Midland's United Way campaign kicked off

Jim Hall signed autographs and gave a talk on teamwork during Sunday's kickoff for the United Way drive held in Midland Center. Hall displayed his Chaparral car which ran in the Indianapolis 500. Local school students who participated in the United Way's "Name the Little Man Contest" were honored.

It was announced that 23.3 percent of the $1.15 million goal has been pledged, amounting to $268,272. Last year at this time, $239,039, or 22.8 percent of the goal, had been raised.

So far, only the pilot program involving 13 businesses has been active in the drive with 10 already completing their activities. Participating are the city of Midland employees, Compressor Systems, Drilco Industrial, The Orloff Corporation, Lynch, Chappell, Allday & Alsop — attorneys, Moran Exploration, Permian Corporation, Midland College, Midland Reporter-Telegram, Texas Electric, Texas Instruments and Tom Brown, Inc.

Increases in some organizations were as much as 52 percent over last year's amount raised.

Democrats assail Clements

He's 'arrogant, insensitive, a know-it-all'

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Republican Gov. Bill Clements is a marked man with Texas Democrats.

"He is arrogant, insensitive and a know-it-all," outgoing State Democratic Chairman Billy Goldberg said of Texas' only Republican governor this century. "In 1982 we are going to slide him out of office on his own oil slick."

"Texas cannot have a government for and by the people if it is led by Bill Clements," the Houston Democrat told the closing session of the party's second state convention Saturday.

The new state chairman, Sherman attorney Bob Slagle, elected after a hot race with Rep. Luther Jones of El Paso, agreed.

"Now let us move forward, healing all past divisions, and keep this one thing in mind — beat the Republicans," said the victorious Slagle.

While much of the convention talk was aimed at the 1982 gubernatorial race, party leaders said they did not want to forget a more immediate goal: beating Ronald Reagan.

"Our top priority is Nov. 4, the presidential race," Goldberg said.

Those delegates who stayed for the entire two days of slow proceedings elected Slagle over Jones Saturday 2,194 to 1,487. Both are considered political moderates.

Travis County Commissioner David

Samuelson, who claimed he represented moderate-conservatives, got only 57 votes.

Incumbent Deralyn Davis of Fort Worth defeated Margaret Gomez of Austin, a challenger put up by the Mexican-American Democrats organization, 2,183 to 1,420 for the vice chairman's seat.

Pic Rivers of Houston, president of the Texas Federated Democratic Women's Club, got 127 votes.

Mrs. Davis' new 2-year term will make a total of 10 years that blacks have held that post, which carries an automatic seat on the Democratic National Committee.

In the final minutes of the convention, when a large portion of the 3,900 delegates had departed, gay rights activists were successful in passing a resolution asking the Legislature to repeal the state's sodomy law. A similar resolution failed by a narrow margin in the June state convention.

Richard Perkins of Dallas was re-elected party secretary and Jack Martin of Austin was unopposed as treasurer, succeeding Daniel Anchondo of El Paso.

There was a turnover of about two-thirds in the newly named 64-member State Democratic Executive Committee.

Slagle had been backed by former state chairman Calvin Guest, a close friend of National Democratic Chairman John White, and endorsed by the Texas AFL-CIO board. Jones was supported by former Attorney General John Hill.

Hill and White are expected to be among Democratic candidates in 1982 wanting to challenge Clements.

Demos may be in trouble in House, poll suggests

NEW YORK (AP) — The Democratic Party's overwhelming margin in the U.S. House of Representatives faces a major threat at the ballot box on Nov. 4.

The latest Associated Press-NBC News poll says likely voters report they would roughly split their votes between the Democratic congressional candidates and the GOP contenders if the congressional elections were held today.

Such a split would be a poor showing for the Democrats, and could mean the loss of dozens of seats. Democrats now hold a 274-159 edge over Republicans in the House, with two vacancies.

The AP-NBC News poll, taken Sept. 22-24, says 42 percent of the likely voters reported they would now vote for the Democratic congressional candidates, while 39 percent said they would vote for the Republican candidate. Two percent said they would vote for someone else and 17 percent of the 1,512 likely voters interviewed by telephone nationwide were not sure.

Compared to past polls and election results, this survey is an ominous sign for Democratic incumbents.

It contrasts with the 47-33 margin in favor of the Democrats found in the final AP-NBC News poll taken before the 1978 congressional elections, with 20 percent undecided.

The 1978 election results differed somewhat from that survey, principally because one does not vote for "undecided" in an election. Voters gave Democratic candidates a 53-45 margin over their GOP opponents.

In 1976, the House vote broke 56-42 for the Democrats and the party maintained its rough 2-to-1 edge over the GOP.

The new AP-NBC News poll found Democrats leading by a 45-39 margin in the South — a pale showing compared to the 62-36 margin they enjoyed in Jimmy Carter's home region in the 1976 congressional vote totals. In the West, Ronald Reagan's home area, the GOP is now slightly ahead of the majority party, 43 percent to 37 percent. In 1976, Democrats took 55 percent of the vote in the West to 43 percent for the Republicans.

In the Northeast, the poll said the congressional vote broke 44-32 for the Democrats. In the Midwest, the split was 42-40 in favor of the Republicans.

Of course, more than five weeks remain before the voting Nov. 4 and much can change. In particular, the course of the presidential campaign could swing voter decisions on U.S. House races.

As with all sample surveys, the results of the AP-NBC News poll can vary from the opinions of all Americans or all likely voters because of chance variations in the sample.

Reagan still leading Carter in electoral votes, poll says

NEW YORK (AP) — President Carter seems to be holding on to his native South, but Republican presidential nominee Ronald Reagan is ahead in the West and is leading the president in 23 states that have a total of 191 electoral votes, says an NBC News Election Unit poll.

Carter is favored in 14 states and the District of Columbia, which have a total of 134 electoral votes, said the poll, released Sunday. A total of 270 electoral votes is needed to win the November election.

Meanwhile, several other polls released over the weekend differed in their assessments of who benefited from the first presidential debate, on Sept. 21, between Reagan and independent candidate Rep. John Anderson. A New York Times-CBS News poll said Reagan was the only "significant beneficiary" of the debate. The poll of 1,627 people said the debate did not appear to help Anderson.

A survey conducted by the Gallup Organization for Newsweek magazine said neither candidate benefited from the debate. Of 1,045 people polled in a telephone interview, Newsweek found the president trailing Reagan by 39 percent to 35 percent. Anderson was favored by 14 percent of those surveyed.

The Newsweek poll also suggested that Carter's decision not to participate in the first debate did not cost him any support.

Iraq says it will heed cease fire

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq said today it would agree to a U.N. Security Council call for a cease-fire if Iran also would heed it. There was no immediate response from Iran and both countries meanwhile pressed their war efforts.

Iraq reported fresh territorial gains in southwestern Iran. Iran claimed a sweeping naval victory while seeking a role by the non-aligned bloc to bring about an end to the war.

Iraq's ambassador to the United Nations, Salah Omar Al-Ali, disclosed a message from Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and said Iran would also have to agree to a cease-fire. A U.N. spokesman said the message was being translated into English from the Arabic.

The Security Council approved unanimously Sunday a resolution calling on Iran and Iraq to stop their fighting.

In response to an earlier Iraqi proposal for a cease-fire on its own terms, Iran offered counter-proposals and sought the help of India, a leader of the non-aligned nations, to help end the fighting, which entered its eighth day.

A "goodwill" mission from the Islamic Conference, headed by Pakistani President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq and Habib el Chatti of Tunisia, secretary general of the Islamic organization, arrived in Baghdad. In Tehran, Iranian President Abolhasan Bani-Sadr had told them: "We will continue to fight until the last aggressor is driven from our territory."

Neither side heeded a resolution adopted unanimously Sunday by the U.N. Security Council calling for a cease-fire.

Tehran radio quoted the commander of the Iranian navy as saying his ships had forced the Iraqi navy to seek shelter in ports of other Persian Gulf nations. He was quoted as saying Iran's navy was in complete control of the Strait of Hormuz, the gulf's outlet, and that foreign commercial ships could proceed normally as long as they do not head for Iraqi ports.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein

said in a broadcast on Sunday that Iraq would stop fighting if Iran recognized Iraqi sovereignty over all of the Shatt al-Arab estuary at the head of the gulf, returned to Arab control the three small islands at the mouth of the gulf seized by Iran in 1971 and called off the propaganda campaign by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and his supporters to incite a Moslem uprising against the Iraqi government. Iran rejected similar demands last week.

Hussein said he was ready to negotiate directly with Iran or through any third party or international organization to reach a "just and honorable" settlement that would recognize Iraq's "legitimate and historic rights."

Iran's ambassador in Moscow, Mohammad Mokri, told a news conference his government might agree to a cease-fire if Hussein resigned, Iraq's army surrendered, the city of Basra were turned over to Iranian control pending an election there, and Iraq's Kurds were allowed to vote in a referendum on whether they wanted autonomy or to join with Iran.

The Iranian ambassador to Kuwait, Shams Ali, on a mission to New Delhi on behalf of Bani-Sadr, told reporters he would urge Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to play an active role in ending the war.

On the battle front, an Iranian military communique, reported by the official news agency Pars, spoke of a sea-borne raid by the Iranian coast guard on Iraqi oil storage tanks and military targets at Faw, Bishah and Qesleh. Faw is a major Iraqi deep-sea oil terminal at the head of the gulf by the entrance to the Shatt al-Arab. The other two places mentioned are nearby.

A later Iranian communique reported Iranian forces attacked the invading Iraqi troops in Sar-e-Pol-e-Zahab, forcing them to retreat and capturing "a great number of undamaged tanks." The town is near the main border crossing point of Qasr-e-Shirin in the farthest northern sector of the battle front.

Chance for more rain exists through tonight

With the Tall City's annual average rainfall total already surpassed, rain just keeps falling in Midland. And, according to the weatherman, the chance for more rainfall exists at least through tonight.

After the past week most Midlanders probably would agree that if there is a chance for rain here, it WILL rain.

The forecast, issued early today by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, is calling for cloudy skies with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms tonight. Skies should clear to partly cloudy Tuesday and afterwards should be warmer.

Low tonight should be in the upper 50s with the high Tuesday near 80. Winds will be light and variable tonight, but will become southerly at 5-10 mph on Tuesday.

When contacted early today, the weather service noted that 1.04 inches of rain had been recorded during the past 24 hours. That boosted Midland's total for September to a soggy 9.69 inches. The total for 1980 now stands at 15.7 inches. The average annual rainfall total for Midland is 13.51 inches.

Temperatures in Midland have been cool since the cold front plummeted into the state early last week, bringing the rain with it. Sunday's high temperature reached only 59 degrees. Low temperature this morning was 58 degrees.

In fact, the last time the temperature in Midland got out of the 50s was Friday afternoon when a high of 67 degrees was recorded by the weather service.

Record high for Sunday's date is 100 degrees, set in 1977. Record low for today is 41, set in 1945.

Rain continues to dampen other Permian Basin communities, too. Rankin unofficially received 4.5 inches during the 24-hour period that ended about 8 a.m. today. Big Spring received 5 inches over the weekend.

Garden City recorded .6 inches and Crane got an unofficial 2 inches of rain. Odessa was receiving light rain and FM 1936 reportedly was closed because of high water, accumulated over the past several days.

Big Lake was reporting misting rain and Andrews reported foggy conditions this morning. Lamesa also reported fog.

Medical residency program expected to be announced

A series of meetings today are expected to culminate in announcement of an agreement between Texas Tech School of Medicine, Midland Memorial Hospital and Midland County Medical Society to establish a medical residency program here.

The program, which eventually could involve from nine to 12 residents in training at Midland Memorial Hospital, would be available for physicians, who already have their medical degree and plan to enter the specialty field of family practice, The Reporter-Telegram has learned.

It is anticipated that, following meetings today between Texas Tech officials and the local Medical Society, an announcement will be made at a special dinner tonight in the Petroleum Club.

Among those attending will be Dr. Lauro Cavazos, president of Texas Tech University and president of Tech School of Medicine.

Moore estimated his cut at least $3 million

HOUSTON (AP) — Labor official L.G. Moore, in a taped conversation with an FBI undercover agent, estimated his cut from state insurance contract deal would be worth at least $3 million.

In the tape played before a federal court jury today, Moore told agent Michael Wachs "I'll take $20 million of that and give $1 million to Wood and Ray."

The labor leader was referring to Austin attorneys Donald Ray and Randall Wood, defendants along with Texas House Speaker Billy Clayton in the Texas Brilab trial. Moore is also a defendant but will be tried later.

The four were indicted by a federal grand jury June 12 on charges of extortion, conspiracy, bribery and racketeering.

Wachs was posing as a representative of Prudential Insurance Co., as was his associate, Joseph Hauser, an FBI informant and key witness in this trial.

The prosecution played several wired-tapped telephone conversations between Moore and Wachs. The government has presented two weeks of testimony focused on secret tape recordings played for the seven-woman, five-man jury.

Defense attorneys have not objected to the wiretap recordings, but indicated they would try to keep off the record tapes made from the telephone of Moore last January and February.

Hauser ended his testimony last week and the defense surprisingly declined to ask him any questions.

Hauser had secretly taped scores of conversations with the defendants, including a Nov. 8, 1979, meeting with Clayton.

The government claims that at this meeting, Clayton accepted a $5,000 bribe to use his influence in reopening bidding on the rich state insurance contract.

"What we want is more democracy in our universities," said Jacek Czaputowicz, an independent student leader at Warsaw University. "And we want pluralism in the student movement."

That means breaking the hold that the Socialist Union of Polish Students maintains on student life, he added.

Since 1973, the Socialist Union has been the only recognized campus organization following its merger with two other student groups. By sponsoring education, cultural travel and other programs, the Socialist Union — and through it, the Communist Party — sets the tone for student life.

Activists in the organization often wind up in the Communist Party in later life.

In a statement released last week, the student organizing committee at Gdansk University charged that the "centralized structure of the Socialist Union paralyzed the student movement."

Bani-Sadr says hostages could suffer

NEW YORK (AP) — The plight of the 52 American hostages in Iran has not changed since the outbreak of hostilities between Iran and Iraq but could worsen "if the international situation gets worse," says Iranian President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

"We have heard that the Americans are sending military aid to the Iraqis. If so, the hostage situation will certainly get worse," Bani-Sadr was quoted as saying in the current issue of Newsweek magazine.

The Americans were taken hostage Nov. 4 when militant students, demanding the return of the ousted shah, seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. The shah, who was hospitalized in New York at the time, has since died in exile.

In a telephone interview from Paris, Bani-Sadr said Iraq is fighting Iran because "both the Iraqis and the Americans have as their common goal the overthrow of the revolutionary regime in Iran."

"They want to replace us with American puppets," Bani-Sadr said. "They (the United States) were never neutral. They were involved in the planning of this war."

He said the war was "like Achilles' spear: it cures the wound that it causes. It's helping us make the people understand that they have to put up with the difficulties of revolution."

"So in that regard, the war is very useful for us," he said. "But I must admit that there is one chance in a thousand that our revolution could collapse."

Government to coordinate quake plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Facing the possibility of a major earthquake striking California, the federal government today announced an effort to coordinate federal and state disaster preparedness planning.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency announced that it would lead a team of federal agencies working with state and local groups to improve readiness to cope with potential major quakes.

The U.S. Geological Survey has reported that faults in the state pose a significant threat to San Francisco, Oakland, San Diego and the Los Angeles area from San Bernardino to Santa Monica.

Normally experts consider the possibility of a quake along the San Andreas fault to be about 1 percent to 2 percent, but survey officials say recent observations lead them to believe that chance has increased to between 2 percent and 5 percent.

If a major quake similar to the one that hit north of Los Angeles in 1857 were to strike today, officials estimate that between 3,000 and 13,000 lives could be lost.

Rules are set for fireworks stands

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The State Board of Insurance has adopted rules on basic design, construction and safety features of retail fireworks stands.

The rules will become effective Wednesday, said State Fire Marshal Ernest Emerson.

He said the rules are designed to prevent explosions that have occurred at fireworks stands in other states.

"People engaged in the retail fireworks business previously could build stands out of cardboard, paper or anything else," Emerson said.

The new rules require the stands to be constructed of wood, metal, masonry, concrete or a combination of those materials. The rules also require the stands to be at least six feet wide so customers can't touch the merchandise and to have an exit at each end if the stands are at least 16 feet long.

"We are trying to make them safe from cigarettes, sparks and other sources of ignition," said the fire marshal. He added that the fireworks industry has been in favor of the rules.

U.S. not ruling out naval action to protect oil traffic

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is not ruling out naval action to keep open the oil shipping lanes of the Persian Gulf, threatened with closure by the war between Iran and Iraq, Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher says.

Asked on the CBS "Face the Nation" whether the U.S. Navy might be sent into the gulf to protect oil tanker traffic through the strategic Strait of Hormuz, Christopher said Sunday, "We intend to keep that open."

Forty percent of the western world's oil passes through the strait. Christopher said the British and French governments share the U.S. determination to keep the strait open. The United States also would want to "consult with the nations in the gulf such as Saudi Arabia" about any military action that might be taken in the region, he added.

Christopher said the Iran-Iraq conflict does not appear to have jeopardized tanker traffic in the strait so far.

According to Christopher, the United States is doing its best to bring about a cease-fire between Iraq and Iran, but he said such efforts are limited because "we don't have good relations" with either country.

Former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and former Undersecretary of State George Ball on Sunday agreed with Christopher that the United States does not have many options in the crisis.

"The best we can do ... is let this drama work itself out," Kissinger said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Ball told reporters on ABC's "Issues and Answers" that U.S. efforts are limited by anti-American sentiment in both countries and by the lack of an American presence in the gulf.

But Ball said the United States should prepare to "inject military force into the Persian Gulf" if the Iran-Iraq war shows signs of threatening American interests.

Christopher acknowledged the war has increased the danger of Soviet intervention in the region — particularly in Iran. He added the United States would view any such intervention

"with the utmost gravity."

Christopher said the border conflict had distracted Iranian government officials at a time when they had been "coming to the point where they've been getting ready to address the hostage issue."

He said if the conflict with Iraq subsides, the United States can expect the Iranians to return their attention to the fate of the American captives.

Israel dedicates new West Bank settlement

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Israeli government dedicated another of its controversial Jewish settlements in the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, a paramilitary outpost that will be turned over to civilians when it is completed.

The settlement, dedicated Sunday, is called Beit Ha'Arava and is located in the Rift Valley near the Jordan River, between Jericho and the northern end of the Dead Sea.

It is near the site of a former Jewish kibbutz, or collective farm, of the same name that was abandoned during the 1948 Arab-Israeli War when Jordanian troops overran the area. Israel captured the West Bank and Arab East Jerusalem from Jordan in the 1967 war.

Officials said the army's special agricultural corps, known as Nahal, will develop Beit Ha'Arava until the site is ready for civilians.

Israel has about 75 settlements in the occupied West Bank. Prime Minister Menachem Begin has said 10 more will be built to complete the program, but officials have not released details.

The settlements have become a major stumbling block in Palestinian autonomy negotiations with Egypt, which opposes the Jewish enclaves, as does the United States.

In another development, Israeli military authorities Sunday released the mayor of the West Bank town of Qalqilya but said he would be tried on charges of publishing an inflammatory anti-Israel pamphlet.

The mayor, Haj Amin Nasser, was arrested last week and held for questioning. An army spokesman said he was released because the investigation was finished and the charges against him were being prepared.

The pamphlet, a 20-page report of Qalqilya's progress during Nasser's term as mayor, thanked Libya for providing aid to the town and urged Palestinians to oppose the Israeli occupation.

Meanwhile, Israel's attorney-general confirmed for the first time that Minister of Religious Affairs Aharon Barak was under investigation for alleged corruption in his ministry.

Police sources said investigators would attempt to question him at his office next Sunday, after the weekly Cabinet meeting. The minister has said he is innocent but has not said whether he will cooperate with the police inquiry.

The Religious Affairs Ministry is accused of allocating hundreds of thousands of dollars to Jewish seminaries and schools that did not exist or that padded their enrollment lists. Police leaks to the local press claimed that aides and relatives of Abu-Hatira were suspected of bribery, tax evasion and buying votes in the last elections.

The affair has raised tensions between religious and non-religious Israelis, with religious leaders accusing the police of a smear campaign against Abu-Hatira.

Police arrest 147 persons at anti-nuclear demonstration

SHOREHAM, N.Y. (AP) — Police arrested 147 anti-nuclear demonstrators who blocked three entrances to the Shoreham nuclear power plant construction site early today in defiance of a court order.

Authorities began hauling protesters away around 4:30 a.m., and just over two hours later, construction workers were streaming through the main gates onto the site for the 8 a.m. shift.

Those arrested were placed in plastic-hand handcuffs, underwent preliminary processing at the site and were driven away, about 35 per bus in four school buses, to Suffolk County police headquarters in Yaphank.

Most of those arrested had to be dragged or carried to the buses.

Authorities said most of the demonstrators would be charged with disorderly conduct, a misdemeanor.

"I thought this was a beautiful, beautiful action," said Esther Pank of Huppauge, coordinator of the protest. "I think once again we raised the issue of nuclear power, and that's exactly what we wanted to do today."

Speaking for the Long Island Lighting Co., which hopes to have its 820,000-kilowatt nuclear generator on line by 1983, June Bruce said: "I think we were successful from the point of view that we wanted to avoid violence. I think what a waste of the county and the rate-payers' money, a real pity that we are paying for their beach party."

Polish students seek independent organization

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Poland's colleges and universities begin the new academic year this week amid calls by some students for the same decentralization and greater democracy demanded by the independent trade union movement.

Student representatives from all over Poland met over the weekend in Gdansk, the Baltic strike city, and decided to form the Independent Student Association to rival the Socialist Union of Polish Students, to which about 70 percent of the country's 480,000 students belong.

Although final details have not been worked out, the Independent Student Association will be organized along the same lines as the independent trade union movement led by strike leader Lech Walesa and based in Gdansk.

Faculty and student groups have begun calling for such reforms as the free election of rectors and deans by faculty-student senates and creation of freely elected student councils at the departmental level to help formulate academic policy. This was the system before World War II.

The Ministry of Higher Education, which now appoints rectors and deans, began discussions with faculty groups more than a week ago, sources say, in hopes of settling the issues before the students return to their campuses on Wednesday.

"What we want is more democracy in our universities," said Jacek Czaputowicz, an independent student leader at Warsaw University. "And we want pluralism in the student movement."

That means breaking the hold that the Socialist Union of Polish Students maintains on student life, he added.

Since 1973, the Socialist Union has been the only recognized campus organization following its merger with two other student groups. By sponsoring education, cultural travel and other programs, the Socialist Union — and through it, the Communist Party — sets the tone for student life. Activists in the organization often wind up in the Communist Party in later life.

In a statement released last week, the student organizing committee at Gdansk University charged that the "centralized structure of the Socialist Union paralyzed the student movement."

Leaders of the Socialist Union differ publicly with the new, independent student organizations primarily on the issue of pluralism. The Socialist Union would prefer to remain the only student organization.

"We are open for discussion," Bohdan Kaczmarek, the Socialist Union vice chairman for Warsaw, was quoted by the newspaper Zycie Warszawy as saying.

"We are discussing what to improve, what to change in order that our organization becomes the authentic representative of young people."

Kaczmarek also was reported as saying he thought the Socialist Union "has to define itself politically" and represent "the view of the whole environment."

By contrast, the new, independent student groups carefully avoid any political discussions for their organizations.

Czaputowicz insisted that his chapter at Warsaw University was nonpolitical. He said membership would be open to all students regardless of their political views.

The goals of the new student organization include a change in the higher education law which allows rectors and the Higher Education Ministry to

According to reports, the man turned and fired three shots at the officers while running towards Red's Drive-In in the 1800 block of East Front Avenue. McKnight fired six shots at the man, hitting him in the left leg and right foot and breaking several bones.

The man fell, then got up and hopped into the drive-in, the officers said. McKnight grabbed the man as he entered the restaurant. Police said the man tried to wrestle McKnight's pistol from him as the officers subdued the man, placed him on the ground and handcuffed him.

During the shootout, Walter Hunter of 500 S. Lee St., was wounded. Hunter had been standing by the patrol car when the shooting began.

The man arrested is under protective custody at Midland Memorial Hospital on charges of attempted capital murder.

Police said they recovered several live rounds of ammunition from the man's pockets and a .38-caliber revolver from the scene of the shooting.

Clayton Williams reported the theft of $530 worth of tools and a tool box from his pickup at 415 W. Scharbauer Drive No. 13 early this morning.

Williams told officers he saw a man in his pickup about 2:45 a.m. today. The man then left in a light-colored pickup. Police are continuing their investigation.

Famous women welcome their 40th birthdays

NEW YORK (AP) — CAROL BURNETT says she feels more serious since turning 40. JUDY COLLINS says she's calmer. SUSAN STRASBERG says she's just better.

The three entertainers were among 20 prominent women interviewed in an article published in the current issue of Harper's Bazaar magazine about the hazards and pleasures of being over 40.

"I've grown more serious since turning 40," said Miss Burnett. "Actually, the most important thing I've learned since turning 40 is that I need reading glasses. And never trust anyone over 50!"

"Part of the advantage of this wonderful age I'm at is that I'm calmer," said Ms. Collins, the folk singer. "I feel relaxed about everything. I was much more driven, uncomfortable and hysterical when I was younger."

Ms. Strasberg, the actress, compared herself to a bottle of wine — "the older I get, the better I'll be."

"By the time I'm 90, I'll be just about ready to uncork," she said. "God willing, I'm going to be one hell of a terrific old lady."

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer NATALIE COLE has failed in several attempts to quit smoking, but she plans to do better the next time and set a good example as chairwoman of the "Great American Smokeout" on Nov. 20.

The "Smokeout," sponsored by the American Cancer Society, is a 24-hour nationwide campaign to help smokers kick the habit.

"My father, NAT KING COLE, was a heavy smoker who died of lung cancer," Ms. Cole said in a statement issued Sunday by the society. "This didn't keep me from cultivating the habit. When I tried to quit several times in the past, I always took up cigarettes again."

Ms. Cole said she would try to quit smoking "for my music and my son," Robbie, who will be 3 in October.

The first "Smokeout," held in 1977, was led by actor SAMMY DAVIS JR., but he did not make it through the afternoon without smoking.

Actor EDWARD ASNER led the campaign the next year and kicked his two-pack a day habit. He celebrated his first anniversary of quitting by serving as chairman again last year.

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Ninety-three-year-old ALF LANDON was sitting up in his bed and doing "just fine" after being hospitalized following complaints of feeling weak, his wife says.

Landon, a former Kansas governor who was the Republican presidential nominee against FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT in 1936, was hospitalized Thursday.

"He's doing just fine," Theo Landon said Sunday. "He's been sitting up and visiting."

Mrs. Landon said her husband would remain hospitalized for about two more days for tests. He was listed in satisfactory condition.

Doctors were unable to find any indication of heart problems, Mrs. Landon said, but they continued to monitor Landon in the coronary care unit at Stormont-Vail Regional Medical Center.

Some fluid was found in Landon's lungs, but that condition had cleared by Sunday, Mrs. Landon said.

Mrs. Landon said her daughter, SEN. NANCY LANDON KASSEBAUM, R-Kan., has called every day to check on her father's condition.

Hundreds want to move to Dakota town now that the missile has been removed

NEKOMA, N.D. (AP)

When a government missile operation shut down, most of Nekoma shut down with it. Now hundreds of people hoping to escape the rat race have inquired about moving in — and Mayor Bill Verwey has found himself turning away would-be neighbors.

"We have four or five homes available, but that's all," Verwey said. "I have to tell them that if they're coming to seek employment, they're out of luck. That's why everyone is leaving. There is none."

The town's biggest payroll was a Safe-guard antiballistic missile complex. Congress declared the $5.5 billion site obsolete in 1975, a few months after it was completed.

The news shriveled the town. More than 415 of Nekoma's 500 inhabitants moved away.

Then a report on Nekoma's plight was distributed nationally in August, and readers flooded the town with inquiries.

"I've received at least 100 letters and more than that number of phone calls from people who want to live here," Verwey said. "They want to get out of the rat race and go back to a quiet town."

One enticement was that there are 200 abandoned homes.

But Verwey said there's a catch. The 200 empty houses are owned by the federal government and cannot be sold on the open market.

Any business would be welcome, Verwey said. Aside from the grain elevator, Verwey's Nekoma bar is the only functioning business.

But many of the callers and writers do not seem to know much about the area.

"A real estate firm from Las Vegas called and said it wanted to buy the whole town," Verwey said. "They didn't know who owned the homes."

"All kinds of calls have recommended turning Nekoma into a gambling center. They certainly don't know much about North Dakota law."

Almost all of the inquiries have been from Southerners, and many have come from Florida, Verwey said. "Many have said that if you can't speak Spanish, there's no room for you there."

"It's made me feel good that so many want to come here despite the cold weather, to live in the place we live," he said.

"But I feel a lot of them are desperate people. I didn't want them to build their hopes up too high. I want them to know the situation here."

The Defense Department has been studying the possibility of finding another use for the missile site, but Verwey said that hasn't stirred much enthusiasm in Nekoma.

"The majority of people here are older and like things as they are," he said.

Ex-wife's letter could unlock 54-year mystery

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — For 54 years, she held the secret that could unlock a puzzling murder case, but kept it to herself for fear of reprisals. Now, officials say, she has told police that her former husband was a killer.

Police in Weverville recently received a letter from a 78-year-old Texas woman who said she had decided to unburden herself of knowledge about an attack at the Fowlerville home of Arthur and Marion Monroe.

Mrs. Monroe was beaten to death and her husband was knocked unconscious in the 1926 incident. Monroe died in 1947, never able to tell police more than that he was struck from behind.

The woman told her story in an article in Sunday's Lansing State Journal. She agreed to be interviewed on the condition that her name not be used.

The woman said she had kept quiet for years because her ex-husband, Russell Smith, threatened to kill her and their children if she told. But Smith died about four years ago in Texas, she said.

"I remember that night he came home," she said, recalling the half-century-old incident. "He was very nervous. He kept washing his hands over and over again."

"We lived in a shack in a swamp and he wouldn't get a job," the woman said. "He was out every night with other women and just wasn't a good man."

A hired hand found Monroe unconscious in the yard the morning after the slaying, and discovered the body of Mrs. Monroe, 52, in the home.

Robbery was the motive, said Fred Teeple, Livingston County Sheriff at the time. About $40 and the couple's gold and silver watches were taken, according to newspaper accounts.

Smith was never questioned, his ex-wife told the State Journal.

There are some inconsistencies between the facts of the case and the woman's recollection, state Trooper Tony Gibson acknowledged. But he said he was convinced she is telling the truth.

"I'll turn everything over to the Livingston County Prosecutor and he'll make a decision," said Gibson, who spent about two months checking the woman's story after receiving the letter from Weverville police. "But I'll recommend that the case be closed."

George Monroe, 84, a nephew of the couple, told the Journal the family was "very scared" after the murder.

"We turned out all the lights at night and locked all the doors. We just didn't know what would happen next," he said.

"We can't blame her," he said of the mystery woman's belated revelation. "She didn't dare say anything since he had threatened to kill her and her children. You can't blame her."

Police seek pattern in disappearances

ATLANTA (AP) — Police investigating the disappearances or deaths of 14 black children are looking for a pattern that would link the cases and lead to a killer.

"Even though we have no evidence to link the cases together, we're going under the assumption there is a connection because we've never lost this many children in this length of time before," said Deputy Police Director Morris Redding, who heads a 13-member investigatory task force. "In my 26 years of police work, I don't recall any cases in Atlanta that have been as tragic and as horrible as these that we have now."

"It's just like the earth opened up and swallowed all of these children," said Willie Mae Mathis, the mother of 11-year-old Jeffery Mathis, who disappeared March 11.

A $20,000 reward has been offered for information on the cases. "Somebody has got the answer," said Redding. "We're asking that person to come forward."

The bodies of nine black children between the ages of nine and 14 have been found since July 1979. They had been shot, stabbed, bludgeoned or strangled. Five other children are missing, including a 10-year-old boy who disappeared last Sept. 14.

Welcome home, Bush

It's definite now. Republican vice presidential nominee George Bush will be in Midland Tuesday, Oct. 7, to attend a political rally in Midland Center. For Bush, the event will undoubtedly be a special occasion since he used to live here.

There's no doubt about it, it will be good to see Bush again. Old acquaintances can be renewed and old friendships reaffirmed.

Of course, it isn't as though the Bush family has been too removed from the Tall City although they now live in Houston. A son, George W., still calls Midland home. And the elder Bush and his wife, Barbara, visit in Midland from time to time. It's always good to have them.

But the demands on his time created by the presidential campaign have, understandably, kept him away from the Tall City and his many friends here. It's not too many communities that can welcome a vice presidential nominee home. We feel most fortunate to have that opportunity.

We wouldn't object, of course, if sometime down the road the other half of the Reagan-Bush ticket, the former California governor, chose to pay a return visit to Midland. And we do understand that the possibility of such a visit exists prior to the Nov. 4 election.

Right now, though, we're just really pleased to say "welcome home" to George Bush. It will be good to have him back.

Really cleaning up

Plans are under way, it seems, to instigate a clean-up campaign for Midland. It reportedly would involve all Midlanders in some manner.

That, we think, is a great idea. We all have a stake in this community. We work, day-in and day-out, to make it a better place in which to live, a good environment in which to raise children, a pleasant city in which to retire.

But nothing is free. To get something worthwhile, one must make an investment in one's own life. That's exactly what a Midland Chamber of Commerce committee has in mind.

The plan reportedly calls for involving schools, businesses, industries, civic organizations and service clubs, and as many residents as possible, in a massive campaign to clean up the Tall City.

Midland's city sanitation department will be cooperating in the effort and is dividing the city into districts.

This is a most commendable citywide effort and is deserving of the support of all Midlanders. Let's help make Midland a more beautiful place in which to live.

Hughes' files paint strange picture of Laxalt

WASHINGTON — The secret files of the late eccentric billionaire Howard Hughes raise some troubling questions about Ronald Reagan's campaign chairman, Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev.

The documents, many in Hughes' own handwriting, paint an unflattering picture of Laxalt during his term as governor of Nevada from 1966-70. Laxalt emerges as Hughes' eager lackey, intervening with federal agencies on Hughes' behalf, helping him to grab the lion's share of the state's casino operations and simultaneously dickering for a top job in the Hughes organization as a reward for faithful service.

In some private memoranda, Hughes discusses his intention to back Laxalt "with unlimited support right into the White House in 1972." But the billionaire left Nevada about the time Laxalt's gubernatorial term ended, and neither the White House nor the Hughes files ever materialized. Laxalt's law firm did collect $72,000 in legal retainers from Hughes in the next two years, however.

Laxalt told my associate Gary Cohn he never negotiated with Hughes for a job, and denied that the legal fees constituted a payoff or a conflict of interest. The Hughes documents indicate otherwise.

The documents relating to Laxalt are among thousands reportedly stolen from Hughes' Los Angeles headquarters in 1974 and later obtained by author Michael Drosnin. He is writing a book which will be published next year titled "Citizen Hughes: In His Own Words — How Howard Hughes Tried to Buy America."

"To make the Laxalt deal work," Hughes wrote in a memo to his Nevada chief of staff, Robert Maheu,

Jack Anderson

"we have to find a means of motivation. When I have a real tough assignment, I search for two ingredients: 1. A man who can do the job if he truly wants to, and 2. A means of furnishing a consideration to this man which will be of such a nature and such an amount as to be well nigh overpowering in its effect upon the man."

"Now Bob, I think Laxalt can be brought to a point where he will just about entrust his entire political future to his relationship with us ... I think we must convince him beyond a shadow of a doubt that I intend to back him with unlimited support right into the White House in 1972."

Maheu gave his boss regular reports on the job negotiations with Laxalt. In December, 1969, he wrote in a memo to Hughes: "Governor Laxalt has started to ask me precisely what his assignment will be in your organization."

In June, 1970, Maheu reported: "Laxalt is very anxious to discuss his future employment with us ... On another occasion, Maheu wrote: 'My guess is that he will hit us for a retainer ...'"

Indeed, Laxalt's law firm started receiving money from Hughes shortly after Laxalt left the State House. And Hughes had already paid $180,000 to a

CHARLEY REESE

Some liberals rethinking sexual revolution's pitfalls

Charley Reese

Some of the liberals who used to ridicule moralists as book-burners and Puritans are having second thoughts about the sexual revolution. Don't get excited. They are not about to admit they were wrong and the moralists were right. They are just getting squeamish about some of the nasty habits of the Frankenstein they themselves created.

They still, however, have not figured it out. I am forced, despite my natural inclination toward moderation, to label most liberal thinking as simplistic.

Ellen Goodman, a lovely liberal columnist, risked the charge of prudery recently to condemn the sexual exploitation of children. In the same column, though, she repeated her ritual defense of the infinite first amendment: adults have the right to read and see anything they choose.

She has not yet seen the connection between what she deplores and what she advocates. Unfortunately for the children, they inhabit the same world as adults. It is not possible to have an anything goes society for adults and a more restrained society for children. It is not possible to destroy morality and avoid depravity. It is stupid to believe you can take the shackles off lust and expect it to leave children alone.

Ellen Goodman, like a lot of decent people who fell into the libertarian trap, has seen her own home and her own child's life invaded by the consequences of her philosophical beliefs. She's alarmed and angry as all of us who have children are at the cultural message being fired relentlessly at our children.

Well, if we're to do anything about it, we must begin at the beginning. We must recognize that the first amendment protection of free speech was intended to protect the free flow of ideas, not a parade of rear-ends and vapid obscenities.

We must recognize that the law operates on the principle of top-down, not bottom-up. The day the first sleazy porno shop in a bad neighborhood was sanctioned by the law in the name of free speech, everything short of that became permissible on our home screens, the supermarket magazine racks and the suburban movie screens. The wisdom of banning pornography lies not in eliminating pornography which is impossible but in setting a more acceptable standard.

We must recognize that the wisdom of the old religions was based on a keen insight into human nature today's sociologists do not possess. The humanist view of man as mere animal without a soul inevitably led to situational ethics, which is no ethics, and no ethics inevitably leads to depravity.

Normal sex between a man and a woman, if stripped of all emotion, romance and spirituality, eventually becomes boring and the boredom produces the progression to perversion and violence.

We must recognize that the Playboy version of a woman as a body devoid of brain and soul with no purpose but to provide pleasure to a male who has no purpose but to consume produces a society of robots, not human beings.

We must recognize that people who try to deny their spirituality self-destruct as surely as a lion would self-destruct if it tried to deny its nature by becoming a vegetarian.

That's why the libertarian ideal of no restraints produced chaos instead of utopia. Instead of a society of healthy human relationships as naive liberals imagined, the destruction of morality produced exactly what the religionists predicted: record crime, drug use, divorce, suicide, venereal disease, abortions, cynicism, and general all-around unhappiness.

There are absolutes in the universe and when man attempts to deny them, he is destroyed.

INSIDE REPORT:

Harold Brown stuck to disarmament despite Soviet gains

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — When Secretary of Defense Harold Brown fought a losing battle against congressional approval of a new chemical warfare plant, he reversed his own instructions to Pentagon deputies and showed the continuing influence of the arms control lobby on Carter administration policy despite heightened tensions between Washington and Moscow.

The Senate followed the House last week and approved the new plant over Brown's objections. That served notice on President Carter that Congress will no longer accept Brown's submission to the arms controllers. The rebuff for Brown, coming in the midst of charges that he is the most politicized secretary of defense ever, reflected congressional rejection of the arms control theology that has dominated policy since Carter took office.

The detailed story of Brown's obsequence to that theology, despite overwhelming evidence of a Soviet chemical warfare buildup, is yet another piece of evidence that the administration did not truly change following the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. The rhetoric has turned hard, but the policy remains soft.

The story of the small ($3 million) authorization for the first new chemical warfare plant in decades started last Oct. 12. Under Defense Secretary William J. Perry sent a confidential memorandum to Brown saying that "in response to your request, a game plan has been developed" that would "assure" inclusion of the plant in the new defense budget.

About the same time, Brown himself wrote national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski that he had "directed" the Army to request money to start building the plant. But just before the Senate began debate earlier this month, Brown informed Sen. John Stennis, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, that the project was "premature."

What changed Brown's mind? The arms control theology. When Perry advised Brown last Oct. 12 that plans for the chemical plant were on track, he also warned that "the key part of the game plan involves concurrence of the other concerned agency That meant the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency (ACDA) backed by dentists in the State Department. They refused to concur."

The arms controllers were still clinging to a confidential letter written by then-Secretary of State Cyrus Vance Oct. 23, 1977. Vance stated the administration's arms control theology in terms now made laughable by Soviet military aggression and Soviet treaty-making.

Arguing against any effort by the U.S. to catch up with the Soviet chemical warfare lead, Vance said the U.S. would gain a "significant psychological advantage" over Moscow with restraint showing "our sincere intent to limit offensive weapons."

Embracing Vance's obsolete theology, the arms controllers persuaded Carter this year. They argued that repeated Soviet violations and new evidence of Soviet foot-dragging over arms control negotiations should not stand in the way of Vance's admonition for "restraint."

The Senate rebelled last week. Led by Democratic Sens. Henry Jackson and Sam Nunn and Republican Sen. John Warner, a bipartisan defense bloc built a masterful case against the Carter policy. Voting with the bloc was one of Carter's most faithful loyalists, Chairman Stennis. In a rare departure from that loyalty, Stennis told the Senate that "in view of the undoubted change in the atmosphere" between the U.S. and the Soviets, the U.S. could not risk further delay.

The congressional order for this belated effort to start narrowing the immense Soviet lead in the ghastly arts of chemical warfare would seemingly be enough to jolt Brown out of subservience to the arms controllers. Leaders of the defense bloc doubt it; if recent Soviet actions could not free Brown, nothing ever will.

In the face of U.S. "restraint" on the nuclear front, the latest Soviet underground test Sept. 14 is acknowledged even by arms control officials to have greatly exceeded the treaty limit.

But that is dwarfed by evidence that Soviet forces are using chemical warfare to subjugate Afghanistan and that Moscow's ally, Vietnam, is doing the same in Laos and Cambodia. After four years of U.S. restraint in trying to negotiate a chemical warfare ban with Moscow in Geneva, the first sentence of a treaty has yet to be agreed upon.

During those four years, Carter and Brown have kept the lid on U.S. production. Not one chemical warfare shell has been produced for 10 years; none fired for 11. The Kremlin has used those four years to arm up to one-third of all their artillery and rockets in central Europe with chemical warfare shells.

Testifying last spring, Gen. Bernard Rogers, the NATO supreme commander, warned he has "no capability of retaliatory ability ... to deter (Soviet) use" of its arsenal. The wonder is that at this late hour, Congress has to force the secretary of defense to start correcting that deficiency.

Heavy rains saturate water-logged area

By The Associated Press

Heavy rains saturated water-logged portions of Texas over the weekend, shoving creeks and rivers out of their banks and chasing North and Southwest Texas residents from their watery homes.

Rain pounded most of Southwest Texas during the day Sunday, but subsided Sunday night, easing some of the flooding. However, an upper air disturbance was poised in northern New Mexico early today, threatening to bring more showers to soggy Southwest Texas.

National Weather Service reports said the rain was caused by a blanket of moist, tropical air streaming over a stationary front stretched across the state.

The front held South Texas highs in the 90s, but brought temperatures in the 50s and 60s to the rest of the state, calling an abrupt end to the Heat Wave of 1980.

The NWS issued flash flood watches for 30 West Texas counties from the Mexican border north to Wichita Falls as small creeks rose into pastureland and water swirled curb-deep in some cities.

"There are no rivers here, all the water is in the streets," said a Midland police dispatcher who asked not to be named. "But it's not too bad."

Several farm-to-market roads were closed during the rain, but authorities said most major roads stayed open during the storms.

In Hamlin, about 40 miles north of Abilene, an earthen dam crumbled in the rain, forcing the evacuation of 50 to 60 homes in the low-lying areas on the southwest side of town.

About 60 residents of the Holiday Lodge nursing home were evacuated to the Hamlin Elementary School for the night, authorities said. No one was injured and law officers said the flooding was not unexpected because of the heavy rainfall.

Flooding threatens aqueduct

STOCKTON, Calif. (AP) — An aqueduct which carries water 80 miles from a mountain reservoir to the city of Oakland has been threatened by flooding from a levee break that already may have claimed millions of dollars worth of crops, officials say.

But officials said Sunday that even if the aqueduct was damaged, water service could probably continue without rationing because of a five-to six-month supply of water stored in smaller reservoirs downstream.

"We think we will be able to continue service without rationing, but that's not to say a disruption is impossible," James Lattie, spokesman for the East Bay Municipal Utility District, said Sunday.

An earth-and-stone levee about 30 miles east of Oakland gave way Friday night, inundating a 5,000-acre tract of farmland with water. The land, called the Lower Jones Tract, lies below the level of the Sacramento-San Joaquin river delta.

The levee was bordered on three sides by the tract and on the fourth side by a Santa Fe Railway embankment. On the other side of the embankment is the aqueduct, which would be inundated if the embankment gave way. The aqueduct carries water from Pardee Reservoir to Oakland.

High winds were whipping water into the embankment Sunday as more than 100 workers struggled to prevent further erosion of the levee.

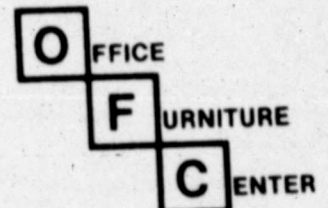

Two hundred people were chased from their homes by the flooding and crop losses were expected to reach millions of dollars.

Georgia to appeal court order

ATLANTA (AP) — Independent presidential candidate John Anderson's name has been placed on Georgia's official ballot form, to be printed today, says Secretary of State David Poythress.

But Poythress adds that President Carter's home state plans to appeal U.S. District Judge Newell Edenfield's order that Anderson's name appear on the ballot.

The judge issued an injunction against the state Friday, saying procedures used to disqualify Anderson from the ballot deprived him of his constitutional right to due process of law.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

What's your number?

DEAR HELOISE:

I read with interest your column which said that due to the Privacy Act we should engrave our driver's license number on our valuables rather than our Social Security number for identification purposes.

The flaw in this is that many of us are transferred from one state to another, sometimes frequently, thus would end up with several different driver's license numbers scratched out and re-engraved if we were to do so.

Since our Social Security number is something we can get as a child and never have to change in our lifetime, I think it would be the best type of number to use for this purpose.

Therefore, I suggest we all write our legislators asking that the Privacy Act be changed so our valuables can be traced if needed. OR, THAT THE DRIVER'S LICENSE NUMBERS IN EVERY STATE BE THE SAME AS OUR S.S. numbers.

In my own state, for instance, my license number would be six digits shorter if my S.S. number were used. Seems to me this would be a darn sight easier to handle, wouldn't it? — C. Anderson

Sure seems so to me!

Several states are already using S.S. numbers as driver's license numbers, but since this is not a nationwide practice it really doesn't help in tracing stolen property if one moves to a state not using them. (At least, not indefinitely.)

So, perhaps C. Anderson's suggestion is a good one that driver's licensing be made standard throughout the U.S.A. by using one's S.S. number.

If you agree, I, too, suggest you write to the legislators in your state, pronto, and tell him your thoughts on the subject. Maybe we will get this

DEAR ABBY

Wedding ring can be dangerous

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Please tell wives how dangerous it is for a man to wear a ring while doing manual labor.

Ask any machinist. Ask Neil Armstrong. You could do a lot of good if you stressed this point, Abby.—Mrs. J.H.M., FLORIDA

DEAR MRS. M.: I have stressed it many times, but thanks for reminding me that it's time to re-run this item that appeared in my column about 15 years ago.

DEAR ABBY: I am one of those foolish wives who insisted that my husband wear his wedding ring at all times. My husband is a maintenance mechanic, and this is what happened. Yesterday, I received a call informing me that my husband was at the hospital! While jumping off a construction truck, he caught his ring on a piece of metal, and his finger was practically torn off. I was told he was lucky he wasn't killed since he lost his balance and fell under the wheels of the truck.

Abby, please print this in your column as a warning to other women who want their husbands to wear their wedding rings to work—AL'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Thank you for your letter, and while we're on the subject, read this one.

DEAR ABBY: When my husband and I were married we had a double-ring ceremony, and he promised he would never take his wedding ring off. And he never did. After a few years he gained a little weight and couldn't get the ring off. My husband was an electrician.

Well, to make a long and very tragic story short, his wedding ring wore a tiny hole through his insulated glove and a fatal contact was made. He died instantly. When his lifeless body was examined, the only sign of injury was a small burn where his wedding ring encircled his finger.—ELECTRICIAN'S WIDOW

So, Dear Wife, if your husband works around machines or electricity, tell him to leave ALL rings at home—if you really love him, that is.

Rings and other types of jewelry for women and men working with machinery and electricity are a major problem in industry. Sentiment is a poor excuse for wearing a ring when it can cause the loss of a finger, hand, arm or even a life.

DEAR ABBY: How do you feel about "bowser bags" at mealtime in a private home? I recently attended a ladies' luncheon where a lovely lunch was served. For dessert, the hostess served ice cream and cookies and also cake. Some ate the ice cream and cookies and took "their" piece of cake home in a paper napkin because they were too full to eat it there.

What might be a clever thing to say to a guest who tries this in my home? I don't mind having guests eat all they want in my home, but I think the hostess has dibs on the leftovers.—SELFISH PARTY'S GIVER

DEAR SELFISH: I see nothing wrong with a guest taking home what she (or he) is offered but cannot eat. But if you do, don't be clever. Be candid.

(Problems? Get them off our chest by writing to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif.

NEWSPAPER BIBLE

Accept yourself

But be sure in deciding these matters that you are living as God intended, marrying or not marrying in accordance with God's direction and help, and accepting whatever situation God has put you into. This is my rule for all the churches.

For instance, a man who already has gone through the Jewish ceremony of circumcision before he became a Christian shouldn't worry about it; and if he hasn't been circumcised, he shouldn't do it now.

For it doesn't make any difference at all whether a Christian has gone through this ceremony or not. But it makes a lot of difference whether he is pleasing God and keeping God's commandments. That is the important thing.

Usually a person should keep on with the work he was doing when God called him.

Are you a slave? Don't let that worry you—but of course, if you get a chance to be free, take it.

If the Lord calls you, and you are a slave, remember that Christ has set you free from the awful power of sin, and if He has called you and you are free, remember that you are now a slave of Christ.

You have been bought and paid for by Christ, so you belong to Him—be free now from all these earthly prides and fears.

So, dear brothers, whatever situation a person is in when he becomes a Christian, let him stay there, for now the Lord is there to help him.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Many prescribed drugs have varied side effects

Dear Dr. Solomon: My doctor recently prescribed some medication that made me nauseous and dizzy. Fortunately he had warned me about these possibilities, and my wife phoned him and had the prescription changed. With all the time the Food and Drug Administration takes before it approves a drug, why should any medicine be able to cause undesirable side effects? — Mr. J.L.L.

Dear Mr. L.: When a doctor prescribes a drug, its purpose is to produce some change within the body. Anything powerful enough to have such an effect—even a drug as common as aspirin—is capable of causing adverse reactions. These may range from relatively minor side effects such as you experienced, to more serious ones such as birth defects or even death.

There are about 70,000 prescription drugs available today, and an additional 200,000 over-the-counter preparations. With so many potent agents around, the potential for adverse reactions is always present. The risk of side effects from use of a drug must always be balanced against the danger of failing to treat the specific condition.

Dear Dr. Solomon: It seems that government officials are minimizing the degree of radiation exposure to which people living near the Three Mile Island nuclear facility have been subjected. Maybe I'm getting a little too suspicious as I grow older, but I can't take these reports at face value. Isn't there some private organization that would be able to investigate the situation and make an objective report on any radiation hazards caused by the accident? I think such a report would go a long way to reassuring an awful lot of people. — Mr. F.D.N.

Dear Mr. N.: While it obviously isn't a private organization, the Food and Drug Administration's bureau of Radiological Health has hit upon a novel method of determining the amount of radiation to which people living in the vicinity of Three Mile Island (TMI) were exposed. Bureau personnel obtained rolls of unexposed high-speed color film from various stores within a five-mile radius of TMI, and compared them with rolls of control film obtained from other sources. The film is sensitive to ionizing radiation and is able to detect as little as five millirems of exposure.

A comparison of the rolls of film showed that any radiation released during the TMI accident was too small to have any effect. More specifically, the exposure to radiation was determined to have been less than five millirems at the locations where the film was purchased.

The FDA notes that these findings agree with those previously obtained by another federal government committee which concluded that the average dose of radiation to people living within 20 miles of the nuclear facility was eight millirems; the average dose for people living within 50 miles of the plant was 1.5 millirems.

Rates show Nevada leading in suicides

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nevada, with its casinos and easy divorce laws, has the nation's highest suicide rate, government figures show. And statisticians are keeping an eye on New Jersey's rate, which was the nation's lowest before legal gambling was introduced there.

Nevada has 24.8 suicides for every 100,000 residents, a rate termed "astounding" by Joan Keemer of the National Center for Health Statistics.

She speculated that the attraction of the state to people seeking divorce, plus the legal gambling establishments, led to the high rate, almost double the national average of 12.5 suicides per 100,000 people.

New Jersey, at 7.2 suicides per 100,000, has the lowest suicide rate. Mrs. Keemer commented that New Jersey's suicide rate would be "worth watching" because of the recent introduction of legalized gambling there.

The newly issued mortality statistics are for 1978, the most recent year for which complete figures have been compiled.

They show that when all causes of death are figured in, Alaskans die at the lowest rate among Americans and Floridians at the highest rate—mostly because the average Alaskan is much younger and the average Floridian is much older than the average American.

The report shows Alaska with a mortality rate of 411.2 per 100,000 residents, compared to 1,103.7 per 100,000 in Florida.

"The characteristics of the population certainly are a factor," said Ms. Keemer.

The median age of all Americans was calculated by the Census Bureau at 28.1 years in 1975, while the median age in Alaska is 22.9 and that in Florida 32.3.

Life expectancy was listed at 73.3 years in the report, with women expected to outlive men by 7.7 years, down from 7.8 a year earlier.

Non-whites also made gains in life expectancy, narrowing the gap between them and whites from seven years in 1968 to 4.8 years in 1978.

Heart disease remains the nation's leading cause of death, followed by cancer and stroke. Those three causes account for more than half of all deaths in the country.

The No. 4 cause of death—accidents—was still the most likely way to die for persons under the age of 45, with heart disease moving to the top after that age.

The statistics show declining death rates for heart disease, cerebrovascular disease (strokes), cirrhosis of the liver, hardening of the arteries and bronchitis, emphysema and asthma.

Death rates from accidents, murder and other diseases were up, according to the report.

The report showed the homicide death rate for non-whites was more than five times higher than the rate for whites, 33.4 per 100,000 compared to 6 per 100,000 for whites.

"The average number of motor vehicle fatalities on Saturday (205) is 76.7 percent higher than the average on Monday and Tuesday (116 each)," the report stated.

In addition, "the average number of homicides on Saturday (79) is 68.1 percent higher than the average on Tuesday and Wednesday (47 each)."

Refugees living in cold barracks

FORT CHAFFEE, Ark. (AP) — Un-sponsored Cubans sent to this refugee camp for the winter are living in unheated barracks as Arkansas goes through a rare September cold snap that has sent temperatures plunging to the 50s.

Li. Col. Harold McKinney, a military public affairs officer, said Sunday that heat has been turned on in the hospital and medical centers at Fort Chaffee, but it will be later this week before the barracks can be warmed.

Normal temperatures for late September are near 80, but the high temperature at nearby Fort Smith on Sunday was only 56. The low was 55. The cool weather was heightened by a drizzle that kept refugees inside the old Army barracks.

To conserve fuel, the military normally does not heat barracks until after Oct. 1, McKinney said.

Arkansas went through a severe heat wave and drought during the summer. July was the hottest month ever recorded in the state, with an average high temperature of 101.2 degrees.

The 659 Cubans who have arrived from Wisconsin's Fort McCoy in the past two days are the only refugees who have been issued jackets. Nearly 3,000 other Cubans at the base have not yet received winter clothes.

Fort Chaffee has been selected by the federal government as the winter home for about 9,500 Cubans who still have not found sponsors or new homes. The Cubans—veterans of the ragtag "Freedom Flotilla" boatlift—had been scattered at bases in Arkansas, Florida, Wisconsin and Pennsylvania, but government officials determined that Chaffee was best equipped for winter.

The 643 refugees from Eglin Air Force Base, Fla., were flown to Arkansas last week. The transfer of 3,900 McCoy refugees is expected to be completed by the end of this week, and Cubans now at Fort Indiantown Gap, Pa., will begin arriving immediately after that.

On Sunday, another 276 Cubans arrived from McCoy on two flights slowed by problems with thunderstorms and baggage. One flight contained the final group of Cuban families from Fort McCoy.

State Department spokesman David Nichols said the airlift should move more rapidly now because most of the remaining 2,400 Cubans at the camp are men without the encumbrance of family belongings.

Officials said the other flight carried 93 Cuban men from an all-male compound where 300 demonstrators tore down several hundred yards of chain-link fence in a protest three weeks ago.

Look at me! I'm a shapely 73— thanks to Pat Walker's.

Ruth Hennessey's True Story:

Me, 21 lbs. heavier.

I knew all the sandwiches and ice cream I was snacking on would catch up with me, and sure enough they did. At 140 pounds (I'm 5'3 1/2"), I was heading toward a real weight problem.

When I decided to try Pat Walker's.

What I didn't want to do was lose weight too fast. I've seen the sags and wrinkles crash dieters get. So Pat Walker's planned a program just right for me: regular (and surprisingly easy) sessions on the passive exercise unit to keep my figure toned and firm, and counseling about the right and wrong ways to eat. I didn't even have to give up the foods I like, once I learned when I could have them.

With Pat Walker's help, I've trimmed off 21 pounds and a total of 31 inches! Now I weigh 119, and honestly, I've never felt better. Don't you think my 73-year-old figure is in good shape?

Make an appointment now for a free, no-obligation consultation at Pat Walker's.

We'll explain how our program works, from the no-muss, no-fuss passive exercise treatments to our belief in your right to privacy.

We'll tell you how much you need to lose; how long it will take, and the total cost of your complete figure correction, based on four dollars per thirty-minute treatment.

Referendum may be held next month

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The constitution approved by the martial law regime of President Chun Doo-hwan is almost certain to be adopted in a referendum to be held about the end of October, government sources said.

The constitutional draft was prepared by a committee appointed by the government in March and approved by the Cabinet in an extraordinary session today and signed by Chun.

The proposed constitution says general elections will be held before June 30, the president's power will be reduced to some extent and more power will be given to Parliament and the courts.

Under the draft, the president may serve only one seven-year term, and will be picked by an electoral college made up of more than 5,000 delegates chosen through a general election.

The new constitution says the emergency power of the president will be invoked only in case of hostilities or "similar grave extraordinary circumstances threatening the security of the state."

New vaccine is almost completely effective against liver disorder

NEW YORK (AP) — An experimental vaccine derived from the blood of hepatitis B carriers has proven almost completely effective against the viral liver infection, which may afflict hundreds of thousands of Americans and hits some developing nations in near-epidemic proportions, doctors say.

Results of the first large-scale trial of the vaccine show it virtually eliminates the risk of hepatitis B among those who receive it and has few side effects, said Dr. Wolf Szmunes of New York Blood Center, who coordinated the trial.

Szmunes said the vaccine may be approved for marketing within a year.

About 15,000 cases of the virus are reported annually in the United States, but doctors suspect the real number of cases may be in the hundreds of thousands. Hepatitis B, which in severe cases can cause jaundice and liver damage, afflicts certain social groups in developed countries and is a major health problem in parts of Africa and Asia.

Bouts of chronic hepatitis often require hospitalization and can cause death. Other victims can become "carriers," showing no symptoms but passing the disease on.

Szmunes said the vaccine would be "very desirable" in many parts of the world and could have a major public health impact if developing countries can afford to mount mass immunizations like those that eradicated smallpox.

"In this country, probably the vaccine will be given only to high-risk people," Szmunes said. He said it probably would not be given routinely to children, but might be given to children of carriers.

Results of the study were not due to be released until a news conference Oct. 8, one day before they were to appear in the New England Journal of Medicine. Szmunes, reached by telephone Sunday night, said he could not discuss the study in detail pending publication but agreed to discuss aspects of it to counter what he described as distorted reports that had appeared in some news media.

In the United States, hepatitis B is common among health workers and kidney dialysis patients and is considered near epidemic among homosexuals. It is most often spread by intimate personal contact. The virus is found in the blood, breast milk, saliva and semen.

In the study, Szmunes and co-workers enlisted 1,083 homosexual volunteers and divided them into two equal groups, one receiving vaccine and the other a placebo vaccine which lacked the hepatitis antigen.

After nearly two years, Szmunes said, 25 percent of those in the placebo group had come down with hepatitis B, compared to 3.6 percent in the vaccine group. There were no cases at all among those in the vaccine group who completed the three-shot series of immunizations and whose blood showed the presence of protective antibodies.

The only side effect was occasional soreness from the shot. A possible bonus is that the vaccine may help reduce the incidence of one kind of liver cancer, hepatoma, which statistical studies have shown to be slightly more common among people who have had hepatitis B.

Szmunes said it will take years of further study to tell whether the vaccine helps reduce hepatoma.

Divided party opens convention

BLACKPOOL, England (AP) — Britain's opposition Labor Party opened its annual convention here today with leftist and centrist delegates locked in a power struggle.

Delegates gathered in this north England seaside resort amid speculation that former Prime Minister James Callaghan, the 68-year-old party leader, would quit his post by Christmas.

Callaghan, who led the Laborites in the May 1979 election defeat at the hands of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservatives, appeared likely to win a crucial party struggle over how his successor will be named.

The ex-prime minister, a moderate who has union support, demands that the Laborite caucus in the House of Commons, on which moderates are in the majority, continue to elect the party leader. Leftists led by former Energy Secretary Tony Benn want the leftist-dominated party Executive Committee to have a major voice in the selection.

Observers believe Callaghan is more likely to retire soon if he is satisfied his successor will not be a committee appointee.

Other battles shaping up during the four-day convention involve a series of leftist policy planks adopted Sunday by the 28-member Executive Committee.

IMF says rich should help the poor

WASHINGTON (AP) — There is an "urgent need" for wealthy, industrial oil-producing nations to provide poor countries greater financial assistance, the International Monetary Fund says.

The IMF's key policy-making body, its Interim Committee, said poor nations are caught in a cross-fire of inadequate imports, mounting foreign debt and limited access to international financial markets as they attempt to achieve economic growth.

The IMF is taking steps to increase its financial assistance to poor nations, but it must also expand its own financial resources, the committee said in a statement following its meeting Sunday.

"It will be necessary for the fund to resort to further borrowing" in the next few years, the statement said.

The committee met Sunday in advance of the annual joint meeting of the 141-nation IMF and the World Bank on Tuesday.

President Carter is expected to address the opening session, although sources speculated he might change his mind if an acrimonious debate develops over a U.S.-backed decision by the IMF against seating the Palestine Liberation Organization as an observer.

Zimbabwe and the People's Republic of China are new members of the two institutions and will be attending their first meeting here.

It will be the last World Bank meeting presided over by Robert S. McNamara, the former U.S. secretary of defense, who is stepping down after 13 years as president of the bank.

Jacques de Larosiere, the managing director of the IMF, said at a news conference Sunday that the IMF might need to raise an additional $6.5 billion to $8 billion annually for its financial activities.

He said the money could be raised by borrowing on private financial markets, which the IMF does not now do, or by obtaining loans from oil-rich nations, such as Saudi Arabia and Kuwait.

"For the moment, there is no urgency. But we are looking at different possibilities, including market ones," he said. De Larosiere said the IMF would continue to rely on regular membership contributions, or quotas, for the bulk of its financing.

He acknowledged that recent negotiations with Saudi Arabia and Kuwait have not yet produced the hoped-for loans from those oil-rich countries.

"Obviously there was a problem of timing," he said. But he didn't rule out success in the future. "I shall continue the very favorable and useful relations with these countries in years ahead," he said.

Both Saudi Arabia and Kuwait are known to be unhappy over the IMF's refusal to grant the PLO observer status here and have balked at committing themselves to new loans because of this.

The Interim Committee agreed to study whether the IMF should extend temporary financial assistance to poor countries to offset sharp increases in the price of imported food, especially wheat.

Regarding the outlook for the world economy, the committee said inflation and the payments imbalances of poor and developing nations are the most pressing problems. It said fighting inflation must remain the top economic priority in many countries.

"Reduction of inflation and inflationary expectations was considered necessary for the restoration of conditions for better investment performance and sustained economic growth," the IMF statement said. It warned against "any premature shift to expansionary monetary and fiscal policies."

Mascot not likely to last long

NEW LONDON, Conn. (AP) — Objee, the Coast Guard Academy's new mascot, is not likely to last more than a couple of seasons. Black bears don't remain cute and lovable too long.

The 45-pound, 8-month-old North American black bear is the 28th cub to hold the title since 1923.

Objee 28 will make his debut Oct. 4, when the academy's football team, the Bears, plays host to Wesleyan University.

The cub arrived at the academy Sept. 21 from the Catskills Game Farm in New York and is expected to be the academy's mascot for two seasons. By then he'll be too big to handle, just as his predecessor was.

"The last mascot was as big as a refrigerator," said John Ochs, one of the cadets who cares for Objee.

"She was 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighed 385 pounds," could unlatch and open any door and could drink from drinking fountains, he said.

The name Objee has been passed down from one mascot to the next, Ochs said. "Objee is short for objectionable."

Motion is filed to increase number of single-bed cells
BALTIMORE (AP) — Facing a Wednesday deadline to end prison overcrowding, the state of Maryland has told a federal court that there are 25 more beds at the Maryland Penitentiary than originally thought.
A motion filed in U.S. District Court here Friday asked that the limit for the number of single-bed cells at the prison be increased from the current 1,003 to 1,028.
The extra 25 beds are the result of recent renovations at the prison.

double ceiling, or the practice of keeping two inmates in cells designed for one, at the Penitentiary and the House of Correction in Jessup.
Crowding inmates into the prisons, the court ruled, amounts to unreasonable punishment and violates the constitutional rights of inmates.
The court has ordered the state to eliminate

Montreal returns home clinging to slim margin

By RALPH BERNSTEIN
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Montreal Expos were home in the friendly confines of Olympic Stadium today, just a week away from a possible first championship in the franchise's 11-year history.

Manager Dick Williams and his team left Philadelphia Sunday confident but not overconfident that 1980 was their year.

The Expos beat the Philadelphia Phillies 8-3 Sunday and lead the National League East by half a game. They came to town one-half game behind the Phillies and took two of three.

Williams thought the key was beating Philadelphia ace Steve Carlton Saturday.

"Now (Sunday) we had our ace, Steve Rogers, going and we knew we could beat them, and we did," Williams said.

"But this thing could go right down to the last day of the season," Williams observed.

The Expos' magic number for clinching the East is seven. The Phillies is eight.

That is, any combination of Expos' victories and Phillies' losses totaling seven makes them a winner. Any combination of Phillies' wins and Expos' losses adding to eight sends the National League Championship Series to Philadelphia.

Montreal has three games starting tonight with the St. Louis Cardinals. The Phillies play four with the Chicago Cubs. Then, it's a three game final series' confrontation between the Expos and Phils in Montreal.

Phillies Manager Dallas Green promised some lineup changes against the Cubs, probably benching outfielder Greg Luzinski and catcher Bob Boone in favor of rookies Lonnie Smith and Keith Moreland.

There is even a possibility that Pete Rose might sit.

Luzinski (2-for-21), Boone (0-for-18), Rose (4-for-35) and Mike Schmidt (2-for-16) are 8 for their last 90 at bats collectively.

Crenshaw, Canizares capture golf tourneys

By The Associated Press
GOLF—Ben Crenshaw fired a 1-under-par 71 and won by four strokes over Jack Renner in a $300,000 tournament, finishing with a 72-hole total of 272, and Renner closed with a 70 for his 276. Tom Watson shot a 68 and finished in a third-place tie at 278 with Gary Hallberg, who shot a 68.

Jose Maria Canizares of Spain, shot a final round 8-under-par 64 to win the $240,000 Bob Hope Classic at Epsom, England. Canizares had a 72-hole total of 269, 19-under-par, one stroke better than Lee Trevino, Brian Waites of Britain and Severiano Ballesteros of Spain, who shared second place.

Jerilyn Britz grabbed a 1-shot lead after the rain-shortened second round of the Ladies Professional Golf Association's $150,000 Dallas tournament. She was 3-under-par after 12 holes of the round when officials halted play. Tied for second were Nancy Lopez-Melton, the first-round leader, and Joanne Carner, who posted an even-par 36 on the front nine before play was suspended. Lopez-Melton shot a 1-over-par 37 for nine holes before darkness caught the leaders.

TENNIS—Czechoslovakian Hana Mandlikova won the final five games to defeat Wendy Turnbull 6-3, 7-5 and capture the $100,000 Atlanta women's classic. Third-seeded Gene Mayer won a $175,000 San Francisco tournament by defeating No. 7 Elliot Teltscher 6-2, 2-6, 6-1.

AUTO RACING—Alan Jones clinched his first Formula One world championship with a victory in the crash-marred Canadian Grand Prix auto race on the 2.74-mile Ile du Notre Dame road course. Jones, who inherited the lead on lap 24 when Brazilian Nelson Piquet's engine blew, crossed the finish line far ahead of his Australian teammate, Carlos Reutemann who finished second.

Dale Earnhardt streaked into the lead when Cale Yarborough made a brief unscheduled pit stop with 12 laps left and won the Old Dominion 500 Grand National stock car race at Martinsville Speedway. Earnhardt, in a Chevrolet, was 1.35 seconds in front of Buddy Baker.

White's passing too much

By MIKE O'BRIEN
MILWAUKEE (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys volunteered compliment after compliment for the Green Bay Packers Sunday, but the charity was understandable.

For while the Packers played markedly better than they had in recent weeks, when reports swirled that Coach Bart Starr was about to be fired, they still came up 21 points short of the Cowboys.

And the main reason was Danny White, the Cowboys' young quarterback who has the thankless role of replacing retired Roger Staubach. He was more than sufficient for the role Sunday as the Cowboys beat the Packers 28-7 in a National Football League game.

White completed 16 of 20 passes for 217 yards and two touchdowns, and set up another touchdown with a 48-yard run on a fake punt.

TONY DORSETT and Robert Newhouse scored for the Cowboys on 1-yard runs as White directed ball-control scoring drives of 70, 70, 90 and 48 yards.

Coach Tom Landry was less than ecstatic about the play of his Cowboys, 3-1, and he insisted the Packers, 1-3, had something to do with that.

"We did some good things," Landry said. "But we really weren't very consistent. We were making a lot of errors. You don't do the things we did, jumping offside and things like that, when you're mentally ready to play football."

"But I don't think they (the Packers) are a bad team," he said. "They're just getting bad breaks."

"They didn't hit like they were an unhappy team," Dorsett said. "I know they're unhappy that they're losing, but they went out and played some pretty good football defensively. They didn't play like a team that lost 51-21 last week."

Starr said condolences would be out of order, despite the banners draped atop the left field bleachers at County Stadium. "Bye-Bye Bart," read one. "No interim coach — we want (George) Allen now," another proclaimed.

Asked if he expects to be coaching the Packers next Sunday, Starr snapped, "Yes, I do."

THE PACKERS, trailing 14-7, took the second half kickoff and drove to the Cowboys' 10-yard line. They tried for a first down on fourth and one, but fullback Gerry Ellis tried to sweep right end and was stopped for no gain by linebacker Bob Breunig.

The Cowboys responded with a 90-yard drive capped by a 5-yard touchdown pass from White to third string tight end Doug Cosbie.

"Obviously, that was a tremendously big swing at the time," Starr said. "I made an emotional decision to go for it (the first down). We were charged up and I made an emotional decision. Maybe it was not the soundest one."

"If they go in and score there after the fourth and one, it's a dogfight the rest of the way," Landry said.

The Cowboys scored their final touchdown on White's 20-yard pass to Drew Pearson with 3:51 to play after an interception by Dallas cornerback Steve Wilson.

A 26-yard run by Eddie Lee Ivey — the Packers' longest run from scrimmage this season — set up a 6-yard scoring run by Steve Atkins as the Packers tied the game 7-7 in the second quarter.

However, the Cowboys responded with a 70 yard, 17-play drive that consumed 8 minutes, 18 seconds. Newhouse plunged for the final yard as Dallas led 14-7 with just over a minute left in the first half.

Desperate Cincy avoids Astro sweep

HOUSTON (AP) — Disgruntled Cincinnati fans have been digging the Reds' grave all season.

"Nobody thinks we can win except us," Cincinnati manager John McNamara said sarcastically.

And if the struggling Reds eventually are eliminated from the National League Western Division race, Houston manager Bill Virdon Sunday gave them a fitting epitaph.

"The good teams die hard," Virdon said, after Cincinnati came back to beat Houston 8-5 and prevent the division-leading Astros from sweeping the pressure-packed series. "We got the quick lead but that doesn't guarantee victory. They can score runs, too."

AFTER BEING shut out in the first two games of the series and falling behind 4-1 on Sunday, the Reds could easily have been mistaken for dead.

But Cincinnati right fielder Ken Griffey revived his teammates with four straight hits, including a two-run home run in the fifth inning and a game-winning double in the seventh.

The Reds left town limping, but still in the race.

"We can't afford to lose any more," Griffey said. "It's obvious we are in trouble. We figured to come out of here with two victories and go home with a pretty good shot. But you look at it. We've got a chance, it's just a little slimmer."

Houston second baseman Joe Morgan got the Astros off to a fast start in Houston's three-run first inning when he hit Frank Pastore's second pitch over the right field fence for his 11th home run of the season. Singles by Jose Cruz and Alan Ashby gave Houston two more runs in the inning.

The other Houston runs came in the second on a grounder by Terry Puhl and in the fifth on Ashby's second RBI single.

CINCINNATI scored one run in the first off Houston starter Ken Forsch when Dave Collins walked and scored on a sacrifice fly by George Foster.

"I wasn't really up for this one. I just went through my regular game," Griffey said. "I tried to get things started. When I hit the homer, I knew it was gone. I just didn't know how far."

Griffey got the Reds started with his homer and completed the chore in the seventh inning with the go-ahead hit. Collins and Dave Concepcion also had run-scoring hits in the seventh and Tom Hume drove home the final Reds run in the eighth.

"It would have been nice to have a sweep but we can't get it all at once," Astros first-baseman Denny Walling said. "We're seeing everybody's top pitchers. It's just like in '78 when we were 16 games under .500, we wanted to beat the top teams. Now we're seeing it in reverse."

McNamara, when asked if the Reds still could win, said "I don't think it's that far-fetched. As long as there's three games to play, there's life. If that day comes (elimination), we'll just talk about next year. Stranger things have happened."

Saints' Nolan finally gives up on Muncie

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — With the team off to a dismal 0-4 season, managers of the New Orleans Saints have traded star running back Chuck Muncie, who rushed for team records but had trouble making it to practice.

Muncie will go to the San Diego Chargers for an undisclosed draft choice, it was announced Sunday.

"I worked with him for a couple of years to try to make him understand that this is a team sport not an individual one," Coach Dick Nolan said Sunday night.

"There are a lot of people out there who work extremely hard to win ... and we're not going to sacrifice those people for one individual," Nolan said.

Observers have said there could be more changes in the Saints lineup with the deadline for National Football League trading two weeks away.

"We have to wait and see," Nolan said when asked about any further shifts in personnel.

The 6-foot-3, 233-pound Muncie came from the University of California as the Saints' No. 1 draft choice in 1976.

He rushed for 1,198 yards last season and as the team's star running back, entered the 1980 with a team career record of 3,218 yards.

Last season, with Muncie having his best season as a professional, the Saints posted an 8-8 record — best in the 14-year history of the franchise.

Roaches tryout pays for Oilers

By JOE KAY
CINCINNATI (AP) — Carl Roaches was driving an ice cream truck when the Houston Oilers gave him a tryout this summer.

The 3-foot-8 kick returner put his new teammates in good humor Sunday, returning a punt 68 yards to set up Toni Fritsch's game-winning field goal in a 13-10 National Football League victory over the Cincinnati Bengals.

Roaches took a Pat McNally kick on his 12-yard line, spun off a few tacklers and tight-rope the right sideline until Nathan Poole caught him from behind on the Cincinnati 20. Houston went on to post its third straight victory since an opening loss to Pittsburgh.

"I got an arm on him and I forced him to the sidelines," said Bengals linebacker Andrew Melntree. "But he's a real good athlete. He made something out of nothing."

THE RETURN was Houston's biggest offensive play of the day. Minus fullback Earl Campbell, the Oilers managed just 42 net yards rushing on 26 plays — a minuscule 1.6 yard average.

Deprived of the ground attack, quarterback Ken Stabler, master of the short passing game, nibbled at the Cincinnati defense with tosses to seven different receivers. He rolled up 241 yards, completing 26 of 31 attempts, but wasn't happy with the offense.

"They used a new wrinkle which gave us trouble. They moved in a fifth man to pass cover our receiver. We didn't play well against it," Stabler said.

"They only scored 13 points on us," said Bengals cornerback Louis Breeden. "They didn't make a lot of big plays on us. They completely abandoned their running game."

"Our coaches warned us Stabler was a control-type passer. I think you can count on one hand the number of times he threw downfield longer than 10 yards."

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Steve Grogan has had his problems with the hard-to-please local fans. One bad series and they overlook all the good games to unleash a torrent of boos.

But this National Football League season has been different.

The six-year veteran from Kansas State has thrown eight touchdown passes to tie for the NFL lead, has completed 60.4 percent of his aeriels and is the top-rated quarterback in the American Football Conference.

He should receive a hearty welcome tonight when the high-scoring New England Patriots, 2-1, host the up- (ABC-Ch 9, 8 p.m.) and-down Denver Broncos, 1-2, in a nationally televised game. But there

PETE JOHNSON, making good his vow to regain the Bengals' starting fullback job he lost in training camp, supplied most of the offense as Cincinnati rolled up a 10-0 lead in the second quarter.

Johnson carried five times and caught two Jack Thompson passes in an 11-play drive for the Cincinnati touchdown. Thompson hit Don Bass with a 12-yard TD strike capping the 36-yard drive.

After Ian Sunter's 26-yard field goal, Stabler rallied Houston 70 yards in 9 plays, with Ronnie Coleman carrying 1 yard for the score. On the previous play, the Oilers lost a fumble hand-off, but an offside penalty on Cincinnati gave them a second chance.

Fritsch's field goals from 27 and 29 yards in the fourth quarter gave the Bengals their third loss in four games.

Thompson scrambled to the Houston 28 with four seconds left in the game, but Cincinnati had no time outs and the clock ran out.

"It's not pretty the way we've been winning, but I'll take it," Stabler said.

But the fans didn't show their appreciation until the regular season. Backup quarterback Matt Cavanaugh had two outstanding preseason games and when Grogan started slowly in the third game against Philadelphia here, the fans started calling for Cavanaugh.

Grogan had the fans on his side in a strong season-opening game, a 34-17 triumph over Cleveland. And he comes back home after firing three touchdown passes against the Seahawks. His prime targets are Stanley Morgan and Harold Jackson.

Denver quarterback Matt Robinson is coming off a less impressive performance.

Even Grant says Baylor for real

By Associated Press

One of the larger questions circulating the Southwest Conference recently was just how good are the Baylor Bears.

Real good, says their coach, the coach of the Texas Tech Red Raiders and R.C. Slocum, Texas A&M defensive coordinator.

The Bears played an intimidating defense that set two school records Saturday night in an 11-3 victory over the Texas Tech Red Raiders.

Baylor is now off to its best start since 1960 when the Bears started the season 5-0.

Defending SWC champion Houston comes calling in Waco Saturday night and the struggling Cougars will need a superb effort to handle the unbeaten Bears.

"This is really a pretty good football team we've got," said Baylor Coach Grant Teaff. "I wasn't ready to say that before but I think we're pretty good. We really played well."

"Tonight (Saturday) was the first big test for our defense. We were ready and we played well so I think we've got a pretty good team. It looks like this team will do what it takes because we did it tonight."

What Baylor did was sack Texas Tech quarterback 12 times for a school record 121 yards in losses. The Red Raiders, partly because of two poor center snaps which resulted in safeties and lost yardage, ended up with a minus 36 yards rushing.

Tech Rex Dockery said

"We just got whipped. Their defensive front people just dominated us. I thought we could move the ball on them but they were just too physical."

Slocum, who was scouting the game for the idle Aggies, said "Baylor impressed me. They are very, very good on defense and their offense is a lot better than it looked tonight. I think the rain bothered them some."

It marked the first time since 1966 that a Baylor team had escaped Lubbock unscathed.

"I came home and won one finally," said Teaff, a former assistant at Texas Tech. "It was a good feeling."

Houston won its first game of the season, defeating North Texas State 24-20.

Rice provided the biggest shocker, upsetting Louisiana State 17-7 before 41,000 fans in Rice Stadium. Quarterback Robert Hoffmann's 15-yard scoring pass to Frank Wilson and Calvin Vance's 24-yard touchdown run pulled off Coach Ray Alborn's biggest victory as headman of the Owls.

In other games, Arkansas escaped Tulsa 13-10, Texas bombed Oregon State 35-0, Georgia beat Texas Christian 34-3, and Southern Methodist riddled Texas-Arlington 32-16.

SWC regular season play winds into high gear Saturday.

TCU is at Arkansas while Texas Tech meets Texas A&M which will be starting quarterback David Bell in place of Mike Moseley.

Oliver has played in all 156 Texas games this season and also has knocked in 100 runs for the first time in his career.

Earlier this season, he reached 2,000 hits in his 12th major league season.

The one-time Pittsburgh Pirate pointed out he played in only 133 games with Texas in 1978 and 136 in 1979 because of injuries. He hit .324 in 1978 and .323 in 1979 and is batting .316 after Sunday's game.

The Rangers, who snapped an eight-game losing streak Saturday night, are 10 games under .500 and a distant fourth in the American League West.

The Mariners lost Saturday night and Sunday after posting a club record six consecutive victories.

"We looked flat the past two games," Seattle Manager Maury Wills said. "That's normal. We burned a lot of energy during our winning streak. We figured to come down a little bit."

In the Mariners' 1980 finale at the Kingdome, John Griggs' two-run homer in the seventh inning broke a 1-1 tie and made rookie right-hander John Butcher, 2-3, the winner. Butcher worked the first six innings. Jim Beattie, 5-14, was the loser.

Butcher scattered seven hits and struck out six. He gave up singles to Bruce Bochte, Danny Meyer and Jerry Narron in the fourth to lose the shutout.

Cubs expel Bucs in NL; Orioles stay alive in AL

By Associated Press

The defending world champion Pittsburgh Pirates lost to the Chicago Cubs 3-2 Sunday and were eliminated from the National League East pennant chase. The Pirates lost all three games of their weekend series with the Cubs.

Mick Kelleher's two-run triple was the big hit for Chicago. It also led to the ejection of Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner and Dave Parker and John Milner of the Pirates.

With one out in the sixth, ex-Midland Cub Jim Tracy singled. Mike O'Berry, another ex-Midland, took a 3-2 and from Bert Blyleven, which trails New York by 4½ games. The Tigers thought was strike three and Tracy was doubled trying to steal second.

But umpire Jerry Crawford said it was ball four, leaving the Cubs with two on before Kelleher tripled.

After Kelleher's hit, Tanner stormed out of the dugout and got into an argument with Crawford, who earlier this season had a run-in with led to a 15-day suspension of Pirate infielder Bill Madlock.

Milner and Parker were ejected from the bench by first base umpire Doug Harvey. As Milner left he kept throwing helmets onto the field.

Montreal moved into first place in the NL East, one-half game ahead of the Phillies after beating Philadelphia 8-3 behind a five-hit by Steve Rogers and four runs batted in by Gary Carter.

In the NL West, first-place Houston lost to Cincinnati 8-5 as Ken Griffey slammed four hits, including a two-run homer. Second-place Los Angeles also lost, 7-5 to San Diego, to remain two games behind.

Luis Salazar raced home from third with the Padres' winning run in the eighth after Dave Lopes hit a pop fly out in front of him for an error. Dave Winfield began San Diego's rally with a double off loser Steve Howe. Randy Bass singled and Salazar's single made it 5-4.

Howe walked pinch-hitter Craig Stimpac to load the bases and reliever Don Stanhouse walked pinch-hitter Broderick Perkins to tie the game 5-5. Fernando Valenzuela relieved to face pinch-hitter Barry Evans. Evans popped to Lopes and was out on the infield fly rule, but Lopes lost the ball, allowing Salazar to score. Gene Richards singled home the final run.

Mike Scott of the Mets threw the first shutout of his career, an eight-hit 8-0 victory over St. Louis. The Giants' game at Atlanta was rained out.

Elsewhere in the American League, Jim Rice's three-run homer keyed Boston's 7-3 triumph over Toronto; Minnesota handed Kansas City its eighth straight loss, a club record, 8-7 as Glenn Adams slammed a two-run homer; Bob Molinaro and Todd Cruz each drove in three runs to pace the White Sox past California 8-1; John Grubb's two-run homer clinched Texas' 4-1 victory over Seattle, and York relief ace Rich Gossage on a two-run pinch-hit homer by Champ Summers in the eighth, then won it in the 10th when Bob Watson misplayed Tom Brookens' ground ball with the bases loaded.

Dome officials are mystified

PONTIAC, Mich. (AP) — Officials at the Silverdome are trying to figure out why a mount holding a large color television monitor ripped loose from the ceiling and sent the set crashing down into the press box.

There were only a few communications workers in the press box when the incident occurred at 10:45 a.m. Sunday, prior to the Minnesota Vikings-Detroit Lions football game, and no one was injured.

Resurgent Lions roar again as Sims sparks 27-7 victory

By The Associated Press

The Detroit Lions and the Buffalo Bills, two of pro football's laughing stocks in the 1970s, are getting the last laugh in 1980, joining the San Diego Chargers as the only undefeated teams after impressive victories Sunday, the fourth week of the National Football League season. The Lions, resurgent with rookie running back Billy Sims, healthy quarterback Gary Danielson and an opportunistic defense, crushed the Minnesota Vikings 27-7. The Bills, paced by quarterback Joe Ferguson and a rugged defense, dominated the Oakland Raiders 24-7. San Diego, champions in the AFC West last year, rolled over the winless Kansas City Chiefs 24-7, but two other teams dropped from the unbeaten ranks. The Philadelphia Eagles, so impressive in Monday night's rout of the New York Giants, couldn't handle Otis Anderson and were beaten 24-14 by the St. Louis Cardinals, winners of their first game of the year. The Atlanta Falcons knocked the San Francisco 49ers from the unbeaten 20-17.

Besides Kansas City, the New York Jets and New Orleans Saints also dropped to 0-4. The Baltimore Colts downed the once highly-regarded Jets 35-21, and the Miami Dolphins scored all their points in the fourth quarter to beat New Orleans 21-16.

ELSEWHERE, the Pittsburgh Steelers rebounded from last week's loss to bury the Chicago Bears 38-3; the Cleveland Browns outscored the Tampa Bay Buccaneers 34-27; the Dallas Cowboys whipped the Green Bay Packers 28-7; the Houston Oilers slipped by the Cincinnati Bengals 13-10; the Los Angeles Rams routed the New York Giants 28-7, and the Seattle Seahawks blanked the Washington Redskins 14-0.

The Denver Broncos play the New England Patriots on Monday night. Sims, the first-year phenom from Oklahoma, continued as the league's top ground gainer, rolling up 157 yards in 27 carries. Danielson tossed a pair of short TD passes, including a 5-yarder to Fred Scott with 9:37 left in the fourth quarter that gave Detroit a 17-7 lead.

The Lions then iced it when defensive back Ray Oldham picked up one of Detroit's five interceptions and raced 29 yards for the score. The Lions, who turned a 7-7 half-time tie into a rout, have not been scored on in the second half this season. They were 2-14 last year without Sims and rookie placekicker Eddie Murray, who had two field goals Sunday. The last time they had a winning record was in 1972.

THE BILLS' last winning campaign was in 1975. Sunday's win combined a stubborn defense and Ferguson's cool quarterbacking.

The defense, led by left end Ben Williams, forced three fumbles and had two interceptions while holding Kenny King, the AFC's leading rusher going into the game, to 24 yards.

Ferguson, whose controlled attack enabled Buffalo to hold the ball for more than 41 minutes, hit on his first 11 passes, missing only when he threw incomplete to stop the clock with four seconds left in the first half, setting up a field goal that gave the Bills a 17-0 lead. In all, Ferguson completed 17 of 22 passes for 175 yards.

Anderson, who hasn't run with the authority he showed in last year's rookie season, powered to second-half TDs of 14 and 37 yards, finishing with 151 yards on 27 carries. The Cardinals also intercepted three passes by Philadelphia quarterback Ron Jaworski.

Steve Bartkowski's 10-yard TD pass to Alfred Jackson and Lynn Cain's 2-yard TD run, both in the fourth quarter, helped Atlanta topple the 49ers, whose Steve DeBerg completed 32 of 51 passes for 345 yards.

Veteran quarterback Bob Griese came off the bench to spark Miami to 21 points in the fourth quarter, finishing with 16 of 23 passing for 241 yards and one TD. The game-winner was Delvin Williams' 8-yard TD run with 2:36 left. Rookie David Woodley started for his first NFL action but completed just 4 of 15 passes with three interceptions.

GRIESE's performance was one of several strong outings by seasoned NFL quarterbacks.

Pittsburgh's Terry Bradshaw fired four TD passes, three of them to wide receiver Jim Smith, and ended the day with 12 of 19 passing for 217 yards in the Steelers' win over Chicago.

—Brian Sipe missed his first six passes then completed 22 of 28 for three TDs — two to Calvin Hill — and 318 yards in the Browns' victory over the Bucs, whose Doug Williams had 30 completions in 56 attempts for three TDs and 343 yards.

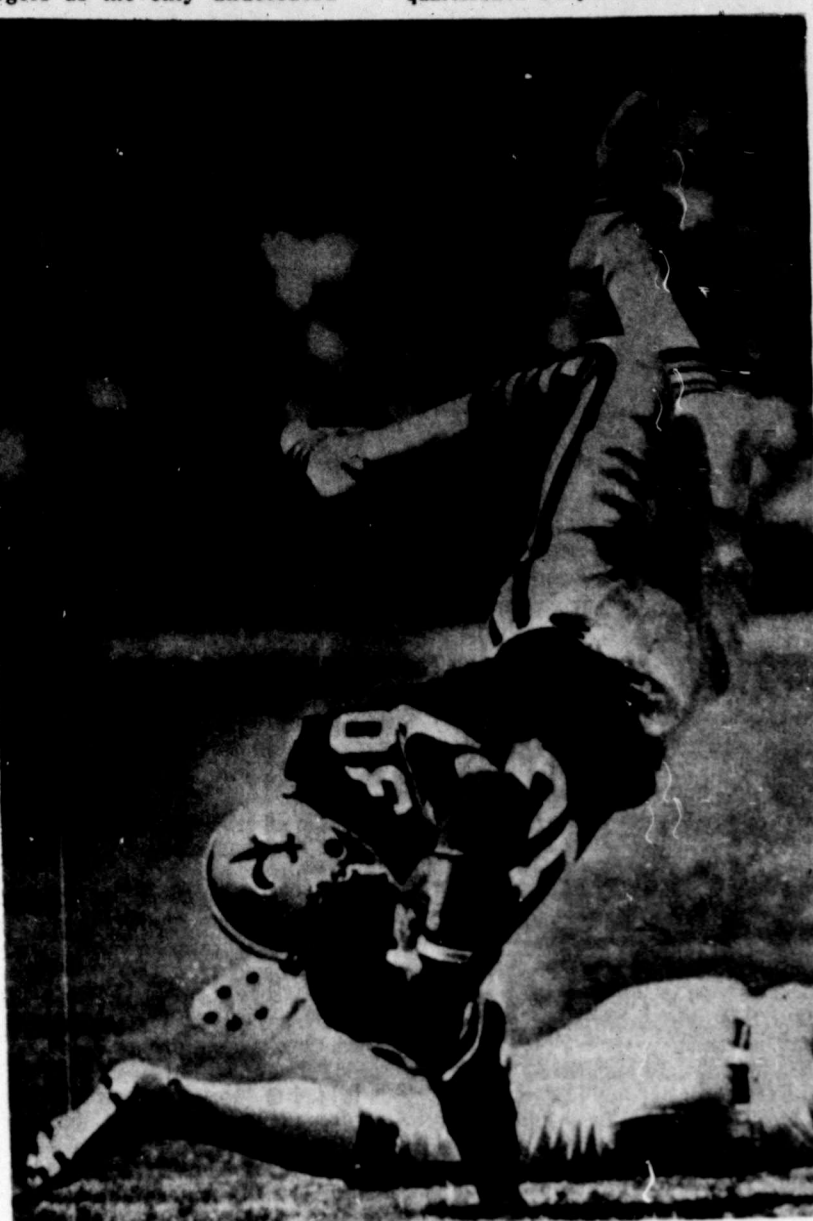

—Dan Fouts fired scoring passes of 15 and 16 yards to Kellen Winslow as San Diego rolled over Kansas City.

—Baltimore's Bert Jones connected on 18 passes in 25 attempts for 275 yards and three TDs in beating the Jets for the second time this season.

And several young quarterbacks continued to flourish when given some daylight.

—The Rams' Vince Ferragamo, fighting for the starting job against the injured Pat Haden, was on target with 14 of 18 passes, including 11 completions on key third down plays. Defensive back Nolan Cromwell forced a fumble and intercepted a Giant pass, setting up two of Elvis Peacock's three short TD bursts.

—Jim Zorn, Seattle's exciting left-hander, faked a pass and went 21 yards to score on a quarterback draw and Dan Doornink cemented the victory over Washington with an 8-yard TD run. But the surprise of the game was the inspired play of the Seahawk defense, which had been ranked next to last in the NFL going into the game.

Seminoles bite the dust

Florida, Oklahoma, Auburn among upset victims

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Only one major college football team in the state of Florida has lost a game this season and — surprise! — it's Florida State.

The ninth-ranked Seminoles' 18-game regular-season winning streak came to an end Saturday at the hands of the upstart University of Miami, which won 10-9. The Hurricanes, 4-0, are off to their best start in 26 years.

Meanwhile, the Florida Gators, like Miami trying to crack the national rankings, boosted their 1980 record to 3-0 after a winless 1979 campaign with a 21-15 triumph over previously unbeaten Mississippi State.

Miami's squeaker over Florida State was not the biggest shocker of an upset-filled weekend. Would you believe Stanford, a 30-13 loser to Boston College last week, knocking off fourth-ranked Oklahoma 31-14? (Boston College, by the way, bowed to Villanova 20-9.)

How about Oregon 34, No. 13 Washington 10? Or South Carolina 17, No. 17 Michigan 14? Or Tennessee 42, No. 18 Auburn 7?

THREE MORE members of the Top Twenty were beaten, but at least they lost to higher-ranked teams — runnerup Ohio State trimmed No. 20 Arizona State 38-21, third-ranked Nebraska beat No. 11 Penn State 21-7 and No. 14 North Carolina turned back No. 19 Maryland 17-3.

Elsewhere, top-rated Alabama crushed Vanderbilt 41-0, fifth-ranked Southern California defeated Minnesota 24-7, No. 6 Pitt trounced Temple

OSU, UCLA on TV

NEW YORK (AP) — Next Saturday's college football game between undefeated Ohio State and UCLA in Columbus, Ohio, will be televised regionally to much of the nation, ABC-TV announced Sunday.

Air time will be 12:30 p.m., with the kickoff at 12:50. Both teams have 3-0 records with Ohio State ranked second and UCLA 16th in last week's Associated Press poll.

ABC will announce its other regional telecasts today.

36-2, No. 7 Texas blanked Oregon State 35-0 and No. 10 Georgia battered Texas Christian 34-3. Eighth-ranked Notre Dame was idle.

In the Second Ten, No. 12 Missouri whipped San Diego State 31-7, No. 15 Arkansas nipped Tulsa 13-10 and No. 16 UCLA mauled Wisconsin 35-0.

Quarterback Jim Kelly's 1-yard run and a 26-yard field goal by Dan Miller put Miami ahead of Florida State.

"We felt like if we made them throw we would win," said Coach Howard Schnellenberger, whose Hurricanes led the nation in rushing defense coming into the game, "but it almost didn't work out that way."

STANFORD snapped Oklahoma's 20-game home winning streak as John Elway completed 20 of 34 passes for 237 yards, including two touchdown tosses to Andre Tyler and one to Ken Margerum, and scored himself on a 1-yard run.

"John Elway put on the greatest exhibition of quarterbacking play and passing I have ever seen on this field," said Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer. "He controlled the game with his short passing game. He did exactly what he wanted to do — controlled the ball. We used five or six defensive backs, but we couldn't stop him."

While Oklahoma was being held to 153 yards on the ground, Nebraska's Jarvis Redwine got 189 all by himself — only two backs have ever rushed for more against Penn State — and scored twice while the defense sacked the quarterback nine times and took the ball away from the Nittany Lions seven times.

"A couple of times they did things we didn't expect," said Penn State center Bob Jagers. "There were a few loops and things I didn't pick up. On passing downs, they threw a lot of stunts that we didn't adjust to."

Art Schlichter became Ohio State's all-time leader in touchdown passes, throwing his 20th, 21st and 22nd while completing 14 of 19 for 271 yards and three TDs against Arizona State.

NORTH CAROLINA'S Amos Lawrence rushed for 103 yards against Maryland and caught a 15-yard touchdown pass while backup tailback Kelvin Bryant ran 6 yards for the Tar Heels' other TD.

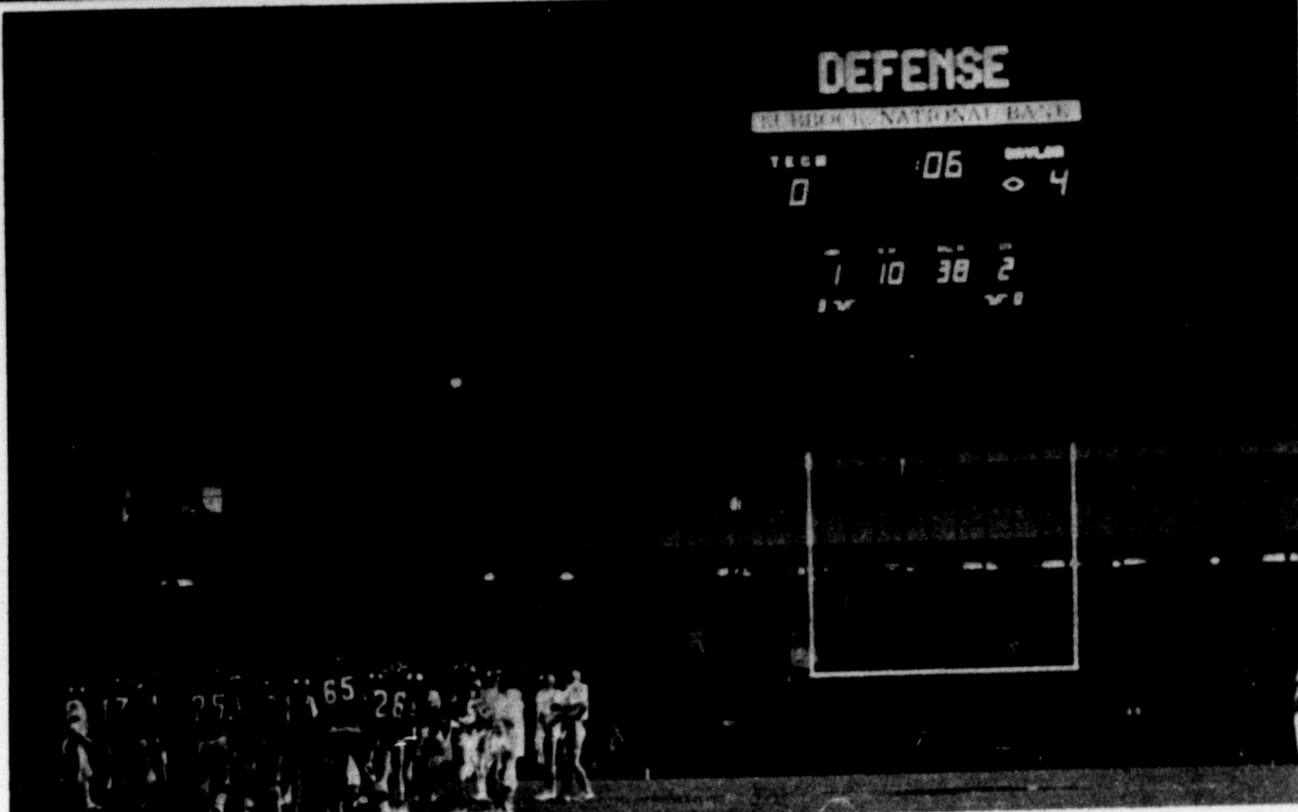

Short runs by All-American George Rogers and Johnnie Wright in the second half brought South Carolina from a 14-3 halftime deficit over Michigan. Rogers rushed for 142 yards on 36 carries.

"Beating Texas when I was at Texas Tech and beating Pitt when I was at West Virginia were big wins in my career," said Carolina's Jim Carlen, "but this one ranks up near the top."

Tennessee visited Auburn for only the second time ever and found the home team an obliging host. James Berry scored three times and Jeff Olszewski scored one TD and passed for another while completing 12 of 15 attempts.

Marcus Allen rushed for 216 yards and two fourth-quarter touchdowns to lead Southern Cal past Minnesota while Dan Marino threw three scoring passes in the first half as Pitt ripped Temple.

Freshman Kevin Nelson, little brother of Stanford's Darrin Nelson, replaced UCLA's injured Freeman McNeil and rushed for 123 yards on 20 carries as the Bruins buried Wisconsin.

With a unique 4-0 score and halftime rapidly approaching, the Jones Stadium scoreboard accurately sums up the Baylor-Texas Tech game in one word.

Easier than it looked for Bears

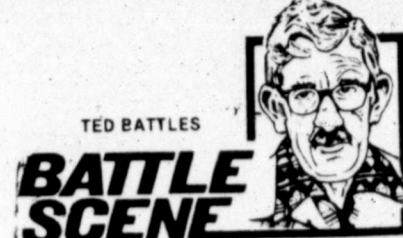

Grant Teaff was pointing out that the 4-0 halftime score could easily have been 21-0, "it was a matter of inches."

"We played very well, but it shouldn't have been that close at half. We were just missing on everything," which is one reason he switched from Jay Jeffrey, the kid brother of the Neal Jeffrey who quarterbacked the Bears to their 1974 Cotton Bowl, to Mike Brannan, a "third string" sophomore in the second half.

Brannan guided Baylor on the resistance wilting 69-yard touchdown drive in the fourth period, twice producing big plays on third down to keep it moving. It came shortly after Tech's Jesse Garcia made things sticky with a 48-yard field goal to leave the Raiders trailing 4-3.

THE SWITCH really wasn't much of a gamble. Jeffrey, a junior, last year directed Baylor's scout team as he sat out a season after switching from Missouri, where he played in 1977 and 1978.

Brannan isn't your every day bench warmer. As a freshman, the 6-3 from Lake Jackson Brazoswood was thrust into the breach in last year's SMU heart-skipper at Texas Stadium and responded with 120 yards rushing, second most ever by a BU quarterback, and 134 yards passing to become a starter the rest of the season. He climaxed it with a two-TD, MVP Peach Bowl performance against Clemson. If it weren't for a leg injury suffered at Atlanta, he'd still be starting, but he missed all of spring practice.

Getting down to specifics, Teaff said Jeffrey was not only just missing his receivers in the first half, but pointed out the Baylor offense lost a 55-yard gain on a pass because of a penalty, a fourth-and-one sneak at the Tech 31 just missed by inches while an interception by Tech's Jim Hart erased another threat after Baylor had moved swiftly from its 20 to the Tech 15.

SO THINGS worked out for the Bears, who now take a 3-0 record into Saturday's game against defending SWC champion Houston at Waco. The Cougars are 1-2 and struggling, but the fun-and-games segment of the schedule is over and Baylor can expect a Cougar with claws Saturday.

Tech, meanwhile, heads for College Station and a crossroads game with the Aggies, wondering on the way what it takes to win. Like Jeffrey, the Raiders, now 2-2, are within inches of doing it.

Despite all the Raiders' offensive inadequacies over the first three periods, they were still in the game, thanks to superb defensive play. They bottled the Bears deep in their own territory in the third period and finally made it pay off when a punt from the end zone carried out to the BU 40. Tech managed just nine yards in six plays, but salvaged Garcia's field goal.

THEN, it was almost a replay of the North Carolina game when defensive back Tate Randle intercepted a pass in the fourth quarter and returned 23 yards to the 19 with Tech behind only 9-3. The Raiders couldn't capitalize on the opportunity then and they couldn't Saturday when Randle intercepted on the first play following the kickoff after Garcia closed the gap to 4-3.

True, the Raiders ground out two first downs, but wound up punting from their own 46, showing a net gain of three yards in six plays.

With a running game that showed minus 36 yards in 47 attempts, most of which came on 46 yards in quarterback sacks and 45 in safety center snaps, Ron Reeves' 138 yards passing was virtually negated.

Coach Rex Dockery summed up Tech's woes, "We couldn't run on them and we couldn't protect (pass-protect) on them."

The wonder of it is that Tech kept it as close as it did.

Holmes just a fighter, Ali special, says Dundee

By ED SCHUYLER JR.
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — "No-body is taking Larry Holmes cheap," says Angelo Dundee. But he is just a fighter. Muhammad is something else."

Dundee has been in the corner for all of Muhammad Ali's fights. He saw Ali beat Sonny Liston twice. He saw him knock out George Foreman and he watched while Ali rallied to stop Joe Frazier in Manila.

Thursday night, Dundee expects to see Ali beat Larry Holmes and become heavyweight champion for the fourth time at age 38.

"He's 33," Dundee said Sunday. "Five years he laid off. He didn't take any beatings."

Ali was out of boxing for 3 1/2 years when he was convicted of draft evasion for refusing to be inducted into the Army, a conviction that was overturned by the U.S. Supreme Court. He has not fought since becoming champion for a third time by outpointing Leon Spinks at New Orleans Sept. 15, 1978.

Ali announced his retirement in June, 1979, and his weight ballooned to 256 pounds. It now stands at about 220.

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠954 ♠62 ♠K85 ♠AQ954
Partner opens the bidding with one no trump. What do you respond?

A.—Only two actions come to mind—a slightly conservative raise to two no trump, or a full-blooded three no trump game, even though this contract is by no means certain. The game will probably depend on how many tricks your club suit will produce, not how many points partner holds. That is a gamble we are willing to take.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠9542 ♠862 ♠95 ♠K632
The bidding has proceeded: West North East South 1 ♠ Dbie. Rdbie. ? What action do you take?

A.—You don't have to tell partner you're weak—unless someone is lying through his teeth, partner already knows that from the auction. The only time you bid on a weak hand in this situation is when you have a clear preference for one suit and you are afraid partner will bypass it. These conditions do not apply here, so pass and let partner bail himself out in his best suit.

Q.3—Both vulnerable with 60 on score, as South you hold:

♠AQ62 ♠Q85 ♠A96 ♠K94
What is your opening bid?

A.—Technically, your correct opening bid is a "convenient" one club. Tactically, however, in this partscore situation it is wise to be more flexible as far as your no trump range is concerned, and we would choose one no trump. First, it is an accurate description of your shape, and you are only a jack shy of the necessary strength. Then there is the preemptive value of the bid. Finally, should the opponents compete, partner will be in an excellent position to decide what to do.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AQ98742 ♠93 ♠KJ ♠82

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West 1 ♠ Pass 1 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass 3 ♠ Pass 4 ♠ Pass ? What action do you take?

A.—Partner's three-suited auction does not guarantee a singleton club—it merely shows a powerhouse in support of spades. Since you might have two fast club losers, all you can do now is invite slam. Our choice would be a raise over game to five spades—in an attempt to get across to partner our concern about the unbid suit.

A.—You have a fine hand (probably the best hand at the table), yet there is nothing you can do with it. If you double, you might end up in a 4-2 diamond fit! Since it is not a wise policy to overcall at the two-level on a four-card suit, the most prudent course is to pass and hope that your opponents get into trouble.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

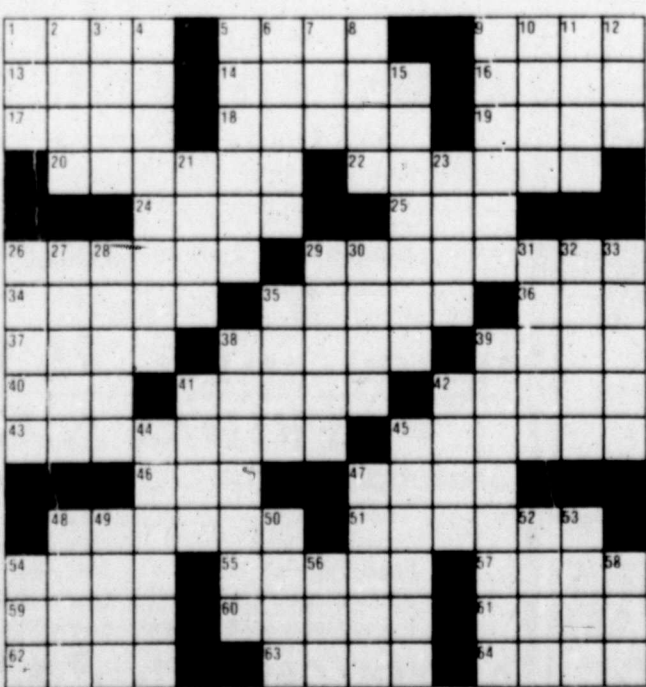

♠AKJ2 ♠5 ♠92 ♠AJ9532
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one club. What action do you take?

A.—Overcalling on a four-card suit is anathema to us, especially on those hands where our longest suit has been bid by an opponent. Nevertheless, this hand cries out for a one spade overcall. First, its preemptive value could shut the opponents out of a red-suit contract. Secondly, you need find partner with only spade length and a card or two to make a game!

It's back again to belt tightening

By LOUISE COOK Associated Press Writer

Food prices are on the rise again, and it's time to dust off your money-saving skills.

The summer drought has damaged crops like corn and soybeans used for animal feed. Higher grain prices mean higher meat prices.

Millions of chickens died during the hot weather, including many valuable broiler hens. Fewer chickens mean higher poultry prices.

Sugar production is not increasing fast enough to keep pace with rising demand. And that means higher sugar prices.

And the farm prices tell only part of the story. Billions of dollars are added to food bills on the road from farm to supermarket. The amount varies from item to item. On the average, however, two-thirds of the money spent on U.S. farm-produced foods goes for marketing costs — transportation, packaging, labor, etc. The farm value accounts for only about one-third of the final price tag.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture is still predicting that retail food prices at the end of 1980 will be 8 percent to 10 percent higher than they were a year earlier. The most likely increase, says the department, is right in the middle — 9 percent.

But the department also warns that the rate of increase during the second half of the year will be much steeper than it was during the first half, when the Consumer Price Index showed that the cost of food at home rose less than 2 percent. And prices next year could rise by 11 percent to 15 percent as the full impact of the dry, hot weather works its way to the retail level.

Start your saving program by looking at where your money goes. How much of your food bill, for example, isn't really food at all?

According to Supermarket Magazine, a trade publication, Americans spent $162.6 billion in grocery stores in 1978, the latest year for which figures are available. About 78 percent of the money went for food and beverages. The rest of the money — 22 percent — was for non-food items like paper goods, pet foods and health and beauty aids.

Check your budget for non-essentials in both food and non-food categories. How much are you willing to pay for the convenience of something like paper plates? Americans spent $4.6 billion on paper goods in grocery stores in 1978 — more than they spent on fresh milk. Do you pick up a six-pack without thinking? Grocery store sales of beer in 1978 added up to $7.3 billion; sales of fresh poultry totaled only $3.9 billion.

Learn to be a smart shopper at the supermarket. Don't assume that a special display means a lower price. Compare products on the regular shelves with the ones in those free-standing displays at the end of the aisles to make sure you get the best deal.

The years have brought some substantial shifts in spending patterns. A recently released Department of Agriculture report on household food consumption showed, for example, that the percentage of the food dollar spent on soft drinks, punches and prepared deserts went up 23 percent from 1965 to 1977.

The share of the food dollar that goes for meat, poultry and fish increased only 5 percent during the same 12 years, but these items still take the biggest bite of the food budget — more than 34 cents out of every dollar.

To cut costs without cutting meat from your diet, watch for specials and compare price per serving instead of price per pound. The cheapest item is not the most economical if a lot of what you pay for is fat and bone that winds up in the garbage.

As a general rule, you can expect three to four servings per pound from steak, ground beef, round steak, lean stew meat, boneless liver, center cut ham, veal cutlet and fish steaks.

You'll get two to three servings per pound from roasts, ham, poultry, dressed fish and most steaks and chops. And you'll get only one to two servings per pound from short ribs, chicken wings and backs, rib chops, spareribs, breast of lamb or veal and porterhouse, T-bone and club steaks.

Saratoga due for facelift

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The USS Saratoga, one of the nation's 13 aircraft carriers, docks at the Naval Shipyard here Tuesday for a $526 million overhaul that will put some wind in the sails of the area's economy.

The 28-month project will add 2,500 civilian and 1,500 military jobs, and generate millions of dollars for businesses.

Mayor William Green called the arrival an event "all Philadelphians can take pride in."

"For many years Philadelphians have been bombarded with reports on plant closings and relocations, government facility shutdowns and a general perception that our city and region cannot compete," he said. "It is our goal to show that Philadelphia can compete effectively and economically."

The 1,046-foot-long, 25-year-old vessel, which has seen service in the Middle East, the Caribbean and Vietnam, will steam up the Delaware River and dock Tuesday afternoon.

It left Jacksonville, Fla., on Sunday, carrying a 2,121-member crew, 186 wives, 215 children, 43 other relatives, 15 dogs, five cats, 517 cars and trucks, 75 motorcycles, 29 campers, six private boats and two mobile homes.

"It's like Noah's Ark," said Chief Petty Officer Tom Bliss Jr., who had his father along.

The jet fighters were gone from the flight deck, and the hangar deck two stories below was filled with crewmembers' cars.

Vice President Walter Mondale, who led the Carter Administration drive to do the overhaul here rather than at a private shipyard in Newport News, Va., will speak at a ceremony Tuesday as the ship steams up the Delaware River. After Mondale announced the contract in 1978, a coalition of southern lawmakers tried to shift the project to Virginia. Business, labor and political leaders from Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware united to scuttle that effort.

Some 1,400 of the crew will remain aboard during the work, which is designed to extend the life of the ship by 15 years.

The crewmen also has work to do, what Capt. James H. Flatley 3rd, the Saratoga skipper, termed a "million man-hour package."

The overhaul will involve three major areas — combat systems, propulsion systems and renovation of the living quarters.

Sioux studying whether to accept $105 million

PIERRE, S.D. (AP) — Low attendance at a meeting of Sioux Indian leaders today stalled formation of a committee to study whether tribes should accept $105 million in federal money for 7.3 million acres of the Black Hills.

The delay throws doubt on whether tribal councilmen and chairmen gathered for a three-day meeting will vote on the settlement as originally planned.

"There are too few people represented at this time to go ahead" with formation of the committee, said Michael Andreau, chairman of the Lower Brule Sioux.

About 55 Indians showed up for the meeting today, not all of them tribal officials. Organizers had expected as many as 500 Sioux would attend. About 180 were on hand Sunday.

Jandreau said tribes would decide in coming weeks if they want to be represented on the committee, and then select representatives.

A vote on the settlement by tribal leaders would serve as a recommendation to each of the eight tribes involved in the Black Hills settlement, said Mario Gonzalez, an Ogala Sioux attorney.

The Standing Rock, Cheyenne River, Rosebud, Lower Brule, Crow Creek, Santee, Fort Peck and Ogala Sioux tribes then would have to make their own decision on whether to accept their shares of the hotly debated settlement, which was approved June 30 by the U.S. Supreme Court after 60 years of court battles.

The court ruled 8-1 that Congress illegally took the Black Hills in western South Dakota from the Sioux without just compensation in 1877.

On Sunday, the opening day of a three-day Great Sioux Nation Meeting, speaker after speaker blasted the settlement, arguing the Sioux should fight in court to regain possession of the Black Hills, considered sacred to the Indians.

"Do not blindly accept something that is written or said by the white man," Louis Bad Wound, an Ogala, said in arguing against the settlement, which his tribe already has voted to reject.

"We are a sovereign nation and this is what this battle is all about," Bad Wound said, insisting that the Black Hills always have belonged to the Sioux. "Maybe many of you think we are radicals, think we are crazy, but we know these laws, we do know we are right."

"For the Ogallas there is no price for the Black Hills."

Bill Means, an Ogala and director of the International Indian Treaty Council, said the region has priceless religious value for the Sioux.

Striking lettuce workers begin returning to the fields

SALINAS, Calif. (AP) — Striking employees of the nation's largest lettuce grower began returning to the fields today after signing a three-year agreement that one union official called "the highest-paying in the entire industry."

The settlement between Bud Antle Inc. and 2,600 farm workers, drivers and loaders in Teamsters Local 800 provides for top wages of $6.85 in the final year of the pact. Top wages are now $5.25.

The workers voted 1,020 to 435 on Saturday to end their strike. Bud Antle personnel director Robert Merino said Sunday that would resume today.

The first-day walkout was the nine-day in the 33-year history of Bud Antle, which since 1978 has been a subsidiary of the Castle & Cooke agricultural conglomerate of San Francisco.

An almost festive air prevailed during the strike, in contrast to a bitter walkout last year against 12 other Salinas Valley growers by the United Farm Workers.

Venezuela oil help limited

Agence France-Presse

CARACAS — Venezuela is technically unable to increase its oil production significantly to meet any shortfall that could result from the war between Iraq and Iran, sources close to oil circles have estimated here.

The sources said that production is currently running at 2.1 million barrels a day, of which 1.7 million are exported. The total could be raised to 2.4 million barrels but this level of extraction would result in the loss of gas.

The president of the Venezuelan Congress, Godofredo Gonzalez, said in Strasbourg, France, Friday, that his country would increase its oil output as far as possible to meet any deficit in Europe resulting from the Iraqi-Iranian conflict.

An authoritative source at Venezuela's energy ministry said that OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) will examine possible revision of its decision to cut back production by 10 percent when ministers meet on October 14.

Klansmen train for 'inevitable race war' in guerrilla warfare camp

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A faction of the Ku Klux Klan has set up a guerrilla warfare training camp in northern Alabama to prepare for a race war it expects will break out soon, according to a published report.

Klansmen wear combat fatigues at the Alabama camp and take target practice with automatic weapons, according to a copyright story in today's editions of The Tennessean, a Nashville newspaper.

"I'm afraid this might be the first indication of a new kind of terrorism that we're not prepared to meet," said an agent for the Alabama Bureau of Investigation who asked not to be identified. The agent said he was pushing superiors to establish a Klan surveillance unit.

"We are going to be ready to take the offensive," said Terry Tucker of Cullman, Ala., the group's leader. "I don't think there is any tactical squad in the state we couldn't stand against."

The trainees belong to the Invisible Empire, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and are followers of Bill Wilkinson of Denham Springs, La., according to the report by Robert Dunnivant, who said he was blindfolded and taken to the camp near Cullman.

Authorities consider the group dangerous.

"These folks are more dangerous than the other Klans because they are so unpredictable — because of things like this," said an FBI agent, who also asked not to be identified.

Roger Handley, Alabama grand dragon of the Invisible Empire, told The New York Times in an article published Sunday that the guerrilla warfare unit was formed about a year ago after threats were made on Klan leaders.

Tucker said there were similar groups in Tennessee, Georgia and Mississippi, but that report could not be confirmed.

Dunnivant said he met Klan leaders at a Cullman coffee shop where they blindfolded him and took him for a 30-minute ride over paved and gravel roads to a place they called "Camp My Lai."

"We named it in honor of Lt. William Calley and the good deed he done in Vietnam," Tucker said. Calley, an Army officer, was convicted of murdering 22 civilian residents of My Lai during the Vietnam War.

Dunnivant said 15 men and one woman cradled weapons as Tucker spoke. Tucker said up to 90 percent of his group members had prior military training — some in Army special forces units.

Many of the Klansmen, wearing dark glasses, didn't want to talk about their backgrounds, and some were teen-agers, Dunnivant said.

But Peggy Farson, the only woman in the group, said she and her husband, Tommy, joined the group a year ago. Her father keeps six children at home while they attend weekend maneuvers.

"I don't worry about the federal authorities, because I'm not doing anything illegal," said a man who would identify himself only as Toney.

Toney, who claimed to be a former Army Green Beret sergeant, said he would not hesitate to rush to a racial confrontation and be prepared to fire his AR-15 automatic rifle.

The mansion of former Texas Gov. Ross Sterling, overlooking Galveston Bay, has been sold to a pair of European aristocrats for more than $900,000. According to legend, Gov. Sterling showed architect Alfred C. Finn a $20 bill, pointed to the picture of the White House, and said, "Build this for me." (AP Laserphoto)

'Texas White House' reported sold to unnamed European 'aristocrats'

LA PORTE, Texas (AP) — The Sterling Mansion, a replica of the White House overlooking Galveston Bay, has been bought by two unidentified "European aristocrats," realtors said.

Jamie Suttles, sales associate for a Houston real estate firm, refused to disclose whether the new owners paid more or less than the $975,000 list price for the three-level mansion built in 1925 by the late Ross S. Sterling, founder of Humble Oil Co., now Exxon.

Realtors said it was one of the few homes on the market to sell for less than the original cost.

Sterling, governor of Texas from 1931-32, paid $1.4 million to have the huge structure built 55 years ago. Today, realtors estimated, it would cost $11 million to duplicate the grande manse.

The new owners, who finalized the purchase Friday, plan to renovate the house and move in sometime next year, Ms. Suttles said.

According to legend, Sterling was unable to decide what kind of home he wanted built. He finally pulled a $20 bill from his wallet, pointed to the White House engraved on it and told architect Alfred Finn, "Oh, hell, make it look like this!"

Behind the 6-inch-thick limestone exterior are 34 rooms, including a large ballroom, formal dining room, nine bedrooms, 15 bathrooms, seven fireplaces and a cedar-paneled wine cellar. On the roof is a sundeck and a covered atrium for dancing.

Sterling, beaten in 1932 in his bid for re-election as governor and his vast fortune wasted by the Depression, donated the home to the Optimist Club of Houston to be used as a "permanent haven" for homeless boys.

In 1961 the Optimist Club, citing high operating costs, sold the home to retired Houston banker Paul Barkley for $92,000. Barkley and his wife spent several years restoring their "Bay-shore Cottage" to its original condition.

Barkley decided in 1975 to turn the residence into a private yacht club. He backed off of the idea after neighbors voiced their opposition and decided to sell the home for $415,000.

After Barkley's death in 1978, realtors showed the mansion to California developers, New Orleans businessmen and "many oil-rich Arabs" until it was bought by the two Europeans, Ms. Suttles said.

Police try TV re-enactments to help solve crimes in Dallas

DALLAS (AP) — It may not be a top-rated series, but if it helps wrap up some unsolved crimes, Dallas police officials are sure to renew it.

Taking a cue from other cities, the police department here will initiate a weekly television spot that re-creates unsolved crimes in the city.

Lawmen hope the dramatizations will elicit information from the public in return for reward money.

Dubbed "Crime Stoppers," the program was designed in hopes of reopening cases with leads so stale and sparse that active investigation has come to a halt, said Officer R.J. Worth, who supervises the program.

The one-minute dramas, along with reward information, will air on WFAA-TV between 6 p.m. and 10 p.m., probably on Saturdays, Worth said.

Local amateur actors working for free will restage the crimes, he said, using the original location whenever possible.

"Crime Stoppers" will solicit money from people and companies in Dallas for rewards, he said.

"The money is strictly for rewards," he said. "All media help is strictly donated. The media people believe in this program to the point they are willing to give us the time. The police department has gotten together with them and they are voluntarily losing money on the deal."

An experienced officer will evaluate tips taken from a 24-hour hot-line, he said, and all requests for anonymity will be granted.

"Now if a citizen calls in, he may get passed around from department to department, then when he finds the right department, the investigator on the case may be working another shift," he said.

Politicos now even more convinced that Texas will be key to election

By GARTH JONES
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Democrats and Republicans who think Texas will play a key role in the presidential election are convinced more than ever of the state's political importance.

First, Republicans over-subscribed a $1,000-a-plate Houston dinner to guarantee more than $2.5 million for the Reagan-Bush campaign in Texas. It will be used mostly for telephone banks and get-out-the-vote doorknockers.

Secondly, Democrats heard a statewide poll report that President Jimmy Carter has gained on Ronald Reagan in Texas. This was a big boost to party faithful, some of whom had begun to believe Reagan could not be caught.

"This shows Reagan is not running away with the state. The Republicans have the phone banks and so on but the one thing we've got is a lot more Democrats," said Bob Beckel, state campaign manager for Carter-Mondale. "It's pretty much a dead heat now."

"This not only makes it possible for us to carry Texas but practically guarantees it," said Republican Anne Armstrong, former U.S. ambassador to Great Britain, at the swish Houston dinner.

The Texas Monthly magazine poll taken Sept. 7-10 showed Carter leading Reagan 42 percent to 34 percent with John Anderson getting 11 percent. A similar August poll showed Reagan with a 25-point margin over Carter.

The dinner and the poll came just before the Oct. 5 voter registration deadline and the Oct. 15 startup of absentee voting.

The developments also signaled renewed efforts by both camps to make Texas a battleground up to voting time on Nov. 4.

Reagan made a trip Wednesday to East Texas and El Paso, pitching his campaign appeals to groups of voters not touched in previous trips to Dallas, Houston, San Antonio and South Texas.

Reagan's office says he plans at least two and maybe three more trips to Texas.

The Carter-Mondale campaign is stressing a mid-October trip by Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., to San Antonio and the Rio Grande Valley, with maybe a stop in Laredo.

Carter also will be back in mid-October and again in late October, his state headquarters say. Carter's schedules are incomplete but it is thought the president will campaign in East and Central Texas, San Antonio and the Valley.

"I don't believe anyone can get elected without carrying Texas," Reagan told the Houston dinner crowd.

Texas' 26 electoral votes rank fourth among the states — surpassed only by California, New York and Pennsylvania.

In 1976, Carter won Texas over President Gerald Ford by only 129,000 votes out of 4 million cast. Much of the credit was given to Democratic Gov. Dolph Briscoe, who was influential in rural areas, and Carter's final week-end campaign trip with Lady Bird

Dateline:
Austin

Johnson to the Valley, where there is a large Mexican-American population.

Briscoe is on the sidelines this time but still maintains he is a Democrat. Gov. Bill Clements, accompanied by former Gov. John Connally, is leading the Reagan-Bush drive, particularly in non-urban areas.

Reagan and Carter's campaign schedules clearly indicate the importance both candidates put on the Mexican-American vote.

In 1976 Mexican-Americans provided only about 7 percent of the total vote but 87 percent of that, or 242,000 votes, went to Carter. That was more than his margin of victory over Ford.

This year the Mexican-American vote is estimated at a potential 800,000, almost double four years ago because of active registration drives. Republicans want 25 percent to 35 percent of this vote. Clements says he got 31 percent of the Mexican-American vote in the 1978 governor's race.

Democrats say they can win even if the Hispanic vote drops from 87 percent to 77 percent, but not much lower.

The Texas Monthly survey showed that 19 percent of those it questioned were either undecided or did not want either Carter or Reagan. Anderson hopes to pick up some of this vote.

This shows campaign workers still have a big selling job among a lot of Texas Republicans and Democrats, not to mention the independents and some who would just as soon go fishing.

Mercenaries' convention ends with shooting match

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — About 750 people wound up a three-day "Soldier of Fortune" convention in which they swapped war stories, sniped at America's foreign policy, watched parachute demonstrations and competed in a shooting match.

A real estate agent from Columbia took top honors in the shooting tournament as the convention drew to a close Sunday.

"I'm no killer. I'm just a real estate agent with three kids," said Raul Walters, a national pistol champion. He said the tournament was really just a sidelight of the convention, whose participants included a major who fought in the Congo and Rhodesian Army and a librarian who served in the French Foreign Legion.

Those in the shooting tournament used three different weapons during target shooting — assault rifles, pistols and shotguns. Walters won the rifle competition, tied for the pistol shoot and was in second place using a pistol.

John Graves, editor of Soldier of Fortune magazine which sponsored the gathering, noted that few of the conventioners had actually fought as mercenaries. But, they are "men frustrated with America's failure to uphold the fight against tyranny and communism throughout the world," he added.

The adventurers, dressed in green and brown camouflage fatigues, heard from such speakers as Robin Moore, author of the novel "The Green Berets." Moore was ousted from the convention Saturday night by a convention official who accused him of making racist comments during a speech.

Robert K. Brown, publisher of the magazine, sponsor of the convention, said Moore's talk Friday night contained material that was "offensive to good soldiers."

During his talk, Moore attacked President Carter's foreign policies, especially his support of open elections that resulted in black majority rule in Zimbabwe, formerly Rhodesia, where Moore spent four years researching his latest book.

Referring to Carter's support of black majority rule in that country, Moore also repeatedly attacked the President for "selling out in Africa just so he can be sure of the black vote in his re-election campaign."

Vanessa Redgrave's portrayal protested

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Protesters angry over the choice of Vanessa Redgrave to portray a Jewish survivor of a Nazi death camp in "Playing for Time," burned the actress in effigy outside CBS' studios and called for a boycott of the TV movie.

The 200 protesters who gathered Sunday at CBS's Television City included members of the militant Jewish Defense League and a group called "Children of the Holocaust." The movie is to be broadcast Tuesday night.

The decision by producers to cast Miss Redgrave in the role of Auschwitz survivor Fania Fenelon has prompted protests nationwide, even from Miss Fenelon herself.

"It's a horrible insult. Six million Jews will roll over in their graves," said JDL leader Irv Rubin. "We encourage Jews and gentiles alike to call CBS in protest. We hope to cancel the show before Tuesday."

No CBS spokesman had comment. In the past, producers have said Miss Redgrave was the actress most suited for the part and that her political beliefs were not a consideration.

Critics who have previewed the drama are nearly unanimous in their acclaim for Miss Redgrave's performance.

Children of the Holocaust members say they are Nazi extermination camp survivors and their children. Spokesman Mike Adelson said he is concerned that protests against Miss Redgrave have only given the show free publicity.

"But we must encourage a boycott. I feel so much pain for my relatives, my people who did not survive, that we do not need this sort of taunting from CBS," he said.

The British actress has long been a political activist. She stirred controversy when she financed and narrated "The Palestinian," a 1978 documentary in which Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat appeared.

When she accepted an Oscar in 1978 for her role as a World War II underground anti-Nazi martyr in the movie "Julia," she referred to "Zionist hoodlums," saying some academy members may have been intimidated by protests of her nomination for the award.

Judge releases five Neo-Nazis in Oktoberfest bombing

KARLSRUHE, West Germany (AP) — An investigating judge today released the leader and four members of a banned neo-Nazi group for lack of evidence that they were connected with the deadly bomb attack on Munich's Oktoberfest.

A sixth, unidentified suspect remained in investigatory custody pending further questioning, a spokesman for the federal prosecutor's office said. German law permits police to hold suspects 48 hours for questioning before an investigating judge must decide whether to release them or file charges.

Karl-Heinz Hoffmann, 43, a signboard painter who likes to wear Nazi-type uniforms, and the five members of his Military Sport Group Hoffmann were taken into custody after Friday's bomb blast which killed 12 persons, including the alleged bomber, and injured 213.

Police said they were directed to Hoffman's organization by papers found near the body of Gundolf Koehler, the 21-year-old student suspected of planting the bomb in a trash can near an exit of the crowded Oktoberfest fairgrounds Friday night. The fascist group was banned in January after several truckloads of rifles, grenades, uniforms and other military equipment were found in Hoffman's home.

Authorities speculated the powerful bomb went off before Koehler could get away. A search of his parents' home in Karlsruhe, 150 miles northwest of Munich, turned up bomb-making materials and chemicals, authorities said. They said grenades, mines and explosives were found in the homes of other group members.

Authorities said they could not say yet what might have been the motive for the bombing.

Bavarian Interior Minister Gerold Tandler said border police confiscated three trucks and three personnel carriers belonging to the Hoffmann group Saturday night at a crossing into Austria. The group was widely reported to have connections with right-wing extremist organizations in Italy, Austria, Belgium and Lebanon. The Paris police said they could not rule out the possibility that it was linked with a French neo-Nazi group called the National European Fascists that claimed responsibility for machine-gun attacks Friday on two synagogues, a Jewish school, a day care center, and a monument to concentration camp victims.

West German police earlier cast doubt on a claim that an Italian rightist group was responsible for the Oktoberfest bombing. An anonymous woman telephone caller with a French accent had said the bomb was set off by the "Right of Bologna," an apparent reference to the August bombing of the railway station in Bologna, Italy, that killed 84 people and injured more than 200, police said.

The Oktoberfest, Munich's popular annual beer festival, opened Sept. 20, and during its two-week run is expected to draw 5 million Germans and foreign visitors.

The grounds were jammed with about 100,000 revelers when the bomb exploded. The dead included 10 West Germans, three of them children, a Briton and a Swiss.

Seven Americans were among the injured. Authorities identified them as Mark Kaufenburg, 23, of St. Paul, Minn.; James William Evans, 21, Montague, Mich.; Denise Fowler, 20, of Sparta, N.Y.; John D. Fox, 28, of Mountain Home, Idaho, and his wife, Cynthia, from Loomis, Calif.; Eva Lidwinski, 37, and Marlie Shoolie, 54.

U.S. military officials said the first five were military dependents or members of the U.S. Air Force stationed at the Hahn Air Base.

Opera faces self-imposed deadline for cancellation

NEW YORK (AP) — With no signs of progress and no talks scheduled in a labor dispute with musicians, the Metropolitan Opera today reaches its self-imposed deadline for cancellation of the 1980-81 season.

Calling off the season — which was supposed to begin last week — would affect not only thousands of opera fans in the New York area, but the millions who hear concerts broadcast nationwide on Saturday afternoons.

Met Executive Director Anthony Bliss has threatened to cancel the opera's 97th season if an agreement with the musicians' union is not reached by today. The threat added tension to the bargaining, but apparently had no mediating effect.

"They're farther apart than they've ever been," state Mediation Board Commissioner Joseph Neglia said Sunday night after contract talks broke down.

Neglia said the adversaries traded and rejected two-year contract proposals. No new talks were set for today, he said.

However, Met spokeswoman Johanna Fiedler said that despite the Opera's "final" offer Sunday, "if there were further talks tomorrow (Monday) we could still save the season."

A source close to the negotiations said new bargaining depended on the outcome of a Met executive board meeting at set for 4 p.m. today. Ms. Fiedler said the Met would make an announcement on the season sometime during the afternoon.

The only concessions made in Sunday's talks came on the secondary issues of wages, according to the mediator. The Met upped its wage offer to 9 and 9.5 percent from a previous offer of 7 and 8 percent in each of two years of a contract. The union came down from its request for successive 15 percent increases, Neglia said.

Both parties said neither side would budge on the key issue in the talks — the musicians' demand for a four-performance week instead of five.

A four-performance week would not reduce the number of performances by the opera, but would mean hiring more freelancers to fill out the 93-member orchestra.

Bliss maintained that expanding the shorter work week would cost between $250,000 and $750,000. He also said the Met's 16 other unions would demand similar settlements, bringing the cost to between $1.5 and $5 million.

The union's chief negotiator, I. Philip Sipser, countered that it was wrong to bring the other unions into the equation and that the musicians had offered to absorb any increased costs through concessions on other issues.

Cuban leader gives conciliatory speech

MIAMI (AP) — In his first major speech since making a series of gestures favorable to the United States, Cuban President Fidel Castro announced the recall of his government's diplomats from Venezuela and called for a solution to the Iran-Iraq border conflict.

Castro, angered by a Venezuelan court's decision to acquit four men accused in a 1976 bombing that killed 73 people aboard a Cuban airliner, announced the recall in a 2½-hour speech Saturday.

The current head of the Nonaligned Nations Movement also called on Iraq and Iran to consider the possible "catastrophic consequences" their week-old war holds for other Third World nations.

His speech to a mass rally in Havana, marking the 20th anniversary of the Committee for the Defense of the Revolution was mostly devoid of the usual attacks on the United States.

Castro's harshest words in the speech, broadcast by Havana radio and monitored in Miami, were reserved for the Venezuelan leaders, who he denounced as "hypocritical Pharisees."

He also called for a "fair and political solution" to the escalating undeclared war between Iraq and Iran.

"It is a war between two oil-rich countries that divides the forces that confront imperialism, that confront violent aggression... to the unaligned nations. That war debilitates the neutral countries, causing considerable mutual destruction," Castro said.

"That war may have catastrophic consequences for undeveloped countries, not the oil-rich," he said.

Speaking of the U.S. race for the presidency, Castro said, "It may be dependent upon the results of the elections in the United States, whether a platform of war or peace triumphs." He did not, however, refer by name to either President Carter or GOP nominee Ronald Reagan, the latter a frequent Castro target.

"On them depend the perspectives of our country, Latin America, and ultimately, the world, if they can move toward peace or toward cold war, and even the hot war," Castro told a crowd he described as "more than 1 million people."

Friday, the Cubans surprised U.S. officials by abruptly closing the port of Mariel to "Freedom Flotilla" boats, which had illegally carried some 125,000 Cuban refugees to this country since April.

The action had been requested by U.S. officials for months. Earlier this month, Castro sent two alleged hijackers back to the United States for prosecution, an action that so far has halted a spate of hijackings by disenchanted Cuban refugees.

The Cuban government also recently gave safe passage home and then out of the country to 383 Cubans who had sought haven in the U.S. Interest Section in Havana since they were attacked by pro-Castro mobs May 3.

Some U.S. political observers believe Castro, who has stridently attacked Reagan in the past, wants to keep Cuba from becoming an issue in the presidential campaign. Other observers note that Castro's decision to stop sending refugees, who have created social tensions in South Florida and in the areas surrounding federal holding camps, may help Carter defuse what some Florida politicians call the "No. 1 issue" in their state.

Special court set to try 'Gang of Four' in China

PEKING (AP) — A special court has been set up to try the "Gang of Four" and six other people on sedition and other charges, a Chinese official said today.

He declined to rule out the death penalty as a possible sentence.

Representatives of China's provinces, people's organizations, government departments and the armed forces will attend the trial, but the foreign press will be excluded, the official said. The Chinese press will report the proceedings, he added.

Zeng Tao, deputy secretary-general of the standing committee of the National People's Congress, told a news conference the 35-member court would begin the trial in "not too long" a time, and its verdict would be final.

Although both Communist Party Chairman Hua Guofeng and Vice Chairman Deng Xiaoping have been quoted as saying the "Gang" would not be executed, Zeng said these reports "were not entirely accurate."

Chairman Hua also said the trial would be conducted strictly according to law, Zeng added.

Pressed further, he said "the best answer is wait until the judgment passed by the special court. It is not suitable for me to say now."

The 10 defendants from the "Lin Piao and Jiang Qing counter-revolutionary cliques" will have the right to be defended by lawyers and to request the calling of witnesses, Zeng said.

Lin, a former defense minister and chosen successor to the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung, reportedly died in a 1971 plane crash after failing in a coup attempt against Mao. His lieutenants now facing trial had not been heard of since then.

Jiang Qing, Mao's wife, led the "Gang of Four," arrested in October 1976, one month after Mao died.

The "Gang" members, who wielded great influence during the Cultural Revolution of the 1960s and 70s, were hardline Marxist-Leninists who regarded practical economic policies put forward then as revisionist. Vice Chairman Deng, acknowledged to be the most powerful of China's leaders today, survived purges during the Cultural Revolution and has turned the China of the 80s onto a practical path.

Physics adds fire to feats

TEXAS CITY, Texas (AP) — As a high-school science teacher, L.W. Steinbach told his students about the laws of nature: gravity, energy,

Ben Barnes says he'll never run

AUSTIN (AP) — Former Lt. Gov. Ben Barnes says a poll he took in 1970 for a possible U.S. Senate race probably had a lot to do with Lloyd Bentsen's election to the Senate that year.

Barnes said on the weekly radio show "Capital Eye" he had "absolutely no plans to ever consider another race, and I hope my children don't consider running for public office."

Asked if he might consider a race for the U.S. Senate, Barnes replied: "In 1970, I had a poll that I spent hard dollars for that showed... I was 18 points ahead of Sen. Yarborough in the Democratic primary, and I thought a long time about running for the United States Senate. As a matter of fact, I think probably the poll I had at that time gave now-Sen. Bentsen some reason to believe that Sen. Yarborough was vulnerable, and I believe that money I spent for that poll probably had a lot to do with Sen. Bentsen running for the Senate."

force, matter, time, etc.

But talking about physics just wasn't enough, so Steinbach chucked his teaching career and set out to prove the laws of nature. Or, more correctly, to defy them.

"I just wanted to see if pure physics and applied physics were anywhere related. I wanted to find out how close you can get," said the 34-year-old stuntman.

Now he earns his living wrecking cars, motorcycles and boats and falling from high places for movie makers and television producers.

"I enjoy doing stunts. Why? Because they're there. Because I like the notoriety, I like the money. There are so many reasons, it's unreal. But mainly I do it because I like it," he said.

Steinbach abandoned teaching several years ago, and since then, has devoted his life to hair-raising stunts using the laws of physics to polish and safeguard his tricks.

For a recent appearance on ABC's "That's Incredible," he rammed a car through — yes, through — four upended cars pointing toward the sky. His car had no windshield and no top.

Sound complicated? It was. Steinbach said he originally wanted to drive through five cars, but John Hubisz, a physics instructor at College of the Mainland here, advised otherwise.

Hubisz told Steinbach he would have only 87-hundredths of a second to get out from under each vehicle before its engine fell to the ground.

"I told him if his engine failed and he lost control of the accelerator he could only hit four cars," Hubisz said.

The fifth car was hastily scratched from the television act.

As it was, Steinbach's car lost power immediately after crashing through the first car and barely made it through the obstacles.

Hubisz later recalled, "If something happened, I'd feel sorry as a friend. But I'm confident the information I give him is good. He's been told the things to look out for. Every person is responsible for himself."

Hubisz works closely with Steinbach developing breath-taking stunts that include falling 10,000 feet into a large net and jumping off a 3,600-foot cliff with only a steel cable and a rope to break the fall 100 feet from the ground.

Steinbach started teaching in 1972, after graduating from Stephen F. Austin University at Nacogdoches. But the lure of full-time stunt work was too strong.

"He's interested in stunts. He's also interested in not getting hurt," Hubisz said. "Anybody who gets into the stunt business and refuses to learn physics and the other tools of the trade, then he's a fool."

L.W. Steinbach, right, is a prime-time TV stuntman who protects himself by making sure his stunts conform to Newton's law of physics. With him is physics instructor John Hubisz, physics instructor at College of the Mainland. (AP Laserphoto)

Patio homes are now being built in Meadowpark

A project of Citizens Savings & Loan

Construction has begun on Midland's newest planned development.

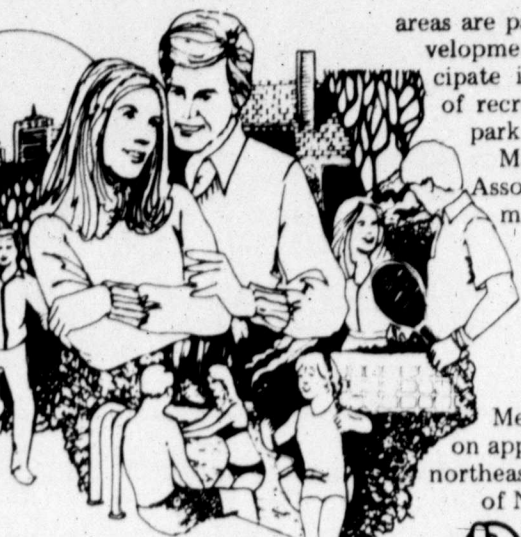

The first cluster of patio homes is now under construction in Meadowpark, a planned Unit Development by Citizens Savings & Loan Association. Meadowpark will eventually consist of up to 200 lovely patio homes and townhomes in a carefully landscaped environment. The cluster arrangement of homes permits a low density development with limited traffic flow.

Citizens Savings provides quality control and financing.
