National Day of Prayer observance set for noon Thursday at Auditorium

By KELLIE JONES
Features Editor

Ministers, city and county officials, along with residents will gather at noon Thursday to celebrate the National Day of Prayer.

The day was officially established in 1952 by a joint resolution of Congress and signed by President Harry Truman. In 1988, President Ronald Reagan made the first Thursday of May the official day to celebrate the National Day of Prayer.

This year's theme is "Honor God" and several events are planned to take place, according to Mayor Tim Blackshear.

The schedule of events includes:
• Noon - opening music by Robert Brooks, First Church of the Nazarene
• 12:10 p.m. - welcome by Leo Free, president of the Howard County Minister's Fellowship and pastor of Living Waters Ministries
• Introductions - Lee Rushing, secretary of the Howard County Minister's Fellowship and pastor of CrossRoads

Community Fellowship

• Welcome and Proclamation - Mayor Tim Blackshear
• Prayer Time (two-minute prayers by each person) - Prayer for pastors of city; Gary Smith; prayer for families of city; Gene Smith; prayer for the church in the city; Malcolm Pointon; prayer for governmental leaders, Leo Free; prayer for law enforcement, Marc Couch; prayer for men of city, Gilbert Chavez; prayer for women of city, Kay Bancroft; prayer for youth of city, Tim Dunn; prayer for businesses of city,

Steve Howard; prayer for evangelism of city, Loren Sproul; prayer for revival in the city and United States, Howard Hornsby and Rhonda Harding
• Closing Prayer - Lee Rushing
City Manager Gary Fuqua said the National Day of Prayer is important for everyone to be involved in. "We need to support the good that is being done in the community. We need to take the time to reflect on what is most important to us and this gives us a good time to do that."

Rushing added, "This is somewhat of a joining of hands with the rest of the country. We need to pray for our country, leaders and one another. "his connects us with the rest of America."

"Also, we hope it will encourage people to get or develop a prayer life. We shouldn't pray just once a year or once a week on Sundays but we should have an ongoing relationship in prayer. And finally, we are told to pray and not by this proclamation of National Prayer Day but it is in the scriptures to pray." The observance is set for noon Thursday at the City Auditorium.

Local investment banker to take part in satellite program

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

A local investment representative will participate in two live satellite broadcast programs in mid-May.

Big Spring's Edward D. Jones investment representative, Dan Wilkins, will host a special satellite teleconference for attorneys and other legal professionals on May 15.

The program, "Employer and Employee Issues," is eligible for two MCLE hours; and course approval is pending in most states.

"This is the first program in the Edward Jones Professional Education Network's 1996 broadcast series," Wilkins said. "I am excited to be hosting this program exclusively for members of the legal profession."

The broadcast's discussion topics include: How to distinguish an employee from a self-employed individual and why it is important; payroll tax issues relating to employees and self-employed individuals; Trust fund tax liability issues; and Employers' discrimination issues.

Guest panelists include: David R. Currie, CPA, M.S., president of Texas Planning & Research Inc. (a consulting organization based in Cave Creek, Ariz.) and senior tax consultant with McGladrey & Pullen CPAs, in Phoenix; and Jeffrey Jacobs, attorney, president of the Professional Education Network Inc. out of Westport, Conn.

The enrollment fee for the intermediate-level taxation program is $25, which includes course materials and refreshments. To reserve a seat, interested professionals should contact Wilkins' office at 267-2501 by the end of the business day Thursday.

On May 16, Wilkins' office will also participate in the Jones' National Career Day, which will again feature a program to be broadcast live over the firm's satellite network.

The program will air twice and will examine opportunities and challenges offered by a career with Edward Jones.

Wilkins said, "Because Jones is so different from other Wall Street firms, it offers its investment representatives unique opportunities. The typical Jones office is staffed by one investment representative and one support person and is located in smaller communities or in suburbs of metropolitan areas. Because our investment representatives live in the communities they serve and work with individual investors exclusively, they develop very strong relationships with their customers."

Jones was founded in 1871. Its representatives offer insured tax-free bonds, mutual funds, certificates of deposit and the common stock of companies with histories of sound management and solid performance.

Wilkins said, "Edward Jones has more than 3,200 offices in 40 states; our goal is to have 10,000 branch offices by the year 2004. Our 3,200 investment representatives have diverse backgrounds."

Wilkins may also be contacted at 267-2501 for inquiries about Edward Jones' National Career Day.

O.L. Cooper takes reins as president at Norwest Big Spring

By CARLTON JOHNSON
Staff Writer

Today is O.L. Cooper's first official day as President of Norwest Bank in Big Spring.

Cooper was named president and managing officer a couple of weeks ago along with Curtis Mullins, who was named chairman of the board of the Big Spring facility, by Tim Coughlon, regional president of Norwest Banks in West Texas.

Cooper's appointment in Big Spring is effective today.

He has more than 20 years banking experience, most recently as president at Norwest bank in Denver City. He began his banking career at Spur Security Bank.

Since 1975, he has served in various capacities at Hale County State Bank, Texas Bank & Trust, First State Bank of Memphis, Wellington State Bank and City Bank in Lubbock.

Coming to Big Spring from Denver City, a community of about 5,000, means Cooper will be dealing with more entities that are able to handle a variety of banking services.

"Each bank will have similar services, but by being in a larger market we'll be able to utilize more services," Cooper said.

He added, "You can't have a change in ownership without having some changes. The brunt of the changes will be positive and if there's a need out there we'll try to fill it."

Cooper says Norwest's philosophy is that they will take what the market gives them and that the bank's strong suit is it offers a variety of services.

Big Spring's Norwest branch has total assets of $215 million.

A lot of physical changes are going on inside of Norwest Bank meaning Cooper has not had a chance to tour the city, but he does see Big Spring a positive community that has adapted to change and is learning to diversify itself.

Some of those changes Coop-

er sees following the Webb Air Force Base era include the Big Spring Correctional Center, industrial development and businesses like Western Container's making Big Spring home.

As for Norwest itself, Cooper hopes the new look will be complete in a few weeks.

"Hopefully were only three weeks away from completing the lobby and new offices. This will show that we're putting our best foot forward and making a strong financial commitment to Big Spring," Cooper said.

Cooper got into banking for several reasons, but said helping people comes first.

"It's very gratifying to help people get into business and succeed and gain some financial independence. That means positive economic growth. Helping people achieve some of their goals and dreams as well as dealing with people gives a banker a lot of enjoyment," Cooper said.

Norwest, which has 101 banking locations in 59 communities and $7.3 billion in assets in Texas, is part of Norwest Corporation, a $72.1 billion company providing banking, insurance, investments and other financial services through 3,137 stores in all 50 states, Canada, the Caribbean, Central America and elsewhere internationally.

Herald seeks memories of Runnels

The Herald is seeking memories of students who attended what is now known as Runnels Junior High School — both when it was the community's high school and as a junior high.

We will take those memories and incorporate them into a special package of "Runnels Memories — Good and Bad," to be published on Sunday, May 12.

Please send your recollections to Runnels Memories, c/o Kellie Jones, Big Spring Herald, P.O. Box 1431, Big Spring, 79721. You may also bring your written recollections by the Herald offices. Sorry, but we can't take any over the telephone and we ask that you limit them to no more than 350 words.

Rumors about mystery cats being caught unfounded

HERALD Staff Report

Rumors about the capture of two large cats, spotted two weeks ago in the Highland and Hillside areas, are unfounded.

According to the Big Spring Police Department, the cats are still at-large. Although no other sightings have been reported, there is no information indicating they have been captured.

John Liedeker, animal control warden for Big Spring, said traps have been set in the areas the cats were sighted. "I've been checking them daily, but we haven't caught anything. I don't know what happened to them," Liedeker said.

The cats were last sighted in a vacant lot in the 500 block of Scott Street around 8 a.m. Thursday, April 11, which was the third such sighting — the first on Easter on the hill between the Barcelona Apartments and the VA Medical Center and the second, on April 10, in the Highland area.

The cats, reported to be approximately 44 inches in length and solid black, were never identified by species. At last report they were thought to be black mountain lions according to data supplied by the Chihuahuan Desert Research Center at Alpine.

A common sense healthcare bill

Unlike President Clinton's massive package in 1994, the health bill that passed the Senate by 100 to 0 last week does not aim to cure every ill afflicting health care in the nation. Instead, it essentially takes on one particular problem, and, perhaps as a consequence, its solutions seem reasonably consistent with common sense.

The chief problem the bill addresses is the risk of losing health insurance when leaving one job for another. Both the Senate bill and one passed earlier by the House fix this by requiring insurance companies to provide coverage under a new employer when a worker was covered in his previous job. Even if the worker is already sick, he or she couldn't be turned down, under a crucially important provision of the legislation.

According to estimates by the General Accounting Office, as many as 25 million Americans may suffer from "job lock," a fear of departing current employment because health insurance might be denied in the next job. This legislation should address their plight through the portability of policies, although not trying this time out to do much for the other 40 million Americans who have no health insurance.

The legislation is not without its shortcomings. One failing is that the bill requires insurance companies to cover mental health as extensively as physical health. Try this, and premiums would quickly skyrocket, causing a major health care crisis in virtually no time at all. Fortunately, Senate Republican leader Bob Dole pledges to eradicate this provision in conference committee, and all the signs are that he will be successful. Other issues in conference will be the establishment of medical savings accounts and limits on punitive damages in medical malpractice awards. Both are good proposals included in the House bill but not in the Senate version. Their prospects are less hopeful because President Clinton has vowed to veto legislation that incorporates them.

It's hard to be enthusiastic about the enlarged health-care role of the federal government implied in this legislation. There are missed opportunities here, and some mopping up of various provisions will almost certainly be necessary in future bills, even if the conference committee carefully re-examines some provisions. Taken as a whole, the legislation nevertheless looks like it should help millions of people without doing any particular damage to businesses or health care, and that's no small achievement.

Blaming bureaucrats for silly document not valid

The federal officials at the Occupational Safety and Health Administration say that I have given them a bum rap, and it appears they are right. This is how it happened:

A few weeks ago, a Chicago manufacturer gave me a copy of a document called a Material Safety Data Sheet.

It is a set of guidelines that businesses must have for any material they use that could be hazardous to their employees. In this case, the MSDS was for H2O — also known as water. Most of it was in jargon that would be unintelligible to a layman. But the manufacturer told me it was legitimate.

So I did a column about it, because it struck me as being kind of silly for a federal agency to be telling people about what water can and can't do.

A few days later, I got a call from a spokesperson for OSHA who said: "OSHA does not issue MSDS's for water. There is no such thing as an MSDS for water."

"We can understand people spoofing OSHA. We've had a whole year of this. When we deserve it, we deserve it, but here we don't. It goes against what OSHA stands for."

"Yes, there have been situations where overzealous OSHA inspectors have said someone needs an MSDS when they don't and a citation is issued, but they are extremely rare, given the tens of thousands of inspections we do."

I checked back with the businessman who had given me the MSDS, and I realized that I had goofed. From what he had said originally, I had assumed that he had received the MSDS from OSHA.

But it turned out he hadn't. Instead, he had been browsing through a university database that contains a voluminous listing of MSDS documents. And he had come across the one for water. So he got a copy of it and decided to pass it along to me.

"So I've been duped by a spoof," I said.

"No," he said, "I know an MSDS when I see one, and this one is legitimate."

So I started trying to track down the source of the water MSDS. But before I finished, there was another call from the OSHA spokesperson.

"Yes, the MSDS for water does exist. A company in New Jersey did an MSDS for every substance under the sun. We aren't the people who devised it. A lot of consultants advise companies on making MSDS's, telling them they need them for everything known to man. They make a lot of money doing that."

Then the spokesperson said that as a result of my column, some congressmen had just introduced a whimsical amendment withholding funds for any MSDS's on water, and the spokesperson bemoaned the anti-bureaucratic raps that OSHA endures.

"When this Congress started out, they were saying all sorts of things, like we killed the tooth fairy because we wouldn't let dentists give patients back their extracted teeth. Or that we think sand is poison. Or that we think chalk is poison. It has been endless."

"The standard that OSHA has is that if someone works with hazardous material, he has the right to know what is in it and the potential side effects. I talked about the consultants, but society is so lawsuit happy that manufacturers include (the MSDS's) with all substances to protect themselves."

"I've heard of MSDS's for bricks and that OSHA thought bricks and sand were poison and that we required them for lumber."

"Lumber in another form can be hazardous — wood dust can be hazardous if you breathe it."

Four-laning in Mexico important to Big Spring

Is the highway issue dead in West Texas?

While all talk has centered around Interstate 69, which would run from the U.S.-Canada border at Port Huron, Mich. south through Indianapolis, Memphis, Houston and on to the Mexican border, the issue of expanded roadways in West Texas should not be closed.

On May 14 at the Lubbock Civic Center, the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) will hold a public hearing that will include the Dallas-based engineering firm of HDR Engineering.

At the meeting, HDR is expected to explain the basics behind its study that revealed only two of five prospective routes in West Texas were marginally feasible for upgrade to interstate status.

In that study, the Lubbock-Sweetwater-San Angelo route, along with one route north of Amarillo, graded at 1.07, which means the route could be expected to generate $1.07 in revenue for every construction dollar expended.

Of the two other routes — Lubbock-Big Spring-San Angelo and Lubbock-Midland/Odessa — the route along U.S. 87 rated considerably stronger than the Midland/Odessa route.

According to materials supplied by TxDOT, the Sweetwater route, which would have to follow Texas Highway 70, a two-lane, asphalt roadway that is also shoulderless in many areas.

I can't see where HDR came up with a traffic count along that route that was higher than that along U.S. 87 — unless the count was taken between Snyder and Sweetwater on U.S. 84 before the traffic heads east on I-20... because it sure doesn't swing south on Texas 70!

An interesting twist has come in the highway discussion with the disclosure that the Mexican government plans to have a four-lane divided highway from Saltillo to Ciudad Acuna, on the border across from Del Rio, completed by 1997.

Mexico has already completed a four-lane divided stretch from Saltillo to Montclova. Saltillo is located just to the west/southwest of Monterrey, Mexico's second-largest industrial city (trailing only Mexico City) and home to the industrial group known as the "Group of Ten."

Montclova is about 100 statute miles north along the route of Mexico Highway 57, which runs to Piedras Negras/Eagle Pass.

The four-laning will continue to Allende, located where Mexico 57 and Mexico 29 join about 50 statute miles south of Acuna/Del Rio. At that point, the roadway will be constructed to the current standards of U.S. 277, which runs from San Angelo to Del Rio.

While the Mexican government is working south of the border, TxDOT has committed to complete, also by the end of 1997, expansion of a 10-mile stretch between Del Rio and Sonora to four-lane, divided status.

That means that by the end of 1997 the only stretch of the roadway between Amarillo and Monterrey that won't be four-laned will be the approximately 25-mile stretch north of Sterling City toward Big Spring.

But even that project continues to move along, as right-of-way has already been purchased and most of the fences have already been moved back to the new property lines.

What that means is that the most direct route from western mid-America and the northwestern United States and Canada to the central distribution center for approximately 85 percent of all Mexico's population runs straight down U.S. 87 — through Big Spring.

And in the age of NAFTA, that should be most attractive to businesses seeking to do business in one of the three countries.

The advantage of the U.S. 87 to Del Rio route is that with the Mexican highway expansion, there is a direct connection to Monterrey's distribution center.

From Monterrey, traffic can go east or west or south, still following Mexico 57, to Mexico City.

Del Rio-Ciudad Acuna is a natural port of entry in that it can handle the expanded traffic that will come with the highway completion. Laredo-Nuevo Laredo is in a gridlock already and Presidio-Ojinaga's inadequate Port of Entry is at the north end of a bad road that goes only to Chihuahua before encountering severe mountains.

The four-laning of U.S. 87/U.S. 277/Mexico 29-57 can only serve to emphasize our community's crossroads location and make us a natural location for a distribution/warehousing center for traffic going north, south east and west.

Former Dallas school trustee, associate indicted
DALLAS — Former Dallas school trustee Dan Peavy has been indicted on charges he received more than $450,000 in bribes to help a business associate win board contracts.

The 42-count indictment returned in Dallas Tuesday charges Dan Peavy, 49, with conspiracy, bribery of local officials, extortion by public officials, money laundering and filing a false income tax return.

Peavy's associate, Dallas insurance executive Eugene M. Oliver, also is named in the indictment. Oliver is charged with conspiracy, bribery of local officials and money laundering. If convicted, Peavy faces up to 501 years in federal prison and $8 million in fines. Oliver could receive up to 305 years in federal prison and $5.25 million in fines.

Austin OKs out-of-court settlement on nuke suit
AUSTIN — After seven weeks of trial and more than a week of jury deliberations, a lawsuit over a 14-month shutdown of the South Texas Nuclear Project has been settled out of court.

The Austin City Council met in emergency session Tuesday night to approve the settlement, which calls for Houston Lighting and Power Company to pay the city of Austin $20 million and step down as manager of the plant.

The city of Austin is a part owner in the project and sued H&P for $120 million for damages related to a 14-month shutdown of the nuclear plant in 1993 and 1994.

DA's investigator retires after 36 years

ANSON — After 36 years in law enforcement, Woodrow Simmons is retiring.

It's not like the 77-year-old is hanging up his guns. He seldom wore one during his years as Anson police chief, Jones County sheriff and district attorney's investigator.

His retirement is effective today. He's stepping down as investigator for the 259th district attorney's office in Anson.

His reluctance to carry a gun made him a rare bird among law enforcement officers. But he never felt much of a need for carrying a gun, he said. He said he believed the people he had to apprehend were his neighbors nonetheless and should be treated as such.

Governor 'probably' will seek reelection in 1998

DALLAS — Halfway through his term, Gov. George W. Bush says he hasn't given much thought about the prospect of running for a second term.

He's a long way from deciding, he says — and in fact, hasn't been thinking much about it at all.

But he added: "If I were a betting person, I would bet 'yes.'" The disclosure came in an interview with the Wall Street Journal.

Former Texas A&M regent indicted

BRYAN — The former chairman of the Texas A&M University System Board of Regents has been indicted on a felony count of official misconduct.

A Brazos County grand jury indicted Ross Margraves Jr. on a charge stemming from his unauthorized use of a university-owned airplane for a trip to Baton Rouge in 1993, Brazos County District Attorney Bill Turner said Tuesday.

Margraves, a Houston attorney who graduated from A&M in 1963, resigned from the Board of Regents under pressure in April 1994.

25-year-old certified as adult in 8-year-old murder

PAMPA — Despite questions about the diligence of police in investigating an 8-year-old murder case, a judge has ruled the dead man's son can face adult charges even though he was 16 at the time of the shooting.

Prosecutors questioned Norman Michael Patterson, now 25, soon after Edward Patterson was killed in their Pampa trailer home in 1987, but he was never charged.

DNA tests conducted in March on blood found on the younger Patterson's clothes hours after the shooting showed the samples almost certainly belonged to his father, Gray County Assistant District Attorney Tracey Jennings said.

"DNA was really new (in 1987)," Ms. Jennings said when asked why authorities didn't test the blood sooner. "It's like anything, until you start using it, you don't rely on it."

Hantavirus strain turns up in Galveston rat

GALVESTON — A rat captured on the Fort Crockett campus of Texas A&M University at Galveston has been found to have antibodies for the rare and potentially deadly hantavirus.

No human cases of the disease have been confirmed in the county, Dr. Ralph Morris, director of the Galveston County Health District, said Tuesday.

Dr. Daniel Cowan, a pathologist at the University of Texas Medical Branch Center for Tropical Diseases, said the strain of the virus is still being investigated to determine whether it can cause disease in humans. He told the Galveston County Daily news that the rat found in the past two weeks did not have the disease itself.

"What they found was not a case of the disease, but the antibody that shows the rat had been exposed to some strain of hantavirus," Cowan said.

"The chances of it being transmitted from rodent to human are very small," he added.

High school bans uniforms from class

ROUND ROCK — The principal of Round Rock High School says it's OK for cheerleaders to raise spirits — but not hemlines.

Principal H. Lynn Russell says the school's dress code is clear: female students aren't permitted to wear skirts that don't reach their fingertips when their arms are at their sides.

Since cheerleader uniforms don't even come close, they can't be worn in classrooms.

Some students aren't happy. Two weeks ago, the campus newspaper, The Spitfire, bashed the new rule as a damper on school spirit.

"It will bring the morale of the school down," said Jenny Johnson, assistant head cheerleader. "It's kind of sad to see that tradition leave."

Administration announces help for cattle producers, prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government will speed up beef purchases and open more environmentally sensitive land for forage to help ease cattle prices out of their worst slump in 10 years.

President Clinton announced those measures and others Tuesday after a meeting with Republican and Democratic senators. He won praise from the lawmakers and cattle producers, but drew criticism from environmentalists.

Shoppers may notice little impact, because the gap between farm-level prices and those charged at stores has widened, while store prices have fallen. But the action could at least steady cattle markets and make more precious feed available at a time of drought, record grain prices and an oversupply of cattle.

Cattle and calves are the largest single-commodity source of farm income, with sales of $35 billion to $40 billion a year. The average store price of beef fell from $2.89 a pound in 1993 to $2.79 in February.

The Agriculture Department said it will buy $50 million worth of beef for the 1996-1997 school year at once rather than waiting for later in the year, and it could buy more.

"I think it is a good psychological boost out there in the market," said Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman.

The department will also allow haying and grazing on land idled under the Conservation Reserve Program. The government pays producers to keep the 35 million acres of environmentally sensitive land idle and planted with protective cover. The payments will be reduced for those who use the land for forage.

The president also promised to push exports more heavily, using credit guarantees, and to further press Europe to accept U.S. beef imports, now banned because of growth hormones.

Glickman will also survey the credit needs of livestock producers and report back in 30 days with recommendations on possible leniency.

An environmental group criticized the plan as an election-year maneuver.

"It could be very damaging to wildlife habitat, and there's been absolutely no study of it, no deliberation of it at all," said Kenneth Cook, president of the Washington-based Environmental Working Group. "It's totally political."

Grain shortages have raised feed costs, while dry weather in the Great Plains threatens range and pasture land. A heavy slaughter of excess animals has created a red-meat glut that is holding down prices.

Also, a cold, wet spring in the East has kept barbecue grills inside longer than expected, the Agriculture Department says. Reports of "mad cow disease" in Britain and possible harm to humans are an unknown factor.

The price of fattened cattle fell to $55.60 per hundred pounds in April, compared with $62 and $63 in March and $77 in 1993.

Without help, producers could sell off large numbers of animals, causing a short-term dip in consumer prices but longer-term increases when shortages occur. Demand for corn and other grains could then drop, causing farm prices to fall.

"This keeps a very serious situation in bounds, to the extent that government action can help," said Senate Agriculture Committee Chairman Dick Lugar, R-Ind.

Price declines have fed complaints from farm-state Democrats and Republicans that a handful of meatpacking companies are holding down farm-level prices.

'Back burn' apparently successful in New Mexico; Two men charged

BANDELIER NATIONAL MONUMENT, N.M. (AP) — Hundreds of firefighters torched brush ahead of an approaching wildfire Tuesday, managing to keep flames from shooting toward a laboratory storing radioactive materials.

Meanwhile, a judge said two men must stand trial for their part in starting the Dome Fire, which had charred nearly 15,000 acres by Tuesday.

It was only one of several major wildfires in the Southwest, where firefighters have been battling blazes kicked up by high winds and hot weather.

So far, the fires have charred about 43,000 acres in Arizona, and in Southern California, fire crews opened an air assault on blazes that have raged across across 11,000 acres.

About 750 firefighters working the Dome Fire in New Mexico were buoyed Tuesday by their brush "burnout," which helped turn the forest fire back upon itself. Firefighters declared the blaze 40 percent contained.

"The burnout went extremely well this afternoon," fire information officer Jim Paxson said. "The advance toward Los Alamos has been stopped."

The burnout helped them keep the blaze from jumping into heavily forested Frijoles Canyon, the heart of Bandelier National Monument, with its ancient Indian ruins — and away from Los Alamos National Laboratory, the birthplace of the atomic bomb.

"If it's successful, it will be a major turning point," said Gary Loving, commander of Dome Fire operations.

Some flames flared across fire lines but were quickly controlled by firefighters as planes dumped loads of pink slurry, a mix of water and fire-retardant chemicals.

Bandelier was closed to visitors as a precaution, but Los Alamos National Laboratory's 10,500 workers and contractors remained on the job. Lab officials said the installation wasn't threatened.

At a preliminary hearing, U.S. Magistrate Don Svet bound over for trial the two men accused of sparking the Dome Fire.

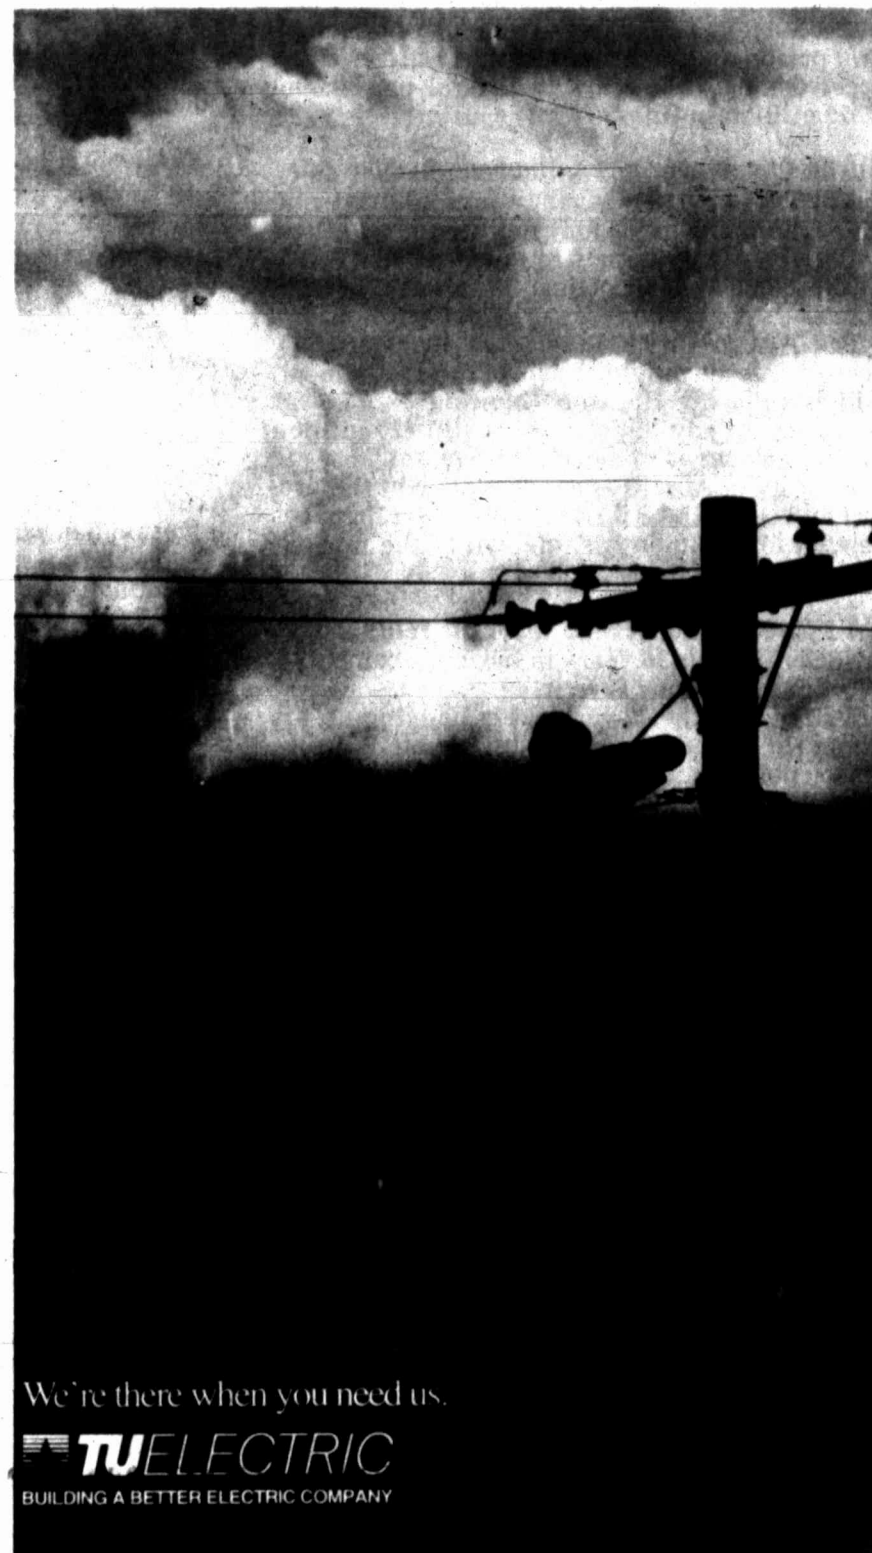

Gregory Steele, 27, of Taos and Farid Touchi, 23, of Konstanz, Germany, pleaded innocent to charges of leaving a fire unattended and unextinguished, supplying false information to a Forest Service officer and damaging U.S. property.

The two turned themselves in Saturday after realizing a campfire they set in a ring of rocks could have started the blaze.

The men said they doused the fire by pouring water and urinating on it, then covered it with rocks before they went to sleep. When they woke up on Friday, Touchi said, it appeared the campfire was completely extinguished.

"It's a little bit sad, the price you pay for honesty. We ended up being treated like criminals," he said.

We're there when you need us.

Report: Ted Kaczynski's paper rejected by two universities just before first unabomber attack at Northwestern in 1978

NEW YORK (AP) — Two universities rebuffed Ted Kaczynski's efforts to publish an anti-technology manuscript just before the first Unabomber explosion went off — in the parking lot of one of the universities, ABC's World News Tonight reported Tuesday.

"He was going to get even is what he said," Northwestern University math professor Don Saari told ABC.

Saari said he just recently remembered that Kaczynski had approached him in 1978 about publishing the paper on the evils of modern technology.

Saari said he referred Kaczynski to engineering professors at both Northwestern and the Chicago campus of the University of Illinois.

Later, "he came in very angry and he told me that they were rude. And he was bitter about it. They were rude and they dismissed him. And he was furious and he was shaking, such anger," Saari said. "His body was actually shaking."

Five weeks later, the Unabomber struck for the first time. A package was found in the parking lot of the engineering campus at University of Illinois at Chicago and brought to Northwestern University in Evanston because of the return address. It exploded when it was opened on May 26, injuring one person.

Saari said he had "a fleeting thought" the explosion might be tied to Kaczynski, then dismissed it.

It wasn't until September of 1994 that he tried to contact the FBI about his experience, after the Unabomber had struck 14 times. But he said he hung up after FBI officials were rude to him.

In April 1995, he wrote the FBI a detailed three-page letter, but never received a response. He tried again in June 1995, and began working with a new agent in the Chicago office, the report said.

Saari said the FBI showed him high school yearbooks and even tried hypnosis in an attempt to help him remember the name of his long ago visitor. But he could only recall that the name contained the letters c, s, and z.

ABC said the FBI had no comment on the report.

Kaczynski, now 53, was arrested April 3 at his Montana cabin. He is jailed in Helena, charged only with possession of bomb components and not with any of the Unabomber attacks, which killed three people and injured 23 in nine states.

It was not until TV footage of Kaczynski earlier this month that the memories came rushing back, Saari told ABC.

Efforts to reach Saari were not successful Tuesday evening.

Deposition sets off new accusations between tobacco company, anti-tobacco lawyers

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp. challenged the ethics of anti-tobacco lawyers on Tuesday after a whistleblower admitted getting a $109,000 house, two co-signed car loans and a salary for his efforts.

Merrell Williams, a former paralegal accused of stealing sensitive industry documents, maintains that except for his salary, everything else from Mississippi attorney Richard Scruggs and his partners was a loan.

But Brown & Williamson, which is suing Williams over release of the documents, said the deposition by their attorneys, unsealed Monday, shows he was paid for stolen material.

"The admission by Williams raises serious ethical questions regarding how far plaintiffs' lawyers will go to win lawsuits," Brown & Williamson lawyer Gordon Smith told USA Today in a Tuesday story.

Williams lawyer J. Fox DeMoisey said the deposition showed that the financial assistance amounted to loans.

"Merrell, I think, clearly testified it wasn't money for documents," DeMoisey said Tuesday. "It was documents he wanted to get to appropriate authorities."

Brown & Williamson spokesman Joe Helewicz said Tuesday that there was no evidence that loans were involved or that Williams has tried to pay back Scruggs and his partners.

"There isn't a single piece of paper that's been signed," he said. "There are no notes, the house has been deeded free and clear to Merrell Williams."

Scruggs said he didn't consider helping Williams inappropriate.

"He was in bad health and had no money," Scruggs said Tuesday. "We gave him financial assistance. It's not any big secret. We'll help anyone who exposes any wrongdoing by the tobacco industry."

Williams worked as a paralegal for the tobacco company's law firm, Wyatt Tarrant & Combs. In 1989, the company accused Williams of stealing about 4,000 pages of internal memos and studies concerning smoking and health.

Documents he provided from Brown & Williamson laid the groundwork for proposed Food and Drug Administration regulation of tobacco products and have become key evidence in a number of major lawsuits against tobacco companies.

It was not clear how much salary Williams is being paid to help in the case.

Some documents suggest Brown & Williamson executives knew 30 years ago that nicotine was addictive and that testing on animals showed a link between smoking and cancer.

Brown & Williamson sued Williams on charges of theft by deception. Williams has countersued, claiming that smoking and stress deteriorated his health.

Bodies piling up in Monrovia as latest truce collapses amid gunfire

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — Bodies piled up across Liberia's capital as the latest truce collapsed in a frenzy of bullets and shelling. Three of the dead were killed by U.S. Marines as they ran toward the American Embassy firing their guns.

Twelve days after warlords agreed to a cease-fire, the streets of Monrovia were in the hands of gunmen again today. The fighting is the fiercest since battles first broke out April 6.

Fighting today was concentrated around a besieged military training camp, whose floors were bathed in blood after dozens of victims were carried in or dragged themselves through the door.

On Tuesday, rocket-propelled grenades smashed into the grounds of the camp as doctors worked, bringing wails of fear and pain from civilians who thrashed on the floors or on flimsy stretchers.

Fighting remained heavy at the training camp today. Warlord Roosevelt Johnson has been holed up inside with hundreds of armed supporters since April 6 in an attempt to evade arrest on murder charges for clashes in March.

The government troops trying to arrest him include fighters loyal to rival warlords Charles Taylor and Alhaji Kromah, members of a six-man ruling council made up of faction leaders and civilians.

All sides had agreed April 19 to a truce negotiated at the American Embassy, but fighting reignited Monday as government leaders attempted to meet at government headquarters.

George Moose, the U.S. assistant secretary of state for African affairs, had intended to hold talks at the American Embassy on Tuesday with government, peacekeeping and faction leaders. Mortars, machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades forced him to cancel the meetings.

The executive mansion is near the military camp, and Taylor and Kromah accused Johnson's men of attacking them from there.

Moose blamed Taylor for the renewed fighting and warned of a "major catastrophe" if it continued.

"Taylor will be held responsible," Moose said in a telephone interview from the embassy on Tuesday. "If he persists in taking power, he should expect a strong international reaction."

U.S. troops were drawn into the violence for the first time Tuesday when they fired on gunmen shooting toward the embassy, which is guarded by about 230 Marines.

"We don't know what (the attackers) were aiming at," Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon said in Washington. "Fire came in and it was returned."

Three Liberians were killed and a fourth was wounded by the American troops, who are stationed throughout the sprawling compound.

Witnesses said the dead Liberians were Johnson fighters who were running toward the embassy firing their weapons while pursuing rival gunmen.

By Tuesday night, the area had quieted down and was back in the hands of Taylor's fighters. At least nine bodies were seen in the area, and bodies littered the streets of the city elsewhere.

The once-plush neighborhood is now blighted by looted United Nations offices, burned-out cars and ramshackle dwellings sheltering homeless civilians.

Doctors at the military compound clinic said at least three people had died there on Tuesday and 60 wounded came in, many of them civilians caught in cross-fire. The casualty toll was sure to rise once the streets were safe enough to begin counting victims.

The fighting could jeopardize the United States' offer of $30 million in aid to bolster the West African peacekeeping army deployed in Liberia since 1990.

The army, which numbers about 8,500, was accused of not doing enough to prevent the first round of fighting April 6-19, and it had maintained a heavy presence in the streets after the truce.

On Tuesday, soldiers quickly abandoned their positions to the heavily armed rebels who overran the city.

Liberia's civil war began six years ago, but the capital had been considered a safe haven under peacekeepers' protection and had not experienced all-out warfare since 1992, when Taylor tried to take the city. The peacekeeping army drove him back.

The U.S. military began evacuating Americans and other foreigners from the city April 10.

Hezbollah says Clinton trying to absolve Israel

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Hezbollah guerrillas accused President Clinton today of trying to absolve Israel of guilt for the artillery barrage that killed 91 refugees at a U.N. base in southern Lebanon.

Clinton has endorsed Israel's contention that guerrillas provoked the April 18 barrage in the village of Qana by firing a salvo of Katyusha rockets at northern Israel from the vicinity of the base.

The attack on the base was the deadliest in the 16-day air, sea and artillery offensive that Israel launched April 11 in an attempt to stop Hezbollah's Shiite Muslim guerrillas from firing rockets into northern Israel.

The attack stopped Saturday under a cease-fire brokered by U.S. Secretary of State Warren Christopher following a week of shuttle diplomacy.

At least 162 people were confirmed killed and 339 wounded in the fighting, the worst flare-up in 14 years on the last active Arab-Israeli war front. Qana's victims accounted for most of the deaths.

They were buried in a mass grave at Qana on Tuesday by a sea of mourners shouting "Death to Israel" and "Death to America."

"Clinton's justification of the Qana massacre, which was committed by the Israeli enemy with U.S. weapons and green light, is designed to absolve Israel of guilt by blaming it on the victim," Hezbollah's statement said.

The Iranian-backed Hezbollah leads a guerrilla war to dislodge Israeli occupation troops from a border enclave Israel has occupied in southern Lebanon since 1985. The enclave has a predominantly Shiite Muslim population of 200,000.

Hezbollah's criticism of Clinton coincided with U.S. condemnation of Iran, the group's arms supplier and cash backer, as the "premier state sponsor of international terrorism."

A State Department report released Tuesday charged that Iran is deeply involved in the planning and execution of terrorist acts. Tehran has repeatedly denied the American charges.

A Lebanese group of lawmakers, legal experts and human rights activists trying to win the release of some 200 Lebanese prisoners held by Israel and its militia ally in southern Lebanon said today that Prime Minister Shimon Peres of Israel should be tried as a war criminal.

In a statement, the group urged the government of Prime Minister Rafik Hariri and the U.N. International Law Committee to set a case against Peres in motion.

In a move marking the Islamic feast of Eid al-Adha, the Israeli-allied South Lebanon Army militia released nine prisoners today from a detention camp inside the Israeli-held zone, the militia command said.

The eight Lebanese — seven men and a woman — and a Palestinian man were freed from Khiam prison where some 200 Lebanese are held on suspicion of carrying out anti-Israel guerrilla attacks. The nine had been held for terms ranging from three to seven years.

Hindu nationalists lead in Indian elections

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The governing Congress Party trailed far behind a Hindu nationalist party in the first published survey since voting began last week in India's general election.

In its Thursday edition, Outlook magazine reported that the Congress Party will win a larger share of the popular vote, but will come second behind the Bharatiya Janata Party in the number of seats in the 545-member lower house of parliament.

The survey incorporated an exit poll of 3,000 voters who cast ballots in seven states on Saturday, when one-third of the country went to the polls. An additional 18,918 people were questioned earlier by Dun and Bradstreet Market Research Pvt. Ltd. No margin of error was reported.

Another one-third of India's 590 million eligible voters will be asked to cast ballots Thursday in the second phase of the staggered election. The rest of India, except for the rebellion-plagued state of Jammu-Kashmir, votes Tuesday, and counting begins the next day.

Although previous surveys in Indian elections have had a mixed record of reliability, pre-election polls from at least four organizations agreed that no party will win a majority and that India will face a period of coalition politics.

The centrist Congress Party has governed India for all but four years since India gained independence in 1947.

The BJP, led by Atal Behari Vajpayee, emerged from the Hindu right wing 17 years ago. Its platform is Hindu cultural nationalism and an aggressive defense policy toward neighboring Pakistan, including the threat of developing a nuclear arsenal.

The poll predicted that the BJP would win 192 parliament seats, that Congress would take 142 seats, and that a left-wing alliance called the Left Front National Front would win 139 seats. The rest would go to small parties and independents.

A government needs the support of 273 legislators to command a majority.

Like the other polls, the latest survey showed the BJP gaining ground from earlier opinion polls. Most of its strength is concentrated in the heavily populated but underdeveloped states of the north.

Congress, campaigning on a plank of "stability" and the need to complete its economic liberalization program, has been troubled by internal strife, defections and scandal.

The surveys show that Prime Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao remains the most popular candidate to lead the country, but a movement reportedly is gaining ground within the Congress Party to oust the 74-year-old leader if it loses the election.

If the BJP emerges as the largest party, it still may have trouble finding coalition partners for a government. The BJP is perceived as a party of the elite upper castes, which is anathema to low-caste Hindus and Muslims.

That would give Congress a chance to draw allies from left parties anxious to block the BJP from power.

But Congress defectors and the leftists have said they would join a Congress government only if Rao steps down.

BJP leaders have said they expect Congress' defeat would split that party and open the way for it to form a government with some regional groups.

Chickenpox is common, vaccine now available

By KELLIE JONES
Features Editor

Chickenpox (varicella) is a common childhood disease and a vaccine was approved to protect people from it last year.

According to a Texas Department of Health publication, clinical trials were conducted in 11,102 children, teens and adults. The vaccine prevented 70 to 90 percent of chickenpox cases and those who did get the disease, had a much milder case. On occasion, a fever and slight rash may result seven to 10 days after the shot is given.

The shot costs about $70 at a doctor's office and the TDH hasn't received any of the vaccine yet. The reason being it is expensive to ship and the vaccine must be kept separate from other vaccines in its own freezer.

Health officials said they could receive it by this summer or it may be next year before it is available to them.

Health officials also say in the case of adults who haven't had chickenpox or aren't sure if they did as children most likely have an immunity to the disease. However, the vaccine can be given to healthy adults after exposure to varicella. The disease can be more severe for the person who gets chickenpox after the age of 13 such as hospitalization, more scarring and even sterility in men. Some people have even been close to death after they contracting the disease as an adult.

Acyclovir is now available and recommended by health officials to be given to those over the age of 13 to treat chickenpox once exposed.

Others who should receive the vaccine include:

- Those who have been exposed to the chickenpox such as someone else in the household having it, shared a hospital room with someone, face-to-face contact with an infected person or played indoors with children who are contagious for chickenpox. Exposed older adolescents and adults who, while likely to be immune, should also receive the vaccine.

- Varicella-susceptible pregnant women might be at a higher risk for serious complications than adults in general, according to a health department brochure. "A major concern is the risk to the fetus of the congenital varicella syndrome when a woman develops varicella-zoster infection, especially during the first half of pregnancy; but whether the fetus will be protected against the development of malformations if the vaccine is given to a pregnant, susceptible woman after exposure is unknown. The vaccine could result in asymptomatic maternal infection, but not protect the fetus. Administration of the vaccine to newborn infants is recommended," states the brochure.

The vaccine should be given as soon as possible after delivery to the infant whose mothers have had onset of chickenpox from five days before to two days after delivery. For healthy, full-term babies exposed after birth to chickenpox, including their mother who had a rash develop more than 48 hours after delivery, do not need a vaccine. Infants who develop chickenpox under these conditions are probably not in any greater risk for complications of chickenpox than older children, according to the brochure.

It is not recommended for anyone with chickenpox to be given aspirin because of the possibility of the person developing Reye's Syndrome, which can be fatal.

Always contact your pediatrician or physician for information concerning who should receive the vaccine and how to treat the chickenpox once someone is exposed to it.

How to tell if canned goods are safe to eat

Occasionally I receive a call concerning the safety of commercially canned food and I find that consumers generally think of food safety as it relates to perishable foods such as meats and poultry, but precautions should be taken with all food even if it is in a can.

Some of the things people want to know about commercially canned food:

- Where should I store canned goods? Store canned goods in an area that is dry, dark and moderately cool. Avoid storage near heat sources such as steam pipes, radiators, furnaces and kitchen ranges.

- How long can I store canned foods? For best quality, a year is suggested. However, the type of food canned, the processing, how it has been handled and stored are all factors to consider. If the can itself is normal in appearance, the food inside should still be wholesome.

- What effect does freezing have on canned foods? While a single freezing and thawing may not affect the safety of canned foods, there may be some texture changes. During freezing the contents of a can expand, put a strain on can seams, and cause the ends to bulge. Check previously frozen containers carefully after thawing to be sure the ends return to their normal flat appearance. If they do not, air may have entered the can and it should be discarded.

- Are metal fragments in canned foods harmful? Investigations by government agencies and industry scientists have shown metal slivers which get into food cans when they are opened by can openers are not injurious to health. However, metal fragments are not desirable, and every effort should be made to keep them out of foods. The best prevention strategy is to keep can openers sharp, clean and in good working order.

- What does discoloration in the food or in the liner of the can mean? The Food Additive Amendment of the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act prohibits the use of food containers which would transfer a poisonous or harmful substance to the food in the can. However, sometimes discoloration occurs on the inside of the can due to the release of sulfur by certain foods during processing, which causes an unsightly brown, blue or black mottling. The stains are not harmful to the contents. An etched effect sometimes appears on the inside of cans, especially those with fruit juices. This does not indicate that contents have been harmed.

Always remember, if you do not feel that the food is safe, DO NOT EAT IT, it is always better to be safe than sorry. Also, remember that if you are home canning foods, there are some specific guidelines you need to follow to assure that the food does not become contaminated. For information concerning home canning foods, contact the Howard County Extension office at 264-2236 or stop by the office located at the Howard County Courthouse.

Precook chicken in microwave before grilling

Scripps Howard News Service

Pre-zapping grilled foods makes sense — recock chicken in the microwave before grilling and you accomplish two things:

The chicken will be ready to eat in about half the time, and you can be reasonably sure that it will be cooked inside when it's browned (or burned) on the outside.

If you've ever had a grilled chicken leg that looked luscious and well-done, but it oozed blood when you cut into it, you know how important this can be.

Before grilling, zap the chicken pieces on high (100 percent) 4 to 5 minutes a pound, or until the chicken starts to cook on the outside. Transfer immediately to the hot grill to finish the cooking. The chicken skin will be a little more delicate after zapping, so be sure to oil the grill or spray with nonstick cooking spray before preheating.

While the chicken is on the grill, baste with a barbecue sauce such as Smoky Texas Sauce.

Other tips:

• The longer the microwaving time, the shorter the grilling time.

• If the grilling time will be very short, you might want to brush some barbecue sauce onto the chicken while it's in the microwave.

• Arrange chicken pieces in microwave with thicker parts to the outside, and thin or bony parts toward center. Cover for faster zapping.

"Zap before grilling" also works with vegetables and ribs. Don't try it for hamburgers or steak, which cook quickly on the grill.

Two good salads featuring some spring vegetables

Scripps Howard News Service

Potato salad with spring vegetables — radish slices, asparagus tips and tiny frozen peas — has color and crunch. It goes beautifully with a grilled salmon steak, a lamb chop or ham dinner.

The salad takes only minutes to prepare, if you have a roomy cutting board handy and a sharp knife. Red-skinned new potatoes are best for potato salad, due to their slick, waxy texture, which means a big time saving because new potatoes shouldn't be peeled.

The other vegetables should be barely cooked, just enough to slightly tenderize them and brighten their green color.

Do not cook the radish slices or the red color on the rims will bleed pink into the slices. Serve the potato salad warm or cover and refrigerate until cold, about one hour.

POTATO SALAD WITH RADISHES

12 ounces new potatoes, cut into 1/2-inch pieces (about 3-1/2 cups)

8 ounces asparagus, trimmed and cut in 1-inch pieces

1/3 to 1/2 cup thawed frozen green peas

1 tablespoon rice-wine vinegar or white-wine vinegar

3/4 cup sliced radishes

1/2 cup Creamy Tarragon Dressing (see recipe)

In a large saucepan, place potatoes with enough salted water to cover. Bring to a boil; boil until potatoes are nearly tender, about 2 minutes.

Trim the asparagus; use just the tips or uppermost parts of the stem; peel stems with a potato-peeler gadget to shorten cooking time. Add asparagus and peas to the boiling potatoes; cook until asparagus tips are barely tender, about 2 minutes. (If using young frozen peas, the deluxe type, add them after the asparagus, for less than a minute of cooking time.)

Transfer vegetables to a colander; drain. Place in a large bowl; add vinegar and toss to coat. Add radishes and dressing; stir to coat. Serve warm or cover and refrigerate until cold, about one hour.

CREAMY TARRAGON DRESSING

1/4 cup reduced-calorie mayonnaise

1/4 cup plain low-fat yogurt

1/4 teaspoon dried tarragon leaves, crushed

1/2 teaspoon salt, or to taste

Grindings of black pepper

In a small bowl, combine all ingredients.

SPRING MUSHROOM SALAD

1 (10-ounce) package frozen baby peas, slightly thawed

12 ounces fresh white mushrooms, sliced (about 4 cups)

1/2 cup sliced radishes

1/2 cup creamy Caesar dressing (from a 12-ounce jar)

2 tablespoons minced fresh chives or sliced green onions

2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

1/4 teaspoon salt

In a medium saucepan, bring an inch of water to boiling. Add peas and simmer, uncovered, until tender, just a minute. (If using regular frozen peas, cook them longer, but not until skins are wrinkled.)

Transfer peas to a colander and drain, rinsing with cold water to stop cooking. Place in a large bowl.

Be sure mushrooms are swished through a sinkful of cold water, or wipe with a paper towel beneath running tap water to clean them thoroughly. Slice medium-thick and add to the peas along with radishes, dressing, chives, Parmesan and salt. Stir gently to coat.

To serve, spoon salad over four to six lettuce-lined plates, dividing evenly. Garnish with hard-cooked egg wedges and chives, if desired.

America loves shrimp, and soon "Forrest Gump" fans will be able to dine at the Bubba Gump Shrimp Co. Restaurant & Market in Monterey, Calif.

It will be the first of several Bubba Gumps planned by a nationwide chain of 14 restaurants — Rusty Pelican — and Paramount Pictures.

If it weren't for canned tuna, shrimp would reign as America's most popular seafood statistically. In other words, shrimp may be No. 1 in our hearts, but canned tuna is kinder to our budgets, so it's consumed in greater quantity.

According to the National Fisheries Institute, here's America's seafood top 10: tuna, shrimp, Alaskan pollock, salmon, cod, catfish, clams, flatfish (flounder and sole, primarily), crabs, scallops.

Species that are gaining in popularity include tilapia, sea bass, squid, hake and hoki.

Pineapples — the symbol of hospitality — have been carved into bedposts, lintels and newel posts, especially in the 18th century. But they're not the only fruit to have an architectural presence.

Heart-shaped strawberries symbolized perfection and righteousness during the medieval period. European stonemasons carved strawberry designs on altars and around the capitals of pillars in churches and cathedrals. During the same period, strawberries were served at important state occasions and festivals to ensure peace and prosperity.

Steers blank Lake View; playoff bound

By STEVE REAGAN
Sports Editor

SAN ANGELO - Forget about the white lines on the field - Tuesday's Big Spring-Lake View game was played between the ears.

Facing a Lake View team that had barely missed out on the playoffs for four consecutive years, Big Spring coach Bobby Doe decided a mega-dose of pressure was in order. Push the Chiefs, he apparently thought, and maybe they'll crack.

They did. An obviously uptight group of San Angelo Lake View Chiefs committed six errors, which was more than enough for Zac Leslie and his Big Spring teammates to take advantage of as they rolled to a 7-0 win Tuesday at Chiefs Field.

The victory wrapped up the Steers' sixth straight trip to the playoffs, and fifth straight under Doe. Big Spring (14-11 overall) finished second in District 4-4A and will face District 3-4A El Paso High (20-6) at 6 p.m. May 9 at Kokernot Field in Alpine.

Doe said he noticed Lake

View's players appeared uptight in pregame warmups. With that in mind, he gave his team a simple directive: Put the ball in play. Force Lake View to make the plays.

The Chiefs couldn't. Big Spring's first five runs were unearned, gifts of sorts from Lake View. Two wild Lake View throws in the second allowed Big Spring to crack the scoreboard, then three more miscues in the third led to three additional Big Spring runs.

Bulldogs batter Winters; remain in three-way tie for district lead

By RODERICK RICHARDSON
Herald Sportswriter

COAHOMA - It's good to have batting practice before a big game. It's even better when you can have it during a game.

Coahoma broke out the bats Tuesday in beating Winters 12-2. The officials threw in the towel and called the game the bottom of the sixth inning because of the 10-run rule.

The Bulldogs needed a momentum boost for Friday's game against Jim Ned. The Bulldogs began the day in a three-way tie for first with Jim Ned and Wall.

Coach Trey Morgan believes the team got everything it needed in this game - especially on offense.

"I was pleased with the effort," said Morgan. "We got on track and started hitting early. We just kept pounding them. It was a great day to play."

Winters jumped to a 2-0 lead in the top of the third inning. In the bottom of the third, pitcher Mike McMillan hit an RBI double to bring in Jay McHugh. Brian Ruiz followed with a single to score Marshall Wright to tie the game.

Coahoma never looked backed after that. The Bulldogs took the lead with three runs in the fourth and one run in the fifth. The Bulldogs went for the kill in the sixth with six runs.

Defensively, the Bulldogs were solid. They had double plays in both the first and second inning. McMillan pitched a no hitter in the final three innings.

Overall, Morgan says Coahoma had the total package Tuesday.

"It was a superb effort on everybody's part," said Morgan. "We had some outstanding plays defensively, and made several good catches. It was a good day all around."

"A lot of the credit goes to (assistant coach) Robby Dickenson. He did a super job working with me in everything - especially today."

McMillan was the winning pitcher. He pitched the entire game and allowed one earned run and three hits while striking out five and walking five. He is 4-2 for the season.

Ruiz was 4-4 hitting with one RBI. McMillan was 3-5 with two doubles and two RBIs.

Wright was 3-4 with two RBIs and two stolen bases, and Freddy Olivias was 3-4 with two RBIs and a double.

Coahoma's final two games are against the other contenders for the district championship. The Bulldogs will have the home field advantage with the Jim Ned game, and Morgan will send Ruiz to the pitcher's mound.

Ruiz is currently undefeated with a 7-0 record, and Morgan hopes his streak continues.

"Ruiz has been pitching good all year," said Morgan. "We are counting on him to do a big job Friday."

"One thing that is going to help us is that we're playing here, and I think this win will help us, too."

Bosio, Mariners blank Rangers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chris Bosio (3-1) allowed four hits in six innings as the Seattle Mariners blanked Texas 8-0 Tuesday night.

Paul Sorrento homered, giving Seattle a major-league record 44 in April.

Kevin Gross (3-3) was tagged for five runs and nine hits in 3 2-3 innings.

Orioles 13, Yankees 10
The Baltimore Orioles and New York Yankees seemed to be playing in slow motion.

"If you're going to stay out there that long, you might as well win," Yankees reliever Scott Kamieniecki said Tuesday night after the Yankees won 13-10 in 4 hours, 21 minutes, the longest nine-inning game in major league history.

The previous record of 4:18 was set by the Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco

AL

Giants on Oct. 2, 1962.

"It felt like two days and 17 hours," Orioles first baseman Rafael Palmeiro said. "It was particularly tough because it was so cold."

Indians 5, White Sox 3
Jim Thome homered and drove in three runs as Cleveland stopped Chicago's seven-game winning streak. The Indians have won eight straight at Jacobs Field, 14 of 17 overall.

Dennis Martinez (4-2) allowed three runs and three hits in seven innings, and Jose Mesa finished the four-hitter, getting three outs for his ninth save in nine tries.

Julio Franco drove in the go-ahead run with a sixth-inning single that ricocheted off Brian Keyser. Kevin Tapani (2-1) gave up four runs, nine hits and four walks in 5 1-3 innings.

Twins 16, Royals 7

Marty Cordova's bases-loaded triple highlighted a 10-run fifth inning at the Metrodome, and Minnesota finished April with a winning record (13-12) for the first time since 1987.

Minnesota had 16 hits, raising its league-leading average to .301. The Twins had just five hits in the fifth, taking advantage of five walks by Julio Valera and Mike Magnante (0-1).

Cordova matched his career high with four RBIs. Denny Hocking drove in a career-high three runs, and Chuck Knoblauch was 3-for-4 with three RBIs and three runs scored.

Red Sox 13, Tigers 4

Reggie Jefferson hit two home runs and Mo Vaughn also homered, sending visiting Detroit to its 11th loss in 12 games.

Streaking Atlanta continues winning ways

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Chipper Jones broke a tie with a ninth-inning single and Fred McGriff homered on the next pitch as Atlanta won for the sixth time in seven games.

John Smoltz (5-1) allowed five hits in eight innings and struck out 10, increasing his league-leading total to 51. Smoltz has held batters to a .171 average, best among NL pitchers.

Todd Jones (3-1) took the loss. McGriff went 5-for-5, matching his career best and hit his sixth homer.

Ryan Klesko hit a franchise record 10th home run for the month of April for the Braves. Pirates 10, Reds 7

Giants 9, Padres 4
April's shower of power ended with Jeff King and Barry Bonds adding their names to some exclusive home-run lists.

King hit a solo homer and grand slam in a nine-run fourth inning Tuesday night in the Pittsburgh Pirates' 10-7 win over the Reds in Cincinnati.

It was the second two-homer inning of his career, and it allowed King to join Willie McCovey and Andre Dawson as the only players to accomplish the feat.

Meanwhile, Bonds tied the major-league record of 11 homers in April by hitting two - a two-run shot and a grand slam - as the San Francisco Giants rallied to beat the San Diego Padres 9-4. Elsewhere in the National League, it was Florida 7, Philadelphia 2; Atlanta 7, Houston 5; Chicago 7, St. Louis 6; Los Angeles 7, Colorado 4; and Montreal at New York was postponed by rain.

Marlins 7, Phillies 2

At Miami, the Marlins gave

Pat Rapp some unusual offensive punch.

Greg Colbrunn hit a three-run homer for the Marlins, who rank last in the majors in runs scored and batting average. Charles Johnson also homered and drove in three runs, doubling his RBI total this season.

The game was played before 15,252, the smallest ever for a Marlins home game.

Rapp (1-3) allowed seven hits before leaving after losing his shutout in the ninth when Jim Eisenreich hit a one-out RBI double.

Kevin Jordan had two hits for the Phillies.

Cubs 7, Cardinals 6

At Chicago, pinch-hitter Robin Jennings doubled home the winning run with two outs in the ninth inning as the Cardinals lost their fifth straight.

Magic close out Detroit; Houston downs Lakers

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Orlando Magic became the first team to reach the second round of the NBA playoffs. Houston and Seattle need one more victory to join them.

Penny Hardaway took over in the third quarter after Shaquille O'Neal went to the bench with four fouls, leading Orlando to a 101-98 victory over Detroit and a three-game sweep of their opening-round playoff series.

"I knew with Shaq out, this team was going to look to me, and I had to step up or we were going to go home with an L," said Hardaway, who scored 15 of his 24 points in the third quarter. "I knew I had to put it all on the line."

Hakeem Olajuwon, who fouled out of Houston's loss in Game 2 with 10 minutes left, stayed out of foul trouble and scored 30 points as the Rockets defeated the Los Angeles Lakers 104-98 for a 2-1 lead in their best-of-5 series.

"Our defense made some big steals," said Olajuwon, who committed only two fouls. "We pressured the ball. In the playoffs, defense is the key."

Hersey Hawkins' 3-pointer capped a late 9-0 run that sparked Seattle to a 96-89 comeback win over Sacramento. The Sonics, stunned by the Kings in Game 2, rebounded to grab a 2-1 edge in the series.

"It's not over," Seattle coach George Karl warned. "Sacramento has really made this a great series."

Tonight, it's Cleveland at New York, Chicago at Miami, Utah at Portland, and San Antonio at Phoenix. New York, Chicago and San Antonio lead their series 2-0, while Utah leads Portland 2-1.

Rockets 104, Lakers 98

At Houston, Olajuwon scored six points during a late 13-0 run by the Rockets, who held the Lakers scoreless for 6 minutes and 20 seconds during the decisive spurt. Sedale Threatt scored 10 straight points for the Lakers, helping them take an 89-86 lead with 8:22 left. But then the Lakers went cold and the Rockets got hot. Houston's Robert Horry sank a 3-pointer to it with 8:06 remaining, starting the 13-0 run. The Lakers didn't score again until Anthony Peeler hit a 3-pointer with 2:02 remaining.

Elden Campbell led the Lakers with 18 points. Magic Johnson had 13 assists, but scored only seven points.

ball in the play and take advantage of their nervousness," Doe said. "I think Zac knows he can beat them, but they're not sure they can beat him."
"There was a lot of pressure on them, but there wasn't any pressure on us," shortstop David Franco said. "We just came out here wanting to win the game. When Zac pitches, it seems like we've got our best defense out there backing him up."

Ah, Leslie.
The senior righthander was simply too much for the Chiefs. Although he claimed he didn't have his best stuff Tuesday, he finished high school a perfect four-for-four against Lake View.

He was a model of efficiency doing it, too, limiting Lake View to only three hits while striking out five and walking none. And he did all that in 70 pitches.

"Zac," left fielder Mark Miller said, "was awesome."

"He did a good job out there today," right fielder Ben Inman said. "He came in and did what he had to do. We played great defense today, but with Zac out there, we didn't have to."

Leslie argued that his arsenal wasn't that impressive.
"As far as the stuff I had, it wasn't my best game," Leslie said. "We got some lucky breaks out there today."

Another factor that had Doe smiling was the team's offense. The Steers cranked out 11 hits, which may be the most they've hit in district play.

"It's the best game offensively that we've played this year," Doe said.

"We were just ready to play," first baseman T.J. Rios said. "We came out here ... and Coach Doe told us it was do or die. We hadn't swung the bats in a while, but coach just told us to put the ball in play, and they'd make errors, and that's what happened today."

The Bulldoggettes (19-10) are making their first appearance in a regional semifinal. They qualified for the game with a 5-3 victory over defending state champion Hawley.

A RECEPTION for Philip Ringener will be held from 7-9 p.m. Thursday at Bowl-A-Rama. Ringener, of Big Spring, recently notched his first ever Professional Bowlers Association tour victory.

The public is invited to attend.

The Wildcats defeated the Lubbock Timberwolves 74-33 to win the title with Herm scoring 11 points.

HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY FOR THURSDAY, MAY 2:
You have much to say and do this year. It is important that you think before lunging forward. A solid, thoughtful sense of purpose serves you. Learn to manage your strong feelings; don't let them turn against you in a self-destructive manner. Investigating situations proves to be your strong point. If you are single, many unexpected demands enter your life, so stay focused on work. However, you could meet someone quite exotic. If attached, share what is going on inside you and at work on a regular basis with your partner. SCORPIO challenges you.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
Your ruler, Mars, changes signs today, bringing up a new set of issues. You are increasingly possessive and focused on the material side of life. Unexpected actions by an authority figure send you into a tizzy. Be cool, stop and think. Tonight: Hear the other side.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
You feel invigorated by what happens. Be careful with your newfound vitality; you might come off as sharp or sarcastic. Be direct yet diplomatic with partners. Bosses and friends are unpredictable now. Tonight: Make plans for dinner out.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Stay in work mode, and don't let your imagination wander. You are uncomfortable with what you are feeling. Do not swallow hurt or anger. Resolve to express it at the appropriate time. A change in plans has you shaking your head. Tonight: Soak away stress.
