Longtime Farmer Dies Near Pampa

Robert Sullivan, 83, a resident of the Pampa community for 29 years, died at 7:45 o'clock last night at his farm home five miles southwest of Pampa where he had resided since moving here from Milford, Ohio, his birthplace.

When Mr. Sullivan came to the Panhandle he purchased a section of land southwest of the city. Later he acquired additional farm land. A few years ago oil was discovered on the Sullivan farm and some of the largest wells in the Panhandle field were drilled on his land.

Mr. Sullivan had been in failing health since last September. He contracted a cold a few days ago and pneumonia followed, causing his death.

Survivors are the widow, three sons, Lester Sullivan of Butteville, Ind., who arrived here at noon today, Ross Sullivan and Clifford Sullivan, both of Pampa, a daughter, Flora May Sullivan, at home, and four grandchildren, Freeman, Bobby, Frances and Opal Sullivan. A son, Charles Albert Sullivan, died in 1906.

Funeral services will be conducted at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon in the First Methodist church by the Rev. W. M. Pearce, pastor, and the Rev. B. N. Neece, pastor of the First Christian church. Burial will be in Fairview cemetery under direction of Clay's Funeral home.

Palbearers will be all oldtime friends.

City To Purchase Auto For Police

City Manager W. T. Williamson was authorized by the city commission at its regular meeting Tuesday afternoon to prepare specifications for bids to be received by the commission at 2:30 p. m. January 23 on an automobile for the police department. The present police car is to be traded in on the deal.

Other business transacted at this meeting included the approval for payment of the month's bills, totaling $3,310.88.

Commissioners Lynn Boyd and D. W. Osborne, City Attorney Walter E. Rogers, Mayor Ed S. Carr, City Secretary W. M. Graven, and the city manager were present at the meeting. It was the first time the entire commission had been present in three weeks, as Commissioner Osborne had been absent on account of a trip to Fort Worth.

Light Pole Moved To Improve Skating Path

PRATT, Kas., Jan. 10 (AP)—A city light pole stood directly in the path of Pratt's best skating place. Mothers appealed to Mayor Siltan and the city commissioners. The mayor had the pole moved so the children can sled in safety.

I Heard . . .

That Gene Pathree went sleigh riding out near Hoover yesterday, and learned things about the business. He picked the sleigh up, made a run over the top of a hill and then dropped the sleigh for the ride but his timing was bad and he landed in front of the sleigh which went over him and down the hill all by itself.

NLRB Loses In Two U.S. Court Rulings

CHICAGO, Jan. 10 (AP)—The Wagner act does not require collective bargaining contracts to be in writing, in the opinion of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

The court's opinion, written by Judge J. Earl Major, held that the Wagner act requires collective bargaining but not an agreement. The court directed the labor board to hold a new hearing in the Inland case, sustaining the company's contention it had been denied a full and fair hearing by Charles A. Wood, NLRB trial examiner.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 10 (AP)—The National Labor Relations board must protect the rights of workers in joining independent unions or in remaining unorganized, the Ninth U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals held here yesterday.

Company unions, in effect, were restored to a standing of equality with international unions by the decision.

The case was that of the NLRB versus the Sterling Electric Motors company of Los Angeles, a manufacturing plant employing approximately 70 workers, which the AFL International Brotherhood of Electrical workers sought to organize.

In its ruling, the appellate court refused the NLRB's request for an enforcement order directing the company to disestablish a company union and to cease collective bargaining with an employees' association. In addition, it denounced the labor board's practice of not making alleged company union parties to such proceedings, saying that such failure violated the civil rights of independent workers' organization members.

A SUGGESTION:
Why Not Negotiate?
(An Editorial)

The resolution adopted by the Pampa City Commission yesterday states that the municipal ownership issue will be submitted to the people in an election in event the commission desires to continue its attempt to acquire the electric power and light plant, and city commissioners are to be commended for this action.

The News, however, has a suggestion to make. Before proceeding to obligate the City for the expense of engineering fees and the cost of an audit, the commission should attempt to settle the controversy by reopening negotiations with the Southwestern Public Service company on the terms of a new franchise.

The company, in a letter of early December, stated that it regretted that negotiations had been interrupted by the action of the commission in seeking to acquire the plant, and invited the commission to renew these negotiations at any time.

To date, the city commission has not done anything about this invitation. The News feels that something should be done about it, before the City undertakes the added expense of an engineer and auditor.

The company has been fair to the people of Pampa over a long period of years. This is evidenced by its continued reductions in rates to the point where Pampans enjoy very low light rates—much lower than average rates of municipal plants.

The News believes that the Southwestern Public Service company would do its utmost to meet any reasonable requests on the part of the City Commission in endeavoring to agree on terms for a proposed new franchise.

With both sides represented around the table, talking things over as men to men—it is highly probable that some mutually satisfactory agreement could be reached.

British Air Force Raids Nazi Shores

LONDON, Jan. 10 (AP)—The British air force carried the war to Germany's shores today in an outburst of renewed air and sea warfare coming only one day after Prime Minister Chamberlain's warning that grim days are ahead.

The British sent warplanes over Germany's northwest coast in what they called reconnaissance flights and "security patrols" over German mine-laying bases in the Frisian Islands.

Dispatches from Copenhagen indicated the Britons ran into battle. Vivid flashes through the early dawn and the rumble of cannonading along with the sighting of numerous aircraft indicated an air battle over the Island of Sylt, German air base.

This followed a sudden bomb and machine-gun attack by German warplanes upon 12 ships in British coastal waters yesterday. The German communiqué asserted that eight vessels were sunk; the British acknowledged the sinking of only two.

The admiralty announced today the 1,985-ton British vessel Oakgrove was sunk with an undetermined number of casualties after an attack from the air, and that the 688-ton British steamer Gworie also went down.

Danish Ships Sunk
The admiralty said today two Danish ships, the 3,369-ton Ivan Krondrup and the 955-ton Peddy, attacked yesterday and previously reported sunk, had been found afloat.

Some observers believed the sudden German attacks might be the prelude to an aerial "blitzkrieg," or lightning war, such as has been threatened by Berlin many times.

Along with this renewed activity it was expected that young Britons of the ages of 20 to 22 years, inclusive, registered in December, would be called to arms shortly, bringing an additional 240,000 men under the colors.

Yesterday's attacks on British ships were reported by the British.

Lights Go Out At Courthouse

Police did their "good turn" last night for the officers of the sheriff's department.

It all happened because the electric current was shut off at the courthouse when two wires in an underground conduit went out of commission, and lights and elevator power were cut off about 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Lugging a "drunk" they had arrested at 8 o'clock last night up four flights of stairs was the only alternative for county officers, as the elevator was out of order.

Therefore, they took their "guest" across the street to the city hall and asked police to "accommodate" him in the city jail overnight. The request was granted.

The conduit wires, extending across Kingsmill street underground from the courthouse to the city hall block, went out about noon. Lights and power were shut off while an overhead line was installed. Everything was in good order today at the courthouse, but permanent repairs to the conduit are to be made soon, County Judge Sherman White said.

Dayton Oil Well Continues To Burn

HOUSTON, Jan. 10 (AP)—An oil well blew out and caught fire near Dayton, 30 miles northeast of here, continued to burn today.

A driller, Michael Holtzke, Jr., 30, of Dayton, who was burned on the face, head and back when the well blew out yesterday, was not considered seriously injured.

A crew of oil well fire fighters reported the well was cratering and was not in a condition to be subdued last night.

The well is General Crude Oil Company No. 9 Davis, a deep test on the northwest side of the Esperanza field, Liberty county.

Cities Exempt From Paying Gasoline Tax

AUSTIN, Jan. 10 (AP)—The Austin Court of Civil Appeals ruled today that cities are exempt from payment of the state gasoline tax.

The decision was considered highly important because the state has been receiving a large amount of revenue from gasoline sold to municipalities. The state was expected to appeal to the supreme court.

The question arose in a suit brought by the state against the city of El Paso to recover the four cents per gallon tax on 70,579 gallons of gasoline imported from New Mexico and used by the city in its police cars, fire trucks and other motor vehicles operated within the city limits.

FDR Tells Congress To Observe Budget

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10 (AP)—President Roosevelt told members of the House Democratic steering committee today that Congress should stay within its budget.

One member said Mr. Roosevelt, in a half-hour meeting with the legislators, laid special emphasis on that point and left the impression that he did not want Congress to take any action which might make it necessary to raise the present $45,000,000,000 limit on the national debt.

The 15-man committee, which helps shape Democratic policy in the House, called on the President at his request. Both the White House and committee members indicated that additional conferences would be held from time to time.

Official Plan Outlined In Resolution

Ballot Planned All The Time, Commission Says

Pampa's qualified voters will get an opportunity to decide a municipal power plant debt issue before any final action is taken on the proposed purchase by the City of the plant and line system of the Southwestern Public Service company.

This assurance was given by the city commission in one of two resolutions adopted at its regular weekly meeting in City Hall yesterday afternoon.

The commissioners set forth in this particular resolution that the current transaction between the City of Pampa and The Southwestern Public Service company is still in the preliminary stages, and that "it is the intention of the city commission to afford those persons qualified under the charter of the City of Pampa and the laws of the State of Texas to vote upon creation of a debt of a municipality, a full opportunity to exercise their right of franchise; and that such opportunity will be afforded to such persons prior to and before any final action is taken in the consummation of such purchase."

Second Resolution Passed
The resolution also states that the commission never has had anything else in mind, but to allow the people to vote on the debt issue.

In a second resolution, the city commission acknowledged receipt from the Southwestern Public Service company of the itemized statement pertaining to construction and betterment costs plus interest on the facilities of the company in Pampa and vicinity.

This resolution provides for an audit and engineer's report on the utility company's statement, and requests full cooperation of the company in the preparation of this audit and report. A copy of this second resolution was sent to J. M. Collins, manager of the Southwestern Public Service company's local properties.

In the resolution, the Southwestern Public Service company is requested to notify the City at its earliest convenience as to whether or not the City can depend upon the company's cooperation.

It further states that an engineer's report on the physical properties and inventories, as reflected in the company's statement, will be complied by an engineer to be designated by the city commission.

Cooperation Asked
The final paragraph of this second resolution reads:

"That in the event the Southwestern Public Service company will comply with the request of the City, that it (the utility company) be further requested to designate a person, or persons, to negotiate

War Flashes

BERLIN, Jan. 10 (AP)—Authorized German circles today interpreted British Prime Minister Chamberlain's mansion house address yesterday as "that of a greatly embarrassed old man to hide his own discomfiture" bitterly assailed the enemy, Chamberlain's reference to the Russian-German pact as "unholy" evoked smiles from Nazis. "If Britain had succeeded in concluding a similar arrangement with the Soviets it would be proclaimed holy," these sources said.

Guest Speaker To Be Featured At AAUW Event

Mrs. Lelah House Stoker, who has just returned to the United States after a year abroad, will be the speaker at the annual Founders' Day banquet of the Pampa branch of the American Association of University Women at the Schneider hotel next Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Stoker is known to many Pampans, having visited here in 1935, at which time she addressed several clubs. Reservations for the dinner, which is open to the public, both men and women, may be made by calling Mrs. Fred Roberts, president of A. A. U. W., at 1908-W, or Mrs. William S. Dixon at 597.

Since her visit to Pampa, Mrs. Stoker has made two trips abroad. Her itinerary included England, Scotland, Norway, Sweden, Finland, Russia, Poland, Germany, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, and France. Mrs. Stoker will speak on some phase of international affairs. She is especially concerned over the spread of Communism and was at one time denied admission to Russia because of her declarations against Communism.

Mrs. Stoker has an interesting connection with two famous houses on different continents. The Samuel House home in Atlanta, which Margaret Mitchell used in her portrayal of Tara in "Gone With the Wind," originally belonged to Mrs. Stoker's great grandfather, Samuel House.

Mrs. Stoker's father was born in the house, which has been published in several nationally known magazines. While in England last year Mrs. Stoker secured as her home the famous "Umbrella Cottage" in Lyme Regis, Dorset, formerly the property of Lord Lister and just across the drive from his "Great House."

The cottage takes its name from its umbrella shaped roof and is visited annually by many tourists.

During 1939 Mrs. Stoker lectured throughout England on international affairs for the Conservative party.

Mrs. J. E. Beard was chairman of the program which opened with the invocation by Mrs. Henry English and two numbers, "Half Note" and "Gloster," by the school band under the direction of Miss Winona Wise.

The three first grade teachers, Misses Minnie Allen, Julia Shackelford, and Louise Willis, presented three numbers on "Thrift" with 81 students of the first grades singing a thrift song after which a playlet, "The Hold-up of the Penny Bank," and "The Savings Bank" were given.

Dr. R. A. Webb, guest speaker, discussed "Health in the Home." The first of three phases in the talk was cleanliness of body, home, clothes, cooking utensils, thought and play. He pointed out that if the homes are kept clean, the schools will be clean also. This importance of cleanliness of mouth and nails in preventing the spread of infectious diseases was stressed as well as the fact that children who have been ill should not be sent back to school until they are well and clear of temperature.

The second phase included sanitation, the disposal of sewage and garbage and protection against flies.

The final point was prevention of disease through serum and toxoids. He stated that the diphtheria toxoid should be given to the child at the age of six months.

"The most important thing is to be sure that your child is safe and able to return to school before sending him back so that the health of others will not be in danger," he concluded.

Superintendent L. L. Sone also spoke on the diphtheria serum.

GOOD LIGHTING DOES THIS TO DARNING

Why is darning so much harder than reading? Because the color of the darning cotton and material is usually about the same... the materials are often dark and absorb much of the light... and threads and needles are small. Better lighting reduces the handicap of poor color contrast between the darning cotton and the goods. More light compensates for the dark material, and also serves to "magnify" the size of the needle and thread.

Long Cut Off Air For Using 'Cuss Words' In Speech

SHREVEPORT, La., Jan. 10 (AP)—Radio station officials said Governor Earl K. Long of Louisiana was cut off the air here "several times" last night for use of words like "hell" and "damn" in a political speech.

"We attempted to eliminate such words," said John McCormick, manager of station KWIK in Shreveport, "by cutting the speech out momentarily."

The effort was abandoned later on the speech, he said, and the address allowed to go over the air.

Long, a brother of the late Huey P. Long, U. S. Senator and former governor, is seeking the Democratic nomination for governor in a primary next Tuesday. He is opposed by four other candidates.

Divorce Granted Here And Not Filed Until Six Years Later

A six-year-old mistake was corrected this week in 31st district court when District Judge W. R. Ewing ordered entered upon the court minutes of a divorce granted on January 6, 1934.

The case, styled Ruth Bolin vs. Cleo Bolin, No. 3533, was filed on September 16, 1933. A divorce was granted on January 6, 1934, and in the language of the order issued this week:

"A decree thereof drawn and presented to the court and duly signed, and presented with the papers to the clerk of the court for entry on the minutes, and that by some error or inadvertence the same was not entered by the clerk, but was filed away among the papers in the case and remained there until a copy of the decree was sought, whereupon it was found that the same had not been entered."

"And the court finding the same ought to be entered on this the fourth day of January 1940 as and for January 6, 1934, it is accordingly ordered that same be entered nunc pro tunc, as of January 6, 1934. W. R. Ewing."

How the error happened to be made was unknown to the district judge. He stated that errors of this kind were made more frequently than expected, although not numerous.

Exact accounts on Christopher Smith Reynolds, son of Libby Holman and the late Zachary Smith Reynolds, have not been announced, but it is a reasonable estimate that he gets along on about the same amount as young Salm, around $1,000 a month. He will receive a little less than $7,000,000 as one-fourth of his father's estate. The boy was born in February, 1933, after the death of his father from a bullet wound at his North Carolina home.

Youth Revival Being Attended By Large Crowds

Rev. Clyde Hankins of Cleburne, Texas, who is doing the preaching in the Youth Revival at the First Baptist church, spoke last night on the subject, "The most neglected text in the bible." He showed by scripture, logic, illustrations, and by humor, that the majority of the church members are hearers of the Word but not doers.

The choir of young people was led by Arthur Nelson, choir director of the First Baptist church.

The unique feature of the meeting is that the young people are in charge of arrangements, constitute the choir, do the ushering, and attend to the publicity of the revival.

Today the pastor, Rev. C. Gordon Bayless, said of Rev. Hankins, "He has the modern approach in presenting the unchangeable truths of life as they are given to us in the Bible. He is a winsome and an effective preacher. All of our people who have heard him speak words of warm appreciation for his ministry. We had a decided increase in the number present last night. I look

Supreme Court Goes FDR 5-4

Do you remember, only four years ago, when one of the major national issues was not a war in Europe but the conservatism of the U. S. Supreme Court?

Do you recall all the talk about "nine old men," the bitterness of the administration toward the venerable jurists who tossed out New Deal legislation, including the AAA and the NRA? And the rumors that floated around about how the President was going to "pack" the court by appointing enough new justices to give him a majority over the conservative bloc?

It seems like yesterday; and yet, President Roosevelt has just appointed the fifth New Dealer within a period of less than four years. With the nomination of Attorney General Frank Murphy to the seat left vacant by the death of Justice Pierre Butler, the score in favor of the New Deal is now 5-4—even if all of the older members consistently oppose the administration, which they don't.

The new members of the high court are all youngsters, as Supreme Court justices go. The latest appointee is 47 years old, Justice Douglas is 42; Justice Black, 54; Justice Reed, 56, and Justice Frankfurter, 58. Barring untimely deaths or resignations, the Rooseveltian influence will remain on the high court bench for many years.

Those four of the Old Guard—Chief Justice Hughes, Justices Stone, McReynolds, and Roberts—must feel a little lonely at times. Since the last presidential election, three resignations and two deaths have cut down the roster of the old court by more than half.

Of course, even before 1937, the Supreme Court was not solidly anti-New Deal. Justice Cordozo, who died, and Justice Brandeis, who resigned, were generally sympathetic toward Roosevelt; and Chief Justice Hughes from time to time cast his vote against the majority. But the liberals were still a minority.

The members of the Supreme Court are appointed for life. They are beyond the influence of politics. Their decisions are made on the basis of whatever interpretations their personal philosophies make of the law.

The law is not absolute. If it were, many of the present duties of the courts would be eliminated. The law is a complicated network of restrictions and licenses placed upon the actions of men. It is made by men, interpreted by men. The interpretation depends largely on the jurist's attitude toward the whole of society.

Each Supreme Court justice has a tremendous responsibility toward the nation. Upon the court rests the final judgment on new ideas and processes of government. The new court—strictly a liberal court—may find itself, in years to come, compelled to judge some of the most vital acts in American history.

Behind The News

By BRUCE CATTON

Pampa News Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10.—Back of Senator Sheridan Downey's innocent resolution for a Senate committee to investigate super-highways there is the most elaborate public works program ever submitted to Congress. On the face of it, the senator's resolution simply asks that the Senate name seven members to find out how and where a super-highway network might be built, and how much it would cost.

What the senator actually is shooting at, however, is the building of a highway system that would cost $100,000,000,000, the building to proceed at the rate of approximately ten billions a year. By doing all of this, the senator believes, the nation would:

- End the depression.
- Solve the employment problem.
- Acquire a set of highways tailored to fit the automobile age.

WOULD GET FUNDS FROM EXCESS SAVINGS
Senator Downey keys his whole project to the recent studies of the Temporary National Economic Committee. The "TNEC," he says, has shown that the nation's major industries have become practically self-financing.

Because of this, "excess savings are piling up at a tremendous rate; for the past year, he asserts, they run to better than seven billions, and if we reach a national income of 80 billions this year, the excess savings—money available for investment but lacking an outlet—will amount to at least 10 billions.

What he proposes is to funnel those excess savings off over a 10-year period, and build highways with them.

"Investigations of present highway conditions show clearly that our highways are inefficient and dangerous," the senator declares. "In another decade, if our roads are not rebuilt, traffic and commerce will simply have to stop.

"Engineers estimate that to give us the best highways fully adapted to this modern era, we would have to spend 100 billion dollars. Of this about 35 billion would be used to build roads between and outside of the cities, and 65 billions to build approaches to metropolitan centers and highways within the city limits."

PLANS TAXATION ON BUSINESS INCREASE
There is, of course, the question of how all of this is going to be paid for. Senator Downey figures that the problem is relatively simple. Here is the answer as he works it out:

Suppose that bonds to obtain the necessary hundred billion are issued. Let the bonds carry interest of 1% per cent and add another 1/4 of 1 per cent for amortization. Two billions a year then would carry and retire the bond issue.

Meanwhile the construction of this vast chain of highways, as he sees it, would cause a huge boom in auto traffic and the existing federal taxes on gasoline and oil would bring in much higher revenues.

Since trucks and buses could operate much more cheaply on the new highways, they could properly be taxed more heavily to help pay for the bonds, he believes.

Sharing The Comforts Of Life --

By R. C. Hollis

EXCESS PROFIT

News reports indicate that Roosevelt expects to try to revise the excess profits tax.

But before there could really be any tax on excess profits the term would have to be defined. What is an "excess profit"? Is it earning above a certain per cent, or what is it?

If a business concern on a free market supplies a human want better than any other business concern can supply it, and supplies the wants of his workers on a voluntary agreement as well as anyone else can supply them, then is not this employer entitled to all the profits above the cost of supplying those wants? If he gets his profits on other than a free market, then let the government devote its energies to establishing a free market.

And is it not to the interest of society on the whole that an employer be thus permitted to add to the tools and wealth of the world? It certainly is. So there really is no such thing as an excess profit.

What people are confused about is that there are business concerns that get profits as a result of misrepresentation and false pretenses. But this is not an excess profit. It is robbery and the state should not take this profit as a result of robbery from the employer and keep it. It should prevent as nearly as possible the employer from getting profits as a result of misrepresentation and if it takes it from him it should return it to those who were robbed.

Any tax on profits, whether it be called "excess" or anything else, is a real tax that lowers the wages of the workers. There is no magical way of making it a crime to make large profits on a free market and thus using it as a pretext for taxation. Large profits secured on an open market and without misrepresentation benefit the world as a whole. To tax them is to retard human progress.

WATCH THE BLUES

Our worst enemies are our bluffers—men who pose to be greatly interested in improving the lot of the poor and who refuse to answer questions as to their method of helping the less fit.

Invariably these self-proclaimed humanists can be recognized by the way they answer questions. These bluffers when asked specific questions do one of three things: They evade by wise-cracks or, secondly, they contend that the asker of the question is too dumb to be able to ask a question worthy of an answer, or they do like they did with Socrates and Jesus, they kill the questioner.

Our self-proclaimed friends of the poor, of course, cannot today kill the questioner, but if their bluff is permitted to triumph and these hypocrites are not detected, they will pull the whole structure down to such a point that they will get control, and then instead of evading or refusing to answer because the questioner is dumb in their contention, they will kill as Socrates and Jesus were killed.

Truly our bluffers, our smug people who are so satisfied with their own wisdom that they think it is not necessary to answer questions, are the poor's worst enemy. They are the poor's worst enemy because they prevent people who are really making it possible for labor to get more wages from being allowed to train labor and furnish them with better tools whereby they can help themselves.

Bluffers usually get in some position like the church, or in school or in public office or on the radio or in some newspaper or magazine, where they cannot be questioned and they can pose as having some easy, magical way of relieving poverty.

FUNDAMENTAL ERRORS OF ALL NEW DEALERS

When all the theories advanced by the crystal gazing New Dealers are analyzed, it is found that they invariably are proposed and presented on one assumption which is in error.

All those who claim to have some magical way of helping the unfortunate by having the government protect and assist them and do it without hurting other workers, base their plan on the assumption that there is some way of taxing the seed corn without making it more difficult for labor to get corn to live on. (This, of course, is a figure of speech as seed corn represents all capital and corn represents all consumption goods).

But every time the New Dealers and those who propose the government should do more to subtract from the capital (the seed corn), they reduce the real wages of all workers by raising the cost of what they consume and lowering the amount labor can produce. So when all their theories of benefiting the poor are based on this error, all their results are fictitious.

The columns of this paper are open for any individual to submit any evidence showing there is any possible way of levying a tax on capital or the rich that does not directly or indirectly reduce the standard of living of all laborers.

FOOTBALL AT CHICAGO

(Chicago Tribune)

The University of Chicago is no longer to be represented in intercollegiate football competition. The decision was reached somewhat unexpectedly by the board of trustees, but the vote was unanimous.

For thirty years and more the University of Chicago was a great institution of learning with a good football team. For perhaps ten years it has been a great institution of learning with indifferent-to-poor football teams. The trustees appear to be confident that the university will retain its academic standing without any football team, and probably they will be proved right. At any rate, they are right in thinking that no team is better than a negligible one.

President Hutchins made the most of his bad teams. They were used as evidence of the high intellectual standards and moral integrity of the institution. The 60 to 0 defeats were worn almost as badges of merit. That was amusing for a time, but the joke was thin. It was possible to recall a number of institutions of higher learning which managed to maintain a position of eminence in the academic world and on the football field as well. Chicago itself had managed to do both in days not so far removed from the present. In short, Chicago could not continue to suffer humiliating defeat without appearing more than a little ridiculous, even in the eyes of its friends.

The decision has been made and it may be hoped that the university will not have cause to regret it. There are those who say that Chicago will lose desirable students and a wholesome morale. They may be right. It is perhaps significant that a number of universities, like Columbia, abandoned football only to return to it.

'MAYBE I HAD THE RIGHT IDEA THE FIRST TIME'

Around Hollywood

By MELCHIOR LENGVEL

(The author of "Ninotchka" tells of some Great Actresses he has known—For Robin Coons on vacation.)

HOLLYWOOD—It was in the garden of Director George Cukor's lovely home that I first met Greta Garbo.

She was dressed in a blue sailor suit—slacks, of course. No makeup on her face, not even lip-rouge, and this tends to give the effect of extreme pallor. Nor was her hair any more than a mass of dark, wavy curls hanging down her shoulders. Every movement was graceful and elegant. But out in the open the sparkling of her eyes is even more interesting: these eyes at once reveal the genius of their possessor.

There is no trace of artifice, of "pose" in Garbo. She delights in laughter. When listening to others, she is all attention. She bears out an old theory of mine—that only those who are without real talent are arrogant and egotistical in manner. Every great artist I ever knew was an excellent person in private life.

Attentively Garbo heard my "Ninotchka" story. She asked me a few questions, but it was evident that she had embraced the character on first hearing—the character which a year later she portrayed with such stupendous artistry. I think it would be wonderful to see Garbo on the stage just once: I am convinced that we would witness the miracle of a second Duke.

I consider Elizabeth Bernger a very great artist. Our acquaintance dates back to her days on the German stage—later we produced "Catherine the Great" in London with her in the stellar role. She is one of the most keen-witted women I know, and if she has any fault at all, it is perhaps her overabundant intelligence. Her faculty for criticism—and self-criticism—is so sharp that it impeded her in creative work; evidently that is why she so prolongs her periods of inactivity between appearances.

Few people would believe of Marlene Dietrich, who possesses an old-fashioned glamour and sex on the screen, that she is absolutely natural, very wise and extremely witty in private life—an excellent story-teller.

But of all the stars whom I have learned to know in Hollywood, Katharine Hepburn is perhaps the most likeable. She is a splendid creature, filled with a spirited benevolence. She sparkles with good will, and with energy. In a short time she will become America's first actress.

My standards of mensuration are very high, for I was fortunate enough to know Duse, Bernhardt, and more recently, the greatest actresses of the nations whose stars have since set. But I feel safe in saying of today's talented ones that, even if perhaps they are not such outstanding personalities, the best of them are surely not inferior to the great of yesteryear.

It is unfortunate, however, that the storm of Europe has now swept a few such gifted players as Ida Roland, in many of her roles unsurpassable; Paula Weeely of Austria, and several great German actresses now wasting away on the unsubstantial spiritual diet of the Nazi Reich.

Deplorable, too, is the loss to the world of the talented actresses of the small countries such as Hungary and Poland—these have never had the opportunity to present themselves to the audiences of any great European or American metropolis.

For, I have to tell you, the finest actress I have ever known was a Hungarian: Irene Varsanyi.

Mike Sheple, a faunish person with a droll sense of humor, had rather take a beating, his friends say, than play in public on his accordion which he teaches to a bunch of kids who practically adore him. However, once you've heard him play you will practically follow him around, so unique and individual is his interpretation. We said Mike was "faunish," well his appearance does make one think that he was cut out for the title role in "The Afternoon of a Faun," and wouldn't you use much make-up, and believe me Mike Sheple that's no slam. (Another thing Mike doesn't like is publicity). "The No. 1 sock of the holiday season or most any other time is Mrs. Morris Pollard whom her husband calls "Tokie." And her faultless rose complexion is as flawless as her cooking. Her turkey gravy is practically matchless, and her barbecued ribs and Swiss steak are the reasons the Pollard brothers, Morris and Fred weigh too much. She says the secret of cooking a Swiss steak is knowing how long to sear it before you pour the tomatoes, chopped onions, bell peppers over it. . . . And speaking of the Pollards, Mrs. Stella Pollard and son Junior, who went to Parkersburg, W. Va., to spend the holiday season are snowbound back there by the coldest spell since 1917. Mrs. Pollard got sick the day after Christmas, and was able to be up only the other day. They may not return to Pampa for weeks. They are visiting in the home of Mrs. Pollard's daughter. . . .

It is now believed that use of tuberculin test in cattle and pasteurization of milk have been fundamental in lowering the tuberculosis rate among cattle. Since bone and joint tuberculosis in human beings is associated largely with infection of the tubercle germ of the cattle type, another argument for pasteurized milk is apparent. If there is any real change in the milk resulting from pasteurization, it is a slight reduction in the vitamin B complex. In this country, we would not even think of experimenting on children with raw milk; but some foreign countries tests have been made on several thousand school children. After a long period of time it was found that there was no significant difference in growth, nutrition or any other factor associated with the use of raw milk. Experiments indicate that approximately 20 per cent of vitamin B1, vitamin C and iodine may be lost by pasteurization of milk. No other nutritive constituent seems to be affected.

Since the advantages of pasteurization are so overwhelming, it is about time that the raw milk adherents cease their pickering and stand aside for the development of pasteurization techniques which might result in lowered costs.

Dr. Morris Fishbein

Strange as it may seem, there are still people who oppose pasteurization of milk because they think the process destroys some of the vital food factors contained in raw milk. If it were not for pasteurization, it would not be possible to provide people in our large cities with a safe milk supply.

Recently, an authority in the field of nutrition reviewed the question of pasteurization as related to nutrition. Both raw milk and pasteurized milk were fed to calves to determine whether there was any difference in the rate of growth, physical condition, body measurements, or resulting composition of the blood.

It was found that raw milk and pasteurized milk were about equal in nutrition qualities; and that, if there was any difference, it was so slight that it could not be observed. However, it was found that there was considerable risk of spreading tuberculosis among calves fed with commercial raw milk, but not among those using pasteurized milk.

It is now believed that use of tuberculin test in cattle and pasteurization of milk have been fundamental in lowering the tuberculosis rate among cattle. Since bone and joint tuberculosis in human beings is associated largely with infection of the tubercle germ of the cattle type, another argument for pasteurized milk is apparent.

All you have to do then is to look up in your rear-view mirror and just laugh and laugh. "It is for each to utter that which he sincerely believes to be true, and add his unit of influence to all other units of influence, and let the results work themselves out."—Speech of contributors are urged to confine their articles to 500 words.

Editor: I am only a housewife and do not pretend to understand big business deals. However, this (municipal plan) issue from the very start did not appeal to me. As a renter, living on a moderate salary, living expenses are always the first to be considered. I have found my utility bills very reasonable in Pampa, with only one exception—the water bill. It is always the highest when an average of the year's bills is taken. Certainly for this reason alone I would not want the city to own another utility.

Have you ever had a complaint to make to the present water office? "I'm sorry, there's nothing we can do about it." Is invariably your answer.

There is a completely different story at the Southwest Public Service company office. "Your complaint will be investigated and an adjustment made. Thanks for calling this to our attention."

Well, these attitudes would be my second reason for wanting the present electric set-up to continue. I believe every American citizen should be given a right to express his opinion by vote and if our city council decides to deny the people this vote, they certainly are not playing the game according to American standards. Please, let's all play fair!

Amarillo To Play Pampa Here Friday Night

Local Teams Crush Weak Bobcat Fives

Any time that Pampa and Amarillo athletic teams play you don't have to worry about the crowd or the glamor, and the traditionally Pampa-Amarillo rivalry is expected to produce plenty of both fans and glamor Friday night when the Sandies come over to take their annual beating in basketball.

Incidentally, it will open the Big Five basketball league in Pampa. It will be remembered that Amarillo won the Big Five championship last year by beating the Harvesters in the final game at Amarillo.

The Sandies haven't won a basketball game in Pampa since Heck was a pup, and the game the Amarillo cagers won from the Harvesters last season was their first victory over the Pampans in years.

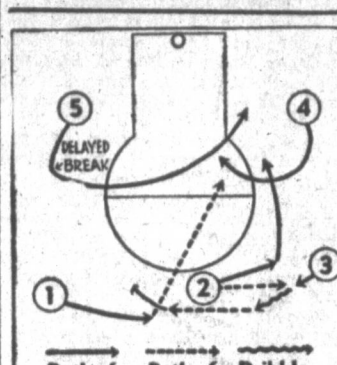

The Harvesters are favored to shake the Sandies Friday night for the reason that they whipped them 31 to 17 in the Pampa invitation tournament the week before Christmas. The Amarillos claimed they played their worst game of biggest ever run up by a Harvesters basketball game.

Referee Joe Ley (Oklahoma A. and M.) called four fouls on the Harvesters and 14 on the rough Bobcats in the second game. His officiating was fair, despite the disparity in the number of fouls. The reserves' game was a rough one and loosely called by a new official, Little.

League Wins Thanks Of Finnish Delegate

By CHARLES S. FOLTZ, JR.

GENEVA, Jan. 10 (AP)—The League of Nations, 20 years old today, has won the thanks of Finnish delegate Rudolf Holsti for its "practical aid" to Finland which he said "no dead league could give."

"We know it still lives," said the white-haired representative in a statement.

The anniversary of the "family of nations" found fully half the staff of permanent experts engaged in discussing financial and material aid for the invaded country from nations both in and out of the league.

Only last month, members revived the league's punitive powers by casting Soviet Russia and rallying world-wide aid for beleaguered Finland.

After praising the United States for "the aid which comes to us from outside the league," Holsti declared: "The next 20 years will be the years when the league comes of age. This last score were the years of bitter experience and growing pains which have made the league what it is today. We in Finland have practical aid today which no dead league could give. We know it lives."

Dykes Promises Not To Heckle Umpires

CHICAGO, Jan. 10 (AP)—Mr. James J. Dykes, the "Peck's Bad Boy" of American League managers, has promised to be good.

That may not be big news to you, but it is no less than that to the umpires harassed by the roly-poly White Sox pilot in seasons past.

Suspended, fined, and banished many times for back-talk to the men in blue, Dykes made a public confession last night at the annual dinner of the Chicago chapter of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

"Yes, I've turned over a new leaf," said Dykes. "The umpires are nice fellows. I like them very much—in the winter time. And President Harbridge and I are the best of friends—why shouldn't we be? I send him money all the time. But I'm going to get along with the umpires next season. I've even made a few wagers with the baseball writers that I won't get tossed out more than four times all year."

Aluminum Arch

ROME (AP)—Corresponding to the try-on and periphery of New York's World's Fair, the theme center of Rome's world exposition in 1942, is to be a mammoth arch 325 feet high, with a span of 756 feet, made entirely of Italian aluminum.

The reign of Charles I of England gave us the word "pin money." Pinmakers gave this monarch 500 pounds annually for his good will, and he turned the sum over to his queen for her private use.

NEW YORK, Jan. 10 (AP)—Watching Billy Conn, the steel city sock maker, in his Madison Square Garden fight tonight will be something like seeing Hamlet in a tuxedo.

The McMancholy Dane would be just as snappy in evening clothes as in a toga, and similarly, Conn is still Conn—even though this time he is a heavyweight.

Having climbed the light-heavyweight ladder until no more rungs were left, the Pittsburgh power-house decided to become a heavyweight. Not because he liked to fight bigger guys, but because there is more money in that division—and Conn isn't in the fight game just for the fun of wearing satin pants.

So Billy, the light-heavyweight king, signified as a heavyweight to meet Steve Dudas, a veteran trial horse who caught an attack of la grippe. So Billy must try out his heavier artillery on Henry Cooper of Brooklyn. A husky 160-pounder, Cooper has no more imagination than a clock, but possesses a very good straight left hand punch.

Actually the Pittsburgher has gained enough weight to move up a class, although he will weigh only a pound over the light-heavyweight limit of 175 and some four pounds over his best fighting weight in that class.

Nearly everyone, except the immediate members of the Cooper clan, think Conn will win handily. After this bout, he is expected to meet Johnny Paycheck of Des Moines. Conn thinks it will be only a matter of time until he is in there with Joe Louis—a prospect that doesn't seem to frighten him the way it should.

Bonura Won't Sign Giants' Contract

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 10 (AP)—Zeke (Ben Hur) Bonura wearing a circle of rhinestones on his head and brandishing a baseball bat, vowed today he felt a good season coming up and wouldn't sign a contract offered him by the New York Giants.

Zeke wouldn't say so but it was rumored the Giants wanted their slugging first baseman to take a cut of 33 1/3 per cent from his reported 1939 pay of $15,000.

The rhinestones and bat were a portrayal of Zeke's dual personality. The circle was the crown he wore the other night when he took the part of Ben Hur and reigned as king of a glittering New Orleans carnival ball.

The bat, needless to say, was just like the one he wielded so well last year for the National League baseball club.

The crown-and-bat act was just a gag for the benefit of a newspaper photographer. But Zeke appeared dead serious when he got on the subject of the Giants' salary offer.

"I like to play ball for Bill Terry," he declared, "but I have to stand up for my rights."

"I had a good year last year. I'm in fine condition. I'm good for some years yet."

"But I'm not going to sign that contract I got cutting me down."

Longhorns Push Methodists Out For Second Win

AUSTIN, Jan. 10 (AP)—The Texas Longhorns, whirling merrily along at the head of the Southwest Conference basketball pack, today looked toward Fayetteville and two of the stiffest tests they'll be called upon to face.

The Longhorns pushed unbeaten Southern Methodist University out 31-24 last night to make it two victories in two conference games.

Friday and Saturday nights they play the Razorbacks in the Ozarks and if they're still leading when they come back, then the Longhorns will make a giant stride toward defending their conference title.

Arkansas has not swung into action but of the other teams only Texas A. and M. and Texas are unbeaten in conference play and the Aggies have played but one game.

A. and M. meets the tough Baylor Bears at College Station Saturday night.

So Billy must try out his heavier artillery on Henry Cooper of Brooklyn. A husky 160-pounder, Cooper has no more imagination than a clock, but possesses a very good straight left hand punch.

Actually the Pittsburgher has gained enough weight to move up a class, although he will weigh only a pound over the light-heavyweight limit of 175 and some four pounds over his best fighting weight in that class.

Nearly everyone, except the immediate members of the Cooper clan, think Conn will win handily. After this bout, he is expected to meet Johnny Paycheck of Des Moines. Conn thinks it will be only a matter of time until he is in there with Joe Louis—a prospect that doesn't seem to frighten him the way it should.

Conn Favored To Whip Henry Cooper Tonight

NEW YORK, Jan. 10 (AP)—Watching Billy Conn, the steel city sock maker, in his Madison Square Garden fight tonight will be something like seeing Hamlet in a tuxedo.

The McMancholy Dane would be just as snappy in evening clothes as in a toga, and similarly, Conn is still Conn—even though this time he is a heavyweight.

Having climbed the light-heavyweight ladder until no more rungs were left, the Pittsburgh power-house decided to become a heavyweight. Not because he liked to fight bigger guys, but because there is more money in that division—and Conn isn't in the fight game just for the fun of wearing satin pants.

So Billy, the light-heavyweight king, signified as a heavyweight to meet Steve Dudas, a veteran trial horse who caught an attack of la grippe. Neely Flies Back To Make Up His Mind

By WILLIAM T. RIVES

HOUSTON, Jan. 10 (AP)—Angus Jess Neely, ambitious but grateful to Clemson college, discussed with close friends today the advisability of changing horses in mid-stream.

Mulling over what he called "a fine opportunity"—the head football coaching position at Rice Institute—Neely flew to his South Carolina home last night after a day of conferences with officials of the South-west conference school.

The job is his if he wants it. Apparently there were only detours—loyalty to the Carolina school that gave him his chance and the possibility that a change might, in the long run, prove to be a mistake.

Neely is 42 years old and doubtless is looking for security as well as a chance to prove his claim to top-ranking coaching ability. He is well entrenched at Clemson.

No one revealed Rice's offer, but most sources placed it at a $7,500 a year, with a long term contract.

Neely pleaded he wanted more time to ponder such an important case, but Rice, wanting to settle the problem quickly, insisted he give his decision before returning home.

At the last, however, Neely won his point and flew home with a promise the school would hold the job open.

J. T. McCants, chairman of the committee on outdoor sports of the institute, said he "hoped" Neely would accept the job, but Neely's remarks before leaving puzzled newspapermen:

"I was impressed by Houston and would like to see it again sometime. The job offers a fine opportunity ... but I think I owe Clemson something. They gave me my chance."

SERIAL STORY BLACKOUT

BY RUTH AYERS

COPYRIGHT, 1939
NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday, the marriage ceremony over, Mary felt herself strangely attracted to this blond doctor. He is soon to leave and she fears that she may never see him again—her husband—she has to gain strength for the operation. Then it is time for him to go.

CHAPTER XVI

GILBERT was not looking at Mary as he gathered up his few things and put on his coat. His face, averted from hers, was impossible to read.

Mary found she could not move or speak. Inside her was a strange hammering.

"I don't want him to go like this," she thought wildly, not understanding or caring what made her feel as she did.

His hands took her chill ones. "Write to me—often, will you?" The sound of his dear voice made her ache.

"Yes—I'll write." She looked up at him. She tried to tell him in that last minute what he'd meant to her, how grateful she was to the bottom of her heart. But it was no use. The paralyzed face made all her words so halting she knew she could never say it.

"Goodbye," he said steadily. "I said from the first you were a good trouper. . . I know it now."

She tried to smile. Some of the numbness in her face seemed to melt. Her eyes spoke for her as she shook his hand.

WALK every day. Drink milk. Eat nourishing food—lots of it. Like a dutiful patient, Mary swung into this routine. She was now building toward a definite goal and everything she did in gaining new strength was a step toward it. When Dr. O'Connell came back from France, she must be in perfect condition to undergo the treatment that might restore her features.

When that was done, she would find Vincent and all the past could be blotted out. Gilbert Lenox was her benefactor and she bore his name. But she was as impatient to free him from this bond, as he would be to be free of it. She knew it had been pity—nothing more—that had persuaded him to help her.

"Letter for you, Ma'm."

It was Mrs. Simmons, the land-

lady. She held out an official looking envelope.

"Oh, thanks—this is, this must be from my husband." It was the first time Mary had said the word and it sounded queer in her ears.

It wasn't from Gilbert. It was merely an official communication from the war ministry with a check enclosed—Gilbert's pay check.

The stout British landlady was still very much in evidence after Mary had read the form letter.

"Is everything all right at the front with the doctor?" Mrs. Simmons asked.

"Oh, yes, quite all right," Mary's voice was listless.

Mrs. Simmons was not entirely satisfied. She pretended to polish furiously at the tiles on the hearth as she went on, "I have said many times, I have indeed, that a finer gentleman never lived than Dr. Lenox, American or not."

"That's very kind of you."

"And if I may say so, you're looking much better yourself these days. Not so peaked. Mind, that terrible shipwrecking of the Moravia by the submarine, would be enough to make a body look peaked for the rest of their lives."

When she had gone, Mary Carroll stared at the check. So cold, so impersonal. There had been no letter yet from Gilbert—instead, this reminder that he was doing his duty toward her.

The spirit of independence that had driven her once to fight for a chance to earn her living as a fashion designer—that had made her a perfectly independent young person in Paris—rose again within her.

"I won't take his money," she stammered, half aloud. "I won't. If he'd written—if he'd made some gesture to show he was not acting out of pity for me, I might have accepted it. But not now."

The lodgings were paid for until spring. Some of the money Gilbert had given her before their wedding still remained. Her needs had been small.

With her disfigured face, Mary Carroll might not be able to find a job—but perhaps she could still earn enough through her drawing so she would not have to touch Gilbert's checks. Resolutely, she went out to buy drawing paper, pencils, and charcoal.

Millions of words had been written about London in wartime. Newspapers and periodicals had been filled with cartoons and drawings of the grim side of London's blackouts and evacuations. In her daily walks, something in Mary Carroll's alert American eyes had seen something else. A lighter, whimsical touch. Fashions had gone military. White helmets, white walking sticks, white gas masks boxes had been designed to show up clearly in the darkened city. Perhaps she could catch some of this lighter vein, some of this striving to laugh at war in her drawings.

When her first group of sketches was finished Mary was thrilled with anticipation. They were not perfect but she had a feeling they caught an atmosphere and a spirit. She packed them carefully and sent them, a few at a time, to some of the London shops, with notes asking if they might be exhibited.

The response was swift and heartening. Letters began arriving, asking for prices and giving her orders.

Days flew as she worked. Life began to shape anew. When the time came, if ever, she could go back to Vincent without being under a penny of financial obligation to Dr. Lenox. She hadn't yet touched one of his medical corps checks. What hurt most, of course, was that Gilbert hadn't written. She tried to forget it under the rush of creative work.

One day she had a visitor.

There was a knock on her door and opening it, Mary saw Lady Ponce-Townsend.

"How do you do," she managed to stammer. "Come in."

Lady Ponce-Townsend, Mary recalled, was the British dowager who'd outfitted the refugees from the Moravia, and who had been so active in war relief work.

Lady Ponce-Townsend smiled a harassed, toothy smile. "My dear, I've just heard of your marriage to Dr. Gilbert Lenox. Congratulations. But why haven't you let me know about your sketches? They're utterly stunning."

"Why, I had no idea you would be interested."

"Interested?" Lady Ponce-Townsend fairly boomed. "If you have no objections I want to exhibit them in my Mayfair home. You will let me, of course!"

Utah Solon Resents 'A Lot Of Things' At Labor Hearing

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10 (AP)—Rep. Murdock (D-Utah), already on record with a complaint of unfairness against the House committee investigating the Wagner Labor act and its administration, told the committee counsel today that "there's a lot of things you do that I resent."

Murdock, a committeeman, interrupted the attorney, Edmund M. Toland, when Toland showed displeasure at one of the replies given by today's witness, Mrs. Julius Schlegler.

Toland was questioning Mrs. Schlegler, 29-year-old attorney in the review division of the labor board, as to how she could summarize thousands of words of testimony for the board without stating findings.

"I simply state what the witnesses said, without stating any conclusions or findings," the witness testified.

"I'm not asking about conclusions," Toland began, but Murdock interrupted hotly.

"It seems to me the witness' answer was responsive to the question, and, in fairness to her and to the committee, she should be permitted to finish it."

"I'm not trying to stop her," Toland retorted. "I resent the implication—"

"And there's a lot of things you do that I resent," Murdock suggested that Murdock owed him an apology.

Chairman Smith (D-Va.) ruled that the exchange be stricken from the record.
