Ask Us

Q—Is there a state law requiring fences around wrecking yards?

A—Yes, but with three exceptions. If the wrecking yard was in existance before June 1972 the fence law does not apply. After June 1972, the law does not apply to zoned industrial areas or unzoned areas (normally outside city limits) or if screened by natural objects.

Snyder, Ira ISDs grouped in latest funding proposal

AUSTIN — Several lawmakers say a school consolidation proposal, impacting at least two Scurry County school districts, is expected to be considered Wednesday by the House.

Sponsors say consolidation is the state's only option for meeting a June 1 court deadline for education finance reform.

The proposal calling for the consolidation of school districts would combine Snyder and Ira, while Hermleigh would not be affected.

But the chairman of the Senate Education Committee Monday proposed another idea: shifting taxes on $40 billion worth of business property among school districts to help equalize funding.

If lawmakers don't come up with a constitutional school finance plan by the deadline, they face a court order to halt state education aid. School districts rely on state aid and local property taxes.

House members say their consolidation proposal would allow existing school districts to keep their identity, including maintaining their football teams.

"We believe that this is the only alternative that we have left that will prevent the judge from shutting off money on June 1," said House Public Education Committee Chairwoman Libby Linebarger, D-Manchaca.

But Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, said his proposal to redistribute a portion of the total $600 billion in property wealth would be more acceptable to the Senate than school consolidation. He said he believes senators would vote for consolidation only "as an absolute last resort."

He said that under his proposal,

Court tables board's request for interim airport manager

Scurry County commissioners took no action Monday concerning the airport board's recommendation of the need for an interim manager.

Wayland Huddleston, president of the airport board, told the court there have been several problems because no one has manager authority.

"The bills have not been paid and checks for hanger rentals have not been deposited," Huddleston said.

Joe Vincent, airport board member, said, "If someone flys in there is no one who can tell them they can or cannot do something."

County Judge Bob Doolittle called the problems "minor" and said that they can be taken care of by himself and Commissioner C.D. Gray Jr. The airport is in Gray's precinct.

Huddleston reiterated the need for a interim manager after saying there were more than "just minor problems" at the airport. "There have been some major problems, like a hanger being left unlocked all night long...we are not blaming the employees because they do not have any authority," Huddleston said.

Doolittle said he had held a meeting with the two employees at the airport. He said he would talk with them again and explain that while they are on duty they do have authority and if any problems or questions of any nature arise to contact him or Gray.

Two part-time employess are currently working full-time shifts at the airport until a manger-mechanic is hired by the county.

Huddleston told the court, "You are in violation of the by-laws, primarly concerning the hiring of employees."

Huddleston and Vincent said they are concerned because the board was not being kept up to date concerning the hiring of an airport manager.

"You have to realize hiring of employees is going to be done by commissioners court," Doolittle

Switching energy providers unlikely, WTC trustees learn

Western Texas College trustees learned Monday there appears to be a major roadblock in their efforts to cut energy costs at the institution.

In leiu of a proposed 15.32 percent rate increase being requested by TU Electric, trustees had requested the feasibility of contracting with a separate utility service. However, trustees were told Monday that Western Texas is situated within an area "singly certified" to TU Electric by the Public Utilities Commission.

"If you are considering an alternative source, what you must do is get PUC to redefine the certification area," said Daryl Thomas, manager of the Snyder area TU Electric office. "The problem with that is, it opens up a wide range of issues for them all across the state. If they redefine this certification area, it sets a precedence...like opening Pandora's Box."

Thomas said TU Electric is "going to stick with the boundaries until we are instructed otherwise," noting that the company has a major investment in the area.

Asked if the delivery point for electricty could be located outside the service area, Thomas responded, "The college campus is still in a single service area, whether you go there or they come to you. The other utility would be in violation of that area designated by PUC."

Thomas noted that certification areas were set up by PUC in 1976. In some areas, multiple certification was granted, but not in Snyder. The boundaries were set, Thomas said, to help protect the consumer. Competing companies led to a large duplication of facilities, and the consumer eventually had to bear the cost, he noted.

Special populations, local TV proposal heard by WTC board

Forty-four percent of Western Texas College students are considered "special population" students, college board members were informed during their May meeting Monday.

Trustees heard reports concerning special populations and a concept for local television during the meeting, held in the administration board room.

The board also approved a bid for boiler repair and a request for the rodeo team to attend the College National Finals Rodeo.

Carolyn Osborn, special populations coordinator for the college, said 44 percent of the students enrolled through Western Texas College are considered special population students in one form or another.

Special populations include students who are physically handicapped, learning disabled, academically disadvantaged, economically disadvantaged or who have limited English proficiency.

Others are students in correctional institutions and those who are considered in a situation of gender bias, such as a woman taking golf/landscape technology or a man studying to be a nurse.

Some $92,000 in Carl Perkins federal funds were provided to Western Texas College this past year for special populations students enrolled in vocational programs. Next year's allocation is expected to be $102,000. The increase depends on the number of Pell grants issued. WTC's increase is due primarily to an increase of students at the Price Daniel Unit on Pell grants.

Carl Perkins funds are used for vocational programs to update equipment and teacher skills, add classes and aid students directly. In aiding students, Osborn's department can provide funds for transportation, child care, books and materials such as uniforms.

Her department also aids in career counseling, job placement, tutoring, language training and referral to other applicable agencies.

Osborn said that between 75 and 94 percent of the students enrolled in vocational courses are considered special population students. Vocational instruction includes cosmetology, criminal justice, diesel, golf/landscape, nursing, management, office systems and welding.

Trustees also heard from John Zalman, who is proposing a low power television station in Snyder, which would broadcast primarily educational and informational shows.

"This would be local people communicating to local people about local issues," said Zalman, who added that, if feasible, such a

HISD board reorganizes

Neil Beeks was elected president and two new board members were sworn in during a meeting of the Hermleigh public school trustees Monday.

Other officers chosen were Tony Lambaren as vice president and Jimmy Hudgins as secretary. Swearing in ceremonies were held for James Rinehart and Milton Adams, elected to the board May 1.

In other action, the board approved a request from the senior class to borrow a van for the senior trip. The seniors will be required to provide insurance.

Trustees also adopted a transfer policy and approved payment of bills.

The feller on Deep Creek says, "A mugger is a guy who takes your money without getting elected."

Dr. Robert Hargrove, long-time Snyder dentist and civic leader, moved to Lubbock a few months ago.

Hargrove says one advantage of living in the city is the ability to find an indoor walking place during bad weather. Folks in Lubbock use the mall for just such purposes, even in good weather.

Hargrove, who misses his daily coffee sessions in Snyder, told about an elderly couple walking and holding hands. The next day he saw the same couple. This time they were not only holding hands, the man had a firm grip on his wife's elbow.

Bob said he thought about the couple and decided what a good relationship they must have, even after so many years together.

Hargrove saw them again and again. At times they were not only holding hands, but the husband would have his arm around his wife's waist.

The urge was too great, and he decided to strike up a conversation with the frisky couple.

The husband also had a good sense of humor. "It's not affection," he said. "It's protection."

The husband further explained, "If I let go of her for just a second, she'll start shopping and spending money."

Shopping has changed. In the ole days, it wasn't unusual to see a women run down to the store in curlers and no makeup.

You can now observe, with all the hidden video cameras, the gals make sure they look good before heading out.

Navy men torpedo proposal to lift ban on homosexuals

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — From an aircraft carrier's hangar deck to the torpedo room of a nuclear submarine, the message from most of the sailors was clear: Keep the Navy's ban on homosexuals.

"It's the morals I was raised with and the morals I raised my children with," George Pickels, a 14-year Navy man who wears a tattoo of a bare-breasted woman, said aboard the carrier USS Kennedy.

Petty Officer James Walters, a crewman on the submarine USS Montpelier, said "you've got a lot of people out there" who favor lifting the ban. "But they don't know what it's like down here," he said.

Walters and Pickels had the prevailing sentiment Monday as the Senate Armed Services Committee came to the Norfolk Naval Base for a hearing on the issue. Another hearing will be held next Monday at a base not yet named.

Members of the panel headed by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., visited several ships to sound out the sailors who will have to serve with homosexuals if President Clinton sticks to his decision to lift the ban. Nunn appeared particularly impressed by the cramped quarters and lack of privacy for crews that must spend months at sea.

After the tours, the senators listened to almost four hours of comments from Navy and Marine officers and enlisted personnel. Most of it was critical of the idea that the Pentagon's stand against homosexuals is similar to past discrimination against blacks and women.

But two of the speakers at the hearing challenged the notion that having homosexuals in the ranks would cause trouble.

Texas House members ok proposal for prison bonds

AUSTIN (AP) — Voters would decide on a $1 billion prison bond proposal, including funding for a new state jail system for nonviolent offenders, under a measure that has been passed by the House.

Rep. Allen Hightower, sponsor of the measure, said Texans should understand the need to vote for the bonds if they read their daily newspapers.

"The front page says somebody's killed, somebody's shot through somebody's window, somebody's raped, somebody's mugged, somebody's robbed," Hightower, D-Huntsville, said Monday.

"If they want this jail program that the state's building to empty their county jails, and give violent criminals twice as long in the penitentiary as they're serving now, they've got to have facilities to do it with," he said.

The proposed new jail system would be created under separate criminal justice reform legislation, which would keep state penitentiaries for violent offenders.

About 19,800 inmates sentenced to state prison currently are in county jails awaiting transfer. The glut of criminals has led to the early release of prison inmates and criticism of the justice system.

The bond proposal, which earlier passed the Senate, won House approval 124-5. It was returned to senators for consideration of House amendments.

The measure had been targeted last week by minority lawmakers who said they would oppose its passage until the state's public school funding crisis was solved. They said education should be Texas' priority.

Lawmakers have until June 1 to come up with a constitutional plan to equalize funding among school districts, or they face a court-ordered cutoff of state education aid. School districts rely on state money and local property taxes.

"Our point was not to kill" the bond proposal, said Rep. Wilhelmina Delco, D-Austin, who voted for its passage Monday. The measure last week had failed to get the necessary two-thirds vote in the 150-member House.

"I'm very well aware that we do have to pay for those prisons," Ms. Delco said.

Police note one arrest

Snyder police made one arrest but otherwise reported little activity Monday.

Police arrested a 26-year-old man in the 400 block of Coliseum Drive at 10:18 p.m. for expired motor vehicle registration, no driver's license and no insurance.

At 10:13 p.m., police were notified of a bicycle stolen from the 300 block of 29th Street. A report for Class B theft was filed.

Officers also worked one minor traffic accident at 10:27 a.m. Monday in the 1700 block of 25th Street. Involved were a 1984 Oldsmobile driven by Neva Fowler Howell of 3007 El Paso and a 1978 Chevrolet pickup driven by Margarita Vasquez Puente of 2805 College Ave.

Applications available for heritage program

Through the Family Land Heritage Program, the Texas Department of Agriculture honors families who have maintained an agriculture operation on the same land for 100 consecutive years or longer.

Since 1974, some 2,749 properties have been certified through the Family Land Heritage Program. "This year marks the 20th anniversary of the program, and I hope to get as many new families involved as possible," Texas Department of Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry said.

Anyone wishing to apply or needing additional information can call Bill Breese at (512)-463-7517. Applications can also be picked up at the Scurry County Courthouse in the county judge's office.

First Discovery series for young

NEW YORK (AP) — Scholastic-Cartwheel has added two titles to its First Discovery series of books for young children: "Birds" and "Flowers."

Each 24-page book contains five to eight brightly printed transparent pages that allow children to peel away the petals of a flower or discover a bird's nest in the branches of a tree.

"Birds" describes the anatomy of birds, how they build their nests, their similarities and differences. "Flowers" describes the different parts of a flower, pollination and the various ways seeds can be used to make food, drinks, or spices.

Originally published in France, the books were created by Gallimard Jeunesse, Claude Delafosse and Rene Mettler, with illustrations by Rene Mettler ($10.95 each). They are designed for children 3 to 9 years of age.

Other titles in the series: "Airplanes and Flying Machines," "Bears," "Castles," "Cats," "Colors," "Dinosaurs," "The Earth and Sky," "The Egg," "Fruit," "The Ladybug and Other Insects," "The Tree" and "Weather."

No time to cook, use crock pot meals

By NANCY BYAL
For AP Special Features

The crockery cooker is making a comeback. It lets you have a home-cooked meal when there seems to be no time to cook. Mix up this full-of-beans soup in the morning and let it simmer all day long in your cooker. About 45 minutes before dinner, stir together the dumplings and add them to the soup. Remember to turn the cooker to high heat to cook the dumplings quickly.

SOUTHWESTERN BEAN SOUP WITH CORNMEAL DUMPLINGS

151/2-ounce can red kidney beans, rinsed and drained
15-ounce can black beans, pinto beans, or great Northern beans, rinsed and drained
3 cups water
141/2-ounce can Mexican-style stewed tomatoes
10-ounce package frozen whole kernel corn, thawed
2 medium carrots, sliced (1 cup)
1 large onion, chopped (1 cup)
4-ounce can diced green chili peppers
2 tablespoons instant beef, chicken, or vegetable bouillon granules
1 to 2 teaspoons chili powder
2 cloves garlic, minced
1-3rd cup all-purpose flour
1/4 cup yellow cornmeal
1 teaspoon baking powder
Dash salt
Dash pepper
1 beaten egg white
2 tablespoons milk
1 tablespoon cooking oil

In a 31/2- or 4-quart crockery cooker combine canned beans, water, undrained tomatoes, corn, carrot, onion, undrained chili peppers, bouillon granules, chili powder and garlic. Cover and cook on low-heat setting for 10 to 12 hours or on high-heat setting for 4 to 5 hours.

For dumplings, in a small mixing bowl stir together flour, cornmeal, baking powder, salt and pepper. In a medium mixing bowl combine egg white, milk and oil. Add egg mixture to flour mixture; stir with a fork just until combined.

Turn the crockery cooker to the high-heat setting. Drop the dumpling mixture from a rounded teaspoon to make 8 mounds atop the soup. Cover and cook for 30 minutes more (do not lift the cover). Makes 4 servings.

Note: Be sure the crockery cooker you're using has coils that surround the food and cook on low or high. The heat should be continuous, rather than cycling on and off. Check your owner's manual if you're not sure.

How do you get rid of body odor?

Everybody has body odor — just ask a bloodhound. But a human's sense of smell isn't as strong as a dog's. So we don't often notice body odor. It isn't until we walk into a locker room or sweat a lot that we say "P.U.!"

Body odor is caused by tiny bacteria living on your body. Even the cleanest, most freshly scrubbed skin is crawling with bacteria. A grown-up might have over two million critters living in just a half-inch square area of an armpit!

Most of your microscopic stowaways are harmless — even if they raise a stink now and then. Many skin bacteria eat sweat and body oil. Then they pass waste material. This waste material from your personal collection of bacteria is the reason you have body odor.

Washing gets rid of waste material, as well as dirt. It doesn't wash away all the bacteria, but that's OK. They're supposed to be there — so don't sweat it!

There's a new pencil that's made of the "write" stuff: it's recycled.

It's called American Ecowriter, and it looks and writes like your basic pencil. But the yellow barrel is made from recycled newspaper and cardboard, instead of wood.

The aluminum ring that holds the eraser is recycled, too. And the rubber eraser is green — as in "green" power!

The Earth-friendly pencil may take a little time to get used to. (It takes a second longer to sharpen). But it lets you save trees and recycle. So, pencil us in!

Ruff high to get home

By Phillip Alder

Mary Buckley said: "Husbands are awkward things to deal with, even keeping them in hot water will not make them tender."

Well, it is often said that the quickest way to destroy a marriage is for the spouses to play bridge together. But some couples have done very well in international competition. Jane and Tony Priday from England spring to my mind. Also, Malvine and Siegfried Klausner, who came from Vienna but moved to Beverly Hills before World War II. She was a national champion in both of her countries. He invented plastic-coated playing cards.

Siegfried played today's deal brilliantly. Look at all 52 cards; can you see how he made six spades?

Declarer realized he had to establish dummy's club suit. So, after winning the first trick with the diamond ace, Klausner led a club to dummy's ace and ruffed a club. But he didn't ruff with a low trump; he ruffed with the queen.

He continued with the spade ace and a low spade. He had two things in mind: to keep the spade king for the second club ruff and to guarantee a trump entry in the dummy.

West won with the spade jack and led the diamond queen to tap the dummy. But Klausner calmly took the force, ruffed a club with the spade king and led his remaining trump, the six, to dummy's 10. This drew West's last trump and allowed Klausner to cash the four established club tricks, on which he threw his four red-suit losers.

Klausner had found the only way through the minefield.

Dad Relies on Heavy Hand To Rear His Seven Kids

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1993 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Three cheers for the father who slapped his son because the lad called him a filthy name! And a pox on you, the boy's mother, and Children's Protective Services, which denied the father custodial privileges.

I raised seven children of my own without any advice from Dear Abby. When my oldest son was 16, he called me a filthy name in front of his peers, and not only did I slap him, I banged his head against the wall while a policeman stood by with a smile on his face. Then I dragged my 6-foot tax deduction home for a stimulating father and son chat, and politely informed him that if he ever talked like that to me again, he had better find another world to live in. Case closed.

This oldest son is now a father, and he thinks that instead of giving advice, you should hang it up and string beads.

Abby, you said that a father's slapping his son was "the ultimate humiliation"; my son feels it was an act of love.

DON GAUTREAUX,
HICKORY HILLS, ILL.

DEAR DON: A father who boasts that he banged his son's head against the wall — and refers to him as a "tax deduction" — could hardly qualify for Father of the Year.

And the son who calls that kind of barbaric behavior "an act of love" is as sick and misguided as his father. I recommend a psychiatrist with two couches.

DEAR ABBY: The other night, I had a first date with an attractive, well-educated, young professional woman. During dinner, she casually wove several foul-mouthed remarks into an otherwise interesting and enjoyable evening.

I cannot understand why so many women these days go in for crude language. Maybe they think it makes them sound sophisticated. To me, it is extremely unfeminine and a big turnoff. I suppose some men like tough-talking women, but I am not one of them.

I would appreciate your thoughts on this as well as the opinions of some of your male readers.

GROSSED OUT IN ATLANTA

DEAR GROSSED OUT: I find vulgar language from women or men equally offensive. Since you found the young woman attractive and interesting — except for her foul language — why don't you let her know that you were turned off, and why? You could be doing her an enormous favor.

DEAR ABBY: You recently published a letter from a reader who requested that her obituary include the fact that she had been a heavy smoker. Perhaps that started a new trend, because I read the following obituary in The New York Times on Feb. 25, 1993:

"Jane Doe, R.N., died after a long illness. Daughter of __, sister of __, cousin of __. A brilliant person, iconoclast and achiever. She smoked two packs of cigarettes daily for 40 years. In addition to her family and friends, the tobacco industry will miss her. Graveside service Feb. 28 at 1 p.m."

NAOMI SCHLESSEL,
GREAT NECK, N.Y.

DEAR NAOMI SCHLESSEL: Thank you. This will go into my "Now I've Seen Everything" file.

Audit finds $53 million in TEA savings account

AUSTIN (AP) — Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno says the Texas Education Agency already is implementing recommendations of a special audit, which concluded that TEA is plagued by inefficiency and excessive bureaucracy.

The audit, prepared by the state comptroller's office, Monday recommended 130 changes in Texas Education Agency operations that it said could save $53.2 million over five years in the TEA's $58 million annual budget.

Comptroller John Sharp also recommended that nearly half the savings, $24.6 million, be reinvested "to make programs more efficient and responsive to taxpayers, parents and students."

The audit found that TEA officials are coping with outdated computers, guaranteed employee tenure that makes reorganization difficult, and so many advisory committees no one is even sure how many exist.

"It is ironic that the agency charged with leading Texas' generations of the future is mired in the past. Its own internal workings are hidebound and antiquated," said Kelly Fero, spokesman for the comptroller's office.

Meno, who requested the audit, applauded its findings.

"A number of the recommendations have already been initiated, and a substantial number of additional recommendations will be incorporated in a reorganization of the agency prior to the beginning of 1993-94," he said.

Among the audit's findings:

— Outdated computers.

In addition to old computers, the agency also has been hiring eight to nine contract programmers, at a cost of $85,000 to $90,000 each per year. "But they have made little effort to educate agency personnel in the intricacies of the systems," the report said.

Fero said some computers can't communicate with one another. And, he said, "They have systems that sit in warehouses so long before support personnel can get them hooked up, the warranties expire before they're even out of the box."

— Employee tenure.

"Unlike other state employees, those who work at the Texas Education Agency enjoy tenure safeguards almost from the moment they walk in the front door for their first day on the job," the report said.

"At TEA ... some managers enjoy unprecedented autonomy — and some may ignore or undermine the directives of the commissioner of education, free from fear of termination," it said.

A bill that would eliminate the tenure requirement and lessen State Board of Education control over agency organization is pending in the Legislature.

— Advisory committees.

Both the education commissioner and State Board of Education may appoint advisory committees.

"The problem is, TEA doesn't seem to know how many of these committees exist," the audit said.

In addition, the average reimbursement paid to TEA advisory committee members in 1991 was $318 each, well above the statewide average of $210 per person.

Legislation also is pending to abolish all the advisory committees and allow the commissioner to appoint those he thinks necessary.

Sen. Krueger picks up endorsement

AUSTIN (AP) — While interim Sen. Bob Krueger has won the endorsement of a defeated rival, Republicans are suggesting that President Clinton has given up hope that Democrats will hang onto the Texas Senate seat.

Krueger on Monday picked up the backing of Richard Fisher, the Dallas investor and former Ross Perot adviser who received 8 percent of the May 1 vote.

Although Fisher had called the other major Senate campaigns "politics as usual" during his race, he said he believes that fellow Democrat Krueger is the right choice for the upcoming runoff that will pick a successor to Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen.

"Our political process has been hijacked by people who are video-ready but devoid of character," he said.

"There is no doubt in my mind that Bob is a man of honor, a man of character and a man of deep integrity. He may not be as video-ready as his opponent, but he is a man of great character depth and that's what this campaign is all about," Fisher said.

Responding, Republican Kay Bailey Hutchison's campaign said Fisher was being hypocritical in backing Krueger.

"Mr. Fisher has clearly decided his future political aspirations outweigh his nominal interest in changing the way business is done in Washington," said David Beckwith, Mrs. Hutchison's communications director.

He said Fisher, who spent $2 million of his own money, had criticized political action committees but "Mr. Krueger's campaign is heavily bankrolled by the very special interests that Mr. Fisher has said he deplores."

Mrs. Hutchison, the state treasurer, earlier picked up the endorsements of Republican U.S. Reps. Joe Barton of Ennis and Jack Fields of Humble, who finished third and fourth in the race.

Meanwhile, the Republican National Senatorial Committee, headed by Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, issued a statement saying "Bill Clinton's White House has concluded that interim Democrat Sen. Bob Krueger cannot win the Senate race and will not come to Texas to campaign for him."

The statement cited reports in two national newsmagazines for its assessment.

Krueger scoffed at the suggestion.

"I don't think that Phil Gramm is the best source of information about me and the Clinton White House," he said.

Krueger said he would like for Clinton to make a Texas trip on his behalf but didn't know whether that would happen given the press of business facing the president in Washington.

"Sure, I think it would be a plus. But he's got lots of other things on his plate right now. We'll just have to see if he finds time," Krueger said.

Mrs. Hutchison was campaigning in the Rio Grande Valley for a second day Monday.

She criticized President Clinton's plan for a $127 billion, five-year cut in military spending and called for more gradual defense reductions as proposed by former President Bush.

In addition, Mrs. Hutchison said she wants to continue the ban on allowing homosexuals in the military.

According to Sir Winston Churchill, "The United Nations was set up not to get us to heaven, but only to save us from hell."

Gen. George Custer's forces were wiped out June 25, 1876, by Sioux and Cheyenne Indians in the Battle of the Little Big Horn.

Small-town residents want doctor despite past problems

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The only doctor in Sargent is fighting to get a license to practice in Nebraska, and much of the town is rallying to his side.

The residents of the small town in central Nebraska need a doctor so badly they don't care if he has ran afoul of regulators in Florida and Kansas and is awaiting trial on federal bank fraud charges.

"There's a lot of old people in Sargent who desperately need a doctor," said 72-year-old Iona Hale, who has lived in the town for more than 45 years. Without Dr. Bernardo Bilang, she said, "it will be a disaster."

The state Board of Examiners in Medicine and Surgery voted 6-0 on March 28 to deny Bilang a license. The 59-year-old general practitioner, who had been practicing since December on a 90-day permit, appealed and had a hearing Monday before the state Health Department.

More than half of Sargent's 710 residents signed a petition supporting him.

"While he has had some problems, I think they've been blown out of proportion," said 75-year-old Viola Brim, who has lived in the Sargent area for more than 40 years.

Like many rural communities, Sargent has had trouble attracting doctors and has had to rely on physicians who visit from towns as much as 45 miles away. If Bilang is denied a license, Sargent residents will be forced to travel to see a doctor.

"It's going to put us in a bind," Brim said.

Bilang's problems date to 1986, when he was given a one-year license probation for prescribing drugs to a woman in Inverness, Fla., with narcolepsy, a disorder that causes people to fall asleep unexpectedly. He said the state charged that he should have continued monitoring clinical progress before prescribing the drugs.

In 1988, another complaint was filed against Bilang after an elderly patient died in a Largo, Fla., hospital. The complaint alleged he falsified documents. Facing a two-year license suspension, Bilang surrendered his Florida license and agreed never to practice medicine in that state again.

In December, he agreed never to practice obstetrics again in Kansas after a baby he delivered in Meade, Kan., suffered facial paralysis.

Ear damage may result from drug

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Nine months ago I was hospitalized because of severe stagger and distorted vision that were due to the antibiotic gentamicin that I received for an infection. Apparently, it caused vestibular ototoxicity. Where might I find a cure or means to alleviate this disastrous problem and what medical specialist might address the condition?

DEAR READER: You appear to have suffered a recognized complication of gentamicin: ototoxicity. In some patients receiving the antibiotic, ear damage (partial deafness, dizziness, vertigo and ringing in the ears) may result.

Regrettably, this is usually permanent, as it reflects damage to the nerves of hearing. Although I doubt there is much you can do to alleviate this condition, you should check with an ear-nose-and-throat specialist for examination and advice.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Ear Infections and Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send $1.25 plus a long, self addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 29-year-old married male with one child on the way. My problem is that I'm quite modest and have a fear of doctors because I'm afraid of getting an erection during an examination. I know the importance of periodic checkups, yet cannot overcome this fear. Am I unique or are there others with similar problems?

DEAR READER: Your concerns are not unique; in fact, they're quite common. However, in my experience, there is rarely a problem. Doctors are sensitive to this sort of embarrassment and ordinarily take pains to avoid it by being meticulously professional and limiting examination of the genitals in patients who are susceptible to easy arousal.

Of course, you can share your fears with the doctor before the examination; this would help. But, in general, there is more apprehension about the possibility of an erection than of the actual event itself, which occurs infrequently.

Remember that healthy men in their 20s and 30s do not need periodic checkups; once every 10 years is sufficient, if you have no recognized health problems. Thus, if you've been examined recently, you can procrastinate until you're a little older and less vulnerable.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I would like to know the proportions used in a molasses and milk enema.

DEAR READER: I don't advise doing this at home; it's a sticky business. I mentioned this concoction in a column several weeks ago because it is an old-fashioned and effective cure for constipation in the hospital setting. The "secret recipe" is half and half.

Members of RC lead coalition fight against energy tax

AUSTIN (AP) — President Clinton's proposed energy tax would rip through the state's economy like a "Texas tornado" leaving behind unemployment and higher inflation, said Texas Railroad Commission chairman Jim Nugent.

"This is a recipe for economic disaster not economic reform," Nugent said Monday.

Nugent joined with Railroad Commission members Barry Williamson and Mary Scott Nabers in opposing the BTU energy tax, which they claim stands for "big-time unemployment."

The energy tax would affect virtually every individual and business in the country, raising the price of gasoline, home heating oil, natural gas and electricity.

Clinton says the energy tax is a necessary ingredient in his $265 billion, five-year tax plan to help reduce the nation's bulging budget deficit. The measure is currently being considered by the House Ways and Means Committee in Washington.

Williamson said that although Texas makes up only 6.8 percent of the nation's population, the state would end up paying 12.5 percent of the tax.

"Why should Texas pay twice as much as states like California and New York?" asked Williamson, adding that he will seek the Legislature's approval of a resolution opposing the tax. "Plain and simply, Texas will be treated unfairly."

Williamson said the tax would raise the price of gasoline 7.5 cents per gallon, costing Texans, who consume 720 million gallons of gas each month, an additional $54 million per month.

Ms. Nabers said that because Texas is one of the nation's leading energy producing states it will be hardest hit.

"From agriculture to trucking, to manufacturing to petrochemicals, the BTU tax will hurt Texas," Ms. Nabers said. "This offers little comfort to Texans who are finally gaining a glimmer of hope that a rebounding energy industry might boost the state's economy."

Texas Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry said although BTU stands for British Thermal Units, "this is not about taxing the British."

"It's about paying higher prices for fertilizer, chemicals and other energy intensive farm inputs," Perry said in Corpus Christi Monday.

Steve Pringle, spokesman for the 300,000-member Texas Farm Bureau, said the tax would cost a grower with an irrigated farm of 1,400 acres nearly $7,000 in additional taxes.

State Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, said the energy tax would place an unfair burden on lower-income families.

"We have people that can't afford to keep their homes warm in the winter by paying their utility bills ... and we end up seeing a number of individuals throughout the winter that die — kids die," Wilson said.

The BTU tax is based on heat content of fuels. It's comparable to taxing food based on its calorie content, Perry said.

"The higher the calories, the higher the tax, or in this case, the more BTU's in a fuel, the more it is taxed," Perry said.

Two fatally shot

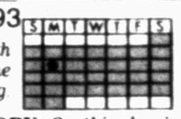

HOUSTON (AP) — A soured drug deal resulted in the fatal shooting of two men and the injury of a woman, police said.

Raymond Mata, 38, was found dead at about 4 a.m. Monday in a north Houston residence, said Joe Gamino, a Houston police spokesman.

Irvin Wright, 52, was taken to Ben Taub Hospital, where he died at noon. A third person was also shot. Angie Perez, no age available, was reported in fair condition at Ben Taub.

Government could seize sect's land

WACO, Texas (AP) — The Branch Davidians' grassy 77-acre spread east of Waco is home to fire ants, large-mouth bass and some say maybe even oil.

The tax-delinquent Branch Davidians say they'll fight to keep the property, even as investigators continue poking through the ashes where David Koresh and 77 followers died of gunshots and flames.

Eyes around the world turned to the land and the once dorm-like fortress on Feb. 28, when a raid by federal agents turned into the bloodiest day in the history of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Four agents and six cultists died in the gunbattle that set the stage for a 51-day standoff that ended April 19 when the compound burned down. Seventy-two people inside, including 17 children, perished.

Most of what remains on the land now is the blackened rubble of the compound and heaped debris scooped by Texas Rangers' bulldozers.

The surviving cultists, some of them in McLennan County Jail and others staying in halfway houses or with relatives across the country, say the land is theirs to redevelop if they so choose.

But county records show the Davidians owe $3,351.72 from 1991 and 1992 property taxes. The county could seize and sell the property.

The 1992 appraised value on 75 acres was $38,689. The remaining two acres — where the compound and a barn stood — were appraised at $43,865 but fell under a religious tax exemption.

The federal government apparently has a claim, too, under forfeiture statutes that allow officials to seize and sell property where a felony has been committed. Authorities suspected child abuse and illegal gun possession inside the commune.

"We might have competing claims by state authorities and federal authorities here," said Texas Tech University law professor Charles Bubany. "My guess is the government's going to get it, eventually."

Advocates for the Branch Davidians disagree.

"It's going to be a long battle, but (the Davidians) will wind up with it one way or another," said Washington attorney John P. Coale, who represents Stan Sylvia, of La Verne, Calif., who lost his wife and two daughters in the inferno.

Sylvia said the survivors should regroup and build a school at the charred site.

"Why should the FBI of all people be [illegible] what they did to my people, to my wife and children," Sylvia asked. "Their lives were lost on that land, and I don't want to see that be done in vain."

Karen Gaidusek, executive director of the McLennan County tax office, said she believes only a church's trustee can sell its land. But the Davidians' trustee was Koresh.

"David was the trustee, and of course he's dead, so a substitute trustee will have to be found," said Houston attorney Dick DeGuerin, who represents Koresh's mother. "There still are survivors, members of the Branch Davidians, and that property belongs to them and we need to perfect the title."

DeGuerin said he intends to file a lawsuit to do so once a substitute trustee can be found.

Ownership got murky during the 1980s when Koresh and a group of renegade Davidians began splitting from then cult leader George Roden. Koresh solidified control when Roden was jailed for filing legal motions asking God to inflict AIDS and herpes on Texas Supreme Court justices.

Roden, who later killed an Odessa man, has been committed to the state hospital for the mentally insane.

County records contain a 1985 document from Roden stating that if he were to die or become incapacitated, leadership and property ownership would pass to his son, Joshua. Roden says Joshua, 25, lives in Israel.

Charles Gauer, chief appraiser for the McLennan County Appraisal District, said the land is in the name of the General Association Davidians, Seventh-day Adventists.

Ms. Gaidusek of the county tax office said she does not envision local officials auctioning the Davidians' land, partly because the county hasn't done that with other landowners who were delinquent.

Anyway, "they'd have to be served with papers," she said. "Who legally can accept them?"

If the land were to be auctioned, the tragedy might inflate the bidding, speculated Waco real estate agent Barbara Rusling.

"Someone may bid on it in order to put up some kind of museum, or have pictures so that curiosity seekers from all around the world could see what went on and where it actually happened," Ms. Rusling said Monday.

On the other hand, she said, "if you're just looking for land to farm, why try to clean that up?"

Gilley will rebuild country music hall

BRANSON, Mo. (AP) — Country singer Mickey Gilley said he would immediately begin rebuilding his country music hall, which was heavily damaged by an apparent electrical fire.

"I've got good credit and pretty good insurance on the building," Gilley said by telephone from his Pasadena, Texas, office. "I'll take a big hit, but it's nothing I can't overcome."

Gilley was expected to arrive in this Ozarks tourist community today to inspect damage from the fire that gutted the lobby of his music hall.

The 936-seat auditorium of the Mickey Gilley Theatre suffered extensive heat, smoke and water damage Monday. Employees escaped seconds before the fire blew out the front doors. No one was injured.

"If they don't have to knock the whole thing down and start over, we might be back open in 21/2 months," Gilley said. "Everything depends on how much we can salvage."

Gilley could be back on stage at another Branson venue by Sunday.

"About every one in Branson has given me a call to offer support, even Mr. Wayne Newton," Gilley said of Branson's newest celebrity.

Gilley had a sold-out show scheduled for Sunday.

"We're going to meet with Gilley (Tuesday) to try and hammer something out since we're closed on Sundays," said Howard Cotner, manager of the Wayne Newton Theatre. "When Wayne heard about it, he jumped on it and pulled the owners and us together and wanted to do something to help."

Preliminary findings suggest the fire started in electric and neon signs that decorated the front of the building, Branson Fire Chief Ernie Braswell said. The sign that held the letters collapsed into the lobby.

June 5 set as runoff date

AUSTIN (AP) — The runoff election for the U.S. Senate will be held June 5, and Texas cities [illegible] the option of holding their municipal runoffs on that date as well, the governor's office says.

Gov. Ann Richards set the Senate runoff date on Monday and will sign into law emergency legislation allowing cities to move their runoffs to the first Saturday in June, said Chuck McDonald, her deputy press secretary.

The Senate race pits Democratic interim Sen. Bob Krueger against Republican state Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison.

They were the top two vote getters in the May 1 special election that drew 24 candidates hoping to fill the vacancy created by the appointment of Lloyd Bentsen as U.S. Treasury secretary.

The governor chose the June 5 date after the House and Senate approved legislation to give cities the option of moving their local runoff elections to the same day.

Many cities had runoffs scheduled for May 29, and some for May 22.

Early voting will begin May 19 and end June 1, McDonald said.

Election officials estimated that forcing voters to go to the polls two weeks in a row would cost at least an extra $1 million and cut turnout.

The unified primary bill earlier had been stalled by Republicans in the House, who said they feared Democrats would use them to help boost Krueger's chances.

Mrs. Hutchison's campaign said she supported the unified runoffs as the most economical way to conduct the two elections.

Lubbock man wins jackpot

AUSTIN (AP) — A Lubbock man has received a hefty birthday gift thanks to Lotto Texas.

Emmett Neal, who turned 39 on Monday, claimed the nearly $11 million lotto jackpot drawn Saturday night, said Texas Lottery spokeswoman Shannon McCann.

"It'll be hard to top this birthday," said Neal, who said he already had quit his job at the Red Lobster restaurant in Lubbock.

Neal will receive close to $400,000 a year for the next 20 years, Ms. McCann said.

Neal was the only person to correctly pick the six winning numbers — 48, 37, 30, 23, 46, 25.

The estimated jackpot for Wednesday night's Lotto Texas drawing is $3 million, officials said.

Fugitive cult leader caught

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — A fugitive Missouri cult leader was arrested following a tip from a television viewer, authorities said Monday.

The case of Nelson DeCloud was profiled last week on "Unsolved Mysteries."

DeCloud, 52, disappeared in September 1992 shortly after being charged in Clay County, Mo., with rape and forcible sodomy, officials said.

He is the leader of about 30 followers who call themselves the DeCloud Family, said Tom Green County Sheriff Pete Skains.

They had been in the area about two months, Skains said. DeCloud was arrested Sunday night without resistance.

DeCloud agreed Monday to waive extradition to Missouri.

School funding plan proposed the Legislature could order that the property value of a mall, for example, be taken from one school district and annexed to another. He said that the 105 wealthiest of the state's 1,048 school districts would lose some property to the "closest possible district."

"I've run it through every lawyer I can think of, and I haven't found a glitch in it yet," said Ratliff, whose plan has the "enthusiastic" support of Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock. But some questioned how property such as a power plant would be handled, if lawmakers wanted to shift only a portion of its value from one school district to another.

Ratliff added of Ms. Linebarger's consolidation proposal, "I think the best thing that could happen is that we both pass bills, and then we've got at least two choices. Right now most of us feel like there are not any choices out there."

Ms. Linebarger and other lawmakers behind the consolidation plan met with their House colleagues Monday to get their input on the consolidation proposal.

Among its supporters is Rep. Warren Chisum, D-Pampa, who called himself "the most consolidated representative in the House" because about half of the school districts in his area would be subject to the merger plan.

Rep. David Counts called the House proposal "the mildest form of consolidation."

Rep. Rene Oliveira, D-Brownsville, also said he supports the measure. He said some school districts in his area couldn't meet their June payroll if state aid is cut off.

Ms. Linebarger said 109 of the state's richest districts would be consolidated with one or more of their poorest neighbors under the plan.

Local school boards still would handle day-to-day policy decisions, including instruction and the hiring and firing of teachers. In addition, a new superboard, nine members from single-member districts, would preside over each consolidated district to approve the tax rate and budget matters.

Ira Supt. Rick Howard was out of the office today, and was unavilabe for comment. Hermleigh Supt. Jerry Church said it was his understanding that Hermleigh is not part of any consolidation plan.

"I do not see us getting hurt any," said Snyder ISD Superintendent Dalton Moseley. "I think we'll be pretty well status quo."

Moseley said he has not had an opportunity to study the bill in depth.

Gov. Ann Richards called the consolidation proposal "a pretty good one. It is an approach that consolidates, yet leaves as much local identity and local control in place as possible."

Some lawmakers also are working on a proposal to dedicate lottery revenue to schools.

Airport board request responded.

Both airport board members said they are aware that it is the court's responsibility, but noted that it is more a matter of courtesy to let them know if applications have been submitted or not.

Doolittle explained that the county has received several applications but is waiting for all the advertisements to run before reviewing them.

Doolittle later said he thought the problem was a breakdown in communication between the board and the court.

Commissioners did vote unanimously to construct an aerial applicator pad at the airport. Doolittle said that building such a pad has been discussed for some time now and the court realized the need after looking at the site Monday.

The pad will be constructed on the east side of the airport and will allow pilots a place to park their fill trucks for sprayer planes. Commissioners expect to start the project Monday.

Rural trash collection was not discussed as planned because Jack Dorris, representative of Pack Rat Services, Inc., was unable to attend the meeting.

Commissioners Ralph Trevey, Jerry Gannaway, Roy Idom and Gray were present. Doolittle presided.

Energy options noted

Western Texas College paid almost $223,000 in the 12-month period ending in February of this year for electrical energy. A 15 percent increase would add another $34,500 in annual costs.

TU Electric Technial Services representatives reviewed the major energy consuming systems at Western Texas in March. Their report noted that the college has reduced overall energy consumption by 3.7 percent from 1988 levels.

The representatives made several suggestions to reduce costs, including thermal energy storage: storing cooled water or ice produced during off-peak times for use during peak load times.

However, WTC President Dr. Harry Krenek noted that a study performed in 1990 by Fanning, Fanning and Associates, Inc., consulting engineers, said it would take 18 years for a payback on a thermal storage system. The engineers recommended that WTC not make that investment at the time.

Monday, Trustee Jay Kidd asked that TU Electric compile some updated figures on thermal storage. Thomas said they would do so.

The study made by TU representatives in March also suggested other energy conservation steps WTC might consider, such as high efficiency fluorescent lamps, reflectors and the use of timers and/or light level sensors.

In summarizing its report, TU noted, "Western Texas College pays close attention to their energy costs. They have taken steps such as preventive maintenance programs, energy efficient lighting, and employ a sophisticated energy management system to control their heating and cooling systems. In light of this, the only realistic opportunity for significant energy cost reductions for Western Texas College lies with thermal energy storage systems."

WTC has been considering a number of options to reduce energy costs. In November, the board discussed replacing electric water heaters with gas heaters in the gymnasium, dormitory and student center. Due to a question of funding, the project was deferred at the time.

However, the board learned Monday that sufficient funds are available in the institutional contingency account currently. Prebid information was discussed briefly at the meeting. A cost study indicated that operation of the electric heaters is about $81,000 annually. Energy costs for the gas heaters would be from $28,000 to $33,500.

Bangladesh visitors tour rural co-ops

Four members of the Rural Electrification Board of Bangladesh visited Snyder to take an up close look at how rural cooperatives operate.

The group, sponsored by the National Association of Electric Cooperatives, traveled all around including Austin, San Antonio and Washington.

While in this area, Member Service Director Edwin Jackson of Midwest Electric showed the gentlemen around. According to the the group, Bangladesh still does everything manually so they took great interest in the computer system developed here.

They explained that America is a few years ahead in rural electricity. They also said only 45 precent of the Bangladesh rural area is supplied with electricity, but they are expanding.

Their master plan is to electrify all the rural areas by the year 2000.

project won't be reality for 18 months to two years.

He said he envisions a format whereby broadcasts may center on WTC one night, Snyder ISD another, Hermleigh and Ira ISDs another evening, sports activities on Friday and church activities Wednesdays and Sundays, for instance. He said he would like to air city council, school board, college board and commissioners court meetings as well.

"The possibilities of what could be aired, to me, are just endless," said Zalman.

During regular business, the board approved a bid of $16,418 from Bailey Boiler Works, Inc. for repair of a boiler. Trustees also approved $5,572 in expenses to send the rodeo team to Bozeman, Montana for the College National Finals Rodeo.

In non-action items, the board discussed pre-bid information on pool resurfacing, gas water heaters, shower repair and a computer networking system.

In other discussion, Trustee Jay Kidd asked the board to gather information on several topics:why Tuesday was chosen as the day to close the college golf course, if it would be feasible to put lights on the driving range for night use, and to consider closing the course two or three times a year for charity fund-raisers and not charging for the use.

Present Monday were trustees Kidd, John Gayle, Carolyn Barbee, Carl Williams, Bill Wilson Jr. and R.C. Patton. John Fagin was absent.

Houston drops series opener

SEATTLE (AP) — Hakeem Olajuwon can only do so much. He's begging for some help from his Houston Rockets' teammates. Help, as in outside shooting help.

Whether the Rockets are capable of giving Olajuwon what he wants will be a key to Houston's Western Conference semifinal series with the Seattle SuperSonics.

"We have to cut down on our turnovers and capitalize on our 3-point opportunities," a frustrated Olajuwon said after the Sonics took the opener of the best-of-7 series 99-90 Monday night.

"If we can hit from the perimeter, we'll make them think twice about doubling Hakeem so quickly," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich agreed.

With the tight defense on Olajuwon and Houston's dearth of outside shooting, the Sonics held the Rockets scoreless over the final 3:40 of the game.

Olajuwon fouled out Michael Cage and almost fouled out Shawn Kemp. But it wasn't enough.

The Sonics used a trio of defenders — Sam Perkins, Cage and Kemp — and help from Derrick McKey to slow down Olajuwon to 26 points on 8-for-22 shooting.

The Rockers star also had 16 rebounds and five blocked shots.

Olajuwon said he didn't agree with the premise that Seattle's front line is the key to the series.

The Rockets made only four of 16 shots from the field in the fourth quarter, but still made a strong run at the Sonics after Seattle took a 91-77 lead with 7:07 left.

Cowboys walk out before charity tilt

WACO, Texas (AP) — Some Dallas Cowboys walked away from a charity basketball game after promoters of the event could not reach an agreement with the athletes.

Running back Emmitt Smith and wide receiver Michael Irvin, two of the best-known players on the world championship team, were among those returning to Dallas on Monday, shortly after their arrival at Baylor University's Ferrell Center.

They had been scheduled for an autograph session and a basketball game against Waco police.

"We're dealing with a bunch of very disappointed kids here," Jim Doak, Baylor chief of public safety, told the Waco Tribune-Herald. "The promoters really dropped the ball."

Both the members of the Super Bowl champion team and the police group said the game's Waco promoters, a non-profit group called Citizens for Higher Education, failed to deliver on the team's upfront payment.

The group's members said they had organized the game to raise funds to help resurrect the old Paul Quinn College campus in East Waco.

The group's vice president for marketing, James Douglas, said managers for the Cowboy Hoopsters — players not officially representing the professional franchise — had kept them guessing about what it would take to get the players on the basketball court.

The Hoopsters are scheduled to make an appearance in Snyder on Saturday.

"On April 28, we received a copy of the contract and worked out an agreement for them to accept $5,000 for the appearance," Douglas said Monday.

"This afternoon, a man from Dallas called and said that if they didn't have $20,000 waiting — in cash, at the interstate — they were going to leave," he said.

Douglas said the players had fulfilled part of the agreement, making appearances at the Paul Quinn campus and at the Waco Veteran's Administration Medical Center before pulling out less than two hours before the game.

He said Irvin told him the Cowboys' group decided to cancel its appearance because Waco ticket sales had not reached expected levels and similar games across Texas were drawing lackluster crowds.

Irvin's telephone number is unlisted, and other Cowboys could not be reached for comment today by The Associated Press.

Staff members at Ferrell Center's ticket office refunded tickets for would-be spectators.

'Dogs battle LHS for lead

The Ira Bulldogs will host Loraine today at 6 p.m. with a share of the District 4-A baseball lead at stake.

The Bulldogs, 6-8 overall, carry a 3-1 mark in loop games, including a 21-17 win over Hermleigh Saturday.

Loraine, which has already clinched a playoff berth, is unbeaten in four district games. LHS was a forfeit winner over Westbrook Friday.

Wyatt Webster is Ira's expected starter.

A win by the IHS 'Dogs in one of their last two games, at home against Loraine today or against Westbrook Friday, would put them into the post-season tournament for the second straight season.

Gonzalez, Palmer homer in 7-4 win

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — The struggling Oakland Athletics are hearing encouraging words from an unlikely source.

"You watch; they're going to be in the middle of this thing," said Texas reliever Tom Henke, who pitched the final 1 2-3 innings for his sixth save in the Rangers' 7-4 victory over the Athletics on Monday night.

"It's too early. They've got too many good players and that's too good of a manager. It's too early to make judgments. They're dangerous."

The Rangers are on a roll, just 11/2 games behind the White Sox, with an imposing lineup of slashers and sluggers.

"Willie Upshaw's been working with these guys to go to all fields," Texas manager Kevin Kennedy said. "It's not just a pull game anymore. That's the reason Jose Canseco got an RBI tonight."

Canseco's single up the middle gave the Rangers an insurance run in the ninth, after the A's had left the tying runs at second and third in the eighth against Henke. Dave Henderson popped out on a 2-0 fastball to end that eighth-inning threat.

"I felt strong tonight, so it was no problem going two innings," Henke said. "I think I've only had two save chances in 27 games.

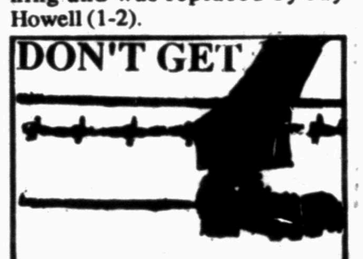

Leibrandt breezed through every inning but the fourth, when the A's scored three runs to make it 5-3.

Mark McGwire hit his eighth homer with two out in the fourth to make it 5-1. Terry Steinbach then singled and scored on a two-run homer by Henderson.

Astros halt Braves streak

HOUSTON (AP) — Ken Caminiti's two-run double keyed a four-run eighth inning as Houston ended Atlanta's 14-game winning streak in the Astrodome, 5-2.

[illegible] to two hits over seven innings, but gave up a double to Eddie Taubensee to start the eighth inning and was replaced by Jay Howell (1-2).
