Second grader Brice Wood mounts his three-time world champion Appaloosa "Foxy Commanche" as he prepares to ride off into the sunset on the last day of school.

'Lone Ranger' heads home

Second grader ends school year in western style

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

He has no mask, no six-gun nor a sidekick named Tonto.

He doesn't roam the prairie atop the faithful companion "Silver" nor does he rescue ill-fated persons aboard stage coaches held up by bank robbers.

But fellow classmates still refer to second grader Brice Wood as the "Lone Ranger" of Santa Rita Elementary School.

Though he may be a bit young to begin galloping off into the sunset, the youngster, son of Dee and Connie Wood of rural Midland, occasionally can be found riding across the vast West Texas Plains to and from school on the family's three-time world champion Appaloosa "Foxy Commanche."

Wood's teacher Mary Ann Hale said she discovered the boy's "unique" mode of transportation by "accident."

"It all began as part of a learning experience," she said. "We were studying a unit on transporation in our social studies class. I asked the children 'How do we get home from school?'

"I asked how many rode the bus? Eighteen raised their hands. We also found that two went by car, two walked, one rode a bicycle and two others went by day care center van," she said.

"Brice never would raise his hand. So I asked, 'Brice, how do you get home from school?' He answered, 'Oh, I ride my horse.' "

Mrs. Hale said she thought it appropriate to ask the eight-year-old to demonstrate his riding skills and it just so happened, he chose Wednesday — the last day of school.

According to the boy's father, "Even though we do it only on weekends, we're pretty in to horses."

Reagan: Selling tax reform a 'challenge'

By W. DALE NELSON

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — President Reagan acknowledged today that he faces a challenge in trying to sell the country on his plan to overhaul the federal tax system, which he called "utterly impossible, utterly unjust and completely counterproductive."

"I'll be speaking about tax reform a great deal over the next few weeks and months, and I expect it to be challenging," Reagan said in a speech prepared for delivery in front of the restored House of Burgesses at Colonial Williamsburg.

"It's a shrewd turn of the American people that, when you announce a plan to help them, they stand back and scrutinize it and approach with the question: How are you going to hurt me now?"

"This is not an unreasonable question," the president said. "But I tell you from the bottom of my being: This is a plan that is going to help our country by helping every individual in it.

"Our federal tax system is, in short, utterly impossible, utterly unjust and completely counterproductive," Reagan declared. "It has earned a rebellion, and it's time we rebelled."

"The current system just doesn't work any more," he said. "The underground economy and the cult of cheating prove this is so."

The setting for Reagan's speech was the capital of colonial Virginia, where its legislators enacted resolutions that were a forerunner of the Declaration of Independence.

Later, in a speech prepared for delivery on the steps of the Winnebago County Courthouse in Oshkosh, Wis., Reagan said:

"Another problem with the tax system as it stands now is that it looks like swiss cheese. Now, Wisconsin is famous cheese country, so you know just what I'm talking about — big holes no matter how you slice it."

Saying that his tax plan would eliminate such unfair tax breaks, the president declared, "from Oshkosh to Miami to Santa Fe, we, the people, must unite. Those who have been elected to positions of public trust must show true leadership and political courage."

Reagan paid tribute to the late Rep. Bill Steiger, R-Wis., whom he credited with engineering a 1978 reduction in the maximum capital gains tax from 49 percent to 28 percent.

"Almost instantly, the amount of venture capital available in our country rose sharply, making it possible to expand existing companies and to form new ones, creating new jobs in the process," he said.

Reagan said his proposed further reduction in the capital gains tax, from the present 20 percent to 17.5 percent "will foster still more growth and job creation — a renaissance of American entrepreneurship."

Oil industry unhappy with just 'half a glass'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The oil industry apparently remains unhappy with President Reagan's tax proposals, but his latest version is clearly less costly to the independent producers who do 90 percent of the drilling in the United States, industry officials say.

"We're better off than we were" under a plan advanced by the Treasury Department last year, Ray Potts, president of PSEC Oil in Oklahoma City, said Wednesday. "But that's like having to only drink a half glass of poison instead of the full glass."

Jon Rex Jones, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, said any changes in current tax law could prove "disastrous and contribute to undermining the nation's energy security." But he agreed the new plan is not nearly as onerous to the industry as the first.

Reagan said Tuesday night he was asking the oil and gas industry "to pick up a larger share of the national tax burden. The old oil depletion allowance will be dropped from the tax code, except for wells producing less than 10 barrels a day."

The depletion allowance entitled producers to deduct 15 percent of the gross value — at the wellhead — of the oil and gas they sold.

Actually, the big, integrated oil companies — those that refine and market oil as well as produce it — lost the depletion allowance a decade ago, so they aren't affected on that score.

Officials will 'wait and see' health care package's effect

From Staff and Wire Reports

Local health officials are taking a "wait and see" stance over recently passed legislation that provides a $70 million health care package for indigent care.

"We're waiting until we actually get the legislation in our hands so that we can examine it more fully," said a spokesman for Midland Memorial Hospital.

Midland health leaders appeared to be unfamiliar with the legislation which was passed in a special session called by Gov. Mark White earlier this week.

"I would hope that the legislation would not adversly affect us," said Midland County Hospital District board member, Frank Cahoon. "Of course, anything that we would obtain from the state would be helpful."

Sen. Bill Simms, D-San Angelo, who was the only member to vote against the program, was not optomistic on the bill's possible affect on Midland County.

"Small counties are going to wind up putting 10 percent of their budget into health care," he said. "I think it could have a pretty strong effect on a county like Midland County."

Legislators worked quickly to wrap up the health care issue. Acting in less than two minutes, the Senate today gave final approval to a health care plan for the poor and adjourned, ending the Legislature's brief special session.

In approving the Senate bill 90-54 Wednesday, the House added six amendments. Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby looked at the changes and predicted it would take "five minutes" for the Senate to OK them and send the bill to Gov. Mark White.

Speaker Gib Lewis, who cast a dramatic tie-breaking vote Wednesday to kill conservatives' efforts to dilute the bill, also was supremely confident the Senate would concur.

Lewis sent House members home after the vote.

"I think the amendments that went on are worked out, accepted amendments by everyone concerned," Lewis said.

The vote came on the second day of the special session that Gov. Mark White piggy-backed onto the regular session that ended midnight Monday.

Belgium may ban British following soccer riot

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — The government said today it was considering banning British soccer teams from Belgium after a clash between British and Italian fans at a championship match left 38 people dead and more than 275 injured.

Most of the victims were Italians trampled or crushed to death under a wall that collapsed when panicked fans tried to escape Brussels' Heysel stadium when the riot broke out before the match.

The Interior Ministry and a European soccer association started work today on separate inquiries to determine responsibility for Wednesday night's deadly riot.

"People were trapped by rubble and dead bodies," said John Welsh, 27, of Toxteth, England. "It was terrible and nobody seemed to be doing anything. We were trying to pull people out, but idiots were still pushing."

■ Countries involved react strongly — Page 4D

Louis Wouters, president of the Belgian Soccer Federation, demanded an autopsy for two whom he said were either stabbed or shot, but State Prosecutor Judge Michel Peytier said preliminary autopies provided no evidence to support that assertion.

The Belgian government in a statement said it was "very seriously reconsidering" giving permission for matches involving British teams. It said it had taken all the necessary precautions "in the light of the presumed risks and previous experiences."

On May 11 a grandstand fire, possibly started by hooligans, killed 53 people and injured 200 at Britain's Bradford stadium.

European sports officials and newspapers questioned whether Britain should be allowed to compete in international events. One British legislator said his country's team should be banned from the 1986 World Cup final.

In London, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher issued a statement saying those responsible for the rioting "have brought shame and disgrace to their country and to football."

Premier Wilfried Martens said on television that the decision to go ahead with the game "may have astonished the Italians, but it was taken for security reasons." He sent a telegram of condolence to Italian Premier Bettino Craxi.

The two teams played the game after a 90-minute delay, and Juventus, of Turin, Italy, won.

County commissioner makes switch to Republican Party

A Democratic county commissioner officially hopped the fence to the Republican Party during a news conference this morning, but the Democratic county chairman said the action might be a mistake in the long run.

Durward Wright, in his 17th year as a county commissioner of Precinct 1, was surrounded by Republican Party leaders this morning at GOP headquarters as he announced his decision — one which he had made several months ago.

"I have always considered myself a fiscal conservative and a supporter of free enterprise.

Cause remains undetermined in blast at San Antonio ice plant

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Arson investigators poking through the remains of a gutted ice manufacturing plant were uncertain what caused an ammonia explosion that killed four people and injured at least 21 others.

Deputy Fire Chief Jim Miller said the explosion Wednesday afternoon "evidently was caused by an ammonia leak" at the plant, owned by Lone Star Ice and Food Stores and Southern-Hencke.

All but one of the injured were treated for inhalation of fumes and released from two area hospitals. Firefighter Delfino Munoz, 31, stayed at Downtown Baptist Hospital overnight for observation, hospital spokesman Ruben Garansuay said. Munoz was one of at least 15 firefighters hurt at the explosion site.

The dead were identified as Macario Martinez, 55; Jesus Rios Acosta, 31; Ascencion Ortiz Rodriguez, 33; and Rito Cazares, 55, said investigator Eva Hickman of the Bexar County medical examiner's office.

The blast scene just southeast of downtown "looked like a war zone" said Dennis Cooper, district superintendent for Lone Star.

White 'airlifts' wayward legislator

By KEN HERMAN

AUSTIN (AP) — Rep. Billy Clemons got first word of the special session from a voice on his pickup truck radio. Problem was he was about 200 miles from the Capitol.

Clemons left town at mid-day Tuesday following the midnight Monday end of the regular session.

Less than an hour after the session ended, Gov. Mark White had called a special session to begin Tuesday at 10 a.m. But nobody told Clemons. He packed up, checked out of his apartment and headed east.

"I heard on the radio on the way home that we're in the middle of a special session," Clemons, D-Pollok, said Wednesday.

At first, he doubted the radio report. The announcer must have been "confused" he figured. But when he got home he discovered the voice in the pickup truck was telling the truth.

"It was time for the evening news. I got home and watched that and, sure enough, we were having a special session," said Clemons, a second-term lawmaker.

He called the governor's and speaker's office late Tuesday, but got no answer.

Clemons thought about jumping back into the truck and heading back to Austin. That plan died due to logistics. "I didn't have any clean clothes," he said.

So he figured a Wednesday morning return would be the best he could manage.

Meanwhile, White was on the phone to House members, rounding up support for the indigent health care program for which he called the special session.

The call to Clemons went out Wednesday morning. White called Clemons' Austin office, where the legislator's staff patched the call to Clemons' home near Lufkin.

"He said he needed my help. I said, 'I'd be glad to help you governor, but I'm in Lufkin.' I said I'd be there in four hours," Clemons said.

White said that wasn't soon enough. The governor called Railroad Commissioner Buddy Temple, a Diboll resident who made one of his company airplanes available to rush Clemons to Austin.

HEALTH

"I thought it was a perfect bill coming over from the Senate, but they may have made one or two improvements," White said after the House action.

Under the plan, if a county without a public hospital spends over 10 percent of its taxes for indigent health care, the state would cover 90 percent of additional expenses. There are 132 counties without a public hospital.

The plan sets aside $70 million in state money — without a tax hike — to help provide health care for the poor. Repeal of the state law against Sunday shopping will provide $40 million for the program.

The initial vote on the substitute bill offered on behalf of the Texas Conservative Coalition was 73-71 in favor of killing it. But a roll call verification wound up 71-71.

"Show the chair voting aye," said Lewis, stifling the conservatives' effort by using his power to break ties.

"You just do what you have to do when you have to. ... You always hope you don't have to," Lewis said after the vote.

The three most substantive amendments, tacked on by Killeen Rep. Stan Schlueter were, according to Lewis, added to "prohibit the counties from increasing taxes and blaming the Legislature."

White added two items to the agenda Wednesday. The House responded quickly, approving a bill to keep the Department of Aging in operation and approving creation of a new river authority.

Dallas Rep. Jesse Oliver's health care bill had died as the regular session ended.

Senators quickly approved the measure Tuesday, shortly after the special session began.

Rep. Alan Schoolcraft, R-San Antonio, pushed the conservative alternative, a package that included postponing most of the state money for two years.

"We're trying to jump head-long into a program with no cap on it and will grow and grow and grow," Schoolcraft said.

"We're not saying write it off, forget it, never," he said, adding that the indigent health care issue needs further study.

Oliver's plan was the product of a 71-member task force that studied the topic for two years.

"If we continue to study we will be impacted negatively by the pain and suffering and death of children who will be born handicapped," Oliver said. "We've studied it. We've made the compromises."

Oliver praised Lewis for making a "gutsy vote."

"He makes the critical decisions when they need to be made. And he makes them right," Oliver said.

If the Schoolcraft amendment had been approved, Oliver said he would have withdrawn the bill — touching off possible legislative turmoil.

Schoolcraft said his intent was to prevent establishment of a costly state program in a time of tight budgets.

"If we commit ourselves to that, with that kind of structure, it's going to bleed us dry over the next few years," he said.

Thee indigent health care bill will affect several areas of public health including: — procedures for resolving conflicts between public hospitals and the home counties of patients who can't pay.

— Requiring the Texas Department of Human Resources to set eligibility standards for patients from counties without a public hospital.

— Requiring counties without a public hospital are to pay for only 30 days of hospitalization or $30,000 in services per patient per year.

The bill also states the following:

— If a county without a public hospital spends more than 10 percent of its tax revenues on indigent health care, the state will pay 90 percent of additional expenses.

— About 70,000 people in counties without a public hospital will become eligible.

— Those counties will pay about $25 million over two years for care of their poor.

— A state Indigent Health Care Assistance Fund will be established to cover the state share of the costs and to help public hospitals that treat a disproportinate share of the indigent patients.

United Way fears effects of reforms

From Staff Reports

Although they have "won concessions" under President Reagan's new tax plan, United Way of Midland echoes statements from the national organization concerning possible adverse effects on donations from non-itemizing contributors.

"It's impossible to guess how the tax plan might affect us," said Executive Director Bob Smith. "In Midland, we probably have a greater number of people who itemize on their tax returns than most typical communities."

"But even if that means that Midland only has 50 percent of the population who do not itemize, that's still 50 percent of the population who will be discriminated against in giving to charitable organizations," he said.

United Way of America has stated that the tax plan "fails the fairness test".

"The president and former Treasurer Secretary Donald Regan previously supported the charitable deduction for non-itemizers, including it in the administration's 1981 tax bill," said Jack Moskowitz, a spokesman. "However, the present recommendation, while preserving two key incentives for giving, fails the fairness test. It discriminates against the vast majority of Americans — those who do not itemize their tax returns."

United Way was pleased, said a report from the national headquarters, with two concessions in the tax plan — the elimination of two Treasury Department recommendations which disallowed charitable deductions for individuals unless gifts exceeded two percent of a person's adjusted gross income and another which placed stricter limits on charitable deductions of gifts of appreciated property.

"We are greatly encouraged by the president's actions," said Moskowitz. "We think our voice was heard and had an impact on his decision."

Still, the elimination of tax incentive for non-itemizers made for a bittersweet reception.

"Tax incentives have been part of the Tax Code since 1917," said Moskowitz. "At a time when the federal government is cutting back, we should not be reducing incentives for charitable giving. These incentives are not loopholes. They do not benefit contributors. They serve only to increase charitable giving for the public good and stimulate ever greater expansion of volunteerism."

A decrease in the number of volunteers could be yet another effect of the tax plan, according to Moskowitz.

"People who give also tend to become involved as volunteers," he said. "The overall impact on charities to garner broad community support is endangered."

Smith agreed.

"It works both ways also," he said. "People can start out as a contributor and then volunteer or they may start out volunteering and then decide to contribute."

United Way will continue to press for non-itemizer legislation according to the report. Included in the Moynihan-Frenzel bills (SB 361 and HR 587) which would make the non-itemizer charitable deduction permanent in any tax simplification plan.

"A majority of the members of the House of Representatives has already co-sponsored this legislation," said Moskowitz.

OIL

The original Treasury Department plan proposed to eliminate the depletion allowance for the smaller companies as well, but the new version would instead phase it out over five years. Moreover, it would be preserved for the so-called stripper wells producing less than 10 barrels daily. Such wells, in fact, account for much of the domestic production.

Of even greater importance — especially to the independents — is that the new plan would retain the annual tax writeoff for intangible drilling costs, expenditures for equipment and services used in drilling wells that have no salvage or resale value upon abandonment of the well.

The original proposal would have eliminated such writeoffs, known as IDCs. "We appreciate getting to keep the IDCs, and we appreciate getting the depletion on strippers. Still, it's going to have a negative effect on the independent oilmen," Potts said.

Most big oil firms reserved comment Wednesday as their analysts pored over the new plan. "It's a complex proposal and we haven't really had a chance to review it enough to make any insightful comments," said Franklin J. Parisi of Diamond Shamrock.

R.G. "Gus" Ensz of the American Petroleum Institute said, "We are just beginning to digest and analyze it." But he said "the petroleum industry already is more heavily taxed than any other. We are concerned by any proposal which would increase the percentage of its income which would to into taxes."

Like other industries, all oil and gas firms would lose the investment tax credit under the Reagan plan. That provision effectively allowed businesses to charge the government for 10 percent of their new machinery and equipment.

"The oil industry is bleeding now," said Doug Bendell of Douglas Energy Corp. in Oklahoma City. "Even under current tax law, the price of crude has dropped by one-third" since Reagan took office and "this is going to have a dramatic dampening effect on drilling and will increase our dependence on foreign crude."

The Petroleum Institute also predicted that the "result would be less investment in exploration and development and therefore less domestic production ... all at a time when consumption of energy is rising and imports already constitute one-third of the oil we use."

SWITCH

Over the years I have seen an erosion of influence in the Democratic Party by the conservative Texas Democrats," he read from a prepared statement.

Contending that his conservative political philosophy has never changed, he said the "ever widening gap" left no place for him in the Democratic Party.

Kelly Fish, Midland County Republican chairman, said the Republican Party is experiencing "tremendous growth" nationwide. Recently, state Republicans applauded when leading conservative Democrat Kent Hance announced his party switch. And Fish indicated more local Democrats will be turning to the GOP "in the near future," but he refused to cite any names.

Wright said he had talked with Fish several months ago about the change, but decided to wait until after the county jail bond election to make the announcement.

Wright, who was first elected to the County Commissioners' Court in 1968, said the Democratic Party was tilting more to the "liberal eastern group of the Democratic Party" and the conservative faction in Texas was becoming "virtually non-existent."

"I don't associate myself with the ultra-liberal" faction, he said. "I saw a slipping away of my personal beliefs in the last decade or so" from the party philosophy.

He denied he made the switch to ensure re-election in three years in his increasingly Republican precinct. Wright said he was elected as a Democrat when the precinct held a majority of Republicans.

But Janet Massey, Midland County Democratic chairman, who wasn't aware of Wright's plans, said the commissioner hadn't been active in the Democratic Party and that the switch could be a mistake.

"He might not win the Republican primary in the next election," she said. Some Republicans, she said, want the Democrats to switch but then don't trust them enough to turn the reins over to these converts.

Noting that she was "shocked" at the news, Ms. Massey added, "I hate to see him go." Nor has she heard of other local Democrats planning to switch.

Wright said he doesn't expect to do another change if the Democrats win the next elections. "The only way I would shift parties again is if the Republican Party changes its course of fiscal responsibility and protection of free enterprise. Myself and most other Republicans would change parties then."

At the end of the news conference, Fish read a mailgram from State Republican Chairman George Strake congratulating Wright on his decision.

Mrs. Wood, a world champion intercollegiate barrel racer, soon will begin teaching her son to master selected rodeo events, his father noted. "He's fixin' to start roping now."

The elder Wood acknowledged that his son "had his own horse by the time he was one year old."

When asked if the ride to and from school was part of the youth's training program, he said, "No, he just wanted to ride."

Marfa to keep school open, despite regulations

STATE

MARFA (AP) — Rather than transport students more than 150 miles daily on a school bus through some of Texas' most mountainous territory, Marfa school trustees have announced they'll violate state regulations and keep an elementary school open in a small town on the Mexican border.

Because of a House Bill 72 requirement that a school must have at least one teacher per class, the Marfa school board voted in February to shut down the elementary school in Redford, which is 15 miles southeast of Presidio on the Rio Grande.

But that would have meant busing students 75 miles north to Marfa, and school trustees reconsidered and voted unanimously on May 14 to keep the school open after all, in spite of state regulations.

"We had time to think about it," Ann Rushton, vice president of the Marfa School Board, said.

"We had a lot of input from concerned citizens, and after considering it for a long, long time, we feel like we'll try it one more year. I have no idea about 1987."

The Redford elementary school has three classrooms and three teachers for 30 to 35 students in kindergarten through eighth grade.

"We were going to have some little bitty ones getting up early and coming home late. They would leave about 7 and get home about 5 or 6 in the afternoon. That's a long time for anyone to be away from home every day five days a week," Ms. Rushton said.

The school also could be in violation of a regulation that requires teachers to spend a given amount of time on particular subjects, Marfa superintendent Carl Robinson said. The three teachers currently must juggle time spent with each subject in each grade, he said.

Ms. Rushton said she did not know what disciplinary action, if any, the state will take against the school district and did not know what the school district will do if the state does act against the school district.

People living in Redford applauded the decision.

"It would have complicated my life," said Lucia Viramontes, who has two children in the school.

"Would you want your kids bused a hundred miles every day to school?"

Partners agree to settle nuclear power plant suit

AUSTIN (AP) — A $750 million settlement will be announced today by three South Texas Nuclear Project partners who filed a multimillion-dollar lawsuit against the power plant's former builder, The Associated Press learned.

Houston-based Brown & Root will pay $750 million to San Antonio City Public Service, Houston Lighting & Power and Central Power and Light, said the source, who spoke only on the condition that he would not be identified.

Official word of the settlement will come today at news conferences in the home cities of the partners. CP&L is based in Corpus Christi.

The money will be paid in proportion to partner's share in the nuclear project near Bay City. San Antonio is a 28 percent owner, Houston Lighting & Power is a 30.8 percent owner and Central Power & Light owns 25.2 percent.

The city of Austin, a 16 percent partner, has not decided whether it will participate in the settlement, the source reported.

HL&P spokesman Don Beeth refused to comment on the settlement Wednesday.

Man 'relieved' over delay of his execution

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — G.W. Green says he was discussing final arangements with his brother when word came that his execution had been delayed.

"I was relieved, obviously," Green said Wednesday, the day that had been scheduled for his execution for the 1976 killing of a Montgomery County juvenile probation officer during a burglary.

A federal judge in Houston granted a stay of execution last Friday.

"A few minutes after midnight I looked at the time and thought that I was hallucinating or had been resurrected," Green said.

"I knew if there was any justice in the world, I'd live to see the Celtics kick...the Lakers," he said, referring to the current National Basketball Association championship series between Boston and Los Angeles.

But Green said he was certain the stay was only temporary and that "I'm going to get whacked for sure. I really expect to be executed."

He was one of two inmates to get delays in death dates last week.

Johnny Frank Garrett, convicted of the rape-slaying of an Amarillo nun, had been scheduled to die early today but also won a reprieve from a federal judge.

Garrett declined interview requests Wednesday, the only day of the week reporters are allowed to speak with death row inmates.

The stays left three of the state's 205 capital murder convicts with active execution dates, including Charles Milton on June 25, Henry Martinez Porter on July 9 and John Michael Lamb on July 22.

Lamb, 27, the only one of that trio to grant interviews Wednesday, faces death by injection for a February 1983 robbery-slaying at a Greenville Ramada Inn.

"I'm sure I'll get a stay," Lamb said.

The San Jose, Calif., native, however, said he had no attorney yet and would seek help from the NAACP Legal Defense Fund.

"I've still got two months to go," he said.

Marshall Field's won't stay open on Sunday

DALLAS (AP) — Officials of a Chicago-based retailer say they will not remain open on Sunday as originally planned, but instead will obey the Texas blue law.

A Marshall Field & Co. executive had said earlier the Dallas store and two Houston locations would be open this Sunday. But company officials reversed their decision Wednesday.

A bill repealing the 24-year-old law has been passed by the House and Senate. But Gov. Mark White has not yet signed the bill, which would allow retailers to begin operating seven days a week on Sept. 1.

"After careful consideration, primarily that the legislation hasn't been signed by Gov. White, taking into consideration the spirit of the law and wishing to be sensitive to the standards of the Texas communities we serve, Marshall Field has deferred its decision to open on Sunday," said a company statement.

Agents: Arrests break up major drug ring

DALLAS (AP) — Federal agents said the arrests of eight people, including the co-owners of a Dallas oil company, have broken up a ring that was one of the major suppliers of cocaine to the United States.

Among those arrested Wednesday on various counts of conspiracy to distribute cocaine and marijuana were Joe Bill Bennett, 39, of Dallas and James Jefferson Bennett Jr., 32, of Carrollton, owners of Bennett Resources Inc., and at least one of their employees, authorities said.

Phil Jordan, a special agent with the Drug Enforcement Administration in Dallas, said multi-kilo quantities of cocaine and marijuana were shipped from South America and Mexico into Dallas and then distributed to Austin, McAllen, St. Louis and New York.

"Dallas was one of the major cities," Jordan said. "These people are significant violators." He said the group was suspected of trafficking "multi-kilos of cocaine and tons of marijuana."

Jordan said DEA agents last year joined an investigation that local and state officials began eight years ago.

The arrests followed a 19-count indictment. The indictment, which named 13 people, will remain sealed until the whereabouts of at least four suspects still at large could be determined, officials said.

Authorities declined to publicly identify the others who were indicted. However, a federal source who asked to remain anonymous said one of the five is in federal custody under another sealed indictment that alleges drug crimes. The source identified the man as Jose Luis Ramirez Hernandez of Mexico.

The eight arrested were brought before U.S. Magistrate John B. Tolle, for a preliminary hearing Thursday. He denied bond on seven of the suspects, but allowed the eighth, Peggy Onstatt Baugh, 50, of Grand Prairie, to be released on her own recognizance.

Railroad files suit against building firm

EASTLAND (AP) — A flurry of lawyers seeking clients in the aftermath of last week's train derailment has led the Missouri Pacific Railroad to file suit against the construction company whose truck ran into the train, railroad officials say.

The company filed suit in Eastland County's state district court Tuesday, just four days after the fiery wreck sent six people to the hospital and forced the evacuation of more than 1,000, MPR spokesman Mark Davis said Wednesday.

The wreckage burned for days after a tank truck struck the second engine of a Missouri Pacific freight train at a crossing Friday morning. Hazardous chemicals that leaked from a damaged rail car forced the evacuations, police said.

The crossing was protected by flashing red warning signals that were operating at the time of the accident, Davis said.

Missouri Pacific's suit alleges that negligent acts contributed to the accident and seeks unspecified damages from B.C. Construction Co. of Ranger; its owner, Bob Carroll; and Gaylon Nelms, the truck's driver.

Nelms remained in serious condition at Hendrick Medical Center in Abilene Wednesday with first- and second-degree burns over 20 percent of his body, authorities said.

Davis said Missouri Pacific, a subsidiary of Union Pacific Railroad, decided to file suit after determining that attorneys from outside the Eastland area were seeking to represent potential damage claimants.

He said some of those attorneys might try to have any claims arising out of the incident resolved in courts outside the Eastland area.

STATE IN BRIEF

Texas Electric customers face higher summer rates

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Power & Light and Texas Power & Light customers will be billed an additional 55 cents per 1,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity from June through September, Texas Utilities Electric Co. officials said.

The fee will pay for electricity produced and sold to TUEC by Dow Chemical Co. in Freeport, officials said Tuesday. The utility plans to buy the power to help carry it through the peak summer demand.

The 55-cent charge will be added for each 1,000 kilowatt-hours used in the coming months, officials said.

Joan Hunter, a TUEC spokeswoman, said a typical residential customer averages 1,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity per month over 12 months, although summer usage can be higher.

Customers of DP&L, TP&L and Texas Electric Service Co. — all divisions of TUEC — will pay the additional cost when they begin receiving power in June under the utility's first co-generation project.

County bows to jail order

HOUSTON (AP) — Harris County commissioners say a federal judge's order to increase staffing at the county jail has them "over a barrel" and could force them to raise taxes next year.

U.S. District Judge Carl Bue on Friday held county officials in contempt of court for failing to follow his order last December requiring them to come up with a plan to increase jail staffing.

County Judge Jon Lindsay vowed last week to fight the ruling and contempt citation. But commissioners on Tuesday approved plans to begin hiring more guards.

Bue levied a $25,000 fine against the county that will be refunded once officials implement a staffing plan. The county must submit a draft of the plan to Bue by June 7 and provide $30,000 to hire monitors to see that it is enforced.

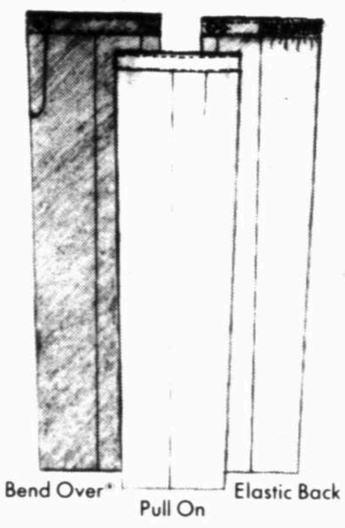

Youths damage mall

EL PASO (AP) — A crowd of 200 to 300 youths threw rocks and broke windows at the Northgate shopping mall during a power failure, police said.

A car struck a power pole near the northeast El Paso mall at about 9:50 p.m. Tuesday, cutting power in the area for about 40 minutes, police said.

Police Sgt. Alfred Lowe said the crowd of youths gathered in the dark and began throwing rocks, breaking windows at the Circle K convenience store.

Day care gives children an edge in educational skills, study shows

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Children given day care in their own homes or in another's home lag in social and educational skills behind children going to organized day care centers and nursery schools, a new study shows.

"Children attending nursery school programs scored consistently higher across the board," Alison Clarke-Stewart of the University of California at Irvine said this week.

"In terms of developmental differences, these children were 6 to 9 months advanced over children in home care," she said.

One hundred-fifty children between the ages of two and four were tested for such things as interaction with their mothers, strangers and peers; confidence, playfulness and assertiveness, and language abilities and memory span, Ms. Clarke-Stewart said.

Her study was one of several studies of day care presented at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

A study by Kathleen McCartney of Harvard University suggested that children's sociability, language skills and intelligence were most developed in day care centers with experienced directors, a high ratio of staff to children, and ample opportunity for the staff to interact individually with children.

Deborah Vandell of the University of Texas-Dallas in Richardson found evidence that many third-grade students who came home to an empty house — the so-called latchkey children whose parents are working — seemed to do as well as those children who came home to their mothers.

"These results do suggest that the latchkey experience is not inevitably the negative we previously thought it to be," Ms. Vandell said.

The studies are part of the second wave of day-care research, Ms. Clarke-Stewart said. The first studies were intended to find out whether day care was as good as traditional care by a child's mother. The new studies are looking more closely at different kinds of day care.

"For reasons of economic and personal necessity, fully half of the mothers of pre-school children in this country are already using some form of day care for their children," she said. "For these parents, the important question is not 'What is the effect of day care?' but 'How can we provide our child with the best possible day care environment?' "

Her study was part of a project she began 10 years ago called the Chicago Study of Child Care and Development.

The new study did reveal one exception to the developmental advantage of nursery schools and day care centers: Children in day care in a babysitter's home were more eager than any others to play with an unfamiliar child.

Presumably this was because these children have more chances than others for social interaction with peers, Ms. Clarke-Stewart said.

She said her study does not mean that "putting children in a well-equipped center with a well-educated teacher and a small class of mature, responsive children will automatically promote their development."

Chinese resort separates 'somebodies' from 'everybodies'

BEIDAIHE, China (AP) — Anybody who is somebody in China vacations at this beach resort, but the somebodies don't mix with the everybodies.

China's 80-year-old leader, Deng Xiaoping himself, has a villa here but the closest an ordinary anybody gets to it is a "No Visitors" sign at a People's Liberation Army guard post.

Separate beaches, walled compiexes and armed guards make it unlikely that a visitor will run into Deng or other leaders casting for driftwood on the shore.

It's pretty much been that way since the emperors of the Han dynasty started coming here 2,000 years ago.

But still the somebodies share the popular east coast resort with model workers, arthritis sufferers and even bikini-clad foreigners — people who are somebodies in one way or another.

Deng is said to spend three weeks every summer in the resort with a year-round population of 17,000.

He swims up to 90 minutes and 1,000 yards a day, one official magazine said. His bridge partner, Vice Premier Wan Li, is another regular.

Most Chinese come here for one- or two-week vacations at the state's expense, but foreigners pay about $13 a night for a room in one of 50 villas nestled among pine and cypress trees on the Gulf of Bohai.

"Different ministries have their own villas," said one Chinese official. "The sanatariums are for model workers, senior cadres and those in weak health."

Starting this year, those entitled to a week at Beidaihe but too busy to come will get $35 in compensation, he said.

The modern resort opened for foreign entrepreneurs and envoys in the 1890s, when cabaret and golf were among the amusements. Vacationers still can eat pastries at Kiesling's, an old Austrian bakery. The European architecture shows its age but survives.

On a recent weekend, 50 blue-uniformed prisoners arrived by police bus for a day's outing along the windy promenade, where souvenirs include seashell peacocks and fake pearls.

Two honeymooning couples from a Peking factory sat on fishermen's dinghies watching three-foot waves near Tiger Rocks, while Mao-jacketed cadres with black plastic satchels roamed the shallow beach in search of shellfish.

A party of Peking hotel workers paid their own way for a four-day break.

"Normally we work together, so we came here to play together," said a young woman in jeans, with fashionable sunglasses dangling from the top of her white casual jacket.

In a pre-season rush, construction crews have been renovating Kiesling's, building multistory hotels and blasting rock to lay sewage pipe.

White Russians once frequented the Western Hill Hotel compound, now run by the Peking International Club. It serves local crab and prawns and has a barber shop, massage clinic, billiards and table tennis.

Tax rates predicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's explanation of the president's plan for overhauling the income tax system uses figures that make difficult to determine how a typical taxpayer would be affected.

The plan refers to "economic income," which includes not only wages but moving expenses, contributions to and interest from Individual Retirement Accounts, employer-paid fringe benefits, federal welfare payments, Social Security, unemployment compensation, food stamps, the appreciated value of property, and the "rental" value that a homeowner receives from living in his or her own home.

Here is how the percentage of total income taxes paid by each group under current law would compare with the president's plan:

Income	Now	Reagan
Under $10,000	0.5	0.3
$10,000-15,000	1.8	1.5
$15,000-20,000	3.3	3.0
$20,000-30,000	10.3	10.1
$30,000-50,000	24.3	24.4
$50,000-100,000	32.7	33.7
$100,000-200,000	12.3	12.7
$200,000 plus	14.8	14.3

Democrats turn wary eye on tax plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats on Capitol Hill are welcoming President Reagan's call for a streamlining of the income tax and reduction in rates with open arms but reserving a wary eye for some of the specifics.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., praised the president Wednesday "for embracing the fundamental principle" of reforming "our loophole-ridden tax laws." He said, however, that the plan "makes unwarranted concessions to some special interests."

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., declared that the proposal would meet "the fairness test" only if the administration "changes its tune" and helps middle-class taxpayers. Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., promised Democratic support if the proposal "is a gift horse for working Americans."

"But if it is a Trojan horse for special interests, we will be the first to expose it," Hart said in a statement as lawmakers reacted to Reagan's nationally televised remarks Tuesday night on behalf of his proposal.

In the House, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., who followed Reagan onto television to urge broad support for tax reform, was already starting hearings on the package in his Ways and Means Committee.

But the plan to condense from 14 to three the number of brackets, eliminate key deductions and cut rates ran into new opposition among Republicans. Sen. William V. Roth, R-Del., joined his fellow tax-cut crusader, Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., in condemning the proposal.

"I cannot support a tax plan that, even in the name of reform, raises taxes on 21 percent of the people in this country," Roth said, citing a figure his office said it received from the White House. "There is an urgent need for tax fairness and simplicity but not at the price of increasing taxes on the middle class."

"The administration tax theorists have turned the princely idea of tax reform into a frog," Roth added. Kemp had criticized the plan earlier.

House Minority Leader Robert H. Michel, R-Ill., however, called the proposal "the kind of tax system which represents what our nation is and what we strive to be."

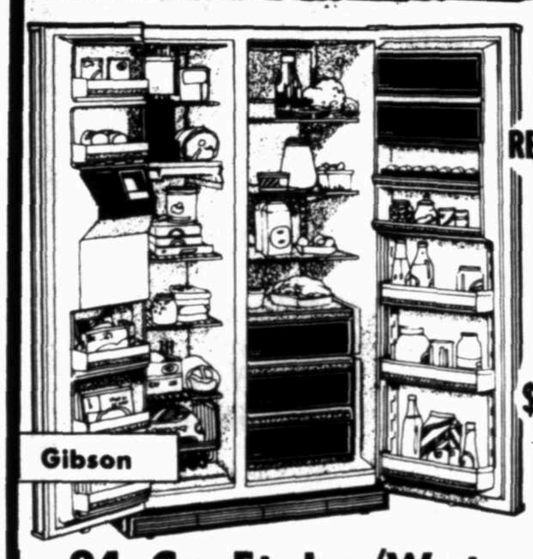

"It may be optimistic to assume we can conclude the process of moving this through both houses of Congress and have the final product on the president's desk by Christmas, but our very best efforts should be directed toward this goal," Michel said.

Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., had said following Reagan's speech Tuesday night that, "with luck, we will have a bill on the president's desk by Christmas."

Defense says 'Sunny' imposed coma, prosecution rests case

New York Times News Service

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Claus von Bulow's chief lawyer told the jury Wednesday that Martha "Sunny" von Bulow, whom he portrayed as addicted to drugs and depressed by her husband's infidelity, had brought on herself the two comas her husband is accused of causing.

Von Bulow

"She did what she did to herself, by her own hand," the lawyer, Thomas P. Puccio, said as the defense began presenting its version of the events that have left Mrs. von Bulow, a multimillionaire New York and Newport socialite, in what her doctors say is a permanent coma. The state charges that her husband caused the comas by injecting her with insulin in December 1979 and December 1980 because he wanted to kill her.

Although the prosecutors formally rested their case Wednesday, 34 days after their first witness took the stand, they continued an effort to tell the jury that von Bulow would have inherited $14 million if his wife had died.

On Tuesday, Judge Corinne P. Grande barred testimony about the terms of Mrs. von Bulow's $75 million estate, and Wednesday State Attorney General Arlene Violet came to the Providence County Courthouse saying she was demanding, through her prosecutors, an explanation of the ruling.

But Judge Grande refused to elaborate on her decision in public, and Miss Violet, leaving the courtroom, declined additional comment. In open court, Judge Grande left open the possibility that the state could introduce the terms of the will if a defense witness or a prosecution rebuttal witness made the issue relevant.

Von Bulow, 58 years old, was indicted on two counts of attempted murder after an investigation started by his stepchildren found a black bag of drugs, needle and syringe in his closet in the family's Newport mansion.

A jury in that resort city convicted him in 1982, but the state Supreme Court overturned the verdict, holding that some of the investigation notes should have been given to the defense and that some of the results of tests on the drugs in the bag should not have been admitted as evidence.

Puccio's 45-minute opening statement concentrated on two themes: that drinking and drug use left Mrs. von Bulow vulnerable to going into a coma and that the medical tests were so unreliable that they did not prove any insulin had been injected.

Baptists to affirm women equals in sight of God

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A resolution aimed at softening language on the ministry of women in the Southern Baptist Convention has been submitted to the denomination's executive committee for consideration at next month's national meeting, officials say.

The resolution expresses "appreciation for dedicated Christian women" and affirms that "every believer is equal at the foot of the Cross," said Reginald McDonough, an executive committee staff member.

At last year's annual meeting in Kansas City, delegates approved a resolution opposing the ordination of women that included a statement saying "woman was first in the Edenic fall."

As for last year's action, the new resolution says a "statement is being widely circulated that many feel implies that womankind is responsible for the Edenic fall, thus placing a burden on women, including Christian women, for the fall of man."

But it does not mention the issue of women's ordination and does not condemn the statement labeling woman as the first sinner.

There about 300 women among the convention's 36,000 ordained ministers, officials estimate.

The issue of women's ministry has been part of a struggle between conservative and moderate factions within the 14 million-member denomination.

Conservatives hold that women shouldn't been ordained according to the New Testament. Moderates claim the New Testament does not rule out ordination for women.

Hussein: PLO will negotiate with Israel

Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — King Hussein of Jordan, using language that U.S. officials said could open the way for the United States to talk to the Palestine Liberation Organization, told President Reagan Wednesday that the PLO is prepared to negotiate with Israel on terms that recognize its right to exist.

In an important concession to Hussein, administration officials indicated that the United States might end its objections to his call for new peace talks under the "umbrella" of an international conference including the Soviet Union. Until now, the U.S. position has been that Soviet participation would not be helpful.

Hussein said he had the approval of the PLO for his announcement, including an endorsement from the PLO's Central Council Wednesday in Tunis.

He called for peace negotiations between Israel and a joint Jordanian-Palestinian delegation on the basis of U.N. Security Council Resolutions 242 and 338, which assure Israel's right to exist within secure boundaries. The PLO has previously balked at accepting the resolutions or making an explicit acceptance of Israel's right to exist.

It was not immediately clear whether Hussein's commitment on behalf of the PLO would lead to a breakthrough in the long-stymied effort to launch Arab-Israeli talks. The United States refuses to deal with the PLO until it accepts the U.N. resolutions, acknowledges Israel's right to exist and renounces the use of terrorism.

Reagan publicly reserved judgment on Hussein's proposal.

"We have made it very plain that nothing has changed those conditions under which we would meet with the PLO," Reagan said. And a senior U.S. official, who spoke with reporters later, stressed that the PLO would have to affirm explicitly the commitment made by Hussein on its behalf.

But U.S. officials regarded Hussein's comments as a potentially significant development. The senior official told reporters, "I think you have heard a significant statement which was fully coordinated by the PLO leadership." Another U.S. official added, "What the king said moves the PLO pretty far along toward the conditions long set by the United States."

Jordan's King Hussein holds a press conference with President Reagan on the White House lawn Wednesday.

Third man arrested in Navy spy case

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — A former Navy officer with "secret" clearance admitted joining a spy ring that included his brother and nephew and confessed that he was paid $12,000 for confidential information going to the Soviet Union, the FBI said.

Arthur James Walker, 50, was arrested at his Virginia Beach home Wednesday night without incident, the FBI said. He was to appear today before U.S. Magistrate Gilbert R. Swink Jr. in Norfolk.

John Anthony Walker Jr., 47, a retired Navy communications specialist and Arthur Walker's brother, and John Walker's son, Michael, a seaman aboard the carrier Nimitz, were formally indicted on espionage charges Tuesday by a federal grand jury in Baltimore. They were arrested last week.

Officials have called the case one of the most serious breaches of Navy security in history.

Arthur Walker admitted during questioning last Friday that "on a number of occasions, beginning in approximately September 1980," he had turned over to his brother U.S. Navy defense plans for delivery to the Soviet Union, according to an FBI affidavit.

Arthur Walker was paid $12,000 for the material he provided, said the FBI affidavit, filed late Wednesday in U.S. District Court in Norfolk.

The retired Navy lieutenant commander whose expertise was in submarines and anti-submarine warfare carried a "top secret" security clearance while in the Navy and still holds a "secret" clearance for his work with a defense contractor, the FBI said.

The FBI said Arthur Walker worked as an engineer for the Chesapeake branch of VSE Corp., a defense contractor that does business with the Navy. His work at VSE involved "United States Navy carrier and ship maintenance planning," the FBI said.

Attorneys for the John Walker and Michael Walker have said the two would plead innocent.

According to the FBI affidavit, Arthur Walker "admitted that on a number of occasions, beginning in approximately September, 1980, he turned over to his brother, John Anthony Walker Jr., documents, files, photographs, booklets and defense plans relating to United States Naval forces, knowing that John Anthony Walker Jr., intended to deliver or transmit these items to 'the Russians.'"

Members of Arthur Walker's family declined to talk to reporters Wednesday night.

Follow instincts

Anyone experienced in trying to get anything accomplished by a committee can appreciate the frustration President Reagan must face in dealing with the Congress where foreign policy is concerned. There are times when it seems that everyone on the committee has a different idea about what should be done.

So when the president showed his frustration recently by declaring, "We have got to get where we can run a foreign policy without a committee of 535 telling us what we can do," he was enunciating one of the greatest drawbacks to this form of government.

Of course, there's a reason that the two lawmaking bodies have both a right and an obligation to slow any president down on foreign policy matters: It's too easy for a chief executive to get this nation too deeply involved in foreign matters before the American people have been consulted.

While the inherent "slow motion" proceedings of consulting Congress on foreign policy matters may create roadblocks and detours in certain instances, in others they're definitely beneficial.

This coin, however, has two faces. The lawmakers, particularly in the House, seem to be guided more by political motivations than concern for the country in thwarting President Reagan's Latin-American policies. Reagan, on the other hand, has a better sense of the American people's opposition to the creation of any more Communist strongholds in the Western Hemisphere and has often been proved right. No sooner had the Congress rejected Reagan's pleas for minimal assistance to the Nicaraguan freedom fighters than the Sandinista chief went to Russia and secured major help for putting down the resistance.

In a lot of instances, Congress appears to be listening too closely to the street demonstrators opposing the president's policies rather than following what should be their instincts. The protesters may be more vocal and visible than ordinary citizens but they do not speak for the majority of Americans any more than did the anti-Vietnam War rioters did.

Those serving in the Congress are supposed to look to the best interests of this nation as a whole. Sometimes it appears that the lawmakers are forgetting their responsibilities.

Another View:

Heartbreak Lebanon

Lebanon is less a country than a heartbreak. Its conflicts seem not only beyond cure but even beyond understanding.

When last we read of Christian militiamen slaughtering Palestinians there in 1982, Israel's occupying army was held responsible, even by Israelis. Now Shiite Moslem militiamen are butchering Palestinians in the same camps, Sabra and Chatilla, and the world just shrugs. The Christian-led government has all but evaporated. Lebanon's Syrian protectors accuse a former ally, Yasser Arafat, of provoking the slaughter to get back at rival Palestinians.

Lebanon is being cut by a hundred knives, rent by a thousand vendettas. Terror is random. Last week, 50 people were killed and 175 wounded by a car-bomb in Christian east Beirut. No one is sure who did it, or why. Lebanon has ceased, by any plausible definition, to be a nation.

Until 1982, Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization provided a shadowy government in tense competition with Syrian forces and Israeli-aided Lebanese. Israel smashed this order, but Moslems and Syrians combined to block the Christians it sponsored. French and American troops, too, were chased out by the terror, and though the Syrians remain they are plainly not in command.

These ghastly divisions were inherent in Lebanon's origins. France shaped its borders after the the collapse of the Ottoman Empire in 1920. Thrown together in the new state were Maronite Christians on Mount Lebanon, the Moslem and Druse communities of the coastal regions and the Moslems of the Bekaa, the eastern valley, who probably would have preferred to join the then new Syria.

Under foreign tutelage in the 1930s, a constitutional republic evolved with a tradition of power sharing. The president had to be a Maronite Christian, the prime minister a Sunni Moslem, the chairman of Parliament a Shiite Moslem, the defense minister a Druse. But gradually, demographics unsettled this arrangement. The Moslem populations grew, yet Christians tenaciously dominated commerce and government. The rival factions formed their own private armies and progressively challenged the center in Beirut. A full-scale civil war erupted in the 1970s, magnified by the influx of Palestinians expelled from Jordan.

Syria intervened in 1976, with the Arab League's blessing, but it could only play the factions against each other. Israel intervened in 1982, allegedly to disarm the Palestinians but actually to try to restore the Christian dominance. In the shadows, there arose yet another army, the Islamic Holy War terrorists, inspired and perhaps directed from Iran.

Sectarian and family feuds engendered by all this violence have made even simple ceasefires impossible. A once thriving economy has been destroyed. The wealthiest and ablest Lebanese have long since fled. The United Nations and a few other agencies dispense humanitarian aid and medical help, but no law now governs in that unhappy land. It has swallowed all foreign illusions, most recently the strategic interests that a series of American presidents proclaimed until just two years ago. Lebanon is more a memory than a society.

ART BUCHWALD

Defense Department is changing

The trouble in the Defense Department (and who says there is any trouble in the Defense Department?) is that as our weapons become more sophisticated they take longer and longer to produce. Therefore, the person in the Pentagon who originally came up with the idea is no longer there, and the project has gone through dozens of teams and many different lives before it is ready for combat.

Art Buchwald

Take the SCM Mark 89. Back in the 1950s the Army wanted a scout car motor vehicle, which in effect was a motorcycle with a sidecar.

The idea for a new scout bike was thought up by Lt. Harold Doggett, who is now a retired general in Sarasota, Fla.

"Do you remember being the project officer on the SCM?" I asked him on the phone.

He thought hard. "Seems to me I had something to do with it. The scout bikes from World War II were obsolete and I went to the Harley-Davidson people and asked them to come up with a design. When I left we were hassling over the price. They were asking $500 for each one and I was trying to knock them down to $450."

"Then you left before it got off the drawing boards?"

"Yes, I did. I turned it over to a Maj. Art Hammond, and that's the last I heard of it. I believe he's out in Arizona at Sun City."

I tracked Art Hammond down.

"Sir," I said. "I understand that you were involved with an SCM scout motorbike that the Army was building."

"That wasn't a motorbike. The only SCM I remember was an $8,000 four-wheel-drive semi-personnel carrier. I stayed with it for three years, and then I was transferred to Hawaii."

"You don't remember who took charge of the project after you?"

"Col. Jeffries or Joffrey. Not too sure of the guy's name, but he wound up heading the Lackadaisical Defense Company that was going after the contract."

Jeffries was also retired when I found him on his boat in the Chesapeake Bay. He recalled the SCM well. "We never did go into production with the SCM because the Army decided instead of a semi-personnel vehicle it wanted an all-weather tank. So we tore up the plans and started from scratch. Then I retired from the service and Brig. Gen. Tommy Wuggenheimer headed the project team. He was really hot on the SCM and had Congress convinced the Army couldn't do without it. Wuggenheimer insisted the SCM have radar on top of it and the capacity to float on water. We told them we could build it for $500,000 each, and they were about to sign the order when Wuggenheimer was sent to Vietnam and replaced by Lt. Gen. 'Swede' Ruffles.

"Swede was the top helicopter pilot in the Army and he decided the SCM would have to fly. So he brought in a helicopter company as a co-contractor, and we worked for 10 years trying to get the thing off the ground. We were up to $2.5 million when Swede was relieved by Gen. Archie Toland, an engineer, who not only wanted the SCM to carry airborne personnel, do the work of a tank and have the ability of a helicopter but also perform as a bulldozer. We said it could be done for $10 million each."

"In all the years you worked on the SCM did anyone ever mention that it originally was supposed to be a scout bike with a sidecar to transport a lieutenant and his aide?"

Jeffries said, "What would the Army want with a motorcycle that could only transport two people?"

JACK ANDERSON

FBI misled Senate committee

WASHINGTON — Slowly but inexorably, evidence is coming to light that shows how seriously FBI officials misled the Senate Labor Committee in 1981 on the relationship between an alleged mobster and the construction company headed by Raymond Donovan, then awaiting confirmation as Labor secretary.

Jack Anderson

During Donovan's stormy confirmation hearings, FBI officials in charge of the background investigation deliberately withheld from the senators information gleaned from 892 tapes of phone conversations. These were secretly recorded in 1979 during a massive FBI operation known as "TUMCON."

The Senate, having been deceived about both the existence and the content of the wiretap evidence, confirmed Donovan.

Last year Donovan was indicted by a New York grand jury on the basis of evidence on 51 of the TUMCON tapes.

The main reason FBI officials gave for keeping the Senate in the dark was that disclosure would have endangered the bureau's key informant in the TUMCON investigation. But after studying nearly 20 pounds of FBI affidavits and tapes that were withheld from the Senate, our associate Tony Capaccio has determined that the FBI informant was involved in virtually none of the contacts. When alleged mob figure William Masselli dealt with the Schiavone Construction Co., the FBI informant was not involved.

Groping like blind men, Senate committee members asked FBI officials about the suspected Masselli-Schiavone relationship — only to be reassured that there had been "very, very limited contact" or "some contact but nothing that I would consider significant." One FBI official said wiretaps dating back to 1969 had been reviewed, and that "we located no reference to Mr. Donovan or Schiavone Construction Co."

Yet Donovan's own attorneys, who are trying to get the TUMCON tapes disallowed as evidence against their client, have stated in court that Donovan or other company executives were mentioned 351 times in the 1979 tapes.

Here are some excerpts from the tapes that might have been of considerable interest to the Senate in considering Donovan's appointment:

— In early 1979, according to an FBI agent's affidavit quoting from the tapes, "Masselli discussed 'Schiavone' and the fact that 'we got a little connection with some people in Jersey.... Whatever (contracts) they can give, we — we're gonna have ... first crack at.... If 10 guys go to bid with them, he'll tell me, "Here's the 10 bids. Can you beat them?" That's how close we are.'"

— During another taped conversation, according to an FBI affidavit, Masselli called a Schiavone executive and "spoke with him about sending trucks to City Island with 'Patty.'" The reference was to Patty Simonetti, son-in-law of the late Mafia godfather Vito Genovese.

— Numerous times during the TUMCON investigation, Masselli was taped in discussions of a bribery scheme to get a dumping permit — and some of the discussions were with a Schiavone executive. "While no money will change hands until the dumping," an FBI agent explained in an affidavit, "Masselli is virtually assured of his right to dump and thus the success of the bribery scheme."

During one phone call to a Schiavone executive, Masselli said, "The thing went through on the dump and passed the board," according to the affidavit, which adds: "Masselli stated that he had the guy from the (Army) Corps of Engineers, and that his person could get the application (for the dumping permit) through."

In this same conversation, the FBI agent noted, Masselli said that "activities necessary to this possible success will continue while he obtains certain agency letters of approval."

TERRORIST WATCH: Intelligence sources, who keep a watch on Libya's Muammar Khadafy, say he appears to be dangerously paranoid, obsessed with the idea that the CIA is trying to kill him.

Khadafy's mood reportedly alternates between morbid silence and bellicose rage. If his outbursts are to be taken seriously, he intends to lash back at his CIA tormentors in ways that will be dramatic, shocking and punitive.

Apparently he has revolutionaries scattered around the world who have been fired with rhetorical zeal and respond to his ravings. They are quite capable of carrying out his wild commands.

WATCH ON WASTE: The taxpayers shell out $9.3 million annually for mining research and training. According to the latest statistics, this helped 1,317 students in 1982 get their mining degrees. Yet the Society of Mining Engineers was able to find only one company that had a job opening.

PERSONAL: Intimates confide that the late President John F. Kennedy's son, John Jr., wanted to be an actor but was determined not to trade on his father's name.

His mother, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, counseled that any success he gained as an actor would be attributed to the fact that he's the son of a president.

So John Jr. decided to devote his life to helping the underprivileged — first in Africa, then in India. His mother pleaded with him to come home; so now he's working quietly with the poor in New York City.

GEORGE F. WILL

Away with the American 'elites'!

WASHINGTON — Talk of accelerated depreciation is on every tongue, except those tongues talking about some other aspect of tax reform. Reform, spreading fear in gilded mansions and hope among toiling masses, has the public's attention.

George F. Will

Or, more precisely, it has the publics' attention. Note the placement of the apostrophe, which tells the essential truth of American politics. On an issue like tax reform, the public (definite article, "the") is a fiction. There are lots of little publics with rival interests. Another problem is that the tax-reform drive opens with a dubious moral pronouncement and a suspect empirical claim.

The moral point is that "the public" believes the tax system is unfair and the public's perception must be accommodated. Actually, polls show that the "unfairness" of the system is a low-intensity grievance. Besides, unhappiness about the tax system is being assiduously cultivated, not least by Republicans eager to change the subject from the deficit to ... well, anything.

The empirical claims is that a flat(er), simple(r) tax with business taxes increased will facilitate growth. That may be true, but no one can know that it is, and recent events — the close conjunction of tax cuts and mushrooming deficits — should have administration prophets feeling chastened.

Some Republicans think their tax reform will stimulate growth because that is the way the world works, assuming that God was reading the right economics text when he designed the world. That is, the economy should work best when government works least at influencing the flow of forces, using a finely tuned tax code.

Many Republicans deplore "people who view the tax as a means of advancing changes in our social structure." Those words were in a speech delivered by a private citizen, in 1964, in support of Barry Goldwater. Ronald Reagan has gone on saying that. (In 1981: The tax power "must not be used to regulate the economy or bring about social change.") He will go on saying it as he praises a tax plan that includes tuition tax credits to improve the educational system, special tax treatment of businesses in "enterprise zones," special rates to encourage small businesses, provisions to nurture energy supplies, increased personal exemptions justified as "family policy," and so on.

Let social goals influence tax policy? Heaven forfend. But it is possible to view the proposal to end the deductibility of state and local taxes as the second punch in the one-two of Reaganism.

The first punch was the 1981 vote for tax cuts which shrank the revenue base of the federal government. This produced a dangerous economic fact, the deficits, and a stunning political result: It changed the political conversation of the country, perhaps for a generation. This year's House and Senate budget resolutions differ about many things, but not about the central thing. They agree that the issue is not whether but where to cut spending.

Reagan altered the federal agenda by shrinking federal resources, and now he proposes to restrain state and local government by altering a line in the federal tax code. Ending the deductibility of state and local taxes will increase the real burden of those taxes on payers. This will alter the taxing and spending environment in which state and local politicians operate.

The administration will defend in terms of economic efficiency the proposal to increase the tax burden on business. But the proposal involves political calculation and failure of nerve. It would take uncommon nerve to act on Reagan's reiterated and correct belief that, because we do not know who pays business taxes, they might well be abolished. Anyway, "populism," which is suddenly in vogue, involves saying General Motors must pay its "fair share" so grandma can pay less.

Liberals traditionally talk as though they can pluck from thin air the indisputable truth about the "fairness" of everything. Conservatives should not compete on that field. Rather, they should earn respect by results born of realism. But "populist conservatism" is the wave of the future, this week. Populism historically involves impatience with complexity, suspicion of big institutions and big people, and reverence for whatever "the people" are thought to believe this week. So "populist conservatism" is an oxymoron.

Treasury Secretary James Baker recently told an audience that tax reform is rooted in populism, which is "opposed to elitism, opposed to excessive concentrations of power and oriented toward fairness." Baker's call to egalitarianism was well received by his audience, the Houston Chamber of Commerce, which peered under the tables and behind the potted palms to make sure no elites were lurking.

NATION in brief

Turner's CNN & Soviets agree to share news

ATLANTA (AP) — Turner Broadcasting System, which owns the 24-hour Cable News Network, says CNN will be able to exchange news and journalists with the Soviet Union under a new agreement.

"CNN becomes the first American news organization to be affiliated directly with Intervision," the Eastern bloc consortium of television systems, the Atlanta-based broadcasting system announced Wednesday.

TBS Chairman Ted Turner signed the one-year agreement in Moscow this week with Sergei Lapin, chairman of the USSR State Committee for Television and Radio. The agreement calls for the two parties to act "in the spirit of friendship and goodwill to further international television cooperation."

Besides news and journalists, the two television systems will be able to exchange entertainment programs, the announcement said. They also will cooperate on a six-hour documentary, "Portrait of the Soviet Union."

Chemicals spill at studio

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A hazardous chemical spilled early today in a film processing plant at Universal Studios, and 27 people were hospitalized with respiratory complaints, officials said.

Many of the 39 injured had tried to clean up the chemical that poured from a 55-gallon drum about 1:53 a.m. at the Technicolor building, said county fire dispatcher Richard Clayton.

"The ones who actually cleaned it up got the worst exposure," said fire Capt. Harrol Fullbright. "They became drowsy and sleepy, but no one actually lost consciousness."

Doctor blamed for pain

ST. JOHN, Ind. (AP) — A man whose shooting rampage killed three people and wounded five others was a drug-taking weapons enthusiast who had threatened to kill the doctor he thought responsible for a back problem that cost him his job, police said.

James Koslow, 31, was shot and killed by police Tuesday across the street from the K mart shopping center where he sprayed a crowd of shoppers with bullets from a semi-automatic rifle.

Koslow had sought treatment for a back injury at a hospitalwhere he believed his injury was worsened, and he hadbeen taking drugs to relieve his pain, said Detective Bernie Johnsen.

Shortly before the shooting spree,police said Koslow spray-painted on the garage of his family's home in St. John:

"Malpractice. You're trying to hide what you did. Liberty and justice to all."

Teen-ager shot on trip

CENTRAL CITY, Colo. (AP) — A teen-ager shot to death in the dark while apparently attempting to scare a camping companion by making animal noises failed to respond to a call to identify himself, officials said.

Ronald Lee Brownlee, 27, of Cleveland, was arrested for investigation of manslaughter in connection with the Sunday night shooting of the unidentified youth, Gilpin County Undersheriff David Martinez said Tuesday.

The group attempted to get help for the injured youth, but their car broke down in the mountains, Ron Foster, chief deputy district attorney, said.

Student admits stabbing

COLUMBUS, Miss. (AP) — A judge warned a 16-year-old girl who admitted she stabbed her school principal in the back with a letter opener that he would impose an eight-year sentence if she violated terms of probation ordered in the case.

"This is the only chance you're going to get in this court and I hope you make good on it," Circuit Judge Harvey Buck told Betty Stone on Tuesday.

Tribe violated, judge says

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — The federal government's failure to address potential effects on the Northern Cheyenne Indian Tribe of the sale of federal coal rights violated several environmental laws and the federal government's responsibility to the tribe, a judge said.

U.S. District Judge James Battin on Wednesday declared void the 1982 sale of rights to 363.3 million tons of coal in southeastern Montana's Powder River Basin, part of the largest sale of federal coal rights in history.

Temperature won't cool very much

From Staff and Wire Reports

Temperatures are expected to cool in the Midland area Friday — but not by much, according to forecasters at the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight will be fair with a low in the upper 60s, becoming hot Friday as temperatures reach near 102. Winds will be from the south at five to 15 mph through Friday.

Wednesday's high of 103 was one degree below the record set in 1938. This morning's low was 26 degrees above the 1937 record of 46.

STATE

A high-pressure system kept skies fair and temperatures warm across a large section of the Lone Star State today, while moist tropical air brought a blanket of low clouds to South Central and North Central Texas and the prospect of record highs.

Meanwhile, a low-pressure ridge extended from the eastern Panhandle to the Stockton Plateau under clear skies. Only some high-level cloudiness prevailed in the Trans Pecos region.

Low temperatures ranged from the 70s in most sections to the mid 60s in the Panhandle. Winds were southerly at 10 to 15 mph across the eastern two-thirds of the state and light and southwest over the Edwards Plateau and the High Plains.

Extreme temperatures were 69 degrees at El Paso and 80 at Abilene. Other readings at 5 a.m. were 72 at Lubbock, San Antonio, Stephenville and Austin; 74 at Midland and Brownsville; 78 at Waco and San Angelo; and 77 at Wichita Falls.

NATION

Thunderstorms spread across the nation from the Plains to the Mississippi Valley today while high winds hit broad sections of the West.

A severe thunderstorm watch was in effect in southeast Nebraska, north central and northeast Kansas, southwestern Iowa and northwestern Missouri.

Showers and thunderstorms were moving across the central Plains, the Great Lakes region and the lower Mississippi Valley.

Strong thunderstorms hit northern Kansas and pelted the Belleville area with golfball-sized hail, the National Weather Service said.

Rain was scattered from the northern Pacific Coast across the central Rockies.

Escape to Lajitas and enjoy the trip

By Gigi McKinney
Advertising Feature Writer

From time to time, I have heard people say they had found the "perfect hideaway." I always found that to be a corny way of saying that they had spent an enjoyable weekend, no matter what the location.

Well, after a weekend in Lajitas, I happy realized I was very wrong!

Lajitas, located 70 miles south of Alpine and one mile north of the Mexican border, is neatly tucked away in the western edge of Big Bend National Park on the water's edge of the Rio Grande River.

This sleepy little town has come alive in the past few years. Since the Mischer Corporation of Houston began developing the land in and around Lajitas, excitement in the amenities of the area runs wild.

Traveling down to the area can be an adventure in itself. My experienced traveling companions, Debbie Reid and her son Lucas, and I very nearly turned an easy 5 hour trip into a lost weekend. Next time we will remember to be more careful in watching for our highway turnoffs!

Once we did arrive, I fell in love at first sight. The rich flavor of the Old West created a first impression of would-be adventure and excitement for the three of us.

Located within the town of Lajitas is the Badlands Saloon, Hotel and Restaurant; gift and clothing stores; the Hotel Reservation Office; an attourney's office; the Lajitas Trading Post; two other motels; a church which was built in 1903 and a dancing area (the old West Texas kind – a covered concrete slab with a stage and concession stand).

After checking into our room (a new two bedroom condominium), we were off again to the Lajitas Museum and Desert Garden Center. There, we met Ray Duncan, the museum curator. His casual and conversational manner made us instantly feel at home.

Over a refreshing soft drink, we chatted in the research library.

"We've all worked very hard to make this area a one-of-a-kind place," Duncan said.

And their endeavors are obvious. Within the museum complex are several exhibit rooms.

The Western Room depicts life in te area during the late 1800's and early 1900's.

"This room focuses on a typical mining district house. We've included items in the exhibit, all of which are handmade," Duncan said.

On display in the gallery were photo portraits of Mexican males by artist Sally Chandler. The exhibit entitled, "Travel Texas", depicts Mexican males in casual settings.

The highlight of the tour for me was viewing the intricately detailed work in the Historical Dioramama Room, designed and completed by Duncan's wife, Cindy.

"Each diorama depicts a different era of the area. Cindy makes each figurine in the dioramas from candelilla, a wax taken from plants of this area," Duncan said.

"Each of these dioramas has taken anywhere from one week to one month for Cindy to complete. It all depends on how detailed the scene must be," Duncan continued.

Out on the patio which leads to the desert garden is the Founders' Wall. Duncan told us that each founder of the museum was allowed to design a pattern for his or her tile.

Below the ceramic tiles hangs a beautiful desert scene also made of these tiles. Together, the design covers nearly the entire wall.

Duncan emphasized that membership to the society has not been closed.

"We encourage new members, for more reasons than tax deductions," Duncan smiled.

He continued by saying that many "extras" are offered to museum society members including free tours of the museum, discounts on gift shop purchases, invitations to Lajitas events, and a membership to the quarterly newspaper.

"Another feature we offer to our members are guided trips within Mexico. These tours will be one-week to two-week seasonal excursions, hosted by Cindy or myself, to out-of-the-way places where our guests can experience the true Mexican culture," Duncan said.

These trips are offered to members only. But non-members will be able to go by buying a museum membership at a small fee.

From the museum Duncan escorted us to the golf course where we met the golf pro, Terry Thomas.

Also very friendly, Thomas easily joked, "Our greens are as good as anyone's in the state. If they don't believe us, they can come and see for themselves!"

But he wasn't joking about the beauty of this course. Wine grapes growing along the fairway were my favorite part of this tour!

Thomas told us he was gearing up for a big turnout for the July 4th Amateur Golf Tourney which Lajitas sponsors each year.

"We hope to draw an even larger crowd this year," Thomas said.

Moving on, we stopped in for a look at The Trading Post.

Believe this or not, the pride of the Post is a beer-drinking goat named Clay Henry. I thought I had seen some of my college friends put away a silver bullet. They wouldn't stand a chance alongside this bearded wonder! The goat is so popular among residents and tourists that the Post sells caps with his picture on them.

Now the local personality (of the human race!) is a resident along the river. He is affectionately called Suitcase Sam and wears the name well. His carefree attitude and slow-moving ways made him one of my favorites.

The next morning we decided to participate in a half-day float trip down the Rio Grande sponsored by Big Bend River Tours.

Our guide was Dr. Rob Dean, a graduate of Texas A&M in Wildlife and Fisheries.

And with a full load and passengers and "necessary luggage", we were one our way.

It was our good fortune to have along with us a family from Midland who made the trip a real success. Don and Nancy Smith, along with their two sons, Danny and David, "sailed" with us in fine style.

The view along the river was beautiful; so peaceful and quiet. As Rob guided the boat along, he relayed interesting stories of the area inserted with a few tall tales!

Since it was Mom's Day, Rob offered a special wine toast for the adults at the luncheon he generously prepared at the river's edge about halfway through the trip.

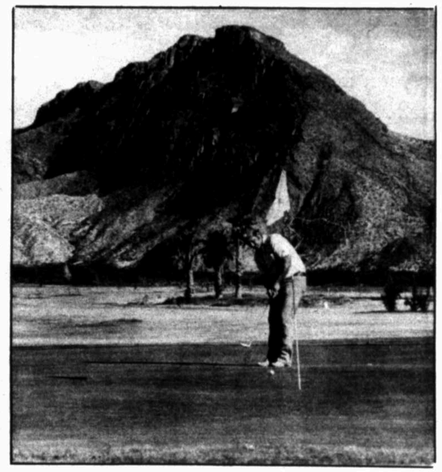

And with Nancy and I bathing in more sun screen, we were off once again. It seemed that just as we began, the float trip was over.

And with that, so was our getaway vacation.

But that will not be the end of my Lajitas excursions. I plan to go again and let someone else do the driving.

This time I plan to take the Lajitas Party Bus down which leaves each weekend from Midland for a small fee and offers loads of fun along the way.

See you in Lajitas!

Seek sun, sand and surf in Laguna Madre area

Down at the tip of Texas lies one of the fastest growing areas in the nation -- the Laguna Madre area. Surrounded by the waters of the Gulf of Mexico and the Laguna Madre Bay, the sister cities of Port Isabel and South Padre Island host hundreds of thousands of visitors annually who seek sun, sand and surf.

From the seemingly endless stretches of clean, sandy beaches to the modern day wonders of man, the Laguna Madre area has it all – history, cultural heritage, superb boating and fishing and a multitude of things to see and do.

The city of Port Isabel is richly deserving of its reputation as "the boating and fishing capitol of Texas."

Originally part of a Spanish land grant known as "El Fronton", the area was discovered by Spanish gold seekers as early as 1526 and its popularity as a vacation resort grew among wealthy Mexicans in the 1700's. Its military heritage is steeped in the historic battles staged here during the Mexican and Civil Wars and General Zachary Taylor, in 1846, changed the area's name to Fort Polk, honoring President James Polk. Following the present townsite was relocated to its present point of land jutting out into the Laguna Madre Bay.

Here, the Lighthouse, constructed in 1852, shone as a beacon to marine traffic and, for a number of years, the area thrived as a major commerce and marine traffic center. The historic Lighthouse was abandoned in 1905 and in 1952, was dedicated as Texas' smallest state park. Plans to expand the facility are now underway.

Today the waterways surrounding Port Isabel reflect the area's growth. A growing contingent of boating enthusiasts of all types – sailors, sportsfishermen and those who make their homes aboard the houseboats on the water – are discovering that the area has grown to meet their demands.

The Port Isabel of today is a harmonious blend of old and new, a city rapidly reaching its potential while preserving its heritage.

Just across the Queen Isabella Causeway, Texas' longest bridge, lies the vacation mecca of the Southwest – South Padre Island.

With a semi-tropical climate and average annual temperature of 73.6 degrees, South Padre Island's four and one-half miles of incorporated city limits are privately owned and adjoined by county parks on each end.

Located just 49 miles from the 100 fathom curve, a favorite fishing ground for serious bullfishermen, South Padre Island's appeal has always centered, to a large extent, around its aquatic appeal.

The Laguna Madre Bay and Gulf of Mexico waters offer unlimited opportunities for water enthusiasts to indulge in their favorite recreational activity; whether it be sailing, fishing, boating, sight-seeing, wind surfing or lazing on the beach.

Beachcombing is also a popular pasttime where seekers may unearth a bottle washed ashore containing treasures and trinkets from days gone by.

Recreational activities have also developed as the area gained in popularity as a primaary vacation resort. Family recreational facilities, such as Jeremiah's RiverRide, Ocean Safari and the Super Sub Movie Pub, have all evolved in direct response to visitor's needs, as have other amusement facilities and the many shops which offer sometimes unexpected buys.

Transportation is available throughout the area in the form of shuttle services, taxis, rental cars and mopeds. Group tours to neighboring Old Mexico and to scenic areas locally and in the Harlingen and Brownsville areas are also available at a nominal cost.

Whatever vacation needs anyone has, the South Padre Island area has it all – clean beaches, a variety of accommodations and shops to fit every pocketbook; and, plenty to see and do.

Nashville is Music City USA

When WSM Radio announcer, George D. Hay, hit upon the idea of a one-hour show each Saturday night over his station's airwaves featuring some downhome, toe tappin' music from local fiddler, little did he or anyone else realize that his idea would become the impetus for Nashville, Tennessee, to eventually -- and rightfully -- call itself "Music City, U.S.A."

For out of that humble start came the show that would become known soridwide as the Grand Ole Opry. And from the Grand Ole Opry would come dozens of spin-off attractions and businesses: Opryland Entertainment Park, The Country Music Hall of Fame, countless recording studios and many others.

And so ever since that first program in 1925, the Opry has always remained the foremost show in country music by presenting a cast of approximately 60 country music entertainers.

The opry presents one show on Friday nights and two shows on Saturday nights year round. All matinees are held at 3 p.m.

A descendant of Music City U.S.A., Opryland is a 120-acre musical entertainment park that emphasizes live musical productions. Known as "The Home of American Music," Opryland can have as many as 15 fully-staged shows in simultaneous production. The shows are complemented by 20 rides and adentures, including the Grizzly River Rampage, a rafting trip on Opryland's own white-water river. The rides and shows are complemented by numerous restaurants, games, shops, artists and craftsmen.

The most popular and informative attraction on Music Row is the Country Music Hall of Fame and Museum. Here visitors can not only see memorabilia of famous country music personalities, but can also learn the history of this truly American art form and its evolution to the world-wide popularity it enjoys today.

A computer-animated exhibit, depicting the history of Music Row, narrated by Dolly Parton, Waylon Jennings and Chet Atkins highlights a tour of RCA's famed Studio B where some of country music's greatest legends, such as Eddy Arnold, Hank Snow, Elvis Presley, Charlie Pride and Dolly Parton recorded their first hits. Visitors to Studio B have the opportunity to handle and play a variety of musical instruments and to try their hand at remixing a hit country song.

The Hall of Fame and Studio B are open daily year-round except for Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day.

Escape into worlds of fun in the Astrodomain of Houston

Houston – the Energy Capital of America and the fastest growing city in the nation, has a special ambiance of boom town vitality and international sophistication. It's where historical buildings of the 1800's stand in the shadows of gleaming, futuristic skyscrapers.

People in the latest Paris fashions mingle with those in western jeans and boots on Main Street. Houston is where one can find dense piney woods and wide open spaces, and the magnolias, camellias and azaleas of the semi-tropical Southland.

And no one has to reach for the stars to find great family entertainment in the nation's fastest growing city. Pleasure seekers can escape to a new world of family adventure within the Astrodomain, a network of recreational activity.

Called the Eighth Wonder of the World, the Astrodome was the first completely roofed, air-conditioned, all-purpose, all-weather stadium ever built. This gigantic structure is only part of the Astrodomain.

Glide gently through space on XLR-8, one of the newest additions to Astroworld. And for a family adventure like no other, experience whitewater rafting on Thunder River. If it's thrills the family is after, conquer the number one roller coaster in the world, the Texas Cyclone, or feel the sensation of falling off a 10-story building on Skyscreamer.

Then watch those Texas stars shine. See the famous rootin' tootin' cow folks in the animated Great Texas Longhorn Revue. Or Astroworld's spectacular fireworks display which lights up the summer sky nightly. During the summer visitors can watch the new Chinese Acrobats perform.

And designed especially for those hot summer days, visitors can splash into a whole new world of family fun right next door at WaterWorld, a 15-acre water recreation park. Surf's up at Breaker Beach with four-foot waves. Water lovers can zip down body slides or grab an inner-tube and head for Run-A-Way River, relax and let the current move them through chutes and rapids. Little squirts can play on swings and slides in the safety of Squirt's Splash.

By land or sea, escape to the worlds of fun the Astrodomain within Houston has to offer.

Old blends with new harmoniously in Boston

(From the 1984-1985 Official Guidebook to Boston) In Boston a fine blending exists between past and present. The cobblestone streets of Beacon Hill, Faneuil Hill, the Old North Church are right in the midst of what has become known since the 1960's as "the new Boston" because of vast projects transforming downtown and the Back Bay. This harmony of the old and the new is what Boston is all about.

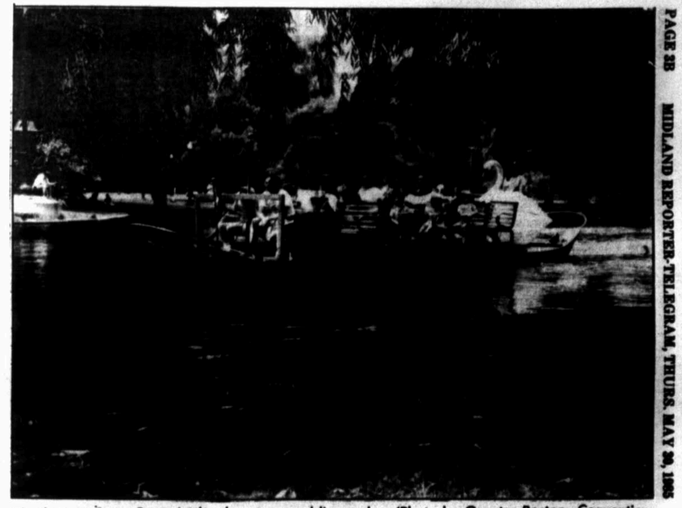

The famous Freedom Trail within Boston starts on busy Tremont Street on the edge of Boston Common. The trail winds through the streets that were once cow paths and are now lined with office buildings for banks, brokerage houses, insurance firms and high technology companies.

Passing the new Government Center with its prize-winning modern City Hall, the Trail reaches the North End, where the first settlers lived. This is typical of Boston. No single section has a priority on historical significance. Every section is historical and landmarks exist everywhere.

An orderly tour, tourists can see 16 different historic sites in Boston in the course of two or three hours along the Freedom Trail. Sites are connected by a red line in the streets and sidewalks. The emphasis is on Colonial and Revolutionary events, due to their national importance. The starting point is Boston Common Visitor Booth near Park Street Subway Station.

Some of the other sites that can be seen along the tour are: The State House which contains the original Massachusetts Constitution; Park Street Church; Boston Massacre Site; Paul Revere's home (built in 1676, the oldest structure in Boston); the U.S.S. Constitution (nicknamed "Old Ironsides" because of the strength of this ship's constitution) and the famous Bunker Hill Monument.

Boston, they say, is where it all began. It is also the place to begin exploring Cape Cod, the White Mountains, the Maine Coast. Truly it is the Gateway to New England.

Experience a 'ghostly' vacation

LONDON (AP) — At the Dolphin in Southampton, if a room's temperature suddenly drops about 2 a.m., guests may expect a visit from a friendly cleaning woman of long ago named Molly, who floats past the bed in her mop cap and gray smock.

At the Grosvenor in Shaftesbury, a "gray lady" stalks restlessly through the halls. And beer disappears from locked cellars.

In the Berystede Inn at Ascot, a former lady's maid named Eliza, who lost her life in a fire, searches for the jewels that were consumed with her.

This is the ghostly stuff that tourist visits are made of.

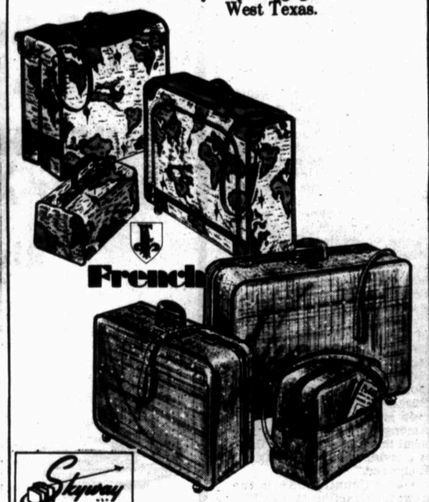

Trusthouse Forte Hotels, owners of country inns and old post houses, has researched the past of these lodging places and come up with a guide for haunters of the haunted houses. They offer fall visitors two, three or four-night stays at the inns.

No ghostly guarantees.

Trusthouse also has an office in New York.

Historic Williamsburg interprets 18th century life

Virginia's Historic Triangle is the year-round center of a wealth of attractions that stretch from the James River to the York.

The scenic Colonial Parkway connects the Historic Triangle of Williamsburg, Jamestown and Yorktown and spans over 300 years of history.

Williamsburg, the colonial capital of Virginia, is located in the heart of the Historic Triangle. Colonial Williamsburg lives today as it did nearly three centuries ago, when it was the social, cultural and political capital of England's largest colony in the New World. Costumed hosts and hostesses interpret this important chapter of American history for today's visitor.

Jamestown, the birthplace of our nation, is located eight miles west of Williamsburg on the Colonial Parkway and is the site of the first permanent English settlement in America in 1607. At Jamestown Island, visitors can watch glass-blowing, visit the Tower of Jamestown's Church and enjoy driving or walking tours of the Island. Jamestowna Festival Park features full-size reproductions of the three ships that made the voyage from England to the New World. Visitors will enjoy watching costumed interpreters recreate life as it was for the early settlers.

Yorktown, where America's independence was won, is 12 miles east of Williamsburg on the Colonial Parkway and is the site of the final battle of the American Revolution which ended with Cornwallis' surrender to General George Washington.

At the Yorktown Victory Center, visitors will relive this proud period in our nation's history through multimedia exhibits and films beginning with the Boston Tea Party to the climactic surrender of the British.

The National Park Visitor's Center and Battlefield is within easy walking distance. Here the exciting view of history continues with an orientation film, exhibits and special overview of the actual battlefield and redoubts, which can be toured by foot or by car.

There are over 20 major attractions within a 25-mile radius of Williamsburg. Each year the area draws millions of visitors from all over the world who may also enjoy the entertainment of world-famous Busch-Gardens/The Old Country, featuring Old World charms of Germany, France, England, Italy and a French Canadian village. There are also thrilling rides such as the Loch Ness Monster, Da Vinci's Cradle and Busch Garden's newest thrill ride is the "Big Bad Wolf." Among the musical entertainment throughout the park, there is a lavish musical "Hats Off to Hollywood."

Water Country USA is the newest attraction in the Williamsburg Area. This water theme park offers a variety of water thrill rides and a giant wave pool. A restaurant gift shop and picnic area is also available.

Williamsburg also abounds in attractions for culture-lovers, including the now-famous Shakespeare Festival, the Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Folk Art Center and the 20th Century Art Gallery, as well as live theater and entertainment.

The College of William and Mary, chartered in 1693, is the second oldest college in America. Classes are still held in the Wren Building, designed by England's best known 17th century architect, Christopher Wren, where three early Presidnets – Jefferson, Monroe and Tyler – were educated.

The list of beautiful homes and plantations includes the Royal Governor's Palace and Bassett Hall and the Williamsburg home of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

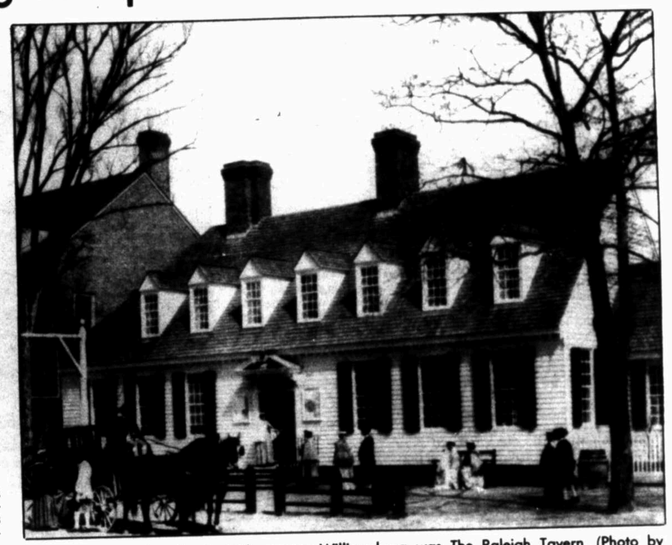

Along the James River, the plantations at Shirley, Berleley, Carter's Grove and Sherwood Forest feature exquisite antiques and works of art.

For seafarers, there is the world-renowned Mariner's Museum and Wharton's Wharf Harbor Cruises in Newport News.

Discover unusual dining and cuisine in 18th century taverns or elegant new restaurants featuring local seafood and southern favorites.

The Area offers more than 6,300 hotel rooms, as well as private guest homes and cottages and more than a dozen campgrounds.

For one of the greatest times in America, trek back into time at Virginia's Historic Triangle.

Phoenix -- lovely gateway to the West

Located just hours away from major summer vacation spots, such as the Grand Canyon, Las Vegas, San Diego and Disneyland, Phoenix is an ideal stopping-off point - or a great place to spend an entire vacation in the Valley.

You can swim or play tennis in the morning in Phoenix, and spend the afternoon fishing, hiking or sightseeing in the cool pines in Flagstaff.

The following driving tours are easily accessible from Phoenix and will add to the enjoyment of a visit.

The Grand Canyon, a five-hour drive from Phoenix, is one of the great natural wonders of the world. The South Rim is open year-round and features nature walks, mule rides down the canyon and the rim drives. The North Rim is open from mid-May until sometime in October. Lodging is available for visitors who want to spend more time exploring the Canyon.

The world-famous Apache Trail winds through spectacular desert mountain scenery to the city of Globe. Highlights of this trip include the dams and lakes of the Salt River.

At the start of the trail the Superstitution Mountains appear on the right. The legend of the Lost Dutchman's Gold Mine originates from this mountain range. Stories about Jacob Waltzer (or Waltz or Walz), nicknamed the "Dutchman", have been told for many generations. Legend has it that the Dutchman often appeared in public with pockets full of gold nuggets and anyone who attempted to follow him was never seen alive again. There is some evidence that the man existed and that he was probably a miner from the thriving vulture Mine near Wickenburg. However, no one has ever found the fabled gold mine. This fascinating excursion is about a four-hour drive round trip.

The Mogollin Rim, a magnificent geological fault, which was named after Jean Ignacio Flores Mogollon, is referred to locally as "The Rim." The dramatic face of the rim consists of a multicolored wall of rock, dotted by pine, manzanita and oak shrub.

This giant wall of rock jutted upward a mile above sea level when the earth's surface shifted 1000 years ago. Several layers of grey shale, creme colored limestone and deeper colored sandstone accent the rim's edge.

The Rim was made famous by author Zane Grey who spent many hours writing, hunting and fishing in this beautiful area. The Rim inspired many of his novels. Zane Grey's cabin is still standing for visitors to see and relive the past.

About a three-hour drive round trip, The Rim is certainly worth seeing.

But don't miss dinner in Phoenix. Specialties of the town are Mexican fodd and cowboy steaks; however they face stiff competition from Continental, French, Oriental and Italian restaurants. Dine on the top of a high-rise building or in the desert under the stars.

Using Phoenix as a gateway, visitors can see the beauty of the state of Arizona - from the cool pines of the north country to the desert scenery and wild west atmosphere of Southern Arizona.

From huge shopping malls to privately owned shops, Phoenix has some of the most unique and exciting places to shop anywhere. (Photo by Phoenix and Valley of te Sun Convention and Visitors Bureau)

Trend in auto rental business in leisure travel area

By The Associated Press

The trend in the automobile rental business is in the leisure travel area, according to Bemiss Rolfs, president and chief executive of National Car Rental, No. 3 in the $4 billion-a-year industry.

The major car rental companies — Hertz, Avis and Budget, as well as National — have spent millions of dollars competing for the attention of the business traveler, says Rolfs, but will now try "to encourage the consumer to think of a rental car as an integral part of any successful vacation or family outing."

Rolfs says that while 65 percent of the adult U.S. population has flown on a commercial airline, only 13 percent have ever rented a car. Part of the problem, he adds, is that consumers are unsure about how to go about renting a car and are apprehensive about it. The leisure traveler may face rates that vary as much as $200, Rolfs says.

Some tips in renting a car:

— Reserve in advance. This way, you'll have the most options available — and the time to discuss rates with the rental agent.

— Weigh costs and other factors carefully. Shop around. Consider more than just the base cost. Look for "hidden" costs, such as unused gasoline or an extra fee for insurance coverage.

— Promotional rates. Many companies offer reduced rates for weekend rentals. Sometimes, tour package rates are available, including air fare and lodging. Ask your travel agent or car reservation rental agent.

— One-way rental. Car rental agencies offer widely varying rates for one-way service. Ask about "drop-off" charges.

— Specialty cars. Most of the major car rental agencies can meet special needs, if you want to splurge on a luxury model, a sports car, or a station wagon or van that can carry lots of luggage or camping gear.

— Extras. Ask for such things as road maps, infant car seats, ski racks, or hand controls for the handicapped.

At National, the consumer-oriented program is trying to lure the college crowd by offering students a National car rental credit card.

And card-carrying nudists of the American Sunbathing Association can save 15 percent on the cost of a rental car.

Camping trends changing

Camping isn't what it used to be.

And that's good news for the majority of Americans, says the Go Camping America Committee.

Camping used to mean laying out a sleeping bag under the stars. It was an activity only for the young and hearty.

But today recreational vehicles of all shapes and sizes are a common sight on the American camping scene. People of all ages, from all walks of life, enjoy the camping lifestyle. Campgrounds, which used to provide a place to lay out a sleeping bag or set up a tent, but little else, are now often wonderful vacation destinations.

Campgrounds have changed significantly. In fact, some are not even campgrounds anymore; they're "camp resorts."

Campgrounds, in general, have been increasing in size and are providing more amenities for campers than ever before. It's fairly common now for campgrounds to have stores, laundry rooms, recreation centers, modern shower facilities, movies and swimming pools. More and more campgrounds are also offering extras such as on-site RV rentals, stocked fishing ponds, jogging trails, boat rentals, RV repair service and even babysitting.

And campgrounds still are not very expensive. According to a recent report by the international CPA firm Pannell Kerr Forster, the average cost of campsites in 104 cities was less than $11 compared to $50 for hotel and motel rooms in those same cities.

The new trend in camping is the development of luxurious camp resorts. They offer facilities such as health clubs, hot tubs, outdoor and indoor pools, tennis and racquetball courts, miniature golf courses and cable television hookups.

There are currently approximately 450 resorts located throughout the country.

Camp resorts are different because they offer campers an opportunity to purchase an interest in the facility. There are two basic types: membership resorts and ownership resorts, with variations of both.

Buying memberships in camp resorts is currently the most popular trend. A resort with 500 sites will generally sell between seven and 15 memberships per campsite, or 3,500-5,500 memberships in the resort. Members have the right to use amy campsite in the resort on a space available basis, with reservations usually required. The average price for membership camp resorts is $5,000 for 30-40 years or a lifetime membership/

In an ownership camp resort, sometimes called a condominium campground, the number of sales will equal the number of sites, as the purchaser actually owns a "piece" of the resort. Owners typically leave their RVs parked on their campsite even when the campsite is not in actual use.

The following locations will make great get-away places for even the weekend camper. Each listed has one or more "camp resorts": Amarillo, Austin, Big Spring, Canyon Lake, Del Rio, Fort Davis, Fredericksburg, Midland (Midessa), New Braunfels and San Antonio.

Miami, Florida -- 'City of the Future'

(from Greater Miami and the Beaches 1985 Visitors Guide)Miami has been called "The City of the Future," and the first glimpse of downtown will tell you why. High rise office buildings, luxury hotels and an elevated transit system all compete for superiority in newness and design.

Miami is investing in its future to the tune of more than $3 billion by 1990.

But modernism comes with strong consideration for the human element and grows from solid roots.

And from these roots stem many exciting attractions for tourists of all ages.

Miami's Metrozoo is a cageless zoo on 225 acres showcasing more than 100 species of the world's animals roaming free in natural habitats, separated from visitors only by moats. Eight free shows daily, elephant rides, petting zoo, walking tours and monorail tours are available. Open daily from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

At the Monkey Jungle, hundreds of monkeys, gorillas and trained chimpanzees swing freely through a natural rain forest and entertain visitors with their antics. The park is open daily from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

All the glory of an earlier era comes together in the Villa Vizcaya, a 70-room Italian palace, beautifullyn situated on 10 acres of formal gardens overlooking Biscayne Bay, built by Jaymes Deering of International Harvester as his winter home. The villa houses a collection of 15th to early 19th-century European decorative arts and art exhibits can be viewed in the gardens. The house and gardens are open daily from 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. except Christmas.

The annual Shakespeare Festival and Italian Renaissance Faire are held on the grounds of Vizcaya, bringing the bard's works to life along with fun, food and merry-making.

And no vacation to Miami would be complete without a voyage aboard one of the SeaEscape-Scandinavian World Cruise ships. This is a unique 16-hour cruise experience on the Scandinavian Sun from Miami to Freeport, Grand Bahama Island. The ship leaves daily at 8:30 a.m. and returns at 11 p.m. Guests aboard can enjoy fine dining, swimming, dancing, gambling and live entertainment plus a few hours in Freeport.

Of course after a full day of sightseeing, visitors will want to bask in the warm Florida sun along any one of the many beautiful sandy beaches. What a relaxing way to spend a day or an entire vacation!

Weathering the heights

By Gregg Howard
Copley News Service

How many times have you heard, "You've never really skied until you've skied in the West?" If you're like most avid skiers, you've heard it frequently.

But that much-repeated statement is supported by a long-standing reputation for excellence. The Rocky Mountains of Colorado, Utah, Montana, Wyoming, Idaho, New Mexico and Arizona attract twice as many skiers each year as any other region in the country.

Whether you head to the high country for skiing or for sightseeing, take into consideration how high altitudes can affect you during your trip.

Altitude sickness is experienced by one-fourth of all vacationers during their stays at mountain resorts. Even veteran skiers who previously have skied at high altitudes without suffering any ill effects can experience some discomfort at any time.

Symptoms and Causes. Altitude sickness results from decreased amounts of oxygen in the blood, or hypoxia. This is directly related to the lower atmospheric pressure, or thin air, at higher altitudes.

As our bodies compensate for this lack of oxygen, a variety of symptoms may occur that signal the onset of altitude illness.

The principal symptoms are: headache and weakness; sleeplessness, often accompanied by irregular breathing; swelling, particularly around the eyes and fingers; slight loss of coordination; dry cough; mild nausea; dehydration, and loss of appetite.

For most people, the symptoms are alleviated as soon as their hearts, lungs and circulatory systems adjust to the higher elevations. These symptoms vary in intensity depending on the elevation and a person's body chemistry.

Children are more susceptible than adults to altitude sickness. Individuals who have colds are more susceptible than those who are in good health.

Prepare for Higher Elevations. Jerry Muth, vice president of skier services at Copper Mountain Resort near Denver, offers these helpful tips for preparing yourself for a high altitude vacation.

— Before the trip. If you have experienced altitude sickness before, you run an increased chance of experiencing it again.

To lessen the effects of altitude sickness, be sure to drink a lot of water and eat simple foods high in complex carbohydrates prior to your trip.

If you're flying to your mountain destination, don't think the flight over will help you get used to higher elevations. Most airplane cabins are pressurized to an altitude of about 6,000 to 7,000 feet. It is a good idea to rest after you arrive. This doesn't mean you should go to sleep — walking will help you unwind and get used to the altitude.

— Acclimate yourself to heights. The best way to prevent altitude sickness is to make your ascent gradually, allowing your body time to adjust. You may want to spend your first day of vacation at a nearby town with a slightly lower elevation. A gradual ascent will allow your body to establish an equilibrium so you can move on to higher elevation more comfortably.

Relive days of Old West in Amarillo

Mosey on up to Amarillo and spend a day in the Old West at the famous Figure 3 Ranch, just 45 minutes from Amarillo. Start a cowboy's morning off right with a mouth-watering tasty breakfast.

After, the ranchhands will demonstrate their talents at branding and roping during an adventurous wagon ride on the range while their guests view the spectacular Palo Duro Canyon.

In the evening, dine at one of the many finer restaurants and paint the town red at any one (or several!) of a wide variety of night spots.

Splendid scenery, rich in historical and geoligical significance, make the Palo Duro Canyon the most celebrated attraction in the Amarillo area. (Photo by Amarillo Convention & Visitors Bureau)

Taste West Texas wines during Del Rio Winery informative tour

And we thought we had to go all the way to California to visit a winery – well, not anymore!

Right here, virtually in our back door is the Val Verde Winery, located in south Del Rio.

The establishment is open six days a week from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. (closed Sundays and major holidays). The winery offers a complimentary tour and wine tasting, a gift shop with wine-related items and an adjacent 12-acre vineyard that guests can stroll through.

Wines for sale include an Herbemont (dry-amber), a semi-sweet Herbemont, a rose from Lenoir grapes, a burgundy type from the Lenoir, a tawny port (that took first place at the State Fair in 1983) and a Johannisberg Riesling from West Texas grapes.

So on the way South, stop in for the red carpet treatment from the friendly people in Del Rio at the Val Verde Winery.

Tan the Tantalizing way

Don't ruin your vacation by getting sunburned the first day.

Come by Tantalizing in San Miguel Square and get a tan before you go on vacation. Tantalizing offers a safe, convenient way to tan without burning. Our FDA approved beds are capable of tanning without the risk of burning, drying, peeling or aging the skin. Our beds are the UVA tanning beds which offer the safest rays for tanning.

Pre-tanned skin is its own protection. Nothing will protect you completely from the sun, but a tan will allow you to stay in the sun longer without burning.

Now there is no need to expose you lilly-white skin to the sun. We pride ourselves in our tanning system. Every thought is given to your comfort. You are tanned while relaxing and listening to AM-FM radio or cassettes in a soothing, comfortable, controlled environment.

We provide: FDA approved equipment; skin care products; large, soft towels; personal attention; make-up room; complimentary beverage; sanitized equipment and AM-FM stereo cassettes.

We accept Mastercard, Visa and American Express.

Kids find museums fun, exciting in Philadelphia

Museums dull and boring?! Not in Philadelphia where kids can touch, climb or crawl through some of the most exciting exhibits in the country.

With exhibits like a giant walk-through heart and a 350-ton steam locomotive, the Franklin Institute Science Museum and Fels Planetarium is the granddaddy of them all. Take an imaginary flight on a real Boeing 707; match with with math games and computers or learn about energy by operating a giant Rube Goldberg-style pinball machine. Take a tour of te heavens at the Fels Planetarium, where Halley's Comet will be the star of the show this summer.

Located at 20th Street and Benjamin Franklin Parkway, the Franklin Institute is open daily.

And where else but the Please Touch Museum can kids dress up as firefighters or ballerinas, ring up sales in their own grocery store, climb through a miniature rain forest or run a doctor's office? Designed for children ages seven and under, Please Touch is the only museum of its kind in the country. There are wall puzzles, puppets, a resource room with computers and sound tubes where children can learn about sounds and music. A special hands-on exhibit focusing on children's play with toys that go from rag dolls and hobby horses to a futuristic look at the high-tech toys of tomorrow will run through March 1986.

Located at 210 North 21st Street, Please Touch is completely accessible to the handicapped and is open daily.

If you can sneak past the roaring dinosaur that guards the lobby of the Academy of Natural Sciences Museum, head for "Outside-In," a nature exhibit that brings the great outdoors down to kids size. There's a salt marsh complete with miniature sand dunes and a salt water aquarium with live fish. Safely tucked behind a plexiglass cover is a working beehive in a papier-mache tree. There's even a crawl-through fossil cave complete with minerals and a saber-tooth tiger skull. Kids can peer through microscopes for a close-up look at nature and the staff will be glad to pull out the python or tarantula that lives in the exhibit. There's also a mynah bird that will chuck like a chicken if he's in the mood.

Throughout the Academy of Natural Sciences, there are special programs with live animals that children can touch and pet.

Just when you think: You've seen one zoo, you've seen them all, along comes the Philadelphia Zoo with the Treehouse, where children can experience what it might be like to be an animal through a myriad of sensory activities. Designed for children four to eleven, the Treehouse is the only exhibit of its kind in the country. Youngsters climb through a 35-foot tall honeycomb and get a bees-eye view of the world...or hatch out of an egg in the Everglades Swamp. Life in the Beaver Pond is all around as kids duck under the beaver dam and come face to face with the pond's fish. Or they can ride a dinosaur and create their own fossil imprints in the Prehistoric Swamp. A "magic ring" for each child will unlock the sights, sounds and secrets of the Treehouse.

The kids will love the Children's Zoo, open daily.

And for every child who ever wanted to share a cookie with Cookie Monster, count with The Count or sing and dance with Bert and Ernie, Sesame Place is a dream come true. Those cuddly friends from Sesame Street come to life at Sesame Place, but there's much more than life-size muppets.

So now, it is easy to see why all museums are not dull and boring; especially those in Philadelphia!!

Cultural and educational events offered in Denver

There's a plaque on the 13th step of the State Capitol Building in Denver, Colorado to mark the spot. Standing there, you are exactly 5,280 feet above sea level – one mile high.

But there's very little sensation of high altitude in Denver since the city is almost completely level. Of course, there are mountains nearby. Climb the winding stairway to the top of the gold-plated dome of the Capitol and you have a spectacular view of snowcapped peaks running in a jagged line for more than 150 miles, from Pikes Peak in the south all the way north to the Wyoming border.

Scattered throughout the sleek glass and steel high rises within the city are a series of skywalks and open air plazas allowing people to relax in the sun or move from building to building without ever entering the streets below. Large fountains, several beautiful downtown parks and some dramatic new architectural designs give the city the taste of the 21st century.

And yet right in its heart, just a block from the shining new Mall, is a pocket of Victorian Denver that has changed little from the days when Bat Masterson strolled the streets. At Larimer Square, gas lamps light every corner, horse-drawn carriages clatter down the alleys, and a mixture of intricate scrolls, false front buildings, stained glass, brick arcades, gingerbread trim and elaborate architectural details recall the colorful days of the "Old West."

In the 1870's, Larimer was one of the wildest streets in America and every lawman, outlaw and desperado in the west visited its saloons and gambling halls. Today, it offers an assortment of fine shops selling everything from western wear and Indian artworks to 'new wave' fashions and European imports. Almost a dozen outdoor cafes, fine restaurants and nightclubs are scattered among the hundred year old buildings, some in beautiful stone cellars while others offer outdoor dining in garden plazas surrounded by brilliant hanging baskets of flowers.

The city's most reknown entertainment complex is the Denver Center for Performing Arts, a massive four-square block facility located in the heart of downtown, just two blocks from the 16th Street Mall. The Denver City features the nation's first symphony hall in-the-round, four theatres, a film institute which screens over 500 features a year, and the West's largest resident acting company. A block long, 80-foot high glass arch and an unusual smoking solar fountain make even the exterior of the facility worth a visit. Inside, the Center hosts everything from the latest Broadway musical road shows to excellent theatre, symphony, opera and dance.

In the visual arts, Denver is understandably one of the world's leading centers for Western art. Three downtown museums all within easy walking distance of each other give three very different views of the "Old West."

The 28-sided Denver Art Museum displays what many consider to be the finest collection of American Indian artworks, covering everything from silver jewelry and pottery to blankets and baskets. A special atrium was built to house the totem pole collection while other exhibits explain the difficult construction involved in Indian basketry and weaving.

Just a block away, the Colorado Heritage Center has $22 million in exhibits covering the state's colorful history, including a popular series of dioramas of old forts, Indian buffalo hunts, gold mining and one gigantic diorama that shows Denver as it was in 1860 (before it was destroyed twice – by fire and flood).

Rounding out the trio is the new Museum of Western Art, an exciting collection of 125 paintings and sculptures housed in an unusual Victorian building that was once Denver's classiest bordello and gambling hall. Divided into three galleries, the museum traces the history of Western art from an early portrait of an Indian woman done by Swiss artist, Carl Bodmer, in 1833 to Georgia O'Keeffe's famous "Cow Skull on Red".

Despite Denver's interest in the "Old West", even a quick walk through the downtown area makes it obvious that this is a modern city. Some 3000 people move here a month, most of them young and well educated. Denver has one of the nation's youngest median ages and is second in the nation in the number of college graduates per capita.

With all this in an almost completely level city, it's difficult to believe that you're a mile high above sea level.

Rookie's view of horse race betting in Ruidoso

By Gigi McKinney
Advertising Feature Writer

And they're off!!

Yes, it's horse racing time again in the Playground of New Mexico, Ruidoso. From first hand experience, I can tell you – it began with a bang!

We arrived on the scene just in time to place our first big bet on Race P1.

Now, I have decided that choosing the winning horse is an art. I found the technique I chose to use is a popular one among many racing lovers; the old "pick-the-horse's-name-you-like-best-and-go-for-it" method. It's not only more fun, but shocking to everyone around you if your horse comes in!

At our table, I was definitely the least educated in the world of horse racing. Among our group was a retired couple from Paducah, Texas, who own one of the horses which raced last Sunday. Norma and Edward Beck, the owners of Able Blue, are avid horse racing fans.

My partner and I felt our confidence grow as the Becks "patiently taught" us volumes of information contained within the Daily Racing Sheet, a standby for racing fans. And believe me, they were patient with us. I never knew how much information could be compacted into one short description of a horse's racing history!

And now after committing all that valuable "know how" to memory, I have chosen to stay with my former method of selecting horses. Call it woman's intuition or call it beginner's luck; but whatever you call it, my method works!

So for all novices to horse racing who may be considering the idea of spending a day at the races in Ruidoso, I highly suggest the following guidelines:

1) Buy a Daily Racing Sheet at a supermarket or service station along the way to Ruidoso.

2) Study it carefully.

3) Fold the Daily Racing Sheet carefully and use for lap pad for snack (because you won't understand a thing it says anyway!).

4) Upon arrival at the racetrack, buy a refreshing drink, disregard any prior knowledge of horse racing and have a lucky day at the races!

Odessans face murder solicitation charges

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Bench warrants have been issued to return three Odessans convicted of murder to Odessa for pretrial hearings in June on charges of capital solicitation of murder.

John C. Skelton, 55, who is appealing his death sentence for the 1983 bomb killing of Joe Lee Neal, faces four charges alleging that he attempted to hire his stepson and another man to kill two former business associates.

The trial of Skelton is to be held in Fort Worth, but 70th District Court Judge Gene Ater said he would hold the pretrial hearing June 5 in Odessa because it would save Ector County tax money. Skelton's new attorney, David L. Botsford of Austin, said he did not object to the pretrial hearing being held in Odessa.

Leonard and Andrea Garcia were convicted June 22, 1983, of murder in the killing of 36-year-old William T. "Teddy" Dowd. The 38-year-old Garcia, a former Ector County constable, was sentenced to 99 years in prison and his 39-year-old wife, Andrea, was sentenced to 40 years in prison for her part in the fatal shooting of Dowd at a motel in October 1982.

In the capital solicitation indictment, the Garcias are alleged to have hired a man to kill two witnesses in the case against them.

Information leading to the indictment of the Garcias on the solicitation charges alleged Garcia gave Charlie Garrett a .38 caliber revolver to use in the murders of Tommacene Dowd, widow of the murder victim, and Brandy Williams.

Garrett purportedly was to receive $3,000 cash and "an ounce of pure heroin" to kill the two women, with whom he was reportedly living in Minneapolis, Minn.

In March 1983, a probable cause statement alleges, Garrett took photographs that appeared to show the two women had been killed and sent them to Garcia, who allegedly wired Garrett $3,000.

Later in 1983, Garrett was indicted for murder, but it was for the April 1982 murder of 29-year-old Michael Rheams. Garrett's conviction is being appealed and he was ordered released from prison by the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals pending a discretionary review of his conviction.

Ector County Sheriff's Capt. Gene Kloss said Wednesday he didn't know if deputies bringing Skelton back to Odessa would return Leonard and Andrea Garcia at the same time, since the pretrial hearings are within about a week of each other.

Court records show that Craig Washington, the Garcias' attorney, asked for a legislative continuance until 30 days after adjournment of the State Legislature. Washington is a state senator from Houston. The request for continuance indicated Washington might be ready to go to trial with the Garcias sometime in June or July.

District Attorney's investigator Richard Scott said Wednesday he had been in contact with Washington's Houston office and his secretary indicated that if Washington was still tied up in the special session called by Gov. Mark White he might delegate another attorney to handle the June 10 pretrial hearing but the senator didn't expect to make a decision until sometime next week. Scott said District Attorney Eric Augesen planned to have the Garcias returned to Odessa just in case Washington or another attorney showed up for the June 10 pretrial hearing.

Young lawyers' group honors bailiff Roy Merket posthumously

Florence Merket

Judge Vann Culp

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Roy Merket, veteran law-enforcement officer and court bailiff, posthumously was presented the Liberty Bell Award for "outstanding community service" by the Midland County Young Lawyers Association.

Merket died last year at age 64.

> "(Merket) had the respect of the prisoners. He was always kind to everybody regardless of what crime they may be charged with.
>
> "He'd come to work before anybody was there and would leave when everybody else was gone. He worked all the time even when he didn't feel like it.
>
> "We all loved him and miss him very much."
>
> — Judge Vann Culp

Judge Vann Culp of Midland's 238th State District Court handed the award to Merket's widow, Florence, at the Wednesday noon meeting of the association in Ranchland Hills Country Club.

"He always had a love for people," said the judge. "He liked lawyers; he liked to work with lawyers. He was always helpful."

Merket served as court bailiff from the mid-1970s until his death in 1984. In his almost 40 years in law enforcement, Merket had served as a motorcycle policeman, traffic lieutenant and night captain, sheriff's deputy and, finally, as court bailiff.

"Bailiffing has been the best job I ever had in my life," Merket once said.

"He had the respect of the prisoners," the judge said. "He was always kind to everybody regardless of what crime they may be charged with."

He described Merket as "just a big man with a big heart."

Culp noted the times in which Merket lived — through the Great Depression and the "tragic" World War II and through "the time in history of the great progress so far as human kind is concerned."

Merket served as a steam engineer aboard a destroyer in the Pacific Theater and aboard a destroyer escort in the Atlantic Theater. One ship was "blown out from under" him by a block-buster in the Pacific Ocean in 1944.

Culp said that those contrasting times in which Merket lived "had some effect upon his personality."

"He'd come to work before anybody was there and would leave when everybody else was gone. He worked all the time even when he didn't feel like it," the judge said, due to his illness in his latter years.

"We all loved him and miss him very much."

Merket had described Culp as, "Outside of my daddy, he's as good as they come."

And of his wife, Merket said he was married to "one of the best women that ever lived."

Culp in late 1983 had noted that Merket "possesses the unique attributes of a good court bailiff...by virtue of his long experience in law enforcement."

"Roy loves people," the judge had said. "It is his natural talent to make people feel comfortable in judicial settings that sometimes may appear awful to the average person. Roy is a big man, and with respect to his innermost being, he has a big heart."

Midlander to be honored by Lions

Duke Jimerson

From Staff Reports

Duke Jimerson of Midland in June will receive the International 300 Key Award from Lions International, making him the fifth living person to hold this award.

Only four living persons in the world have received this award and two of the four are over 80 years old. Jimerson will be the youngest recipient, and he was recognized for his achievements during Wednesday's meeting of the Downtown Lions Club here.

The award will be made June 21 at the International Convention of Lions Clubs in Dallas. Usually this convention is held in other parts of the world.

Jimerson received the International President's Award in 1982 and 1983.

He has served as district governor for Lions International and during his term his district led the nation in total membership and ranked second in the world. He has 35 years of perfect attendance and speaks at numerous Lions banquets and conventions. He has talked to the largest Lions Club in the United States, which is at Lubbock, and to the Downtown Lions Club of Dallas, which is where the organization was started in 1917.

Jimerson installed his brother as president of the Carthage Lions Club and 20 years later he installed his brother's son as president of the same club.

Young Democrats sponsor seminar

From Staff Reports

The Texas Young Democrats will sponsor a "Water for Texas" seminar at 3 p.m. Saturday at the Ramada Inn here. Dr. Herb Grubb, of the Texas Department of Water Resources, will be the featured speaker.

Grubb was instrumental in the passage of the recent water bill. The seminar is open to the public at no charge.

Following the seminar, the Young Democrats will sponsor a reception for State Sen. Bill Sims, at 5 p.m. Tickets are $10 and may be purchased at the door or from Michael Higgins, president of the Midland County Young Democrats. For more information, contact Higgins at 687-1210.

The seminar and the reception for Sims are a part of a meeting of the State Executive Committee of Young Democrats. Executive committee members will hold a business meeting in the morning and will join local members for a luncheon.

Woman jailed for child's injury

From Staff Reports

A 35-year-old Midland woman accused of throwing a lye-based liquid cleanser in a 14-year-old girl's face last week was being held in city jail this morning on a $50,000 bond after being arrested Wednesday by Midland police.

Christie Harris, 1111 S. Connell, was charged with injury to a child in connection with an incident May 18 at 1201 S. Connell. Terry Willingham, 14, was treated at Midland Memorial Hospital for chemical burns to her face, eyes, breasts, abdomen and thighs after the cleanser was thrown in her face, and she faces possible vision damage, according to reports.

Margarita Belloc, 20, remained in Midland County Jail this morning on a $75,000 bond. She was arrested last week and charged with injury to a child after her 1-year-old daughter was treated for head injuries at Midland Memorial Hospital. Ms. Belloc told police the child fell from a sink. Police say the child had also been sexually abused, but no one has been charged in that regard.

The child remains under treatment in Midland Memorial Hospital, but a hospital spokeswoman said her condition has been upgraded from critical to stable, and she was expected to be moved today from the intensive-care ward to the pediatrics ward.

Also in county jail on an injury-to-a-child charge is Jeffry Nichols, who has been held on a $50,000 bond since last week for allegedly beating a 6-year-old boy with a belt buckle.

In other police reports Wednesday, Robert Bucola, 4700 Polo Parkway, told police a $2,000 stereo system, a $900 videotape recorder and $100 worth of tapes were taken from his apartment sometime between 9:30 a.m. and 11 a.m.

Florence Aldridge, 2200 Princeton, reported that someone broke into her garage Wednesday and took lawn-chair cushions worth $400, a $150 electric edger and a $75 spreader, for a total loss of $625.

A Falcon Marine employee told police 10 wheels worth a total of $900 were taken from boat trailers in a storage yard on West Industrial Loop. Someone apparently jumped a chain-link fence and took the wheels sometime between Friday and Wednesday, reports said.

Leo Gamboa, 2828 N. County Road 1313, reported the loss of a $450 stereo system sometime between 6:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Wednesday. Entry was apparently gained by breaking out a living-room window, reports said.

A $250 BMX racing bicycle was reported stolen by Paul Tunnell, 4622 Versailles. The bike was apparently taken sometime between Friday and Sunday, according to reports.

Curtis Lee McBride, 4534 Sinclair, reported the loss of a $250 revolver from his unlocked 1983 Monte Carlo on May 13. The auto burglary occurred sometime between 5:30 p.m. and 7 p.m., reports said.

Court asked to bar county from site list

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A federal appeals court has been asked by the State of Texas to remove a Panhandle site from consideration as a potential high-level nuclear waste dump.

The request Wednesday concerns the choice of Deaf Smith County as one of three primary sites under consideration by the Department of Energy as a site for the nuclear repository.

On Tuesday, Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox released a statement in which he said this suit "is also over the Department of Energy's failure to follow the law governing the selection of a permanent respository for dangerous high-level nuclear waste."

An earlier suit was filed by Mattox in the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Dec. 19, the day before the DOE announced Deaf Smith County as one of three top contenders for the dump. The other sites are in the states of Nevada and Washington.

Texas Gov. Mark White said the Energy Department "selected the dump site prior to establishing guidelines that are to be used for that very purpose.

"The guidelines are wholly inadequate to determine the impact that the dump would have on water supplies and agriculture in the Panhandle," White said in a statement.

Paeans of praise to Texas likely to outlast eternity

The hails to Texas may never end.

They started long before any of us now living ever took our first breath or walked the length and breadth of this grand old state. And they likely will not end 'til Texas and Texans are no more. That may be eternity. Maybe we can bear it out.

Perhaps that's a lot to ask of a sometimes intolerant world which alternately likes and dislikes braggarts. There must be a cause to boast.

Odes to Texas are stirring, and the more grandiose and exaggerated they are, the more truth they exhibit. Nothing too grand can be said about Texas. It's all true. Every word of it. If it doesn't appear that way, ignore it. Just like Texas, truth is. Period.

Just recently, I ran across a bit of early-day truth about our Lone Star State. It was in the form of a poem composed by Whitney Montgomery in Farm and Ranch magazine and appeared in the April 2, 1909, "special prosperity edition" of The Midland Examiner newspaper. It goes thusly:

TEXAS

Makes me kind 'o proud somehow
Just to live in Texas,
Ain't no other place I 'low
Quite so good as Texas,
'Course there ain't no other state
Half so big, or half so great,
Can't nobody estimate
What we've got in Texas.

Water, water, everywhere
Good to drink in Texas,
Land enough and some to spare
Waitin' here in Texas,
Anything that earth will grow,
From 'taters up to mistletoe,
We can grow it, don't you know?
Here in balmy Texas.

Ain't no riders o' the night
Riding' here in Texas,
People sure to treat you right
When you get to Texas,
If your heart ain't satisfied,
Jump the train and take a ride,
You'll be on the sunny-side,
When you get to Texas.

Isn't that just marvelous? That poetic work is a tribute to Texas and to all of those out-of-staters and foreigners who jumped trains, hitched rides on wagons and stagecoaches, mounted horses or embarked on a steamship to partake of this fine land.

It seems just about everybody, including my granddaddy from the charming state of Kentucky, came to Texas looking for something they couldn't or didn't find elsewhere. My granddaddy left his native Kentucky to find serenity, peace, wholesomeness and prosperity. He did all right. There was too much whiskey up there to suit him, so he came south to Texas, where probably there was even more of the devil's drink, but he avoided it like fire.

Of course, those who came to Texas just to escape troubles and woes likely flung headlong into more misery in Texas. After all, Texas has everything.

Texas has much to offer those who would be prosperous and those who would be "plumb broke."

Texas is big on everything. You can be big and rich in Texas or big and poor.

All the while, you might as well brag and seek the "sunny-side, when you get to Texas."

DEATHS

George Brotherton Jr.

HOUSTON — George Highsmith Brotherton Jr., 61, of Houston and formerly of Midland, died Tuesday.

Services will be at 1 p.m. Sunday under the direction of Gibson-Rice Funeral Home in Carlton, Mo.

Brotherton was a pilot in the South Pacific during World War II and had attended the University of Arkansas.

He was a member of the Noble Grande Order of Odd Fellow Lodge, a trustee and elder of Northwest Christian Church, a director of youth bowling in Midland, and president of the softball organization in Rialto, Calif.

Survivors include his wife, Bonnie Jeann Brotherton; a son, George Bradley Brotherton of Houston; three daughters, Karen Jeann Tussey of Las Vegas, Vicki Lynn Wright and Donna Lee Parker, both of Ruidoso, N.M.; a step-mother, Iris Brotherton of Carlton, Mo.; a sister, Anabell Moore of Booneville, Mo. and 10 grandchildren.

The family suggests that memorials be made to the Special Olympics.

Ronnie Ramirez

Services for Ronnie Ramirez of Midland will be at 9:30 a.m. Friday in the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with the Rev. Jerry Berry of Kelview Heights Baptist Church, officiating. Burial will follow in Fairview Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home. He died Tuesday at a local hospital following a brief illness.

Ramirez was born June 4, 1968, in Midland. He was a student at Carver ODL School.

Survivors include his father, Cruz Ramirez of Lubbock; his mother, Mildred Ramirez of Midland; five brothers, David Lewis of Waco, Frankie Dobbs of Houston, Jesse Dobbs of Waco, Adam Ramirez and Joe Ramirez, both of Lubbock; and six sisters, Lollie Ayers of Donithan, Mo., Sue Millentree of St. Louis, Mo., Brenda Mayfields of Dallas, Mary Ramirez and Rosa Linda Ramirez, both of Lubbock and Janette Ramirez of Midland.

The family request memorials be directed to Midland Association for Retarded Citizens, 2701 N. "A" St., Midland, Texas, 79701 in care of the Ronnie Ramirez Fund.

Florence E. Mills

FLORESVILLE — Florence E. Mills, 85, of Floresville, died Wednesday following a brief illness.

Services were to be at 3 p.m. today at the Vineyard Funeral Home in Floresville.

Survivors include three children, including a son, Carvell M. Mills of Midland; and five grandchildren.

Oscar Hefelfinger

Services for Oscar Hefelfinger of Mart and father of Mrs. Gene Abernathy of Midland are pending with Littlepage Funeral Home in Mart.

Ellis Funeral Home handled local arrangements.

Hefelfinger died Wednesday in a Midland hospital.

Nettie Mae Menefield

Nettie Mae Menefield, 77, of Midland, died Sunday in a local hospital following a lengthy illness.

Services will be at 10:30 a.m. Saturday at Alexanders Temple Church of God in Christ with Elder John L. Purdue officiating. Burial will follow in Fairview Cemetery with Thomas Funeral Home in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Menefield was born Feb. 7, 1908, in Wallis. She moved to Lamesa in 1950 and to Midland in 1965. She was married to Robert Menefield Sr. He preceded her in death.

She was a member of Straight Truth of Church of God in Christ.

Survivors include four sons, James B. Menefield, Earl A. Menefield and Arthur Ray Gene Menefield, all of Midland, and Lawrence E. Menefield of Houston; three daughters, Rosemary Spencer of Lamesa and Joylene Smart and Delores J. Menefield, both of Phoenix, Ariz.; 35 grandchildren and 37 great-grandchildren.

Pallbearers will be Leodis Henderson, Lee Clemons, James McGrew, Valley Smith, C.D. Brackens and Jessie Ray Davis.

Ruth K. Harris

Services for Ruth K. Harris of Midland were to be at 11 a.m. today in the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with Dr. Kenneth Hall, pastor of Crestview Baptist Church, officiating. Burial was to follow in Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers were to be Buddy Miller, Lee Reece, Mark Hobbs, Jim Crumbley, Haden Minton and L.V. Halley.

Honorary pallbearers were to be Murns Graham, Jim Winget, Clint West, Charlie Timberlake, Zack Scott, Layton Summerwell and the men of Crestview Baptist Church.

Texas papers lose bid to repeal tax on sales

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas newspapers, which lost an effort to repeal the state tax on newspaper sales in the 69th Legislature, say they will try again in 1987.

"We will make a full and complete effort next session to repeal the tax and I am confident it will pass," said Phil Berkebile, executive director of the Texas Daily Newspaper Association.

Lyndell Williams, executive director of the Texas Press Association, agreed.

Plans also are being made to make another attempt in 1987 to close loopholes in the Texas freedom of information laws, as members of the Texas media have unsuccessfully tried to do for the last three legislatures.

The newspaper tax bill and a bill to revise the Texas Open Meetings Act died in the final hours of the recent regular legislative session. Both measures passed the Senate easily but died in House committees without floor debate.

Sen. Roy Blake, D-Nacogdoches, got his bill to repeal the sales tax on newspaper sales out of the Senate on May 9 on voice vote, with no debate.

At last summer's special session, when a $4.8 billion tax bill was passed mainly for public school reform, legislators removed the sales tax exemption that had been given newspaper sales on recommendation of Comptroller Bob Bullock.

One of Bullock's deputies testified in support of Blake's bill that the sales tax on newspapers, delivered largely by teen-age carriers, was "impossible to administer and enforce equally."

Project Tejas funds top Hightower's expectations

AUSTIN (AP) — Project Tejas, the farmer-organized effort to send surplus Texas grain and powdered milk directly to African famine victims, has raised considerably more money than expected.

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower said Wednesday the project so far has raised $300,000, adding that the amount "will buy an enormous amount of food. It's certainly more than we ever expected to raise."

Hightower said $300,000 would buy enough food "to feed 215,000 starving African children for a month.

"Such a gift of basic human kindness should fill the hearts of all those who have given with satisfaction — and thousands of Texans have given to Project Tejas," he said, adding that the project's new goal is $350,000.

Project Tejas began on March 1. It will extend until June 30.

The 23 sponsoring agricultural organizations are asking for tax-deductible contributions of $35, which will purchase about 10 bushels of Texas grain and feed 100 children for a week.

The money raised so far will purchase nearly 2,000 tons of surplus grain and powdered milk, Hightower said.

"When the farmers and ranchers of Texas launched Project Tejas...contributions began trickling in at the rate of $100-$200 a day. Initially, we felt really excited about raising $10,000-$20,000," he said.

Traveling Roosevelt exhibit in Odessa closes June 8

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — A special exhibition, "Franklin Delano Roosevelt: The Intimate Presidency" closes June 8 at The Presidential Museum.

The exhibition commemorates the 100th anniversary of Roosevelt's birth in 1882 and deals with the 32nd president's skill as a communicator.

Circulated by the Smithsonian Institution Traveling Exhibition Service, the Odessa showing is being funded by the Odessa Cultural Council and the John Ben Shepperd Presidential Museum Endowment Fund. A preview reception will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Monday. The public is invited to attend.

At a time of swiftly changing technological developments in the mass media — especially in broadcasting, Roosevelt's approach both exploited and accelerated advancements. Through Roosevelt's forceful personality and style, the presidency was transformed from a distant office that rarely affected ordinary people to a part of the average American's life.

In the exhibition, four microphones used by Roosevelt are used to re-create the broadcast room from which he delivered his fireside chats. The background and atmosphere of the era and the efforts to combat the Depression through FDR's New Deal are shown by photographs shot by photographers from the Farm Security Administration. Audio tapes will replay the words and images of contemporary and controversial masters of mass communications such as Huey Long and Father Coughlin.

An illustrated catalog of the exhibition and other books on Franklin Roosevelt will be available at the museum gift shop.

For more information call the museum at 332-7123.

From Staff Reports

The Alamo YMCA is now accepting registrations for summer child care, summer recreation for first through sixth grades and Kinderkamp for ages 4-6. Participants are urged to sign up early while there are still openings.

The Central YMCA, 800 N. Big Spring, is now offering a weight management program. This program is supervised by a dietician and an exercise scientist. It includes a combination of diet, exercise and lifestyle changes needed to successfully take off and keep off extra pounds. Free orientation sessions are held at 6 p.m. on Wednesdays. Call Doug Grosso at 682-2551 for more information.

The Midland YMCA Travel Club invites new travelers to sign up for membership this season. The club is designed for men and women 55 years of age and over who like to travel in small groups, but all age groups are welcome.

The Travel Club coordinates all trip arrangements, including hotel accomodations and transportation. A tour guide from the YMCA escorts members on each trip. The Travel Club is not a travel agency and most of the activity of the club is handled through the Central YMCA, 800 N. Big Spring. You do not have to have a YMCA membership to join the Travel Club. Annual dues are $10 and each trip has a minimum and maximum number of travelers.

Available trips this year include European Alps and Rhine Cruise; Ruidoso Racing and Santa Fe; Scandinavian Tour: Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Fjords; Alaskan Cruise and Tour; the Ozarks: Eureka Springs and Branson; Fall Foliage: Lake Tahoe, Reno and San Francisco; and Australia and New Zealand.

For more information on the YMCA Travel Club, call Marty Gilmore at the Central YMCA, 682-2551.

The Midland YMCA is now taking registration for its summer Day Camp, Camp Comanche Trails.

The first session will start June 3 and will run for 13 weeks. Activities included are: Arts-n-Crafts, Hiking, Sport Skills, Nature Lore, Archery, Riflery, Swimming and other activities.

Fees for Day Camp are : YMCA members — $45 per week and non-YMCA Members $50 per week.

Camp Comanche Trails is located on Farm Market Road 868 and Andrews Highway. For more information call 684-8392.

Newborn-care plan to be presented

From Staff Reports

A $10,000 financial study, for providing intensive care for newborn children, was to be presented to the Midland County Hospital District Board of Trustees today during the board's monthly meeting with the MCHD directors.

The study, approved at the director's February meeting, and conducted by S.K. Mosely of Houston, was presented to the directors for discussion during last month's meeting.

The study is a result of increasing costs incurred by transferring high-risk neo-natal patients to hospitals outside of Midland County. Midland County Hospital District paid $800,000 outside the district last year, with $500,000 going to Fort Worth Childrens' Hospital, according to Midland Memorial Hospital president, Ray Branson.

"It's the single costliest factor in the budget," said Branson in recent months.

Also to be discussed at the meeting was the recent purchase of West Texas Pathology Laboratory by MCHD.

Opening of two city pools delayed

From Staff Reports

Only one city pool will be opening Saturday as scheduled and two others will be opening next week, according to a spokesman with the Midland Parks and Recreation Department.

Ulmer Pool will open at 1 p.m. Saturday. Washington and Haiff Pools will open at 1 p.m. Wednesday. The spokesman said the deferred opening for the two pools was caused by a delay in receiving supplies to prepare the pools for summer use.

"The Parks and Recreation Department regrets having to postpone the opening of these two pools. We hope this inconvenience to the citizens will be minimal and we appreciate your understanding."

In addition, the registration scheduled for Midland Park Mall Saturday has been canceled. But the Parks and Recreation office, 300 Baldwin, will be open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday to allow registration for summer programs.

'Fun time van' will visit parks

From Staff Reports

The Parks and Recreation Department will be reinstituting the summertime playground program this summer. The 'fun time van' will visit selected parks on a weekly basis to provide games, crafts and special events to children at no charge.

Two recreation leaders will be at the playgrounds from 9 a.m. to noon June 10 through Aug. 2.

The playground schedule is as follows:

— Mondays, Henderson Park at Eisenhower and Graceland.

— Tuesdays, Hill Park, North G and Cuthbert.

— Wednesdays, Tumbleweed Park, 1300 Ventura.

— Thursdays, Grafa Park, Midkiff and Mamar.

— Fridays, Lancaster Park, Kansas and Godfrey.

Children are requested to go to the playground nearest their home on the correct day and sign up for the program.

Water Wonderland announces appearance of Cruse Family

Water Wonderland, the West Texas water theme park, announces the Cruse Family will be the featured entertainment for Christian Youth Day, June 6th. The Cruse Family has enjoyed years of local popularity. Their high energy concerts, built upon a wide spectrum of talent, put them at the forefront of contemporary Christian entertainment.

Water Wonderland is a 22-acre water theme park located on Highway 80, 2½-miles west of the Midland Regional Air Terminal. Christian Youth Day has become an annual event at the park, providing a day filled with recreation and entertainment for young people throughout the region.

The park opens at 11 a.m. and will close at 8 p.m., at which time "The Cruse Family" will begin their performance.

"The Cruse Family" has been recording Christian music since 1971, when they signed their first record contract after friend and fellow performer, Larry Gatlin, introduced them to Duane Allen of "The Oak Ridge Boys." They have recorded 16 albums and have twice been the recipients of the coveted "Dove Award."

Christian Youth Day is being cosponsored by KKKK Radio with proceeds to benefit Street Level Outreach.

Odessan faces charges in mishap

From Staff Reports

Charges were expected to be filed today against a 21-year-old Odessa man whose car struck and killed two Midland bicyclists Sunday on State Highway 191.

"We're going to go ahead and file criminally-negligent homicide charges" against Sean Hannon, 5050 Tanglewood, said Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman.

According to Department of Public Safety reports, Hannon was driving east in the outside lane when he came up behind four bicyclists riding two abreast about a mile west of FM 1788.

Hannon apparently tried to swerve into the inside lane to avoid the bicylists, but hit George Hoffman, 35, 202 Ridglea, and David Werner, 14, 2806 Haynes, and dragged them about 200 yards. Both were pronounced dead at Midland Memorial Hospital after the 2:37 p.m. accident.

Hannon was traveling at a high rate of speed, according to Dettman. The charge of criminally-negligent homicide is a Class A misdemeanor, with a penalty range of up to a year in prison and a $2,000 fine.

Hoffman was chairman of the March of Dimes Tall City Triathalon, which is to be held Saturday.

Summer school registration Friday

From Staff Reports

Summer school registration for all Midland Independent School District secondary students will be from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. Friday at the Lee High School cafeteria.

First semester classes will be from June 3 to July 1. Second semester classes will be offered July 2 to Aug. 1. Cost is $70 per course per semester.

Forecasters fear 'catastrophic' season

By JANET BRAUNSTEIN

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — The upcoming hurricane season is the most likely one in several years to produce a catastrophic storm like the 1935 killer that tore through the Florida Keys, forecasters warn.

And the dangers of such a hurricane are made more extreme by the fact that since 1935 many more people have moved onto vulnerable coastal lands that are difficult to evacuate.

Forecasters use increasingly sophisticated tools, including radar, satellites, computers and reconnaissance planes, to measure and track storms that can grow into hurricanes.

But technology hasn't been able to keep up with exploding population growth along coastlines, says hurricane specialist Robert Sheets.

"Our (forecasting) skill level is not sufficient to tell people in the 30 hours they need (to evacuate) in many areas," he said. "We try to provide 12 hours of daylight warning."

Sheets is deputy director of the National Hurricane Center, where forecasters are preparing for the 1985 Atlantic hurricane season, which opens Saturday and runs through November. This year's tropical storms will be named Ana, Bob, Claudette, Danny, Elena, Fabian, Gloria, Henri, Isabel, Juan, Kate, Larry, Mindy, Nicholas, Odette, Peter, Rose, Sam, Teresa, Victor, Wanda.

The 1935 hurricane, strongest ever recorded in the Western Hemisphere, predates the practice of naming tropical storms and is known only as the Labor Day hurricane. It slashed the Florida Keys just 36 hours after it was sighted as a tropical storm over the Bahamas on Aug. 31, 1935, and killed more than 400 people.

If such a storm slammed Florida's southeast coast this year, a half-million people would have to be evacuated, a feat that would probably be impossible with so little time, Sheets said.

"You'd see property damages of at least $10 billion; in terms of loss of life, hundreds to thousands," he said.

Evacuation time for the upper Florida Keys is estimated at 30 hours; no plan exists for evacuating the lower Keys because it would be pointless with only one two-lane highway across the chain of islands. The time is approximately the same for Miami's Key Biscayne and other barrier islands.

Forecasters say coastal residents have reason to be concerned because El Nino, a Pacific weather phenomenon that has suppressed formation of massive storms in the tropics in the last few years, shouldn't linger into the summer.

Unlike last year, when only one tropical storm and one hurricane from the Atlantic basin made landfall in the United States, this season is expected to see a return of violent storms that form over Cape Verde in northwest Africa.

Cape Verde storms gather strength as they sweep across the Atlantic, through the Caribbean and the Gulf of Mexico and then slam into the U.S. coastlands at full or near-full strength.

The Labor Day hurricane 50 years ago was such a storm. When it hit the Keys, driving a storm surge of high water, its highest winds were swirling around the central eye at 155 to 200 mph, sucked in by the lowest central barometric pressure ever recorded in the Western Hemisphere, 26.34 inches, Sheets said.

When it left the Keys on Sept. 2, 1935, 409 people were dead. The surge wiped out the Overseas Railroad, which was completed in 1912, the first link between the islands and the mainland.

Before that hurricane died in the northern Atlantic on Sept. 10, it had swept alongside Tampa, up Florida's west coast, through Georgia and across North Carolina.

In place of the railroad, engineers built the two-lane Overseas Highway, now part of U.S. 1 which runs the length of the East Coast. It is still the only link between the islands and the mainland but now serves a far greater population than in 1935.

Ana, Andres will designate 1985's first hurricanes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration says that Ana and Andres will be the opening act in the 1985 hurricane season.

The agency said Wednesday that Ana will be the name of the first hurricane in the Atlantic Ocean, Caribbean and Gulf of Mexico area. The first eastern Pacific Ocean hurricane will be named Andres.

Meteorologists said hurricanes are named for ease of telling them apart, particularly when more than one is threatening at the same time.

Officials said the practice first began in Australia where names of politicians were used at one time. Later, mostly male meteorologists picked female names for the storms, and now male and female names are alternated.

The World Meteorological Organization selects the names, chosen from differing cultures to represent the various nations affected in each storm area.

Meteorologists retire names of major hurricanes that strike land and do considerable damage. For example, the names David and Frederic, which struck the United States in 1979, are no longer used for hurricanes.

Names are given to tropical disturbances when they reach the strength of tropical storms, with winds of at least 39 miles per hour. Those storms become hurricanes when the winds top 73 mph.

For the Atlantic-Caribbean-Gulf of Mexico area this year's hurricane names are Ana, Bob, Claudette, Danny, Elena, Fabian, Gloria, Henri, Isabel, Juan, Kate, Larry, Mindy, Nicholas, Odette, Peter, Rose, Sam, Teresa, Victor and Wanda.

Names in the eastern Pacific are Andres, Blanca, Carlos, Dolores, Enrique, Fefa, Guillermo, Holda, Ignacio, Jimena, Kevin, Linda, Marty, Nora, Olaf, Pauline, Rick, Sandra, Terry, Vivian and Waldo.

Storms in the central Pacific will be called Nele, Oka, Peke, Uleki, Wila, Aka, Ekeka, Hali and Iniki.

High cost could slow aquifer depletion, shut down farms

By KATHRYN BAKER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The cost of depleting the Ogallala Aquifer may save it, but not without running some farmers out of business, according to an Interior Department official.

"I think you're going to see some changes," said Robert Broadbent, assistant secretary for water and science, as the agency released a major report on the state of the nation's underground water supply.

"I think agriculture is going to be subject to the same economics that anybody else is," Broadbent said at a Wednesday news conference. "If you can no longer afford to buy the products you need to make agriculture productive, you're going to go out of business or go into dryland farming."

The Ogallala, known as the High Plains Aquifer, extends beneath portions of eight states. It supplies about 75,000 Texas irrigation wells, said the report, compiled by the U.S. Geological Survey.

In Texas, more than 80 percent of underground fresh water is used for irrigation.

"Unless effective conservation measures are implemented, the irrigated acreage will be decreased by slightly more than one-half of the present acreage by the year 2030," said the report.

In a case study of Floyd County, in the Texas Panhandle, the Geological Survey analysts said the depletion of aquifer was already slowing because of the increasing cost of pumping the water to the surface.

Between 1952 and 1981, the cost of pumping water in Floyd County increased 594 percent, without adjusting for inflation, said the report.

From 1945 to 1984, the water level in a Floyd County observation well dropped from 60 feet below the land surface to 245 feet below it, the report said.

In 1958, the annual irrigation withdrawal in Floyd County was 61.5 billion gallons. By 1969, it had increased to 103.5 billion gallons. But by 1979, withdrawals decreased to 57.7 billion gallons, the report said.

"I think economics is going to take care of it a lot," said Broadbent. "If you can't afford to pump it, then you're not going to pump the groundwater and the groundwater is going to stabilize and may even come up."

If West Texas farmers cannot irrigate, they have to give up crops like corn and cotton in favor of non-irrigated crops such as grain sorghum and wheat.

The report said the Houston area is also rapidly drawing water from the coastal aquifer system, which is causing land to sink.

"Saltwater encroachment may occur in coastal areas because of large freshwater withdrawals," the report said.

He said water is plentiful nationwide and that the federal government should leave management of underground water resources to the state and local governments.

'Greenhouse effect' once helped

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

LOS ANGELES — The "greenhouse effect" that threatens to disrupt global climate may have been a critical requirement for life to develop on Earth, a researcher says.

The so-called greenhouse effect occurs when carbon dioxide and water in the atmosphere trap the sun's heat in much the same way as the glass roof of a greenhouse.

By moderating Earth's temperatures, the effect apparently was responsible for enabling life on Earth to survive what scientists believe has been a 25 percent to 30 percent increase in the sun's brightness in the last 4.5 billion years, said James Kasting of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Center in Mountain View, Calif.

The greenhouse effect also helps explain why Earth's temperatures are so different from those on Mars and Venus, Kasting said Wednesday at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

"The greenhouse effect is not an evil thing," he said in an interview. "It's the thing that makes it possible for creatures to inhabit the Earth."

In recent years scientists have grown concerned that the widespread burning of fossil fuels and the world's forests is raising the level of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere, and possibly, therefore, raising the Earth's temperatures. (Carbon dioxide is produced when wood, coal and oil — which contain carbon — are burned.)

The damage that can be caused by too much carbon dioxide in the atmosphere is amply demonstrated by Venus.

Even though it is closer to the sun than the Earth, Venus absorbs less of the sun's radiation because the clouds that cover it reflect much of the radiation, Kasting noted.

Nevertheless, Venus's surface temperature is about 850 degrees, because its atmosphere is high in carbon dioxide and a resulting runaway greenhouse effect traps the comparatively small amount of the sun's energy that does penetrate the planet's cloud cover.

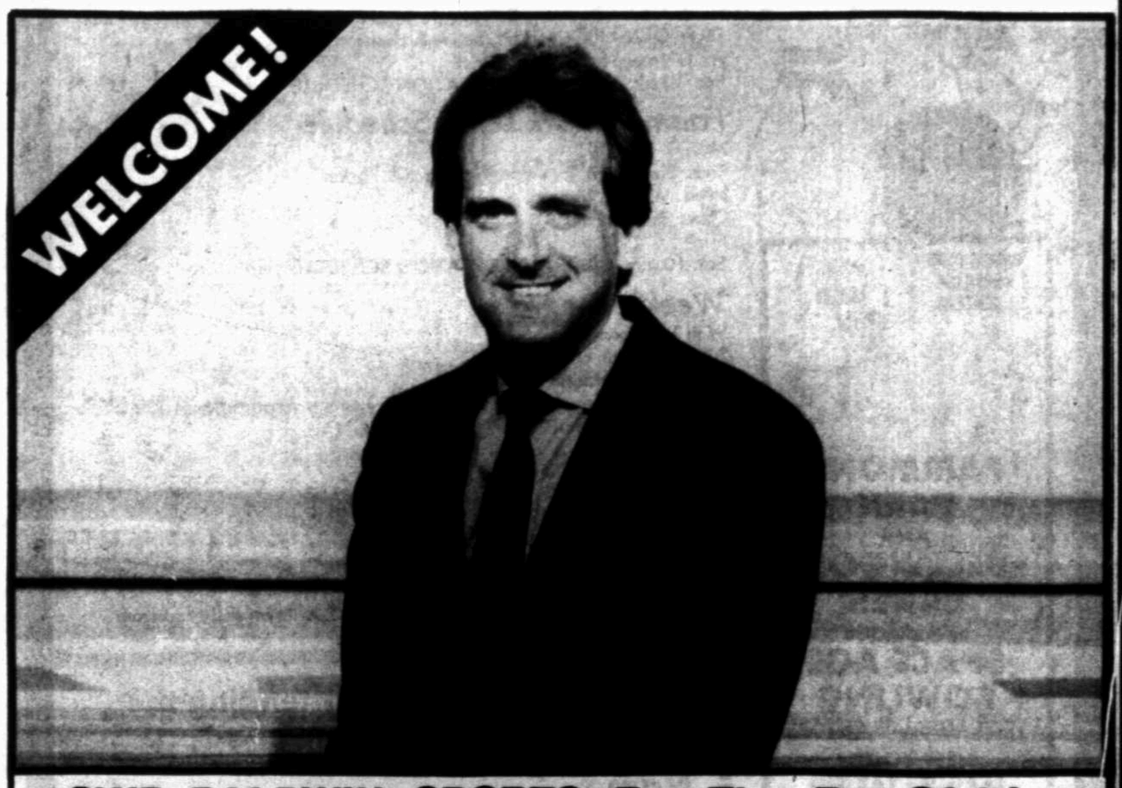

On Mars, where the atmosphere contains very little carbon dioxide, the surface temperature is 65 degrees below zero, Kasting said. The cold is due more to the lack of carbon dioxide in the Martian atmosphere than it is to Mars being farther from the sun than the Earth.

Earth's mild temperatures are maintained by a complex chemical balancing system in which most of the Earth's carbon dioxide is chemically locked in the Earth's crust and in minerals, Kasting explained.

The system appears to moderate Earth's temperatures, he said. When temperatures rise, more rain falls and the rain dissolves carbon dioxide and removes it from the atmosphere, thus cooling the Earth to counter the rise in temperature.

When temperatures drop, rainfall decreases. Carbon dioxide begins to build up in the atmosphere, causing a warming trend, Kasting said.

When carbon dioxide is dissolved in the rainwater, it becomes chemically bonded to other substances. More carbon dioxide is pumped into the atmosphere from volcanoes and gaseous vents at the bottom of the ocean where the Earth's crustal plates are pulling apart.

Cliffhanger episode wins 'Knots Landing' top spot

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES — You don't have to wait until September to learn that the "Knots Landing" cliffhanger put the CBS soap opera at the top of the Nielsen ratings for the week.

The season-ender, in which Val (Joan Van Ark) learned that her babies are still alive, finished first, but another CBS serial, "Falcon Crest," tied for 11th place with its cliffhanger for the week ended May 26.

Despite the victory by "Knots Landing," it was NBC's week to celebrate. NBC, which finished second the previous week to CBS, won the A.C. Nielsen Co. poll. CBS was second and ABC was third.

The previous week's winning shows, CBS' "Dallas," which was first, and ABC's "Dynasty," second, were not telecast this past week.

The second and final part of the ABC miniseries "Deadly Intentions" took second in the ratings. NBC's "The Cosby Show" was third. The first part of the NBC miniseries "Deceptions" was fourth and the ABC movie "Right To Kill" was fifth.

The heavyweight title fight between defending champion Larry Holmes and challenger Carl "The Truth" Williams on NBC was sixth. Holmes won a unanimous 15-round decision of the International Boxing Federation match.

Completing the Top 10: NBC's "Family Ties," seventh; the CBS movie "Do You Remember Love," eighth; CBS' "Simon & Simon," ninth; and NBC's "The A-Team," 10th.

NBC won the week with a network average of 13.8. CBS was second with 13.7, and ABC third with 12.5. The networks say the average means that in an average prime-time minute 13.8 percent of the nation's TV homes were tuned to NBC.

The conclusion of the CBS miniseries "Christopher Columbus" was in 15th place. The opener was in 14th place the previous week.

CBS remained in the lead among the evening news shows with a rating of 10.9. ABC was second with 9.5, and NBC third with 9.3.

Here are the ratings for the week of May 20-26:

1. "Knots Landing," CBS, a rating of 22.9, or 19.4 million households.
2. Miniseries-"Deadly Intentions," Part II, ABC, 21.3, or 18.1 million.
3. "The Cosby Show," NBC, 21.1, or 17.9 million.
4. Miniseries-"Deceptions," Part I, NBC, 19.9, or 16.9 million.
5. Movie-"Right To Kill," ABC, 19.0, or 16.1 million.
6. Boxing, Holmes vs. Williams, NBC, 18.5, or 15.7 million.
7. "Family Ties," NBC, 18.1, or 15.3 million.
8. Movie-"Do You Remember Love," CBS, 17.4, or 14.7 million.
9. "Simon & Simon," CBS, 17.1, or 14.5 million.
10. "The A-Team," NBC, 16.8, or 14.2 million.
11. "Highway to Heaven," NBC, 16.4, or 13.9 million.
11. Tie-"Falcon Crest," CBS, 16.4, or 13.9 million.

Angry Lakers try again

BOSTON (AP) — Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley said Wednesday that Boston's 148-114 victory in the opener of the National Basketball Association finals has made the Lakers angry.

"Monday was a one-game debacle that stung us," Riley said before practice at Boston Garden for Thursday night's second game of the best-of-seven Championship Series. "We're angry, but we're not obsessed with anger. It should be more of a quiet, seething anger."

The Lakers looked unstoppable offensively while rolling over Phoenix, Portland and Denver in the Western Conference playoffs to reach the NBA finals for the fifth time in six seasons. But it was the Celtics who scored at will in the opener, setting six Championship Series offensive records.

WERE THE Lakers overconfident?

"Maybe a little, but I don't want to use that as an excuse," Riley said. "I think we just rolled out of bed on the wrong side."

Several Lakers players agreed that the blowout was a fluke that won't happen again.

"Something happened that we hoped would never happen," guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson said. "There was probably a one out of 10 chance it would.

"It was not a case of overconfidence because when you're overconfident you get so cocky that you get out of your game plan and take wild shots. I think we played our game Monday, but it was one of those times when our game just didn't work."

Johnson said the Lakers aren't thinking about last season's Championship Series loss to the Celtics, although that defeat did add more incentive to win.

"But just wanting it badly won't win games for you," he said. "But there's no way we'll have another game like the first one."

"We wouldn't have even gotten into the playoffs if we had played like that all season," center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added. "So I can confidently say that we will be better Thursday night. The problem is whether the Celtics will play worse."

The Celtics have certainly played worse in the past. They were almost written off in the finals last year when the Los Angeles beat them 137-104 to take a 2-1 lead in the series.

But they came back to beat the Lakers at Inglewood, Calif., in Game 4 and went on to win their 15th NBA title in the seventh game. Now, they are trying to become the first team to repeat as champions since the Celtics did it in 1969.

"Getting blown out may have some effect on their confidence, but you don't destroy a team's confidence by beating them one game by 30 points," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "That happened to us last year and we didn't quit. When you lose like that, you get down, you get embarrassed, but it motivates you to come back harder."

"WE STILL have our confidence," Johnson said. "We've been in the finals five of the last six years. You don't get rattled in one game."

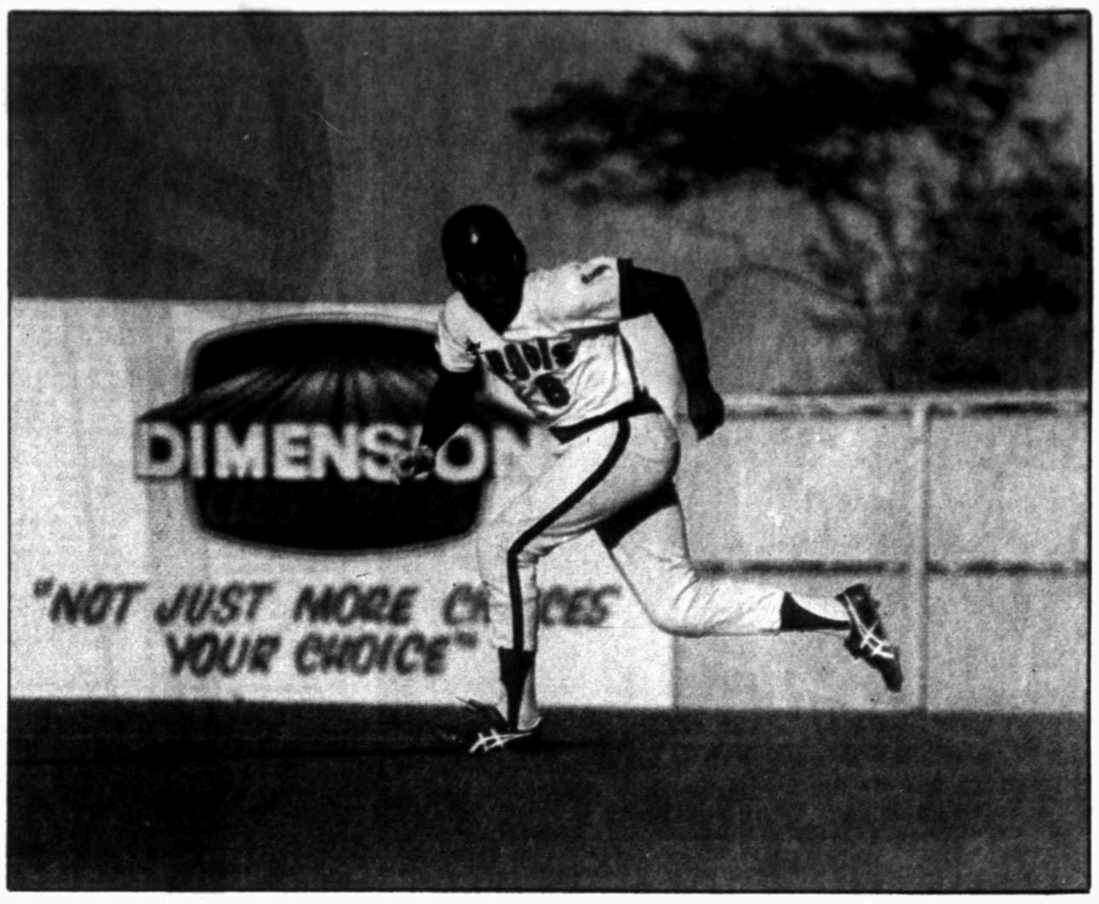

In Game 1, Boston got spectacular performances from outside shooters Scott Wedman, who became the first player in the Championship Series to have a perfect night from the field when he hit 11 straight shots, and Danny Ainge, who scored 15 points in the first quarter.

But Riley said the Lakers still have more fear of Boston's inside attack led by Larry Bird, Kevin McHale and Robert Parish.

"Their front line always has been our No. 1 priority," he said. "We'll still sag back and give the outside shot, but maybe not as much as the first game."

The Lakers also must rediscover their vaunted running game that led to only three baskets in the first half as they fell behind 79-49.

"You could see it on the tapes," Los Angeles forward Kurt Rambis said. "We were always a step behind."

Flyers face desperate times in Cup finals

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — These are desperate times for the Philadelphia Flyers. But they don't plan on resorting to desperate measures to stay alive in the Stanley Cup finals.

"We can't do anything different," said captain Dave Poulin, whose team trails the defending National Hockey League champion Edmonton Oilers three games to one entering what could be the clincher here tonight. "We just have to go out and keep working hard, hope we can keep our concentration.

"If we win the next game, we take it back to Philly."

The Flyers blew an excellent chance to grab a victory here, where the Oilers have won 15 straight playoff contests. They lost a 3-1 lead in Game 4 and were beaten 5-3, with four goals coming on Edmonton's power play.

"You have to give great credit to them that they can play any kind of game," said Poulin. "They're not known for it but they are a grinding team now and that tic-tac-toe passing, particularly on the power play, is very effective."

There is no panic in Flyers headquarters, however.

"Our objective coming out here was to win one of three at least, then go back to Philadelphia and come up with two," said Flyers Coach Mike Keenan. "Whether we won the first or the last of the three out here makes no difference.

"I'm confident we are taking Edmonton to the limit in some games. That is one hell of a club."

Indeed, the Oilers clearly are the league's most talented team. But they have been erratic in this series. They allowed the Flyers to come out strong early in Game 4 but were able to rally thanks to their revitalized power play, 1-for-14 in the first three games but 4-for-6 Tuesday.

"We did a lot of things wrong right off the bat," said Oilers Coach Glen Sather, who is on the threshold of his second consecutive NHL title in 12 months while coaching Team Canada to the Canada Cup in between.

"I told them between periods to get their act together, that we were the better team. I told them to relax and slow down. It seemed like they were a little nervous."

Oilers star Wayne Gretzky, who scored power-play goals in the second and third period, credited goalie Grant Fuhr with keeping the game close.

"When things don't go right for us, someone usually comes along and gives us a boost. That's what makes us a great team," noted Gretzky, the favorite for the Conn Smythe Trophy as the playoff's most valuable player.

While the Oilers have been healthy, the Flyers continue to lose players. They are without high-scoring right wing Tim Kerr, who reinjured his right knee in Game 3 and isn't expected back, and Brad McCrimmon (separated shoulder), their best defenseman this year.

Shreveport spills Midland again

Angels avoid shutout in ninth

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

Shreveport righthander Jack McKnight came within two outs of shutting out the Midland Angels for the entire season, but Devon White beat out an infield hit and Doug Davis followed with his sixth homer to smudge what had been a four-hitter going into the ninth.

McKnight and the Captains, however, came off a 6-2 winner, their third victory in four games at Angels Stadium.

The Captains and Angels conclude this series and the season's series at 7 p.m. tonight as Midland winds up a 10-game homestand.

McKnight blanked Midland 3-0 in a seven-inning game at Shreveport and was on the verge of doing it again Wednesday when Davis, who shouldn't even have been playing, powered a drive over the right field fence.

"He hit a good pitch," said McKnight later. "I didn't throw him a mistake."

McKnight, who was 11-8 for the Toronto Knoxville farm club in the AA Southern League last year, had a good slider and a "fast ball that had some pop to it," he said. "But my change up kept Midland off stride. This is a good hitting club and you've got to keep them off balance."

MCKNIGHT, NOW 2-1, came to the Giants' organization in the Gary Lavelle trade. This is his fifth year as a pro after signing out of Westark, Ark., Junior College.

"We faced McKnight in a seven inning game over there and didn't score on him. He went 16 innings before giving up a run," commented Midland Manager Joe Maddon. "He's an aggressive pitcher with a good straight fast ball.

"Doug (McKenzie) pitched a good game for us. He was just one pitch away from a two-run game."

(Through Wednesday)

Everett Graham gave Shreveport a 1-0 lead with a solo homer in the second and it remained that way until the sixth when Alan Cockrell, enjoying a 4-for-5 night, doubled to lead off and Matt Nokes singled in the run.

Going into the eighth, it was 2-0. Cockrell and Nokes singled and McKenzie, now 0-5, was lifted for lefthander Spiro Psaltis. Graham dumped a bunt down the third base line to move up the runners and then pinch hitter Steve Stanicek walked to load the bases. Steve Miller singled home two runs and C.L. Penigar's hit up the middle accounted for the third before Scott Suehr came in to get the final out.

SHREVEPORT ADDED another run in the ninth when Cockrell, San Francisco's No. 1 draft choice out of the University of Tennessee last spring, doubled and scored on Graham's hit.

So going into the home ninth, it was 6-0 and the only issue unsettled was McKnight's bid for a second straight shutout. Davis, who foiled that bid, hadn't started but was forced to take over the catching tools when starter Dave Heath was hit on the right hand by a pitch in the fourth inning.

McKnight walked only two and struck out nine.

Wolski named as Lee track coach

Volpe passes baton after 24 years

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

With the 24-year reign of Sam Volpe coming to an end as head track coach at Midland Lee Wednesday, Midland athletic director Gil Bartosh named Eddie Wolski as Volpe's replacement.

Volpe, who won his fifth District 4-5A track title this spring, had previously announced that he would retire at the completion of this school year. Wolski has served as Volpe's assistant coach since 1980. Volpe is the only track coach the school has ever had.

"The Lee track program has been very successful over the past few years and Eddie has been a big part of that success. We feel like Eddie will help to keep the Lee track program competitive," said Bartosh. "We hate to lose a coach like Sam Volpe, but he has served us well and respect his decision to retire. We feel like Coach Wolski can continue to give Lee the same kind of dedication."

WOLSKI, WHO also is an assistant football coach under Jack Tayrien at Lee, will keep his position as defensive line coach in addition to his track duties.

"I really think working in both sports will be a big help rather than a distraction," noted Wolski. "Most of the kids we have in track also play football and I think you need that association year round with the kids."

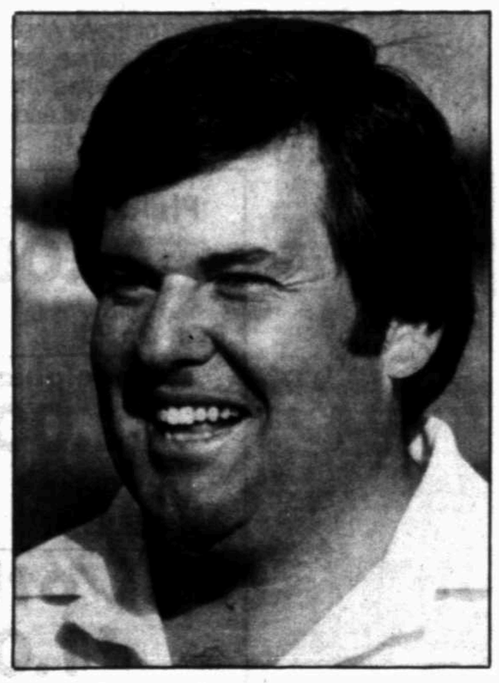

It was Bartosh who brought Wolski into the Midland school system. When Bartosh took over the reigns of the Lee football program in 1978, he called on Wolski as an assistant.

"I'd heard of the Granger Ghost all my life and was thrilled when he asked me to come to Lee. He had a legendary reputation as a high school coach and it was an honor for me to coach with him," said Wolski.

Wolski didn't join ranks with Volpe until 1980, but Lee went on to win three track championships in five years.

"I'm happy for Coach Wolski. I thought he should have the job. He's the best assistant I've ever had," said Volpe.

WOLSKI PLANS no major changes in the Lee track program, saying, "You can't gripe with success. Sam did such a great job that you just want to hold on to what you have. I would hope that we could win a regional meet. That's something that has escaped us."

Midland Lee's Eddie Wolski
...Rebels' new track coach

Wolski also has some strong ties with former Lee football coach Spike Dykes, who is now an assistant at Texas Tech.

"My senior year at Coahoma I played for Spike and we were 10-1, winning Coahoma's first district title in 1964. Spike was more than a coach to me. He was like a father. He was the best man at my wedding.

"Spike told me to graduate from college and he would give me my first coaching job at $7,000 a year. At the time Spike said that, he was making about $5,500. About three weeks before I graduated from Angelo State, Coach Dykes sent me a letter with a job offer at Alice for $7,200 a year. That man knew where he was going and I'll always be grateful to him."

Wolski joined Dykes at Alice in 1970 as junior high football and track coach. When Dykes left Alice in 1972, Wolski went to Mexia as head track coach and head junior varsity football coach. In 1974, Wolski joined John Wilkins at Odessa Permian as a football assistant and head JV basketball coach for one year.

Wolski left Odessa Permian for Shallowater where he became head football coach and athletic director in 1975 and stayed there until he heeded Bartosh's call in Feburary of 1978.

"I'm thrilled to be the track coach at Lee. When Sam announced his retirement, I thought that I would like the job. My family loves Midland and I'm very happy here. The coaching staff, administration and faculty makes a working relationship that is great. You don't find that everywhere."

WOLSKI WILL inherit some good talent for his 1986 debut next spring.

"We have some good kids — quality people — back. Mike Garza is the defending champion in the 1600 as is David Almand in the 800. Quintus Hampton was the champion in the 300 hurdles as a sophomore and runs on both relay teams. Brad Cooper is also back on the 1600 relay. We have a good freshman crew coming over and if we can keep them out for track, that would give us some depth."

Wolski said that Mike Quimby would remain as one of his two assistants, but the second coach has not been finalized.

"Mike did a great job with our weight people this year and he will have some of those kids back. I just don't know about the other position, but we should make a decision on that over the summer," said Wolski.

Wolski and wife, Dila, have three children, Steffeny, 16; Trey, 14; and Brad, 12.

After hitting a grand slam at Cleveland, Kansas City's Steve Balboni was so exalted, he exclaimed, "Hitting your first grand slam is a thrill. I'll always remember this." When reminded that he hit one in 1983, Balboni said, "You're right. I guess I forgot about that one."

Arkansas suffers nagging setbacks

NCAA Track

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Don't inscribe "Arkansas Razorbacks" on the 64th annual NCAA Outdoor Track and Field championship trophy just yet.

The heavily favored Razorbacks, seeking to become only the second team in history to win the NCAA cross country, indoor, and outdoor in the same year, suffered a series of setbacks during Wednesday's qualifying in Memorial Stadium.

They'll get a chance to bounce back today as qualifying continues in the meet which runs through Saturday night.

"I still don't think we're in bad shape," said Arkansas Coach John McDonnell. "We thought it would be close all the way, anyway."

Mike Conley, the Razorbacks' seven-time NCAA long- and triple-jump champion, boosted McDonnell's morale by leading the qualifying in the long jump and 200-meter dash.

CONLEY RAN a wind-aided 20.12 seconds in the 200-meter dash in a race in which Olympic bronze medalist Thomas Jefferson of Kent State failed to qualify.

The NCAA record of 20.15 by Mike Miller of Tennessee still stands because the wind on Conley's run was over the allowable.

Conley also led the long jump qualifying with an effort of 26 feet, 6½ inches.

"Conley had a good day for us," said McDonnell. "But we expected either Joey Wells or Michael Davis to qualify in the long jump. I was counting on three getting into that event.

"It also was disappointing to barely miss qualifying Marty Kobza (in the discus) and Fred Cleary (in the 400-meter hurdles). It was especially disappointing for Fred. It was the second straight year he was ninth (the top eight qualify). He missed qualifing for the finals by two-hundreths of a second."

Also, Mark Klee of Arkansas failed to make the opening height in the pole vault qualifying.

Conley, who is competing in four events, said he felt fine despite the 90-degree Texas heat and high humidity.

"I'm in shape to do it all," he said. "It was my toughest day. I can take tomorrow (Thursday) off. I can come out and take one triple jump and that's it (qualifying)."

Conley, a senior from Chicago, won the silver medal in the triple jump at the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles.

Conley also ran a great third leg on the Razorbacks' 400-meter relay team which qualified second in 39.21 behind behind Baylor's 39.20.

"Conley is just unbelievable," said McDonnell. "I hope he can last three more days. He gives everything he has."

The Arkansas team was already hurting because sprinter Wallace Spearman suffered a strained hamstring in the Southwest Conference meet and was not available to anchor the 400-meter relay.

"The final relay made the day for us," McDonnell said. "It was a great way to finish. We're still in position to control our own destiny. We had some bad breaks."

THERE WERE several other major disappointments on Wednesday.

Nawal El Moutawakel of Iowa State, who won the Olympic gold medal for Morocco in the women's 400-meter hurdles, failed to qualify in the event. Latanya Sheffield of San Diego State led the qualifying with a meet-record time of 55.39 seconds, eclipsing Moutawakel's old standard of 55.84.

Jackie Joyner of UCLA led the qualifying with 56.91 seconds but then shocked her followers by failing to make it in the long jump. She finished 16th with an effort of 20-5½, a half-inch back of the last qualifying leap. Olympian Carol Lewis of Houston led the qualifying with 21-8¼.

UCLA is seeking its third women's title in four years. Florida State was the winner last year.

Texas-El Paso is the only school to have swept all three men's championships in one year.

In the only final on Wednesday, senior Nan Doak of Iowa won the women's 10,000 meters in 33:33.03.

Dunston just so-so on farm

New York Times News Service

Shawon Dunston, the shortstop from Thomas Jefferson High in Brooklyn who took away Larry Bowa's job this spring and then proved not quite ready (a .194 batting average and 9 errors in 23 games), is doing only so-so down at Iowa, the Cubs' Class AAA affiliate: .270, 6 stolen bases and 2 errors in 11 outings through Monday night.

To the Chicago organization, though, the significant thing is that Dunston shows signs of shedding the effects of the psychological demands that, in the words of Manager Jim Frey, had made every trip to the plate "an ordeal."

"With the pressure of a major league pennant race off," says Larry Cox, the Iowa manager, "he's relaxed and regaining his confidence. His first error came on a very difficult bad-hop play in the hole. Otherwise, he's been fielding very well and consistently."

Dunston himself views his circumstance with an equanimity not always found in a 22-year-old demoted ballplayer of whom so much was expected. "I think the Cubs did the right thing," he says. "It's not the end of the world for me. I feel fine, and I'll be ready to try the major leagues again whenever they call me."

When will that be? So much depends, of course, on his progress at Iowa.

"But Shawon's our shortstop of the future," Green affirms. "He'll be back."

Chisox wake from batless hibernation

Associated Press

The Chicago White Sox needed something to snap them out of an offensive hibernation in which they had batted just .167 during a seven-game losing streak.

They got it from Carlton Fisk and Ron Kittle, who combined to hit four home runs and knock in all eight runs Wednesday night as Chicago beat Toronto 8-5 to snap the Blue Jays' eight-game winning streak.

"It was nice to jump out ahead tonight," said Fisk, who knocked in five runs with three hits and celebrated his 16th career two-homer game. "Our pitchers knew they didn't have to shut somebody out."

THE FIRST homer by Fisk, his 10th of the season, put the White Sox ahead 1-0 in the second inning. Kittle, who had 35 and 32 homers, respectively, in his first two seasons, followed Fisk with just his third of the year.

"There's a myth that Ron Kittle can't hit the breaking ball," Chicago Manager Tony LaRussa said of his slugging left fielder who had been just 1-for-22 entering the game. "But both his homers tonight were off breaking balls.

"For us to score consistently, our right-handed hitters have to produce like they did tonight," said LaRussa, who noted that Kittle took extra batting practice Wednesday, hitting only breaking balls.

LaRussa said he hopes the homers by Kittle, batting just .160 with eight RBIs, will be a turning point for the team. But he couldn't help but expand on the theme of Kittle being exclusively a fastball hitter.

"You don't hit .350 in the minor leagues without being able to hit a breaking ball," LaRussa said. "That kind of ability doesn't come around every day."

The White Sox got six innings from winner Britt Burns, 6-4, who left after Toronto moved to within 6-5 in the seventh. Bob James, the third Chicago pitcher, struck out four batters in 1⅓ innings of relief to get his eighth save.

Buck Martinez hit his second homer and drove in two runs for the Blue Jays, whose AL East lead over Detroit is four games. Jim Clancy, 1-2, took the loss.

A's 4, Tigers 2

Oakland wasted no time getting started — Dave Collins doubled off Milt Wilcox to open the game and scored on the first of Carney Lansford's two home runs. They also accounted for the other two runs in the fifth when Collins hit his second homer and Lansford followed with his seventh.

Lansford snapped out of a 2-for-23 slump, helping the A's reach the .500 mark for the first time since April 27.

"I've been hitting the ball well," Lansford said. "They just weren't falling."

Chris Codiroli, 6-2, allowed only an infield single through the first four innings and settled for a six-hitter. He struck out five and didn't allow a walk in completing his first game.

Mariners 5, Orioles 4

Darnell Coles blew a chance to drive home the winning run in the ninth inning, but didn't miss two innings later when he got another opportunity.

"I was just trying to get the ball to the outfield any way I could," said Coles, who struck out in the ninth. In the 11th, he hit a bases-loaded sacrifice fly off Don Aase to score pinch-runner Dave Henderson.

"It was my first ribbie and it was a game-winner . . . nothing wrong with that," said Coles.

After falling behind 4-0, the Orioles pecked away and pulled into a 4-4 tie when Cal Ripken hit his ninth homer.

Red Sox 7, Twins 0

Pitching-poor Minnesota lost for the seventh straight time. Boston jumped on starter Frank Viola, 6-4, for three runs in the second inning and three more in the sixth in support of Dennis Boyd.

Boyd hurled a five-hitter and Wade Boggs had three of Boston's 12 hits and drove in three runs.

After dropping a 1-0 five-hitter to Texas in his last start, Boyd nearly clashed with teammate Rick Miller. The air was cleared the next day in a closed-door meeting with Manager John McNamara.

"I was down, I was tired of losing 1-0 and was wondering when I was going to win 1-0," Boyd said.

Boggs, Rich Gedman and Marty Barrett, who drove in two runs each, made it considerably easier than that.

The Twins, whose Manager Billy Gardner and pitching coach Johnny Podres were ejected for arguing on a walk to Glenn Hoffman, have allowed 48 runs in the losing streak.

Yankees 7, Angels 2

Phil Niekro, continuing his pursuit of 300 career victories, limited California to two hits in collecting No. 290. Niekro, 6-3, worked eight innings and got heavy hitting support from two unlikely sources.

Mike Pagliarulo, who came into the game batting just .191, hit his second home run of the season off loser Jim Slaton in the fourth inning. Then Omar Moreno, a .189 hitter, hit rookie Urbano Lugo's first pitch over the wall for his first homer.

Royals 6, Rangers 2

George Brett feels good enough to hit a knuckleball — even Charlie Hough's dancer.

Kansas City, with Brett hitting a third-inning homer off Hough, 4-4, and a run-scoring single, tied California for first place in West.

"I'll take anything off him," Brett said after picking up his 17th RBI in nine games.

Brett credits an off-season training program in which he dropped 20 pounds for his fast start.

"I think this is the fastest start that I've had in 12 years," said Brett, whose homer was his eighth.

Danny Jackson, 4-2, pitched seven strong innings before Dan Quisenberry came on to collect his 10th save.

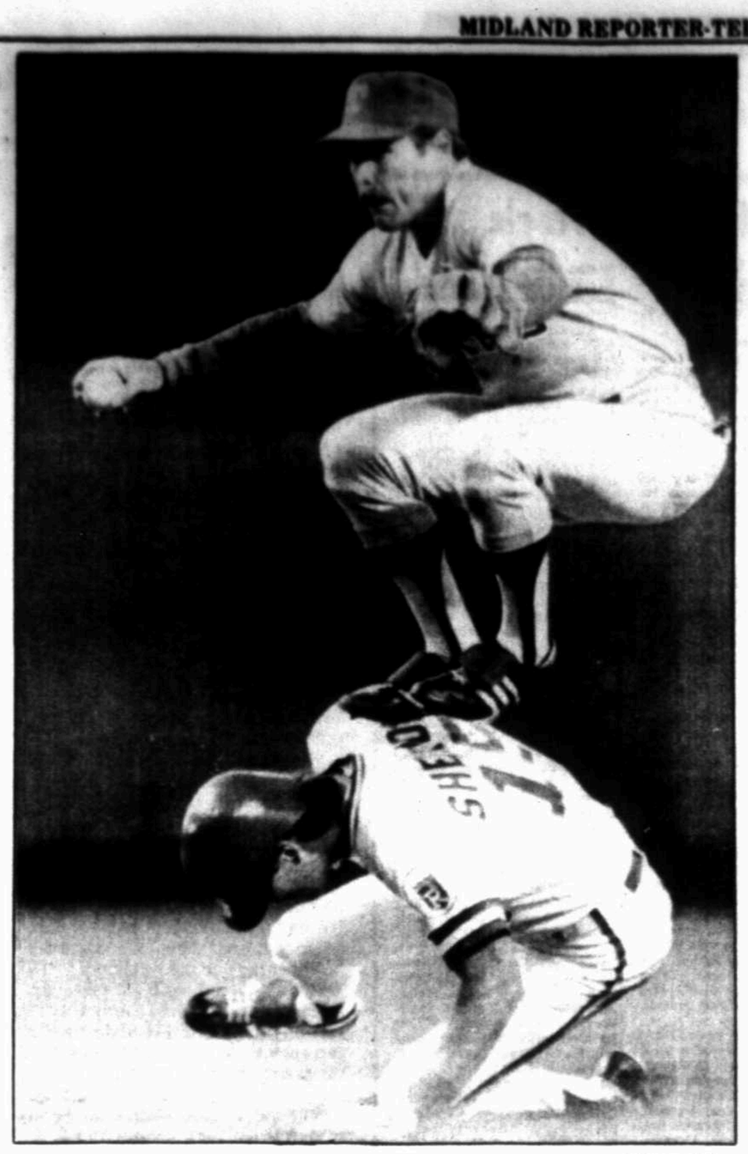

Brewers 7, Indians 2

Milwaukee's Jim Gantner, dusted off by Don Schulze, provided a script-writer's dream by picking himself up from the dirt and hitting a two-run, fourth-inning homer.

"I was just trying to hit the ball hard," said Gantner, who had three hits.

Gantner and Schulze, 3-4, collided when the Cleveland pitcher tried to cover home plate on a rundown play in the second inning. They glared at each other, but no fists were thrown.

Soccer riot shames Britian

Liverpool hooligans ignite violence

LONDON (AP) — As Europe reacted with horror to the deaths of at least 40 people in a soccer riot in Belgium, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Britain was shamed and dishonored by the Liverpool soccer hooligans who sparked the violence by attacking rival Italian fans.

"Those responsible have brought shame and dishonor to the community and to football," Thatcher said in a statement issued by her Downing Street office Wednesday night. Prior to the statement, Thatcher watched live television coverage of the carnage at the Heysel Stadium outside Brussels.

The riot erupted before the European Champions Cup final between Liverpool of England, the defending champion, and Italy's Juventus of Turin.

Most of those trampled and crushed to death were reported to be Italians. The British domestic news agency Press Association quoted Brussels police saying no Britons were among the dead.

THE GAME had to be played despite the drama, to avoid further incidents. Premier Wilfried Martens said on television that the decision "may have astonished the Italians, but it was taken for security reasons."

Police had urged that the game be played, fearing more violence if it were called off. Large sections of the stands were empty during the contest except for clothing and personal belongings stained with blood.

The two teams played the game after a 90-minute delay. Juventus, of Turin, Italy, won the European Cup final — matching Europe's best professional teams — defeating Britain's Liverpool by a 1-0 score on a penalty-shot goal by Michel Platini at 56 minutes.

In Rome, Pope John Paul II prayed for the victims as thousands of Italians flooded telephone switchboards to learn if loved ones at the match between Juventus of Turin and Liverpool had survived.

Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro Valls said the Pope was dismayed and horrified at the result of a sports event which could have been a means of brotherhood.

Italian Prime Minister Bettino Craxi, in Moscow for a meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, expressed "horror and anguish for an irresponsible and absurd tragedy and sentiments of his sorrow for the victims of such irrational violence," his office said.

The disaster occurred in an open grandstand where English and Italian fans were separated only by a makeshift fence, and trouble started with bottles and cans being thrown into the rival areas.

Eyewitnesses at the stadium, including sports reporters of many nationalities, agreed the English fans attacked first, pushing down the fence and crushing some Italians under it. Some Liverpool fans claimed police had not intervened when an English youth was kicked by Italians and the English "went in" to get the Italians concerned.

Fighting broke out and some fans armed themselves with metal bars. Most of the Italians tried to escape from the trouble.

Many made it onto the field, but hundreds were crushed against a wall at the end of the grandstand, many being trampled or suffocated. Some climbed the wall and jumped to the ground some 10 feet below, only to be crushed when the wall collapsed.

British Sports Minister Neil MacFarlane said in England he had been in touch with Belgian ministers three weeks ago to ensure that all possible security steps be taken to keep the two groups of fans apart.

He added he had telexed the Union of European Football Associations, the governing body of European soccer, last Thursday after hearing reports that the security measures "might not be up to scratch."

"I have had no reply but expect UEFA to carry out a vigorous, urgent and searching investigation," he said.

Though the authorities mobilized some 2,000 police for the game, the violence began before the match. Most police officers were outside the stadium to protect people who were entering.

EYEWITNESSES agreed there were very few police on the grounds when the trouble broke out, and the handful stationed between the two groups of fans was overwhelmed.

In Turin, Italy, about 10,000 people poured into the streets Wednesday night to celebrate their team's 1-0 victory in the match that took place despite the preceding riot, police said.

But Turin's major newspaper, La Stampa, said other Turin residents called it to criticize the celebration in light of the tragedy. About 1,000 police patrolled the streets, but no clashes were reported, the paper said.

A Juventus secretary, Augusto Gribaudo, was quoted as saying: "It was a mistake to play a game of this kind in a stadium (like) Brussels, little capable of holding the foreseeable flow of fans."

But Brussels Fire Brigade chief Col. Hugo van Gompel told British reporters: "Your British football fans are murderers."

Each weeks official entry form will be published Monday, Tuesday and Thursday in the Midland Reporter-Telegram. Hand drawn facsimilies of the entire official entry form also will be acceptable, but machine duplicated copies are prohibited.

4) Contestants may submit multiple entry forms each week. However, each entry form must be mailed postage paid to the designated address in a separate envelope with the number of the weekly game marked in the lower left hand corner of the envelope on the address side. Envelopes must be postmarked by midnight Friday of each week, and be received at the contest address by 2:00 PM of the following Tuesday to be eligible for the weekly drawing.

5) The $200.00 first prizes will be awarded to the entrant with all 10 questions correctly each week. In the case of more than one entry with all 10 answers correct, a drawing will be held. 2nd, 3rd and 4th prizes will be awarded to the next 3 entrants with the most correct answers respectively. Again, in the case of more than one entry form with all 10 correct answers, drawings will be held to determine the 2nd, 3rd and 4th prize winners. In the case of no entrants with all 10 correct answers, the prizes will be awarded to those with the most correct answers respectively.

6) Correct answers to each weeks Trivia Game Questions will be broadcast twice on AM 1510 KMND Radio Saturday morning between 6:00 AM and Noon. Trivia Game questions and answers will also be published in the Midland Reporter-Telegram each Sunday. Weekly winners will be announced by both AM 1510 KMND Radio and the Midland Reporter-Telegram each Wednesday.

7) It is not necessary to purchase the Midland Reporter-Telegram to play the Trivia Game. Copies of the MRT are available for free examination at the Midland Reporter-Telegram 201 East Illinois and the Midland County Public Library.

8) All winners must sign a release form acknowledging that both the Midland Reporter-Telegram and AM 1510 KMND shall have the right to publish, publicize, and broadcast his/her name, picture, voice and the fact that he/she won the cash or prize. If a winner is a minor, a parent or guardian must sign a minor's release form prior to the prize being awarded. Winners are responsible for all taxes incurred on prize.

9) NO POSTAGE MACHINE CANCELLED ENVELOPES WILL BE ACCEPTED. Only entries bearing the correct postage and cancelled by the U.S. Postal service or entries hand delivered to the contest address by 6 a.m. Saturday will be accepted.

10) Judges decisions will be final in any interpretation of the rules of his game. Employees of the Midland Reporter-Telegram, Bakcor braodcasting and members of their immediate families are ineligible.

11) The Grand prize, a 4 night cruise on the Mississippi River on the Delta Queen or Mississippi Queen departing and returning to New Orleans including round trip air travel to New Orleans. The winner will be chosen in a drawing at the conclusion of the 14 week trivia game. All weekly prize winners will be entered in the grand prize drawing.

John McEnroe returns ball to Florin Segarceanu of Romania during second round match Wednesday in the French Open. McEnroe won in straight sets, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4.

Three seeded women fall

PARIS (AP) — Top-seeded John McEnroe easily won his second-round match, but the women's singles field at the French Open tennis championships was stripped of three seeds Wednesday, including No. 5 Helena Sukova and No. 6 Zina Garrison.

Joining McEnroe in the third round of the men's singles were fourth-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden and No. 5 Andres Gomez of Ecuador.

Chris Evert Lloyd, the women's No. 2 seed, also progressed to the third round, but encountered the tough opposition she expected from fellow American Lisa Bonder.

Besides Sukova and Garrison, 16th-seeded Pam Casale of Fairfield, N.J., was ousted by Nathalie Tauziat of France 6-7, 7-6, 6-2.

South Africa's Rosalyn Fairbank eliminated Garrison, a right-hander from Houston, 7-6 (7-4), 2-6, 13-11 in one of the hardest-fought matches so far on the slow, red clay courts of Roland Garros Stadium.

Sukova, the Czechoslovakian right-hander who upset Martina Navratilova in the Australian Open last December, fell to Switzerland's Christiane Jolissaint 2-6, 6-3, 6-0.

French Open

For the second time in his two matches, McEnroe downed a qualifier, Romania's Florin Segarceaunu, winning 6-2, 6-4, 6-4. Gomez eliminated Kent Carlsson of Sweden 6-2, 6-4, 6-1, while Wilander crushed West Germany's Boris Becker 6-3, 6-2, 6-1.

Other men seeds to advance Wednesday included No. 9 Yannick Noah of France, No. 13 Tomas Smid of Czechoslovakia and No. 12 Henrick Sundstrom of Sweden. Women seeds to post victories included No. 3 Hana Mandlikova of Czechoslovakia, No. 8 Carling Bassett of Canada, No. 11 Steffi Graf of West Germany and No. 14 Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina.

The center court was bathed in sunshine for the Wilander-Becker clash. The 20-year-old Swede, who won the singles championship here in 1982 and has captured the last two Australian Opens, was a veteran against the 17-year-old Becker, who tried to pit his powerful serve and aggressive style against Wilander's patient baseline game.

Wilander crushed his young foe convincingly.

"I was lucky to win the very important points, and it was difficult for him then to get back," Wilander said.

The Swede said his straight-set victories here over Becker and Thierry Tulasne of France were his best performances of the year.

Becker conceded.

"It was a kind of tennis lesson for me," the German teen-ager said. "He made no mistakes."

Bonder also made few errors in her second-round game against Lloyd, who won 7-5, 6-3. Before the game, the No. 2 seed said she anticipated a tough game because "Lisa gets everything back."

In Berlin last week, Bonder took the first set against Lloyd, who rallied to win. This time, the 30-year-old, five-time French Open winner was prepared.

Bonder, who rallied from 1-5 down in the opening set, said: "This time she started off stronger. She was really aggressive and ran me around."

Mandlikova scrambled through to the third round with a gutsy 2-6, 6-4, 7-5 victory over American Elise Burgin, who held leads of 3-0 and 4-2 in the final set.

'Great Gamble' stumbles

Schmidt plays first, Phillies lose

Associated Press

If it looked strange to see Mike Schmidt playing first base for the Philadelphia Phillies, just how did it seem to him?

"To be honest, the game seemed weird," Schmidt said. "It looked totally different."

Alas, the result Wednesday night was no different than the previous ones that led to The Great Gamble of moving Schmidt — a nine-time Gold Glove winner at third base — to first base in order to make room for highly touted prospect Rick Schu. The final score was: Los Angeles Dodgers 6, Phillies 1.

Schmidt, off to a slow start with both the bat and glove this year, had played a few games at first early in his career. He fielded his new position flawlessly Wednesday night. So did Schu, a 23-year-old with impressive minor-league credentials.

"He handled himself well at first base," said Phillies Manager John Felske, who orchestrated the switch.

But did the Schu fit, as far as Schmidt was concerned?

"I'm tired," Schmidt said. "First base is a hard position, don't let anyone tell you different. On the bag, off the bag ... you handle the ball so often."

Schmidt spent some time in the trainer's room after the game, with his right knee wrapped in ice.

"When I made a stretch play at first, I felt something go weird in my knee," he said. "My body's never been in that position on a baseball field before."

Schmidt went 1-for-4 and Schu was hitless in three at-bats. The Phillies collected just four hits off Orel Hershiser, who raised his record to 5-0 while Philadelphia slipped to 16-27 on the season.

The Dodgers roughed up Kevin Gross, 3-6, for five runs in 1⅓ innings. R.J. Reynolds singled and scored in the first inning and singled home a run in the second.

Hershiser struck out nine and walked two. The only run Hershiser gave up came in the fifth and was unearned, a result of his own throwing error.

"We got down by five quick and it's hard to make that up when a guy's throwing like Hershiser was," Schmidt said.

Braves 5, Cardinals 3

Bruce Sutter, who left St. Louis after last season and signed a $10 million, free-agent contract with Atlanta, faced his former team for the first time and pitched two hitless innings for his ninth save.

Dale Murphy hit his 13th home run of the season to create a 1-1 tie in the fourth inning. The blast tied Murphy with Boston's Tony Armas for the major-league home-run lead.

The host Braves went ahead for good in the fifth. With two outs, Glenn Hubbard hit a grounder that took a bad hop over the head of shortstop Ozzie Smith and went for a two-run single that made it 3-1.

Reds 1, Cubs 0

Mario Soto, mixing a nasty slider into his repertoire, fired a two-hitter and struck out nine for his first shutout of the season.

Cincinnati, which beat visiting Chicago 13-11 in a slugfest Tuesday night, managed just five hits off Dick Ruthven and Ray Fontenot in the afternoon game.

Soto, 7-3, was in trouble only twice. In the fourth inning, a single by Keith Moreland and two walks loaded the bases with two outs, but Steve Lake grounded into a force play. In the sixth, Soto walked two more batters, but struck out Ron Cey and Leon Durham to end the inning.

Dave Parker hit a sacrifice fly in the third inning for the game's only run. Gary Redus, who had two of Cincinnati's five hits, doubled off Ruthven, 1-4, took third on a groundout and scored on Parker's fly.

National League

Astros 8, Pirates 3

Jim Pankovits drilled a grand-slam home run that highlighted a seven-run rally in the seventh inning to help Nolan Ryan beat Pittsburgh for the ninth straight time.

Houston trailed 3-1 entering the seventh, but exploded against starter Jim Winn and relievers Ray Krawczyk and John Candelaria. Pankovits greeted Candelaria with his first career slam, which broke a 3-3 tie at the Astrodome.

Ryan, 5-2, gave up three runs on four hits over seven innings. He also struck out eight to raise his all-time major league leading strikeout total to 3,950.

Expos 2, Padres 1

Andre Dawson led off the top of the ninth inning with a home run that carried Montreal over San Diego. Dawson connected for his seventh homer of the season off Craig Lefferts, 1-2, who had worked a 1-2-3 eighth inning after taking over for starter Dave Dravecky.

Reliever Tim Burke won his first major league decision by pitching the eighth inning in San Diego. Jeff Reardon took over to start the ninth and earned his major league leading 14th save. It was also the 100th save of Reardon's career.

Mets 4, Giants 3

The visiting Mets, held to one hit in the first seven innings by Dave LaPoint, rallied for four runs in the eighth inning to overcome a 3-0 deficit.

LaPoint retired the first batter of the eighth, but then yielded a pinch-double by Wally Backman and an RBI single by Mookie Wilson.

Mark Davis, 2-3, relieved LaPoint and surrendered a single to Kelvin Chapman. Wilson and Chapman then executed a double steal, and after Keith Hernandez struck out, Gary Carter hit a two-run double to tie it 3-3.

Scott Garrelts replaced Davis, but George Foster rapped a single to put New York ahead.

Winner Ed Lynch, 3-3, gave up three runs in the first inning, two on a double by Gary Rajsich. Roger McDowell went the last two innings for his third save. McDowell, a rookie, has not given up a run in his last seven appearances, a span of 21 innings.

Former quarterback sentenced for rape

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former North Carolina State quarterback Percy Moorman was sentenced to 26 years in prison Wednesday for the rape last August of a female student, but the prosecutor said he will be eligible for parole almost immediately.

"I'm pleased he got an active sentence," said Wake County Assistant District Attorney William Hart, who had asked for the 26-year sentence. "But by sentencing him as a committed youthful offender, he is eligible for parole at any time. Hopefully, the Parole Commission will allow him to remain in custody long enough to get the help he needs."

Moorman was convicted Feb. 19 of second-degree rape, second-degree sexual offense and breaking and entering into the dormitory room of a North Carolina State freshman last August. He has been held at Polk Youth Center since his conviction, undergoing a presentencing diagnosis.

Judge James H. Pou Bailey sentenced Moorman to 12 years for rape, 12 years for sexual offense and two years for breaking and entering. Bailey ordered all the sentences to run at the same time. Hart said under North Carolina law, Moorman faces a maximum of 5½ to 6 years in prison "if he served the entire time" without parole.

Bailey denied defense attorney Roger Smith's request for bond, but said he would hear arguments from Smith later that Moorman should be released on bond while his attorneys appeal his conviction.

After the sentencing, Moorman stood and kissed his mother.

College series begins Friday

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The Arkansas Razorbacks under Norm DeBriyn finished second in their only other appearance at the College World Series, so DeBriyn has an idea of what it takes to capture a national baseball title.

"The competition is so keen and the teams so good, you have to be hot and have some things go for you to win," DeBriyn said as Arkansas prepared for this year's National Collegiate Athletic Association championship, which begins here Friday.

"There is an aura with the media, the attention, all the activities that are there," DeBriyn said. "It takes some concentration. You've got to have your head screwed on right."

In 1979, DeBriyn brought a Razorback team to Omaha, winning three and losing two, including a 2-1 championship game with Cal State Fullerton.

DeBriyn has all new faces on his 49-13 team that opens the double-elimination tournament against 47-20 South Carolina at 4:10 p.m. CDT Friday.

"I think in a way it's a reward for the kids to be there," DeBriyn said. "But we'll be coming to Omaha to win."

In other first-round games, Oklahoma State, 57-14-1, meets Mississippi State, 48-13, at 7:10 p.m. Friday, while Stanford, 47-13, faces Miami, 59-15, at 4:10 p.m. and Texas, 60-12, meets Arizona, 47-20, at 7:10 p.m. Saturday.

Here are capsules on each of the CWS tournament teams:

Arizona

Coach Jerry Kindall's Wildcats carry a .321 team average and 5.13 team earned run average into the tournament. Todd Trafton leads the team with a .375 batting average, 74 runs batted in and 103 hits. Joe Magrane, 13-7, heads the pitching staff. Kindall says his team isn't overpowering but has lots of heart.

Miami

Coach Ron Fraser brings his seventh team in eight years to the CWS. Pitching has made the difference with junior left-hander Dan Davies at 15-1 with a 2.63 ERA. Bullpen ace Rick Raether is 5-2 with an ERA of 1.57 and 19 saves, just two away from an NCAA season record. Gone is last year's power but Jon Leake's 3.48 and Mike Fiore's .333 head an offense that has a .299 team average.

Mississippi State

Pitching is Mississippi State's strength with Gene Morgan, 13-1 and 1.89 ERA, paired with Jeff Brantley, 17-2 and 2.17. The team ERA of 3.22 is second in the tournament only to Texas. Will Clark is hitting .416 for a team that averages .295 at the plate.

Oklahoma State

Offense sums up Oklahoma State with a team batting average of .342, 124 homers and 774 runs scored in 72 games. The main gear in the power machine is Pete Incaviglia, who boasts a .466 average with NCAA season records for 47 homers and 140 RBI. Nine players hit over .315 but the pitching staff has a team ERA of 5.54.

Arkansas

DeBriyn is one of few coaches who can claim to have had Texas' number this year. The Razorbacks won four of five against the Longhorns. Hitting and defense are team strengths with a team batting average of .324. Dave Patterson leads the team at a .373 clip and six players have 40 or more RBI. Fred Farwell, 10-1, is the top pitcher with a 3.10 ERA.

South Carolina

Another hard-hitting team, South Carolina has a .322 team batting average, including .397 for Rob Rinehart and .359 for Jeff Barns. With good power, the Gamecocks have 144 team homers, led by Joe Datin's 23. Mike Cook, 16-2, has a 2.03 ERA in 18 starts.

Stanford

Stanford is sparked by Rick Lundblade's .402 average, 24 homers and 89 team-leading RBI. The team hits at a .317 clip with 78 homers. Jeff Ballard is 14-2 in 19 starts on the mound and has a 3.12 ERA. Rick Dietz picked up eight saves with a .237 ERA out of the bullpen.

Texas

Greg Swindell, winner of two CWS games a year ago, is 17-1 with a 1.66 ERA for the Longhorns. Texas' team ERA is 3.18, the best in the tournament. Dennis Cook, Dodd Johnson, Bill Bates and Bobby Behnsch hit .350 or better for a team with a .318 average.

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: A financial venture will never get off the ground unless you make the first move. Iron out family problems as soon as they arise. Self-discipline is the key to reaching your career or educational goals. Do not let less committed individuals talk you into goofing off. An older person's support is yours for the asking. Wrap up pending projects before taking on anything new. CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Clint Eastwood, Brooke Shields, actress Sharon Gless, "Another World's" Petronia Paley, attorney Edward Bennett Williams, pastor Norman Vincent Peale, music's Peter Yarrow, Monaco's Prince Rainier, Joe Namath.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The financial picture looks brighter than ever. Your consideration for others is the key to your successful personal relationships. A real estate deal proves highly profitable.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Family members' cooperation puts you in high spirits. Group activities enjoy favorable influences. Your powers of persuasion serve you well in both business and romance. Take a break from a tedious task.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A new self-confidence helps you put over an important business venture. Old friends are more likely to help out in an emergency than new acquaintances. Show your appreciation in a tangible way.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Parents find a way to finance a college education. Tact and patience are your strongest assets when dealing with authority figures. Treat yourself to an inexpensive evening out.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Even an innocent flirtation could cause trouble today. Co-workers become irritated if you show favoritism. Remain neutral when others squabble. Share expenses with a friend.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Someone's cooperation puts you in a more cheerful frame of mind. New domestic harmony is possible. A dialogue with an associate of the opposite sex proves intriguing.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Push ahead with your financial plans. You can learn a lot from quietly observing others. Give a younger person the benefit of your experiences. Celebrate some good news by dining out tonight.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Hold on tight to your savings if approached by a friend with a get-rich-quick scheme. Keep any promises you have made to loved one. Romance sizzles!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Postpone making an important decision until more information is available. This is not time to flaunt your authority before someone younger or less experienced. A personal relationship takes on deeper meaning.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A roadblock is removed. Press forward with your career or financial project. Relatives may try to throw a monkey wrench into your weekend plans. Stand up for your rights.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Get several bids if planning to renovate or redecorate your home. Do-it-yourself types can save big bucks. Be careful not to take unnecessary risks. A romance blossoms anew.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take care of routine chores early in the day. Privacy helps you concentrate on a complex project. A change in your appearance could help romance. Keep any diet or exercise resolutions.

We could regale you for hours with tales about the bridge adventures of our late friend, Baron Egmont van Dewitz. This is another of his favorite hands.

North-South reached a fairly normal contract of three no trump, and we would hazard a guess that it would be made 999 times out of 1,000. The 1,000th time "Eggy" held the East cards, and look what happened.

West made his normal lead of the jack of hearts, won in the closed hand. Declarer led a low diamond to the queen and ace, and von Dewitz returned the eight of hearts to the king.

Declarer took a successful club finesse, cashed the ace of spades and continued with a spade to the table's knave. Without a second's hesitation, von Dewitz followed with the ten! Suddenly, declarer had visions of making a bushel of tricks.

He finessed the ten of diamonds, cashed the king and then confidently finessed the nine of spades. Von Dewitz produced the queen he could not have, cashed the jack of diamonds and exited with a club. Declarer was left to stare longingly at a master heart and a top spade in dummy, with no way to get to them. He still had to concede two club tricks to East for down one.

What thrilled Eggy about this hand was not the beauty of the spade falsecard—he expected to make good plays. But at the bridge table he was like a mischievous lad. He got far more pleasure out of one bit of larceny than out of a dozen hands that he played with technical perfection. He would burst out laughing at the table when he succeeded in stealing a trick of two, but he was so good-natured about it all that his opponents never took offense.

Nancy Reagan visits facility which provides riding therapy

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House Press Secretary James Brady got a blue ribbon and a crop from riding partner Nancy Reagan after the two went for a spin on horseback as therapy for Brady, who is recovering from a four-year-old gunshot wound.

Brady, shot in the head during the attempt to assassinate President Reagan, and the first lady took a turn around the track Wednesday at the National Center for Therapeutic Riding in Rock Creek Park, where Brady has been riding regularly since March.

The 12-year-old non-profit organization, which provides riding as therapy for a wide range of handicapped people, honored Mrs. Reagan for her support of the organization.

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan was referring to Apple Computer founders Steven P. Jobs and Stephen G. Wozniak in his tax address this week when he gave the example of the modest beginnings of a computer company founded in a garage by college students, the White House said.

After Tuesday night's speech, Apple and Hewlett-Packard Co. both quickly said he meant them. Both companies started in garages, but none of the founders was a student at the time.

"I would assume he means Apple," said spokeswoman Barbara Krause. Jobs and Wozniak were college dropouts in 1976 when they started the Cupertino company in Jobs' parents' garage.

"He means H-P, of course," said Hewlett-Packard Co. spokesman Roy Verley. The giant computer and electronics company was started in 1939 by Stanford University graduates William Hewlett and David Packard in Packard's Palo Alto garage.

On Wednesday, White House deputy press secretary Albert R. Brashear said Reagan was referring to Jobs and Wozniak.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Britain's royal sailor, Prince Andrew, was all business when his ship, the frigate HMS Brazen, docked here for a week's visit, saying he was here "as part of the Navy" and had no plans for his leave.

The prince said Wednesday that he suspected "it's probably inevitable" that he would meet American girls on his trip, but added, "I shan't be out looking. Why should I be?

"Aside from the National Aquarium, my diary is completely empty," Andrew said.

The Brazen, at sea since mid-January, will be in port until Tuesday.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Gov. Edwin Edwards joined Cajun fiddler Doug Kershaw and rock 'n' roll singer Fats Domino in a music video filmed in the French Quarter.

"The governor was my chauffer," said Kershaw, whose songs include "Louisiana Man." "He was very delighted to do it, to help the music industry."

So was actor David Carradine, whose part involves an argument with the governor during an introduction to the song, "Don't Mess With My Toot Toot."

Most of the video was filmed last week as Kershaw, 49, and Domino, 57, performed at a French Quarter night spot.

Edwards, 57, who was not paid for his short speaking part, and Carradine apear in the introduction — a scene about a traffic jam in the French Quarter.

Economic indicator slumps first time this year

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main economic forecasting gauge decreased 0.2 percent in April, marking the first decline this year and signaling that the lagging economy has yet to feel the effect of lower interest rates.

The Commerce Department report issued today was generally in line with the expectation of market analysts, although they had been split over whether the index of leading indicators would move up slightly or down slightly.

Interest rates have been driven lower in recent weeks, first by reduced demand for credit as business executives scaled back their activity and then by the Federal Reserve's lowering of its discount rate in an effort to stimulate an economy that grew at an annual rate of only 0.7 percent in the first quarter.

However, government and private analysts have emphasized that it will take at least a couple of months for lower interest rates to start showing up in even the most interest-senstive sectors of the economy.

Building permits, for example, were among the six indicators down in today's report.

In order of their impact, the negative factors in the April index were contracts and orders for plant and equipment, money supply, vendor performance, average workweek, building permits and net business formation.

A decline in vender performance means companies were receiving slower deliveries from their suppliers.

The four indicators making positive contributions, again in order of their impact on the composite figure, were new orders for consumer goods and materials, change in sensitive materials' prices, stock prices and average weekly initial claims for state unemployment insurance.

Today's report included upward revisions for the last two months, primarily because of a change in inventories on hand and on order both months.

The February figure was revised from a 0.5 percent gain to a 0.7 percent increase and the March figure was changed from a 0.2 percent decline to a 0.1 percent gain.

The April change left the index at 167.4 percent of its 1967 base.

Reagan administration officials have started to hedge their forecast of 4 percent economic growth this year in the face of a series of lackluster economic measures.

However, the consensus of economists in and out of government is that the economy will pick up enough in the second half of the year to realize annual growth on the order of 3 percent, give or take a few tenths either way.

The index of leading indicators is designed to give insight into the likely shape of the economy six to nine months into the future.

However, it is a notoriously volatile report that often moves up or down within a small range, especially in times of unclear economic trends. It has not risen for three consecutive months since last May and has shown a decline in five of the past 12 months.

Three Mile Island reopening hit

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP) — Hundreds of angry demonstrators vowing to "never give up" blocked the gates to Three Mile Island and 82 people were arrested after the long-idle Unit 1 reactor at the nuclear power plant was given permission to resume operation.

Condemning the Nuclear Regulatory Commission's 4-1 vote to allow a restart, about 250 demonstrators marched outside the plant Wednesday night. Troopers arrested 76 adults and six juveniles after they stood in front of the plant's gate or sat in the main driveway and refused a state police request to leave.

Immediately after the NRC decision in Washington, the state of Pennsylvania and a Harrisburg, Pa., citizens' group, Three Mile Island Alert, petitioned the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals asking that the NRC decision be overruled.

In its ruling, effective Monday, the NRC said plant operators must submit a schedule for gradually bringing the reactor into operation and that a plan should be developed for increasing NRC staff at the plant. Unit 1 has not been allowed to operate since the core of the adjacent Unit 2 was destroyed in 1979 in the nation's worst commercial nuclear accident.

In that accident, water that cooled the reactor was accidentally shut off and the nuclear fuel started to melt. Radiation escaped from the plant, and Gov. Dick Thornburgh advised women who were pregnant or had pre-school children to leave the area.

William G. Kuhns, chairman and chief executive officer of General Public Utilities Corp., which owns the plant, said safety is the top priority. "It is a trust we will not violate and we will demonstrate that to the country," he said.

Plant officials have said the plant could be back in full commercial service within three months.

Despite Kuhns' assurances, protesters said they could not forget the suspicions and anger created by the Unit 2 accident.

"We'll just keep fighting," said Brenda Witmer while sitting in the plant driveway surrounded by reporters and state troopers. "We'll never give up. We kept the plant shut for six years. We won't give up now."

The demonstrators marched about a quarter-mile along a highway that passes the main gate. They carried signs, such as "We Voted No, TMI Must Go," "Radiation is a Reproductive Issue" and "Surrender GPU, You're Surrounded."

Two green state police buses ferried the arrested people to an unused airport terminal building several miles away for processing. Six juveniles were released without being charged, but each adult was charged with obstructing a highway and ordered to pay $73.50 in fine and costs.

One New York City couple, who said their daughter was arrested at the plant in a protest last year, said they accompanied her this time to give her support and express their own worries. All three were arrested Wednesday.

Hughes Tool predicts national drilling decline

HOUSTON (AP) — Hughes Tool Co. lowered its 1985 drilling activity estimates for the second time in nine months, citing uncertainity about federal tax policies, weak natural gas prices and unstable crude prices.

The Houston-based oil field equipment manufacturer predicts the number of active rigs in the United States this year will decline 8 percent from 1984, bringing drilling activity to its lowest level since 1979.

The number of active U.S. rigs averaged 2,123 during the first four months of this year, a 10.3 percent decrease from the same period in 1984, Hughes spokesman Jim Montgomery said Tuesday.

Hughes' original 1985 forecast, released last August, predicted an average 2,750 rigs would be working, a 5.5 percent hike from the 2,428 rigs active in 1984.

But the company revised its estimates in December to show it expected an average of 2,550 rigs.

This week's active rig count is 1,848, a 20 percent decline from last year's figure of 2,322, Hughes reported.

Montgomery attributed the reduced estimates to uncertainty over federal tax policies, weak natural gas prices and unstable crude prices. Also, oil company mergers and restructuring have resulted in lower drilling expenditures than originally planned, he said.

Hughes Vice President I.C. Kerridge Jr. said the revised figures are based on the assumptions that crude oil prices will remain stable or decline by only 5 percent this year and that Congress will not pass a tax simplification bill during this session.

The figures also are based on the expectation that natural gas prices will be lower for a short while but will rise before the end of the year, Kerridge said.

Lawrence A. Crowley, vice president of the brokerage firm Rauscher Pierce Refsnes Inc. in Houston, said the revised figures now reflect the sluggishness in the drilling market.

"This is the grim realization of what actually is happening in the natural gas market," Crowley said. "The market continues to be oversupplied, and exploration and production companies, even if they are successful at finding new supplies, are having trouble marketing that production."

Two 'back-office' workers blamed in Hutton scheme

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two people in the "back office" of E.F. Hutton & Co. Inc. were largely responsible "in a criminal sense" for check-writing practices that brought 2,000 felony fraud counts against the company, the Justice Department says.

Neither of the individuals was a "high-level executive," and the evidence indicates a "plausibility of a lack of high-level executive knowledge of the details of this activity," Assistant Attorney General Stephen S. Trott said.

His statements were made in a letter to Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., who along with 14 of his Democratic colleagues had questioned the Justice Department's failure to prosecute any individuals in the company.

"The individuals primarily responsible for Hutton's criminal activity worked in the 'money management' or "cash concentration' part of the 'back office,'" Trott wrote in the six-page letter.

"Based on who they were, where they worked, what they did, what they personally got out of the scheme and other relevant factors, it was the considered view of our trial lawyers that even if convicted, only a minimal jail sentence was probable and indeed a sentence of no jail time was not out of the picture."

E.F. Hutton & Inc. pleaded guilty May 2 in federal court in Scranton, Pa. to a Justice Department criminal information alleging 2,000 counts of mail and wire fraud.

The charges were in connection with a $4.35 billion scheme from July 1980 to February 1982 to intentionally write checks in excess of deposits it had in some 400 banks.

CHAMBER NOTES

By SUSAN ATCHISON

As a contribution to Centennial activities, the Chamber is sponsoring a photograph contest to capture the spirit of Midland on film. The winning entrant will receive a $500 cash award, with copies of the winning print to be available for order during the July 4 festivities.

The contest is open to all Midland professional photographers. The object: to show what Midland is like in 1985., on its one-hundredth birthday. Chairman of the contest is Jerry King, marketing manager of First City National Bank. For entry information, contact Alison Peeler at the Chamber of Commerce.

Two Midland teachers have been chosen by the Chamber's Education Committee for participation in the University of Texas at Austin Free Enterprise Teacher Intern Practicum. American Airlines will sponsor Frances Jean Hightower, a Midland High twelfth grade ecology teacher, and Tersco will sponsor Danny Howard, an economics/world history teacher also at Midland High.

Following classroom instruction in Austin, the teachers will return to Midland where they will receive first-hand experience working for their sponsoring companies. The purpose is to help instructors understand, and therefore be better able to teach, free enterprise. This will be Midland's second summer in the program.

•••

Participants in the 1984-85 Leadership Midland class, sponsored by the Chamber and Midland College, will graduate at a special banquet June 13. The Leadership Midland program was developed seven years ago in an effort to familiarize potential community leaders with the workings of, and opportunities in Midland. A new class of approximately 50 people will be chosen in August.

•••

Midland business will now have the opportunity to sponsor and be sole advertiser in one or more issues of the Chamber's monthly newsletter, Monitor. To be displayed on the top half of the newsletter's back page, the advertisement may be placed for $500 per issue. Monitor advertisers/sponsors will be accepted for issues on a first come, first served basis.

The Monitor is mailed to all Chamber members, approximately 1,000 people. Ad deadlines will fall on the third Wednesday of each month, corresponding with Chamber board meetings. For more information on sponsoring the newsletter, contact Susan Atchison.

•••

Now at press, the Chamber's July/August/September issue of Citylife magazine will be a special Centennial keepsake edition, featuring stories on the history of early Midland businesses, Midland shopping, 100-year-old Midland citizens, three Midland churches celebratig a century in Midland, the history of the oil business in Midland, early ranching tales and the significance of the Brown-Dorsey home. The magazine will have a special pull-out section with a map of Centennial Fest booths and a list of participants with what will be sold.

Recently produced publications available at the Chamber include "Profile: Midland, Texas", a comprehensive look at all aspects of the city compiled attractively with colorful pictures and charts; "Midland: The Plain Facts of the Matter", a compact brochure complete with highlighted, up-to-date information from Profile; and "Midland Apartment Survey", an easy-to-read listing of Midland apartments with helpful information about complex and individual unit sizes, prices and amenities available at each. Contact the Chamber's information secretary to obtain any of these publications. There is a charge for some pieces.

OIL & GAS REPORT

EXPLORATION HIGHLIGHTS

Crockett well flows 7.25 Mmcf

From Staff Reports

A second Upper Canyon gas producer, extending the DJS field of Crockett Counrty north-northwest was completed by DJS ENERGY CORP., Sonora. The firm potentialed the No. 3 Ladd Henderson "13" for a calculated absolute open flow of 7.25 Mmcfd with 65.4 gravity condensate and a gas-oil ratio of 100,333:1.

The well is flowing from the Upper Canyon Sand interval 6,4967 to 6,537 ft., which had been acidized with 2,000 gallons of acid and fractured with 80,000 gallons and 159,600 lbs. of sand.

The well was drilled to a total depth of 6,756 ft. and plugged back to 6,699 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,750 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from south and 1,400 ft. from east lines of Section 13, Block SL, T&STL survey, 20 miles southwest of Ozona.

The opener, the No. 2 Ladd Henderson "13" was completed in the Ozona field prior to being given DJS Field designation. The well was potentialed for a CAOF of 7.1 Mmcfd through Canyon perforations 6,538 to 6,583 ft.

Strawn oil producer flows 189.5 barrels

BADGER OIL CORP., Lafayette, La., completed the No. 3 Grand Slam, Strawn oil producer in the Dewey Lake South field of Glasscock County, to flow 189.5 barrels of 53.09 gravity crude, 864 Mcfd and 4.5 barrels of water through a 16/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 1,550 psi.

The well is flowing from Strawn perforations 10,082 to 10,152 ft., which had been acidized with 5,600 gallons of acid.

Drilled to 10,300 ft., the well is plugged back to 10,257 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 10,300 ft.

On ground elevation of 2,715 ft., formation tops include the Clearfork at 5,562 ft., Lower Spraberry at 7,000, Dean at 7,870, Wolfcamp at 8,040, Wolfcamp Reef at 8,300, and the Strawn at 10,040 ft. Pay was topped at 10,082 ft.

Location is 696 ft. from north and 660 ft. from west lines of Section 40, Block 35, T-3-S, T&P survey, 9.5 miles northwest of Garden City.

Leonard discovery pumps 49 barrels oil

THE SUPERIOR OIL CO., Houson, completed the No. 1 Superior-Slaughter Estate, Garza County Lower Leonard strike, pumping 49 barrels of 36.5 gravity crude and 103 barrels of wate with gas-oil ratio of 102:1. Superior perforated the Leonard 5,265 to 5,270 ft., acidized with 3,200 gallons of acid and fractured with 84,000 gallons and 145,000 lbs. sand.

Drilled to 8,755 ft., the well is plugged back to 5,660 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 5,854 ft.

Locationis 1,633 ft. from north and 1,013 ft. from east lines of Section 168, EL&RR survey, 15 miles southwest of Post.

Tom Green discovery tested for 41 barrels

Tom Green County gained a Strawn Lime discovery with completion of the FORTUNE PRODUCTION CO., San Angelo, wildcat No. 1 Schniers. The well potentialed to flow 41.4 barrels of 34.1 gravity crude and 16 barrels of water on a 12/64 inch choke through Strawn perforations 4,666-4,715 ft. The interval was acidied with 2,000 gallons of acid.

Total depth was 4,805 ft., plugged back to 4,742 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 4,788 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 1,869 ft., include the Cisco at 3,447 ft., Palo Pinto at 4,207, Canyon Sand at 4,385, and the Strawn Lime at 4,644 ft.

The discovery is located 1,985.8 ft. from north and 2,389.4 ft. from west lines of Section 58, Block 11, SPRR survey, a half-mile south of Wall.

The production is 4.5 miles northwest of Susan Peak North (Strawn) and (Canyon) production.

Tamarack completes wildcat for 9 barrels

TAMARACK PETROLEUM CO., INC., Midland, completed the Reeves County explorer, No. 1 Texaco State, to pump 9 barrels of 38 gravity crude, 2 Mcfd and 69 barrels of water with a gas-oil ratio of 222:1. Tamarack perforated the pay 5,112 to 5,132 ft., acidized with 1,750 gallons acid and fractured with 15,000 gallons of gel and 36,000 lbs. sand.

Permitted as a 6,300 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 6,010 ft. and plugged back to 5,167 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 6,010 ft.

The well topped the Lamar at 4,024 ft., Olds at 4,214, and the Cherry Canyon at 4,980 ft. on kelly bushing elevation of 2,837.6 ft. Pay was topped at 5,112 ft.

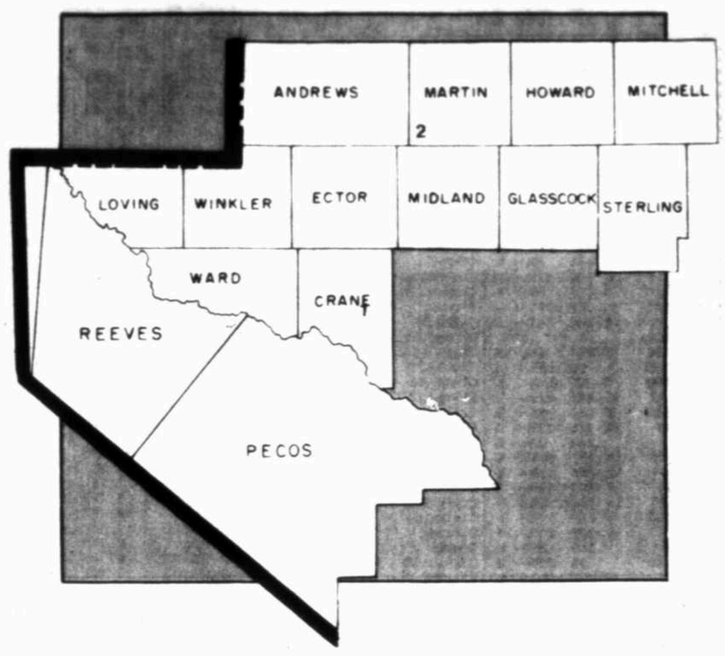

The discovery is located 660 ft. from north and east lines of Sectin 10, Block 54, T-5, T&P survey, 10 miles west of Pecos.

Eddy re-entry yields four barrel discovery

An Eddy County wildcat re-entry by YATES PETROLEUM CORP., has resulted in a Glorieta-Yeso discovery with the potentialing of the No. 1 4 Dinkus "GV" to pump four barrels of oil, 5 Mcfd and three barrels of water with a gas-oil ratio of 1,250:1. Yates perforated the pay 2,236 to 2,456 ft., acidized with 3,000 gallons of 15 percent acid and fractured with 80,000 gallons, 80,000 lbs. 20/40 sd. and 80,000 lbs. 10/20 sd. Pay was topped at 2,236 ft. Originally drilled to 8,810 ft., the well was cleaned out to 2,868 ft. and plugged back tio 2,817 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 2,864 ft.

The well is located 660 ft. from south and 1,980 ft. from east lines of Section 16, T18s, R25e. Ground elevation is 3,551 ft.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

No IRA? You're paying extra tax

Q. All the articles about individual retirement accounts encourage people to establish IRAs and seem to give the impression a person with an IRA can't lose under any circumstances. I'm not so sure about that.

Suppose a man puts money into an IRA during his working years and, by the time he passes age 70 1/2, his IRA is worth hundreds of thousands of dollars. He must then start withdrawals from the IRA, based on his life expectancy or the joint life expectancies of him and his spouse. Suppose he has to withdraw $25,000 the first year.

Suppose he has other taxable income of $30,000 a year. He also has to pay tax on the $25,000 IRA withdrawal, making his total taxable income $55,000 — and putting him in a much higher income tax bracket.

In such a case, is it smart to have an IRA?

Doyle

A. Indeed, it is. You're overlooking the fact that the man didn't have to pay income tax on all the money he put into his IRA or the money it earned — in interest, dividends and-or growth in value — until he has to make withdrawals. That long-term shelter saved him a bundle of tax dollars.

If his money hadn't gone into the IRA and stayed there, his retirement nest egg wouldn't have grown so large. Taxes would have reduced it to a much smaller size.

It boils down to this: Anyone who can afford to put money into an IRA and who doesn't do so simply makes unnecessary gifts of tax dollars to Uncle Sam.

Many people who don't have IRAs will find themselves strapped for cash when retirement time rolls around. No one enjoys paying taxes, either in his or her working years or in retirement. But it's far, far better to have high taxable income and live comfortably than to scratch along on less income.

Also, we can all hope the big debate now going on in Washington will result in true tax reform and simplification and — most importantly — lower federal income tax brackets.

• • •

Q. A friend and I are in disagreement over the tax treatment of withdrawals from individual retirement accounts.

I say that all IRA withdrawals are subject to income tax as ordinary income in the year received. He says that, because his IRA is invested in stocks on which no dividends are paid but which are increasing in value, the portion of his withdrawals representing profit from the sale of the stock will be long-term capital gains — only 40 percent of which is taxable. Who is correct?

A. You are. It makes no difference where the money for IRA withdrawals comes from. It can be from the money that went into the IRA, from dividends, from interest or from profit on the sale of stocks or other assets held in the IRA. All the money that comes out of an IRA is fully taxable — no matter the source.

One kicker, here. Any withdrawals made before age 59 1/2 or before the IRA participant becomes permanently disabled are subject to an additional 10 percent penalty tax.

When your friend makes withdrawals from his IRA, he'll receive a Form 1099 each year, listing all the money withdrawn as fully taxable income. The Internal Revenue Service gets copies of all Forms 1099.

• • •

Q. Are there any restrictions on the type of investments a person can have in an individual retirement account? I have about $15,000 in my IRA at a bank, in certificates of deposit and a money market deposit account. I would like to invest in stocks and real estate with my IRA.

A. The only IRA investment restrictions are against holding "collectibles," such as works of art, rugs, antiques, metals, gems, stamps, coins, alcoholic beverages and other items of tangible personal property.

Other than that, you can have almost anything in your IRA. You can open a "self-directed" IRA at a brokerage firm through which you buy and sell stocks and other securities. Some brokerage houses and other IRA sponsors are set up to handle real estate.

You can put your IRA money into an annuity written by an insurance company, but you can't buy insurance on your life with your IRA money. And, of course, you can use your IRA to invest in mutual funds.

Crystal Gayle

'Crystal' tones to grace at Round Up '85 benefit

Crystal Gayle will perform June 1 during Round Up '85, a concert to benefit The American Cancer Society, at the Faudree Ranch between Midland and Odessa.

Ms. Gayle has two platinum as well as four gold albums to her credit. She has twice been named outstanding female vocalist by the Country Music Association and has received the same accolade from the Academy of Country Music three times.

She received a Grammy for her performance of the multi-million seller, "Don't It Make My Brown Eyes Blue." And she has twice been named favorite female country vocalist at the American Music Awards.

At the Faudree Ranch, Ms. Gayle will be performing songs from her new album, "Nobody Wants To Be Alone," as well as many of her past hits.

Long-time Midlander Pomeroy Smith, who has been cured of cancer, has been named honorary chairman of the Round Up '85 event. He is a graduate of Princeton and has been a Midland resident for 31 years.

Founder and chief executive officer of Coquina Oil from the company's inception in 1969 until 1980, Smith has served on various committees, such as the Trinity School Board, Midland Memorial Hospital Board, Racquet Club Board, Museum of the Southwest Board, Petroleum Club Board and the Beall Foundation board. He is an independent oil operator.

Jan O'Neill is this year's chairman, with Marcie Bray serving as co-chairman. This year's event has involved over 200 local volunteers.

In addition to Ms. Gayle, the evening's entertainment includes a performance by the Hill City Cowboy Band, Fort Worth. The Perini Brothers of Buffalo Gap will be catering the event.

Funds from the event help support the service, education and research programs of the ACS.

Tickets for Round Up '85, which begins at 7:30 p.m., are $100 per couple and must be purchased in advance. For more information call the AMS, 563-0204.

Well-known artists showing at museum

ENTERTAINMENT

On display through Sunday in the Museum of the Southwest's Stables Gallery is the exhibition "Selections of American and European Masterpieces," which includes works by such well-known American and European artists as Kenneth Adams, Fremont Ellis, Robert Wood, Peter Hurd, Henriette Wyeth and Michael Hurd.

Kenneth Adams, 1897-1966, was the youngest and last member to be elected to the Taos Society of Artists. He was closely associated with both the "old guard" and the later arrivals to the New Mexico art scene. As a realist, he experimented with cubism and found that some of its basic tenets complemented the style he was trying to achieve.

Fremont F. Ellis, 1897-1985, was a Santa Fe artist and an American impressionist. He was essentially a landscape painter who sought inspiration out-of-doors.

Ellis and five other Santa Fe artists founded a historic group in the 1920s known as "Los Cinco Pintores," and to this day they remain among the best known artists' groups in the Santa Fe art community.

Robert Wood, born 1889, a favorite artist of some American art collectors, was born in England but has found America an unending source of inspiration. His landscape paintings, rugged mountain scenes, pastoral studies and marine scenes depict his love of nature and of the colors that abound there. A prolific artist, he has painted constantly for 60 years.

Peter Hurd, Henriette Wyeth, and Michael Hurd compose a family of well-known painters.

Peter Hurd, 1904-1984, studied under the great illustrator N.C. Wyeth, through whom he met Wyeth's eldest daughter, his future wife, Henriette, who was already an accomplished painter. Her brother, Andrew, was also to become a famous American artist.

After 12 years training at Chadds Ford with Wyeth, Hurd returned to his native New Mexico with Henriette and their family. Hurd became more well known when he was commissioned to paint the official portrait of President Lyndon Johnson for the White House collection.

Henriette Wyeth, born 1907, is considered by some to be one of the most important women in American art — past or present. Her works are found in major American museums and in many private collections throughout the country.

Michael Hurd, Peter and Henriette's son, lives in the Hondo Valley in southern New Mexico, and is an accomplished painter. His representational style is uniquely his, as can be seen in his oil and watercolor landscapes and portraits.

Other artists featured in the "Masterpieces" exhibit are: Joe Beeler, Johann Bertheisen, Gerald Cassidy, Andre Gisson, Mort Kunstler, and (Carol) Grende LaFord.

The Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., is open to the public. Hours are Tuesday through Saturday 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sunday 2 to 5 p.m. Admission is free. For further information call the museum, 683-2882.

'Ain't Misbehavin' ' starts theater run today

A special production of "Ain't Misbehavin' " is being presented today through Saturday at the Yucca Theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave.

This Capital City Playhouse musical revue, which features the comedy and music of Fats Waller, is sponsored here by Midland Community Theatre and First City National Bank.

"This is the greatly touted musical revue that has entertained theater goers and music lovers everywhere," said Greg Elsner, business manager for MCT. "The Austin production has received such rave reviews throughout Texas. So good is their reputation, in fact, that we just had to bring the troupe to the Permian Basin."

Tickets, priced at $8, $10 and $12, are for reserved seating. For reservations call Theatre Midland, 682-4111.

Watercolors to be exhibited at Texas Tech

LUBBOCK — A national exhibition of 80 watercolor paintings will be displayed June 9 through Aug. 11 at The Museum of Texas Tech University.

The show is sponsored by the West Texas Watercolor Society.

Selections were chosen from more than 400 entries in juried competition judged by Millard Sheets of Gualala, Calif. Sheets is known for his murals in several Lubbock buildings, including RepublicBank and Methodist Hospital.

"It is going to be a fine exhibition with a wonderful variety of expressions," Sheets said. "It is on a high level of national quality."

Sheets' works are held by 46 museums in 15 states. He has received 32 awards and has designed more than 100 murals and mosaics in buildings across the country. Sheets has designed about 100 buildings during a period of architectural work.

Sheets has numerous one-man art shows to his credit, including one at The Museum of Texas Tech University in December 1983. He has served as a technical adviser and production designer for Columbia Pictures.

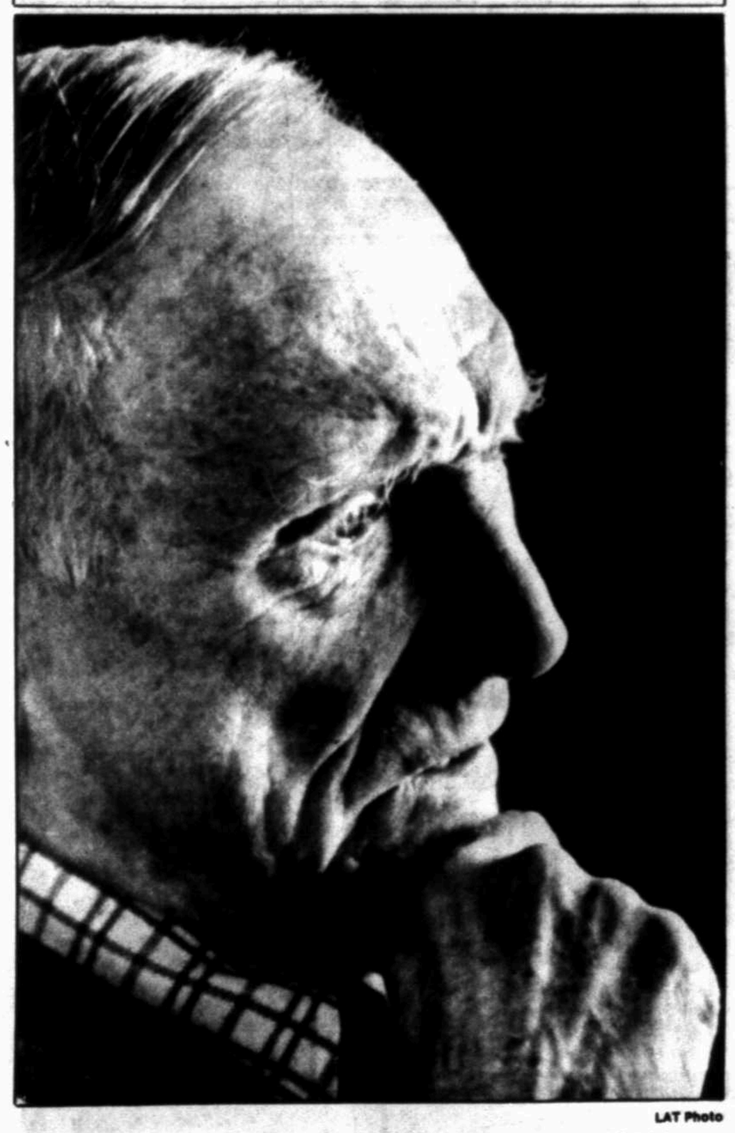

He has illustrated editions of books by Robert Louis Stevenson and Joseph Conrad.

The West Texas Watercolor Society has sponsored 10 previous juried competitions at The Museum.

The exhibit was made possible in part through a grant from the Lubbock City Council as recommended by the Lubbock Cultural Affairs council.

Sheets will discuss watercolor art with the public at a reception at 2 p.m. June 9 in The Museum.

Warren fancies the sword, lives by the pen

LAT Photo

"The basic idea comes in a flash, but then you have to build, you have to do a lot of construction. It takes years. It takes two or three years, but then there's an awful lot of trial and error and projected actions that get refused because they don't make sense, and one thing and another."

— Robert Penn Warren, 80, author and poet

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (LAT) — It starts with a mumbling, a word muttered on a walk through the woods with the dog, a phrase that meanders across a blank-page mind. A poem may swell to the surface while swimming, perhaps.

"Swimming is a wonderful way of writing," said Robert Penn Warren, the poet, white-haired now and sitting in the former onion barn he turned into a home 30 years ago. "Your body is totally occupied, there's nothing else and your mind goes blank."

A few words, a phrase, is how it begins, and "even if you don't know where it's going, it has some thrust. You pick a rhythmic phrase, and you let the rhythmic phrase hunt something to tie to."

Now a novel is something quite different. "A novel has to come in a flash to begin with," Warren said. He leaned forward, idly scratching the neck of a small black dog, the lone survivor of five canines who once inhabited the Warren household.

"The basic idea comes in a flash, but then you have to build, you have to do a lot of construction. It takes years. It takes two or three years, but then there's an awful lot of trial and error and projected actions that get refused because they don't make sense, and one thing and another."

For example, "All the King's Men," the 1946 fictionalized portrait of Louisiana's Long dynasty, probably the most famous work of fiction by this soon-to-be-80-year-old dean of American letters. "I can tell you right where I was when I started it," Warren recalled. "I remember the very day, sitting under a tree in Italy, in Umbria, with a blank sheet of paper on my knee."

Warren was determined to undertake a play that day, a verse play, and the title he chose for the work that would one day be "All the King's Men" was "Proud Flesh."

The name was a pun, he explained, "because 'proud' flesh is swollen flesh with pus in it." Soon Warren decided "the pun would never do, because no one would get it except me" — Warren laughed, still relishing this private joke — "Or some back countrymen.

"Anyway," he continued, "I wrote it as a verse play and I wasn't satisfied with it, and three years later I took it out and looked at it, and saw what was wrong with it. It should have been a novel, because my conception of it was really a novelistic conception. And having just that one thought started the whole thing over again with a novelistic conception. It changed the whole story."

It is mid-day, gray and still quite icy outside, nearly the time of day when Warren and his wife, writer Eleanor Clark, emerge from their separate writing rooms. Just now Warren is standing before a wide picture window, studying a volume that has arrived with the morning mail. These days, Warren finds himself drifting away from fiction, even in his reading.

History is what he leans to now, biography sometimes, and of course poetry; Warren is deluged still, always, with the worlds of all the new poets. "Fiction, I never thought fiction was," and he pauses, seeking just the right word, "sensible, somehow." As a writer, in any case, "There was a certain period in my life, I guess, when the poetry began to eat up the fiction."

In fact poetry nibbled at Warren from his earliest days. As a boy in the tobacco country of Guthrie, Ky. — "Oh, a young boy, about 9, I guess" — he remembers his joyous discovery of an old book stuck behind the shelf. The book was called "Poets in America," and "I turned to a page that had my father's name across the top, and there was some poems under that name," verse his father had composed at maybe 22 years of age.

"I was so surprised and confused, I guess, that when he got home I showed it to him." Worldlessly, Warren's businessman father took the book from the boy and walked away with it. Was he embarrassed? Ashamed to expose this slice of his long-past youth? Warren shrugs: "It was part of his life he had put away."

In Warren's own life, one of his fondest memories is of packing off for a master's degree at Berkeley. He speaks fondly of his academic experience there, but it is less, the experience of going to Berkeley than of getting there that truly rouses his recollections. So many of Warren's poems, so many for example, in "New and Selected Poems," the book Random House is publishing to mark his 80th birthday on May 29, take their titles, and certainly their poetic springboards, from places and sights in the United States.

The Warrens were old Southern stock, a family filled with great doses of war and history, "some of it quite funny," like the tale of the giant turnips spotted by Warren's maternal grandfather as he was leading a scouting party up the road in Mississippi. The turnips, as it happened, were not vegetables at all, but "a whole bunch of old women who had been caught by fellow scouts, and with their big skirts tied up over their heads, they looked just like turnips," Warren laughed, as if his Confederate cavalryman grandfather were sitting right there, as if he were just hearing the story for the very first time himself. "That was part of the war, too."

History marked the Warren men, branded them in such indelible ways, much like the names they bore for life. "My father's father had the habit of naming his sons for people he admired," Warren explained. "Benjamin Franklin of course was one. But another was called Cortez!"

All the military legend and lore was bound to have its effect on young Robert Penn Warren. Indeed, it was not a poet at all that he set out to be at age 14, but admiral of the Pacific Fleet. "Sure I did. I wanted to go to Annapolis." Warren even received a congressional appointment to the Naval Academy but, at the last moment, an accident kept him from enrolling. "So I went to the university instead, and studied to be a scientist." That plan, he said, chuckling, 'lasted about three weeks."

For at Vanderbilt University, Warren was quick to tumble into "the bad company of people teaching English." It was then, at 16, that Warren began writing verses.

Ringling Brothers to give Midland 'The Greatest Show on Earth'

Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus will be returning to Midland for its second appearance after a six-year absence.

There will be four big shows of "The Greatest Show On Earth" at the Al G. Langford Chaparral Center June 25 at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. and June 26 at 2 p.m. and 8 p.m.

Tickets are on sale at Chaparral Center's box office, Sears at Midland Park Mall and Odessa's Permian Mall. For more information, call Chaparral Center, 684-0811.

"The Greatest Show On Earth" brings to Midland such thrilling acts as Miguel Vasquez, "The Flying Vasquez," the first human ever to complete the quadruple somersault from the bar to the hands of a catcher. Wade Burck faces the savage fury of rare Burmese white tigers. Highwire heroism is displayed by the Tzekovi Troupe, and more as this circus brings 300 of the world's greatest circus performers to Midland.

Martin Mull, Twinkies & laughs star in 'White People in America'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Martin Mull, a white person and host of a comedy special called "Martin Mull Presents the History of White People in America," was sitting out back by his pool, dressed in a Hawaiian shirt, jeans and moccasins.

He also was drinking orange juice and eating Twinkies.

White folks are supposed to relax that way, said Mull, who will draw on his experiences and others' for the two-part special on pay-cable's Cinemax. The first part will appear five times in June, starting June 4. The second part will be on in July.

Mull said the idea for the special came over lunch with producer Allen Rucker. "I come from northern Ohio, a very very small town, a very white town. Allen comes from a similar town in Oklahoma," Mull said.

"I ordered macaroni and cheese and he said, 'You're such a white guy.' It went back and forth. You know, mayonnaise, white bread, Velveeta, Ritz crackers, until we realized there is a white culture. But we figured no one would touch it.

"About a year later I was talking over ideas for pay television with Charles Engel at Universal. I mentioned it and he bought it on the basis of just the title."

The program explores the stereotypes, misconceptions, habits, behavior, likes, dislikes, diet and manners of the white culture. "It's sort of like David Attenborough meets the Beaver's family," Mull said.

Fred Willard, Mull's sidekick from "Fernwood 2-Night," plays a typical white person and Mary Kay Place is his wife. Mull's wife, Wendy, who's expecting their first child, wrote two songs, "The White Folks Barbecue Song" and "The White Folks Fight Song." Harry Shearer, who was in "Spinal Tap" and "Saturday Night Live," directed.

Martin Mull

Mull and Rucker, who was co-producer and co-writer, are now at work on a book about white culture. "We were working on what an average white family would have for Thanksgiving dinner," Mull said. "We've already written six pages and we're still on the appetizers...I just hope the WASPs have a sense of humor, so all the other ethnic groups can finally have a laugh."

Mull's next project is to play Colonel Mustard in the movie version of the popular board game "Clue." "We had to sign a paper agreeing not to talk about the movie," he said. "All I can say is that it's very different and very unique."

Mull was last seen on television in the comedy series "Domestic Life," which received mixed reviews.

"I think the only reason they canceled us, since television is a business, was because we weren't getting the numbers. Some perfectly dreadful things get big ratings, so go figure. CBS kept moving us around and people couldn't find us. I think people tend to plan their viewing. Time magazine called it one of the 10 best shows, but that doesn't pay for my house.

"The No. 1 show in the ratings today is 'The Cosby Show.' I think the similarities between that show and 'Domestic Life' are very striking. Someone said Cosby's show was a black 'Ozzie & Harriet.' If that's true, ours was a white 'Ozzie & Harriet,' which is redundant."

Mull spent some time after "Domestic Life" working on his paintings. He photographs ceramic dogs and then makes large, life-like airbrush copies. One painting hanging on his wall showed the dogs playing football and was called "Fourth and 39."

He also has a ceramic collection of Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. His wife buys him a new piece each Christmas and birthday.

"I'd do another television series, but I'd miss the freedom I've felt with cable," Mull said. "Not four-letter words and topless ladies, but the freedom of attitude is what I'd miss. You have an opportunity to be real. I'd love to do more things for HBO." Home Box Office is the parent company of Cinemax.

Soviets take Old Masters collection home to Netherlands after two-century absence

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Peter the Great and Catherine the Great had an eye for art, and stocked up on Dutch and Flemish Old Masters. Many of those paintings haven't been seen outside the Soviet Union for more than two centuries — until now.

After a decade of negotiations, the Soviet Union is giving the Netherlands a look at a few works from the Hermitage museum's extensive collection of Dutch and Flemish art.

On exhibit here at the Boymans-van Beuningen Museum, the 41 paintings on loan from the Leningrad museum include works by 17th century masters Rembrandt, Rubens, Ruisdael and van Dyck.

Once the Winter Palace of the czars when Leningrad was known as St. Petersburg, the Hermitage has a major section devoted to Dutch and Flemish art — a passion of contemporary Soviet art lovers, according to museum art historian Paul Donker Duyvis.

"It's just strange to realize that someone far away in Russia has such a beautiful collection of Dutch art," said Duyvis, who visited the Hermitage in preparation for the loan exhibit.

"When I saw the 24 Rembrandts together, the Russian curators saw me looking and smiling and asked, 'Do you regret they are all here, and not in Holland?'" he said recently.

"But they bought the paintings at a very early period, and have a real interest in Dutch art," he continued. "They didn't steal the paintings like Napoleon did or the English with the statues in the Parthenon."

The Hermitage collection was started by Peter the Great, who ruled from 1682-1725.

DEAR ABBY

Grandma won't baby-sit

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: This is for "No Names, Please," who couldn't understand why neither her parents nor her in-laws would take her kids once in a while so she could have a little vacation.

I am a grandmother, and I won't keep my grandchildren either. I raised five by myself, and I was never ashamed to take them anywhere because they were taught how to behave. I'm sorry I can't say the same about my grandchildren.

I love the little tykes and it's not their fault that they weren't trained right, but I refuse to baby-sit or take them anywhere. If they don't get what they ask for in a store, they fall down and kick and scream. When they were at my house, they walked on the furniture, stood on the table and pulled things out of cupboards and drawers. I was exhausted trying to watch them. Meanwhile their mother (my daughter) paid no attention to them.

My neighbor and her husband just retired, and they were so afraid they might be drafted to baby-sit their grandchildren, they sold their home, got a post-office box and bought an RV. They keep traveling in self-defense.

Please print this so some young parents will understand why their parents won't help with the kids. — NO NAMES, EITHER

DEAR NO NAMES: You have lots of company. However, there are some people who are lucky enough to be able to write a letter like this one:

DEAR ABBY: I'm sorry for "No Names." My husband and I are only children, so our children are the only grandchildren on both sides. We have twin daughters and one son — all under 10 — and both sets of grandparents beg to baby-sit, or keep the kids for days or weeks if we'd let them. We actually have to be careful not to favor one set over the other. — LUCKY IN LONG BEACH

DEAR ABBY: I am a high school senior who will be 18 in June. I have been going steady with a 17-year-old girl for six months and want to give her a gold ring with two small diamonds and two small rubies.

My parents think it is improper to give a girl a ring at my age, and would rather see me buy her a bracelet. To me a ring is just a piece of jewelry, and has no more significance than a bracelet, necklace or earrings.

Please answer soon. — A KID FROM NEW YORK

DEAR KID: A ring may be "just a piece of jewelry" to you, but to most people it symbolizes a serious commitment. And until you're ready for one, give necklaces, earrings or bracelets.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for printing the letter signed "The Quiet One." I could have written it.

I suppose people mean well when they try to bring me out of my shell by teasing, "My goodness, you sure talk a lot!" Or by asking me in a group, "Why are you so quiet?" Such remarks do not "bring me out" or encourage me to talk; they have the opposite effect.

There is a saying that sums it up nicely: "If you don't understand my silence, you won't understand my words." — SPEECHLESS

DEAR SPEECHLESS: That "saying" strikes me as the ideal response to the clod who asks, "Why are you so quiet?" Silence may be golden, but the appropriate retort to an inappropriate question is worth its weight in platinum.

Ground turkey versatile meat

By LINDA ANDERSON

Red meat is delicious and nutritious — and very expensive for families raising hungry children. Seems like everyday meat gets more and more costly while the kids are growing bigger and bigger and eating more and more meat.

Some people solve the problem by serving more fish or chicken. Some dress up the potatoes and vegetables, hoping the family won't notice the meat is skimpy.

But kid's favorites are hard to duplicate without hamburger. It's impossible to make spaghetti meat sauce or chili out of fish. And some kids are not fooled by veggies.

For cooks who use a lot of hamburger — or ground beef — Louis Rich Company may have a solution. The company markets ground turkey, advertised to be used just like hamburger.

The ground turkey, packaged frozen in one-pound tube containers like pork sausage, is usually found in the frozen meat section of the supermarket, along with the frozen turkeys, chickens and fish sticks.

Knowing that turkey is a nutritious and economical way to get protein, we tried this frozen ground turkey to see (and taste) if it really is as versatile as hamburger. That's what its label advertising claimed.

The adult, teen and children taste-testers compared the turkey with ordinary hamburger for flavor, usefulness, price and advertising accuracy.

The ground turkey costs $1.39 per one-pound container (and can sometimes be found on sale for as little as 79-cents per pound.) Hamburger is usually available in the supermarket in several grades, with several prices. Although the price of meat is not one of the supermarket's most stable, ground beef can cost from $1.28 per pound for ordinary hamburger to $2.18 per pound for ground sirloin. (Prices listed are from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.) The different styles of hamburger are produced from different cuts of beef, but their major difference seems to be the amount of fat they contain. The more expensive the ground beef, the less fat it contains — as a general rule.

Judging by the fat content of the meat, the ground turkey won this round — when it was cooked, no fat rendered out. Or at least the amount of fat was so small we couldn't see it. This makes the turkey a better dollar value than beef hamburger; when paying for a pound of the turkey, a customer actually receives a pound of meat and not a ½-pound of meat and a ½-pound of fat.

We used ground turkey instead of hamburger to make several favorite dishes, including spaghetti, ground meat and macaroni skillet casserole, chili and meat loaf.

The results were unanimous. Everyone liked the ground turkey. In fact, in many of the dishes the testers couldn't tell they were eating turkey instead of beef. The meat loaf, because it is not simmered in flavorful sauces or spices, was the dish picked as having the most obvious flavor difference, but all the testers liked the turkey meat loaf as much as the beef.

Ground turkey seems to have a lighter flavor and finer texture, but was found to be just as versatile as hamburger — not to mention more economical and nutritious because of its low fat content.

The only complaint I have against the ground turkey is that sometimes it is hard to find in the supermarket. But I keep a supply in the freezer and only panic when I'm down to three or four pounds — we use it a lot.

Air conditioner maintenance keeps summer cool

By DENESE ALBRACHT

Denese Albracht

Few things are worse than a broken air conditioner on a hot, humid day — except the bill to get it fixed. Preventative maintenance can help avoid a possible breakdown during the summer months and make an air conditioner run more efficiently.

Since air conditioning is one of the largest single users of home energy, proper service and maintenance can help consumers hold down electric bills. Checking the system for warning signs is a simple matter. Put your hand in front of the air supply vents. If the air feels lukewarm, it could indicate a problem with the ductwork, compressor, evaporator or refrigerant.

You should also feel air movement from the vent. If you don't, it may indicate a fan problem, a dirty filter, dirty evaporator coils or ductwork leaks. Then check the condenser unit outside. It's normal for the air being discharged from the unit to be hot. If it isn't, there could be a problem with the compressor.

Fixing or maintaining a central air conditioning unit is usually not a job for a do-it-yourselfer. But because a service call can be costly, homeowers should know what to expect for their money.

Here are suggestions which should be included in a maintenance service call:

— Lubricate the condenser fan bearings, if not permanently sealed.

— Clean the air intake side of condenser coil.

— Tighten the electrical connections on the condenser, and check the operating current and supply voltage with volt amp meter.

— Check the refrigerant levels and pressures.

— Inspect the compressor start and run capacitors.

— Clean or replace the blower filter.

— Lubricate an unsealed blower fan motor and blower bearings. Check and adjust the belt tension and inspect the belt if the fan is belt-driven. Clean the blower wheel.

— Clean the evaporator coil and check the fin condition on blower unit.

— Clean and inspect the drain lines and pan in the blower unit.

— Check for excessive attic air leakage into the return air chamber of the blower unit.

Ask the service technician to provide a checklist of the maintenance provided for your unit, to insure that you're getting the most for your service dollar.

Birth-control pills are big business for manufacturers

NEW YORK (AP) — An estimated 60 million women worldwide choose oral contraceptives as their method of birth control, and that translates into big bucks for the six major U.S. manufacturers of the pill.

Although profitable, the business has had its problems for leader Ortho Pharmaceutical Corp. and the other major players.

One has been the waxing and waning of sales, corresponding to publicity about side effects associated with the pill.

Another problem has been occasional multimillion-dollar damage awards to women who have claimed serious illnesses from taking the pill. Although all pharmaceutical companies can be liable to such claims, lawsuits filed by women of childbearing age could pose higher risks for the manufacturers.

Still, oral contraceptives are the most popular temporary method of birth control in the United States, with more than 10 million users, says Ortho, a subsidiary of Johnson & Johnson based in Raritan, N.J.

The company says its products, whose hormone contents vary, cost on average $10 for a cycle of pills.

At that price, industry-wide U.S. sales would total $1.3 billion because women usually use 13 cycles of pills per year.

Fifty-three million prescriptions for oral birth control pills were dispensed by retail pharmacies in this country in 1983, the most recent year for which the Food and Drug Aminstration gives statistics. That represented somewhat less than 4 percent of all prescriptions dispensed by those outlets, the FDA said.

Dianne Kennedy, chief of the drug-use analysis branch of the FDA, said use of oral contraceptives increased steadily from 1960, when they were approved by the FDA, through 1968.

Use dipped in 1969, when the first studies associating the pill with an increased risk of blood clots were published, Ms. Kennedy said.

Sales quickly resumed rising, however, peaking in 1973 with 70 million prescriptions. It then drifted downward for the next six years.

"There were a lot of studies being done at that time on oral contraceptives and a lot of publicity," Ms. Kennedy said.

Sales turned upward again in 1979, and that trend has continued, she said.

Ortho Pharamceutical's Ortho-Novum products captured 37 percent of the market in 1983, the FDA said.

The company will not release other figures, but Forbes magazine reported in 1978 that Ortho's profits from oral contraceptives were $30 million to $35 million on revenue of $60 million to $70 million.

Many children have arthritis

ATLANTA (AP) — Arthritis affects people of all ages, including thousands of children, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

Pediatric rheumatology is an emerging medical specialty that focuses on the treatment of children with arthritis.

This does not mean more children are getting arthritis, but rather that arthritis in children is becoming diagnosed more easily and that better treatments are available for it.

Arthritis can begin in infancy and last into adulthood, but most children with a form of the disease grow up without significant physical disability.

Bangladesh government changes death toll estimate

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — Relief workers passed out food, blankets and vitamins today to typhoon survivors trying to patch together their shattered homes in the Bay of Bengal.

The government dismissed reports of tens of thousands dead as "guesswork" and said no more than 6,000 people had died.

Radio Bangladesh said Wednesday a new storm was brewing in the bay. Yutaka Kuwabara of Japan's meteorological agency said this morning satellite photos showed a huge cloud ring over the bay but this was only a "possible" indication of new bad weather.

Meanwhile, martial law president Lt. Gen. Hassain Ershad visited areas north of Dhaka Wednesday, where floods cut off some communities and left 800,000 homeless. One death was reported.

Whole populations of the storm-swept islands of the bay were living on meager relief goods, although pledges of aid were pouring in from around the world.

On the silt-formed islands and along the nation's southern coastline, journalists flying in military helicopters saw human bodies washed ashore, along with hundreds of dead farm animals.

People sitting amid the rubble of smashed huts waved to the helicopters to land, apparently thinking they were carrying relief goods.

Some men were reassembling thatch huts. Others huddled under lean-to structures and went without shelter.

Abu-nayeem Amin Ahmed, a presidential aide, said in a briefing the government has been checking with local officials and investigating news reports in Dhaka that up to 100,000 were killed in the Saturday storm.

"No more than 5,000 to 6,000 perished in this catastrophe," said Abu-Nayeem Amin Ahmed, top presidential aide.

"The figures given so far are just guesswork," said Ahmed.

The official count of bodies stood today at 1,515, and authorities said 90 percent of the dead were from Urir Char island, 220 miles south of Dhaka.

Many of the Urir Char dead, however, were found on the mainland or washed up onto other islands, official said.

Most of the 1,000 Urir Char residents who crouched in orderly rows awaiting food, typhoid shots and vitamins had very little before the storm hit. They lived off rice and vegetable crops that grew abundantly in the rich delta soil.

In the midst of the overwhelming misery and woe, a few tears were shed in joy when families rediscovered loved ones who had been lost in the storm.

Abdul Wahab, 45, who told of hanging onto a bamboo pole as the waves washed carried him to the mainland, embraced his daughter, Jahanara, 15, who had been swept through the sea to another island. His wife and three other children were still missing.

A government cyclone warning was announced over Radio Bangladesh last Thursday and was repeated every half hour. The storm first hit the offshore islands around midnight Friday.

But one survivor on Urir Char, Abul Kashem, said the only transistor radio on the island had been stolen on Wednesday.

Reports on the number of people actually living on Urir Char ranged from 6,000 to 20,000. It had been estimated that 7,000 people had perished out of Urir Char's population of 10,000.

The Red Cross had said through its international offices in Geneva that 2.3-4 million Bangladeshis were affected by the storm and 275,000 "lost everything." Earlier, the Red Cross had said 6 million were affected.

The southern delta and islands of Banglaedesh, then East Pakistan, were ravaged by one of history's worst natural disasters in 1970. The official death toll was 500,000 and local authorities in the area say they believe it was one million.

An unidentified woman grieves the loss of her husband and children in Dhaka, Bangladesh. Survivors of the killer storm in the Bay of Bengal lined up for cholera vaccinations and helicopters ferried water pumps in a hurried effort to prevent disease from taking more lives.

Bangladesh scientists had been studying how to predict path of killer storms

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — As a typhoon and high waves mauled Bangladesh last week, two scientists from that country were in Louisiana learning how to predict the paths of such killer storms.

Anwar Ali and Dewan Quadir left Louisiana State University last Sunday for Dhaka, Bangladesh, to study the aftermath of a disaster they had spent the past year training to prevent, said Oscar Hugh, a professor at LSU's Coastal Studies Institute.

"This has happened there before and they were so caught up in finishing their reports and getting on an airplane home that it really didn't have time to sink in," said Hugh.

Tens of thousands were feared dead in the typhoon which roared out of the Bay of Bengal on Saturday, driving huge waves that swept bay islands clean and destroyed coastal communities.

Authorities in Bangladesh knew about the storm last Thursday with the help of a computer-satellite system, developed in part by LSU researchers, Hugh said.

"What happens now is that the country has to look at its population distribution. It's an internal problem," he said. "What broke down was their ability to move their people away from the islands and the coast."

Most of the thousands of people who live on the small islands in the bay and along the country's low coastal areas don't own radios and have virtually no way of receiving communications, Hugh said.

"Nor is there, at present, any effective system for a mass evacuation of inhabitants of the areas, even if they did receive advance warning."

Hugh said LSU developed its $7.4 million monitoring system during the past year as part of a project funded by the U.S. Aid Agency and NASA.

The Agro-Climatic Environmental Monitoring Project was designed to aid the area with both agricultural planning and weather prediction.

"LSU received specialized software through the Navy and our engineers modified it to make a specialized system for Bangladesh," said Hugh.

The system, operated by the Bangladesh Space Research and Remote Sensing Organization in Dhaka, is designed to take satellite data and convert it by computer into pictures monitored for potentially dangerous weather conditions.

A set of 11 ground stations and one buoy anchored in the Bay of Biscay transmit data daily from Bangladesh to a polar-orbiting satellite. Other stations around the globe transmit similar data to other satellites.

The NOAA satellite records the earth's temperature, foliage density, cloud masses, water temperatures, wind speed, wave height and a host of other data.

Hugh said the coast of Louisiana and Bangladesh are very similar in elevation and topography — at or near sea level with very little to stop the huge waves which accompany hurricanes.

"What happens in a situation like this is the wind pushes against the ocean water, causing the sea level to tilt upward toward the coast, and you get a massive wall of water topped with another five or 10 feet of waves."

The researcher added, however, that New Orleans and other Gulf Coast cities from Texas to Florida probably would have ample time to evacuate and would not suffer the same death toll as Bangladesh.

"Fortunately, we have the capabilities of getting an early warning to the coastal populations that are endangered," said Hugh. "We must somehow convey to them that the danger is real and terribly life threatening.

"That can be the hardest part, since we haven't had a really bad hurricane in a long time."

Soviets: 'Star Wars' threatens arms talks

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — U.S. and Soviet negotiators today began a second round of arms control talks that the Soviets say are threatened by U.S. research into a space-based defense system.

The two sides met for an hour and 50 minutes at the Soviet mission, according to a U.S. spokesman who didn't want to be identified. He said some of the delegates left 30 minutes earlier but "the principal negotiators" stayed on.

Before the U.S. delegation arrived, Soviet chief negotiator Victor P. Karpov told reporters he was a "practical optimist" about possible progress at the talks. The "common goal" of the superpowers is "not allowing an arms race in space," Karpov said. "Now our countries should practically agree how to do so."

Max M. Kampelman, the head of the U.S. delegation, faced Karpov across a negotiating table and said, "Let's hope this session will be a constructive one."

Karpov told Kampelman he hoped preparatory work done during the first round of talks and the recess "will enable us to move faster forward here."

The resumption of talks follows a five-week lapse during which both sides returned to their capitals for consultations after a first round that showed little progress.

In Moscow on Wednesday, Communist Party leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev called for a renewal of superpower detente. However, he said U.S. research into a space-based missile defense could lead to "the scrapping of every prospect for an end to the arms race."

The U.S. research program, known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, has been dubbed "Star Wars."

Karpov said Wednesday as he arrived in Geneva that the Star Wars program "sharply reduced" chances of an agreement.

He urged the United States to scrap the program in order to "open the way to radical reductions in nuclear arms and, ultimately, to...complete elimination of nuclear arms everywhere."

The Soviets have charged that the United States is using the arms talks as "camouflage for its military preparations." The United States has said it will not give up research on the project while arms negotiations continue, and the issue is thought to be the main stumbling block in the talks.

U.S. officials have said the Soviets have prevented progress in the arms control talks by backtracking on positions they took in previous negotiations.

Kampelman avoided making accusations in his arrival statement, but he said he was disappointed with the "slow pace" of the first round.

Gorbachev has been quoted as saying the first round was "completely fruitless."

Kampelman said the Americans returned with "broad authority," for the second round of talks, and that the Soviets have "similar flexibility and that (they) will work with us to achieve equitable and verifiable agreements." He avoided mentioning the space defense system.

U.S. Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, in Geneva as part of a group of congressional observers, said President Reagan had given the U.S. negotiators more flexibility for the second round of talks.

Space and defense weapons are discussed in Geneva in sessions headed by Kampelman and Soviet negotiator Yuli A. Kvitsinsky. The two sides also are discussing intermediate-range weapons in talks headed by American Maynard W. Glitman and Soviet Alexei A. Obukhov, and strategic nuclear forces in talks led by John G. Tower from the United States and Karpov.

During the first round of talks, which began in March, each subgroup met once a week. Extra sessions were held near the end of the round in an apparent attempt to make progress before the recess.

The meetings were held alternately in the Soviet compound and U.S. arms control offices, located less than a mile apart on Geneva's Avenue de la Paix, or Peace Avenue.

Canadian cancer victim completes 4,924-mile run across country

VICTORIA, British Columbia (AP) — Steve Fonyo, who lost his left leg to cancer when he was 12, has completed a 14-month run across Canada that raised nearly $7 million to fight cancer and made him a hero.

Weary from his 4,924-mile journey, the 19-year-old runner covered the final seven miles through Victoria on Wednesday in a steady rainfall that did not deter tens of thousands of supporters from lining the streets to cheer him on.

At the rocky Pacific coast, Fonyo walked down a red carpet to the waterline and waded, grinning, two steps into the sea.

"It's great — it's over," Fonyo shouted as he returned to shore.

Canadian officials dubbed him a hero for completing his "Journey for Lives," but Fonyo turned aside such suggestions.

"Everybody calls me a hero," he told a news conference. "I still feel like a did before."

Officials of the Canadian Cancer Society, sponsors of the run, said Fonyo has raised about $4 million from private donors, plus nearly $3 million in pledges from the governments of Canada, British Columbia and Alberta.

The premier of British Columbia, Bill Bennett, announced a scholarship for Fonyo, who dropped out of school after ninth grade, to earn a commercial helicopter pilot's license.

But first, the young man is heading for a three-week vacation in the Cook Islands in the South Pacific to relax and unwind.

"I've had enough running for a while," he told a news conference. "I don't think I'll be running on the beach."

Once he returns, there are plans for a book on the journey and for commercial endorsements.

"I think Steve Fonyo is a new Canadian hero and he is marketable," Terry Roberts, chairman of special events for the Canadian Cancer Society, told reporters.

Fonyo, son of Hungarian immigrants who own and operate the Pyrogy House restaurant in Vernon, British Columbia, lost his left leg to bone cancer when he was 12.

Two years of monthly chemotherapy followed. The treatments made him vomit and caused his hair to fall out, but left him free of the disease.

The inspiration to run across Canada, the world's second-largest country, came from Terry Fox, who attempted the feat in 1980, also on an artificial leg replacing a limb lost to cancer.

Fox, who suffered a recurrence of cancer and died before finishing his run, is now memorialized in monuments and statues across the country.

Fonyo's run began in a snowstorm on March 31, 1984, when he dipped his artificial leg in the Atlantic Ocean at St. John's, Newfoundland.

At first Fonyo was treated as an interloper trying to take advantage of the affection showered on Terry Fox. As Fonyo's journey neared its conclusion, though, the crowds grew larger and the acclaim greater.

American being investigated in Peking fire

PEKING (AP) — An American businessman said today that Chinese authorities have detained him for six weeks in connection with a hotel fire in Harbin that killed 10 people, including his partner.

"Basically, they won't let me leave. I can do everything except leave town," Richard S. Ondrik, 34, said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press from the northeast Chinese city.

Ondrik survived the April 19 blaze at the 15-story Swan Hotel, and the Chinese say he is under investigation while they probe the cause of the blaze, which gutted the 11th floor.

Ondrik, from Houston, said he is a Hong Kong-based representative for Energy Projects, Southeast Asia Ltd., a company that does business in China.

Ondrik said he believes the Chinese want to hold him responsible for the fire, which killed his partner, Alan Eng, five North Koreans and four hotel staff.

"I have no idea what is going on," he said. "They don't consult with me, they don't tell me who is involved. All I want to know is when it's going to end."

He would not go into detail about the fire, but said: "I ended up on the first floor and came out of shock about two weeks later."

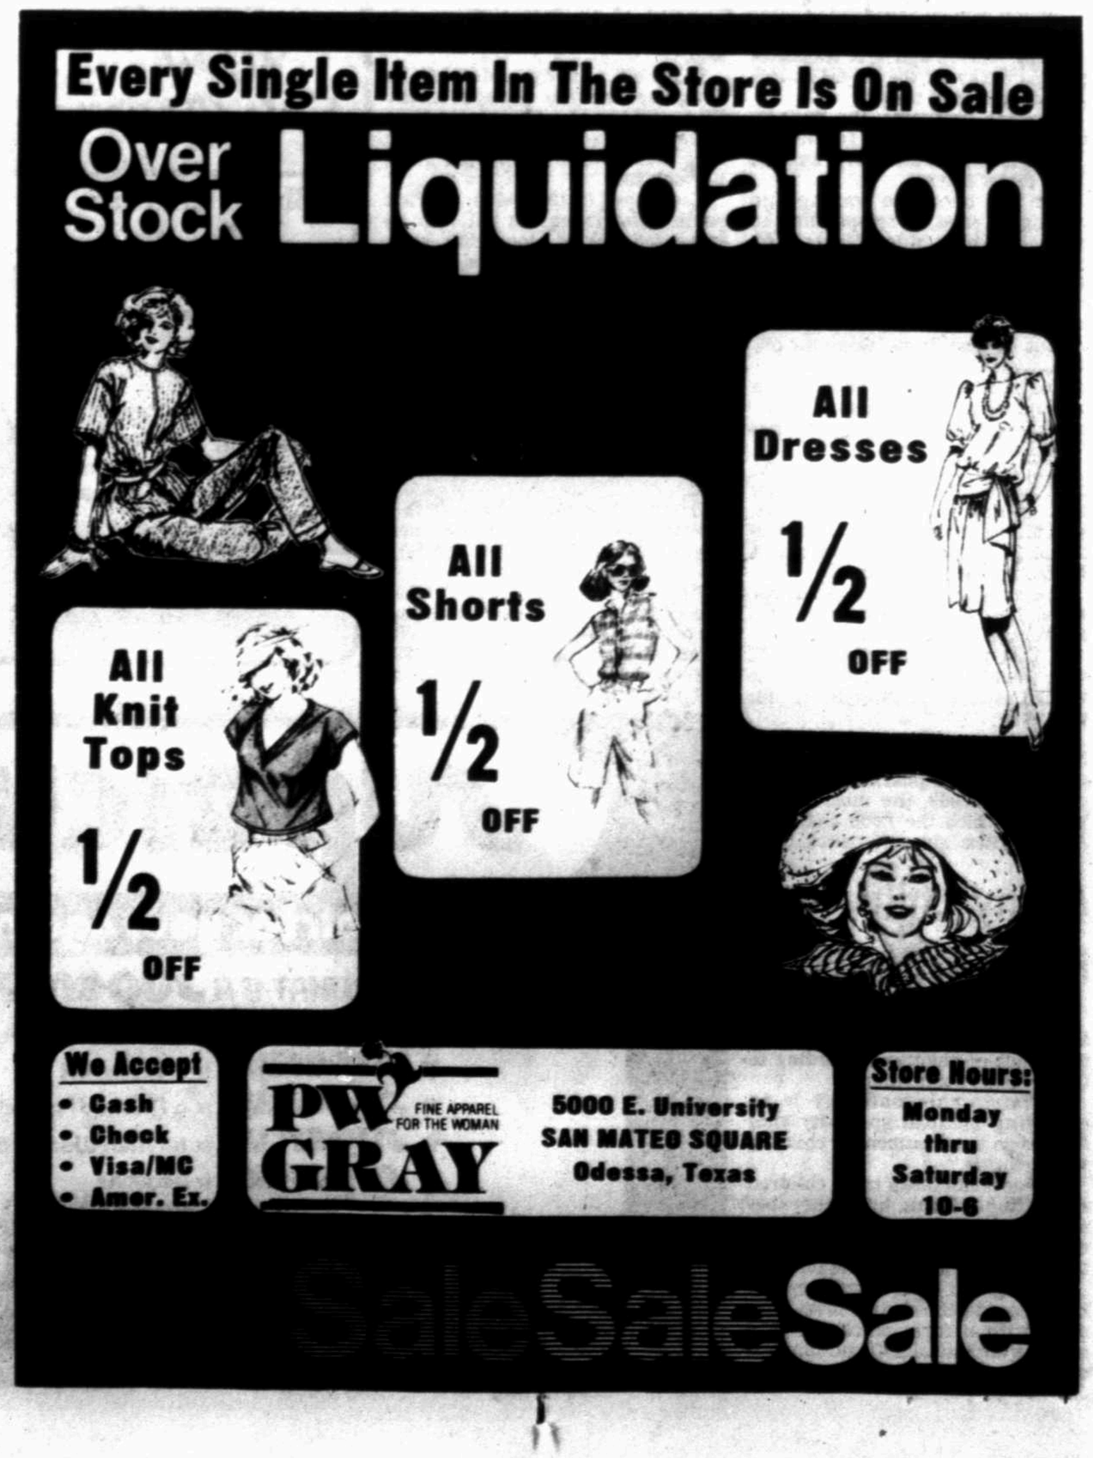

Ondrik said U.S. diplomats have met with him twice, and he claimed his case has been raised "at very high levels" four or five times in Peking.

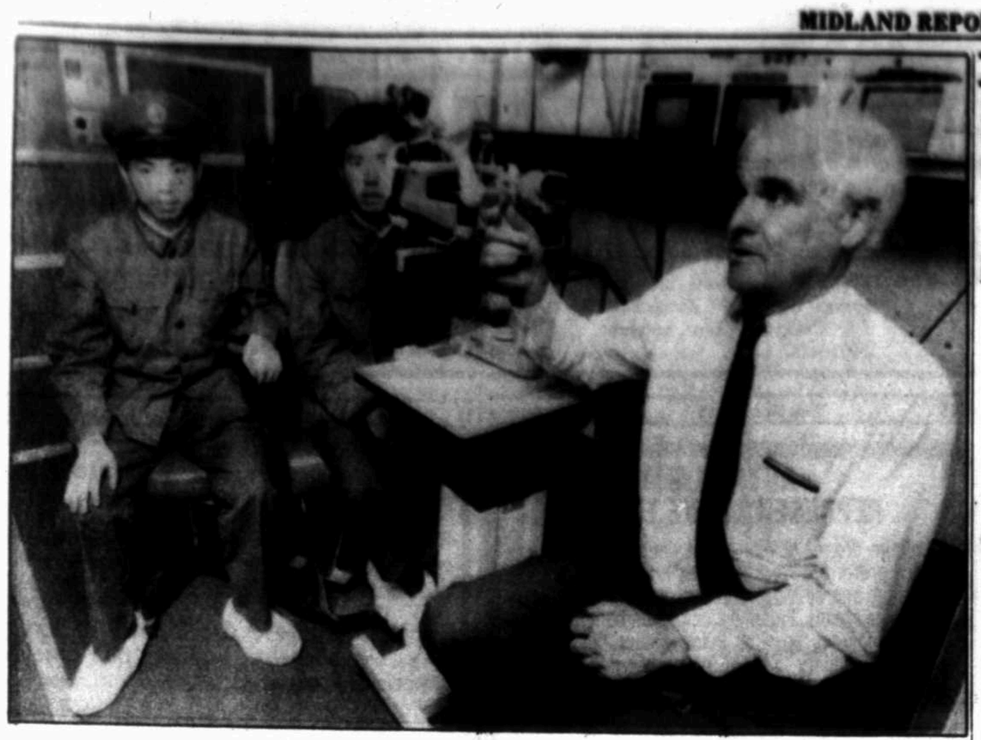

U.S. Embassy spokesman Anthony Sariti said he could not comment on the case. However official U.S. sources who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the issue of Ondrik's detention was raised when U.S. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige visited Peking earlier this month.

Sun Zhijie, spokesman for the Harbin foreign affairs office, declined to divulge details of Ondrik's case or specify when he could leave, but said, "The investigation basically is over."

Ondrik said he is watched by two plainclothes policemen staying in an adjacent room of the International Hotel, where he has been living since the blaze.

The officers do not follow him, but Ondrik said he must report daily and inform them when he goes outside. "It is a little difficult for foreigners to get lost in this town," he said.

Presidents of Lebanon, Syria search for ways to end battle

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Artillery fire rocked Beirut's refugee camps today as the presidents of Lebanon and Syria searched for ways to halt the 11-day battle between Shiite Moslem forces and Palestinian guerrillas that has claimed 420 lives.

Meanwhile, the Islamic Jihad terrorist group, believed to have ties to the Islamic regime in Iran, on Wednesday claimed responsibility for killing a British professor and kidnapping an American and two Frenchmen.

In a statement to a Western news agency, the shadowy group said it would not "let anyone rest" until Moslem extremists jailed in Kuwait were freed and the United States and France halt what the group said was their support for Iraq in its war against Iran.

Warplanes roared over the Lebanese capital at midmorning. Local radio stations said they were Israeli jets monitoring the fighting in and around the refugee camps of Sabra, Chatilla and Bourj el-Barajneh.

A police report said 12 people were killed and 85 wounded in dusk-to-dawn hostilities. This raised the known casualty toll to 420 killed and 1,888 injured since the Shiites attacked the camps May 19 to prevent the Palestinians from rebuilding the power base they lost in Israel's 1982 invasion.

Presidents Amin Gemayel of Lebanon and Hafez Assad of Syria met in a third session of summit talks in Damascus today amid reports an agreement to end the camp battles was imminent.

Gemayel flew to the Syrian capital on Wednesday, shortly after narrowly escaping death in an artillery attack on his hilltop palace in suburban Baabda east of Beirut. Shells set his private wing and office on fire and showered him with broken glass as he ate lunch in the adjacent dining room.

Police reported that two shells also exploded within a few yards of the entrance to U.S. Ambassador Reginald Bartholomew's residence in neighboring Yarze. No casualties or damage were reported.

Gemayel held two rounds of talks with Assad Wednesday night and the third got under way at 11 a.m. today at Assad's Mohajerin presidential palace, Lebanon's state radio said.

A caller to a Western news agency who claimed to represent Islamic Jihad said it killed 53-year-old Denis Hill, an English professor at the American University of Beirut. He had been missing since Monday, and was found shot in the head.

The caller, speaking in Arabic, said Hill was killed trying to escape his captors "who wanted to interrogate him about his suspicious activities in Beirut."

The caller also said Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy War, had kidnapped David P. Jacobsen, the American director of the university hospital, on Tuesday, and Frenchmen Jean-Paul Kauffman and Michel Seurat last week.

It was the first claim of responsibility for the abduction of Jacobsen, 54, of Huntington Beach, Calif., and the two Frenchmen. Islamic Jihad is believed to be a Shiite Moslem group.

Witness says he gave gun to Agca

ROME (AP) — A prosecutor today pressed a Turk accused of conspiring to kill Pope John Paul II to explain why he was in Bulgaria at the same time convicted assailant Mehmet Ali Agca was picking up a false passport.

Omer Bagci, on the witness stand for a second day, insisted he had only spent a few hours in Bulgaria in late August 1980, and that he had met with no one. On Wednesday Bagci testified he had given Agca the gun he used to shoot the pope.

Bagci, three other Turks and three Bulgarians are accused of complicity in the attempt on the pope's life in St. Peter's Square on May 13, 1981.

Antonio Albano, the prosecutor who recommended the indictments against Bagci, said that Bulgaria, possibly with Soviet support, sought to kill the pope to end his support for the Solidarity free trade union in his native Poland.

Marini said Wednesday that Bagci's testimony has shed new light on the alleged plot to kill the pope and that he is studying whether new charges should be issued.

Two of the accused Bulgarians are former Bulgarian Embassy officials and the third is the Rome station chief of the Bulgarian airline. Bulgaria has denied any involvement in the alleged plot.

Bagci said Wednesday that he gave Agca the gun he used to shoot the pope in St. Peter's Square, but insisted he did not know what it was to be used for.

The stocky, balding Bagci also told the court that three or four Turks came to his house in Switzerland late one night a month before the attack and gave him a package containing the gun.

Two of those Turks,Erdem Eyup and Mahmot Inan, were named in court, but Marini said they had not been indicted because Agca, the state's star witness, had been vague about their roles in the alleged plot.

He said Bagci's testimony was a "new development" in the case. Marini said he had asked for a transcript of Bagci's testimony to determine if new charges should be issued.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Liberian sentenced for treason

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) — A Liberian accused of conspiring with an American to overthrow head of state Samuel Doe has been sentenced to 10 years in prison. He pleaded guilty to treason.

During the three-day hearing that ended Wednesday, the prosecution said that Elmer Johnson, 28, recruited William Henry Woodhouse in the United States last autumn to help him install a Marxist government.

The two men were arrested in Monrovia last Nov. 3 following a shootout with police. Woodhouse was sentenced to 10 years in prison on April 3 after pleading guilty to "mercenarism."

NATO ships trail Soviet ships

LONDON (AP) — Ships from the United States and four other NATO alliance countries earlier this month trailed the largest Soviet naval task group ever deployed in the Mediterranean, said NATO's naval command center.

It said in a statement Wednesday that eight Soviet ships, led by the aircraft carrier Kiev, left the Mediterranean through the Strait of Gibraltar on May 23 and was last reported to be northwest of Britain.

The statement said the other Soviet ships were two cruisers, four destroyers and a frigate.

Art dealer arrested for forgery

TOKYO (AP) — Tokyo police have arrested a Japanese art dealer who allegedly made $72,000 by selling counterfeit lithographs of French painter Pierre Auguste Renoir's "Girl in a White Apron."

Kazuo Yamada, 31, was arrested on charges of fraud and forgery of a private document for selling to two Japanese art galleries 345 prints of what he claimed were a limited French-made edition of the famous Renoir oil painting, police official Kaoru Ishida said today.
