FBI targets suspects in Olympic bombing

■ Centennial Park to reopen today with memorial service for victims, increased security.

Associated Press

ATLANTA — Investigators tracking a host of leads have identified several Americans as potential suspects in the Olympic bombing, a federal law enforcement official said Monday.

Authorities did not indicate an arrest was imminent.

From across Georgia, meanwhile, police and National Guard reinforcements converged on Atlanta to add more eyes, ears and firepower to the security force shielding the Games from new terror attacks.

Centennial Park, closed since a pipe bomb went off there early Saturday, will reopen this morning with a memorial service for the victims. One woman was killed and 111 people were injured; a Turkish cameraman died of a heart attack rushing to the scene.

No one has claimed responsibility for the attack, other than the person who called 911 to warn that the bomb was about to go off. "There is a bomb in Centennial Park. You have 30 minutes," was all the caller said before hanging up, the FBI said.

Investigators are confident the caller was a white American male, with no discernible accent. That, and the crudeness of the device and method, apparently have led them to suspect a homegrown, relatively unsophisticated individual or group, not international terrorists.

Experts interviewed by The Associated Press suggested the bomber was a troubled loner, resentful of athletes and spectators enjoying themselves. "This is a be-somebody type of activity," said Clinton Van Zandt, a former FBI behavioral scientist.

Women's wages

WASHINGTON — Despite a half-century-old worldwide agreement that a woman and a man must earn equal wages for equal work, the International Labor Organization says women's pay levels still average far below men's. Boston violence

BOSTON — Growing up in their tough neighborhood, Jason McLean and Rachawn Lundrum might have crossed paths as members of rival gangs. Instead, they met at summer camp. The free day camp for kids who live in gang territory is run by four Boston police officers and funded by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. It is a small part of a 5-year-old effort to curb teen gun violence in Boston that includes stepped-up enforcement, job training, education and recreation programs. Page 7A

Midland Police Sgt. Brian Bogart trains a radar gun on traffic along Highway 349 north of Midland. Police are urging motorists to slow down in the construction area.

Officers come out in force to slow down drivers

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Three Midland police officers (with their cars visible on the roadside), aimed radar guns and flagged down and ticketed speeders. The sight of those three police cars and officers, however, appeared to serve as only a small deterrent to motorists determined to go 50 mph or more in the hazardous area.

Despite construction signs, and a posted 35 mph speed limit, the police officers stopped one driver after another — every few minutes Monday afternoon — who failed to slow down in an area that has been the site of several accidents, including a fatality on Friday.

Police officers spent Monday working the area north of Midland on Highway 349, near the left turnoff to Midland Country Club.

"We've got lanes closed, barrels on the road and construction warning signs, and the added distraction of construction vehicles coming through, but people are still traveling at unsafe speeds for the conditions existing," said Sgt. Brian Bogart. "We have a posted speed limit of 35 mph, but the majority of vehicles are running at least 50 mph."

On Friday, Midlander William Penn, 87, was driving his white sedan north on State Highway 349 about 11:30 a.m. when he veered left into the southbound lane. He was hit by an oilfield truck and died several hours later at Memorial Hospital and Medical Center from massive internal and head injuries.

Bogart said a major accident also occurred in the same area Monday morning (involving a city of Midland

TV broadcasters, president reach agreement over children's shows

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton, polishing his credentials as the candidate of family values, brokered a deal Monday that forces television stations to air at least three hours of educational shows a week for America's kids.

The arrangement marked the first time the government required broadcasters to air a specific amount of educational shows aimed at children.

Federal regulators could approve the agreement by Thursday, said Reed Hundt, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, a Clinton appointee.

Plan says stations must air at least three hours of educational programs a week.

But GOP presidential contender Bob Dole was skeptical the plan, if adopted, would make any difference to TV viewers.

"Frankly, Bill Clinton's role in this makes the entire agreement suspect," said Dole spokesman Nelson Warfield. "Bill Clinton, after all, has pocketed over $454,000 in campaign contributions from the entertainment industry. And, it's doubtful he'd do anything to risk losing his commercial sponsors."

The TV industry accepted the plan under pressure from the White House, dropping its longstanding opposition to government intervention in this area.

Working frantically over the weekend with children's TV advocates, regulators and the administration, television executives fashioned a plan that it says gives stations more flexibility than earlier proposals would have.

The plan "says to America's parents, you are not alone; we are all committed to working with you to see that educational programming for your children makes the grade," Clinton said, announcing the accord at a White House summit on children's TV.

Expert on world hunger speaks to agency's volunteers, workers

By Ed Todd

ODESSA - The "specter of hunger" anywhere in the world and, particularly, in the United States and, especially, among children is a paradox, said Dr. Christine Vladimiroff, president and chief executive officer of Second Harvest and an authority on hunger.

The Chicago-based Ms. Vladimiroff was in Odessa on Monday to tour the West Texas Food Bank, one of 181 food banks in Second Harvest's network, and to speak to West Texas Food Bank and agency volunteers and staff workers at the Holiday Inn Centre. The luncheon session was sponsored by the San Antonio-based H.E. Butt Grocery Company (H-E-B), which donates food to Second Harvest food banks.

ODESSA - The San Antonio-based H.E. Butt (H-E-B) Grocery Company on Monday delivered a 25,300-pound shipment of canned and packaged food goods to the West Texas Food Bank in testimony of its ongoing commitment in attacking hunger in America as a partner in Second Harvest, national food-bank network.

"H-E-B and the Butt family are very committed to helping the needy and fighting hunger," said Eddie J. Garcia, who is H-E-B's manager of public affairs.

Garcia helped establish H-E-B's Reclamation Center in 1985, which salvages damaged but edible and nutritious foods from H-E-B's network of 235 stores in 120 Texas and Louisiana communities. The 1905-founded H-E-B, which ranks among the nation's largest food store chains, is opening supermarkets in Midland and Odessa.

The West Texas Food Bank is one of 15 foods banks to which H-E-B regularly delivers food. Garcia said that H-E-B ships truckloads of food to the West Texas Food Bank twice a month.

Israelies learn to accept threat of terrorism, increased security

By Nicolas B. Tatro
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Random searches, sophisticated bomb detectors, more aggressive security: Such measures — being considered by U.S. officials in the wake of two apparent terror attacks — have long been a way of life here in Israel.

Handbags are searched in grocery stores. Guards frisk patrons at movie theaters. Bomb pits are dug outside schools in case explosives are found. Passengers are asked to show up at the airport three hours in advance.

"I wouldn't call it paranoia, but there is a security awareness in this country," said national police spokesman Eric Bar-Chen.

Nobody can prove that such measures work. Suicide attacks by Islamic militants claimed the lives of 63 people so far this year, and hardly a week goes by without a drive-by shooting, a stabbing, an infiltration attempt or a bomb threat.

But Israelis believe the efforts are effective, and they pay a lot for the extra precautions, even though the result is often tantamount to security mania.

"Living with terror is our fate," said Ran Cohen, a liberal member of parliament and a reserve army colonel in the elite paratroop unit. "We need every civilian to be very concerned about the possibility that a terrorist is not far away from him."

That concern is spreading to the United States. A bomb killed one woman and injured more than 100 others at the Olympics in Atlanta last weekend, and evidence is mounting that a bomb caused TWA flight 800 to explode over New York on July 17, killing all 230 people aboard.

The attacks may force the U.S. to take more stringent measures than its citizens are used to — including state-of-the-art bomb detectors for airports that cost up to $1 million, said Yisrael Shai, former head of Shin Bet's VIP bodyguard unit and now a partner in a private security firm.

"Americans should prepare themselves not only for the small discomforts that will come with increased security but also for the big financial expenditure," said Shai, whose company sold bomb-resistant garbage bins to Atlanta for the games.

Shai noted that on recent domestic flights he took in the United States, security was "lacking, almost non-existent."

Signs of increased security abound in Israel: Mailbox slots are barely wide enough for letters to prevent bombs from being mailed, and trash containers on Jerusalem's streets are made from a heavy, rubberized material that can absorb the blast of most pipe bombs.

The security pit — a hole lined with concrete and topped with a metal lid — has been placed outside schools and other buildings in case explosives are found and need to be disposed of.

After Palestinian infiltrators killed 21 children and wounded 70 at the village of Maalot in northern Israel in 1974, more than one million parents volunteered to stand guard at kindergartens and schools throughout the nation.

Parents at a Jerusalem preschool in the exclusive Yemin Moshe neighborhood voted to hire a former combat soldier to protect their children after a stabbing in the neighborhood in early 1995.

Israeli police responded to 49,979 reports of suspicious objects last year, and safely defused 51 bombs. In many cases, traffic was brought to a standstill while bomb squads using remote-controlled robots searched for explosives.

In Jerusalem alone, police investigate about 20 suspicious cars a day, which means a lot of motorists return to find their trunks popped open and a note saying the car was searched.

"We've had the real thing happen quite a few times, and people don't take it lightly," said Bar-Chen, of the national police.

China conducts nuclear test hours before talks

GENEVA (AP) — Just 11 hours before international negotiators sat down Monday to push through a global nuclear weapons test ban, China detonated what it said would be its final nuclear test explosion.

China's chief negotiator, Sha Zukang, then told delegates at the 61-nation Conference on Disarmament that they should welcome the test — believed to be China's 45th — because it was China's last.

Still, Sha said China would continue to push for changes in the proposed test ban treaty. Negotiations on the treaty have stalled, in part, over China's dissatisfaction with guidelines on policing suspected violators and over India's demands that nuclear powers promise to disarm.

China's final nuclear test, conducted in the desert of its northwestern Xinjiang province, came as diplomats in Geneva scrambled to produce an accord in time to be signed at the U.N. General Assembly in September.

But the objections from China and India mean negotiators might not meet that deadline.

China has questioned the scope of the treaty and its enforcement provisions, saying it wants to make it more difficult to order inspections if a nation is believed to have conducted a test.

India has complained the treaty favors the five declared nuclear powers.

The draft treaty bans only test explosions of nuclear weapons, making it difficult for less advanced nations to develop nuclear technology. Existing nuclear powers are allowed to continue refining their own weapons with computers and other technology. Only last week, the United States announced plans for a supercomputer capable of simulating nuclear explosions.

Truth hurts: Participants in apartheid machine tell all — and get rebuffed

By Donna Bryson
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — Until admitting he once spied for the apartheid machine, Mark Behr was something of a hero. Now the award-winning novelist is being vilified as a traitor.

The new black-led government has urged South Africans like Behr to tell their stories. Officials established a Truth and Reconciliation Commission as a forum for soul-baring, saying the country could not move forward until its people fully understood what went wrong in the past.

But the overwhelming criticism that has greeted Behr's confession raises questions about how much truth his country can stand.

"I've become a symbol of everything that was ever wrong in South Africa — of betrayal, of false beliefs, of complete and utter culpability," Behr said in a recent telephone interview from Oslo, Norway, where he teaches a summer graduate course on peacemaking.

Behr, the product of a conservative, white, middle-class family, said he was willing to believe that "apartheid was OK" as a 22-year-old university student in 1986.

That was the year a relative who was a high-ranking police officer first asked him to report on the activities of a few leftist students at the University of Stellenbosch, near Cape Town. At the time, Behr was leading protests against white minority rule. The money the white government offered helped pay his tuition.

Within a year, he said, the young men and women he was spying on had convinced him their cause was just. But he continued working for the police — not so much for the money, but because he was afraid of being exposed as a traitor.

Behr's handlers also threatened to reveal that he was gay, something Behr no longer hides but which was very much a shameful secret in 1980s South Africa.

By 1990, the white minority government had embarked on negotiations that led to historic all-race relations in 1994, and its security forces lost interest in Behr.

He kept his secret until he began to fear that the attention being showered on his first novel, "The Smell of Apples" — including two national literary awards — would create new interest in his personal story and lead to his exposure. He confessed earlier this month in a speech at a writers' seminar in Cape Town.

His admission has not exactly been considered a contribution to national healing. Behr has been accused of seeking publicity, of being insincere and manipulative, of providing too few details — even of being too remorseful.

"He apologizes for the betrayals, for his motivation, for his lack of moral courage; he apologizes for apologizing; and then, in an infinite regress, he apologizes for apologizing for apologizing," Nic Borain, who worked with Behr as a student activist, wrote in the Weekly Mail and Guardian days after Behr's revelation.

Similar denunciations from other colleagues and friends have appeared in newspapers across the country.

Most acknowledge that Behr committed no crime, and probably provided little information the state didn't already have. But his confession has brought an outcry harsher than that provoked by former soldiers and police who admitted to murder and torture in the service of apartheid.

Excavation may lead to biblical archives

HAZOR NATIONAL PARK, Israel (AP) — Multiplication tables inscribed on a chip of reddish clay more than 3,000 years old may be the tip of a treasure trove of documents describing life in the times of the biblical patriarchs.

Four palm-sized clay tablets inscribed in Akkadian cuneiform have been found at the excavation site of the ancient city of Hazor, referred to in the biblical book of Joshua as one of the great Canaanite kingdoms.

Hebrew University professor Amnon Ben-Tor, head of the excavation, said Monday that the tablets and other evidence point to the existence of two royal archives at the site in as-yet unexcavated palace rooms.

The discovery of such archives would be unprecedented in the Holy Land and would provide a wealth of information about life in the Canaanite period, which lasted from the 18th to 13th century B.C.

The tablets discovered so far are "in my opinion the most important of all documents found in this country," Ben-Tor said.

WEATHER WATCH

Thunderstorms in today's forecast

Staff Report

Today's forecast is for partly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms and a high in the middle 90s with southwest winds 5-15 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight's forecast is for mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms and a low in the upper 60s.

Wednesday's forecast is for partly cloudy with a slight chance of thunderstorms, a high in the low 90s and a 20 percent chance of rain.

After an overnight low of 72, compared to the record low of 63, set in 1988, yesterday's high was 98, compared to the record high of 105, set in 1995.

STATE

Texas was partly cloudy and warmer Monday with showers dampening the coastal bend.

Winds returned to the regular summer pattern from the south at 10 to 15 mph with gusts to 20 mph at Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene.

Temperatures rose into the 80s and 90s at most locations, but 4 p.m. readings ranged from 77 degrees at Lufkin in East Texas to 102 degrees at Laughlin Air Force Base near the border in Del Rio.

The North Texas forecast is for today to be partly cloudy and warm with a chance of thunderstorms in the north. High will range from 90 in the northeast to 97 degrees in the southwest. Tonight will have increasing cloudiness with a chance of thunderstorms and a low of 72 to 76.

South Texas is to be partly sunny with scattered showers and thunderstorms along the middle and upper coasts. Highs will be in the 90s along the coast and over 100 in the interior. Lows will be in the mid 70s inland to near 80 along the coast.

Forecasters said West Texas will be partly cloudy with a chance for thunderstorms over the north, far west and southwest mountains. Highs will be in the 90s to over 100 with lows in the 60s and 70s.

NATION

Powerful thunderstorms raked parts of the Midwest on Monday, as another line of storms rumbled across the Tennessee Valley and a chill was in the air across much of the East.

The storms that drenched southern Kansas and northern Oklahoma overnight were spreading southeast and into south-central Missouri.

The same storm system also dumped hail up to an inch in diameter near Marthasville, Mo., and produced 72-mph wind gusts in St. Louis.

Storms also were possible in Ohio and Michigan, southern New England and across the Rockies in Colorado and eastern Idaho and western Montana.

The temperature dipped to 63 degrees at Greenville, S.C., edging the previous low for the date of 64, set in 1984. Also, Caribou, Maine, fell to 43 degrees, tying a mark last set in 1987.

Mostly mild conditions prevailed across the West, with some light showers across the northern Great Basin.

More thunderstorms were forecast from the lower Great Lakes and Ohio Valley regions, through the northern Plains. Some of the storms could spawn isolated tornadoes and large hail.

SHOWS: Federal regulators could give plan OK this week

(From 1A)

About 50 people, including TV executives, children's TV activists, program producers and actors, discussed ways to boost the amount and quality of shows for kids.

A child will have watched 25,000 hours of television before his 18th birthday, Clinton said.

The industry's decision to support the plan may short-circuit tougher government proposals in the future.

Though Clinton has long supported a three-hour weekly minimum, the accord gives him additional leverage in the social values debate between Democrats and Republicans.

Voters, especially women, are telling pollsters they are concerned about the content of programming on television. Female voters are key to Clinton's re-election prospects.

The proposal requires broadcasters to air between 7 a.m. and 10 p.m. three hours of regularly scheduled, 30-minute shows specifically designed to educate.

Stations that fall short of the three-hour standard could still meet the goal by airing public service announcements, specials and 15-minute shows.

And, with special permission from the FCC, those stations could also meet the shortfall with non-programming activities — such as helping local schools buy computers or financing educational programs that would air on a local public TV station.

Stations that fail to comply could lose their license.

The deal applies only to TV broadcasters, not to cable TV, which is not federally licensed.

The agreement generally defines educational material as that designed for youngsters 16 and under and that serves a youngster's intellectual, cognitive, social or emotional needs.

Children's TV activists Peggy Charren and Kathryn Montgomery, executive director of the Center for Media Education, predicted the plan would produce higher-quality shows that will not only teach children scientific and mathematical concepts, but social skills as well.

"It will not be easy," said CBS Entertainment Chief Leslie Moonves. "It is easier to put on more programming. It is far harder to put on more quality programming that kids will actually want to watch. But that is our challenge."

TV star Bill Cosby said it's not hard to make shows that are both entertaining and teach kids, for instance, geometry. Its all boils down to creativity and good writing.

"You can find gold if you get the proper writers, the proper producers," he said, but added, "I find those people running away."

Greg Simon, the White House's point person on the issue, said shows now on the air — like NBC's "Saved by the Bell," a sitcom targeted to teens, Fox's "Where on Earth is Carmen Sandiego," an animated show about a girl who steals world treasures, and reruns of "The Cosby Show" — would qualify as educational fare under the new plan.

In 1992, stations told the FCC they had met the educational and information needs of children as required by a 1990 law by airing such shows as "The Jetsons" and "Leave It to Beaver" reruns.

The FCC's Hundt disagreed and proposed making broadcasters air three hour a week of educational shows. But he couldn't get a majority of the four-member commission to support his plan. The agency deadlocked over how much flexibility should be given.

The new plan appears to have the crucial third FCC vote need for adoption. "It looks good so far," said FCC Commissioner James Quello.

Edward Fritts, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, praised the accord. "We believe we will be successful and the children of the United States will be the beneficiaries."

Van crashes into cement beams when manual accelerator sticks

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

A driving mishap sent a van crashing through wide cement beams, but it stopped before hitting the plate glass windows of a business Monday afternoon.

The unidentified driver was not injured when his converted van jumped the curb in front of a beauty salon shortly after 4 p.m. and hit the beams. The driver, who uses a wheelchair, told witnesses his manually operated accelerator jammed as he was attempting to park in the handicap space directly in front of Panache, 4610 N. Garfield.

Panache owner Teri Brown said the beams had been erected recently to block the afternoon sun from flooding through the windows.

"We have them there to block the sun, but they really served a better purpose," she said, noting hairdressers were working in the back of the salon when they heard a boom. "It sounded more like an explosion than a crash," Ms. Brown said.

A maintenance worker expressed surprise that the beam, which fell on the driver's side of the vehicle, didn't break any windows on the van. The driver dropped the van ramp and exited the vehicle in his wheelchair with no problem, witnesses said.

Ms. Brown said she was concerned the broken beams would collapse if the van was towed away.

ISSUE: Centennial Park to reopen today with service

(From 1A)

Investigators have identified several potential suspects who are the focus of immediate attention, according to a law enforcement official in Washington who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The source said those suspects are not the people depicted in composite sketches developed by the FBI from witness descriptions of suspicious people at the scene. The source would not elaborate further on the targets of the investigation.

"We do not believe any composite drawings to this point are suspects," FBI spokesman David Tubbs said in Atlanta, where about 900 FBI agents are now at work.

He said it was a "pretty strong assumption" the 911 caller placed the bomb, and that there no was evidence yet that more than one person was involved.

Investigators have received a flood of information — witness statements, videotapes and snapshots taken by tourists in the area before the explosion, and video from surveillance cameras in the park.

About the time of the call, police in Centennial Park happened by chance upon the unattended knapsack and began evacuating the immediate area. Questions were later raised about why police in the park were not informed of the phone threat before the explosion.

There apparently was a 10-minute lag between the incoming 911 call at 12:58 a.m. and the next notation of any action, according to a document detailing the call and obtained by the AP. The bomb went off at 1:18 a.m.

Police Chief Beverly Harvard did not respond to requests by the AP to discuss the document. On Sunday, she said the 911 protocol would be reviewed in the aftermath of Saturday's bombing.

Work crews were busy Monday at Centennial Park, righting upended benches and trash cans, cleaning up and resupplying concessions and other facilities. Authorities also were installing improved surveillance technology, whose characteristics they would not discuss.

"We invite the public to return the park to its original intention of bringing the world together for the Centennial Games," said Bob Brennan, spokesman for the Atlanta Olympic organizers.

The reopened park will have double the security force it had before the bombing, Olympic organizers say, with the reinforcements drawn from police departments across the state, and officers will conduct random searches of visitors' bags.

Former Mayor Andrew Young, an ordained minister, will lead the prayers for the victims, 17 of whom remained hospitalized Monday.

Tens of thousands of fans thronging the city remained determined to enjoy the Games. On Day 11 of the 17-day Olympics, they streamed past the bomb site to cheer the U.S. basketball "Dream Team" at the Georgia Dome and enjoy handball and volleyball matches at other arenas bordering Centennial Park.

"People don't want to be held hostage," said Aurelia Sands-Bell, head of a volunteer group handing out green-and-gold ribbons in remembrance of the victims.

At the White House, President Clinton met with congressional leaders to discuss possible new legislation to combat terrorism, including a proposal to require chemical markers in black powder explosives to help in tracing.

Saturday's explosion occurred at a crowded rock concert just inside the popular, 21-acre park, which is studded with corporate pavilions, giant TV screens and stages for free, open-air music.

The bomb, in a green knapsack left beside a sound tower, exploded with a hail of nails, screws and shards of a shattered aluminum fence.

Despite the heightened surveillance, organizers say they are striving to maintain the park-like atmosphere.

"We're trying to effect a balance," said Atlanta Olympics communications chief Dick Yarbrough. "We don't want to look like an armed camp."

The explosion prompted a rash of bomb threats and scares about suspicious unattended bags and packages in Atlanta, New York, Washington and other cities on Monday.

"There are a lot of copycats out there who are finding great fun in disrupting the games whenever they can," Brennan said.

The Odessa-based food bank, one of 20 Second Harvest food banks in Texas (181 in the nation), serves thousands of needy and hungry individuals and families through 294 agencies, such as soup kitchens, food pantries, churches, day-care centers, shelters and senior-citizen centers, in 22 counties from Big Spring to El Paso. The Chicago-headquartered Second Harvest is the nation's largest domestic charitable hunger-relief organization.

Garcia noted that H-E-B in June received the Second Harvest Hunger's Hope Award for Grocery Distributor Support.

"We have been recognized at a national level as having the most committed program in helping food banks," Garcia said.

H-E-B truck driver Ernest Fernandez, who drove the 18-wheel tractor-trailer that brought the food to the West Texas Food Bank, said that it is "just a great feeling to give.

"It makes you feel proud of yourself (and) proud of the company you are working for that supplies these food goods to these (hungry) people," Fernandez said. "We thank the owner (Charles Butt) of the company for what he stands for."

H-E-B is an "outstanding corporate citizen," said Dolly Neff, executive director of the West Texas Food Bank. The company, which has been "instrumental in feeding hungry people" across Texas, means "a great deal to food banks in Texas.

"Food banks all across the state struggle to have the blend and the balance of good, nutritional foods," Ms. Neff said. "And we always watch the dollars. And when we have the support of such a community-minded organization, it is a win-win situation for the community, the poor and the food bank. It is a blessing. And we are grateful for it."

While recognizing that H-E-B is "not the sole supporter" of the West Texas Food Bank, Ms. Neff said that H-E-B's involvement is "a big blessing.

"The timing of H-E-B's donation to the West Texas Food Bank is critical," Ms. Neff said, "because we are asking all of our donors to step up to the plate to help the growing need as we face budget cuts. And more and more of the front line agencies will experience growing numbers coming to the doors for food."

Ignacio Cisneros, who is president of the West Texas Food Bank board of directors, said that "there is a lot of hunger in the United States" among children, working-class adults and senior citizens" who are "being neglected."

Serving on the food bank is "a ministry in my case because there is so much need and so much that can be done," Cisneros said. "We are blessed with a lot of things."

Bob Robinson, manager of the H-E-B Midland store and a member of the West Texas Food Bank's board of directors, said that before the H-E-B Reclamation Center was established "we were dumping at the store level and helping fill up the dump sites, which cities can't afford, either."

Before the mid-1980s, H-E-B stores were "dumping good, wholesome foods" that were pulled off of the shelves or out of the warehouses because of things like "a crushed box or a dent in a can."

The 25 truckloads of H-E-B food items that are being shipped each year to the West Texas Food Bank are valued between $600,000 and $700,000 and weigh about 625,000 pounds.

"We are committed to a minimum of two (truckloads) a month" to the West Texas Food Bank, Robinson said.

All told, about 45 truckloads of food goods leave the H-E-B Reclamation Center each month in delivering goods to Texas food banks.

"Charles Butt is very concerned that when we enter a community that we give back," Robinson explained. "We become a part of that community, we become involved. The community becomes a better place" through H-E-B's involvement.

EXPERT: 'Specter of hunger' is paradox, Vladimiroff says

(From 1A)

"We know that there is enough food in the world to feed everyone — enough food and resources to sustain everyone," Ms. Vladimiroff, a Benedictine nun and former educator, said of the world's more than 5 billion people.

"But when we have hunger in the United States, ... it is not only a paradox but a scandal," she charged, "because we are a land of abundance."

And Ms. Vladimiroff is grieved over the plight of America's abused and hungry children who represent the nation's future.

"The presence of hungry children raises troubling questions for a nation and a world with enough food for all," she said. "Hunger reveals a deadly gap between our professed moral values as a nation and our collective behavior as a society. Hunger is both a challenge to our faith as a believing people and our citizenship as a democracy and caring nation."

Ms. Vladimiroff poignantly noted the adult world's responsibility in caring for children, especially hungry children:

" 'In every child who is born under no matter what circumstances,' " Ms. Vladimiroff said in quoting novelist-playwright-poet James Agee, " 'the potentiality of the human race is born again, and in him/her, too once more, and in each of us, our terrific responsibility toward human life.' "

"We serve 25 million Americans" or "10 percent of the U.S. population," Ms. Vladimiroff noted, "and 42 percent are children."

"Here in the United States, hunger is hidden," Ms. Vladimiroff said. "It is young parents struggling to feed their children. It is elderly people in their little apartment or house, drinking tea and (eating) crackers and that is their evening meal because they don't have anything else. It is a man unemployed looking for another job and going to a pantry to bring food to his children and feeling not good about himself because he didn't provide that."

In America, "the faces of hunger" are in soup kitchens and in homes and outside homes in cities, towns and rural areas throughout the nation.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Second Harvest President Christine Vladimiroff addresses the West Texas Food Bank luncheon at the Odessa Holiday Inn.

"You've served them in a soup kitchen. Or you have packed pantry bags and saw the gratitude and the sadness of people who pick those up."

Ms. Vladimiroff, who is a member of the boards of Bread for the World and the Heartland Alliance for Human Needs and Human Rights, noted that "hunger is in every community in the United States. It is in the inner-city. It is in the suburbs that we might think are wealthy. And it is in the rural areas that provide food for the rest of us."

In America, hunger is "a very difficult picture to paint" and is difficult to define, particularly in comparison to hunger in Third World nations and regions, such as Biafra and Sudan in Africa.

Broadcast "scenes of starvation and famine ... in the Third World depict "skeleton bodies and bloated bellies of children."

And everyday in America, 2,600 children are "born into poverty," Ms. Vladimiroff said. And everyday 27 children die from poverty-related causes. Everyday, 7,962 children of "all races and classes" are reported "abused or neglected, and three die from that abuse. Everyday, 15 children are slain by firearms, and everyday, 2,833 children drop out of school, and everyday, 790 children are born at low birth weights.

"In a country that is first in the world in military and health technology, we (in America) rank 18th in the industrialized world in infant mortality," asserted Ms. Vladimiroff, who allowed that child abuse and suffering is "not a pretty picture, not one that we can be proud of."

Ms. Vladimiroff described the adverse effects of malnutrition in the development of children.

"The critical period for a healthy life is the time between conception and birth, and the first five years of life outside the womb," she said. "In this time, the body develops, and the brain develops its ability to function and to learn."

And when children are "chronically undernourished, their bodies conserve the limited food energy available and prioritize its distribution":

- Energy is reserved for maintenance of critical organ function;
- Energy is used for the child's growth;
- Energy is directed toward social activity and cognitive development.

"This is nature's biological way of protecting the species," said Ms. Vladimiroff, who said that "physical existence, even in diminished capacity, comes first."

And undernourished children "typically are fatigued and uninterested in their social environment." Unlike their well-nourished peers, they are "less likely to establish relationship or to explore and learn from their surroundings."

The upshot is that "the child cannot learn." The child has an "increased susceptibility to disease" and school absenteeism.

"A lifetime of failure has begun."

But failure because of malnutrition need not be because "hunger is 100 percent curable, no, preventable," Ms. Vladimiroff said.

The "costs" of hunger include increased health-care expenditures, billions of dollars in educational investment "wasted because hungry children are not prepared to learn," lower work force productivity because of impaired educational achievement and reduced U.S. competitiveness in the world market.

"American people are good people," Ms. Vladimiroff said. "We need to find the way to craft the agenda for action. America's children deserve better."

And to staff workers and volunteers in the West Texas Food Bank and agencies, Ms. Vladimiroff said that commitment to help nourish hungry children is "a sign of hope that, neighborhood by neighborhood, town by town, state by state, we can promise the future to our children in the security that we love them and that we will take care of them."

vehicle), and several fender benders last week.

As officers pulled speeders over, other speeders continued to whiz by. "We will write more tickets out here in two or three days than we will for the whole rest of the month," Bogart said, shaking his head as a teen-ager ignored an officer standing in the road signaling him to pull over. (The officer got in his car to pursue the speeder.) "We will be out here until we can get people to slow down. Even when we are out here, accidents are occurring," Bogart said.

Police officer R.L. Sanders said, "If everyone were going the speed limit, there wouldn't be any accidents."

Construction warning signs begin south of the intersection on Big Spring and Loop 250. Posted speed limits are lower on the highway because of construction and road work. Police officers will be out today enforcing the speed limit.

Airline cargo too difficult to check manually, director says

By Karen Schwartz
Associated Press

NEW YORK — As airline passengers line up to get their carry-on bags searched, thousands of pounds of unscreened cargo are loaded on the same plane with hardly a second glance.

"I think it's a huge loophole," said Charlie LeBlanc, former manager of cargo security with Continental Airlines.

The airlines are responsible for the security of cargo placed on their flights, just as they are responsible for inspecting the passenger bags brought on board a plane. But the airlines rely on the freight shipping companies to vouch for the contents of shipments, and the freight shipping companies often rely on the honesty of frequent customers.

"It would be extremely difficult to inspect every package of every shipment manually," said Jim Foster, executive director of the Air Forwarders Association, which represents freight companies. "That means opening the shipment and comparing the contents to the packing list. It would not be something that people would be willing to pay for."

The casual oversight of cargo on passenger planes has been a vulnerability for years. In 1989, a presidential commission called it "a huge gap in the security umbrella."

Standards were increased in 1993, but a year later, the Federal Aviation Administration was criticized for still not having met the requirements of a 1990 law passed in response to the bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland.

Among the areas singled out for improvement by the General Accounting Office, Congress's investigative arm, was development of ways to enforce new security rules for mail and other cargo.

No action has been taken by the FAA since, and the fact is thorough scrutiny is impossible. At New York's Kennedy Airport, 1.4 million tons of cargo worth $86 billion was shipped in 1994 on cargo and passenger planes.

Investigators have speculated that TWA Flight 800 was destroyed July 17 by a bomb in the front cargo section. TWA spokeswoman Beth Randolph said Monday that all cargo records from Flight 800 have been turned over to the FAA. She said the cargo deliveries to the flight were "routine" and that she couldn't comment further.

■ For TWA crash updates call Cityline at 560-2400 enter category 6201

LeBlanc, now operations manager at Air Security International, a Houston consulting firm, said commercial cargo is generally placed in the front cargo hold of a Boeing 747, while luggage is placed in the rear hold.

The tighter airline security ordered by President Clinton last week will apply to cargo on passenger planes, but the FAA refused to discuss specifics on Monday.

Currently, security takes a two-pronged approach. The nation's 1,200-1,500 freight shipping companies, also called air forwarders, are required to file a security plan with the FAA, certifying that their employees have undergone criminal background checks and other screening, said Ken Jones, director of operations for Air Cargo Inc., an Annapolis, Md.,-based company that handles ground shipping for the airlines. The FAA provides the airlines with a list of the approved air forwarders.

In addition, the freight shippers, with FAA approval, have less stringent measures for known shippers, companies like General Motors, than those who walk in off the street.

"If somebody walks up to an airline cargo desk and says I want to ship this box to London, they will be questioned, and their package would be opened and inspected and possibly held for 48 hours," LeBlanc said.

But there is little done to verify paperwork or check on a person's claims, LeBlanc said.

"If I'm somebody that walks up and says "I'm with XYZ Company," and that company has shipped with them in the past, those checks and balances would not take place nine times out of 10," he said.

In addition, it can take only a few months to establish credibility as a known shipper, a short time for a terrorist with a mission.

Bomb threats, packages trouble authorities since Olympics blast

NEW YORK (AP) — Suspicious packages and bomb threats appear to be on the rise since the crash of TWA Flight 800, including ones Monday in New York City that closed off the United Nations, and Pittsburgh where thousands of downtown office and government workers were evacuated.

Nothing was found at any of the locations.

Barbie Sutton, a Seattle tourist, was shopping in the Rockefeller Center promenade when an officer asked everyone to clear the area. It was a request she quickly complied with.

"Actually, I thought with all the bomb scares and everything, this isn't the place to be," Sutton said.

But Gabriel Santa Crue, who works in a building nearby, got as close as he could.

"I see it on TV a lot and I know it's dangerous. Maybe I want to experience danger this close," he said. "We are in a generation where this is going to go on. It's like a show."

Since the Saturday incident at the Olympics that killed one woman and injured more than 100 people, the New York Police Department has responded to a rash of calls, said Capt. Mike Collins, an NYPD spokesman.

On Monday morning alone, NYPD officials investigated a suspicious package near the visitors' entrance of the United Nations; a bomb threat at the Port Authority bus terminal, a package at a Times Square building and suspicious suitcases across from St. Patrick's Cathedral and Saks Fifth Avenue.

The three red, blue and brown suitcases were cordoned off and bomb squad officials wearing protective suits were called in to X-ray their contents.

The suitcases were full of clothes.

Similar incidents occurred in other cities on Monday.

■ Washington, D.C. police received bomb threats causing the evacuation of a downtown office building and a health club. They also investigated a suspicious car, parked near the Washington Monument.

■ A concourse area at the Seattle-Tacoma International Airport was closed briefly after a gate attendant noticed a suspicious package.

■ San Juan's Luis Munoz Marin International Airport had four bomb scares over the weekend, all of which were bogus, police said. Callers also said bombs were planted inside casinos at the Caribe Hilton and Condado Plaza hotels in San Juan. None were found.

American bird enthusiast dies

OLD LYME, Conn. (AP) — Roger Tory Peterson, a modern-day John James Audubon who turned millions of Americans into bird watchers with his easy-to-use field guides, has died at 87.

Peterson, who died Sunday after suffering a mild stroke several months ago, combined artistic talent with a lifelong scientific interest in birds.

During his 60-year career, he wrote, illustrated and edited 15 books that sold millions of copies and were translated into at least 12 languages.

Peterson was among the world's most knowledgeable bird watchers.

"I can recognize the calls of practically every bird in North America," he said. "There are some in Africa I don't know, though."

Peterson said it was his seventh-grade science teacher who first encouraged him to draw birds and apply his talent for detail. He had no formal scientific training but traveled the world to draw birds.

Peterson studied at the Art Student League in New York City and the National Academy of Design.

He was teaching art and science in Massachusetts when an editor of Audubon magazine asked him about doing a pocket guide for bird watchers.

The result was a 1934 guide featuring the birds of the Eastern United States. The guide was hailed as a masterpiece not only for the quality of the drawings but also for Peterson's unique identification system.

Atlanta bombing needs response

Saturday's deadly pipe-bomb explosion in Atlanta brought back visions of earlier terroristic attacks directed at the Olympic Games. But this time the target, apparently, was the spirit of the Games — and this attack occurred in the United States.

Although the blast at Centennial Olympic Park resulted in the death of two people and injuries to more than 100 others, it didn't quash the spirit of the Games as crowds poured back to scheduled events only hours after the bombing.

Coming just weeks after the explosion of TWA Flight 800, which investigators have indicated may have been the work of terrorists, the bombing in Atlanta raises fears that a terroristic assault may be underway in the United States, although there seems to be no connection between the two incidents.

If that is the case, the question arises: How should the people of the United States respond to this threat?

Obviously not in fear and intimidation, which likely is the response the terrorists are seeking.

Rather, Americans should go about their daily lives as they always have. Security measures in Atlanta and elsewhere in the nation are being increased in the wake of this latest bombing and, as President Clinton has said, "We must not let these attacks stop us from going forward. We cannot let terror win. That is not the American way."

Congress certainly has a duty to strengthen the anti-terrorism bill signed earlier this year to make it easier for law enforcement to trace all the materials that can be used in making bombs.

We must learn to fight terrorism better and make it easier to track the culprits who prey on our society, but we must not let the terrorists gain control of our lives. If they destroy our open society, they have won.

Rebellion could help save souls from Internet

It is not true, as commonly believed, that only the young can rebel. The crustiest geezer can pretend he doesn't know how to tie his shoelaces. Any middle-aged drone can pretend he can't tell the front of a baseball cap from the back.

Today's geezers, after all, are the same people who once wore zoot suits and stood on street corners twirling key chains. Today's mid-lifers are the same people who once smashed dad's collection of Benny Goodman 78 r.p.m.'s, then blew out all the old man's brain circuits with maximum-volume Rolling Stones.

Baker

Now these old-timers have lost the rebelling knack. Why? Because after adolescence most people find it unfulfilling to walk around in weird clothing or fill a room with savage din.

Books gush daily from the presses insisting that neither middle age nor dotage must be allowed to deprive Americans of a full sex life. Well and good, but rebelling is just as health-enhancing as sex, not to mention less fatiguing.

"But why should I want to rebel?" you may ask if you are tired and old and get no heat. The easy answer is that rebelling is an exceedingly young thing to do, and if you don't act young in America you are not going to be of the slightest interest to advertisers. In short, to make TV reveal which beers and shampoos are essential to render the graying and elderly irresistible to the other sex, do the youth thing: Rebel.

There is also the philosophical reason: Society is corrupt, and must be made to hear your rage and feel your pain. You must show it your contempt.

"How can I do all this," you may ask, "without wearing my baseball cap backward and leaving my shoelaces untied?" Easy. Start with just a few of the thousands of things about our corrupt society that make you wish you had the nerve to chuck it all and join Gauguin in Tahiti.

Advice to "have a nice day" is bound to be one such. Why should you have a nice day if you don't want one? Maybe you've had so many nice days recently that you are sick of them. Yet here is a stranger who couldn't care less exhorting you to suffer yet another: "Have a nice day."

Here is an easy place to start living the rebel life. Speak to the nice-day wisher in your most pleading voice, "Where can I get one?" Or perhaps, adopting your genial, chatty, cracker-barrel-philosopher voice, say: "You know, I'll bet that's what Knute Rockne really said to the team. Never said 'Win one for the Gipper,' I betcha. Said 'Have a nice day, fellas.' Or maybe he said, 'Have a nice day for the Gipper.'" With millions of rebelling Americans taking this line, "Have a nice day" would soon pass from the language.

Here's another thing: the information superhighway. Bill Gates has made himself the richest man west of the Sultan of Brunei by persuading people to buy things they can't afford to do things that don't need doing. One of these things is locking yourself into a dark sealed room and "surfing the web."

Normal, non-engineering, run-of-the-mine, computer-practically-illiterate people who need human contact, need to talk over a bridge table, need to sit on the front porch and schmooze, need to get out in the air and live — they're glued to machines. And forever if web fanatics have their way. Rip Van Winkle at least enjoyed a good sleep.

The easy way to rebel against this threat to humanity's humanity? Get up a weekly bridge game. Go out on the front porch, invite the neighbors over and schmooze. Go out in the air and walk around, smell a flower, kick a pebble.

Yes, these acts will be hard for wretched souls hooked on the Internet. So why not rebel with ingenuity? See how cleverly the smoke-haters rebelled against tobacco. Rebels must lobby the surgeon general. Most likely the Internet really is hazardous to health. It's certainly addictive. Crusade to stamp out this addiction. As the anti-smoke people will testify, nothing is so satisfying as rebellion that takes on the nobility of crusade.

Of course, if your rebelling instinct is violent, you can always buy a gun almost anyplace, sneak into that sealed and darkened room and empty several clips into your computer.

Now for one of the most corruptive things in America — destroying corporate voice mail is absolutely essential to the survival of ...

Teen mother practiced what we taught her

Selfa Silva is sweet-15 and charged with murder. Not just any murder. The murder of a newborn baby boy. Her baby.

She hid her pregnancy from all but a few friends. Two of them were with her when the baby was born into a toilet during a slumber party at a house where all the adults were fast asleep.

One of the friends testified that Silva wanted to flush the toilet after the baby was born. Her friends persuaded her to pull the infant out of the bloody water.

She cut the umbilical cord with scissors and held her hand over the baby's mouth to silence his cries. Her friends left the room. When they returned, her friend said, Silva was strangling the infant.

"The baby was just, like, squirming," Silva's 15-year-old friend Carmen Castro told a judge in Tucson earlier this month. Castro said she tried to stop Silva.

"She said, 'I can't keep this baby,' " Castro testified. "I said 'Yeah, you can, you had it.' She said, 'You don't understand, you don't understand. I hate this baby.' "

Silva allegedly wrapped the body in a plastic bag, cradled it for the first and last time and carried it out to a trash bin, where it was found by a transient.

John Davis, Pima County Superior Court judge pro tem, found enough evidence to try Silva for first-degree murder. Next month, the court will decide whether she should face trial as an adult.

Silva held onto to her mother and sobbed while her friend testified. Her father stroked her hand. Her lawyer says she still hasn't talked about what happened.

When the hearing was over, she went back to kiddie jail where she had nightmares so bad she would vomit. This week she was transferred to a secured psychiatric facility.

Friends, family and teachers say Silva was always an athletic girl with a happy disposition. She didn't have a record.

Silva is a reflection of the adults in her world. They have no more idea what to do about teen pregnancy than she did.

They used to deny the problem, refuse to talk about it. Then it became as impossible to ignore as a wailing baby. Now they try to smother those causing the trouble.

They talk about a return to the days when out-of-wedlock childbirth carried an ugly stigma. That'll fix it, they say.

Silva created her own stigma. It swelled inside her for nine long months. Her shame sealed her lips and her fate. She never went to her parents. She never gave anybody a chance help her find solutions. She was too desperate. She settled for hating the baby, punishing him for her mistake.

Again she was imitating adults.

We don't look for solutions, either. We look for someone to blame. We resurrect old ideas. We direct our anger at little girls who grew up in a world as different from the old days as Victoria's Secret is from Victorian morality.

In Emmett, Idaho, a 17-year-old pregnant teen was recently tried and convicted of fornication after Gem County prosecutor Douglas Varie dusted off a 1921 law. The prosecutor-on-a-mission says the conviction represents a victory for family values.

We allow this kind of cheap, easy answer because we are as frightened as Silva was. We lack the courage to find out why so many of our children are intent on flushing the future down the toilet.

ANOTHER VIEW

Hussein's legacy may be his rule-by-terror regime

Saddam Hussein is having trouble with his extended family again. But, as usual, the Iraqi dictator has no problem enforcing his idea of family values.

Saddam reportedly has put a son-in-law under house arrest, and his security forces have detained one of his nephews. Saddam particularly seems to have problems with his in-laws. Two of his sons-in-law were exiled to Jordan and then were killed in gangster execution style after they returned to Iraq.

These family troubles of Saddam's appear to be related to the feudal power structure he's established in Iraq. Blood relationships form the foundation of his regime, but the real tie that binds is the fear that flows with his willingness to shed blood — even his own family's — to maintain power.

Given his available successors, an irony is that if Saddam is ever toppled from power, he may be replaced by one of his nephews or sons-in-law.

Good-hearted clerks' nature pays rich dividend

It might be a good idea for the tale of the late James Glenn Dudley to be tacked behind the counters of every supermarket, convenience store, gas station, drugstore and anywhere else where paying customers are regularly acknowledged by grunts, mumbles, yawns or a half-hearted "have a nice day."

Royko

Dudley, 85, was a retired podiatrist who lived in Marietta, Ga. Every morning, he would go to a nearby Kroger supermarket to have breakfast with other retired geezers and maybe do some grocery shopping.

The clerks who worked in the store said he could be a grumpy and bossy old fellow. Which is understandable. At 85, a guy usually has a lot of aches and pains to be grumpy about.

And after a lifetime of messing with the feet of other people -- trimming corns and bunions and curing the dreaded black toe -- most of us would not be standup comics.

But some of the clerks in the supermarket kind of enjoyed Dudley's irascible ways.

"To me," said Jeannette Peeks, "he was sort of a mean old man, but I liked him for it. Like he told me I was too fat. He'd say things like that. He was kind of bossy and very particular about things."

So when he frowned, grumbled or commented on their weight, they smiled. When he came in shoeless or without a shirt on hot days, they just joked with him.

Loretta Griggs, 54, has worked in the deli section of the store for seven years.

"He was a regular customer. He came in every morning for breakfast. It's self-service, but when we'd see him coming, we would hand him a plate. We would carry his coffee to the table for him because he'd always forget it. But I try to be nice to all my customers.

"When he came in, I used to say, 'Why, here's Glenn, he's my boyfriend,' and another woman would say, 'I want to take Glenn away from you.' We just kidded with him."

Early in the year, Dudley, a widower, was diagnosed as having cancer.

"I think that was why he could be mean, sometimes, because he was sick," Griggs said.

"But he could be so nice. When I mentioned once that I had high blood pressure, he came back the next day with some pills and said, 'Here, take two every day.' Another time, I said I had a taste for watermelon. He went right over and bought me some."

When Dudley's health began slipping and he was hospitalized, Griggs and three other clerks visited him. They just thought it was a neighborly thing to do. It's kind of a Southern thing.

Then in June, they got word that he had died.

A few weeks later, Griggs was at work when a man came in, told her that he had been Dudley's financial adviser and wanted to talk to her when she finished her shift.

She met him outside at his car.

"He told me: 'Loretta, Glenn left a little piece of money for you.'

"I said: 'He did?' And he said, 'Just sign right here and I'll give you his check for $10,000.'

"I said, 'Oh, my God, I can't believe it.' Ten thousand dollars. I had to go back in the store and sit down for an hour. I was shocked. Ten thousand dollars when I'm saving what I can to buy my own little house."

There also were $10,000 checks for Peeks and two other co-workers, including a clerk named Sherry.

"When he told Sherry, they had to hold her up to keep her from falling down," Griggs said.

And there was $30,000 for Jesse Gray, a middle-age clerk.

"Jesse was flabbergasted," Griggs said. "He got $30,000 because he really did more for Glenn than the rest of us. Jesse used to go to Glenn's house and unload his groceries for him."

Frank Cairns, Dudley's financial adviser who handed out the checks, said: "He got to know those ladies pretty well. They treated him well, and he liked them a lot. And he thought they could probably use the money."

In a way, it was like winning the lottery.

Except better, because they truly earned it.

Boston's teen gun-violence rate down after 5-year-effort begins to bear fruit

BOSTON (AP) — Growing up in their tough neighborhood, Jason McLean and Rachawn Lundrum might have crossed paths as members of rival gangs. Instead, they met at summer camp.

"We just got together and we've been pals ever since," said Lundrum, who like McLean is 14.

The free day camp for kids who live in gang territory is run by four Boston police officers and funded by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. It is a small part of a 5-year-old effort to curb teen gun violence in Boston that includes stepped-up enforcement, job training, education and recreation programs.

While nobody is claiming victory, "we believe we have an impact," said Lt. Robert O'Toole, a police spokesman.

Whatever the reasons, nobody under 17 has been killed by gunfire in Boston so far this year. That compares with four minors killed last year, six the year before and a yearly average of nearly 10 since 1990.

Fewer minors were wounded by guns during the first third of the year, too, according to the state Department of Public Health.

Still, black teen-agers in particular face some grim odds. In 1992-93, one out of every 34 black male teenagers in the city was shot or stabbed, on average, each year, according to the Weapon-Related Injury Surveillance System. Among white male teen-agers, the rate was one in 455.

Boston police have been tracking guns through the ATF since 1991 in hopes of developing federal and state cases against scofflaw firearms dealers and illicit gun traffickers. President Clinton expanded the tracing program to 17 cities in July.

The police department's Youth Violence Strike Force also has been trying to get the message out that possession of firearms or ammunition will not be tolerated.

"Those kids who do want to change, when they look you in the face and say, 'What are you going to do for me?' you have to offer them something."
— Lt. Robert OToole, police spokesman

At a May meeting in Dorchester, 15 youngsters were confronted by authorities from almost every law enforcement agency.

"The power of that meeting was that they saw people from all those agencies together," said Anne Piehl, a professor at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government assigned to the Boston Gun Project. "I think it was shocking for some to find out that the U.S. attorney knows their name, for example."

One item on the agenda: The youngsters were told about a 19-year-old Roxbury gang member who was sentenced to 20 years in prison for carrying a single bullet in his pocket.

But there is an understanding these days that playing bad cop alone won't do the job.

"You need to arrest the bad kids, but those who are on the border and could go the other way need youth programs, jobs," said O'Toole, the police spokesman. "Those kids who do want to change, when they look you in the face and say, 'What are you going to do for me?' you have to offer them something."

That approach is driving partnerships with church groups and businesses, sports leagues and educational programs. It led the department to appoint youth service officers like William Baxter, who grew up in a notorious housing project and lost two teenage cousins to gun violence last summer.

Officials accuse officer of hoax

GADSDEN, Ala. (AP) — A police officer who claimed to have nearly saved a baby in a river was accused Monday of pulling a hoax and could be fired.

Billy Vasser, 26, was charged with conduct unbecoming an officer, an administrative offense that will be heard by the city's civil service board.

Vasser, who will continue to remain on paid leave until the case is resolved, claimed to have made a near-heroic effort to rescue an infant in the Coosa River on June 11.

But investigators concluded that Vasser was a participant in a hoax that included a woman's telephone call reporting that she had seen a woman toss the baby from a bridge.

The call was made to a City Hall phone that is not recorded. Vasser and his partner were the first on the scene, and both jumped into the water.

1996 PROPERTY TAX RATES IN MIDLAND COUNTY HOSPITAL DISTRICT

This notice concerns 1996 property tax rates for Midland County Hospital District. It presents information about three tax rates. Last year's tax rate is the actual rate the taxing unit used to determine the property taxes last year. This year's effective tax rate would impose the same total taxes as last year if you compare properties used in both years. This year's rollback tax rate is the highest tax rate the taxing unit can set before taxpayers can start tax rollback procedures. In each case these rates are found by dividing the total amount of taxes by the tax base (the total value of taxable property) with adjustment as required by law. The rates are given in per $100 of property value.

Last year's tax rate:

Last year's operating taxes	$6,043,736
Last year's debt taxes	$741,323
Last year's total taxes	$6,785,059
Last year's tax base	$3,901,701,725
Last year's total tax rate	$0.1739 /$100

This year's effective tax rate:

Last year's adjusted taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property)	$6,779,623
/ This year's adjusted tax base (after subtracting value of new property)	$4,011,071,417
x 1.03 = maximum rate unless unit publishes notices and holds hearing	$0.17409 /$100

This year's rollback tax rate:

Last year's adjusted operating taxes (after subtracting taxes on lost property and adjusting for transferred function)	$6,038,893
/ This year's adjusted tax base	$4,011,071,417
= This year's effective operating rate	$0.15056 /$100
x 1.08 = this year's maximum operating rate	$0.16260 /$100
+ This year's debt rate	$1.52665 /$100
= This year's rollback rate	$0.01689 /$100

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite a half-century-old worldwide agreement that a woman and a man must earn equal wages for equal work, the International Labor Organization says women's pay levels still average far below men's.

"Women still earn between 50 and 80 percent of men's wages worldwide," the U.N. agency said in "More and Better Jobs for Women," an ILO document made public Monday.

Lin Lean Lim, the paper's author, said advances have been made since 124 governments signed the equal-wages agreement in 1951, but "progress has been neither universal nor sustained, even in countries and areas which have made explicit efforts."

American women receive an average 68-70 percent of men's pay, she estimated.

The United States and other rich countries should be the first to enforce the accord, she suggested, but noted that the U.S. Senate never ratified it.

Labor Secretary Robert Reich promised last month to get President Clinton to ask Senate approval of another agreement banning job discrimination including discriminatory treatment of women. That ILO agreement dates from 1958.

Ms. Lim's paper points to a special difficulty for U.S. compliance: each state has labor laws, and the federal government has trouble getting them to conform.

"In some states ... women could not legally be required to lift loads of more than 30 pounds," the paper says. "This was used to justify paying (men) a higher wage."

In an interview, Ms. Lim said her country, Malaysia, has moved closer to equality because a continuing economic boom has created a labor shortage forcing it now to import workers from the Philippines and elsewhere. More Malaysian girls are attending schools, she said, which she considers the single most important requirement for Third World countries to rectify man-woman pay discrepancies.

More education increases a woman's earning power, cuts the population growth and increases the likelihood that children of both sexes will survive, be better cared for and educated, she said.

"It makes no economic sense for a country to discriminate against half its population," Ms. Lim said.

Her report says that in Latin America and the Caribbean, an average woman can earn as little as half a man's pay. In rich countries, the difference can be less than 10 percent.

In a preface to the guide, ILO Director General Michel Hansenne said women have unequal chances for training, access to loans, choice of jobs, share in decision-making, family responsibilities, career prospects or steady work — as well as unequal pay.

The ILO has 179 member countries, with headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland. It includes representatives of governments, employers and labor.

Woman finishes 1,300-mile walk in protest of land mines

WASHINGTON (AP) — After walking 1,300 miles to protest the United States' use of land mines, Ariel Brugger plans to go home and sit down.

Brugger, of Charlestown, N.H., on Monday completed a nearly three-month walk from Minnesota to Washington to raise awareness about the dangers of land mines and solicit support for a ban on their use.

About 50 people, including Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., and Cambodian holocaust survivor Dith Pran, came to a rally in Lafayette Park, across from the White House, to greet her.

"I'm really glad to be here," she said. "I think I've succeeded. Now, I'm going to go home and sit down."

Members of the International Campaign to Ban Land Mines presented the 28-year-old Brugger with a bright green vest with the words "Please Ban Land Mines" on the back, while supporters bearing signs with similar messages surrounded her.

Brugger said she decided to organize the walk after spending time in Southeast Asia and the Balkans, areas where there are still unexploded land mines.

"I can walk from Minneapolis to D.C. and not fear stepping on a land mine," while other people cannot, she said. "I hope we achieve a ban."

The walk started May 7, outside the Minneapolis-based Alliant Tech Systems, which makes land mines. Brugger walked about 20 miles a day, wearing a cloth sign that read "Ban Land Mines." She held lectures at night, and said she was often joined by supporters along the way.

She said although a number of legislators joined her on her various stops, "I don't think we have an appointment with the president."

In May, shortly after Brugger began her walk, President Clinton decided against banning American use of land mines. The U.S. military deploys land mines in confrontation areas such as the Demilitarized Zone between North and South Korea while seeking a permanent worldwide ban on the weapons, which opponents say kill more than 20,000 people, mostly civilians, a year.

Leahy, who has lobbied Clinton to support a total ban on the weapon, congratulated Brugger and called for treating land mines the same way the government has treated chemical weapons. "We should ban them," he said.

Six Texans to speak in San Deigo

GOP release partial speakers lineup for national convention

WASHINGTON (AP) — Texans from Gov. George W. Bush and his father, former President Bush, to former Secretary of State James Baker will be in the spotlight at the upcoming Republican National Convention.

A partial lineup of speakers released Monday by Republican National Committee Chairman Haley Barbour shows six Texas elected officials will be sandwiched in among the "real people" Republicans are eager to showcase at the Aug. 12-15 convention in San Diego.

The idea, Barbour said, is to highlight "uncelebrated Americans — the 'ordinary' Americans who have turned Republican ideas into extraordinary accomplishments."

But the lineup Barbour unveiled at a news conference Monday is long on elected officials, short on "real people." He stressed that the list is only a partial glimpse of the final lineup, hedging on naming those who have yet to confirm their appearances.

Convention temporary co-chairs George W. Bush and New Jersey Gov. Christie Todd Whitman will preside during the event's first night, "contributing their personal perspectives on the greatness of America's people to our celebration of Republican achievements and ideas," Barbour said.

Former President Bush also will be heard from on the first night, as will former President Ford, former First Lady Nancy Reagan and retired Gen. Colin Powell.

Rivals who unsuccessfully challenged Bob Dole for the presidential nomination will appear on videotape during the convention, each speaking on a different topic ranging from taxes to immigration to balanced budgets. Pat Buchanan, who has yet to abandon the campaign trail, is the only one who has refused the video appearance.

Sen. Phil Gramm, who abandoned his presidential quest last February and is seeking re-election to a third Senate term, will discuss the balanced budget, said spokesman Larry Neal.

BASIN BRIEFING

Mayor recovering

EL PASO— El Paso Mayor Larry Francis, hospitalized after suffering a mild heart attack, intends to complete his second term, although it's uncertain when he will actually return to City Hall, an aide says. Francis was doing well Monday, a day after undergoing an emergency angioplasty, and his physician has indicated the prognosis is good, said Mark Smith, the mayor's executive assistant. "He's in good shape and in good spirits, but he needs to take it easy," said Smith. Francis, 63, drove himself to the hospital Sunday afternoon after experiencing chest pains. Smith said he did not know whether Francis has any history of heart trouble, but friends have said the mayor underwent an angioplasty about seven years ago.

Freon seized

HOUSTON — A cool 420 pounds of freon, believed to have been smuggled into Texas from Mexico, has been seized by U.S. Customs agents. The $10,000 worth of coolant was recovered over the weekend from a wholesale auto supply company, customs service officials said in a prepared news release on Monday. Since Jan. 1, the United States has been reducing the amount of freon in use for automobiles. Agents from Customs and the Environmental Protection Agency executed a search warrant on the auto supply shop on Friday. Evidence gathered indicates the freon was manufactured in Monterrey, Mexico and smuggled from Brownsville to Houston for distribution. It is illegal to bring freon manufactured in other countries into the United States, customs officials said.

New regulations?

WASHINGTON — Texas would be the state hit hardest by new regulations if the Senate ratifies the Chemical Weapons Convention, according to an analysis released Monday by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Some 212 chemical and petroleum producers as well as some tire and paint manufacturers in Texas likely would be affected by Senate ratification of the weapons treaty, the committee said. Additionally, another 460 sites in Texas potentially could be affected by the treaty, which is designed to end the manufacture, stockpile and use of chemical weapons. Story 3B

Still no date set for retrial of 1993 night-club murder

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Both sides in the murder trial of Sherry Henderson continue to await the date of the new trial, which earlier was moved from Midland County to Martin County.

Ms. Henderson faces a murder charge in the Nov. 27, 1993, shooting death of Angela Perkins-Belcher.

She was found guilty of shooting Ms. Belcher at the Zodiac II club and was sentenced to 50 years in prison during an August 1994 trial.

The conviction was overturned last year when an appeals court ruled the jury was entitled to hear certain evidence which wasn't allowed at the trial by the presiding judge.

Attempts to seat a panel for the retrial in June were unsuccessful for a number of reasons including public knowledge of the case, court officials said.

Her retrial was pending the ruling of 238th District Court Judge John Hyde. He was pondering whether to move her trial to an adjoining county because of public knowledge of the case or to try and seat a local jury panel.

Hyde elected to move the retrial to Martin County due to local publicity regarding the case.

The trial will be conducted in 118th District Court in Martin County, but no trial date has been established.

When the jury pool assembled a few months ago conflicts arose leading Judge Hyde to dismiss the jury panel.

Among the counties that were considered for a change of venue were Martin, Upton, Ector and Glasscock counties.

Midland County Assistant District Attorney Brian Carney said he anticipates the trial taking about five days to complete once it is started.

The trial originally was set to start June 3, but was postponed several times for different reasons.

Ellsworth Boswell says one of the best things about driving a bus is having the opportunity to see new places.

Bus driver tours America in style

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Ellsworth Boswell has driven to Asheville, North Carolina, San Diego and many places in between.

He's traveled with seniors, church groups, students, athletes, garden-club members and federal prisoners. He's listened to the aspirations of a Mexican man looking for work and a Japanese English professor writing a book for Japanese touring the Southwest.

He's watched the Dallas Cowboys play and pitched a tent with some Californians interested in hiking and camping in Texas.

"There's something different all the time ... You're meeting different people, going different places, learning new things all the time," Boswell, 60, said.

And that's what Boswell — a bus driver for the past four years — likes best about his job.

After 31 years in the oil and gas business — mostly in administration and materials management — Boswell sought another line of work because of the danger of layoffs and lack of retirement security in that field.

He got a lead on a job from a friend and bus driver. "Within a week's time, they had me certified and I was working," he said.

Boswell had never operated a bus before going to work for Carlsbad, N.M.-based Industrial Bus Lines Inc. doing business as All American Travels in Midland.

"It's not difficult at all and not uncomfortable to operate," he said. Boswell admits a driver must be aware of the bulk of the vehicle, noticeably larger than a school bus.

Boswell drives to wherever a group charters the bus, as well as a set route between Midland and Presidio.

Texans gather to discuss ways to include special-education students in classrooms

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — Texans concerned about special-education students in regular public school classrooms gathered for a "Day of Dialogue" Monday at the Omni Hotel. Sponsored by the Association of Texas Professional Educators (ATPE), about 130 people attended the inclusion summit.

"There are numerous examples of inclusion programs that have produced very positive results for all students. Unfortunately, there are far too many instances where inclusion has served as a source of frustration for teachers, administrators and parents alike," said Mike Moses, Texas Education Commissioner, in a statement to participants. "As educators, we should examine the cases that have met with success and offer ways to model that success."

"As educators, parents, activists and community leaders, it is imperative we provide the best possible learning environment for our children," ATPE President Shari Emmons said.

Teresa Gross, an educator in Andrews and ATPE director for Region 18, said some of the obstacles to implementing inclusion, or the practice of moving special education students into regular classrooms, are "attitude barriers, resistance to change, lack of staff development and training, and limited facilities, including classroom space."

Ms. Gross announced the summit in a Friday news conference in Odessa. On Monday she said the summit "will not solve all the problems. But dealing with this awareness is a beginning."

"I would hope that if implemented properly, inclusion wouldn't be such a major undertaking," Ms. Gross said. Fellow educators at the news conference said they were concerned with special-education students disrupting regular classrooms and being put into classrooms where teachers lacked the training to help them.

Ms. Gross said possible solutions would be to provide "more training or additional paraprofessionals to better deal with these students, and a redistribution of funds."

A recent ATPE survey indicated 85 percent of public school educators surveyed said that

More rambling thoughts ...

— I wonder what it is like to be one of those people who wakes up in the morning full of energy and an intense desire to face that day's challenges.

Witnesses testified Ms. Henderson retrieved a revolver from her car and went back to the club to find her wounded sister surrounded by a group of shouting people.

The jury found Ms. Henderson fired one fatal round in Ms. Belcher's chest.

The jury was not allowed to hear testimony detailing an ongoing "terror campaign" waged against Ms. Henderson by her ex-husband.

Testimony indicated both Ms. Henderson and her sister had been assaulted by the ex-husband on various occasions and that Ms. Henderson thought it might have been her ex-husband who had assaulted her sister that night.

Grounds for the appeal centered around Ms. Henderson's entire state of mind at the time of the shooting.

During the trial the judge ruled the testimony of Ms. Henderson's claim of being a battered spouse was not applicable to the charges.

DRIVE: Midland man tours nation on regular basis with charter groups

(From 1B)

Boswell benefits from the group's activities. Oftentimes he'll be invited to attend a function of the travelers such as watching an athletic event.

"Generally the driver will stay with the group in the same hotel. The driver's responsibility is to always have the bus ready and clean for the group," he said.

But although Boswell has many times traveled to the same place more than once, each trip is unique. "I've been to Big Bend about 8 times. No two groups do it in the same manner," he said.

Aside from the exposure to different places and different agendas, bus drivers are always seeing new faces.

"I think it's a courtesy to get to know them, to learn their names," Boswell said.

"Some people are just very, very interesting to talk to," he said. On the other hand, "some people can be more talkative than you want them to be. Technically, you're not suppose to talk to the driver."

Despite the seemingly vacation-like atmosphere of being a charter bus driver, it's still a job. Boswell may drive up to 10 hours a day and work five more hours not driving.

And naturally the job has its downside: folks who don't appreciate the effort you make, the occasional ticket from the state police, motorists with bad driving habits and those impatient with buses, Boswell said. A bus driver just needs to maintain a patient disposition, he said.

In light of all his travels, Boswell still enjoys home.

He has lived in Midland since 1974 and from 1966 to 1969. "I've been all over the country and haven't found another place I'd rather live," he said.

Midland has been a good place to raise a family, he said. Boswell and his wife, Mary Rae, have six grown children and six grandchildren.

Ellsworth Boswell at a Glance

Place of birth: Washington D.C.

Favorite movie: "Dances with Wolves."

Favorite food: "I enjoy everything but I'm currently on a diet."

Favorite vacation spot: "Probably Rockport, Texas because of the deep sea fishing."

If you could visit anyplace in the world where would it be? "Scotland because it's the country of my ancestors."

If you could change something about yourself, what would it be? "I've always felt I was too impatient. I like to get things done and get things done now."

If you won the lottery, what is the first thing you would do? "Probably not tell anyone ... I don't buy lottery tickets. My wife does." Boswell added that he doesn't buy lottery tickets because funds generated are not used for education as intended.

STATE IN BRIEF

■ $250 million to bring water to border

AUSTIN — Efforts to bring basic water and sewage services to some 1,500 colonias along the Texas-Mexico border will need $250 million more than currently allocated, according to state officials and colonia residents.

Experts at a Sunday conference on colonias estimated it would take $1 billion to bring water and sewage systems to the hundreds of thousands of people who call colonias, substandard subdivisions, home. And, they said the estimate does not include other basic services, like health care, schools and police and fire protection.

However, state, federal and private sources have contributed $750 million toward the effort.

"The most important thing we learned in this conference is we need (to begin) working to raise more money," said Teodora Trujillo, a community organizer working with colonia residents in El Paso County.

Organizers of the conference issued a draft report on colonias, offering some recommendations like:

■ Getting private foundations involved in funding colonia projects.

■ Creating a coordinating board to guide public and private projects.

■ Seeking designation as a federal empowerment zone for the border area to help raise money.

Dan Torrez, who coordinates colonia projects for Attorney General Dan Morales, said another idea would be to call a bond election, similar to a 1988 election that raised $250,000 million for colonia projects.

■ Man makes public appology for battery

HOUSTON — A man apologized to his wife Monday on the steps of Houston's City Hall as part of his court-imposed sentence for domestic abuse.

"Today I would like to talk to you about abuse," began Joel Witwer of suburban Deer Park. "But first I would like to apologize to my wife, Lisa, for all the things I put her through.

"As a child I was raised in a dysfunctional family and not knowing what abuse was. I learned to abuse then. I thought that was normal," Witwer said, his voice blaring over a loudspeaker.

Last December, Witwer was given a probated sentence for assaulting his wife. In January, he was charged with beating his wife again.

She declined to pursue the charge and state District Judge Ted Poe stepped in.

Poe amended Witwer's probated sentence and ordered him to publicly apologize for the incident and enroll in counseling programs.

"When you commit a crime in the home it is not a private matter if people are hurt," Poe said. "And the public will know about it and if need be, you will be humiliated by it."

"I'm not embarrassed," Mrs. Witwer said. "I'm not the one who did the crime. I'm just glad it's over with now."

■ Veasey leaves after repairing office

Veasey was assigned the lugubrious task of undoing the legacy of the area's former pathologist, Ralph Erdmann, who is serving a 10-year prison sentence for his part in botching possibly more than 100 autopsies.

Veasey holds no malice toward Erdmann, however.

"I think he's been beat up on enough," Veasey said. "I'm not trying to second-guess judges or prosecutors. But you look at the violent offenders in our society who have spent less time in prison. I think there's something incongruous."

Veasey, 44, will begin teaching and performing autopsies for the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston next month. He'll examine bodies of prisoners who die behind bars.

Among the prisons in the region is Erdmann's current home at the Ramsey II unit in Rosharon, about 30 miles from Galveston. It was the site of Veasey's first surgical action as a UT medical student, when he removed a bullet from the scalp of a prisoner.

Texas could be hit hard by chemical weapon rules

By Michelle Mittelstadt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Texas would be the state hit hardest by new regulations if the Senate ratifies the Chemical Weapons Convention, according to an analysis released Monday by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

Some 212 chemical and petroleum producers as well as some tire and paint manufacturers in Texas likely would be affected by Senate ratification of the weapons treaty, the committee said.

Additionally, another 460 sites in Texas potentially could be affected by the treaty, which is designed to end the manufacture, stockpile and use of chemical weapons.

The convention would impose new reporting requirements and regulatory burdens on producers of legal chemicals that could be illegally diverted for the manufacture of chemical weapons.

The automotive, biotech, pharmaceutical, textile, food processing and cosmetics industries would be among those most affected by passage of the convention, the analysis found.

"Compliance costs associated with the CWC will prove a massive new regulatory burden to many companies," Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Jesse Helms, R-N.C., wrote in a letter to his colleagues. "Unprecedented on-site inspections and data declarations may compromise trade secrets vital to the competitive edge of many businesses."

Helms complained that "legions of lawyers" would be needed by the companies to meet the new reporting requirements.

But the Chemical Manufacturers Association, which has been working for 15 years on ratification of the treaty, contends that the requirements are "a manageable burden."

The association, which represents more than 90 percent of all U.S. industrial chemical manufacturers, "fully and unconditionally" supports ratification, said spokesman Matthew Weinstock.

CMA lawyer Mike Walls said the organization's own study shows the treaty would impact 2,000 U.S. facilities — mainly chemical producers. Of that number, 1,800 would be required to fill out a simple one-page form, he said.

The other 200 would submit to on-site inspections by international inspectors. The treaty has been crafted to "make sure those inspections are not intrusive, do not jeopardize confidential trade information in any way and yet permit the rapid verification that the activities in those facilities are not in conflict with the Chemical Weapons Convention," Walls said.

Walls took issue with the committee's findings suggesting that more than 7,500 companies could be affected. The analysis "unfortunately is misleading," he said. "The range of companies who are actually affected on a day-to-day basis by the Chemical Weapons Convention is far, far less than suggested by those numbers."

Over Helms' objections, the Foreign Relations Committee last April recommended ratification of the treaty, which has been signed by more than 150 nations, including the United States during the Bush administration. It would require the destruction of all existing weapons and chemical weapons production facilities in signatory nations.

The committee's analysis was based on information provided by the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

New Jersey stands behind Texas in number of industrial sites likely to be affected with 206, according to the report. California is next with 142, followed by Ohio (140) and Illinois (133).

Congressional redesigning maps submitted to three-judge panel

HOUSTON (AP) — At least 15 maps redesigning Texas congressional districts were submitted Monday to a three-judge federal court panel working to ensure the legality of new boundaries for three districts that were found to be racially gerrymandered.

In a flurry of activity leading up to the 4 p.m. deadline set by the judges, the federal court clerk's office in Houston received a pair of proposed district lines from Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Pete Laney.

Another came from a pair of plaintiffs and still others from parties including the Galveston County Republican Party, an Hispanic civil rights organization, some Houston city officials and U.S. Rep. Eddie Bernice Johnson, whose 30th District in Dallas was among the three ruled unconstitutional by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The three-judge panel had asked the parties to submit redrawn boundaries also for Houston's 18th and 29th districts. Any redesign, however, also could affect a number of other adjacent Texas congressional districts.

Attorneys had indicated plans under discussion between the two sides ranged from changes in as few as 10 of the state's 30 districts to as many as 26.

The judicial panel, which includes Appeals Court Judge Edith Jones, and U.S. District judges David Hittner and Melinda Harmon, has indicated up to 14 districts may have to be redesigned if they do the reconfiguration.

The new boundaries became necessary after Republican plaintiffs argued successfully in a suit that racial criteria improperly were used in designing the districts.

They want new lines this year, as do GOP congressmen and party officials eager to expand their presence. The Democrats hold an 18-12 advantage in the Texas congressional delegation.

Democratic state officials and House members, meanwhile, are satisfied with the status quo and want the Texas Legislature to draw a new map next year.

Of the maps submitted Monday, one version of the Bullock-Laney plan would affect nine districts. The other would change 12.

The plaintiffs filed two new proposed plans, one changing 13 district lines, the other 17.

"Clearly from the discussions in court, the three judges in this case signalled to us and to the other pariticpants in this case that the plans we submitted should focus in on the northeast Texas region and the southeast Texas region and not go all the way, let's say, west of Waco," Ed Blum, one of the plaintiffs, said.

The judges could accept any of the plans or draw their own boundaries.

They also could throw out results from the March primaries and April runoffs in some of the state's 30 House districts and order an all-comers, open election on Nov. 5. Districts where no candidate emerged with at least 50 percent of the vote would have a December runoff.

The judges' other choice is to allow this year's elections to proceed under the current, unconstitutional lines.

The court has given interested parties until Wednesday to comment on the plans submitted.

Drought spawns grasshoppers

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — The drought has hurt crops, livestock and even caused a lawmaker to quit the Legislature. But it's proving good for one thing — grasshoppers.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service reports that grasshopper populations are exploding in many parts of the state.

John Jackman, an entomologist with the service, said grasshoppers usually lay eggs in the soil during the fall. Under normal circumstances and rainfall, the grasshoppers are controlled by a natural fungus that is in the soil. This year, that didn't happen, he said.

There could be as many as 200 species of grasshoppers in Texas, but they don't all feed on grass. Some are predators and may eat other grasshoppers, Jackman said.

"Because it's been relatively dry, grasshoppers are going to move around and find the greenest, lushest things," he said. "As they move off dry pastures to find something to eat, they are concentrated. That's why you see more of them."

Stop (if you can) at Midland Muffler and Brake

When you put on the brakes, the joke says, your life is in your foot's hands. So into whose hands do you put your brakes themselves?

Midland Muffler and Brake has been an important "stop" for Midlanders for over thirteen years. Customers appreciate their thoroughness and their use of top quality, fully guaranteed Raybestos parts.

With technology and regulations changing often these days, braking systems also change with each new model year. Technicians at Midland Muffler and Brake attend schools and seminars, as well as study books to stay current. They also keep up with the latest equipment and technology.

Technology changes can affect how the brakes operate. "Since asbestos was outlawed, brakes sound different now," Murray points out. Some noises are harmless, but a persistent squeaking should be checked out. It could be the "wear alarm" warning that your brakes are getting thin.

Midland Muffler will inspect your brakes at no charge, then give you a full report on what, if anything, needs to be done.

This same care extends to the exhaust system, including mufflers, pipes and catalytic converters. All these need to be in good working order for your car to be quiet and safe from toxic fumes. If you've noticed your car running louder than usual, it could be a hole in the muffler or a pipe. This could mean something more dangerous than noise is leaking; carbon monoxide.

"We can check your system and spot the problem quickly," says Murray. "Left alone, an exhaust leak can be very dangerous, especially on a vacation trip with the air conditioning on and the windows rolled up."

Likewise, a significant loss in power could signal problems with clogging in the catalytic converter. A clogged catalytic converter can cause back pressure in the exhaust system, leading to loss of fuel efficiency and fouling of plugs. Most converters last 100,000 to 150,000 miles, but engine problems can bring one to an early demise. Midland Muffler can perform a free exhaust system check to spot any problems.

If you have a large motor home, Midland Muffler's large rack can handle brakes, exhaust systems and alignments on these big vehicles. Murray says if you're planning a fall trip, now is a great time to get your worked on, to make sure it's safe for the road.

From now to the end of September, Midland Muffler is offering a special on Monroe shocks and struts. Save from $20 to $40 on Sensatrac struts and selected shocks.

That's an extra reason to stop by Midland Muffler and Brake while you can.

Midland Muffler and Brake is located at 3200 West Front, and has been in business since 1983. They do repair work on brakes, shocks and exhaust systems, as well as alignments. Store hours are 7:30 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, and 7:30 a.m. to noon on Saturday. The phone number is 699-7924.

Lifetime Siding owner Neil Letkeman stands in front of his work at the Zachary home. Lisa Zachary reports utility savings of $50 per month at their all-electric home after installing siding. Lifetime's bid was significantly lower than the national company they also called. They expect siding to pay for itself in 10 years on painting costs alone.

Save money with Lifetime Siding

Have you recently received an estimate for storm windows or siding that you thought was too high? Do you keep painting and repainting the outside of your home because you think maintenance-free siding is too costly?

One more estimate might change your mind.

Lifetime Siding's low overhead allows owner Neil Letkeman to save customers hundreds of dollars on steel and vinyl siding, soffit and fascia. Lifetime also offers dual glass tilt-in windows with a lifetime warranty, metal carport and patio covers (can be screened in), seamless rain gutters and metal roofing, as well as storm doors and windows.

By using screws and rivets instead of nails, Lifetime's can offer a lifetime warranty on parts and 15 years on labor. That means once it's installed, you don't have to worry about it.

From now to the end of August, save an additional 20 percent off Lifetime's already low prices.

You'll also start saving up to 25 percent on energy costs if you have Lifetime install insulation behind the siding.

Lifetime Siding has been in the Permian Basin for over 10 years. They specialize in siding, as well as storm doors and windows. A long list of references is available. Call 580-8125 for a free estimate. Financing is available.

Across the country and around the corner Aire Serv is America's Comfort Company®

If your electric bills have been significantly higher than usual this summer, let the comfort specialists at Aire Serv check your ducts; there may be a hidden problem there. Call them at 570-7405

Leaky ducts come with big bills

If your electric bills this summer seem outlandishly high, much more than your neighbors with comparable size houses, it may not be a problem with your air conditioner itself. Leaky or poorly installed ducts could be the culprits.

"Leaky ducts can negate the most efficient system," warns Aire Serv Sales Manager Lynn Crawford. "It doesn't matter if your unit is a 12 SEER (one of the most efficient units commonly available) if it's blowing out in the attic."

Many companies don't inspect the ducts when they check the system itself, meaning problems can go undetected for years. While this is a problem in all seasons, it becomes especially obvious on your electric bill during extreme temperatures. Aire Serv takes the extra time to make sure your system delivers the cold air where it's needed. This is one of their service distinctives.

> "If your allergies are much worse in the house than away from home, let Aire Serv check your system. Air conditioning problems could be the culprit,"
> Aire Serv

"Gaps in ducting can also pull in dirty air," Crawford points out. "Any room where dust or allergies are especially bad may have ducting problems."

Duct repairs are usually much less costly than replacing the whole system. Crawford says, typically, they should pay for themselves in lower electric bills within three years. Where electric bills are especially high, the payback could be in as little as three months.

Aire Serv can also verify if the filter and return air system are working properly. "Most people assume everything was installed correctly, but we see some pretty strange things," Crawford says. He adds that older homes especially are prone to incorrect installation because technicians know more about air flow today than they did years ago.

Problems in this area make a system especially vulnerable to dust and even mold or mildew. "If your allergies are much worse in the house than away from home, let Aire Serv check your system. Air conditioning problems could be the culprit," says Crawford.

For customers whose air conditioners are beyond repair, Aire Serv is currently having a sale on selected Carrier models. Call the office for details.

If you've been told your unit is beyond repair or needs costly repairs, call Aire Serv. They offer second opinions for free.

> "Leaky ducts can negate the most efficient system. It doesn't matter if your unit is a 12 SEER, if it's blowing out in the attic."

> Aire Serv

There is something else they do for free...if you're considering buying a house, Aire Serv will inspect the home's heating and air conditioning (including ducts) for free. Crawford admits it's no secret why they do this for free: "We want folks to experience our top notch service so they'll call us when their unit needs repair."

Another distinctive is the follow-up phone call. A few days after performing service, whether a new installation or a repair, Aire Serv personnel will call to check on customer satisfaction. "This helps us make sure the customer got what they needed," says Crawford.

When considering who to call for service, Crawford recommends calling the Better Business Bureau. Then you'll know who has a lot of complaints against them and who has few. Crawford says Aire Serv has an excellent BBB record.

Aire Serv is locally owned and operated by Lee Thompson. The company sells Carrier and other units and offers complete service on all brands. The phone number is 570-7405.

DEAR ABBY

Ex-husband's address is classified information

DEAR ABBY: I recently called my daughter-in-law and asked her to give me my ex-husband's new address. She refused to give it to me, so the next day I called my son "Jeff" at work and asked him for the address. He also refused, and said he doesn't give his dad information about me and he wouldn't give me information about his father. I don't care if Jeff gives such information to anyone — I am listed in the phone book.

Van Buren

Jeff said he would call his dad and ask if it was OK to give me the address. (His father and I are estranged and avoid all possible contact.) I merely want his address for my records, and I did not request a telephone number.

I know in which city he lives and have been thinking of moving to that city as well, but I certainly would not want to live in the same neighborhood. I may need the address in later years to claim Social Security benefits or something.

I am dismayed at my son's attitude. I can't understand why he is being so pigheaded about an address. Am I wrong for expecting him to give me this information? — A DISMAYED AND PERPLEXED MOM

DEAR DISMAYED AND PERPLEXED: Yes, you are wrong to expect your son to give you information about his father, especially since you are estranged from your former husband and you both avoid contact. Don't try to wheedle the information from Jeff or his wife. Putting your son and daughter-in-law in the middle will only alienate them from you. Jeff will tell his father you would like his address. But the decision whether or not to give it out rests with your ex.

DEAR ABBY: I just spoke with my younger sister whom I haven't seen in six years. I had planned on visiting her in September. She told me she had heard through the family grapevine that I was planning to bring "John," my live-in boyfriend. Abby, John is not just a boyfriend — we are getting married before the end of the year.

I am not a child. I have four grown children and a grandson, and I have been divorced for many years.

Well, to make a long story short, my sister informed me that when I visit her I will not be allowed to sleep with John. (It's not like she and her husband are saints. He did drugs and had plenty of women before they were married, and my sister was no angel either.)

I am so burned up over her holier-than-thou attitude that I'm considering canceling my trip. What are your thoughts on this, Abby? It's going to be a family reunion and I would hate to miss it. — ON THE FENCE

DEAR ON: Your sister and brother-in-law have the right to make the rules in their home. Stop fuming, get off the fence, take John and stay at a motel.

P.S. I hope you and John enjoy the family reunion!

CONFIDENTIAL TO "YOUR NEW READER IN PORTLAND, ORE.": True, charity begins at home, but it shouldn't end there. The way to have nothing to give is to give nothing.

Fulbright scholars celebrate program's 50th anniversary amid cuts to budget

By George Esper
Associated Press

Juleyka Lantigua can tell you to the precise minute when she opened the letter assuring her lasting membership in one of the most exclusive clubs in the world.

"It was May 15, at 12:03 a.m. I went completely insane. I woke up everyone in my house, screaming. 'Mommy! Mommy! They gave it to me! I can't believe this!' " And then I started crying."

The 20-year-old immigrant from the Dominican Republic had returned home late from work and a night out with friends when she found the letter awaiting her on the coffee table in the living room of her Bronx home.

The news: She had been awarded a Fulbright foreign scholarship for nine months of research in Spain on how Dominican immigrants have fared in that country.

Juleyka is one of a new generation of Fulbrighters — as their club is called — in a milestone class that marks the 50th anniversary of the program.

More than 200,000 Fulbrighters from the United States and other countries have lived and studied overseas since President Truman signed the legislation establishing the educational exchange program on Aug. 1, 1946. More than 90,000 Americans have gone abroad.

The program is named after U.S. Sen. J. William Fulbright, who sponsored the legislation two weeks after the United States dropped an atomic bomb on Hiroshima.

"It is a modest program with an immodest aim — the achievement in international affairs of a regime more civilized, rational and humane," Fulbright wrote in his book, "The Price of Empire," published in 1987. "I believed in that possibility when I began," he wrote. "I still do."

The Arkansas senator died in February 1995.

But while observances around the world commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Fulbright program, they are tempered by a hard reality: Congress has cut the program's budget by more than 20 percent, from $118 million to $92 million this year.

> "It's a modest program with an immodest aim — the achievement in international affairs of a regime more civilized, rational and humane.
> — Former U.S. Sen. J. William Fulbright wrote in his book 'The Price of Empire'

"I think it's because the government applied the same levels of reduction to every operation it had rather than setting priorities," says Thomas Farrell, a vice president of the Institute of International Education in New York, which administers the Fulbright program for Congress.

"The students programs are always the programs in the past that have been cut," says Farrell.

Farrell says a generation and a half of Fulbrighters were lost between 1969 and 1981 as the result of a drastic budget cut in 1969 ordered by President Lyndon Johnson, who committed U.S. forces to the Vietnam War, was feuding with Fulbright, who opposed the war.

"We seemed to not be producing for a while the same set of leaders the Fulbright program had produced in the '50s and '60s," says Farrell.

"There wasn't a new generation of Fulbrighters and that was because the program was cut back so drastically in 1969. It was only under President Reagan in 1981 where we started to see growth in the program again, more opportunities for U.S. students."

AP Laserphoto

Dr. Barbara Burn, 70, an early recipient of the Fulbright scholarship, poses in her office at the University of Massachusetts in Amherst.

One of those students is Juleyka Lantigua, who came to the United States with her family at age 10, speaking no English, and with little money.

"My neighbor's old clothes and hand-me-downs became the latest fashions at my house," she wrote in her application. "Santa Claus never brought battery-operated toys either. Thinking it would make a difference, at age 11 I started bagging groceries at the ... supermarket down the block. Funny thing is, I still think the $3.50 I earned in tips after school made a difference — an emotional one."

Farrell says Fulbrighters like Juleyka are one of the reasons for the program's significance and prestige.

"It's based on merit," he says. "It's set up to take the best and brightest. It doesn't matter whether your family has a lot of resources or a few resources. It's the only national scholarship program we have in the United States for any kind of international study."

Another reason for its success, says Farrell, is that it is a joint effort between the United States and 130 other countries with which it has agreements.

But supporters of the program fear even more cuts ahead.

"Under congressional plans to balance the budget by 2002, the Fulbright program would be reduced by at least 40 percent," says the Fulbright Association, in a statement. "Cuts of this magnitude would result in negative action by foreign partner governments and by the private sector, which together accounted for 31 percent of the funds received by the Fulbright program in 1994."

The association says seven foreign countries, including Austria, Finland, Germany, Japan, Morocco, Netherlands and Norway, contributed more to the Fulbright exchanges between the United States and their country than did the U.S. government in 1994.

The Fulbrighters include members of Congress and the press and prominent figures in education, science, the arts, business and entertainment.

Among the most prominent ones are U.S. Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan; Richard L. Thomas, chief executive officer of the First National Bank of Chicago; television journalist Garrick Utley; Ronald J. Grabe, astronaut mission commander for Discovery; authors John Updike and Eudora Welty; actor Stacy Keach; musician Aaron Copland; opera singer Anna Moffo; and Rita Dove, poet laureate emeritus of the United States.

"It was, it continues to be a very big part of my professional resume," says Fulbrighter Meredith Parente, 45, vice president and treasurer of the Brown-Forman Corp., a Louisville, Ky.-based company that makes or sells everything from Jack Daniels Tennessee Whiskey to Lenox china.

Parente's Fulbright in 1972 took her to the University of Bonn in Germany, where she studied economic and political science.

"The way I think about things was different after having lived and studied abroad," she says. "It makes you aware of how different the same set of facts or situations can look, and that open-mindedness is probably the one thing that you take forward both into personal and professional life."

"I think it's helped me professionally a lot," she says. "I didn't enter a business career thinking that I was going to have a top flight career in international finance. But it happened."

Barbara Burn, now 70 and associate provost for international programs at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, was among the early Fulbrighters. She was at the University of Bristol in England in 1950, doing research for her doctoral thesis in international law.

"I think it's still tremendously exciting," she says. "The Association of American Universities, when they're measuring quality, they're looking at the numbers of professors on the faculty that have Fulbrights.

"And it has certainly done some terribly important things in bringing collaboration, networks and joint research among scholars around the world."

As Juleyka Lantigua embarks on her journey nearly a half century later, joining about 800 others going abroad in this golden anniversary year, she muses about the meaning of the Fulbright.

"The Fulbright for me signifies ... that I can perform. I am of equal standing ...

"I want, especially, more people of color to know about it. I want to be a resource for people who are interested. And if it means that in the 100th anniversary, I'm going to be around. I want to be able to say, 'I have positively contributed to this. I've been able to give this more life.' "

There are times at the bridge table when you can turn the tables on a potential calamity. Today's deal is a typical example.

The auction was routine. Once South showed a limited, balanced hand North saw no point in raising South's suit with four-card support headed by the three top honors. Trying for an 11-trick game when there was a more attractive nine-trick one in sight would have been foolish.

West led a low diamond and declarer could not afford to hold up. After winning the king, declarer cashed two rounds of clubs and learned the bad news when West discarded a low heart. The queen of hearts came next, covered by the king and won by the ace in the closed hand. How would you proceed?

After some thought, declarer found the key play, cashing the table's remaining club honor. That posed an insoluble discarding problem for West. If West parted with a heart, declarer would score three more tricks in the suit; if West sluffed a diamond, declarer would have time to set up a long heart. That forced a spade pitch from the defender, and declarer read the position perfectly.

The ace and king of spades were cashed and a diamond from dummy fetched the nine and ten. West was able to win, cash three more diamond tricks to complete the defensive book, but then had to lead a heart away from the ten into declarer's J 9 tenace.

Various books have alleged the president had an affair with Monroe, who serenaded the president during a party at Madison Square Garden.

"Just because people have clucked for decades, why does this make it strange we would use that bit of iconography?" JFK Jr. said. "I don't see what possible taste questions could be involved. If I don't find it tasteless, I don't know why anyone would."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Elizabeth Dole, wife of Republican presidential candidate Bob Dole, turned 60 on Monday and celebrated her birthday at campaign stops in California, punctuated by one-liners from her husband.

"It's my wife's birthday," Dole told a rally at Redding in northern California. "She's now old enough to vote."

The crowd broke into the song "Happy Birthday."

The Doles planned to celebrate by taking in the movie "Independence Day" — about invaders from Outer Space who blow up the White House — then dining privately in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Dole's birthday comes a week after her husband's. Dole turned 73 last Monday, celebrating it in his hometown of Russell, Kan.

LONDON — The follow-up film to "A Fish Called Wanda" has flopped with American audiences.

John Cleese's 1988 movie was a smash, but the new "Fierce Creatures" is like a fish out of water in the United States.

"We're having to reshoot because we messed it up a bit," Cleese said Monday.

"Fierce Creatures" brings Cleese back together with Michael Palin, Kevin Kline and Jamie Lee Curtis in a comedy set at a zoo.

Some of the black humor of the film — including the death of one of four characters played by Kline — was acceptable to British audiences, but didn't go over well at previews in the United States.

Cleese said the cast would regroup in two weeks to reshoot scenes and he hoped for a Christmas release.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Garth Brooks is singing for three.

The country music star and his wife, Sandy, had their third child Sunday at a Nashville hospital, the singer's management company said Monday.

Garth Brooks and his wife Sandy become parents a third time.

Allie Colleen Brooks weighed 8 pounds and was 21 1/2 inches long at birth. Mother and daughter were doing well.

The baby is named for Sandy's paternal grandfather, Allie, and Garth's mother, Colleen. The Brooks have two other daughters, Taylor Mayne Pearl and August Anna.

CINCINNATI — TV game show host Ray Combs left his family with at least $500,000 in debts, his widow said.

"I don't have anything," Debbie Combs told The Cincinnati Enquirer in a story published Monday.

Between 1988 and 1994, Combs was the host of "The New Family Feud." The 40-year-old hanged himself June 2 in a suburban Los Angeles hospital where he was under observation for mental problems.

Lawyers found an $82,000 debt from Combs' Cincinnati comedy club that closed 18 months ago, assorted credit card and telephone bills, Mrs. Combs said.

Their house has been foreclosed on and the family is relying on a food pantry for meals, she said.

MALIBU, Calif. — Actor Robert Downey Jr., arrested three times in the past month, pleaded innocent to drug and weapons charges Monday and was ordered held under supervision in a drug rehabilitation center.

Municipal Court Judge Lawrence Mira warned Downey that he will be jailed without bail if he leaves the rehab center before an Aug. 23 hearing. Bail was set at $25,000.

Downey, 31, pleaded innocent to felony charges of cocaine and heroin possession and misdemeanor charges of carrying a concealed weapon, driving under the influence and being under the influence of drugs.

Sabo bat seized

CINCINNATI — Cincinnati Reds third baseman Chris Sabo was ejected in the second inning of Monday night's game against Houston when his bat cracked, leaving several pieces of cork on the field.

"It's a no-brainer," umpire crew chief Ed Montague said. "The bat broke and cork flew out."

Sabo left Riverfront Stadium before the Astros' 2-1 win and could not be reached for comment.

Sabo was facing Houston's Mike Hampton when he cracked his bat. A bat boy brought out three more. Sabo picked one and returned to the plate. He fouled off the next pitch, and Hampton thought he heard that bat crack, too. But Sabo kept it, and on the next pitch flied out to short left field. A large chunk of the barrel of the bat flew almost to third base.

North 127, South 95

HOUSTON — Gabe Muoneke didn't win the slam-dunk contest but he threw in 15 of his 24 points in a breakaway third quarter, leading the North All-Stars to a 127-95 victory over the South Monday night in the Texas High School Coaches Association basketball game. The North extended its streak to four straight victories in the annual game sponsored by McDonald's but they didn't pull away from a 52-41 halftime lead until Muoneke took off in the third quarter.

The victory evened the series at 26-26. Muoneke, who will attend the University of Texas, was named the North's most valuable player and Quincy Sims of West Oso, the smallest player on the court at 5-6, scored 19 points and got the South's vote as MVP. By the end of the period, the North was leading 98-63 and the fourth quarter turned into a shooting display by Ryan Mendez of Burleson, who averaged 38.3 in the regular season but had three fouls and seven points at the half.

But he showed his sharpshooting skills in the final period and finished with 25 points, hitting 10 of 13 shots from the field.

Lasorda, 68, says his days are done

By Ken Peters
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES — Tom Lasorda, who began bleeding Dodger blue when the team still played in Brooklyn, left the job he loved and lived for 20 years when he retired Monday as Los Angeles' manager.

Choking back tears at one point and respinning old baseball yarns at another, the 68-year-old Lasorda said health concerns and the desire to spend more time with his family convinced him to leave the dugout and become a team vice president.

Lasorda underwent angioplasty June 26 after it was determined he had a heart attack. He said he was cleared medically to return to the dugout, but realized it made sense to retire.

"For me to get into a uniform again — as excitable

Hall ends 43-year career

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

Midland's Jim Hall, who won an Indy 500 championship and had a driver win rookie of the year, announced that he will retire from auto racing at the end of the 1996 season.

Hall

The 61-year-old owner and operator of the Hall Racing Inc., said this season will be his last, marking the end of a career which started in 1954 when he took the driver's seat in his first race while a California Institute of Technology student.

This season, the Hall Racing team currently stands as a strong contender for the IndyCar Championship. Going into Sunday's Marlboro 500, driver Gil de Ferran stood in third place behind leader Jimmy Vasser. At a press conference on Sunday, Hall said that getting the title and not his retirement is the main focus of the team.

"I got together with the guys on the team and Gil last week and told them my decision," said Hall, who won the PPG Cup national championship in 1980 with Johnny Rutherford as his driver. "But also told them we have a championship to win. That is where

Carl Lewis celebrates after winning the gold medal in the long jump. At age 35, Lewis equaled American discus thrower Al Oerter with four straight Olympic event gold medals.

Lewis matches gold standard with ninth win

By Rob Gloster
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Carl Lewis trotted to the long jump pit, scooped some sand into a plastic bag and waved it triumphantly to the crowd.

It was a memento from the place where he had written a brilliant ending to a glorious Olympic career, soaring to a record-tying ninth gold medal.

As Lewis won his fourth straight Olympic long jump with a leap of 27 feet, 10 3/4 inches on Monday night, Michael Johnson moved halfway toward making some history of his own, winning the first half of what would be an unprecedented 400-200 double.

Lewis unleashed his longest jump in two years to become only the second athlete — along with discus thrower Al Oerter — to win the same track event in four straight Olympics.

His ninth gold medal ties him with U.S. swimmer Mark Spitz, 1920s Finnish distance runner Paavo Nurmi and Soviet gymnast Larissa Latynina for the Olympic record. American Ray Ewry won 10 Olympic golds in standing jump events at the turn of the century, but two of those came in the unofficial 1906 Athens Games.

Lewis won't get a chance for a record 10th gold because he's not on the U.S. 400-meter relay team. He finished eighth in the U.S. trials in the 100, and wasn't chosen for the relay by coaches.

"The only experience left would be to become the all-time gold medal winner," said Lewis, who was joined by Oerter at a news conference. "It's kind of sad. If it was up to me, I'd be running in that relay. I'd be anchoring that relay and I'd be doing a great job."

Johnson won the 400 meters in an Olympic-record 43.49 seconds, his 55th straight victory in a 400 final over the last 7 1/2 years.

He's also favored to win the 200 that begins Wednesday and become the first man to win the Olympic 400 and 200.

He had hoped to break Butch Reynolds' world record of 43.29, but was unable to accomplish that feat on a steamy, 85-degree night.

"I'm not disappointed," he said. "I'm extremely pleased with my win, and that's what I came here for, to win. I'll have other opportunities to set the world record."

With a record eighth Winston Cup title beckoning, Dale Earnhardt isn't about to give up standings points without a fight, no matter how painful.

Earnhardt, who fractured his left collar bone and sternum in a crash during Sunday's DieHard 500 at Talladega (Ala.) Superspeedway, said he will attempt to qualify his Goodwrench Chevrolet on Thursday.

Then he plans to at least start Saturday in the Brickyard 400 at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, where he is defending champion.

Under NASCAR rules, the driver who takes the green flag earns the points for that race, even if he gives way to a relief driver after the first lap.

Despite finishing 28th in Sunday's 42-car field, after being involved in the wild, multi-car crash at about 190 mph, Earnhardt fell only one spot in the standings.

He is third, trailing new series leader

MISD FACILITIES: A CLOSER LOOK

Relief pitch

Voters could face another bond decision

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

On June 1 of this year voters rejected a Midland Independent School District $110 million bond proposal. Passage of the bond would have led to renovations and expansions on the Midland Lee and Midland High campuses that would solve overcrowded facilities and gender inequity problems in athletics.

The Midland school board meets Monday and is expected to make plans for drawing up a new, leaner bond proposal. But for now, the coaches and students of the Lee and MHS athletic programs will have to go several seasons without relief.

At least two questions remain regarding the issue of inadequate athletic facilities at the high schools: How much of a priority are athletics when the school system faces other funding needs? And, are Midland taxpayers willing to help fund athletic facility upgrades?

"We were really hurt by the bond election," MISD Athletic Director Tim

Angels break open win over Caps

■ Midland comes through with 8-3 victory over Shreveport.

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

Before Monday night's Midland Angel game at Christensen Stadium, the Halo Heroes could do little right. Dropping one-run decisions, making many mental errors, and just doing anything and everything to signal they were ready to be excluded from the second half Texas League race. Shoot even the sure thing, Mike Freehill was having his problems.

But of course, when everybody is ready to just go ahead and wish the Angels a good offseason, they do something they haven't done since July 7 — come away with a resounding win.

Backed by good pitching and timely hitting, the Angels defeated Shreveport 8-3 marking the first time that the Angels have defeated any opponent by more than two runs in over three weeks.

"He (Rob Bonanno) was really good and pitched a great game," Midland Angel manager Mario Mendoza said. "We also got a couple hits at the right time and two three-run home runs. That made things easier for Bonanno."

The timely hitting came and came early against Shreveport starter Troy Brohawn (1-1 for the season). Five first inning-runs on just two hits gave the Angels a very comfortable cushion.

The biggest hits of the inning came on Ben Molina's bases-loaded single to deep center that drove in two runs. Jovino Carvajal followed later in the inning with his first home run in his return to Christensen from Triple-A Vancouver. The speedster, who was moved to the No. 7 slot three days ago, drove in three with a blast to left.

Midland, which improved to 15-26 in the second half, then turned the ball over to Bonanno, who had by far his best performance since being promoted from Lake Elsinore. Shreveport fell to 21-20.

Except for a bomb in the second inning to Johnny Bess and to Brett King's mammoth shot that landed just short of Lamesa in the third, there was little doubt who was in control. When second baseman Keith Luuloa went to his right, swiped a ground ball up and flipped it with his glove hand to start a 6-4-3 double play. The scarce crowd at Christensen knew it was his night.

After the game, Bonanno said that once he got settled down everything was just working well.

DALLAS COWBOYS REPORT

Ex-officer, lawyer defends Hernandez

■ Former undercover drug cop to represent man accused of Irvin murder-for-hire scheme.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Drug dealers once put out a contract on Frank Perez's life. Now the attorney and former undercover drug cop represents the man accused of soliciting a murder contract on Michael Irvin.

Perez says he'll use his experiences to find a flaw in the case against ex-Dallas officer Johnnie Hernandez.

"I'm just going to tear it apart and make sure they did everything right," said Perez, who left the Dallas police force in 1993 to become a criminal defense attorney.

"I know what the proper procedures are and I don't think they followed the proper procedures," he said. "I like Johnnie. I like Johnnie a lot and I really want to help him."

Hernandez, 28, resigned from the Dallas Police Department on June 27, the day he was arrested on a solicitation of capital murder charge and an unrelated bribery charge. He denies the allegations and is free on bond pending trial early next month.

Prosecutors say Hernandez wanted Irvin killed because his girlfriend, Rachelle Smith, said the football star threatened her. Smith was a star witness at Irvin's drug possession trial, which ended two weeks ago with the Cowboys receiver pleading no contest.

The officer was arrested after giving a down payment for Irvin's murder to an undercover agent, authorities say. Perez argues that Hernandez tried to back out of the deal but was entrapped by police.

Perez, a 1993 Southern Methodist University law graduate, was named Officer of the Year by Dallas police officials in both 1988 and 1989. The honors came as he helped infiltrate and break up major drug rings in the city. In time, his work made him an assassination target. Perez says one Mexican drug family felt particularly offended when he seized $1 million in drug proceeds.

Word began trickling back to police headquarters that someone was willing to pay $25,000 to have Perez murdered. Later, someone firebombed his front porch. No one was injured in the firebombing, but Perez decided it might be time to get out.

"It was getting dangerous," he said. "It was common knowledge that they wanted Frank Perez dead. It was a stressful time."

Dallas County prosecutor Toby Shook said his adversary's background will make for an interesting trial.

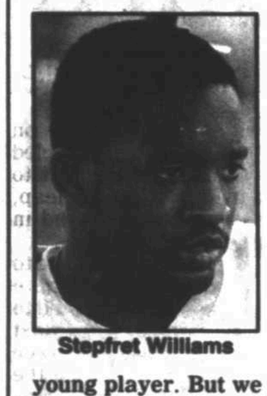
"I'm sure Frank will bring all his experience to bear on this," said Shook. "That worries me, but then I worry about every lawyer I go up against."

Never say never again: Aikman praises rookie WR

By Chip Brown
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — Troy Aikman never praises rookie receivers in training camp. Never.

He didn't have anything good to say about Alvin Harper or Kevin Williams when they arrived from college for their first camps as Dallas Cowboys, and they've gone on to become stars.



Stepfret Williams

So, either Aikman is softening up, or third-round draft pick Stepfret Williams of Northeast Louisiana is something special.

"I've said it all along, I think the guy can play," Aikman said. "We want to reserve a little bit of our enthusiasm because he is a young player. But we all think that he's going to do a great job for us."

The Cowboys need someone to emerge at wideout with All-Pro Michael Irvin suspended from the first five games of the season after pleading no contest to cocaine possession charges.

Dallas coaches are hoping Williams, who has consistently made the tough catch in practices and scrimmages, turns out to be a steal from a draft heavy with receivers.

"The draft was deep in receivers this year and we thought he was one of those guys in that second echelon who was as good as any of them," coach Barry Switzer said. "He's got good speed and he can help on special teams."

Switzer has said he is counting on Williams to be in a rotation with Kevin Williams and Deion Sanders at receiver when the season starts. He may also be a return specialist, although he fumbled a punt in a 35-34 preseason victory over Oakland on Saturday.

The rookie has gained Aikman's confidence by using his speed (4.3 in the 40-yard dash) to run precise routes. He has quickly grasped the Cowboys' intricate timing on offense, which frequently calls for the quarterback to throw to an area on the field and trust that his receivers will be there.

"We ask quite a bit of our receivers in the routes that they are asked to run and the adjustments that they have to make," Aikman said. "You can tell he's come from a good college program, where a lot was asked of him. He's picked things up much quicker than what most guys do."

At a pencil-thin 6-feet and 170 pounds, Williams says he has simply had to work harder than most to become a pro prospect.

"I feel like other teams were saying that I was too small, but I don't feel like that's a problem," said Williams, who attributes his work ethic to growing up in tiny Minden, La., and a father who doubled as his high school coach.

"He was hard on me," Williams said of his father, Stepfret Williams Sr.

Williams says there is no shortage of inspiration each day in camp.

"You have to work really hard every day because everyone is so good," Williams said. "It's a big step coming out of Northeast Louisiana. This is the best competition there is."

Williams had only two scholarship offers out of high school.

As a senior at Northeast Louisiana, he caught a school-record 66 passes for 1,056 yards and 12 touchdowns while earning first-team All-Independent honors. He finished his college career with 15 school records.

And what about that name?

"All I know is my mom named me after my dad," he said. "We are probably the only two Stepfrets in the world."

HOUSTON (AP) — Odell James expects to use tonight's Texas High School Coaches' Association All-Star football game to prove one more time that he is a quality quarterback.

"I think I've proven to the people in Houston that I can play," James said. "Now, I'll get a chance to play against players from all over the state and I'll come to this game and try to show everyone that I can play against anybody around the state of Texas."

James will be the starting quarterback for the South All-Stars for the 7:30 p.m. kickoff in Rice Stadium against the North All-Stars, who lead the series 33-21-6.

James has little left to prove as a schoolboy. He has been on the Texas football map since leading Aldine MacArthur to the Class 5A state finals as a sophomore. James rushed for 3,261 yards, passed for 2,577 yards and accounted for 76 career touchdowns, 54 running and 24 passing.

"He's an impressive athlete," South coach D.W. Rutledge said. "We expected him to be good coming in but he's exceeded our expectations. He has the size and the ability to run the ball. Those things jump out at you."

Rutledge's offense is run-oriented but that won't limit James.

"It's difficult to get an offense in and get the protection you like, but the thing about Odell is he has the ability to get outside and challenge the perimeters and to run with the football," Rutledge said.

RELIEF: MHS, Lee athletics face crunch times

(From 1C)

Whalen said. "I promise you, if the general public had been aware of the cramped conditions in extracurricular areas they would have wanted to do something about it."

MHS boys basketball coach Jack Stephenson was surprised by the election outcome.

"I was so annoyed and bewildered that the bond issue failed," Stephenson said. "I couldn't believe a community wouldn't support it. I always felt like there wasn't a better place to put money than in the future of the community, in the kids."

Whalen thinks most voters focused on the $110 million bond figure without realizing what the money would buy.

"I think a lot of people when they heard the bottom line they almost went into panic and said, 'Good Lord, we'll be in debt the rest of our lives.' " Whalen said. "But when are we going to do it right, that's my question."

Some voters may feel the athletic programs are not important enough to warrant new facilities.

"I certainly can't refute that we are here (primarily) for academics," Whalen said. "However, there are a lot of kids who stay in school because of extracurricular activities.

"Anytime you spend money on athletics there are going to be people in this community who are going to throw up their hands and say, 'Why spend on athletics?' People who are anti-athletic, they think we are just doing this for fun and games. They say these kids aren't going to be professional athletes. But we have math students who won't be professional mathematicians and people in the choir who won't be professional musicians. The more positive things you can expose students to, the better off they are."

Another question taxpayers have is whether the athletic programs really need as much as the district is asking for.

MISD Executive Director of Auxiliary Services Wilson Heidelberg admits it can be hard convincing voters of athletic needs.

"When you try to justify it (athletic spending), it doesn't sound like a big deal. (Voters say) 'Oh, they can get by,' " Heidelberg said. "But you can't get by, or you can, but it's awful tough to do."

The need for off-season programs, which all sports have adopted, can also be a hard sell.

"I know there will be people saying you don't need an off-season program," Heidelberg said. "But if you're going to compete in this district you do. Off-season programs are as important as season programs if you're going to compete."

Whether voters think high school athletics is valuable enough for passage of high-priced bonds or not, Midland's high school athletes and coaches will have to make do with current facilities for some time to come. And the crunch times for Lee and MHS sports will continue.

Roby takes second job

By Michael A. Lutz
AP Sports Writer

SAN ANTONIO — Reggie Roby signed with the Houston Oilers to do one job and now he has two.

Roby replaced Rich Camarillo as the Oilers' punter but Camarillo's departure left kicker Al Del Greco without a holder, something Roby hadn't practiced since 1985.

The veteran Roby, beginning his 14th year in the NFL, thinks the job will be easier to learn because of Del Greco's attitude.

"Al's not like a lot of kickers around the league," Roby said. "A lot of guys are real particular. The laces have to be a certain way. It has to turn an exact way or 'I'm going to miss and it's your fault.'"

Del Greco, among the league's steadiest kickers last season, does have some standards.

"Al says look, get the ball down on the spot, turn it a little bit and be sure the laces don't face me," Roby said. "Nine out of 10 kickers won't say that. Al is just so confident in his abilities, he knows he'll kick the ball through.

"That makes it easier for me."

"The important thing is that Bruce is such a good snapper," Del Greco said. "When he's on, Reggie doesn't have to do a lot."

Del Greco is accustomed to changing holders. He estimates he's worked with 16 holders in his 13 year NFL career.

"I've gotten to the point I don't care who does it as long as it's someone who gives 100 percent every time and cares," Del Greco said. "If someone can get it down and get it down fast so I can get a good look at it, it makes a huge difference."

Roby ranked ninth in the NFL with a 42.8 gross punting average for Tampa Bay last season and ranks among the top 10 all-time punters with a career 43.5 average.

So, it's not taxing his practice time to get ready to do his first job.

"I've played so long I don't have to get nervous," he said. "Of course, your adrenaline is flowing but why get nervous. I stand back there 4-5 times a game and kick the ball.

"If I get nervous I shouldn't be here."

"This is like a game for me," he said. "I'm a grown man at 34, getting paid to do what he's done all his life. It's never business. If it turns into a business it's time to turn it in."

Judge dismisses rape case against Va. Tech footballers

By David Reed
Associated Press Writer

ROANOKE, Va. — In a decision that dismissed a rape case involving two Virginia Tech football players, a judge ruled that Congress exceeded its authority by enacting a law that lets women sue their attackers in federal court.

Christy Brzonkala, the first woman to sue under the 1994 Violence Against Women Act, claimed the two players raped her in their dormitory suite in 1994.

She sought $10 million from reserve linebacker Antonio Morrison and unspecified damages against defensive back James Crawford. Kiser dismissed Virginia Tech and a third player, Cornell Brown, from the lawsuit earlier this year.

Brzonkala contended the attack was motivated by their hatred of women and was not a random act of violence.

U.S. District Judge Jackson Kiser, who ruled Friday but did not release the decision until Monday, said gender discrimination is not like racial bias, so the 1994 law patterned after the Civil Rights Act is unconstitutional.

"Without a doubt, violence against women is a pervasive and troublesome aspect of American life which needs thoughtful attention," Kiser wrote. "But Congress is not invested with the authority to cure all of the ills of mankind. Its authority to act is limited by the Constitution, and the constitutional limits must be respected if our federal system is to survive."

The football players, who are attending summer school, have unlisted telephone numbers in Blacksburg. Jim Morrison of Chesapeake said he and his son were hoping the case would be dismissed before practices began in August.

"It's sort of like a 25-yard gain — it's not a touchdown but it's a whole lot better than being sacked," said David Paxton, Morrison's attorney.

Crawford's attorney, Joe Painter of Blacksburg, said, "It's great, but how many times does James have to be exonerated?"

China's Xiong Ni pulled in front of Lenzi on the last dive. Scott Donie of Houston was fourth.

Novotna's opponent in Wednesday's semifinals will be No. 3 Arantxa Sanchez Vicario of Spain, who beat No. 8 Kimiko Date of Japan 4-6, 6-3, 10-8.

The other U.S. women won, which means a semifinal showdown Wednesday between Mary Joe Fernandez and Lindsay Davenport. Fernandez, seeded seventh, rallied past No. 2 Conchita Martinez of Spain 3-6, 6-2, 6-3. Davenport, seeded ninth, beat No. 4 Iva Majoli of Croatia 7-5, 6-3.

Wes Barnett finished sixth with an American-record total of 870 3/4 pounds. Konstantine Starikovitch and Barnett each broke the American record in the snatch, with Barnett lifting 385 3/4 pounds before Starikovitch lifted 391 1/4. In the clean-and-jerk, Barnett set another American record, lifting 485 pounds.

Brazil's Torben Grael and Marcello Ferreira won the Star class. Nikolaos Kaklamanakis of Greece, the world champion, won the men's Mistral. And two golds clinched Sunday became official: Lee Lai-shan of Hong Kong in women's windsurfing, and Mateusz Kusznierewicz claiming Poland's first yachting medal in the Finn class.

Miller beaming with golden smile

■ Shannon Miller closes her Olympic career with her second gold of the Games, winning the balance beam apparatus final.

By Nancy Armour
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Shannon Miller waited four years for an Olympic gold medal. Now she's got two.

Vitaly Scherbo has a pair of medals, too, they're just not the color he wanted.

Miller won the gold medal Monday night with a near-flawless performance on the balance beam, where she tied for the silver in Barcelona. None of her five medals in 1992 was gold; she won her first last week with the rest of the U.S. women's gymnastics team.

Miller had trouble in the all-around and Sunday's vault final, but she pulled it all together on the beam. The grin on her face as she finished said it all, and coach Steve Nunno threw his hands into the air in celebration.

"I don't know what else to say, but it feels great," Miller said. "It was a great note to end on."

The crowd, which gave her its loudest cheer since the team finals, cranked it up when Miller's score of 9.862 flashed. When the final standings were posted, the crowd gave Miller a standing ovation and the chants of "U-S-A' began.

Miller's teammate Dominique Dawes, getting ready to compete in the floor exercise final, ran over to give her a hug.

All-around champion Lilia Podkopayeva of Ukraine won the silver and Gina Gogean of Romania got the bronze. It was her fourth medal of the games.

Miller's teammate, Dominique Moceanu, finished sixth on the beam after a disastrous spill. The 14-year-old was trying to complete three aerial back handsprings on the 4-inch-wide beam, but missed her footing as she landed the second one.

Her right foot never landed on the beam, she couldn't get enough height and came crashing down on the next handspring, smacking the top of her head on the beam.

She got right back into the routine and finished solidly. But she started shaking her head as she walked off the podium.

Scherbo won bronze in the men's vault final, failing once again in his quest for a record seventh gold medal. Alexei Nemov of Russia, trying to tie a medal record of his own, won the gold. Yeo Hong-Chul of South Korea won the silver.

The crowd roared when Scherbo, of Belarus, stepped onto the runway, but he showed no reaction, staring intently at the vault. He took off, his legs pumping as he flew down the runway before cartwheeling onto the takeoff board, pushing high off the vault and twisting 2 1/2 times in the air.

His landing wasn't perfect as he took a slight hop, but the crowd still booed when his first score of 9.712 was posted. He clapped his hands together once as he prepared for his second vault.

Scherbo was off-center as he hit the vault on his second effort, nearly missing it. But he soared high, then windmilled his arms to save a solid landing. He acknowledged the crowd's cheer with a wave and a slight smile, smiling again as they booed his second score.

The 9.737 gave him a combined score of 9.724, good for third place. He already has a bronze from the all-around competition.

Nemov, trying to tie the gymnastics record of seven medals in one Olympics, put together two solid vaults, then had to wait as the final six competitors tried to match him.

Yeo looked as if he might overtake Nemov with his first vault, but he went flying backward on his second landing. He walked to the edge of the podium and squatted down, burying his face in his hands.

Nemov finally began accepting congratulations from his coach when all-around champion Li Xiaoshuang of China, who went second to last and was the last real challenge, blew his vault.

U.S. softball team pulls off another late victory

■ Sheila Cornell's bases-loaded single in the 10th gave the U.S. a 1-0 win over China and a berth in the gold medal game.

COLUMBUS, Ga. — This time, pitcher Lisa Fernandez saw her teammates come through, and the United States softball team beat China 1-0 in 10 innings Monday night to move into the Olympic gold medal game.

Sheila Cornell hit a one-out, bases-loaded single and the Americans had their second straight thrilling victory over the Chinese. Three days ago, Cornell hit a game-winning, two-run homer in a 3-2 win against China.

Four days ago, Fernandez saw her bid for a perfect game end when Australia's first hit, a two-out, two-run homer by Joanne Brown, gave the Aussies a 2-1, 10-inning win Friday and handed the Americans their first loss in the Olympics and second in 111 games.

But Fernandez had another strong game Monday night, allowing three hits and striking out 13.

After two extra innings, the rules state a team starts the 10th with a runner on second. The Chinese were unable to score, with Fernandez striking out Xu Jian to end the inning.

In the bottom of the inning, Dot Richardson started on second, Julie Smith was hit by a pitch by Wang Lihong before the next batter grounded to short, but the throw to third hit Richardson in the back and the bases were loaded.

After Kim Maher struck out, Cornell worked the count to 3-1 before singling up the middle to score Richardson.

Cornell took two steps, broke into a wide grin and raised both arms in triumph. Richardson scored and then joined the rest of the Americans in a race to first base, where they mobbed Cornell.

The United States blew several scoring chances because of problems on offense.

The Americans put their leadoff runners on in the fifth and seventh, but base-running blunders ended the threats. A poor bunt in the third killed another scoring chance.

Xiong wins springboard

ATLANTA — Three Olympics and three medals for Chinese diving star Xiong Ni, the latest one gold.

Xiong and countryman Yu Zhuocheng pulled away from Americans Mark Lenzi and Scott Donie midway through the springboard finals Monday. Not even Lenzi's final spectacular dive could catch them.

Xiong won a silver medal in 1988 and a bronze in 1992, both on the 10-meter platform. Yu finished second, and Lenzi, the defending champion, took third.

Donie, 27, was in third after a strong fourth dive. But he had a poor fifth dive, a reverse 2 1/2 somersault from a pike, and dropped to fifth place with one dive left.

The 28-year-old Lenzi, who is retiring after the Summer Games, made the last dive of his career the best of the night, a reverse 3 1/2 somersault from the tuck position with a high degree of difficulty of 3.5. Lenzi received a 92.40 from the judges, the highest score of finals night, to put pressure on the Chinese.

Yu was the next-to-last diver and needed a 78.73 to beat Lenzi for second place. He got 83.16. Xiong, nearly flawless in his previous 16 dives, went last. He needed a 77.20 to clinch first over Yu and came through again, scoring 87.72 on an inward 3 1/2 somersault from a tuck position.

U.S. women withstand South Korea

By Chuck Shoffner
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — Staggered by South Korea's 59 percent first-half shooting, the U.S. women's basketball team switched to a stifling matchup zone. The result: another runaway victory for the Americans.

The United States won 105-64 Monday, finishing preliminary Olympic play at 5-0 and topping the 100-point mark for the third time.

After U.S. coach Tara VanDerveer called for the matchup zone, South Korea missed 13 of its first 14 shots in the second half and 25 of its first 28. The Koreans finished the half at 6-for-35 (17 percent) after knocking going 20-for-34 in the first half.

"We got to their shooters quicker and forced their shooters to take shots they didn't want to take," U.S. center Lisa Leslie said. "It got them out of their rhythm."

With South Korea throwing up bricks, the United States began the half with a 17-2 run that took its lead from 60-50 to 77-52, and it was no contest after that.

So now it's on to the medal round, which begins Wednesday, and the United States is a solid favorite to win the gold. The Americans are averaging 101.4 points and winning by an average of 33.6.

"The important thing is that we're going into the medal round with a lot of confidence," forward Katy Steding said. "There's some good teams on the other side, a couple we haven't played. We'll do a lot of scouting, watch some video and come out ready to play."

Reserve Nikki McCray led five U.S. players in double figures with 16 points as VanDerveer rested her starters extensively in a game that was meaningless because the United States already had clinched first place in its pool.

Sheryl Swoopes played more than any starter and was in for just 18 minutes. Swoopes finished with

Seles' medal bid doused by Novotna

By Steven Wine
AP Sports Writer

STONE MOUNTAIN, Ga. — Jana Novotna ended Monica Seles' bid for an Olympic medal today, rallying to beat the top seed 7-5, 3-6, 8-6 in a 2 1/2-hour quarterfinal marathon.

Novotna refused to wilt on a warm, sunny day, and she came back from a 5-3 deficit in the third set. Seles staved off three match points before hitting a backhand inches long to give Novotna the victory.

The sixth-seeded Novotna then jumped for joy, raised her arms and broke into a grin. Her opponent in Wednesday's semifinals will be No. 3 Arantxa Sanchez of Spain, who outlasted No. 8 Kimiko Date of Japan 4-6, 6-3, 10-8.

A center court crowd of 10,000, largest of the tournament, chanted and cheered in vain for Seles, who was born in Yugoslavia and became an American citizen in 1994.

Americans Mary Joe Fernandez and Lindsay Davenport also had quarterfinal matches scheduled today. Fernandez and Davenport, who are close friends, could meet in the semifinals.

On Sunday, Andre Agassi and MaliVai Washington gave fans the match they wanted, if not the result. A boisterous crowd of 5,000 watched the U.S. teammates lose in second-round doubles to Ellis and Wayne Ferreira of South Africa, 7-5, 6-7 (2-7), 6-0.

The Atlanta Committee for the Olympic Games called in extra police to control the crowd after fans protested a scheduling change that was going to prevent them from seeing the match.

When informed that Agassi and Washington wouldn't be playing in the stadium as scheduled, spectators delayed a women's match with booing and chanting.

And when 200 to 300 angry fans gathered outside an adjacent court where the revised schedule called for the Americans to play, officials feared the crowd would storm the gates. More than 20 police cars arrived, but the situation remained tense until an official announced the schedule change had been reversed.

Taimazov wins 238-pound class gold medal with world record effort in clean-and-jerk

By John Nadel
AP Sports Writer

ATLANTA — If there was any question about Timur Taimazov's condition before the Olympics, the Ukrainian weightlifter gave an emphatic answer Monday.

Taimazov decisively won the gold medal in the 238-pound class, lifting 947 3/4 pounds thanks in part to a world-record effort in the clean-and-jerk.

The world champion in 1993 and '94, Taimazov didn't compete in major competitions last year.

After the world championships in 1994, "I decided to take it easy, get some rest," Taimazov said. He started to train for the 1995 world championships in China but injured a wrist.

"I could have gone, but I didn't want to lose," he said. "Obviously, it was a hard thing. I was really concerned about that."

Judging by Monday's performance, he needn't have been.

Taimazov was in third place after lifting 429 3/4 pounds in the snatch, but he clinched the gold medal by succeeding at 501 1/2 pounds on his first clean-and-jerk lift. He later set a world record of 520 1/4 pounds, beating his own record of 519 pounds.

The total only goes up by 5 1/2-pound increments; thus, the total of 947 3/4 pounds instead of 950 pounds.

Sergey Syrtsov of Russia won the silver medal with 925 3/4 pounds. Nicu Vlad of Romania also lifted 925 3/4, but won the bronze because he weighed more than Syrtsov. Vlad, a gold medalist at the 1984 Olympics, said he was retiring.

Two Americans were among the 24 entries. Wes Barnett of St. Joseph, Mo., finished sixth with an American-record total of 870 3/4 pounds, and Russian immigrant Konstantine Starikovitch of White Plains, N.Y., who became a U.S. citizen in April, was 12th with a lifetime-best 854 1/4 pounds.

Barnett's finish was the best by an American lifter in these games.

Starikovitch and Barnett each broke the American record in the snatch, with Barnett lifting 385 3/4 pounds before Starikovitch lifted 391 1/4 pounds.

In the clean-and-jerk, Barnett set another American record, lifting 485 pounds, while Starikovitch lifted 462 3/4 pounds to equal his lifetime best.

"That was an early Christmas present because they had totals ahead of me," Barnett said of the two lifters who dropped out. "I'd like to win a medal of some sort in the world championships before I'm through.

Competition in the final weightlifting division — over 238 pounds — begins Tuesday, with two more Americans, Mark Henry of Silsbee and Thomas Ingalsbe of Powder Springs, Ga., among the 19 entries.

Like the other eight Americans who have competed previously, neither Henry nor Inglesby is expected to win a medal.

Earlier Monday Henry announced he had signed a 10-year contract with the World Wrestling Federation to become a professional wrestler after the Olympics.

Alexander Kurlovich of Belarus will try to become the second lifter in Olympic history to win three gold medals, equaling the feat of Turkey's Naim Suleymanoglu. Suleymanoglu won the gold in the 141-pound division last week.

Another lifter, Germany's Manfred Nerlinger, will attempt to win a medal in his fourth separate Olympics. Only one other lifter, Norbert Schmensky of the United States, has accomplished that feat.

Tribe sends 2B Baerga to N.Y. Mets

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — If anyone had suggested a year ago that the Mets would be in a position to acquire a three-time All-Star who batted in the lofty No. 3 position for the mighty Cleveland Indians, the whole world would have laughed.

Funny how things change — for the Mets, for the Indians, for Carlos Baerga. The stellar second baseman, who averaged 29.6 doubles, 17.2 home runs and 91.6 runs batted in the last five seasons, saw weight problems entering the season eat at his batting prowess and land him in the Indians' doghouse.

Poised to enter the post-season for a second straight year, the Indians chose to do so without Baerga, trading him on Monday with the former Yankee utility man Alvaro Espinoza and a $100,00 payment for the Mets' starting third baseman, Jeff Kent, and starting second baseman, Jose Vizcaino.

Baerga was batting only .267 with 10 home runs and 55 rbi this year, but said on Monday that he has been hampered by a wrist injury incurred late last season.

Carlos Baerga was traded Monday to the New York Mets.

The addition of Baerga addressed one of the Mets' primary needs, "more pop in the middle of our lineup," said General Manager Joe McIlvaine by telephone from Tennessee, where he was visiting the Kingsport Mets. It also allows Edgardo Alfonzo to step out of the shadow of Kent, as both Alfonzo and Baerga are now expected to fill out the infield with shortstop Rey Ordonez and first baseman Butch Huskey.

Which positions will be held by Alfonzo and Baerga will not be decided until Manager Dallas Green talks with Baerga, who began his career as a third baseman. The Indians had been talking off and on with the Mets as teams head toward Thursday's trading deadline. When they put Baerga's name on the table in conversations with the Mets Saturday, "I was surprised," McIlvaine said.

"I always try to be silent on things like that and listen to what they're talking about," he said. "But when his name was mentioned by them, not by me, immediately my antenna went up. Here's a chance to get a good quality player."

"Leaving the Cleveland Indians is going to be like taking my heart away," Baerga said.

However, he also said that "I was down on myself but I want to show people I'm not done; I've got a lot of baseball left."

To McIlvaine, Baerga is a standup player.

"We've been doing background checks for the last three days and talked to an awful lot of people who have intimate knowledge of Carlos," McIlvaine said.

Rockies lose 12th on road

Associated Press

MONTREAL — Pitcher Rheal Cormier went 2-for-2 with a two-run triple and the Montreal Expos beat Colorado 4-1 Monday night, the Rockies' 12th loss in their last 15 road games.

The Rockies, 38-18 at Coors Field and averaging 8.25 runs per game, are 16-33 on the road and scoring just 3.53 runs per game.

Colorado is coming off a seven-game homestand in which it totaled 55 runs. The Rockies began a stretch in which they play 18 of 21 games on the road.

Cormier, a .180 career batter, singled in the third inning. He then hit his first major league triple, highlighting a three-run fourth.

Cormier (6-6) allowed one run on seven hits in 6 1-3 innings. He struck out six and walked one. Mel Rojas pitched the ninth for his 17th save. Tied at 1, Moises Alou and Henry Rodriguez hit consecutive doubles off rookie Jamey Wright (1-1) leading off the Expos fourth.

Mets 5, Pirates 0

NEW YORK — Pete Harnisch pitched his first shutout in four seasons and Butch Huskey hit two solo home runs, leading New York past Pittsburgh.

Edgardo Alfonzo, inserted into the starting lineup after Jose Vizcaino was traded to Cleveland in a deal for Carlos Baerga earlier in the day, also homered for the Mets.

The Mets set a team record by homering in their 13th straight game, a span in which they've totaled 18 home runs. The Mets connected in 12 straight games in 1993. Harnisch (6-7) gave up four hits, struck out seven and walked one. He did not allow a runner past second base in his second complete game of the season and first shutout since Sept. 17, 1993.

Astros 2, Reds 1

CINCINNATI — Pinch-hitter Bill Spiers homered and Jeff Bagwell singled in the go-ahead run later in the eighth inning as Houston rallied to beat Cincinnati .

Bret Boone's sacrifice fly in the sixth to give Cincinnati a 1-0 lead. But Spiers, hitting for Kirt Manwaring, homered to lead off the eighth against Mark Portugal (7-7).

Derrick May, batting for Mike Hampton (7-7), walked and moved up on John Cangelosi's sacrifice. Bagwell hit his RBI single to center off reliever Hector Carrasco.

Ray Knight, hospitalized overnight for allergy and neurological tests, checked himself out and returned to Riverfront Stadium about an hour before game time to manage the Reds.

Knight said the tests confirmed what he knew — he has a sore neck and severe allergies — but nothing more serious.

Padres 5, Marlins 3

MIAMI — San Diego pitcher Scott Sanders continued his torrid July run, striking out 11 in winning his third consecutive start, as the Padres beat Florida.

Ken Caminiti again hurt Florida, driving in a run and scoring another. Caminiti is hitting .365 against the Marlins this season with 9 RBIs. Sanders (4-3), who tied his career high with 12 strikeouts against Colorado on July 18, allowed three earned runs over 6 2-3 innings.

QUIT: Lasorda retires after 20 seasons

as I am — I could not go down there without being the way I am," Lasorda, his voice shaking, said at a Dodger Stadium news conference. "I decided it's best for me and the organization to step down. ... That's quite a decision."

"It was a heckuva run," he said.

During his two decades, there were a total of 185 managerial changes in the major leagues. Lasorda became just the fourth big league manager to last into his 20th season — joining Connie Mack, John McGraw and Walter Alston. It was Alston's retirement after 23 years that opened the job for Lasorda.

Lasorda, who's spent 47 years with the Dodgers system as a player, scout, coach and manager, led Los Angeles to the World Series championship in 1981 and again in 1988 — a memorable five-game victory over the heavily favored Oakland Athletics highlighted by the limping Kirk Gibson's dramatic pinch-hit homer to win the opening game.

The Dodgers also reached the World Series under Lasorda in 1977 and 1978, and won NL West titles in 1983, 1985 and 1995.

Bill Russell, who played shortstop under Lasorda in the late 1970s and early '80s and later had him as his mentor, will remain the interim manager through this season. During Lasorda's absence, Russell had a 14-16 record.

The decision to step down as the manager was completely his, Lasorda said. He said as recently as Friday, after receiving medical clearance from his doctors to go back to work, that he intended to return to the dugout.

Lasorda changed his mind, however, after talking with owner Peter O'Malley and executive vice president Fred Claire.

"Peter gave me all the confidence in the world," Lasorda said. "Peter told me, 'You're the manager. If you want to go down there and put on that uniform, you're the manager.'"

Said O'Malley: "I think it's fair to say the last three days — Friday, Saturday and Sunday — that he was wrestling with it. Even though he didn't say it, I could tell that he and Jo (Lasorda's wife) were wrestling with it.

"As much as he had said after he was hospitalized that he was going to manage again, I could tell that he was wrestling with it. And perhaps family and close friends were saying, 'Hey, Tommy, wait a second. Think about this a little bit more.' And I think he did."

Lasorda, who has spent 47 of his 50 years in pro baseball with the Dodger organization and professes to "bleed Dodger blue," grew teary-eyed as he thanked O'Malley for hiring him 20 years earlier.

A few minutes later, though, Lasorda's eyes lit up as he talked about becoming a vice president, noting with a grin that he always secretly envied the guys in suits.

"I always used to look up at Fred and Al (Campanis) and those guys who were vice presidents, and now I'm a vice president of the Dodgers," Lasorda said, his voice rising. "That's an honor and a privilege. And I'm going to do the best job I possibly can for the Dodgers because I love this organization.

"I've been with them for 47 years and I'm hoping that maybe 50 years from now I'll die a Dodger."

Lasorda finishes his on-the-field career as a rarity in modern professional sports: He spent two decades managing the same team.

There's a baseball axiom that says there are two kinds of managers: those who have been fired and those who are about to be. But that never applied to Lasorda.

The Dodgers were 41-35 and had a two-game lead in the NL West when Lasorda entered the hospital. They now are tied for second place with Colorado, 1 1/2 games behind San Diego.

Lasorda was the winningest active manager and No. 13 on the career list with a record of 1,599-1,439 and two ties. He ranks 12th on baseball's career list for games managed (3,040), having surpassed Dick Williams in wins and games managed earlier this season.

As a left-handed pitcher who spent most of his career in the minors and had a 0-4 major league record, Lasorda was part of a different sort of Dodgers lore.

When the Dodgers needed a roster spot for a promising young pitcher in the mid-1950s, they sent Lasorda down — and signed Sandy Koufax as a bonus player.

PHONE FRAUD TIPS

DO BE WARY of telephone calls or postcards with offers too good to be true. They usually are. Do ask lots of questions and listen carefully to the answers. Fraudulent telemarketers shade the truth to make offers appear legitimate. Of course, if the caller doesn't answer your questions, Do hang up.

DO REFUSE to be pressured into making a hasty decision. Legitimate callers will allow time for consideration.

DO BE SKEPTICAL if told you've won a prize, but have to pay something (tax, shipping, handling costs) to receive it.

DO REFUSE a prize if told you must make a purchase to claim it. In some states, once a prize is promised it must be given regardless of a consumer's purchase decision. Your chances of winning cannot be affected by your decision to buy or not.

DO CHECK OUT the telemarketer with consumer protection organizations, such as the BBB or government agencies.

DO TELL CHILDREN and grandchildren in your home never to give financial information to callers, and teach them how to spot phony calls.

DO MAKE your elderly friends and relatives aware that fraudulent callers prey heavily on older people.

DON'T GIVE your credit card number, personal identification number (PIN), expiration date or other credit information to a caller.

DON'T SEND CASH check or money order by messenger, overnight delivery or wire to any telemarketer insisting on immediate payment.

DON'T PROVIDE a telemarketer with the name of your bank, checking account number, or copy of your signature.

DON'T BE EMBARRASSED to report telemarketing fraud. Anyone can fall prey to a scam artist. You can register a complaint with the National Fraud and Information Center by calling 1-800-876-7060. And let your Better Business Bureau know by calling the telephone number at the end of this story.

Emmo undergoes surgery

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — Emerson Fittipaldi was transferred Monday from Michigan to a hospital in Florida for surgery to repair a neck fracture, hospital and IndyCar officials said.

Injured in a crash early in Marlboro 500 on Sunday at Michigan International Speedway, Fittipaldi was in serious but stable condition Monday when taken from St. Joseph Mercy Hospital, hospital officials said.

The hospital said in a written release that Fittipaldi would have surgery Monday night at the University of Miami/Jackson Memorial Hospital in Miami. It said Fittipaldi's prognosis was good.

Fittipaldi had completed only one lap in the race before clipping the car of rookie Greg Moore while trying to pass and ending up in a fiery crash.

It took rescuers 15 minutes to get Fittipaldi, 49, out of the wreckage. He was then airlifted to the Foote Hospital in nearby Jackson.

He was transferred to St. Joseph Hospital later Sunday. X-rays revealed a fracture of the seventh cervical vertebra and a partially collapsed left lung. IndyCar officials said Fittipaldi also had a fractured left shoulder blade.

Racing officials said IndyCar director of medical services Dr. Terry Trammell and Dr. Barth Green, chairman of neurosurgery at the Miami hospital, would perform the surgery.

HALL: Race chief retires second time

In addition to his management skills, Hall leaves auto racing as one of its premier car designers. In 1962, Hall and partner Hap Sharp formed Chaparral Cars, Inc. and began to produce some of the most unique and innovative race cars of all time. Through Chaparral, Hall pioneered the use of race car wings, semi-automatic transmissions, ground effects and plastic composites, technology which is common-place in racing today.

"In addition to being an outstanding driver, team owner and valued member of the IndyCar Board of Directors, Jim Hall is one of the true powers of our sport and an innovator who made a great contributor to the development of the modern day race car," IndyCar President and CEO Andrew Craig said. "We will miss working with Jim but his contributions to the sport will be ever present in the technology found in the race cars in the PPG IndyCar World Series."

Hall's success in the technological aspects of racing followed a driving career halted by an accident at the Stardust International Raceway in Las Vegas in 1968. Hall made his mark on the sport with a U.S. Road Racing Championship in 1964 and season of Formula One racing in 1963.

Hall's career with Indy cars started in 1978 after time spent in with Formula 5000 cars. In his first year competition, Hall and his driver Al Unser collected titles at triple crown of 500 races at Indianapolis, Pocono, Pa. and Ontario, Calif.

Following the points standings title with Rutherford in 1980, Hall took a hiatus from the sport in 1982. He came back in 1991 and with driver John Andretti, the Hall/VDS team won the first race of the season in Australia. From there, Hall would take three top-10 points finishes. Last season, de Ferran, in his first year with Hall Racing, won the rookie of the year title and a season-ending win at Laguna Seca.

Hall, who was born in Abilene. He and his wife Sandy live in Midland and have three children: Linda Green, Sharee Anderson and Jim Hall II.

Race fans criticize CBS decision

By Dick Brinster
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK — CBS, in the process of expanding its NASCAR coverage, didn't make any fast friends among stock car fans by pulling the plug on the rain-delayed DieHard 500.

When CBS learned at about 2:30 p.m. CDT on Sunday that the Winston Cup race — already delayed some two hours — would not start for at least another hour, the network abandoned its coverage plans.

"We always try to do whatever will make the most people happy," said CBS spokeswoman Leslieanne Wade. "But there's no way to make everybody happy. That's not possible."

CBS said it will show a tape of race this Sunday between 1 p.m. CDT and 3 p.m.

This past weekend, the network had a five-hour "window" that began at noon CDT. The race was scheduled for a three-hour run, to be followed by two hours of PGA senior golf. At 5 p.m., the sports division hands off to the news division.

"We had Dan Rather broadcasting out of Atlanta and '60 Minutes,'" Wade said. "We went to the golf early, but the race was so late, it ended at 8:20 p.m. (EDT)."

In Johnson City, Tenn., CBS affiliate WJHL received an estimated 1,000 calls on Sunday and Monday, said Thom Throp, the station's community affairs director.

"It's been virtually nonstop up until our noon news," Throp said. "This is major NASCAR territory."

A woman answering the phone at WAKA-TV in Montgomery, Ala., laughed when asked if there had been calls about the race not airing.

"All morning long," she said.

At WRAL-TV, in Raleigh, N.C., assignment editor Julia Lewis said the calls never stopped.

"I came in at 6 a.m. ... It's made for a very bad morning," she said.

"There were a lot of people not watching the Olympics yesterday," said Herman Ramsey, general manager of WGNX-TV, the CBS affiliate in Atlanta. "I'm sure CBS did everything they possibly could do other than change the weather."

At WKRG-TV in Mobile, Ala., station president and general manager Buck Long said he understood the fans' frustration.

"As long as you have live television and you are subject to the elements, things like this are going to happen," he said.

At NASCAR headquarters in Daytona Beach, Fla., the sanctioning body received a flood of complaints Monday.

"I lost count of the phone calls," NASCAR spokesman Kevin Triplett said. "There had to be hundreds."

Wade said the reaction of NASCAR fans is one reason the network chose to expand its schedule from nine to 13 races this year with an eye toward even more.

"We've made a commitment to NASCAR," she said. "It's a growing sport and its fans are very loyal."

Price, Norman, Frost and Els advance in World Golf

KOHLER, Wis. (AP) — Zimbabwe's Nick Price has that old feeling again.

Price easily won his first-round match Monday in the International Championship bracket of the Andersen Consulting World Championship of Golf, defeating Michael Campbell of New Zealand 4 and 2 over the 6,991-yard, par-72 River Course at Blackwolf Run.

"Confidence is a steady builder," said Price, who won a dozen tournaments worldwide in 1993 and 1994, including a PGA Championship and a British Open. "It happens over three, four, five months, sometimes a year. You have the edge. When you have the edge, the ball just goes right for you."

In other first-round matches Monday, Greg Norman defeated fellow Australian Craig Parry 1-up, David Frost downed fellow South African Ernie Els 1-up and Steve Elkington of Australia beat Vijay Singh of Fiji 3-and-2.

Norman plays Elkington in the semifinals Tuesday morning and Price takes on Frost. The winners play in the afternoon to determine who represents the International section in the finals Jan. 4-5 at Grayhawk Golf Club in Scottsdale, Ariz.

PAIN: Earnhardt will race at Brickyard and defending Winston Cup Jeff Gordon by just 23 points. Terry Labonte, who had been leading the standings, fell nine point behind Gordon after being involved in the same accident late in Sunday's race.

After spending Sunday night in a Birmingham, Ala., hospital for observation, Earnhardt flew back to North Carolina on Monday and immediately met with car-owner Richard Childress, crew chief David Smith and team manager Bobby Hutchins at the team's race shop in Welcome.

They picked Mike Skinner, an occasional Winston Cup starter and the team's full-time driver in NASCAR's Craftsman Truck Series, where he won the 1995 championship, as the relief driver for Earnhardt at Indy.

"He was a unanimous choice by all of us," Childress said. "He knows our cars and set-ups and we know his ability."

Skinner, who is to become Earnhardt's full-time teammate next season when Childress adds a second car, has started 12 Winston Cup races — three for Childress this season — with a best career finish of 12th at Rockingham, N.C., in the second event of 1996.

David Allen, president of the Championship Group, which does public relations for Earnhardt and Richard Childress Racing, said, "Mike will practice in the car on Wednesday and Friday and will stand by on Saturday.

"Dale will start the race and go until an early caution flag," Allen added. "Then he will come in and give the seat to Skinner."

Asked what will happen if there is no early caution flag, Allen said, "In that case, Richard and Dale will look at their options, maybe stopping under the green flag or going on, based on how Dale feels."

The slogan of a former sponsor, which fit Earnhardt to a tee, was "One Tough Customer." He proved he is still that Sunday when, in pain after being pulled from his battered car, Earnhardt struggled out of the grasp of safety workers, rose to his feet and, flashing a thumbs-up to the workers, walked to the ambulance for the trip to the infield medical center.

"Everybody is worried about the points right now and the championships," Childress said. "Our concern is Dale Earnhardt. But he's tough. He can handle it."

"All I can say is I was very lucky," Earnhardt said Monday after his first close look at the wrecked Chevy. "I feel very fortunate. It is a situation like this that makes you appreciate the high standards required by NASCAR. It also shows you what a great car the guys at RCR build."

As for the choice of Skinner, 38, as his relief driver, Earnhardt said: "Mike will be a great asset for us as he has tested for us several times recently and he is very capable of keeping us in the points race."

Skinner, who lives in Randleman, N.C., said: "My goal is to be consistent and keep the team in the points race It is an honor to relief drive for the biggest name in the sport. I might be able to fill the seat, but I'll never be able to fill his shoes."

Earnhardt, 45, is tied with retired Richard Petty, the longtime king of stock car racing, for the most Winston Cup championships with seven.

Since he began his first full season of Winston Cup racing in 1979, Earnhardt had had only one serious injury — a broken leg sustained in a crash at Pocono in his rookie year. That put him out of action for four races.

He has not missed a race since and is riding a string of 501 consecutive starts, second only to Labonte's 524 among active drivers and third all-time behind Petty's 513.

Gas prices sink

Natural gas futures fell to a six-month low Monday as much of the nation basked under below-normal temperatures, silencing air conditioners and reducing demand for electricity.

Natural gas for September delivery fell 14.6 cents to $2.046 per 1,000 cubic feet on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Prices recovered from the day's $1.99 low — the lowest price for the spot month since the end of January. The contract has dropped 91 cents — 31 percent — in the last 16 trading days.

West Texas Intermediate for September delivery gained 17 cents to $20.28 cents a barrel. Local crude purchasers raised their posted price 25 cents to $18.75 a barrel.

Cooler weather cuts demand for natural gas, which fuels electricity generators, and allows stocks to rise. As of Wednesday, natural gas stockpiles had risen to 51 percent of capacity, far below the 70-percent average but higher than at the beginning of the summer.

Phone arbitration

AUSTIN — Long distance giant AT&T wants to be in the Texas local telephone market and is seeking help from the Public Utility Commission to get in.

AT&T on Monday sought arbitration from the PUC to settle disputes with Southwestern Bell. The two phone companies have been working on a deal to open the state's local phone market.

One major sticking point is the cost SWB will charge AT&T for service it will resell to its local phone customers.

Appointed arbitrators will have until Dec. 14 to come up with a plan for the companies.

Dollar dips

NEW YORK — The dollar dipped lower against most leading currencies Monday on low volume as U.S. stock and bond markets slipped while waiting for direction from economic data this week.

In New York, the dollar traded at 108.14 yen, down from 108.37 on Friday. The dollar traded at 1.4802 marks, down from 1.4822.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday: 1.2063 Swiss francs, down from 1.2100; 5.0210 French francs, down from 5.0300; 1,526 Italian lire, up from 1,517; and 1.3728 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3745.

Markets retreat

NEW YORK — Stocks retreated Monday in the slowest session of the year as investors hunkered down before a series of key economic readings that could jolt the market.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 38.47 points to 5,434.59.

Broad-market indexes also held near opening levels for much of the day before succumbing to a worsening bond market in the last hour of trading.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by an 8-to-5 margin on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume totaled 281.35 million shares.

The NYSE's composite index fell 2.23 to 338.64, and the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index fell 5.00 to 630.90.

The Nasdaq composite index fell 12.97 to 1,066.47, and the American Stock Exchange's market value index fell 3.03 to 536.12.

State lowers insurance benchmark

■ Homeowners and renters across much of Texas, including Midland-Odessa, will pay less for insurance policies under new benchmark.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The statewide average benchmark rate for homeowners insurance was lowered on Monday 1.1 percent for homeowners and 24.9 percent for renters insurance.

Insurance Commissioner Elton Bomer's order, the second lowering of the rate mark in two years, means 15 of the 23 geographic rating territories will see reductions.

Homeowners in Midland-Odessa would pay an average of $723 on an $80,000 policy for a brick-veneer house with a $250 deductible, including $32,000 coverage of contents, $25,000 personal liability and $500 medicalcoverage. This is down 8.9 percent from $794 currently for a policy in an apartment building with frame construction that includes $25,000 coverage on personal property, $250 deductible and $25,000 liability and $500 medical payments.

Renters in Midland-Odessa would pay an average of $106 under the new benchmark, down 29.2 percent from $138 currently on a policy

Insurance companies subject to the benchmark rating system account for about 30 percent of the homeowners insurance market in Texas. The other 70 percent of the $2.3 billion business goes to companies whose rates, by law, aren't regulated.

Rate-regulated companies set their own rates but must stay within a range of 30 percent above and 30 percent below the benchmark rates set by Bomer unless they receive special permission.

These companies must file their new rates with the Texas Department of Insurance by Oct. 30 and may start using them as soon as they are filed.

Last year, the benchmark rates were lowered an average of 3 percent for homeowners and 25 percent for renters.

"It's important to remember, however, that rates vary widely across the state and from company to company, which means it is important for homeowners to shop for the best deal they can get," Bomer said.

His comments were echoed by the industry.

"Many insurers take advantage of the ability to adjust their rates well below the benchmark for property insurance," said Jerry Johns of the Southwestern Insurance Information Institute.

Claims used to calculate the new rates were for the period ending Sept. 30, 1994. That did not include the $1.1 billion hail storm that hit the Dallas-Fort Worth area in May 1995. Losses from that storm will begin appearing in rate calculations that begin later this year.

The benchmark rates fell in most of the state's largest cities, including Houston, San Antonio, Austin and El Paso. They rose in Dallas-Fort Worth.

Bomer's order divided the central rating zone into north and south regions to reflect what he said are major differences in weather-related insurance losses.

The effects of the division mean higher rates for Dallas, Fort Worth and Waco and other cities in the region, and lower rates for San Antonio, Austin, El Paso, Laredo and other southern cities.

"We know from experience that damaging hail strikes North Texas far more often than South Texas. It's not right for homeowners in San Antonio to pay for hail storms in Dallas, just as it wouldn't be fair for homeowners in Dallas or Fort Worth to pay for hurricanes along the coast," Bomer said.

Rates for the Texas Catastrophe Property Insurance Association residential policies will remain at present levels. That pool provides wind and hail coverage in the 14 coastal counties and part of Harris County for buildings that private companies won't insurance voluntarily because of the threat of hurricanes.

Monday's rate order also established discounts on homeowners insurance premiums for consumers who choose large deductibles. Insurance companies must start giving the discounts this fall. Deductibles are the part of a claim that the policyholder must pay.

There are separate deductibles for wind, hurricane and wind-driven losses and for fire and all other property losses. Until now, the maximum deductible was 1 percent of a home's insured value. The new, larger deductibles range up to 5 percent, with premium discounts growing as the deductible grows.

Computer sales growth falls in quarter

NEW YORK (AP) — Personal computer sales grew more slowly in the second quarter than in the first, according to a new study.

The market for PCs grew 16.5 percent worldwide and 12 percent in the United States, Dataquest reported Sunday. That's down from 18.4 percent worldwide growth and 14.7 percent U.S. growth in the first quarter.

Growth in both markets exceeded 20 percent during the second quarter of 1995.

Compaq Computer Corp. continued to lead industry but lost ground in both worldwide and U.S. sales to second-place IBM and others.

Compaq's worldwide market share was 9.7 percent and U.S. share was 12.4 percent in the second quarter. During the first quarter, Compaq had a 9.8 percent worldwide market share and 12.7 percent in the United States. A year ago, Compaq had 10.4 percent of the world market and 12.6 percent of the U.S. market.

IBM's worldwide PC market share jumped to 8.8 percent from 7.2 percent in the first quarter and its U.S. share jumped to 9.0 percent from 6.1 percent in the first quarter. A year ago, IBM had 7.7 percent of the world PC market and the U.S. market.

IBM had been the No. 1 PC seller for many years until it was unseated by Compaq in 1994.

Compaq's growth was 8.5 percent worldwide and 10.4 percent in the United States. IBM's growth was 33.6 percent worldwide and 31.1 percent in the United States.

Apple continued to be the third-largest PC seller worldwide, though its sales dropped nearly 17 percent. The company had 5.3 percent of the world market and 7.4 percent of the U.S. market, where it was No. 4 in sales.

Packard Bell was the third-largest in U.S. sales with 8.7 percent share, though growth was a slim 3.8 percent. Its overseas operations are too small for the company to count among the five-largest worldwide PC sellers.

NEC is the fourth-largest worldwide PC maker with 5.1 percent of the market, according to the Dataquest estimate. Hewlett-Packard is next with 4.3 percent.

Dell Computer Corp. was fifth in U.S. sales with a 7.2 percent market share.

Both Compaq and IBM pleased analysts and investors when they reported their second-quarter results last week.

Compaq's profitability was higher in the quarter than it had been during the first three months of the year, but the gain came at the expense of sales growth. Meanwhile, IBM's sales across many lines, but especially personal computers, turned out better than analysts had expected.

Terms of the acquisition were not disclosed.

Anderson battles tensions between two units

N.Y. Times News Service

New York — Arthur Andersen Worldwide won't split into separate accounting and consulting businesses, even though "tensions" exist between the two units, its chairman said.

"There will be no recommendation to split the firm at the partners' meeting in September," said Lawrence Weinbach, global chairman and chief executive. "From any source," he added, when asked if he was sure some of the firm's disgruntled consulting partners might not propose such a split.

His comments were in response to a Wall Street Journal report that a growing number of partners in the firm's faster growing Andersen Consulting unit favor a split from the auditing side.

Weinbach said the company is making so much money there's no need to break it up.

The firm will exceed $9.3 billion in revenue in 1996, up 17 percent from $8.1 billion last year, he said. "If that's a broken organization, I'd be surprised."

Still, he said that the firm's accounting side contributed as little as 14 percent of that increase, while the consulting business accounted for 20 percent.

It's that disparity in growth that many industry watchers think makes the firm ripe for a split.

"We're kind of predicting the split," said Tom Rodenhauser, Managing Editor of Consulting News. "It's one of those situations where one side's making a lot of money and the other isn't."

British press reports have said that if Andersen Consulting were divided from Andersen Worldwide, and then went public, its partners could reap an average of 1 million pounds ($1.53 million).

"I think it makes a lot of sense, even to the point of the rumors of Andersen Consulting going public," said Public Accounting Report Editor Suzanne Verity. "It's a different kind of business and they're competing with entities out there that have a lot of capital."

Weinbach dismissed the IPO speculation as "all rumor."

Instead, Weinbach said he hopes to ease tensions at the company by reorganizing the auditing business into "multiple business units." He wouldn't disclose how many units or what their responsibilities would be.

"There's no question that there are some tensions as we look at the future strategic development of the firm," he said.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Married couples frequently differ in savings habits

By Eric Tyson

Q: My husband's a gambler. He's forever chasing after the latest investment fad or hot tip he's gotten from friends and in some cases from complete strangers. Unfortunately, he controls more of our money and is doing a terrible job investing it. How do I get us on the right track and keep us from fighting over our different investing approaches?

Tyson

A: You are in a difficult but, from my observations, not uncommon situation. Many couples end up divorcing over money problems, and yours is one of the more challenging marital disagreements to tackle.

Since it sounds as though your husband won't listen to your reasoning, you should seek some third-party support.

First, try the education route. Pick up some good books and try reading them together. While your husband won't listen to you, maybe he would be more open to the thoughtful advice of an independent author.

Some couples also find that psychological counseling helps. Be sure to interview several counselors to find whose approach and style matches what you need.

If your husband's gambling tendencies are really an addiction, he might benefit from a program such as Gambler's Anonymous. Because most gamblers refuse to acknowledge their addiction, getting him to go would be the hardest part.

While you should be supportive, your husband really needs to hear how his behavior concerns and hurts you.

In the meantime, you should learn to invest your money in the best possible way. The better the job you can do with the money that you control, the less anxiety you might feel over your husband's financial mistakes.

Q: I'm 33 years old and worry that by the time that I retire, there will be nothing left in Social Security to pay me any benefits. What can I do to prepare for this likelihood?

A: Well, I wouldn't be so pessimistic about Social Security. While the system is likely to go through a few reforms by the time you and millions of other baby boomers are ready to retire, it's hard to imagine that there will be no benefits at all.

Think about the consequences. If the politicians eliminate Social Security benefits for baby boomers, they'd be bounced out of office faster than a snowman melts when the temperature hits 80.

A number of software packages and work booklets allow you to crunch some numbers to plan for retirement. Good resources are available through large mutual fund companies. The computer software usually runs around $15, while the booklets are free.

You input such items as your age, current assets and expected future investment returns into the worksheet. If you're willing to be reasonably aggressive with your investing, you can safely assume that your annual investment returns will outpace the rate of inflation by about 4 to 6 percent.

Run the numbers a few different ways, testing out various scenarios.

The advantage of the software is that once you learn how to use it, you can more easily tinker with your assumptions and more quickly see the results.

In your case, you can run the numbers with the assumption that you'll receive little or no Social Security, and therefore you'll need to save much more to accomplish your retirement goals.

The retirement-planning exercise is designed to determine how much you need to save per month to reach your desired retirement objectives.

Don't focus on the lump sum that you'll ultimately need to accumulate; that can be demoralizing and self-defeating. Think in terms of reasonable monthly savings goals.
