearance on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley."

Meanwhile, Robert C. McFarlane, the president's national security adviser, said it would probably take a couple of months for the Soviets to respond to Reagan's proposals for regular high-level contacts focusing on arms control and other issues.

"The Soviet process is a very deliberate one, and they've had a lot to chew on after this week, so it will take some time," McFarlane said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

Shultz said that in the nearly nine hours of talks with Gromyko — 3½ hours with Reagan and the rest with Shultz — "practically all subjects of concern" between the two nations were discussed.

As a result, he said, "the chances of a more constructive dialogue with the Soviet Union ... are reasonably good."

He said the two sides agreed "to keep in touch, carefully and systematically" through diplomatic channels.

Shultz said there will be follow-up consultations at the ambassadorial level in Washington and Moscow.

But Walter F. Mondale, the Democratic presidential hopeful, told reporters Sunday that the Reagan-Gromyko session was an "apparent failure in arms control," and "both disappointing and a basis for apprehension" because it raised doubts about "which Reagan will we see" if he wins a second term.

"Will we see the Reagan who for four years has engineered an arms race ... or will we see a Reagan who as he has in the past week, talks about peace?" he said.

Mondale, who met with Gromyko in New York on Thursday, said afterward he thought there was an opportunity for Reagan to make progress toward breaking the impasse over arms control talks.

However, after Gromyko's meetings with Reagan and Shultz, administration officials could only say they hoped the talks would break the impasse, but couldn't be sure.

'Very suspicious' fire forces evacuation of Fort Worth hotel

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH — A "very suspicious" fire in the downtown Hilton Hotel forced the evacuation of more than 400 guests, including people who screamed for help before being rescued from their balconies, authorities said today.

Investigators were trying to determine the cause of the five-alarm blaze, which started just after 9:30 p.m. in an 11th-floor maid's closet and caused extensive damage to the top two floors.

"The room (closet) had, according to our arson investigator, no good accidental source of ignition, so that tends to make it very suspicious, and at this time it's being carried that way," said Fort Worth Fire Department spokesman Jim Noah.

Only one man, who was treated at the scene for smoke inhalation, was injured, Deputy Fire Chief Don Peacock said.

"We were lucky to get him out of there," he said. "He was asleep and had had a whole lot to drink."

Soon after firefighters quelled the blaze shortly before 11 p.m., guests at the 12-story hotel at Commerce Street and Interstate 30 were allowed back inside, Noah said.

The fire, which drew scores of spectators and more than 65 firefighters to this east side hotel, was confined to the 11th and 12th floors, Noah said.

Several guests complained that they didn't hear smoke alarms until it was much too late.

Janie Williams of Austin, who was with her husband Ken on the ninth floor when the fire began, said that "you couldn't hear the alarms on the top floors. They were muffled. We couldn't hear them until we got down to the third floor."

Clifton James of Comanche, Texas, claimed the fire alarm never went off at all.

"We've heard that story and we're investigating," said David Sanders, the hotel's general manager. "We know that smoke alarms were going off in the corridors and some of the guest rooms, but we'll be following up on those comments."

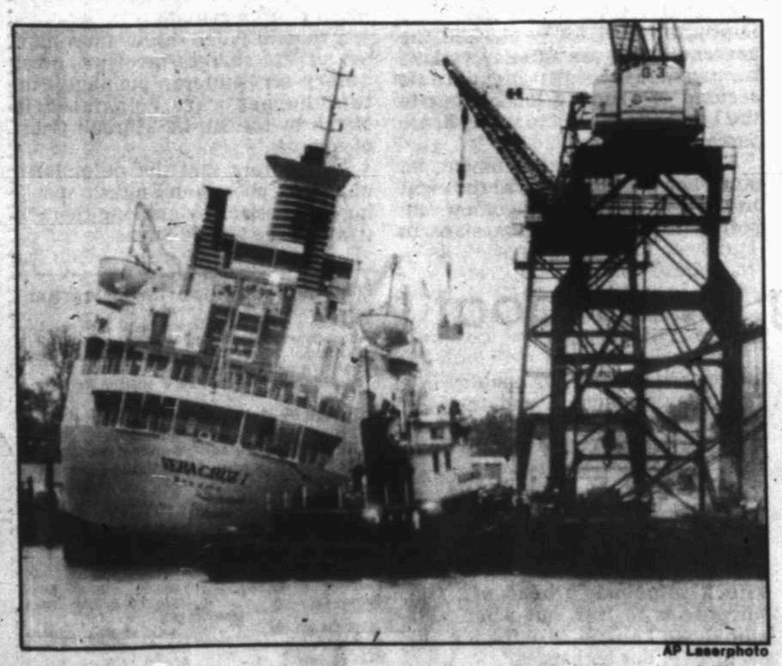

Vance Tanner, and IBM Corp. employee from Tucson, Ariz., was on the 12th floor when the blaze broke out.

"I started to be concerned when I stepped into the hallway and couldn't breathe," he said. "The firemen came up and rescued me."

Noah called the incident "a good kind of high-rise fire," very different from last year's blaze at a Fort Worth Ramada Inn that killed five people.

"You don't go 110 feet in the air with a bunch of equipment and attack a fire without it being difficult," he said. "But everything worked properly."

James later told Noah that "if you boys hadn't come in and got us, we'd have been in a lot of trouble. We didn't know anything about it until we heard your fire engines."

Panamanian cruise ship Vera Cruz sits at a 20 degree list following its fall from a drydock at Norfolk, Va.

Cruise ship falls from dry dock, injuring more than 30 crewmen

By JEAN McNAIR
Associated Press Writer

NORFOLK, Va. — A Panamanian cruise ship with about 150 sleeping crew members aboard fell off a dry dock and crashed on its side into the water early today, briefly trapping about 50 people and injuring 31, authorities said.

The 50 people trapped inside the overturned vessel were rescued or got out on their own, according to the Coast Guard.

"Everybody is off the ship," said Coast Guard Petty Officer Tom Armstrong.

Still, Lt. Susan Donner, a Coast Guard spokeswoman, said authorities continued to search the water's surface below the dry dock platform "just in case."

Spokesmen at three hospitals where the injured were taken said one man was in critical condition with head injuries, but the other 30 were treated mostly for cuts and bruises and released.

The accident occurred at 3:48 a.m. at the Norfolk Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., said Don Haupt, director of paramedical rescue in Norfolk.

Haupt said that of the approximately 150 people aboard the ship at the time of the accident, about 100 got out as the vessel overturned. Another 50 were trapped inside the ship, he said.

No information was immediately available on how the ship fell.

The 484-foot cruise ship, identified by Coast Guardsmen as the Vera Cruz, was originally believed to be Spanish-based but later found to be registereed in Panama and owned by Bahama Cruise Lines.

The ship was on a platform above the water when it turned and fell into the water, said Ms. Donner.

The Vera Cruz "fell off the platform, apparently crashed into the water and was listing about 20 degrees," Armstrong said. Workers "sank the dry dock again to refloat" the ship.

The accident occurred in drydock 2 at the shipyard, Haupt said.

Thomas Forrest, a dispatcher at Norfolk paramedical rescue, said most of those aboard the vessel were asleep at the time of the accident.

Coast Guard Petty Officer Vernon Covington said the rescue effort presented a language problem because the crew members spoke Spanish.

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA U.S. Dept. of Commerce

The National Weather Service predicts showers Tuesday for parts of New England and the Southwest.

Warmer temperatures due in Permian Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

Midlanders can put those warm coats back in the closet for awhile, as the cold weather of the last few days gives way to warmer temperatures. Tonight will be partly cloudy with a low in the mid 50s and winds from the south at 10-15 mph. Tuesday, the high will be in the upper 70s, but there is a 20 percent chance of afternoon thundershowers. Winds will be from the south at 10-20 mph and gusting, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Sunday's high of 64 was 40 degrees below the record for the date of 104, set in 1977, while the overnight low of 48 was 6 degrees above the 1966 record of 42.

STATE

Record low temperatures, triggered by a high pressure ridge aloft over the Colorado Rockies, were reported in several Texas cities early today.

The high pressure ridge kept skies across Texas mostly clear during the night, setting the stage for the record breaking plunges by the mercury at Austin, Wichita Falls, Fort Worth and Houston.

Records for October 1 were set in those cities by 5 a.m. and the National Weather Service said the mercury would likely dip a few more degrees before the sun rose enough to start a warming trend.

NATION

October's chill hit the nation's midsection early today as frost warnings were posted from the Canadian border to west central Arkansas and southern Missouri, while rain fell over parts of the East and West coasts.

Temperatures were in the 30s over the Great Lakes, the upper Mississippi Valley and the northern Plains. Readings were in the 40s over New England, the Ohio and Tennessee valleys, the middle and lower Mississippi Valley, the central Plains and the Rockies.

A freeze warning was in effect for the lower peninsula of Michigan early today.

TASB offers recommendations

By SHEILA ALLEE
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO — Texas' new $2.7 billion education reform package could stand some improvements, the Texas Association of School Boards says, and it has adopted dozens of recommendations aimed at doing just that.

The TASB, which represents nearly all of Texas' 1100 school boards, concludes a three-day joint meeting today with the Texas Association of School Administrators.

The TASB's 500-member Delegate Assembly, a policy-making group, endorsed dozens of recommendations Saturday, including making the state Board of Education elected once again.

The Legislature, meeting in special session this summer, passed the package and an accompanying tax increase of $4.6 billion over a three-year period.

Prior to the convention, TASB's legislative committee commended the Legislature for its education package, and incoming TASB President John Quisenberry said they felt it appropriate to recognize "that we appreciate the funding."

But Jerry Gerlich of the Sweeny Independent School District convinced the delegates to strike the commendation.

"The extra money is not without a price," Gerlich told the delegates. "We've paid that price by giving up local control. To keep the word 'independent' in our district names is just not realistic."

Popular election of the state Board of Education was a key change the delegates recommended.

The board had been elected by popular vote until the reform package, which called for gubernatorial appointment of a 15-member board until 1989. In that year, the trustees will be elected by popular vote.

The TASB delegates also urged non-partisan election of the board in April of election years and not November, as stipulated in the new law.

Proponents said holding the elections in November would reduce the attention the races might get in April, when most school districts elect their trustees.

Also recommended was more flexibility on maximum class sizes. The education bill requires no more than 22 students per class from kindergarten through fourth grade.

"We're sympathetic to focusing an emphasis on keeping class sizes down," said David Thompson, associate executive director of the TASB.

But "when that 23rd student shows up, you've got to find a room, equip it, hire another teacher," he said. "The expense is going to be in the hundreds of millions of dollars somewhere down the line."

The group urged more leeway so schools could have 27 or 28 students in a classroom staffed by a teacher and an aide.

The TASB delegates also urged the Legislature to relax state laws on disciplining students.

The reform bill "says you have to jump through a lot of procedural hoops — hearings, appeals and more appeals — to suspend a student," Thompson said. "Meanwhile, the student has to stay in school and the teacher is allowed to remove him from the classroom to maintain order.

"What are you going to do with the kid — put them in purgatory for six weeks?"

The delegates also advocated doing away with a new mandatory school calendar that requires classes to begin no sooner than Sept. 1. They said the calendar is better left to each district because of such factors as construction projects, climate and staff development activities.

The delegates also rejected new rules governing student absences. House Bill 72 requires a failing grade for students with five or more unexcused absences in a semester.

Advocates of a change said some students whose parents take them out of school would be unfairly punished.

REAGAN

And he quoted Mondale as saying in December 1982, "At most I can only see a modest or anemic recovery coming as a result of the recent declines in interest rates and some pickup in consumer buying."

Boasting of an American renaissance that "too many old-guard economists still won't acknowledge," Reagan ridiculed Mondale's proposal to reduce the record deficits of this administration through tax increases and spending cuts.

"My opponent, who opposed our tax program, said it would be murderously inflationary, before inflation went down; said there would be no recovery, before recovery began; then said recovery would be only anemic, before the strongest economic expansion in 30 years, now says there is no denying that the deficit must be reduced with tax increases," Reagan said.

"Forgive me, but judging from the record of those who are philosophically or constitutionally opposed to what we are doing, we might be better off consulting astrologers about what the deficit will be in 1989," he said.

Earlier, Reagan addressed a swearing-in ceremony for 1,548 new American citizens, urging them to enrich America with their culture, but not to forget their heritage.

"Our diversity is not only ethnic," Reagan said in his prepared remarks. "You will find, if you haven't already, that this country is full of different — and sometimes conflicting — ideas and philosophies.

"Walk by a newspaper stand, and you'll see scores of magazines and newspapers arguing this point and that. Listen to television and radio, and you'll hear more than enough opinions with which to agree and disagree.

"In fact, if you don't, over the next few years, wind up at least once taking off your shoe and throwing it at a television screen, then you will have missed out on one of the great Modern American Moments."

Besides Michigan, Reagan was visiting Mississippi and Texas on his three-day trip.

The campaign schedule includes an outdoor rally in Gulfport, Miss., and a three-city swing through Texas, ending in Houston, where Reagan and Vice President George Bush meet for a major Republican fund-raising dinner Tuesday night in Bush's adopted hometown.

An Associated Press survey shows Reagan leading in all three states, although Democratic nominee Walter F. Mondale is mounting determined challenges in Michigan and Texas, which many strategists say he must carry to have a chance at electoral victory.

The president returns to Washington on Wednesday to begin preparing for his first debate with Mondale. The nationally televised confrontation is scheduled for 9 p.m. EDT Sunday in Louisville, Ky.

Reagan spent most of last week concentrating on foreign affairs, with speeches to the United Nations and the World Bank, meetings with the leaders of Canada and Peru, and his first talks with a high Soviet official. Although those events were not without their political implications, he made only one overt campaign trip, visiting Ohio and Wisconsin in one day.

Reagan's meeting Friday with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko produced no immediate results but supplied the president with a ready defense against charges by his Democratic opponents that Reagan has been reluctant to talk to the Soviets.

However, during his campaign stop in Ohio, the president made an off-the-cuff remark that, for a time at least, seemed to scratch the shine on Reagan's highly polished re-election machine.

The remark, offered in reply to a student's question at Bowling Green State University, was widely interpreted as an attempt to blame the latest terrorist bombing of Americans in Beirut on the failures of his predecessors.

In discussing embassy security in the wake of the Sept. 20 suicide bombing in Lebanon, Reagan claimed America's intelligence capability was nearly destroyed before he took office, making it difficult to protect against terrorist attacks.

MONDALE

As for Lebanon, Mondale accused Reagan of an "inexcusable attempt to duck responsibility" for the bombing that killed two Americans.

"Presidential leadership means being accountable for events that occur on your watch," he said in his radio talk.

"There was not a failure of American intelligence; there was a failure to use it wisely."

Reagan has blamed the attack on the "near destruction of our intelligence capability" by previous administrations, but Mondale said that was "false, misguided and dangerous."

Such a statement "invites further assaults. It jeopardizes the security of our personnel and installations abroad," Mondale said.

He called on Reagan to "immediately and clearly" withdraw his claims about the weakness of the CIA.

Bush, at a news conference Sunday, was asked if Reagan should take responsibility for the bombing. He said that question should be asked of Reagan, then added:

"I think he'd say, 'I'm president and if there's responsibility I'll take it,'" Bush said. "But I think fair-minded people would say a terroristic act is extraordinarily difficult to guard against and therefore let's be a little careful about assessing blame."

Supreme Court agrees to tackle homosexual issue

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court today agreed to decide whether states may empower local public school boards to fire teachers who advocate, encourage or promote homosexuality.

The justices, tackling a case involving gay rights for the first time in 17 years, said they will review a federal appeals court ruling that such an Oklahoma law violated teachers' free-speech rights.

The Oklahoma law stated that a teacher could be fired or otherwise denied work for engaging in "public homosexual conduct or activity."

In other orders issued in a flood of actions on the first day of the term the justices:

— Refused to reinstate the attempted murder conviction of socialite Claus von Bulow, who had been accused to trying to murder his wife in order to inherit $14 million and marry his ex-actress lover.

— Agreed to consider making it easier for the federal covernment to recover potentially hundreds of millions of dollars in education aid allegedly misspent by the states.

— Refused to bar manufacturers from using favorable reviews from Consumer Reports magazine in their advertising.

— Agreed to decide if the states may force an individual to have his or her photograph on a driver's license if that violates the invidiual's religious beliefs.

— Left intact federal regulations aimed to providing consumers more information about prices in the funeral industry and barring unfair and deceptive practices by funeral home operators.

— Barred U.S. businesses from answering questionnaires used by Arab nations to help carry out their trade boycott of Israel.

The Oklahoma law on homosexuals defined that term as "advocating, soliciting, imposing, encouraging or promoting public or private homosexual activity in a manner that creates a substantial risk that such conduct will come to the attention of school children or school employees."

The National Gay Task Force challenged the law in a test case lawsuit against the Oklahoma City Board of Education. The suit attacked the law as written without ever alleging that it had been used against any teacher or teacher applicant.

U.S. District Judge Luther Eubanks in 1982 ruled that the law was valid, but the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals last March 14 reversed by a 2-1 vote his ruling as it pertained to "advocating, encouraging or promoting" homosexuality.

The appeals court cited past Supreme Court decisions in saying that the Constitution's First Amendment does not permit someone to be punished for advocating illegal conduct at some indefinite future time.

"Encouraging and promoting, like advocating, do not necessarily imply incitement to imminent action," the 10th Circuit court said. "A teacher who went before the Oklahoma Legislature or appeared on television to urge repeal of the Oklahoma anti-sodomy statute would be ... creating a substantial risk that his or her speech would come to the attention of school children or school employees."

Saying "a state's interest outweighs a teacher's interests only when the expression results in a material or substantial interference or disruption in the normal activities of the school, the appeals court said the Oklahoma law would allow firings without any showing of such disruption.

In seeking Supreme Court review, school board lawyers argued that the law is capable of being read — and enforced — in a way that would not violate free-speech rights and still protect schoolchildren.

But lawyers for the National Gay Task Force attacked the law, calling it "a heavy-handed attempt to limit debate on an important public issue by forbidding all public school teachers from speaking out on homosexuality."

The task force lawyers said teachers who make sexual advances toward children should be punished, but contended that such behavior was not the subject of the invalidated law.

The Supreme Court has not issued a decision in a homosexual rights case since 1967, when it ruled that aliens found to be homosexual may be deported as persons "afflicted with a psychopathic personality."

Servitude ruling allowed to stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today allowed the government to use anti-slavery laws to prosecute eight individuals accused of bringing Indonesians to the Los Angeles area to use as house servants.

The court, without comment, let stand a ruling that ordered the eight to stand trial on charges they conspired to hold the Indonesians in involuntary servitude.

A federal judge threw out a number of the charges involving involuntary servitude or peonage. But the charges were reinstated in March by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Prosecutors said the defendants imported poor, non-English speaking Indonesians by enticing them to travel to the United States.

Embassy probe not seeking 'scapegoat'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, responding with unusual emotion to questions on the U.S. Embassy bombing in Beirut, says he will find out if negligence was involved "but we're not in this investigation business to knock somebody's head off."

"There is somehow this notion that somebody's head has to roll," the usually relaxed Shultz told interviewers Sunday on ABC-TV's "This Week with David Brinkley."

"Well, maybe so," Shultz said. "And I'm willing to have it be my head anytime anyone wants ... I certainly feel responsible. Absolutely. And I take that responsibility very seriously."

The secretary's heated response came in reply to a question on whether lax security was involved in the Sept. 20 terrorist bombing of the embassy annex in which two U.S. servicemen and several other people died. It was the third major attack on Americans in Lebanon in 17 months.

"Just you listen to me now — I feel so strongly about this," Shultz said when interviewers tried to interrupt. "The people out there in Beirut are serving our country in a risky environment ... and they are doing everything possible to improve their security and it's up to us to help them."

"There is an investigation ..." he said. "If there was negligence, we'll find it. But we're not in this investigation business to see if we can knock somebody's head off. Our purpose is to find out what additional we can do to enhance the security of our embassies."

Shultz described U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew as "a hero."

Public concept of prison life not real, say prison officials, inmates

DALLAS (AP) — An assistant warden at a Texas prison says "free world people" have no real concept of what it's really like to be in prison.

"They see a lot of Alcatraz movies," said Jimmy Alford, an assistant warden at Coffield. "They figure we're in a dungeon-type building with water trickling down the walls."

In fact, he told The Dallas Morning News, most prisons are modern, clean and resemble a public school with bars.

But inmates, in their interviews with reporters the newspaper sent to each of the 25 units of the Texas Department of Corrections, said the public also has no idea how violent prison life is.

ONE PRISONER, James Evans, said he has learned he can't read the Bible as long as he's behind bars and has no one to protect him.

"This is what came of it," he said, touching a left eye that was blood red and circled with a purple bruise.

"A bunch of guys jumped on me. One kicked me in the eye while I was down," he said.

By some accounts, Evans was lucky. Bible reading is a sign of weakness in prison, and a sign of weakness is a guarantee of torment, other prisoners said.

The strong prey on the weak, threatening violence unless they are paid off — in money, sex or both, Evans said. This practice is called "paying protection" or, more commonly, "hogging."

"My cellmate had no money coming in at all. He had to turn homosexual to make it," Evans said.

PRISON OFFICIALS say that because of a guard shortage, it's largely up to inmates to defend themselves.

"I tell inmates right off the bat that I can live with a fist fight. You have got the right to protect your property and your manhood," said Carl White, an assistant warden at the Coffield Unit.

Jerry O'Neal, who served time in prison in 1981 and 1982 for auto theft and was sent back to Pack II early in 1983 on a second auto theft conviction, has fought. In one scuffle, he stabbed another inmate 10 times, he told the News.

"I didn't plan to kill him. I only wanted to injure him," he said.

Most weapons used by prisoners are homemade — the most common being a razor blade pressed into the melted handle of a plastic toothbrush.

O'Neal told the News he made his weapon, which resembled an oversized icepick, from a crutch left behind by another inmate.

"It took less than an hour," he said.

O'NEAL SAID he was stunned by the changes that took place in prison during his few months of freedom.

"We get treated a lot better by the guards than we did. They actually try to help you now. We get fed a lot better too," O'Neal said.

"But there's a lot more violence — more fights, more stabbings. And if you don't fight, you're going to have problems," he said.

Almost two-thirds of the inmates fall below the normal IQ range, the News reported. One warden described the typical inmate as "like a 3-year-old who bench presses 300 pounds every day."

The day starts at 4:30 a.m. Breakfast is over and the workday started by 6:30 a.m. Jobs range from chopping weeds in the farm fields to operating a computer.

Inmates quit at 3:30 p.m., take a shower, get freshly laundered white cotton prison uniforms and eat supper. In the evening, they watch television, play dominoes, read or go to the recreation yard.

Lights are out at 10:30 p.m. on weeknights and midnight on weekends, although they are allowed to stay up later during Monday Night Football.

THERE ARE 25 prison units and their atmosphere varies widely.

Jester inmate David Bowman called his unit "a summer camp." Pack I inmate Robert Littlejohn said, "This is a Sunday school unit here."

New education board gathers for first time

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Whether the new State Board of Education is elected or appointed should not be the key issue in Texas' public education, new board member Maria Elena Flood says.

"I'm not sure being elected or appointed is the point," she said Sunday at a reception for the new panel. "We have a legislative mandate and we're going to make every effort to implement the education reforms."

Mrs. Flood, of El Paso, and eight others of the 15-member board gathered publicly for the first time Sunday in a reception given by the Texas Association of School Boards and the Texas Association of School Administrators.

The two associations met in a joint convention this weekend to discuss a $2.7 billion education reform package passed by the Legislature in a special session this summer.

The reform bill called for the governor to appoint a 15-member State Board of Education, replacing the previous 27-member board elected at the polls.

The new panel, appointed two weeks ago by Gov. Mark White, will have the advantage of making a fresh start, said Emmett Conrad, a Dallas physician.

"We don't have any vested interest in what's been established. We won't fall in the trap of viewing things as sacred," he said.

The new board, said member Pete Morales Jr. of Devine, will have more latitude and more authority than the old one, although it will have to work out the reform bill's rough edges.

"But I hope it gets us back to the basics — reading, writing and arithmetic. I have a first grader, so I'll be wearing two hats. I'll be a father and a board member," he said.

Two board members — Jack Strong, a former state senator and now a board member from Longview, and Carolyn Crawford of Beaumont, said the new board will operate more smoothly because it is smaller.

Addressing an issue controversial during the joint convention, Strong said he's not sure if the teacher competency testing required in the education bill is the best way to guarantee quality teachers.

"I have never talked to a teacher who said he or she didn't know of some incompetent teachers," he said. "Whether (the competency test) is the best way, I don't know. Our first obligation is to give the students the best education we can. And if that is a problem, then we need to address it."

Also on hand for the reception were board members Rebecca Canning of Waco, Katherine Raines of Cleburne, Paul Dunn of Levelland and William McBride of San Antonio.

Not present were Mary Berlanga of Corpus Christi, Volly Bastine of Houston, Charles Duncan of Houston, John Prescott of College Station, Jon Brumley of Fort Worth and Fred Bucy of Dallas.

Inmate burned in accident

GALVESTON, Texas (AP) — A 23-year-old Texas prison inmate received second-degree burns on both legs and his hands when a 60-gallon pot of boiling cobbler spilled on his legs, officials said.

Ricky R. Erving, a cook at the Texas Department of Corrections Pack II unit, was injured about 4:20 a.m. after he slipped on the kitchen floor, knocking out the stand that supported the large cooking pot, unit warden Bobby Maggard said Sunday.

Maggard said the inmate, who is from Dallas, was treated at the unit infirmary and was later moved by helicopter to John Sealy Hospital here were he was kept in the intensive care unit for observation. He was listed in fair and stable condition, said TDC Major Sherman Isenburg.

Lawmakers, commissioner predict problems with competency testing

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Texas' controversial new teacher competency testing law will never be implemented because of the massive legal problems that would ensue, the chairman of the Senate Education Committee has predicted.

The testing requirement is part of Texas $2.7 billion education reform bill the Legislature passed in special session this summer.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, and state Rep. Bill Haley, chairman of the House Education Committee, reviewed the education package in a joint appearance Sunday at the convention of the Texas Association of School Boards and Texas Association of School Administrators.

"I personally believe competency testing will never be put in place in Texas," Parker told about 1,000 listeners.

"If you're worried about lawsuits, you fire somebody for failing a test. You haven't seen anything yet," he said. "You're talking about the lawyers' retirement bill of Texas."

Haley, D-Center, said competency testing is a "legally questionable procedure. What can be accomplished by such a test?"

He said every professional licensing act he has seen pass the Legislature has included a grandfather clause allowing current practitioners to continue working.

Haley said the state could run into a teacher shortage with the testing because 5 percent could fail, another 5 percent are at retirement age and might opt not to take the test, and many more might refuse to take it.

In a separate appearance, Ray Bynum, commissioner of the Texas Education Agency, said if the predicted 5 percent fails the test, as many as 25,500 public school teachers could lose their jobs.

Bynum said many teachers have told him they will not take the test and risk losing their jobs.

"Particularly some people who have a spouse that makes a good income, who are 55 years old or older and have been teaching 25 to 30 years," he said. "I believe them."

Bynum urged school leaders to be concerned about their image — "the image that we are a split and fragmented group. If I would make a criticism of people in public education, it would be we are so fragmented anyone could whip us."

Haley urged the groups to have alternatives in mind when they approach the Legislature about making changes in the reform package.

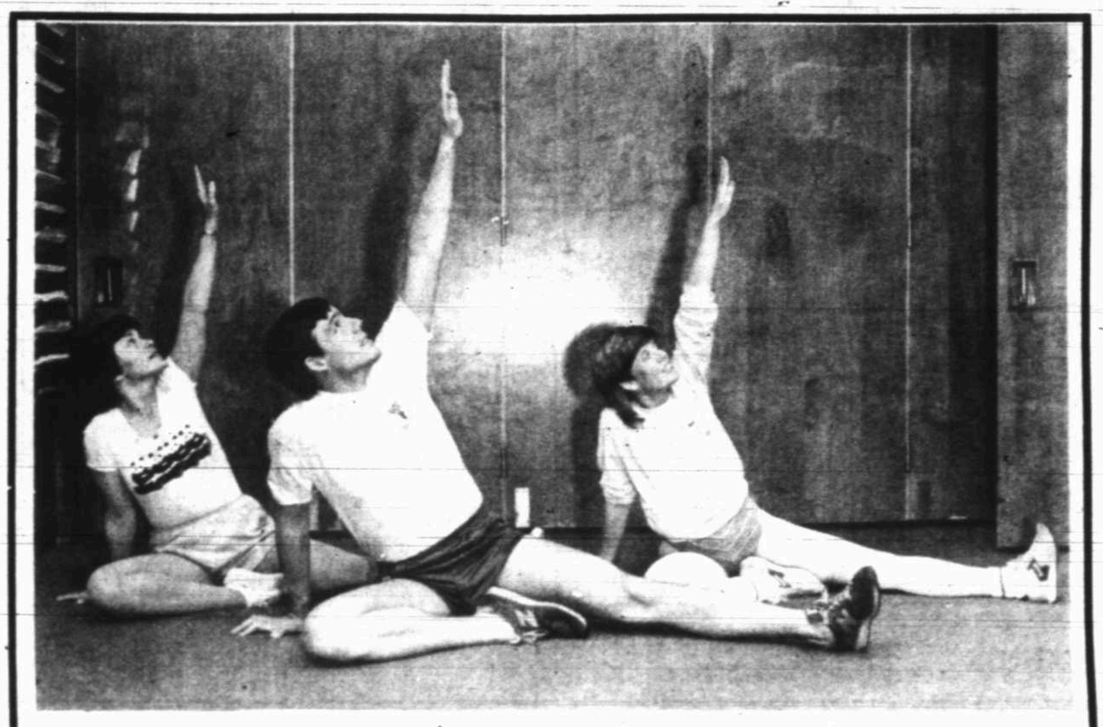

"You can forget a frontal assault," Haley said. "You've got to address the Legislature with facts, reason and calmness. Those who come to us and say 'here are some suggestions' will gain an ear in the Legislature."

Parker had harsh words for the newly appointed 15-member State Board of Education. House Bill 72 abolished the old 27-member elected board and called for the governor to appoint a 15-member panel.

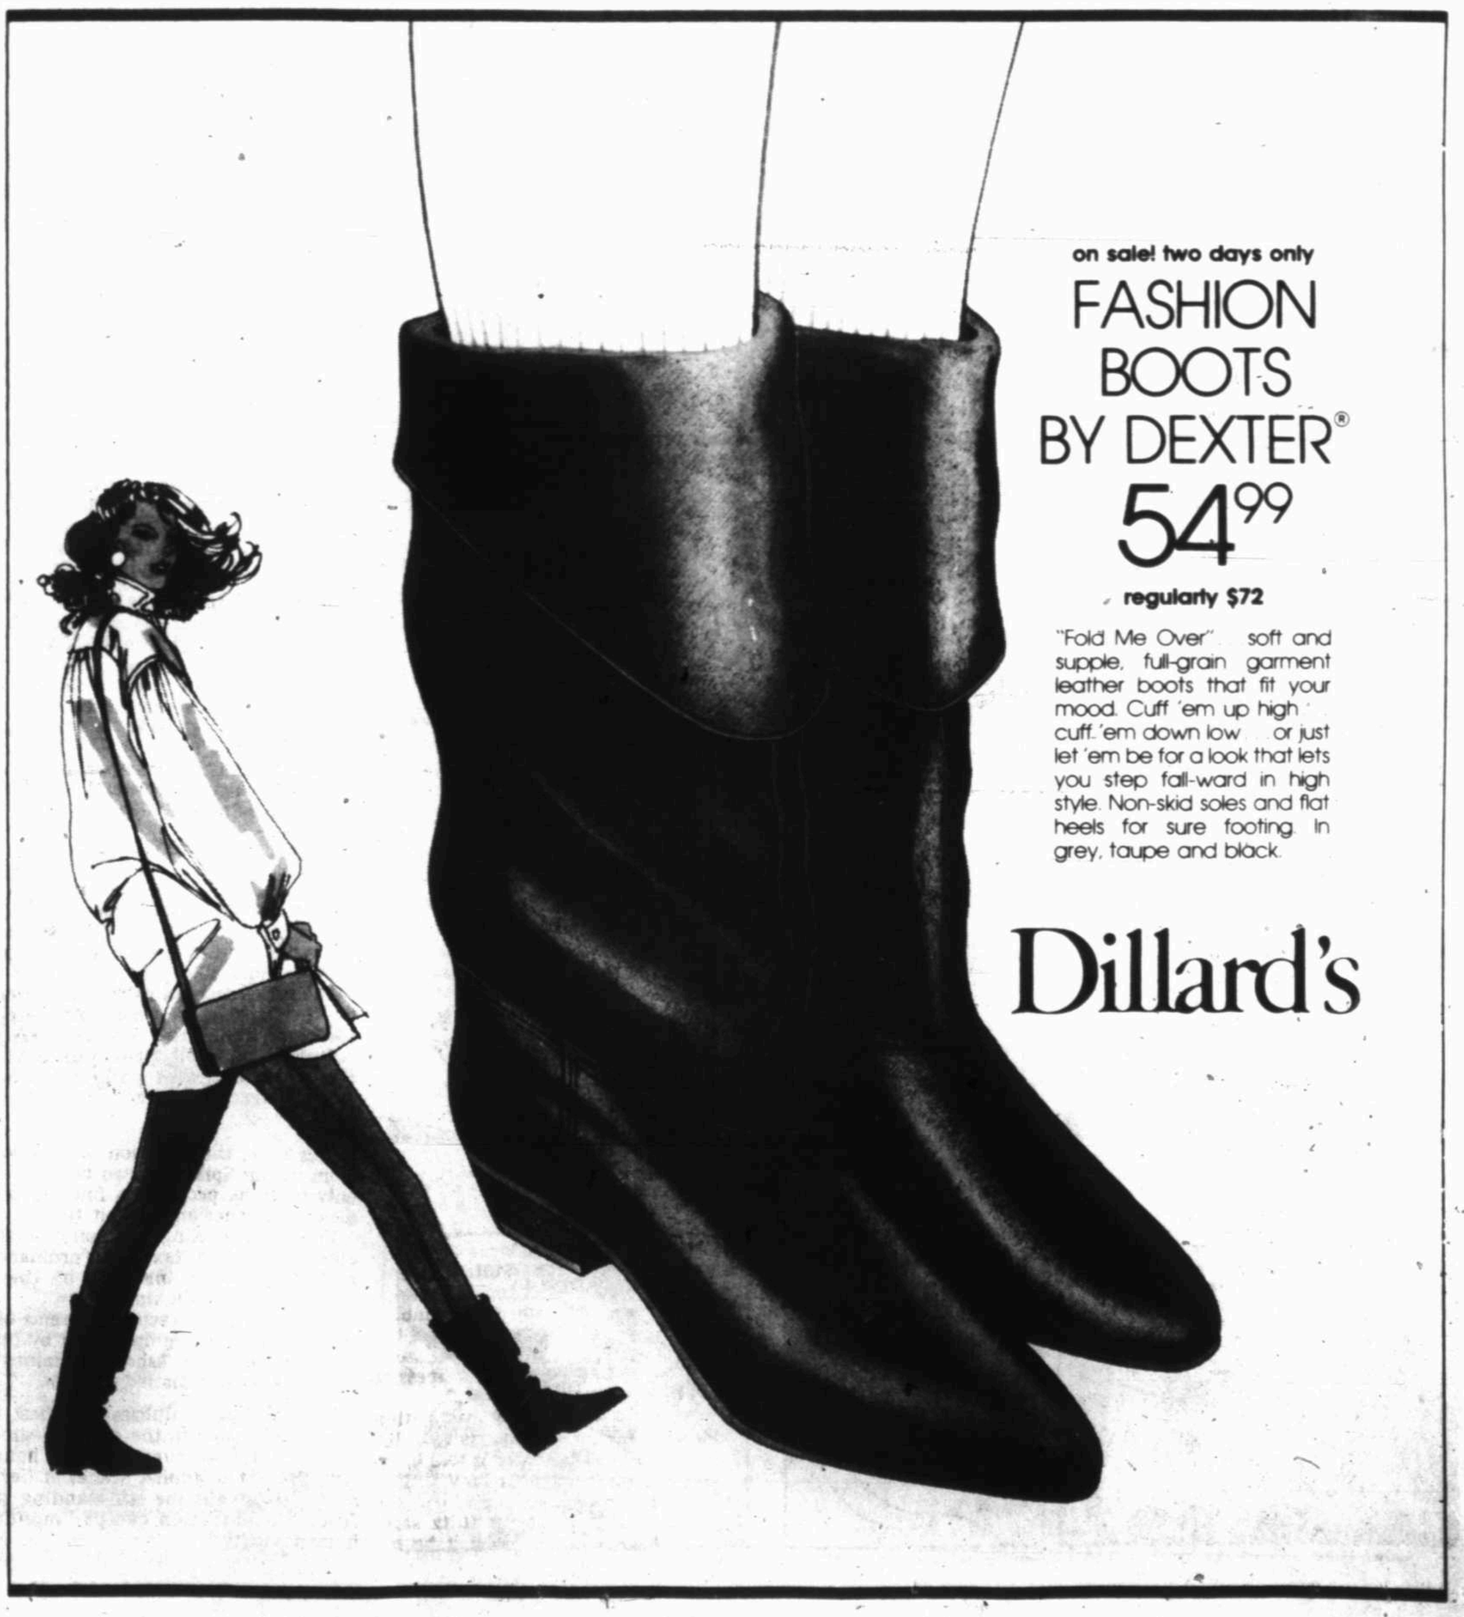

The board, appointed two weeks ago by Gov. Mark White, will be elected beginning in 1989.

"I'm tired of people getting appointed just because they gave $10,000 to the guy who got elected governor," Parker said.

"The old board could have done it (implemented education reform package)," he said.

Iacocca says he wouldn't mind taking crack at U.S. economy

Lee Iacocca

NEW YORK (AP) — Lee Iacocca says now that he's turned things around at Chrysler Corp., he wouldn't mind taking a crack at the U.S. economy.

"Under the right conditions, I'd serve anybody," the auto company chairman said in an interview in this week's Newsweek. "I'd serve Reagan. I'd have served Calvin Coolidge if he gave me the right job: economic czar in Washington, or something like that."

Iacocca said one condition would be that "all of those other guys — the Council of Economic Advisers, Federal Reserve — all go through me."

Newsweek also published excerpts from "Iacocca: An Autobiography" in which Iacocca, a former president of the Ford Motor Co., describes Henry Ford II as "a king who could tolerate no equals."

When Ford fired him in 1978, Iacocca writes, "it was enough to make me kill — I wasn't quite sure who, Henry Ford or myself."

John De Lorean

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Z. De Lorean, who successfully argued last month that he was set up by the federal government on cocaine trafficking charges, says he's been targeted by law enforcement officials since his advocacy of civil rights in the 1960s.

Government prosecutors and agents expected promotions and bonuses for "targeting me in the high visibility and publicity surrounding the case," the automaker said in an interview published Sunday in the Los Angeles Herald Examiner.

"I feel strongly that this goes back quite a long way, and we have some evidence that indicates that ... I became targeted back during the Hoover days in the '60s when I was a very strong advocate of minority and black rights," De Lorean said, referring to the late head of the FBI, J. Edgar Hoover.

De Lorean, 59, was acquitted on eight felony charges he conspired to distribute $24 million in cocaine after a five-month trial. Jurors felt he had been entrapped by government agents.

He still faces bankruptcy proceedings in Detroit stemming from the collapse of the DeLorean Motor Co. in Northern Ireland.

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Queen Elizabeth II has been sending royal horses to Kentucky for years to breed them with the best of the Blue Grass State, but in October she'll see the lush farmland for the first time.

No official schedule for the queen's six-day trip has been issued, but the Lexington Herald-Leader reported Sunday she will be honored at three parties and will present the trophy to the winner of the Queen Elizabeth II Challenge Cup at Keeneland Race Course on Oct. 11.

Charles Anson, press secretary of the British embassy in Washington, characterized the queen's visit as "strickly a private visit for her to view some of the local stud farms."

Series explores Judaism's history

NEW YORK (AP) — "Heritage: Civilization and the Jews" is much more than the history of one religious or ethnic group. It's a monumental map of mankind, using 3,000 years of the Jewish experience as its legend.

Or to put it another way, it's a history of humanity, written from right to left.

The ambitious nine-episode series, produced by New York's WNET, begins tonight on public television. It continues Tuesday night before moving to weekly installments for seven Monday nights.

"It's the story of a small people with a large place in the destiny of mankind," said Abba Eban, the erudite, eloquent former Israeli ambassador to the United Nations who serves as host and chief consultant on the five-year, $11 million project.

For the most part, it's an untold television story. The medium has, of course, devoted much dramatic and documentary space to the Holocaust and modern Israel, but little to Judaism's origins and historical and cultural influences.

TV has seen "Jews as sufferers, and the Jews as a 'problem,'" said Eban, "but not as the creators of original values, not as a major contributor to the reservoir of world thought, (not) as a generator of moral ideas and social principles."

The most radical theological departure was the notion of a single, universal god. This belief delineated Jews in ancient times and, as described in tonight's "A People Is Born," put them at odds with all the empires — Babylon, Egypt, Persia, Greece and Rome — that rose and fell around them.

The opening episode is not an overview. Instead, it chooses to delve immediately into the beginnings of man, with Adam and Eve being traced back to Mesopotamia — modern-day Iraq.

In watching "A People Is Born," more than in any other segment, a knowledge of history helps. Preferring to keep an ongoing narrative flow, this episode rarely stops to provide explanatory charts and maps that would give viewers a chronological and geographical compass.

One dramatic moment is the description of the Jews' forced enslavement in Egypt. With the soundtrack at its most menacing and modern shots of the pyramids in the background, the program describes this first act of persecution of the Jews and their first act of survival — the exodus from Egypt.

Eban then traces the Jewish pilgrimage to Mount Sinai, where Moses received the Ten Commandments. Pictures of Mount Sinai today are shown, and the area has the striking red-clay profile of the Arizona steppes of Sidona, where many American westerns were filmed.

Photographic splendor is one by-product of the production's journey to 19 countries on four continents. At times, "Civilization" resembles a travelogue that would rival any National Geographic Special.

The information and ideas packed in the nine hours should also challenge any scholar. As with any lengthy chronicle, the history can be dry, and the scholarly Eban, who brings such dignity and integrity to "Civilization," doesn't have the type of personality to enliven the show or quicken its pace.

The series soars in its middle episodes covering the Renaissance period. Amsterdam in the 1600s was called the New Jerusalem. Jewish culture flourished, providing a climate for Spinoza, the Jewish philosopher who questioned miracles and conventional beliefs in God.

This time, the rejection of new ideas came from within Spinoza's own religion — not the only time the production found Jewish prejudice, intolerance and exploitation.

For example, King Solomon used slave labor and levied heavy taxes on "ordinary people," and King Herod, installed by the Romans, slaughtered his own kin.

But, of course, a recurring theme of the Jewish story is a people oppressed by others. Episode 8, "Out of the Ashes," examines the Holocaust and its aftermath.

Here, the series utilizes historical film footage not available to the earlier segments. The words of Jewish survivors are heard, along with the all-too-familiar scenes of German brutality. Eban calls the still-standing structures from concentration camps "monuments to human cruelty."

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♡AQ653 ◇A1085 ♣KJ94
Partner opens the bidding with three spades. What action do you take?
A.—At this vulnerability, you are on the borderline for a raise to four spades. However, the fact that you are void in partner's suit means that he might have one trump loser more than he anticipates, so that convinces us to pass. If you bid three no trump, you should brush up on your understanding of the trick-taking potential of your hand.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠6 ♡K8 ◇AKJ93 ♣AQ1054
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Partner's one heart response has improved your hand a little, because the king of hearts now becomes a working card. Therefore, we would jump shift to three clubs. Had partner responded one spade rather than one heart, we would have deemed a simple rebid of two clubs sufficient.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KJ982 ♡AQJ ◇Q96 ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	3 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—You have a minimum opening bid and partner did not have the values to force to four spades. Nevertheless, we would not pass. Our diamond values should be upgraded, and we would accept the invitation on the strength of the double fit. Had partner's response been two clubs instead of two diamonds, we would have been content with a partial score.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J10 ♡AQJ9 ◇Q6 ♣J9873
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—In terms of high cards, your hand does not merit another move. However, you have two honors in partner's suit, a five-card suit of your own and excellent intermediates, so we think you are worth one try. The obvious bid is two no trump, despite the sketchy diamond stopper.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQ10 ♡84 ◇KQ95 ♣A982
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's jump to two no trump after passing shows a balanced hand of 11-12 points. You have 14 good points — the tens and nines give your hand body. Proceed forthwith to three no trump.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠1065 ♡AKQ2 ◇J64 ♣QJ5
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	1 ◇	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Since your hand is flat, and most of its strength is concentrated in one suit, it is not quite as strong as its point count suggests. Certainly, it is worth another bid, but we would not contemplate any drastic action. For the moment, a raise to three clubs is adequate.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: New York Yankees shortstop Andre Robertson, author Graham Greene, actor Moses Gunn, top movie critic Rex Reed and innovative magazine editor Clay Felker celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: India's Mahatma Ghandi and comedians Groucho Marx and Bud Abbott. You are about to get a lucky break at work. Make the most of it! The financial outlook improves as business thrives. New romantic ties are forged over the winter holidays. Get out and socialize more. A change of environment stimulates your creativity. Artistic projects succeed Someone could try to deceive you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Counteract disruptive influences by adopting a more positive attitude. Eventually opposition will fade away. Real estate transactions prove highly profitable. Welcome an opportunity to improve a personal relationship.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Reconfirm appointments and travel arrangements before departing on a business trip. You may be asked to fill in for someone. An occasional surprise keeps romance exciting.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone tries to get you to rush an important work assignment. Stand your ground. Your mate or steady date introduces you to valuable contacts. Capitalize on the rapport you have with a newcomer.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Creative endeavors prove very profitable. An unsettling development requires you to pay closer attention to financial transactions. Old alliances are more rewarding than new ones now. Keep in touch with influential friends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not allow your finances to become entangled with your friends'. Protect mutual interests, however. Family members approve your choice for a mate. Promote domestic harmony.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Honoring an obligation could bring unexpected financial benefits. You get a chance to travel for educational purposes. A new romance turns serious. Be honest if you are not ready to take the plunge.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A child may act contrary to your wishes. Patience and love help you counteract negative influences. Look forward to receiving invitations that signal your entry into a very prestigious group.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not spread yourself too thin today. You will accomplish more by zeroing in on one project. A co-worker may refuse to repay a loan. You get help from an unexpected quarter.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A down-to-earth attitude and a little luck make this a red-letter day! A long-sought career or financial goal moves with reach. An indirect approach works best in romance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your ideas for solving a financial problem are first class. Secrecy is essential when finalizing contracts and agreements. A Leo offers some sound advice. A private rendezvous could prove sensational.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A creative idea could mean a big step forward for your career. Sidestep an argument with mate or partner. Your excellent judgment tells you the right tack to take in a sticky situation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your finances enjoy favorable influences now. Friends or relatives prove generous. Luck plays a role in career advancement. Be gracious to a newcomer. Keep any diet or exercise resolutions.

Hid in the corner

By now most Americans should be accustomed to the "say nothing" kind of commentary that typically flows from world leaders following their meetings. It's a good indication that most people attach too much importance to the talks and, quite consistently, end up disappointed.

Usually the talks are described by the officials in hazy terminology that reveals little of substance such as: "The talks were constructive" or "the talks left the officials hopeful."

Well, certainly! After all, most people hope world leaders don't hold meetings only for show. We like to hope progress can be made when they get together and that the meetings will bear fruit.

Not much more could be said, though, following the initial talk between President Ronald Reagan and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko. Both men said the talk was "hopeful" and Reagan indicated he believed the session signaled an easing of tensions — something that has concerned a number of Americans in recent months. Whether that assessment proves accurate probably will be determine in coming weeks.

We all like to think that world leaders can sit down and in the matter of a few minutes or, in some cases, hours iron-out differences that have existed in the relationship between their countries over a period of time. But it doesn't happen that way and in many instances if two world leaders can establish a rapport for future negotiations, their people surely have gotten their money's worth.

Even in the talks between Reagan and Gromyko their are other factors that must be taken into account, such as political posturing by the leaders and the fact that the leaders probably will not reveal all they discussed. Reagan and Gromyko even met briefly alone and they are the only ones who know what was said at that time.

Perhaps world leaders tell their audiences really all they need to know about their talks. Perhaps not. But it has become obvious in recent times — the past two decades or so — that "say nothing" descriptions are the best play-by-play we'll get. Maybe that's really best in the interest of the two world leaders establishing a rapport for future talks or negotiations.

Still, it sure would have been interesting to have been a mouse in the corner of the room where Reagan and Gromyko were talking.

Lovestruck roaches

It's hard to love a cockroach.

The shiny, scurrying creatures eat everything from garbage to books and other bugs. They are dirty, and they spread germs. They haunt restaurants, hotel rooms and homes.

Go into the kitchen some dark night. Switch on the lights. We hope you don't see them slithering quickly toward their hiding places beneath the cupboards or behind the stove.

Everybody's had it with cockroaches. Still they exist, after millions of years. But now they are facing doom. Man has found a devious way of sending the cockroach off to meet its maker.

Yale University chemists have produce a synthetic cockroach aphrodisiac. It is called periplanone-B. Even the tiniest amount can drive male cockroaches wild. Make them stand on their back legs and wiggle their wings

Periplanone-B will lure cockroaches into what is cleverly called a Roach Motel — a little cardboard box baited with poison, say the chemists. There, the cockroach will die of unrequited love. At least that's our plan.

Glossing-over facts

There they go again. For the umpteenth time, critics of the Reagan administration are trotting out what some Democrats call the fairness issue: the charge that Reagan administration policies have enriched the wealthy and further impoverished the poor.

This time, it's a joint study by two subcommittees of the House of Representatives. The two Democrats who are chairmen of the subcommittees said the study indicates that disposable income has declined for poor families in the past four years because of the Reagan administration's tax and budget policies.

A news service story on the study said the Democrats' report was the latest in a series of skirmishes in a battle over why the poverty rate increased from 15 percent in 1982 to 15.2 percent in 1983.

The increase in the poverty rate that is so often cited by administration critics was determined by the Census Bureau through sampling techniques. An increase of two-tenths of 1 percentage point was described by the Census Bureau as not being statistically significant.

No one's taxes were raised by the 1981 tax cut approved by President Reagan and Congress, economists Martin and Kathleen Feldstein noted in an article recently. Martin Feldstein is the former chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

"To assess the impact of the Reagan tax act, the effect of the changes in the tax law must be separated from the effects of rising incomes, and that's just what Reagan's critics have failed to do," the Feldsteins wrote.

In addition, the critics can't escape the fact that no tax or budget policy adopted during the Reagan term could have become law without the approval of the Democratically controlled House.

Decisions by the independent Federal Reserve Board also influence the economy and, in turn, the financial condition of individuals. So do market forces that can't — and shouldn't — be controlled by government.

To gloss over such consideration in accusing the administration of catering to the wealthy at the expense of the poor is simplistic and unfair.

Land grabbers have big guns

WASHINGTON — Land grabs by powerful, well-armed interests with scant regard for the law were fairly common in the Old West. Unfortunately, the practice still exists. Just ask the people of Nevada.

Jack Anderson

This time the land grabbers aren't railroad tycoons or cattle barons, but the military services of the United States. They're armed, not with six-guns, but with helicopters and supersonic fighters and bombers. Their arrogance and might are more than any latter-day "Shane" could overcome.

I've already reported how the Air Force illegally appropriated 139 square miles of the government-owned Groom Mountains in southwestern Nevada and set up "No Trespassing" signs, armed guards and helicopter patrols. The Air Force finally admitted to Congress that it had never obtained legal right to the property from the Bureau of Land Management — but no one has been so much as reprimanded for this violation of the law.

Now the Navy has steamed full speed ahead after its share of the Nevada desert. The admirals have asked for 21,576 acres of public land near the Fallon Naval Air Station, to go with the 183,000 acres they sought there two years ago. The Navy is still drafting an environmental impact statement on the earlier request.

The Navy has also gained a toehold in public lands that are theoretically under wilderness-law protection. It has put radar stations in "wilderness study areas" — public land that is supposed to remain untouched until Congress decides what to do with it.

The radar, installed by helicopter to minimize disruption to the wild area, helps Navy pilots keep score in practice dogfights. A Bureau of Land Management official told my associate John Dillon the Navy was given permission to put in the radar because the environmental impact was considered slight.

Perhaps the Navy's most ambitious expansion proposal is not a land grab but an "air grab." It wants the skies over 5,600 square miles of central Nevada closed to civilian air traffic for a "supersonic operations area." This patch of sky will be reserved for F-18 fighter planes based at Fallon.

Although much of the area the Navy wants the exclusive right to fly over is public land, it also includes privately owned ranches and towns, whose desert solitude will be shattered by as many as 100 sonic booms a day.

Dr. Richard Bargen of Fallon, who runs a flying health service, has gone to court to block the Navy's plan, which he suspects is a reincarnation of the 1974 Air Force-Navy proposal to restrict airspace in a triangle formed by Fallon and the Air Force's Nellis and Hill bases.

"A major project with major health implications for the entire state is being implemented in a piecemeal fashion," Bargen said, "without really addressing the need for it or what impact it will have on people. It's really a matter of doing to a few people what you can't do to a lot of people."

From a physician's point of view, he said, the sonic booms "amount to an uncontrolled experiment on human beings."

There have already been instances of military planes bombing the wrong targets — including an accidental attack in 1973 on a Fish and Wildlife Service headquarters near the Nellis base. And the Navy's own documents concede that any person straying into the restricted area — or any wildlife living there — would be in peril. "Any structure, person or animal in the area could be exposed to possible destruction from air-launched ordnance," one report noted.

The Nevada State Parks Division described the expected sonic-boom impact with understatement, saying: "The flying of supersonic aircraft, in substantial increasing numbers, to within 100 feet above ground level will surely impact wilderness values."

No darts for Gromyko in U.N.

WASHINGTON — In his first words with Ronald Reagan at the president's reception opening the United Nations General Assembly session, Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko exhibited his frame of mind by asking: "Well, Mr. President, how many arrows are you going to shoot at us in your speech tomorrow, about 14?"

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

Reagan was momentarily taken aback. Smiling faintly, he answered to this effect: I don't know that I'm going to shoot any arrows at all!

Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, standing alongside, was overheard at that point telling Gromyko there would not be "even one dart" for the Soviet Union in Reagan's General Assembly speech the next day. Kirkpatrick was right. There were plenty of arrows and darts in the U.N., but they were thrown by Gromyko himself in his Thursday address.

REAGAN AVOIDS GOP

President Reagan's careful campaign managers have turned down a plea that before Congress adjourns next week he meet on the steps of the Capitol with all Republican candidates for the House, as he did in 1980.

The Capitol steps extravaganza was planned by Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia and other House GOP activists in an attempt to put Reagan more solidly behind the congressional campaign. But the president's men, at both campaign headquarters and the White House, still fear too close association with the Republican Party could cost Reagan votes against Walter F. Mondale. They want to wait at least until mid-October to see if the president's lead still holds.

The reason given for the presidential no-show is the need to rehearse for the first presidential debate Oct. 7. In fact, Reagan will do much less rehearsing than four years ago. In dry runs, presidential assistant Richard Darman has taken Reagan's place, while budget director David Stockman played Mondale's role.

WHITHER CUOMO?

The failure of New York's Gov. Mario Cuomo to try to talk Timothy Russert out of quitting as his top political aide suggests he has not made up his mind whether to run for president in 1988.

Russert, who was largely responsible for building Cuomo into a national figure during his first two years as governor, is eager to leave politics after eight years as an aide to Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan and Cuomo. Nevertheless, he probably would have turned down the juicy offer to become an NBC News vice president had the governor asked him to stay on board for a presidential run.

Although Russert's contract with NBC is for three years, he does not intend to return to the political wars in 1988 and has rejected offers from other presidential prospects. With Russert gone, Cuomo will have to find a national operative to augment his New York-oriented staff if he harbors presidential intentions.

DON REGAN STAYS

Denying a cascade of rumors pouring through Washington, Donald T. Regan tells his closest associates he has no intention whatever of returning to his old Wall Street job running Merrill Lynch in 1985 and instead plans to stay on as secretary of the Treasury in a second Reagan administration.

Regan made it clear during the Republican Convention in Dallas that he was not planning to resign after the election. Since then, rumors have circulated in Washington that he would follow the admonitions of old associates at Merrill Lynch insisting that he return to the giant brokerage firm to iron out serious troubles there.

The secretary contends there is not a word of truth in it, and some of his colleagues suspect the rumors were planted by White House staffers. Regan's departure would open a choice Cabinet seat for James A. Baker III, presidential chief of staff, thereby clearing the way for a comprehensive staff reorganization at the White House.

ZBIG WAS CANCELED

Contrary to published reports that Zbigniew Brzezinski briefed President Reagan prior to his meeting with Andrei Gromyko, the session with the foreign policy expert who served as President Carter's national security adviser was canceled without explanation.

According to White House aides, the president is fond of Brzezinski — one of the strongest anti-communists in the Carter administration. Accordingly, he was scheduled (along with Richard M. Nixon and Henry A. Kissinger, among others) to brief Reagan before he saw the Soviet foreign minister. But before the meeting could take place, the invitation was withdrawn.

Insiders point to the incident as a sign of disagreement at the White House over whether Reagan in his second term should move toward more bipartisanship with Democrats such as Brzezinski. But a top official from a former Republican administration also was invited and then disinvited without explanation, suggesting disorganization at the White House as the cause.

Highways 'better off'

We read with interest your editorial of Sept. 12, entitled, "Honesty — or else." We totally support your comments regarding our proud Texas tradition of demanding honest government and the important role informed voters play in insuring honest government. There is, however, another tradition of which we Texans are equally proud and that is our outstanding highway system ... probably the finest in the nation.

The highway funding package passed by the Legislature this summer and the tax increases to fund it, were passed in an honest effort to correct serious problems in highway maintenance and construction, and to continue our tradition of excellent highways. It was never, to our knowledge, described as a "cure-all," but it does provide a total net increase for highways estimated to be about $1.7 billion over the next three years. This is a substantial increase in anyone's book, and will provide much needed funds for additional maintenance and reconstruction of our existing highways as well as new construction required to keep up with growth.

As you stated, House Bill 3, which this year appropriated $268.1 million of General Revenue Funds for highways was repealed. However, it was replaced in 1985 by a one-time transfer of $265 million of General Revenue. In 1986 highways will begin receiving an "earmarked" portion of the vehicle sales tax (10% plus an amount equal to one-eighth of the motor fuels tax revenue). This new revenue is estimated to be $210.6 million in 1986 and $214.9 million in 1987. While this is a slight decrease from the HB 3 funding, it is a return to the traditional user financing of highways and away from reliance on General Revenue.

All in all, it was a giant step toward safeguarding our mobility and traditional Texas lifestyle.

Every member of the Legislature as well as the governor and lieutenant governor deserves our thanks for their hard work and contribution.

Proposition 2 support urged

As a faculty member at U.T. Permian Basin, I would like to point out several positive effects of Proposition 2 — the Education Assistance Fund Amendment.

Since 1979, universities not covered by the Permanent University Fund (such as ours) have had no guaranteed fund to take care of needed repairs on buildings, expand facilities to meet student demand or plan ahead for construction. We have had to ask the Legislature to fund each project every session with the result that much maintenance has been deferred.

Proposition 2 will establish a fund to take care of these brick and mortar needs and also enable the university to improve the libraries, purchase computers and laboratory equipment. It will also allow the Legislature to concentrate on "people" needs so we can do a better job for the students.

Proposition 2 takes the university's capital needs out of the legislative "pork barrel." I am supporting Proposition 2 and I urge you and everyone else to support it on Nov. 6.

Funding bill significant

I recently had the opportunity of reading your editorial of Sept. 12, in reference to highway funding.

Enclosed is a copy of the Summary of Fiscal Implications Related to Tax and Appropriation Legislation, Sixty-Eighth Legislature, Second Called Session and a copy of the Fiscal Note in reference to highway funding as reflected in House Bill 122.

If you will look at the bottom of the summary, you will see that highway funding will receive a net increase of $405,774,000 in the fiscal year 1985. The passage of H.B. 122 indicates a net gain of $514,810,000 by 1989.

I do not know what you consider as a significant increase, but, frankly, it appears to me to be significant, particularly since it removes the highway funding from the political pressures of passage of the general appropriation bill.

NATION IN BRIEF

Disney hires Hollywood executive

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Walt Disney Productions has hired the Paramount Pictures production chief, the third Hollywood executive in three weeks to move to Disney.

Meanwhile, no new talks were scheduled between Disneyland and five unions representing 1,844 workers on strike since Tuesday. The two sides were to return to court today for a ruling in Disneyland's suit seeking, among other things, a limit on picketing.

In the executive move, Disney announced Sunday that Jeffrey Katzenberg, 33, will become president of its motion picture and television divisions when his Paramount contract expires Jan. 31.

Twenty-one winners to split prize

BRAINTREE, Mass. (AP) — Holders of 21 Megabucks tickets are $190,540 richer, an improbable occurrence, according to a statistician who figured the odds on so many winners at 60 thousand billion to one.

The record number of winners will split Saturday's $4,001,430 jackpot. Lottery officials said they had tracked down five of the owners of 21 Megabucks tickets numbered 4-9-13-22-26-34.

Split 21 ways, the jackpot would pay $9,527 apiece a year for the next 20 years.

Herman Chernoff, a director of the Statistics Center at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, did a "rough calculation" on the odds of 21 winners.

Pilot may have had engine trouble

TURBOTVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Authorities speculated a pilot experienced engine trouble before his twin-engine plane apparently split apart in flight and crashed, killing all five people aboard.

The identities of the three men and two women aboard were withheld after the Sunday afternoon accident, which scattered bodies and debris over a rural section of east-central Pennsylvania, authorities said.

The Piper Seneca III had taken off from the Akron, Ohio, area for Teterboro, N.J., police said.

The cause of the accident had not been determined, state police said. Witnesses' accounts varied on whether an explosion preceded the crash.

Falling debris came from engine

SEATTLE (AP) — Debris that fell off a Boeing 747 shortly after takeoff apparently came from the left inboard engine cowling of the four-engine jet, a Federal Aviation Administration official said.

Federal inspectors seeking to determine the cause of the accident collected debris in a residential neighborhood on Sunday, the day after the jet, with 350 people aboard, was forced to return to Seattle-Tacoma International Airport, where it landed safely. No one was injured.

The Northwest Orient Flight 19, was en route to Seoul, South Korea, when the metal pieces fell over Milton, 25 miles south of Seattle.

Debris struck one car, breaking its rear window, said FAA duty officer Richard Ferguson.

Republicans running major effort for Jewish vote in nine states

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans, venturing out among a political constituency that Democrats have long claimed as their own, are trying to convince traditionally liberal Jewish voters in nine target states to vote for President Reagan.

The Republican goal is to attract 55 percent of the Jewish vote for Reagan on Nov. 6. If they are successful, it would be the first time since 1924 that a Republican candidate has received more than half of the Jewish vote, said Benjamin Waldman, national executive director of the GOP-funded National Jewish Coalition.

"I don't think the Jewish community is more conservative than it was years ago," Waldman said.

"But I think the Republican Party has become more liberal in the way Jews have been liberal. Jews believe the individual has rights and should advance in society based on his own merits, and that's what the Republican Party believes."

According to the American Jewish Committee, President Carter received 44 percent of the Jewish vote in 1980, Reagan took 39 percent and independent John Anderson got 15 percent.

It is those proportions that the Republican-backed National Jewish Coalition, with its budget of nearly $2.5 million, is setting out to change with paid staffers in New Jersey, New York, California, Florida, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Ohio and Illinois.

Steven Lee, a 21-year-old student at Georgetown University, is executive director of the New Jersey Jewish Coalition, headquartered in Trenton, N.J.

Lee, who said he was not allowed to talk to reporters, has a paid full-time assistant, 10-15 part-time volunteers, and a budget of about $200,000, according to Waldman.

With that money, Lee's task is to telephone as many of the state's 98,000 Jewish households as possible. Those who express a preference for Reagan or indicate they are undecided are mailed a three-page letter that asks for their support.

The Jewish vote makes up between 8 percent and 12 percent of the total ballots cast in the most recent elections in the state, Republicans say.

Democratic presidential nominee Walter F. Mondale is counting heavily on winning the state's 16 electoral votes. Republicans say that each vote they can pry from the former vice president in New Jersey makes his chances slimmer.

"There's no reason not to think it won't be a close race," Waldman said. "Mondale is far behind, but given a close race, the Jewish vote could easily swing it."

New Jersey's Democrats say they are still expecting support from the Jewish community. James Maloney, the state Democratic chairman, said he expects 65 percent of the state's Jews to vote Democratic, despite Republican claims.

"Most Jewish voters concur with the environmental, human rights, and nuclear freeze stand for which Mondale and the Democratic Party are far superior," Maloney said. "I think the relationship is there and it's solid."

But Waldman said he has detected a shift in Jewish political sentiment during the last dozen years.

"The beginning of the breakdown was in 1972, when Jews perceived a shift in Democratic foreign policy by (Democratic nominee George) McGovern toward a Third World apologist view," he said.

In Michigan, Jim Alexander, staff director of the state's Jewish Coalition for Reagan-Bush, said the estimated 80,000 registered Jewish voters there wouldn't make or break Reagan.

Rajneesh followers criticized over voting by homeless people

RAJNEESHPURAM, Ore. (AP) — Local residents, fearful that followers of an Indian guru are trying to take over the county government with votes from homeless people who have been bused in, say they'll bring in ringers of their own to vote.

The 1,700 followers of Bhagwan Shree Rajneesh, who have brought in nearly 2,000 homeless people to their central Oregon commune-city, say their campaign is part of a "share-a-home" experiment that has nothing to do with the voting in Wasco County.

Many of the new arrivals, however, say they intend to vote Nov. 6. Oregon law allows a new resident to vote after living in the state 20 days.

"Why not? They've accused us (of wanting that)," said Ma Anand Sheela, a Rajneesh spokeswoman. "I'm not going to disappoint them. It sounds good, doesn't it?"

But she denied voting clout was the reason the Rajneesh Humanity Trust began financing the trips, saying, "That's ridiculous."

Rajneeshee opponents say that, in a bid to counter the new residents' voting power, about 1,000 Oregonians plan to move temporarily to Wasco County so they can vote.

Registered Oregon voters can move on election day, register and vote, but Secretary of State Norma said it is against the law to register to vote without intending to establish a permanent residence.

About 12,200 people are registered to vote in the sparesly populated ranching county. About 900 of them are Rajneeshees.

So many rumors are flying around the state that the U.S. Justice Department, asked by State Attorney General Dave Frohnmayer to monitor the Wasco County elections, suggested installing a rumor control center.

Frohnmayer also filed a lawsuit last week seeking to have Rajneeshpuram declared illegal on grounds it is owned and run by the sect, in violation of the constitutional separation of church and state.

Tensions rose last week when the commune announced it would no longer offer free return trips to homeless people who decide to leave the community, and would instead bus them to the nearest town.

Officials expressed concern the street people would pour into central Oregon's quiet towns.

"We knew it wasn't going to work. We knew it was going to be dumped in our lap. We just hope we can get out of it without any bloodshed," said Mayor Ray Murray of Madras, a town of 2,300 people about 45 miles southeast of Rajneeshpuram.

"They deserve to be scared because they are bigoted," said Ma Anand Sheela. "When we have bigoted people from Madras come with guns and other things, we deal with them. It happens often."

By Sunday, only a handful of homeless people had been dumped without bus fare in Madras, said Stan Toms, a senior officer for the Madras Police Department.

"We're just watching the bus station a little more," he said.

Ship overturns, traps 50 people

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — A Spanish cruise ship with about 150 sleeping crewmembers aboard overturned in a dry dock here early today, briefly trapping about 50 people and injuring 25 others, authorities said.

The 50 people trapped inside the overturned vessel were rescued or got out on their own, according to the Coast Guard.

Caroline Sullivan, an assistant supervisor at the Norfolk Police Department, said, "We have about 25 who are injured, four of them serious."

Ms. Donner said all of those injured had been removed from the scene, but she did not know how many were hurt. "Some are extremely critical, most are minor," she said of the injuries.

The accident occurred at 3:48 a.m. at the Norfolk Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., said Don Haupt, director of paramedical rescue in Norfolk.

Haupt said of the approximately 150 people aboard the ship at the time of the accident, about 100 got out as the vessel overturned. Another 50 were trapped inside the ship, he said.

But Lt. Susan Donner, a Coast Guard spokeswoman, said authorities believed all those aboard had been rescued or otherwise accounted for. She said authorities continued to search the water's surface below the dry dock platform "just in case."

Guard Petty Officer Tom Armstrong identified the ship as the Vera Cruz, a Spanish-based cruise ship. Details about the ship's size and number of crew were not immediately available.

The ship was on a platform above the water when it overturned and fell into the water, said Ms. Donner.

The Vera Cruz "fell off the platform, apparently crashed into the water and was listing about 20 degrees," Armstrong said.

One killed, 20 hurt in bus accident

GREENVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — A 91-year-old man was killed and 20 people were injured, one critically, after a bus carrying a college lacrosse team collided with two cars and flipped onto its side Sunday night, officials said.

The man who died was either a driver or a passenger in one of the cars, according to state police at Middletown. The other automobile driver, Amilcar Barcelona, 24, of the Bronx, was reported in critical condition at Elizabeth Horton Hospital in Middletown with severe chest and head injuries, a hospital spokeswoman who refused to give her name said.

State troopers were withholding the identify of the dead man pending notification of relatives, but said he was 91 years old and from Scranton, Pa.

The bus was carrying about 40 Lafayette College lacrosse players back to the school in Easton, Pa., after an informal match Sunday afternoon at the Military Academy at West Point, according to Herman Kissiah, dean of students at Lafayette.

Democratic candidate heading South again

NEW YORK (AP) — Democratic vice presidential candidate Geraldine A. Ferraro is heading back to the South today for another extended campaign foray after a stop in the industrial heartland.

The New York congesswoman starts her four-day, six-state campaign trip with a morning rally in Akron, Ohio, an important Midwestern state where President Reagan is regarded as leading Ms. Ferraro and the Democratic presidential candidate Walter F. Mondale.

Then Ms. Ferraro will fly to North Carolina, where Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt will join her for a two-city swing, the first time he has campaigned with a member of his party's national ticket this year.

Hunt, who is locked in a fierce and expensive fight with Sen. Jesse Helms for the GOP incumbent's seat, did not appear with Mondale when he made a campaign swing through the state in August.

But campaign officials said the two-term governor will be with Ms. Ferraro at her stops in Greensboro and Raleigh late today.

Moslem women in traditional clothing cheer word that an Egyptian court had acquitted more than half of some 300 defendants accused of plotting to overthrow the government in the wake of the 1981 assassination of President Anwar Sadat.

107 Egyptian Moslems convicted

By MAURICE GUINDI
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt — A 22-month subversion trial, the largest ever in modern Egypt, ended with a judge sentencing 107 Moslem extremists to prison for staging riots in a bid to topple the government after President Anwar Sadat's assassination.

The sentences issued Sunday ranged from two years to life. Another 174 of the 302 original defendants were acquitted, 19 were never apprehended and two died during the state security court proceedings.

Some of the defendants showed up for sentencing with banners declaring: "Martyrs for Islam," but no death sentences were handed out.

The white-robed defendants chanted slogans such as "Egyptians wake up!" and "No to America, no to Israel!" before Chief Judge Abdel-Ghaffar Ahmed read the sentences amid tight security in a makeshift courtroom on Cairo's fairgrounds.

Former army intelligence officer Lt. Col. Abboud el-Zomor was among the 16 sentenced to life imprisonment at hard labor. But under Egyptian law, they will be released after 25 years, and possibly after 18 years with good conduct.

Sentences for the others convicted ranged from 15 years to two years.

All were charged in connection with riots that broke out in the southern city of Assiut two days after Sadat was killed on Oct. 6, 1981, by members of the Jihad (Holy War) organization.

Egyptian officials said 87 people, including 66 police, were killed in the uprising. The prosecution said the plotters hoped Sadat's assassination would lead to a general revolution and that the civil government would be replaced with a fundamentalist Islamic regime modeled after Iran's under Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

The Egyptian Jihad organization is not believed to have formal links with the Lebanese-based Islamic Holy War, a pro-Iranian group that claims responsibility for three bombings that killed 260 Americans in Beirut since last year.

The evening newscast on Egyptian television mentioned neither the sentencing of the fundamentalists nor clashes between police and stone-throwing demonstrators Sunday in the industrial Nile Delta city of Kafr el-Dawar.

At least 40 people were reported injured in the day-long rioting. An official of the left-wing National Progressive Unionist Party claimed three people were killed, but a statement from the Interior Ministry made no mention of any deaths.

Police said they arrested several "known radical leftists" in the town, which lies on the edge of tidal swamps on the agricultural road 17 miles southeast of Alexandria and which has been a longtime center of left-wing worker activity.

Sources who refused to be identified by name said by telephone from the area that police used tear gas and fired weapons into the air to disperse demonstrators who were angry about increases in payroll deductions for social insurance as well as price increases for certain foods.

Today, President Hosni Mubarak canceled some food price increases and ordered improvements in bread quality.

Authorities said it was the first such riot since the days following Sadat's assassination, but it was not linked to Sunday's sentencing.

On Saturday, the Egyptian Parliament extended for 19 months the state of emergency imposed after Sadat's death. The emergency decree permits police searches without warrants, bans demonstrations and strikes and allows suspected subversives to be held without charges.

Prime Minister Kamal Hassan Aly said no suspects now are being held without charge, but said an extension of the state of emergency was needed because of a continued threat of terrorism in Egypt.

In another court proceeding, 176 people are being tried on charges of belonging to the outlawed Jihad group, but are not accused of specific acts of violence against the state.

Outside the court in Cairo on Sunday, khaki-clad police stood guard with automatic weapons as hundreds of relatives and supporters of the defendants cheered when word spread that there had been no death sentences.

The defendants included a broad spectrum of Egyptian society, including soldiers, civil servants, teachers, engineers, merchants, physicians, students, farmers and blue-collar workers.

Jordanian Parliament opened with Hussein's call for unity

By JOHN RICE
Associated Press Writer

AMMAN, Jordan — King Hussein today opened Jordan's first regular Parliament session in 10 years with a call for Arab unity, but a Syrian leader was quoted as suggesting the king risked assassination for restoring diplomatic ties with Egypt.

Hussein's address to Parliament was his first major speech since Jordan announced last week that it was restoring diplomatic ties with Egypt after a five-year break. The king defended his decision and also lashed out at the United States for "procrastination and hesitancy" in its Middle East initiavtives.

Regarding the reconciliation with Egypt, Hussein said Jordan was "hoping other Arab states will take similar steps and restore Arab-Arab ties to their purity and strength." He called for a summit meeting to reunify the Arab world.

Syria — which along with Libya is strongly opposed to the renewed Jordan-Egypt relationship — rejected the call for an emergency Arab summit, Syrian state radio reported today.

The radio also quoted Syrian Vice President Zohair Masharka as telling a rally in Damascus: "Jordanian leaders should expect their fate will not be different from that of the late Anwar Sadat."

Sadat, the Egyptian president who signed a 1979 peace treaty with Israel, was assassinated by Moslem extremists in Cairo in October 1981. The peace treaty he signed prompted 17 Arab governments to sever diplomatic ties with Egypt, and Jordan last week became the first of the boycotting countries to restore those ties.

King Hassan II of Morocco on Saturday called for an Arab summit to consider Jordan's move, saying he was dispatching envoys to Arab capitals to discuss the prospects for such a meeting.

A statement issued by the Syrian government and broadcast over Damascus radio said: "Syria has been astonished at the Moroccan monarch's call for an emergency Arab summit.... This call is aimed at covering up Jordan's move and helping its government escape condemnation for its violation of previous Arab summit resolutions against the Egyptian regime."

The Syrian statement charged that Jordan's action and Morocco's summit call were designed to pull the entire Arab world into the U.S.-sponsored Camp David agreements that led to the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty.

Jordan's acting prime minister and interior minister, Suleiman Arar, said in Amman late Sunday that the decision to restore relations with Egypt was intended to "end Egypt's isolation" in the Arab world.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Leftists lean on media

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Nicaragua's leftist leadership apparently sees it, typical Americans don't have much intellectual depth and the only way the Sandinistas can win them over is to make them the target of an "almost daily" media blitz.

The Sandinistas' attempt to surmount their image problem in the United States is contained in a secret document that was leaked to the American Embassy in Managua several weeks ago. A copy of an embassy summary of the document was obtained by The Associated Press.

The apparent intent of the Sandinistas is to neutralize the Reagan administration's frequent assertions that Nicaragua's electoral process is a sham that is designed not to test voter sentiment, but to keep the Sandinistas in power.

The strategy, according to the embassy account, is spelled out in "The Propaganda Plan of the Electoral Campaign of the FSLN," the official acronym for the Sandinista Front for National Liberation.

U.S. officials in Washington confirmed the authenticity of the embassy summary, which is stamped "confidential" and is addressed to Secretary of State George P. Shultz. It was made available to AP by unofficial sources.

Mafia boss aids police

PALERMO, Sicily (AP) — A jailed crime boss has defied the Mafia's code of silence, enabling police to round up scores of suspected mobsters and putting U.S. authorities on the trail of others in one of the biggest breakthroughs against the Mafia in 20 years.

Police said Tommaso Buscetta violated the "omerta" — or code of silence — to avenge the killings of seven relatives by rival gangs in a battle for control of Palermo's multi-million drug trafficking network.

In Washington, Justice Department spokesman Thomas M. Stewart said Sunday that U.S. warrants had been issued in connection with the case, but he refused to say where they were issued, whom they sought or anything more.

Elections threatened

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — A nationwide general strike, threats of a mass civil disobedience campaign and months of disastrous flooding could prompt the martial law government to cancel national elections planned for December.

President Hussain Mohammed Ershad has set Dec. 8 as the date for parliamentary elections to pave the way for a return to civilian rule. But opposition leaders say they will boycott, and perhaps disrupt, any voting held under martial law.

The politicians demand lifting of military rule and formation of a neutral caretaker government to conduct elections. Ershad, a lieutenant general who seized power in a bloodless March 1982 coup, says martial law will not be withdrawn until after the elections.

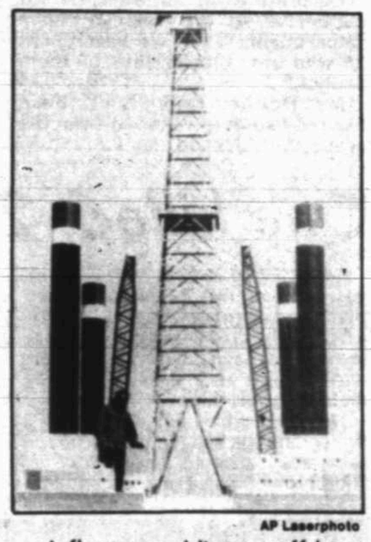

The opposition, led by the widow and daughter of two assassinated presidents, is stepping up pressure on Ershad.

Food price hikes held

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — President Hosni Mubarak canceled some food price increases today and ordered improvements in bread quality after a day-long riot near Alexandria which left at least 40 people injured.

An official of the left-wing National Progressive Unionist Party claimed three people were killed in Sunday's rioting at the industrial town of Kafr el-Dawar. But a statement from the Interior Ministry made no mention of any deaths.

Sources who refused to be identified by name said by telephone from the area that police used tear gas and fired weapons into the air to disperse demonstrators.

A float resembling an offshore oil rig is among those on display during Peking's National Day Parade.

China celebrates 35th anniversary

PEKING (AP) — In a spectacle of patriotism and military might, Communist China celebrated its 35th anniversary today with a colossal pageant capped by Deng Xiaoping's first public speech as top leader of the country.

"Today all our people are full of joy and pride," Deng declared from the rostrum of Peking's Tiananmen Gate, where Mao Tse-tung proclaimed the founding of the People's Republic in 1949.

In his first public address since 1978, when he rose to power at a meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee, the 80-year-old Deng boasted to a half million onlookers of China's "new look" under his reforms.

That was the theme of a mammoth parade by tens of thousands marchers carrying pompons, giant signs and flags. They marched in step behind nuclear missiles, Olympic athletes, robots and 100 floats depicting such achievements as oil derricks and a massive coal pit.

A 500-member military band played the national anthem and 100 guns fired a 28-salvo salute to launch the military portion of the parade, China's first military review since 1959.

On the eve of the National Day celebrations, Prime Minister Zhao Ziyang declared that China is ready to start talks with Taiwan leading to peaceful reunification "acceptable to both sides."

Zhao made the overture at a state banquet, hailing the Sept. 26 agreement with Britain on resuming control over Hong Kong in 1997 as "a big step forward in our great cause of national reunification."

Deng, in his 12-minute speech today, continued on the Taiwan theme, saying reunification was one of China's top priorities.

Taiwan "is part of our sacred territory," he said. "Being an irresistible trend, the peaceful reunification of our motherland will sooner or later come true."

Deng also took an indirect swipe at Mao, saying "the perverse acts of the counter-revolutionary Gang of Four" have been thoroughly redressed — a reference to Mao's widow Jiang Qing and three other radical leftists held responsible for upheaval during Mao's 1966-76 Cultural Revolution.

Under a thick haze, 6,000 troops in smart new uniforms, 426 tanks and other war vehicles paraded through the balloon- and flower-filled Tiananmen Square.

Deng rode general-like in a black limousine convertible to review assembled troops before making his speech. "Comrades, how are you? You work very hard," he called out.

"How are you, chairman?" the soldiers replied in unison.

Keeping big lead tough but not so Strange

LaJet Classic

ABILENE (AP) — Appearances to the contrary, a big lead is difficult, Curtis Strange said.

Not true, said Mark O'Meara, one of 27 pros here who will be playing in the one-day Pro-Am today at Midland's Green Tree Country Club. Tee off times began at 8:40 a.m. and continued through 1 p.m.

if "It's tough with a 6-shot lead," insisted Strange, who had that margin when he started play Sunday in the final round of the LaJet Golf Classic.

"I sleep less with a 6-shot lead than I do with one or two. With one or two, anybody can win. With six, you're SUPPOSED to win," Strange said.

And he did, needed only a front-running, 1-under-par 71 to score a 2-stroke victory over O'Meara, a runner-up for the fifth time this year.

"Obviously, I was playing for second place all the way," O'Meara said. "With Curtis leading by 6 or 7 shots, he's too good a player, too good a thinker, to throw it away."

Strange led all the way in bright, crisp fall weather and acquired the fifth title of his 8-year PGA Tour career with a 273 total, 15 shots under par on the 7,166 yard Fairway Oaks Golf Club course.

His only anxious moment occurred when, leading by three shots, he drove into the water on the 17th. He salvaged a bogey, however, and went to the 18th needing only a bogey-6 to win. He made par instead.

"I was very comfortable, very confident," Strange said.

The victory was worth $63,000 from the total purse of $350,000 and sent Strange's season's earnings to a career-best $276,773.

O'Meara, with a closing 66, claimed second and, in the process, added 2 points to Tom Watson's leading margin in the race for Player of the Year.

O'Meara, a winner at Milwaukee and runner-up in the Kemper, Westchester, Memphis and Hartford tournaments, completed 72 holes here in 275, 13 under par and reduced his scoring average to 70.93.

Watson, a 3-time winner this season who entered this tournament in an attempt to protect his 60-58 lead against the absent Denis Watson of South Africa in the race for Player of the Year, had a closing round of par 72 and completed the tournament in 284. His scoring average remained unchanged at 70.97. But he dropped back one place (a loss of two points in the complicated point list that determines Player of the Year) when O'Meara passed him.

While O'Meara cost Tom Watson 2 points, he cost Denis Watson 4. Both O'Meara and Andy Bean vaulted over Denis Watson on the money-winning list, dropping him to third. O'Meara, with $37,800 in winnings here, took over second at $437,173.

That gives Tom Watson 58 points in the Player of the Year race and Denis Watson 54. Four official events remain on the schedule this season, and neither of the Watsons is scheduled to play in this week's Texas Open in San Antonio.

Vance Heafner, never really in the title chase, was tied for third at 278 with Canadian Dan Halldorson.

Tim Simpson, who made eagle-2 on the first hole, finished with a 69 and tied for fifth with veteran Hubert Green at 279. Green had a closing 70.

Cowboys find way to stop Payton

Dallas Cowboys

CHICAGO (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys finally figured the way to stop Walter Payton was to hold onto the ball themselves.

"The way Payton was running, our offense had to stay on the field and keep him out of it," said quarterback Gary Hogeboom.

Hogeboom completed 18 of 29 passes for 265 yards including a 68-yard touchdown screen pass to Tony Dorsett on Sunday, and Rafael Septien booted three field goals to lead the Cowboys to a 23-14 victory over the Chicago Bears.

Payton rushed 25 times for 155 yards, but 130 of them came in the first half.

"We made some changes at halftime," Dallas Coach Tom Landry said. "They were hitting our weaknesses. We went back to the basics and didn't do much changing.

"It was a tough game. They played, and I worried," Landry said. "We knew it would be a big play game. If you don't get the big plays, you don't score."

The biggest play was the Hogeboom-Dorsett screen for Dallas' first touchdown after the Bears had taken a 7-3 lead.

"I didn't see the play," Hogeboom said. "They put on a strong safety blitz. I made a strong throw, got hit and when I got up I saw Tony in the end zone."

Dorsett called it "a basic screen. I picked up some coverage, broke a tackle, and from then on it was a foot race. I won."

Although Payton scored a touchdown, tied Jim Brown's record of 58 100-yard games and closed with 66 yards of Brown's career rushing record of 12,312 yards, he was disappointed.

"We made a couple of mistakes early," Payton said. "We had a lot of opportunities to put points on the board, but we didn't. When you're playing a team like Dallas, you can't afford not to take advantage of those opportunities."

Bob Thomas missed two field goal attempts and the Bears moved in field goal range in the closing seconds of the half but never got the play off when the clock ran out on a completed pass from Jim McMahon to Willie Gault.

The victory gave the Cowboys a 4-1 record while the Bears, losing their second in a row, dropped to 3-2.

The Cowboys, who had to come from behind twice in the first half, iced the game with 4:11 remaining on Septien's third field goal, a 24-yard shot.

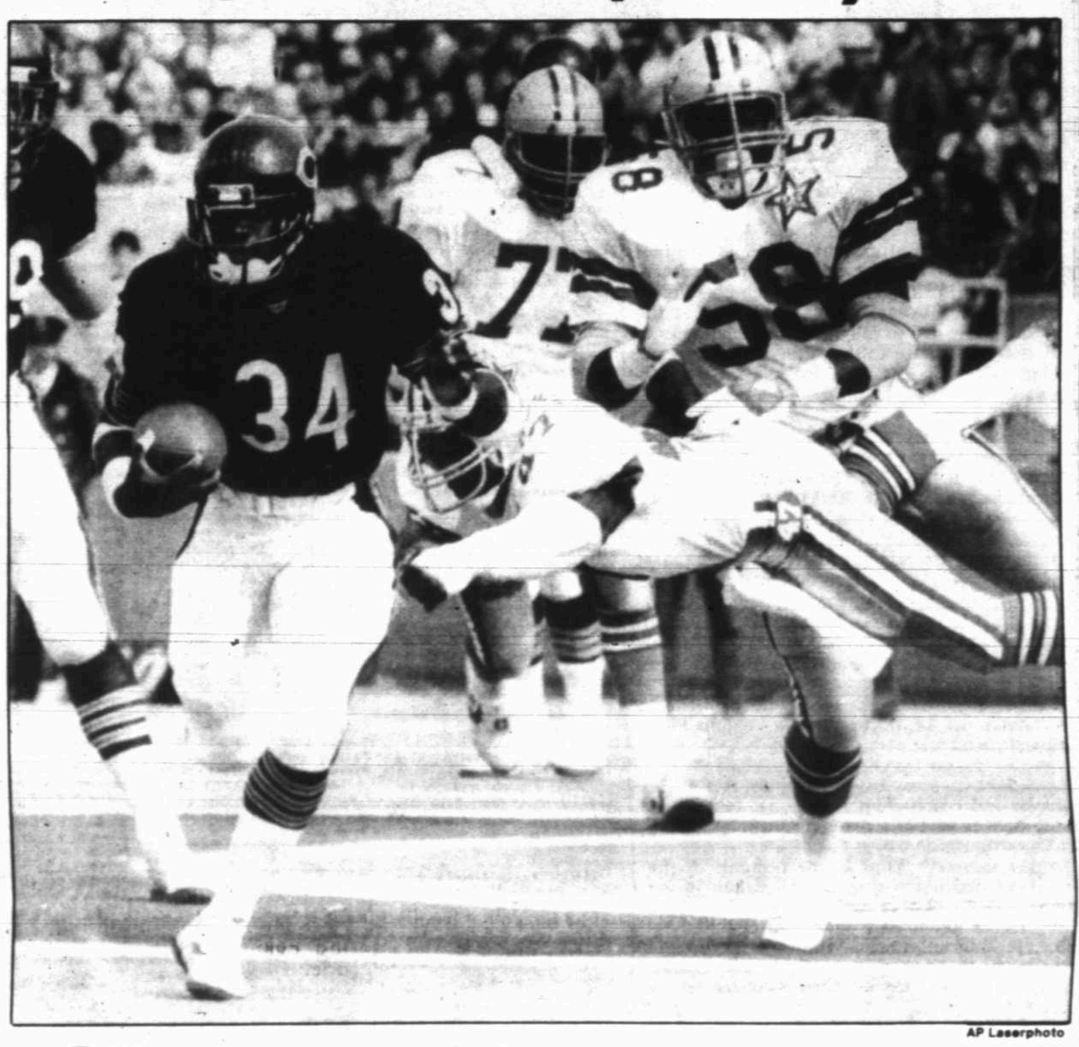

Septien gave the Cowboys the lead early in the first quarter on a 44-yard field goal, but the Bears came right back with a 72-yard drive and scored a touchdown on Jim McMahon's 16 yard run.

Less than a minute elapsed when the Cowboys counted on the 68-yard screen pass from Hogeboom to Dorsett.

Chicago again went ahead 14-10 on a 20-yard touchdown dash by Payton, who gained 130 yards i the first half.

But the Cowboys came back with an 81-yard touchdown drive capped by Tim Newsome's 2-yard run. Hogeboom completed four passes in the drive for 78 yards as the Cowboys took a 14-10 halftime lead.

Septien's two field goals of 32 and 24 yards accounted for all the scoring in the second half.

Bucking Broncos throw LA Raiders

NFL

Associated Press

The Denver Broncos knocked the Los Angeles Raiders from the NFL's unbeaten ranks Sunday, leaving only Miami and San Francisco with clean records.

The Broncos scored their ninth straight home victory 16-13 over the defending Super Bowl champions, ending the Raiders' eight-game winning streak dating back to last season.

Miami downed St. Louis 36-28 and San Francisco beat Atlanta 14-5 to run their records to 5-0.

Running back Gerald Willhite, playing most of the second half in place of injured Sammy Winder, raced four yards for a third-quarter touchdown and Rich Karlis kicked three field goals for the Broncos in the physically punishing game which was marked by numerous fistfights.

The triumph moved Denver into a first-place tie with the Raiders and Seattle in the AFC West at 4-1.

NEW ENGLAND topped the New York Jets 28-21, Dallas downed Chicago 23-14, Seattle stopped Minnesota 20-12, Indianapolis upended Buffalo 31-17, Kansas City edged Cleveland 10-6, San Diego turned back Detroit 27-24, New Orleans defeated Houston 27-10, the Los Angeles Rams routed the New York Giants 33-12, Washington beat Philadelphia 20-0 and Tampa Bay edged Green Bay 30-27 in overtime.

Cincinnati visits Pittsburgh Monday night.

Miami's Dan Marino tossed for 429 yards and three touchdowns in leading the Dolphins over St. Louis. That gave him 15 TD throws this year.

Marino riddled the Cardinals' defense by connecting on 24 of 36 passes in a shootout against Neil Lomax, who hit 22 of 37 passes for 308 yards and one touchdown. Mark Clayton caught five of Marino's passes for 143 yards, including a 29-yard touchdown. St. Louis fell to 2-3.

"Clayton got a game ball, but I guess you could have given one to (Mark) Duper and you could have given one to Marino and passed them around," said Miami Coach Don Shula.

Joe Montana, wearing a flak jacket to protect his ribs, threw two second-half TDs to pace San Francisco over Atlanta. Montana, who sat out last week's game, hit Russ Francis with a 5-yard TD and Mike Wilson with a 21-yarder, sending the Falcons to their third loss in five games.

Atlanta, which entered the game with a 30.5-point average, scored on Mick Luckhurst's 22-yard field goal and an intentional safety.

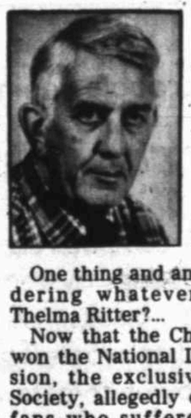

New England quarterback Tony Eason threw three touchdown passes in a 354-yard passing day against the Jets and scored once. The Patriots broke a 14-14 tie when Eason hit Bo Robinson with a 4-yard score and Stanley Morgan with a 43-yarder. Both teams are 3-2.

ERIC LANE'S 113 yards rushing, including a 40-yard TD, and Dave Krieg's 20-yard toss to Steve Largent paced the Seahawks, who recorded five sacks and forced the 2-3 Vikings into three fumbles.

Randy McMillan raced for two second-half touchdowns for Indianapolis, 2-3, which dealt winless Buffalo its fifth setback. The Colts were tied 17-17 after three quarters but went ahead for good on McMillan's 31-yard run.

Kansas City, 3-2, registered 11 sacks (one short of the NFL record) for 78 yards against Cleveland, 1-4. Nick Lowery's 42-yard field goal and Todd Blackledge's 9-yard pass to Billy Jackson with 11:02 remaining earned the Chiefs the triumph.

San Diego, 3-2, behind Dan Fouts built up a 24-7 halftime bulge, then withstood a furious Detroit rally keyed by Gary Danielson's passing. The Lions, 1-4, had a scoring pass nullfied in the final minutes.

Emil Verban was really a Cardinal

One thing and another while wondering whatever happened to Thelma Ritter?...

Now that the Chicago Cubs have won the National League East Division, the exclusive Emil Verban Society, allegedly composed of 350 fans who suffered through the depths of the National League club's extended pennant depression, are making a big thing about their loyalty over the years.

Apparently, they are "Cub" fans who don't know that Emil Verban was really a Cardinal...

Son of the Bishop, Texas, High School coach, a lad named Burris, is a Chicago Cub fan because everybody in the infield is an animal, "They got a Penquin at third, a Boa at short, a Rhino at second and a Bull at first...

At the Dallas-Green Bay game, David Ramsey, Abilene Reporter-News sports writer, related that despite what the 28-14 loss to Temple might hint, Abilene Cooper coaches and fans were very pleased with the Cougars' performance.

"It was 21-14 and the Cooper quarterback called a draw play. It was the perfect call, but he stumbled on the one-foot line. From there, Temple swept the length of the field in four or five plays to sew it up, but..."...

DID ANYBODY notice, of 4-5A's two-school cities, Midland is the only one with two unbeaten teams. When's the last time that happened?...

Lee's win over San Angelo in the state's biggest game was...was a Texas over Penn State-sized win. Shucks, it was even bigger than that, more like Nebraska, Nebraska and Syracuse.

And speaking of Nebraska, even though the Huskers lost, they had reason to be grateful. Suppose Rutgers had gotten hold of them. The Scarlet Knights had pistol-whipped Syracuse 19-0...

FIND ME a hole to crawl in dept. Midland College athletic director Delnor Poss was working a game up at Canyon between West Texas State and New Mexico State and one of the officials introduced himself and asked Delnor, "What conferences do you work?"

Delnor answered, "The Lone Star, Southwest, Gulf Coast....by the way which conferences do you work?"

"I work the NFL," Pat Haggerty answered...

If you didn't catch the replays of Aggie quarterback Kevin Murray breaking his ankle in the Arkansas State game, you were lucky. The way his ankle snapped under him hurt just to watch...

Baylor bungled two extra points and a couple of field goal attempts Saturday night against Tech and a lot of folks wondered if Coach Grant Teaff had just given up in frustration at kicking one or was trying to "run up the score" when Baylor went for two after the third touchdown with 16 seconds left on a holder rollout.

"No, we just fumbled another snap and had to run," said Teaff...

Tech had its problems as well when holder Perry Morren kept fumbling the snap. Tech's regular quarterback was out of the line up as a result of a hand injury, which prompts one to wonder why the Raiders didn't employ a holder with healthy hands. That's more easily said than done. The kicker and holder are a team and it is not all that easy to replace a member of the team on short notice...

AT A recent roast, Lanny Wadkins consoled Masters champion Ben Crenshaw on his recent divorce, "Don't worry about your divorce, pal. Mulligans are always better."...

Colleague Terry Williamson's football forecasting improved dramatically the last two weeks when he picked the Rebels to beat Eastwood 75-0 and San Angelo 17-7. He hit the outcomes right on the head...give or take 35 points or so...No, I'm not laughing. I'm crying. I picked San Angelo...

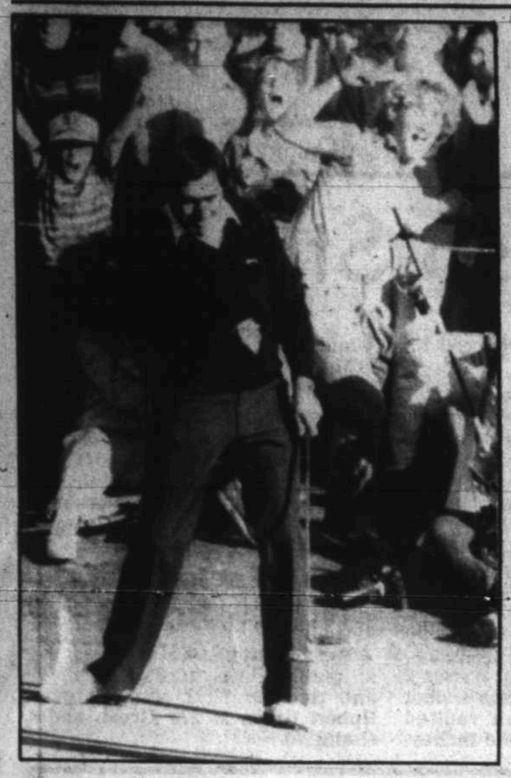

Former R-T staffer Paul Domowitch, now the button-busting pappa of a baby daughter, showed up in the Cowboy press box for the game with the Eagles a couple of weeks ago. Paul is getting his fill of football. During the spring, he covers the Philadelphia Stars and writes a weekly column on the USFL for the Sporting News. In the fall, he follows the Eagles...Last week, Steve O'Brien, another ex-staffer, was down for the Packer game from Tulsa to cover the game for The World. Steve doesn't mourn the loss of the Outlaws, Tulsa's USFL franchise. "They were a professional operation in name only."...

I didn't catch the entire game, but was around long enough to see Missouri wipe out Midland's Wally Kleine Saturday on one play. The triple-team block left him so far out of the play that the Notre Dame defensive end was in position to fall on the fumble when the ball popped out of the hands of the Missouri back and rolled forward...

Every year some team pops up to capture the imagination, you know, like Tulsa and New Mexico a couple of years ago. Last year, I guess Miami qualified by beating Nebraska for the national title. This year is shaping up as a banner year with Georgia Tech, TCU, Oregon, Vanderbilt and Army all favorites of those who thrive on rooting for the downtrodden...

Ballesteros does it again

From Wire Reports

GOLF— Seve Ballesteros curled in a 9-foot putt on the 35th hole for a 2-1 victory over Bernhard Langer in Suntory World Match Play Championship. The 27-year-old Spaniard, 3-up at the halfway mark, had to rally over the final holes to win the title for the third time in four years. In the 18-hole playoff for third place, Greg Norman and Ben Crenshaw finished in a tie...

TENNIS— Martina Navratilova won her 65th straight tournament match, defeating Zina Garrison 6-4, 6-3 in the New Orleans championship. Navratilova won $30,000. "Every point was a struggle. It was a well-played match — 6-4, 6-3, and it could have been much closer," she said...

John McEnroe rebounded from a rocky start Sunday to defeat John Fitzgerald 4-6, 6-2, 6-1 as the United States continued its domination of Australia in the Davis Cup semifinals. The American team already had clinched a spot in the finals against Sweden by taking a 3-0 lead over the Aussies in the best-of-five competition Saturday...

Yankee manager Yogi Berra remains in the dark about 1985future after finishing their in the AL East. Owner George Steinbrenner had called a pregame invitation-only news conference in his office, fueling speculation that the 59-year-old Berra might be fired for the second time as manager after one year. He had been dismissed following the 1964 season by then-owner Dan Topping after the Yanks won the AL pennant and lost a seven-game World Series to St. Louis. Steinbrenner said "no decision has been made" on Berra's future, but that it would be made by Thanksgiving Day...

Syracuse has had long wait

Quotes from college coaches:

Syracuse Coach Dick MacPherson, whose Orangemen upset No. 1-ranked Nebraska 17-9 after losing to Rutgers 19-0 one week earlier: "After last week, I hope the fans really enjoyed this one. They deserved it. We have waited a long time for a win like this."

Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne: "Their defense probably played as good a game as we've had played against us in the last three or four years. They were just more physical than we were and they outplayed us. We really got banged around."

Texas Coach Fred Akers, whose second-ranked Longhorns stomped No. 4 Penn State 28-3 and figure to be No. 1 in the next Associated Press poll: "I know this sounds kind of crazy maybe, but it's the truth — this is still a rebuilding year."

Penn State Coach Joe Paterno, bemoaning the fact that his team completed just 14 of 40 passes: "We had people wide open; we just didn't get the football to them. No sense getting them open if you can't get them the football."

Ohio State tailback Keith Byars, who rushed for 164 yards and two touchdowns — his fourth straight 100-yard game — as the third-ranked Buckeyes downed Minnesota 35-22: "I'm always one of my hardest critics, but I could have played better. I dropped a pass, and that's a cardinal sin."

Washington Coach Don James, after the sixth-ranked Huskies mauled Miami of Ohio 52-7: "We beat a team that's struggling, that is young and that is still two to three years away. It's not like beating Michigan."

Miami Coach Tim Rose: "I don't see all the top teams in the country, but from what I saw today Washington ought to be playing in the NFL."

Mississippi Coach Billy Brewer, a 19-14 winner over Tulane, lamenting that his team doesn't seem to get fired up for opponents with so-so records: "I can't help it if they are not impressed. I am impressed, and I am the one that counts."

Alabama Coach Ray Perkins, whose team is 1-3 after losing to Vanderbilt for the first time in 15 years 30-21: "The biggest problem we've got — and it doesn't take a Phi Beta Kappa to figure it out — is that our offense has not complemented our defense.Until it does, we won't have a chance to be a good team."

Defensive tackle Bob Buczkowski, after Pitt, ranked No. 3 at the start of the season, lost to West Virginia 28-10 and fell to 0-4: "It's unreal. If somebody said Pitt would go 0-4 I would have bet my life it wouldn't happen. I don't know what to do or what to say."

Don Mattingly's four-hit finish captures AL bat title

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

Don Mattingly, the New York Yankees' first baseman playing his first full major-league season, drilled four hits in five at-bats to beat out teammate Dave Winfield and win the American League batting title Sunday — long after Tony Gwynn won the National League crown.

Mattingly, who came into the final game of the season — a 9-2 romp over playoff-bound Detroit — with a .339 average to Winfield's .341, had a single in the first inning, doubles in the third and fourth and, after a fifth-inning fly ball to left, a bad-hop single off the glove of Tigers second baseman Scotty Earl to finish the season at .343.

Winfield, who drew a third-inning walk, managed only one hit in his four other plate appearances, an infield single in the fourth inning. It left him with a .340 average.

Both performances paled a bit when compared to Gwynn's. The San Diego outfielder, like Mattingly playing his first full big-league season, ran away from the rest of the National League.

He took the batting lead for good on June 11, about a month before the All-Star game and finished with a .351 average, dropping two points on Sunday when he failed to get a hit in two at-bats during the Padres' 4-3 loss in Atlanta. Lee Lacy of Pittsburgh was second at .321.

Mike Schmidt of Philadelphia finished the season as a co-winner in the NL in both runs batted in and home runs. The veteran third baseman hit his 36th homer of the season Sunday to tie Atlanta's Dale Murphy for the league lead, while his one RBI tied him with Montreal's Gary Carter for the league lead at 106.

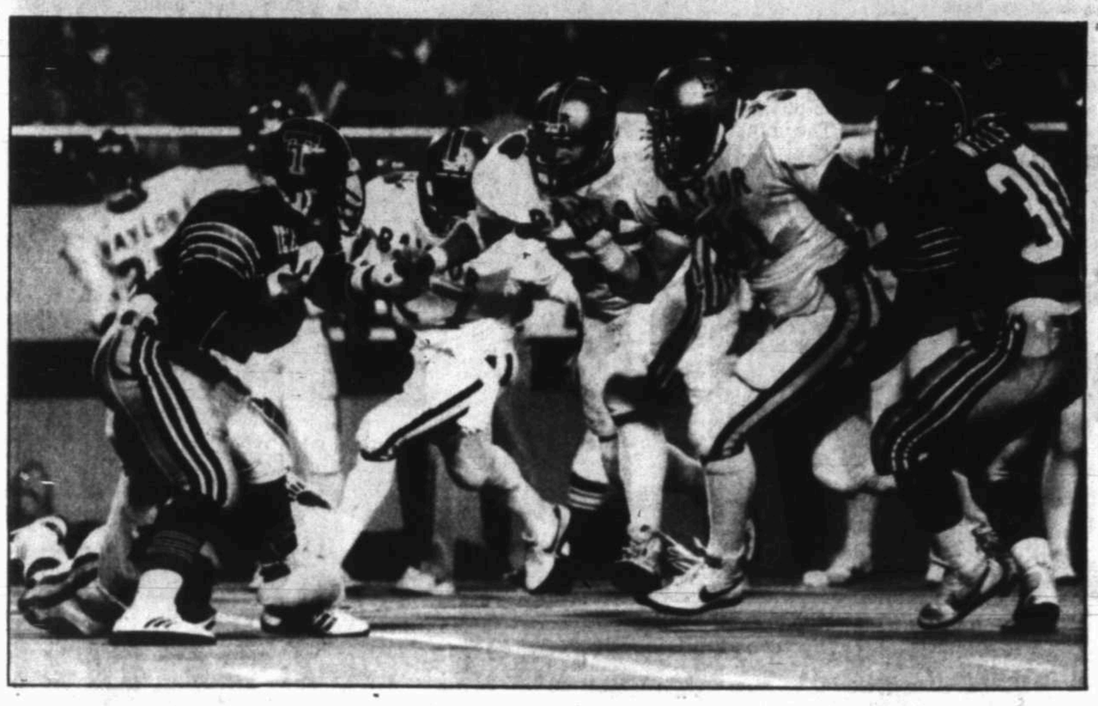

Tony Armas of Boston led the AL in both home runs and RBI, finishing with 43 and 123, respectively.

On the pitching side, rookies led each league in strikeouts — New York's Dwight Gooden in the NL with 276 and Seattle's Mark Langston with 204 in the AL. Bruce Sutter of St. Louis led the NL with a major-league record tying 45 saves, while Dan Quisenberry of Kansas City led the AL with one less.

Alejandro Pena of Los Angeles had the best ERA in the NL, 2.48, while the 2.79 posted by Mike Boddicker of Baltimore was the best in the AL.

There was one 20-game winner in each league — Joaquin Andujar of St. Louis finished at 20-14, while Boddicker had a 20-11 mark. Chicago's Rick Sutcliffe was 16-1 in the NL with the Cubs after compiling a 4-5 record with Cleveland in the AL.

The AL race came down to the Yankees' final at-bat against Willie Hernandez, the ace of the Detroit bullpen.

What happened to Tech's running game at Lubbock Saturday night? Raider halfback Timmy Smith, left, can tell you as he runs into Baylor's welcoming committee of Ray Berry and Derek Turner, 81.

'Horns big hit in Jersey

Associated Press

Coaches Fred Akers of Texas and Bobby Collins of Southern Methodist unveiled two new offensive formations Saturday and the end results were convincing victories over Penn State and Texas Christian.

Akers decided to spring an unbalanced line on the Nittany Lions and it so rattled Coach Joe Paterno's crew that Texas rolled to a 28-3 victory and immediately became the prime candidate to be ranked No. 1 in the nation.

Collins used flanker Ron Morris as a wingback on the option and Morris ran for a touchdown and caught a pass for another in the Mustangs' convincing 26-17 victory over the upstart Horned Frogs.

In other games involving Southwest Conference teams, the Baylor Bears bounced Texas Tech 16-9, Arkansas sank Navy 33-10 behind substitute quarterback Danny Nutt, Miami mauled Rice 38-3, Texas A&M nipped Arkansas State 22-21, and lowly Louisville shocked Houston 30-28.

TEXAS CALLED it a "mash" offense and the Longhorns overpowered Penn State.

"We wanted to control the ball more and I think we did a pretty good job of it except for some turnovers," said Akers.

"It's called a mash offense because we put all the meat in one place and just go," said Texas fullback Terry Orr.

SMU brought Morris around on the option much like Nebraska did last year using Irving Fryar.

"We've been working on it since August," said Collins. "We were just waiting for the perfect spot to use it."

SWC Roundup

Texas-Penn State

EAST RUTHERFORD — Who's No. 1 in the nation?

The Texas Longhorns believe they know.

"There ain't any doubt in my mind," said Orr after the Nittany Lions fell hard.

Orr, a senior, had 108 yards on 15 carries, the best day in his career.

"If there's any justice we're it," said Akers.

Texas hasn't been ranked No. 1 since 1981.

"We think we have the ability to go all the way," said Texas center Gene Chilton.

SMU-TCU

IRVING — Collins is glad he has the Horned Frogs behind him.

"They are going to cause some big problems before this season is over," said Collilns after the hard-earned victory before 58,206 fans in Texas Stadium. It was the largest crowd for the game in 36 years.

With Morris being used as a ball carrier for the first time, the Horned Frogs were unsettled defensively. It was not until Reggie Dupard's 25-yard touchdown run late in the game that the Mustangs put TCU away.

"Our defense played great," said Collins. "They never get the credit they deserve. We won with our defense."

Baylor-Texas Tech

LUBBOCK — It was one of those wacky games where hardly anything went right for anybody, but Baylor beat Texas Tech on a pass in which the receiver never saw the ball.

"The touchdown pass was a swing pass called for me," said Baylor tailback Ralph Stockemer after the Bears, 1-2, earned a sluggish triumph.

The TD pass came with 1:16 left and capped a 63-yard drive that enabled the Bears to seize a 12-9 lead.

Ray Berry's pass interception seconds later set up another Stockemer touchdown, this time on an 11-yard run, and the Bears had launched the SWC campaign on a winning note.

Aggies-Arkansas State

COLLEGE STATION — Texas A&M starting quarterback Kevin Murray is lost for the season with a broken ankle, suffered in the third quarter of the victory over Arkansas State.

He underwent surgery after the game and his ankle will be in a cast for at least six weeks. The sophomore can apply for hardship to get a year of eligibility back.

"When Kevin got hurt, I thought the team was starting to come together," said Aggie Coach Jackie Sherrill. "Craig Stump came in a played well. We have a lot of confidence in him. He has a great arm and he can move, and he can run the option."

Navy-Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK — Backup quarterback Danny Nutt threw three touchdown passes as Brad Taylor's replacement.

A transfer from the University of Central Arkansas, Nutt said "I was real nervous but after the first snap it was all right."

Angels' Witt just perfect

Retires 27 Rangers in order

Associated Press

Mike Witt hurled the major league's first nine-inning perfect game in three years Sunday, stopping Texas cold as the California Angeles nipped the Rangers 1-0.

"I was awe struck," Witt said. "Getting 27 outs is incredible. All you're trying to do is get outs. All I know is it's hard as heck to get."

The 6-foot-7 Witt, 15-11 for the season, struck out 10 and went to three balls on just one batter — Wayne Tolleson in the seventh inning — as he threw the third no-hitter and second perfect game of the season.

Jack Morris of the Detroit Tigers no-hit the Chicago White Sox on April 7 and David Palmer of Montreal was credited with a perfect game as he retired 15 batters in the Expos' rain-shortened victory over the St. Louis Cardinals on April 15.

Witt, 24, in his fourth major-league season, went through the Texas batting order with relative ease. Larry Parrish sent right fielder Mike Brown to the warning track leading off the eighth on the only well-hit ball off Witt.

"I was real nervous walking out there (in the ninth inning) until I threw the first pitch," Witt said. "I think I had a good curve ball. I got it in there a couple of times when they were looking fast ball."

Reggie Jackson drove in the lone run in the seventh inning with a fielder's choice grounder.

NEW YORK'S Don Mattingly collected four hits to capture the American League batting crown over teammate Dave Winfield and help the Yankees to a 9-2 victory field, who had an infield hit in four at-bats, finished at .340.

Baseball Roundup

Wayne Gross broke a tie with a two-run single into shallow right-center in the seventh inning, lifting the Baltimore Orioles to a 5-3 victory over Boston and spoiling Red Sox Manager Ralph Houk's farewell to baseball. The loss dropped the Red Sox to fourth place.

Bob Gibson and Ray Searage combined on a four-hitter and Robin Yount cracked a two-run double in the fifth inning to ignite the Milwaukee Brewers to a 4-0 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Rookies Danny Tartabull and Jim Presley belted consecutive first-inning homers and rookie left-hander Mark Langston captured the AL strikeout title as the Seattle Mariners downed the Chicago White Sox 5-3. Langston, 17-10, struck out nine and finished the season with 204, six more than Toronto's Dave Stieb, and became the first AL rookie since Herb Score of Cleveland in 1955 to lead the league in strikeouts.

Three-run homers by Tony Phillips and Mike Davis powered the Oakland Athletics over the Kansas City Royals 8-2.

IN THE National League, five Pittsburgh pitchers combined on a three-hitter and Jason Thompson and Jim Morrison delivered RBI-singles as the Pirates beat the Philadelphia Phillies 2-0 in the first game of over the Detroit Tigers, clinching third place for New York.

Mattingly went 4-for-5 with two doubles to finish at .343, while Wina double-header. In the second game, Jim Morrison had three hits and three RBI, and Lee Lacy went 4-for-5 with two doubles as the Pirates completed the sweep 7-2.

Montreal's Dan Driessen drove in three runs with a two-run homer and a double to give the Expos a 5-4 victory over the New York Mets, while Paul Zuvella knocked in the first run of his major league career and Dale Murphy his 100th of the season to lead the Atlanta Braves to a 4-3 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Pete Rose became the NL's career leader in doubles and drove in three runs in Cincinnati's 7-6 victory over the Houston Astros. Rose, the Reds' manager, knocked in two runs with a second-inning double, the 726th of his career to move him one ahead of Stan Musial for the NL record. He trails Tris Speaker's all-time mark of 793.

St. Louis catcher Glenn Brummer threw away a potential double-play relay in the bottom of the ninth, allowing Thad Bosley to score from second base and giving the Chicago Cubs a season-ending 2-1 victory over the Cardinals.

With the bases loaded, Keith Moreland grounded sharply to third. Terry Pendleton fired home to force one runner, but Brummer's relay to first was wild, allowing Bosley to score.

Bob Bailor knocked in three runs with a double and two singles to support the nine-hit pitching of rookie Orel Hershiser as Los Angeles whipped the San Francisco Giants 7-2.

JIM MURRAY

How would Padres be able to live with selves?

I don't think I'd like to be the San Diego Padres these fall days. I don't see how they can sleep nights.

They may be about to go down in history as the meanies of all time. They may get the role once assigned to the dirty little coward that shot Jesse James, the guy who first told us there wasn't any Santa Claus. They may be about to eat Little Red Ridinghood, prove the glass slipper on Cinderella is two sizes too small, cancel Easter, sink the Good Ship Lollipop, let Little Nell die in the first chapter.

They got the part in this drama that usually goes to an Erich Von Stroheim type, the guy with the mortgage, a role about as sympathetic as a snitch.

I don't think there are six people east of Chula Vista who want them to win the pennant and World Series. It's just very bad theater. It's un-American.

THE CHICAGO Cubs, their opponent in the National League playoffs, are America's Team. Forget the Cowboys. The Chicago Cubs are John Wayne, General Patton, Sergeant York. A march by Sousa. Their colors are the good old red, white and blue. It's unpatriotic to root for anybody else. It's like rooting for the rustlers.

The intellectuals love the Cubs. The guys in the bleachers love the Cubs. The guy in the executive suite and the guy in the unemployment line love the Cubs. George Will loves the Cubs. Mike Royko loves the Cubs. Dutch Reagan used to be their announcer. It's not a team, it's a cult. Tinker, Evers and Chance were Cubs. Studs Lonigan rooted for the Cubs. So did Carl Sandburg. Breathes there a man with soul so dead he ne'er unto himself has said "This is my own, my native team"? Like to see some stuck-up New York team up there ahead of the Cubs? I should say not!

Everyone loves the Cubs because they are the athletic version of Charlie Chaplin's little tramp. They have always been out of touch with their environment. They're always getting thrown out of places their well-meaning intentions take them. They come offering a flower and it has a bee in it. They dream wild dreams and then get hit with a pie. When Babe Ruth called his World Series home-run shot, whom did he hit it off? The Cubs, of course. The Cubs didn't belong on the same field with Babe Ruth. Or Babe Herman or Babe Phelps, for that matter. The Cubs lost that World Series in four straight. And by scores like 12-6 and 13-6. When the Cubs lost, they didn't fool around.

THE CUBS just don't seem to understand the situation. Ever. While the rest of the world plays night baseball, the Cubs play in the daytime. The Cubs didn't need Edison. If the good Lord intended baseball to be played at night, he would have left the sun out.

While the rest of the world plays on plastic grass, the Cubs play on real grass. Rugs are for dancing.

When other teams push on for sun-belt locations, the Cubs stay in the heat and ice.

When other teams get other cities to throw up glass-and-plastic domed fields for them, the Cubs stay in pre-World War I Wrigley Field, where they still light a light atop the scoreboard to tell the city whether they won or lost, as if the 11 o'clock news didn't exist.

Even their owner was hardly your typical front-office Philistine. Phil Wrigley was a shy type who couldn't bear to put in night baseball because it would disturb the neighbors. He spent his whole life atoning for the fact he put chewing gum on the bottom of every theater seat and subway platform in the country, but he couldn't bear to fire anybody and once had the Cubs managed by a seven-man committee because he didn't want to hurt anybody's feelings. By the time they got the bunt sign on, the game and maybe the season was over.

They lost every World Series they ever played in Wrigley Field, usually by counts of 4 games to 0 or 4 games to 1. Playing the old Yankees there was like fighting an ape in a phone booth or a shark in a pool. The only World Series it ever took down to the wire, the 1945 World Series, is by common consent the worst ever played, contested by 4F military rejects and returning out-of-shape veterans. The Cubs, of course, were the worst of the worst.

SO, WHAT'S not to love about the Cubs? They're inept, uncoordinated, old-fashioned. This team wasn't turned out by computer, wasn't bought by an egocentric's millions. It's not slick, smooth, poised. It elongs back in the era of open trolleys, megaphones, straw hats, high-button shoes and the fox trot.

So, San Diego's going to step in the middle of this sentimental lace valentine of a scenario and start pulling the wings off the cupids, trampling on dreams? The country will never forgive them. Of course, the real old-line Cubs fans will. They expect it.

Majors make plans 'in case'

NEW YORK (AP) — Negotiations between the baseball commissioner's office and the Major League Baseball Umpires Association continued Sunday, but "contingency plans" were being made if the umpires strike Tuesday's League Championship Series.

"Our position remains the same, in that there are ongoing negotiations," Bob Wirz, a spokesman for the commissioner's office

Some one hundred persons were evacuated from around the area of a natural gas processing plant just outside of this southwest Louisiana town. When the plant threatened to explode, all personnel, even firemen, were moved a mile from the plant.

Louisiana Gas fire forces evacuation of families

BASILE, La. (AP) — A natural gas processing plant exploded afire with "a big whoosh like the noise when you light a gas burner," forcing the evacuation of 15 families overnight as the giant flames were brought under control.

No injuries were reported in the fire, which sent flames hundreds of feet into the air after bursting out about 4:30 p.m. Sunday at the Texas Gas Transmission Corp. plant in rural southwest Louisiana.

The main fire was extinguished by 9:30 p.m., said E.E. Edel, a spokesman for CSX Corp., Texas Gas' parent firm.

Firefighters, who withdrew to a mile from the plant when another explosion seemed imminent, were dousing scattered fires in the complex today. All but two of the evacuated families were allowed to return to their homes near the plant this morning, state police said.

Officials said they did not know what caused the explosions and could not estimate damage until all fires were out.

The plant, a highly automated maze of vertical towers and steel pipe, refines natural gas into ethane and propane, both highly volatile products, said Edel, who spoke from Richmond, Va., where CSX is based.

The main fire was centered in a line that feeds natural gas into the plant, Edel said.

"What is burning now are light hydrocarbons, such as propane and butane," Don McGee, a Louisiana State Police spokesman, said around midnight. "The fire is being isolated section by section as the plant crews shut it down."

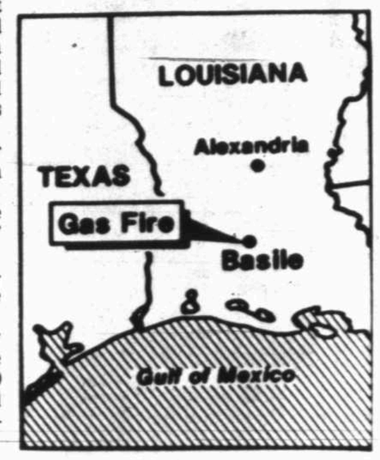

Eldon Sonnier was inside her home less than a mile away when the natural gas ignited.

"It was like a big whoosh like the noise when you light a gas burner," she said.

McGee said the evacuated residents all spent the night at the homes of friends or relatives.

Frank Ashworth, from nearby Eunice, said he and a friend were driving near the plant about 4:30 p.m. and "heard an explosion and saw a black cloud rise up from a vertical vessel."

"Me and my partner drove closer to get a better look and there was another explosion and fire began to spread toward a group of 22 horizontal vessels. There was a third explosion and we got ... out," Ashworth said.

Overall food prices down

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
AP Business Writer

Much cheaper pork chops and sugar pulled overall grocery prices down 1.7 percent during September, the monthly AP Marketbasket survey found.

The strong U.S. dollar in relation to other currencies has been a major factor in lowering prices, an economist said.

Pork chops fell an average 9.4 percent, after dipping 1.9 percent in the previous month.

Sugar fell an average of 1.2 percent during September.

"The biggest single influence is probably the dollar, along with the continued very small inflation rate in the U.S.," said David A. Wyss, an economist with Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass.

"The continued decline (in prices) is showing the continued strength of the dollar. It's up 14 percent from last year. That's reflected in lower prices of imported goods."

Asked why pork chop prices fell so dramatically, John Ginzel, a livestock analyst in Chicago with the investment firm Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc., cited a "very sharp price decline for fresh pork at the wholesale level."

Those wholesale prices, which have declined steadily, are at lows for the year, he said.

He said hamburger, in particular, was "attractively priced for retailing."

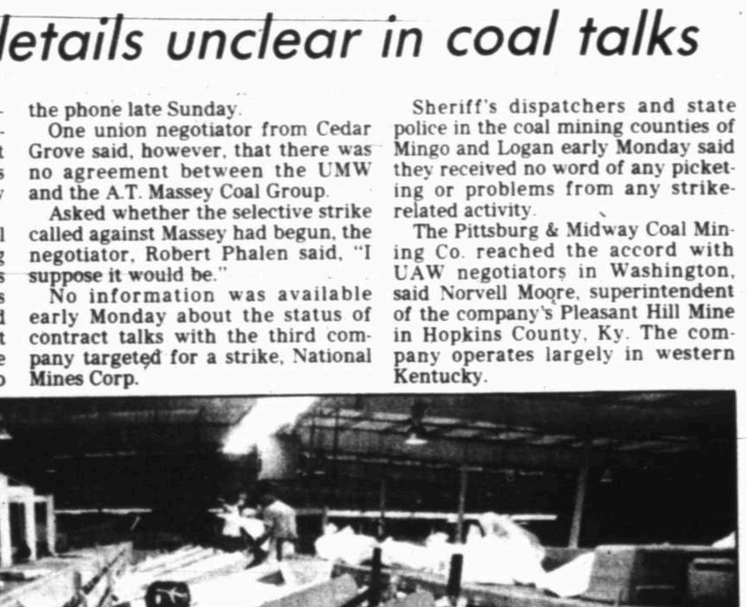

During September, overall prices fell in nine cities, an average of 4.2 percent. They rose in three cities, an average of 1.8 percent. The bill was unchanged in Salt Lake City.

The marketbasket tab fell 0.7 percent during August.

The tab has risen a scant 0.7 percent since the beginning of the year, according to the latest check.

The Associated Press drew up a random list of 15 commonly purchased food and non-food items, checked the price at one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973, and has rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. One item, chocolate chip cookies, was dropped from the list several years ago because the manufacturer discontinued the package size used in the survey.

No attempt was made to weight the AP survey results according to population density or in terms of what percent of a family's actual grocery outlay each item represents.

The day of the week on which the check was made varied depending on the month. Standard brands and sizes were used when available.

Dollar gains; Gold prices upward

LONDON (AP) — The dollar gained against all major currencies in early European trading Monday. Gold bullion prices moved ahead in nervous dealing.

Currency dealers said the market was very quiet and attributed the dollar's rise to slightly better prices on the Tokyo foreign exchange market.

Friday's news that leading indicators of U.S. economic growth rose a stronger-than-expected 0.5 percent in August added to the dollar's firmness, dealers said.

In Tokyo, where trading ends as Europe's business day begins, the dollar closed at 246.60 Japanese yen, up from Friday's close of 245.40 yen.

The dollar gained fractionally against the British pound in London. It cost $1.23125 to buy one pound sterling, cheaper than $1.2380 late Friday.

Other mid-morning dollar rates, compared with last Friday's included:

–3.07775 West German marks, up from 3.0615.

–2.52875 Swiss francs, up from 2.5150.

–9.4425 French francs, up from 9.3650.

–3.4675 Dutch guilders, up from 3.4400.

–1,912.625 Italian lire, up from 1,896.50.

–1.31825 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3182.

Gold bullion opened in London at a bid price of $345.00 a troy ounce, up from $343.75 late Friday.

New cars cater to new baby boom

DETROIT (AP) — The new American cars arriving in showrooms this fall embody the latest sales strategy from Detroit: Catering to the affluent baby boomers and the European-style cars they like to drive.

For 1985, Chrysler Corp. and General Motors Corp. are going after the Yuppies with American-made sedans that are faster, lighter and stiffer-handling — in short, more European — than the U.S. cars aimed at upwardly mobile people a decade ago.

The Chrysler entry is the LeBaron GTS and a twin model, the Dodge Lancer.

GM's Pontiac division will bring back an old nameplate, Grand Am, for its sporty sedan. Two other GM divsions will have a version of that car — Buick's will be called the Somerset Regal; Oldmobile's will be the Calais.

In the same category, Ford Motor Co. is importing the Merkur XR4Ti from its West German subsidiary.

The marketing divisions in Detroit are counting on a surge in sales from people who want two-door coupes that handle like sports cars with the luxury of a touring sedan — and are willing to pay the price.

European manufacturers such as BMW and Mercedes-Benz have been shipping such cars like that to North America for years.

But the American strategists say they don't have to compete head-to-head with the imports. They say the potential market is big enough to give the Americans a foothold while allowing the imports to keep their niches.

Pontiac, for instance, estimates that the buyers in the young, upscale category — from two-income, white-collar households — will make up 42 percent of the adult population by 1990.

Ford's Merkur strategy is to catch many of those buyers while they're too impatient to continue driving boring subcompact cars but not yet affluent enough to get behind the wheel of a Mercedes.

Most Merkurs, therefore, are expected to sell well below the $20,000 starting prices of Europe's best sedans. Chrysler says its basic LeBaron GTS will sell in the $9,000 range. The Buick Somerset and Olds Calais will start at around $9,000.

Another new, U.S.-made car is the Volkswagen Golf, which will replace the slow-selling Rabbit at VW's domestic assembly plant outside New Stanton, Pa.

The Golf, which has been made by VW in Europe, has a shape similar to other subcompact hatchbacks, including the Rabbit, but VW says it's a wholly different kind of car.

Also, GM and Ford, playing catchup to Chrysler, will introduce minivans this year. Unlike Chrysler's, these will be rear-wheel drive and will have bigger engines. While able to carry larger loads, they will be more difficult to fit into a garage and will have more in common with big vans than do Chrysler's models.

Bargaining details unclear in coal talks

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (AP) — United Mine Workers representatives reached a tentative agreement with one of three coal companies shortly before a midnight Sunday strike deadline, officials said.

There was no immediate official word on the status of bargaining involving the other two companies as telephone calls to their offices went unanswered early Monday and a woman answering the telephone at the home of UMW spokesman Joe Corcoran refused to summon him to the phone late Sunday.

One union negotiator from Cedar Grove said, however, that there was no agreement between the UMW and the A.T. Massey Coal Group.

Asked whether the selective strike called against Massey had begun, the negotiator, Robert Phalen said, "I suppose it would be."

No information was available early Monday about the status of contract talks with the third company targeted for a strike, National Mines Corp.

Sheriff's dispatchers and state police in the coal mining counties of Mingo and Logan early Monday said they received no word of any picketing or problems from any strike-related activity.

The Pittsburg & Midway Coal Mining Co. reached the accord with UAW negotiators in Washington, said Norvell Moore, superintendent of the company's Pleasant Hill Mine in Hopkins County, Ky. The company operates largely in western Kentucky.

Nuke plant affects crabs

SAN ONOFRE, Calif. (AP) — The discharge of toxic substances into the ocean by the San Onofre nuclear generating station most likely caused the severe reproductive abnormalities in sand crabs found near the plant, university researchers say.

About 95 percent of the female crabs sampled near the plant failed to produce normal egg masses, according to the study conducted by biologists Adrian Wenner and Paul Siegel of the University of California at Santa Barbara.

Their research was called "sheer speculation" by Byron Mechalis, manager of environmental operations for Southern California Edison Co., the principal owner and operator of the plant.

Getting a 'kick' from KARATE

Tony Lopez, the fifth-ranked middleweight in the Professional Karate Association, breaks a board with a jumping side kick. Lopez teaches karate in Midland and Odessa.

Shelley Lopez finishes a spinning back kick, evoking a grimace from her husband and instructor. Students alternately practice kicks on each other during work-outs, with the person fielding the blow cushioned by a special air bag.

ODESSA — From its humble beginnings in India in 400 B.C., karate has branched in many different directions.

American karate combines lessons learned through the years with contemporary American ways to form a new discipline. This is the style taught by Tony Lopez at his karate school in Odessa and in classes at Midland College.

Three major schools of martial arts have evolved from the primitive form practiced by the monks, who developed the first forms for self defense against robbers and other perils facing them in olden times.

Karate, an Indian word meaning empty-hand combat, refers to the Japanese discipline which emphasizes use of hands over leg kicks.

Tae-kwon-do, "the way of the hand and feet", comes from Korea. Kicks, more conducive to the smaller Korean build, make up a large part of this art.

Kung fu is the Chinese evolution. It emphasizes fluid movement and the parlaying of an opponent's motion to the advantage of the fighter.

From these three disciplines and variations within them has developed the contemporary American form. Following the national interest in head-to-head competition, the Professional Karate Association was formed in 1974.

"We've modified martial arts to the American man," said Lopez, fifth ranked middleweight in the PKA and holder of the World Karate Association's U.S. title.

Lopez called the form he has developed in 21 years of martial arts, "Karate International". It combines what he feels are the best of the three disciplines, honed to fit the needs and desires of his students.

The Indian monks fashioned their method of self defense around the use of their hands, feet and agricultural tools. Since it was illegal to carry weapons, the monks were otherwise helpless for protection when traveling the country.

Martial arts spread throughout the Orient. All the forms developed individually, with more than martial arts explored by many of the practitioners. For example, kung fu came to mean a philosophy which encompassed far more than self defense.

"You can use the word even if you're in dance or a painter," explained Lopez.

Tae-kwon-do remains the premier sport in Korea. Lopez said it may be added for the 1988 Olympic Games. Now controlled by the government, it was used by revolutionaries who overthrew a past regime, said Lopez.

This discipline is also taught in studios in Midland and Odessa.

PKA-style karate — also referred to as kick boxing — comes from a melding of these three, said Lopez, noting that boxing was a favorite pursuit of the Chinese long before Americans went at it with bare knuckles.

The contemporary style relies strongly on Tae boxing. It has dropped some of the more brutal moves, such as head butts and elbow strikes, which Lopez said might be objectionable to TV viewing audiences.

Gone is much of the mental aspect, which involved mediation and various mind control techniques. "It's interesting, but it's something you cannot expect most Americans to want to do," said Lopez, pointing out that much of the mental experimentation was linked to religous interests.

Variations on the farm implements used by the monks remain as weapons in the martial arts.

The bar staff, once used in carrying water and herding, is taught to students early in their training, said Lopez.

Sais, resembling a short sword with three prongs, were used in planting in the Orient. Used in pairs or individually, they are a more advanced weapon.

Tonfas, used by the San Diego police, are wooden club-like weapons, that apparently have evolved from a implement once used in everyday Oriental life.

The three sectional staff, once used in hunting, is a highly advanced weapon that can fend off large numbers of attackers simultaneously.

Relatively popular in this country are nunchukas, which Lopez said were used in carrying loads and beating grain in the Orient in bygone days. Properly used, this weapon — two short staffs connected by a rope or chain — can generate 1,600 lbs. of force. Only 8 lbs. of force will break bones, he said.

The popularity of martial arts has grown in recent years, said Lopez. Starting with Bruce Lee and most recently in the movie, "Karate Kid," these forms of self defense have caught the fancy of larger segments of the population.

More children and women are taking up karate, said Lopez. "A woman who knows how to defend herself has more advantage than a man," he said because of the element of surprise.

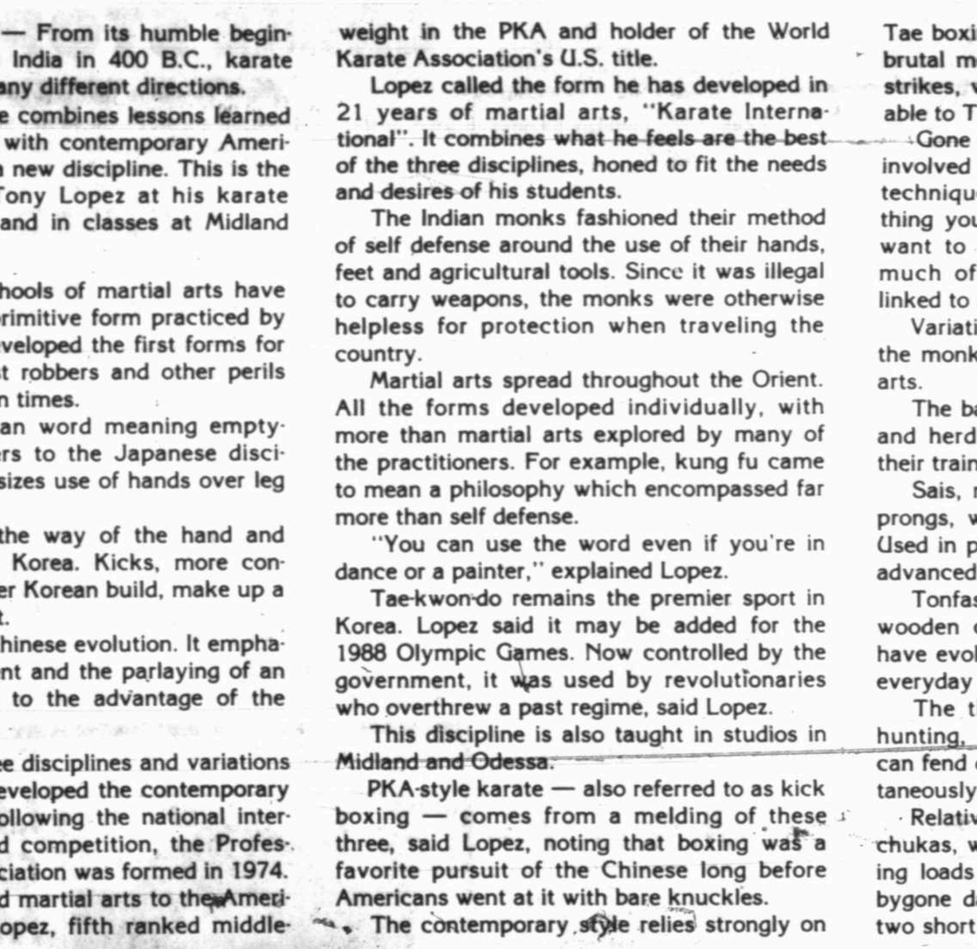

While criticizing the authenticity of the karate in the movie, he said, "It protected karate."

Where the stereotype of the karate expert is of a bully, Lopez insisted "Most people that take martial arts don't fight."

Within the American style are many variations. Kenpo, or kick boxing, is a Japanese derivative. Ishin-ryu uses short kicks and punches. Shotokan is a faster variation, with more use of the legs, said Lopez.

Contact competition is favored by some. Others concentrate on the kata, which is similar to a synchronized dance. No contact is made in a kata, in which the fighter goes through a set series of movements, in the process refining techniques.

"Form is the essence of the martial arts," said Lopez. Otherwise, "It's kind of like ballet without style."

Shauna Goddard, 11, daughter of Lana Goddard, Midland, demonstrates the use of sais. A student of karate since the age of 3, Ms. Goddard is in the midst of a kata, a series of movements developed into a routine.

Man charged in karate instructor's death

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A man accused of wildly firing 30 rounds of ammunition in a suburban high school was being held without bond today on charges of murder and attempted murder in the slaying of a karate instructor.

Barry Wayne Shaw, 21, was jailed withoutbond after being charged in the slaying of Jimmy Glen Wilson, 30, who was killed last Monday when a sniper fired through the window of the Self Defense Illustrated Karate Studio.

Assistant District Attorney Jim Blankenship said evidence gathered after Friday's shootings at Richland High School in North Richland Hills was enough to connect Shaw to Wilson's killing and the wounding of Rudy Smedley, a karate instructor.

Monday's killing and Friday's shooting at Shaw's alma mater may have been triggered by a dispute between Shaw and the karate instructor, officers said. Shaw had also been arrested earlier on theft charges.

Shaw, armed with two semiautomatic rifles and a pistol and dressed in cowboy boots and an Army-style vest, burst into Richland High at 8:50 a.m. Friday and fired a volley of shots, police said.

He later surrendered to his former principal, and only one student was slightly injured when she was struck by bullet fragments.

The attemtpted murder charge was filed in connection with the school shooting. A $500,000 bond set on that charge Friday was revoked when the additional charges were filed Saturday.

Officials said Shaw had voluntarily entered a psychiatric ward at a Fort Worth hospital the day after the karate school killing and was released two days later.

Shaw's probation officer referred him to a Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation office in Fort Worth, but he failed to show, police said.

Rudy Smedley said he believed Shaw tried to kill him because Smedley's brother, John, a Tarrant County sheriff's deputy, had been involved in the arrest of Shaw for burglarizing a fishing tackle shop in Haltom City.

Rudy Smedley, who was wounded in the stomach, also said he'd told Shaw three weeks ago that he couldn't take self-defense classes at the center because of the arrest.

"I told him (Shaw) we had children here, and that I didn't think it was a good idea for him to train here. He really acted like he understood," Smedley told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

He said Shaw returned about a week before the shooting and they had the same conservsation.

Seven agencies called before problem solved

AUSTIN (AP) — Mrs. Harold Thiele had to raise quite a stink herself before she was able to get rid of a skunk that wandered into her kitchen.

It took about 24 hours and dozens of calls to seven public and private agencies before the skunk was removed from her premises.

It all happened this way, she said.

Mrs. Thiele said the skunk slipped into her kitchen through a small swinging door used by the family cat. she said she became concerned that the animal was disoriented and acting "unskunklike." So she called Austin Police.

Police arrived, but said they would have to get special permission to shoot the skunk. They were also concerned because it was cowering behind an oven. They feared the ensuing smell and the danger of hitting a gas pipe. The officers suggested Mrs. Thiele call Austin Animal Control.

Animal Control did not answer the telephone Saturday night. So Mrs. Thiele forced the skunk into a small cage.

The woman called animal control officers again Sunday morning, but employees there refused to come out and get the captured skunk.

The next call went to Wildlife Rescue Inc., a non-profit, volunteer group that deals with animals including car-struck opossums, downed birds, and starving deer. But they don't handle skunks.

"We do only non-dangerous animals," said rescue volunteer Linda Berg. "Over half of all skunks tested are found to have rabies. They're a real serious problem, and if it wandered into somebody's kitchen during the day, it's got to be sick."

Next up on Mrs. Thiele's telephone list was the Texas Department of Health. They told her they could not do anything about the skunk unless it bit someone. They suggested that she bring in the decapitated head for rabies testing.

"I don't have a gun," said Mrs. Thiele. "How was I supposed to kill it? Strangle it to death?"

Woman awaiting arraignment on kidnapping, robbery charges

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 19-year-old woman was in custody this morning, awaiting arraignment on charges of aggravated kidnapping and robbery in connection with a Saturday night incident.

Dr. Diego Pazo, no age available, Odessa, reported to police that he was driving to his office about 6:30 p.m. Saturday, when a woman approached his car at a stoplight at the intersection of 2nd St. and Dixie.

After some exchange, the woman reportedly reached into her coat pocket as if for a gun, then got in the doctor's car. She forced him to drive to a spot on S. Grant St., where she robbed him of a wallet containing $900 and credit cards after ordering him to drop his pants.

The suspect was arrested at 12:19 a.m. Sunday, according to reports.

Hospital patient reports rape

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 21-year-old female patient at Medical Center Hospital was raped Sunday night in her third floor room, according to police reports.

The victim told police a black man, 21-22 year old, six feet tall, a slender build, short Afro, clean shaven, weighing about 160 lbs. and wearing a Permian High School letter jacket entered her room about 9:15 p.m Sunday and committed the sexual assault.

She said the attacker threatened her with a knife while she was in her bed, but never displayed the weapon.

The incident was reported to police at 10:25 p.m. Sunday. The attacker reportedly was seen leaving the building, but witnesses were unaware the assault had occurred.

Police probe burglaries

From Staff Reports

The theft of two diamond rings and a gold watch worth a total of $8,100 was reported to police Sunday by Carl R. Ramsey of 2301 N. L St. The theft occurred sometime between Sept. 26 and Sept. 28, Ramsey told police.

In other police reports over the weekend, employees of the Video Concepts store at 4511 N. Midkiff told police that someone came into the store at 6 p.m. Saturday and stole a videotape recorder valued at $450.

Jackie M. Fite reported a burglary of her apartment at 3600 Midland Dr. Saturday afternoon. Taken was a diamond pendant worth $2,000.

EARNEST KIKER

Farm, Ranch tour slated for Thursday

Earnest Kiker

On Thursday, the Chamber of Commerce Agribusiness Committee and Midland County Extension Office are cosponsoring the annual Farm and Ranch Tour. Residents are invited to participate in the half-day event, which will highlight the county's farm and ranch business — Midland's third largest industry — which annually adds millions of dollars to the city's economy. There will be no charge.

This year, participants will tour the wine distillation and production process at the University of Texas Lands' Winery, observe food production at Cox Marketing, see horse production and training procedures at the Winner-Maker Horse Farm, view a presentation of 4-H Club projects and witness the annual "First Bale of Cotton" presentation and cotton style show. Lunch will be provided.

The bus tour will begin from the parking lot of Holiday Inn/Country Villa, 4300 W. Highway 80 at 8 a.m. County Extension Agent Earnest Kiker will be on hand to provide comments and explanations at stops along the tour route.

To join us on this exciting and educational tour of Midland's agricultural contributions, please contact the Chamber office. Only a limited number of seats is available and must be reserved as soon as possible.

Persons participating are asked to be present at Holiday Inn no later than 7:45 a.m. so buses can leave promptly at 8 a.m. Please park in the hotel's east parking lot, which is behind the main building and adjacent to The Kettle Restaurant. The tour should be over and participants returned to their cars by 1 p.m.

We hope that you will take this opportunity to learn firsthand how important agriculture and its related industries are to Midland and West Texas.

Earnest C. Kiker is Midland County Extension Agent for Agriculture.

State officials want 'Happy Hours' banned

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — If these two men have their way, Texas bars will have to take the "happy" out of their "Happy Hours."

A state insurance lobbyist and at least one state legislator say they want Texas to follow the lead of other states and attack drunk driving by banning inexpensive afterwork bar hopping.

Texas legislators have already adopted stiff penalties for drunken driving, but that isn't enough, says Jerry Johns, president of Southwest Insurance Information System.

"When we allow bars to offer increased amounts of liquor at reduced prices, we're encouraging people to drink more, faster and then get in their cars and drive home," he said.

Johns told the San Antonio Light he has not found a legislative sponsor for the bill, but Rep. Doyle Willis, R-Fort Worth, who sponsored legislation to increase the state's drinking age to 21, said he wouldn't mind tacking his name to an anti-happy hour bill.

"Anything that will lessen the number of tragedies on highways has my support," Willis said. "I know other states have gotten rid of happy hours, and their statistics show it has reduced the number of early evening drunk drivers."

New Jersey and Michigan have laws that prohibit the sale of two drinks for the price of one. Oregon does not permit happy hour ads outside an establishment, and California is considering a happy hour ban, the newspaper reported.

"We've got to do something about drunk driving," Willis said. "One life that's lost is worth sacrificing the privileges of all those drinking drivers."

Willis said anti-happy hour legislation may join bills to raise the drinking age and outlaw open containers in a massive campaign against drunken driving during the next legislative session.

But local state Rep. Frank Madla said he doesn't see such a bill passing.

"We've just raised the taxes on the sale of alcohol," Madla said. "We're facing an economic crunch. I don't see the Legislature attempting to push back liquor sales when we're trying to raise revenues from them."

Johns said he hopes public sentiment will override the concerns of fiscal-minded legislators.

"We're hoping for a public groundswell to help us rid the state of happy hours," Johns said.

Area insurance agents to host noon meeting

From Staff Reports

Richard E. Marks, president of the Independent Insurance Agents of Texas, will speak on the attempt of bank holding companies to enter the insurance marketplace and the association's efforts to eliminate unfair treble damages for unintentional violations of the deceptive trade practices code.

Marks is to speak at noon Tuesday at the Odessa Country Club in the first joint meeting of the Independent Insurance Agents of Midland and Odessa.

The issues Marks will address have been long-time priorities with Texas agents and the statewide association and will come before the 1985 Texas legislative session this January.

Marks, president of The GEM Agencies in Houston, has been active in trying to prevent banks' entry into the insurance business and says that such arrangements would have a negative impact in the consumer and commercial markets.

The Independent Insurance Agents of Texas is the largest state association of property and casualty insurance agents in the country. The 3,000 member agencies represent more than 10,000 individual agents.

Paige Eiland & Associates of Stanton presides over the Midland association, and Randy Reynolds of Melton-Reynolds & Associates is president of the Odessa group.

Modern-day cattle rustler different from predecessor

HOUSTON (AP) — The cattle rustlers of today are a lot more sophisticated than their predecessors, prompting authorities to use equally sophisticated technology to round up the wily bandits, an industry spokesman says.

"Twenty years ago your average rustler was an old cowboy who was down and out," said Steve Munday, a spokesman for the 107-year-old Texas & Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association. "He'd haul a horse into a pasture, rope a couple of cows and put them in a pickup.

"That's changed a lot," he said. "Now we find many people who don't know a Hereford from a heifer. But they know they can make money stealing cattle."

One victim of the modern rustler was 84-year-old widow Estella Williams. Earlier this year, 28 head of cattle disappeared from Mrs. Williams' ranch 60 miles north of Houston.

"I hope I get my cattle," she said. "I've had them all my life.... Every time they would multiply, I would sell them and they would help me through. The government helps me now."

Mrs. Williams, who at first thought the cattle had wandered away, realized several weeks later they must have been stolen. But by that time, says the special Texas Ranger working on her case, finding any clues was difficult.

The job of getting stolen cattle to market is made easy by the open interstate highway system and the fact 161 cattle auctions are conducted each week in Texas.

Under state law, animals up for sale must be inspected and have their brand recorded. Computers are used to store the brand information and authorities can check to see if the animal has been stolen.

The cattle association, which is based in Fort Worth, has hired peace officers for the last 100 years to work as field inspectors to help catch the rustlers.

"One myth about Texas is the average size of a cattle herd," Munday said. "Last year, 71.1 percent of all the cattle operations in the state had fewer than 50 head."

Driver 'critical' after accident

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — An 18-year-old driver injured when the car also carrying two passengers flipped five times Saturday night remained in critical condition this morning in the intensive care unit of the Medical Center Hospital.

Eric Bruce Jackson, 18, Odessa, was listed in critical condition this morning. Paige Crawford, 18, Odessa, one passenger in the 1984 Ford Mustang, was treated and released Sunday. Lewis Ramos, 19, Odessa, was listed in stable condition this morning, according to hospital reports.

The one-car accident occurred at 11:25 p.m Saturday in the 5800 block of N. Grandview Ave. in Odessa. Police reports indicate the car flipped five times and left 483 feet of skid marks before impact.

The car was northbound on Grandview when it went up on the shoulder of the road for about 280 feet, then overcorrected, crossing the roadway and striking a barb wire fence.

After the flipping, the car landed on its front and rested on its roof, according to reports. A citation for excessive speed was issued, with further charges pending, according to police.

First pie hit Turpin

The first movie actor to have a pie thrown in his face was cross-eyed comedian Ben Turpin, who was born in 1874.

Plant bulbs in fall for flowering gardens in spring

By ANITA LEWIS
Hearst News Service

Even now, while mums and marigolds still dance in the early autumn sun, gardeners turn their green thumbs toward the soil and set their sights on their spring garden.

Fall is the time to plant bulbs. And dedicated gardeners the world over will plant more than seven billion Dutch bulbs, says the Netherlands Flower-bulb Institute.

"Bulbs are very easy to raise and will grow in almost any type of well-drained soil, as long as their roots have adequate moisture," says Wanda Trent of the University of Maryland Cooperative Extension Service. Bulbs are efficient, too. They contain all the nourishment they need to flower, Trent notes.

The best time to plant bulbs is when the soil temperature falls below 60 degrees F., says the Institute. Most bulb flowers prefer partial shade and good drainage. Break up and loosen soil to a depth of 10 inches. If your soil is mostly clay, mix in an organic material (peat moss or compost) in amounts up to 50 percent of volume. Once the bulbs are positioned, cover them with half of the dug-out soil, cover the planted area with a three-inch layer of organic mulch and keep the soil moist.

TRENT SUGGESTS planting croeus corms (similar to bulbs but without scales) three inches deep and about three inches apart in September or October. Crocuses are best shown off in rock gardens, in raised beds and even dotted in lawns (but be careful not to mow them down until after they flower). Since crocuses increase year after year, corms should be divided about every three to four years.

Daffodils and jonquils, names for two different species of narcissus, also increase from year to year. They are reliable bloomers well suited for naturalized settings, rock gardens and containers. As an additional bonus, the bitter taste of these bulbs repels some rodents, Trent says. Plant daffodils and jonquils mid-month about eight inches deep and six to eight inches apart.

Tulips decrease from year to year and must be periodically replanted. Tulips should be planted in October and November. Place them in a hole eight to 12 inches deep in a wire mesh cage and space them four to eight inches apart. "The wire cage keeps mice from eating the bulbs," Trent says. Twenty-five tulips will fill a 2-by-3 foot bed.

THE NETHERLANDS Institute recommends fertilizing to improve year-to-year performance and suggests a sulfer-coated, slow-release complete fertilizer to the rooting area. Use one rounded tablespoon per square foot. A single application will feed bulbs through the next spring. Alternatively, in the fall apply an 8-8-8 (one level tablespoon) or 10-10-10 (one rounded teaspoon) of fertilizer per square foot and apply again in the spring when the first shoots break through the ground.

Artful use of blooming bulbs can accentuate the best features of your home and yard. The Netherlands Flower-bulb Institute suggests planting them along walkways, fences and patios and in other high-traffic areas. Ring your mailbox and lamp post, or group them near your porch and garage.

Here are other landscaping tips from the Institute.

— Try flamboyant parrot tulips, with their fringed petals, to brighten any walkway.

— Surround an entryway with sweetly perfumed hyacinths.

— Formal plantings are attractively offset with naturalistic clusters of tulips, daffodils, hyacinths and other early-blooming bulbs — such as snowdrops and crocuses — in adjacent lawn areas or under trees and shrubs.

— Bulbs also are perfect for flower beds usually reserved only for perennials and annuals. After the bulb flowers fade, the surrounding plants conceal the ripening bulb foliage, which should be allowed to wither and die naturally, because it supplies nutrients to the bulbs for next year's blossoms.

AS A RULE-OF-THUMB, plant tall-growing bulbs toward the rear of the bed and shorter ones near the front. This technique will give you a succession of blooms that can last from earliest spring to late May. Hybrid crocuses, buttercup-like winter aconite (Eranthis hyemalis) and other low-growing bulbs blossom soon after the ground thaws. Tall-growing single and double late tulips bloom four to six weeks later. In between, plant medium-sized daffodils and hyacinths and early-to-mid-season tulips. For best results, group together at least a dozen large bulbs, or 20 small ones of the same kind and color and then intermix groups according to taste.

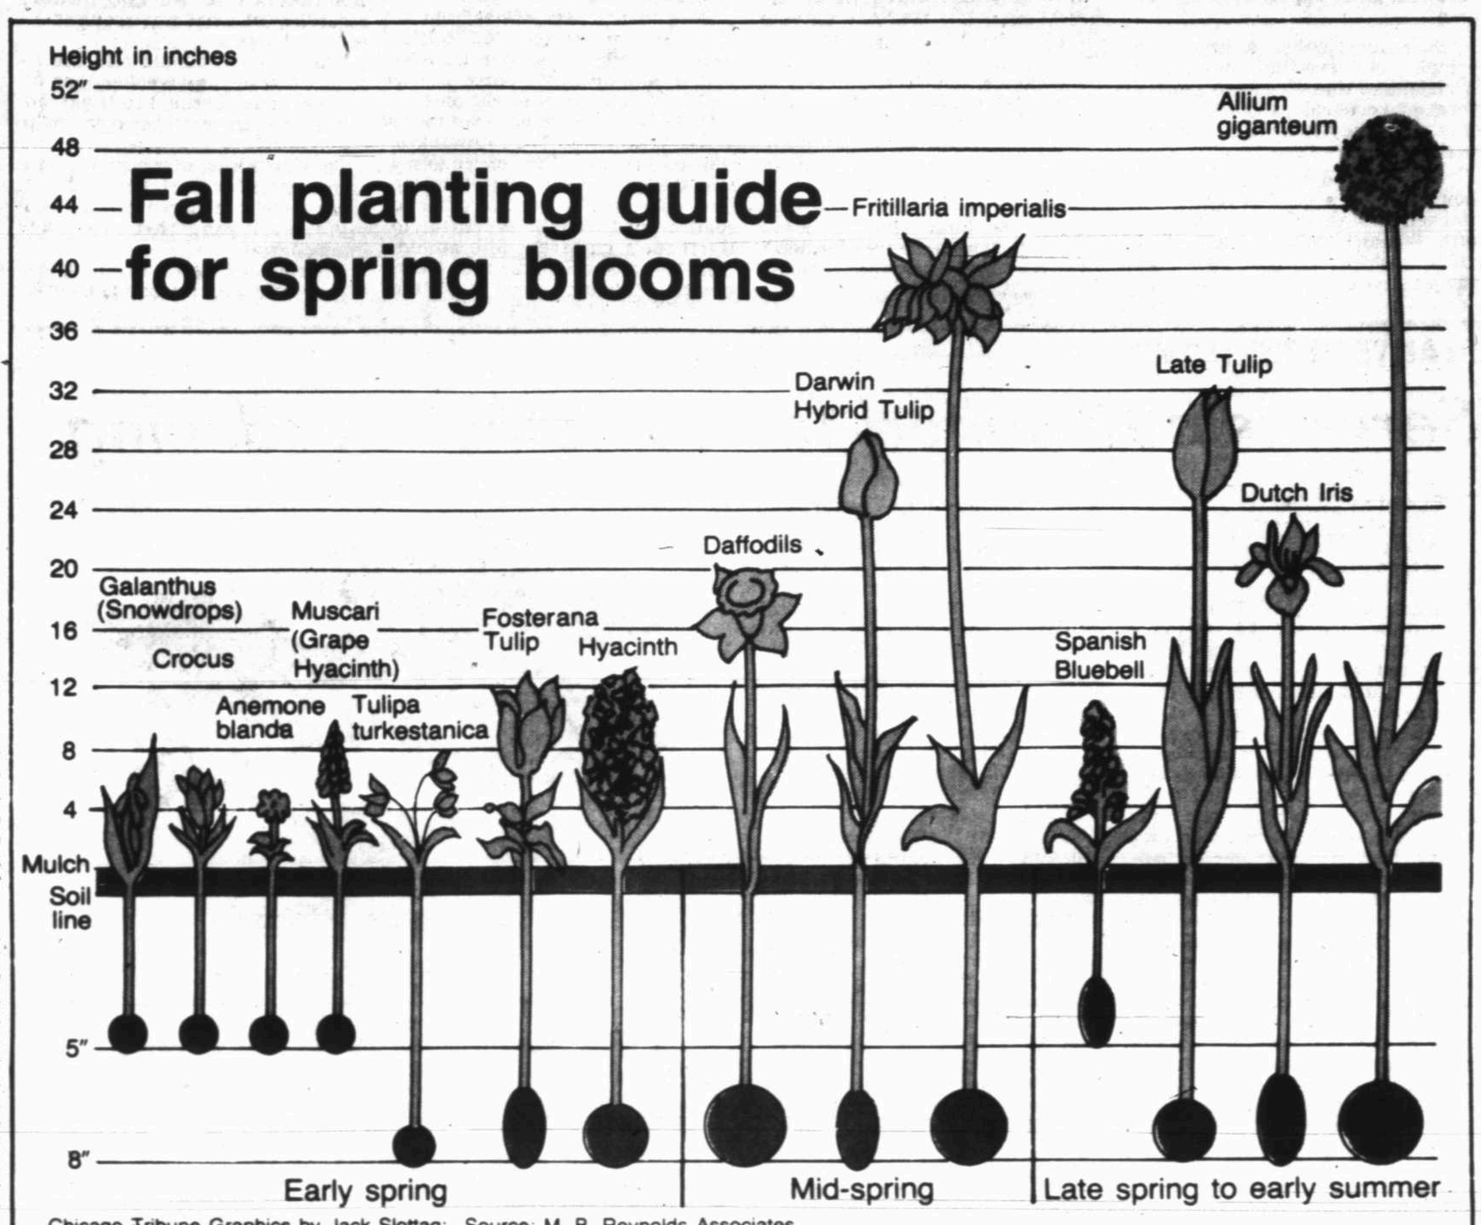

— Dwarf Kaufmanniana and the larger Fosteriana classes are among the earliest tulips to bloom and appear in late March or early April. Darwin hybrids, the largest of all tulips, dominate the mid-spring scene and are followed by lily-flowered, single late and peony-flowered tulips in May. Daffodils — snowy white, pale yellow, cream, orange and even pink or multi-colored — range in size from miniature varieties only six inches tall to the tall showier Trumpets.

— Hyacinths, with their spring perfume, bloom in bridal white and pastel yellows, pinks, lilacs and pale to deep blues and are better planted in clusters of five to seven rather than in stiff rows.

— The lesser known anemone blanda, crocus, galanthus and muscari, which grow closer to the ground, are best planted in groups of 15 to 25 among shrubs or along walkways or in rock gardens. (Anemone blandas are surefire for an early spring carpet under tulips and daffodils. Their star-shaped flowers, which resemble daisies, grace four- to five-inch stems and come in shades from white to vivid rose, blue and purple.)

— Crocuses come in lavender, mauve, violet, purple, blue, yellow, gold and white. Even some striped varieties are available. Galanthus (snowdrops) are also early bloomers: Their frosty-white, three-petaled flower often comes on the scene as early as late February.

— For added drama, try Allium giganteum or fritillaria imperialis, which grow to a spectacular two to four feet. Allium, in lilac and purple, is made of hundreds of tiny florets that radiate from a central core. Fritillaria imperialis has drooping, cup-shaped flowers that resemble miniature tulips. Their orange-red-yellow blossoms encircle a tall, slender stem and are crowned with a thick tuft of green.

Autumn best time to plant grass

By ANITA LEWIS
Hearst News Service

Fall is the best time to "get your grass in gear," says Wanda Trent of the University of Maryland Cooperative Extension Service. The soil is warmer, germination is faster and it rains more frequently. In September and October, grass seedlings also don't have to compete with as many weeds as in the spring.

That's the good news. The bad news is that you'll still need to invest time, effort and materials if your lawn has balding patches, is smothering under a thick layer of thatch or just needs to be reseeded.

If you're planning to reseed this month, your lawn should already be free of steep slopes, small hills and valleys.

If you haven't already tested your lawn for lime and fertilizer content and added the proper amount, a good rule of thumb is to till into the soil eight to ten pounds of ground limestone and three to four pounds of 5-10-5 fertilizer for every 100 square feet of lawn. Most lawn grasses grow best in a well-limed soil with a pH of 6.0 to 6.5.

To reseed large areas, choose a Kentucky bluegrass certified mixture. Kentucky bluegrass grows thickly in the fall and comes in 50 cultivars. It is recommended for either full sun or partial shade. Fine fescues do well in shady areas.

Seeding can be done anytime in late summer or early fall. It can be done by hand, with a rotary seeder or a droptype spreader. Rake the soil surface to loosen the top inch, divide the seed into two lots and plant it at right angles to distribute it evenly. In fact, seed, fertilizer and lime should all be spread this way. Rake lightly to cover the seed and mulch with weed-free straw. Keep the ground moist with frequent light waterings until the seed germinates. The first season after seeding, water the lawn frequently and mow when it grows three to four inches tall. After the first mowing, keep the lawn at two to three inches high. Don't fertilize it until the next fall.

Bare spots larger than 10 inches should be reseeded, advises the Fall Planting Council. Start by removing all dead and unhealthy looking grass from each spot. Dig out the soil about four to six inches deep and condition it with peat moss and a slow-release nitrogen. Tamp the conditioned soil level with surrounding ground and sprinkle the spot with seed. Make sure the grass species you choose is compatible with the species already in your lawn.

Rake the seed about one-eighth to one-quarter of an inch into the soil. Tamp again and water the spot lightly. Cover the newly planted area with a mulch of straw or salt hay to retain moisture. Keep the area moist until new growth appears.

According to the extension service, only two herbicides are recommended on newly seeded areas: bromoxynil for broadleaf weeds and siduron for pre-emergence crabgrass control.

Women more prone to soccer injury

Copley News Service

The fast and furious action of soccer produces twice as many injuries among women as men, according to Dr. Frank Noyes, director of the Cincinnati Sports Medicine and Orthopedic Center. Noyes, who reviewed a five-year study of soccer injuries in the United States and Europe, said women tend not to be as well trained as men and females tend to be looser jointed, resulting in more serious injury.

Oat bran, beans most effective fibers

Copley News Service

It's no mystery that a diet high in fiber and low in fats can significantly reduce one's blood cholesterol. But a recent study reported by Executive Fitness Newsletter suggests the most effective fiber may be oat bran and beans. Ten men with high cholesterol who ate a diet rich in those items experienced a 26 percent reduction in their cholesterol levels after 24 weeks.

DEAR ABBY

Offers to fix jukebox are music to family's ears

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR READERS: On Aug. 22, the following letter appeared in my column:

"Dear Abby: We have three adult crippled children (our own) all in wheelchairs due to a rare genetic form of cerebral palsy. However, this is not the problem; I'm coming to that.

"Our children love music, so we bought them a used jukebox and stocked it with their favorite records — mostly polkas, Irish ballads, golden oldies, etc. Last December the jukebox broke down. The dealer who sold it to us tried to locate the transfer switch that was needed to repair it, but he told us that since it was a 20-year-old Wurlitzer, he doesn't expect to find one because the parts are not being made anymore.

"Abby, the model is 2810 and it plays only 45s. It had a beautiful tone before the switch broke.

"Can you help me, or is this a hopeless case? — Gertrude B. in Wilkes-Barre, Pa."

"Dear Gertrude: There must be someone out there who has an old Wurlitzer transfer switch. Readers? Write to Abby, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038."

Did I get letters! My mailman isn't speaking to me, and my staff is still working overtime to handle the responses.

More than 10,000 people from all 50 states, Canada and Puerto Rico wrote, offering to send a transfer switch. And at least a dozen people volunteered to custom-make one!

Michelle K., an employee of the H and G Amusement Co. in Milwaukee, was the first to call my office to say that she had already started taking up a collection at work in order to send a good, rebuilt Wurlitzer to Gertrude's children. She added, "The Milwaukee Sentinel, which carries your column, agreed to pay the $75 shipping charges."

An engineer in Maryland offered to fly to Wilkes-Barre and restore the jukebox to working order, regardless of what was required — free of charge.

I heard from people offering to send Gertrude their collections of old records. Some kindhearted strangers even sent checks to "help out."

The outpouring of generosity and compassion for Gertrude and her three disabled children had me and my staff typing through tear-dimmed eyes.

I telephoned Gertrude and spoke to her and her husband, Chuck. They were overwhelmed with gratitude and said, "There is no way we can thank all those wonderful people, so will you please thank them for us?"

You will be pleased to know that the sound of music will again be heard in Gertrude and Chuck's home thanks to Philip Roth, owner of Roth Novelty Co. in Wilkes-Barre. He wrote to say that he has represented the Wurlitzer Co. for 25 years and he will gladly provide the music-loving family with the best rebuilt jukebox available at no cost. And because of the special circumstances, Roth agreed to service the unit free of charge — forever.

Now, who says we're living in a cold, selfish society where people care only for themselves?

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

PLANTS IN THE HOME

Serissas best suited for container gardening

By ELVIN McDONALD

Visiting my desk today are seven different serissas, none of which you will find listed in today's most up-to-date reference books. These naturally dwarf, bonsai-like shrublets have small rounded evergreen or variegated leaves and white or pink flowers, single or double, the latter resembling tiny gardenias.

While many of the plants we grow indoors have periods of dormancy or stand half-resting for months at a time, the serissas are both evergrowing and everblooming, with peak blossoming in winter and spring. They are excellent for half-sunny windows and a few inches beneath the tubes in fluorescent-light gardens; also growable outdoors in the Sun Belt, to 27F., but seem best suited to intensive container gardening, otherwise such diminutive plants tend to get lost.

All seven serissas I am presently growing are apparently derived from one species that hails from southeast Asia, S. foetida. When you bruise the leaves or clip back wayward branchlets with your pruning shears the specific name will make sense (and scents): There is a slightly offensive odor, but nothing to detract in the least.

If you've ever wanted to try your hand at bonsai, I can't imagine a better beginning plant than serissa, particularly 'Cherry Blossom,' 'Kyoto' and 'Sapporo,' all of which have compact habit by nature. If you grow one of these well, establish it in a small oriental pot, and keep any dead twigs clipped, the nearly automatic response will be a picturesque little tree.

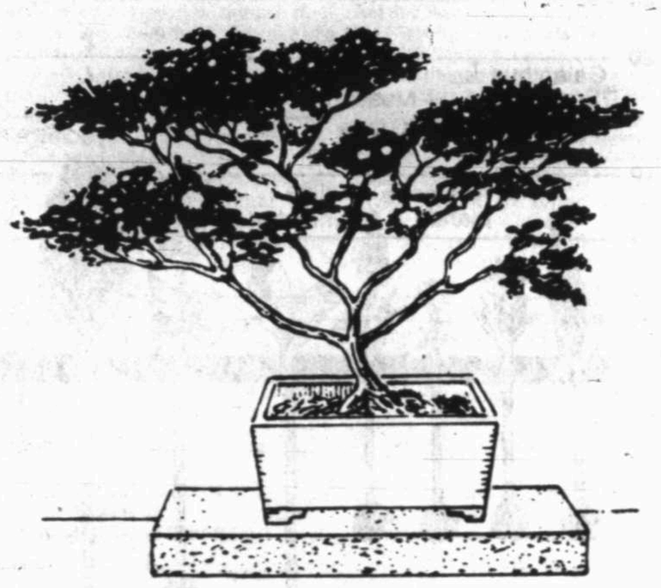

The only source I know for these special serissas is Kartuz Greenhouses (1408 Sunset Dr., Vista, Calif. 92083; catalog $1). Sources for bonsai containers, with step-by-step drawings for how to establish one classic style dwarf tree or shrub, are in my notebook sheets. For your set send 50 cents coin and a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope with "Bonsai" written on the back flap to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, Box R, Niagara Falls, N.Y. 14305.

Q. How can I get azaleas to live and bloom a second year? Mine never flower again and eventually die.

A. Potted flowering azaleas sold by florists and garden centers need an abundance of sunlight, fresh air and moisture from spring to early fall, then a season — about three months — of coolness (50-55F.), less water and no fertilizer. They usually fail to bloom because the sequence of fat and lean growing conditions is not followed, or the roots are allowed to dry.

Next time, be sure to keep your flowering azalea moist through and through; never let it become so dry that the leaves or blossoms wilt. When the last flower fades, transplant to a size larger pot, filling in with African Violet potting soil, or a mix of two parts coarse sphagnum peat moss to one of sand or vermiculite.

Clip off any new growth that sticks out awkwardly from the plant's overall shape, up to mid-summer. Also apply a balanced fertilizer regularly, such as 20-20-20 or fish emulsion, until early August. Shower all leaves rain-fresh every week or two, in a sink or tub, using lukewarm water. This keeps spidermites at bay; if they should yellow-fleck the leaves and hang tiny gray webs all over, bag at once and discard before the mites move on to something greener in your "pasture" of plants.

Serissa

Azaleas of one beautiful kind of another are cultivated outdoors over all but the coldest and driest sections of North America. Even in areas where the soil is far too alkaline to suit I hear of gardeners planting in sunken barrels or other enclosures of imported peat-rich earth.

Students improving skills with school media centers

CHICAGO (AP) — Can kids improve their reading skills through television?

The answer to that question is an emphatic "yes" in school systems where students aren't just watching television, but are actually producing it, says Alice Fite, executive director of the American Association of School Librarians (AASL).

Two such school systems — in Richmond, Va., and Riverside-Brookfield, Ill. — have library media center programs designed to give students opportunities for creative outlet, to encourage younger students to read, and to provide access to the latest electronic equipment, including television and computers.

They have been so successful in motivating students to learn, says Ms. Fite, that both earned National School Media Programs of the Year awards for 1984 from the AASL. The award recognizes excellence and innovation in school library media services.

"The school library — or media center as it is now known — is becoming an ever more integrated part of the curriculum of elementary and secondary schools," Ms. Fite said. "And, we find the schools with the highest achieving students tend to have media centers with the most creative approach to learning, as well as the electronic 'carrots' that young people must learn to master — including television and computers."

Evidence of the interest these new media programs are drawing is the fact that some 80 students at Riverside-Brookfield Township High School volunteer as student aides in their school's library. The Media Services Club is one of the most popular in the suburban Chicago school.

Teachers at Riverside-Brookfield are using television to add sparkle to traditional subjects, while students employ video to produce everything from creative book reports to home economics demonstrations.

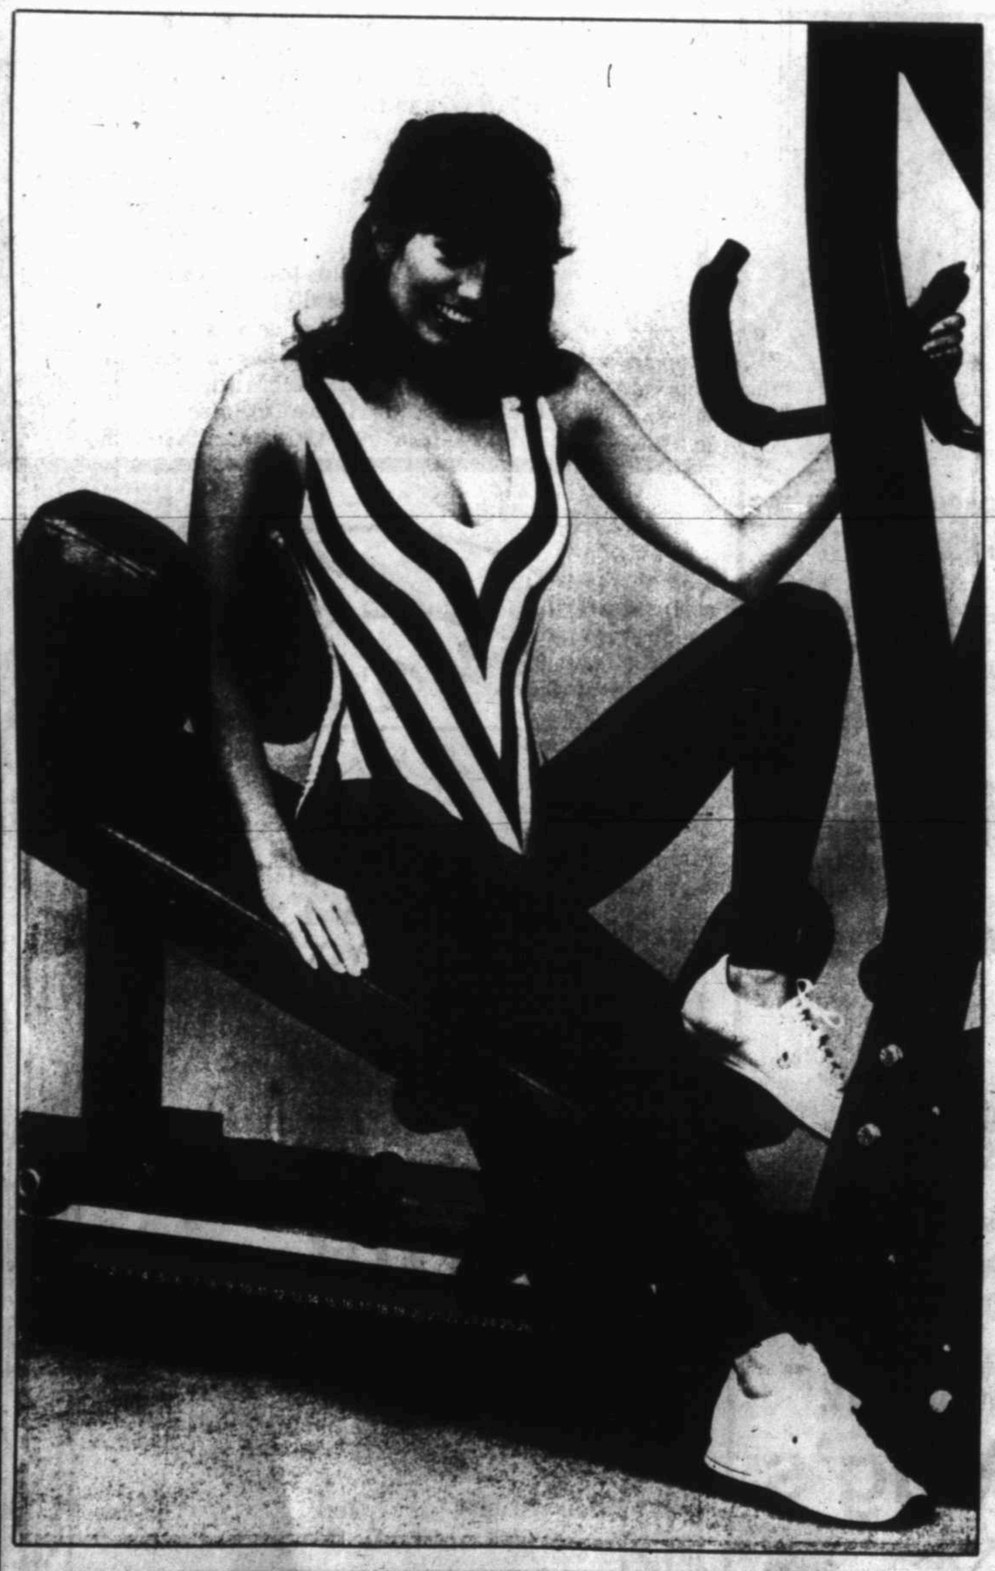

For the last several years, the school has produced a student television show called "Dateline: R-B," directed by two students who receive independent study credit. Upon completion of the local cable system, the show will beam out of the school throughout the community.

Richmond schools are also using the new technology to increase student performance at the elementary and secondary levels. The system's libraries have among their goals "to prepare each pupil to assume a productive role in a technological society" and to increase student achievement. This, according to the judges of the AASL award program, Richmond is doing.

The system makes extensive use of closed circuit television — broadcasting daily programs dealing with reading, literature and literacy. In addition, the in-house TV station airs news and features.

Mircrocomputers are also a part of Richmond's school libraries. They don't necessarily take attention away from such well-accepted programs as the system's "Read Squad," which sends secondary students to elementary media centers to read to younger children.

Prohibitionism battles country's alcoholism

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — Tom Quayle, an old-fashioned prohibitionist, believes he is making some headway in his battle to ban alcohol in this country of hard drinkers.

Quayle leads the New Zealand Temperence Alliance, which has been showing a strength it hasn't known in decades by focusing its campaign on the deaths, broken families and ruined lives that have been blamed on alcohol.

"Our movement has always had as its goal the promotion of the alcohol-free way of life in our society and national prohibition," Quayle said in an interview.

Since 1911 a proposal to ban alcohol has been on the ballot in every general election. The prohibitionist vote has been rising recently with 20 percent opting in June to make the country dry, up from about 13 percent in the 1970s.

Sitting in a threadbare office from which he directs his campaign, Quayle rails against drink.

"I believe my body is the temple of the Holy Spirit and I should consume nothing that taken in sufficient quantity would impair my ability to control myself and my actions. Furthermore, as a Christian I believe I am my brother's keeper," he said.

But the prohibitionists are making new converts with tactics that have little to do with moral objections. A child killed by a drunk driver is their new argument, they say.

A typical Alliance pamphlet features a display of newspaper stories and headlines reporting drunken driving accidents, brawls in bars, brain damage from alcohol and alcoholism as a factor in divorce.

"This represents people, tragedies, innocent victims, beaten, injured and knocked down by those affected by alcohol," it says.

Said Quayle: "The things that we have been saying for over a century, which we of course update from time to time, ... now have a ring of truth to many people because they just cannot escape the consequences of the consumption of alcohol in our society."

Jim Thompson of the New Zealand Liquor Industry Council said the prohibitionists are a force his group spends a lot of time and money to counter.

Thompson added in an interview that many people are worried about drunken driving and other abuses, but he said the industry has responded with expensive education programs on safe drinking.

"This is a very intimate democracy. Everybody sits in judgment on each other in this country."

New Zealanders have always had a reputation for enjoying a drink with some saying there isn't much else to do in the remote country. The nation ranks about 12th worldwide in average alcohol consumption, according to the government.

Fatal accidents involving alcohol account for about one death a day on the roads or half the national total, and there are an estimated 60,000 alcoholics in the country of 3.25 million people, according to official figures.

Until 1967 bars had to close at 6 p.m., giving rise to what was called the six o'clock swill, which one historian described as "the most barbarous drinking custom in the world, whereby people got as drunk as possible as quickly as possible after work between five and six o'clock."

Now bars stay open until 10 p.m.

The prohibitionist vote has a powerful effect on politicians in a country where many races are decided by a few hundred votes, Thompson said.

Former Prime Minister Robert Muldoon said political parties won't oppose having the drinking referendum on the ballot for fear of antagonizing the prohibitionists.

States try to control alcohol consumption

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures Writer

In New York state, it's okay to drink beer in a pizza joint next door to a church, but illegal to have a glass of wine in a restaurant the same distance away.

In Illinois, it's against the law to sell a martini or a split of champagne within 100 feet of a church or a school. But the church itself can serve drinks for social functions.

In some places in Mississippi, you can buy all the hard liquor you want, but beer sales are strictly illegal.

The liquor laws of this country have never been consistent and, in many cases, never good friends with logic. The only national attempt to ban the sales of liquor — the Volstead Act of 1919 that was repealed in 1933 — was one of the country's greatest legislative fiascoes.

Even now, as evidence mounts that more and more lives could be saved by enacting a uniform legal drinking age of 21 nationwide, only 22 states have complied.

The idiosyncracies of the liquor laws survive, state by state, and when local option comes into play, county by county, town by town.

Sometimes quantity counts. You can buy a six-pack of beer in a bar in Pennsylvania, but if you want a case you must go to the state package store.

In Rhode Island, you must be 21 to purchase any alcoholic beverage, but 18-year-olds can tend bar. And in South Dakota, it's legal to sell liquor on Election Day, but not Memorial Day.

Oklahoma, until this week, took first prize in the hypocrisy sweepstakes. It was absolutely illegal throughout the state to sell any alcohol by the drink, a provision spelled out in the state constitution.

But the truth was, a visitor would never have noticed. You could order a Scotch and soda at virtually any good restaurant or club in the state. The Sooners called it "liquor by the wink."

If residents complained about the open bars, the police would usually make some token arrests, hauling bartenders or waitresses off to jail. The trouble was, they were usually back to work in time to collect their tips.

Oklahoma voters paved the way for change Tuesday (Sept. 18), when they narrowly approved a referendum that will allow each of the state's 77 counties to decide whether they want liquor sold by the drink, rather than the wink. Unofficial returns showed 425,779 in favor, 396,986 against. Two earlier referendums, in 1971 and 1976, were defeated by wide margins.

The beer law in Oklahoma is also worth noting. They have "weak beer" and "strong beer." Weak beer contains 3.2 percent alcohol or less. Somebody decided that weak beer is officially "nonalcoholic," the alcohol content notwithstanding, so it may be sold in grocery and convenience stores. It can also be sold cold, ready to be chug-a-lugged.

Strong beer, on the other hand, must be sold at the state liquor stores and only at room temperature, not chilled.

And if you're caught zig-zagging down the road in your car after too many "nonalcoholic" cold ones, don't even try to explain it to the judge. You've got a ticket for driving while intoxicated.

Not that local option solves all of a state's problems. Anyone who travels knows that if you check into a Holiday Inn in a dry county, you become a member of a "club" immediately and can head for the bar.

To get around the ban on liquor by the drink, there are many variations, depending on where you are. Sometimes you bring a bottle in a brown bag, sometimes you have to buy the bottle from the bartender and then he charges you for the setups at a price commensurate with what you drank, or sometimes you buy a miniature bottle, the kind the airlines use.

Convicted drivers perform services while doing time

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Second-time offenders of the state's drunk driving laws, performing court-ordered community service while they serve mandatory jail sentences, are saving taxpayer dollars, say people who have supervised their work.

At Holmes State Forest on Crab Creek Road, they've planted pine trees, performed maintenance on lawnmowers and trucks, mowed 30 acres of grass several times, cleaned out a trash-filled attic and partitioned it into several guest rooms.

"We've had 12 people so far," said Tom Ennist, supervisor at Holmes. "Two of them are working 100 hours each. If you figure just that time at minimum wage, $3.65, that's over $700 right there."

Second-time offenders ordered to perform community service have also painted the Henderson County Jail and one offender, a licensed electrician, has done the electrical wiring for cameras and microphones there.

County maintenance supervisor Ed Capps estimates the painting saved the county $1,200 to $1,500 and the electrical wiring saved about $350 more.

Under an arrangement that is apparently unique in the state, orchestrated by community service coordinator Stuart Van Meter, there are two "recipient agencies" that pick the offenders up at the jail on Saturday and Sunday mornings and return them to the jail the same afternoons. The other agency is the Elks Camp for Boys on U.S. 25 at the border between North Carolina and South Carolina. Offenders who serve their jail time during the week work for the County Maintenance Department, Van Meter said.

Van Meter is coordinator for Punishment Alternatives for Impaired Drivers Inc., which operates in Henderson and Transylvania counties. PAID was established in October 1983 under the Safe Roads Act and is part of the statewide program that provides the mechanism for judges to order first-time offenders to perform community service.

"This program has worked so well, I have recipient agencies calling all the time asking for more people. I didn't have enough people to send them," Van Meter said.

American teens write book about themselves

CHICAGO (AP) — If no one understands American teen-agers, it's not the fault of journalism students at Glenbard East High School.

Twenty members of the student newspaper, the Echo, spent two years compiling "Teen-agers Themselves," a 270-page book that gives the views of hundreds of American teens on subjects ranging from parents to sex to nuclear holocaust.

The book, which sells for $16.95, went on sale in late June. The first printing of 12,500 copies sold out, and the book is now in its second printing, said publisher Esther Cohen of New York.

The book covers 20 major topics, among them prejudice, priorities, religion, relationships, the future, drugs and death. The variety of views expressed indicates that, "while there are some universal teen-age experiences, there is no universal teen-ager," said Diana Slyfield, 17, Echo editor-in-chief for 1983-84.

"We strove for a diversity in the opinions and the areas," said Tracy Wykert, 18, Echo assignment director. "We tried to put in responses from all 50 states. And that way we could get a wide range of views."

On the subject of parents, for example, 17-year-old Kelly Curry of Lubbock, Texas, wrote: "My parents and I have an average relationship. They tell me. Then they tell me louder. Then they scream it. Then I do it."

On sex, 17-year-old Shannon Appel of St. Clair Shores, Mich., wrote: "It's so scary because if you do, then the guy might go tell some other guys. Then when another guy asks you out, you don't know if he likes you or if he's asking you out because of what he heard...about you."

On nuclear war, Brian Dary, 18, of Greenfield, Wis., said: "The thing that comes first in my life above everything would be learning all I can about superior weaponry and...survivalism."

And Steve Bresnahan, 16, of Newton, Mass., said: "My one fear concerning the future is nuclear war. I can work around all my other fears, such as an unsatisfactory job or bad marriage, but I have no control over this fear. I am not in constant fear...but it is always in the back of my mind, sitting, waiting to be remembered."

Ms. Cohen said she offered the project to the high school in suburban Lombard because she was impressed with the quality of the Echo.

"The kids themselves showed an unusual amount of dedication," Ms. Cohen said. "I went to Lombard not expecting a great deal. But I saw kids trying to understand the ethic of America as it encompassed their lives."

Students devised and mailed questionnaires to high schools in all 50 states, said their adviser, Howard Spanogle. They sifted through about 9,000 responses before choosing 750 they wanted to use. Also included in the book are transcripts of discussions among 13 Glenbard East students who gathered each week to share their thoughts on each of the chosen topics.

In one of the discussions, on death, a 17-year-old senior girl said: "I think the biggest problem I have dealing with my mom's (heart attack) is that I made a pact with her that if she ever got to the point where she was a vegetable... I would pull the plug. That's what scares me a lot... I wonder if I could bring myself to do it. But I promised her that I would."

Hollywood releases several 'serious' films for fall season

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — If you're fed up with Hollywood ghosts, gremlins and teen-age sex comedies, take heart: the fall movie season promises a bumper crop of goodies for those who can think and eat popcorn at the same time.

More than 40 new movies were scheduled for release from September through Thanksgiving. That's an unusually high number of films in a period traditionally restricted to the "serious" pictures that usually get crunched in the summer and Christmas seasons by "Ghostbusters"-type blockbusters.

Potentially big-grossing films such MGM-UA's "2010," the sequel to "2001: A Space Odyssey"; Universal's "Dune," based on Frank Herbert's science fiction classic; and "City Heat" from Warner Bros., which teams Clint Eastwood and Burt Reynolds, won't appear until Christmas.

In the meantime, audiences can expect adult dramas starring Sally Field, Jessica Lange, Charles Bronson, Paul McCartney, Nastassja Kinski, Nick Nolte, Katharine Hepburn and Howard E. Rollins Jr.

FILM EXECUTIVES say this glut of autumn movies is a testament to Hollywood's robust health. U.S. and Canadian box office returns are already on a record pace this year, with a total of 150 films expected to be released.

"The last couple of falls there's been a lot of product," said Tom Sherak, distribution president at 20th Century Fox. "The reason for that is this industry is very healthy right now, and there are lots of pictures being produced."

Adding to the heavy fall turnout was this summer's Olympics, which caused distributors to delay the release of some films. A crowd of big films battled it out earlier in the summer.

"The Olympics put the fear of God into a lot of people in terms of opening a picture," Ashley Boone, distribution and marketing group president for Columbia Pictures, told The Los Angeles Times. "But the fall is still primarily for films that you want to qualify for Academy Awards and that can't take the heat of Christmas."

Distributors tend to think small in the fall when much of their audience is in school. Virtually no movies are released for vast numbers of theaters, as is typical of summer and Christmas, and advertising and promotion efforts are relatively modest.

But the fall season usually produces a big-grossing sleeper or two, and for the discriminating moviegoer the pre-Thanksgiving releases are about as close to art as Hollywood ever comes.

"A Soldier's Story" and "Amadeus" head the big fall parade.

"A SOLDIER'S STORY," which stars Howard Rollins Jr. in Charles Fuller's Pulitzer Prize-winning off-Broadway drama, originally titled "A Soldier's Play," concerns a murder in an all-black Army unit. It opened in a small number of theaters Sept. 14.

"Amadeus," based on Peter Shaffer's Broadway hit, stars Thomas Hulce as composer Wolfgang Mozart. It opened Sept. 19.

Sally Field stars as a young widow struggling to maintain a Depression-era Texas farm in "Places in the Heart," was due Sept. 21. That same weekend, Charles Bronson, Jose Ferrer and Theresa Saldana appear with "The Evil That Men Do," in which Bronson plays a mob hit man coming out of retirement.

The following weekend features "Irreconcilable Differences," a family drama starring Ryan O'Neal, Shelley Long and Drew Barrymore. The film was originally set for midsummer release.

Nick Nolte is scheduled for two films this fall: "Teachers," about a high school graduate who sues his alma mater because he can't read, and "The Ultimate Solution of Grace Quigley," in which he and Katharine Hepburn play a pair of mercy killers.

In October, John Savage, Robert Mitchum and Keith Carradine appear with Nastassja Kinski in "Maria's Lovers," and Rutger Hauer, Powers Booth and Kathleen Turner form a love triangle in "A Breed Apart."

Jessica Lange stars with Sam Shepard in "Country," from Disney's Touchstone Films division. "Garbo Talks," in which Anne Bancroft makes a dying request to meet the legendary film star, Greta Garbo, is due Oct. 12.

In "The Little Drummer Girl," Diane Keaton plays a British actress recruited by the Israelis to infiltrate a Palestinian terrorist group. The film, based on John Le Carre's best-selling novel, will be released Oct. 19, the same weekend Bill Murray, Theresa Russell and Catherine Hicks open in the remake of the 1946 classic, "The Razor's Edge."

JoBeth Williams is an American housewife who wins a trip to Paris in "American Dreamer," a romantic adventure due Oct. 26. The same weekend, pop music fans will find former Beatles Paul McCartney and Ringo Starr in "Give My Regards to Broad Street," a "day in the life of" story about a musician.

Another October release with a musical theme is "Songwriter," starring Willie Nelson, Kris Kristofferson, Lesley Ann Warren and Rip Torn.

Just before Thanksgiving, Christopher Reeve and Rosanna Arquette star in "The Aviator," an air crash survival drama set in the 1920s.

Following is a list of movies to be released by the major studios from September until Thanksgiving, including date of release, title, cast and brief plot synopsis.

Sept. 14

—"A Soldier's Story." Howard E. Rollins Jr. A black man is murdered on a southern Army base.

Can drama buck Gremlins, Nerds?

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — As a play, "A Soldier's Story" won the Pulitzer Prize and fascinated audiences with a murder mystery played against the backdrop of World War II.

It should have been a natural as a film, but Norman Jewison, whose "In the Heat of the Night" won the Academy Award as best picture of 1967, had a lot of trouble getting it made.

"Nobody wanted to make it," said the Canadian-born director, 50, whose films include "Fiddler on the Roof" and "Jesus Christ Superstar."

"Films today seem to be an endless parade of nonintellectual subject matter filled with mindless, endless action — a triumph of style over content," he said. "Producers seem to be convinced the movie audience will be bored if they are shown something that bears a relationship to their lives."

Two years ago, Jewison saw a performance of Charles Fuller's "A Soldier's Play" performed by the Negro Ensemble Company in New York. The director was intrigued by the story of a black army captain assigned to investigate the murder of a black sergeant at a segregated camp in the South in 1944.

Jewison persuaded Warner Bros., for which he had just filmed "Best Friends" with Goldie Hawn and Burt Reynolds, to buy rights to the play. Jewison worked with playwright Fuller on a filmscript for six months. Warner Bros. passed. So did MGM and Universal.

"Everyone felt that there had not been many black films in recent times, except those with black performers (Richard Pryor, Eddie Murphy) in comedy roles," said Jewison.

He finally found a backer in Columbia Pictures — provided he could make the film for $6 million. Jewison agreed to waive his usual salary, which could have been about $1 million, and work at the Directors Guild minimum to meet the stringent budget. He was paid $76,856.

John Flinn, a Columbia Pictures spokesman, said the studio agreed to undertake "A Soldier's Story" because of Columbia President Guy McIlwaine's confidence that Jewison could make a quality film at a reasonable price. McIlwaine also felt that a prize-winning play on such an important theme should be filmed.

Though this season's top-grossing movies have all been lightweights — such as "Gremlins," "Ghostbusters" and "Revenge of the Nerds" — McIlwaine predicts the more serious "A Soldier's Story" will eventually prove to be profitable.

Jewison assembled a cast headed by Howard E. Rollins Jr., an Academy Award nominee for best supporting actor for his work in "Ragtime."

"There is no scarcity of talented, willing and committed black actors," said the director. "I interviewed actors here, in Chicago and New York, and I could have cast the picture three times over."

Swan holds up commuters

BATH, England (AP) — Commuters on one British Rail train had a tough time explaining why they were late for appointments on Friday — they were held up for 18 minutes when a young swan refused to leave the tracks.

The train between London and Bristol was zipping along at 50 mph when it ground to a halt to avoid hitting the cygnet, said a British Rail spokesman, Chris Watts.

"But the cygnet was somewhat stubborn and it was some time before it would leave the rail line," Watts said.

Israel's 'economic barometer' feels pressure

By MASHA HAMILTON
Associated Press Writer

BEIT SHEAN, Israel — A dozen men sat in the shade drinking beer and playing a midday game of gin rummy, their customary escape from long days with no work.

Down the street the owner of a sporting goods shop waved a stack of bounced checks and refused to give credit for a pair of tennis shoes.

The manager of a cafe a few blocks away complained that he brings in the equivalent in Israeli shekels of only about $6 from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Beit Shean, a remote northern town a few miles from Jordan, is Israel's economic barometer and it's on its heels.

Its 13,000 residents are among the first to feel the crunch of the nation's worsening economy as unemployment climbs and inflation slides toward 400 percent annually.

Beit Shean is what Israel optimistically calls a development town. It is one of the former Arab villages that became home to some of the millions of Jewish immigrants who entered the country after the 1948 war of independence.

The towns were created to encourage people to live away from the cities on the coastal plain and to delineate the borders of the struggling new Jewish nation.

Immigrants were given homes and the government sponsored small industry and public projects to provide work.

In the those days, work was plentiful and Beit Shean mushroomed. In the late 1970s, a new quarter of luxurious homes grew on its outskirts.

Now, much of the industry is closed for lack of investment and no new businesses have come to fill the void.

Shops are boarded up. Houses need paint. Unemployment is more than twice the national average of 5.9 percent, and rising.

"Thirteen percent of the population lives in development towns, but they make up 40 percent of the unemployed," said Baruch Haklai, director of Israel's Employment Service.

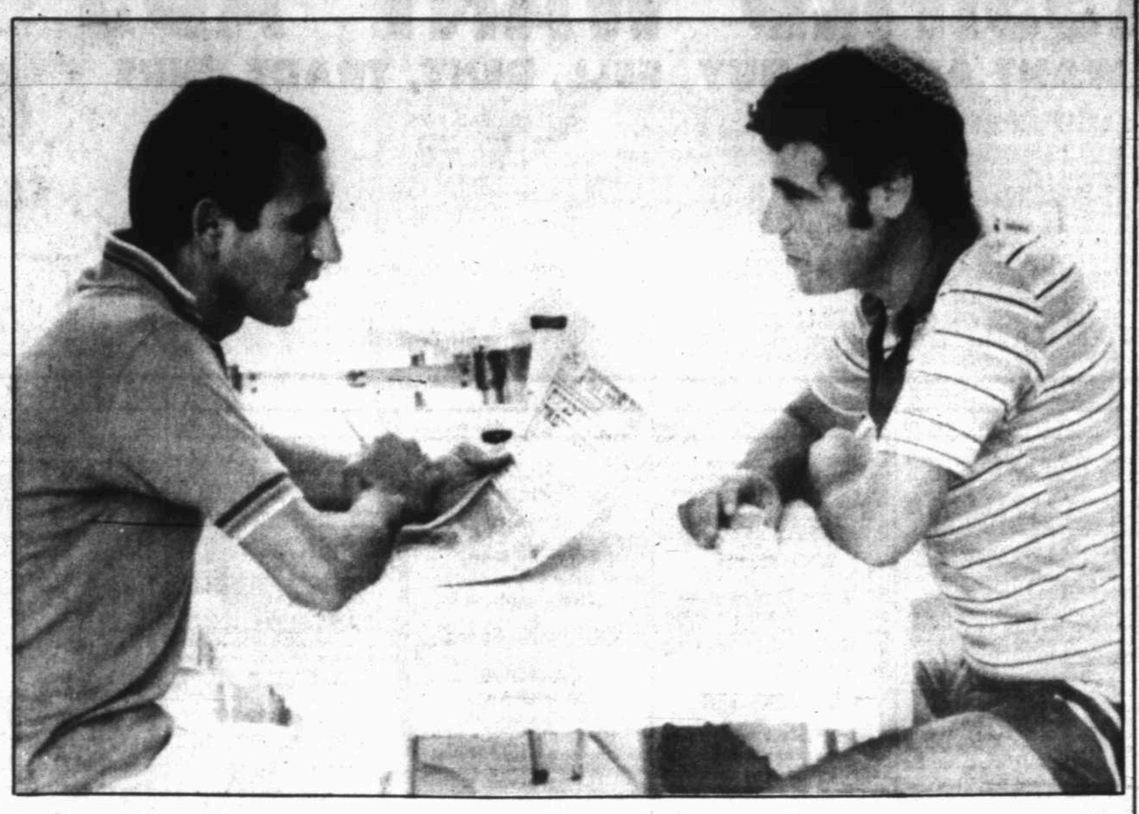

Shalom Avitan, 25, has been out of work for several months. Despairing of finding a job, he has stopped looking, even though his wife is pregnant with their second child.

"I get up at about two in the afternoon, go around with my friends until I go to sleep and then get up again," Avitan said.

Some people here resentfully accuse the government of ignoring their town while pouring money into Jewish settlements in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, the latest area Israel hopes to claim by creating Jewish communities.

Government officials say the incentives are the same to invest either in development towns or the West Bank, and they can't help where businessmen opt to go.

But Beit Shean residents, 55 miles northeast of Tel Aviv, feel they are a long way from the minds of Israel's leaders.

AP Laserphoto

Helping a friend search the newspaper for work is 29-year-old Avi Nachmani, left.

"Nobody in Tel Aviv cares about our situation because there they have plenty of places to work," said Mordechai Malka, a resident. "Here we only have an olive-producing plant and a textile factory that is laying off workers."

"I don't accept that we will have 20 percent unemployment and everyone else will have 5 percent," said Moroccan-born Mayor Shlomo Ben-Lulu. "We're not treated equally."

Most people who live in Beit Shean are Sephardi Jews from North Africa, and many believe they don't get economic support because of what they claim is discrimination by a government made up mostly of Ashkenazi Jews from Europe. Sephardi Jews typically are among Israel's lower-income class.

Some residents turn their anger against West Bank Palestinians, who they say are taking jobs away from Jews. Beit Shean was bombarded daily from Jordan in the early 1970s, and today ethnic hatreds are never far from the surface.

More than 300 residents voted in Israel's national elections in July for the U.S.-born Rabbi Meir Kahane, who advocates expelling Arabs from Israel and the West Bank.

Beit Shean also is reeling under the cost of living. When government officials announced in September that the cost of cooking oil would increase by 88 percent, "everyone in town was lined up in the store fighting for those bottles of oil," Hazan said.

During an interview in his plush office, bank manager Avraham Refaeli got a telephone call from a client who offered to sell him a few bottles of cooking oil at the old price. He declined.

Place in non-aligned movement stirs strong feelings in Malta

By KERIN HOPE
Associated Press Writer

VALLETA, Malta — "It used to be that nobody discussed politics on Malta except at election times," the schoolteacher said. "Now families are split down the middle and we talk about nothing else."

As with some others on this Mediterranean island, she talked politics with with a foreign visitor only on condition that her name not be published because of rising political tensions.

The opposition Nationalist Party has resorted to clandestine radio broadcasts to get its message across, although the government maintains that free speech is guaranteed.

In 13 years as Malta's prime minister, socialist Dom Mintoff has transformed the nation from a NATO headquarters to a member of the non-aligned movement — a process that has left the 330,000 islanders divided.

The conservative opposition, Maltese businessmen, and Roman Catholic churchmen all accuse Mintoff's socialist-based Labor Party of growing increasingly autocratic.

Reflecting a view held by many Westerners here, a West European diplomat said politics on Malta, which is 60 miles south of Sicily, are now "chronically polarized with neither side feeling at all conciliatory."

Mintoff has forged close ties with Libya and China and upgraded relations with the Soviet Union. Earlier this year, Malta accepted $1.5 million worth of light arms free of charge from North Korea's communist government.

But at the same time, the socialists say they hope to renew a treaty with Italy guaranteeing the island's neutrality after it runs out next year.

"We'd like to be as equidistant as possible from both the United States and the Soviet Union ... that's where our security lies, not in being a fortress," the senior deputy prime minister, Carmelo Mifsud Bonnici, told visiting reporters.

For centuries Malta and its neighboring island of Gozo served as a Western military outpost in the southern Mediterranean — first as the headquarters of the medieval Knights of St. John, and later as a British colony and the southern headquarters of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

Mifsud Bonnici, a 51-year-old labor union lawyer, is the 68-year-old Mintoff's designated successor as leader of the Labor Party.

Anti-government feeling has intensified since the December 1981 elections, when the Labor Party won a three-seat majority in the 65-member Parliament while the Nationalists won 51 percent of the popular vote.

The Nationalists boycotted Parliament for 15 months afterward, claiming the Labor Party had altered electoral district boundaries to favor its own candidates.

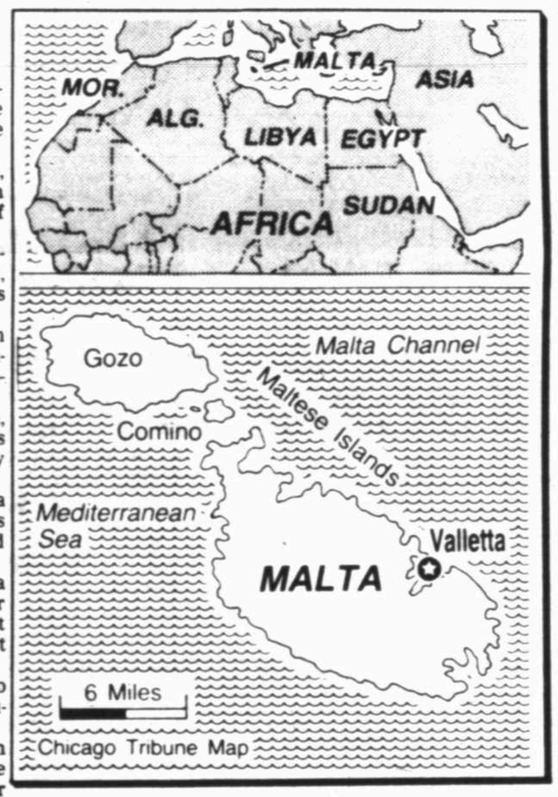

"We will attend Parliament's next session but only selectively," Nationalist Party leader Eddie Fenech Adami said in an interview. "The government doesn't respect its rules. ... And there's a gradual but definite erosion of democracy taking place."

The government is also accused of using the state-run radio and television to distort the views of the Roman Catholic Church and the Nationalist Party.

"We now run a clandestine broadcasting station in order to offset the government's media campaign against us," Fenech Adami said.

Asked about the radio station, Mifsud Bonnici said: "It has very marginal appeal. We let them do it ... and it disproves their charges that we run a police state."

The government and the Catholic church are seriously at odds over a measure that prohibits parochial schools from charging tuition. The government claims the church should pay for students' educations out of its own funds.

Many Maltese praise the socialists for improving housing, welfare and pension schemes and health services during their years in power.

But critics say Mintoff's policy of touring Eastern bloc and non-aligned countries in search of political support and economic aid has brought Malta few gains.

Mintoff, who earlier in his career sought union for Malta with Britain, closed the British naval base on the island in 1979. Two years later, the socialists signed a neutrality pact with the Soviet Union and a bunkering agreement for Soviet merchant vessels.

"The Soviet Union doesn't make full use of its bunkering facilities ... and Malta can't possibly produce enough to fulfil the requirements of a $260 million trade agreement signed this year with the Soviets," said a leading businessman who would comment only if not identified.

The socialists hope that Malta will become a transhipment center for freight traffic in the Mediterranean with the completion of a new $160 million port facility built by Chinese experts.

In the meantime, the island faces declining revenues from its traditional sources of income — tourism, drydock facilities and exports of blue jeans.

The government says unemployment is running at 9 percent, while unofficial estimates range as high as 18 percent.

Priests epitomize Nicaraguan fight

By MONTE HAYES
Associated Press Writer

SAN MARCOS, Nicaragua — The Rev. Benoit Laplante, a French-Canadian Roman Catholic priest, worked for more than 14 years with the poor in this provincial town, establishing an adult education program and a thriving housing cooperative.

In July, he was expelled from the country by the Sandinista government.

On the other hand, The Rev. Uriel Molina celebrates Sunday Mass for his working-class parishioners in a Managua church whose inner walls are covered with murals showing oppressed people and a gun-toting priest. The Mass ends with the playing of the anthem of the Sandinista National Liberation Front, which contains the line, "We fight against the Yankee, enemy of humanity."

He is a leader of the "People's Church" and has the Sandinistas' support.

Both Laplante and Molina, a Nicaraguan, advocate the cause of the poor. But they epitomize the conflict between the Nicaraguan Catholic church and the leftist Sandinistas.

Laplante was one of 10 foreign priests expelled in July accused of anti-government activities.

Molina is one of the maverick priests in the People's Church who embrace the Theology of Liberation, which has been condemned by the Vatican on grounds that it uses Marxist analysis to explain poverty and social and economic injustice.

Church officials say the expulsion of the 10 priests is part of the Sandinistas' efforts to discredit the established church and promote the People's Church and, through it, Marxism.

Protesting the expulsions, the leader of the established church, Archbishop Miguel Obando y Bravo, said in July, "It is part of Sandinista policy to continue to undermine the church, since they chose for deportation the priests who most work with workers and peasants and the least favored classes."

The Rev. Bismarck Carballo, an aide to Obando y Bravo, said in an interview in Managua that the 10 priests were selected because they were viewed as a threat to the Sandinistas' efforts to bring poor people into organizations loyal to them.

"Behind all this is not only their desire to control all social organizations. They also want to make us look like the church of the rich and prevent us from helping people so that they can say the church is distant from the needs of poor," Carballo said.

Here in San Marcos, a town of 27,000 people set among rolling green hills 25 miles south of Managua, the 44-year-old Laplante established a housing cooperative, funded by Canadian government development agencies, that provided homes for 1,500 familes.

During the rule of rightist strongman Anastasio Somoza, Laplante's work with the poor and his criticism of the government drew death threats from Somoza supporters, and he was forced to flee the country briefly. He returned when the Sandinistas ousted Somoza in 1979 after a bloody two-year civil war.

But he began to have problems with local Sandinista representatives.

Pro-Sandinista cooperative members organized a movement against him, won a majority on the board of directors in February and wrested the administration away.

Guillermo Sanchez Cruz, the Sandinista-appointed manager of the cooperative, accused Laplante of being arrogant and a poor administrator.

Sanchez Cruz claimed that Laplante used his sermons to attack the government, the military draft and the Sandinista Defense Committees.

Critics charge that the Sandinistas use the committees, organized on the neighborhood level throughout the country and called the "eyes and ears of the revolution," to intimidate opponents.

The Rev. Jean Dolbec, another French-Canadian priest who has been here less than two years, said Laplante did not openly criticize the government but was a strong critic of the People's Church.

"Somoza called him a Communist. Now they say he is a member of the CIA," Dolbec said in an interview.

Church officials say the government has begun denying new visas to foreign priests and nuns invited by the church to work in Nicaragua. At the same time, they say, the Sandinistas are bringing in leftist priests to work with the government and perform religious functions without church authorization.

Carballo said Nicaragua has about 320 priests to serve the 85 percent of Nicaragua's 2.9 million people who are Roman Catholic. About 200 are foreigners.

Only 26 priests, the majority foreigners, are openly identified with the Sandinistas, but the government promotes them through the state media so that they appear to be a much larger force than they really are, Carballo said.

Police, Sikhs clash at Golden Temple

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — Police and paramilitary troops clashed with Sikh extremists today in the Golden Temple, charging into a crowd that came to give thanks for the army's withdrawal from the Sikh religion's holiest shrine, an Indian news agency reported.

United News of India said police with riot sticks cordoned off the 12-block temple complex and rounded up 400 people.

By this evening, however, a Punjab state government spokesman said the situation was under "complete control." He spoke on condition of anonymity.

Eyewitnesses told the Associated Press that police and federal troops had left the complex, the cordon had been lifted and that devotees were coming and going to the complex as usual this evening.

There was no official report of injuries but eyewitnesses said many people were injured and some were beaten.

"The scene was chaos. Police were entering from all sides and people were running madly in all directions. Women were screaming. It was dreadful," said one journalist who witnessed the melee.

Meanwhile, in New Delhi, the Indian government announced that the ban keeping foreigners from visiting troubled Punjab state, first imposed when the army raided the temple in June, would be extended for two months. The ban has kept foreign journalists from visiting the temple complex in this Sikh holy city except in tightly-orchestrated tours.

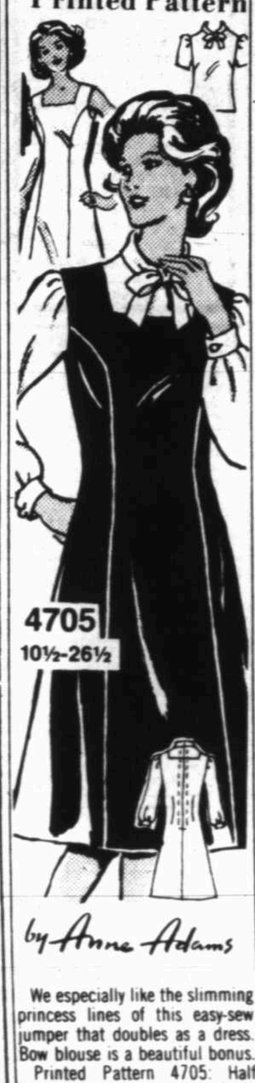

The violence erupted on a "day of thanksgiving" as thousands of rejoicing Sikhs celebrated the return of the temple to the Sikh community after nearly four months of occupation by the army.

UNI said police entered the complex to evict shouting extremist youths who had taken over the holy Akal Takht building and hoisted a flag of Khalistan — the separatist state sought by some Sikhs.

CITY OF MIDLAND, TEXAS
B. C. Clanton, City Secretary
October 1, 1984

NOTICE TO BIDDERS
The Board of Trustees of the Midland Independent School District, Midland, Texas, is requesting bids on Lockers. Bid specification, regulations and forms may be secured from the Purchasing Agent, 801 South Moran, Midland, Texas. Phone 683-6228.

LEGAL NOTICE
You are invited to bid on a Detention Equipment Construction Contract for "The Midland County Jail and Sheriff's Office, Midland, Texas". All bids must be on a lump sum basis; segregated bids will not be accepted.
At 3:00 P. M., October 17, 1984, the Midland County Commissioners' Court will convene in a public meeting in the Commissioners' Courtroom on the second floor of the Midland County Courthouse at which time bids will be opened in public and read aloud. Bidders may select either of two procedures for submitting bids. They may submit their sealed bids directly to the Commissioners' Court at the time and place for the bid opening or during the period of time prior to the bid opening they may submit sealed bids to Midland County Auditor, P. O. Box 421, Midland, Texas 79702. Bids received by the Auditor prior to the time of the bid opening will be securely kept, unopened. All Detention Equipment bidders are invited to attend the bid opening meeting. Bids received after 3:00 P.M., October 17, 1984, can not be considered.
In general, the scope of the detention equipment project may be described as follows:
Base Bid - 165 bed Jail and Jail Administration facility with a total area of approximately 54,000 sq. ft. as shown on proposed Contract Documents dated October 1, 1984.
Add Alternate No.1 - Jail Housing Module "B" Shell space only for addition of approximately 17,000 sq. ft.
Add Alternate No.2 - Detention equipment only for an additional 60 beds to be added to the first floor of Module "B" shell (see above Add Alternate No.1).
Add Alternate No.3 - Add the Sheriff's Office consisting of approximately 12,000 sq. ft. of office space.
The General Construction Contract bids will be received by Midland County Commissioners' Court on October 31, 1984. The lowest responsible detention equipment sub-contractor's bid amount will be supplied to each of the general construction bidders. The intent is that each of the general construction bidders will include in their proposal sufficient cost to cover the complete work (including work by the previously selected detention equipment sub-contractor). The Detention Equipment Sub-Contractor will be assigned to the selected General Contractor. Ultimately, a single construction contract will be prepared with the successful general contractor which will include both the general and detention equipment construction.
The proposed Contract Documents may be examined at the following locations.

"Some people only live this way two weeks a year."

Welcome to vacation living all year long. Welcome to Saddle Club Apartments. Saddle Club isn't a resort-we just look like one. We offer you 2 sparkling swimming pools, 2 lighted tennis courts, 2 indoor racquetball courts, a universal gym, indoor and outdoor jacuzzis, and wet and dry saunas.

Once inside a Saddle Club apartment home you can cozy up to a warm fireplace, relax on your own patio or balcony and enjoy the feeling of luxury living.

There's privacy here, but if you want activities, we have planned resident get-togethers.

Rent beginning at $309. We're located only minutes from major businesses, recreation, fine restaurants and entertainment. We're probably only a few minutes away from where you work.

So if you feel like taking a vacation that never has to end, take a drive over to Saddle Club and let us show you how.
