Boys ambush classmates, kill 5

Police, school and emergency service personnel cordon off the scene of the fatal shootings Tuesday afternoon at Westside Middle School near Jonesboro, Ark. At least five people were shot to death and about a dozen wounded when two boys in camouflage ambushed a group of students as they assembled outside during a false fire alarm, authorities said.

JONESBORO, Ark. — Two boys in camouflage lay in wait in the woods behind their school, then opened fire with rifles on classmates and teachers when they came out during a false fire alarm Tuesday. Four girls and a teacher were killed and 11 people were wounded.

The pair — cousins aged 11 and 13 — were caught trying to run away shortly after the midday ambush at the Westside Middle School, police said. One of the boys was seen near the fire alarm, a witness said.

Police did not offer a motive, but a classmate said one of the suspects had recently broken up with his girlfriend.

"He told me after seventh period (Monday) that he was never going to see me again and I wouldn't be able to see him again because he was going to run away," said Jennifer Nightingale. She did not say if any of the victims was the former girlfriend.

Authorities said as many as 27 shots were fired. Youngsters ran screaming back inside the school as their classmates fell bleeding, then cried as they WASHINGTON — Despite Clinton administration objections to some of the provisions, bills providing $18 billion for the International Monetary Fund advanced in the House and Senate on Tuesday. Lawmakers also worked on legislation providing billions of dollars for El Niño-related disaster relief and military operations in the Persian Gulf and Bosnia. The House Appropriations Committee approved a pair of bills, one providing the IMF funds and the other containing $2.9 billion for U.S. troops and domestic disasters. The Senate neared passage of both measures.

'Mini heat wave'

Warm weather expected to last through Friday

By Alice Ashmore
Staff Writer

A glance at the calender may tell Midlanders it is only March, but one step outside says that summer is on its way. Sunny skies and high temperatures sent residents to parks and pools for an early start on a summer tan.

Temperatures in the 90s broke the record on Monday, and tied Tuesday's record high of 89 degrees. Today's high is expected to hit 90 again. The warm weather is expected to continue until Friday, according to the National Weather Service.

Meteorologist George Mathews called the warm weather a mini heat wave. "We're breaking records; I guess you could say it was unusual," he said.

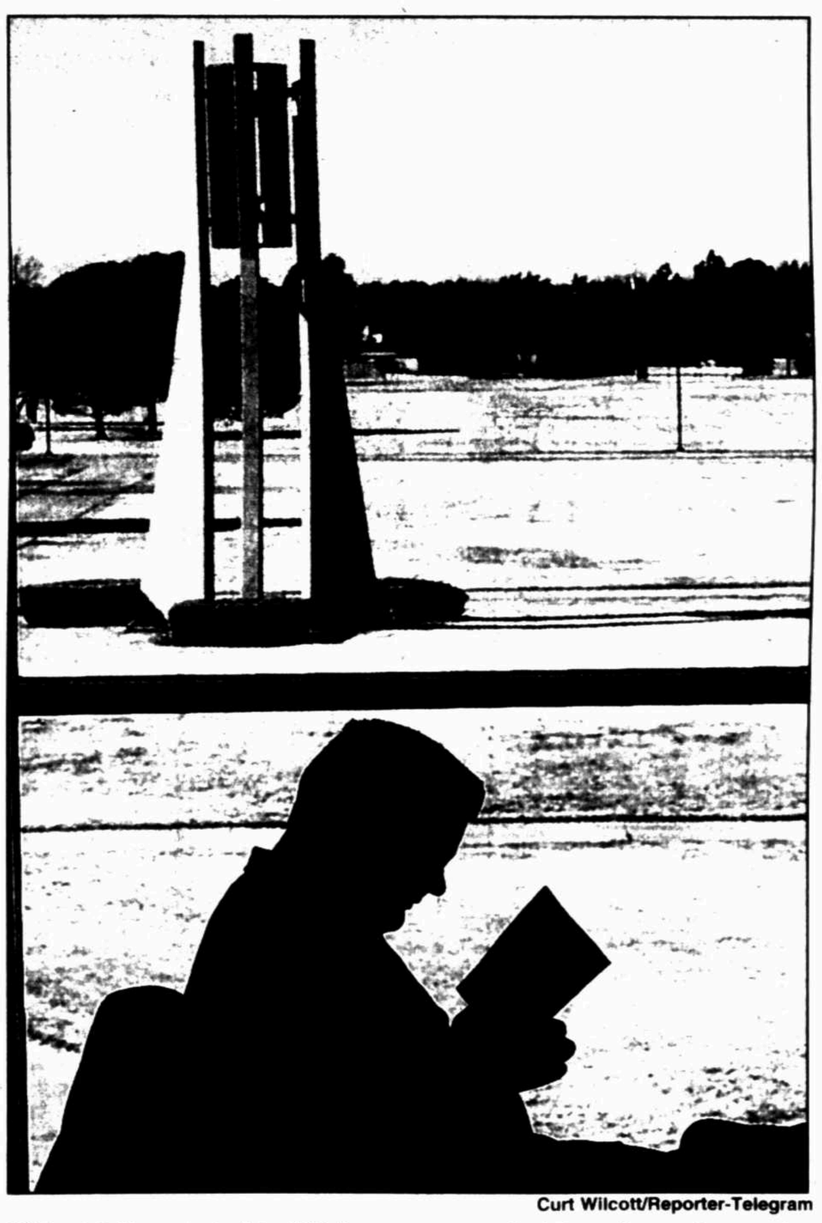

Mathews said the warm weather was the result of an area of upper level high pressure over the region. He said that wide fluctuations in temperature are common in the spring and fall, "when you are in transition, and winter and summer are fighting it out."

Mathews said that this winter season has been mild for West Texans. "January was certainly very mild." February was slightly warmer than normal, while December was cool and wet, according to Mathews. "There's been just enough rainfall to keep the farmers at bay," he said. "Most people have enjoyed having a milder winter."

Mathews said the long-range outlook for spring calls for wetter than normal weather. "If El Niño continues, it should be an interesting spring." He said forecasters were expecting more hail this spring as a result of El Niño.

Mathews said that while it is fairly simple to predict an increase in hail, it was not as easy to predict an increase in tornadoes. "During the spring storm season tornadoes are on everybody's mind."

Areas of the southeastern United States have recently been declared disaster areas as a result of tornadoes spawned by El Niño.

Hispanic Chamber denied by council on carnival issue

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Despite an ongoing effort to promote the downtown area, Midland City Council members balked at an effort to include a downtown carnival with the Mex-Tex Menudo Cookoff.

At a Tuesday meeting, council members voiced reservations about the carnival, which cookoff organizers planned as a way to add more "family-oriented and wholesome" activities to the cookoff, according to Bo Zertuchi, chairman for this year's event.

Promoters of the cookoff, scheduled for the first week of June, were asking for the carnival to be in the large city-owned parking lot near the intersection of Baird Street and Texas Avenue, where people could walk from the main cookoff area at Centennial Plaza and the Midland County Courthouse to the carnival.

Voting 6 to 1 against the proposal by the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce, the council was generally of the opinion that the carnival was inappropriate for the downtown area, although carnivals were set up in the area during the 1976 Bicentennial and the 1985 Midland Centennial celebrations.

Cookoff promoters said the downtown area would be a boon to the festival, which is now in its 11th year and had been held at the Twin Cities Speedway grounds.

"This is, without a doubt, the most well-respected and well-attended event in West Texas," Zertuchi said.

The event is "inclusive of every segment of the community" and attracts about 10,000 visitors each year to the Midland area, according to Zertuchi.

The event includes concerts of various kinds of music as well as the cookoff, which also draws chili and fajita cooking teams from New Mexico and Oklahoma. "It's not just menudo any more," said David Diaz, chamber executive director.

"This is an annual event that is a major economic boost to the community," Diaz said. As much as two thirds of the festival's attendance comes from out of town, providing an economic gain to area restaurants and hotels, he said.

All seven council members praised the efforts of the Hispanic chamber and others in building this event over its 11-year history.

The council had previously been sup-

Arco Permian president accepts offer for post in South America

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

After five years as president of Arco Permian, Tony Best will be heading south to serve as senior vice president for South American operations for Arco Latin America.

Best

Best and his wife will be relocating to Caracas, Venezuela, beginning in late May or early June. His successor as president of Arco Permian will be Keith Weiser, who currently is working for Arco in South America.

"I keep telling people I'm leaving the best job I ever had," Best said. "Five years in Midland has been a wonderful experience, but this is an opportunity I can't pass up."

Best has been with Arco 19 years. He worked in Alaska twice for a total of 12 years, including a term as field manager of Prudhoe Bay, and two assignments in Midland for a total of seven years, including the last five at Arco Permian.

During the past five years, Best has been very active in community organizations, primarily United Way of Midland — he served as campaign chairman in 1997 — and the Petroleum Museum.

"I've always been interested in community involvement in each place I've lived," he said. "But I've never pursued it to the extent I have in Midland. That's due to the nature of the community and the friendliness of the people; it gives you an incentive to get involved."

He had been named president-elect of United Way and said he will miss the opportunity to serve in that post. He also said he has

Halliburton CEO says potential for growth in oil market tremendous

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

The potential for the oil and gas industry looks very good, according to Richard Cheney, chairman and CEO of Halliburton Co.

Cheney, keynote speaker during a Permian Basin Oil & Gas Recovery Conference luncheon, presented a scenario of robust growth for the oil and gas industry.

The former secretary of defense, who directed Operation Just Cause in Panama and Desert Storm, said the worldwide economy was the driver behind oil prices and the worldwide economy was good. "The Asian downturn is temporary," Cheney said Tuesday. "Demand will return to Asia."

He noted that the potential for economic growth in Asia was tremendous. "The per capita oil consumption in China is one barrel per day. In Mexico it is 12 barrels and in the U.S. it is 34 barrels per capita. That is a lot of potential." He projected oil demand for China would grow at the rate of 3 percent to 4 percent a year, and that world demand would grow by 2 to 3 percent a year.

At the same time, world reserves are being deplet-

'Clinton promises to improve relations with Africa despite past

Hearst News Service

MUKONO, Uganda — Speaking of American sins ranging from slavery to neglect, President Clinton acknowledged Tuesday that the United States "has not always done right by Africa" but pledged to be a better partner.

Afterward, senior administration officials, including Jesse Jackson, Clinton's special envoy to Africa, tamped down speculation that Clinton was edging toward an apology for slavery during his visit to the continent.

The president, joined by Ugandan leader Yoweri Museveni, visited a rural school nestled on a lush hilltop and announced small increases in U.S. aid to Africa for education, food safety and fighting malaria. Clinton is on a six-nation journey to highlight emerging democracies and open markets in Africa.

The two leaders and their wives watched as schoolchildren, some dressed in monkey fur and grass skirts, performed songs and dances from Uganda's regions. Clinton, enjoying the second day of his 11-day itinerary, clapped and bounced from foot to foot as children enticed the foursome to join the pageantry.

In his speech, Clinton made an impromptu reflection on past U.S. policy toward the continent.

"It is well not to dwell too much on the past, but I think it is worth pointing out that the United States has not always done the right thing by Africa," Clinton said.

He spoke of the Cold War when the United States dealt with African countries "based more on how they stood in the struggle between the United States and the Soviet Union than how they stood in the struggle for their own people's aspirations to live up to the fullest of their God-given abilities."

AP Photo

President Clinton holds a 2-day-old baby who was named Bill Clinton in honor of the president at Wanyange village in Uganda Tuesday.

He remarked on the era when "European Americans received the fruits of the slave trade. And, we were wrong in that, as well." But, he said the "worst sin America ever committed about Africa was the sin of neglect and ignorance."

"We have never been as involved with you, in working together for our mutual benefit, for your children and for ours, as we should have been. So I came here to listen and to learn, to offer my help and friendship and partnership," Clinton said.

Afterward, Jackson and other Clinton aides said the president's remarks were not intended as an apology for slavery. "He simply said that it was morally wrong, a source of great shame and began to focus on remedy and repair, which is what the African leaders want to hear," Jackson said.

Susan Rice, assistant secretary of state for Africa, said slavery "is largely irrelevant to what we're about here."

But the president has mentioned the issue on each of his two days on the continent. In Ghana on Monday, Clinton remarked on the emotions of the African Americans who are part of his delegation.

"It wasn't so very long ago in the whole sweep of human history that their ancestors were yanked from the shores of Western Africa as slaves. Now, they come back home to Africa and to Ghana as the leaders of America, a country that hopes to be a better model than we once were, for the proposition that all men and women are free and equal," Clinton said in Accra, the capital of Ghana.

The president last year referred the issue of a formal apology for slavery to his racial reconciliation advisory board and appeared lukewarm to the idea because of concern it would dominate his call for a national dialogue on race in America.

In Uganda, Clinton intended to focus "on the future of our children" in Africa and the United States. Less than half of sub-Saharan Africa's children attend primary schools and girls are discouraged from attending at all. Uganda has one of the continent's highest literacy rates, 64 percent.

Clinton announced the United States would spend $120 million over the next two years to help bolster Africa's education programs, $61 million over two years to increase food production and food safety, and an additional $1 million to support research at the Regional Malaria Laboratory in Mali.

The malaria funds are part of a $16 million initiative to help curb infectious diseases in Africa. AIDS remains a major problem on the continent although the rates of infection are slowing in Uganda. Still, the life expectancy for a Ugandan male is 39 years and 40 years for a woman.

The president visited a social studies class at the Kisowera School, about 30 minutes from the capital city of Kampala, and situated amid banana tree groves and one-room homes made of bricks from the native clay. The homes, like the school, are without windowpanes or doors.

The Clintons and the Musevenis arrived in separate helicopters, landing in a field behind the school and providing many children with their first sight of a helicopter, let alone two presidents.

Irene Nameere, 18, a high school senior, noted Museveni has attempted to improve Uganda's educational system "but he needs more support." Students often attend crowded classes of 50 or more. It also costs parents $5 per child per term for education, said Betsy Mull, a Peace Corps volunteer who helps train teachers.

Museveni last year began a new education initiative that allows parents to send their first four children to primary school free. He is considered one of the region's new generation of leaders focusing on individual freedoms and promoting investments in Uganda.

"Africa cannot be marginalized by the world," Museveni said at the school. "It is only the African leaders that can marginalize Africa through their own actions."

New Serb-Albanian clashes erupt

GLAMOC, Yugoslavia (AP) — Fierce clashes between Serb police and ethnic Albanians in Kosovo province sent scared villagers fleeing Tuesday from the rattle of machine-gunfire and the boom of grenade and rocket launchers. One policeman was reported killed.

The new outbreak of violence, which authorities say began when Albanian separatists with mortars ambushed a police patrol, came on the eve of a conference where the United States was to press strongly for sanctions against Yugoslavia for police repression in Kosovo.

Villagers say heavily armed Serb police surrounded four hamlets in western Kosovo and moved in, launching an action that resembled a Feb. 28 crackdown that left about 80 Albanians dead and prompted an international outcry over alleged human rights violations.

The main party for ethnic Albanians, who outnumber Serbs in Kosovo province 9-to-1, said it was not known whether there were any Albanian casualties. But the Democratic League of Kosovo spoke of a "dramatic" situation and appealed for international help against "Serb aggression."

The clashes also coincided with the clearest signal yet from the leader of Kosovo's Albanians that he was willing to enter into talks with the Serbs on the southern province's future.

El Niño Strikes Local Business

El Niño has claimed its latest victim right here in the nation's heartland. Service Experts®, proudly serving West Texas's heating and cooling needs for over 100 combined years has been at the mercy of this vicious weather cycle.

General Manager Tim Claire can't believe the unusual temperatures. "Everyone's been enjoying the warm winter weather except for me and my employees," explained Claire.

With little demand for furnaces this winter, Service Experts has an overstock of about 50 furnaces. "We're just about ready to give them away," said Claire. "Obviously, we've got to do something besides just pray for cold weather to help our business."

To keep his dedicated employees out of the "El Niño unemployment line," Claire is offering homeowners a tremendous savings package that will allow them to get a new deluxe furnace at a drastically reduced price and make no payments until September 1998*.

"Here's the kicker," said Claire. "Any homeowner who purchases a new deluxe air conditioner before March 30th will receive the deluxe furnace for only $438. That's almost $1,800 in savings!"

Hurry, just like the El Niño weather, Claire doesn't expect these overstocked furnaces to be around much longer. Call his personal assistant Carol, from Service Experts today at 561-9440.

If your furnace or air conditioner is 10 years or older, this could be your chance to save a lot of money and help save Service Experts from El Niño's grip!

Yeltsin's government shakeup blurs picture of his successor

MOSCOW (AP) — While Russia awaits a new government, the larger question looms of who will replace President Boris Yeltsin when his term ends in 2000.

The political turmoil created this week by Yeltsin's surprise government shakeup has spurred the speculation. At least five men appear likely contenders, but all have major weaknesses. Yeltsin, wary of becoming a lame duck, coyly declines to say whom he favors.

"As of today, nobody can play the role of official heir to the throne," said Boris Makarenko, a political analyst with the Center for Political Technologies.

It is widely expected that the "party of power" — a term encompassing Yeltsin, his allies, and the country's business elite — will settle on a single candidate and lavish him with campaign resources.

But if an election were held now, opinion polls indicate it would be a wide-open affair and the "party of power" candidate might not be the favorite. Communist leader Gennady Zyuganov, ex-general Alexander Lebed and Moscow Mayor Yuri Luzhkov, a Yeltsin ally, all could be in the race.

Yeltsin, 67, has made contradictory comments about his plans in 2000, but his age, his questionable health and the Russian constitution all appear to rule out a third term. There has been speculation he might run again if the Constitutional Court rules that his first term, which began under the old Soviet constitution, does not count toward Russia's two-term limit.

Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin's presidential hopes may have been dashed Monday when Yeltsin fired him along with the rest of the Cabinet.

"We can pronounce the once super-powerful premier politically dead," said Kommersant, the country's leading business daily, which is usually sympathetic to Chernomyrdin.

In a vague statement, Yeltsin told Chernomyrdin to begin making preparations for the 2000 election. But that didn't mean Chernomyrdin would be a candidate, and many analysts saw it as a gentle way for the president to say good-bye to the loyal premier.

Short on charisma, Chernomyrdin lags far behind the other potential candidates in opinion polls, and without the machinery of the government behind him, he'll have a tough time mounting a credible campaign.

Yeltsin, meanwhile, is inclined to postpone naming a successor until the "last possible moment," said Makarenko, the analyst. "As soon as he appoints someone, his own sources of power will begin to wither."

But right now, it's not clear who that person will be. Here is a brief rundown of the leading candidates, including Yeltsin's rivals:

■ Boris Nemtsov — The young, liberal reformer was fired Monday as a first deputy prime minister, but he is likely to get a senior post in the new government. He became the most popular politician in Russia after he joined Yeltsin's Cabinet last year, but his star faded a bit when his economic initiatives ran into resistance. At 38, he may be too young and inexperienced for the 2000 race.

■ Yuri Luzhkov — The bombastic mayor of Moscow is hugely popular in the capital and could get the nod from the "party of power." He has led a frenetic building spree that is transforming a gray city into a brash metropolis. However, many Russians resent Moscow's wealth and power, and Luzhkov's appeal in the provinces is untested.

■ Gennady Zyuganov — He finished second to Yeltsin in the 1996 election, and under his guidance the Communist Party remains the leading faction in parliament. But the party base is dwindling, with elderly supporters dying off and young people shunning the organization.

■ Alexander Lebed — He faces a crucial test when he runs for the governor's post next month in the Siberian region of Krasnoyarsk. He needs to win if he hopes to revive his fortunes, which have waned since Yeltsin dismissed him as national security adviser. A populist, the gravel-voiced Lebed finished a strong third in the 1996 presidential election.

■ Grigory Yavlinsky — The most liberal and pro-Western of the leading candidates, he finished fourth in the 1996 presidential election and heads a small, but vocal parliamentary faction.

Iraq's biological warfare program still problem, U.N. arms chief says

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — While declaring he had made "great progress" in the search for Iraq's weapons of mass destruction, U.N. weapons chief Richard Butler admitted Tuesday that Baghdad's biological arms program was still a significant problem.

Butler said Iraq's germ warfare program was so troublesome that it needs to be picked up "by the scruff of the neck" and shaken hard to find a solution.

Fresh ideas to resolve the dispute may be found at a meeting this week in Vienna between Iraq and the United Nations, Butler said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Butler's comments came the same day that 19 diplomats arrived in Baghdad to accompany U.N. inspectors to suspected weapons sites formerly off-limits.

Until the inspectors certify that Iraq has eliminated all its illegal weapons, the U.N. Security Council will not lift the economic sanctions imposed on Iraq after its 1990 invasion of Kuwait, which sparked the 1991 Gulf War.

Iraq says it has destroyed all its biological weapons, while the U.N. Special Commission, which Butler heads, demands conclusive proof.

Butler's visit to Baghdad was the first since Iraq signed an agreement with U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan last month to open eight of President Saddam Hussein's presidential compounds to U.N. weapons inspectors.

Using diplomats to accompany arms inspectors to the palaces was part of the deal that averted a threatened U.S. and British military attack on Iraq to force entry to the compounds.

In New York, U.N. spokesman Juan-Carlos Brandt said the diplomats will be briefed before starting their work "later this week." The group of diplomats is led by Jayantha Dhanapala, Sri Lanka's former ambassador to the United States.

Overall, Butler said he was "very pleased" after two days of talks and praised Iraq's new "spirit of cooperation."

Asked if failure in Iraq would undermine the international community's efforts to police weapons of mass destruction, Butler said: "Why are we talking about my inability to do my job (when) I have been talking about the great progress?"

Much of the progress has been in UNSCOM's search for special warheads and chemical weapons, Butler said. New technical discussions by United Nations and Iraqi officials are scheduled in six to eight weeks. "These are very practical things, very important things," he said.

On Monday, Butler met with Oil Minister Lt. Gen. Amer Mohammed Rashid, the Iraqi official in charge of the country's missile program.

Later, the official Iraqi News Agency said Butler and Rashid had visited a site where Iraq has destroyed and buried warheads containing chemical and biological agents. It did not say where the site was.

As part of the Feb. 23 deal, Annan appointed a special envoy to Iraq, Prakash Shah of India, who will stay in Baghdad for at least six months to prevent any trouble between UNSCOM and Iraq from flaring.

Butler was asked if the appointment of Shah and Dhanapala undermined his authority.

"These are all additional expansions of the international community's work with Iraq," he said. "I think the basic attitude that should be taken in Baghdad is that you are getting three for the price of one. You are getting attention that is right and good."

The 19 diplomats arrived Tuesday from Bahrain at Habaniyah air base outside Baghdad and were driven to the capital. U.N. officials in Bahrain said two others already were in Iraq.

Iraq had maintained the palaces were symbols of national sovereignty and should not be inspected. Washington and London insist the inspectors must have unfettered access.

Also Tuesday, a U.N. official said Iraq notified the United Nations that a senior official in Baghdad's biological weapons program, Nassir al-Hindawi, was arrested trying to flee the country.

NASA researcher confirms meteorite composition

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

A NASA researcher visited Monahans Tuesday to investigate the site of the two fragments of meteorite found there Sunday and Monday.

Dr. Everett Gibson Jr., a space scientist and geochemist at NASA's Johnson Space Center in Houston, confirmed that the two fragments, weighing a total of six pounds, were chondrite, or stony meteorites, said Steve Schmidt, director of the Marian Blakemore Planetarium in Midland. Since the two are partially magnetic, they may also contain some nickel or iron, Schmidt added.

"(Gibson) also suspects there may be more fragments in the area," he added.

Schmidt is helping compile eyewitness accounts of the meteor's arrival Sunday night.

"We're asking anyone who saw or heard anything Sunday night to contact the planetarium ... and leave their name, phone number and mailing address," he said. "We want to use objective eyewitness accounts to develop a trajectory, time and direction."

He said he wants to talk to people not just in Monahans, Midland or Odessa but anyone from surrounding towns who may have heard or seen something Sunday evening. Anyone with photographs or videotape is also urged to contact Schmidt at the planetarium.

"I'm also encouraging anyone in Monahans to check their property and if they find anything unusual, don't touch it with their bare hands but to leave it where it is. Take photographs or videotape from four directions, and try to include a ruler or object to show the fragment's scale. If you feel you must move it, pick it up using plastic and place it in a sealed plastic bag. And handle it gently."

He said he is not so much concerned about humans being contaminated through contact with the fragments as the fragments being contaminated by being handled.

"We have a real opportunity to conduct scientific research on the fragments we've recovered and those that may be discovered," he said.

Since a group of Monahans residents saw the meteor fall to Earth near them Sunday evening, local media and scientists have been in town inspecting the site and questioning eyewitnesses. Schmidt said it even drew the attention of an Italian journalist who was in Houston and heard about the meteorite.

"The folks in Monahans are to be congratulated for their good humor and hospitality. They've handled this event and being faced with a bunch of strangers asking a lot of questions with humor and hospitality," Schmidt said.

AMBUSH: Laws allow minors to possess rifles and shotguns waited for emergency workers.

"Someone pulled the fire alarm inside and they went outside, and two people in camouflage clothing started shooting," said Connie Tolbert, a secretary for the school superintendent.

"We thought it was just firecrackers," said one student, Brandy George. "I saw one of my teachers get shot. I started running towards the gym."

Said paramedic Charles Jones: "We had children lying everywhere. They had all been shot."

Sheriff Dale Haas cried as he recounted the shootings.

Authorities identified the dead students as Natalie Brooks, Paige Ann Herring, Stephanie Johnson, all 12, and Brittany R. Varner, who was 11. English teacher Shannon Wright, 32, died Tuesday night after surgery for wounds to her chest and abdomen, Craighead County coroner Toby Emerson said.

"She loved kids," her husband, Mitchell, said after her death.

Another teacher, Sara Thetford, was in critical condition after surgery. Five wounded girls were listed in stable condition. Three girls and one boy were treated and released.

The wounded students were between 11 to 13 years old. State police said a 11th person was wounded, but was not treated at the hospital. They did not have any more details.

Amber Vanoven, 11, said she saw Mrs. Wright step in front of sixth-grader Emma Pittman.

"This guy was aiming at her (Pittman)," Amber told the Jonesboro Sun newspaper. "He was fixing to shoot her and Mrs. Wright moved out in front of her. She got shot .... She did. I sat and watched her.

"I saw my best friend, Natalie Brooks, get killed — shot in the head twice," she said.

Amber also said she saw the 11-year-old suspect standing near a fire alarm and then watched him run out of the building as an electric buzzer hummed.

The school has about 250 students in sixth and seventh grades. Jonesboro is a university town of 52,000 about 130 miles northeast of Little Rock.

The two boys, wearing camouflage shirts, pants and hats, were caught near the school with handguns and rifles. Officer Terry McNatt said they offered no resistance and said little. The boys, who were not idenfied and were students at the school, were being held at the county jail. They were scheduled for court appearances at the jail Wednesday morning.

Investigators said the boys were running in the direction of a white van found about a half-mile away from the school with more guns and ammunition in it. It wasn't immediately certain if the vehicle was related to the shootings.

Karen Pate, a parent volunteer, was in the school gym when the fire alarm went off just after sixth-graders had finished lunch and returned to their classrooms. She fled outside and "saw girls falling to the ground."

"I helped one teacher who had been shot in the abdomen get out of there where she could lay down and we could start medical attention," Mrs. Pate said. "Another student had got shot in the leg. As soon as she got hit, she couldn't walk and she fell into the doorway."

Emergency personnel sit at the back of an ambulance following the shootings at Westside Middle School near Jonesboro, Ark. Tuesday.

Mrs. Pate and her sixth-grade daughter were not hurt.

President Clinton, on a visit to Kampala, Uganda, said in a statement that he and the first lady were "deeply shocked and heartbroken."

"We don't know now and we may never fully understand what could have driven two youths to deliberately shoot into a crowd," he said. "Our thoughts and prayers are with the victims, their families and the entire Jonesboro community."

Gov. Mike Huckabee said he was angry, as a parent, that such a tragedy could happen at a public school.

"It makes me angry not so much at individual children that have done it as much as angry at a world in which such a thing can happen," he said.

Arkansas law does not prohibit minors from possessing shotguns or rifles, but it does bar people younger than 21 from possessing handguns. Other laws prohibit anyone from possessing a gun on public property or with criminal intent.

It was at least the third fatal shooting rampage in a school in the past five months.

On Dec. 1, a boy opened fire on a student prayer circle at a high school in West Paducah, Ky., killing three students and wounding five. A 14-year-old student, described as small and emotionally immature, was arrested.

Two months earlier, a 16-year-old outcast in Pearl, Miss., was accused of killing his mother, then going to school and shooting nine students. Two of them died, including the boy's ex-girlfriend. Authorities later charged six friends with conspiracy, saying the suspects were part of a group that dabbled in satanism.

BEST: San Antonio native has lived all over world enjoyed his two years as president of the Petroleum Museum and called both groups great organizations.

"Once you give so much of your time and commitment to something like the United Way or Petroleum Museum. ... I'll sorely miss those organizations."

Though they will miss Midland, Best said he and his wife are excited about relocating to a foreign country and learning a new language, new culture and a new job. They will leave their two daughters — one works in Houston and the other is a student at Texas A&M — behind.

"We're just a five-hour plane ride from South America," he noted.

A native of San Antonio, Best said he was a military brat who lived all over the world, including England and Alaska and numerous states as a child. He attended high school in Bossier City, La., and graduated from Texas A&M.

He will oversee Arco's activities in Latin America, including its offices in Ecuador, Peru, Brazil, Mexico, Trinidad and Venezuela.

The region's oil development is growing at a rapid pace, and Best said Arco plans to invest $2 billion in the region over the next couple of years.

He added that he will encourage his successor to become as involved in community organizations as he has been.

CHENEY: U.S. chastised for unilateral sanctions

ed by 3 percent a year and demand was using up excess productive capacity at a rapid rate. "There once was 12 percent excess capacity in the world, but now it is down to 4 percent. This means there will be lots of work for the oil and gas industry," said the six-time congressman from Wyoming. He attributed much of the economic growth to the demise of the Cold War, and said it was responsible for today's balanced budget.

Cheney said the oil and gas industry was now part of a global economy and that the global market would determine oil prices. "If you are looking for oil price support from Congress, it will never happen. Congress will never support oil prices in the U.S."

While the U.S. oil and gas industry is the main exporter of petroleum technology, and is engaged in international business, he said the U.S. government was turned inward and more focused on domestic policy. "The average Halliburton hand is more versed with international policy than the freshmen congressmen who come to Washington." He said that 33 percent of the new lawmakers don't even have passports and have never been out of the country.

Cheney chastised the United States for its unilateral sanctions, such as those against Iran, which cost Conoco a lucrative oil agreement. "Multilateral sanctions often work, but unilateral sanctions seldom work. The U.S. once was the No. 1 proponent of free trade. Now it is the No. 1 proponent of secondary boycotts." He said that trade should not be used as club to beat the heads of those who disagree.

Cheney said that because of the breakup of the former Soviet Union, the United States had been lulled into a position of military weakness. He said America's military strength was deteriorating. "It takes 13 years to bring a new military aircraft into the fight. What you want to be tomorrow, you have to initiate today. The secretary of defense today is working off the efforts of secretaries a decade in the past."

On events in Russia, which saw Yeltsin fire his entire cabinet, Cheney said he hoped Russia would be able to make the transition to become a democratic nation, but pointed out that the country had never been tested by free elections and the peaceful transfer of power.

CARNIVAL: Cuevas only member to vote in favor

portive of the idea, but were swayed by the concerns expressed by a number of citizens.

Nancy McKinley, president of the Midland Historical Society, objected to the plan citing possible vandalism or accidental damage to Midland's oldest structure near the intersection of Illinois Avenue and Weatherford Avenue, a block away from the proposed carnival site.

This home has been granted landmark status by the state and Ms. McKinley said the chance of damage was too great, even after festival organizers offered around-the-clock patrol by festival security personnel.

"I am fiercely opposed to this carnival or any carnival being set up next to this landmark — ever," Ms. McKinley said.

Two representatives of the Wall Street Bar & Grill opposed the move, citing parking problems and safety issues for employees who leave the establishment late at night. One suggested that she might be forced to carry a firearm for protection.

"People are going to be walking with their small children there and if they don't have to arm themselves, I don't know why she does," Zertuchi retorted.

Carl Berneathy of the Lone Star Barber Shop and Wall Street Bar & Grill officials argued that parking is difficult enough for their customers, and the festival will hurt their businesses economically. Opponents pointed out that control and sufficient security was impossible to provide in the downtown area for an event of that magnitude.

While customers for this area of downtown often make use of the city-owned parking lot adjacent to the Midland Center, the Hispanic chamber is leasing this parking lot from the city for the festival, cutting down on the parking spaces available for business traffic.

Council member Dale Brown pointed out that these businesses benefit throughout the year from that parking lot and should not be averse to giving it up for the festival. "You are enjoying an exemption from that most days of the year," Brown said.

Both Diaz and Zertuchi went as far as offering spaces in this parking lot for the downtown businesses and posting security personnel for protection and to ensure that festival goers did not use these retail parking spaces — but to no avail.

Downtown businessman Frank Tirey said that the carnival was not appropriate for the downtown area and Mayor Bobby Burns agreed, saying that was the major point of contention with the council.

Council member Jose Cuevas said festival officials had answered all of his questions regarding security for the event by planning to hire off-duty police officers and having sufficient number of private security personnel. Cuevas was the only council member to vote in favor of the request.

Burns, Brown, Lee Wood, Berry Simpson, Juluis Brooks and Pat Schneider voted against the proposal.

Burns expressed regret at being forced to vote against the carnival and praised festival organizers for their efforts to compromise. "In my opinion, we owe you one. Let us know if we can help you," Burns said.

Following the vote, Diaz said the organization will probably scrap the plans for the carnival, but move ahead with plans to hold the festival downtown.

Papers indicate conspiracy in King assassination, ex-FBI agent says

ATLANTA (AP) — After 30 years of silence, a former FBI agent said Tuesday that papers he took from James Earl Ray's car after the assassination of Martin Luther King Jr. support claims of a conspiracy.

Donald Wilson, who worked in the FBI's Atlanta office when King was slain in 1968, showed copies of the documents Tuesday to Fulton County District Attorney Paul Howard.

Wilson claimed to have found in Ray's car an envelope containing two pieces of paper with the name "Raul" written on them. Ray contends he was set up by a shadowy gunrunner named Raoul, a man whose existence has never been verified.

Donald Wilson claims to have found in James Earl Ray's car an envelope containing two pieces of paper with the name 'Raul' written on them. Ray contends he was set up by a shadowy gunrunner name Raoul, a man whose existence has never been verified.

"This is the first time ... that there has been a verification of the existence of a man whom James said set him up all of these years," said William Pepper, Ray's attorney, who was with Wilson on Tuesday.

Wilson declined to say why he withheld the papers from his FBI superiors. But Pepper described Wilson as having been an idealistic young agent who doubted the integrity of the FBI's investigation into King's death.

"It's become clear to me that he had grave concerns as to whether the bureau itself was not going to obstruct justice in this case," Pepper said.

Cartha DeLoach, who was assistant to FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover in 1968, said he was not aware of Wilson's evidence.

"If Mr. Wilson had received such evidence during the course of his official duties, he should have turned it in to the FBI," DeLoach said Tuesday in a telephone interview from his home in Hilton Head, S.C. "I think all evidence should be considered, but I think the FBI did a very thorough, excellent job."

Walter Fauntroy, a former House delegate from Washington who chaired a subcommittee that investigated the King assassination in 1978, said Wilson's information could be a "very significant development."

"The whole question of a conspiracy related to James Earl Ray turns on whether or not Raoul was a real handler," Fauntroy said.

Wilson said he wants to meet with U.S. Attorney General Janet Reno to show her the documents, which he says he kept from his FBI superiors in 1968.

Ray pleaded guilty to killing King in 1969, but later recanted his confession and has been seeking a trial ever since.

Wilson was one of two agents who impounded Ray's white Ford Mustang from an Atlanta housing project on April 10, 1968, six days after King was assassinated in Memphis, Tenn.

One of the papers contained a list of names, including Raul, and figures that appear to be payments made to those people, Pepper said.

Pepper said Wilson, who lives in suburban Chicago, contacted him a year ago and hoped to release the new evidence in court. Pepper said Wilson agreed to come forward now because there's been little progress in winning a trial for Ray, who suffers from a liver ailment and may not live much longer.

Wilson said: "I'm here only on behalf of the King family, to secure hopefully what will be answers to the questions they've been seeking for some 30 years."

Coretta Scott King, the civil rights leader's widow, released a statement calling for an investigation of Wilson's evidence "to help bring about at least some sense of closure to the pain my family and the American people have endured over unanswered questions surrounding this tragedy."

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution, which obtained copies of the papers Monday, reported Tuesday that one of the papers had the number 450,000.00 written at the bottom, with a date and a name that appears to be Raul. The other document contains a telephone number and the name Raul, the newspaper said.

In an odd twist, the Journal-Constitution said a telephone number on one of the papers appeared to refer to Jack Ruby. The number is next to a capital J inside a circle. A 1963 Dallas directory showed that number listed to Ruby and the Vegas Club, the newspaper said. Ruby was arrested in 1963 for killing Lee Harvey Oswald, the suspected assassin of President Kennedy.

Some question executive privilege for first lady

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legal scholars voiced skepticism and critics saw Nixonian abuses Tuesday in the White House effort to use executive privilege to shield aides from questions about conversations with Hillary Rodham Clinton.

President Clinton himself refused to discuss the issue when asked about it during his Africa trip. But sources familiar with the Monica Lewinsky investigation back home said the administration was trying to claim the privilege to prevent testimony related to discussions with the first lady.

And scholars saw that attempt as a daring one.

"It's a bold claim and quite possibly a real stretch of the doctrine of executive privilege," said Mark Rozell, a political science professor at American University and author of a book on executive privilege.

"This is a step too far," said Jonathan Turley, a law professor at George Washington University and a frequent litigator on constitutional matters. "The first lady is not the tsarina. ... It is difficult to see how the first lady can assert executive privilege when she is not an executive of this government."

Republican Party Chairman Jim Nicholson raised a comparison with former President Nixon's failed effort to keep White House tapes private during the Watergate investigation, accusing Clinton of "putting the nation through a constitutional crisis."

Nicholson said the president's use of executive privilege was "absolutely bogus, especially with regard to conversations his aides had with Hillary Rodham Clinton."

Executive privilege is the legal doctrine that allows the president to keep talks with his aides confidential, a privilege traditionally limited to matters related to his official duties. The idea of applying the doctrine to conversations involving the first lady has never been tested in court.

'This is a step too far. The first lady is not the tsarina. ... It is difficult to see how the first lady can assert executive privilege when she is not an executive of this government.'

— Jonathan Turley, law professor at George Washington University

White House lawyers invoked executive privilege last week, seeking to shield grand jury testimony by communications director Sidney Blumenthal and longtime Clinton confidant Bruce Lindsey. Starr has suspected Blumenthal, a protege of Mrs. Clinton, of leaking information to reporters about the conduct of his prosecutors.

Sources familiar with the investigation said the White House may point to two court rulings in arguing that aides' conversations with Mrs. Clinton should be shielded: one in which the first lady was considered a government official as head of the 1993 health care task force and another extending executive privilege to presidential advisers.

Prosecutors and attorneys for Clinton met for 90 minutes in closed session Tuesday before Chief Judge Norma Holloway Johnson. They declined to discuss the subject of the meeting.

In Africa, Clinton was asked whether claiming the privilege would risk sending a signal that he has something to hide. He told reporters: "That's a question that's being asked and answered back home by the people who are responsible for (it) and I don't believe I should be discussing that."

"I haven't discussed it with the lawyers," Clinton said. "I don't know. You should ask someone who does."

Barbara Olson, a former federal prosecutor and one of the founders of the conservative Independent Women's Forum, said the administration's attempt to apply executive privilege in the Lewinsky case was a stalling tactic that was certain to be rejected by the courts ultimately.

"Presidential dating habits" don't fall within the bounds of privileged communications, she said.

Presidential adviser Rahm Emanuel denied there was any White House attempt to slow down the investigation.

"We want to get this over as soon as possible," he said. "The notion that we have a strategy to delay runs counter to our interests. The facts are on our side."

The American Civil Liberties Union criticized Clinton's move to claim executive privilege for his aides and also Judge Johnson's decision to keep the matter behind closed doors.

"The public should not be left in the dark as these vital issues about our system of government are debated and decided," said ACLU legal director Steven Shapiro.

With the American people largely shrugging off the whole Lewinsky matter, pollsters predicted little risk to Clinton in claiming executive privilege, comparisons to Nixon notwithstanding.

"This question about executive privilege is very much a part of the ins and outs of a story that the American public isn't tracking," said Andrew Kohut, director of Pew Research Center for the People & the Press.

Likewise, Democratic pollster Mark Mellman predicted the issue would have "zero effect" on the president's public standing.

"People don't believe the ultimate objective here is the search for truth ... so that tends to make less important the concept of executive privilege," Mellman said.

New data confirms link between TV watching, overweight children

CHICAGO (AP) — A new study confirms that children who watch a lot of television tend to be heavier than those who do not, but it fails to settle the question: Which came first, the Simpsons or the Twinkies?

Children who spent more than four hours daily in front of the tube were significantly heavier than children who watched fewer than two hours daily, according to researchers led by Ross E. Andersen of Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine.

Yet the study could not say whether watching television results in children getting fatter or being fatter induces children to watch more television, said an editorial accompanying the study in today's edition of The Journal of the American Medical Association.

Researchers looked at federal data on 4,063 U.S. children who were examined from 1988 to 1994 and found that 26 percent averaged more than four hours of TV viewing daily.

Non-Hispanic black children had the highest rate of watching; 42 percent watched four or more hours daily, the researchers said.

Levels of vigorous activity were lowest among non-Hispanic black children, Mexican-American girls and girls in general, the researchers found.

"Many U.S. children watch a great deal of television and are inadequately vigorously active," the study concluded.

If you knew what was underground, you'd want to leave it there.
If you dig into a natural gas line, you could cause a fire or explosion. And with more than a million miles of line, there's only one way to dig safely. Call 800-562-5879 two days before you plan to dig.
We'll come to wherever you are and clearly mark where gas lines are...and where you shouldn't dig.
Calling for locations of natural gas facilities is more than just a good idea – it's the law.
And if you're ever somewhere where you smell gas, get away. Don't operate any equipment, don't flip any electrical switches, don't do anything but get away and call KN from a neighbor's house or some other location.
Our greatest concern is for your well-being.

Century of posters gets dual exhibit — on World Wide Web, at museum

WASHINGTON (AP) — A drawing of a female nude that won second prize in a contest for the cover of an upscale magazine 100 years ago went on the World Wide Web on Tuesday in a show of posters at the Museum of American Art.

The date was August 1897 and Maxfield Parrish, one of the period's most popular artists, did the brightly colored lithograph for the monthly "Century." Now no longer published, the magazine was a kind of 19th century 'New Yorker,'" according to the Library of Congress.

Parrish's designs, often featuring lush settings and female nudes, were produced for a wide variety of magazines, said Therese Thau Heyman, curator of the "Posters American Style" show.

All 120 posters in the show are online, from 1890s bicycle ads to a sharp image of the cockpit of a Boeing 777. Also included are images such as a stern, finger-pointing Uncle Sam recruiting for World War I, Marilyn Monroe poised over Niagara Falls in a movie ad and Norman Rockwell's evocation of freedom of speech — a young man in a windbreaker at a town meeting.

There's also Joan Baez and her two sisters in a black-and-white photo poster urging resistance to the Vietnam War, with the caption "Girls Say Yes to Boys Who Say No."

Also on the web site portion of the show is an elaborate system of references and background on the posters. It tells, for example, how Rockwell's posters initially were rejected for World War II propaganda in Washington and then won nationwide fame as covers of "The Saturday Evening Post."

The site provides material on each artist, general social and political background on each poster and an explanation of the lithographic process by which many posters were produced.

The exhibit closes in Washington on Aug. 9. Admission is free.

Its next stop will be the Norton Museum of Art, West Palm Beach, Fla. Aug. 29-Oct. 25; Santa Barbara Museum of Art, Santa Barbara, Calif. Jan. 23, 1999-March 21, 1999 and the Oakland Museum of California, June 12, 1999-Aug.15, 1999.

Breast cancer gene rarer than thought, studies suggest

Findings in two new studies cast doubt on whether defective genes cause the early onset of breast cancer and on how useful gene testing would be, researchers say.

CHICAGO (AP) — Gene defects that have been linked to breast cancer are rarer than previously thought, and widespread screening of women for the flaws would not be worthwhile, two studies suggest.

Any of several defects in two genes — BRCA1 or BRCA2 — are known to raise the risk of breast and ovarian cancer dramatically. Women who test positive for the defective genes often choose drastic options — even having healthy breasts and ovaries removed — to avoid cancer.

In previous research, up to 75 percent of breast-cancer patients with family histories of breast and ovarian cancer were found to have defects in BRCA1.

However, in a new study from North Carolina, only three women among 211 breast-cancer cases had a BRCA1 defect. The women were 20 to 74 years old and were selected without regard to whether they had a family history of the disease.

And in a new Washington state study, only 12 women had a defective BRCA1 gene among 193 who developed breast cancer before age 35. Only 15 women had the trait among 208 who developed breast cancer before age 45 and also had a close relative with the disease.

The findings cast doubt on whether defective genes cause the early onset of breast cancer and on how useful gene testing would be, researchers said. Both studies were published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

Defective genes account "for less disease than we previously thought," said Beth Newman, lead author of the first study and an assistant professor of epidemiology at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

The Washington researchers, led by Kathleen E. Malone of the Fred Hutchinson Cancer Center in Seattle, said the findings suggest it may be difficult to develop criteria for which women should be tested for the defective genes.

An editorial by experts not involved with either study agreed.

The research "strongly suggests that widespread clinical testing of individuals and families of low risk is premature," said Fergus J. Couch and Dr. Lynn C. Hartmann of the Mayo Clinic and Foundation in Rochester, Minn.

Earlier studies of how common the BRCA1 defects are may have been skewed because they were done mostly at breast-cancer clinics, where patients tend to have developed cancer unusually early or belong to families with a lot of cancer, Ms. Newman said.

"There's been a lot of emphasis on genetic testing and how women can take this test and learn what their risk of breast cancer is," Ms. Newman said. "To me, that's a simplistic analysis, and it also covers over some real possible risks associated with genetic testing."

Various studies have found that a woman who tests positive for a BRCA1 defect faces as much as an 85 percent lifetime risk of developing breast cancer. Other studies have found a much lower risk.

But a woman who tests negative for known cancer-causing BRCA1 defects might be misled, Ms. Newman said. "You can still get breast cancer, even if you test negative," she said.

Even opting simply to get mammograms more often might be hazardous as well, she said, since it's possible that defects in BRCA1 increase the usually negligible cancer-causing potential of X-rays.

But if a woman knows that a particular defect runs in her family, or she is a member of a population subgroup known to be at high risk for the defect, testing might make sense, Ms. Newman said.

For example, Jewish women of European descent have been found with BRCA1 defects at a relatively high rate of 1 percent to 2 percent, and women in Iceland have a high rate of BRCA2 defects, she said.

Secret Service questions man about gunpowder packages

BURLINGTON, Vt. (AP)— Secret Service agents questioned a Vermont man Tuesday about packages sent to two U.S. senators that contained gunpowder and threats against former President Reagan.

The gunpowder discolored and temporarily numbed the hands of two aides and another person in the office of Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio, when they opened a package that arrived Monday at his Columbus, Ohio, office.

Staff members in the Burlington office of Sen. James Jeffords, R-Vermont, opened a package that arrived there but not the box inside. No one was hurt.

Law enforcement officials who spoke on condition of anonymity said both packages were mailed from Burlington, where they were questioning the man whose return address was listed on the package sent to Jeffords.

The man's name was found in the Secret Service database of people the agency has encountered while protecting presidents, one official said.

Letters in the packages contained racial and ethnic slurs and threats against Reagan but not the two senators. Those threats led the Secret Service, which still protects the former president, to take over the case.

No charges were filed immediately, but it is illegal to mail a dangerous substance like gunpowder, said Bernie Feeney, a spokesman for the Postal Inspection Service.

"Everybody's confident that whatever threat there was is contained and dealt with," said one law enforcement official in Washington.

A bombing last week in Fair Haven, Vt., that killed a 17-year-old boy and seriously injured his mother had made the staff in Jeffords' Burlington office especially alert for suspicious packages.

"I think everybody took notice," said his state director, Jolinda LaClair. "It would be hard not to."

Erik Smulson, Jeffords' spokesman, said he couldn't immediately think of any connection between the two senators that would make them targets.

Jeffords called the incident "a sad situation, not only because of the potential threat of injury to innocent people but also because we are clearly dealing with an individual who is quite ill and in need of help."

Authorities in Columbus evacuated people from the downtown federal building Monday after the package was discovered in Glenn's office. The three people injured were treated at a hospital and released. The two aides to Glenn were expected to return to work Tuesday.

The package was accompanied by a rambling 12-page handwritten letter that appeared to come from "a militia type," said Vicki Butland, a spokeswoman for Glenn.

The letter was angry and rambling, but the sender's intention was perfectly clear, fire Battalion Chief Howard White said.

"It wasn't meant to explode. It was meant to harm," he said.

Some think 'Communist Manifesto' makes perfect accessory

NEW YORK (AP) — You've come a long way, comrade.

A stylish new edition of "The Communist Manifesto" aims to make Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels the latest in radical chic.

The slender volume is being republished as a glossy, $13 hardcover for release in New York and London on May Day. The fashionable department store Barneys is thinking about it for a window display.

The publisher says the 1848 work speaks to a sense on Wall Street that the party can't go on forever.

"There's a sense of anxiety tied to the millennium. People don't believe things will just carry on, with markets rising forever," says Colin Robinson, head of Verso publishers, which is printing 20,000 copies on the 150th anniversary of the manifesto. "Marx's description of a capitalist system prone to shocks and convulsions captures that mood."

The revolutionary book, now with a rippling red-flag cover, has become fodder for capitalist fantasy:

With a handle attached, the book could make a snazzy accessory to a designer dress, says Simon Doonan, creative director of Barneys on Madison Avenue. One could sashay toward the new millennium, the 19th-century words of Marx and Engels dangling at one's side.

Doonan is toying with the idea of featuring the "Manifesto" — along with red lipsticks — in the window as "conceptual art." His assistants are looking for the right lipstick — preferably with a Russian-sounding name.

With communism gasping around the world, "it's OK to look at the book as camp," he says.

Around Wall Street, the very capital of capitalism, the Borders bookstore at the World Trade Center plans a prominent display. Barnes & Noble also will market the "Manifesto" at its 483 superstores as "a storefront feature."

Court ruling upholds Scouts' contention

A local official with the Buffalo Trail Boy Scouts Council on Monday cheered two unanimous rulings by the California Supreme Court that the Scouts are not a business and thus are not covered by California civil rights laws and as a private organization can exclude gays, agnostics and atheists.

Jack Ladd, president of the Buffalo Trail Boy Scouts Council, said that the ruling affirming a Contra Costa County Scouts organization in 1981 rejecting Timothy Curran as an assistant scoutmaster after he disclosed he was gay was "very good for the Boy Scouts of America and this council."

Ladd was quoted as saying, "I think a lot of parents would have a philosophical problem sending their teen or preteen boys on a camp out with someone who said they were homosexual."

'I think a lot of parents would have a philosophical problem sending their teen or preteen boys on a camp out with someone who said they were homosexual.'
— Jack Ladd, president, Buffalo Trail Boy Scouts Council

In a related ruling, the California Supreme Court also upheld the decision of an Orange County, California Cub Scout den in barring twin 9-year-old brothers, Michael and William Randall, from membership in the organization because they are agnostics. The twins were allowed into the Scouts by lower court rulings and recently qualified to become Eagle Scouts, scouting's highest rank. But they must be approved by the national organization to receive that rank and their father, James G. Randall, who is their lawyer, says the boys "haven't yet worked out their religious beliefs."

Ladd noted that the Boy Scouts organization requires youngsters to promise to uphold a duty to "God and country." He said, "We do not prescribe any particular religious credo, only that the scouts believe in a supreme being."

Religious faith and upholding a duty to God and country are important elements in the training youngsters receive in the Boy Scouts organization. This ruling by the California Supreme Court is an important victory for the organization.

Today in History

Today is Wednesday, March 25, the 84th day of 1998. There are 281 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On March 25, 1965, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. led 25,000 marchers to the state capitol in Montgomery, Ala., to protest the denial of voting rights to blacks.

On this date:

In 1634, Maryland was founded by English colonists sent by the second Lord Baltimore.

In 1865, during the Civil War, Confederate forces captured Fort Stedman in Virginia.

In 1894, Jacob S. Coxey began leading an "army" of unemployed from Massillon, Ohio, to Washington, D.C., to demand help from the federal government.

In 1911, 146 immigrant workers were killed when fire broke out at the Triangle Shirtwaist Co. in New York City.

In 1913, the home of vaudeville, the Palace Theatre, opened in New York City.

In 1918, French composer Claude Debussy died in Paris.

In 1947, a coal mine explosion in Centralia, Ill., killed 111 people.

In 1957, the Treaty of Rome established the European Economic Community.

In 1990, 87 people, most of them Honduran and Dominican immigrants, were killed when fire raced through an illegal social club in New York City.

In 1992, Soviet cosmonaut Sergei Krikalev, who'd spent 10 months aboard the orbiting Mir space station, thereby missing the upheaval in his homeland, finally returned to Earth.

In 1996, the redesigned $100 bill went into circulation.

JACK ANDERSON

It's about time Poland was included in NATO

The expected approval by the U.S. Senate of a treaty that will bring Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic into the NATO fold has been too long in coming — especially for Poland.

Anderson

We've visited Poland and spoken to her leaders for more than a decade now, and have developed an affinity for the plucky people. On many occasions through this column, we've pushed Congress to cut the post-communist Poland a break or two.

The Polish people have historically thought of their country as being the heart of Europe. Never mind that it has been erased from the map a few times over the centuries; its lack of mountains leaves it exposed to invading hordes from East and West.

Poles will bring out a map and draw a line from the Urals in easternmost Europe to Lisbon on the western edge, and another line from its southernmost point in Greece to northern Norway. The lines intersect near Warsaw, and that's close enough for the Poles.

The Polish people are Europe's romanticists, a stubborn people who believe in grand gestures and heroic sacrifices and who are forever tilting at windmills. They have shown a hunger for freedom that often bordered on the suicidal — such as the Polish horse-mounted lancers who charged invading Nazi tanks and machine guns with incredible courage and little else.

The Poles are the dreamers of central Europe. And they have been asking America to help them become the doers.

Lech Walesa always worried about a fickle U.S. foreign policy that abandons Poland after years of encouraging their democratic, almost suicidal fight against communism. "I've been afraid to turn the radio on and learn that countries such as China, Vietnam and Cuba have started reforms similar to those in Poland," he once told our associate Dale Van Atta. "Of course, we would wish them well. All of them that can fly will go to the West — to America. Yes, you still like us today. But you will get all those Chinese coming to America, and you may not like us much anymore."

In an allegorical, typically Polish sort of way, Walesa was speaking of a fickle American foreign policy which can move from fervent embraces and promises one year to avoidance and noncommittal remarks the next.

Poland and America have an almost mystical bond. Polish immigrants came to America so early that they began America's first labor strike -- in Jamestown, Va., in the early 1600s. Not incidentally, the first globe to include the American continent was a Polish one — the Jagiellonian Globe, circa 1510.

When America fought for her independence, two Polish generals, both greatly revered patriots in their own country, responded to Benjamin Franklin's cry in Europe for help and came to America to fight the British.

Fast-forward to the early 20th century, when more than 1 million Polish immigrants came to America because of poverty and the partitioning of Poland between Prussia, Russia and Austria. When President Woodrow Wilson first called for American volunteers to fight in World War I, a whopping 40,000 of the first 100,000 to enlist were Polish-Americans.

Woodrow Wilson did not forget them or their ancestral land when the war was over. One of his famous 14 points demanded an independent Poland. And it was no accident that when it came time to elect their first prime minister, the Polish people voted for a legendary pianist who lived in the United States and had pleaded their cause, Ignace Paderewski.

To the world, Poland gave astronomer Nicolaus Copernicus, writer Joseph Conrad and brilliant physicist-chemist Marie Sklodowska. Poland's musical contributions are immense: polonaises, polkas and mazurkas; Frederic Chopin; and a line of virtuoso musicians like Paderewski, Leopold Stokowski and Arthur Rubinstein.

Polish-Americans even made a name for themselves in those most American of sports, baseball and football. Consider Carl Yastrzemski, Stan Musial, Phil and Joe Niekro and Ted Kluszewski. Or former Chicago Bear Mike Ditka, who has been quite proud of his Polish roots — perhaps not so unnatural in a city that has more people of Polish descent than any other city except Warsaw.

As President George Bush once related on a visit to Poland, standing beside Walesa in Gdansk, where Solidarity and the freedom movement began: "Poland has a special place in the American heart and in my heart, and when you hurt we feel pain, and when you dream we feel hope, and when you succeed we feel joy. It goes far beyond diplomatic relations; it's more like family relations. And coming to Poland is like coming home."

We thus salute the expected Senate approval of the long-awaited inclusion of Poland in the NATO military alliance. We only wonder what took them so long.

ART BUCHWALD

Can Clinton weather El Niño threat?

"Do you always have to write about the Lewinsky affair? I'm getting tired of it," thus wrote Haley Breene Huxley the other day.

Buchwald

I replied by telling her she was right, and instead of dealing with an infamous scandal, I would talk about El Nino — the most important story of the year.

El Nino first came to the public's attention when it blew through the Whitewater housing development in Arkansas. This bankrupted a bank outside Little Rock and half of a law firm.

The governor of Arkansas, whose concern was with acts of God, called in several deputy sheriffs, who had dealt with El Nino disasters before.

He also called in a flood damage expert named Paula Jones to discuss what could be done to turn EL Nino in a different direction.

Unfortunately, they met alone in a hotel, and Paula said El Nino was hardly discussed.

Then the governor was elected president, and a special prosecutor was appointed to find out why there was so much warm water in the Pacific Ocean.

At this point in time, a White House intern, who had majored in freezing weather, told her best friend that she and the president spent all their time talking about El Nino.

The friend taped everything the intern said, including the reports of a weird storm system over Alaska.

She took her tapes to the special prosecutor, who was trying to find out how much water El Nino was dumping on Los Angeles.

But the prosecutor needed confirmation before he could charge the president with lying about the high tides and misdemeanors.

Apparently one other woman knew about the president's role because she had gone to see him about a job.

When she raised the question about the cold masses of air coming into Canada and meeting the warm winds from El Nino, the president grabbed her and said, "The country salutes you." It was "60 Minutes' " finest hour.

The question now is, has El Nino hurt the president? His pollsters say it hasn't. His job is to make sure the weather does no harm to the people.

And if he does it right, no one can impeach him.

Clinton claim pits him against law of United States

WASHINGTON — By defiantly asserting that he and his aides are above the criminal law — the essence of his claim last Friday of "executive privilege" — Bill Clinton has increased the likelihood of their indictment and his impeachment.

Pitting his soaring poll ratings against bedrock judicial principle, he offers the other two branches of government the choice of the rule of Clinton or the rule of law.

Safire

That is the meaning of his decision to place his cover-up crew beyond the reach of a grand jury. Not since Richard Nixon tried to withhold incriminating taped evidence — and was forced by the unanimous Supreme Court to respond to the subpoena of a grand jury — has a president presumed to wrap personal wrongdoing in the cloak of official business.

Firestorm, anyone? Not yet; most are hung up on trashing the background of women accusing the president of misconduct to grasp the constitutional import of Clinton's blatant attempt at the usurpation of power.

Perhaps his reach for unlimited immunity has little of the human interest of a sex dispute. But what Clinton crudely groped at last week is an idea called "equal justice under law." To try to stretch presidential prerogatives to subvert the course of a criminal investigation goes beyond ordinary criminal acts to reach the level of a "high" crime.

Despite being committed under the secrecy of an ill-considered judicial seal, Clinton's claim of unprecedented privilege is not denied by the president's fleet of lawyers. We know it has taken place. If Clinton can get away with this, any future president would be able to get away with anything.

He will declaim piously that he seeks only to protect the confidentiality of official advice. That's sophistry because he is blocking inquiry into a conspiracy of witness-tampering, which is not in his job description.

We can hope that the Supreme Court, in a U.S. vs. Clinton, will again deny a presidential power-grab (and this time Justice Rehnquist need not recuse himself). But Clinton hopes his stall will get him past the Jones trial and the midterm elections. To pay for his bid to run out the clock of his second term, this self-weakened president is willing to force the court and the Congress to weaken the presidency permanently.

Why take such a risk to keep his aides from talking? Only one logical answer: He sees a greater risk in letting them tell the truth.

Note the difference between his defiance of the independent counsel, who is unpopular, with Clinton's more cautious approach to delaying the Congress, which now nearly matches his own popularity.

Bruce Lindsey, Clinton's longtime Mr. Fixit, who refuses to answer the grand jury's questions, also invoked a spurious executive privilege when deposed by the staff of the House committee looking into campaign scandals. Chairman Dan Burton once before brought a contempt of Congress resolution against a White House counsel, who caved in at the last minute. Under the same threat, Lindsey has agreed to return to testify April 6 about conversations with Clinton about James Riady's influence.

Behind the talk of a select committee to replace Judiciary in considering impeachment is this: House rules require a two-thirds vote to grant witnesses immunity and force them to testify. In Judiciary, Clinton diehard Barney Frank has the votes to block such vital grants.

That's why a new committee, headed by Judiciary chairman Henry Hyde, will likely be appointed with two-thirds Republicans. Otherwise, the parade of 89 witnesses taking the Fifth or fleeing the country would continue and no serious inquiry could proceed.

If impeachment comes, Clinton's power-abusive attempt to carve out a personal privilege that places him above the law — the high crime perpetrated last week — will be remembered as the beginning of his end.

Bills to replenish IMF, pay for defense, disaster costs advance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite Clinton administration objections to some of the provisions, bills providing $18 billion for the International Monetary Fund advanced in the House and Senate on Tuesday.

Lawmakers also worked on legislation providing billions of dollars for El Niño-related disaster relief and military operations in the Persian Gulf and Bosnia.

The House Appropriations Committee approved a pair of bills, one providing the IMF funds and the other containing $2.9 billion for U.S. troops and domestic disasters. The Senate neared passage of both measures.

Strings attached to the IMF money by the House Appropriations Committee drew complaints from Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin and Democrats, suggesting a confrontation ahead. The White House also objected to the House committee's plan to cut housing and other domestic programs to pay for the defense and disaster spending — a condition most House Republicans are insisting upon.

"The confrontation artists are back calling the shots," said Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., blaming Republicans for the budget fights that produced government shutdowns in 1995 and 1996.

The IMF money would help the international lending agency replenish loan funds depleted by the Asian economic crisis.

The House panel approved the IMF legislation by voice vote, but placed conditions on the money that the Clinton administration said it opposed.

"While there are many issues in the legislation that we sympathize and agree with, we have to differ on how to go about it," Rubin told reporters. "The conditions set forth would take a long time to achieve, if they could be at all. If that happened, the funding for the IMF could be delayed."

But House Appropriations Committee Chairman Bob Livingston, R-La., defended the legislation and said the GOP conditions on the IMF funds, which would require the Clinton administration to aggressively prod the IMF to tighten its lending policies, were responsible.

"We're advancing the ball. We're funding IMF," Livingston said.

The House committee voted 29-25 to kill a Democratic amendment that would have called on the IMF to require stronger protections for workers and the environment in the countries to which it lends money. Rep. Frank Wolf, R-Va., was the only defector in a vote that was otherwise along party lines.

Strings attached to the IMF money by the House Appropriations Committee drew complaints from Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin and Democrats. The White House also objected to the House committee's plan to cut housing and other domestic programs to pay for the defense and disaster spending — a condition most House Republicans are insisting upon.

The Senate version — which was nearing a final vote, possibly today — also contains conditions, but they were accepted by the administration. The conditions, generally, would require the president to assure Congress that the Group of Seven industrialized democracies was pressing the IMF to overhaul its lending practices — mainly to prevent IMF money from subsidizing unfair trade practices.

The House IMF bill also includes $505 million for partial payment of back U.N. dues, but those funds were left out of the Senate measure.

"U.N. funding is a priority for Democrats and for the administration," said Senate Democratic Leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota. "We'll save the U.N. vote for another day."

While the Senate debated its $3 billion version of the separate defense and disaster bill, the House Appropriations Committee approved its own measure by a 29-21 party-line vote.

Obey and other Democrats criticized the plan in that bill to reduce spending for housing, airport projects, bilingual education and President Clinton's Americorps national service program to pay for the military and disaster expenses. White House budget director Franklin Raines wrote Livingston a letter saying the administration would "vigorously oppose" those spending cuts.

"It would be disappointing and disturbing if our ability to provide assistance to victims of natural disasters and our troops in Bosnia and Iraq were held hostage to partisan politics in the House of Representatives," White House Chief of Staff Erskine Bowles, traveling with Clinton in Uganda, said in a statement.

"We should be able to provide disaster assistance to communities here at home and support for our troops overseas without reopening last year's balanced budget agreement or attaching extraneous political provisions."

The emergency spending bill was becoming a magnet for a raft of amendments on politically appealing subjects. It was on the verge of growing by at least $1.6 billion to cover additional disaster relief for damage caused by fierce weather in recent weeks in Florida, Mississippi, Georgia, North Carolina, New England and California.

At the House appropriations panel, lawmakers used a voice vote to approve an amendment by Rep. David Skaggs, D-Colo., that would forbid Clinton from launching an attack against Iraq without congressional approval. The provision, whose fate was uncertain, would not affect U.S. troops in the Persian Gulf who are braced for an attack against Iraq.

The Senate agreed, by voice vote, to an amendment by Sen. Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., for $151 million for the Pentagon to make improvements in the nation's missile defense system, including improved radar. Supporters said the funds were prompted by concerns over weapons programs in Iran and North Korea.

Senators agree to five Great Lakes instead of six

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are five Great Lakes, not six, the Senate conceded Tuesday, undoing a recent vote that flew in the face of what every student knows.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., who engineered the earlier elevation of Lake Champlain, went along with the change because it left his original aim intact: helping the University of Vermont snag maritime grants.

Leahy had quietly inserted a sentence into other legislation last month designating Lake Champlain one of the Great Lakes for purposes of the National Sea Grant program.

But he underestimated the wave of controversy that hit after President Clinton signed it into law March 6.

"It snowballed into concerns that we would have to rewrite our encyclopedias or throw out our atlases," Leahy said jokingly on the Senate floor.

Lawmakers from the states that border Lakes Huron, Ontario, Michigan, Erie and Superior saw red. The issue has been on the front pages of newspapers and in editorials across the Great Lakes states for weeks.

"This is not just a tempest in a teapot for those of us who live on the Great Lakes," said Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich. "This is a matter of our identity."

"It created a serious perception problem," said Sen. Spencer Abraham, R-Mich. "Residents of the Great Lakes take great pride in the Great Lakes. ... The designation of any lake beyond the original five is simply unacceptable."

So Leahy, Abraham and Levin took to the Senate floor to offer to "clarify" the previous legislation — as Leahy put it.

"The purpose of my earlier amendment was not to change any maps, but promote ecological research," he said. "We've agreed to call Lake Champlain a cousin."

Champlain, a 490-square mile lake that straddles Vermont and New York, is puny in size compared to the Great Lakes. The smallest of the Great Lakes, Ontario, is 7,430 square miles.

The government spends $56 million a year for Sea Grant research at nearly 30 universities on lake and sea problems such as pest infestations or pollution.

The compromise allows the University of Vermont to seek money for research on problems it shares with the Great Lakes, such as zebra mussel infestation and the fish-killing sea lamprey.

The Senate agreed by voice vote to strike the designation of Champlain. The repeal is subject to approval by the House and Clinton.

Are lawmakers taking this all a bit too seriously?

"No," insisted Levin. "We just don't want to see our definition of Great Lakes watered down."

"The toughest job in the world isn't being President.

It's being a parent."

Starr suggests grand jury investigation may be near end

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The Whitewater grand jury created four years ago to investigate President Clinton's Arkansas land dealings may be ready to adjourn, special prosecutor Kenneth W. Starr said Tuesday.

The special Whitewater grand jury — the second empaneled at Little Rock since 1994 — is scheduled to expire May 7.

Starr suggested he might not need another, saying the cooperation of former Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker has proven helpful to the investigation.

"This investigation could conclude quickly if all persons who have relevant and material information would come forward and cooperate with the grand jury," Starr said outside his Little Rock office.

Tucker, who recently began cooperating with Starr's probe, pleaded guilty in February to conspiring to avoid taxes in the sale of a cable television business.

Asked whether he would request another grand jury be appointed, Starr spoke of the sacrifices grand jurors make to travel to the federal courthouse every two weeks.

"We have long sensed that it's in the national interest to bring these matters to a conclusion and closure in an orderly and very professional way," he said.

The Arkansas grand jury is separate from a Whitewater grand jury that has been meeting in Washington since September. Most recently it has been looking into Clinton's relationship with White House intern Monica Lewinsky.

The Arkansas Whitewater grand jury has most recently been interviewing Rose Law Firm attorneys who worked with first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton. It is also looking into whether President Clinton's supporters hired former Justice Department official Webb Hubbell in an effort to buy silence on Whitewater-related matters.

"The grand jury still has some weeks to go and I think we're at a stage where we will be at a position to assess the needs of the investigation promptly," Starr said. "We're mindful of the interest in bringing things to a closure."

Mother suffocated 3 daughters with duct tape, Calif. police say

DALY CITY, Calif. (AP) — A mother used duct tape to suffocate her three little girls in their pajamas, then climbed into bed with them and took an overdose of prescription drugs, police said Tuesday.

The woman, Megan K. Hogg, 25, was treated at a hospital, then booked for investigation of homicide and taken for a psychiatric evaluation.

Ms. Hogg left two notes describing her actions, police said.

"In 29 years, I've seen a lot of evil. Nothing like this," said Lt. Steven Lowe.

Ms. Hogg's parents found the bodies of 7-year-old Antoinette Marden, 3-year-old Angelique Roberts and 2-year-old Alexandra Hogg in bed next to their unconscious mother Monday morning. Ms. Hogg lived with her parents.

"She bound their hands and their faces with duct tape," Lowe said. Hogg. "She did them one at a time. She took them into the bedroom, suffocated them and came back and got the next one."

The officer added: "It takes about five minutes to suffocate someone. Multiply that by three."

Ms. Hogg overdosed on several prescription drugs in what Lowe called "a suicide gesture. I don't think she intended to kill herself."

He said one of her notes described what she planned and the other reported what she had done. Police did not release the contents.

Friends and relatives said Ms. Hogg was an adoring and gentle mother who had not appeared depressed or unhappy.

"She was very devoted to the kids," said Daisy Hogg, her aunt. "She tried her best for them."

The cream-colored house with pastel blue trim sits in a quiet working-class neighborhood of Daly City, on the southern edge of San Francisco. The house was decorated with Easter eggs and bunnies.

"I walked past the house and I tried to send them a prayer," said Serena Doss, who lives a few blocks down. She said she heard of the girls' deaths from a neighbor. Neither knew the family.

Residents with warrants to be listed

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram
Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter, left, and District Attorney Al Schorre said Tuesday that they are going to publish lists of felony and hot check warrants.

■ Authorities to publish list of Midlanders with outstanding warrants for Class A, Class B and felony crimes in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

By Rick López
Staff Writer

On Sunday, some Midlanders will find more than just news, TV listings and glossy sales ads in their Reporter-Telegram.

If they are one of 5,000 residents sought by local authorities, they may see their own name in black and white print.

The identities of people wanted by local authorities on warrants for Class A, Class B and felony crimes will be printed in a four-page spread.

The insert is the result of a project launched by Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter and District Attorney Al Schorre. The endeavor took several months of planning, they said at a news conference Tuesday.

"We're doing this as a joint venture," Painter said. "If it's a success, there'll be other ventures in the future."

The format will be similar to the city of Midland's March 1 insert, which contained the names of all people who had not paid their traffic tickets or other citations pending with municipal court.

"The municipal court said their efforts were very successful," Schorre said.

The county's list will be a bit different from the one created by municipal court. It will have the name of the defendant, their birth date and which law enforcement agency they should contact to settle their matters.

The charge they are wanted on will not be disclosed until they contact the appropriate office.

"These people would need to get a hold of Al Schorre or me and turn themselves in," Painter said Tuesday. "This is our way of telling people that they need to come see us."

Most of the people mentioned are wanted for writing hot checks, jumping bond or for not making an appearance in court.

MISD board OKs bid for Fannin renovation

By Richard Enos
Staff Writer

Midland Independent School District board members on Tuesday accepted a bid to renovate Fannin Elementary School.

In a 6-0 vote, the board authorized construction to begin around April 4. The board awarded the contract to Lee George Construction of Big Spring for its low bid of $2,685,580.

The project will be about $69,580 over MISD's projected budget because of unexpected market increases, according to Wilson Heidelberg, MISD's construction manager.

Heidelberg told the Reporter-Telegram later that the school district expects to complete temporary arrangements for Fannin students to attend school during the renovations.

"We'll start Fannin in April, then we'll bid Bowie Elementary in May," he said.

Lee George will move gradually through the school renovating the facility. The renovations will be completed in late December. Until then MISD will probably lease classroom space from one of two churches across the street from Fannin.

"We've leased the classrooms from churches before. It's

MHS Bulldogs honored at City Council meeting

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

The entire Midland High School state champion basketball team was honored with city and state proclamations Tuesday at a meeting of the Midland City Council.

Texas Sen. Teel Bivins sent a letter of congratulations and the state flag that was flying over the Capitol building on the day the Bulldogs won the championship.

"It was the highlight of this year to see you guys win the state championship," Mayor Bobby Burns told the purple-attired basketball players.

In the council's document honoring their success, March 24 was proclaimed Midland High School Boys Basketball Team Day.

"Everyone is so proud of this Midland Purple Pack basketball team," said council member Juluis Brooks.

In a briefing before the meeting, council members heard a proposal from the Midland Arts Assembly for a new program to display outdoor sculptures by local artists at Windlands Park.

In the program, a local dignitary would be selected to serve as curator and would select four local artists who would receive $1,000 each to create their sculptures for dis-

Drug task force seizes 500 pounds of marijuana from vehicle

Tim Fischer/Reporter-Telegram
Sgt. Robert Martin, with the Permian Basin Drug Task Force, seized more than 500 pounds of marijuana Tuesday and arrested a man in connection with the incident.

By Rick López
Staff Writer

MONAHANS — A routine traffic stop turned into a drug bust Tuesday when Permian Basin Drug Task Force agents pulled over a New Mexico man and seized a large drug cache from the sports utility vehicle he was driving.

Javier Rodriguez, 20, of Hagerman, N.M., was arrested on felony charges of possession of marijuana. He was taken to the Ward County Jail, where his bond had not been set as of Tuesday afternoon.

Sgt. Robert Martin, who arrested Rodriguez, said the incident occurred at about 11 a.m. There were at least 10 bundles of marijuana in the back seat and storage compartment of the vehicle. The 500-pound stash has an estimated street value of $330,000, he said.

The man's erratic driving is what alerted the officer to the suspicious vehicle. The truck also had a sticker on its back window that mocked the U.S. Border Patrol.

"I was looking out for indicators that I recognized," Martin said. "He was weaving on the road."

A drug-sniffing K-9 was not needed for this bust, Martin added. The plastic-wrapped bundles of marijuana were uncovered and were packed so high that they could be seen from outside the truck.

"When he stepped out of his vehicle, you could smell it," Martin said, adding that the driver did not even try to come up with a story. "He froze. He didn't say much because he knew he was caught."

Task Force Commander Tom Finley said that the vehicle was pulled over near mile marker 86 on Interstate 20. He believes that the driver had left the Presidio area and was en route to Odessa. He added that Tuesday's recovery is the second biggest amount that the task force seized this year. The biggest catch was a 700-pound cache recovered

Field named agricultural agent

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Sam Field, a veteran Texas Agricultural Extension Service agent whose pursuits have focused on West Texas farming and ranching, has been named the Midland County agricultural agent.

"We feel very honored to have Sam" heading up the TAEX education efforts for Midland County," Charles Neeb, director of the 23-county TAEX District VI, told the Midland County Commissioners' Court Monday. "He has an excellent record."

Field, 45, who currently is the TAEX county administrator for rural Cochran County just west of Lubbock, is succeeding Earnest Kiker.

Kiker, who recently retired, had been county agent since late 1982.

"Sam Field (is) a good name for a county extension agent," Neeb said.

His strong background in agriculture and his leadership experience in working with people contributed toward his winning the Midland job, he said.

Officers who shot woman given administrative duty

By Rick López

Two Midland police officers who shot and injured a Midland woman who had charged at them with a knife will return to the police force today and be placed on administrative duty.

The patrol officers — including a rookie officer — shot at 26-year-old Loretta Goodman at her apartment, 506 W. Cowden Ave. One bullet struck her in the chest. She was released from the hospital shortly after the incident.

Tina Sanders-Jauz, public information officer for the Midland Police Department, said the officers have been placed in administrative roles with the training division.

"This will allow them to continue work while having no enforcement contact with the public," she explained.

The placement is temporary until the officers' case is just right across the street," Heidelberg said.

The district originally planned to renovate Fannin over this summer, but learned that the contractor could save them about $119,000 by starting during the school year. That money can be applied to leasing space.

The temporary measure would affect about eight classrooms of students, or about 170 children.

In other business, the school board voted 6-0 to approve, on first reading, a modification of junior high school boundaries between Goddard and San Jacinto junior high schools. The area in question is vacant at this time.

Larry Lusby, executive director of pupil services, told the board that the area affected would generally be along the intersections of state highways 158 and 191, and from Highway 158 to an extension of Wadley Avenue.

"There are no students in this area, currently," he said. "We're recommending to you that the area be moved from Goddard Junior High to San Jacinto. We think that this recommendation has the greatest (chance) for an impact without moving existing students."

Administrators expect the land to be developed in the near future and wanted to balance enrollment between the two junior highs.

Among other items, the board recognized the district's National Merit Finalists. Midland High School's finalists are Christopher Welsh and John Simmons II. Welsh is the son of Jim and Juanice Welsh and plans to attend Texas A&M University. Simmons is the son of Barre and Jackie Simmons and plans to attend Texas A&M.

Lee High School's finalists are Michelle Blake, Elianna Marziani and Micah Prude. Ms. Blake is the daughter of Benjamin and LaRae Blake and plans to attend Brigham Young University. Ms. Marziani is the daughter of Nicholas and Joanne Marziani and plans to attend Washington and Lee University. Prude, the son of Randy and Miriam Prude, plans to major in computer engineering.

(Trinity School also had a finalist, Jessica Harvey. She is the daughter of Allen and Julie Harvey and plans to attend either the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Harvard or California Technological Institute.)

Lee had two National Achievement Finalists, Jenny Lawrence and Ritha Mary Belizaire. Ms. Lawrence is the daughter of Larry and Pat Lawrence and plans to attend the University of Oklahoma. Ms. Belizaire is the daughter of Roger and Amelia Belizaire.

The school board also recognized the Midland High School 1997-98 boys basketball team, which on March 14 won the 5A state championship by beating San Antonio Taft in Austin. A MISD board resolution designated March 24 as "Bulldog Day."

BUST: Another 760 pounds discovered in tractor-trailer

several weeks ago.

At least one other huge marijuana seizure was made in West Texas this week, U.S. Customs Service officials said.

Judy Turner, Customs spokeswoman, said 760 pounds of marijuana were found in a tractor-trailer when it arrived at the Customs inspection port Monday.

The driver of the tractor was referred to the secondary inspection lane because of missing paperwork. Customs officers noted that the man seemed nervous when they approached him.

Officers found a "C-shaped" metal cylinder stuffed with marijuana hidden inside a tire. Twenty of the vehicle's 24 tires also concealed a marijuana stash.

The driver, 31-year-old Gilberto Minjarez Barrera of Chihuahua, Mexico, was arrested in connection with the seizure. It took inspectors 11 hours to search the 24 tires, Presidio Customs' Port Director Guillermo Rivas said. This was the largest amount of marijuana ever seized at the port there, he added.

FIELD: New agricultural agent will assume duties in mid-April

(From 1B)

"I think he will perform a valuable service not only to Midland County ... he is going to be of valuable service to all of District VI and the Permian Basin area here," Neeb said.

The West Texas TAEX district includes the counties of Andrews, Brewster, Jeff Davis, Crane, Crockett, Culberson, Ector, El Paso, Glasscock, Howard, Hudspeth, Martin, Midland, Pecos, Presidio, Reagan, Reeves, Loving, Terrell, Upton, Val Verde, Ward and Winkler.

In his TAEX service, Field has effected strong agricultural programs and excellent programs in 4-H Club projects for boys and girls, Neeb said.

His forte is in economic development. "He is an economist," Neeb said.

Field said he accepted the Midland assignment because of the "new changes and the challenges of a more urban county and the diverse clientele that Midland has to offer, as opposed to the small community that I now work and reside in."

He will assume his new duties in mid-April.

Field has been agriculture agent for Cochran County, which has about 120,000 acres of cotton and 300,000 acres of ranchland, since 1980. Morton, a town of about 2,500 people, is the county seat.

Before his Cochran assignment, he was Borden County agent at Gail in 1979 and 1980 and was the 4-H Club coordinator for programs in Abilene and Taylor County.

Midland County, which is predominantly ranch country, has about 30,000 acres of cotton and about 1,000 acres of alfalfa.

"My training began in Abilene in Taylor County," Field said. "(Midland County) is real similar to that situation."

Midland and Abilene are both in the 100,000 population range.

"You might say I've made a full swing," Field said. "I started in an urbanized but highly agricultural area. Hopefully, that's where I'm ending up.

"The Midland area is a little more diverse," owing to its petroleum base, major business districts, and farming and ranching holdings. "I'm looking forward to that."

The 6-foot-4 Field, who was raised in oil-field country in Sundown, and his wife, Donna Howard Field, have two sons, Jim Ed, 21, a senior at Texas A&M University, and Bryan, 17, a senior at Morton High School.

Field has a bachelor's degree in animal science from West Texas A&M University (formerly, West Texas State University) and a master's in agricultural economics from Texas Tech University.

"My primary background is economics," Field said. Prudent management "is going to help pull us through a lot of our problems in agriculture," he said.

"Sam, we are certainly glad to have you aboard." Midland County Judge Jeff Norwood told him.

OBITUARIES

James Huddleston

James Elbert "Hud" Huddleston Sr., 92, died at Highland Hospital on March 23, 1998, after a brief illness. Visitation will be held from noon until 1 p.m. on Wednesday, March 25. Funeral services will begin Wednesday at 1 p.m. in the chapel of Osborn Funeral Home. Officiating will be Dr. Mark Brister of Broadmoor Baptist Church. Interment will follow in Forest Park Cemetery under the direction of Osborn Funeral Home of Shreveport, La.

Mr. Huddleston was born in Natchitoches Parish, La., on July 10, 1905, and after graduation from Natchitoches High School (with honors), he attended Draughons Business College in Shreveport in 1925-1926. After completion of his business course he moved to Monroe, La., and was employed by a pipeline construction engineering firm as an accountant. On March 1, 1927, the firm moved its office to Baton Rouge, La., and in May 1927, they started construction of a gas pipeline from Baton Rouge to New Orleans for a subsidiary of United Gas Co. After completion of the pipeline, United Gas in February 1930 moved the office force to its headquarters in Shreveport, La., and in October 1930, the firm moved its headquarters to Houston, Texas. They continued to be in Houston until February 1940, then moved the headquarters back to Shreveport.

In September 1931, while in Houston, Mr. Huddleston married Mildred A. Rockholt of Little Rock, Ark. He retired from United Gas on January 1, 1968, and established a public accounting and tax business, which he operated until 1988. He joined Broadmoor Baptist Church in July 1940, and was very active in all phases of the church until he became ill. He was affiliated with the American Petroleum Club and also served on the Caddo Council on Aging. In 1972, he was instrumental in organizing the United Gas retirees and their former employees and they have held weekly meetings ever since.

Mr. Huddleston was preceded in death by his wife of 62 years, Mildred A. Huddleston; a daughter, Barbara Ann Huddleston; his parents of Natchitoches Parish, La.; one sister; and three brothers, including his twin brother, Edgar of Lewisville, Texas.

He is survived by his son, James Elbert Huddleston Jr. of Midland, Texas; two granddaughters, Jennifer Coke and husband, John, of Hewitt, Texas, and Jessica Wilds and husband, Sam, of Temple; one grandson, Joe Huddleston of New Jersey; sister-in-law, Gladys Huddleston of Bossier City, La.; four great-grandchildren; and numerous nieces and nephews.

Pallbearers will be Ronald Huddleston, C.D. Brazzel, John Coke, Sam Wilds, Joel Huddleston, Pat Mase, Dawson Mase and Johnny Rockholt.

Obituary & Death Notice policy

There is no charge for death notices of residents or former residents of Midland or for those who have Midland relatives. We also publish death notices for residents of the surrounding West Texas area.

Free death notices include date and place of death, service and burial information, funeral home handling arrangements, date and place of birth, brief biography, survivors and memorials. A longer, more detailed obituary is available for a charge. It may include tributes, expanded biography, organizational associations, notes of appreciation, pallbearers, honorary pallbearers and a photo.

Deadline for both free death notices and paid obituaries is 4:30 p.m. and information must be either received from or verified by a funeral home.

COUNCIL: Historic house to be available for functions play, according to Linda Bond of the Midland Arts Assembly.

The proposed sculptures would be reviewed before construction for safety and moral standards. After being displayed for several months, the sculptures would be returned to the artists and the next curator selected.

Council members were receptive to the idea and Arts Assembly members are continuing with the planning stages of the program.

The inside of the historic Scarborough-Linebery House will soon be available for various functions, from small meetings to weddings.

The city set a fee schedule at the higher end of the scale to keep the home and its delicate antique appointments from being overused, according to city staff.

Prices for using the home range from $50 for a meeting room to $800 for use of the entire facility. Last year, council members approved the construction of restroom facilities outside the home so that the grounds could be made available to the public.

Also at the meeting, council members:

- approved a new ordinance to streamline the process for forcing the removal of nuisance, abandoned or junk vehicles from private property or on the street in front of homes;
- voted to contract with a Tallahassee, Fla., company to update and recompile the city code and produce a computerized version of the code at a cost of $12,500. (This is the first time the code will be available on computer);
- voted to purchase 31 automobiles and light trucks from various vendors for a total purchase cost of $367,777 for the annual replacement of the city's older vehicles in the fleet;
- approved the purchase of a police SWAT van from Jack Sherman Chevrolet for just under $34,000 (the old SWAT van is a converted ambulance that has reached the end of its serviceable life, according to Police Department officials);
- approved the purchase of two new ambulances to replace the two oldest of the city's five ambulances, which were purchased at a cost of $86,000 each; and
- approved the low bid of $93,000 for a street sweeping vehicle from Bane Machinery of Dallas (the council budgeted $125,000 for this purchase).

2 killed, 17 hospitalized after truck of immigrants overturns

WADSWORTH (AP) — Seventeen people remained hospitalized Tuesday after a truck hauling as many as 60 undocumented immigrants overturned on a farm road.

Two people were killed in the accident at 11 p.m. Monday on Farm Road 521 near Wadsworth, about 75 miles south of Houston.

Tela Mange, a spokeswoman for the Texas Department of Public Safety, said the passengers were riding in a flatbed trailer when their driver took a righthand curve at an unsafe speed.

As the truck began to cross the center line, the driver overcompensated, flipping both the truck and trailer onto their sides as they skidded down the road.

"All the passengers in the rear bed area were ejected onto the roadway," Ms. Mange said. "The truck kept sliding and it struck some of the people who got ejected."

A 33-year-old woman, whose name was not released, was killed at the scene. Another passenger, 35-year-old Erasto Lopez, hometown unknown, died later at Hermann Hospital in Houston.

In all, 43 people were transported to two hospitals in Matagorda County, where they were admitted, transferred to other hospitals or treated and released.

Seven people remained in stable condition at Matagorda General, said hospital spokeswoman Tiffany Foltyn.

Ten people, including Lopez, were transported to Hermann Hospital. One was released. Of the others, five were in stable condition, two were critical and one was serious, said hospital spokeswoman Relicia Johnson.

Another two people, a man and a woman, were in critical condition at the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston.

Those who were treated and released were turned over to the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. An INS spokeswoman in Houston did not return messages from The Associated Press.

Authorities, meanwhile, were searching for the truck driver, who fled the scene of the accident, Ms. Mange said.

Sharp urges lawmakers to do more to sustain space program

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Johnson Space Center could fall victim to the same budgetary knife that has gutted Texas' military bases unless state lawmakers begin doing their part to keep it viable, state Comptroller John Sharp said Tuesday.

"Places like NASA and Fort Hood are taken for granted by too many Texans and far too many people in Austin," Sharp said. "The last thing we want is to be in a position of, when budget cuts come, we haven't done our homework."

Sharp made the remarks at a news conference to release the March issue of his monthly economic newsletter, Fiscal Notes. The latest issue includes a report on the space program's importance to the state's economy.

The focus on Johnson Space Center, which serves as the control base for NASA's manned spaceflight operations, could not have been better timed.

Earlier this year, the space shuttle's prime contractor, Houston-based United Space Alliance, was forced to lay off hundreds of workers due in part to a $100 million shortfall in this year's NASA budget.

At Florida's Kennedy Space Center, about 300 people lost their jobs. Another 40 people were laid off in Houston, while others were transferred to different jobs, said United spokesman Jeff Carr.

NASA's proposed budget for fiscal year 1999 includes a $173 million reduction in overall spending. Those cuts could lead to further job losses at Johnson and other NASA facilities.

With such budgetary pressures, "having the support of the state and the community is important," said JSC Director George W.S. Abbey.

Sharp, noting that JSC has spent billions of dollars on contracts and business in dozens of Texas cities, said lawmakers should provide the center with some of the same economic benefits granted other corporations.

Priest pleads guilty to 3 molestation counts

DALLAS (AP) — Former priest Rudolph Kos admitted in court Tuesday that he sexually abused altar boys, pleading guilty to three of eight counts against him as his molestation trial started.

Kos, 52, entered his plea before the first witness, an 18-year-old former altar boy, testified about being molested when he was 13.

Kos could be sentenced to two to 20 years in prison on each of the guilty pleas: one count of sexual assault of a child and two of indecency with a child.

Prosecutors are seeking convictions on three counts of aggravated sexual assault of a child — with maximum penalties of life imprisonment — and two remaining indecency counts.

All eight counts involve four young men who told police they were molested about 1,350 times.

Defense attorney Brad Lollar said the pleas "do reflect the facts of the matter. He believes he is guilty of three of the eight indictments." He would not say why Kos changed his plea from innocent to guilty.

The Rev. Robert Williams, assistant pastor at St. John's Catholic Church in Ennis when Kos was pastor there, described confronting him after many young boys were staying overnight at the rectory.

Williams said he heard boys ask to play video games in Kos' bedroom and told the priest, "'Rudy, you promised not to have boys into your room any more.' He looked at me with the most intense hatred I've ever seen on a human face in my whole life."

Williams' intervention eventually led to Kos' leaving the parish.

In his opening statement, prosecutor Howard Blackman told jurors that Kos abused the power of the priesthood to prey on the altar boys.

"He assumed control of the altar servers and turned this program into a flesh pool into which he recruited his victims," Blackman said. "Evidence will show how this man, who was supposed to be their spiritual guide, used them for his own selfish sexual gratification."

Nathan Nichols, 18, of Ennis, testified that he and other boys spent time with Kos watching movies, playing video games, having sleep-overs, even making two trips to Kos' family farm in Magnolia.

Nichols, who agreed to be identified, testified that when he and Kos shared a blanket as they watched a TV movie, the priest rubbed Nichols' foot, moved it against his crotch and rubbed it for sexual gratification.

Blackman asked why he didn't object.

"For one thing, he's a priest. I didn't think he could do anything wrong, anything to hurt people," Nichols answered.

On cross-examination, Lollar attacked Nichols' credibility by citing inconsistencies between his testimony Tuesday and in a November 1993 deposition in a lawsuit against the Catholic Diocese of Dallas.

For example, Lollar asked Nichols why he said in 1993 that he was first molested when he was in seventh grade, but changed his story to sixth grade in 1997 and fifth grade on Tuesday morning.

He also asked about differences in Nichols' accounts after he testified about 450 or more alleged molestations over a period up to four years. At his deposition for the civil trial, Nichols had listed only 10 or so attacks.

Nichols says he had not "wanted to really think about it."

"Did you lie?" asked Lollar, who had reserved his opening statement until later in trial.

"No," said Nichols, who had met Kos in the fifth grade when he was 10 or 11 years old. "I wasn't true to myself. I was insecure about telling another man that another man had molested me."

Nichols also described evening trips with Kos to restaurants including Hooters, the Macaroni Grill and Dave & Buster's in Dallas when he was 12 or 13, along with malls and amusement parks, such as Six Flags at Arlington.

In a civil trial last summer, a Dallas County jury returned a $119.6 million verdict against Kos and the diocese in a lawsuit filed by 11 men who alleged that Kos molested them as children while the diocese covered for him.

LIST: Attempts have been made to contact defendants

(From 1B)

Painter and Schorre said they have made several attempts to contact the defendants before they submitted their names for publication.

Some have been summoned to appear in court, while others have been notified by mail, Painter said.

"It shouldn't be a surprise for them. No one on the list is unaware that we're looking for them," he noted.

Those who do not make arrangements with authorities risk being arrested during traffic stops.

The incentive, they said, is that people are afforded the opportunity to turn themselves in and take care of business in a discreet, organized manner.

"In some cases, we can work with the individual," Painter said.

This is not the first time that either one of the agencies started a project of this kind.

"It's been a while since we've done this," Schorre said. "We've done round-ups before that turned out to be successful, but we don't have enough employees to handle the job."

However, printing the defendants' names will cut the time it takes officers to seek and arrest them, he added.

"We can handle the caseload. Once we get them into our system, we get them ready for court," Schorre said. "We would also appreciate the public's cooperation in helping us notify them."

The process for collecting the names has been streamlined with modern technology, Painter said.

"Now we have the capacity to download them onto disks, so people ... won't have to type them in," he explained.

The cost for printing the insert was approximately $24,000. The bill was split between the two offices.

DUTY: Other officer suspended in connection with alleged rape reviewed by a grand jury.

"The MPD shoot team is still conducting their investigation and waiting on lab evidence to come back on the case," she added.

Their names are not being released until the grand jury decides what action to take.

Another officer was suspended this week in connection with his alleged participation in a Sunday night rape.

The case is under investigation by the Texas Rangers. The officer will remain on suspension with pay until the investigation is completed.

The victim, a woman in her early 20s, claimed that the incident occurred at a residence in west Midland. Two other men — who are not law enforcement officials — are also suspects in the case. No charges have been filed.

At least one other MPD officer was reprimanded this year for violating police procedures.

The officer was under investigation for shooting the tires of a car occupied by two men who were eluding officers. The incident occurred on Feb. 8. He received a three-day suspension without pay.

The officer, Ms. Sanders-Jauz said, does not have to serve all three days consecutively.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 25, 1998

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Wednesday, March 25, 1998:
Your magnetism, energy and courage work in your favor this year. But you need to know when it's time to step back. Work on your timing, and be willing to wait for the right moment. Plans for travel become confusing. Do more things alone, rather than in groups. Your greatest growth comes through individual work. If you are single, be careful of an exotic stranger; he is likely to disappoint you. Learn more about people by observation. If attached, take plenty of weekends away together. An in-law could become a problem. PISCES reads you cold.

★★★★ As you pull back and look at the big picture, you see the limitations of a certain situation. Cut red tape, and become more efficient. Seek out advice. There are many ways to handle a work-related problem. Make an appointment for a checkup. Tonight: Go to the movies.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Get down to brass tacks. Find out what is going on with a child or loved one. Your perspective is desired. One-to-one relating brings new information. A change in approach is needed. Work as a team. Check out a money investment. Tonight: A quiet night for two.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★ With added pressure, you need to defer to a trusted associate. Others express their views. A convoluted situation needs your attention. Do not think you can suppress your feelings. It is time for a substantial change. Tonight: Join friends, and share news.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Work is demanding, and you might not have the energy to follow through. You point of view will change substantially as events occur. You might become difficult and controlling. Try to see someone in the same light. Take a walk to let off steam. Tonight: Wind down early.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★ Your imagination helps you realize what you want. A money risk is not a good idea. Pull back, and analyze decisions. Recognize what is important to you. A new relationship is enticing and heated. Share your many ideas with a good friend. Tonight: Do something you relish!
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★ Pressure mounts beyond belief. Take some time off from a difficult family situation. You might want to rethink a decision more carefully, rather than reacting. If you engage in a control game, problems escalate. Loosen up, and lighten up. Tonight: Get away from it all.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ Reach out for others. A discussion is necessary because your imagination is concocting mountains out of molehills. Once you understand where another is coming from, you will be able to settle a problem. Return messages; touch base with friends. Tonight: Out and about.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Financial concerns demand your attention; talk with your accountant or banker to clarify matters. A friend could let you down, just when you thought everything was OK. Trust judgments, and be sure of yourself. Consider establishing stronger boundaries. Tonight: Pay bills.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Though you are a roll, you might want to pull back. A boss is demanding, so you feel like throwing in the towel. Think before leaping. Focus on matters that flow, rather than impossible problems. Your magnetism breaks barriers. Tonight: Get out of work early.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
2♣	3♣	3◇	5♣
6♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣

Study the diagram carefully, then decide whether you would rather play or defend six spades after the lead of the king of clubs.

South's opening bid was artificial and forcing. After North showed positive values by bidding freely over West's interference, South elected to gamble on a small slam when East's preemptive raise at favorable vulnerability left North-South with little or no room to investigate.

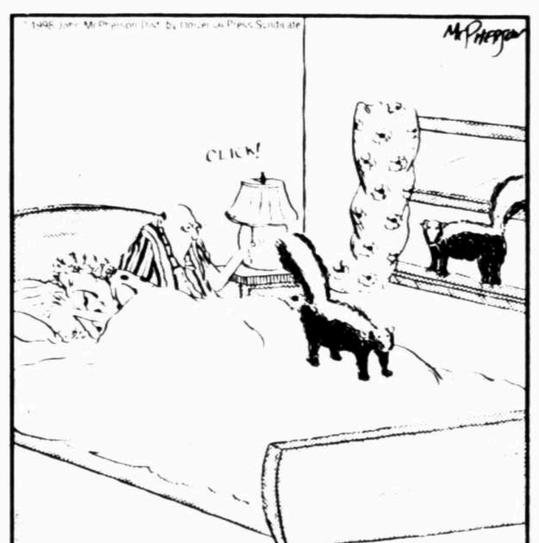

Suppose you elect to defend and continue with the ace of clubs after the king holds. Declarer ruffs and if, after drawing trumps, South relies on the heart finesse to make the slam, East-West will triumph.

However, declarer has another line available — finding diamonds 3-3 or a doubleton king with either defender. After ruffing the second club, declarer can clear the ace of diamonds, cross to dummy with a trump to the eight and ruff a diamond high. Another trump to the ten and another diamond ruff sets up the suit, and there is still a trump in dummy to cash the three good diamonds. And should either defender hold four diamonds to the king, declarer can still get home if East has the king of hearts guarded no more than twice.

Does this mean you should choose to declare? By no means. Suppose that, at trick two, West were to shift to a trump. That spends one of dummy's entries before declarer can put it to good use, and the slam must fail. Try it.

Pop star sentenced to year in jail after sending impostor for community service

OSLO, Norway — Salman Rushdie, the world's most visible writer-in-hiding, will be honored Saturday for his free-speech struggle.

The University of Tromsoe will give the British author an honorary doctorate. William Nygaard, the publisher who was shot and wounded in 1992 after putting out "The Satanic Verses" in Norway, will also be honored.

Salman Rushdie is being honored for his free-speech struggle.

"Nygaard and Rushdie are people who have paid a high price for freedom of speech," said Tove Bull, a spokesman for the school in the arctic city of Tromsoe. "That shows that freedom of expression cannot be taken for granted."

Rushdie has been in hiding since 1989, when the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini declared "The Satanic Verses" blasphemous. Khomeini ordered the death of Rushdie and anyone connected with the book.

LEICESTER, England — After sending an impostor to perform his court-ordered community service, Mark Morrison was sentenced to a year in jail Tuesday for a brawl that left a young man dead.

The pop star who had a hit last year with "Return of the Mac" got 150 hours of community service in 1995 for the brawl outside a nightclub.

Morrison, 25, completed 42 hours at a homeless shelter but arranged for another man to finish up.

The switch showed an "arrogant contempt for the order of the court," Judge Christopher Pitchers said in sending him to jail.

Morrison's lawyer, David Evans, said: "He knows he should not have done it, but there was pressure on him to perform elsewhere — all over Europe and the United States."

HOLLAND, Mich. — Robert Urich is back on track and looking forward to the debut of a TV series and his third child.

Urich, 51, said Monday he celebrated his first anniversary of being cancer-free this month.

Robert Urich celebrated being cancer-free for one year.

"I really recommend this. We need to celebrate life," he said at a benefit for a domestic violence program.

Eighteen months ago, Urich was diagnosed with synovial cell sarcoma. After chemotherapy, two operations and radiation treatment, he said he's healthy and looking forward to a big April.

Urich's wife of 25 years, Heather Menzies, is due in three weeks, and "The Love Boat: The Next Wave" premieres April 13. He stars as a former Navy captain running a cruise ship.

LOS ANGELES — A photography company specializing in nude men settled its copyright infringement lawsuit against Playgirl for running its picture of an Antonio Banderas look-alike.

The terms of the settlement Monday were not disclosed.

Jim French, who owns Colt Inc., sued the magazine because the fake Banderas shot had previously appeared in a Colt calendar in 1994.

The picture ran in Playgirl's February 1997 issue with the caption: "This photo was taken off the Internet. Supposedly it is Antonio Banderas. You, the reader, be the judge."

TEL AVIV, Israel — Chess and Israeli politics aren't much alike in Gary Kasparov's world.

"The difference between chess and politics is that in chess the aim is to win, while in the complex politics of the Middle East, a draw is the ideal result," he told reporters Tuesday.

Kasparov was in Israel to announce his participation in a chess competition in May as part of Israel's 50th anniversary celebration.

"I have always been sympathetic with the struggle of the Jewish people for independence," said Kasparov, whose late father was Jewish.

The chess whiz was defeated by the IBM computer Deep Blue last year.

No time to cook from scratch? Combine convenience foods with pantry items for meals

By Elizabeth Lee
N.Y. Times News Service

Putting dinner on the table fast doesn't require a trip through a drive-through line. With the help of quality convenience foods and pantry staples, it's just as quick to cook a homemade meal. Here are entrees that take no more than 40 minutes total to prepare, cook and serve, without sacrificing flavor.

MAIN DISH:
SHRIMP CREOLE

Makes 4 servings Preparation time: 10 minutes Cooking time: 15 minutes

This is a speedy rion of a New Orleans favorite made entirely with ingredients from your freezer and pantry.

Nonstick cooking spray
2 cups frozen stir-fry bell peppers and onions (from 16-ounce package)
1 (14-ounce) can chunky tomatoes with crushed
red pepper, undrained
1 pound uncooked peeled and deveined medium shrimp, thawed if frozen
1 teaspoon chopped fresh or 1/4 teaspoon dried thyme leaves
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder

Spray 12-inch nonstick skillet with nonstick cooking spray; heat over medium-high heat. Cook stir-fry vegetables in skillet about 3 minutes, stirring occasionally, until crisp-tender. Stir in tomatoes, shrimp, thyme and garlic powder. Heat to boiling; reduce heat to low. Cover and simmer 8 to 10 minutes, stirring occasionally, until shrimp are pink and firm.

SOUP
PRESTO PESTO CHICKEN SOUP

Makes 4 servings Preparation time: 10 minutes Cooking time: 15-20 minutes

Frozen onions make a good substitute for fresh when the dish derives its seasoning from many sources. If onions are essential to the flavor of a recipe, use fresh.

1/2 teaspoon olive oil
2 skinless, boneless chicken breast halves (about 2/3 pound total), cut into bite-size chunks
3/4 cup frozen chopped onions
2 (14.5-ounce) cans fat-free chicken broth
1 (14 1/2-ounce) can dicedtomatoes
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon bottled minced garlic
1/2 cup half-and-half
1/4 cup commercially prepared pesto
Salt and black pepper to taste

Heat the oil in a 4.5-quart Dutch oven or large soup pot over medium heat. Add the chicken and onions and cook 2 minutes, stirring from time to time. Add the broth and raise the heat to high.

Cover and bring to a boil. Drain the tomatoes and add them to the pot, along with the Worcestershire and garlic, keeping the lid closed as much as possible. When the soup boils, reduce the heat to medium-low.

Continue to cook at a slow boil until the chicken is no longer pink but is still tender, about 6 minutes.

Remove from the heat.

Stir in the half-and-half, pesto, salt and pepper. —From "Desperation Dinners"

MAIN DISH
ELIZABETH'S CHUTNEY CHICKEN

Makes 4 servings Preparation time: 5 minutes Cooking time: 8-10 minutes

Another miracle in a jar, this recipe is a good fallback for busy days. Slice the chicken and serve over a bagged salad, or pair it with quick-cooking, flavored couscous and steamed carrots or salad. If there is extra green onion, chop it fine and sprinkle some over the couscous.

2 teaspoons olive oil
4 boneless, skinless chicken breast halves (about 5 ounces each)
Jar (19-ounce) mango chutney
2 tablespoons sliced green onions

Heat oil in a large nonstick skillet. Add chicken and cook about 3 to 4 minutes per side until nicely browned and cooked through. Add chutney, cover and heat through. Sprinkle with onions. —From Woman's Day, Feb. 17, 1998

MAIN DISH
SPICY CUBAN STIR-FRY

Makes 6 servings Preparation time: 20 minutes Cooking time: 10-12 minutes

A long list of ingredients doesn't preclude quick prep time. The Spicy Cuban Stir-Fry, created by Linda Morten of Katy, Texas, was a finalist in the 30-minute entree category in this year's Pillsbury Quick & Easy Bake-Off.

2 cups water
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 cups uncooked instant white rice
1 pound boneless beef sirloin steak (one-inch thick)
Package (11 ounce) taco seasoning mix
2 tablespoons fresh lime juice
1 tablespoon olive or vegetable oil
2 large garlic cloves, minced
1/4 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes
Nonstick cooking spray
Can black beans (15 ounces), drained, rinsed
Can (11 to 15 ounces) whole kernel corn with red and green peppers, drained
2 cups firmly packed torn fresh spinach
Chopped red onion as garnish
Lime wedges as garnish
Fresh cilantro sprigs as garnish

In medium saucepan, combine water and salt. Bring to a boil. Stir in rice; cover. Remove from heat; let stand 5 minutes.

Meanwhile, cut beef into 0.25-inch-thick strips; cut strips into 1-inch pieces. In medium bowl, combine beef pieces, taco seasoning mix, lime juice, oil, garlic and red pepper flakes; toss to coat.

Spray large wok or 12-inch skillet with nonstick cooking spray. Heat over medium-high heat until hot. Add beef mixture; cook 4 to 5 minutes or until beef is browned.

Stir in cooked rice, beans and corn; cook 4 to 5 minutes or until thoroughly heated, stirring occasionally. Add spinach; cook until spinach just begins to wilt. Garnish as desired.

MAIN DISH:
MEDITERRANEAN SUPPER

Makes 4 servings Preparation time: less than 10 minutes Cooking time: 15 minutes

1 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup chopped green pepper
2 teaspoons olive oil
2 cloves minced garlic
1/2 cups coarsely chopped zucchini
1 cup chopped fresh tomatoes or one 14-1/2-ounce can drained, stewed tomatoes
1 teaspoon each dried tarragon and dried oregano
2 tablespoons chopped fresh basil or 2 teaspoons dried (recommend fresh)
Salt and black pepper to taste
1 (16-ounce) can rinsed and drained black beans
Plain nonfat yogurt for garnish

In a 3-quart casserole, combine onion, green pepper, oil and garlic; cover. Microwave on high (100 percent power) 3 to 5 minutes or until vegetables are soft. Add zucchini, tomatoes, tarragon, oregano, basil, salt and pepper; stir in black beans and cover. Cook on high 4 to 6 minutes or until heated thoroughly. Let stand 2 minutes. Serve over brown or white rice and garnish with a dollop of plain nonfat yogurt. —From "Save Your Heart With Susan" by Susan Nicholson (Morrow, $16.95)

SOUP
WINTER CORN CHOWDER

Makes 6 servings Preparation time: 10 minutes Cooking time: about 20 minutes

2 teaspoons olive oil
1/2 cup frozen chopped onions
2 cups cubed frozen hash brown potatoes
Soup Seasoning Mix (recipe follows)
2 (14-1/2-ounce) cans fat-free chicken broth
3-1/2 cups frozen corn kernels
2 tablespoons reduced-fat real bacon bits (not imitation)
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
2 dashes hot pepper sauce (optional)
1/2 cup whole or low-fat milk, or half-and-half

Heat oil in 4.5-quart Dutch oven or soup pot over high heat. Add onions and potatoes and cook until they start to brown and stick to pot bottom, about 3 minutes. Stir occasionally.

Meanwhile, stir together Soup Seasoning Mix.

When onions and potatoes are brown on edges, add 1 can chicken broth. Stir vigorously and scrape all brown bits from pot bottom. Add remaining can of broth, Soup Seasoning Mix, corn, bacon bits, Worcestershire and hot pepper sauce (omit if serving to children). Stir to mix. Cover pot and bring soup to boil. Boil 12 minutes to develop flavor, stirring occasionally. Reduce heat to medium and add milk. Re-cover and cook 1 minute to heat milk through. Serve at once (or let stand off heat until ready to serve).

SOUP SEASONING MIX: 1 teaspoon salt, 3/4 teaspoon onion powder, 1/2 teaspoon garlic powder, 1/2 teaspoon dried thyme, 1/2 teaspoon dry mustard powder, 1/4 teaspoon paprika.

SALAD:
NEW POTATO AND TUNA SALAD WITH BASIL AND OIL

Makes 6 servings Preparation time: 10 minutes Cooking time: 12-15 minutes

Small new potatoes are quick to cook and require no peeling. Toss them with a can of tuna and a few other ingredients, and you've got a meal.

1-1/2 pounds small red potatoes
1/4 cup olive oil
2 tablespoons finely chopped fresh basil
1 (16-1/8-ounce) can solid white tuna in oil, drained
1/4 to 1/2 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper, or to taste
1/4 teaspoon salt

Place the potatoes in a medium saucepan with lightly salted water to cover. Bring to a boil over moderately high heat. Reduce the heat slightly and boil until the potatoes are fork-tender, 12 to 15 minutes. Drain and let cool. Cut the potatoes in halves or quarters and place in a large bowl. Pour on the olive oil and toss gently to coat. Add the basil, tuna, pepper and salt and toss again.

Casseroles just what doctor ordered?

By John Owen
Hearst News Service

At the clinic, this computer-written message is posted in the room where routine physical examinations are performed:

"This life is a test — it is only a test. If it had been an actual life, you would have received further instructions on where to go and what to do. This is only a test."

I don't know about the rest of the patients, but people are continually telling me where to go and what to do — in that very same clinic. They tell me to go here for an eye examination, over there to wait for a prescription, and to yet another room to be inoculated against swine flu, tetanus and mad cow disease.

What none of these medical people know is that I have also been conducting tests in all those rooms. The results indicate that this is, in actuality, a real life. But it is predated by four or five years.

Every time I arrive in a waiting room, I reach for a magazine. Typically, three dog-eared publications can be found on a table. The first is devoted to explicit and unnerving advice for nursing mothers. The second is a copy of Good Housekeeping, with all the best recipes cut out. And the third is an issue of Saturday Evening Post headlined, "The Inside Story on President Truman's Friday Night Poker Games."

We have subscribed to The New Yorker for several years. It's a good magazine, but the back issues quickly pile up. So I decided that anytime I passed near the clinic, I would take along 15 copies of the magazine and drop them on the tables in three different waiting rooms. No, I didn't ask anybody. The medical people know what's good for me. I know what's good for them.

Yet the last time I checked a waiting room, there wasn't a copy of The New Yorker in sight. There was a 3-year-old copy of Jack and Jill and a copy of Sports Illustrated so ancient the scores were chiseled in Roman numerals.

Do physicians deliberately stock their waiting rooms with such dismal literature so that patients will heal themselves instead of waiting around for professional attention? Or is the staff concerned that a patient engrossed in reading current material might fail to hear a summons to go have his wallet X-rayed?

I haven't figured out an answer. But I could hazard a guess as to which recipes are missing from that 1983 issue of Good Housekeeping.

PORK CHOP CASSEROLE

4 thick pork chops
1/4 cup flour
2 tablespoons canola oil
1/2 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
1 medium onion, sliced
2/3 cup evaporated milk
1 (10-ounce) can mushroom soup
1 cup grated Cheddar cheese
1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
1/4 teaspoon dried basil
Salt, pepper to taste
Paprika

Coat the chops in flour. Heat the oil in a skillet and briefly brown the chops on both sides. Remove them to a casserole.

Add the onions to the pan and saute until soft and beginning to brown. Dump them over the chops. Saute the mushrooms in the same skillet until the juices have cooked away. Scatter them over the chops.

In a saucepan combine the milk, undiluted soup, the garlic powder, basil and cheese.

Heat this mess until the cheese has melted, then pour it into the casserole. Add salt and pepper if you think it needs it and sprinkle lots of paprika over the top. Cook the casserole, covered, for 45 minutes in a 325-degree oven. This will serve a doctor, a pharmacist and two medical technicians. If you want to make points with the staff, serve with your favorite bread stuffing on the side.

SCALLOP PASTA

Flour
3 tablespoons olive oil
1 sweet red pepper, cut into 1-by-1/4-inch sticks
1/4 pound fresh mushrooms, quartered
1/2 cup tomato sauce
1/2 cup dry white wine
Four green onions (including tops), chopped
3tablespoons cream or evaporated milk
1/2 pound spinach fettuccine

Heat the oil in a skillet. Dredge the scallops in flour, then plop into the pan and stir-cook about twominutes. Don't overcook or you will be serving your guest sauteed pencil erasers.

Remove scallops to a warm dish and add the red pepper sticks to the pan, along with the mushrooms. Stir-cook two minutes, then add the tomato sauce and wine. Cook another two minutes to thicken the sauce.

Reduce heat and add to the pan the scallops, the green onions and 1 tablespoon of cream.

While all of this is happening, you are supposed to be cooking the fettuccine in boiling salted water for about 10 minutes, or according to package instructions.

Drain the pasta and plop into a warm dish. Add two tablespoons of cream and stir it in. Add the ingredients of the skillet and this will serve two or three hungry diners. They are probably in the other room, leafing through old magazines.

Nibblers don't satisfy cheese snack quest

By Linda Anderson

Anderson

In the never-ending quest for good, tasty — and maybe even low-fat — snack items, I recently discovered something called Snyder's of Hanover Golden Cheese Nibblers. Snyder's of Hanover often makes pretzel products, so I'm somewhat familiar with the company, but only somewhat.

Anyway, these little cheese snacks have "only 2 grams of fat per serving," according to the front of the package. The back of the package says "At Snyder's of Hanover, we created the perfect bite-size snack for folks on the go. Try fat-free Sourdough Nibblers, Unsalted Nibblers or crispy Golden Cheese Nibblers and tangy Honey Mustard and Onion Nibblers. You'll love Nibblers' fun, pop-in-your-mouth size!" That means each flavor of the Nibblers line are about the size and shape of little pieces of bread sticks or something like that.

And it goes on: "Finally, a uniquely light, crispy snack that offers the satisfaction of real Cheddar Cheese with only two grams of fat per serving." (By the way, one serving is said to be 14 of the little Nibbler pieces.) "Golden Cheese Nibblers are bite-size, so it's fun to pop all that delicious Cheddar flavor right into your mouth." Where do they come up with this stuff!?

A 9.5-ounce bag (located with the low-fat and baked snack chips on the supermarket shelves) that contains nine servings costs $1.99.

Nutrition information on the back of the bag shows one serving of about 14 Nibblers contains 130 calories with 20 of them from fat.

I sometimes call my favorite supermarket my "home away from home" because I spend so much time there. A lot of the people who work there — and many of the other people who shop there — know me, so when I showed up at the checkout counter with this bag of new snacks, we couldn't resist ripping it open right then and there. The cashier, one of the checkers and a man I know who was checking out in the next line all became taste-testers for the product.

And they all agreed — the snacks are crunchy like crackers are and not like pretzels are, have a very, very light cheese flavor (almost non-existent, actually), and seem to taste kind of like almost-flavorless Cheez-Its.

The cashier summed it up: "What do you expect for two grams of fat?"

That pretty much says it all. And the quest goes on.

DEAR ABBY

Mom's long-kept secret causes daughter pain

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My young-adult daughter, "Ellen," dated for several years before meeting "Tom," to whom she is engaged. Before she fell in love with him, Ellen cut short several relationships because the men wanted to have sex, and she was saving herself for marriage.

Tom and Ellen's wedding is in two months, and we just received a letter from her informing us that she is pregnant! In her letter, she said she would understand if we wanted to disown her.

I called her immediately and told her that we love her, we know she loves Tom, and everything will be all right. Although I know she heard me, she still seemed upset.

Abby, I have never shared this with my daughter, but her father and I made love before we were married.

He has been the only man in my life, and I never felt hypocritical teaching Ellen to wait for sex until after marriage.

Now that I see how bad she's feeling, I'm wondering if it would make her feel better to know I understand more than she might guess. Should I tell her? — WANTS TO HELP

DEAR WANTS: Since your husband is half the equation, ask him if the "secret" should be revealed to your daughter. I'm not at all certain it would make your daughter feel better to hear that she had been held to a standard that you didn't meet. In fact, she might resent it and feel she had been misled. Before reaching a decision, read on:

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing this letter for all of those well-meaning people who subscribe to the notion, "What he or she doesn't know, won't hurt them."

After my father was killed at his restaurant during a robbery (at age 48), my mother and I were at his attorney's office to start proceedings, and the question of "date of marriage" came up. Mom said, "Aug. 23, 1925," and I said, "No, Mom — it's 1924." She turned to me and said, "Hush. We'll talk about this later."

I was 22 years old when I learned I had escaped illegitimacy by just 34 days!

First I felt betrayed, then foolish because in mom's large family, I was the only one who was unaware of this fact of my birth. When I asked her, "Why, Mom, why?" she said, "Because Dad made me promise you would never know of it in his lifetime."

Apparently this proud man could not bear the thought that I might consider him imperfect. It was easy for Mom to go along with it because she always tried to protect me by withholding unpleasantness.

Abby, all this happened 50 years ago, and I have long since forgiven them. But I have not altogether forgotten that I was deceived by those I trusted most. — CAN'T FORGET IN L.A.

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Doesn't Look Handicapped," who is walking tall in the Midwest — I, too, have a handicapped placard. I had a car accident in 1990, breast cancer in 1991 and a heart attack in 1992.

I look OK, and I'm not a whiner.

I have a standard answer for anyone who tells me, "You don't look handicapped." I say, "You don't look ignorant, either. It just goes to prove you can't tell by looking!" —ST. PETERSBURG, FLA., RETIREE

African American food trends changing

By Ann Criswell
N.Y. Times Service

HOUSTON — Okra, greens, yams, peanuts, rice, watermelon and black-eyed peas help tell the tale of black history. The foods forge a link between the cuisines of Africa, the Caribbean, South America and North America, say African-American cultural and culinary anthropologists.

Combining foods of the African continent with those of the New World created a cooking style that left an indelible impression on American cuisine, according to cookbook author Jessica B. Harris.

"There was a heaping cupful of cornmeal to signal our links with the Native Americans, a rounded tablespoon of biscuit dough for southern gentility, a mess of greens and a dozen okra pods for our African roots, and a good measure of molasses to recall the tribulations of slavery," she wrote. "A seasoning piece of fatback signals our lasting love for the almighty pig, and a smoked turkey wing foretells our healthier future. A handful of hot chiles gives the mixture attitude and sass, while a hearty dose of bourbon mellows it out, and a splash of corn liquor gives it kick."

Cooks in South Carolina threw in benne (sesame) seeds, those in New Orleans added praline, and from all over the South and Southwest came the tang of different barbecue sauces.

Harris is the author of "The Welcome Table: African-American Heritage Cooking" (Simon & Schuster, $24), a definitive book on African-American cuisine, as well as "Tasting Brazil" and "Iron Pots and Wooden Spoons" (both out of print).

When her children were growing up, Vertamae Grosvenor used food to help them learn about different cultures. Grosvenor, a storyteller, cookbook author and culinary anthropologist, chose one country a month and studied its customs, fabrics, clothes, art, foods and recipes. Sometimes the country would coincide with what the children were studying in school. Food was a practical way to expose them to a culture.

"They were a captive audience. One day when they came home from school, I had a duck hanging in the kitchen to make Peking duck, and they just about lost it," she said. She continued sampling cultures for several years.

"My daughter says because of that, she learned you can eat the world off your plate," Grosvenor said. A cultural correspondent on National Public Radio in Washington, D.C., she can be heard on Morning Edition (5-8 a.m. weekdays) and All Things Considered (4-6 p.m. weekdays).

"The way they grew up and I grew up, food meant the coming together of people — of sharing something personal. Whether there is a party or just two or three, something wonderful happens. I think people are getting back to being more communal now; they're coming back to the home."

African-American foods are not such stereotypes anymore, she says.

"Blacks are drinking latte and eating rice cakes, and I bet there are more black vegetarians now than there ever were.

Blacks are eating what most of the U.S. is eating," said Grosvenor, who won a James Beard Award in 1995 as host for Seasonings on NPR as the best radio show on food. She also hosted a 13-part series, Americas' Family Kitchen, on public television. The companion cookbook is "Vertamae Cooks in The Americas' Family Kitchen" (KQED Books, $18.95).

Grosvenor's family is from the Low Country of South Carolina, where as descendants of African slaves, they were known as Gullah, although "we call ourselves 'Geechee,' " she said. Her first cookbook was "Vibration Cooking: Or the Travel Notes of a Geechee Girl" ($8, Ballantine; the author at that time went by Vertamae Smart-Grosvenor).

"When I lived in New York, I always lived in multicultural neighborhoods, and I would talk to people about food. I might go to an Italian specialty store and say, 'I'm trying to make so-and-so; how would you make it?' People love to talk about their cooking.

"I never believed that soul food was like Topsy and just grew out of the master's leftovers. What leftovers? Even the masters made use of everything they could — they didn't just eat 'high on the hog' and throw away all that other meat.

"Black cooking is still evolving," said Grosvenor, who recently made a soufflé out of collard greens, which she says "was beautiful and tasty."

thing to serve for special occasions, as well as everyday meals.

"The origin of the recipe is the Italian appetizer known as bruschetta," she explains. Her version puts the toppings on chicken breasts instead of on bread.

SALSA CHICKEN COUSCOUS

3 cups hot cooked couscous or rice (cooked as directed on package
1 tablespoon olive or vegetable oil
1/4 cup coarsely chopped almonds
2 garlic cloves, minced
8 chicken thighs, skin removed
1 cup prepared chunky salsa
1/4 cup water
2 tablespoons dried currants
1 tablespoon honey
3/4 teaspoon cumin
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon

While couscous is cooking, heat oil in large skillet over medium-high heat until hot. Add almonds; cook one to two minutes or until golden brown. Remove almonds from skillet with slotted spoon; set aside.

Add garlic to skillet; cook and stir 30 seconds. Add chicken; cook four to five minutes or until browned, turning once.

In medium bowl, comvine salsa and all remaining ingredients; mix well. Add to chicken; mix well. Reduce heat to medium; cover and cook 20 minutes or until chicken is fork-tender and juices run clear, stirring occasionally. Stir in almonds.

Serve chicken mixture with couscous.

CHICKEN BRUSCHETTA

4 boneless skinless chicken breast halves
1 teaspoon garlic powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
TOPPING
2 tablespoons olive oil
1 (4.5-ounce) jar sliced mushrooms, drained
5 garlic cloves, minced
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup chopped red onion
1/2 cup loosely packed chopped fresh basil or 1 teaspoon dried basil leaves
3 medium Italian plum tomatoes, seeded, chopped
4 teaspoons balsamic vinegar
1/8 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
1 ounce (1/4 cup) shredded fresh Parmesan cheese
Fresh basil sprigs, if desired

Spray broiler pan with nonstick cooking spray. Sprinkle chicken with garlic powder, 1/4 teaspoon salt and 1/8 teaspoon pepper; place on sprayed broiler pan.

Broil 4 to 6 inches from heat for 6 to 8 minutes on each side or until fork-tender and juices run clear.

Meanwhile, heat oil in large nonstick skillet over medium-high heat until hot.

Add mushrooms, garlic and 1/4 teaspoon salt; cook 1 to 2 minutes or until garlic is tender, stirring occasionally.

Add onion, chopped basil, tomatoes, vinegar and 1/8 teaspoon pepper; cook 30 to 45 seconds or until thoroughly heated. To serve, arrange chicken on individual plates. Sprinkle with half of cheese. Top each serving with mushroom mixture; sprinkle with remaining cheese. Garnish with basil sprigs. Makes 4 servings.

CLASSIC: Mom cooks food fast

(From 8B)

Toss, made with black beans, corn, mild green chiles and diced Mexican-seasoned tomatoes. To devote more time to family activities, Ms. Moser uses culinary shortcuts to update homestyle meals.

My family demands meals with more spices and added flavor, but less fat. But as a single mother of two who works full time, my kitchen time is tight."

In her essay, Ms. Moser wrote: "I adore my children and being their mom is the most important thing inthe world to me. I am ALWAYS busy, but I feel fulfilled and content with my life. I revel in my children's growth. I strive to kepp a nice home and have healthy food for meals and snacks. But I keep these things simple, so that my time can be spent concentrating on my children's needs, work, fun and achievement."

The winning recipe follows:

MEXICAN VEGGIE TOSS

2 cans (15 ounces each) black beans, rinsed and drained
1 can (14-1/2 ounces) diced Mexican tomatoes, drained
1 can (11 ounces) vacuum-packed corn kernels
1 can (7 ounces) diced mild green chilies (optional)
1/2 cup fresh cilantro, chopped
1/4 cup green onions, chopped
2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
Hot pepper, to taste

In bowl, toss all ingredients except hot sauce. Cover and refrigerate several hours to blend flavors. Serve with tortilla chips and low-fat sour cream, if desired.

Is this recipe worth $1 million?

■ Pillsbury said, "yes" — Ellie Mathews' recipe for Salsa Couscous Chicken won the Seattle resident the $1 million grand prize in the recent Pillsbury Bake-Off contest.

Ellie Mathews, a self-employed writer, took home $1 million for her Salsa Couscous Chicken recipe. This was the first time in nearly two decades that a savory main dish won the grand prize in the Pillsbury Bake-Off competition — a reflection of the country's move from complicated home baking recipes to making quick and easy main dishes.

No pies, cookies, cakes or breads, please! The new '90s Pillsbury Bake-Off asked for quick and easy recipes only.

Modifying a North African recipe with the new rice replacement called couscous, a self-employed writer won $1 million in cash.

EllieMathews of Seattle practically made history by having a main dish recipe take the grand prize in Pillsbury's annual Bake-Off. Her Salsa Couscous Chicken was the first main dish recipe to win the top prize in 18 years. This was also the first year in the contest's 49-year history that Pillsbury called for only quick and easy recipes, signaling the demise of the cook who spends all day baking. Top recipe entries had limited preparation time or ingredients.

Another winning recipe, from Joan Baker of Estacada, Ore., is one of the 100 winning recipes from the recent Pillsbury "Quick & Easy" BAKE-OFF cooking contest.

It was featured in the 30-minute main dish section.

Ms. Baker is a radiography student at Portland Community College, and also works at a natural foods grocery store. She came from a large family and says she learned early on that food could bring people together. "Today there's nothing that I like better than sharing a great meal with my family and friends."

Jell-O wants upbeat essays

Staff Reports

RYE BROOK, N.Y. — When it comes to Jell-O products, everyone seems to have a story to tell. Now, through a national contest, the American with the best story will win a chance to meet actor, comedian, and Jell-O spokesman, Bill Cosby.

The contest theme is "How Jell-O makes me smile."

"This past year, during our 100th anniversary, people were constantly telling us about their food memories involving Jell-O, and how it makes them smile," said Mary Beth Stone, business director for Jell-O.

"The stories were so captivating that we wanted to give more Americans the opportunity to share with us and reward them for making Jell-O America's most famous dessert."

The contest winner will have his or her name "in lights" on the Jell-O billboard in New York City's Time Square in May. The winner will also get a full expense-paid trip to New York City for four days and three nights, and a meeting with Cosby.

Originality and creativity will be 40 percent of the scoring, with appropriateness to the theme given 35 percent and clarity of thought comprising 25 percent of the score.

To enter, legibly write or type the entrant's name, address, place of birth, and day and evening telephone numbers, along with a 75-word (or less) essay about how their favorite flavor or Jell-O, Gelatin, pudding or No-bake dessert makes them "smile more."

Mail entries to Jell-O Smile Contest, P.O. Box 35980-PR, Los Angeles, Calif., 90035-0980. To enter by Internet, visit the Jell-O website at http: //www.jell-o.com. All entries must be received by April 15.

Winner and guests must be available for travel during the week of May 18. Open to U.S. residents age 18 and older as of April 15.

'Horn hurt in wreck

AUSTIN — University of Texas freshman defensive back Tyres Dickson was injured in a two-car collision Saturday night in Houston, according to his mother, Beverly Dickson.

Dickson was listed in fair condition Tuesday at Ben Taub Hospital in Houston, his mother said.

He suffered back injuries in the wreck. The preliminary diagnosis indicated a possible fractured vertebrae, his mother said. Doctors have not made a long-term prognosis regarding his injuries.

"Anytime a young man is involved in an accident, football is not the issue," Texas coach Mack Brown said. "The thoughts and prayers of our players and staff are for Tyres to have a speedy and full recovery."

Lady Rebels retain tie for district lead

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The Midland Lee softball team didn't hit the District 4-5A lottery Tuesday at the Lee diamond, but it was a good day's work nevertheless.

Lee bombed San Angelo Central 9-2 to retain a share of first place in the 4-5A softball race, but failed to gain sole possession of first place since Abilene High roughed up Odessa Permian 7-0 in Abilene.

That leaves Lee and AHS tied for the first half lead at 5-1. The Lee win over the Lady Bobcats knocked San Angelo back to 4-2 and in a third place tie with Midland High, who was idle from district play Tuesday.

"It's tight," Lee softball coach Perry Young simply put it. "We'll take 5-1 for the first half, but I really have no choice. We'd rather be 6-0, but we're not there."

This was expected to be a real battle since both teams came to the game in a three-way tie for first place with AHS. A real game never materialized as the Lady Bobcats were no where near the level of play that they had previously produced.

The Lady Bobcats gave up nine hits and committed eight errors, five by third baseman Rebecca Holland, who is usually one of the strong hands at third in 4-5A.

"It's a strange race," Young said. "We beat Midland High and San Angelo. Midland High loses to San Angelo and beats Abilene High and Abilene High beats us. It's going to be interesting."

Defending 4-5A champion Lee scored three runs in the first inning, five in the fourth and another in the fifth. The Lady Bobcats broke up the shutout in the seventh with their only two runs of the game.

It was also a game of two hours, long for a softball meeting, and possessed little of real excitement that would mark this contest as "crucial" for either team. There was not an extra base hit in the game although

EP Franklin proves too powerful for Lady Rebels

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

For the first 40 minutes of Tuesday's Region I quarterfinal, the Midland Lee girls soccer team matched firepower with well-armed El Paso Franklin.

However, the Lady Cougars showed why they had made two previous trips to the regional tournament and why they will be going for the third straight year — they just had more ammunition.

The deadliest weapon of them all, Holly Cohen, accounted for every Franklin score as the Lady Cougars defeated Midland Lee 5-3 at the Lee Soccer Field.

"I haven't seen a player that can cover her," Franklin coach Rennie Rebe said.

Cohen, who equaled her season's best for goals in a game, said that a game like this brings about a big rush. The junior should be used to it. She also scored four goals in Franklin's sectional win over Bel Air Friday.

"It is great," said Cohen, who has scored 45 goals this season. "I don't know how to describe the feeling. There is so much adrenaline. I couldn't do

Del Valle keeper stops Rebels' run

By Stewart Doreen
Assistant Sports Editor

Unfortunately for the Midland Lee boys soccer team, Del Valle's Martin Rodriguez was better than his average.

Coming into Tuesday's regional quarterfinal, Rodriguez had allowed just over one goal a game. Tuesday, the El Paso Del Valle goalkeeper was better. He was absolutely huge, playing the biggest role in denying the Rebels their first trip to the Region I Tournament.

Del Valle triumphed in a shootout to defeat Midland Lee 1-0 at the Lee Soccer Field in region quarterfinal action.

"Their keeper won the game for them," Lee coach John McCulloch said. "Not really in the shootout but in the game."

Rodriguez had six saves on the day, most of the acrobatic variety, but none was bigger than the one with 1:22 play in the second overtime period.

Inside the penalty box, Lee's Danny George had passed the ball to Troy Henry who was right in front of the goal face. Henry, then flicked the ball toward the left post when Rodriguez came out of nowhere to make a diving, finger-tip save. It will not lead to many pleasant memories for Lee.

"I keep replaying that in my mind," Henry said. "If (the shot) would have been a half a mph faster it would have gone in."

"That was a beautiful save and shows the ability of the keeper we have," Del Valle coach Bruce Reichman said.

Henry's shot was the best scoring opportunity of the 100 minutes of regulation and overtime play. The senior had another in the 42nd minute which Rodriguez again dove and grabbed.

However, the later Rodriguez' save meant the game would go to a shootout where the keeper's confidence grew.

Right before going out to the shootout Rodriguez told his coach, he guaranteed victory. After two saves, a couple of forced misses and conversions by teammates Cesar Mendoza and Victor Mora, his talk was backed up.

"He said 'coach pack your bags. We going to Dallas'," Reichman said. "He did it.

"They (Lee) are an awesome team. I hope they keep doing overtimes and not shootouts (to determine the winner). That doesn't show anything but how good your keeper is."

Lee finishes the season at 17-7 and one game short of the region tournament for the second time in three

Lemons

Tatum

■ Team lists/3C

When you win a state basketball championship, the honors just keep coming.

Midland High's 6-6 senior post Kirby Lemons was named to the Texas High School Basketball Coaches Association's All-State team Tuesday while 5-9 junior guard Charles Tatum took second team honors

"I think it's fantastic," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "I wish both of them would've been on the first team. But it says a lot when both of them make it to the all-state team.

"I know they're great players and they're very deserving of the honor."

Both had record breaking years for the state champion Bulldogs. Lemons practically put a sledge hammer to many of the Bulldog scoring records.

Lemons set the school's single game scoring record with 45 points against Del Rio, breaking the old mark of 43 by Jumon Hailey against Abilene High in 1995. Lemons also became MHS' all-time single season scoring leader with 924 points, breaking the 854 scored by Herbert Johnson in 1981. He broke the season field goal mark of 357 by Johnson in 1981 with 385. And he broke Johnson's season free throw record of 140 with 145. These are just some of the major records he set at MHS. His career marks have yet to be calculated.

Tatum, too, set MHS' 3-point record, hitting 99 this season, busting his own record he set as a sophomore of 72.

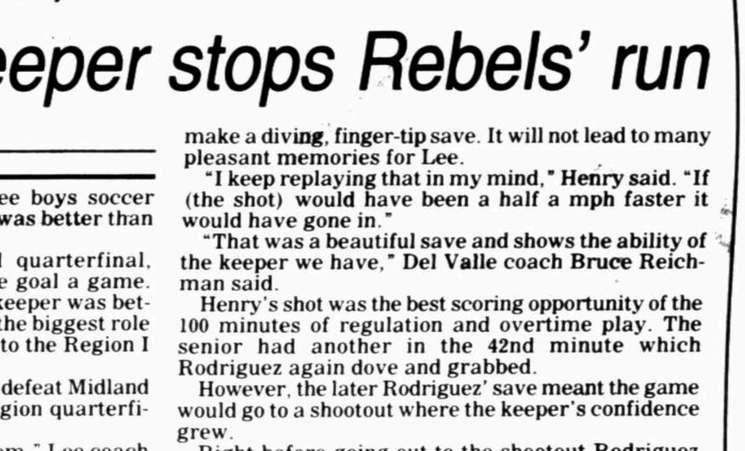

Alief Elsik's Rashard Lewis, a 7-footer, was named as Class 4A's Player of the Year. Joining Lewis and Lemons on the first team were Chris Davis, Sr., Dallas Kimball; Greg Harrington, Sr., Carrollton Smith; Joe White, Sr., SA Taft; Adam Hall, Sr., Katy; Scott Spradlin, Sr., SA Clark; Jamaal Brown, Sr., Dallas Skyline; Andy Leatherman, Sr., Klein; and Chris Richardson, Sr., CC Carroll.

Stephenson also said Midland High is ranked No. 12 in the latest USA Today national high school basketball poll.

"I think it's pretty significant that they recognize us like that," Stephenson said. "I think there are some teams that are still playing, so we could still move up some."

Some other area athletes were also honored. Lamesa senior Andy Ellis, who is headed for

MHS shoots down Eagles

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

You can now count Midland High's hat as officially in the ring in the District 4-5A baseball race.

What has been shaping up as a wacky season took another intriguing turn at Zachery Field Tuesday afternoon, as the Bulldogs, winless in two district contests, pasted Abilene High 12-5, handing the Eagles their first district loss in three games. It was also the second slaying of a 4-5A Goliath in Midland in four days, with Odessa High having beaten fourth-ranked Midland Lee 11-6 Saturday.

Picking all six Lotto numbers would appear to be as easy a task right now as trying to predict the eventual district champion. Midland High looked like the only team which might not be able to stake a rightful claim to a playoff spot prior to Tuesday, but the win over Abi-

Hingis survives Williams' attack

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. (AP) — The two teen-agers traded 36 strokes, scrambling from side to side in a baseline rally so breathtaking that it left Martina Hingis panting and leaning against the back wall.

The point ended when Hingis swatted a forehand long. That gave upstart Serena Williams two match points at 15-40, 3-5 in the third set of their thriller Tuesday at the Lipton Championships.

"I didn't feel very well in my skin," Hingis admitted.

But the top-ranked Swiss Miss escaped unscathed — with some controversial help from a trainer — and edged Williams 6-3, 1-6, 7-6 (7-4) in the quarterfinals.

That's one Williams down and one to go for Hingis, the defending champion. In Thursday's semifinals she'll play Serena's sister, Venus, who beat Silvia Farina 6-1, 6-2.

Serena, 16, served notice that she's ready to join 17-year-old Venus and 16-year-old Anna Kournikova as challengers to the reign of Hingis, 17.

"Serena is going to be a tough opponent in the future," Hingis said.

Hingis appeared on the verge of exhaustion before she fended off the two match points and held serve to trail 4-5. Then she made a dubious request for a trainer, complaining of leg cramps, and received three minutes of treatment.

"I think she was very nervous, so she called the trainer to get some time, get some coaching," Williams said. "If you watch her matches, there's a pattern in that. ... If I was tired, I probably would have called for a trainer, too."

Hingis said her legs hurt, but she also confessed to gamesmanship.

"Everybody could think that," she said. "I guess there are little games. Everybody's playing games.

The strategy worked: Hingis won the next two games for a 6-5 lead.

GIRLS: Franklin ends Lee's season

anything without my teammates."

Cohen was a rocket, and probably the best player the Lady Rebels have faced this season. Her quick burst of speed kept defenders off the ball and in the first half, she was a big reason that Franklin got the lead over and over again. Add that to Franklin's precise passing game and it was tough to combat, although the two teams battled toe-to-toe in the first half.

The Lady Rebels end the season at 18-5. The 18 wins are the most of any Lee girls team in the program's history, and Lee also picked up its first outright District 7 title. This Lady Rebel team also went farther into the playoffs than any other, becoming the first to break the two-year sectional jinx.

However, for the third straight season, a Tall City girls team will miss the regional tournament by one game. In 1996 and 1997, Midland High also fell in the regional quarters.

Cohen had a hand on all of Franklin's goals. In the first half, she got Franklin (22-1-1 overall) on the board first, scoring off a crossing pass from Molly Hiett.

Then, Cohen, who has 45 goals this season, assisted on Lori Rodriguez' goal in the 21st minute. The third goal, in the 28th minute, gave Franklin the lead for good.

Lee's Brandice Zachry had stopped a one-on-one attack by Franklin's Rodriguez, but Cohen was there, slamming the rebound to the cross bar. The ball ricocheted straight down and was close to crossing the goal line when a Lee player was called for a hand ball in the penalty area. Cohen converted on the subsequent penalty kick for a 3-2 lead.

"We were focusing on scoring one more goal than the other team," said Rebe, whose team allowed half the number of goals on Tuesday that they allowed for the season (6).

Lee answered the Lady Cougar attack the first two times Franklin scored.

In the 15th minute, Lee's Ritha Belizaire, a two-time all-District 7 performer, hooked a corner kick into goal.

Down 2-1 in the 26th minute, Belizaire received a great serving pass from Cassie Taylor, another all-district pick, and took the ball down the field left of the goal before driving the ball for Lee's 2-2 game.

"Our first half plan was to lay back and see what they had for us," said Belizaire, who leaves Lee as the all-time leading scorer. "It was good that we answered."

"They are a big challenge. They are a great team and put ourselves in a place to play a good game and win."

The killer for Lee in this game, however, may have come in the last minute of the half. A ball had caromed off the keeper and right to Belizaire, who found herself at the top of the penalty area with the ball and the keeper out of position. However, the attempted shot flew off her foot and over the unattended goal.

"You take the two PKs (penalty kicks) away and the goal we missed at the end of the half and it is a different game," Lee coach Mike Simpson said. "This game was back and forth at the half. I still say that we score that ball at the half, it is an even game."

The second half didn't have the scoring of the first half, but a good portion of the 40 minutes was controlled by Franklin. It was during this time that its tactical game was at its best — even after losing all-state midfielder Nicky Thrasher to Texas A&M.

"Every time we take the field we feel like the underdog," said Amber Jolley, a former Midlander who anchors the midfield for Franklin.

"They say Nicky is gone and we are going to lose. People didn't expect us to do this well. We proved them wrong."

The midfield and constant offensive pressure prevented Lee from getting Belizaire and Johnson, the team's two leading scorers, looks in the second half. Lee had two shots in the second half.

"I would like to have taken more shots, but that is water under the bridge," Belizaire said. "They (Franklin) have a couple of strong players, but as a team, they make up for others' weaknesses."

In the 64th minute, Cohen made a run to get to a ball inside the box and was brought down, bringing on the second PK of the game. She converted.

In the 80th minute, Cohen who has 45 goals this season, added another getting loose in the Lee defense. Lee answered that as Johnson scored her 16th of the season.

Staff Report

ABILENE — One game after he helped dig the Midland Lee baseball team a huge hole, Matt Whitaker almost singlehandedly bailed the Rebels out of another crater Tuesday afternoon.

Whitaker had a dream game at the plate for Lee against Abilene Cooper, hitting for the cycle and driving in seven runs, but his performance wasn't enough as the Rebels fell short in a 10-9 District 4-5A loss.

Lee fell behind 7-0 after two innings but steadily began chipping away in the third, starting with a three-run homer by Whitaker. Four days earlier in a loss to Odessa High, Whitaker committed three errors at shortstop which helped Lee fall behind 8-0 in a game the Rebels eventually lost 11-6.

"I was contemplating before the game not playing (Whitaker) because of his three errors, but I figured he could snap out of it and I'm glad he did," said Lee coach Jesse Benavidez said.

Besides his heroics at the plate, Whitaker had an errorless game in the field. However, defense hurt the Rebels (14-4 overall, 1-2 in district) in the first inning. After Aaron Erdwurm walked the leadoff batter, the Rebels botched Cooper's sacrifice bunt when first baseman Kevin Crawford dropped a throw.

The Cougars (10-4, 1-1) then got back-to-back singles to start the flood offensively. They added two more runs off Erdwurm in the second, and eventually he was knocked out in the third, having given up seven hits. The Rebels never could catch up after that bad start.

"We could have gotten out of that first inning with just two or three runs," Benavidez said. "Erdwurm struggled as far as not having very much pop on his fastball."

Lee pulled to within 7-4 in the fourth, but in the bottom of the inning, Cooper's Jarod Jeter hit a two-run homer off Lee reliever Nate Brignon to make it 9-4.

Whitaker's two-run triple cut it to 9-7 in the sixth but Cooper responded with a run in the bottom of the inning which proved to be the difference. The Rebels got a two-out rally going in the seventh when Stacy Jones and Ryan Klatt both walked against Cooper's Mark Rau, and Whitaker, needing a double for the cycle, got exactly that, driving in two runs and cutting it to 10-9.

With Whitaker representing the tying run at second, Crawford hit a ball deep into the gap in right-center, but Cooper's Adam Riddle made a diving catch to save the game for the Cougars.

Lee has now taken a precipitous fall after being ranked No. 4 in the state, and finds itself tied with crosstown rival Midland High at the bottom of the district. The fight to make the playoffs is now considerably more uphill than it was a week ago.

"It's a concern to lose these two games especially to those teams we lost to," said Benavidez of dropping games to Cooper and Odessa High. "We've still got the best teams to play in our district."

Lee has a bye Saturday before hosting district power Abilene High at 4 p.m. Tuesday.

ALL-STATE: Teams announced

Texas Tech, was a first team choice in Class 4A as was Sweetwater's Derrick Franklin. Ellis led the Tors to the state semifinals where they lost to Class 4A champion Houston Waltrip by only three points.

Stanton's Marcus Washington, a 6-8 senior, made the second team for Class 2A. Washington didn't play football, but his basketball season was cut short since Stanton didn't start playing basketball until after the Buffs won the state football championship.

years. After Central's 3-0 loss to El Paso Hanks on Tuesday, Lee was the lone hope to become the district's first representative to the region tournament since 1995 (Odessa Permian).

"It sucks. It sucks hard," Henry said of just falling short of the tournament. "I was hoping region, but you win some and lose some. Hopefully, they will be able to pursue it next year."

"Mentally, I can't imagine what these guys are going through," McCulloch added. "That is high pressure and the game is on their shoulders. To lose like that is tough."

During regulation, Lee played a similar game to what was played against Abilene High in Saturday's sectional round. The difference might have been that Lee played better offensively. Lee had 12 shots, 11 in the first 80 minutes while giving up 15 to Del Valle.

Both teams had their moments. Del Valle came out with numerous shots in the opening minutes of the game, but none found the back of the net.

Lee matched Del Valle's intensity, but like the Conquistadors, they, too, were denied.

"They (Del Valle) were hot in the first 15 minutes," McCulloch said. "After that it was all us.

"On the field, we won the game. We just didn't get a goal, but putting that ball in the net is what counts."

For 20-4 Del Valle, which makes there second appearance in the regional tournament under Reichman, the game was a bonus since his team was playing without three starters who missed the game due to card problems.

"We were fortunate," Reichman said. "They (the Rebs) are a great countering team. The unfamiliarity with new three players caused us to be out of sync."

That is just an afterthought for Reichman and the rest of the Del Valle team, because Rodriguez was on top of his game.

CENTRAL FALLS TO HANKS: The San Angelo Central boys soccer team fell to El Paso Hanks 3-0 Tuesday in Odessa.

Central (21-3) was outshot 9-5 and allowed two goals in five minutes to Hanks (18-4).

Stanford star apologizes for mocking choke sign

By Dennis Georgatos
AP Sports Writer

STANFORD, Calif. — Arthur Lee staged a dynamic, head-spinning performance in leading Stanford back from the brink of defeat to a Final Four appearance. One part, he'd like to take back.

Lee said Tuesday he was sorry for the mocking choke signs he made when Rhode Island guard Tyson Wheeler missed three free throws near the end of Stanford's 79-77 win in Saturday's Midwest Regional final. Stanford (30-4) meets Kentucky (33-4) in a semifinal Saturday in San Antonio.

"If I was in my right mind, there's no way that would have happened," said Lee, who seemingly willed the Stanford rally by scoring 13 of his 26 points in the final 2:04.

"I'm sure everyone in the whole world could see I was intense and just gone. I was in another world. I was in a zone. I hope people realize that. I really didn't mean that he was a choker. The fact is, he's a great player. He did so much for Rhode Island throughout his career and he's going to be a great pro. It was just something that happened and it was definitely wrong."

Lee also has written a letter of apology to Wheeler and he said he sent it to him earlier Tuesday.

Lee had fouled Tyson with five seconds remaining and Stanford leading 77-74. After Tyson missed his first free throw, Lee stood near midcourt in view of the Rams bench and put both hands around his throat. He did it again after Wheeler missed a second time before missing the final free throw on purpose.

"I thought it was very unfortunate," Stanford coach Mike Montgomery said. "As soon as I saw it, I started yelling at him. He made a mistake and he knows it."

The gestures infuriated Rhode Island players, and coach Jim Harrick suggested afterward that a technical foul could have been called on Lee for taunting. No call was made.

Lee, who came into his own during the game after playing in the shadow of former Stanford star Brevin Knight all year, also raised eyebrows after the game by grimly staring into the crowd for several moments.

Again, Lee said he was caught up in the emotions from a draining comeback and the realization his team was going to the Final Four.

"It was just that feeling that, 'Man, I finally did it. We finally did it. Stanford finally did it, so just be quiet and let us enjoy our moment,'" Lee said.

Montgomery said he told Lee he had to deal with the mock choking episode because, "it wasn't going to go away."

Now Stanford, playing in its first Final Four since its 1942 team won the national title, must concentrate on preparing for the game ahead, Montgomery said.

"I think it's great for everybody in the Stanford community to see this happen," Montgomery said. "But other than all the external things and the ramifications, we've just got to get down and have three good practice sessions and try to focus on playing the best we possibly can against a Kentucky team that has the experience of having been there.

"So the edge in experience goes to them but we have a lot of grit, so you never know."

'Cats introduce coach to Final Four

LEXINGTON, Ky. — This may be Kentucky coach Tubby Smith's first trip to the NCAA Final Four, but it's familiar territory for his players. They won the national title two years ago and were runners-up last season.

Five of the Wildcats were members of the national championship team in 1996, and seven players on the current roster played on the team that lost in the finals to Arizona last season.

"I was very fortunate we had talented players returning and the program was in good shape," said Smith, who sends his Wildcats against Stanford (30-4) on Saturday in San Antonio.

Allen Edwards, Cameron Mills, Nazr Mohammed, Jeff Sheppard and Wayne Turner were around in 1996, but only Edwards and Sheppard played against Syracuse in the final.

"It's special but the last two years were just as special," Edwards said of going back for a third consecutive season. "It's fun. We still have a goal in mind and that's winning another title."

Sheppard was redshirted last season, while newcomers Jamaal Magloire and Scott Padgett along with Turner started in the championship game.

"They're going to be a big help to all the newcomers like myself," Smith said of the veteran players.

He said one of the biggest decisions he made after becoming coach was naming the seniors — Sheppard, Mills and Edwards — as tri-captains.

Sheppard said the Wildcats have embraced Smith's concept of unselfish play all season.

"We've won some close games and lost some tough games," said the senior guard, who leads the Wildcats with 13.3 points a game. "We know we have to play as a team. That's how we win. We understand that's the only way we can win."

Smith even talked to his predecessor, Boston Celtics coach Rick Pitino, on the phone Monday about preparations for the Final Four.

Pitino told him to try to control the environment the team will be in, keep the players focused and make sure they understand their goals and "be businesslike because they'll have plenty of time for fun after it's over with," said Smith, who was Pitino's assistant at Kentucky from 1989-91.

While Smith has never been to the Final Four as a coach, he took Tulsa (1994-95) and Georgia (1996-97) to the NCAA tournament. He led three of the teams to the round of 16. He has a 10-4 record in NCAA play.

"The preparation is where you're most concerned because it's a unique situation and the atmosphere around the Final Four is so different," he said.

Smith believes beating Duke 86-84 in the South Regional final on Sunday, rallying from a 17-point deficit in the final nine minutes, will help his team heading into the national semifinals.

"We feel like we're playing pretty well, especially a come-from-behind game that will give us confidence going into the Final Four," he said. "We were off yesterday. Our guys look fresh now. Obviously, they're excited about going."

High-flying Heels never forget defense

By David Droschak
AP Sports Writer

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — There are the alley-oop jams and the blinding passes.

There are the radar shots from Antawn Jamison, Vince Carter and Shammond Williams.

There's also something else, and it just might be the most important thing of all: defense.

And this defense is among the best of any in the history of North Carolina basketball.

Entering the Final Four against Utah on Saturday, North Carolina has limited opponents to 38 percent shooting — the lowest by a Tar Heel opponent since the 1959-60 season. That mark has dropped even more (35 percent) in four NCAA tournament games.

"Our defense really has become a factor," coach Bill Guthridge said.

Only one team — Maryland in its overtime win on Jan. 14 — has shot better than 50 percent against the No. 1 Tar Heels (34-3) this season. Nineteen teams haven't cracked 40 percent, including Michigan State and Connecticut in the East Regional semifinals and finals in Greensboro.

"We know deep down inside that our offense can disappear just like that," said Jamison, an All-American. "There will be a time when we're not shooting 55 percent and that's when we really need to rely on our defense."

Jamison pointed to last year's national semifinal loss to eventual NCAA champion Arizona as a time when the offense dried up and more defense was needed.

"If we had the same defensive intensity last year as this year it probably would have been a different story," he said.

It is not the typical defense seen under coach Dean Smith for most of the '70s and '80s, a trapping style that would often fluster guards into turnovers as they crossed midcourt.

Instead, with much less depth than usual, North Carolina has tried to improve its man-to-man and implement a matchup zone the team can switch to in an instant.

"We are trying to build on the same defense that Dean went to in January of last year," Guthridge said. "In a way it's not the typical Carolina defense in that it's not the pressure that we would like to have. But is has been good to us."

The Tar Heels also confuse opponents with their interchangeable parts.

They used three defenders on Connecticut's Richard Hamilton, the Big East player of the year, on Saturday, forcing him into 5-for-21 shooting.

"A lot of it is the athletes," Guthridge said. "We don't have the same player guarding the same players."

Guthridge was also quick to credit the development of center Makhtar Ndiaye and the defensive improvement of Carter, also the team's most impressive offensive player.

"A lot of it is technique and maturity," Guthridge said of Carter's development. "He always has been such a great dunker and make the spectacular plays, but he's realized that he needed to become more of a complete player.

"He certainly has worked hard. You can't just say all of a sudden 'Tomorrow, I want to be a good defensive player.' It takes a long time to work at it and develop the technique."

Carter, at 6-foot-7, is in some way North Carolina's most valuable defender. He can play opposing point guards and inside players with equal effectiveness.

"I knew I had the ability and I had to motivate myself to play harder for this team and to prove that I belonged here," Carter said.

Utes recall their 1966 Final Four squad

By Mike Carter
Associated Press Writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Jerry Chambers sees a lot of similarities between the 1966 Utah team he led to the Final Four and the '98 version: speed and defense.

But, mostly, heart.

"And that will take you a long way," said Chambers, who displayed ample amounts of it 32 years ago when he was the tournament's most valuable player. "I think they've got a fighting chance."

So does Jack Gardner, a Hall of Famer who coached the 1966 team.

"It's awful hard to say they're going to be the national champs," Gardner said from his home in Salt Lake. "But they've certainly done the work to get there."

Chambers, a senior in 1966, was a small forward when Utah won its bid to the NCAA tournament with a 23-8 record. The team appeared doomed from the outset after center and team captain George Fisher, Utah's second-highest scorer, broke his leg two games before the tournament.

But Chambers, having a great year and averaging 28.7 points and 11.6 rebounds, stepped in at center. He led the tournament with averages of 36 points and 14 rebounds a game, including a tournament-high 40 points against Pacific in the West Regional semifinals.

Utah lost to eventual champion Texas Western (now UTEP) 78-85 in College Park, Md., despite 38 points by Chambers. He was the only Final Four MVP from a fourth-place team

After leaving Utah, Chambers had a brief run in the NBA, including a stint with the Los Angeles Lakers. He is 52 now and works with disadvantaged youngsters as a recreation specialist in Los Angeles.

He likes what he sees in the '98 team, particularly guard Andre Miller.

"He's good, both as a player and in running the team from the floor," Chambers said. "Our teams are different in that we were smaller, more like Arizona," the team Utah stunned 76-51 in the West Regional final. "We were very much a run-and-gun team."

Utah meets top-ranked North Carolina (34-3) Saturday in the Alamodome in San Antonio.

Chambers sees the 1998 Utah team (29-3) as perhaps more balanced than his team, able to run the floor in transition but bigger and posing a defensive threat.

Another member of the '66 Utah team, Lyndon McKay, agrees. McKay, now a dentist in Salt Lake, averaged 10.3 points and 7.1 rebounds as a 6-foot-7 forward that year. The '66 team, he said, was "total transition."

"If you couldn't beat the ball down the court, you didn't play," he said. "We just ran everybody into the ground."

The 1998 team, he said, has a diversified game.

"They're really good on defense and they have a good transition game, but they got a strong half-court team as well," he said. "I like what I see. I don't think the Tar Heels will."

McKay and Chambers both pointed to coach Rick Majerus's seemingly uncanny ability to find an opponent's weakness and exploit it.

"Majerus is always trying to break down the other team, rather than trying to make his team do something different," McKay said.

If Chambers has any advice for this edition of the Utes, it's this: Don't run with North Carolina All-American Antawn Jamison.

Gardner is reluctant to compare the '66 and '98 Utah teams or his coaching style with that of Majerus. His suggestion for Saturday? Lower the temperature.

"They'll be fired up, so you don't have to worry about that," he said. "You're main problem becomes making them be cool and competent."

Bliss prefers New Mexico despite Aggies' interest

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico's Dave Bliss withdrew Tuesday from consideration for the head coaching job at Texas A&M, saying his task with the Lobos was not completed.

"We love what we've been able to accomplish here," Bliss said at an afternoon news conference. "We know we aren't the finished product yet, but we're getting better and better every year."

Bliss has led the Lobos to the NCAA tournament five of the past six years and six times in his 10 seasons at New Mexico. But none of his teams have been able to get beyond the second round.

"The part we all felt, whether it's our staff or our family, is that our task really isn't completed here yet," he said.

Bliss said Texas A&M received permission from UNM to talk to him and he had discussed the job with Aggie officials. But he said he "respectfully declined."

He said his decision was in no way meant to be anything against Texas A&M.

"If you told me before I got to New Mexico that I'd have a chance to coach at Texas A&M, I'd hug you because that's one of my favorite schools," he said.

But Bliss said he and his staff appreciate the program at New Mexico and the players who have committed to the Lobos.

His contract at New Mexico runs through the 2001-2002 season.

Louisville extends Crum's deal

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Citing his 72.5 percent winning record, six trips to the Final Four and two national championships, the University of Louisville has given head basketball coach Denny Crum a four-year contract extension.

The extension will keep Crum, 61, as the Cardinals' coach through the 2001-02 season. Crum's base annual salary will remain at $353,702, which includes television and radio commitments. The extension also includes incentives for academic performance and on-the-court success.

"I love it here," Crum said at a news conference Tuesday. "I've always felt that I wanted to retire here, and I'm happy that the university chose to keep me."

He will receive a $25,000 bonus if his team attains a collective grade point average between 2.5 and 2.74 and a $40,000 bonus if the team achieves a 3.25 GPA or higher.

On the athletic side, Crum would receive a bonus equal to one month's pay for leading his team to the NCAA or NIT Tournament.

Penn State uses crowd experience to defeat Baylor

WACO (AP) — Penn State's experience in front of big crowds came in handy in the Women's NIT final.

Lisa Shepherd and Helen Darling each made a free throw in the final 20 seconds as the Lady Lions held off Baylor 59-56 Tuesday night in the championship game.

The title game was played before a record crowd of 10,057 in Ferrell Center, Baylor's home court.

"Two weeks ago we played in front of more than 17,000 at Wisconsin. Our league (Big Ten) is very hostile, but let me tell you, this is the noisiest place. My team couldn't hear me tonight," coach Rene Portland said.

Penn State (21-13) won despite a superb effort by Lara Webb, who almost singlehandedly kept Baylor (20-11) in the game, scoring 21 of her 26 points in the second half. Webb made five of eight 3-pointers.

The Lady Bears had the ball, trailing 57-56 with less than a half-minute to play, but Amy Alcala was called for traveling after rebounding a miss, and Penn State hung on for the win.

When Shepherd missed her second free throw with 4.7 seconds left and a 3-point lead, Andrea Garner grabbed the offensive rebound that enabled the Lady Lions to run out the clock.

"We rebounded really well in the second half and came up with some big ones when we had to to come out with the win," Portland said.

Baylor coach Sonja Hogg said her team's poor shooting (21-for-60) and Penn State's tough defense led to the Lady Bears' demise.

"We're not going to win many games shooting 35 percent from the field and 42 percent from the free throw line. Penn State has a great team. They really came in here and got after it," Hogg said.

Garner gave Penn State a 53-51 lead with a short jumper with 2:46 to play. The Lady Lions extended their lead to 55-51 before Webb hit her fifth 3-pointer to bring Baylor to 55-54.

Shepherd led Penn State with 16 points. Darling, the tournament MVP, finished with eight points and six assists.

Portland and her players agreed that the Lady Lions' late-season run will be a stepping stone for a promising 1998-99 season.

"Next year, this is really going to help us. We're a really young team and only losing two players," said Darling.

Portland added: "These young kids are workhorses. They want to win, and we're very excited about next year."

Baylor led at the half 27-26, but Em Clements led Penn State on a 15-4 run in the first four minutes of the second half to go up 41-31.

Webb brought the Lady Bears back, making three 3-pointers and scoring 11 points over the next 4:16. That pulled Baylor to 43-42 with 11:33 left.

Two free throws by Webb helped the Lady Bears regain the lead, 46-45, and it was back-and-forth the rest of the way.

But Shepherd led a balanced stretch drive with an outside jumper and a late free throw.

Backed by the friendly home-court crowd, the Lady Bears jumped out from an early 8-8 tie, going on a 7-0 run. But Penn State countered, led by the outside shooting of Shepherd, who hit 3 three-pointers in the first half. Baylor led 27-26 at the half.

Del Negro's last-second shot lifts Spurs to win vs. Cavaliers

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Coach Gregg Popovich designed the play, and Tim Duncan and Vinny Del Negro executed it to perfection Tuesday night.

Del Negro hit a 12-foot baseline jumper with 3.3 seconds to play to give the San Antonio Spurs an 86-85 win over the Cleveland Cavaliers.

"It felt good when I shot it and better when it went through," Del Negro said. "We diagrammed it in the timeout and executed it well."

Del Negro drove around a pick by Duncan, freeing him from defender Derek Anderson, and buried the fallaway jumper to snap Cleveland's four-game winning streak.

"I put my arms up but didn't want to foul him," Anderson said. "It was just one of those things."

Del Negro said Anderson nearly ruined the well-timed play.

"He played great defense and I felt him when I went up for the shot," Del Negro said. "I leaned back just a bit. That's a shot I like to take, a fade on the left side."

Spurs point guard Avery Johnson, who had a game-high 12 assists, triggered the play with a pass to Del Negro.

"We have about seven different options on that play," Johnson said. "Vinny was probably number five. It's a good play and worked well."

David Robinson led the Spurs with 27 points, 10 rebounds and eight blocked shots. Duncan had 18 points and 10 rebounds. Robinson scored 13 points in the final quarter.

"I got in a better rhythm in the second half and started driving to the basket," Robinson said. "That got me to the foul line a few times and that helped."

Robinson made 13 of 16 shots from the line as San Antonio held a 23-13 free throw advantage.

Zydrunas Ilgauskas led Cleveland with 21 points and 12 rebounds.

Cleveland took its first lead, 65-63, early in the fourth quarter. Danny Ferry, activated from the injured list earlier in the day, hit three consecutive 3-pointers midway through the quarter to help Cleveland open its largest lead, 78-72. Ferry finished with 13 points.

"Danny basically got us back in the game," Cavs coach Mike Fratello said. "The key was we never got the defensive stop down the stretch that we needed."

San Antonio rallied to tie the score at 78, but Anderson sank a baseline jumper and Wesley Person added a 3-pointer to put Cleveland back in command, 83-78.

"That was like a stake in the heart," Popovich said. "I think a lot of teams would have folded, but the guys just kept on playing. I'm proud of their mental toughness at that point."

Robinson slammed in two points, then seconds later made two free throws to pull the Spurs to 83-82 with 1:37 to play.

Robinson and Duncan then turned to defense, combining to swat away a drive to the hoop by Shawn Kemp with 47 seconds to play.

"That was a big play, very important," said Robinson, who got credit for the block. "We're a team that has to come up big on defense because we don't score a lot of points."

Cleveland got the ball back and Brevin Knight was fouled by Robinson. The rookie guard made both free throws with 9.5 seconds to play.

After Del Negro put the Spurs ahead, Cleveland had a final opportunity but Bob Sura's inbounds pass hit Anderson in the chest and rolled out of bounds.

Bucks 118, Rockets 108

MILWAUKEE — Even when the Milwaukee Bucks win, they lose.

Ray Allen scored 33 points and Armon Gilliam added a season-high 29 as the Milwaukee Bucks snapped a nine-game losing streak and also halted Houston's six-game winning streak with a 118-108 victory Tuesday night.

But the injury-decimated Bucks, who have been without their three best players in Glenn Robinson (leg), Terrell Brandon (ankle) and Tyrone Hill (back), lost forward Michael Curry to a sprained right ankle midway through the second quarter.

Curry had 11 points when he went down with 6:18 left. He did not return.

"Michael Curry was red-hot before he joined the injured list," Bucks coach Chris Ford said with a sigh. "He's sore, but he's a trooper. It was already sprained before the game, so it's a sprain on a sprain."

Curry was walking with a bad limp but said he didn't expect to be out long.

Hakeem Olajuwon scored 22 and Othella Harrington 18 for the Rockets, who were depleted themselves as Clyde Drexler (groin) and Charles Barkley (shoulder) did not make the trip.

"They left two Dream Teamers at home, but they still had one of the Top 50 players of all time in Hakeem," Ford said. "We just played well."

The Bucks, who led 58-50 at halftime and 89-77 after three quarters, also got a season-high 19 points from rookie Jerald Honeycutt.

The Rockets cut it to 89-81 on forward Eddie Johnson's long-range jumper with 10:39 remaining. After a timeout, the Bucks put the game away with a 14-4 run that included eight points from Allen.

Jazz 92, Suns 73

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone scored 19 points, Greg Foster added 12 points and a career-high 15 rebounds and Utah moved back into a tie for the best record in the Western Conference.

Dennis Scott led the Suns with 16 points and Danny Manning added 14, but none of Phoenix's starters scored in double figures. The Suns shot just 37 percent (30-for-81) from the field.

John Stockton dished out 11 assists for the Jazz, who won their fourth straight home game and their 14th in 15 overall. Utah and Seattle, who play each other next Tuesday, each have a record of 51-17.

Hornets 106, Raptors 89

TORONTO — Glen Rice had 24 points and seven rebounds and all five Charlotte starters scored in double figures as the Hornets cruised past Toronto.

David Wesley had 10 points and 14 assists and Anthony Mason contributed 11 points and nine rebounds for Charlotte, which won for the 14th time in 15 games.

Bobby Phills added 17 points and Matt Geiger had 15. The Hornets shot 8-for-15 from 3-point range.

Marcus Camby had 20 points and John Wallace added 12 for Toronto.

Hawks 85, Magic 73

ATLANTA — Steve Smith scored 10 of his 28 points in the last 10 minutes to lead Atlanta over Orlando.

After the Magic cut the lead to 73-67 with 4:30 to play, Smith hit a pair of free throws and two 3-pointers in a 12-0 run giving that gave the Hawks an 85-67 lead with two minutes left.

The Hawks halted a two-game losing streak with their fourth win in six games.

Orlando, battling Washington for the eighth and final playoff spot in the East, had its two-game winning streak snapped.

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood baseball team got off to a huge start Tuesday, scoring 10 runs in the first inning on the way to defeating Seminole 18-14.

The big blow for the Rangers was a grand slam by Gabriel Pallenez in the first. For the game, Greenwood smacked six doubles. Monty Magee had two doubles and a single for the Rangers.

Angel Valles was the winning pitcher in relief for Greenwood, which improved to 8-4-1.

Excalibur wins Denver tourney

DENVER — Excalibur, a 16 and under Midland Volleyball Program team, won the Silver Bracket championship at the Colorado Crossroads Junior National Qualifier.

Excalibur won the backet by defeating Davis, California's Hyrax 15-10, 6-15, 15-13, rallying from a 10-1 deficit in the final game. Excalibur defeated Mountain West of Utah 15-7, 15-8 in the semifinals and Albuquerque Prism Onyx 15-4, 15-12 in the quarterfinals. The finish in the tournament placed Excalibur 17th in the nation.

Mustangs romp over Loraine

The Midland Christian Mustangs scored 10 runs in the first inning on the way to a 20-2 romp of Loraine at Christensen Stadium on Tuesday.

Dustin Thaney (2-3) picked up the win for the Mustangs. Thaney struck out seven batters in five innings of work.

The Mustangs (6-7) also added seven runs in the fourth inning. Seth Denson was 3-for-4 with a double, John McKinney was 2-3 with two doubles, Craig Patteson had a triple, Trent Lee had a double and Thaney added a triple.

The Mustangs next play a doubleheader at Colorado City starting at 4:30 p.m. on Friday.

Midland High JVs fall to Abilene High

The Midland High junior varsity baseball team fell to Abilene High 14-13 in a slugfest Tuesday.

Clay Gilkerson was 2-4 with a home run and double for the Bulldogs. Matt Bose was 3-for-3 with a double, Michael Glover was 2-for-4 with a double while Jeff Brock and Santee Hathaway were 2-for-5. Midland High is now 12-3 on the season and 2-1 in District 4-5A.

Minnesota gets past Fresno in NIT

Associated Press

NEW YORK — With the man who exposed its off-court problems to America watching from the stands, Fresno State's troubled season ended with a loss.

Kevin Clark scored a career-high 30 points and Sam Jacobson added 24 as Minnesota advanced to the NIT championship with a 91-89 victory in overtime against the Bulldogs.

Fresno State's season of scandal, which included arrests, suspensions and substance abuse problems for some of its star players, was recently the focus of a "60 Minutes" feature by CBS correspondent Mike Wallace.

After the story was aired, Fresno State coach Jerry Tarkanian criticized Wallace for not being up front with him about its content. But at halftime, Wallace, a Madison Square Garden regular for Knicks games, said he and Tarkanian had spoken before the game and had "a very civilized conversation."

But the Gophers (19-15) put an end to Tarkanian's difficult season and will play the winner of Tuesday's second semifinal between Penn State and Georgia on Thursday night in the final.

Jermaine Fowlkes led Fresno State (21-12) with 25 points and Chris Herren had 14 — all in the second half.

The second meeting between Fresno State and Minnesota was much tighter that the first, a 92-72 Gophers victory in December. The clubs went at each other hard from the outset, and went to overtime tied at 77.

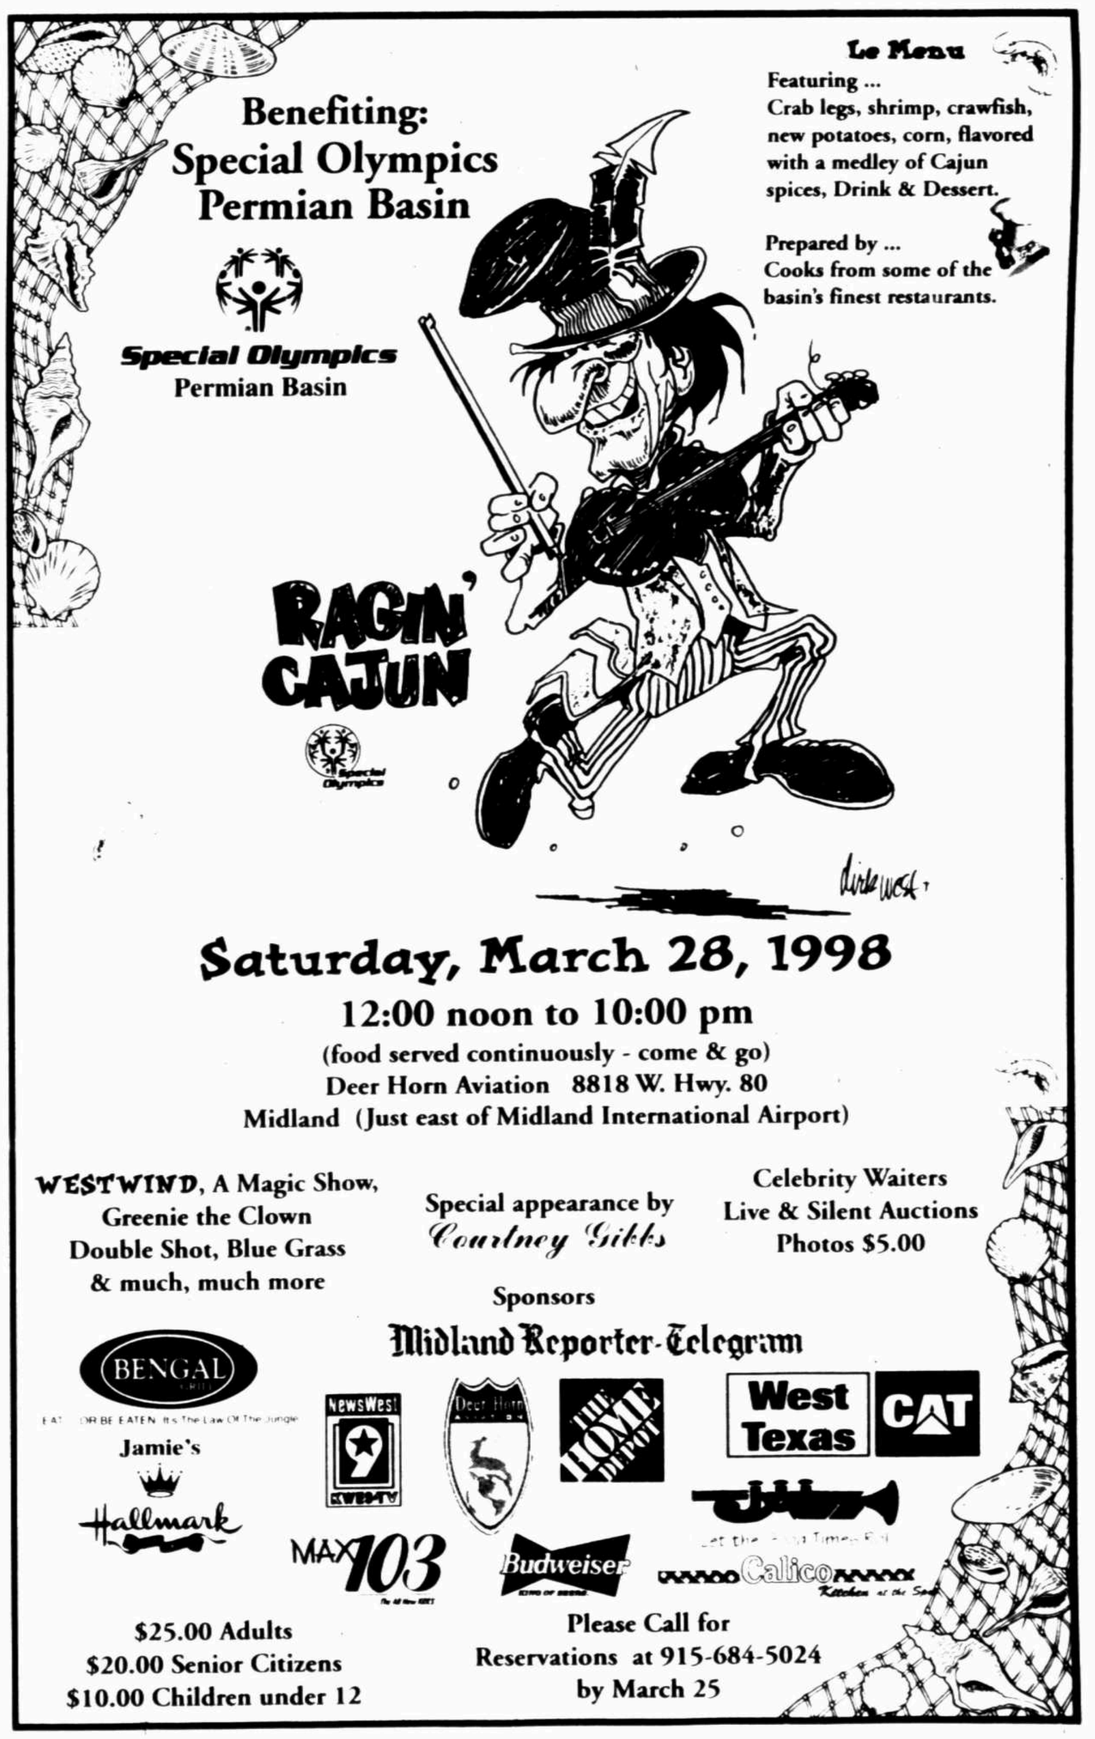

Herren's free throw with 2:52 left in OT gave the Bulldogs an 82-81 lead before Jacobsen was fouled and made two to put the Gophers back up.

Penn State 66, Georgia 60

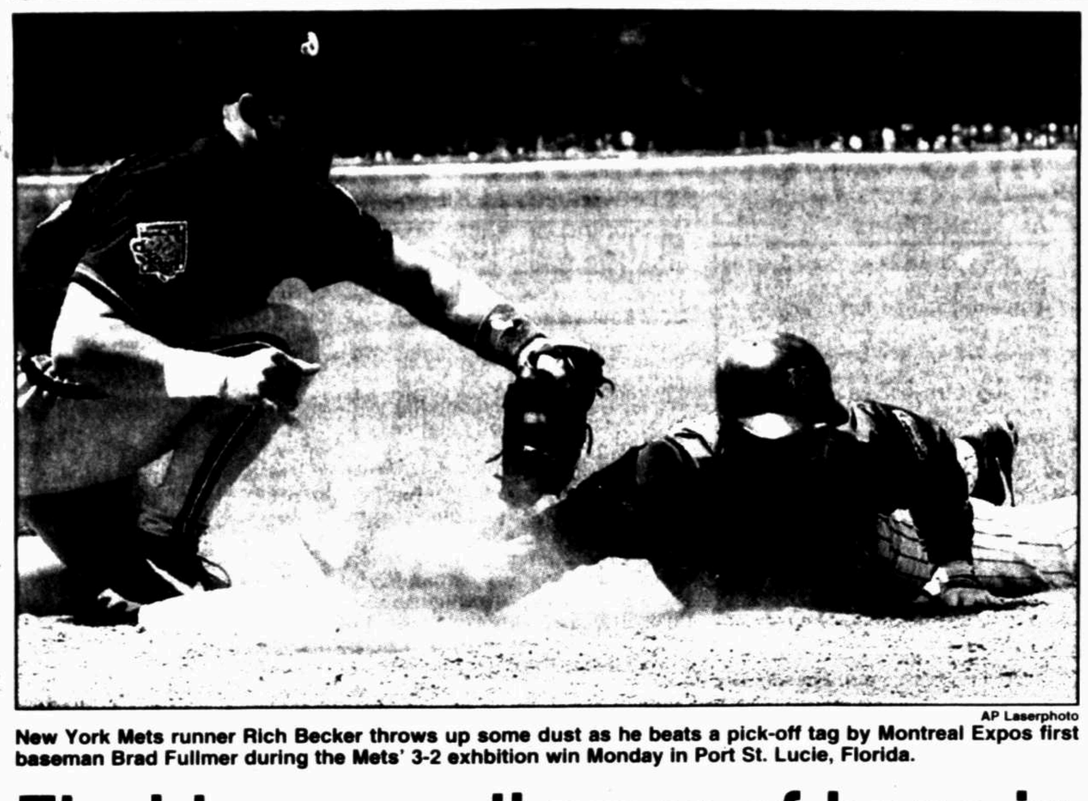

NEW YORK — Penn State's men will now get a chance to match what their women's team has already accomplished.

Freshman Joe Crispin scored 18 points and the Nittany Lions advanced to the championship of the NIT on Tuesday night with a 66-60 win over Georgia.

Penn State (19-12) will meet a familiar foe in Thursday night's final. In Tuesday's other semifinal, Minnesota defeated Fresno State 91-89 in overtime, and will now play Penn State in an all Big Ten title game. The teams split their two meetings during the regular season.

Florida sees glimmer of hope in performance of Sheffield, Bonilla

Associated Press

■ Spring Training

MELBOURNE, Fla. — Call it a tease. Call it wishful thinking. There were at least two glimmers of hope Tuesday for the dismantled World Series champion Florida Marlins.

Gary Sheffield looked nearly good as new in his first start of spring, hitting a two-run homer. The Marlins overcame Mark McGwire's sixth home run to beat the St. Louis Cardinals 6-4.

Earlier in the day, third baseman Bobby Bonilla took his first cuts at batting practice with full-speed pitches after undergoing surgery on his wrist and Achilles' tendon in the offseason.

And both players said afterward they felt good.

"To have Gary back is a great feeling and to see Bobby responding the way he's responding ..." manager Jim Leyland said, his voice trailing off. "But I don't want to get carried away."

With good reason.

Once healthy, Sheffield and Bonilla will be the mainstays of this team, which cut its payroll by nearly half in the offseason after becoming the youngest team ever to win a World Series.

Until then, Leyland is faced with an opening day roster that could include as many as five rookies.

Bonilla, 35, was placed on the 15-day disabled list Tuesday, meaning he definitely will not be on the field next week when the Marlins open their season against the Chicago Cubs.

Sheffield, who saw his first action in right field, said he thinks he'll be ready. He says his back ailment no longer hurts him on the field; he has said it was a factor in his subpar 1997 season, when he hit .250 with 21 homers and 71 RBIs.

Rangers 9, Reds 4

SARASOTA, Fla. — Rusty Greer went 4-for-5 and Kevin Elster doubled twice and drove in a pair of runs as the Texas Rangers beat the Cincinnati Reds and closed in on a club record for spring training wins.

The Rangers (18-8) need one more victory to equal the team mark of 19, set in 1992 and matched in 1996.

Roberto Kelly also had a pair of hits as the Rangers got 14 overall against four Cincinnati pitchers.

Brett Tomko, one of the biggest concerns in the Reds' rotation this spring, started only his second major league spring game and gave up eight hits and four runs in five innings.

Tomko, sidelined for three weeks by shoulder tendinitis, threw a 93 mph fastball but had trouble with his changeup and breaking pitches. He said afterwards that he felt fine and should be ready for the season.

Reds reliever Mark Hutton left the game in the eighth inning after sustaining a mild groin strain. The injury is not considered serious.

Leading 4-2, the Rangers put the game away with three runs in the eighth off Hutton and Gabe White and two more in the ninth off Jeff Shaw. Elster's two-run double off White highlighted the eighth-inning rally.

Darren Oliver started for Texas and threw four scoreless innings before giving up Bret Boone's RBI triple and Brook Fordyce's run-scoring double in the fifth.

Royals 15, Astros 0

HAINES CITY, Fla. — Terry Pendleton, trying earn one of Kansas City's final roster spots, hit a grand slam and Sal Fasano drove in five runs as the Royals beat the Houston Astros.

Pendleton's slam came in the fourth inning off Jose Lima. Fasano doubled twice and singled, and is now 8-for-17 in his last seven games with 10 RBIs.

The Royals had 15 hits, including four each by Joe Vitiello and Shane Halter. Dean Palmer hit his fifth home run.

Chris Haney pitched six shutout innings. He has allowed only two earned runs with no walks and 11 hits in his last 12 innings.

Expos 6, Dodgers 1

At Jupiter, Fla., Montreal ended its 14-game losing streak, beating Los Angeles behind five shutout innings from Javier Vazquez.

Rondell White hit a two-run single for Montreal, 4-21 this spring.

"We know we are better than a lot of people believe," manager Felipe Alou said. "We have been trying several things and have not been playing our best offensive team much."

Red Sox 2, Phillies 1

At Clearwater, Fla., Mike Gallego singled home the go-ahead run in the eighth inning and Rich Garces picked up his sixth save of the spring as Boston beat Philadelphia.

Garces has allowed no runs and only three hits in nine innings.

Mets 5, Orioles 1

At Fort Lauderdale, Fla., Rick Reed pitched six strong innings and New York capitalized on errors by Brady Anderson and Cal Ripken to beat Baltimore.

Reed allowed one run and three hits. He struck out six and walked one.

Tigers 4, Braves 3

At Lakeland, Fla., third baseman Ray Holbert made a throwing error that allowed two runs to score in the seventh inning as Detroit defeated Atlanta.

Blue Jays 8, Devil Rays 6

At Dunedin, Fla., Juan Samuel hit his fifth spring homer and Ed Sprague had a two-run double as Toronto topped Tampa Bay.

Shawn Green had four hits and scored twice for Toronto. Fred McGriff hit a three-run homer for Tampa Bay.

Mariners 7, Angels 5

At Tempe, Ariz., David Segui hit two solo home runs and Seattle roughed up Anaheim starter Jack McDowell.

Segui and Jeff Huson each had three hits for Seattle. Dan Wilson hit a solo homer off McDowell in the third and also doubled.

McDowell gave up 11 hits and seven runs in 4 2-3 innings.

Cubs 15, Athletics 7

At Phoenix, Sammy Sosa, Manny Alexander and Brant Brown each homered and Henry Rodriguez hit three doubles as Chicago beat Oakland.

Sosa drove in four runs and Brown drove in three. Rodriguez scored three times and Lance Johnson had three of the Cubs' 21 hits.

Ben Grieve and Dave Magadan homered for the Athletics.

Diamondbacks 6, White Sox 3

At Tucson, Ariz., Jorge Fabregas homered twice, doubled and drove in four runs, leading Arizona over Chicago.

Fabregas hit a two-run homer in the sixth inning off Tom Fordham for a 4-3 lead. He had a solo home run, his fourth of the spring, in the eighth.

Padres 7, Giants 4

At Peoria, Ariz., Ken Caminiti hit his first homer of the spring, a two-run shot that helped San Diego defeat San Francisco.

Tony Gwynn doubled and singled, extending his hitting streak to 11 games.

Rockies 8, Brewers 5

At Tucson, Ariz., Edgard Clemente, nephew of Hall of Fame outfielder Roberto Clemente, had two hits and scored twice as Colorado beat Milwaukee.

Kirt Manwaring went 3-for-4 for Colorado, which took advantage of four Brewers errors.

McLemore, Elster blend well in Rangers' defensive recipe

■ Texas expects defense to improve with McLemore healthy, Elster back after one-year absence.

By Evan Grant
The Dallas Morning News

TAMPA, Fla. - Individually, nothing about the Rangers' double-play combination suggests anything other than ordinary.

Neither second baseman Mark McLemore nor shortstop Kevin Elster has ever been recognized for their own talents. Neither has won a Gold Glove nor made an All-Star Game. Elster has been released five times; McLemore twice.

But put them together, and something magical happens.

"This is a case where two and two makes five," Rangers manager Johnny Oates said. "Sometimes, two and two makes three. Most times it makes four. In this case, it adds up to something more."

When the Rangers lost, 2-0, to the New York Yankees on Sunday at Legends Field, perhaps the two best double-play combinations in the American League were on display. Same job, vastly different styles.

The Yankees boast a flashy shortstop, Derek Jeter, who stole singer Mariah Carey's heart, and a gritty second baseman, Chuck Knoblauch, who has taken New York by storm since being acquired from Minnesota in February.

Each of them has been recognized individually. Jeter was the Rookie of the Year in 1996. Knoblauch won it in 1991. They have combined to go to four All-Star Games and may very well be the AL's starting middle infield in this year's game.

"You've got two guys who are young and athletic," Rangers infield instructor Bucky Dent said. "And then there are our guys, the older, steady guys that have been around. Our guys have learned to get the most out of what they have."

That, if anything, may explain why Elster and McLemore work so well together. They are The Dead End Kids. They've been around the block and know all the tricks. And they use them to their advantage.

The biggest statistical difference between the division-winning Rangers of 1996 and last year's third-place team was defense. In 1996, defense was an asset. Last year, it was a liability.

Break down the defense and the biggest difference from one year to the next was the absence of Elster, whom the Rangers didn't re-sign, and McLemore, who missed 73 games because of injuries.

The Rangers replaced Elster with Benji Gil, a younger, more athletic - and more inconsistent - shortstop. They spent all year unable to replace McLemore. The difference? In 1996, Rangers middle infielders made 32 errors. Last year, they made 49.

By now, though, that Elster and McLemore play well together is well-documented. That's why the Rangers reunited them during the off-season.

Why do they play so well together?

"It's the professionalism," Dent said. "It's easier for those two guys to work together. It's hard to explain, but there is a chemistry that is just there."

Dent should know. Just before the 1977 season, the Chicago White Sox traded him to the Yankees. He wandered into camp, met second baseman Willie Randolph and proceeded to form the AL's best middle infield for the next four seasons. It was nothing more than chemistry.

"After the first few games, there was just this confidence between the two of us," Dent said. "I played with so many second basemen in Chicago. I was kind of like McLemore was. When I got together with that one guy on a consistent basis, it became easier to do my job. Very quickly, I think we each realized 'Wow, this guy can play.' All we had to do was our jobs."

That's exactly the way Elster and McLemore feel. When they became the starting middle-infield combination late in the spring of 1996, they quickly became comfortable with each other.

"There was just a little extra something," Elster said. "We clicked a little quicker than with anybody else I had played with."

Said McLemore: "There is usually an adjustment period between two players. But this just happened. He knows how to play shortstop; I know how to play second base. We know what each other can do. Put those two things together, and it makes a pretty good combination."

Because of the feel they have for one another's game, McLemore and Elster rarely speak. Each goes through a variety of preparations prior to each pitch.

They check the pitcher, how he's throwing and what he's throwing. They check the situation. They check the hitter and where he usually puts the ball in play. That's what allows them to move with the pitch and get to balls their range might not normally allow.

A year ago, when McLemore did play, he spent as much time trying to help Gil do his job as his own. Gil sometimes lost concentration and would be late moving into position. His throws to second, and first, often came from different arm angles. Because of that, his throws often arrived in different areas.

"We certainly didn't have the same defense last year that we did in 1996," McLemore said. "I did more talking last year than I do with Kevin. It's a tough thing to do when you are doing your job and trying to help someone else do his."

This spring, Elster and McLemore have clicked again. The Rangers have 10 errors as a team, fewest in the majors. McLemore has two; Elster none.

But their impact is more than just in fewer errors. Though the Rangers have turned only 20 double plays, they have gotten them in key situations.

For instance, John Burkett, a ground-ball pitcher, needed double plays to get out of innings twice on Saturday. McLemore started one, Elster the other. And Elster's ability to make accurate flips to second from an awkward position has eliminated some lead runners.

"This isn't rocket science," Elster said. "But you do have to think a little bit."

McLemore's words are almost identical, right down to the rocket-science stuff. But that's what happens when two guys are on the same wavelength.

BASEBALL: MHS earns district win

(From 1C)

lene High gives the Bulldogs as much optimism as anybody.

It also has to be the biggest district win for Midland High coach Barry Russell since taking over the MHS program last season.

"Well, I've only had three (district wins) so yeah, it's a big one," Russell said. "For us to stay in the race we had to win today."

Much like Odessa High's win over Lee, it was hard to tell which team was winless in district and which one was unbeaten going into the game at Zachery. Midland High (12-8 overall, 1-2 in district) simply outplayed Abilene High at every turn, taking advantage of an error in the second inning to score six runs which eventually broke the game open.

It was a reversal in fortune for the Bulldogs, who surrendered big early innings in losses to Lee and Odessa Permian in their first two district games. Midland High chased Eagles' starter Chris Churchill in the second despite picking up only three hits, but they were big ones.

After Churchill struck out Aaron Pullin to begin the inning, Lee Martin then stroked a pitch the opposite way over the right-field wall to give the Bulldogs the lead for good at 3-2. Churchill faced five more batters after that and didn't retire a single one. He hit Morgan Leak with a pitch then walked Tyler Nobles and Ross Nobles to load the bases.

The Eagles (8-7, 2-1) could have escaped the situation, but shortstop Brad Massey booted a potential double-play grounder by Blake Johnston, allowing a run to score. Tyler Nobles then scored on a wild pitch and when Laynce Nix hit a two-run triple to right, that gave the Bulldogs a 7-2 advantage and permanent momentum.

"I think that made it easier when we jumped ahead," said Nix, who had two hits and drove in three runs. "This is a good game because we can show other teams how good we are by defeating the defending district champs."

Trailing 8-2, though, the Eagles showed why they are so respected in the district. Abilene High started a rally against Joey Schlaffer with one out in the fourth, starting when Odis Dalton reached base on a dropped third strike. After a single by Alan Zabloudi, James Bryant crushed a three-run homer to left to cut the lead to 8-5 and give cause for concern.

"(Schlaffer) hung a curve on that pitch," said Russell. "He told me not to give up on calling the curve.

"He had a lot of confidence. He was a last-minute starter and didn't know he was going to start the game at first."

Following Bryant's homer, Schlaffer made Russell's hunch pay off. He retired the next nine batters and surrendered only a meaningless single in the seventh after the Bulldogs had already rebuilt their margin.

It didn't hurt Schlaffer, who lost all five of his district decisions last season despite a respectable ERA, that he got plenty of support both offensively and defensively, as the Bulldogs committed only one error.

"We've been playing so poorly, but then we picked it up, got after it and got it going," Russell said. "We finally started swinging the bats and playing good defense. I feel we've got a good chance because this district is about as even as it's ever been."

Prior to the game on Monday, there was a team meeting where the players challenged each other on goals for the remainder of the season, especially the seniors and returners who went through the rough times last season.

"Yesterday we had a long talk and decided we wanted to go out with a bang," said shortstop Ralph Romero, another senior like Schlaffer who had a big day, with two hits and two RBIs. "Once we stepped out between the lines we knew the game was ours. (The Eagles) looked kind of dead.

"We've still got a long ways to go. We've got to play seven innings every time."

Daly comes back to Sawgrass sober

By Ron Sirak
AP Golf Writer

JACKSONVILLE BEACH, Fla. — One of the nine young men bellied up to the horseshoe-shaped bar at Sloppy Joe's and yelled, "Tequila!" His friends bellowed agreement as the bartender lined up nine salt-rimmed glasses and filled them.

The scene was repeated several times, the young men baiting each other into drinking more and more, their loud, good-natured banter carrying with it an ominous undercurrent hinting that things could easily turn ugly.

A year ago, John Daly was part of a similar scene at Sloppy Joe's, the place where the long day's journey into his last drunken night began after the first round of the Players Championship.

Daly returned to TPC at Sawgrass this year a sober man who never wants to forget the horror of the night of March 27, a mere 12 months ago.

"It's definitely a miracle what I've done," Daly said Tuesday. "There's always been an angel on my shoulder looking after me."

Even when Daly was sober for 4 1/2 years before his last fall, he was not able to talk about his alcoholism. Now he attends meetings at least three days a week and can speak freely about "beating demons."

"Last year I was a walking drunk," Daly said. "This year I have somewhat of a grip on my life."

The new Daly even was able to find humor in the 18 he scored on No. 6 Sunday in the Bay Hill Invitational.

"I tried my hardest," Daly said with a laugh that was shockingly surprising because it came from someone normally uptight in interviews.

"I just couldn't get it over the water," he said about the six consecutive 3-woods that failed to make the 270-yard carry.

"It's the first time I've actually lost my patience" during his new sobriety, Daly said.

But he followed the 18 with a birdie on the next hole.

"So it looks more like a 10 and a 10 instead of an 18 and a 2," he said, once again shaking with laughter.

"When I finally got on the green, I had a 30-footer for a 17 and Tom Watson said, 'Knock it in,' like it meant something," Daly said. "He was serious, too. We both just started to laugh."

Laughter is not entirely new for Daly. It's just that it's new for him when he is sober.

The night that turned Daly's life around began with lots of laughs in the friendliest of environments.

A balcony lines the two-story building inside and out. A mounted sailfish hangs from the inside balcony and photographs of Ernest Hemingway, the poster boy for the hard-drinking man's man, are everywhere.

Just inside the front door is a Sloppy Joe's shirt autographed by Daly.

Sloppy Joe's is the kind of place that can make you feel comfortable. It's also the kind of place were you can get in trouble, as Daly found out a year ago.

AP Laserphoto

John Daly follows through on a drive during a skins game last May in Pennsylvania.

"It was very crowded," said Jeff Taylor, a bartender at Sloppy Joe's on that night when Daly had his last drink.

"He was very nice, signing autographs and buying drinks for people," Taylor said Monday night. "He drank a lot, but he was not a problem."

The real problem came when Daly left Sloppy Joe's and returned to his hotel room. His wife, Paulette, told him she had taken as much as she could stand of his drinking and was leaving him.

Daly trashed the room, causing $1,000 in damage, and was eventually taken to the hospital in an ambulance, fearing for his life.

Two days later, he was on his way to the Betty Ford center and his second stint of alcohol rehabilitation.

"If I had continued the way I was going last year, I don't think I would be here," Daly said.

That night, he was the life of the party.

"He got up with the band and sang some little redneck songs, some Lynyrd Skynyrd," said Tara Raichel, who was also a bartender the night Daly had his last drink. "He was a perfect guest."

He was also a perfect drunk.

On Saturday, Daly will get a coin from Alcoholics Anonymous marking one year of sobriety. On Tuesday, he slowly turned in his hand one of the nearly 100 coins sent to him by other recovering alcoholics.

"The scariest part is it's a day-to-day thing," Daly said, looking at the coin. "If I want to buy my death, I can just go to a liquor store and buy it."

MHS softball team romps by Midland Christian, 18-0

■ Lady Bulldogs' Kirk hurls four-inning one-hitter in break from district play.

Staff Report

The Midland High softball team climbed to 13-8 for the season as they took a break from the District 4-5A race Tuesday with an 18-0 win over Midland Christian.

The game was called after four innings as Alicia Kirk was the winning pitcher, giving up only one hit to the Lady Mustangs.

Crystal Shelton went 3-for-5, scored two runs and had an RBI. Dana Pope was 2-for-4 and scored three times. Francesca Salcido was 2-for-4 and scored three times. Amberleigh Berry and Kristi Heard were both 2-for-2 and scored twice while RayLynne DeLeon was 3-for-4 with two RBIs. Chancey Davis was 2-for-4 with two RBIs. Kirk also had a hit and an RBI.

The Lady Bulldogs own a 4-2 record in District 4-5A play, tied with San Angelo Central for third place, but both are only one game back of league leaders Midland Lee and Abilene High, who both carry 5-1 records.

Only three teams can make the playoffs, so it should be an interesting race to the finish line.

"It looks like one of us is going to have to stay home when the playoffs arrive," said MHS coach Rich Wieligman. "It's really crowded at the top."

Midland High and Lee meet Saturday at the Lee diamond at 2 p.m. No matter how that game turns out, it will have a major bearing on the district race.

SOFTBALL: Lady Rebs stay tied for first in 4-5A

(From 1C)

Lee cracked out nine singles, three by sophomore designated hitter Jennifer Bryant.

Senior second baseman Jennifer Aman, who knocked in two runs, scored a run and stole a base, felt this game could have been much closer.

"I thought it would be a lot closer coming in," Aman said. "One bad inning is all it takes, especially in softball, and they had a couple of them.

"We're playing a little better, but we are still making little errors as a team. We'll take 5-1 this half."

There were a couple of aspects that came from this game that Young liked.

"We hit the ball well and we came out of the shoot in the first inning," Young said. "We've been flat coming out of the gate in some other games, but we started fast today. San Angelo helped us some, too, with errors and walks."

In addition to nine hits for the Lady Rebels, Lee is beginning to use the bat in all kinds of effective ways. Leadoff hitter Patricia Carrasco and No. 2 hitter Crista Hargrove each had two sacrifice bunts.

Freshman Brandie Row picked up another district win for Lee, going the distance. It wasn't one of her better outings she says. Row gave up six hits, walked five batters and hit two more. Still, she had a shutout working until the seventh.

"I was hoping to do better than that, but I just wasn't really pumped up for some reason," Row said. "It was nice to get those runs early."

District Notes: Odessa High won its first district game of the season with a 7-2 win over Abilene Cooper. OHS let a victory get away from them against Midland High Saturday after leading with two outs in the bottom of the seventh. The bottom of the standings is almost as interesting as the top. OHS, Cooper and Permian all finished the first half with identical 1-5 records. That means, of course, that the second half race is a four team shootout, but only three can qualify for the state playoffs.

JV Action: The Lee junior varsity climbed to 5-1 in district play and 21-6 on the year with a 2-1 win over San Angelo. Jamie Rohn got the win, tossing a two-hitter with six strikeouts. Shandi Neatherlin had three hits and scored both runs while Reagan Viney drove in a run. Jodi Sosa had two hits.

Finchem considers Players Championship major

Associated Press

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. — PGA commissioner Tim Finchem may have come up with the best answer on whether The Players Championship should be considered a fifth major.

"It's the first major," he said.

The tournament, which celebrates its 25th anniversary this year, has the credentials to be one.

Only four previous champions have failed to win a major — Mark Hayes, Calvin Peete, Mark McCumber and Jodie Mudd.

And last year, it became the first tournament to have all of the top 50 players in the world. This year's field features 46 of the top 50 — three withdrew because of injury, and Brian Watts from the Japanese tour declined his invitation.

"It's certainly got the field, doesn't it?" said Nick Faldo. "We love the four majors, though. It's hard to squeeze another one in."

The Masters celebrated its 25th birthday in 1958, won by Arnold Palmer. He is credited with being the first to mention the modern "Grand Slam" — the Masters, U.S. Open, British Open and PGA — when he went to St. Andrews two years later.

"So we're young," Finchem said. "We're of an age where it's got some history now. It's up to the players and the media and fans to figure out how important various golf championships are.

"We can't tell people, we just try to make it as good as we can."

ELKINGTON OUT: Steve Elkington couldn't wait until after the Masters to have sinus surgery, and a slow recovery kept him from defending his title at The Players Championship.

"He called to say he's just not recovered from surgery to the point he could make the trip," Finchem said at opening ceremonies.

It's the first time a Players champion did not defend since 1983, when Jerry Pate had to withdraw with neck problems.

Elkington had said he planned to have surgery after Augusta, but it got to the point where had an operation Thursday in Houston.

■ Golf Notes

CASEY MARTIN: The 36-hole Sunday at Bay Hill should help the PGA Tour bolster its argument that there is a fatigue factor in golf because of the walking involved. A federal magistrate in Oregon rejected that notion in allowing Casey Martin access to a cart in tournaments.

Because of rain delays, the Bay Hill concluded with two rounds on Sunday.

Playing under near identical weather conditions, players in the third round averaged 71.786 and players in the final round averaged 73.636 — a nearly two-stroke difference.

"We'll find out tomorrow how stupid the assessment was by that judge who said that walking is not fatiguing," Scott Hoch said on the eve of the 36-hole finale.

FALDO OFF FORM: In terms of mechanics, Nick Faldo has never felt this good. In terms of scoring, he has rarely performed this bad.

The best finish this year for the three-time Masters and British Open champion was a tie for 22nd at the Mercedes Championship. In full field events, his best is a tie for 43rd in Los Angeles, where he was the defending champion.

With the Masters only three weeks away, Faldo is searching for answers.

"The good is as good as it's ever been," he said at the Bay Hill Invitational after missing the cut. "It's just not consistent."

Faldo said he has pulled out videotapes of 1990, the year he won the Masters and the British Open, and said he is swinging much better now than he did then.

"I've just got to get into a groove," he said. "I used to be around the blooming stick all day. Now, I'm grinding to make par."

In five tournaments, Faldo is 74th in greens hit in regulation and 102nd in putting, not a good combination. He has broken par five times in 18 rounds.

STROKES AGAINST STROKE: For the fourth straight year, Bayer Aspirin will sponsor a team of players and donate $1,200 for every birdie they make in the month of May. This year's team is Tom Kite from the PGA Tour, Bob Murphy from the Senior Tour and Nancy Lopez from the LPGA.

Bayer has raised $282,000 for the American Heart Association. It also donated a putting green to the Genesis Rehabilitation Hospital in Jacksonville for patients recovering from strokes.

The amount per birdie is $200 more than last year, when Kite, Lopez, Tom Weiskopf and Chris DiMarco made 138 birdies.

"You can assume I'll make more birdies than Tom Kite or Nancy Lopez," said Murphy, noting that three of the Senior events are in cities where he has won.

"Well, I'm playing in Houston, which is in Texas; Dallas, which is in Texas; and Fort Worth, which is in Texas," said Kite, a native of Texas.

One problem. Kite has won 19 PGA events, but never in his home state.

DISNEY CHANGES: The Disney Classic has a new sponsor, an attractive slot in the calendar, and a change in format sure to be even more attractive to the players.

Disney is the last full field event of the season, meaning it will be the last chance for players to earn enough money to make the top 30 for the Tour Championship, or the top 125 to keep their card.

And instead of playing with three amateurs for three days over three courses, this year it will be two pros and two amateurs over the Magnolia and Palm Course. The Lake Buena Vista course, the easiest on the PGA Tour circuit has been eliminated.

The new sponsor is National Rental Car, one of the tour's marketing partners and the official rental car of Disney since 1980. National, which replaces Oldsmobile as the title sponsor, has a one-year deal but is negotiating to extend the contract.

BALL WARS: Spalding won a delay in its court battle with Callaway over its "Top-Flite System C" golf ball, which it is promoting as being the best ball suited for Callaway's Great Big Bertha.

Callaway sued for trademark violation and asked that it get immediate access to Spalding's research. A federal judge in California denied their motion last week.

"In my mind, it makes me more eager to see it," said Steve McCracken, Callaway's chief legal counsel. "If it's helpful for them, I don't know why they would oppose it. If they have any, I bet it shows the ball doesn't work very well."

HOW TO READ THE MARKET IN REVIEW

Here are the 1,675 most active stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, 925 most active on the Nasdaq National Market and 405 most active on the American Stock Exchange. Stocks in bold are worth at least $5 and changed 5 percent or more in price. Underlining for 50 most active on NYSE and Nasdaq and 25 most active on Amex. Tables show name, price and net change, and one to two additional fields rotated through the week, as follows:

Name: Stocks appear alphabetically by the company's full name (not its abbreviation). Names consisting of initials appear at the beginning of each letter's list.
Last: Price stock was trading at when exchange closed for the day.
Chg: Loss or gain for the day. No change indicated by ...
PE: Price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's earnings per share for the most recent four quarters.
PPE: Projected price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's projected earnings per share for upcoming 12 months. PPE supplied by I/B/E/S, Institutional Brokers' Estimate System. Is a consensus forecast of all analysts following the company. Only companies with three or more analysts following them have a PPE.
How to use: In general, if PPE is lower than PE, analysts believe earnings will be going up. If PPE is higher, they expect earnings to fall. The numbers can be helpful in following stocks but as with all financial data are only one of many factors to judge a company by. HOW TO READ THE MARKET IN REVIEW

Here are the 1,675 most active stocks on the New York Stock Exchange, 925 most active on the Nasdaq National Market and 405 most active on the American Stock Exchange. Stocks in bold are worth at least $5 and changed 5 percent or more in price. Underlining for 50 most active on NYSE and Nasdaq and 25 most active on Amex. Tables show name, price and net change, and one to two additional fields rotated through the week, as follows:

Name: Stocks appear alphabetically by the company's full name (not its abbreviation). Names consisting of initials appear at the beginning of each letter's list.
Last: Price stock was trading at when exchange closed for the day.
Chg: Loss or gain for the day. No change indicated by ...
PE: Price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's earnings per share for the most recent four quarters.
PPE: Projected price-earnings ratio. Derived by dividing closing price by company's projected earnings per share for upcoming 12 months. PPE supplied by I/B/E/S, Institutional Brokers' Estimate System. Is a consensus forecast of all analysts following the company. Only companies with three or more analysts following them have a PPE.
How to use: In general, if PPE is lower than PE, analysts believe earnings will be going up. If PPE is higher, they expect earnings to fall. The numbers can be helpful in following stocks but as with all financial data are only one of many factors to judge a company by. Consult your financial advisor before making any investment decision.

Stock Footnotes: cc – PE exceeds 99. dd – Loss in last 12 months. d – New 52-wk low during trading day. g – Dividend in Canadian $. Stock price in U.S. $. n – New issue in past 52 weeks. q – Closed end mutual fund; no PE calculated. s – Split or stock dividend of 25 percent or more in last 52 weeks. Dividend begins with date of split or stock dividend. u – New 52-wk high during trading day. v – Trading halted on primary market. Unless noted, dividend rates are annual disbursements based on last declaration. pf – Preferred. pp – Holder owes installment(s) of purchase price. rt – Rights. un – Units. wd – When distributed. wi – When issued. wt – Warrants. ww – With warrants. xw – Without warrants.

Dollar mixed

NEW YORK — The dollar ended mixed against most major world currencies Tuesday, as traders awaited details of plans to revive Japan's economy and to unite Europe's currencies.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted late Tuesday at 130.28 yen, down from 130.47 late Monday. It also was changing hands at 1.8278 German marks, up from 1.8256.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday: 1.4900 Swiss francs, up from 1.4869; 6.1255 French francs, down from 6.1330; 1,799.60 Italian lire, up from 1,798.60; and 1.4168 Canadian dollars, down from 1.4194.

The British pound was quoted at $1.6753, down from $1.6776.

Software conference

SAN FRANCISCO — It sounds like a high-tech dream: Running your favorite software on all kinds of computers, from office machines to home desktops to pocket organizers.

Despite a widening industry rift, enthusiasm is growing among software developers for a computer language that could make that vision of universal software a reality.

Developers at a four-day industry conference here that began Tuesday remained hopeful the Java programming language will free them to write software once to run on a range of computers and digital consumer devices — regardless of the underlying operating system.

Livestock prices

WASHINGTON — Depressed cattle prices led Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman to announce the government purchase of $30 million in beef and a renewed investigation into whether four dominant processing companies exert unfair influence on the market.

"You can't let three or four very large packers run roughshod over family farmers," Glickman said Tuesday after a Capitol Hill meeting with Democratic farm-state senators.

Prices paid to cattle producers are in the doldrums because supplies are huge. American consumers are not eating enough beef to keep pace and exports are down largely due to the Asian financial crisis.

Pepsi CEO's salary

NEW YORK — PepsiCo Inc.'s boss is giving up a salary so the company can use the money for scholarships for the children of its salespeople, warehouse employees, truck drivers and other "unsung heroes."

Roger Enrico, the PepsiCo chairman and chief executive who grew up in a blue-collar family, had a $900,000 salary last year and also received a $1.8 million bonus. He is not giving up any bonus that may be awarded, under the agreement with the PepsiCo board.

Enrico told employees in a memo distributed earlier this month that he had asked the board last fall to cut his salary to $1 a year and "consider using the savings to benefit our front-line employees."

Crude retreats on doubts of cutbacks

■ After rising sharply Monday, crude prices fall 4 percent on doubts exporters will honor cutback agreement.

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — Crude oil fell almost 4 percent on doubts oil exporters will honor an agreement to cut production and boost prices close to nine-year lows.

Crude oil for May delivery fell 59 cents, or 3.6 percent, to $15.92 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange after surging $1.90 Monday to $16.51 — the biggest gain in seven years —after Saudi Arabia and other countries pledged to cut daily production by as much as 1.6 million barrels a day.

Traders are wary because some countries that are part of the agreement, such as Venezuela, have broken promises in previous years to pump less.

"I don't expect (the exporters) to live up to their agreements," said Ahmad Zaki Yamani, a former Saudi Arabian oil minister who runs the London-based Centre for Global Energy Studies. "They can't do even 1 million" barrels a day.

Even if the cuts are made, the world will have too much oil at a time when demand is weak in Asia and stockpiles in the U.S. and Europe are ample after an unusually warm winter. Prices have tumbled 30 percent since early October.

If Venezuela curbs daily output by a promised 200,000 barrels, it still will pump half million barrels more than it agreed to as a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, according to Bloomberg Energy Service estimates. Four of 11 OPEC members currently produce above their quotas.

"The market is skeptical with good reason," said Elaine Levin, a trader at Morgan Stanley Dean Witter in Washington. Producers "are all notorious cheaters. They say one thing and do another."

Crude oil prices fell 31 percent between Nov. 26 and March 17, when it sold for $13.21 a barrel, the lowest since 1988. OPEC voted in late November to expand quotas by 10 percent to 27.5 million barrels a day, beginning this year.

Prices collapsed as warm weather in the Northern Hemisphere sapped demand for heating oil and an economic slowdown in Asia, slowed expected demand growth there. In Asia, demand growth is expected to be reduced by about 300,000 barrels a day from earlier estimates.

The United Nations has also expanded the amount of oil Iraq can sell from $2 billion every six months to $5.2 billion. The oil sales, which pay for food and medicine, have yet to be approved, but is expected soon, and could amount to a production increase of several hundred thousand barrels a day.

Even if the producers keep their promises to reduce output, the world still may be oversupplied with crude. Analysts, estimates that as much 3 million barrels a day are going into storage.

Dow rebounds 88 points

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Dow industrials sprang back toward the 9,000-mark Tuesday, narrowly missing a record as stocks in widely followed broader indexes all hit new highs.

The Dow Jones industrial average gained 88.19 points to 8,904.44, recouping most of the 90.18 points it gave up on Monday. The index of blue chip stocks remains just shy of the record it set on Friday, when it ended a weeklong climb of 300 points to close at 8,906.43.

With no major economic reports issued, investors continued to focus on oil prices, which dipped Tuesday after soaring Monday.

Oil got a lift over the weekend when top petroleum exporting countries agreed to cut production in an attempt to revive the sluggist energy market. On Tuesday, Qatar announced it, too, would cut oil production and Iran's oil minister said the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries would hold an emergency meeting soon to find ways to boost prices.

The movement to curb oil output raised fears of renewed inflation and lower corporate profits. But there has been growing skepticism that the cuts won't be steep enough to make a significant reduction in a global glut of oil.

The change in attitude affected oil stocks, as Chevron fell 1 7/16 to 85 7/16 and Mobil fell 1 1/4 to 78 1/8.

Other short term factors have helped pushed stocks ahead. Mutual funds are making end-of-quarter investments for investors flush with cash after a wave of mortgage refinancings and accelerated tax refunds.

Where stocks go now depends largely on the performance of corporate earnings, analysts said. Many reports for the first three months of this year will be out next month, and they will provide clues on how the rest of 1998 is shaping up.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by about 8 to 7 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 614.25 million shares.

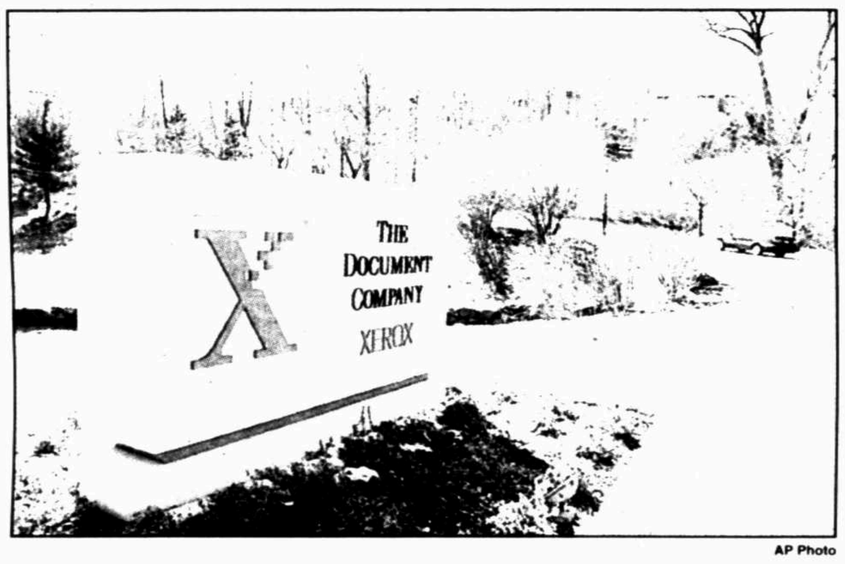

The S&P 500 rose 10.10 to 1,105.65, and the NYSE composite index rose 4.42 to 574.96, and the Nasdaq composite index rose 19.93 to 1,812.44, and the American Stock Exchange composite index rose 3.42 to 738.69 — all new highs.

The Russell 2000 rose 2.30 to 476.26, surpassing its previous record of 474.25.

A car enters Xerox corporate headquarters in Stamford, Conn. on Tuesday. Xerox will reportedly layoff 10,000 people worldwide over the next two years. Less than half of those expected layoffs will be in the United States.

Xerox reportedly planning major cost, job reductions

Associated Press

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — A Xerox Corp. drive to "aggressively and relentlessly" trim costs could mean big cutbacks, analysts said Tuesday, and one newspaper reported 10,000 jobs would be eliminated.

The belt-tightening at a company that only recently had been adding jobs comes as Xerox moves to better compete in the exploding digital copier business.

The Rochester Democrat and Chronicle, citing unidentified sources, said Xerox will announce 10,000 job cuts — almost 11 percent of its work force of 91,400 — the week of April 6.

As many as 2,000 jobs will go in Rochester, home to 13,900 employees, and Xerox is likely to take a charge as high as $1 billion in the second quarter to pay for the cutbacks over the next two years, the newspaper said.

"We regard the story as speculative and have no comment on it," responded Judd Everhart, a spokesman at Xerox headquarters in Stamford, Conn.

Wall Street analysts said there were rumblings that Xerox was sharpening its scalpel.

"It's been kind of around that they were going to intensify their cost-cutting efforts but a number had not been put on it," said Jack Kelly of Goldman Sachs & Co. "I had a sense it was going to happen sooner rather than later."

Xerox's new chief operating officer, G. Richard Thoman, who is widely viewed as the likely successor to chief executive Paul A. Allaire, has stressed the urgency of bringing Xerox's cost structure closer in line with competitors led by Hewlett-Packard Co.

Buoyed by robust sales of its new family of digital black-and-white copiers, Xerox enjoyed a 20 percent jump in profits last year. Digital equipment now comprises more than 40 percent of sales.

However, the company has struggled to pare costs fast enough as it makes the transition away from old-style copiers that operate with lenses and light bulbs to all-purpose digital models that can be upgraded to plug in scanners, fax machines and printers when connected to personal computers.

Mexican company agrees to acquire Mrs. Baird's

■ Acquisition of 90-year-old Texas institution will give Mexican firm distribution network north of the border.

Associated Press

DALLAS — Grupo Industrial Bimbo, Mexico's leading baking company, said Tuesday it will buy out Mrs Baird's Bakeries, a 90-year-old Texas institution and the nation's largest family-owned bakery.

Grupo Industrial Bimbo did not disclose the price it will pay for Fort Worth-based Mrs Baird's.

"The sale of our company was a difficult and emotional decision," said Byron Baird, board chairman of Mrs Baird's. "However, it is clearly in the best interest of our shareholders and the company to take this step."

The sale is subject to regulatory and shareholder approval.

Grupo Industrial Bimbo and Mrs Baird's had worked together previously, selling tortillas to Texans. When Grupo moved to increase its U.S. presence, it decided that Mrs Baird's, the state's most popular bread brand, would be a good fit.

Grupo Industrial Bimbo plans to continue using the Mrs Baird's name and no layoffs are expected.

"They have no overlapping facilities," said David Margulies, a spokesman for Mrs Baird's.

Grupo Bimbo distributes its products in Mexico, the U.S. and Latin America. Founded in 1945 in Mexico City, it is Mexico's industry leader in the making of bread, cakes and cookies. It employs over 50,000 people and has sales of $2.3 billion.

Founded in 1908, Mrs Baird's has 10 plants across Texas, about 3,400 employees and sales of over $300 million. The company was started when Ninnie L. Baird and her children began baking bread for friends and neighbors in their Fort Worth home.

Fourteen members of the Baird family still work for the company. Several have said they would like to continue in their jobs after the sale goes through, Margulies said.

There have been many changes at Mrs Baird's over the past couple of years. In 1995, the company hired its first non-family member to run the company. A year later, the bakery, which has always capitalized on a folksy image, was found guilty of price-fixing from 1977 to 1993 in East Texas. The company was fined $10 million for cheating its customers by fixing the price of a loaf of bread.

Toymakers issue profit warnings

N.Y. Times News Service

Hasbro Inc., the Rhode Island toymaker in the midst of a reorganization, warned investors Tuesday that first-quarter sales could fall by 15 percent because of a change in ordering policies at one of its biggest customers, Toys "R" Us Inc.

Toys "R" Us is reducing orders as it looks to keep inventories low while battling fierce competion from Wal-Mart Stores Inc.

Mattel Inc., the nation's largest toymaker to Hasbro's number two, also indicated its first-quarter earnings will be "relatively flat" as a result of changes at Paramus, N.J.-based Toys "R" Us, Bloomberg News reported.

"These were developments that Mattel and Hasbro could not control," said Jill S. Krutick, an analyst at Salomon Smith Barney who follows both toy companies.

They were developments, however, that seemed to take Wall Street by surprise.

Based on the average estimate of eight analysts surveyed by First Call Corp., Hasbro was expected to earn 19 cents a share for its first quarter.

Tuesday Hasbro said earnings could fall as low as 5 cents a share, but chief executive and chairman Alan Hassenfeld expressed confidence that the toy company would rebound strongly in the second half of 1998.

Cellular Express opens doors in Fairmont shopping center

By Mella McEwen

Just opened in Fairmont Shopping Center, 3323 N. Midland Drive, is CELLULAR EXPRESS.

McEwen

Owner Nancy Fuller once was general manager for Cellular One in Midland and decided to strike out on her own.

Cellular Express carries a wide variety of cellular phones in different colors from different manufacturers. Also available are accessories such as carrying cases, spare batteries, cigarette adapters and three-watt booster kits.

"We specialize in wireless data transfer," she said, adding that her store also offers full service repair and installation, either at the store or will provide service at the customer's location.

The store is a premiere dealer for Cellular One, sells Motorola Talkabout radios and has its own paging service, complete with a full line of pagers.

Hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday and noon to 4 p.m. Saturday.

Jack Sherman

Customer Satisfaction ... First!

What's the product you rely on most in your daily life? A recent survey of more than 1000 people said (95%) the reliability of their refrigerator was very important. 2nd was the automobile, with 91%, & placing 3rd was deodorant, with 82%! More men (94% vs. 89%) picked the automobile, while women led men (69% to 75%) in wanting to be sure their deodorant didn't fail. The refrigerator was basically a dead heat, 95% men to 94% women. Well, we can't help you keep your food cold, but if you're in the market for a car or truck, our low prices won't put you in a sweat! And our ok used cars are some of the most reliable around, stop by & take a look, at Jack Sherman Chevrolet Buick Mazda in Midland!
