Front brings rain

A Pacific front that stalled near Lubbock brought nearly a third of an inch of rain to the Midland-Odessa area by Wednesday evening and continued cool, damp conditions are expected. The National Weather Service recorded .30 inches of rain and another front is forecast to arrive tonight. A 60 percent chance of rain is in today's outlook, dropping to 30 percent tonight. Libraries pull 'Sex'

AUSTIN — Madonna's controversial book, "Sex," has been removed from two Austin public libraries, but not because of the revealing photos. The Oak Springs and Howsón branch libraries have withdrawn their copies of the books, which have spiral bindings, because of wear and tear, officials said Tuesday. "The books were absolutely falling apart," Austin Public Library Director Brenda Branch said. "Spirals don't usually hold up. But when you have 40 people a day looking at it, that's pretty heavy use."

Clinton files case probe absolves White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — A State Department investigation concluded Wednesday that officials who snooped in Bill Clinton's passport files had been trying to help President Bush win re-election — but had not done so at the bidding of the White House.

State Department inspector general Sherman M. Funk, disclosing the results of a month-long probe, said:

"There was indeed an attempt to use the Department of State, the records and the people of the Department of State to influence the outcome of the election.

"That is a very heinous activity and shame on the Depart-

Father Time, not Grinch, steals city's decorations

By Darren J. Waggoner

The lack of Christmas decorations along Wall Avenue this holiday season is a reflection of harsh economic reality, not that a Scrooge mentality has overtaken City Hall.

The seven dozen decorations have garnished downtown streetlights for 17 years, but last February city officials decided it was time for the adornments to go.

"They were frayed, there were wiring problems and the plastic material on them was tattered and torn," said Chuck Swallow, assistant director of Community Services.

The 84 double-candle, garland-wrapped decorations also had metal frames and, with 220 volts, officials determined they had become dangerous to at-

4-5A moves to strip Lee of 3 games

■ Committee recommends forfeiture of football victories for playing ineligible player.

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

The Midland Lee football team apparently lost three games in one day Monday.

The District 4-5A Executive Committee recommended Monday that Lee forfeit three non-conference football games from the just-completed 1992 season for playing an ineligible player, according to Joseph Baressi, superintendent of the Midland Independent School District.

"I can't give the name of the individual because he is a minor," Baressi said. "However, the Executive Committee found that a varsity player was improperly enrolled at Lee. He played in the first three games and all were Lee victories (El Paso Andress, 21-7; El Paso Socoro, 49-12; and Amarillo Palo Duro, 41-0)."

Baressi, who is the chairman of the district's Executive Committee, "stepped aside" as evidence was heard. The committee was chaired by Bill Graves, superintendent of San Angelo schools, and superintendents of the other two 4-5A school districts serve on the committee. Jimmie Kelly, MISD director of compliance and administrative services, presented the evidence. Since September, Kelly has been handling on-going school district investigations of some 50 disputed cases of students attending one school and living in another attendance zone.

The Executive Committee is the ruling arm of the University Interscholastic League at the district level.

"We are in the process of drafting our letter to Dr. Bailey Marshall of the UIL," Baressi said. "The parent and player involved in the case did not appear before the committee."

Grand jury exonerates officer

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

A police officer acted within the law when he fatally shot a knife-wielding man last month, a Midland County grand jury concluded Wednesday.

"We feel bad for the family but people need to know you don't attack a police officer with a knife," said Steve Fischer, the officer's attorney and a visiting professor at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Since the Oct. 21 shooting, the family of Francisco Gutierrez Madrid, 45, has staged demonstrations and claimed excessive force was used by Phil Partin, a 22-year-old rookie officer.

The grand jury, after hearing witness accounts and examining police and autopsy reports, determined Partin was

NEW YORK — They took Spike's advice Wednesday, and the director of "Malcolm X" was right: His new movie was worth taking a day off from school to see, according to students who did just that.

"I wouldn't change a thing about this movie," said 16-year-old Tahirah Duncan, who left the theater in tears after watching the film biography with her Afro-American studies class from Montclair, N.J.

"Malcolm X was a hero. He supported black unity. ... There are so many Malcolms dying at the hands of other black men, too many Malcolms. It has to stop," she said.

Airport board opts to slice VIP parking-privileges list

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

The Airport Board Wednesday opted not to recommend the elimination of VIP parking privileges at Midland International Airport, in favor of slicing the existing list of 207 in half.

The board's input will be considered next Tuesday at the Midland City Council's regular meeting.

The program, which costs the city $33,000 a year, allows about 130 designated officials to park for free at the airport when conducting city-related business. City officials said they have no estimates on how many people use their parking privilege for personal business.

If the Airport Board's proposal is accepted, the lost revenue attributed to the VIP stickers would be cut to around $20,000.

Aspirin gets another boost in preventing fatal heart attacks

By Carolyn Poirot
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW ORLEANS — Aspirin may be an even more potent protector against fatal heart attacks than originally believed, according to a major new study presented Wednesday at the American Heart Association's annual scientific sessions.

Researchers studying nearly 1,000 patients recovering from heart attack or angina (chest pain caused by narrowed coronary arteries) found that those who were not taking aspirin had a three times higher risk of fatal heart attack than those taking aspirin.

The study was presented Wednesday by investigators with the Multicenter Study of Myocardial Ischemia, an American research group, who evaluated medical records of patients at 15 U.S. hospitals in states ranging from New York to California to Mississippi. No Texas hospitals were involved in the study.

"The consistent reduction in cardiac deaths among aspirin users is larger than reported previously," said Dr. Robert Goldstein, director of cardiology at the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences in Bethesda, Md., the U.S. military's medical school. Goldstein was the leader of the research team.

Goldstein told the heart specialists and researchers gathered for the international meeting that the study indicates that aspirin use also reduces death from heart failure and stroke as well as heart attacks.

"We observed a markedly reduced overall cardiac mortality — a 2.7 fold reduction associated with regular aspirin use," Goldstein said.

Patients in the new study were recruited one to six months after entering the hospital for a heart ailment. Eighty percent of the patients were taking aspirin regularly, most of them a single adult dose of 250 to 325 milligrams daily.

Two years after the study began, 22 of the 936 patients in the study had suffered a fatal heart attack. Of them, 10 were clustered in the 185-member non-aspirin-taking group. Thus the death rate in the non-aspirin group was more than three times higher than among those taking aspirin, Goldstein said.

In a similar Swedish trial, involving 2,035 patients, a lower dose of aspirin Wednesday was credited with a 38 percent reduction in sudden death

Catholic bishops refuse letter on the role of women in church

By Peter Steinfels
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The nation's Roman Catholic bishops refused on Wednesday to adopt a proposed pastoral letter on the role of women in the church and society, a document nine years in the making that had ended up being dominated by traditional church views.

The vote marked the first time since the National Conference of Catholic Bishops was formed in 1966 that the nation's Catholic hierarchy failed to reached a two-thirds majority consensus on a proposed pastoral letter, the bishops' weightiest form of policy statement.

In a debate before the vote, the bishops' comments revealed a broad dissatisfaction with the document as incomplete and likely to alienate many women.

Bishops who supported the document warned that a rejection would be seen as disloyalty to church precepts, particularly on the question of ordaining women to the priesthood. In fact, however, very few of those who voted against the document wanted to see women as priests; among the bishops, that is the position of a small minority and was never seriously considered.

The tally, taken by secret written ballot, fell 53 votes short of the two-thirds majority of the active hierarchy necessary to approve a pastoral letter. Favoring the text were 137 bishops. Voting against it were 110 bishops.

No previous pastoral letter has ever been opposed by more than 30 votes. Because the church hierarchy puts a high value on consensus, it usually succeeds at refining texts so that the bishops can rally behind them.

For example, despite fierce public disputes associated with the 1983 pastoral letter on nuclear weapons and the 1986 letter on economic issues, only nine negative votes were cast against the final drafts of each.

The letter voted on on Wednesday, like three previous drafts of the same document, had been produced by a bishops' committee headed by Bishop Joseph L. Imesch, of Joliet, Ill. The final draft, as well as three earlier ones, affirmed the equality of men and women and condemned sexism as a "moral and social evil." It deplored violence directed at women, the high rates of poverty among single mothers and elderly women, abusive or broken family relationships, and discrimination in the workplace.

The final draft also retained some criticism of the church's insensitivity to women and endorsed a widening of non-liturgical opportunities for women in the church.

But the letter could not be read apart from its own history. Under Vatican prodding, later drafts adopted an increasingly guarded tone. The fourth draft warned, for instance, that "to identify sexism as the principal evil" harming women socially would be "to analyze the underlying problem too superficially."

Whereas the first draft, issued in 1988, highlighted statements by women who had testified in hearings held by the bishops, the fourth draft highlighted Pope John Paul II's view that equality of the sexes should not rest on minimizing the differences between them.

The pastoral letter was brought to a vote on Wednesday, the third day of the semiannual meeting of the bishops, despite the efforts of Cardinal Joseph Bernardin, of Chicago, to avoid a showdown. On Tuesday, he suggested that instead of issuing the draft as a pastoral letter, it be turned over to committees that could pursue some of the letter's objectives.

On Wednesday morning, Bernardin announced that at the request of the conference's top leadership, he was withdrawing his proposal temporarily. But after the pastoral letter was defeated, his suggestion was revived and was approved as a way of salvaging some of the bishops' work and of indicating that the hierarchy remained determined to deal with questions of discrimination and sexism.

ment of State that it happened." While absolving the White House, Funk's investigation disclosed that Bush's chief of staff, James A. Baker III, became aware of the file searches no more than a day after the first took place.

The two most senior officials held responsible were the assistant secretary of state for consular affairs, Elizabeth Tamposi, dismissed last week by Bush, and the acting assistant secretary of state for legislative affairs, Steven Berry, also disciplined.

As for Tamposi's allegations of White House involvement, Funk said in a memorandum to acting Secretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger, "We found no evidence that the White House — or any other external source — orchestrated an 'attack' on the Clinton files."

Funk recommended that "less than 10" department officials be disciplined.

Eagleburger disclosed that he had offered his resignation to Bush because of his distress over the department's political activities before the Nov. 3 election.

"When this thing first developed and before the election, I offered the president personally my resignation. He refused to accept it," Eagleburger said.

He told reporters there were no plans to recommend criminal action by the Justice Department against department officials.

In a statement, Tamposi said she regretted that "my actions may have been misperceived." But she added, "I am confident of my own actions and I will not speculate as to the actions of others who may have been involved directly or indirectly in this matter."

Funk had been asked to determine whether the department initiated the file search in response to reporters' requests under the Freedom of Information Act or whether administration officials were attempting to dig up damaging information on the Democratic presidential nominee.

Funk said the way department officials conducted the search made it clear they had not been merely responding to routine requests from the news media. He cited in particular the breadth of the searches undertaken at a suburban records center on Sept. 30 and Oct. 1.

'I believe in fact our reputation has been tarnished. I am sorry it happened. But it did, and now we've got to try to clean it up.'

— Lawrence S. Eagleburger, acting secretary of state

"Never, in our opinion, in the annals of the Freedom of Information Act has there ever ben a FOIA search conducted with such urgency, scope thoroughness and grade-levels of participants," Funk said.

According to established procedures, the requests should have been treated routinely.

The search of Clinton's files was undertaken at the same time the Bush campaign was attempting to question Clinton's character by citing his anti-Vietnam War activities as a graduate student in England and his 1969-70 visit to Eastern Europe.

Aides to Tamposi also searched for passport files on Ross Perot but Funk said there was no evidence this effort had been undertaken in the hope of finding something politically useful.

Funk also said a search into the files of Clinton's mother, Virginia Kelley, was based on the possibility of finding information about her son.

Funk is a State Department investigator who, by law, acts outside the authority of the department hierarchy.

Eagleburger said Berry has been asked to step down but can remain at the department. The acting secretary said only that Berry "failed to carry out his responsibilities properly."

Berry left his office late Wednesday afternoon and told aides not to speak to reporters.

Baker, the former secretary of state, was interviewed twice. Two interviews each also were conducted with two Baker aides who accompanied him to the White House after he left the State Department last August.

They are former State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler and Janet Mullins, former assistant secretary of state for congressional affairs.

Tamposi, a former Republican state legislator from New Hampshire, reportedly has identified Mullins as the White House official who, working through Berry, expressed interest in having the Clinton files looked at.

Funk said, "We have not a scintilla of evidence, and believe me we tried to find such evidence, that Ms. Mullins suggested, instructed or did anything to get Mr. Berry to pass on to Ms. Tamposi anything that was improper."

In response to questions, however, he said it was his "supposition" that "there was knowledge at the White House" of the file searches.

Indeed, according to a 38-page report Funk gave Eagleburger, Baker told the investigators he had become aware of the searches on "Sept. 30 or Oct. 1," the very days the searches were undertaken.

A separate investigation is being undertaken by the General Accounting Office, a congressional investigating agency.

Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I. and the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said the report does not make it clear whether Tamposi was acting at the instruction of her superiors in the State Department.

He said this and other unanswered questions should be resolved by the GAO probe.

Rep. William Clay, D-Mo., asked the government's Office of Special Counsel to investigate whether there have been any violations of the Hatch Act, which forbids government workers from involvement in partisan political activity.

Front might bring more rain

Staff report

A Pacific front that stalled near Lubbock brought steady rain and lower temperatures to the Midland-Odessa area Wednesday.

The National Weather Service recorded .30 inches of rain and more could be on the way today and tonight as another front makes its way into the area.

A NWS spokesman said the weather will be "unsettled" for the next few days, with varying temperatures and more chances of rain through Sunday.

Today's forecast calls for cloudy skies and a 60 percent chance of rain. The high should be near 60 with variable winds at 5-15 mph. Tonight should be mostly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of rain and a low in the lower 40s.

Friday should be partly cloudy with a high in the lower 60s.

After an overnight low of 51, Wednesday's high reached 58, compared with the record high for that date of 84 set in 1981. The record low was 18 set in 1987.

STATE

A cold front on Wednesday combined with abundant low-level moisture to produce light rain and fog over much of West Texas — the first measurable precipitation in almost two months for the South Plains.

Lubbock had .16 of an inch of rain by mid-afternoon. Other cities had generally less than .20. Temperatures throughout West Texas were mostly in the 50s, ranging from 43 at Amarillo to 64 at San Angelo. Winds were north at 5 to 10 mph in the Panhandle and variable elsewhere at 5 to 15 mph.

The National Weather Service said areas of light rain are possible for the region through Thursday night, with a few thunderstorms. Lows should be from the 30s north to near 50 south; highs in the 50s and 60s are expected.

In South Texas, the approaching upper-level disturbance and plentiful moisture in the atmosphere kept skies mostly cloudy through the afternoon.

NATION

Rains pounded South Florida on Wednesday but largely spared hurricane-damaged neighborhoods. Snow showers were over the high Plains and Appalachians. Rain dotted the nation's interior and the Northwest.

Crisp, sunny skies were over the Northeast as high pressure moved in from Canada. No winter storms were brewing Wednesday.

A tropical disturbance moving northeast from the Gulf of Mexico combined with cold air stalled between the Florida Keys and Cuba produced thunderstorms in Florida, the National Weather Service said.

Authorities in Deerfield Beach on the southern coast blamed blinding rain for a fatal accident in which an elderly woman backed her car into a canal.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

STRIP: 4-5A committee recommends forfeiture

(From 1A)

The UIL almost always abides by the recommendation of district committees and Lee should receive official word of the three forfeits by next week, Baressi said.

Vashti Hines, the mother of Lee running back Sherman Dedrick, told the Reporter-Telegram Wednesday that she had been told that Lee might have to forfeit the three games her son played in, but said she wasn't asked to attend the Executive Committee meeting.

"I met with the school board Monday a week ago (Nov.9) and they said Lee might have to forfeit the games Sherman played in. The school board said that and so did Mr. Kelly and Dr. Baressi," Mrs. Hines said. "I did all the paper work for the transfer (to Lee), but they said that Sherman couldn't play any athletics this year.

"They told me I wouldn't have to meet again since my transfer appeal would be done administratively. No one said anything about there being another meeting."

Dedrick was Lee's leading rusher in 1991 and was the leading Rebel rusher through three games this year until he was sidelined by a knee injury in the Palo Duro game. His brother, Mantrey Dedrick, played football at Lee in 1989.

The news was a blow to Earl Miller, Lee head football coach.

"I wasn't asked to be at the committee meeting and all I know is that I get a memo saying we have to forfeit three games," Miller said. "This just hurts kids, nobody else. I guess I don't understand all the rules, but his brother (Mantrey) played for me. What am I supposed to do?"

If the UIL adopts the district committee's recommendation as expected, Lee's 1992 record will officially be 4-6 instead of 7-3.

The last year the Rebels posted a losing record was 1973, when they went 3-7. In 1977, they were 5-5.

Baressi said five other cases investigated by Kelly and the Transfer Rules Committee were brought before the Executive Committee Monday. One involved a Lee sophomore baseball player while the others involved Lee Freshmen students.

"Basically, our (school) board asked us to refer these five other cases to the committee to ensure that the students wouldn't be declared ineligible for the remainder of their school years," Baressi said. "We only have the authority to limit extracurricular activity one year at a time. We were afraid that this could be brought up again in the future, but this way, the issue has been resolved."

Baressi said the committee took no action on the cases, meaning that the students involved may participate in extracurricular activities at Lee next year, but will remain ineligible the rest of this school year.

Although Baressi wouldn't release the names of the students involved, the Reporter-Telegram learned from several sources that the Lee Freshman students brought before the Executive Committee Monday and gaining athletic eligibility through high school were John Thurman, Benjamin "Benny" Acosta, Joel Turner and Justin Ham. Lance Watters, a Lee sophomore, also received a favorable ruling.

These were the first students investigated in September.

"Everyone involved has now moved into the Lee attendance area and they may compete as long as they stay enrolled in the Lee district," Baressi said.

Even though Rick and Nancy Jumper, the parents of freshman Justin Ham, got a favorable high school eligibility ruling from the Executive Committee, they were upset with how the case was handled.

"We admit that we lived five weeks in the Midland High school district," Jumper said. "We had a lease that was up on our house Aug. 1 and had to move. We knew we were going to move into the Lee district, so we listed a wrong address so we wouldn't have to take our kid out of school after five weeks.

"Justin didn't even play football and we would be in the right district when we moved to our new home on Oct. 1 before basketball even starts. They just told us that we were moving for athletic purposes. There was never any discussion at the transfer committee or our meeting with the board. They just voted against us."

Mrs. Jumper said, "Mr. Kelly did not have the best interest of my child at the Executive Committee. All he tried to do was present a case against Justin being eligible for all four years. Dr. Baressi even told us that was the instructions he had from our school board — to see that they be declared ineligible for all four years. Shouldn't our own people be for us and not against us? Going in, we didn't even know we were going to be judged on Justin's whole high school career. We thought we were going to resolve his eligibility for this year."

"One of the Executive Committee members told me after our meeting he couldn't believe what Midland was trying to do here. He told me it was petty and vindictive," Jumper said.

Baressi said that the school board has dealt with "two or three" additional transfer hearings and "others" have been worked out through the TRC.

"After receiving the original list of concerns on students living out of attendance zones, we got a lot of tit-for-tat cases," Baressi said. "In all, we probably investigated 50 cases. We continue to have reports, but as far as I know, all reports have now been resolved."

Baressi said that of the 50 cases investigated by Kelly and the TRC, approximately 35 dealt with Lee students and 15 with Midland High students. Baressi also noted that not all of the cases dealt with athletics, but that band and other extracurricular activities also were involved.

FILM: N.Y. students give 'Malcolm X' thumbs up

(From 1A)

Duncan was one of about 300 students from Manhattan and Montclair who filled the Victoria 5 movie theater in Harlem to see the latest Spike Lee film — with school permission — instead of heading to class. The movie opened Wednesday at 1,200 theaters nationwide.

The theater, located between the Apollo Theater and Malcolm X Boulevard, held a special morning screening for the group. A night earlier, the cast and crew of "Malcolm X" watched the movie in the theater.

Lee, speaking before the movie's release, had encouraged students to see the film as a school assignment, citing his own forced visit to "Gone With the Wind" while in school.

Several New York City schools, including Lee's alma mater, Junior High School 113 in Brooklyn, sent groups of students to the movie on its opening day. Non-student crowds were heavy in Manhattan, with several theaters reporting first-night sellouts.

'For our youth, 'X' must shift from a clothes style to a lifestyle.'

— Jesse Jackson

The movie follows Malcolm X from his days as a street hustler through his association with the Nation of Islam and his 1965 murder in Harlem's Audubon Ballroom.

Newspaper critics were full of praise, and the reviews from the mostly black crowd were unfailingly upbeat for the 3-hour, 21-minute epic starring Denzel Washington. The crowd cheered a zoot-suited Malcolm in his early days, jeered a hanging judge played by civil-rights attorney William Kunstler, and screamed when Malcolm was assassinated on screen.

"I had mixed emotions between tears and anger. I was caught in between the two," said Coltrane Curtis, 16, wearing a black "X" visor. "This showed the human side of Malcolm.

"I think he was seen as an object, not as a person. This showed him as an average family man, the things he went through with his family. Everybody learned something from this."

And that's not all. Try these reviews:

■ "Very breathtaking. I felt Spike Lee did a wonderful job. ... The movie is wonderful." Malika Crossdale, 20, City College.

■ "It was really powerful. Malcolm was a very important man to history. It was important." Jason Avery, 16, Montclair High School.

Jesse Jackson, speaking Tuesday in Alabama, agreed with Lee that young people should see the film. "For our youth, 'X' must shift from a clothes style to a life style," said Jackson.

Lumumba Bandele, 20, who accompanied students from the Manhattan Valley Youth Center to the screening, said the film delivers the same message Malcolm was preaching

"The main thing of the movie is it's time for all African-Americans to drop the Negro mentality that they're inferior, second-class, don't have ability," he said.

LIST: Board's input to be considered Tuesday

(From 1A)

Mayor J.D. Faircloth said the Airport Board carefully considered the pros and cons of the VIP privilege before deciding against canceling the program.

"Their decision was carefully thought out. They determined the benefits outweighed the costs," Faircloth said.

But the council has the option of revising the board's plan.

"The only thing I feel is questionable is granting lifetime VIP privileges to all former council members and mayors — which is about 40 people," he said. "To serve one year on council and then be able to park for life doesn't seem right."

The council could decide to grant the privileges to former council members for a time equal to the time they served on the council, Faircloth said.

Currently parking at the airport generates $1.2 million a year for the city.

Those currently receiving the parking privileges include past and present council members and mayors, 15 city management employees, airport board members, mayors from area towns, two congressmen, several Midland Chamber of Commerce employees, 25 Permian Basin airport board members and Chief of Police Richard Czech.

Under the Airport Board's plan, all those receiving the privilege would be allowed to register only one vehicle, which is where the majority of the cuts would fall.

Faircloth said the program originally started to encourage people to run for city offices, since council members and the mayor receive just $25 and $75 a month, respectively.

SHOOTING: News conference to be held today justified in using deadly force.

Partin fatally shot Madrid about 5 a.m. outside his 807 E. Kentucky Ave. house after Partin and two other officers responded to a disturbance call, police said.

Madrid, who had been tossing appliances and furniture into the front yard, threatened the officers, chased them around the yard, jumped in a police car and attempted to drive away before running at Partin with a knife, police said.

Partin warned the man to drop the knife, then fired three shots that struck Madrid in the head, chest and shoulder, police said.

Partin has said he feared for his life.

The officer also said he had responded to the same address on a domestic disturbance call before.

Police said Madrid had a history of drinking-related arrests, including an arrest for assault on a police officer in 1981.

Official records show that Madrid "had a lengthy history of mental illness," according to grand jury findings.

Regardless of the grand jury's decision, Madrid's family feels Partin's actions were unjustified, said Robert Montoya, organizational coordinator for District 5, League of United Latin American Citizens.

"We'll pursue this matter until the family and community are satisfied," said Montoya on behalf of LULAC.

Josie Espinoza, 34, a sister of Madrid, previously told the Reporter-Telegram that police should have been able to subdue her brother without killing him.

The San Angelo attorney who represents the family could not be reached for comment following the grand jury decision.

Although criminal charges have not been filed against Partin, the officer could face a civil lawsuit.

The FBI also has interviewed Partin concerning possible civil rights violations but no action has been taken.

Partin, who has been on administrative leave with pay since the incident, is eligible to return to work, police said.

Police said a news conference will be held today to comment and answer questions about the grand jury decision.

tach to the metal poles.

Repairing the aging decorations was estimated to cost $150 for each ornament — a total cost of $12,600 — while buying new ones would cost about $15,000, said Mike McGregor, Deputy City Manager.

Last February, City Council members agreed they were not willing to make either investment.

The decorations were inherited from the Midland Chamber of Commerce. Through the years, responsibility for their annual hanging was passed to the city's traffic and engineering department, unofficially kicking off the holiday season.

But despite the lack of decor this year, city officials still hope for a festive holiday season.

The annual lighting of the city's live Christmas tree at Centennial Plaza will be held Dec. 4. Santa Claus is expected to be whisked in by fire truck to participate in the celebration.

"There will be Christmas carols, bonfires, hot chocolate and hopefully a lot of people gathering," McGregor said.

The lighting ceremony, co-sponsored by the Midland Jaycees and the city, also will feature live entertainment.

Former Prime Minister, leaders detained for defying rally ban

By Kathy Gannon
Associated Press writer

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — The government arrested former Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto and her top advisers at a huge political rally Wednesday after they defied a ban on protest and called for the overthrow of the government.

Ms. Bhutto had threatened that 100,000 marchers would storm Parliament. But the march, scheduled to begin 10 miles from the capital in Rawalpindi, was disrupted before it began.

Police barricaded the route, fired tear gas into the crowd and beat protesters. In the capital, Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif imposed emergency measures and troops patrolled in machine-gun mounted trucks. Thousands were detained around the country.

"My arrest won't make any difference. The struggle will continue," Ms. Bhutto said in a brief speech to about 40,000 supporters at a Rawalpindi park. Then she and party leaders were surrounded by 200 police and taken away.

Ms. Bhutto had claimed there would be an assassination attempt on her, and she wore a bulletproof vest under her traditional tunic.

The government put Ms. Bhutto on a plane for Karachi, her hometown, and said she would be banned from Islamabad, the federal capital, for 30 days.

She was greeted in Karachi by about 200 supporters before going to her fortress-like house overlooking the Arabian Sea. Government sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said she would be held under house arrest.

Ms. Bhutto charged that Sharif's Islamic government, which replaced her administration in 1990, is corrupt and repressive and rose to power through rigged elections. She wants President Ghulam Ishaq Khan to establish an interim government that would oversee new elections.

But her demands are unlikely to be met. Sharif's government has a solid majority in Parliament. Ishaq Khan makes no secret of his contempt for Ms. Bhutto.

AP

Ms. Bhutto herself was dismissed from office in August 1990 for alleged corruption, nepotism and abuse of power, paving the way for the October 1990 elections that brought Sharif to power.

Ishaq Khan has filed corruption and mismanagement charges against Ms. Bhutto. A conviction would bar Ms. Bhutto from politics for seven years.

Ten people were seriously injured in other protests Wednesday in Peshawar, and a dozen were hurt in Lahore, including a policeman who was set on fire.

Ms. Bhutto's left-leaning Pakistan People's Party called for more demonstrations Thursday.

The U.S., British and other Western embassies had urged Ms. Bhutto to cancel Wednesday's march, saying it could lead to bloodshed.

To get to Rawalpindi, Ms. Bhutto, 39, and her colleagues pushed through barricades of barbed wire and barrels around her Islamabad home, as enraged police with bamboo batons charged a crowd of supporters.

Ms. Bhutto herself was beaten but unhurt and managed to scoot away in her jeep. A group of 28 party leaders who tried to reach her home were arrested.

After Ms. Bhutto finished a brief speech, about 200 policemen surrounded her entourage.

NATO imposes blockade on Yugoslavia

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO agreed Wednesday to impose a naval blockade on Yugoslavia under a U.N. effort to intensify pressure on Belgrade to halt ethnic fighting in Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Romania announced it had begun stopping boats on the Danube River to check for contraband cargos under a new Security Council resolution allowing the use of force to block such shipments.

The new U.N. effort is designed to cut off goods and fuel that have been getting through to Yugoslavia despite 6-month-old trade sanctions. Serbia's help for Serb militants in Bosnia is widely blamed for the war that erupted after Bosnia's majority Muslims and Croats voted for independence on Feb. 29.

In other developments:

—U.N. officials reported an outbreak of typhoid fever in Bosnia. They said the source appeared to be a contaminated spring in Jajce, a town that thousands of people fled after heavy fighting last month. Doctors have confirmed 25 cases among refugees but many cases probably have been missed, the report said.

—Sarajevo, Bosnia's capital, was relatively quiet on the seventh day of a tenuous ceasefire, but many areas of the city did not have water or electricity. Radio reports said there was some shelling and machine-gun fire in several outlying areas and other cities.

—U.N. relief officials took advantage of the relative calm to open new supply routes to beleaguered Sarajevo and nearby cities. Several hundred people left the capital by bus.

—Former Presidents Reagan and Ford and ex-British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher issued a statement warning that the fighting in Bosnia could spark a wider war in the Balkans. Turkey's defense minister, Nevzat Ajaz, made a similar warning, citing the problem of ethnic groups that overlap borders.

—Opposition parties in Serbia decided to take part in elections in hopes of ousting the republic's hard-line president, Slobodan Milosevic. The parties had considered boycotting the vote planned for late December or early January, because Milosevic's former Communists control state television.

The 16 NATO allies announced they would cooperate with the Western European Union in jointly policing the Adriatic Sea to keep ships from breaking the U.N. ban on trade with Yugoslavia, which is now only Serbia and Montenegro.

The nine-nation union is being overhauled to serve as the future defense arm of the European Community. The foreign and defense ministers of its members are expected to endorse a blockade on Friday.

A statement from the North Atlantic Treaty Organization said the details for implementing the blockade would be worked out after consultations with the Western European Union.

Currently, the two groups have 10 destroyers and frigates in the Adriatic. But until the Security Council authorized a blockade Monday, the warships were barred from boarding vessels suspected of smuggling goods to or from Yugoslavia and were confined to monitoring traffic in the Adriatic.

The U.N. resolution would allow warships to fire on suspect vessels if necessary.

But the key to cutting off trade will be cooperation from Yugoslavia's neighbors. Nearly all of the goods and resources getting through have been carried in by truck or by boats on the Danube, which flows Yugoslavia and forms the border between Romania and Bulgaria until it reaches the Black Sea.

Those two nations are struggling with the transition from four decades of Communist rule and their economies could be hurt by the embargo. Romanians, who are among Europe's poorest people, have profited from smuggling to Yugoslavia. And many of the trucks crossing into Yugoslavia have gone through Bulgaria.

Still, Romanian officials said several boats had been stopped on the Danube and moved to port so their cargos could be checked since the new U.N. rules took effect. No force was used, and no decision had been reached on whether any of the boats was violating the embargo, the officials said.

Guerrilla violence explodes in Peru

LIMA, Peru (AP) — The Shining Path exploded a car bomb and traded gunfire with police Wednesday, but the rebel group failed in its plan to cripple the Peruvian capital with a strike.

The attack was the latest in the fiercest outbreak of guerrilla violence in Lima since rebel leader Abimael Guzman was captured in September and sentenced to life in prison.

Officials said at least 43 people have been wounded and two killed since Sunday, the latest victims of a 12-year insurgency that has claimed 25,000 lives on both sides.

Still, rebel violence and rhetoric is less fierce than in July, when attacks killed 40 and nearly paralyzed the capital, suggesting that the insurgency has been hurt by the loss of Guzman, its founder and principal strategist, and other leaders.

Commuters came out in defiance of a rebel order to not work Wednesday, but faced long waits for transportation because many private bus operators stayed off the roads. Vendors reported slow sales because of the transportation slowdown.

Soldiers and police patrolled many of the capital's main avenues. The military's presence appeared highest in industrial districts and upscale neighborhoods.

The attempt to shut down commerce — an "armed strike" in rebel parlance — appeared designed to frustrate Sunday's elections for a Congress to replace the one President Alberto Fujimori dissolved in April.

Despite the transit delays, 90 percent of factory employees reported to work Wednesday, the National Industrial Society said. Business in most districts appeared to be operating normally by midday.

The first day of the Shining Path's armed strike coincided with the second and last day of a strike by a radical teachers union that closed most public schools.

NAACP: Resort owners stealing island from slaves' descendants

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civil rights attorneys accused two South Carolina developers Wednesday of trying to force black families off an island where they've lived for generations so that resorts can be built.

The NAACP Legal Defense Fund charged that a system of segregation had been set up on Daufuskie Island through an uneven tax structure, land seizures and inadequate public services. This, the fund said, has made it difficult for the black residents to hold onto their property.

More nation news/7B

In letters mailed this week, the fund asked the developers and the Beaufort County government to take steps to erase the alleged segregation and improve public services. Copies of the letters were obtained by The Associated Press.

"It is clear that the county has pursued a pattern of conduct that disproportionately displaces or evicts African-Americans from Daufuskie, thereby segregating the island and the county as a whole," the letter said.

Daufuskie, a five-mile by three-mile island off South Carolina's coast near Hilton Head Island, is inhabited mainly by blacks called Gullah people, direct descendants of freed slaves who settled on the island more than 120 years ago. Anthropologists consider their language and culture the most unique preservation of West African traditions in this country.

Fund attorney Alan Jenkins said a federal class action lawsuit would be filed unless a response is received by Dec. 3.

"They've really demonstrated quite a bit of insensitivity toward the needs of African-American islanders," Jenkins said. "It would behoove them to come to the table."

Beaufort County Administrator Michael G. Bryant said Wednesday he had received the NAACP's letter and would discuss the situation Monday with the county attorney and Tom Maddox, the county's purchasing director.

A spokesman for the International Paper Realty Corp., owners of Haig Point resort, said the company had not received the letter.

Stephen B. Kiser, senior partner in the Melrose Co. Inc., which owns the Melrose Plantation resort, said the NAACP's allegations "comes as absolute news to us."

Since the mid-1980s, developers have purchased large tracts of land on Daufuskie and Hilton Head to create luxury resorts in the style of plantations. In 1985, the Beaufort County government adopted a development plan to accommodate the expected growth.

Tapes provide early reaction to Exxon spill

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Oil company officials decided shortly after the 1989 Exxon Valdez oil spill they couldn't clean it up but still tried to give the appearance of doing something, taped telephone conversations show.

The conversations during the flawed early response to the spill were secretly recorded by Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., which Exxon and other oil companies formed to run the trans-Alaska pipeline and the Valdez marine terminal.

Alyeska never told state and congressional investigators about the tapes, but transcript summaries and excerpts have been disclosed during the past two weeks as a result of lawsuits.

The tapes appear to back the state's contention that the oil companies were incapable of applying chemical dispersants on the spill in any quantity because there wasn't enough on hand and aircraft with spray equipment arrived too late.

"There is a mass of confusion here, I think, as to where the dispersant is that's in Alaska, and the crewing of the planes, and how fast they'll be available," said Alyeska's Bill Howitt in a midnight telephone call to Valdez almost 24 hours after the spill.

"Get that stuff out there," Exxon's Don Cornett said in one transcript. "I don't care if it picks up 2 gallons a week."

In another conversation, Cornett said, "It doesn't matter if they are really picking up a hell of a lot of oil. ... It makes a real bad impression with the public, without any activity going on."

The excerpts were released by the state and by Alyeska critic Chuck Hamel, who has worked with some of the plaintiffs suing Alyeska and Exxon. On Monday, the state and other plaintiffs demanded a full transcript of the recordings as they prepare for trial.

Alyeska has refused, citing rules that protect parties in a lawsuit from disclosing the opinions and strategies of their attorneys. It said the full transcript was prepared by lawyers who filled in blank and ambiguous spots on the tape and identified unknown speakers through their knowledge of Alyeska.

"If you look at the full content of these tapes, rather than a few selected quotes taken out of context, the tapes make clear the extraordinary efforts made by Exxon to mount the largest oil spill response ever undertaken," Cordett said in a statement from Houston.

- David Ruskin, an Anchorage lawyer chosen by the courts to referee the disputes over what evidence must be turned over by each side, said he would rule on the request for transcripts soon.

Hamel called on the federal Environmental Protection Agency to investigate whether the pipeline company misled officials by providing the government only poor copies of the original seven-track tapes released last week.

City planting project gives streets beauty

Thanks to the efforts of a number of Midlanders and several local organizations, Lamesa Road will be a much more attractive thoroughfare in coming years.

Last Saturday, the workers — representing churches, schools, softball and civic groups — planted 200 trees along Lamesa Road, giving the street an aesthetic lift while at the same time bolstering the area's soil erosion and air cleaning capability. The trees, which included red oak, live oak, burr oak, Spartan juniper, Chinese pistache, lacebark elm, Bradford pear and purple-leaf plum, were purchased with $25,000 given by Texaco, Inc. The project was a cooperative effort between Texaco, Keep Midland Beautiful, Inc., the Texas Forest Service and the City of Midland.

Tree planting projects have benefited Midland for years. Good examples of earlier projects include the trees lining Scharbauer Drive, Wall Avenue, and the entrances to Midland International Airport. And all Midlanders are the recipients of the aesthetic and environmental changes that trees bring the city.

Mayor J.D. Faircloth heralded the most recent planting by saying, "Trees have always been a much-needed source of beauty in this windy, dry West Texas area." He also speculated that in the future the tree-lined Lamesa Road "will be an example of Midland pride to many visitors coming to Angels Stadium and the many softball and soccer fields along Lamesa Road."

The project was particularly commendable in that it brought together numerous groups and individuals for a single, selfless endeavor that will benefit all Midlanders for decades into the future.

With the current emphasis on conservation and the environment, the project illustrated graphically how individuals, companies, and political entities can join hands to build a better tomorrow for our society.

It's an example we hope to see repeated time and time again.

A book with a silver lining by Madonna

Now that the election is over I felt it was time to catch up on my reading. I went to my local bookstore and asked Jim Stockard, the owner, what he would recommend.

"I'd like something to challenge me," I told him.

Buchwald

Jim handed me a book wrapped in a silver Mylar envelope.

"You might like this one," he said. "It's a roman a clef written by America's greatest woman novelist, Madonna. Most of my customers can't put it down."

"Why is it wrapped like this?"

"We don't want it to get dirty in the shop. If it does we can't return it to the publisher."

"What's it about?"

"It's the story of the girl-next-door searching for happiness and the kindness of strangers. She's a sort of female Henry Kissinger."

"Is it a thriller?"

"It's not so much of a whodunit as a 'don't do it'," Jim said. "The publishers expect to sell a million copies, which could cause a shortage of Mylar trees in the world. One hundred and fifty thousand acres of Mylar trees had to be cut down to fulfill the first printing."

"Is it a love story?"

"Of course. In fact, there are several. There is one with a woman, several men and a Maytag washer. There is another between two women and a cactus tree, and there are also variations on the family values that Madonna holds so dear. Everyone in the book gets a chance to tie up someone else."

"I enjoyed 'The Hunt for Red October.' Is there any stuff in this book about submarines?"

"Not now, but for 50 bucks I'm sure they would put one in for you. You have to understand that this is not your usual Tom Clancy novel. This book deals with people — not just any people — but with women who really believe that men know nothing about them. Madonna examines her feelings. For example, how does she handle pressure under stress? What are her dreams and her fantasies? Is she a tortured person because she can't find someone to go to the Matisse exhibition with her?"

"I wish I could just riffle through it," I told Jim.

"To find out what is in it?"

"No, to see if my name is in the index."

LESLIE GELB
Foreign affairs is putting America first

'By bringing to Washington a government determined to govern," Arthur Schlesinger Jr. wrote of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, "(he) unlocked new energies in a people who had lost faith, not just in government's ability to meet the economic crisis, but almost in the ability of anyone to do anything."

Gelb

Voters wanted their faith renewed in 1992. So, many once again set aside their mounting cynicism about governmental activism and selected Bill Clinton.

They gave this young question mark of a governor from a poor and unremarkable state a mandate to do "something," though nothing in particular, to fix the economy and provide broader health care coverage and better education.

But candidate Clinton neither sought nor received a mandate for national security policy. Therein lies the problem. Unaddressed, it could lead to creeping isolationism and, worse, backfire on his commitment to domestic priorities.

But the Clinton thrust was decidedly and correctly inward. Politically, it had to be. With the Cold War over, Americans chafed under the heavy burdens of world leadership. They felt that President Bush had paid too much attention to foreign problems. Clinton repeatedly picked at that sore. Ross Perot went much further, often sounding isolationist. Even Bush fell virtually mute on foreign policy for fear of reminding voters of his once proud strong suit.

Separately and collectively, the three candidates pledged to reverse Cold War practice and focus on America.

This message was not only good politics, it pointed to sound priorities. Presidents have shortchanged domestic problems throughout the Cold War. The country is falling apart. It cries out for presidential energy and imagination and for a larger share of the Federal pie.

Even foreign leaders have come to empathize with those needs. They have started fretting about Bush's apparent indifference to stimulating the U.S. economy. They have begun to admire Clinton's domestic activism.

Clinton is more likely to fall prey to the second and far more insidious trap of passivity. World crises will occur no matter what he does, but his chances of containing them will improve if he is constantly trying to head them off. It is not enough for the U.S. simply to be engaged overseas; it must be engaged actively and imaginatively, and with dollars.

Often during the campaign, Clinton wisely argued that domestic policy is foreign policy is domestic policy. In a few short weeks he must come to terms with the paradox of his own wisdom: If he wants to devote the maximum time and resources to his domestic agenda — as he should — he will have to engage in active and creative diplomacy.

Urban schools become a killing field for youths

CHICAGO — The day Dantrell Davis died, Karen McCune wrote: "I thought my life will better than what it turned to be." That summing-up of a life was made a month ago, by a 9-year-old.

Will

Today Karen is a 47-pound miracle of resilience. She is more than a match — so far — for the pounding that cities give childhood in this era of urban regression.

The shooting of Dantrell might have elicited a "so what?" shrug of this city's broad shoulders. After all, Chicago averages a shooting every 34 minutes and a murder every eight hours and the more than 13,000 shootings so far this year have killed 17 children under 14 years old. Dantrell was the third pupil at Jenner Elementary School shot dead this year. One of Dantrell's schoolmates said: "I hope that next time it won't be somebody that I know." He assumes there will be a next time, a fourth time.

Dantrell was killed by a sniper firing from a nearby high rise as Dantrell and his mother began the 40-yard walk to Jenner from their high rise, through the killing zone of the Cabrini-Green housing project. Today, beneath the lead-gray sky of a Chicago November, the hard wind off the lake is gusting razor-like rain horizontally and Karen is chatting in a classroom overlooking a growing puddle on the spot where Dantrell fell.

Cabrini-Green is 70 acres of appalling public policy less than a mile from Michigan Avenue's Magnificent Mile. About 7,000 people live in the 31 high rises and 60 other buildings in this public housing project. More than half the residents are under age 20. Nine percent of the residents have paying jobs.

Jenner School shows its 90 years but is a wonderfully clean haven for children from a neighborhood run by armed children. For now there is a truce between the gangs, a result of a heavy police presence since Dantrell's death. The truce is a respite from the recurring need to move children into inner hallways on whichever side of the school shooting has erupted.

Twenty years ago Jenner had 2,500 students. Today it has 630. Some of them have symptoms — short attention spans, difficulty sustaining relationships, a tendency to think only in stark opposites — often associated with survivors of a battle area. Small wonder. Shortly after Dantrell's death, Karen shared with a local newspaper reporter the sort of memory that marks childhood in this other America:

"They couldn't find my friend's mother. They looked and looked but they couldn't find her. Finally one day they found her body stuck in the sewer. It was all mushy and it stinked real bad. I'm glad Danny wasn't like that."

Her prescription for neighborhood improvement is common sense and contrary to public policy: "Take the gangbangers (gang members) out and take away all the guns." With an imperious sweep of a spindly arm in the direction of the high rises, she decrees: "Mow down those buildings. Don't need to be high-rise. Five floors enough."

Her small face wreathed in a huge smile of serene certainty, she announces that she's going to college: "I'm not going to have no boyfriend or no husband or child when I'm 15 or 14 or 13. I'm going to wait until I get real, real big, until I'm" — she plucks a number from her imagination — "27."

One of her best friends is a boy who wants to be a lawyer: "He uses big words, like 'interject.'" Karen says she is going to be a teacher. She already is.

George Will's column is distributed by Washington Post Writers Group.

Cartoon regarding King holiday questioned

What a sorry, base canard is Steve Benson's "political" cartoon in Thursday's Reporter-Telegram. Arizona HAS had a holiday in honor of M.L. King for several years. It just hasn't been a PAID holiday for state employees.

When one observes a holiday — any holiday — only because he is paid, one assigns a very cheap value indeed to his sense of honor. For the Midland Reporter-Telegram and Benson to imply otherwise is also cheap and demeaning. No, "gentlemen," that dog won't hunt.

Police officer Partain commended for work

This letter is written concerning the conduct of suspended Midland Police officer Phil Partin.

On Sept. 16, 1992, I was stopped by a Midland Police Department vehicle. The patrolman that got out of the vehicle was Officer Phil Partin. Officer Partin asked for my driver's license and informed me that the reason I had been stopped was because of "inoperable tail lights." Officer Partin asked me to have a seat back in my vehicle and I did. He returned to his patrol car "to run a driver's license check" on me. Moments later, he returned to my vehicle and asked that I "step out of the car." Officer Partin then informed me that I was under arrest for "driving while license suspended," according to Department of Public Safety (DPS) records in Austin. I felt certain that an error had been made concerning my driver's license. Officer Partin explained that he "was just doing his job." Officer Partin handcuffed me and took me to the Midland County Detention Center where I was booked and placed in jail. Hours later, my bond posted, I was released.

I did not know Officer Partin before this incident. Nor have I seen or spoken with him since.

I was furious at the time for what I consider a "wrongful arrest."

Physically, I do not know if my being 6'6" and weighing 210 pounds posed a threat to Officer Partin in any way. But I do know this officer never threatened me in any way physically or verbally. I never felt my life or even my physical being was in jeopardy. Officer Phil Partin could not have acted in a more professional way whatsoever. Regardless of whether he had handcuffed me or not, Officer Partin acted in the utmost professional manner. He was, in fact, "just doing his job."

For the record, I contacted the Midland DPS the following morning and they contacted the DPS headquarters in Austin. Yes, there had been a mistake made by the DPS computer. My driver's license had not been suspended after all. Nonetheless, MPD Officer Phil Partin had done exactly what the taxpayers pay him to do, "just his job."

I can only wish that the Midland Police Department had more officers like Phil Partin. May God bless him and his family.

Pro-life supporter defends abortion view

Larry Montgomery's letter, published Nov. 5, deserves a response. I wrote one of the letters to which he refers. If, as he suggests, men can express no opinions on abortion, then, in fairness, women should express no opinions on rape, which is "a man's decision involving his body."

"Wait," you say. "There's an innocent victim involved." That's precisely my point about abortion. The unborn child wants no more to be dismembered than a woman wants to be raped. We are free to do what we wish with our own bodies until those decisions infringe upon the rights of others.

Let's stop this nonsense about abortion being a "woman's issue." It is an issue which involves all concerned human beings as it leads inexorably to the death of our culture. Let us all unite in concern for abortion's victims: the innocent child deprived of its right to life, the tragically deceived mother who will eventually suffer untold guilt, and our society, which is doomed if we continue offending God with this Holocaust.

If you do not want a child, don't conceive one. Don't act irresponsibly. If you do conceive, at least have the human decency to let your child live with one of the thousands of couples who are eager to adopt. But don't make your unborn child pay for your mistake with its precious life.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

Correction

A letter from Rick L. Sprague in Wednesday's Midland Reporter-Telegram erroneously identified Midland County Road and Bridge Supervisor Johnny Williams as the son of former Midland City Councilman Bill Williams.

Johnny Williams, who became supervisor of the county's road and bridge department in March, is the son of the late George Williams and Mrs. Rheba Williams.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

Clinton begins transition with Bush

By Terrence Hunt
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — President-elect Clinton swept triumphantly into the capital Wednesday for a "terrific" meeting with President Bush that ran 45 minutes over schedule and touched on more than a dozen potential trouble spots the Democrat could inherit.

Clinton said he and Bush discussed such global tinderboxes as Russia, Bosnia and Somalia. "He was very candid," the president-elect said. "He gave me a lot of insights. The American people should be pleased."

"It was a terrific meeting."

Bush was waiting in the White House driveway to extend a handshake as Clinton stepped from his armored black limousine — on time, a rarity for the often-tardy Arkansas governor.

The White House visit was the first stop on a two-day whirlwind of high-powered meetings and social engagements with the lions of the Washington establishment. Clinton's visit was intended to pave the way for a smooth transition and signal the new president's readiness to deal with Washington insiders.

Demonstrating his willingness to be a good neighbor to the community, Clinton went directly from the White House to Northwest Washington for a walking tour of one of the city's black business districts.

Thousands of well-wishers strained against police lines for a glimpse as Clinton ducked into the Hamilton Seafood Grocery, the Hamilton Laundromat and other stores near the Georgia Avenue intersection.

There have been eight homicides in the last year within a mile of the neighborhood that Clinton visited.

Briefly discussing his White House meeting, Clinton said he talked with Bush about Russia, Bosnia and the Middle East.

"It was helpful insight," Clinton said. "It was a great meeting."

To one shop owner, Clinton talked about the need for banks to make more credit available. "It's the quickest way to generate more jobs in America," he said.

"We've got some plans and we're going to put them in and I think Congress will go along," Clinton said.

Clinton will go to Capitol Hill today for meetings with Senate and House leaders, Republicans as well as Democrats. Congress holds the key to success for Clinton's ambitious agenda of economic proposals and other measures, and Clinton was eager to begin the relationship on the right foot.

The hottest ticket in town was an invitation to a cocktail party or dinner with Clinton and his wife, Hillary.

Washington lawyer and transition chief Vernon Jordan was the host for a dinner party Wednesday night. Clinton also was attending a fund-raising reception for the Children's Defense Fund, the advocacy group that his wife once led. Pamela Harriman, Washington hostess and Democratic fund raiser, invited the Clinton's to her Georgetown mansion tonight.

Eschewing Bush's offer of a military jet, Clinton and his wife flew into town on a chartered plane, its cost subsidized by the dozens of reporters who accompanied them. The Clintons got off the plane hand in hand, then went their separate ways. They were staying in the presidential suite of the luxury Hay-Adams Hotel, with a commanding view of Lafayette Park and the White House.

Mrs. Clinton planned to visit the White House today for a tour of the private living quarters by Barbara Bush.

As Clinton's limousine arrived at the White House, Bush strode from the Oval Office to greet him.

The president escorted Clinton to the colonnade in front of the Rose Garden where they smiled and shook hands again for the benefit of the cameras but declined to answer questions.

They met in the Oval Office, one on one, for an hour and 45 minutes. A White House statement called it "a warm and informative conversation."

Clinton said that Bush "was very helpful to me. We talked about a couple of domestic issues and more than a dozen actual or potential trouble spots in the world. He was very candid. He gave me the benefit of his thinking on a lot of things. It went a half-hour longer than expected. It was terrific — a friendly and helpful exchange."

After their private talks, Clinton and Bush went next door to the Roosevelt Room where transition leaders for each man were meeting. Bush said he wanted a smooth transition and that he "appreciated the task that lay ahead of the transition team," the statement said.

Postmaster general expands hours, promises hold on rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cost-cutting efforts have put the Postal Service in the black and should help postpone a stamp price increase at least through 1994, Postmaster General Marvin Runyon said Wednesday.

Runyon also told the National Press Club that hours will be extended at more than 5,000 post offices across the country to help meet the expected Christmas rush.

Runyon said progress to cut costs means the price of a stamp may be held constant through 1994.

Without the money-saving measures the agency was facing a $2.2 billion deficit in fiscal 1993 and a 35-cent stamp price in 1994, Runyon said.

He took office in July and quickly launched a massive restructuring of the postal service, including an offer of six-months pay to senior workers who want to take early retirement.

More than 46,000 workers took the offer. Some will be replaced but Runyon expects to cut the postal labor force by at least 30,000 overall — mostly managers. In addition he has dropped some projects and restructured agency debt, sharply cutting interest payments made by the agency.

"In July we were talking about breaking even in 1992. Now we're expecting an operating surplus of $500 million. And we're in a good position to break even in 1993," he said. "All this adds up to two more Christmases at today's rates."

When it became an independent agency in 1971, the Postal Service was ordered to operate like a business, breaking even over time. The agency no longer receives tax subsidies for operations.

Over the past two decades, the post office has generally operated on a three-year cycle: reporting a surplus one year, breaking even the next and losing money the third, followed by a rate increase to restart the cycle. However, the last three years haven't followed that pattern.

The agency last had a surplus in 1989, of $61 million. It lost $874 million in 1990. The Feb. 3, 1991, rate increase should have pushed it back into the black by about $430 million, but Congress shifted $1.9 billion in unexpected costs to the post office, resulting in a $1.5 billion loss for 1991.

Fiscal 1992 ended on Sept. 18, but the final accounting figures are not yet available. With four weeks not yet totaled, the Postal Service had a surplus of about $500 million.

"By holding rates steady through at least 1994 we'll make history," Runyon said.

It would be the first time since the post office became independent in 1971 that rates remained unchanged for four years. The record to date is the three years and three months that the 20-cent rate was in effect, Nov. 1, 1981, to Feb. 17, 1985. The current 29-cent rate took effect Feb. 3, 1991.

Despite the changes and staff cuts, the Mailers Council, an organization of major businesses that send large volumes of mail, says it has received no reports of significant problems in moving the mail.

And on Tuesday Runyon held a closed circuit television conference with postal workers around the country in which he stressed the need for improved customer service.

"The holiday season will be an early test of how well we can deliver. We are taking steps to make sure we do," he said in his press club speech.

The postmaster general said postal workers will be placed in the lobbies of 7,200 large post offices during busy times to direct customers, answer questions and generally assist the public.

"And, I'm announcing today that we are expanding hours of business in more than 5,200 of our largest post offices nationwide during the holidays," said Runyon.

Collector expects 100 percent tax revenue

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Local taxing entities have collected about 5 percent of their tax revenue during October and expect to collect about the same amount this month.

"We anticipate collecting all of our revenue," said Frances Shuffield, Midland County tax assessor-collector. "We collected 100 percent last year and we pretty much expect the same. Hopefully, that will be by the January deadline."

Ron Stegall, chief appraiser for the Midland Central Appraisal District, is less optimistic.

"You really can't tell how much to expect until January, when you start getting into delinquent taxes," he said. "I would guess we'll get about 84 percent of our tax revenue by January."

Midland County has collected 5.8 percent of its anticipated $8.4 million tax revenue, said Ms. Shuffield. The revenue total is up slightly from last year's $8.3 million. The tax rate for the county is 22.75 cents per $100 valuation.

The city of Midland, Midland Independent School District, Midland College and Midland County Hospital District have all collected about 5 percent of their expected tax revenues, said Stegall.

He said it was too early to determine if this year's total revenues will be up or down from those collected last year.

The city's tax rate is 67.93 cents per $100 valuation and the total expected revenue for this year is $16.8 million.

The school district's tax rate is 17.69 cents per $100 valuation and the Andrews-Midland County Education District is 90.73 cents. The district will collect $15.7 million and the CED will collect $28.9 million.

The tax rate for Midland College is 12 cents for $100 valuation, collecting $4.2 million in revenues.

Midland County Hospital District, for Memorial Hospital and Medical Center's indigent-care funds, will collect $6.6 million from its 17.69 cents per $100 valuation tax rate.

Ms. Shuffield, who also collects for the Greenwood Independent School District, said GISD has collected only about 3.5 percent of its total revenue. Of the $3.5 million to be collected, $1.9 million will come from the district and $1.6 million from CED. The district's tax rate is $1.071 per $100 valuation for the district and 90.73 cents for CED.

Greenwood's total expected revenue is up about $300,000 from last year's $3.1 million.

Ms. Shuffield said Midland residents should remember that if they pay half of their taxes by Nov. 30, the other half will be due on June 30, 1993 with no late penalties.

The deadline for paying all taxes due is Jan. 30, 1993.

Testimony: Agency has weak management plan for aquifer

Associated Press

An opponent of an environmental group's fight for tough pumping limits to protect an aquifer testified in Midland Wednesday that one water agency already has a management plan.

But Russell Masters, manager of the Edwards Underground Water District, conceded under cross-examination that the agency has no power to impose fines or fees to enforce its management plan for the Edwards Aquifer.

Masters testified for the city of San Antonio and other agencies opposing the Sierra Club's request for a federal judge to impose withdrawal limits to protect threatened and endangered inhabitants of the aquifer's springs.

Comal Springs, the state's largest, could still go dry under the Edwards district's plan, testimony before U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton showed.

David Hillis, a University of Texas biologist, testified earlier Wednesday there are questions whether the Texas blind salamander, one of the endangered species, still lives in San Marcos Springs.

The springs are the state's second largest.

New Braunfels Utilities Manager Robert Sohn testified a large percentage of the water that city draws from the aquifer is not reported to the U.S. Geological Service, the Sierra Club's prime source of technical data.

Environmentalists rested their case Tuesday against the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and Interior Secretary Manuel Lujan, accused of violating the Endangered Species Act by failing to set aquifer pumping limits.

Officials in San Antonio, the largest city in the country to rely on groundwater for its sole drinking source, have said they could be forced to reduce their aquifer withdrawals by about 60 percent.

Lawyers said testimony in the case is expected to wrap up Thursday.

An aquatic biologist testified in the trial's first day Monday that tiny fish that live in Comal and San Marcos Springs have died during periods of low flow. The aquifer flows for 176 miles under five counties.

PALS encourages acceptance, camaraderie between students

■ Program creates chance for special education children to gain social skills from their peers, who in turn learn responsibility.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

When special education student Duran Coppinger, 6, got stuck "holding the bean bag" a hug from his fifth grade buddy Felix Lombardo got both the boys smiling.

Then as Duran correctly passed the bag to his right on cue Felix gave his pal a thumbs up and a pat on the back.

Other fifth graders gave encouragement to the younger pupils during bean bag passing and follow-the-leader games which required the youngsters to "touch your nose, hop on one foot, or carry a bean bag on your head."

Despite the laughter and camaraderie, the interaction between the students involves more than fun and games. The younger special education pupils gain social skills and acceptance from older peers, while the fifth graders gain understanding and responsibility. The fifth graders sacrifice their social time in order to assist in the PALS (Partners at Learning Skills) program.

"Helping the kids is a special thing and a privilege," said Justin Primera, who said he decided to participate in PALS after his cousin had done the same.

"I enjoy helping the kids and I like the teacher, and if I wasn't here, I would just be doing more work (in class)," said Margie Gamboa.

"The fifth graders give up their social time in the morning from 8-8:30 and some recess time 12:55-1:30 four days per week," said Scharbauer Elementary special education teacher Doreen Davis.

Ms. Davis and a former reading teacher at the school began the PALS program in 1987.

"The program has really grown. We had 29 students apply to be PALS for 10 spots," she said. This year, 10 students interact with the nine special education pupils.

The young partners participate in playground activities, eating lunch together, taking field trips and planning holiday celebrations.

Memorial receives $10,000 donation

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

The Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans' Memorial received a $10,000 contribution from the Beal Foundation of Midland, the president of the memorial committee announced Wednesday.

Rain did not prevent John Philbeck from standing at the future memorial site near the airport and announcing the donation.

Contributions now total $185,000 of the $500,000 needed.

Groundbreaking for the memorial is tentatively set for July 1993 with opening ceremonies slated for next Veterans Day.

The local memorial will consist of a Texas-shaped piece of "sunset red" granite against a masonry wall. A Lone Star, set in the ground in front of the wall, will have a point emerging from the ground and aimed at the Permian Basin region of the granite Texas. Names of the more than 200 Permian Basin soldiers killed or missing in action will be inscribed in the star point.

The site ground is located on Wright Drive near the Confederate Air Force at Midland International Airport.

The committee has until July 4, 1994, to complete the memorial or lose the site, according to an agreement with the city.

"By the end of the year, we hope to be right at $200,000" in money or pledges raised, Philbeck said.

Philbeck said the fund-raising committee has received positive comments from veterans and the public.

The memorial committee hopes to bring in $250,000 from Midland County donors, $100,000 from Ector County donors, and the remaining $150,000 from the other counties in the Permian Basin.

ED TODD

Todd

Entertainment.

It's the nation's mania. Especially passive entertainment. Do nothing but sit, watch, listen, and let your emotions and intellect be manipulated. Let others do the work — those who strive for center stage and splendor with their talent, purposes, goals and perseverance.

Let others sing, dance, act, pluck, blow, strum, tap, throw balls, catch balls, hit balls, bounce balls, run, skate, swim, model flesh and form in blue jeans and scant garments, talk, make jokes, sign multi-million-dollar contracts, publish gossipy tabloids, produce mundane soap operas, and do a hundred other things hailed as fun and entertainment.

Do nothing. Contract contagious posterior-itis. Slumber languidly within earshot of the boob tube, the ubiquitous television set. Given enough time, the whole body and mind, from pate to sole, will collapse and atrophy. Help get the Nielsen ratings up. Scarf beer and pizza. Burden your midriff, belly, and heart with a fleshy balloon. Exhibit your brand of affluence and contentment with a portly silhouette. Flirt with gout. Burp and belch. Grow weary.

Entertainment. It is a luxury widely abused. In the balanced life, passive entertainment would be but a niche, perhaps cultural and uplifting, perhaps bland and forgotten.

Depending on your perspective on commercial television, entertainment is the vehicle through which merchandise, from mints to automobiles, is marketed. From the artists' viewpoint, advertised products put their works on the air and into homes.

Entertainment can be passive or active.

A child may hone up his or her reflexes and hand-eye (mind) coordination by entertaining himself or herself with cops-and-robbers and war-and-peace Nintendo games.

Another person may broaden his or her world by reading a short story or book. Entertainment becomes education.

You intensely follow a radio dramatization, paint scenes, color the characters, study the plot, discern motives, weep, cry, laugh, frown, smile. Entertainment? Yes. Education? No doubt.

You hop over to Odessa and spend the evening guzzling booze and watching topless dancers tagged with G-strings gyrate and beckon for attention and money. Entertainment? If you are so inclined. Education? Could be. If you are studying a cultural quirk, perhaps. Otherwise, you are probably drinking and gawking out of lust and boredom.

In proper doses, you might surmise that entertainment "tames the savage beast" or, for awhile, tames that which is savage in the heart of man. If you go to the theater to be entertained, you probably won't be disappointed. If you enroll in an academic course to be entertained, you are probably enrolling for the wrong reason and will be sorely disappointed unless learning entertains you.

If you drive to a shopping mall or to any other place where people congregate, you just might be entertained by heightening your observations of the human condition and idiosyncrasies. You may fine-tune your powers of observation just about anywhere and at anytime.

And it seems that the more you know about any subject in the sciences, arts and literature and the more enlightened you become, then the more enjoyable life seems to be.

Then, the question looms: Is an enlightened life a life of regalement?

In a civilized society, is man and woman and boy and girl really destined, in the ideal, to enjoy themselves through knowledge, service, toils, and skills?

If you truly enjoy what you are doing and experience a sense of fulfillment and clarity, are you not entertaining yourself?

Lasting enjoyment of life's chores, whether it is slicing cabbage, building a skyscraper, learning how to read, studying physics or reading Shakespeare, comes from within.

You must entertain yourself and not wait to be entertained. To entertain self is a lifetime pursuit that is never boring and is fraught with enlightenment. Merely to be entertained as a way of life will route you into a rut and into darkness.

To be entertained or to entertain, it is a choice each person makes moment by moment and day by day. Choose well.

Officials charge son with family slayings

By Laura Tolley
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON — Police said they suspected him all along, but friends and neighbors expressed shock Wednesday about the arrest of a man who is charged with killing and burning the bodies of his parents, two sisters and brother-in-law.

Robert Otis Coulson, 24, the only surviving member of the slain Spring Branch family, remained jailed without bond Wednesday.

Coulson was arrested Tuesday night at a local hotel after his roommate and alleged accomplice — apparently bothered by a guilty conscience — gave a statement to Houston police about the killings, authorities said.

Otis Bullard Coulson, 67, his wife, Mary, 54; their daughters, Sarah Lucinda Coulson, 21, and Robin Wentworth, 25; and Robin's husband, Richard Robert Wentworth, 27, were discovered dead Friday evening at the elder Coulsons' west Houston home.

The five victims were suffocated before their bound and gagged bodies were set on fire.

Coulson's arrest came just hours after he attended funeral services for his family.

His roommate, Jared Althaus, 23, also was arrested Tuesday. Althaus was charged with capital murder Wednesday morning and ordered held without bond, police said.

The Coulsons adopted Robert and Robin, his natural sister, in 1972. Sarah was adopted as an infant in 1971.

Houston homicide Sgt. Brad Rudolph said the suspected motive for the slayings is money.

"It's speculation now, but I believe it is going to be monetary," Rudolph said Wednesday.

Police said that all along they had suspected Coulson, who did not seem to be grieving during questioning.

"I haven't seen a whole lot of remorse (from Coulson)," Rudolph said.

But others were stunned by his arrest.

"It's just utterly unbelievable," said Mary Grass, a neighbor of the Coulsons.

Friends who attended church with the Coulsons at St. Francis Episcopal Church were "in a state of shock and dismay," the Rev. Stuart Hoke said. "A lot of grieving people are trying to deal with the kind of incomprehensibility of something like this."

Neighbor Ray Stanfield, however, said he was pleased to learn the killer probably was someone who knew the family. He said he felt "relief — to find out it wasn't a random hit, or violence or drug-related" in the normally quiet neighborhood.

Hundreds of people, including a teary-eyed Coulson, had filled St. Francis Episcopal Church Tuesday for funeral services.

Hoke said the Coulson family had been active in the church since 1979. But Hoke, who came to the church in August 1991, said he had only seen Robert Coulson once at church before the slayings.

"My relationship with him has been very limited," he said.

Robert Coulson, he said, had participated in youth activities at the school and had served regularly as an acolyte.

"He had grown up here," Hoke said.

Rudolph said the pair had first told police they were on their way to a house in Caldwell when the killings occurred, but police then discovered some discrepancies in the times they gave.

"Our feeling all along was that the son was the most likely suspect. Common sense and all the information told us that," he said.

But the roommate surprised investigators when he appeared at the police station Monday night after one of the sessions.

Althaus allegedly told he police he "was having difficulty sleeping, difficulty existing in day to day life and he just decided to come forward and tell us what he knew," Rudolph said.

Police now believe the pair went to Althaus' grandfather's lake house in Caldwell immediately after the killings.

Police arrest suspect for serial rapes

FORT WORTH (AP) — A 32-year-old man charged with two rapes is also a suspect in eight others that date back to 1987, police said Wednesday.

Jefferie Wayne Williams, arrested Nov. 10, was charged with aggravated sexual assault in connection with two July rapes, one that occurred in Fort Worth and another near Mansfield.

Williams, on probation for criminal trespass of a building, was arrested on outstanding traffic warrants in Mansfield.

"Up to now, he has been fairly cooperative," Deputy Chief Mike Culpepper said of the suspect. "So far, he has been talkative about some of them."

One of the sexual assault charges was filed Saturday and the other on Monday, officials said.

For years, the so-called Downtown Rapist preyed on mostly elderly women — robbing, raping and binding them hand and foot with wire coat hangers. The attacks spread terror in low-income housing areas where he seemed most prone to attack.

The victims' ages range from 43 to 92, with the average age of the victims being 69, officials said.

The Downtown Rapist was declared a serial rapist in 1988 after seven elderly women were assaulted in 10 months, including four in the Ripley Arnold Housing Complex next to the police department. The community was outraged and demanded more security.

Four attacks this year were attributed to the Downtown Rapist, but police were no closer to making an arrest until an unspecified complaint was filed against Tarrant County sheriff's deputies this fall.

Acting Sheriff Jim Minter said Wednesday that the internal affairs investigation stemming from the complaint resulted in the sexual assault probe and ultimately the arrest of Williams.

PROGRAM: PALS encourages students to learn, grow together

(From 1B)

They also spend about 30 minutes per week in the library perusing books, and the older students read to their young peers.

Once accepted into the program, the older PALS are expected to participate for the entire school year.

"Leaving their friends at the end of the year will be hard, but the students (younger as well as older) will get 10 times more out of life (for participating)," the teacher said, as youngsters clapped and cheered over a successful round of bean bag toss.

Fifth grader Michelle Elliot said, "I like little kids and I like helping them do stuff. This is fun."

And as one student noted, as they all squeezed their "buddies" good-bye, "This is a very good place to get hugs."

MC announces winner of 5th annual poetry contest

Staff report

For Patricia Randall Peek, persistence pays. She was announced Wednesday morning as the Grand Prize Winner of the 5th annual Hilda Simmons Levitt Poetry Contest at Midland College.

Ms. Peek won third place in the 1989 contest and took second place in 1991.

For her entry, "Beowulf's Last Fight", she received the Grand Award Plaque and a check for $500.

David Bays took the Second Place Plaque and $300 cash for his entry "Guardian Angel" and Donald L. Howle won $200 and the Third Place Plaque for "How Do I Love Thee?"

Announcement of the winners was made during a ceremony Wednesday at 10:15 a.m. in the Chaparral Hall. Making the awards was David E. Daniel, college president.

The contest is in memory of the late Hilda Simmons Levitt of Midland, an admirer of fine writing and poetry who had been a creative writing student at Midland College. She was a graduate of Louisiana State University.

The award was established by Stanley Levitt of Midland in memory of his wife.

Coordinator for the 1992 contest was Rebecca Watson, instructor in English. Others on the contest committee included: Larry G. Griffin, chair of the Fine Arts and Communication Division and committee chair; Pamela Howell, Bill Feeler, and Glenda Lindsey-Hicks, all instructors in English.

The contest was open to present MC students and former students who had been enrolled in an English class at the College during the past year.

Judges for the 1992 contest were Carol Coffee Reposa and Barbara Evans Stanush, both from San Antonio. Reposa has taught English at San Antonio College since 1970. Stanush is a free-lance writer, a columnist for the San Antonio Express-News and a master teacher for the Institute of Texan Cultures.

Winners read their award-winning entries and poetry from the two judges also was read.

Kidsville creates illusions to end old hospital myths

EL PASO (AP) — At a pediatric ward in an El Paso hospital, doctors and nurses won't mind if the children see an illusion.

Providence Memorial Hospital Wednesday officially opened a renovated pediatric ward that turned the drab, ominous wing into a colorful place called "Kidsville."

Starting next month, children who were moved out of their cold, sometimes scary rooms, will become residents of Kidsville.

"Many times hospitals can be traumatizing," said Norma Bastin, Providence Memorial Hospital child-life specialist. "Children are afraid of separation, mutilation. They fear they're going to be hurt somehow. They fear pain."

She said many children say they're afraid because they've heard that nurses will stick them with great, big needles and doctors will put cold, scary things all over their bodies.

Getting rid of those hospital myths is what Kidsville is all about, Ms. Bastin said.

"We're trying to create an illusion, that even though they (the patients) may be ill, and may even be facing death, they can still have a childlike atmosphere," said Rosie Sanchez, director of pediatric services.

The hospital is so earnest about making the ward more like being at home, parents will be able to sleep beside young patients. Each room will have sleeper chairs that convert to cots and shower areas for patients.

And for the children, there are plenty of happy distractions from their illness.

Kidsville is a place where fuzzy green dinosaurs jump out of giant computer screens, blue mountains are capped with chocolate fudge syrup and a life-size Humpty Dumpty gets put back together again.

Providence said the concept was modeled after a program in Alberta, Canada. The renovation cost $850,000, half of which was paid for by business donations.

Man claims he'll get stay of execution

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — A Vermont man who claims to be the only person from his state on death row anywhere said Wednesday he was confident he would not be put to death Dec. 4 in Texas for a 1983 killing in Houston.

"They're all serious," Robert Drew said of his execution date next month. "It may go to the last minute, but it will be stayed. I've got a writ pending in the Supreme Court."

Drew, 33, from Rutland County, Vt., is facing lethal injection for the 1983 stabbing death of Jeffrey Mays, 17, of Birmingham, Ala., who had given hitchhiker Drew a lift toward Houston from Lake Charles, La.

Despite the pending writ before the high court, the Texas attorney general's office considers Drew a good candidate for execution since his appeals are near an end.

Drew, while sounding confident, said in an interview the possibility of execution "has crossed my mind."

"The state doesn't like to admit they made a mistake," he said. "They worry more about political careers than truth and facts and what should be done."

His goal is a retrial so he can introduce new evidence he says will clear him of the Mays slaying.

"The courts are refusing to hear the evidence," he said. "If they were going to do the proper job, they're supposed to look at the facts and not what's popular with the majority."

Texas law requires motions for a new trial based on new evidence to be filed within 30 days of conviction. Drew said a companion, Earnest Purleauski, recanted testimony 101 days later, changing his story that Drew was involved in the Mays killing and now insisting he alone killed the Alabama man.

Purleauski is serving a 60-year prison term after pleading guilty.

According to Drew, Purleauski killed Mays and was threatened by him if he tried to stop the attack.

Investigation stings seven who sold phony insurance

AUSTIN (AP) — An undercover sting operation has resulted in the arrest of seven people accused of selling phony proof-of-insurance cards, officials said Wednesday.

Claire Korioth, chairwoman of the State Board of Insurance, said the arrests were the result of six undercover buys in Dallas, Austin and San Antonio.

"You now need proof of insurance to renew your license plates, to get your car inspected and obtain a driver's license," Ms. Korioth said during a news conference.

"Scam artists operating out of homes, flea markets, used car dealerships and other locations are selling fake proof-of-insurance cards to help uninsured drivers evade this law," she said.

The sting was headed by the Texas Department of Insurance Fraud Unit, the Texas Department of Public Safety and the Travis County district attorney's office with help from local police.

Officials said the TDI's fraud unit, which began operating 10 months ago, sought assistance from the DPS and Travis County district attorney after receiving complaints about the use of fake proof-of-insurance cards.

A printer called authorities after receiving an order for 10,000 cards designed to look like those issued by an insurance company, officials said.

Some counterfeiters are highly sophisticated, with computer-generated cards, while others are producing handwritten imitations.

House keeps school finance measure alive

AUSTIN (AP) — The House mustered enough support Wednesday to keep alive a proposed constitutional amendment on school finance, but first added a provision to ban a state income tax unless approved by Texas voters.

The proposed amendment was loaded up with several tax and education provisions before winning preliminary approval on a heavily partisan vote of 86-59. It would authorize redistribution of some local property tax money from wealthy to poorer school districts.

The vote was short of the two-thirds required in the 150-member chamber to try to put it on the ballot for Texas voters. However, it allows leaders another try to get the 100 votes they need.

Speaker Gib Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said another vote on the amendment might come as early as Friday.

"We had to find out where the votes were. Now we know," he said.

Only two of the 58 House Republicans voted for the measure, and five were shown absent for the vote.

One of Lewis' top lieutenants, Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, said, "If we don't get some Republican and bipartisan support on the effort, I mean we are doomed. This session is over."

Rep. Kent Grusendorf, R-Arlington, said, "There are other alternatives available" to Wednesday's proposal. He also noted concerns that a bill to implement the proposed amendment would result in higher local property taxes.

One alternative, by Republican Rep. John Culberson of Houston, was turned down early in the House debate. It would severely restrict court interference in school funding by saying that a system is constitutional as long as it rationally furthers a legitimate state purpose.

House members also rejected a proposal to earmark lottery revenue for education.

Before passing a school finance proposal, the House added the provision to require a vote of Texans for lawmakers in the future to impose an income tax.

The proposal also would mandate that at least half of the revenue from an income tax in the first year be used to reduce school property taxes.

In addition, the House voted to prevent the state from mandating programs for education unless it also provides funding for the programs, with some exceptions.

But the House also said any state programs should be paid for under an equalized system, so wealthy school districts that get virtually no state money still would have to comply with state mandates.

Among other changes, the House also tightened the limit on the amount of local property tax money that could be redistributed.

The House Public Education Committee had put the limit at 2.75 percent of state and local public education money, but the full House changed that to 2.5 percent.

Public education is funded mainly from local property taxes and state aid, and the Texas Supreme Court has said similar revenues should be available to school districts that have similar tax rates.

But it ruled in January that the current system of redistributing local property tax money among districts, within counties or groups of counties, violates the state constitution.

Texas inmate faces execution

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — The U.S. Supreme Court rejected a petition Wednesday from Texas death row inmate Jeffery Lee Griffin, putting the former male model one step closer to execution after midnight for a robbery at a Houston convenience store that left two people dead nearly 14 years ago.

Griffin, 37, has been on the Texas death row since 1979 for killing David Sobotik, 19, the night manager of his uncle's One Stop Drive-In Grocery.

The justices late Wednesday unanimously refused a request for a reprieve. Another petition was rejected by a federal district judge in Houston and was expected to wind up at the high court as well.

State attorneys have insisted the motions raise claims that already had been considered and rejected.

After the store was robbed March 12, 1978, Sobotik and a 7-year-old boy who also was there, Horacio DeLeon, were abducted and driven away in Sobotik's car. Both later were fatally stabbed and their bloody bodies were found in the car. Each had been stabbed repeatedly in a concise pattern around their hearts.

Griffin, who lived in the neighborhood and frequented the store, originally called police and told of seeing two men abducting the pair. Two days later, he was arrested and subsequently confessed.

A jury deliberated just 20 minutes before convicting him. The same jury took 15 minutes to decide he should be put to death.

Because of the death sentence, he never was tried for the boy's slaying. He also was accused, but never tried, for killing a waitress in 1978.

Griffin said he was placed in a state hospital as a child, was treated at least two other times there and was under state medical supervision at the time of his arrest. Prison records list his education level at fourth grade.

"I've been in state hospitals most all of my life," he said.

Certain oils deter breast cancer, doctor says

By Jean Carper

Carper

Which fats are best to eat or avoid if you are concerned about breast cancer: Olive oil? Meat fat? Fish fat? Vegetable oils like corn oil? A recent Harvard study found that eating less fat did not significantly cut the risk of breast cancer. But that does not mean fat is neutral. Actually, the type of fat women eat may be more important in breast cancer than how much they eat.

Here's what new evidence suggests, according to Dr. David Rose, a researcher on fat at the American Health Foundation.

Olive oil seems to deter breast cancer, as shown by studies in animals and in olive-oil consuming Mediterranean women.

Fish oils, from fatty fish like salmon, sardines and mackerel, also appear to suppress breast cancer and its spread.

Meat fats tend to promote breast cancer.

And perhaps worst of all are vegetable oils, high in so-called omega-6 fatty acids. In animals, they are potent promoters of breast cancer. This fat is concentrated in corn oil, regular safflower and sunflower seed oil and soybean oil and in shortenings and margarines made from them. Canola oil, very low in omega-6 type fat, in contrast, seems to be anti-cancer.

Hold the sprouts

Certain sprouts, widely touted as health foods, don't deserve their reputations. In fact, some sprouts contain toxins, and should not be eaten regularly or in large quantities, according to Andrew Weil, M.D., on the faculty of the University of Arizona College of Medicine.

Most hazardous are raw sprouts from the legume family, he warns in Natural Health magazine. That includes commonly eaten sprouts from lentils, garbanzo beans, mung beans and alfalfa.

Some of Weil's reasons: Alfalfa sprouts contain canavanine, a toxin that "can harm the immune system, possibly increasing risks of cancer and degenerative diseases." Indeed, both animals and humans, eating high amounts of alfalfa sprouts have developed symptoms of lupus, an auto-immune disorder.

Garbanzo beans, known as chick peas, also contain a toxin that has produced a lupus-like disease in India. Cooking chick peas destroys the toxin, but garbanzo sprouts with large, raw seeds attached are frequently offered in salad bars, notes Weil.

It is better to stick to non-legume sprouts that come from radishes, sunflower seeds, fenugreek seeds and buckwheat, advises Weil.

Breathless from sugar

If you have a serious lung disease, sugary drinks and a high-carbohydrate diet may make your breathing problems worse. So finds new British research.

In a test, investigators at Churchill Hospital in Oxford, gave patients with chronic obstructive lung disease various drinks and then measured their breathing capacity and lung functions after a six minute walk.

One drink was made up of 53 percent carbohydrate, 32 percent fat and 15 percent protein. Another drink was 28 percent carbohydrate, 55 percent fat and 17 percent protein. A third drink had no calories.

The results: After drinking the high-carbo drink, patients had much reduced breathing capacity and got out of breath faster, and the distance they could walk was up to 15 percent less. In contrast, the higher fat drink did not produce such breathing difficulties.

Unfortunately, most of the patients were on high-carbohydrate diets, said researchers, possibly in attempts to combat malnutrition, that also tends to exacerbate the lung disease. In such cases, carbohydrate may not be the better choice over fat, the research suggests.

Group threatens food labeling lawsuit

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The American Heart Association threatened to sue the federal government if overdue nutritional labels for foods weren't approved by Thursday.

The heart association at its annual meeting this week is also collecting what it hopes will be thousands of letters from its members to deliver to President Bush on Friday, urging him to break the deadlock between the Food and Drug Administration and the Department of Agriculture.

The two agencies have been battling over the labeling regulations. The FDA is under orders from Congress to devise labels that will tell people more about the food they eat.

"This is another manifestation of a very inappropriate system in the federal government that controls food labeling," said Dr. W. Virgil Brown, immediate past president of the heart association and an authority on nutritional aspects of heart disease.

He was sharply critical of the Agriculture Department, saying they are "inappropriately representing agriculture interests at the expense of the consumer."

"They should not be telling consumers what to eat after promoting the production side of things," he said Wednesday. "That's clearly the fox in the henhouse."

The FDA has devised labels that Brown thinks are suitable, but adoption of the labels has been blocked by the Agriculture Department, which says the labels discriminate against meat producers.

The labels were supposed to have been adopted by Nov. 8. On Nov. 17, the heart association and two consumer groups wrote to Dr. Louis Sullivan, the secretary of Health and Human Services, saying if the labeling regulations are not published "we intend to bring suit to compel publication."

The heart association urged in a statement "that the gridlock between the FDA and the USDA be resolved by President Bush."

"If these issues are not resolved immediately, the entire process of food labeling reform threatens to collapse under the weight of Washington gridlock," the statement said.

Tobacco firm defends itself in trial

BELLEVILLE, Ill.(AP) — The nation's second largest tobacco company engaged in a conspiracy out of greed to hide the truth about the dangers of smoking, an attorney for a lung-cancer patient told a jury Wednesday.

An attorney for the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. countered that the dying man knew what he was doing when he smoked cigarettes.

The statements came in the opening of the first trial since the U.S. Supreme Court ruled warning labels don't shield cigarette makers from lawsuits.

"We say the defendants sold a product to the plaintiff and it was defective and unreasonably dangerous when they sold it," attorney Bruce Cook told the St. Clair County Circuit jury.

He said he would prove there was a conspiracy to keep smokers smoking and to recruit children to smoke.

"It was a conspiracy based on human greed," Cook said.

Charles Kueper said in his lawsuit that R.J. Reynolds and the Tobacco Institute, a trade association, conspired to persuade him and millions of others to ignore evidence smoking is dangerous.

"Charlie's 51 years old and that's all the older he's going to get," Cook said. Kueper was diagnosed with inoperable lung cancer in December 1990 and doctors did not expect him to live until next spring.

Reynolds attorney Paul Crist said Kueper should have known the hazards of smoking because there have been warnings on packages since 1966.

Kueper, a truck driver and retired Army master sergeant from Cahokia, near St. Louis, is suing for compensatory damages of $3 million and unspecified punitive damages. Kueper, who wasn't in court, says he got cancer from smoking 1½ packs of cigarettes a day for 30 years.

FBI investigates security glitches at NASA center

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI is investigating national security problems at NASA's Ames Research Center in Mountain View, Calif., after a preliminary study found evidence of violations of law and misuse of government equipment, the space agency said.

Bill Livingstone, a NASA spokesman, said Wednesday that the information uncovered by a NASA management review team has been turned over to the FBI, and that an investigation continues by NASA's office of inspector general.

Livingstone said he could give no further details.

A statement from NASA, however, said that Ames was considered "high risk for hostile intelligence operations" and that the center had not acted properly in handling sensitive technology.

"Processes and practices in the area of personnel, legal, procurement and data and technology protection are contributing to the potential risk rather than serving as controls over the risk," the statement said.

It noted that the FBI and the departments of Justice and Defense were all consulted on "the national security and foreign counterintelligence aspects of the problems identified."

Livingstone refused to confirm or deny that sensitive technology had been taken from the Ames center.

No other NASA centers were said to be involved.

Asked whether any sensitive technology had been taken, FBI spokesman Rick Smith said in San Francisco, "That's yet to be determined."

He said the FBI had begun its investigation within the last six months, at NASA's request, and did not know how long it would take.

"Our investigation focuses on two things: whether there exists any criminal activity, and ... whether there exists any counterintelligence concerns," Smith said. "... There is cause for concern at a facility which is involved in such classified work."

He declined to give details of the scope of the investigation or any findings so far.

Ames' director, Dale L. Compton, issued a statement saying he shared "the concerns expressed by the review team about the need to improve procedures for protecting sensitive technologies."

Immediately after learning of the concerns in August, he said, Ames established an internal group to examine its practices in those and other areas, including procurement and personnel procedures.

"I am committed to ensuring that no illegal or unwarranted transfers of sensitive technologies occur," Compton said.

NASA administrator Daniel S. Goldin met with representatives of the Asian Pacific Island Advisory Group at Ames "to discuss their concerns," the statement said.

Woman fulfills college dream

By Nolene Hodges
Associated News Writer

WESLACO — Ruth S. Michael always wanted to have a college degree, but it has taken her awhile to achieve that goal.

In fact, she'll be 83 when she receives a bachelor's degree from the University of Texas-Pan American in commencement exercises next month.

Why?

"It helps my self-confidence" and "I didn't have a college education and I wanted a college education."

Mrs. Michael is a candidate for graduation with honors as a psychology major, with a minor in communications.

The Ohio native is a widow who does her studying in a comfortable apartment at John Knox Village retirement center. She confides she took a course in how to study as she started her second stint toward a degree at UT-Pan Am and has no problem with concentration.

She admits to having trouble with "memorizing," about the only concession she will make to age.

A seasoned member of the business world, she has worked as a reporter and city editor, legal secretary, in the presidential campaigns for Taft and Borah, as a greeting card verse writer and as a Kelly girl, while living in Cleveland, Chicago, New York and Harlingen.

What is next on her personal agenda?

"I might write a book," she confided. "I've got 80 years of history stored up. I think it would be autobiographical."

There has been some exploring of a master's program. But graduate study may have to wait for a while.

She was amused that she got excused from physical education because of being over 25 years of age. "I had to take a course in nutrition instead."

She finds no age discrimination in her pursuit of knowledge, and enjoys her younger classmates.

Cards sell out

TEMPE, Ariz. — The Phoenix Cardinals announced Wednesday that Sunday's game against Dallas is a sellout, allowing lifting of a local television blackout for only the second time in the team's five seasons in Arizona.

The live telecast from 73,521-seat Sun Devil Stadium will end a string of 35 straight blackouts. NFL policy requires that a stadium be sold out at least 72 hours in advance of kickoff to lift a local TV blackout.

"We are pleased with only the high ticket sales for this game, but also that so many more Arizona fans across the state will have the opportunity to see one of our home games," Cardinals president Bill Bidwill said.

The Cardinals' poor record since moving here in 1988 has led to declining crowds. Phoenix drew 472,937 regular-season fans in 1988, when it finished 7-9, and 332,025 last year, when it was 4-12.

This year, the team is 3-6 and, after four home dates, has played before 152,398 fans — on pace to draw fewer than 305,000 for the season.

The smallest crowd ever to watch the Cardinals in Tempe is 26,043, set last season against the New England Patriots.

Vets refute SI

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Two veterinarians who operated on the leg fracture that led to Alydar's death in 1990 on Wednesday labeled as "ridiculous" recent insinuations that the injury was anything but accidental.

"It is a ridiculous charge — the idea that someone might have broken this horse's leg intentionally," Dr. William Baker said responding to a Nov. 16 Sports Illustrated article. "It didn't look like somebody had done it intentionally."

The SI story raised questions that the injury was caused deliberately so Calumet Farm could collect $36.5 million in insurance in an effort to help its desperate financial situation.

Ranger loan

DALLAS — A multimillion-dollar loan sought on behalf of the Texas Rangers will enable them to charge less for premier seats at their new stadium, officials say.

Members of the Stadium Authority Board in Arlington agreed Tuesday to seek the loan, which would use the team's current $1 ticket surcharge as collateral. The surcharge would repay the loan, said Rangers president Tom Schieffer.

After two weeks of brisk sales, the Rangers have leased $2 million worth of luxury suites for the new ballpark, said Schieffer.

But he said the loan would allow the team to charge less for premier seats because it no longer would rely so heavily on their sale for money.

A resolution authorizing the board's participation in the loan and giving it ability to sell bonds for the choice seats was unanimously passed.

IRVING — Without a robust Charles Haley, the Dallas Cowboys defense became vulnerable in a 27-23 loss to the Los Angeles Rams.

Haley, who is battling a groin injury, could be on the sidelines again when the chastened Cowboys ride to Phoenix to meet the Cardinals on Sunday.

Chaps coast to 7-0

■ Six Midland College players score in double figures as the Chaparrals rumble past Cisco Junior College, 108-79.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

Midland College put its depth on display again Wednesday night, defeating Cisco Junior College 108-79 and running its record to 7-0 as the team completed its longest uninterrupted homestand of the season.

Six Chaparrals scored in double figures while Kirk Ford, Ari Rodriques and Corey Tubbs all went on individual mini scoring runs to peck away at the Wranglers.

"As much as anything," Cisco head coach Doug Galyean said, "their depth wore us down."

Sophomore Demeitreus Drew had 18 rebounds, 15 of which were on the defensive end. In contrast, Cisco was limited to eight offensive boards and 28 total, only 10 more than Drew accounted for by himself.

With the Chaps leading 43-36, Tubbs nailed three-pointers on two consecutive trips down the floor and scored seven of his 11 points in the last two minutes of the first half. Tubbs' scoring helped give MC a 52-39 bulge on the scoreboard at the break.

Rodriques, hobbling on a bum left knee which will require surgery next month, scored six of the Chaps' first eight points of the second half.

Ford later had a mini-run of his own when the Chaps had put the game out of reach.

"It's like I've said all along, our depth is our biggest factor," MC head coach Steve Green said. "That's going to have to be our strong point going through the season. We're fortunate to be able to have people come off the bench and contribute."

Midland College's Richard Edwards (15) drives around Jake Escobar (30) of Cisco in Wednesday night's game at the Chaparral Center.

Fifty-one of the Chaps' 108 points came from players off the bench as MC shot 52.5 (42-of-70) percent for the night.

After the Chaps had built a 19-point lead in the second half, Cisco went on a 14-2 run to close the margin back to nine, 68-59. After a timeout, the Chaps put Cisco away for good, outscoring the Wranglers 32-19 in the game's final 10:35.

"They're very talented," Galyean said of the Chaps. "For us to stay with people like that we have to play exactly the way our practices go. We've got to execute and be in position defensively, and they forced us out on both counts."

Still lurking over the Chaps' collective shoulder is the injury problem. Although the wounded rolls didn't increase during Wednesday's game, the thought was always with Green that something bad may happen.

"Injuries ... they're killing us," Green said. "Dominique wasn't having that good of a game, so I took him out because I was afraid he was going to get hurt.

SMU task force recommends I-A

Trustees still must approve

Associated Press

DALLAS — Bigtime collegiate football at Southern Methodist University survived a major test Wednesday, and the next one will come on Dec. 4 when the school's Board of Trustees rules on a recommendation to keep all of the Mustangs Division I-A programs.

A 12-member task force evaluating intercollegiate athletics unanimously approved the continuance of SMU's Division I-A programs and membership in the Southwest Conference. A source close to the board said the task force's recommendation would be approved.

"I don't think we'll be doing this again two years from now," SMU president A. Kenneth Pye said. "Things could change if the Mustang club doesn't fulfill its committment, or Texas A&M and Texas defect, or if Title IX doesn't become too disruptive financially."

The task force recommended that any future operational deficit should be met by the Mustang Club, alumni and other school supporters.

"The Mustang club will have to increase the gifts from its members," Pye said. "It's a formidable challenge. However, if all the people who have written me a letter about SMU football

Bonds named NL MVP

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Barry Bonds' value as a free agent went up a little Wednesday after he was named the National League Most Valuable Player for the second time in three years.

Bonds was an easy winner over Atlanta's Terry Pendleton, receiving 18 of a possible 24 first-place votes in balloting by the Baseball Writers Association of America. Bonds finished with 304 points, followed by Pendleton with 232 points, including four first-place votes, and San Diego's Gary Sheffield with two first-place votes and 204 points.

Andrews healthy for Plainview

By Joe Wyatt
Staff writer

This just might be the year that the Andrews Mustangs break out of their playoff doldrums.

Andrews, a football team with a 1-7-1 playoff record since 1964, joins the postseason fray for the second straight year when the undefeated Mustangs (9-0-1) meet the Plainview Bulldogs (10-1) at 2 p.m. Saturday in Lubbock's Lowrey Field. And unlike last year, when the Mustangs lost eight starters to grades and injuries on the eve of their 27-16 area-round loss to Pampa, Andrews will be pretty much at full strength Saturday.

"We didn't lose anybody to grades and we're about as healthy as you can be for this time of the year," said Andrews coach W.T. Stapler, whose Mustangs had a first-round playoff bye while they finished up the regular season last weekend.

"These guys weren't even born in 1964. They don't know what went on then."

What did transpire in '64 was Andrews' last playoff victory, which came 15-14 over Dumas. The Mustangs did advance on penetrations in 1971 in a 21-21 tie with Canyon, but both playoff spurts ended in second-round losses. Since '71, the Mustangs have suffered five straight first-round defeats.

Andrews is coming off a 10-10 tie in its regular-season finale at Sweetwater as each of those teams share the 3-4A title for the second year running, this time with 5-0-1 marks.

But Sweetwater grabbed the league's No. 1 seeding with a 4-2 edge in penetrations in that game, which Andrews led 10-3 before Sweetwater used its final drive to knot the score, converting on four fourth-down tries along the way. As a result, Sweetwater meets Lubbock Estacado in its area tilt, Friday at Jones Stadium in Lubbock.

"I think gradually we're getting over that (Sweetwater) game, but our kids were really down the other night and I felt for them," Stapler said. "The 10-0 deal and an outright championship really meant a lot to them."

Now Plainview, the District 2-4A champion, must face the brunt of the Mustangs' ire. The Bulldogs are coming off a 19-7 bi-district win over Hereford. And the 'Dogs have a slight similarity to the Sweetwater team that Andrews just tied — on the road.

"If Plainivew looks like anybody we've played so far it would be Sweetwater, except they have a little more speed than Sweetwater," Stapler said.

Andrews held the high-powered Sweetwater attack to just 180 offensive yards and two scores on four penetrations of the 20 yard line.

"Our defense was just outstanding," Stapler said after the tie. "I'm not unhappy at all with the way we played."

Another such outing could spell trouble for Plainview. Andrews allowed its district opponents just 189 yards a game this year, for a league-best total of just 43 points.

And the Mustang offense has outscored its 10 opponents by a total of 374-108.

Red Devils prepare for Anton

By Joe Wyatt
Staff writer

Nobody in Rankin is proclaiming a victory. And nary a sole in Anton is throwing in a towel.

But just as sure as two and two make four, the Rankin Red Devils are prohibitive favorites to beat the Anton Bulldogs (6-4) when the two teams collide in the area round of the Class 2A playoffs, at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Seminole.

Rankin completed its fifth consecutive District 8-A championship season Friday with a 21-13 victory over Garden City. And with the 5-0 league finish — they stand 9-1 overall — the Red Devils are now undefeated in 8-A play throughout that five-year span.

Rankin, the team that advanced to the regional round of the state playoff in 1988 and 1989, and to the quarterfinals in '90 and '91, is again in playoff

MHS catcher McLaughlin inks with Rice

By Bill Price
Staff writer

Midland High catcher Tim McLaughlin doesn't have to worry about college scouts analyzing his every move when the high school baseball season begins next spring.

That's because McLaughlin, a senior who moved to Midland from Kilgore in the off-season, signed a preseason baseball scholarship with Rice University Wednesday at the MHS Fieldhouse.

"I think it's a great opportunity. Their baseball program is on the rise and I can also get a great education," McLaughlin said. "I'm real glad to get this out of the way. Now I can concentrate on the season and work to help the Bulldogs get in the playoffs."

McLaughlin's honors portfolio is already a thick one, as he was named All-District in both his sophomore and junior years at Class 4A Kilgore, and was also All-East Texas last year. Last season he switch hit his way to a .348 average.

McLaughlin is the second MHS player to sign with Rice in the past two seasons, following pitcher James Madrid to the college noted for its educa-

Hurricanes should overcome Syracuse, dome

By Rick Warner
AP Football Writer

Big games are nothing new at the Carrier Dome. Only this time, the game is football.

Known primarily as the home of Syracuse's high-profile basketball team, the Dome will be the setting for a huge football game Saturday — top-ranked Miami (9-0) against the No. 8 Orangemen (9-1).

At stake are Big East bragging rights, bowl bids and Miami's chance for a second straight national championship.

The Hurricanes say they aren't worried about playing in the ultra-loud Dome before 50,000 screaming fans.

"We like going into hostile environments," receiver Lamar Thomas said. "We like people screaming obscene things, calling us jailbirds and convicts. It turns us on and makes me want to score touchdowns."

Miami has scored plenty of touchdowns in its last four games after struggling for points early in the season. However, the Hurricanes will be facing a Syracuse defense that has given up only 36 points in its last four games.

"They've got a very good defense," said Miami quarterback Gino Torretta, the school's career passing leader. "They're very fast and they give you a lot of looks in the secondary, which is why they have so many interceptions."

Syracuse quarterback Marvin Graves is the nation's leading passer, but he will be tested by a Miami defense that is giving up only 11 points and 166 passing yards per game.

Although the Orangemen are playing at home, remember that their only loss this season — 35-12 to Ohio State — came at the Carrier Dome. Furthermore, an experienced Miami team that played before 96,000 Penn State fans last month won't be intimidated by the deafening Dome crowd.

The Hurricanes are favored by six points .... MIAMI 24-21.

Aaron charges Schott with racism

Associated Press

Aaron

Schott

CINCINNATI — Home run king Hank Aaron wants baseball to investigate allegations of racism against Cincinnati Reds owner Marge Schott. Aaron said comments Schott allegedly made to former employees were "really heavy, heavier than what brought down Al Campanis."

Campanis, a former Los Angeles Dodgers executive, was fired in 1987 after he said on national television that blacks did not have the "necessities" to be big-league managers and general managers.

Former Reds front-office employees, fired by Schott, have said that she referred to former Reds stars Eric Davis and Dave Parker by using an offensive racist word.

Schott said she did not make such a comment. She said she has used the word in her life, but had never asked a black if the word was offensive.

"Any halfway intelligent person knows that word is offensive," Aaron told The Cincinnati Enquirer. "If a person doesn't know its offensive, or has to ask, 'Is it offensive?' they need to have their head examined."

Neither Schott nor general manager Jim Bowden returned calls Wednesday seeking reaction to Aaron's comment.

"Baseball must come forward and make it known to the world: 'We won't stand for this. There is no place for it in the national pastime,'" said Aaron, senior vice president of the Atlanta Braves. "Baseball needs to investigate. Baseball must investigate."

National League spokeswoman Katy Feeney said the league had no comment.

"When the commissioner's office begins an investigation, we don't announce it to the world that we are investigating," deputy baseball commissioner Steve Greenberg told The Enquirer. "We have had countless investigations that no one even knows about."

On Tuesday, Schott denied making some of the statements attributed to her and said she bears no racial or religious prejudice.

"Talk to the people who work for me; they know me very well. I'm very close to my employees," Schott said.

"I've been in business for 25 years, since Charlie (her husband, Charles Schott) died, and I've never had anything like this. And I've had thousands of people work for me."

She acknowledged that there was only one black among more than 40 front office employees. But she said she did not have a policy of discriminating.

"Absolutely not. I never have. I'm not that type of person at all," Schott said.

Schott spent two days in court this week before former Reds controller Tim Sabo agreed to dismiss the remainder of a $2.5 million lawsuit alleging that he was fired illegally.

The allegations of racial discrimination and name calling came to light because Sabo said he was fired, in part, because he objected to Schott's alleged prejudice in hiring and promoting minorities.

He also alleged that he was fired because he refused to doctor the Reds books and because Schott wanted to retaliate against him for testifying for her limited partners in a lawsuit last year.

Judge Fred Cartolano dismissed the claims regarding retaliation and unethical practices, citing Ohio's "at-will" doctrine of employment.

Cartolano said at-will employees — those who work without a contract but at the discretion of their employer — may be fired for any reason. But he said Ohio law had a provision for Sabo, who is white, to pursue his suit on the basis of his objection to alleged discrimination against minorities.

Sabo's lawyers saw that as the weakest of their claims, and chose to dismiss the suit in hopes of getting Cartolano's ruling reversed on appeal.

The allegations against Schott have sparked editorial reaction from both Cincinnati daily newspapers.

"Mudville could hardly be more joyless than Cincinnati this week, as a local sports franchise took another head-first slide into the gutter," The Enquirer said on Tuesday.

"This is the kind of dirty lawsuit laundry that offends everyone, takes the fun out of sports and hurts the reputation of the whole city."

"Fans deserve better," The Cincinnati Post said Wednesday. "Mrs. Schott's continued ownership of the Cincinnati Reds is a continuing embarrassment to this city."

OU players clear air with coaches over QB situation

Associated Press

NORMAN, Okla. — Disgruntled Oklahoma football players met with their coaches Wednesday in an effort to clear up some hard feelings over who plays quarterback for the Sooners.

"A group of players got together and wanted to visit with each other about the quarterback situation that developed last week after the Missouri game concerning Steve Collins and Cale Gundy," coach Gary Gibbs said.

Gundy played all the way in a 15-15 tie with Oklahoma State last weekend. In the previous two games, Collins had played quarterback while Gundy recovered from a shoulder injury.

Collins, a popular fifth-year senior, had looked particularly impressive in a 51-7 victory over Missouri the week before the OSU game.

"We discussed the quarterback situation in detail. We discussed a variety of other issues concerning players who were playing or not playing as much as they wanted to," Gibbs said. "I thought it was a very healthy exchange."

It was initially reported that the players had walked out of practice, but Gibbs and several players said that was not the case. They said the length of the meeting precluded any workout.

Gibbs acknowledged that some players wondered why Collins didn't play a snap against Oklahoma State and said some of the frustration was borne out of the fact the Sooners did not win that game.

That game left Oklahoma 5-3-2. The Sooners must beat Nebraska on Nov. 27 to have any chance of going to a bowl game.

"Anytime you tie, you have a couple of disappointing games in the stretch of the year, a lot of frustration builds up and consequently we addressed some of those frustrating questions today," Gibbs said.

He said the meeting would not cause a change in Oklahoma's plans for the Nebraska game and that Gundy would start.

"We're always going to put our best players on the field. We've always done it in the past and that's what we're going to continue to do," Gibbs said.

Most players refused to comment as they left the meeting, although those who did comment said it had nothing to do with the quarterbacks.

Gundy bolted through reporters and said, "There's no problems, no problems at all."

Later, Gundy returned and said the meeting had nothing to do with any controversy involving him and Collins.

"Steve and I have probably become better friends than anybody on this team," Gundy said. "We're not walking out. We're not going to quit as a team. We just called a meeting so we could talk as a team with all the coaches and all the players together. We've been doing all of our talking on our own, by ourselves, with certain coaches and certain players, but not as a team."

Directing his comments at the media, Gundy said, "Y'all people don't try to ruin this team. We've got a great team here and we've got a lot of family."

At least one player said the meeting resulted from feelings that had been brewing for several weeks.

"I think a lot of people don't believe the right things are being done for us to win," lineman Joe Correia said after Gundy left.

He said he and others were upset that Collins did not play against Oklahoma State. He said Gundy at one point during the OSU game asked coaches to insert Collins because he had hurt his leg.

"I just don't understand it unless it's a personal vendetta against Steve," Correia said.

He added later, "We need to win at all costs. They (the coaches) were saying 'we want the best players on the field at all times and that's our job to do that.' It's a contradiction to me. If you go back and watch the Oklahoma State film ... Cale will tell you himself that he wasn't the best player for that situtation."

Gibbs said it would not have been prudent to have inserted Collins at times when Oklahoma drove deep into OSU territory.

Linebacker Reggie Barnes, who like Gundy, is a captain, said "the things that were said were said for the betterment of this football team, not to cause any heartache or problems."

BONDS: Free agent Pirate is 10th multi-MVP winner giving to my mom. She deserves it," Bonds said of his second MVP award.

Bonds, the son of former major leaguer Bobby Bonds, led the Pittsburgh Pirates to their third straight NL East title by hitting .311 with 34 homers and 103 RBIs. He also scored 109 runs and walked 127 times.

The left fielder also won the MVP award in 1990 and was runner-up to Pendleton last year. He is the 10th player to win more than one MVP, joining such Hall of Famers as Stan Musial, Willie Mays and Ernie Banks.

"I have a lot or reactions," Bonds said. "Last year, statistically I thought I had a shot. I was very happy for Terry Pendleton. He's a good friend of mine."

For winning MVP honors, Bonds gets a $250,000 bonus from the Pirates. That raised his 1992 income to $5.05 million, including bonuses.

"I never set goals for myself," Bonds said. "I prepare the same way every year. I would do the same things if you paid me one dollar."

The difference this winter is that Bonds is preparing to play for a new team in 1993. The All-Star outfielder will be a looking for a contract that pays him at least $7 million per season, and it's unlikely the Pirates can afford it.

"I haven't closed the door to anything," Bonds said. "I don't really want to get involved in the negotiations. My agent will let me know what's going on."

The teams most interested in Bonds are the New York Yankees and Atlanta Braves. During the NL playoffs, Bonds went house hunting in the Atlanta area.

"Maybe by next week things will be a little clearer," said Dennis Gilbert, Bonds' agent. "We've talked to a lot of teams. We've narrowed it down to five teams."

Gilbert declined to discuss any figures.

Bonds has emerged as one of the best players in the major leagues because of his all-around abilities.

"I want to do it again," Bonds said of the MVP award. "I'm 28. I want to be the first to do it four times."

Marlins, Rockies save money but may stink up field in 1993

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The big names stayed put, while the little names and the no-names were taken. The Colorado Rockies and Florida Marlins may be terrible, after all.

"We don't think we're going to win a pennant with the team we have," Marlins general manager Dave Dombrowski said. "But that wasn't our philosophy going in. We think we have a bright future."

Just not a winning one in 1993. Florida's prospective pitching rotation of Jack Armstrong, Pat Rapp, Dave Weathers and Scott Chiamparino has a combined career record of 34-51.

Colorado went for players with slightly more big league experience, but also won't challenge anyone with this cast.

"We felt," general manager Bob Gebhard said, "we were able to put together a young but experienced ballclub that can play without being intimidated, as opposed to one with young guys with no experience."

As of now, Colorado's payroll for a 25-man roster will be about $4 million. Florida is paying more than that to just one player, reliever Bryan Harvey. His salary is listed at $4,125,000 in 1993. Shortstop Walt Weiss, obtained in a post-draft trade, will get somewhere near the $760,000 he was paid by Oakland in 1992.

"Our feeling was that players who were just breaking in at the big league level or were in the minors could make us a better club in the long run," Dombrowski said. "We didn't put as much emphasis on having players who play at the big league level right now."

Florida's lineup for opening day could have Jack Armstrong pitching, Steve Decker catching, Jeff Conine at first, Bret Barberie at second, Weiss at shortstop and Gary Scott at third. Junior Felix, Monty Farris and Chuck Carr could be in the outfield.

Colorado could have David Nied on the mound throwing to Joe Girardi, Andres Galarraga at first, Eric Young at second, Freddie Benavides at shortstop and Charlie Hayes at third. The potential outfielder has Jerald Clark, Alex Cole and Dante Bichette.

"We stayed away from guys who won't be here in a year or two," Gebhard said. "But yet we were able to bring in established players, especially on the four corners where we have four guys who can hit home runs and drive in runs in Mile High Stadium."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 19, 1992

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Old attitudes may be hard to combat, but overcoming someone's stubbornness is your key to great success. Good relations with your relatives guarantees happiness over the winter holidays. Creative self-expression will produce the same effect early in 1993. New emotional and physical attractions are featured next spring. Taking a midsummer vacation recharges your batteries. September will demand careful attention to career or financial choices. You will feel more ambitious than ever as your next birthday approaches.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actress Jodie Foster, talk show host Dick Cavett, broadcast tycoon Ted Turner, fashion designer Calvin Klein.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Good things happen for you now. You find out that a friend really is as loyal as you believe. Concerns about your car can be answered by a thorough inspection.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your imagination may be running away with you. Forget your suspicions and stick to the facts and figures. More can be accomplished if you work independently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can have a terrific day if you show the will to work and to get things settled. Do not fail someone to whom you have made a promise. An unexpected bonus is in the works.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The time is ripe to invest in something that really interests you. If you have any doubts, though, it would be best to obtain more data. Consulting an expert fills in the gaps.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An excellent day for investing, buying property or conducting interviews. If single, you may want to end a romance. Tonight may not give you the opportunity. Bide your time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A pet project will get the green light today. Go slow to avoid making errors. Stay good-natured, even if your associates do things that irritate you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Travel could be highly profitable now. Romance is on the schedule for those who are single but have their eye on one special person. Be upfront about your intentions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Not a good day to wait for someone else to take the lead. It is up to you to steer your own course. A warm embrace tells someone that you are on his side.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You see someone in a new, less-flattering light today. Keep your own counsel. Arguing with a person who is in a bad mood is pointless. Storm clouds blow away by nightfall.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): All might not be as it seems at your place of work. Avoid secretive [illegible] underground activities. A cooperative attitude helps thaw out a pigheaded associate.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Self-pity could threaten to engulf you. It is time to consult a friend who has your best interests at heart. Exercise boosts your spirits and helps restore your self-esteem.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Simple pleasures hold the most appeal today. Set aside more time for meditation. A favorite hobby could lead to a new career. Think about what you would really like to accomplish.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are goal-oriented, persistent and loving. They know what they want and will not give up the struggle until they get it. Unafraid of conflict or disapproval, these children express their views with quiet confidence. They are ready to defend their opinions at all cost. Although dedicated to their careers, these affectionate Scorpios will drop everything to take care of a loved one. Family comes first!

To fully appreciate this deal, cover the East-West cards and decide how you would play this hand at rubber bridge. Would you do anything different in a pairs event?

The auction is simple enough. Once North can respond, South has enough to insist on game—it's simply a question of where the hand should be played. Three no trump by South on the third round of the auction, however, would have been a better choice. Incidentally, note North's response of one no trump on a balanced minimum with three-card spade support. We heartily endorse this choice.

West starts the defense by taking two high diamonds, then shifting to the jack of clubs. You win in hand and cash the king of spades, on which West drops the jack. How do you continue?

Since you have no other losers except for trumps, you should take a safety play to ensure no more than one trump loser. You can accomplish that by leading a low spade toward the ten. If West has the queen as well, all you have given up is an overtrick.

As the cards lie, West discards and East captures the ten with the queen. You can win any return on the table and take the marked finesse for the nine of spades to land your game.

How would you tackle the hand if you were playing duplicate? Exactly the same way! The Principle of Restricted Choice states that West's jack is more likely to be a singleton than from specifically queen-jack doubleton. Indeed, Q J is only one of four possible doubleton combinations West could hold which includes the knave.

Ambassador Sophia Loren hopes to assist refugees

GENEVA — Sophia Loren plans to go to Somalia to call attention to the suffering of refugees and perhaps "change my whole life."

Loren

"There are moments in our lives when by an unpredictable event we find ourselves facing horror, pity and shame," Miss Loren said Wednesday after being named a goodwill ambassador for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees.

The 58-year-old actress said such a moment came to her about a year ago when she saw a picture of a starving Somali child "tragically attempting a smile."

The child is probably dead by now, Miss Loren said, but she said she hoped to be able to do something for the refugees still alive.

She plans to leave for Kenya by the end of the week to visit a refugee camp, then cross into Somalia.

"When I come back maybe I'm going to be a different person, because whatever I see over there it's going to be something so incredible that it may change my whole life. It's possible."

NEW YORK — Pop star Paul Simon is outraged that the man who killed his "Graceland" colleague Headman Tshabalala won't spend a day in jail.

Tshabalala, a member of the black South African vocal group Ladysmith Black Mambazo, was shot to death Dec. 10 by a white security guard. Sean Nicholas, 26, was sentenced by a South African court last week to five years, two of which were suspended and the rest of which will be served under house arrest.

Simon

"This isn't the sentence for murder," Simon, 51, was quoted as saying in Wednesday's Daily News. "This is an insult to Headman's family, as if his life has no value. But that's the way it is under apartheid. It makes you ashamed to be white."

The shooting occurred when Nicholas pulled Tshabalala, 44, over to make a "citizen's arrest," saying Tshabalala was driving erratically.

CHICAGO — Neil Young put on a two-hour show before fewer than 200 invited guests, but the concert is destined for a wider audience in the first joint production of a performance series by cable and public TV.

Cable music channel VH-1 and Chicago public TV station WTTW are co-producers of the "Center Stage" series, which aims for an older audience than the "Unplugged" concert specials on VH-1's sister channel, MTV.

Young ranged through a ballad-heavy set of 20 songs — nine from his new album "Harvest Moon." VH-1 said it will broadcast portions of the concert in a half-hour special Dec. 19 and 20.

The series will have its official premiere on Valentine's Day on VH-1, also in a 30-minute format. Hour-long versions of the concerts will begin airing on the public television system next summer, spokespersons at VH-1 and WTTW said.

Other artists signed for "Center Stage" include k.d. lang, Lindsay Buckingham, Michael Bolton and Keith Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO — Herbert Blomstedt is stepping down as the San Francisco Symphony's music director at the end of the 1994-95 season for personal reasons.

Blomstedt, 65, who has held the post for seven years, announced his decision to his musicians at the end of their rehearsal Tuesday.

Blomstedt said he wanted to spend time with his four daughters in Sweden and return to his musical roots in Europe.

Symphony officials said they would begin a search for a replacement immediately.

RIVERSIDE, Calif. — A psychedelic portrait of rocker Alice Cooper, which a frustrated fan painted on his foreclosed home, might be more permanent than neighbors had hoped.

Earlier this week, homeowner Patrick Kelly said he would repaint the house white before departing, since neighbors had complained that the wild paint job was an eyesore and lowered their property values.

The house, which didn't sell even after its asking price was dropped from $258,000 to $180,000, faces a Nov. 24 foreclosure sale.

Cooper's agent, Toby Mamis, was quoted in The Press Enterprise on Wednesday as saying the musician would consider helping Kelly avoid foreclosure. "One stipulation would be that he can't paint over the house," Mamis said.

"I'm not sure what we're going to do," said Mamis. "We could help him get a loan, and get some publicity for Alice. Mr. Kelly obviously has good taste in music."

Courier, Sampras win ATP openers

Associated Press

FRANKFURT, Germany — The victory over Richard Krajicek on Wednesday brought Jim Courier closer to retaining the No. 1 ranking in the world.

Courier outlasted the big-hitting Dutchman 6-7, 7-6, 7-5 to win his opening match at the ATP World Championships.

Pete Sampras beat Stefan Edberg 6-3, 3-6, 7-5 to keep alive his chances of retaining the title.

But Courier's victory prevented Sampras from having any chance of getting to No. 1, even if he wins the year-end tournament of the top eight players in the world.

Edberg, who is now 1-1 in the round-robin portion of the event, could still get enough computer points to climb from No. 2 to No. 1 for the third time this year, depending how well Courier does.

Sampras, who beat Boris Becker Tuesday, brought his record to 2-0.

Becker (1-1), seeking to win the title for the first time since the tournament moved to his homeland in 1990, beat Petr Korda (0-2) 6-4, 6-2 in the last match of the long night.

The German double-faulted on his first match point, but then blasted an ace.

■ MORE SPORTS, 10C

Sampras broke Edberg in the fourth game of the third set, but suffered a break of his own in the seventh.

After wasting two match points in the 10th game, the American set up three match points in the 12th game after scrambling to reach the ball and score with a backhand volley. He then forced the second-ranked Swede into a backhand error to win the match in two hours and six minutes.

Virginia Slims Championships close first round

NEW YORK (AP) — In what is rapidly becoming the latest fad at the Virginia Slims Championships, Jennifer Capriati and Arantxa Sanchez Vicario turned first-set tiebreakers into straight-set victories.

Capriati, the No. 7 seed in this 16-player tournament, defeated Helena Sukova 7-6 (7-3), 6-1 after Sanchez Vicario upended Zina Garrison 7-6 (7-0) 6-1.

Third-seeded Gabriela Sabatini completed the opening round when she took on Amy Frazier in the night's final singles match.

Capriati and Sanchez Vicario were only the latest to win first-set tiebreakers. On Tuesday, Lori McNeil shocked No. 2 seed Steffi Graf 7-6 (7-1), 6-4 and Jana Novotna eliminated No. 6 Mary Joe Fernandez 7-6 (7-3), 6-2.

The university will cover the costs of grants and aid for students in all sports.

"The task force believes it is in the best interest of SMU to remain in Division I-A in the Southwest Conference, because of the university's long tradition of competing in sports at the highest possible level and because of the cohesion athletics bring to the university community," said Dr. Leighton Farrell, chairman of the task force.

The task force also recommended the university maintain its current admission standards for student athletes.

The study comes after SMU had an athletic deficit of $4.9 million for 1991-92 and a projected deficit of $4.6 million for 1992-93. Athletic director Forrest Gregg said most of the athletic department's expenses are scholarships.

It costs about $17,500 in tuition, room and board to attend SMU annually.

"We realize that the commitment of the university to Division I-A is only part of the formula," Farrell said. "The university's commitment must be matched by a strong commitment from alumni and friends in the Dallas community to support the program through both giving for athletic and academic purposes and attendance at athletic events.

The task force examined several reports before making its recommendations, Farrell said. The panel considered the athletic department's fiscal health; the competitiveness of the programs; and the impact athletics has on student life and admissions.

healthy."

Although Haley has recorded only two sacks since he joined the Cowboys from the San Francisco 49ers, he's had 32 quarterback pressures, recovered two fumbles and been responsible for clearing the way for five other sacks.

The Cowboys were able to sack Jim Everett only one time last Sunday as the Rams passed and ran through the NFL's previously top-ranked defense. A limping Haley tried to play with the sore left groin but couldn't get near Everett.

"Haley is valuable because he adds a lot to the pass rush," said Johnson. "It was obvious Charles was not at full speed on Sunday. It was the first time we had dealt with a Charles Haley injury. He felt he was able to go. We thought once he warmed up he could give us a pass rush. This has got to be a concern."

Haley said the injury has taken away his primary weapons.

"I do a lot of quick moves and I couldn't do it every time I tried to," Haley said.

Prices decline

NEW YORK — Oil futures continued a downward drift Wednesday after an industry trade group reported that crude supplies had dropped.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in December settled at $20.19 per barrel, down 7 cents, on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Local crude purchasers such as Scurlock Permian and Navajo Refining lowered their posted price 25 cents to $18.75.

The market was responding to an American Petroleum Institute report issued after the close of trading Tuesday that said supplies of crude oil continued to decline last week.

Natural gas contracts for delivery in December settled at $2.375 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 3.4 cents.

Credit report

NEW YORK — Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan said the credit crunch isn't getting worse and there are signs that small and medium businesses may see bank loans become more available.

The banking industry, battered by bad real estate loans, strict federal regulations and a poor economy, appears in good enough shape to help finance the economy's emerging rebound, Greenspan added Wednesday in prepared remarks.

However, he warned that new strict banking regulations, particularly the 1991 banking bill, represent an "overreaction" that could hamper the recovery of the banking industry — and the economy.

Dollar slumps

NEW YORK — The dollar finished lower Wednesday against most major currencies despite a report that the U.S. trade deficit shrank in September.

In New York, the dollar fell to 123.70 yen from 124.35 yen late Tuesday.

The dollar also lost ground to the British pound. In New York, the pound rose to $1.5265 from $1.5220 late Tuesday.

Stocks rally

NEW YORK — Stock prices rose and the pace of trading picked up as the market pulled out of a recent sinking spell Wednesday, enouraged by hopes for a stronger economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 47.01 points over the previous four sessions, climbed 14.05 points to 3,207.37.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by more than 9 to 5 on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Nasdaq composite index for the OTC market gained 7.79 to 634.86.

U.S. exports soar to all-time high

Imports leave America's trade deficit stuck at $8.31 billion for month

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. exports soared to an all-time high in September despite a sluggish world economy, but imports hit a record as well, leaving America's trade deficit stuck at $8.31 billion for the month, the government reported Wednesday.

The Bush administration, pushing forward with negotiations aimed at resolving a bitter farm trade fight with Europe, hailed the new report as a sign that American exporters were excelling despite the sluggish world economy.

However, private economists noted that the September deficit was down only slightly from a deficit of $8.95 billion in August. Both months represented the country's worst trade performance since November 1990.

The big jump in exports was widespread, with sales of chemicals, semiconductors, computers and telecommunications equipment all posting big gains.

On the import side, foreign sales were up sharply for autos and other consumer goods. Shipments of clothing, diamonds and shoes all posted big gains as retailers stocked up in advance of the Christmas season.

Analysts, however, said the surprisingly good showing for American exports was likely to be temporary, given the pronounced weakness in Europe and Japan, two of America's biggest export markets.

They forecast that export sales would falter in the months ahead while a pickup in economic activity in the United States would keep imports rising.

Negotiators from the United States and Europe began a last-ditch effort Wednesday to avoid a trade war over the issue of subsidies that the United States claims are costing American farmers $1 billion annually in lost sales of soybeans and other oilseed crops.

Both sides expressed optimism as they arrived at the Blair House, across the street from the White House, for their first round of talks Wednesday night.

Agriculture Secretary Edward Madigan said he was pleased to read press reports that the EC was prepared to be flexible.

Asked if he was optimistic, Frans Andriessen, the EC's chief trade negotiator, said, "Of course. Otherwise we wouldn't be here."

The administration has announced that it will slap 200 percent tariffs on $300 million worth of European imports, a move that will triple the price of white wine for U.S. consumers, if the soybean fight is not resolved by Dec. 5.

The negotiators were scheduled to resume today.

Through the first nine months of the year, the country's trade deficit was running at an annual rate of $80.2 billion, up sharply from last year's deficit of $65.4 billion. Many analysts believe the deficit will top $100 billion next year and remain at that level for the foreseeable future.

"When you look ahead for U.S. exports, they are not going to remain as bright as they were in this report because economic conditions in Europe and Japan are going to get worse before they get better," said Bruce Steinberg, economist at Merrill Lynch in New York.

But Commerce Secretary Barbara Hackman Franklin said private forecasters were being overly pessimistic. She predicted the trade deficit could actually be eliminated by the turn of this century if the government keeps pushing ahead to expand markets for American products.

She expressed optimism that the fight with the EC over soybean subsidies would be resolved and that this would enable broader negotiations aimed at writing a new global trade agreement .

Chairman warns American to brace for difficult 1993

DALLAS (AP) — American Airlines chairman Robert Crandall, in a somber message to employees, is warning that the carrier faces more financial difficulty in 1993.

"We will have to be different, and the time to start being different is now," Crandall said in the message. It was videotaped for distribution to managers last month and printed this week in the company's "Flagship News" newspaper.

Crandall's message contained no new specifics but its tone was clearly more grim than previous discussions of the company's challenges.

Not even recovery from the recession, which has deepened the troubles of most carriers, will help America overcome changing competitive conditions and consumer attitudes, Crandall said.

"We're not going to be rescued by better times," he said.

American's parent, Fort Worth-based AMR Corp., appears likely to post a third consecutive annual loss and surpass last year's record $240 million loss. It lost $231 million through the first three quarters of the year.

The company has blamed fare discounting and higher fuel costs for the performance but it also took a special charge of $118 million in the summer for costs from a failed reservation system and a price-fixing lawsuit.

American said it is reviewing every operation to slice $300 million in operating costs next year. The airline last month announced the layoffs of up to 1,000 managers, nearly 10 percent of that segment of its workforce.

"We are also tightening up, everywhere we can, in field and station manning," Crandall said.

American, the nation's largest airline, employs about 98,000 people and AMR, nearly 117,000.

American may also withdraw from U.S. markets where it loses money and return some aircraft for which it has short-term leases, Crandall said. There was no mention of any possible shrinking of its international system, which has grown rapidly in recent years.

Crandall repeated earlier statements that American is also considering closing some of its hubs, reducing food service and other frills on shorter routes and selling some assets. Some decisions are likely by the end of the year.

Board bans ex-S&L regulator from banking, thrift industries

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former savings and loan regulator was barred from the banking and thrift industries Wednesday for alleged ethical breaches committed in helping Lincoln Savings and Loan owner Charles Keating.

Lee H. Henkel Jr., a former member of the now-defunct Federal Home Loan Bank Board, agreed to the ban in a consent order issued by the board's successor, the Office of Thrift Supervision.

He also agreed to pay restitution of $50,000, but neither admitted to nor denied the charges against him. Henkel, an attorney, was debarred from practicing before the thrift office.

In December 1986, Henkel proposed loosening the rules on how much a thrift institution could invest directly in real estate development projects. The change, which was not adopted, would have benefited only the Irvine, Calif.-based Lincoln and one other institution.

The thrift office said before Henkel submitted his proposal, he circulated a draft and made changes recommended by attorneys representing Lincoln's parent company, American Continental Corp.

Before his appointment to the bank board, Henkel served as legal counsel for Lincoln and was involved in a joint real estate venture with the thrift. The thrift office charged that Lincoln bought Henkel out of the joint venture at an inflated price and also released him from loan guarantees at "substantially less than the true value" of the obligations.

GAO: Some high-tech sectors wane

WASHINGTON (AP) — American dominance of several key high-technology sectors waned during the 1980s, with Japan picking up much of the market share lost by U.S. firms, the General Accounting Office said Tuesday.

The congressional investigative agency, in a study prepared for Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, found that 10 of the 11 high-tech sectors surveyed lost ground to foreign competitors over the decade.

"This GAO report dramatizes one of the toughest challenges confronting our nation," said Bentsen, D-Texas, who chairs the Senate Finance Committee.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Brokerages don't vanish without a trace

By Bill Doyle

Q: About five years ago, I purchased stocks in four companies through a New York City brokerage firm, which kept my stock certificates. I paid about $7,000. I haven't heard from the firm for a long time, and recently I asked my brother's broker to find out what happened to it.

Doyle

He reported back that he could not learn a thing. The firm seems to have vanished from the scene.

I am devastated. Someone, somewhere, must know where my certificates are. Is there anyone I can contact to find out what happened?

A: Yes, write the Public Disclosure Department, National Association of Securities Dealers, 1735 K St. N.W., Washington, DC 20006. NASD is a regulatory agency to which all brokerage firms doing business with the public are required to be members.

Brokerages don't simply disappear from the face of the earth. If the firm through which you bought those stocks went out of business, its accounts were transferred to another brokerage. If it was merged, its accounts were shifted to the merged firm.

NASD keeps track of such things and will be able to tell you what happened to the company holding your certificates.

Let's hope you saved the statements from the brokerage you are trying to locate. Shortly after making each purchase, you should have received a confirmation statement providing details of the transaction, including number of shares, price per share and total cost. The confirmation statement is your proof of purchase.

After that, you should have received periodic statements — monthly or quarterly — detailing your holdings.

By leaving the certificates with the brokerage, you had a "street name" account. The brokerage was the "registered owner" and your "nominee." That didn't change the fact that you became the "beneficial owner" — the real owner — of those stocks.

Q: Do you feel Wall Street brokers earn the big fees they charge? What productive goods or services do they really provide?

A: Brokers don't produce goods; they provide services. Whether or not a particular fee is reasonable depends on the service it covers.

The most frequent brokerage fee is a commission for buying or selling stock. Commissions vary at different firms. When you feel one brokerage's commissions are too high, you can always take your business elsewhere. Commissions at many discount brokerages are less than half those charged at big "full service" firms.

Some brokerages lay on various other charges, which can be avoided or reduced by using different firms. Despite what you might have heard, Wall Street is a highly competitive arena.

Truly "big fees" such as those to which you allude come about when a brokerage acts as an investment banking firm. That's the process of underwriting the sales of new corporate securities or doing such things as structuring a merger or coming up with a plan to defend a company against an unwanted takeover.

Although a broker handling large numbers of purchases and sales can enjoy a large income, the really big bucks are garnered by investment bankers.

Q: Unbeknown to me until recently, my mother owns stock in 14 companies — all left with a brokerage firm in a street-name account. When I learned about this, I told her to order her broker to send the certificates to her, so the certificates can be put in her safe-deposit box.

Lo and behold, we were told there would be a $30 charge for each certificate delivered. Is that legitimate?

A: It depends on your definition of the word "legitimate." To my mind, it's ridiculous and little short of a rip-off.

Nonetheless, there is no rule against it. Brokerages are allowed to levy any fees they please, providing advance notice is given. Your mother, no doubt, was notified of that charge before it went into effect or in the small print of the agreement she signed when she opened the brokerage account.

Shaq sends Magic past Philly 120-110

Associated Press

NBA Roundup

PHILADELPHIA — Shaquille O'Neal continued to show why he was the NBA's No. 1 draft pick, scoring 29 points and grabbing 19 rebounds to lead the Orlando Magic to a 120-110 victory over the Philadelphia 76ers Wednesday night.

Nick Anderson added 23 points and Scott Skiles 19 for the Magic while Hersey Hawkins had a season-high 32 for Philadelphia.

O'Neal sparked a third-quarter surge with 13 points and six rebounds that helped Orlando take its biggest lead, 79-58, on a jumper by Jeff Turner with 4:19 remaining.

Philadelphia rallied within 87-74 at the end of the third quarter. O'Neal picked up his fourth personal foul with one second left in the period and left the game.

The 76ers then went a 14-5 surge, capped by Hawkins' driving layup, and cut Orlando's lead to 92-88 with 9:26 remaining.

O'Neal then returned, and though he scored one more point, his rebounding helped Orlando build a 110-101 edge on a jumper by Anderson with 3:24 left.

Jazz 92, Celtics 91

BOSTON — Utah won its first game ever at Boston Garden and the Boston Celtics continued their worst start in 14 seasons when Reggie Lewis missed a jumper with two seconds left, sealing a victory for the Jazz.

The Jazz ended an 18-year, 21-game losing streak at the Garden with their fourth straight road win. Boston lost its fourth straight game, falling to 2-6, its worst start since 1978-79, the season before the arrival of Larry Bird, who retired before this season.

Trailing 92-91, Boston failed to go ahead when Lewis missed a 15-foot turnaround with 14 seconds left. Utah's Tyrone Corbin missed two free throws with 13 seconds to go, and Kevin McHale rebounded for Boston.

Sherman Douglas dribbled the ball up court and gave it to Lewis, who forced up an off-balance shot from just inside the 3-point line. It hit the front of the rim, and McHale's tip came up short as time expired.

Utah, which leads the Midwest Division with a 5-2 record, was led by Karl Malone with 29 points, including 10 in the fourth quarter, and Jeff Malone with 22, including 14 in the third.

Boston was led by Lewis, who had 11 of his 25 points in the last quarter, and McHale and Xavier McDaniel with 15 each.

Suns 127, Kings 111

PHOENIX — Cedric Ceballos scored 13 of his 30 points in the third quarter, helping the Phoenix Suns beat the Sacramento Kings their fourth consecutive victory.

Ceballos, a third-year forward, also matched his career high with 13 rebounds. Tom Chambers added 20 points for the Suns, and rookie center Oliver Miller had 19.

Charles Barkley, the NBA's fourth-leading scorer with a 26.2-point average for the first five games, played only 26 minutes and had 10 points, his low with Phoenix, while watching reserves play the last quarter.

Randy Brown led the Kings with 18 points, while Wayman Tisdale and Pete Chilcutt added 15 each.

The victory left the Suns unbeaten in three games at the new America West Arena. The Kings suffered their fourth consecutive road loss and second straight defeat.

Indiana routs Murray St. in first round

Associated Press

Preseason NIT

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Greg Graham scored 22 points Wednesday night and No. 4 Indiana was deadly from the free throw line in a 103-80 victory over Murray State in the first round of the preseason NIT.

The Hoosiers (1-0) took a 53-36 halftime lead and widened it to as many as 27 points as the Racers (0-1) repeatedly sent Indiana to the foul line. The Hoosiers hit 37 of 42 attempts, including 12 of 13 by Graham, while Murray State managed just 15 of 21 free throws.

The victory sent Indiana into the second round of the tournament on Friday night at home against the No. 17 Tulane, which beat Wagner 70-54 Wednesday night.

The Racers stayed close midway through the opening period, and a basket by Jerry Wilson pulled them within 21-18. But a fast-break basket by Greg Graham and two free throws by Pat Graham started an 11-3 Indiana streak that broke the game open.

The Hoosiers held Murray to two field goals and six free throws over the next 8 minutes and took a 48-28 lead.

Calbert Cheaney and Alan Henderson added 13 points each for Indiana and Chris Reynolds and Damon Bailey each had 12.

Frank Allen scored 12 of his 19 points for Murray State in the first six minutes of the second half, but the Racers never got closer than 13. Marcus Brown and Maurice Cannon each added 11 points for Murray State.

No. 9 Florida St. 89, Siena 80

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Bobby Sura and Sam Cassell each scored 24 points and No. 9 Florida State defeated Siena.

The Seminoles (1-0) will remain at home for a quarterfinal game on Friday night against the winner of No. 19 Iowa State, an 84-69 winner over Indiana State on Wednesday night.

Sura, last year's Atlantic Coast Conference Rookie of the Year, scored 17 points in the second half when Cassell added 14. Sura hit all four of Florida State's 3-point shots.

The guards keyed an 11-2 Florida State run to open the second half and give the Seminoles a 52-37 lead with 16:53 left and Siena couldn't get any closer than eight points the rest of the way.

Florida State hit 19 of 26 shots in the second half and finished shooting 60 percent.

Senior guard Mike Brown scored 28 points, including five 3-pointers, to lead Siena (0-1). Lee Matthews added 22 points and nine rebounds for the Saints.

Byron Wells had 15 points and Lorenzo Hands 10 for the Seminoles, who went into the game without two starters. Point guard Charlie Ward is the quarterback for the Seminoles' bowl-bound football team and forward Douglas Edwards was suspended for the opener for failing to take a final exam last spring.

Florida State may have lost Chuck Graham when he left the game early in the first half after his left knee buckled as he spun toward the basket. He will be examined Thursday to determine the extent of the injury.

No. 17 Tulane 70, Wagner 54

NEW ORLEANS — Anthony Reed scored 20 points — six in the first three minutes of the game — as No. 17 Tulane jumped on persistent Wagner.

Tulane will play Indiana in the second round Friday night at Bloomington, Ind. The fourth-ranked Hoosiers beat Murray State 103-80 Wednesday night.

Tulane scored the first 12 points of the game and Wagner could only cut the lead to 11 twice in the second half.

Texas-El Paso 90, George Mason 71

EL PASO — The University of Texas at El Paso went on a 25-7 run late in the first half and went on to beat George Mason behind 19 points by Eddie Rivera.

It was the first game of the season for both teams.

St. Louis and UCLA played Wednesday night in Los Angeles to determine UTEP's next NIT opponent.

George Mason of the Colonial Athletic Conference led 28-25 before the Miners went on their tear. UTEP, a member of the Western Athletic Conference, led 50-35 at the end of the run, and led 52-37 at intermission.

CHAPS: Dixie Classic next

(From 1C)

"Kirk busted his lip open again. It looks like he needs stitches to close it up."

As for Rodriques, Green said, "I play him until I think I see a play that tells me he's tired."

Ford, battling a case of the mental yips, started the game, but came off the bench to open the second half.

"I believe he's better off the bench," Green said. "Kirk made some great plays but he's not ready to make the fundamentals you've got to make."

After seven home games to open the season, the Chaps leave for Utah at 7:30 a.m. today for this weekend's Dixie Classic. MC opens the tournament Friday against Snow (Utah) at 7 p.m., Midland time. MC will then face either Pasadena, Calif., or host-team Dixie Saturday night, depending on the outcomes of Friday's games.

Pompey retains USBA title

TROY, N.Y. (AP) — Kevin Pompey retained his U.S. Boxing Association welterweight championship Wednesday night, surviving a bruising 12-round battle against challenger Buck Smith, who lost for the first time in 107 bouts.

Pompey credited both his own ring smarts and some out-of-ring work by his manager, Bob Miller, for helping him last through a particularly grueling 10th round.

"I cracked it in the 10th," said Smith.

Cancer doesn't keep Valvano from work

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

Five months after being diagnosed with cancer, Jim Valvano returns to work Friday night to broadcast the quarterfinals of the preseason NIT on ESPN.

"I feel pretty strong and I'm looking forward to getting back to work," Valvano said in a telephone conference call Wednesday. "When my eyes open each day and my feet touch the floor, I thank God for the day I have and say 'let's go get 'em.' "

Valvano takes treatment for his cancer every two weeks as an outpatient at Duke University Medical Center and every six weeks he spends two or three days in the hospital where he is treated with chemotherapy. "I fight every day and it's an every day battle," he said. "Every day you get up and thank God for the day you have."

Last June, the ex-North Carolina State coach was diagnosed with metastatic adenocarcinoma, a cancer that can start in an organ or in glands and spread throughout the body. "When I found out, my reaction was not anger, it was incredulity," Valvano said.

"My reaction was, 'Run that test again.' It was incomprehensible, followed by helplessness. I was no longer in control. I had always felt in control over my destiny and dignity. Being a cancer patient, you don't feel that control."

Valvano said he has pain in his lower back, hips and knees caused by the cancer. The chemotherapy treatment causes numbness in his hands and feet and ringing in his ears. He has not experienced the baldness that usually occurs.

"I have the toughest hair in the country," he said. "It's a medical miracle. I was supposed to be bald three months ago. I'm trying to defy the odds. That's what I'm all about. I haven't lost my hair and they don't know why."

"Be grateful and thankful for the day you have and what you can do to make a difference. That's what I do."

RANKIN: Devils unbeaten in district for 5th straight year

form and rolling behind a nine-game win streak.

"I'm extremely proud of this team, especially of our seniors," said head coach Raul Sanchez, who has not let the Red Devils skip a beat since taking over for his former boss, Troy Kennedy, who left for Merkel following last year's playoff run.

"The five seniors we've got have really helped us in leadership and in team unity," Sanchez said. "I hope they can build on the tradition that has been built up here."

That tradition is immense as three of Rankin's last four playoff runs has ended with a loss to the eventual state champions, including last year when Memphis downed the injury-plagued Red Devils, 15-3, in the quarterfinals.

Anton, meanwhile, is a team with new life and on a roll of its own.

The Bulldogs, just 1-9 a year ago, needed to win their last to District 6-A games to reach the playoffs and did.

"They have come to believe they can win, and that is what's made the difference," Sanchez said of the Bulldogs, who will utilize a Wing-T offense that features the talents of halfback James Stewart. Stewart has rushed for over 1,100 yards this season and caught passes for an additional 530.

Rankin will counter with several weapons, including quarterback Jo Jo Guerra, who has passed for over 1,200 yards and 16 TDs. And Roy Abalos, who is nearing 1,400 rushing yards for the year, gives the Devils a solid ground game of their own.

In fact Rankin, which has outscored opponents 300-104 this year and has not lost a game since dropping the season opener by six points to Iraan, would probably have to beat itself to lose to Anton.

Sanchez and his staff do not intend to let that happen.

"This is the reward the kids all look forward to. But we're trying not to get caught up in all the hoopla so that we can go out and play our type of game," Sanchez said.

Note: Rankin's 36-7 area triumph over Sudan last year in Seminole bordered on the unbelievable. The Red Devils broke open a close game with 29 fourth-quarter points, 22 of which came in a flurry with under three minutes to play.

tional excellence.

"I had never met James Madrid before my visit to Rice last weekend. When I met him, he and his roommates were real high on Rice, so when the opportunity came up I though it would be good to sign now," McLaughlin said.

"I don't know that there's a Midland-Rice connection. It's a tribute not only to Tim's athletic ability but his educational ability. Not just everybody can go to Rice University," said MHS head baseball coach Rick Wood. "Tim is a very talented athlete and he's been rewarded."

Last season MHS posted a 10-15 overall record, and finished fourth in District 4-5A with a 6-6 league mark.

"Last year we struggled to find a catcher, and it wasn't until the middle of the season that we did find one. Moving one in is a definite plus. We're very happy," Wood said.

Sensuous silhouettes accented with satin, jet

By Barbara DeWitt
N.Y. Times News Service

Were did the glitz go?

After a decade that glorified all things gaudy, including fur coats, colored rhinestone-and-feather-trimmed sweaters and garish combos of fuchsia and chartreuse, we're back to quiet glamour for the holidays.

This year, designers and retailers are seeing red (any shade will do) as the alternative to basic black, and fashion mavens are buzzing about long, sensuous evening gowns that smolder with class and caress curves.

You know the type. Languid lux looks worn by the likes of Veronica Lake and Carole Lombard back in Hollywood's heyday.

"The little black dress has taken a rest," explained Ginny Sydorick, fashion director of Saks Fifth Avenue stores, "and the dress of the moment is the column. It's a long and lean dress with deep slits in the front, back or side, and sometimes accented with slender strap detailing across a bare back."

And it's often in matte jersey. But few have the figure for them, so designers have dished up some festive options: organza blouses with billowy taffeta skirts to tuxedos-turned-sultry, a la Marlene Dietrich.

"Evening separates also are an important trend because few people have the money to spend that they did (in the '80s)," Sydorick continued, "so they're updating their holiday clothes by adding a sheer blouse or skirt."

Gregg Andrews, assistant fashion coordinator for Nordstrom stores, agrees, and thinks the new feminine twist on the classic tuxedo makes it the perfect vehicle to stretch a wardrobe.

While Sydorick talks about optional details such as wide satin lapels or a shawl collar, and layering the look with a blouse and vest, Andrews likes to pair the tuxedo jacket with a slim skirt, either long or hemmed at the knee. Or combine satin-striped tuxedo trousers with a bronze organza blouse or sweater twinset with rhinestone buttons.

All of these understated designs, noted for a lack of frou-frou, allow for a lot of accessorizing, according to Jane Harmon, accessory specialist for Bullock's/Macy's stores. "It's a dandy mood for the holidays," Harmon said, "and with the tuxedo look there are numerous opportunities to add feminine touches, such as a rhinestone-accented bow-tie, velvet-trimmed vest, decorative cuff links, pearl choker or pearl-trimmed watch fob."

For other ensembles, especially those long, sleek dresses, Harmon suggested wearing a black satin ribbon around the neck with a brooch pinned at the center.

"Jet is the number one bead for the holidays because it has such a rich appearance and lends itself to a lot of looks, especially the old Hollywood glamour style. To be up to the minute, wear some jet earrings in a chandelier style that end at the jawline," she suggested.

Fashions courtesy of Julian Gold will be shown at the Midland Symphony Guild's Mistletoe and Mink Brunch and Style Show to be 11 a.m. Dec. 5 at the Plaza Club.

Kleine, Harriet Herd, Debbie Foster, Mrs. William Ross, Merrill Lynch, Margie McKinney and MiMi McKnight; Mrs. James D. McLaughlin, Mrs. Bill Stella, Mrs. Frank L. Thompson, and Janet Walton and Claudia Traxel.

Active and patron guild members who will be models are Terry Atkin, Louie Eben, Gail Essex, Gloria McGavran, Marsha Sheffield, Cindy Walton, Modesta Williams and Betty Basham.

DEAR ABBY

Children speak out against wasteland that is television

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a fifth-grade elementary school teacher in Axtell, Texas. I have read your column for years and believe that you want what is best for children and families. Allowing vulgarity, profanity and sexually explicit material in the movies and on TV to go unchallenged only weakens our country's moral fiber and family unit.

Van Buren

Your recent survey showed that "67,783 readers felt many movies and TV shows today insult our values, intelligence and morals. Only 213 readers disagreed."

I asked my students (all 10-year-olds) to write a few sentences expressing how they feel about what they see and hear on TV and in the movies. I submit their comments. — JEANIE OWENS, AXTELL ELEMENTARY SCHOOL

DEAR ABBY: I do not like the scenes that the TV stations put on the TV screens. All that kissing embarrasses me. — COLT WEST

DEAR ABBY: What I see on TV embarrasses me when my cousins are watching TV with me. Thank you for wanting my opinion. — KRISTIN HARRIS

DEAR ABBY: I don't like dirty words on television. One day another girl asked me, "What does that mean?" It made me feel stupid. — NATASHA WILSON

DEAR ABBY: I don't think it's right when some parents don't know what their children are watching on TV. Young children do not need to watch that filth. — JEREMY BENNETT

DEAR ABBY: I am tired of dirty language on TV. I am also tired of the nasty videos. — CATHERINE HERNANDEZ

DEAR ABBY: I wish there was at least one show that people of all ages and races could enjoy together. — LACY WITT

DEAR ABBY: I think there is too much violence and cussing, but most of all it is embarrassing to kids when people kiss on TV. — LAURA LUPU

DEAR ABBY: I disagree with the kissing and all the other mushy stuff on TV. I am 10 years old and in the fifth grade. Thank you. — ADAM LAW

DEAR ABBY: I don't like some of the fighting and killing on TV. It is just not nice. This is my opinion. — ALINA TANASA

DEAR ABBY: I really hate the bad talking and kissing on television. Thank you. — NATALEE DOLLINS

DEAR ABBY: I am a 10-year-old at Axtell Elementary School, and I am writing to you to state my displeasure at the illicit material used on VCR tapes, in movies and on television.

Crime in a city near me has risen 37 percent. Sometimes I get scared when I hear the news about kids killing kids in school. I wonder if these kids have been watching all the violence on television, and then try to copy it. I was always told by my parents that killing doesn't make you a grown-up. I was also told that to be a grown-up, I am to treat others as I want to be treated. — JOHNATHON DOOLET

DEAR MRS. OWENS AND STUDENTS: Your thoughtful letters are much appreciated. If enough of us demand better TV and movies from the networks and film studios, we'll get results!

To order "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

AT WIT'S END

Clean hair is obsession

By Erma Bombeck

I have three thirtysomething children, and I have never seen them when they didn't have wet hair. What is it with a whole generation obsessed with clean hair? OK, so maybe parents don't know where these heads have been, but how dirty can they get in 24 hours?

Bombeck

It's probably my fault. When they were growing up, I preached the cleanliness-is-next-to-godliness gospel. When they began to empty the hot water tanks and spent more on shampoo than the national deficit, the gospel changed to cleanliness-is-next-to-penniless.

My kids wouldn't answer the front door without first washing their hair. Every time we were ready to go somewhere, they would climb into the car and drip all over the upholstery. It became a battleground on which the family fought and no one ever retreated.

I was a mother who had her hair washed and teased once a week at the beauty shop. It looked the same when I went into the shop as when I came out. A hair never moved. I could have stood in a wind tunnel and it wouldn't have moved. The rules were simple. No open convertibles. No standing in blowing rain. No going to bed unless your coiffure was gift-wrapped in toilet tissue. My kids accused me of renting out condos in my beehive to mice.

They, on the other hand, defied all the rules. Even when I told them all that hair oil going down the drains each day was the answer to OPEC, they ignored me.

I never understood the contradiction. You could have a son or daughter wearing jeans with holes in the knees, faded shirt with ripped hems in the sleeves, athletic shoes with no shoestrings or underwear hanging out from under tennis shorts, but their wet hair still smelled like a pine forest.

On any given day, you could go into our bathroom and see seven or eight bottles of shampoos and rinses around the tub. To me they looked like cannons directed at Mom and Dad as a defiant reminder that our kids were not going to grow up to be like us.

There was only one occasion I was able to talk my daughter into going to a beauty shop. Just before the prom, I convinced her that she should at least have a crack at having her hair washed, set and styled by a professional. She came through the door and looked beautiful. She immediately went to the bathroom, where she washed her hair.

Autopsy shows drugs in beating victim

DETROIT (AP) — Police beating victim Malice Green had alcohol and cocaine in his system when he was killed, according to an autopsy report released Wednesday.

Lawyers for four police officers charged in the killing said the report is significant, but prosecutors and Green's family said it shouldn't affect the case.

The toxicology tests found 0.50 micrograms of cocaine per milliliter of blood, and a 0.03 percent level of alcohol in Green's urine. His urine also tested positive for cocaine. No alcohol was found in Green's blood, according to the report.

Dr. Eugene Baillie, director of laboratories at Anderson Memorial Hospital in Anderson, S.C., said the results indicate a moderate amount of cocaine and only traces of alcohol in Green's system.

But he warned that the results can have different meanings depending on the person and the way the tests are conducted.

"It depends on the person's metabolism, the timing and a whole bunch of things going on in the person's body," he said.

"But if the cocaine was present in both (his urine and his blood), it means it was still around in his system and capable of having some effect."

The level of alcohol in urine does not indicate whether somebody drank enough alcohol to be impaired by it, as blood alcohol tests can show, said Phil Predmore, a toxicologist for the Oakland County medical examiner's office. It's possible for someone to have no alcohol in their blood but some in their urine, he said.

Green, of Detroit, died of head injuries after being bludgeoned with a metal flashlight Nov. 5. Seven police officers were suspended without pay for allegedly taking part in or watching the beating.

Officers Larry Nevers and Walter Budzyn were charged Monday with second-degree murder. Sgt. Freddie Douglas was charged with involuntary manslaughter and willful neglect of duty, and Officer Robert Lessnau was charged with assault with intent to do great bodily harm.

John Goldpaugh, who represented Nevers, Budzyn and Lessnau at their arraignment, said, "If there was cocaine in Mr. Green's system — and depending on what level and in what mixture with alcohol — it clearly casts new light on his behavior on the night in question."

Armand Bove, attorney for Douglas, said: "It will depend on how much (cocaine) was there, but this is very important to our defense."

But Richard Padzieksi, chief of operations for the Wayne County prosecutor's office, said the report wouldn't affect the prosecution.

Green's father said the report doesn't reveal any information that could justify the officers' actions.

"They're going to say he was drunk, high, whatever. But I don't think that has anything to do with somebody dying," Green's father, Jessie, told The Detroit News.

'Madame Butterfly' soprano Dorothy Kirsten dies at 82

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lyric soprano Dorothy Kirsten, an opera prima donna who dedicated her later years to supporting Alzheimer's disease research, died Wednesday of complications from a stroke. She was 82.

Kirsten was best known for her roles in "Madame Butterfly," "Tosca," "Manon Lescaut" and "Girl of the Golden West."

She retired abruptly in 1982 upon learning her husband, the late Dr. John Douglas French, had Alzheimer's disease.

Kirsten first made her mark on the stage in 1940, when she debuted with the Chicago Opera Company. Within five years, she moved into prima donna roles with the San Francisco and New York Metropolitan operas, specializing in the lyric roles of Verdi and Puccini.

Kirsten was a longtime favorite at the Met, where she debuted in 1945 as Mimi in "La Boheme." The following year, Life magazine put her on its cover.

She was the first American soprano to sing opera in the Soviet Union. In 1962 she sang in "La Traviata" at the Bolshoi Opera in Moscow, "Tosca" in Leningrad, and was the first American to sing opera in the Georgian capital of Tbilisi, where she performed "Madame Butterfly."

The director of the Tbilisi Opera hailed her at the time as "the strongest link in the chain of friendship between the Soviet Union and the United States."

Kirsten worked in radio with Frank Sinatra, Bing Crosby and Perry Como, played opposite Mario Lanza in the movie "The Great Caruso," recorded arias with Robert Merrill and Richard Tucker and pop music with Crosby, Gordon MacRae and Nelson Eddy.

"She was an artist I admired very much and a great lady of the stage," Placido Domingo was quoted as saying in a release from the French Foundation, which Kirsten co-founded to support Alzheimer's research and develop model methods of caring for patients.

"I remember with great fondness the 'Toscas' we sang together," Domingo said.

"Not only did Dorothy have a beautiful voice, but she was a wonderful actress," Merrill said in the foundation statement. "She knew the drama of a part. You didn't just act — you reacted to her portrayals."

In 1975, at a New Year's Eve performance of "Tosca," Kirsten became the first prima donna to celebrate a 30-year anniversary with the Met. Later that year, she received the Commendatore Medal, Italy's highest honor, for her dedication to Italian opera.

In 1983, after she retired, she and Richard K. Eamer, head of National Medical Enterprises Inc., founded the French Foundation. She also helped design The John Douglas French Center for Alzheimer's Disease in Los Alamitos. The 148-bed center was the nation's first facility devoted exclusively to Alzheimer's.

"We've lost a great leader in the fight to conquer Alzheimer's disease," Eamer said. "In the past 10 years she directed her energies and perseverance to triumph over this dreaded disease."

Her husband, a neurosurgeon who headed the UCLA Brain Research Institute, died of Alzheimer's in 1989.

Kirsten, originally of Montclair, N.J., is survived by two sisters and a brother.

'Big One' expected to come sooner, study says

By Lisa Pope
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Three earthquakes that shook Southern California earlier this year increased stress along sections of the San Andreas fault, bringing "The Big One" at least 10 years closer, according to new studies.

But researchers probing the affects of the temblors in the San Bernardino County areas of Landers, Big Bear and Joshua Tree still cannot say when a major earthquake will occur along the state's primary fault.

"We've moved the time of those earthquakes closer. We know how much closer. But we don't know when they are going to come," said Ross S. Stein, of the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park, Calif.

"What we can say is the next earthquake on the San Andreas fault in San Bernardino will occur about 10 years sooner than it would have had the Landers shock not occurred," Stein said.

Seismic inquiry has been supercharged in Southern California by three earthquakes that occurred near — but not on — the San Andreas fault, beginning with a 6.1-magnitude temblor at Joshua Tree April 23.

On June 28, the largest quake in 40 years hit Southern California at Landers with a 7.5 magnitude. A 6.6 magnitude quake struck Big Bear the same day. Hundreds of aftershocks have followed.

Scientists say the research that centers on the so-called Landers sequence is teaching them about the relationships between earthquakes and neighboring faults and pointing them toward potential seismic hot spots.

The findings of three studies discussed in scientific journals this week support the suspicion that the San Andreas fault could be under new and greater pressure.

The San Andreas fault, which passes within 50 miles of one of the ruptures, runs along a north-south diagonal. The earth on the Pacific side is incrementally sliding northward, while the continental side is moving southward.

"The stresses are building up slowly. You are getting closer and closer and closer to the Big One, closer to the failure stress." said Tom Henyey, executive director of the Southern California Earthquake Center.

Scientists believe that earthquakes occur along certain segments of the San Andreas fault on an average of every 200 or more years, Stein said.

In 1988, a group of scientists estimated that Southern California stood a 60 percent chance of experiencing a great earthquake — measuring 7.5 or more — along the San Andreas fault by the year 2018.

Researchers say that the likelihood of a major earthquake in the next three decades has increased as a result of the Landers sequence. But they do not know by how much.

"We haven't assessed it quantitatively, saying 'This is how much it's increased.' But we think in general that Landers pushed part of the San Andreas closer to a big quake," said Steven C. Jaume, a graduate research assistant at Columbia University's Lamont-Doherty Geological Observatory in Palisades, New York.

While scientists have an idea of how much new stress has been added to sections of the San Andreas fault, they do not know how close it had been to a failure, Henyey said.

"The problem is we don't know exactly where we are. We don't know if we are right near the end of the time frame. So that means it's very difficult to know how much this has increased the likelihood of an earthquake," he said.

The researchers say that the series of quakes appears to have increased stress along the San Bernardino and Coachella Valley segments of the San Andreas fault. In addition, stress appears to have increased along the San Jacinto fault near San Bernardino, Stein said.

A 3.6-magnitude quake struck at 6:10 a.m. Wednesday four miles southwest of Yucaipa in San Bernardino County. Seismologists at the California Institute of Technology do not believe it was an aftershock.

Stein said that kind of activity supports the theory that faults in the San Bernardino area are under increased stress.

At the same time, the series of quakes appears to have relieved some pressure on the San Andreas fault north of Los Angeles along what is known as the Palmdale segment, delaying the chance of a major earthquake along that section by a few years, according to two of the studies.

General Motors taps into campus pool to sell cars

By Jamie Beckett
N.Y. Times News Service

In a new twist on working their way through college, students are earning credits by helping General Motors sell cars.

More than 1,000 students at 43 colleges are using classroom time to design and execute on-campus sales promotions for the giant automaker as part of a GM sales drive in California.

The program, an example of a growing corporate involvement in education, is intended to increase the carmakers' market share while providing students with practical business experience.

"The focus of the program is to expose our product to a generation we haven't been very successful with," said Keith Landenberger, coordinator of what General Motors calls its California Marketing Initiative. "A lot of them grew up with imports and don't even know what kind of products we make."

The nation's largest automaker, GM has been weakened by record losses and continuing erosion of its market share. Its performance has been particularly weak in California, one of the strongest markets for imported cars.

GM has only a 27 percent share of sales in the state, as compared with a 34 percent share nationally, according to J.D. Powers & Associates, a market-research firm.

At each school, a marketing class acts as an advertising and sales promotion agency, developing a campaign to sell one type of GM car to students.

In each case, they work with GM executives and with Sgro Promo Associates, the Orinda, Calif., marketing firm that helped develop the college program. A local GM dealer provides $2,500 to cover costs of the promotion.

At the University of California at Berkeley, students in the Haas School of Business have just completed a Geo promotion they call the Geo-Logical Gold Rush. The event tested students' knowledge of four Geo models parked on Lower Sproul Plaza — and offered prizes ranging from a haircut to Big Game tickets to a $350 grand prize.

To qualify for the prizes, the students had to complete a form that was forwarded to Oakland car dealer Val Strough.

Trudy Kehret-Ward, who teaches the class working on the GM project, said that she initially had some qualms about students providing free labor for corporations. But the students' enthusiastic response to past projects — a previous class created a marketing plan for credit-card provider Visa USA — erased that skepticism, she said.

"These are tough economic times, and students feel like anything they can do that's hands on will set them apart," said Kehret-Ward.

"I wasn't bothered by the fact that they're getting work from us for free. I think there was a trade-off, because I learned so much," said Angela Lau, a UC Berkeley senior.

Lau, who graduates in December and is looking for a job, said corporate recruiters have been impressed by her GM experience.

Marketing students at San Francisco State University spent six weeks last fall working on a project for GM's Pontiac division.

To counteract an impression that Pontiac cars are old-fashioned, they set up an interactive video kiosk on campus that their classmates could use to obtain information about financing and car crash-test results. Students could also pose for pictures inside a Pontiac convertible.

"There's a lot of opportunity in school to learn theory, but not a lot to get practical experience," said Joe Ries, who teaches the marketing class. "My objective is to have my students get hands-on experience working with people in industry."

Other schools in the program include UCLA, the University of California at San Francisco, Pepperdine University, Golden Gate University and Santa Clara University.

But some educators question whether the GM program offers schools a fair exchange.

"Half of me applauds General Motors. I wish more corporations would get involved and get students engaged in real-world problems. But the other half says that if GM has the opportunity to profit from this, it should give something back to the school," said James Guthrie, a professor at UC Berkeley's Graduate School of Education and co-director of Policy Analysis for California Education, an education research center.

"I think it's absolutely inappropriate. Students in these institutions are paying for the promotion of a commercial product," said Henry Levin, the David Jacks Professor of Higher Education and Economics at Stanford University.

"A lot of institutions are really hurting financially now, and ethics get put on hold."

Despite concerns raised by educators, the GM program does not appear to have sparked any campus protests — even at Berkeley.

"It's not that we're being taken advantage of — we've been given an opportunity," said Darin Medeiros, a senior at the University of San Francisco who is working on a promotion for Cadillac.

GM's Landenberger said the company works with college administrators and faculty to ensure that its program conforms with school regulations. The company also tries to shape promotions to fit the school. For example, GM chose the fuel-efficient Geo for environmentally conscious Berkeley.

Although dealers have sold some cars as a result of the college promotions, GM has so far seen no significant sales increase in the state.

According to Landenberger, the company was not looking for an immediate sales boost. Instead, it hopes to change opinions about its products among college-age car buyers, many of whom had unfavorable impressions of American-made cars in general.

"This program works because students trust other students," said Tony Sgro of Sgro Promo.
