A Tip to Uncle Sam—
Not a $3000 Job—
Wichita Club Grows—
Words Won't Tell—

PROVISION of proper recreation facilities and directors in Wichita Falls parks for children is commendable work on the part of the park department, but more than 300, the initial day's attendance, should take advantage of the city's provisions for play.

Wichita Falls has a number of fine parks, but more should be added before the ever advancing price of real estate makes purchase or acquisition through gift almost beyond possibility. Mothers and fathers should encourage their children, where possible, to take advantage of the recreational facilities now being offered. Play is essential to the child's health, happiness and development. Directed play, where the child comes in contact with other children and learns the lesson of a "give and take" life, is the most beneficial form in the development of future citizens.

A REPORTER for The Record News who walked in the relief association office Thursday while a line of anxious-eyed mothers sought milk, ice and food for their children, could hardly believe the stories of suffering and want told by these tragic women.

It is hard to believe that there is such misery in Wichita Falls. From the majority of us these people hide their misfortunes and their needs, revealing their wants more than often only to the leaders of those associations from whom they are assured of kindness, understanding and possible help.

TO SAY that children in Wichita Falls are dying of starvation is difficult to make convincing. Yet, hundreds of mothers and fathers, who can recall the tender care and lavish attention given their own offspring, will know that "starvation" is the correct word when they are told that MORE THAN ONE HUNDRED families in this city are unable to provide ice and milk for their children.

The Record News opens its milk and ice fund each year for these children—with the knowledge that words are almost futile in attempting to paint the true picture of the needs of those the fund is designed to help.

WORK NOW underway of repainting and repairing the interior of the Wichita Falls postoffice will add much to the appearance of the building, but will bring little satisfaction to residents of this city.

The federal government is spending $5000 on minor improvements, when it should be spending $200,000 on a new building in keeping with the progress of this city and section, and in accordance with the standards of the postal department.

THE RECORD NEWS believes the personnel of the local postoffice to be as fine as any in the state, but the building in which these employes work is far from the standard set by them in their service to the city. Regardless of statistics and reports showing the local building to be adaquate for this city's needs, it is a shame that Wichita Falls does not have a more imposing, a better equipped a more adequate, and a finer postoffice. It is a shame that such fine service as is being given Wichita Falls by its federal employes should have no more inspiration than the present building.

THE RECORD NEWS congratulates the Wichita club in "stepping out" with a real membership campaign, in keeping with its expansion into fine new quarters occupying two floors of the Hamilton building. This civic club, carrying on its membership rolls an unusual number of the city's leaders, has always ranked high as an active agent in the building of the city.

New quarters on the 12th and 13th floors of the Hamilton building will be without equal in the south, and this city may well be proud such an organization, as well as of the mangificent club facilities which it provides in keeping with Wichita Falls' growth and progress.

After that time she suffered a sudden heart attack and the end was foreseen in a bulletin issued by her physician, Dr. Alejandro Wallace shortly after the turn for the worse.

ROBT. H. GRAY WILL TRY HOP OVER PACIFIC

Veteran Pilot Of World War Fliers Here For Conference

HE SEEKS BACKING

"Faith Of Wichita Falls" Name To Be Given His Plane

Against the swishing hurricanes and through the treacherous air pockets of the Pacific ocean, Lieut. Robert H. Gray, of the British Royal Air Corps, will probably hurl "The Faith of Wichita Falls," to Hongkong, China, it was indicated Thursday night.

The intrepid battler against the never ending efforts of the air currents to smash to earth the man-made birds has practically been assured the financial backing by Wichita Falls capitalists to equip an airplane for entrance into the Dallas-China trip sponsored by William E. Easterwood, Dallas chewing gum magnate.

"It might mean your death to attempt a trip across the Pacific," he was told.

His answer was a broad smile.

But, death is something far from Lieut. Gray's mind—he faced it on the German front.

Shot Down in War.

His ship became a target for Bosche guns—down it came and into a prison camp Lieut. Gray was escorted.

Again death grinned at him—he escaped from the prison camp amid a hail of bullets.

Death started laughing when for eight days and nights, Lieut. Gray criss-crossed a path and dug his way under heavily charged electrical wires—on which one touch meant the Great Beyond.

At the end of the eighth day, Lieutenant Gray, famished and his tongue swollen from lack of water, was discovered in his hiding place and recaptured.

Death nearly won its battle when he was placed in a prison camp on the bleak shores of the Baltic sea. It was the German camp for dangerous prisoners and those expected to make an attempt to escape. Food was scarce and the prisoners were barely clad—hundreds died in the camp.

Laughed at Death.

Only those who laughed at death survived—and Lieutenant Gray was one.

After the war, Lieutenant Gray came to the United States and after touring the country in a flying circus he founded a flying school and airport at Amarillo.

He flew from Amarillo to Wichita Falls Thursday, arriving shortly after noon.

His plane, an exact duplicate of the one Captain Charles Lindbergh piloted across the Atlantic, was landed at the Browning airport and will remain there until Lieutenant Gray leaves.

While in Wichita Falls, Lieutenant Gray will be the guest of Raymond Allred, attorney. He will remain here until he has completed financial arrangements for the Pacific ocean flight.

WOMAN SHOT, BROTHER HELD

Burkburnett Shooting Said To Be Accidental

Mrs. W. E. Muckelroy of Burkburnett, about 25, is in the Hargrave-Walker hospital here with a bullet wound in her abdomen, and her brother, Bill Lynch is being held in the Burkburnett jail as the result of a shooting at Burkburnett Thursday night.

Mrs. Muckelroy was wounded by the accidental discharge of a pistol, according to information to Chief of Police Bill Garland of Burkburnett received after the shooting. Her condition is not considered serious, hospital attendants said.

Mrs. Muckelroy's mother and Lynch were in a small coupe at the family home and Mrs. Muckelroy was standing at the side of the car when the pistol was accidentally discharged, Chief Garland said.

The wounded woman was brought here in an Owens ambulance, and Chief Garland placed Lynch in the Burkburnett jail.

Atlantic Air Pioneer To Visit Paris Before Sailing Home

By Universal Service.

LYMPNE, Eng., June 3.—Capt. Charles A. Lindbergh's flight from London to Paris was interrupted here by foggy weather over the English channel. Lindbergh landed at 6:58 o'clock. At that hour the weather over the channel was thick, but the aviator was hopeful that it would be clear in an hour or two permitting him to continue on to Le Bourget flying field, just KENLEY, England, June 3. (AP) Captain Lindbergh hopped off for Paris at 6 o'clock this morning.

Captain Lindbergh is flying across the English channel in a British plane. As he took his seat in the machine at 6:15 a. m., about 100 persons who had been waiting at the airdrome for some hours for the start, cheered enthusiastically. Two other planes escorted him.

Lindbergh made a perfect start. He climbed rapidly to 1000 feet when he went into formation with the two escorts. Circling over the airdrome once, he headed straight southeast for the coast near Folkstone. Weather prospects were good.

LINDBERGH FILMS HERE

Scenes of the remarkable flight of Capt. Charles Lindbergh to Paris will be shown in the Pathe News at the Majestic theater four days beginning Friday. His start from New York, showing complete preparations, his takeoff and reception in Paris by the throngs that met him are recorded on the screen by Pathe artists. The story in picture form is the first release of the flight and shows the entire adventures of the young hero.

KENLEY, England, June 3. (AP)—Captain Lindbergh was awakened by a servant at 3:30 o'clock this morning to prepare for his flight across the English channel to Paris. He hoped to start at 6 a. m. The plane was immediately rolled out on the field and the work of getting it ready began. The weather was more favorable than last night, although there were low clouds in the sky.

LONDON, June 2. (AP)—Adverse weather reports today forced Captain Charles A. Lindbergh to postpone until tomorrow his return to Paris by air.

With that care and quiet thoroughness which characterized his preparations for his epic transAtlantic flight, the American flying ace sat in the little headquarters office of the Kenley military air station this afternoon and as the adverse weather reports from south England and the channel and northern France were laid before him and as the mist and fog rolled up over the edges of Kenley air field, he pictured the treacherous air path to Paris. Minute by minute he waited for nearly two hours to see if conditions would improve, and then decided to start from England at dawn tomorrow.

He had tea with the officers and tonight he slept at their mess—among men who talk his language of aeronautics and to whom he is as much a hero as he is to the crowds who have followed him France, Belgium and England.

He Stunts in Air.

From the air marshal to the ground force of the British air service, the story has spread that Lindbergh cavorted through the air in the British military plane which he brought back from Gosport the other morning after taking the Spirit of St. Louis to the south coast to be packed for the trip home.

As if for sheer joy at being in his element again, Lindbergh turned

Relief Fund To Be Raised For Storm Victims

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, June 2.—A movement to raise funds for the people whose homes and property were destroyed by a storm in the northern part of Wilbarger county Wednesday night began here Thursday by the various welfare organizations.

Cyclonic wind and torrential rain and hail laid waste a strip of land 10 miles wide by 20 miles long in the northern part of the county with two persons injured and houses, out buildings and crops levelled by the wind. Heavy hail fell in the western part of the county extending from the Red River valley community to the south on Pease river on the north.

Parker Massey of Doans was struck on the head by a seantling and Henry Brumbeck of near Margo was hurt when his house blew away.

Houses, garages, barns and other buildings were destroyed and a number of farm animals killed. Property loss will run into thousands of dollars.

65 Derricks Down

Eleven derrick crews out of Burkburnett went to work Thursday repairing damage from a wind which, swept across the county and the Red river oil field Wednesday night wrecking some 65 or more derricks. Additional workers are needed in the section, it was reported, and operations will be held up for several days pending repairs.

Damage from the wind was revealed Thursday morning, farming property in the Burkburnett section resisting the brunt of the blow. Oats and wheat shocks were scattered, and cotton and other crops damaged to a considerable extent all over Northwest Texas, according to reports here.

Several poles of the Texas Electric Service company were blown down in the area, while two farm houses were also demolished. A portion of the roof of the home of Cain Moore, who lives southwest of Burkburnett, was blown away, and the home of Carl Williamson, near Midway Junction, slightly damaged.

40-Mile Wind

While the wind in Wichita Falls only reached a maximum velocity of 40 miles an hour, damage over the county was greater than in the rain and storm of the preceding night, when a maximum of 60 miles an hour was reported by the bureau of the Texas Electric Service company.

The amount involved in permits issued Wednesday, June 1 was $2,200, which amount, added to Thursday's total of $13,400, brings the June amount of $168,600.

SENATE IN WRANGLE

Fight Over Primary Bill Heated In Upper Chamber

AUSTIN, June 2.(AP)—Gov. Dan Moody's plan to perfect rehabilitation of the Texas prison system by vesting a new nine member board with plenary power to make property transactions incident to concentration, was struck down by the house of representatives late today, 65 to 57.

By that vote the house sustained Representative Satterwhite's amendment to the Teer administration bill to make the key purchases and sales subject to approval of the legislature.

MOODY FORCES HOLD WHIP IN SENATE

AUSTIN, June 2.(AP)—Texas' political family skeleton rattled in the senate today, but the "White Primary" bill seeking to bar negroes from voting with the democratic party survived a vigorous assault and passed to third reading.

Only two votes were lacking to secure four-fifths vote to put the measure on final passage, third reading vote being 20 to nine after efforts of Parr and others tried to cut off the Lewis amendment promising past political affiliation or present or past membership in "secret orders" shall not in any case serve as a bar to the primaries.

Two attempts by Stuart to have the senate reconsider its recent action in indefinitely postponing his bill—opposed by the administration—create a highway commission of nine members were choked off by Wood, Governor Moody's floor leader, by use of parliamentary tactics. The bill seemed doomed.

Old Law Upset

The primary bill provides that party state executive committee or convention shall have power to judge qualifications for party members, thus affording opportunity for excluding negroes. A recent United States supreme court ruling held that present Texas law seeking to bar negroes is unconstitutional.

Parr, whose amendment attempting to place jurisdictory power not in the state committees but in county organizations was defeated, discussing Lewis' amendment, declared that "those who bolt the party should not be allowed to vote with the party in the future."

Lewis answered that he is "ready for repentant men to come back to the party" regardless of past "transgressions."

POLLARD WINS POINT IN SENATE FIGHT

AUSTIN, June 2.(AP)—Using surprise attack to befuddle opposition, Pollard of Tyler late today had the senate to set his civil service bill for special order tomorrow afternoon.

Chance for civil service, requested by Governor Moody and a plank adopted by the last democratic state convention, hitherto has looked slim in the senate as the session is drawing to a close and a previous attempt by Pollard to set it for special order was defeated.

The vote for special order was taken amid great confusion and Parr of Benavides and others protested and raised points of order without avail, the senate adjourning after the vote on motion of Witt of Waco.

Hambone's Meditation

"I Wouldn't Ask Except for Him—We've Lost Two This Year"

Many hearts will be happy in the little "No Man's Land" of Wichita Falls today!

For the people of Wichita Falls are answering the plea sent out through The Record News for milk and ice for the sick and hungry youngsters of the city—they are bringing in dollars and five dollar bills—they are holding out their hands to the needy ones, with money promises of more.

And as the funds that go immediately to the relief of empty stomachs and feverish brows begin piling up, it seems that the pleas for help increase with each hour. As quickly as it can be done, investigations of the calls are being made, and the real needs sifted from those not so great so that the work may get under way as soon as possible. Mrs. Effie McHam of the Family Relief association of the city, spends the greater portion of each day among the families that are most destitute, and will start changing this money into milk and ice for the babies and the helpless ones with the haste each case warrants.

Thursday morning a woman with tired eyes and a weary step came to the offices of the welfare council, asking for the first time in her life, for help.

"I couldn't do it except for—him," she said, pointing to the 8-months-old child on her arm.

"We have lost two this year, and somehow I can't bear to think of him getting sick—we're so foolish about him. And he's a little feverish now—do you think he's all right?"

The child did have fever—he was crying with hunger, and three other children, none of working age, had pinched faces and were weak from insufficient and improper food. The woman is willing to wash, iron, scrub—anything to get money for the babies—her husband has been out of work for weeks, and is walking the streets looking for a job every day.

Into such homes as this one will be sent the provisions purchased with the milk and ice funds. There cannot be too much given—nor can it come too soon, and those who can help are asked to send their gifts TODAY. Oral Jones of the City National bank is trustee of the fund.

HOW MRS. WEAVER WAS HELPED

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

As Mrs. Weaver herself says, "I was never very strong." This is a mild statement describing her condition, for, according to her letters, she was subjected to no small amount of ill health. Fortunately, her sister was familiar with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and begged Mrs. Weaver to try it. "After three or four weeks," writes Mrs. Weaver, "I felt a great difference in myself. I would go to bed and sleep sound, and although I could not do very much work, I seemed stronger. I kept on taking it and now I am well and strong, do my work and take care of three children. I sure do tell my friends about your wonderful medicine, and I will answer any letters from women asking about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Lawrence Weaver, East Smithfield St., Mt. Pleasant, Pa.

If you knew that thousands of women suffering from troubles similar to those you are enduring had improved their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, wouldn't you think it was worth a trial?

P. Hern, commercial work and coach; Miss Ruth Strange, English. Gramma school: P. G. Lindbergh Hops Off For France

tumbled, soared, dived and rollicked about like an elfin child at play—free at least from the earth-bound creatures who have been crowding him much of late. It was because of this experience with the American birdman that the British air force authorities at Kenley realized the great responsibility they had as his hosts tonight.

Wing Commander H. M. Brock, in charge at Kenley station, has issued an order to his two squadrons of air fighters that Captain Lindbergh is not to be given any plane except the one carefully tested and designated for his Paris trip tomorrow. Night flying is carried out every night at Kenley, and the high officials feared that the adventurous American might sally into the clouds tonight just for the fun of the thing, or that he might go up with British officers for a lark.

Lindbergh told the Associated Press correspondent this evening that there need be no worry about him; all he wanted was rest, so as to be ready bright and early for the hop to the continent.

There were tense moments at Kenley while Lindbergh wrestled with the problem of the English weather. Should he disappoint the crowds awaiting at Lebourget, or start off in the fog, which the British airmen called "awfully sticky" the single seater Gloucester gamecock was all primed for the trip; Lindbergh's baggage—his new felt hat and suitcase—was in the storage space behind the cockpit, and the parachute was ready for adjustment.

Decides to Wait.

Two youngsters from the British air forces, Flight Lieut. Boret and Flying Officer Horiman of the 32nd squadron, were ready to accompany him to the coast. Observation planes circling the field seemed hardly visible a few hundred yards away.

Final decision regarding the flight actually rested with Captain Lindbergh himself. He could have had the plane if he wanted it, the British officers would have accompanied him to the coast. But there was a stroking of tanned faces and a shaking of heads and then a sigh of relief as the American youth announced that he was greatly disappointed but would wait until dawn.

Officers Elected By Wichita Falls Laborers

Organization of another labor union for Wichita Falls was perfected at a meeting of laborers at the courthouse Thursday night, when permanent officers were elected and a by-laws committee appointed.

Installation ceremonies and obligation of members will be held at the Labor Temple next Thursday night. Twenty-seven new members added at the meeting brought the total membership to more than 200, as nearly 200 had joined the union at previous meetings.

P. B. Roberts, editor of the People's Press and a leader in local union labor, was in charge of the meeting, and announced that employment for approximately 200 had been obtained since the preliminary organization was formed several weeks ago.

A talk on unionism was made by Mr. James of the Axton-Fisher Tobacco company, and brief talks were made by several members.

Officers elected were as follows: B. E. Allison, president; F. M. King, vice president; H. A. Goad, secretary; O. B. Kelly, treasurer; J. J. Moore, M. J. Allison and F. M. Webb, trustees; A. D. Lux, sergeant-at-arms.

GRAIN HARVEST IN WILBARGER

Yield Expected Under Normal Average

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, June 2.—Harvesting of wheat and oats is now in full swing in all parts of Wilbarger county and this section, and a yield of a little below the average crop is expected. The oat yield is expected to be about the same average as the wheat, but much less acreage was planted to oats.

Probably the best wheat yield in this county is to be found in the Hinds community, it is reported. Wheat on the farms of Ernest Scheur and Ernest Karcher in this community will yield an average of 20 bushels to the acre. Mr. Scheur estimates.

Combine In Use

Mr. Scheur has purchased a combine this year and practically all grain in this vicinity will be harvested by this rapid method. The combine cuts, threshes and sacks the wheat at the same time. At least 400 acres of grain will be harvested by this method near Hinds.

Since the combine method of harvesting is not yet fully developed here, most of the grain will be cut by the usual binder method and then threshed. Since a large part of the grain in this section has short stalks because of the dry weather, provision has been made to "head" the grain, according to R. E. L. Patillo, county agricultural agent.

There will of course be some fields left uncut, but by use of the header practically all fields will be harvested. But very little grain will be wasted in Wilbarger county this year, Mr. Patillo stated. Practically all fields in the county will be cut within the next ten days, he estimated.

Grain at Kirkland

As yet no new grain has arrived at the elevators here, according to Joe A. Kell of the Kell Milling company. Some new wheat has been received at this company's plant at Kirkland, however, Mr. Kell said. The recent rains have not damaged grain to any extent in this section, according to Mr. Kell.

Several large wheat growers and others interested in the crop estimate that the total yield will average from 12 to 15 bushels per acre in this county. The average crop is 18 bushels to the acre, according to Mr. Patillo's estimate.

CHAPLIN WILL FIGHT CHARGES

Comedian Declares He Has Been Kind Spouse

LOS ANGELES, June 2 (AP).—Charles Chaplin today leaped into the divorce battle ground which had been dominated by his wife, Lita Grey Chaplin, for nearly five months, and took up the fight by firing a broadside of denials and counter charges in a 100-page cross complaint and answer to his wife's suit.

Mrs. Chaplin was charged by her husband with defiantly associating for a long period of time with two young men whom he did not name, with frequent intoxication, neglect of their two children, extravagance and fortune seeking.

He Charges Neglect.

The comedian of the films pictured himself as a hard-working, faithful, loving and indulgent husband and father. His complaint represented his 19-year-old wife as neglecting their home and children for parties and excessive liquor drinking with young men and as defiant to his wishes as to her conduct.

Chaplin declared his wife had demanded $1,125,000 of him and not merely the half of their community property to which she was entitled. He declared the community property amounted to but $266,000 and this and separate property to $1,125,000. He declared his wife unfit to have the care and support of their children, asked the court to deny her decree for divorce and to grant to him instead the divorce and custody of their two children, Charles Spencer, Jr., and Sidney Earle, aged about 2 and 1, respectively.

Chaplin pictured himself as a loving, indulgent husband, and Mrs. Chaplin a cold and extravagant wife.

Denies Actress Affair.

The movie actor and producer denied that he had ever spent a great part of his time since he was married with motion picture actresses or any other women, either publicly or privately.

Directors of Wichita Club Approve Plans For Membership Campaign

Directors of the Wichita club, meeting Thursday night, approved plans for a membership campaign to open at once. Arthur C. Rayzor was named chairman of the membership committee, and will receive applications of those desiring to join the club.

With the completion of new quarters for the club on the top two floors of the building, the Wichita club will be housed in a plant as fine as any in the south, according to officials of the organization.

Dorothy Dix Highest Paid Woman Writer, A Daily Woman's Page Feature

Many of Women's Ills Due Only To Imagination, Says Dorothy Dix

"Woman Can Literally Think Herself Into—or Out of—Misery—So Why Doesn't She Put Wet Compresses on Her Imagination When She Feels It Swelling and Getting Feverish?" Asks Dorothy Dix.

The thing that ails most of the unhappy and disgruntled women you know is inflamation of the imagination.

It is a chronic complaint, and alas! incurable, for the only specific for it is common sense, applied in large and frequent doses. And this is a home remedy that they never keep upon their shelves. This makes the cases of these ladies very sad, for their sufferings are just as great as if they existed in reality instead of being merely hallucinations that they conjured up to torture themselves with.

"As a man thinketh, so is he," said the sage. This goes double for women. The actual world, the real conditions of her life, the environment in which she is situated, have little to do with a woman's happiness. That depends almost exclusively upon her mental attitude, upon what she thinks. She can literally think herself into anything. And she has a perfect genius for thinking herself into misery.

As an example of this, take the successful business or professional woman. She has spent years of study and thousands of dollars of money developing her talent in some particular line. She is doing the work she elected to do, the work she is interested in doing. She has made good in her job. She earns enough money to make her comfortable, and for a time she is happy and contented.

Then suddenly, without any reason whatever, she is taken with an acute attack of inflamation of the imagination. She sees her lot as one absolutely desolate and forlorn, without a ray of sunshine in it because she isn't married, and she beholds the fate of the married woman as one of supernatural bliss, without a cloud upon its horizon.

She begins to pity herself because she has not a husband and sheds barrels of tears over being childless. She pictures all husbands as God-like beings, without nerves or temper or moods, who spend their time doing beautiful, chivalrous things for their wives and paying them gorgeous compliments. And to her feverish fancy all children are cherubs with golden curls and clean, white frocks, who do nothing but smile angelically and do cute little parlor tricks.

And because she has missed getting the kind of a husband and the sort of children that never existed outside of a story book, the business woman is perfectly miserable and gets no pleasure out of the goods the gods have vouchsafed her.

It isn't because she's in love or there is any particular man she wants as a husband or any special child that she craves. It's just that she is the victim of her inflamed imagination.

Most likely she wouldn't swap off her good job for any makeshift husband or any spoilt brat that she knows. What she wants is some imaginary thing over which she has worked herself up into a frenzy.

And there is the case of the married woman who goes out of her way to hunt for trouble by deliberately thinking herself out of love with her husband and into love with some other man.

She is married to a perfectly good man, who is kind and generous to her and works like a dray horse to support her in comfort.

All goes well until some fine day her imagination begins to develop a temperature. Maybe it's over some old sweetheart that she would not marry when she had a chance. She preferred her husband to him then and thought him a commonplace chap that she couldn't see at any price. But now she begins to invest him with every charm and virtue and to be sure that he was her real soul mate instead of the man to whom she is married.

Or, perhaps, the lay figure she dresses up in her romantic dreams is some stranger she meets, or even one whom she does not meet at all, for he is just as likely to be a screen star or an actor or a football player or baseball champion as he is to be a friend's husband or the man who takes her in to dinner.

It doesn't matter about the man. All she needs is somebody she can brood over in her thoughts and believes herself in love with, and contrast her husband with invidiously until she can make herself utterly miserable and actually come to feel that she is being persecuted by the good, honest man who laps her in luxury and gives her time to indulge her idle fancies about other men.

The most tragic thing that can happen to any wife is for her to care more for some other man than she does for her husband. There is heartbreak in that. There is generally scandal and divorce and a broken-up home in it. Every woman knows that. Yet, in spite of this knowledge of what the consequences will be to themselves and to others, women encourage themselves in nourishing the thought that they are in love with other men and in feeding the flames of these illicit romances until finally they are consumed by their own imagination.

There is hardly a woman who couldn't have kept herself from falling out of love with her husband if she had only had the nerve to put wet compresses on her imagination as soon as she began to feel it swelling and getting feverish.

But perhaps the most wonderful and amazing illustration we are ever privileged to see of the effect that a woman's inflamed imagination can have upon her is the spectacle we so often behold of one making herself miserable over the loss of a worthless husband who made her life wretched when he was with her.

All of us know cases of men who have abused and mistreated their wives in every way, who were grouchy and grumpy and disagreeable at home, who did not even support their families decently.

Yet instead of rejoicing that they were freed of their burdens and striking upon the cymbals with joy when these good-for-nothing husbands deserted them for some other woman, these wives clothed themselves in sackcloth and ashes and spent the remainder of their days beating upon their breasts, bemoaning their sorrows. And no one could convince them that their suffering was entirely imaginary.

Verily a great and wonderful thing is the feminine imagination and beyond all finite understanding.

DOROTHY DIX.

DON'T INTERRUPT.

PHILADELPHIA.—Mrs. Margaret Lytle, of Darby, one of the six women picked out by the tax collector for arrest because of refusal to be taxed, has once more scored a triumph over the tax collector. The deputy tax collector, armed with a commitment, knocked at Mrs. Lytle's door and politely said: "I am the tax collector." "So I perceive," said Mrs. Lytle, and slammed the door. The rest of the conversation ensued through an open window, and was to the effect that Mrs. Lytle was doing her annual spring cleaning, and simply could not be bothered with taxes and tax collectors. Sadly the deputy of the law departed, muttering to himself, "Well, what could I do with a woman like that."

MODISH MITZI — Not Open to Mitzi — By JAY V. JAY

"What will they wear for fall?" that's what Mitzi wants to know. It's a long way ahead. But will the cape she now wears with the fitted shoulder line be still in fashion then? Will the close fitting felts be good? Will the lady who is wearing the dress with tiers of fagoting still look upon it as being one of her smartest dresses? There is a way of knowing all this, for right now the famous French dressmakers are deciding these things. They are introducing styles at "the openings" which are, so Mitzi discovers, not open to her.

The openings are only for those who are "in the know" of fashion and who are themselves presenting it to the world. If Mitzi could only be smuggled in. Not even the most influential friend of hers can open the door. She's out—left quite outside—unless she can think of some way to whisk herself through the portals. How? One would think that her ensemble suit, with its blouse and coat lining matching would content her with fashions for the moment. But now Mitzi must know more. She will, watch her and see!

Tomorrow—Dresses.

Woman's Day Of Work and Play

Here's the modern version of the popular story of Old Mother Hubbard. The plot is the same but time works miracles. The old shoe has given way to a spacious settlement house with a real gymnasium. And Old Mother Hubbard—Why bless her! She knows just what to do!

Miss Mary Hayes, in charge of the Weinman club of the League of Catholic women of Detroit is the foster mother to hundreds of boys and girls. The business of being a foster mother starts early in the day. At 8 a. m. children of pre-school age and babies whose mothers must work away from home are brought to her "shoe" to be taken care of. Miss Hayes takes them all in. Under the direction of trained social workers they dramatize such nursery classics as "The Three Bears," "Babes in the Woods" and "Little Red Riding Hood." The morning, spent in this manner, quickly passes and at noon the children are given a luncheon of cocoa and graham crackers.

Then in the afternoon the little children play and the older boys and girls are given instruction in manual training, and domestic science with basketball as a relaxation for both.

Quite a jolly program, we'd say. Makes us all wish to be kids again.

Record Broad Jump.

Eureka! Eureka!

The cry goes up and in this instance the word has a double meaning. It means "found" a new champion in the girls' running broad jump, and it is also the name of the town in which it happened.

In Eureka, Calif., in a recent field meet, Miss Ella Cartwright, Humbolt State Teachers' college student, jumped 17 feet 4 inches in the running broad jump. She won the event from the men students of the college and bettered the national mark for women by four inches.

Miss Cartwright won the 50-yard dash for women in the National A. A. U. track and field championships last year.

Musician.

The Countess Tomasetti, wife of the former Italian minister to Poland, has just written an operetta which will be performed in Rome before long.

Interest is aroused in this instance as the Countess Tomasetti's talent in this sphere was quite unknown before the secret leaked out that her work would be given by Guido Riccioli, who excells in light opera and musical comedy productions.

After the initial opening in Rome the opus will tour France, Britain and America. We will have the opportunity of judging the operetta for ourselves, a real opportunity since countesses who write are novel experiences in most of our lives.

An Uncrowned King

CAPTAIN Charles Lindbergh is an uncrowned king for the present at least. He is the king of the air. He has received decorations of the great nations of Europe—which men have given their lives to win and then lost. He has been received by the crowned and the uncrowned heads. Patrician and proletarian alike have pelted him with flowers. He has received offers sufficient from showmen to make him a millionaire in a year. His name is known in every peasant home in Europe as well as in the palaces of royalty and the counting rooms of gold potentates of civilization.

He is only 25. He has won a place which is the highest niche in the temple of fame. He has rejected all offers of a financial nature. He has never lost his head. He is as modest as a school girl. He has not been baffled or puzzled or made chesty by the place which he has won in the hearts of the people of the world.

Modesty linked with courage makes a magnificent combination. Captain Lindbergh was a flier in Texas. He received many valuable lessons in flying in Texas. He should come, and no doubt will, to Texas on his triumphal tour of the United States. Then he will be given a Texas welcome. There is nothing like it under the skies of any nation.

A Twentieth Century Philosopher

ARTHUR BRISBANE is a twentieth century philosopher. He is the king of the short paragraph. His paragraphs make men think. When men begin to think, think for themselves, they win the gift of understanding. This is the latest from the pen of Brisbane.

"Statistics show that nearly 2,000,000,000 human beings of various kinds of colors, live on this earth—a little more than 1,900,000,000. Many have troubles, some are fighting, some worry about death, but on the whole they are better off than ever before in history and there are more of them now."

Arthur Brisbane has been a student since early boyhood. He has read everything, all the ancient writings as well as the modern, that enrich the mind of the student. He has traveled widely. He has been a keen as well as a close observer. He sees and then he knows. He told a lot of truth in his paragraph.

Witt and His Bill

SENATOR EDGAR WITT of McLennan county sent his free textbook bill over the top in the upper house by a vote of 20 to 10. This measure provides that each county shall purchase what textbooks it needs instead of the present buying and shipping the books to the county. Incidentally the Witt bill passed the senate at the regular session but died on a house calendar. Incidentally too, it incurred the hostility of Senator Thomas B. Love of Dallas and two senators from the west. They were beaten by a 2 to 1 vote. According to its author, county and city superintendents over the state favor the measure as one tending toward economy. Now just why shouldn't economy be practiced in buying textbooks for the children of Texas?

Kirby and Civil Service

REPRESENTATIVE John H. Kirby of Harris county "fails to find any merit in proposed civil service for state employes." Col. Kirby is a large employer of labor. He applies the acid test to applicants for position on his payroll. They must make the grade or their names do not appear on his payroll of workers. Every successful business man follows the Kirby plan. A successful business man does not attempt to place square pegs in round holes. Call it competitive examination or what you will, the man or woman who works for a private corporation must be qualified to fill the job or go elsewhere to earn bread. If it is good for the captain of industry, why isn't it good for the stockholders in a commonwealth?

Another Important Decision

PROFITS made from oil taken from oil properties must be considered in computing gain or loss for federal taxing purposes and depletion allowances, according to a recent decision handed down by the Supreme Court of the United States. This is another fly in the ointment of the oil producer.

This Is Texas

PECAN growers of the San Saba country state that a fine crop is in prospect. There is no insect interference. Farmers in the same section say that alfalfa and burr clover are dividend makers. They are including more sheep and more hogs in their program, and the berry growers are prosperous as well as enthusiastic.

One grower realized $300 from less than an acre of dewberries. As for the peach and pear and plum orchardists of the section, they say that fruit of all kinds will be plentiful and prices promise to be excellent.

Cotton is not the only money crop that is grown under Texas skies and when there is a bumper crop of cotton it is a staple that must be sold away below the cost of production.

Flowers For Colleen

COLLEEN MOORE, queen of the films, paid $1000 for her seat at a benefit performance in Hollywood for the flood sufferers of the Mississippi river valley. Colleen Moore in her girlhood lived in New Orleans. She did not forget. It is well while critics and cranks are railing at the movies and movie stars to remember the generous deeds and the warm impulses of the people of Movieland. There are no misers among them; there are no hypocrites among them; their ears are never deaf when the wail of the stricken is heard in the land. Flowers for Colleen.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK, June 2. (EFS)—The afternoon Lindbergh was due to arrive in Paris thousands of persons were grouped outside a newspaper office in Times Square. Bulletins were slow and the watchers contented themselves with discussing various phases of the flight. There existed widely varying opinion with respect to the difference of time between New York and the French capital. The prevailing impression was that three hours was the breach. Some said five, and a few thought eight. One woman insisted that 36 hours was the exact difference, and said she could prove it by the afternoon paper in which she had read it. She left to purchase a paper and was not seen thereafter.

"Able's Irish Rose" is about to wither.

On May 23, "America's favorite comedy" entered the sixth year of its existence and coincidentally found its way into Joe Leblang's cut-rate ticket agency.

When Broadway announces that a show has been Leblanged, it means the end is in sight.

In the case of "Able," however, the tradition was upset. Shortly after the show opened, in 1922, it looked as if the production would be a failure. Mr. Leblang was hastily notified, and preparations were begun for the obsequies. Then something happened. What it was no one has ever been able to find out. Business picked up and Leblang stepped aside. But so far as old-timers on Broadway can recall it is the only show that has been in and out of Leblang's clutches in the course of a continuous run.

If the play lasts until early July it will hang up a new world's record for a continuous run, passing the mark of 2238 set by the London production of "Chu Chin Chow."

There is more nonsense peddled by "Special writers" about New York's night clubs than any other feature of the city's life.

The night club is a retreat where a jaded gentleman in quest of a "thrill" may, for a consideration out of all proportion to the return, traffic in bootleg affection and phoney hooch while his sensibilities are lulled by delirium tremens music termed "jazz."

It is the haunt of the hopeless, the rendezvous of the roustabout, the roost of the out-of-town "sucker" with more money than brains, and of the native single gentleman and his current wife.

It is also the haunt of the latest manifestation of the breed known as "columnists,"—young men with puffy eyes and a dimmed vision who tout the proprietors daily in their papers, for a "consideration," and think they're seeing life.

The average New York night club is the equivalent of the old-time "joint," the name of which, for some reason or other, is not supposed to be used in polite society.

The consumption of soda water in New York is tremendous. Broadway, as Doc Somebody remarked the other day, may spend more for orange drink, pineapple juice and ginger ale than it does for education, but the coin thus released in circulation infiltrates into numerous branches of business and keeps the wheels of the old machine whirring.

A drug store on one of the busiest of New York's corners pays a yearly rental equal to a king's ransom; and the rent is earned by six soda fountains that sizzle and fizz in a daily 16-hour staccato.

And the only place left on Fifth avenue where ice cream soda can still be purchased for 10 cents is at Brother Woolworth's Nickel and Dime Conservatory.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

Both Anne Tracy and Mr. Jones, who is the Tracys' milkman, object to the engagement of Phillip Wynne Tracy IV and Natlee Jones.

Phillip's mother plans to interest her son in other girls and decides to give him a party. She tells him about the impending visit of her old friend, Mrs. Hilliard, and unconsciously arouses his interest in the woman. He goes to the depot to meet her and takes her to luncheon. Shortly he finds he has fallen in love at first sight and wishes Natlee were not coming to the party.

After their first kiss, Phillip only lives to be near Lyra.

At the party Natlee overhears Phillip making love to Mrs. Hilliard and breaks her engagement. She refuses to be even friends and tells Rodney Maxwell all about it. Rodney comforts Natlee by telling her that he loves her and will smash Phil's face, but she begs him to forgive Phil and stay friends with him through everything.

On a midnight ride Lyra confesses her love for Phillip.

The next day Phillip tells his mother that he is not going to college and sends Lyra a very passionate love poem which his mother finds. Lyra and Mrs. Tracy have it out. Lyra tells Anne she is not too old for romance. The whole affair, however, sinks into nothingness because war is declared.

Here the story further unfolds—

CHAPTER XX

PHILLIP KEEPS UP THE TRADITION

It did not strike Anne Tracy that she was sacrilegious in her prayer. She was only a very human mother with human impulses.

The impulse first to save her boy from the devastating wiles of a woman who would make his life a living hell — and second — to in some way make the war god think it was to him she was giving her only son that he might set her boy apart and bid death to pass him by.

Her head was pounding — she could not breathe—but at last, in a torrent of sobs and tears she confessed to herself that she would rather know that Phillip was dead out there on the fields of France than realize that when asked to choose between her and Lyra he would choose Lyra.

She lifted her head. Above the ominous noise of already war-crazed men a young voice was raised high over the crowd.

"Rod—oh, Rod—come on—you know we promised to sign up together."

"All right, Wynne—I am with you."

Anne Tracy rushed to the window and looked out on the street. Through the gate of the house next door came the stolid form of Rodney Maxwell.

As he reached the car and swung himself in beside the boy at the wheel, he threw his arm around Phil's shoulder.

"All right, Buddy," he said, "let's go."

Sharply the shining blue roadster turned and drove away.

Anne Tracy drew back quickly as the dread thought struck her. She had not for a moment thought that Phillip would enlist without first telling her.

She rushed back to the window and threw it up, calling "Phillip! Phillip!"

He did not hear her, for with honking horn and open cut-out he was racing down the street to the first recruiting station.

When she realized that he had forgotten her—that even now her anguish meant nothing to him, she felt her breath come faint.

Some time afterward her faithful Nonnie found her underneath the open window prone on the floor.

Lyra Hilliard, from her window, had witnessed the little drama and her heart also missed a beat as she realized that she, too, was forgotten in this great thrill that made Phillip Wynne Tracy IV look the very image of the American soldier as standing straight up in the roadster, his uncovered head bared to the breeze that lifted his dark brown hair, he drove down the avenue shouting "Come on, boys—come on! America is at last going in, and we have to follow the flag!"

War propaganda — thrilling appeals to one's patriotism and the intimation that only those who were yellow would stay behind.

As usual, it was Phillip who impulsively and unthinkingly forged ahead through the ruck of men milling about the street, cheering, laughing, triumphant.

It was only within the closed doors of homes all over the land that white, tearless women moved unheeding of the country's jubilee.

Across the road from the Jones house a little figure was pressed against the old elm tree. So closely did the girl hug its rugged trunk that in her gray coat she looked like a part of it.

Her arms outstretched above her head was clutching, tearing at its bark.

Every few minutes a sharp exclamation would perhaps call the attention of some one of the excited passers-by, but even he would handily notice that it was the girl clinging to the tree in anguish who spoke.

"Why doesn't Rod come?" It was very significant that even in this terrible crisis Natlee Jones was depending upon Rod and not upon Phillip.

Natlee knew that the excitement and thrill of declared war had brushed every other thought out of Phillip's mind. But she also was sure that Rod would remember her—he would not leave her for long without some word.

It seemed hours, but in reality the time was very short, before Rod was gently taking Natlee's arms down from above her head against the tree.

Then she burst into wild, dry sobs that sook her whole frame.

"Rod—Phillip's going?"

The very way she put her question showed that she expected no other answer than the bowing head which told her yes. "We are both going, Natlee."

With the unconscious cruelty of a woman who is passionately in love with one man and knows that the other is in love with her, she exclaimed: "Oh, I am so glad."

For a moment the man beside her grew white and leaned against the tree.

Natlee hurried on: "I was going to ask you, Rod, dear, to go with Phillip, but I was afraid that you still might be angry with him. I might have known that like the good friend you are, you would have thought of nothing except to be with him when danger came.

"You will take care of him, will you not? You kow how thoughtless and impulsive he is. He would would run into danger for the sheer thrill of it. But you will be with him, Rod, and now I know that he will be as safe as any one could be in that awful hell.

"Rod, you are so good to me."

Rodney wondered grimly if she realized what she was doing to him. For a moment he was quite contemptuous of his weakness, for he had no illusions. Natlee Jones had sacrificed him all his life for Wynne and now she was sending him probably to his death without a qualm because she thought he might save her lover from casual danger.

Then another thought struck her. "Why, it never occurred to me that neither Phil nor you are old enough to go. How did you get in, Rod?" Natlee asked a gleam of new courage coming into her eyes. "I hope you did not lie about your ages."

"No—Wynne is going to get his mother's consent."

"She will not give it. Surely Rod, she cannot give it. Why, Phillip is her only child.'

"Wynne thinks she will consent, for she knows he is the only one in the family that can keep up that tradition that whenever the American flag goes into battle there will be a Tracy following it."

"I don't believe that will make any difference with her." Then, as an afterthought: "What about you, Rod. Why, you, yourself, are only a little over 17.

"Oh, I have no one to ask. You know, Natlee, that in my house there is no one but an old housekeeper who will not care whether I go or stay, and my guardian will give his consent if I ask it. Yes, I am slated for France, for the only person in the world who might hav person in the world who might have said 'stay' has said, "Oh, I am so glad you are going."

For the first time in her life Natlee Jones heard a bitter note in Rodney Maxwell's voice.

Immediately her heart was filled with self-reproach. "Rod, dear, you know that I did not think of what I was saying. You know in my selfishness I was only thinking of Wynne over there all alone and knowing that I would gladly go with him and share his hardships and danger if I could. I thought of you as myself, dear, willing to do the same.

"But I am sure that all our worrying is needless. I am certain that Mrs. Tracy will not give her consent to Wynne's enlisting. I am going over there to have her tell me that and then I'll go down to your guardian's office and post him so that he will withhold his consent to your going."

"I would rather you would not do that, Natlee, for whether Wyne goes or not, I am going."

Natlee threw her arms around Rod's neck and burst into a torrent of tears. "Dear, dear, Rod—have I hurt you beyond healing?"

For answer Rodney Maxwell's cheek was laid caressingly on her pale gold hair.

When he reached his home Phillip expected to see Lyra immediately. Instead, he was handed a note which he knew was from her.

At the same time his mother called, "Come here to my room, my son."

He didn't know what to do. He knew that Lyra had given that letter to the maid to be given to him before he saw his mother and yet, of course, his mother expected him to go to her immediately.

Finally he hastily thrust the letter into his pocket and turned to his mother' sroom.

"Mother, I have joined the army."

He hurried forward to catch her, for he was afraid she was going to fall. But the feel of his arms about her seemed to strengthen her. He gently seated her in an easy chair and knelt at her side, both arms still around her waist.

"Oh, I can't let you go, Phil—I can't let you go. What made you think that your mother could send you away to die"

"Do you mean that you will not give your consent, Mother?"

"I thought I could, Son, when I heard that war was declared this morning, but now I find I can't do it. While you might not die but once, I would die a thousand times."

"But, Mother, my father came back from the Spanish war and my grandfather came back from the war between the North and the South.

"Under the circumstances, it is up to me."

(TO BE CONTINUED)

FLOOD BUILDS GIGANTIC LAKE

Vast Area In Louisiana Still Under Water

NEW ORLEANS, June 2 (AP).—Having engulfed approximately 10,000 square miles, or two-thirds of the alluvial lands of Louisiana as it streamed from more than a dozen crevasses, the unprecedented Mississippi valley flood slowly drained into the Gulf of Mexico tonight with falling stages everywhere except in the south portion.

In the central part of the Mississippi river, however, high water again was threatened and at Cairo, Ill., the weather bureau predicted 47 feet, two feet above flood stage, by Sunday. At New Madrid, Mo., which suffered severely a month ago, new dykes were being thrown up in anticipation of more high water.

A lake more than 225 miles long and ranging from 50 to 100 miles wide, lies over the lowlands along the west side of the Mississippi river and through the level basin of the Atchafalaya river.

As ridges of land emerged from the flood with recession of waters to the north another great exodus was about to begin. Joyful refugees, glad that they can go back to the homes from which they were driven by the racing waters, prepared to set sail on the receding sea to be in their houses and ready to plant crops as quickly as they can get into the fields.

Twenty parishes were involved in the sweep of the flood through Louisiana and thousands of acres went under water where floods had never been known within memory of the inhabitants.

Ford Denies That He Has Hired Lindbergh

DEROIT, June 2 (AP).—Reports that Capt. Charles Lindbergh had been offered a place with the aircraft division of the Ford Motor company were characterized as a fabrication by Henry Ford in a statement issued here tonight.

The statement follows: "The report that we have made an offer to Captain Lindbergh is entirely without foundation. In fact, we have never considered doing anything of the kind."

STEERS KNOCK SPUD CURVES

Three Twirlers Unable To Halt Trinity Cows

The Dallas Steers took last game of the three-game series with the Spudders 13 to 3 when Kiefer, Kallina and Cobb proved ineffective, while Russell Pence, Steer righthander, was pitching air-tight ball with men on bases. Kiefer started off like he was right by setting the Steers down in a row for the first three innings, but in the fourth Dallas chased three runs across when the first five men up hit safely.

The Steers batted around in the eighth when five runs crossed the plate on three hits, four bases on balls and two errors by the outfield.

Jenkins looked like the "Dynamite" of old with two doubles and a single out of four times up, while "Bing" Miller was hitting three singles for the Steers.

After Tobin had grounded out to start the third, Kiefer doubled to left, LaFayette walked and Mann singled to center, scoring Kiefer to put the Spudders one run in front. The Spudders scored again in the fifth on a base on balls, and two singles. Their final run coming in the seventh on Kallina's single through second and Fitzgerald's single after two outs.

Shreveport opens a three-day stand here Friday against the hopefuls in which a double-header is likely to be given the fans on Sunday. Estell is the Spudder most likely starter Friday against the Sports.

Fisherman Captures Squirrel With Hook

SAN ANGELO, June 2 (AP).—C. R. Hallmark, cashier of the First National bank here, entered a new hall of fame when he caught a squirrel with a dowegiac. The denizens of the tree lined banks of the Concho and was disturbing the fish with their chatter and Hallmark retaliated by heaving the bait at them. His first cast missed by inches, and the second sank into the back of the furry animal, which took all the line in a mad scamper to the top of the tree, from which point the fisherman dragged him in.

Detroit Draws Blank In Close Contest

NEW YORK, June 2 (AP).—The Yankees played snappy ball behind Dutch Ruether's great pitching and shut out the Detroit Tigers here today, 2 to 0. Reuther yielded only two hits. Stoner also pitched well for the Tigers, but New York managed to bunch four of its eight hits in the fifth and sixth innings for two runs. Stoner suffered his first defeat of the season. Score:

Chautauqua Program Dated At Iowa Park

HIGH SPOTS of BASEBALL

There is no standard price for ball players.

A ball player is like a work of art.

The price of a work of art depends on how much you like it.

The price of a ball player depends on how much you need him.

A team weak in pitching would pay five times as much for a certain pitcher as a team with a strong pitching staff.

Or, a team that is weak at first would pay a fabulous sum for a good first baseman who would be passed by elsewhere.

* * *

This calculation enters into many of the published prices paid for players.

Most of the player deals, in fact practically all of them, involve a cash consideration and players.

We will suppose that a major league team wants an outfielder from a minor league team.

The minor league team will let the outfielder go for $20,000 and a pitcher and shortstop.

The major league team meets the demand. It pays the minor league club $20,000 in cash and turns over a pitcher and a shortstop.

In computing the cost of the outfielder, the major league club places a value of say, $15,000 on the pitcher and $10,000 on the shortstop. Then it announces the price paid for the outfielder as $45,000.

* * *

While only $20,000 cash went out in this transaction some allowance must be made for the pitcher and the shortstop. That is where the difference comes in.

If you are a major league club owner you will soon discover that a minor league club is more desirous to secure playing talent than cash. There are reasons for this. The minor league club must keep up its roster. It must fill in. Also, if it secures full title to the players sent out by the major league team then, in a year or so, the player may develop sufficiently to be sold back to the majors. This has happened a number of times.

The price of ball players, or the value of individuals, depends on supply and demand. There is no set figure.

COUNT WILL WRESTLE HERE

Russian Will Meet Link Decker Of Britain

THE CARD

Count Zarynoff, Russia, versus Link Decker, British Columbia. Heavyweights, two falls to a finish.

Silvio Checco, navy welter champ, versus Billy Bain, San Antonio. One fall to a finish.

Young Harris, Megargel, versus Buster Badgett, Wichita Falls. Middleweights, 10 minutes limit.

Howard Jeffery, Lawton, versus Jess Lowrance, Wichita Falls. Middleweights, 10 minutes limit.

Place: Ross Stadium.

Time: 8:15 Friday night.

All the participants of tonight's wrestling melees carded at the Ross stadium on Indiana between Eleventh and Tenth streets, were announced as on hand and ready for the starter's word.

Zarynoff took a light workout and swim yesterday as tapering off exercises while Decker indulged in a comparatively short cross country run and a series of setting up exercises. Both big fellows appear to be in the best of condition and prepared to make a stiff battle of it tonight.

Silvio Checco, the sturdy Italian, has been substituted for Yaqui Joe who is wrestling elsewhere tonight. The Indian originally was billed with Bain Tuesday but was rained out. He was unable to meet the new arrangement.

All four preliminary boys were said to be primed for action.

Interest, of course, centers on the acrobatic Zarynoff and his clash with Decker, the scissors exponent who will weigh within a pound or so of Zarynoff's heft. After the way Zarynoff ran rings around the massive Schikat here last week until spilled on his head accidently and knocked out, fandom's curiosity is aroused as to what he might do against a speedier man close to his own weight.

FOLLY'S DAUGHTER

By ANN LISLE

Jill Hides Her Large Tip from Her Guardian

By Ann Lisle.

"WHAT'S the thing you keep always remembering?" Tony Savelli asked, letting himself swing a little closer to Jill as the taxi careened about the darkest roads the astute driver could pick out in in Central Park.

ANN LISLE

"I've never told anyone," she said doubtfully and yet with the beginnings of confidence.

"You could tell me. I'm your friend."

Slam! Jill found she had gone inside herself suddenly and shut the door after her. "I don't care to talk about it, thank you."

Tony felt her slipping away again. A sly one, this Jill. He'd give her time to get set again. He lighted a cigarette and devoted himself to it.

Jill sat boiling with resentment because Tony had called himself her friend. He was the second man who had used the word tonight. It had sounded wonderful on MacNeil Shannon's lips. Jill had no idea that a poet had pronounced it akin to love.

"Why are you so bashful—so shy, honey?" Tony asked at last. "Anybody do you dirt? Don't have to give me a pleasant word, but I'm for you and if there is anybody that ever tried any funny business with you, all you got to do is tell Tony Savelli his name and I'll carve his heart out."

Jill laughed. Tony didn't know why, but he laughed too. That seemed to restore the entente cordiale and he ventured again:

"If you knew what a lot of good it did me to ride around in the clean air with a nice girl who doesn't try to vamp me, you'd do this often. I'm sometimes so darn lonely I could yell. Would you believe that, little Jill?"

"You lonely too?" she asked.

Tony grinned at space. He had found the right tack.

"All of us need the right kind of pals. I'm not keen to have women think I'm a temperamental musician and a great lover and all that tripe. I like somebody I can talk to. Just the way you and all the other regular folks do. Don't do anybody too much good to shut all their thinks up inside of theirselves."

"No, it doesn't. It makes you go round and round," Jill acknowledged.

"Sure. Like a merry-go-round. Dizzy-like. You need someone you can spill things to. And of course, Folly is so busy she can't find the time to listen to that thing you've puzzled about so much you can't think straight any more."

"It isn't anything I think," Jill corrected. "It is something I dream. Sort of day-dream. It comes sometimes when I'm not expecting it at all."

"Come tonight?"

"Yes."

"When you saw the lady you look so much like?" he asked sympathetically.

"How did you know?" she gasped.

"Oh—I speak your language. I look like a city fellow, but I'm a simple country boy at heart. I dream too. I'll tell you some day. Tonight you tell me."

And then the barriers went down and Jill told him her dream.

She was in a big room, like a nursery. And she climbed up on a window seat and looked out.

There was a boy in the garden. He looked like Beppo. But Conchetta was never there. And the boy was cutting roses. There was a pretty lady strolling about. She looked like Folly. Then a gentleman came. And a tall lady ran after him. She couldn't see their faces. Then there was always a lot of noise and screaming and the boy from the garden burst into the nursery and dragged her away from the window and put her in a big closet. He had a big rose bush in his hand with the roots dragging and making the floor all red—

"Black you mean, with mud," Tony corrected.

"It's a dream. It's mixed up," Jill told him. "The floor is always red. And then a policeman comes and Beppo cries very hard and I wake up."

"Do you dream it awake and asleep?" Tony asked.

"Yes."

"And you never see the faces of anybody but the ones you call Folly and Beppo."

Jill hesitated. Then she spoke sturdily. "Never."

She wouldn't tell Tony Savelli that strangely enough when she saw the lovely lady at Beppo's tonight, she felt at once that this was the tall one of the dream—the one who ran after the gentleman she could never see. And Tony knew that she had withheld something from him. He sat still for a moment struggling with his desire to seize Jill in his arms, to cover her face with kisses, to drink in her sweetness. But he restrained himself. He must gain her friendship first. There was a lot more to win that way.

So Tony Savelli took his little sleeping beauty home unawakened.

And Jill, hesitating at the door of the shabby hotel room she shared with her "guardian," Folly Duane, shed Tony from her consciousness like a drop of water and went in to face her curt little guardian with the news that she had lost her job.

Folly was not there when at last Jill let herself into the room. And the place was in the wild disarray that Folly always left when she went out to keep one of the sudden dates that were coming her way less and less frequently of late. Jill put the place in order before she went to bed. And then she laid out all her clothes ready for use in the morning.

When everything was arranged and her prayers were said, she opened the handkerchief where the fifty-dollar bill and the card were hidden. She picked up her purse and counted her tips. Her takings for the day were only four dollars and ninety-five cents beside the fifty dollars. She kept two dimes and a dollar bill, which she tucked around the fifty and put carefully into the centre compartment of her bag. The three seventy-five she laid on the bureau, where Folly would find it on returning. Her purse she tucked in a corner of her top bureau drawer. The card she held to her cheek for a moment.

Her eyes were soft, her breath came in little gasps of daring and her lips curved in a tiny smile when at last she went over to her bed and tucked MacNeil Shannon's card under her pillow.

Then she turned out the lights and crept into bed. She slid her hand under the pillow, found the card, and with her fingers caressing it, Jill went to sleep.

To Be Continued.

Parisian Evening Frocks for Summer Dances

Republished by Special Arrangement with Good Housekeeping.

THE frock at the left above is typical of the new white chiffon evening dresses in that it depends for its effects on the cut of the fabric. Its lines are simple, yet most graceful.

In the oval is a frock of palest pink velvet. The skirt is flat at the back and draped toward the front, the drapery falling in a double flare below a long narrow pin of diamonds.

Red georgette with rhinestones and red strass in the buckle are the materials of the very smart gown at the right. Its chic, again, lies in the graceful cut of the lines.

General Laws of Hygiene Best Aid to Complexion

By Chas. A. L. Reed, M. D., Former President of the American Medical Association.

THERE is nothing more trying to a young woman, to any woman—yes, and men too—than a face covered with pimples. When these pimples develop a yellowish white core at the top, they are called acne, or white heads.

Where they develop a black cover at the top, they are called comedones, or blackheads.

To understand this condition, you must remember that the skin is equipped with a great number of little glands which secrete various fluids. The function of one set of these is to secrete sweat, and that of another set is to secrete the oily fluid which keeps the skin dry and supple. These latter are known as the sebaceous glands. If by any mishap these glands become blocked at their outlet, they are liable to be infected with a certain micro-organism which lives on the surface of the skin.

When the gland is first blocked a "blackhead" is formed, and when this becomes infected it turns into a small raised red spot, which is the sign of acne. Patches of acne occur where the sebaceous glands are most active, i. e. on the face, forehead, chest, and back.

The people most liable to it are those with a naturally oily skin and an over-secretion of this oily fluid.

Everyone tends naturally to have either a dry or an oily skin, but the activity of the glands depends not only on inherited constitution, but also on temporary conditions such as over-sensitivity of the nerves or nervous ailments caused by overwork, too much tobacco, and strong condiments.

The smaller pimples which come out on the skins even of people who are dry-skinned by nature are equally disfiguring. They are possibly more obstinate, since they do not clear themselves by discharging.

Because the oil secreting glands awake to a special activity at the appearance of the sexual functions, acne is particularly a trouble of young girls. It often causes them great distress and humiliation. It generally clears up when the girl or boy reaches a state of sexual balance. Common acne, although it is the most distressing of all the ailments called by this name, is actually the least serious. In these cases, the spots clear themselves by discharging and disappear without leaving any scars. It is the dry-skinned person who needs to be careful that the rash does not become permanent.

The over-activity of the sebaceous glands is directly due to nervous impulses. If these stimuli can be minimized, the secretion of the glands can be lessened.

When the spots appear, therefore, the patient should cut off all condiments, and, needless to say, all alcohol. He should considerably restrict his intake of fats, especially animal fats, which are most liable to excite the secretion. He must also avoid substances of which the products, when eliminated from the skin, form a favorable soil for microbes to multiply. These are jam; shellfish; highly flavored seafish; game; salted, preserved, and smoked meats; etc.

The best local remedy is sulphur, but since this is not easily absorbed, it is given in small frequent doses. Apart from its value in acne, it is an internal disinfectant. But sulphur and other ointments should be used only when and as prescribed by the doctor.

The patient can help himself best by attending to the general laws of hygiene, living a healthy life, keeping his bowels well opened, etc. The blackheads may be softened and removed by steaming the area over boiling water, and soft soap mixed with an equal quantity of oatmeal can with advantage be lathered into affected areas every night. The dry-skinned person does not need remedies which check his sebaceous secretion, but needs chiefly to cause the spots to discharge. This is best brought about by applying potash or soda soap and leaving it on as long as the skin can stand it, every day until the skin starts to peel.

You can see from these precautions how important it is for these cases to be under direct observation of a physician.

Our Rhyming OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

I DO not ask that I may understand the strange, inscrutable events of life; that I may grasp what Wisdom's self has planned or see the pattern under pain and strife. Too dim and weak, these mortal eyes of mine, to pierce a single thickness of that veil; too dull to trace the intricate design, before such mysteries their sight must fail. I do not seek to learn why right may seem to trail its splendid banners in the dust, while high aloft wrong's tawdry standards gleam; I would not know; I only ask to trust! I only ask for faith to see that good in some far, final judgment will prevail, and all these riddles, long misunderstood, at last be plain—for faith that cannot fail!

Childhood Training in Reliability

By L. Lamar Matthews.

MRS. Green hurried to the front door to give a parting order to Sam and Betty, who were going to spend the day with relatives.

"When you come back, Betty, be sure to bring the pattern that Cousin Myra borrowed. I want to cut out your new dress tomorrow."

L. LAMAR MATTHEWS

"Mother, please tell Sam to bring it," said the girl. "He is reliable and I'm not."

Mrs. Green laughed and called to Sam asking him to remember the pattern.

As far as the errand was concerned it made no difference which of the children performed it. But think of encouraging that attitude in irresponsible Betty. When she was a little tot she was careless and thoughtless. That was when she first began hearing her mother say, "You can't depend upon Betty. She is so forgetful."

Betty being of a butterfly nature, with tendencies to flit from one interest to another, found comfort in her mother's leniency.

It was always the brother, just two years older than Betty, who was required to bear the small burdens. And the requirements served to increase his sense of responsibility. He finally came to regard himself as the main dependence of his mother in household affairs.

The result was that he developed into a reliable, dependable boy who could be trusted to carry out assignments to the best of his ability. Furthermore, he learned to overcome or walk around or go over the small obstacles that came along to hinder his performance of duty.

The world is crying aloud for men and women who will shoulder responsibilities and faithfully perform the tasks that need to be done. Failing to meet an engagement or shirking a duty is not a crime in itself; but the practice of failure to comply with such promises is quite serious.

To be reliable is to become one of the pillars of business or a home or a community. Reliable men and women are the mainstays of any organization and the irresponsible ones are never very valuable, no matter how brilliant or charming or capable they may be.

When your child has carried out your instruction or request thank him as sincerely and as courteously as you would any other person. Let him know that you appreciate the fact that you can depend upon him. "I can rely upon my child. I never have to watch him. He is my right hand man and whatever he tells me that he will do, he always does," is the sort of praise that inspires him to continue his efficient efforts.

Drill into your child's soul this idea of being reliable. It means success or failure. It means strength of character or the lack of it. It means the esteem of his associates or the want of it. It can be cultivated and it is invaluable.

Tempting Warm Weather Dishes

By Hannah Wing.

CHILLED coffee dishes made from the left over breakfast coffee are delectable in warm weather, since they are both refreshing and slightly stimulating. An iced coffee shake may even be preferred to hot coffee for a breakfast drink on a hot, sultry morning.

For an individual glass place in a tall iced tea glass half a cup of very strong strained coffee and add sugar to taste, a pinch of ground cinnamon and a few drops of vanilla extract. Chill on the ice over night and in the morning fill the glass three-quarters full with chilled rich milk. Stir in half a cup of cracked ice and shake vigorously until it foams up. Top with a mound of sweetened whipped cream.

Iced coffee with orange is a novelty. To one quart of strong cold coffee add one cup of sweetened orange juice. Drop a tablespoonful of powdered ice in each glass and top with whipped cream.

Coffee desserts may be either frozen, moulded or chilled.

COFFEE WALNUT MOUSSE.

Whip one pint of chilled double cream solid with a pinch of salt and flavor with half a teaspoon of vanilla extract and strained coffee to taste. Sweeten with half a cup of powdered sugar and stir in one cup of crushed dried macaroon crumbs and half a cup of chopped black walnuts. Mix well and turn into a mould with a watertight cover. Bury in ice and rock salt for four hours. Serve with a chocolate or a thick maple sauce and dust each portion with grated cocoanut.

CAFE FRAPPE.

One egg white, ½ cup cold water, 1 quart boiling water, 1 cup sugar, ½ cup ground coffee.

Beat the white of the egg slightly and add the cold water and ground coffee. Place this in a coffee pot and pour over it the boiling water. Boil two minutes, then stand where it will infuse. After ten minutes strain, add sugar, cool and freeze. Serve in tall, thin glasses with whipped cream.

If a percolator is used make a quart of clear, black coffee.

When Manners Are Correct

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

General Social Helps

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

There are several questions that I should like to ask concerning manners when one is dining out. I am particularly anxious to make my table manners uncriticizable. Will you help me?

1. When there is a choice of a fork or a spoon, which is given the preference?

2. Is it ever permissible for one to eat chicken or a chop in the fingers?

3. When I am eating soup, how should I use my spoon?

4. When I am eating ice cream is it permissible to draw the spoon or ice cream fork from my mouth when all of the ice cream has not been eaten?

5. I have noticed when at dinner parties that some hostesses make a point of eating (or "making believe" that they are eating) until every guest has finished eating. Is this necessary? Does it not make the guest feel that he is holding up the table?

A DINER-OUT.

CONGRATULATIONS — high and deep and wide—on your splendid determination! Nothing will so classify you in the social world as your table manners. They are an infallible index to our social station and to our general ideals and understanding of what's what. Everyone of us should be especially careful of every detail of our manners at table. Thank you for letting me talk over your problems with you.

1. The fork is given the preference over the spoon, if there is a choice. The fork is the "grown-up" utensil, more mature, more indicative of sure manners. We should all develop, or crystallize, our fork-consciousness!

2. No—except when we are alone, if we wish. Chicken and chops are certainly in the classification of "moist" foods, and as such will, of course, soil our fingers and thereby soil our napkins, when we wipe our fingers on them. It is bad enough to take a piece of chicken in one's fingers, but it is worse, I think, to take a chop in one's fingers. And, let me add—for this sometimes confuses some people—the small paper decoration on the chop is for decoration only—it is not to be used as a handle!

3. When you eat soup dip the spoon away from you—as if you were sending it on a journey, not welcoming it back from one! Take the soup from the side of the spoon, never from the tip. Do not make any noise! Never, of course, blow on your soup. Take particular care not to fill the soup spoon—this causes more carelessness in eating soup than anything else. Fill the spoon from one-half to three-quarters full and be careful of the drops on the side—rest the spoon on the edge of the plate to let this drop into the plate.

4. No. This, to my mind, is one of the most disagreeable habits that one can have—and how many people we see doing it! Take, in the spoon, only enough ice cream for one mouthful—a small mouthful.

5. Yes, it is necessary for a hostess to eat—or to pretend that she is eating—until every guest has finished. Indeed, this is one of the most important things that she must do at her dinner party. If she does it unobtrusively—as she should—the guest will not notice that he is the last one eating. And accustomed hostesses get so expert in this final "nibbling" that even seasoned guests think that the hostess is enjoying hugely those last mouthfuls!

Fashion Fads and Fancies

By Mildred Ash

In Union Lies Strength—we have always been told, so in the union of a linen coat suit and a crepe de Chine blouse lies the strength of the fashion influence that combines two fabrics in creating one costume. Jacket costumes of linen jacket and skirt, the jacket having revers lined in the same shade of crepe de Chine as that of which the sleeveless overblouse is made, are very smart in polka-dotted linen with solid tone silk blouse, or in tone linen with printed jumper. Often a printed linen jacket is used with a linen skirt of solid color.

Shining by Day or Night—half-moon buckles of rhinestones or pearls are used at the side of the girdle or at the shoulder of daytime as well as evening frocks. These crescent-shaped ornaments are by far the most favorite type of jeweled dress ornaments.

None of Nun's Veiling—has been used in years, and yet the new transparent wool voile costumes, made over printed silk or taffeta foundations with band trimmings of the silk, remind one very vividly of the nun's veiling suits and dresses of long ago.

More ornamental Than Useful—are the buttons running down the side of the bodice of almost every sports frock, whether it be a one or a two-piece model. Closing at the side, many of these models have clasp fasteners, the row of attractive buttons marking this line being purely decorative.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

Don't Be Rash.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young married man of good standing and have a wonderful home. My wife and I had an argument last week. During the argument she called me a liar. This hurt me very much. I told her that if I am a liar she can go to her mother and need not stay with a liar.

I tried to forget what had happened the same evening and make up, but my wife would not listen. The next day she went to her mother's. Her parents came over to my parents' home and told things that never had happened. They took their daughter home with them, saying I would call for her soon. Two weeks have passed and we have not seen each other.

In the meantime I have made up my mind to break up my home and place the furniture in storage. Do you think I am right in doing so?

My wife's fault is that she tells every little thing that happens between us to her mother. Please advise what to do. I am intending to leave the state if she doesn't come home. M. E.

WHAT a pity to break up a "wonderful home" for what is, after all, a petty reason. Two sharp tempers, together with pride that hates to give in, balanced against a lifetime of happiness together.

I suggest that you have an affectionate, frank talk with your wife. Try to persuade her to return to you with a mutual pledge that you will see only the good in each other. Then do not quarrel, whatever her parents may say or do. She cannot quarrel with you unless you take an active share in the dispute. Do not break up your home except as a last desperate measure, if she absolutely refuses all efforts at reconciliation.

Keep Your Friends.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been keeping steady company with a young man for a few months and he has proposed marriage.

Without any reason or word, he stopped coming to call on me. He lives out of town.

Is it all right for a girl to go out with other young men when she is keeping company with a man, but isn't engaged to him?

BLUE EYES.

YES, Blue Eyes, it is perfectly all right, natural and wise, for a girl to go about with more than one young man until she becomes engaged.

"SILENT" PRODUCTION IS ESTIMATED AT 300,000 BARRELS

OIL IN SIGHT PROLONGS CUT

Many Big Wells Are Being Restricted

Asked when he believed the crude market would take a turn for the better and for the basis of his belief, a prominent Wichita Falls oil operator and one who is thoroughly familiar with the entire Mid-Continent field, replied simply:

"Not soon. There is too much oil in sight, besides that which is being produced."

Oil men now believe that the silent production of the restricted areas offer a problem which will be as hard to handle as the present oil flood in Seminole. The revival of the shut-in and shut-down districts when the oil industry gets back on its regular path will menace a prolonged period of stability, it is now believed.

This oil "in sight" seems to be a matter of growing concern throughout Texas and Oklahoma. In the Seminole field only is drilling and pumping taking most of the available oil as rapidly as possible, while in the Panhandle, West Texas and North Central Texas fields there is an indefinite amount of oil discovered which is being left in the ground, either by shutting in the wells drilled or by not drilling additional wells.

In Pecos county alone, where the remarkable Yates pool has been opened up, it is estimated that a total of 45,000 barrels of daily production is shut in, besides an unestimated amount which might be under the ground there.

Average production shut in among the Panhandle pools is placed at 30,000 barrels. North Central and North Texas are credited with having between 20,000 and 30,000 barrels shut in or undrilled.

300,000 Barrels Total

About 300,000 barrels of daily production are now shut in throughout Oklahoma, Texas, California and the Rocky Mountain state. In California, a number of shut-in wells were recently opened and failed to respond, which modifies the situation somewhat in that state, although it is yet estimated to have about 50,000 barrels of restricted output.

It is believed that the Seminole field could be made to produce about 15,000 barrels more daily than it is now making. There are a few other districts in Oklahoma where flow has been curtailed, and there are a comparatively few wells being held back in Kansas.

The oil "in sight," but not being produced in North Texas is confined generally to areas where drilling has been stopped until the crude situation is more clear. Young county, however, has a number of wells of the flowing type which are shut in.

Observers in the Panhandle say that much new territory has been added there within the past few months, although the production has not been materially boosted. This is evidence that Panhandle companies are really bearing down and cutting production.

And Now Tools Are In Watchorn Oil Test

Hard luck seems to be stalking the trail of the Watchorn Oil and Gas company in attempting to complete its No. 1, Williams Brothers, located in section 1, B. S. and F. survey of Jack county. No sooner had a lost bailer been successfully fished out than various other tools were lost in the hole. The test is now fishing and has made several heads but was swabbed out this week. Its depth is now 4530 feet.

No Oil Slump In West Texas Field, Says Mount

E. R. Mount has just returned from a week's tour of the oil fields west of San Angelo, covering practically every important area in the West Texas field. Mr. Mount declares that there is little evidence of a slump in activity in that district and that oil men refrain from estimating the potential output of the entire field. Mr. Mount made the journey on a mission for the Simms Oil company with which he is connected here.

Many Derricks Down Result Of High Wind

Between 50 and 100 derricks were blown down in the territory along Red river from Wilbarger county to a point east of Burkburnett in the windstorm of Wednesday night. The northwest field of Burkburnett was probably the hardest hit area, about 40 derricks being lost. Heavy loss was sustained on leases in Red river and southern Oklahoma.

HUMBLE PREPARES TO DRILL TEST IN WILBARGER

Humble Oil and Refining company is rigging up at a new wildcat location in Wilbarger county, being No. 1-A Castleberry about midway between the Rock Crossing and South Vernon fields. It is 490 feet west and 150 north of the southeast corner of section 67, block 14, H. & T. C. survey.

PURE'S EMBRY PICKS UP ITS SECOND OIL SAND.

Pure Oil company has picked up another oil sand in its No. 1 Embry, located just north of the Homer Chapman pool in northeast Cooke county. This test failed to pay off in the Hooser sand.

Foard Test Is Drilling Ahead

Important Wildcat Watched By Operators

With the eyes of the North Texas oil fraternity fastened upon it, the Roxana and Fain-McGaha No. 1 Matthews, located northeast of Crowell and south of Thalia, being in Foard county, was drilling ahead Thursday. This wildcat caught the attention of oil men Wednesday when it encountered a strong gas flow in a sand at 850 feet. Always looked upon as Foard county's best bet, it is now heralded as the discovery of an oil field in Foard county. Royalty negotiations are already under way by traders who want in on the ground floor, according to reports. The well is in section 3 of the G. C. & S. F. survey.

Burbank Fields Does 45,769 Barrels Past Week

TULSA, Okla., June 2.—The Burbank field of Osage and Kay counties, produced a total daily average of 45,769 barrels from 1998 wells, for the week ended Wednesday morning, June 1. The field proper, did 39,538 barrels of this amount, from 1807 barrels, while the Kay county extension did 6,221 barrels from 191 wells. This is an increase of three wells and 1321 barrels.

The Fairfax pool in 25-6, south of the Burbank field, made 993 barrels daily, from 20 wells, which is an increase of 30 barrels over the previous week.

As to the production of the Seminole field, there seems to be a variation of figures in the compiling of same. One of the large pipe line companies shows the total for the 24 hours ended yesterday morning, to be 351,820 barrels from 479 wells, while another shows a total of 363,329 barrels from 490 wells. One total representing a decrease compared with the previous day, while the latter shows a new peak for the field.

Atlantic Gets Second Producer In Fluhmann

Atlantic Oil Producing company is completing its second producer in the Fluhmann pool of Wilbarger county in No. 1-B Fluhman, located in the W. A. McKinney survey and a south offset to the Atlantic's first producer in the pool. The well has the sand at 1465-78 feet and is swabbing at an estimated rate of 100 barrels per day.

Woodson Extensioner Drills With Oil In Hole

R. W. Painter's No. 1 Donnell of southwest Young county, which is giving promise of opening up an eastern extension to the Woodson field of Throckmorton county, is drilling at 3900 feet, with 750 feet of oil in the hole. The well struck oil at 3804 feet. It is located in section 2371, T. E. & L. survey.

BRIDWELL AND HEYDRICK BELOW 1000 FT. IN COWAN.

Bridwell and Heydrick are drilling below 1000 feet in their No. 1 Cowan, located in block 59, Jefferson county school land of Archer county. The same interests have abandoned as a duster their No. 1 Crenshaw, near Belcherville in Montague county, which went to a depth of 3417 feet.

Borger Field Gas Well Casers Demand Greater Safety Measures

BORGER, June 2. (AP)—Three gas well fires in the Hutchinson county oil and gas field in the past few days, nine deathes, and several burned, have resulted in demands by casers that greater safety precautions be taken, and today many casers were refusing to work until their demands were met.

Two items the casers are demanding of contractors and oil companies are:

Double instead of single casing crews on all wells while casing being run.

All gas wells must be "mudded in" to prevent casing from striking dry sides and causing sparks.

The casers say they believe such sparks to have been the cause of the three recent fires.

Concerted efforts of the men to bring about compliance of their demands is being considered and two meetings have been held here with that in view. The first meeting was Tuesday night and was followed by another Wednesday.

At the meeting the men said they are satisfied with present wage scales and are not asking more money. What they say they want is greater safety measures. About 75 casers attended the meetings and were reported today to be idle pending outcome of their negotiations with employers.

NEW YORK COTTON.

NEW YORK, June 2. (AP)—Unfavorable weather report caused rallies after an opening decline in the cotton market today, but the advances met considerable realizing and were not fully maintained. October contracts sold up 16.98 to 17.25 and closed at 17.15, the general market closing steady at net advances of three to seven points.

The market opened easy at a decline of eight to 11 points in response to relatively easy Liverpool cables, and overnight selling orders which had probably been attracted by the reactionary tone late yesterday. Active months soon showed net losses of 10 to 12 points, July selling off to 16.60 and December to 17.23. There was a considerable volume of liquidation which was supposed to include realizing on old long accounts, also local or southern selling for a reaction.

This decline was checked by trade buying or covering and demand became more active after publication oft he weather map showing no rain in the drought sections of Texas. The official western belt forecast for a continuance of partly cloudy and warmer weather in Texas, promoted the buying, but realizing continued and there were reactions of several points during mid-day, when there appeared to be selling on belief that barometric conditions held out a prospect for rain in West Texas later in the week.

The official weather details showing precipitation at only two points in Texas and rains in the central belt encouraged a renewal of buying which carried most months up to the highest prices of the day during early afternoon with December selling at 17.50 but reactionary sentiment remaining in evidence, and the close was 10 or 12 points off from the best.

Exports today 17,285, making 10,390,145 so far this season. Port receipts 17,154. U. S. port stocks 1,595,207.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON.

NEW ORLEANS, June 2 (AP).—Following an opening dip of 10 to 11 points on poor Liverpool cables, the cotton market today rose to levels 16 points above the previous close. The holiday here tomorrow, however, induced some hesitation and prices eased off on evening up, losing 17 points of the gain. Near the end the market steadied and prices rallied a little from the lows, closing steady at net gains for the day of 6 to 8 points.

After the opening decline, the continued dry weather in West Texas turned prices on the upgrade and just before mid-session July traded to 16.90c, October 17.20c and December 17.41c, 26 to 27 points above the opening lows.

When the demand was satisfied the market turned reactionary on evening up in advance of the holiday and during the afternoon October traded as low as 17.03c, or on a parallel with yesterday's close. That option rallied to 17.12c in the late trading and the general market closed steady to 10 points under the highest.

A private authority made the decrease in acreage 13 per cent.

Exports for the day totaled 17,285 bales.

Bear Raid On Stock Market Fails To Jolt Prices To Any 'Appreciable Degree Thursday

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, June 2.—Excellent support was rendered the stock market today when a bear raid was engineered following the recommendation of an interstate commerce commission examiner that the federal regulatory board turn down the unification plan of the New York Central on the ground that it "was not in the public interest."

Following this news treasury officials were quoted as saying that there would be no immediate reduction in the local reserve bank rate. Nevertheless shorts were forced to cover in numerous issues and the tone at the close was strong. The bears have come to the realization that the stock market is getting shock proof. Investors throughout the country are beginning to realize that bear raids do not represent intrinsic values and refuse to part with their holdings.

Money was 4 1-2 per cent. Selling developed in wheat and cotton at times. Steadiness prevailed in international currencies.

The late recovery was under the leadership of General Motors. Another extra distribution is expected to be announced by directors of this corporation. Rumors were current in Wall street today that the General Motors would announce shortly control of the Mack Truck company. G. M., it is said, has acquired sufficient stock of Mack through the purchase of 125,000 shares. This is about one-sixth of the total common stock.

Selling developed in New York Central following the report of the I. C. C. examiner concerning the road's leasing plan of its subsidiaries. The examiner took the stand that the rights of the minority stockholders in railroad corporations planning consolidations must be protected. As a result the decision was regarded as favorable to holders of railroad stocks in smaller lines and stimulated buying in other section of the list.

Chicago & Northwestern was one of the strong spots. Reports were current in connection with the Union Pacific-Chicago Northwestern deal that the U. P. planned to segregate and form an investment holding company and offer stock in the latter to U. P. stockholders, thereby acquiring funds for the C. N. it was also reported that certain estates interested in the stock in the past were again becoming interested.

St. Louis Southwestern was another stock in demand. Insiders of this road are understood to be interested in a merger. It was rumored that a bid of 115 has been made for a block of stock held by the Goulds. St. Louis Southwestern, it is said, is interested in a deal with the Texas & Pacific and another carrier at prices considerably above the current market. Erie sold at a new high for all time. Years ago George F. Baker predicted that Erie would some day pay a dividend and Wall street is beginning to think that this prediction will make good.

Steel common did nothing but there was a good demand for the independents. Inland Steel rose four points and buying was noticeable in Republic. These two companies, along with Youngstown, were influenced by talk of a consolidation.

While steel remained quiet there was good buying of this issue and predictions were made that it would sell shortly at 135.

Wall street is beginning to take notice of the public utilities and is quietly accumulating them. While the big stocks are well known, traders are turning their attention to smaller companies with big earnings. One of these is Utilities Power & Light "A," earning in the neighborhood of $7 a share and selling out of line with its income. Another group which has been backward is the tobaccos. One of the prominent tobacco magnates is expected to return to this country tomorrow. As a result there was buying of Philip Morris, of which earnings are showing a steady increase in proportion to the company's growth.

Specialties came in for attention. Byers Pipe was strong. The buying was explained when it was announced that the company would offer additional stock below the prevailing market price. Profit-taking developed in National Distillers, although rumors were current that another company was negotiating for control. By-products coke rose harply as did National Lead. Texas Pacific Land Trut Old jumped more than 150 points and Standard Milling experienced buying on talk of merger negotiations.

Grain

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW.

CHICAGO, June 2. (AP)—Soaring 4¾ cents beyond all recent high records, corn today held a big share of the grain despite immense selling to realize profits. Persistent wet weather that hinders planting and reduces acreage appeared to eclipse all other factors in the corn market.

Closing quotations on corn were unsettled, 1⅝ to 2⅝c net higher wheat 2⅛ to 2⅜c down. Oats unchanged to ⅝c up and provisions showing 7 cents to 15 cents advance.

Wheat met selling pressure on all rallies and closed weak. Better weather southwest and in Canada took off the edge of demand although unofficial crop summaries made public today pointed to an average of 34,000,000 bushels less than was the case a month ago.

Oats, like corn, rose to a new high price record for the season, owing mainly to the action of corn.

Provisions were firmer, responsive to the trend both of hog values and of corn.

TEXAS VEGETABLES.

SAN ANTONIO, June 2. (AP)— The movement of Texas watermelons and tomatoes continued to hold their own. A decrease was noted in the shipment of potatoes from the state. Texas carlot shipments for Wednesday were as follows: Potatoes 50 cars, cucumbers one, onions three, watermelons 69, tomatoes 89 cars.

Potato shipments were practically finished in the Wharton and Eagle Lake districts. The market is strong at San Antonio and cobblers are quotable at $4 per cwt. in carlots. Dry weather is seriously affecting the watermelon prospects. The crop at Alice, Falfurrias, and Kleberg county points was practically through. At points nearby San Antonio 26 to 28 pound averages were quotable at 21 per cwt. Wednesday.

N. Y. Stocks

NEW YORK, June 2. (AP)—Opposing speculative forces staged a bitter struggle in today's stock market, with the day's advantage again resting on the side of those working for higher prices.

A sudden wave of selling in the late morning was counteracted with a flood of new buying orders and in the confusion which followed the ticker tape ran 22 minutes behind the market and did not get caught up until the middle of the afternoon. Total sales ran just over 2,700,000 shares, the largest since February 9.

Several reasons were brought forward to explain the selling movement, but chief stress seemed to be laid on the belief that the technical position of the market had been weakened by the rapidity of the recent advance in many issues. The passing of the Marland and Lorillord dividends, while generally expected, and the interstate commerce commission examiner's recommendation of a rejection of the New York Central's plan to acquire the "big four" also tended to create bearish sentiment.

Speculators for the advance, having succeeded in attracting a public following in many issues, were loathe to relinquish control of the price movement, even temporarily, and developed enough buying power to keep the main trend upward. Call money held firm at 4½ per cent but only a normal amount of loans were called and funds appeared to be plentiful at that figure. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged, and no change was announced in the 4 per cent rediscount rate of the New York federal reserve bank.

Another flock of new high records was created in the railroad group, but major speculative activity seemed to center in Chicago, Great Western preferred and the Missouri Pacific issues, all of which are whirled upward at the expense of an apparently over-crowded short interest. New York Central closed more than a point lower on the proposed rejection of its unification plan. Rock Island also lost a point net after attaining a new peak at 108⅝.

Revival of activity and strength in General Motors sent that stock up nearly 2 points to a new record high level at 201⅜ but it lost more than half its gain. Baldwin moved within a range of 3 points and closed unchanged at 227. United States Steel common was sluggish, but closed only fractionally lower at 125.

A rally of nearly 10 points in Italian lire which again sold around 5.60 cents, was the only development of consequence in the foreign exchange trading. Demand sterling ruled slightly easier around $4.85¾ and French francs held steady at 391½ cents.

HASKELL NEWS

Special to The Record News.

HASKELL, June 2.—A two weeks' revival meeting is in progress at Haskell. It started last Sunday, May 29. Rev. Olds, pastor of First Methodist church, McKenny, is doing the preaching, with Miss Winnie Wiggs of Paris leading the singing and working with the children and young people. Rev. W. B. Vaughn is the pastor of the local church.

New Drug Company for Haskell

The J. C. McKinney brick building on the south side of the square was finished the past week and will be occupied by the Martin drug store. J. M. Martin, an old experienced druggist of Sagerton and his son, Mack Martin, who has been with the Oates drug store for several years, will be the proprietors. Part of the fixtures are being installed and Mr. Martin states that they will open their doors June 10.

Five Oil Tests in Haskell Area

With five oil tests in the county, developments in this section are being closely watched by the oil fraternity. It is reliably stated that several more test wells are in prospect for this section, with one block of leases practically completed. The Subble oil interests, Jeter No. 1, eight miles southwest of Haskell, is shut down at a depth of 1200 feet. Operations are to be resumed in a few days. The Kouri-Ballard well, 15 miles east of town, is drilling at 1700 feet. This well is favorably located and developments in this test are being watched with interest. The Ziegler well, located on the Scott ranch, 14 mile seast of Haskell, has reached a depth of 1300 feet, where the eight-inch casing is being set. Geologists are favorably impressed with this location. The Blackston well on the Grissom land, four miles south of Haskell, is down 1600 feet. The derrick has been completed for the Stewart well on the J. F. Thompson farm, six miles northeast of Haskell, and will be spudded in at an early date.

Drouth Broken in Haskell County

What threatened to be a drouth was broken by a rain and hail storm last Thursday, and while some farmers had to replant cotton, cotton in most communities is up and doing nicely. The small grain crop is small and will be harvested by another week. On Tuesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock a terrific rain and wind storm swept over Haskell and portions of the county. The precipitation was from 1.25 to 1.75 inches. This puts the Haskell county folk in fine spirits, for the high dry winds of May, coupled with the fact that there had been no rain for three months, looked very much like the drouth of 1918.
