Creager And Petty May Be Heard On 'Protection' Charges

PATRONAGE AND IMMUNITY TALE NOT ALL TOLD

Creager Expected to Ask For Right to Testify After Petty's Call

HILL SIGNED NOTE

Fort Worth Federal Man Tells of 'Protection' Given Hotels

By CHARLES S. HAYDEN
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—The startling disclosures made before the senate committee on patronage in the southern states today by Col. Lloyd Hill of Fort Worth, revealing what Senator K. D. McKellar of Tennessee characterized as "the barter and sale of federal offices in Texas" is to be followed up.

Senator McKellar has indicated that he will favor the summoning of E. P. Petty, Fort Worth building contractor, who was quoted by Colonel Hill as his authority for the claim that certain hotels in Fort Worth and Dallas were protected from raids by prohibition agents.

Senator Smith Brookhart of Iowa, chairman of the committee, stated there might be some question as to the committee's jurisdiction in this matter, but made it plain he would not oppose the summoning of Petty.

Creager May Talk

In the event Petty is called as a witness it is deemed likely here that R. B. Creager of Brownsville, Republican national committeeman for Texas, would insist on an opportunity to be heard. The Hill charges were directed particularly at Colonel Creager.

There also will be a demand that certain of the druggists of Fort Worth, whom Hill intimated could tell of prohibition protection, be summoned before the committee. More than that, it is anticipated the committee will seek to obtain a copy of the report which Petty is alleged to have submitted to Commissioner D. H. Blair of the internal revenue bureau. It was this report, dealing with the activities of bellboys in a Dallas hotel which Hill intimated caused the separation of Petty from the prohibition service.

While the committee is to continue its investigation Wednesday, it will be dealing with the situation in one of the other southern states and will come back to Texas later on.

Withington Testifies

Hill followed Leonard Withington, also of Fort Worth, who as secretary of the Republican organization in the Lone Star state frankly told the committee how that organization has been financed and supplied the committee with vouchers and ledgers, notes and other records of his office.

Wurzbach Present

Only two members of the committee, Senator Brookhart and Senator McKellar, were present at the session today, but they were flanked by Representative Harry M. Wurzbach, representative from the San Antonio district and the arch-foe of National Committeeman R. B. Creager and the regular Republican organization in Texas. Congressman Wurzbach was allowed to ask questions of the witnesses and otherwise participated in the hearing.

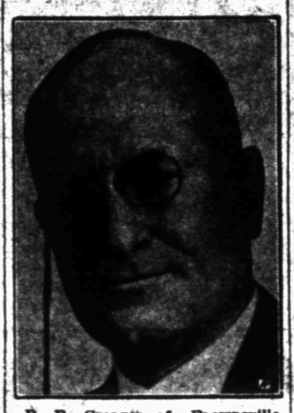

It was Hill who provided the sensation when he recited facts dealing with a general statewide meeting of Republicans held in Fort Worth during May, 1921. R. B. Creager of Brownsville, then vice chairman of the state committee, presided, and Hill said Henry Zweifel and other leading Republicans spoke as well as urged those present to make contributions to the party or sign notes of their willingness to pay. Many of those pres-

Music was supplied by the high school faculty orchestra, composed of members of the faculty, directed by W. C. Watts.

HIGHWAY BOND ISSUE PLANS RECEIVE JOLT

House Committee Votes 'No' on Proposal for State Road Issue

AMENDMENT LOSES

$175,000,000 for Texas Road Construction Hits Snag Despite Fight

AUSTIN, Jan. 29. (AP)—The plan to issue state-wide bonds for construction of highways received a setback here tonight, when the house committee on constitutional amendments voted an unfavorable report on the idea. The vote stood 10 to five.

The vote was direct on submitting the proposed constitutional amendment incorporating the $175,000,000 plan of the committee of seven, appointed by Governor Moody to co-ordinate the legislation on the subject, and make recommendations. Report of the committee was read to the house yesterday.

Amendment Rejected

In turning down the $175,000,000 idea, the committee also rejected a proposed constitutional amendment which would authorize the issuance of $225,000,000 in bonds, covering the suggestion of the first committee of 31 appointed by the governor and which discussed the proposal of financing a system of permanent connected highways, prior to the legislature convening.

The original resolution asking for referendum of the $225,000,000 bond issue through amendment of the constitution was offered by Representation Prendergast of Marshall. When the committee met this afternoon the Prendergast resolution was replaced by one involving the $175,000,000 bond issue as suggested by the committee of seven.

Ousley for Plan

It was espoused before the committee by Judge W. O. Huggins of Houston. Representative Hubbard of New Boston, former member of the highway commission, Representative Beck of Fort Worth, and Clarence Ousley of the East Texas Chamber of Commerce.

Representative Anderson of San Antonio led the opposition and frequently interrupted Judge Huggins with questions as he discussed the resolution.

Status of the bond issue plan is uncertain, with the proposal not yet acted on by the senate committee, and with the probability of minority action on the floor as a result of the house committee's refusal to report the resolution favorably.

Register was said to have drawn a pistol and opened fire. Baker returned the fire and Register dropped dead, the sheriff escaping a fusillade of shots unharmed.

Register escaped Dec. 5 from the prison where he was serving a life sentence for murder. JUDGE HARDY EXPLAINS WHY HE KEPT QUIET

Recipient of Aimee's Famed 'Love Offering' Sensed Judicial Danger

EVANGELIST IS SAUCY

Asked Where Her Mother May Be Found, Aimee Lashes Tongue

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 29. (AP)—Appearing as a voluntary witness, Superior Judge Carlos S. Hardy told an investigating committee of the state legislature that he had defied a state bar association's attempt to question him about a $2,500 check from Aimee Semple McPherson, the evangelist, because it would "tend to intimidate the judiciary."

"As a member of the judiciary, I did not think the state bar had jurisdiction over my case," he testified. "I believe it would tend to intimidate the judiciary and place them under the rule of a group of attorneys if they were allowed authority in matters of this kind."

Aimee Questioned

The jurist's appearance had been preceded by nearly two hours of questioning Mrs. McPherson and the Rev. J. W. Arthur, of Angelus Temple, the only two previous witnesses to appear since the committee began its sessions last Saturday.

Met with repeated denials from Mrs. McPherson that the $2,500 was for "legal advice," Chairman Wattat Little pointed out that the jurist previously had admitted advising the evangelist of Angelus Temple about "income taxes" and "matters involving large sums of money." It was on this point that the state bar sought to investigate the jurist following the charge of Mrs. McPherson's mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, that the check was for "legal advice."

Evangelist Piquant

Mrs. McPherson was asked where her mother, with whom she had disagreed, was now living. The evangelist said she presumed she was in Seattle and when the committee indicated it would like to have Mrs. Kennedy as a witness, Mrs. McPherson said:

"If I see her, I'll tell her about it."

The evangelist had planned a tour of Canada which would take her through Seattle, but her trip was delayed when the committee demanded her presence.

Maj. Charles Manly Steadman Discourses on State's Rights Again

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 (AP)—Representative Charles Manly Steadman, of North Carolina, today was 88 years of age. He is the only Confederate veteran left in either house of congress.

Erect, courtly and bearing a remarkable resemblance to his great leader, Lee, he talked of state's rights, but no in reminiscence of the time when men shouted the words as a battle cry.

"Always realizing the necessity for this government to permit the states to retain their rights," Major Steadman said, "I wish to admonish the citizens of this country to guard them. I feel that the rights of the states are being absorbed so rapidly through the centralization of power in Washington, that some reaction must come in the future."

Both Hoover and Smith Fully At Ease When They Meet for Chat

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 29. (AP)—Wearing his celebrated brown derby of campaign days, Alfred E. Smith called on Herbert Hoover, today at No. 8 Belle Isle; swapped stories with him about some of the amusing incidents on their spectacular struggle for the presidency, and wished him luck in the White House.

The president-elect and his Democratic opponent were together for 25 minutes, and friends who were present said there was nothing of constraint in the meeting; that both were in happy mood and laughed at the recital of difficulties that came to each by reason of the odd presents admirers forced upon their campaign trains.

Reception in Sun Room

Mr. Hoover received the "happy warrior" in the sun room of the Thomas C. Penney home which has been fitted out as his office.

"How do you do, Mr. President?" was the salutation of the former governor as the president-elect met him at the door.

"How do you do, governor?" Mr. Hoover replied as they shook hands. "It has been a long time since we saw each other."

Mr. Smith presented his friends, John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee and William F. Kenney, of New York, and the president-elect introduced his secretary, Lawrence Rickey.

Cigars Lighted

The five then found comfortable chairs, and cigars were lighted as the conversation began.

Neither Mr. Hoover nor Mr. Smith would go into details of their visit. The former governor did say afterwards, however, that he had congratulated Mr. Hoover and wished him the best of luck.

"And I meant it," he added in his brief talk with the two newspaper correspondents who were permitted to be on the grounds around the home during the visit. All photographers were barred and consequently no pictures of Mr. Smith were taken while he was on Belle Isle.

"We talked about some of the funny things that happened to us during the campaign," the "happy warrior" said, but beyond that he declined to go.

"Mr. Hoover looked well," was a parting comment.

YANCY DENIES REMARK MADE

Childress Man on Stand In His Trial for Murder

Special to The Record News

CHILDRESS, Texas, Jan. 29.—A. O. Yancy took the stand in district court where he is being tried for murder today, and denied he had made any remarks concerning the wife and mother of George Barnes, whom Yancy is accused of shooting fatally near here last September.

Yancy's testimony was the feature of evidence entered by the defense, who closed thir case late today. The state concluded its testimony earlier in the afternoon. District Judge A. J. Fires announced tonight that he was preparing a charge, which will be read to the jury Wednesday morning.

Remarks supposed to have been made by Yancy were allegedly to have been the cause of the argument which preceded the shooting, which occurred at a dance hall about two miles from here.

John Compton, who was sheriff at that time, was placed on the stand by both state and defense today. He testified that the shooting followed an argument between the two men, but that his back was turned when the actual shooting began, and that consequently he was not an eye witness.

JOHNSTON TOOK LEAD

Mrs. Hammonds Told To Leave Offices of Oklahoma Executive

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Jan. 29. (UP)—The Oklahoma house of representatives late today impeached Henry S. Johnston, suspended governor, on a charge of general incompetency. The vote was 72 to 26, with six absent. Johnston now has been impeached on nine charges.

The combination of Gov. Henry S. Johnston with his confidential secretary, Mrs. O. O. Hammonds, has been definitely dispensed with, according to a Johnston leader, speaking from the floor of the house late today while that body was in session considering the impeachment charges against the governor.

Break Is Surprise

The disbandment of this political partnership came as a surprise to the house. Legislators had thought the two, having fought side by side during impeachment and suspension of the state's chief executive, would stand together during the trial before the senate court beginning 10 a. m. Thursday.

The alleged dictatorship assertedly exerted by Oklahoma's "woman political boss," which anti-administration leaders charged had corrupted the governor's office, was the urgent center of the recent investigation by a house committee.

It was reported tonight that the night Johnston was suspended from office, Mrs. Hammonds was told to remove all her belongings from the governor's office, as she would not return in case the governor withstood the present storm and was not ousted.

Johnston Won't Say

The governor refused to answer a direct question to that effect.

When the governor appeared before the senate court of impeachment Monday, he was not accompanied by Mrs. Hammonds. She sat alone in the senate gallery.

The three additional impeachment charges against the governor were adopted by the investigating committee this afternoon.

Two of the charges concern the issuance of alleged unlawful deficiency certificates. The third charge is the one passed by the house late today.

EMBASSIES NOT LIQUOR SOURCE

Permits Do Not Allow Enough Booze to Hurt

By ALFRED P. RECK
United Press Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1929, by United Press)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Diplomatic liquors in bootleg channels exist largely in the imagination of Washington bootleg patrons, the United Press learned today from an authoritative source.

An examination of liquor import records to foreign embassies and legations disclosed not "enough to float an ark," as been charged by dry speakers and some members of congress, but scarcely enough to dampen the decks of a good-sized ark.

For 1928, foreign diplomats brought into this country an average of 150 cases monthly, a grand total of 1,800 cases for the year. This figure includes both whiskies and wines and is about the average yearly business of a prosperous bootlegger.

With approximately 260 officially accredited diplomats, the importation for last year would permit each one less than eight bottles a month. As nearly 75 per cent of all liquor imported was wine, the diplomatic consumption is not regarded as excessive, according to standards in their respective countries.

Representative Celler, New York, Democrat, recently asked Prohibition Commissioner Doan for figures on diplomatic liquor importations but was refused on the grounds of "diplomatic courtesy." Once before, in 1923, the house asked Secretary of Treasury Mellon, for similar information, which was denied.

The United Press, however, was able to learn from an unquestionable source the amount of diplomatic liquor importations is negligible.

Breckenridge Man Appeals to Court

AUSTIN, Jan. 29. (AP)—Charles Binney, Stephens county, today applied to the court of criminal appeals for a writ of habeas corpus alleging he is being illegally restrain at Breckenridge as a result of trials in justice and county courts.

He was tried in justice court on a charge of "unlawfully and wilfully poisoning a dog with intent to injure owner." He was fined $50 and appealed to the county court, where he was fined $50.

Citing a recent court decision, Binney claims the county court was without jurisdiction, "in that it was an appeal from the justice court, which was without constitutional authority or statutory law to hear and determine a criminal case."

In one month, last year, 100,000 New York families, involving at the lowest estimate 300,000 people, moved from one apartment to another.

The telephone rang.

"Hello, Mr. Commissioner," the caller said. "Your car has just been hauled in for illegal parking."

Astonished but able to retain his composure, Whalen learned that the report was only too true, and moreover that his wife, who had been on her way to a luncheon engagement, had been forced to stand on a cold sidewalk curb while one of his own bluecoats took the family chauffeur to a police station for the offense.

Nevertheless, the new police commissioner praised the copper who had spotted the family sedan in a non-parking zone on Fifth avenue.

WOODWARD TO VOTE ON RULE

Oklahoma Town to Decide On Government

WOODWARD, Okla., Jan. 29 (UP)—An election to establish the legal form of government of Woodward will be held Feb. 25.

In 1923 the city voted to change from councilmen to commissioners but the charter was not returned from the then governor, J. C. Walton.

The council last August called an election to vote a franchise to the Western Light and Power corporation. Injunction suits were filed claiming the council had been replaced by the commissioners through the forgotten charter.

The Western Light and Power company claimed that the councilmen acted with full authority as commissioners under the forgotten charter, and that their acts were final. Judge W. P. Bayless of district court ruled that a contract had been made and that the power company had purchased the power franchise.

If the supreme court upholds Bayless' decision, the franchise will be turned over to the corporation. The supreme court will start hearing on the case today.

Starving of Pupils At School Probed

SANTA FE, N. M., Jan. 29. (AP)—A committee composed of Governor R. C. Dillon, Dr. George S. Luckett, director of the state bureau of public health, and E. Dana Johnson, managing editor of the Santa Fe New Mexican, will make an investigation of allegations that pupils at the United States Indian industrial school in Santa Fe are underfed and treated brutally.

The investigation was asked by Edgar L. Merritt, assistant commissioner of Indian affairs at Washington, by United States Senator Sam Bratton of New Mexico and Burton L. Smith, superintendent of the school, following publication of an article entitled "the cry of a broken people" which appeared in "Good Housekeeping."

The article alleged inhumanity throughout the Indian service and mentioned especially the U. S. Indian schools at Santa Fe and Albuquerque.

Clarence Badger and Clara Bow,

Paramount director and star, say

"Smooth skin is a girl's greatest charm"

New incandescent "sun-spot" lights—film even more highly sensitized than before! That is why the beloved screen stars must now keep their skin lovelier and smoother than ever for the all-revealing close-up.

CLARA BOW, Paramount's popular star, in the bathroom which is one of the most luxurious built in Hollywood.

"A beautifully smooth skin means even more to a star than to other women. Keeping one's skin flawless for the all-seeing eye of the camera means constant care. Lux Toilet Soap is a great help in keeping the skin in perfect condition."

THELMA TODD, First National star, says: "A star's skin must be what we call 'studio skin,' to be lovely in the close-up. It requires constant protection, especially in hard water. Lux Toilet Soap's gentle lather is lovely for my skin."

The next time you see MERNA KENNEDY, sparkling little star with Universal, notice how delightfully smooth Lux Toilet Soap keeps her skin. "A star must guard with so much care the perfection of her skin! Lux Toilet Soap keeps my skin so smooth," she says.

9 out of 10 Screen Stars guard their skin this way

NO MATTER where you see it—on the street, at dinner, on the screen—your heart beats a little faster in response to a faultlessly lovely skin.

"The most important thing in making a girl lovely is an exquisite smooth skin," says Clarence Badger, Paramount—and sums up the opinion of 39 leading directors in Hollywood.

"Because beautiful skin charms people so, it is a first essential for screen stardom," he continues. "Velvety skin is the treasured possession of every screen star."

As Clara Bow says, "A beautifully smooth skin means even more to a screen star than to other women."

Of the 451 important actresses in Hollywood, including all stars, 442 (98%) keep their skin smooth and lovely with Lux Toilet Soap. Little wonder, then, that all the great film studios have made this white fragrant soap the official soap in their dressing rooms.

When you see your favorite star in the close-up, remember that nine out of ten screen stars use Lux Toilet Soap for smooth skin.

JOB BARTERING STORY HEARD

Fort Worth Man Tells Of 'Protection'

ent, according to Hill, were applicants for federal appointment and he himself at that time was seeking the appointment as postmaster in his home city.

Signed $1,200 Note

Hill admitted signing a note for $1,200 on which he has paid $600. He presented canceled checks for the latter amount and a receipt from R. B. Creager for $150, the first payment made, as well as other receipts. Hill said he saw no liquor at this meeting, but he had seen it at others and he regaled the committee with the story of raids made by V. B. Petty, prohibition officer, on the Metropolitan hotel in Fort Worth and the Adolphus hotel in Dallas, both of which the witness said were under the protection of high Republican leaders in Texas.

Hill explained that he attended the meeting with the expectation that he would be named postmaster and signed a printed form note for $1,200 with the idea that this would represent about 10 per cent of the salary he would receive. He said he had the indorsement of J. H. Mumber and of Joe Kingsbury, and that they talked with Creager about him.

Forms Passed Out

"At that meeting, which was held in the Metropolitan hotel," said Hill, "the announcement was made that they needed money and they passed printed forms of notes around for us to sign. Mr. Kingsbury came to me twice to urge me to sign. He wanted $1,200 and gave me assurances that if I paid and did not get the office that the amount would be returned to me."

"Was this meeting held to sell the federal offices in Texas?" asked Senator McKellar.

"Don't know that was it, but they wanted contributions."

Admits "Parceling"

"Well, weren't they parceling out the offices?" insisted the senator from Tennessee. "Everyone who wanted an office was expected to contribute, wasn't he?"

"Just about that," replied the witness.

"That was a barter and sale of offices, wasn't it?" persisted McKellar.

"Just about that," admitted Hill.

McKellar then read into the record the form of a note which Hill said was substantially what he had signed and on which he paid $600. Then Hill laid before the committee his canceled checks.

"It took about an hour to get all those notes signed," said Hill.

"Was anything said that if you would pay you would be made postmaster at Fort Worth," asked Congressman Wurzbach.

"Well, it was generally understood that applicants for offices would pay about 10 per cent of the salaries they would receive."

Return Not Asked

"Did you ever ask for the return of your money?" asked Senator McKellar, "after you failed to get the office?"

The witness said he had not, and then, in response to questions, told of his service in the Spanish-American as well as the World war, said he had been under fire and been gassed in France. Hill explained about the mixup over the Fort Worth postmastership in 1921 when E. C. Kingsbury was first nominated but his name was withdrawn when he got into difficulties over "an oil deal." He was asked if he knew what Postmaster Moore contributed in order finally to get the appointment, but denied knowledge as to this.

"Did you ever hear of any protection over prohibition?" asked McKellar.

"Yes," replied the witness. "I heard there were some places that were protected."

"What were they?" persisted the Tennessee senator.

"The Metropolitan hotel in Fort Worth and the Adolphus in Dallas."

"Who told you about this?"

"B. V. Petty, who was a prohibition agent."

"Was there liquor at this gathering of patriots you just told about?" asked McKellar.

"I don't know that there was. I didn't see any there, but I did at others. It was out in the open."

"Were there prohibition officers at these meetings?" asked McKellar.

"Yes, and U. S. marshals, too."

"At whose request did you understand the prohibition agents were to pass up certain places as you mention?" asked Senator Brookhart.

Petty Given Notice

"I was told it was at the request of Dave Morris, prohibition officer of Texas," replied the witness. "Petty had made a raid on the Metropolitan hotel and was notified that he would be suspended."

"That is the way they do in Texas," said Senator McKellar, "suspend the officer when he gets too active?"

"I guess so," replied Hill.

"When he got this notice Petty went over to Dallas and went to the Adolphus hotel. Went to a room and one of the bell boys asked him what he wanted. Petty asked what he had and the boy said, 'most anything.' Petty ordered a bottle of liquor—he told me the kind but I don't remember whether it was Canadian or not. When the boy brought it up Petty said, 'boy, you are in bad' and showed him his badge.

"The boy replied, 'no boss, that's all right, this hotel is protected. Mr. Creager gets his drinks here'."

"Petty asked how many other boys were engaged in the business, and they told him there were five. He had all those boys up and got their affidavits which he sent to Mr. Blair?"

Places "Protected"

The witness then said that Petty had told him other places which were protected.

"Who owns the Metropolitan in Fort Worth," asked Senator McKellar.

"I understand a Mr. Moore had something to do with it," said Hill.

"When a prohibition officer in Texas under this pay-as-you-enter plan gets too active he is suspended, is that it?" asked McKellar.

"That was the condition some time ago," admitted the witness. It is better now, the prohibition officers are under civil service."

"Is the Metropolitan still a going concern?" asked McKellar.

"Yes," replied Hill.

"Where is Mr. Petty now?"

"He is a building contractor in Fort Worth."

"Not in the service now, then?" said McKellar.

"As soon as he began this evil practice of raiding protected hotels, he was dropped."

"What effect will your testimony have on you as superintendent of the branch postoffice in Fort Worth?" asked McKellar.

"I don't know, but I expect I'll catch hell."

He'll Catch It

"If you do, let us know," said McKellar, we'll want to know it."

"Were you a man of means when you signed this note?" asked Brookhart.

"No, I was making about $150 a month."

"Your idea was that Mr. Creager and the others were simply selling these offices, wasn't it?" asked McKellar.

"Yes, at that time," said Hill.

At this point Leonard Withington asked if he might question the witness and was told he could suggest questions. He brought out that neither Creager nor Eugene Nolte had told him he would be expected to pay if he received an appointment.

"But you had no doubt that this was a sale just the same?" insisted McKellar.

"No, all my friends, Petty and others at the table with me, said if we wanted offices we must pay."

Lubbock Man Testifies

John L. Vaughan, postmaster at Lubbock, was the last witness summoned. He said he had been postmaster there since 1924 and that since his appointment had signed a note for $100 but had not paid all of it. He admitted that he was recently reappointed, having been confirmed in December although the amount of his pledge to the party was still unpaid. He denied knowing anything of contributions by others and told of being present at the meeting in Fort Worth in 1921, saying he went as a loyal Republican from Lamesa, where he was living. He made no contributions then, not being a candidate for any office.

The testimony of Leonard Withington opened the hearing and he frankly declared he had no objection to submitting all the facts relative to Republican financing in Texas. He prefaced his testimony with a prepared statement in which he asserted that while contributions were received from all Republicans in the state and that the organization was maintained throughout the year that the question of whether or not an applicant for office was a contributing member did not enter into the equation when National Committeeman Creager determined on his recommendation.

Withington Talks

Withington said his salary is $10,000 a year and that only those in his office are paid salaries. The cost of the organization, he said, is $25,000 a year. In summing up his facts Withington said there are 24,892 federal employes in Texas of whom 9,008 are in the postal service. Only 982 have contributed through notes and 457 have made cash contributions. During the seven years, ending Dec. 31, 1928, Withington said, 982 office holders have signed pledges aggregating $90,620 and 1,233 non-office holders have contributed $112,575. Cash contributions from office holders have been $10,109 and 660 non-office holders have contributed $32,109.

In his testimony, Withington revealed that some of the postmasters have not paid their notes, naming Postmaster John Philp who had paid but $350 on an $800 note while P. G. Lucas had made a note for $600. The organization opposed reappointment of Philp but he was named just the same.

Hoover Demos Financed

Withington explained that the Republican organization in Texas had financed the Hoover Democrats during the last campaign. His total receipts, he said, were approximately $80,000 and this was divided with the Hoover Democrats on a 50-50 basis.

Withington said the activities of the Republicans in Texas in maintaining a year-round organization had resulted in vastly increasing the Republican vote.

Congressman Wurzbach quizzed the witness regarding the purposes of the organization but Withington insisted it was not designed to fight the Wurzbach organization but rather to build up the party.

"I want to say that in the last election it was Mr. Wurzbach's district which went for Smith," said Withington.

"Yes, you might tell them I had the opposition of your organization," Wurzbach said, "and that Dr. Thompson, the treasurer of your organization, contributed to the campaign fund of my Democratic opponent."

"I don't know anything about that," replied Withington.

Senator McKellar asked Withington to supply a list of persons appointed to federal office in Texas with the amounts each contributed, if anything, and the witness agreed to supply it.

Oil Company Victor In Suit for $1,400

A jury in the 30th district court Tuesday afternoon returned a verdict for the defendant in the suit of C. E. Taylor against the Hines Oil company. Mr. Taylor sought to recover $1,400 damages in connection with an automobile accident on the lake road.

The plaintiff alleged that the collision resulted from the lack of a tail light on a truck belonging to the company. He asked $1,000 damages for his car and $400 for personal injuries. Counsel for the defense offered testimony to show that the truck was not being used in the service of the company at the time of the accident.

Passage of Bill Creating Game Commission Believed Assured

Wichitans Victorious in Fight for Six Members on Board; Long Speaks for Measure

The bill creating a commission of six members for control of all fish, game and oyster affairs in the state, which was introduced in the senate about two weeks ago, was passed to engrossment by a substantial majority in the house Tuesday, according to messages received from Austin by Ben O. Oneal, president of the local chapter of Izaak Walton league.

As first presented, the bill called for a commission of three members to supplant the present plan of committing the handling of fish and game matters to one commissioner. When the bill came to the house of representatives, the committee to which it was referred made a number of alterations, including the increase of the membership from three to six. Mr. Oneal and other leading sportsmen of the state appeared before the legislative committee and spoke in behalf of a large number of commission members, basing their argument upon the necessity of at least six men to give fair representation to the extensive territory and wide variety of fish and game conditions included in the state of Texas.

It is expected that the bill will be passed soon as amended by the house committee, Mr. Oneal said.

Special to The Record News

AUSTIN, Jan. 29.—The Williamson house bill, abolishing the game, fish and oyster department and creating a game, fish and oyster commission consisting of six members, an executive secretary and an assistant executive secretary, was passed to engrossment in the house Tuesday afternoon. An effort to suspend the constitutional rule and place the bill on final passage failed. This means that when the bill comes up on final passage it will pass. Representative Bob Long of Wichita Falls urged the passage of the bill.

TAX OFFICE OPEN TO LAST

Midnight Jan. 31 'Zero Hour' Wichita Payments

The main office of the county tax collector in the courthouse will be kept open until midnight Thursday Jan. 31, to accommodate eleventh hour tax payers and automobile owners, Roy A. Jones, chief deputy announced Tuesday. Registrations will be received and poll tax receipts issued up until 12 o'clock When the office reopens on Feb. 1, delinquent penalties will be in effect.

Between 400 and 500 licenses were sold Tuesday, leaving some 4,000 automobile owners in the county still unregistered, C. H. Parker deputy in charge of the automobile division, said. Reports from the branch offices in Electra, Iowa Park, and Burkburnett were incomplete late Tuesday.

Poll tax registrations from two outside precincts, in addition to those handled in the main office brought the total to around 8,750 Tuesday afternoon, or 2,000 more than was reported Monday. Another 2,000 must be handled if a normal number of voters are qualified, according to Mr. Jones.

The main office in the courthouse remained open to accommodate a waiting line Tuesday afternoon The door will not be closed before 6:30 Wednesday.

Additional deputies have been employed in the branch offices in the county to serve during the last two days and to help with the work of checking the records after the work is over.

Four extra deputies have been at work in Mr. Raley's office during the past three weeks.

Sentence Passed On Four Prisoners

Judge Allan D. Montgomery Tuesday pronounced sentence on four prisoners convicted in the 30th district court last week. Colley Bruner, convicted for automobile theft, on a second offense indictment, was sent to the penitentiary for 10 years, and Sam Maniochia and Paul Reneau, convicted for burglary, were given two years each.

A five year suspended sentence was revoked and two more years added to the punishment of Raymond Sellers, convicted of car theft. D. E. Fowler, negro, tried Tuesday for assault with intent to kill and convicted of aggravated assault was given six months in jail.

Dog Owners Warned To Register Animals

All owners of dogs in the city limits must buy licenses for their animals or run the risk of having them picked up by the city dog catcher, R. M. Hurst, day police sergeant, declared Tuesday.

An increase in diseased dogs which has forced the police to kill a number of dogs during the last few weeks makes it necessary for officials to pay strict attention to the enforcement of the city "dog law."

Dogs must be vaccinated for rabies before licenses can be obtained, Hurst declared. The license may be renewed at police headquarters.

DANDRUFF

Soon Destroys the Hair

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.—Adv.

Wins Praise

The quality of her acting as the Private Secretary in "The News Parade" is winning the praise of movie fans everywhere for this lovely newcomer to the screen. At home in New York City, hundreds admire her charming personality and she has fairly "set the style" on Broadway by the way she dresses her hair.

"The simple method I use in caring for my hair," says Miss Shea, "has been of great help to me in my motion picture work, where one's hair must always look its best. It's just the thing for busy girls, too, because it is so easy. Most of the girls I know in stage and picture work are taking it up as soon as they hear about it. All you do is put a little Danderine on your brush every time you use it. It makes your hair so easy to dress and holds it in place wonderfully. It's ideal for girls who are letting their hair grow. It keeps my hair and scalp so clean and comfortable. I don't shampoo half so often, now. It gives my hair such a silky, soft, lustrous appearance that all my friends comment on it."

Danderine removes the oily film from each strand of hair, restores its natural color, gives it more luster than brilliantine. It cleanses and invigorates the scalp; helps overcome dandruff. It is delightfully fragranced; isn't stick or oily; doesn't show. Waves "set" with it, last longer. All drug stores have it, in generous 50c bottles.—Adv.

Miss Rebecca Smith Well Received By Forum Members Tuesday Afternoon

Borrowing her title from Willa Cather's "Death Comes to the Archbishop," Miss Rebecca Smith of T. C. U., Fort Worth, talked on "The Bright Edges of the World" to a large number of Woman's Forum members at the Forum clubhouse at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Miss Smith connected her title with the book in that the Southwest reminded her of Miss Cather's description of Santa Fe when she says that "one could only breathe that air on the 'Bright Edges of the World' Miss Smith explained that she meant by the "Southwest", that section of the country south of the Mississippi, stopping at the Rockies and all the states that touch it, plus Arizona. "These people have a certain feeling of solidarity of their traits by virtue of being the last of a great frontier. These traits are self reliance, self dependence, courage, and democratic equality," Miss Smith pointed out.

"At this passage of the frontier stage, we are hardly out of the covered wagon stage and still have our pioneers with us. The cultural and intellectual life depends on the resources of the people of the country and the development of the Southwest in these matters will be a result of its resourcefulness. We can import little theater directors at fabulous salaries, lecturers and artists but we cannot accelerate our own progress. Cultural life is organic and cannot grow any faster than our historic, political and intellectual growth of today," Miss Smith believes.

"We no longer have any folk literature. The folk literature has passed on with the passing of the frontier. We are at the beginning of woman's clubs, little theaters and art galleries. We are in the same transitional period that the North east was in 100 years ago. We have within our states a combination of three dramatic elements which assist us in accomplishing the things we want done. They are our own heroic age, natural resources and all the means of communication and transportation that keep us momentarily in touch with the older centers of culture." Miss Smith defined these three as nature's richness, wealth and contact.

In discussing Southwestern literature Miss Smith gave a list of books that should be included in a five foot shelf. Following is a list of the authors she considered important: Andy Adams, Bill James, Phillip Ashton Rollins, Charles J. Finger, Will H. Robinson, Washington Irving, John Fletcher, Albert Pike, Mary Austin, Frank Dobie, Charles F. Lummis, Daisy Waller Dorothy Scarborough, Carl Sanburg John Lomax and Jack Thorp.

Preceding the lecture, Miss Ines Rudy of Bowie, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Harry Karlsberg sang two numbers. Mrs. J. C. A. Guest introduced the entertainers in the absence of Mrs. Ben G. Oneal president.

'Key Home' Idea For Community Gaining Favor

By CORINNE RICH
Universal Service Writer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Establishment of "key homes"—that is, permanent demonstration institutions—in every community, where housewives may go for specific information on all phases of their jobs, is the next big undertaking the General Federation of Women's clubs will push.

It is the outcome of a home-equipment survey made by the federation during the last two years.

This survey, extending as it did into thousands of urban and rural homes throughout the country brought out some astounding facts concerning the deplorable lack of ordinary modern equipment which hampers a large percentage of the nation's home makers.

"The great majority of girls leave school with only a smattering of knowledge of the manifold tasks that confront them as soon as they marry and establish homes," said Mrs. John D. Sherman today.

Mrs. Sherman is chairman of the general federation's department of the American home and past president of the federation. The key homes idea is dear to her heart.

"The need of expert help on points of domestic management is so important that we club women try to establish in every city and town an institution to demonstrate the operation of an up-to-date home, run with the least effort and friction," she explained.

"The ideal 'key home' is a home controlled and supported by the community and representative of the best type of home that can be established for a moderate sum in its particular town.

"It is furnished with taste and equipped in accordance with modern scientific standards. It is staffed by experts in maternal and infant health, in child psychology, in home economics, in home recreation. It extends its influence through extension agents into the parts of the city or country that can not be brought into direct contact with the home itself."

Already a few key homes are operating in various parts of the country. Los Angeles has the first one opened, where problems of budgeting, guidance for the young wife, adult and child health, and many other phases of domestic well-being are discussed with whomever comes.

Good Mother Is One Who Prepares Her Children for Life's Battles

"A Good Mother Is a Woman Who Prepares Her Children for Life, Who Tries to See Them as They Are Instead of as She Would Like Them to Be, Who Puts the Iron Of Courage Into Their Souls."

A correspondent asks: "What is your idea of a good mother?" The traditional idea of the good mother is something gooey and soft and sweet and sticky, and with about as much substance to it is gelatin pudding. That is the idea that most women have of being good mothers. They think they have been good mothers if they have worshiped their children enough, and if they have made doormats of themselves for their children, and if they have shed enough tears over their children.

You never hear of a girl who has gone wrong, or of a boy who is a drunkard, or a bootlegger, or a thief, or a gambler, that somebody doesn't say what a good mother she or he had. The tragic figure in every murder trial is not the criminal at the bar, but a forlorn, broken, martyred woman, who is wringing her helpless hands and saying what a good mother she was.

These mothers thought they were good mothers because from the time their first baby was born they never had any other thought except for their children. They thought they were good mothers because they indulged their children in everything that it was possible to get by hook or crook for them. They thought they were good mothers because they never saw a single fault in their children or denied them anything, or made them do anything they didn't want to do.

But they were bad mothers because they fostered every weakness in their children's natures and developed every fault, and made it inevitable that they would take the easiest way to their desires when they were grown. Good mothers rear good citizens. Their children are never criminals.

Now my idea of a good mother is not a spineless, jellyfish woman. On the contrary, she has a backbone like a telephone post. She loves her children, but she loves them too well to bring them up so everybody else hates them. She sacrifices herself to her children, but she sees that they give up to her also. Her children do not think of her as just a tear jug. They look upon her as the incarnation of law and order. They know that they can always count on her help and sympathy, but they likewise know that she will mete out justice as well as mercy to them.

My idea of a good mother is a woman who prepares her children for life. She looks about her and sees that most of the derelicts and the failures, those who have not been able to make the grade, are the men and women who are the round pegs who have got into the square holes, or the men and women who have never been disciplined, who have never been taught any habits of thrift and industry and perseverance.

So the good mother tries to get a true slant on her children, and to see them as they are, instead of what she would like them to be. She doesn't deceive herself into believing that a girl with a snub nose and carroty hair and a chunky figure is destined to be a movie star or marry a millionaire. Nor does she delude herself into believing that because Tommy can pick out a tune on the piano with one finger that he is a second Paderewski; nor that because Sammy evades doing all household chores it is an indication that he has an artistic temperament that will make him a great writer or actor or something.

Far from it. The good mother doesn't see her ugly ducklings as swans. She recognizes them as plain barnyard fowls and helps them to make the best of themselves on that basis. She sees to it that her homely daughter is taught some good and sufficient way of supporting herself since she is likely always to have to do it, and that her boys with a mechanical or musical turn take up some profession in which their aptitude will count.

The good mother teaches her children self-control, because that is the foundation stone of happiness and success in life. She teaches them to control their tempers and that makes them masters of every situation. She teaches them to control their tongues, and that makes them diplomats that can get along with anybody in any situation. She teaches them to control their appetites, and they never become drunkards. She teaches them to restrain their passions and her daughters never become women of the street, nor her sons murderers.

The good mother puts iron into her children's souls. She breeds in them the courage to do and to endure. She teaches her very babies to bite back the cry when they fall and hurt themselves. She never lets her youngsters whine nor complain because they are not so rich as others are, or because the thing they have to do is hard. She makes them feel that the yellowest thing in the world is to be a quitter, and that it is a point of honor to finish up every job, no matter how trivial, that they have undertaken to do.

The good mother makes her children's home a place of peace and love and tenderness and comprehension and hope. The rooms may be small and crowded, the furniture rickety, the food plain, but mother is always there with her jolly laugh, never too busy to stop and talk things over with a fellow when he is in a jam, always with a suggestion that will set things right; always full of hope and encouragement; always laughing with her children, never at them.

A good mother recognizes that her children are regular human beings with their own individual tastes, talents and inclinations, even as she is. She doesn't try to make them rubber stamps of herself. She gives their personality as free play as she can and uses as much finesse in getting along with them as she does with the strangers next door. She doesn't nag them about little things. She respects their privacy and doesn't pry too much into their affairs, and because she doesn't offend their sensibility with vulgar curiosity they confide in her.

Finally, a good mother is unselfish enough not to try to absorb her children. She doesn't expect to be all-in-all to them and to keep them from establishing any other relationships. She doesn't arrogate to herself the right to direct their lives, and so she does not resent their marrying, or wish herself on them as a life guest when they do marry, or hate her in-laws because she feels that they have taken her place in a son or daughter's heart.

"By their fruit shall ye know them." A good mother makes good children. —DOROTHY DIX.

Hot Tilt Ensues on Bill to Bar Ministers

AUSTIN, Jan. 29. (INS)—Proceedings in the house of representatives were enlivened today by a tilt between Representative J. Lewis Thompson of Houston, author of the proposed amendment to the constitution which would bar preachers and priests from holding the office of governor or member of the legislature, and Representative James Harper of Mount Pleasant.

Harper, on a plea of personal privilege, took exception to the amendment and said he spoke on behalf of the five ministers of the house. He said he resented the proposed amendment, declaring that these ministers were elected by their people "and have as much right to be members of the legislature as anyone in the house."

Separation Urged

Thompson, also on a plea of personal privilege, took the floor and said he had no personal animosity toward the five minister-legislators, but declared he wanted "simply to urge separation of the church and state." He added that prior to the adoption of the present constitution, pastors were prohibited from holding seats in the legislature, and that the only time they ever held such offices was during the reign of the carpetbaggers in reconstruction days.

This statement aroused the ire of Representative Reno Eichenrodt of Seguin, sole Republican member of the house, who demanded to know if "you mean to say all Republicans are carpetbaggers?" Thompson replied in the negative.

School Fund Proposed

Representative Holder of Dallas introduced a bill creating a state rural aid school fund, to consist of such a sum as the legislature may appropriate for each school year out of the general revenue fund. It also provides for its distribution among the counties of the state upon the basis of their density of population and the per capita wealth. This bill would revolutionize the existing method of distribution of rural aid.

Representative Sinks of Geddings, chairman of the house committee on privileges and elections, announced the personnel of the subcommittee to hear evidence of reported illegal balloting in the contest for the seat of W. R. Montgomery of Edinburg by E. M. Smith, also of Edinburg.

The members of the subcommittee which left tonight for Edinburg are Cecil Storey of Vernon, chairman; Representative S. E. Stewart of Greenville, Luke Mankin of Georgetown, Henry A. Turner of Madisonville, E. T. Murphy of Livingston and S. R. Williams of Hemphill.

The Prendergast bill making it unlawful to drink intoxicating liquor not only on a train but also on motor buses and airplanes was passed.

PURCHASE OF ALAMO VOTED

Senate Favor Buying Historic Texas Shrine

AUSTIN, Jan. 29. (INS)—The entire session of the senate today, before adjournment to hear Murray Bulbert, exalted ruler of the Elks, was given over to the passage of the Williamson senate bill appropriating $1,000,000 for the purchase of Alamo Square at San Antonio. Senator Pink Parrish of Lubbock, cast the only dissenting vote against the bill on its final passage.

The most fiery speeches so far uncorked before the senate at this session marked debate on the bill. Senator Thomason of Nacogdoches brought heavy applause in a rousing speech in favor of the bill. Senator Love of Dallas, and Holbrook of Galveston, likewise urged passage of the bill and asked their fellow solons to let their patriotism rise above the opposition to the pecuniary clause involved and purchase the property before it increased in value.

Senator W. R. Cousins of Beaumont, newly elected senator to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Triplett, offered to amend the apropriation, reducing it to $200,000 and to purchase only a 100-foot strip around the Alamo. His motion was lost. Senator Pollard of Tyler moved to decrease the appropriation to $825,000, because, he said, appraisals showed the property could be bought for this. His motion was likewise lost.

Senator Parr's joint resolution providing for a constitutional amendment extending the term of office for district offices to four years was laid on the table because of the absence of Senator Parr.

THE twentieth century abolished certainties. Riches and power ceased to be guarantees of indefinite permanence—mighty sovereignties and vast fortunes, alike, become vulnerable to maladministration and competition.

In an age when an Armour can lose $140,00,000 within 12 months, lose $140,000,000 within 12 months, and the strongest entrenched dynasty can be erased overnight, it behooves lesser wealth and position to heed "stop-look-and-listen" signs.

Time was when men might bequeat hcapital and titles with assurance of reasonable perpetuation. Nowadays, place, property and prestige are wasted on folk who haven't also inherited the qualities which won them.

That's why thrones are passing from the picture and so many who once sat in the lap of luxury are cocking eyes at park benches.

Several thousand recent millionaires—"who thank God that their sons won't be compelled to undergo the work and hardships they endured"—are accordingly warned to put Junior over the same hurdles dad jumped.

Money and monarchies are quickly parted.

Any ass can have, but it takes ability to hold on to a concern, an estate or a realm.

Modernists and Infidels

A STATEWIDE strike of parents against sending their children where the doctrine of evolution is taught or winked at is threatened by Representative Rev. James W. Harper of Mount Pleasant unless his anti-evolution bill is sent over the top. He is quoted as having said:

"The indications are that all of our higher institutions of learning are under control of modernists and infidels, and if the citizens of the state of Texas really knew some of the things that are being taught in the class rooms of our institutions of higher learning they would rise up in mass and demand a reform."

In the grand old state of Arkansas it is the duty of the attorney general to inspect the libraries of the state institutions of higher learning and place on the black list all books which refer in any way to evolution or the teachings of its advocates, and where mention of the subject in the impious books calls for the strangulation of the offending tome—the menace as the Rev. Depresentative Dr. Harper sees it.

It is said that the Encyclopedia Brittanica is one of the poisonous books unearthed by the attorney general. This is a wicked world. What a blight come upon civilization when the art of printing was invented.

Money Justly Spent

PRESIDENTIAL primaries cost Herbert Hoover $380,000. Presidential primaries cost Smith $142,000. There were 15 candidates for the primary presidential nomination. All the 15 candidates spent $894,000 and the senate campaign funds investigating committee returns the verdict that it was money legitimately spent.

Heflin of Alabama declared while the primary campaign was on that the backers of Smith had invested millions of dollars in the primary contest, that the country had been flooded with Smith money and that the wreck of the nation as well as the constitution and the flag was in sight.

Well, a Republican senate investigating committee gives the figures: Hoover $380,000; Smith $142,000. Not many years ago in the state of Illinois a greater sum of money was spent to win a senatorial nomination for the Republican president of the state utility commission. He won the nomination; he won the election; his fellow senators refused him a seat.

His name was Smith, Frank L. Smith, the boom political and personal companion of the Hon. Roy O. West, now secretary of the department of the interior. Heflin of Alabama must have picked the wrong Smith.

John D. Battles Again

NOT THE LEAST interesting of the new year's developments is the appearance of the elder Rockefeller as one of the leaders of the fight to unseat Col. Robert W. Stewart as chairman of the board of Standard Oil of Indiana.

It is a long time since the aged oil king stepped out into a public fight. More noteworthy than this is the fact that this is probably the first of the many fights Rockefeller has been in in which he has appeared as champion of the rights of "the people" against "the interests."

The whole fight against Stewart is based on new standards that have gradually been taking form in American business circles. Two decades ago it would have been incomprehensible for a powerful industrial magnate to be in danger of losing his position merely because of his testimony before senate investigators. Indeed, Rockefeller himself probably would have been sorely puzzled by such a thing. He had his experiences with senate investigators, did Rockefeller; and not always were the senators able to get from him all the information they wanted.

But the times have changed, and Rockefeller, senior, has changed with them.

It is only a few years since Rockefeller was probably the most hated man in America. To the ordinary mortal his name was a symbol for all that was menacing, selfish and conscienceless in the world of finance and industry. A demagogue on the stump, if he ran out of ideas, could always draw a hand by attacking Rockefeller.

But today Rockefeller is actually popular. The general public likes to read about him. It feels that it owes him a debt of gratitude. And now he tops it all by leaping into a fight on the popular side—using his mighty influence to enforce certain canons of honor and decency in the business world.

It is customary to remark cynically that Rockefeller has "bought himself off" with the American people by his unparalleled philanthropies. But there is more to it than that. The man himself has changed; and, in the process of his change, he has done all of us a great service. He has come to realize, and has made the rest of the country realize, that great wealth and power carry with them great public responsibilities.

Does that sound like an empty platitude? Please remember that the big business man who gave it a thought a generation ago was the shining exception. The public was there to be milked, and a business man's responsibility ended when his stockholders had been taken care of. That was the universal rule.

So now we find Rockefeller emerging from his long retirement to convince the kings of business that they must heed the ordinary rules of honor and every-day morality. It is a significant sight. It betokens a great improvement that has come over American life. Rockefeller has never served his country better than now, in what will probably be the last of his great fights.

TEXAS AND HER PRODUCTS

Instead of feeding our maize crop to our own chickens, we're sending it to California. Maize turned to chickens would add much money to the farmers of Texas. West Texas, where a great crop of maize is raised each year, has found that there is a market for the crop in California. California, by the way, is one of the greatest chicken producing states in the Union. We're sending our cotton seed to Europe, where it is fed. It should be used in this country, where it is produced. Much is being lost by the sending away of our natural feedstuffs. It should be used mostly where it is produced.

The Day Book of a New Yorker
Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—Much has been written of the Chinatown of the past and the present. Usually these stories deal with two or three characters. Irving Berlin is referred to as the singing waiter in Nigger Mike Salter's beer saloon and frequently Chuck Connors is brought into the limelight as having been one of the characters in this section of New acters all right, but there were a great many more who were contemporaneous with them.

For more than 30 years Chinatown had its own club. It was the Chatham club, and its chief owner was Johnny Kenny. It was unique in the fact that it not only harbored the underworld type who made Chinatown their headquarters no matter where their home was situated, but it was the real spot to see night life.

On the ground floor of the club, which was three stories high and in Pell street near the turn on the north side, was a regulation barroom where the chief drink was beer. Of course, there was whisky and other concoctions to be had. Upstairs a short flight brought you into a room about 60 feet long by 30 wide. It had a well-polished floor due to the constant dancing that went on nightly from 9 o'clock until everybody got tired.

The music came from a piano, but not one of the wheezy kind associated with dance halls. The piano player, Big John, was a musician of the old school, who insisted that the instrument be kept in proper tune. He was so zealous about the care of the music mat'r that he rarely permitted any one else to play it. John could play all the popular dance tunes of those days and got so much music out of his piano that he would not permit extra pieces to be added to his orchestra.

There was at least one man, who was permitted to play that piano, and he sits today as a justice in one of the important courts in New York. He is a graduate of Harvard and, unknown to most of his friends an accomplished musician. One night the writer took this justice, then a lawyer, to see the lights of Chinatown, after which the party adjourned to the Chatham club. There was John in his accustomed place. A few waltzes had been played when the judge was introduced to the one man orchestra, who suggested a duet. It was played. Dancing stopped and John gave way to the judge, who entertained in concert like manner for some 20 minutes.

The judge later made many visits to meet his newly made acquaintances, John and Kenny. On every occasion he was asked to play. He did.

One of the most pleasing of ballad singers of those days was Jimmy Doyle, who was a regular entertainer at the club for years. He was known as the silver voiced tenor. He was of the type that was always ready to sing any song suggested and he did them all so well that outside of the good salary paid him by Kenny he was the recipient of goodly sums from some of the slummers who got into the place and had been entertained by him.

After many years of night life in Chinatown Jimmy was induced to move up to Harlem, where he opened a place similar to Johnny Kenny's. But the neighborhood did not take kindly to the place. Before it was actually closed Jimmy paid nightly visits to the Chatham club. After singing two or three of his favorite songs he would go back to Harlem, only to brood over his mistake in ever leaving the place that had made him famous.

Another oldtimer who was a regular visitor was Kitty O'Neil, who in her day was the ace of clog dancers. With all due respect to her she liked to drop around after her theater performance was over and take a few glasses of beer. Sometimes it would be champagne.

When Kittiy reached a certain stage in her wine sipping it was the custom to ask her a dance. For those who saw her it may be stated that they never "saw nothing." The vim with which she did those steps that made her famous just stopped everything else. Between the piano player, who was an artist all by himself, Jimmy Doyle and Kitty O'Neil, who never took a penny for her act, the club was noted.

Of course it had its ups and downs. Police conditions had their changes in those days as of today. A new captain would attempt to reform a section that could not be reformed. He would raid the place for a violation of the liquor law, but the case would be thrown out of court. No police official ever could charge Lanny with permitting any wrong-doing on the premises.

It is true that well-known thieves used to drop into the place after hours, but it is also true that a customer who as safe there as he would be in his own home. It was one of Kenny's maxims that while he had some customers who knew how to pick pockets he would not permit a customer to be molested. If a man complained to him that he had been robbed after leaving the place Kenny at once became a detective. He would get a description of the suspect, and if found the thief would be compelled to return the stolen property. It was Kenny's boast that he had few such complaints and in every instance the goods were recovered.

Kenny's regime ran for a number of years. He never varied his style of entertainment and he never was asked to do so by his patrons. It was agreed that it was a wholesome place even if frequented by many persons known in the underworld.

After Kenny died the place had a number of proprietors, but none stayed long.

The diagram of feminine loveliness pictured below depicts the facial beauty of Broadway's one-woman-crime wave—Helen Morgan, who is the main reason why men leave home to see Ziegfeld's "Show Boat." Helen used to give the suckers a big hand in a New York whoopee club until the snoopers decided that the will-weakening fluid flowed there. Then they broke up Helen's playhouse, but the courts made the federal men bring all of her toys right back home.

HELEN MORGAN

"Don't tell me you've heard this one before," Helen told me, "because it just happened to me this morning."

"Oh, you must tell me how it all happened," I begged, clapping my hands.

"Well," she explained, "I needed some rat poison for a pet mouse that's been running around here in my dressing room, so I ran over to the drug store and told the clerk that I wanted some rat poison. I finally convinced him that I really wanted rat poison and not what he was first thinking of.

"Well, he yawned and asked in a nice, sweet, bored voice, 'shall I have it delivered to you?'

"Imagine a guy like that? So I just gave him a dirty look and said:

"'Oh, don't bother about sending it over—I'll have the rats come in after it!'"

The VICARION

The Astounding Story of an Invention Greater Than the Movies

Copyright by Gardner Hunting

By Gardner Hunting

Serialized by Ledger Syndicate

In the year 1935 Radley Brainard has invented the Vicarion, a device with which it is possible to re-create scenes out of the past. The invention is a sensational success, with all the theaters installing it in place of motion pictures. Complete Illusions, Inc., which at that time controls all the improvements on the movie, faces ruin, but when Ferdinand Mortimer and Jerry Ballard, heads of the company, call on him, Brainard refuses to make terms.

Brainard's records of the past are contained in "bombs," which hold liquid air and while he is projecting one of the "bombs" which was unmarked, he sees a beautiful gossamer-clad girl, with whom he falls in love, although he is engaged to Phyllis Norman. During the first demonstration of the Vicarion, with Phyllis and her family looking on, a strange man staggers in the studio. He is unable to tell who he is and Brainard names him Van Winkle, and makes him his aide.

Brainard calls in the operator who made the unmarked record, but gains no information from him. He orders Van Winkle to investigate the making of the bomb. Brainard projects one of the three remaining bombs containing the woodland scene in which the girl with whom he is infatuated appears and decides the records were made by Jeffry Honer, a criminal whom he has employed. Honer dies of fright while listening to the voice of his dead brother which Brainard projects by means of the Vicarion and Honer's secret of the "bomb," which contains the "sunrise nymph" passes into the hands of Mortimer and Ballard.

"Oh Fate, be kind again!"

The insane search began. He was like a man who dips for a jewel dropped in the sea; like a man who runs after an echo; like a man who sleeps hoping to recapture one beloved dream. Hours fled past him like the spokes of a wheel of his machine, as little needed. Afternoon ran into evening and evening into night, and night into dawn. He woke from unconsciousness to call at his door for food, to deny all demands from outside, to go back to his task.

Supplies enough for his work were at hand—he needed none but a double set of bombs for his machine, and electric current to run it. By fifties he made his records, then set his machine to go on with the making while he viewed his results. Some records he ran in all their captured length; most of them he gave but a moment of his precious time. He was like one who skims a book, pausing here and there to read a page, then flicking a score of leaves under impatient thumb. Twenty, thirty, forty records in an hour passed or were allowed to escape as worthless. Then he would give half an hour, an hour to one. Wholly preoccupied, he gave no thought to events that might be transpiring outside, so far as the present hour was concerned. Living in seperate moments in a hundred, a thousand widely separate hours and places, he was but a degree less isolated from his own time than the figures at which he looked.

Wonder of Life

With the area of earth and the stretch of the ages to range in, he looked at bits, as he might have caught at a leaf here and there in millions falling in a forest. He saw—

Two moon-whitened desert jackals, snarling across an ass' bones; a girl of the street, raging at the police net in a New York night court; a brutish farmer in a smock, beating a writhing cow; a woman making batter-cakes; an honest lover's first timid, reverent kiss; a dance in some obscure sculptor's studio that might have made the marble blush; a trip-hammer forging a liner's shaft; a bride, whispering her sacred vows, poignant with innocence; a group in ghostly garb, at work over something in an operating room; a seaplane taking off in clouds of spray; a chimpanzee mother chattering to her offspring in a tropical tree; a little family happy around a Christmas tree; charred husks of men and women carried from a burning building; a boy lying drowned in the flowing mouth of a culvert; a white-haired old man giving roses to his white-haired old wife; 20 men in stripes doing the lock-step; a laughing child in the snow; a bull moose bellowing his mating call in a dim pine opening; old ladies knitting in a sunny porch; a buxom woman nursing a sickly babe; a fox terrier killing a kitten. Life! In scattered patches and raw spots! Perhaps ancient, perhaps modern—scenes 10,000 miles, or 10,000 years apart—or simultaneous!

Often he had no cue to the where and the when of the thing at which he looked. But his bombs were numbered and his tape-record told him the set of his dials; he could search out period and locality when he chose.

He looked into the face of Oliver Cromwell—he stood in the Venusian sunshine with Simon Bolivar! He saw Romans in tunics building a road. He watched a lurid love affair between a woman and a man whose faces and garments whispered of Babylon. He heard a band play on the deck of a sinking ship—and watched the tragedy through to the last bubbling eddy in a yellow sunset. He saw a trembling, wet-eyed mother watching a daughter's little graduation triumph. He saw cowboys leap into gun-play over a poker difference.

He heard a contrite little son ask his father's forgiveness for offense. He saw a girl dying in a motor wreck. He saw the silvered outlines and red eyes of a buck by jack-light on the short of a Canadian lake. Delight, or horror, at their poignant heights and depths. Life's sea, from its sparkling spume to its fetid scum! Love, cruelty, tenderness, courage, filth! Parade of virtue and sweating vice! Man's record, from his blazing triumphed to his gangrened wounds! Life, with blood running red in its capilaries and moisture on its skin—with broken nails and split lips—with its hairy chest or its fair bosom bowed—with its nostrils quivering and its knuckles white—from its cradle to its mummy-case, striving, reaching raging, living, dying—hating, stabbing, caressing, cheating, flattering, poisoning, self-sacrificing, throat-cutting! Life, the mummer, the martyr, the madcap, the patriot, the assassin, the sweetheart, the despoiler, sublime or groveling, in its glory or its shame!

Before him passed things so terrible that one might think they could lacerate the eyes or leave the mind mangled; and things so beautiful as to burn bare the soul. But the man listened and watched—listened and watched—for a trickle of falling water and eyes peering ing from a screen of leaves!

In each little bomb, new hope! Never could he know what the new little shell might contain. Expectation, disappointment, momentary distraction, despondent return! Sometimes he slowly, carefully, methodically combed a period or a place, to and fro, and back and forth, spreading his multiple vibrations, as it were, fanwise—scattering, deplaying—in organized search. Sometimes he swept with a single vibratory magnet, zigzagging like a hound ranging for a lost scent. Sometimes, desperate, he flung all method and all sense aside and snatched at random for what might be caught—like an unreasoning child who claws wildly for some lost treasure in a mass of jumbled toys. Sometimes he duplicated things he had seen before—furious at the loss of time, then flaming with hope that the God of Chance would yet toss the priceless replica his way.

As time went by he became calloused to its passing. He forgot that life is not merely fever and fray and fear and hope; that it is eating and drinking and rest—and casual contact and sympathy—and music and laughter—and day and night! Strung to a pitch far above any normal human note, he became like a mere tuning fork attached to his machine—like a sensitized plate awaiting a ray. Sometimes he started up—and his sagging knees gave way; sometimes his hands fell atrembling in an ague of helplessness. Then he would drink, and drink. His decanter emptied, he broke the neck from a bottle we would not pause to uncork. He ceased to want food. He felt no thirst his liquor would not quench—and when his eyes sometimes doubled images before them he attributed to it the drink. He felt neither weariness nor pain, though he had his periods of unconsciousness which he thought might be sleep. If it occurred to him to stop he stopped long enough to see Jerry Ballard's grinning face and to hear him say, "I'll go back and wait till you come to me!"

Darling of the Dawn

And then suddenly, he found himself waking from a sort of wide-eyed sleep of the brain and hearing and seeing the trickle of water into a crystal pool and the love-note of a scarlet bird. He saw his Darling of the Dawn peep from her lookout, spring out and down to her carpet of grass, a thing of morning skies and dew, with hair like spun shadows from the hollows of the sea, with eyes like memories of lost heaven! She stretched out arms to him aglow with ripening sunlight, her young breast heaved with panting breaths, as she called—and dropped—and sobbed!

Crazed with joy, he leaped and screamed! He tried to rush to her. He fell over his chair and crashed to the floor. His head struck—a fearful blow. When he tried to rise, the white room whirled. Nausea filled him and he fell back as if thrust down by mighty, buffeting, baffling, suffocationg hands. For a time consciousness went out again.

When he found the dim light and stillness around him once more, he was lying with his face in a wet spot of his own blood on the floor. His head was against the foot of the condenser. But he did not care. His brain was clear. He crawled to his feet, hope lifting his body like a galvanizing current. The scene—the precious scene was gone again; but he stood on his feet and knew that triumph was his. He had found her! Sweet Spirit of All Ecstasy, he had found her! She was his! He could not lose her again. There in his projector was the numbered bomb whose index was registered now. He could trace her. He could know her. He could find her! If she lived, he would fetch her to him from wherever she was, oppose who might! If not, he would go to her. He wanted no other earth, and no other heaven!

He was forced to seize a chair and use it as a crutch to help him across the room. But he made his way to his switchboard and the niche where he sheathed his bombs. He flung open the little door and thrust in his hand. There was no bomb there!

Impossible! He clawed at the tiny opening like a dog at a hole in sand. He struck at his switches and brought on his glare of light. He wrenched at the door of the niche till it came off in his hands. He stared, fumbled, moaned—he searched the floor, the air! He clawed again at the empty niche. Then whirled and surveyed the white room once more.

The long, glittering condenser was dumb. In it 50 freshly filled bombs awaited him. In his waiting tray were 50 others, mostly spent. He started vaguely toward them, but stopped short. He had taken no bomb from the niche since that scene had come and gone. No bomb had been there! What he had seen had not come to him through the condenser, recaptured, found! A trick of the mind! A dream! Vapor of half insanity, born of the foodless, sleepless, drink-spurred brain itself! Born of unknown laws! Not the etheric record of the thing he'd loved and lost; but only the record that memory had made and stored away—and projected into the visible world!

Still holding to the chair, he shuffled across the studio to the outer door. In a desk down the hall lay an automatic he had begun to consider obsolete.

It was the only object before his mind. He fumbled at the lock; his fingers seemed numb—he could not feel the key. His vision filled with spots of light. Suddenly maddened, he swung the chair up and smashed through the door like cardboard. The halls rang with the crash. He dropped the wreck of the chair and staggered down to another room. It was his dining room. He heard the thud of bare feet, and Ushigi came pounding in, in strange blue pajamas. It was night!

Brainard tried to speak. He uttered a queer dry sound. Ushigi's eyes seemed to start out of his face. He fell backward against the sideboard and his elbows crashed jangling into glassware there. He was cringing and shrieking like a cornered puppy when Brainard ceased to hear.

Phillis did not know of the explosion at the Bonmar till the morning following the event. Then they told her that no one had been hurt. She found out afterward that this was not true. An engineer had been killed, and two of the police officers who had guarded the front door were in the hospital, one with both legs broken.

But they told her another thing which she proved for herself was true. Brainard was locked up with one of his experiments and would not even listen to a report of the occurrence. He seemed quite indifferent. Ushigi assured her that he had told his master plainly, twice—the only times Brainard had appeared at his door. And Phyllis insisted then on staying in the office, with instructions to Ushigi to call her when Mr. Brainard should appear again.

It was nearly night again when the Jap summoned her, suddenly. She almost ran out into the hall—and arrived there just in time to see Radley speak a last impatient word to his man and close his door. He glanced up as Phyllis called out wildly to him, but he seemed neither to see nor to hear her. After that she was helpless. At dark she went home. Next day Brainard had given out word that he was not to be disturbed on any consideration whatever; and in answer to a reiterated statement about the explosion he had told his informer to "attend to it."

Phyllis asked them to telephone to her when Mr. Brainard was free again; and she waited all next day for a message. None came. But the following morning, two days after the attempt to blow up the Bonmar, Ushigi phoned at last that his master was in his bed, ill.

Phyllis tried to find her mother, Mrs. Norman had gone out. She learned that her father had not come home till near daylight, and was asleep. John had not been home at all.

The girl telephoned Relief Brainard to meet her at the Bonmar and went there as soon as she could. She found Miss Brainard waiting for her, and they interviewed Dr. Carmichael, who had seen Radley. The physician shrugged in answer to their anxious questions.

"Overwork," he said briefly, "and trying to keep up on booze." He looked curiously at Phyllis. "Are you—his sister?" he asked.

Miss Brainard relieved her of the necessity of explaining. "I'm his aunt," she said. "You can tell me anything you like."

"Well," said the doctor, smiling slightly, "I'll tell you that if I had any influence with him, I'd get him to let down. He'll crash."

"Then he—hasn't broken down now?" asked Phyllis.

"No—not broken down. He was sitting up when I saw him. Said he would be at his desk at noon."

He was. But after hearing the story of the attempt to bomb his building, he had only strength enough to direct Rex Welling to use the multiple condenser in an effort to pick up and follow the plane which had dropped the explosive. Then he staggered back to his bed and sleep.

The next day he denied himself to everybody again; but on the next he was receiving people as usual. And Phyllis was relieved, till afternoon, when a newspaper had a report spread all over its first page of the suicide in a San Francisco hotel of a well-known air pilot, who was believed to have been the man who had "tried to get Brainard!" The supposition was based upon marked maps found in the man's room. But the paper said there was "no clue to the reason for self-destruction."

Phyllis gazed at that last line in horror. No clue!

When she saw Brainard again, he did not refer to the matter and she could not. He looked like a sick man now. But he told her he was not ill; that he had been merely worn out. He admitted that he had been a fool. Now, he merely spent some hours of each day closeted in his studio—experimenting. He said he was perfecting a method of projecting spectacular scenes on large scale; and he had taken over a great tract of beach land on which hundreds of men erected a tremendous new out-door theater almost in a day. There Brainard intended to set up shows that would bring great panoramas before the eye.

Madness

But meanwhile events swept on at a pace that outran comprehension. First the theaters began to run mid-night showings of the Vicarion's products. These were crowded, and people still demanded more. The shows became continuous, day and night—with no cessation except for moments, to change theater crews. And all over the country showmen followed suit. With a large part of the old Complete Illusions studios now devoted to the task, Brainard was able to furnish them something to show. And no interest had ever so set fire to the world. National pastimes must have drawn their hundreds of thousands; but—baseball was dead now. Murderous bull-fighting, chariot-racing to the death, gladiatorial combat, all were eclipsed! Show places were outnumbering groceries, churches, schools. Trade was at a standstill, ministers were without congregations, teachers were without pupils. No one even talked of controlling the Vicarion now. Everybody tried to see all he could of all that most startled his senses. No epidemic could have so swept away normal conditions.

In industry, capital drew back suddenly into panic. There was no crash on 'Change; men simply deserted the stock market and the wheat pit for a mightier entertainment—in which they were but spectators! All business, not connected with vicarious sensation, dwindled almost out of sight. And nobody cared. Merchants, clerks and customers alike were afraid of losing some experience offered them that could not be regained; warranted to sate an appetite mounting into a disease. Homes were neglected, lawns, streets. Men and women began to forget the very need for presentability. They were not interested in living—except by proxy.

It was incredible, impossible, incomprehendible! Yet it was true, and but too easy to understand. Phyllis felt the tremendous suction of the current. It was not to be resisted. It was like the proverbial rapids leading to the falls; one might see and know he was being caught but be unable to struggle. Occupants of pulpits and bench uttered loud warnings, and were first silenced, then themselves swept into the amazing vortex. Men could not neglect business, and careers, and plans, and ambitions, and opportunities, and duties, merely to see and hear history! But men did! It was history stripped to the buff—they flayed! Far more than impossible for men to resist. The inside story of mankind and womankind in flesh and blood, as real as breakfast, as compelling as the need of light!

HIDALGO VOTE PROBE WAITS

Committee Seeks Added Authority

AUSTIN, Jan. 29. (AP)—Departure of the sub-committee which will go to Hidalgo county to take evidence in the contest by E. M. Smith of the seat held in the house by W. R. Montgomery of Edinburg, will be delayed until it can get some additional authority from the house.

Representative Storey of Vernon, vice chairman of the committee on privileges, suffrage and elections, which is hearing the contest, who will head the sub-committee, said today resolutions empowering the investigators to make certain inquiries, will first have to be passed by the house.

Other members of the committee are S. E. Barnett, Greenville; Luke Mankin, Georgetown; Henry A. Turner, Madisonville; E. T. Murphy, Livingston, and S. R. Williams, Hemphill.

The committee decided yesterday it would be less expensive and more satisfactory for some of its members to go to Hidalgo county to hear the great number of witnesses on questions involving alleged irregularities and illegal votes in the general election when Smith and Montgomery were candidates.

Ruling on exceptions presented by attorneys for contestee, the committee decided it would not go into charges of "conspiracy" and dominance of a "political ring," but confine its activities to determining who got the most legal votes. It was decided that where a voter could not read, write or speak the English language, but marked his ballot without assistance, his would be a legal vote.

The committee decided also to consider the votes cast in the Weslaco precinct box, returns of which were not accepted by the county commissioners court because the envelope bearing them was not sealed and because of other alleged irregularities.

Aviatrix Delays Hop For 'Better' Weather

NEW YORK, Jan. 29. (INS)—What Curtiss field pilots deemed "perfect flying weather" wasn't good enough today for Elinor Smith, 17-year-old aviatrix, who had announced she would surely take off for her long premised endurance flight.

At 7 a. m., Miss Smith's bird biplane was taken from its Curtiss field hangar to the runway at Mitchel field.

The aviatrix arrived shortly afterwards, glanced at the skies and decreed the wind too strong. She postponed the attempt until 5 a. m. tomorrow.

DOOMED PAIR AWAIT DEATH

Two Youths to Hang In St. Louis Friday

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 29. (INS)—Two condemned youths in murderers' row of the city jail today awaited their doom less than three days distant.

The two are Leonard R. Yeager, former St. Louis boy, who shot and killed Conniours Schoun, an elderly tailor in a bar holdup in 1926, and Thomas Lowry, who murdered motorcycle Patrolman Eugene Lovely in a pistol battle.

The youths will die in a double hanging Friday unless Governor Caulfield interferes.

The traps from which Yeager and Lowry will be dropped to their deaths are on the top floor of the six-story building. The traps lie three feet apart. They are 10 feet from the west wall. A large iron hook is embedded in the wall above each. Two hempen ropes, each one inch in diameter, lie coiled neatly nearby, ready to be made into the nooses that will be suspended from these hooks.

A board with five buttons operates the electric machinery that controls the traps. Each of five deputy sheriffs will press a button to open them simultaneously and drop Yeager and Lowry through to the next floor.

Shortage Revealed In Topeka County Office

TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 29. (INS)—Frank Wilson, deputy sheriff of Shawnee county, has been appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mrs. Lena W. Pennington, Shawnee county registrar of deeds, following discovery of a shortage of between $10,000 and $15,000 in her accounts.

According to county officers, Mrs. Pennington has failed to file her reports for several monthe and her salary, amounting to $1,800 has been withheld under suspicion that the affairs of the office were not as they should be. It was said today that Mrs. Pennington had admitted the shortage, stating that her records were correct but that she had been unable to make her bank accounts balance.

Mrs. Pennington has served one full term and was starting on her second term of office.

Teacher and Farm Boy Pupil With Lots of 'It' Hunted by Police

ELLAVILLE, Ga., Jan. 29. (UP)—Authorities hunted in vain today for Mrs. M. M. Wellens, 35-year-old school teacher who is being sought on a warrant charging her with kidnaping her favorite pupil—a farmer boy with lots of "it."

The warrant was sworn out by W. C. Chapman, father of Edwin, 17, who disappeared 10 days ago with his teacher.

According to the boys and girls of Mount Holly school, the pair were last seen driving toward Atlanta in Mrs. Wellens' car. The teacher had $500, it is said, which she partly raised by applying a $300 mortgage to the old homestead. The other $200 recently had been paid her in salary.

Edwin's school mates recalled that he had frequently mentioned the fact that he had a pal in Akron, Ohio. It is thought the runaway pair might have headed for that city or Detroit, where it is known Mrs. Wellens had sought a teaching position.

Although police are being strongly urged by the boy's father to intercept the elopers, Wellens goes about his chores on the farm without saying much. It is understood he doesn't care a great deal whether his truant wife is found or not.

Boy Given 40 Years For Series of Robberies

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Jan. 29. (INS)—After pleading guilty to a series of robberies, perpetrated here in the past three months, Raymond Graham, 22, was sentenced to serve 40-years in the penitentiary, the longest sentence ever imposed here for burglary.

Ten burglary charges were filed against Graham and he was sentenced before Judge Allen C. Southern to serve four years on each charge, the sentences to run consecutively.

Graham had given as his reason for the burglaries that he wanted to get enough money to "settle down and go straight."

State Would Control Aviation and Radio

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 29. (INS)—Oklahoma's sovereignty of the air is declared by a bill introduced in the legislature this afternoon giving the state corporation commission control of aviation and radio transmission above the commonwealth.

The commission is authorized to assert its priority right to the control of certain radio wave channels. Senator Fletcher Johnson of Sapulpa and others are authors.

"COMPLETELY MOTORIZED"

...thanks to the USED CAR

"I HAVE a wife, a daughter and a son," a business man writes, "and each of us needed a car. To buy four new cars was out of the question for me, but thanks to the present-day bargains in used cars, my family has been completely motorized at surprisingly small expense."

A rather unusual family, but the idea is not new. Very many American families in all circumstances have found in the used car an economical means of enjoying the convenience of two- and three-car ownership. For a used car is unused transportation which may be enjoyed by the next owner at an attractive price.

Used cars are opportunities

A good automobile is built to stand years of use. It will provide many thousands of miles of transportation. But only occasionally are all its years and all its mileage used up by one owner.

The cars which General Motors dealers are taking in trade offer great opportunities to buy unused transportation at low cost. The convenience of the GMAC Plan of Payment is available.

LINDY WANTS SAFER CRAFTS

Plane Builder Sums Up Ace's Opinions

By GEORGE W. HINMAN, JR.

PARIS, Jan. 29. (US)—Future overseas flights will await the development of safer and practicable seaplanes, in the opinion of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

This summary of the view held by the man who flew from New York to Paris without a stop is given by B. F. Mahoney, of San Diego, Calif., designer and builder of the Spirit of St. Louis, which made the trip.

In Europe on a trip combining both business and pleasure, Mahoney sets forth Colonel Lindbergh's views obtained in a recent conversation as follows:

"Colonel Lindbergh believes that no further trans-oceanic flights will be attempted until a new type of plane has been developed which will eliminate the great peril involved in the use of existing types. The overseas craft of the future undoubtedly will be much larger and heavier, probably a seaplane.

"These seaplanes must be big and strong enough to withstand rough usage in air and on water in case of being compelled to come down at sea. Colonel Lindbergh himself does not contemplate any further overseas flights until some such plane has been developed.

"Seaplanes are much better suited to overseas flying than are airships."

Mahoney believes the United States leads the world in night flying, and that the Berlin airport is the finest thing of its kind.

Farmer Robbins Suffered for Years

Another Wichita Man Is Relieved of Seven Years' Trouble and Gains Daily on Orgatone

"I have not only gained in strength since I commenced taking Orgatone, but I have been completely relieved of seven years' suffering," said J. D. (Judge) Robbins, a well-known farmer who lives on rural route 4, Wichita Falls, Texas, while in Allison's Drug Store, the other day.

"Yes, sir, Orgatone just knocked my troubles winding," continued Mr. Robbins, "and it is the only medicine I got hold of that did me any good at all. I had been suffering from stomach trouble and what doctors told me was gallstone colic, for the last seven years, and I just gradually grew worse and I finally got to the point where it was impossible for me to get any nourishmen from my food. There was a pain in my stomach that just felt like somebody had stuck me with a knife and it was cutting me in two and I will tell you frankly the pain and misery I underwent is simply more than I will ever be able to tell. I didn't know what it was to get a good night's rest. Finally my stomach went back on me, and what I ate would sour and cause gas to form so bad I could hardly get my breath. I tell you I was in mighty bad shape, and the different medicines and treatments I had didn't do me a particle of good.

"I had read in the papers where several people who had been suffering like I did had been greatly helped by taking Orgatone, so I decided to give it a trial. Well, sir, it just beats the world the way I have improved since I commenced taking that medicine. Why, I have only been taking it four weeks so far, and my general health is better than it has been in years. The pains have completely left my stomach, and I am able to work every day in the week. My nerves are as steady as a clock and I sleep like a log every night. I have gotten rid of that stomach trouble, too, and eat three hearty meals every day and I never suffer a particle afterwards. It may sound unreasonable but I will tell you truthfully I have already gained nine pounds, and I am glad to have this opportunity to pass the good word about Orgatone along."

Genuine Orgatone is not a so-called secret or patent remedy but a new scientific treatment containing no alcohol or other false stimulating drugs and is sold in Wichita Falls exclusively by the Allison's Drug Store, 715 Indiana avenue, under the personal direction of a special Orgatone representative. Out-of-town customers are being supplied promptly by mail upon receipt of price, one bottle $1.25 or six bottles for $6.50.—Adv.

West Texas Towns Quick to Sense Vast Future of Air Transportation

By LUCILE CLENDENIN
Special Correspondent

STAMFORD, Texas, Jan. 29.—There is no question mark in the minds of the people of West Texas as to ..... aviation is going to be the leading means of transportation in the future.

Almost every town in the western section of Texas is either maintaining an airport, building one, or doing its best to get the proper people interested in designating one, regardless of the fact that in cases the operation of an airport will be an expense for a number of years.

Sweetwater Active

Various methods are used to get the people "airminded." In Sweetwater where a 260 acre plot for an airport has recently been purchased at $70 an acre the chamber of commerce induced two government airport men to visit the city and talk aviation. Commercial fliers and aviation enthusiasts were asked to speak at civic luncheon club meetings in the effort to sell the idea of a municipally owned airport to the public, and the Sweetwater paper conducted a news and editorial campaign keeping the people informed as to advancement of aviation in other sections. The result is that a hangar and standard markers are to be erected.

In Ranger every club indorsed the movement to get an airport and each appointed a committee to look after a specific thing such as grounds, hangar, etc. Robert Hazen of the department of commerce came to Ranger and approved one of several sites that had been picked out. The city bought the land, and the improvements were made by public donations.

In this way a 60 by 60 all-steel hangar was placed on the field and equipped with telephone, electric lights, water, aviation gas, and oil for servicing of planes. A 200 foot circle standard marker was placed in the field. All fence posts and nearby telephone and telegraph poles which constituted an obstruction or menace to landing were painted with alternate bands of crome yellow and black.

Snyder Has Port

Snyder's new airport will be entirely a commercial port, probably the first of its kind in West Texas and in addition to landing fields and hangar will have a modern filling station, restaurant, camp ground with rooms running from 50 cents to $2.50 a night, natural gas, water electricity, and sewage disposal. Snyder expects to spend $50,000 on its recently purchased 200 acre port.

At Waco bonds amounting to $75,000 were voted to buy Richfield which had not been used since the war for an airport. It now has on its 256 acres of ground three wooden hangars, a beacon light, and boundary lights; and $23,400 of bonds left to spend on providing gravel runways, another hangar and floodlights.

The airport at Midland, where 40 to 60 planes land each month, is a kind of monument to the late Sam Sloan. The field has a four plane hangar, administration building home for the chief pilot, and a 18,000 gallon aviation gas tank from which 22 gallons of fuel is electrically pumped per minute. Midland's port is one of the most popular in the state with transcontinental fliers.

A Complete Field

Kingsolving Field, Abilene's airport has hangar accommodations for six ships, is lighted and has fuel and oil. A stock of spare parts are kept available. A $100,000 bond issue to give Abilene a larger hangar, offices, and a lighting system that will meet all government requirements is expected to be voted by a large majority.

Two Ford tri-motored all-metal 12 passenger airliners make their home at the El Paso modern airport. A new Consolidated "Husky" has been purchased for training purposes. Several long trips by plane have been inaugurated by the chamber of commerce over an itinerary which included Pecos, Fort Stockton, McCamey, Odessa, Wink, Pyote and Carlsbad. Another trip had Mexico City as its objective.

Lubbock has a temporary airport equipped with markers, and available to transportation, refueling, and other similar accommodations. Several pilots live in the city, and others spend weeks there because of the good landing field. The city has an option on sites for a permanent airport, and expects to have a municipally owned Class A airport within the next 60 days.

Plainview has an emergency port of 80 acres which is used when planes wish to land there. The interest in aviation is intense and two citizens, G. A. Lowery and Theo Brown own planes. Wm. J. McKenzie airport specialist of the department of commerce visited Plainview in an official capacity recently and outlined the requirements of a modern airport. The city intends to act on his suggestions during the year.

Pampa Leases Site

Pampa has leased a 160 acre landing field with Ray Shifflet, licensed pilot of Mangum, Okla., conducting a flying school on it. Fifteen local citizens have been students.

Civic organizations in Breckenridge were responsible for the visit of Harry Weddington of the United States Air corps, who offically approved two locations for airports, one of which will be chosen and improved in the near future.

Although Coleman does not have a landing field at this time the interest of the citizenship in the subject is shown by the fact that they sent the secretary of the chamber of commerce to the aviation school of the Texas Air Transport, Inc., in Fort Worth.

Eastland is establishing a strictly modern aviation field on the Bankhead highway just past the Bell Hurst poultry farm towards Ranger on a location that has natural drainage and a soil that will not bog, enabling landing and take-off regardless of wind direction.

Port for Oil Fields

Since Big Spring is stragetically located as an operating center for West Texas oil fields, the 160 acre port located two miles west of the city on the Broadway of America which is being equipped with 3,000 feet runways will some day be one of the most used ports in the state.

Frank Shelton, the licensed pilot at Denton, and Ray Hudley, the only citizen who owns a plane, are not the only ones interested in aviation there since these men are kept busy carrying up local thrill seekers and using their planes in trips to other cities, and in advertising campaigns.

Pecos, which was one of the central stops for the National Air races last year, at which time the world's most noted woman flyer was entertained in the city for five days, is the home of oil companies who keep Spartan and Travelair planes to commute with offices in other states.

Cisco is rapidly preparing a 200 acre plat of ground to meet first class requirements. The field will be sodded this summer.

For fear some bewildered aviator flying at night might alight on some of her buildings Canadian has a remarkable marker in the way of illuminate light.

CRUISER BILL VOTE ASSURED

Senate Agrees to Limit Debates

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29. (UP)—Enactment of a navy cruiser construction bill at this session of congress was virtually assured today by adoption in the senate of a unanimous consent agreement to limit debate on the pending measure.

By terms of the agreement, proposed by Senator Curtis, Kansas Republican, leader of the senate and vice-president-elect, each speaker will be limited after noon next Monday to 20 minutes on the bill and on any amendment and after 4 p. m., to 10 minutes.

Danger of a filibuster by opponents of the bill to authorize construction of 15 cruisers of 10,000 tons each and one aircraft carrier was definitely averted by the limitation of debate. A final vote will be reached late Monday and passage of the bill by a large majority is expected on the basis of private polls of the senate.

The measure passed the house at the last session.

The fight will continue in the senate this week over a host of pending and proposed amendments, particularly one approved by President Coolidge and President-elect Hoover to remove the time limitation clause from the bill. This clause provides that the 16-ship program shall be started within three years.

The president's opposition to this limitation was reiterated at the White House today with the assurance that ship construction will not be delayed unduly if a "satisfactory" authorization bill is passed.

Chairman Hale of the naval affairs committee and other backers of the bill now before the senate continued to oppose the president's suggestion despite the White House announcement. The meaning of a telegram received by Mr. Coolidge yesterday from Hoover approving the president's stand on the time clause was questioned in the senate.

Senator Oddie, Nevada Republican, one of the "big navy" advocates appealed for a "broad interpretation" of the Hoover telegram. He pointed out that Hoover's speech stated the need for an adequate navy and said he believed the present bill, if passed, would be acceptable to the president-elect.

Oddie immediately became the target for sarcastic questions. Senator Brookhart, Iowa Republican charged Oddie and others with deliberately seeking to rebuke both the president and the president-elect. Senator Harrison, Mississippi Democrat, asked if the Republicans were charging their new president with bad faith.

Brookhart poposed a change in the bill, providing that all the cruisers authorized must be constructed in government yards. Under the Dallinger amendment, adopted by the house and now a part of the bill, eight cruisers would be built in government yards and seven in private yards.

Senator Norris, Nebraska Republican, introduced an amendment authorizing the president to seek a naval disarmament agreement with Great Britain before construction of any new ships is started.

Cleaning Out of Old Wells Boosts Output

Special to The Record News

TULSA, Okla., Jan. 29.—The Greater Seminole field dropped out of the 300,000-barrel mark on Nov. 7, 1928, but is now nearing the figure again. The gauge Sunday was 292,524 barrels from 1,336 wells and 296,184 barrels from 1,339 wells Monday, showing a gain of 3,897 barrels over the week-end.

Cleaning out and shooting wells in the Earlsboro and Little River pools have caused their output to increase several thousand barrels. The production of the Maud area is still increasing, having registered a high figure Monday. There are 41 producing wells in the new pool and the gauge for the past 24 hours was 34,049 barrels.

The Indian Territory Illuminating Oil company No. 1 Tully, in the southeast of the southwest of the northeast of 10-8-5, in the eastern part of the field, had the Wilcox sand from 4256 to 4259 feet for 1500 feet of water in the hole. It had a showing of oil in the Simpson sand.

TEEPEE OPENS AIR-RAIL LINE

Planes Supplement Trains On Texas Line

In recognition of the increasing demand for unified rail-air passenger transportation as a time saving factor in transcontinental travel, and in keeping with its progressive program along other lines, the Texas & Pacific railway has entered into an arrangement with the Standard Airlines, Inc., which will enable passengers using its trains to or from El Paso to fly between that point and Los Angeles, Calif., Phoenix, Tucson and Douglas, Ariz., it was announced here.

The new service will start on Monday, Feb. 4. The first westbound airplane will start from El Paso and the first eastbound airplane will start from Los Angeles on that date.

This will be the first regular transcontinental rail and air passenger service to and from California. Single motor cabin planes, seating six and eight persons, will be used. New ships have just been received from the factory, and have been built with every consideration for the comfort and convenience of passengers, including warmth, ventilation, observation windows, luxury chairs, lavatories, etc., and will be manned by transport licensed pilots measuring up in every respect to the requirements of the United States department of commerce regulations.

A limited amount of baggage will be handled for each passenger. Trunks will be handled by express between El Paso and destination.

Representatives of the railroad and plane companies will give personal attention to passengers at El Paso, thus making the trip a simple transfer from train to plane, or vice versa. Taxicabs will transfer passengers at El Paso between the air field and the railway station.

Westbound Sunshine Special from St. Louis, Memphis, New Orleans, Shreveport, Dallas and Fort Worth, arriving El Paso 8 a. m., will connect with plane departing 9 a. m. (mountain time), reaching Douglas 10:30 a. m., Tucson 11:50 a. m., Phoenix 1:10 p. m. and Los Angeles 5:30 p. m. (Pacific time), or only 8½ hours, including stops.

Eastbound planes will leave Los Angeles 8 a. m. (Pacific time), Phoenix 1:20 p. m., Tucson 2:40 p. m., Douglas 4 p. m., arriving El Paso 5:30 p. m. (mountain time), connecting with the Texan, leaving El Paso at 7:15 p. m. (mountain time), with through sleeping cars to Fort Worth, Dallas, Memphis and St. Louis, with car to car transfer for Shreveport and New Orleans.

This service is available to people in Wichita Falls provided they reach Fort Worth in time to depart on the Texas & Pacific train at 2:10 p. m.

OFFICIAL KILLS WIFE AND SELF

Murder-Suicide Act Performed for Mercy

BOULDER, Colo., Jan. 29. (UP)—Seeking "the light that gleams and shines in the distant future for both of us," J. E. Kirkbride, 43, former district attorney, entered a "mercy murder-suicide" pact with his wife, who feared she was becoming insane.

Their frozen bodies were found side by side in an upper bedroom of their home here yesterday after their neighbors had broken in and found this note pinned to a chair just inside the door:

"Don't go upstairs. Phone How (the coroner) at 134."

The sign was scrawled in large letters with the evident intent to catch the eye of the first person to enter.

Examination of the bodies showed Kirkbride had shot his wife in the temple with a revolver and then turned the gun on himself.

A half dozen letters, all written by Kirkbride, were found in various prominent places in the house. All of them stressed that he was killing his wife as an act of mercy because Mrs. Kirkbride believed she was losing her mind.

American Customs and Culture To Be Ignored in Baby's Rearing

PARIS, Jan. 29. (UP)—Plans already outlined for the education of the Indian-American princess, daughter of the former Miss Nancy Miller of Seattle, Wash., ignore American culture and customs, the secretary of the baby's father, abdicated maharajah of Indore, said.

The former Miss Miller's acceptance of her husband's faith eliminated all question of American education and influence, the secretary said when asked how the child would be reared. Indian customs and Hindu culture, with a taste of European education, will be the program.

The young princess was born at the St. Germain chateau of her father Saturday, but announcement of her advent was kept secret until yesterday.

It is understood a number of arrests have been made.

Plains Extension Helps Quitaque

Special to The Record News.

QUITAQUE, Texas, Jan. 29.—Augmented agricultural and cattle industries here are being attributed chiefly to the coming of the South Plains railway into this territory last year.

During the 12 months prior to the opening of general freight and passenger service on the Fort Worth and Denver South Plains extension last Nov. 22, carlot shipments to and from Quitaque were handled by the contractors who were building the line. The raising of wheat in this vicinity had been practically forbidden formerly by the excessive cost of transportation to railway stations, the nearest of which was nearly 40 miles away. With carlot shipping facilities assured, a number of farmers here gave considerable acreage to wheat in 1928, and a good yield resulted in heavy shipments from Quitaque during the early summer. A new elevator was built here during the spring.

Growing of maize also has multiplied apparently with the improved shipping facilities. Officials of the South Plains railway here stated that between 50 and 60 car loads of maize will be shipped from Quitaque during the next 60 days.

Cattle growers are utilizing the new railroad for the importation of cottonseed cake, and the number of calves being fed in this community has increased noticeably. Approximately 100 car loads of cattle have been shipped from Quitaque stock pens since the opening of the road last November.

GARDEN HEAD ASSERTS FIGHT WILL BE HELD AT MIAMI BEACH

ADVANCE SALE DISCOURAGING

Rumor Persists That Battle Will Be Held in Gotham

By JACK LAWRENCE

NEW YORK, Jan. 29. (US)—There is no chance of the Sharkey-Stribling fight not taking place at Miami Beach, as scheduled by Tex Rickard before he died. This was made plain today in somewhat indignant fashion by Colonel John S. Hammond, acting manager of Madison Square Garden.

Reports to the effect that the discouraging advance sale, which had reached only $10,000 at last reports, had caused the Madison Square Garden management to transfer the fight to New York were roundly denied by the man who is trying to gather up the loose ends of the promotion that were in Rickard's mind when death overtook him.

Colonel Hammond's statement, which was emphatic enough, did not deter the pessimists from being more pessimistic. There was still a rumor lingering along Broadway tonight that the battle of Miami Beach would never take place. At least, not in the vicinity of Miami Beach or the sovereign state of Florida.

"I am astonished at these stories," said the white-haired colonel. "We have no intention of transferring the fight and have had none.

"The fact that we intend to hold the fight at Miami Beach might be indicated by the fact that we have already shipped our tickets there. Our box office staff, including Joe Boynton, will leave for Miami Beach tomorrow."

Accompanying Sharkey will be his wife, his manager, Johnny Buckley and wife; Jack Conway, associate manager, and wife; Al Lacey, one of Sharkey's advisers; and two sparring partners, Andy Callahan, 138, and Pat McCarthy, 175.

Pa Stribling wired Madison Square garden officials today that his son had acquiesed to Dempsey's demands to refrain from flying here and would come by automobile instead, arriving tomorrow.

Around The Ring

By EDWARD J. NEIL

Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—A tall, lean figure, pearl gray hat jauntily perched on the side of his head, cane a-swinging, stood in the doorway of his palatial offices in Madison Square garden and bade the boxing writers, filling the soft chairs, goodbye.

His mouth and eyes crinkled in a grin of happiness and the writers grinned back at him. The train was waiting to carry Tex Rickard to Florida for golf, fishing, swimming, a lot of play in the sun with little Maxine, and some fight promotion.

"You can all go to h—" he waved. "I'm off for the South. These offices are yours. Fuss around all you want to. I'm going to have some fun.

Tex's Prophecy

"But just remember this. I'm going to give you the thrill of your lives in 1929. You're going to have the biggest story yet, a front page story. You won't never see anything like it."

They hooted at that and shouted farewell. Nothing Tex could do, they thought, would lift the fight he planned between Jack Sharkey and Young Stribbling in Miami Beach from the sport to the front pages. Still, Tex's prophecies had a way of coming true and no one knew that better than those newspapermen, closest friends of the promotion genius.

Less than two weeks later the same newspapermen gathered again in Madison Square garden to file with grim faces past the bier of Tex Rickard.

Prediction Fulfilled

It was late afternoon, dark outside, where long lines already formed waited for the doors to open and permit the public a last glimpse of the dead promoter. Inside the flood lights that usually focused on the mad, blood-stirring action of the ring, poured white light on the upturned face of the tall Texan. All around were the masses of fragrant flowers, last tributes of the "best people" Rickard delighted in drawing to his shows.

And through every mind, beating like a tom-tom as the writers said goodbye to their friend, ran the last words they had heard the promoter say:

"I'm going to give you the biggest thrill of your lives in 1929. You're going to have the biggest story—a front page story."

Famous Golf Shots of 1928

Key Shot of Record Round

By BASIL G. WYRICK

Associated Press Staff Writer

Of all the thrilling shots made during Mrs. Melvin Jones' record round of 73 over the No. 1 course at Olympia fields last summer that doughty sportswoman recalls only one.

That was a hazardous spoon shot to the tabled eighth green. Mrs. Jones believes this shot bolstered up her nerve and kept down the score which ran away with medalist honors in the Chicago championship.

To achieve this score of one over men's par on a course where national championships have been held Mrs. Jones performed many miraculous stunts. She holed out from a trap for an eagle, sat long iron shots down alongside the can and ran down putts of 30 and 40 feet. Even these things fade alongside that spoon shot at the eighth.

This hole is nearly 400 yards long, the green occupying the leveled top of a high ridge running lengthwise of the fairway. The terrain drops alarmingly into a woody tangle on each side, and the far side ends abruptly in a steep bank. Sand traps are plentifully sprinkled about the banks.

Mrs. Jones opened her attack with a longish drive which left her 150 yards from the pin, but slightly to the left. This made her approach considerably more difficult, because an enormous tree intervened. The ball had to be lifted over this tree and caused to duck immediately and hold the narrow green which from this angle was almost crosswise to the player.

The shot was a trifle stiff for an iron, as to achieve the distance the trajectory would be too flat to carry the tree and the steep approach to the green. Mrs. Jones chose a spoon and played a powerful shot, cutting well under the ball and drawing the club head across its surface.

The shot was perfect, the ball rose dizzily, skimmed over the tree, carried past the bank and swerved sharply down to the green. It landed 15 feet past the hole, but so powerful was the backspin imparted that it jerked backwards three feet nearer.

After that shot anything was possible. Mrs. Jones rammed down the treacherous side hill putt for her eagle 3 (woman's par) and went on to the 73, which sets a record for women's tournament play over a championship course. She scored six birdies and four eagles in the round.

Basketball Shots

By TED VOSBURCH

Associated Press Sports Writer

Coach Ed Kelleher's great Fordham varsity basketball five, victor over such teams as Yale, Princeton, Colgate and Syracuse, has a record of never having started a game.

All five of the first stringers are seniors and they have played together every season for four years, but they do their playing in the last three quarters of the game. For the first few minutes they watch the shock troops work.

"I believe I was the first to apply the two-team idea in basketball," said the genial Kelleher, who learned the game as a member of the Niagara university team back around 1910. "Anyway I have made a practice of starting my second team in every game for the four years I have been coach. I do it in all games, hard or soft. It seems to be an important factor in winning, in addition to having the advantage of getting more men into the play.

"With my regulars on the bench they are able to size up the other team pretty thoroughly and see just what they should do when they get in there. Little damage is usually done in the first part of the game anyway and the seconds ordinarily leave only a couple of points behind.

"Then, too, there's a psychological advantage. Boys of college age are impressionable and there is bound to be a disturbing effect upon the opposing players when a fresh varsity comes prancing onto the floor after they have had a hard time holding the seconds.

"The system has a good effect on our second-stringers, giving them added confidence and experience so that a year or so later they will be ready for varsity play."

Kelleher's present big five which at the time of writing had reeled off its first nine games without a defeat was his freshman team four years ago and did shock troop duty the next season before winning the varsity assignment last year.

Its members are fairly tall, Sweetman, the center, and Landers, left forward, being more than six feet. All five are built for speed without being willowy or fragile.

"In Dougherty, the captain, I have one of the fastest running guards I have ever seen," said Kelleher. "He shoots with either hand. Reardon, the other guard, who is sent into scoring territory only a couple of times in a game, is the fastest man on the team, so that his presence around mid-court while we are in possession of the ball is a constant threat."

A big factor in the making of the Fordham team's sensational early season sweep was the set of tactical weapons placed in its hands by Kelleher.

He uses a five-man defense which is air-tight, the men falling back immediately after losing possession of the ball.

When the ball is in their own hands four men are well down in enemy territory while the standing guard is at mid-floor.

"My offensive starts from back court," Kelleher explained. "The two forwards come in fast and both are in the air when the ball is tipped. The forward getting the ball passes it back to one of the guards and the attack begins from there.

"The center and the guards are near the middle of the floor and the forwards nearer the basket at the sides. Under my system three men always cut at once."

The offensive outlined is a five-man attack, as the standing guard is its starting point and is always near enough to the basket to be dangerous, a kind of suspended two-edged sword."

Seymour Roadsters Five Defeats Zundy, 31 to 28

Red Allen, scintillating center of the victors, was high scorer with 13 points, including six field baskets. Greenwood was Zundy's main point-getter with 10. Lineups:

CULLEN BOXES HALL TONIGHT

Howard Scott and Kid Murdock in Semi-Windup

Six bouts, comprising 36 rounds, will be offered tonight by Promoter Alex Ross in his weekly boxing show at 821 Indiana avenue. The bill is headlined by Cyclone Hall of Childress and Gene Cullum of Austin, middleweights, in a 10-round mill. Boxers well and favorably known in this section will go to the wars in other "tops."

Cullen is sponsored by Adolph Friedman, who from the ring last week challenged any middleweight of the Southwest to meet Gene. Hall accepted the defy and Ross agreed to stage the match, after answering Friedman from the ring that he (Ross) is the promoter and shall say who he puts on in his shows. The Austin fighter is said by Friedman to be a most capable battler and Adolph's great confidence in the capital city scrapper indicates Hall is in for a strenuous go.

The eight-round semi-windup, a return duel between Kid Murdock of Sulphur, Okla., and Howard Scott of Electra, is exciting about as much interest among fistic fans here as the main go. In their last meeting here recently Scott won on a foul in the eighth and last round. It was a slashing, corking bout, one of the best boxed here for some time.

Henry Adams of Wichita Falls and Kid Garland of Burkburnett, are to step six rounds. They are a pair of willing, aggressive boys and lots of action looms in this go. They are lightweights.

Jimmy Wilson of Oklahoma City, who weathered two knockdowns and a beating last week to stay the limit in a courageous stand, meets Virgil Oden, Wichita Falls welterweight, in a four-round go.

There are two other four-round mills and a battle royal which will open the show at 8:15 o'clock.

Indians Play On Arlington Floor

Tribe Meets North Texas Aggies This Week-End

The Wichita Falls Junior college Indians, like the prep Coyotes, are to engage in four basket ball games this week. In addition to contests last night and tomorrow night in the Commercial league, the Pack will meet the North Texas Aggies next Friday and Saturday nights at Arlington.

Coach Baggett's cagers lost two games to the North Texas Aggies last week but have hopes of giving the Arlington athletes harder games this week-end.

Macon Gives Strib Rousing Send-Off

MACON, Ga., Jan. 29. (AP)—Macon pinned a picture of W. L. (Young) Stribling on its best suit tonight and went to the new Riverside auditorium to tell the Georgia acrobat that Georgia was behind him to a man in his quest for the heavyweight championship.

"Pa" and "Ma" Stribling, Clara, his wife, and his new daughter were all at the party, a send-off for the battler before he entrains for Miami Beach, Fla., where he meets Jack Sharkey in a Madison Square Garden-Jack Dempsey heavyweight elimination bout.

Hunt Named Captain Of Burk Grid Team

Special to The Record News.

BURKBURNETT, Jan. 29.—Frank Hunt, star guard for the Burkburnett Bulldog eleven for the past three years, was chosen captain by his teammates for next year's team.

Hunt is one of the best guards the Burkburnett high school has turned out in its history. There have been very few games during the past three years in which Hunt has not been considered as a participant.

With only a few of the old letter men graduating this year, the Bulldogs are expecting to make a creditable showing for the coming football season.

Staging of Willard-Moran Fight Started Jess and Tex Friendship

Champion Signed to Defend Title for Rickard and Promoter Started Hunt for Foe That Led to Dempsey

By JACK LAWRENCE

(Copyright, 1929, by the New York American, Inc., and Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Jan. 29.—Tex Rickard had engaged in one boxing enterprise between the Jeffries-Johnson and Dempsey-Willard contests. This intermediate affair served two important purposes, although it failed to enrich the promoter to any great extent. It gave New Yorkers their first close-up of Rickard as a boxing promoter and it brought Tex and Jess Willard together. This undoubtedly made it easier for Tex when he went about the business of matching Jess with Jack Dempsey, three years later.

The fight we refer to was the 10-round, no-decision "exhibition" held at old Madison Square garden March 25, 1916. Inasmuch as decisions were against the law at that time in New York state, the only way that Frank Moran of Pittsburgh could have won the world's heavyweight championship from Willard would have been to score a clean knockout.

The bout attracted considerable interest, partly because it was Willard's New York debut and partly because many believed that Moran was destined to be the next heavyweight champion of the world. Among the contenders for the title he was the outstanding figure. It was the widespread public interest in him and the universal talk of a Moran-Willard fight that caused Tex to undertake the promotion of the bout.

Madison Square garden was leased by Rickard for one night and he little suspected then that he would return in later years and be the first man ever to make that huge structure pay regular dividends. The rent for that one night set Tex back $15,000. It was a lot of money for a 24-hour lease, but as he said afterward:

"It was a lot cheaper and less troublesome than building an arena. And, anyway, that fight didn't measure up to an outdoor show."

This Was Easy for Tex

Rickard had little difficulty in signing Moran and Willard. The work of promoting that fight was child's play compared with the troubles he had encountered at Goldfield with Gans and Nelson and later at Reno with Jeffries and Johnson.

The fight itself wasn't so hot. The fact that no decision could be rendered took a lot of public interest out of it as few people believed that Moran, with every physical advantage lying with his ponderous opponent, had a chance of winning by a knockout. In this they were quite correct. Moran did the best he could, but it wasn't enough. Though he was exceedingly popular with the newspaper men and Jess had few friends among the writers, the verdict of the press was in favor of Willard.

However, despite the no-decision aspect, the battle drew $152,000, which established a record indoor gate. Willard received $47,500 and Moran $23,750. What Rickard cleared for himself was never made public, but he claimed that after the $15,000 rental had been deducted, together with other expenses, such as attendants, preliminaries and advertising, there wasn't much left for him. But the fight was well handled and it showed New York what Tex Rickard could do. It also furnished Tex with the notion of taking the garden over permanently as a center for boxing and other sports. That dream wasn't to materialize for a long time, but it was the Moran-Willard fight that gave him the idea.

Jess Liked Tex

Rickard always seemed able to get along with Jess Willard. He was one of the few persons with whom the big cowboy was associated in business who really liked him. When Jess was training in Yonkers for his match with Floyd Johnson at the Yankee stadium in May, 1923, he seemed to be more unpopular than ever. One day Tex drove me out to Willard's camp and I asked him about this. Tex pulled his famous old refrain, but could not offer an adequate explanation.

"I dunno," he said. "I never seed nuthin' like it. He was always O. K. with me. I always found him straight-forward and honest and a man of his word. They say he ain't game, but I can tell you that is the bunk. I guess maybe the answer is that he's always grouchy when training because he hates the fight racket. He'd never got into it at all if it hadn't been for the big dough in sight."

Incidentally, it might be well to state here that Tex Rickard always regarded Frank Moran as one of the gamest heavyweights that ever lived.

Jess Signed for 100 Grand

It was early in 1919 that Rickard, then property poor as a result of his investments in South America, decided to go after another heavyweight championship bout. He had no particular challenger in mind, but he knew that if he could tie up the services of Jess Willard, then the titleholder, the matter of selecting an opponent would work itself out. His dealings with Willard in the garden bout gave him a great advantage over other promoters who were on Willard's heels.

Jess, at that time, was touring the country with a circus. Tex caught up with him in some tank town out West, and, as he had anticipated, found the champion in a tractable mood. Jess didn't evince any disposition to name the challenger but objected that there wasn't one in sight who stood out sufficiently to draw big money. Rickard advised him to leave the matter of the challenger to him and when he offered the champion a guaranty of $100,000, win, lose or draw, the latter put his name on the dotted line.

It is the truth that Tex himself was "up in the air" as to who Willard's opponent was to be. It was not until he got back to New York and accidentally met Jack Kearns at the bar of the old Manhattan hotel that the solution of this problem literally fell into his lap and incidentally established the famous triumvirate of Rickard, Dempsey and Kearns.

Strib-Sharkey Exchange Telegrams of Mutual Bad Wishes

MACON, Ga., Jan. 29. (AP)—Young Stribling and Jack Sharkey have flunked out of Gene Tunney's school of fistic courtesy, but have enriched the literature of fight ballyhoo with two telegrams.

When Sharkey met K. O. Christner last week he got this from Stribling:

"Don't let the big bum hit you on the chin. Save it for me at Miami."

While Stribling was on the receiving end of a large sendoff by the home folks tonight, this answer came from Jack:

"Received your telegram. I am receiving $100,000 to sock you on the chin at Miami but would be pleased to do it for nothing."

"There'll be no answer until Feb. 27," was Stribling's comment.

MEASLES

Although measles is principally a disease of childhood, adults are sometimes attacked. The exact cause of measles is unknown since as with the common cold, no germ causing it has yet been discovered. It is however, quite apparent that measles is associated with a definite form of toxemia. If properly cared for, measles leaves no bad after effects but if improperly, it may lead to some serious sequelae.

The first indications of measles are symptoms of a catarrhal nature accompanied by sneezing and running at the nose, redness of the eyes and lids, congestion of the throat and tonsils, and finally a slight fever for the first few days, but about the fourth day the fever suddenly rises, reaching about 104 degrees. This extreme fever usually persists until the rash breaks out on the skin, and as soon as the body is entirely covered with the measles eruptions the fever begins to subside and the symptoms to abate.

The rash appears first on the forehead and behind the ears but rapidly spreads over the entire body. It appears that much poisonous substance is discharged through the skin, producing the rash, and after this elimination has taken place, the symptoms subside and the red rash gradually becomes more pink and finally disappears.

In measles as in any other fever or eruptive disease, no so-called "nourishing" food of any kind should be given the patient. Plenty of drinking water should be used, and the juices of several oranges or grapefruit should be taken daily. The citrus fruit juice seems to have a stimulating effect in producing a quicker elimination through the skin and consequently recovery takes place more rapidly.

Many people make the mistake of feeding to the one who is sick with a fever such heavy foods as eggnogs, milk toast, meat broths, etc., but this is a very serious mistake and usually leads to the graver complications.

During the acute crisis of an eruptive fever, the digestion of foods practically ceases and everything placed in the stomach at this time will very likely only ferment and putrify, producing very serious toxins.

If parents only realized how many children have been killed from the mistaken idea that feeding them tasty foods during a fever is a kindness, there would be very few deaths from any of the children's diseases.

From the very beginning of this disease, the patient should be given tepid sponge baths at least every two hours during the day, and an enema morning and evening. As soon as the rash begins to disappear, the skin may be treated with applications of milk of magnesia after the sponge baths. This will counteract the acid irritations which are being thrown out through the skin and is very soothing to the patient. When the irritation has disappeared, these frequent baths may be discontinued. The intake of food should be kept at the minimum for a few weeks, and there will be less chance of developing the catarrhal troubles or tuberculosis which so frequently follow measles.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Low Weight and Unsound Sleep

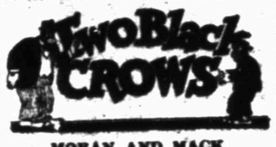

Question: O. M. V. asks: "Will you please tell me how I can put on weight? I am a girl 20 years old and only weigh 97 pounds. The most I have ever weighed is 106 pounds. I am five feet, seven and a half inches tall. Also please tell me what would cause my sleep to be disturbed by dreams every night regardless of whether I eat or not before retiring, and why I am tired every morning even when I retire early."

Answer: There is no doubt but what your weight is too little for your height, but don't stuff yourself. Look for functional causes, such as the liver and gall bladder trouble. Any girl who is as thin as you are must have a tendency to extreme nervousness, and this is no doubt what keeps you awake at night. You need psychological, as well as physiological, treatment. Read every book you can get hold of on the subject of psychology, auto-suggestion, psycho-analysis, etc. In addition to this, go to a good practitioner of psycho-analysis. Have yourself analyzed, and change your habits of thinking from bad to good.

Lemons

Question: Mrs. H. P. asks: "Does abstinence from sugar and starch foods and the eating of lemons help a person troubled with hives and kidney complaints?"

Answer: It is always better for anyone suffering from kidney complaint to temporarily eliminate starches and sugars from the diet. A lemon or orange juice fast is often helpful in the cure of both hives and liver complaints, but it is not wise to use the lemons with other foods.

MORAN AND MACK

MORAN: Say, why is yo' singin' when I'm cookin'?

MACK: I don't have to eat it.

MORAN: Say, I don't like that thin customer we got. He's always squawkin'.

MACK: We'll soon be rid of him. He wuz a FAT man last week.

MORAN: How come he eat in here?

MACK: He's on a diet.

MORAN: What's that?

MACK: Well, they puts on yo' tombstone, John Doe. DIET suddenly, Jan. 30, 1929.

MORAN: Yo' ain't saying my cheffing is killin' him, is you'?

MACK: It ain't doin' him no good.

MORAN: People gains weight on my cooking.

MACK: Yes, a man gained six pounds but it wuz a goitre.

MORAN: Why, that man says he wuz attracted to this lunch waggin' by th' smell of my cheffing.

MACK: Sure. Yo' cookin' is like hair tonic. It smells good. But youse foolish to put it in yo' stom ach.

The aroma from the Two Black Crows' lunch wagon is enough to make a bee leave a flower, grab a can opener and rush into a delicatessen store. When they start to cook an egg they don't stop until it is a hand grenade.

Requisitions for Two Men Honored by Moody

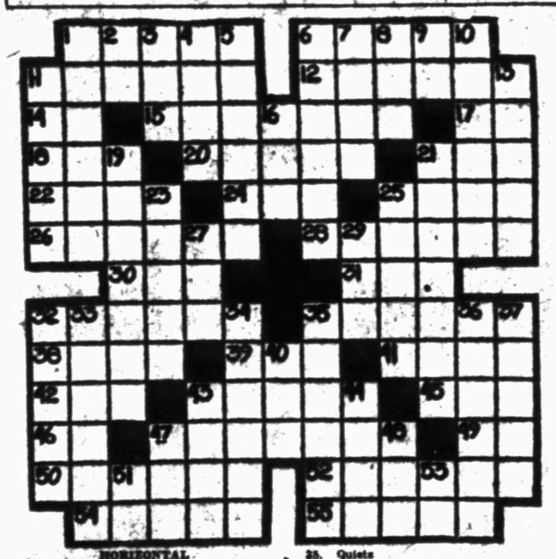

AUSTIN, Jan. 29. (AP)—Governor Moody today honored requisitions from Oklahoma and New Mexico for return to those states of men held in Texas.

Oklahoma will get James Wood, now in the Texas penitentiary, alleged to have escaped from the state prison at McAlester in 1928, while serving a life term for murder.

New Mexico asked for Lytel Boothby, said to be under arrest in Webb county, Texas, wanted for alleged embezzlement of an automobile in Eddy county, New Mexico.

Many trees, shrubs and plans contain rubber and, if proper methods of extraction can be devised, may be grown as crops.

Fess Denies That He Opposed Raid

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29. (INS)—Rising in the senate to a question of personal privilege Senator Simeon D. Fess, (Republican) of Ohio this afternoon denounced as a lie a charge that he had protested against the raiding of a Cincinnati brewery last year.

Fess was named as a "higher-up" who protested against the brewery raid in testimony given yesterday at Columbus, Ohio, by John F. Eckhart, assistant prohibition director. Eckhart said Bart B. Buckley, Ohio state treasurer, now defendant in a liquor conspiracy trial had told him Fess was protesting against the raid.

Fess denied ever having heard of the raid or the case and denied ever having spoken to Buckley on such a matter. He told the senate his sole purpose was to secure law enforcement and that he always secured a pledge to enforce the law before he endorsed any candidate for public office.

Misener Sand at Beggs Still Is Productive

Special to The Record News

TULSA, Okla., Jan. 29.—The Misener sand is still a potential producing area near Beggs in Okmulgee county.

This fact was proven when L. C. Wentz, L. C. Wheeler, Cothran and Campbell drilled unexpectedly into the Misener sand at No. 1 Fish, in the southeast of the northeast of the northeast of 6-15-12. The top and bottom of the hole is 2460 feet. The crew was in a brown lime when the big pay was touched. The test was started as a Wilcox sand well, and the Misener was found with an eight-inch hole, and 700 feet of it uncased. The tools were left in the hole when the well started flowing at from 100 to 200 barrels an hour for three hours. It then went dead, and after a two-hour period headed up and made a 30-minute flow. It was standing full of oil Monday morning.

Pecos Refinery Costs $1,000,000

Buford Plant Ready To Begin Operation

Special to The Record News

TULSA, Okla., Jan. 29.—The million-dollar refinery at Pecos, Reeves county, West Texas, of the Burford Oil company is completed and will be placed in operation Feb. 1. Construction work has been under way for the last seven months.

It will run 6,000 barrels daily of Winkler county crude, which will be transported to Pecos through the pipeline owned jointly by the Skelly Oil company and Burford Oil company. This pipeline has been working since last July.

F. W. Burford, president of the Burford company, says the pipe still to be used is of the newest type, and in addition to that unit, there are under construction two cracking units that will handle 4,000 barrels of charging stock daily. Latest ideas developed by refining technique have been utilized in the Burford refinery. Practically all of the pumping will be done by electrically driven pumps, and special continuous treating systems have been installed. These are adaptable for special processing of gasoline from Winkler crude, and allowing the plant to produce a product conforming to United States motor gasoline specifications.

Gasoline manufactured is to be called Crystal, and with B. D. Dawson in charge of sales, plans are being made to market in West Texas and New Mexico. Daily gasoline production will approximate 125,000 gallons. John J. Thomas is general superintendent and has been on the grounds for months.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Jan. 29. (AP)—The cotton market was more or less irregular today, but showed a declining tendency under liquidation combined with some southern and local selling, probably promoted by less favorable advices from Lancashire and absence of aggressive demand. After selling at 19.97 early, May declined to 19.76 and closed at 19.79. The general market closed barely steady at net declines of 6 to 14 points.

The market opened steady at an advance of 3 points to a decline of 2 points. There were some overnight buying orders brought in by the steadier tone of yesterday's market. They were readily supplied. The market eased off during the middle of the day under comparatively small offerings. March declined from 19.95 to 19.76 and July from 19.63 to 19.44. New October contracts sold off from 19.28 to 19.13, making net declines of about 10 to 17 points. Trade demand made an appearance as prices approached the 19¾-cent level, as it had done on previous setbacks.

It was supplemented by covering and the market rallied several points from the lowest. The demand tapered off on the advance, and prices weakened again in the late trading.

There was a comparatively small volume of business, with the market narrow enough to feel the influence of small orders either way. Apprehensions of labor troubles in Manchester owing to the dispute over oiling and cleaning machinery during working hours were repeated by cable advices and may have had an unsettling effect on sentiment.

A private authority was quoted as estimating the world's consumption of American lint cotton for December at $1,250,000 and for the first five months of the season at 6,255,000 against 6,956,000 for the same period last year. Port receipts today, 46,433 bales.

United States port stocks, 2,366,074. Exports today, 33,305, making 5,542,163 so far this season.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 29. (AP)—Irregularity and erratic fluctuations characterized today's session of the cotton market but the general trend of prices was slightly downward. May contracts after trading up to 19.35 in early trading reacted to 19.14, recovered 7 points but eased off again and closed at 19.16, 13 points net down. The general market closed steady at net declines of 11 to 13 points.

The market opened irregular. As Liverpool cables were slightly easier near months opened 1 to 4 points down. New York, however, opened higher causing an initial gain of 1 to 5 points on later positions here. Prices continued to advance after the start in keeping with the improvement in the northern market and March sold to 19.31, May 19.35 and July 19.31, or 3 to 7 points above the previous close.

A report that Georgia and Carolina mills were curtailing production brought out considerable liquidation and ring selling. The subsequent decline was aided materially by cables asking that shipments be deferred and before the offerings were absorbed March reacted to 19.10, May to 19.14 and July 19.15, or 16 to 21 points down from the highs and 12 to 15 points under yesterday's close.

In the early afternoon a bullish private estimate of world's consumption of American cotton and reports of backwardness in new crop preparations brought out moderate purchasing which carried the price level 6 to 7 points above the lows but as soon as the demand was supplied the market weakened again and final prices were within 2 points of the lows.

Power and Utility Shares Hog Activity in Quiet Stock Session

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Jan. 29. (US)—Power and utility stocks featured an other wise quiet and irregular market on the stock exchange today. Call money renewed at 6 per cent but was in lesser supply and climbed to 7 per cent before the close, causing further worry as to the charge for over the month-end.

Strength of the utilities was entirely based on the merger expectations with governmental favor. American and Foreign Power gained five, American Power and Light six, Commonwealth Power 5⅝, Philadelphia company over 14 and Public Service of New Jersey added three points more to its gain.

Nickel stood out in the industrials with a four point gain following reports here of new pool interests being at work. Steel lost fractionally, General Motors and Chrysler dropped two one-half, and numerous other recent favorites declined a point or so. Railroads met profit taking and closed lower on the average, while oils continued to meet quiet liquidation.

Turnover dropped to near the 4,000,000 share level.

Utilities and power stocks remained the favorites of the moment although obliged to absorb considerable profit-taking. Merger plans told of here three months ago were the dominating influence to purchases. To a lesser extent the railroads are favored because of similar expectations. The more friendly attitude in Washington was the most prominent topic of discussion of the future of these groups. Evidence thereof was seen in the decision of the commerce commission permitting the New York Central to absorb short lines, and it was thought that both the carriers and the utilities group would receive even better treatment from the new administration. Recent buying of Interborough and other local tractions has been based on somewhat the same trend of thought inasmuch as expectation of higher fare is looked upon as likely to hasten consolidation under one managing group.

American Radiator was again well taken as official announcement of merger was made. As forecast here sometime ago, the Radiator management have other plans for expansion in connection with which the stock is to be split up and a higher return made to shareholders. Tobacco stocks continued to render a good performance. Liggett & Myers was helped by group operation coincident with voicing of expectation that reports of earnings to be issued tomorrow would be much more favorable than has been expected. Quiet absorption of U. S. Leather has been evidenced, due to expectation that it will benefit from change in tariff law during the next administration.

Continued important liquidation was evidenced in copper shares. Another quarter of a cent advance in the price of the Red Metal was expected but it was thought likely it would be about the last as supply of the Red Metal is increasing. Continued support to Westinghouse evidences belief that it is booked to be one of the real leaders of this year's market. Group work continued evident in the sugar refining shares with those interested in American Sugar absorbing all offerings resulting from government's crop report and new interests taking a position in federal. Real Silk Hosiery recovered on report that earnings this quarter were keeping pace with the record breaking showing of the final period of 1928.

Results of the meeting of the Steel Corporation directors are not likely to help the market materially tomorrow. In fact they probably will enhance the effect of expectation of a higher call money rate for over the week-end. The earnings of $11.61 a share for the year were about as expected. Unfounded rumor had caused rather widespread hope that an extra cash dividend would be paid so that the announcement of only the regular dividends will be quite a disappointment to many. Should earnings of the corporation continue favorable during the coming months, there will be reason to expect highly favorable dividend action toward the close of the year, but not much before.

TEXAS REVIEW

FORT WORTH, Jan. 29. (AP)—The better class of cows here Tuesday apparently had a little better demand than on yesterday when they were very slow; not quotably higher, but buyers willing to look them over and place steady bids. MIDWESTERN REVIEW

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 29. (AP)—(United States Department of Agriculture)—A broad shipping demand influenced a stronger undertone in the hog market at the opening and some sales were slightly higher, but later trade to big packers ruled dull and 10c to 25c lower than early. Selected light hogs reached $10.20 at St. Louis for the day's extreme top. Offerings at 11 markets totaled 98,000 against 112,618 last Tuesday and 158,224 a year ago.

Trade in fed steers and yearlings was dull, and most of Monday's advances in prices were erased. Values were considered 15c to 25c lower, with spots off more on short-feds. Choice heavy steers scored $15.50 at Chicago, while most of the arrivals at all points sold from $11.00 to $13.00. Fat she stock sold uneven at steady at 25c lower rates. Limited stocker and feeder supplies held prices at fully steady levels. Total arrivals were 46,000 as compared with 36,669 a week ago and 45,739 a year ago.

Fat lambs moved slowly at weak to 25c lower prices, with extreme cases off more. Choice closely sorted lots at Chicago were noted at $17.25 to $17.65, but the bulk at this market ranged from $16.50 to $17.00. At the river markets desirable fed lambs sold from $16.75 down. Matured classes sold at steady to 25 cents lower levels, with the demand limited. Offerings totaled 58,000, an increase of 16,000 over a week ago and the same day a year ago.

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW

CHICAGO, Jan. 29. (AP)—Ridicule of talk that winter wheat has suffered any severe damage did a good deal to bring about a lively tumble in wheat values today. Notice was taken that wheat primary receipts were larger, especially at winter wheat centers, and speculative selling of future deliveries here broadened out, with prices dropping to 5⅛c below figures obtainable last week.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 1¼c to 1½c under yesterday's finish, corn ⅝c to 1⅛c off, oats ⅜c to 1⅛c down, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 20c.

In connection with disbelief expressed in various quarters today that domestic winter wheat had suffered any unusual amount of crop damage, one trade leader here said that 1913-14 had produced the largest United States wheat crop on record up to that time, although the winter was very cold. He also asserted that the winter of 1918-19 was the coldest in 50 years, but the wheat outurn at the ensuing harvest was also of record-breaking volume.

For at least the time being, it was in vain that leading experts pointed out that wheat crop conditions so far this season are radically different, that wheat had a late start, and there have been six zero periods experienced in January without snow protection and with alternations of rain and thaw that have resulted in widespread ice covering.

On the other hand, reports of increased offerings of Argentine wheat to Europe, together with lower quotations at Liverpool, were an evident factor in bringing about downturns in Chicago prices. Predictions, too, were current that wheat clearances from North America are to diminish and Argentine clearances enlarge. Primary domestic arrivals of wheat today totaled 1,048,000 bushels, compared with 942,000 bushels a week ago and 841,000 bushels the corresponding day last year. Today's wheat receipts at Kansas City, St. Louis and Omaha were 255 cars, against 181 cars a year ago.

Notwithstanding advices that cold weather had occasioned much greater farm use of corn, the market today both of corn and oats duplicated the action of wheat, but with better commission buying on the fall.

Provisions ran into free selling orders, and averaged lower despite steadiness of hog values.

POULTRY TRADE BRISK HERE

Heavy Movement of All Classes Reported

Chickens of all ages from one day to two years are moving out of Wichita Falls in greater numbers than at any previous time in the history of the city, according to reports from dealers and poultry growers in this vicinity.

Almost 10,000 baby chicks per week are being shipped from the M. Johnson poultry ranch to points all over the United States. This production is from two hatches per week, and within the next few days additional incubators will enable the Johnson plant to take off four hatches weekly. There are now almost 75,000 eggs in the incubators, and this number will be increased soon. The entire output of almost 10,000 is being used, with the exception of a few culls, for incubation of baby chicks.

Orders for this poultry, which is shipped when one day old, range in number from 25 to 4,000 chicks each. A great many orders, it was said, call for 300 to 1,000 of the tiny birds.

The influx of chickens from the territory surrounding this city for the local market continues to maintain an unusual volume. Shipments are being made from towns as much as 140 miles from Wichita Falls. The capacity of local plants has been required to dress and pack the stock for shipment to eastern points. From three to five carloads of dressed chickens weekly have been leaving Wichita Falls for New York and other eastern centers recently, and the month of January promises to show one of the best poultry months in the history of the city.

Two carloads of young beef stock were shipped early this week by Ed Robert, local cattle buyer. One car was of calves, and the other of yearling steers. The animals had been bought in small lots from various points in the territory surrounding Wichita Falls to a distance of 100 miles.

Cotton dropped about 25 points on Tuesday's market, closing at 17.75c per pound, middling basis, with local buyers.

SCHOOL BILLS STIR UP FIGHT

All-American' Measures In Host Discussion

AUSTIN, Jan. 29. (AP)—Two house bills carrying for the Americanization of Texas public schools stirred up a hornet's nest of opposition today when offered for final adoption by Representative Cox of Corsicana, their author.

One of the measures, providing that a course of instruction in United States history, civil government, patriotism and duties of a citizen should be given students of seventh and eight grades, was passed. The second, an enactment whereby no teachers' certificates shall be issued an alien authorizing him to teach in public free schools unless he has produced evidence showing his intention of becoming a citizen, was the subject of an hour's wrangle, and was in the air at adjournment.

A host of amendments was offered after Representative Kayton of San Antonio took a stand against the bill, contending that it would prevent exchange of instructors between institutions of higher learning.

When Representative Cox asserted his measure would not apply to teachers' colleges and universities of the state, Representative Snelgrove of Henderson submitted an amendment which would make the proposed law affect any school supported by state funds.

"If we're going to cleanse a stream, we must start at the fountain head," Snelgrove declared.

Representative Woodruff of Decatur, speaking against the Snelgrove amendment, declared that neither universities nor high schools should come under the provisions of the alien instructors law.

Club Hears Address On Radio Advertising

"Radio programs are essentially entertainment. Your advertising program has no right to be given unless it is interesting within itself," said Miss Betty Van Deventer, New York radio advertising expert, in an address before the Wichita Falls Ad club Tuesday noon at the Kemp hotel.

Miss Van Deventer stated that radio advertising is most effective in its appeal to the large daytime audiences of women. The speaker was introduced by Ralph DeShong, manager of Saul's stores. J. M. Gilliam and R. E. Shepherd also made short talks.

J. H. Allison, T. A. Bradley, W. S. Abbott and J. W. Pyland were appointed by A. E. Kelly, president, on a committee to see if any members of the local club can attend the International Advertising association convention at Berlin this year. Members of the club were asked to attend the opening of the Charles Weeks "garden farm" community Saturday, Feb. 2.

Wichita Company Offers $200,000 In Stock To Public For Expansion

Corporation to Seek Local Capital in Program, Officials Declare in Announcing Issue

One of the first public offerings of stock in an established Wichita Falls concern will be on the market Wednesday when the R-F Finance corporation of Wichita Falls opens its books for subscriptions to a $300,000 block of securities.

Present stockholders of the corporation have taken $100,00 of the new issue, leaving $200,000 available, it was said. The company is engaged in the financing of automobile purchases, and the increase in stock will make it the largest firm of its type in West Texas or Southern Oklahoma, officials said.

According to a prospectus prepared for purchasers and statements of officials of the company Tuesday, the stock will be offered as a participating preferred 7 per cent cumulative, with par value $100. The purchase of one share of common stock in the firm for each four shares of preferred stock will be allowed, although preferred stock alone may be secured, it was announced. Dividends are exempt from the present normal federal income tax.

Tells Purposes

The purpose of the public offering of stock is three-fold, according to the explanation of Solon R Featherston, vice president and treasurer of the corporation. The first purpose is the need for expansion to properly serve automobile purchasers and dealers in West Texas and Southern Oklahoma, he said. Desire of dealers and purchasers to finance their cars with home capital was given as one of the chief reasons for the growth of the company, which was organized June 9, 1924, with a paid in capital of $100,000. Since the organization, it has increased its stock to $200,000 in March 1926, and in January, 1929, the stockholders unanimously approved the increase to $500,000. Substantial dividends have been paid since organization, Mr. Featherston said, while the loss ratio of the company on purchases of paper has been one half of one per cent.

The expansion of the company to a half million dollar enterprise will also mark another step in making Wichita Falls the financial capital of Northwest Texas and Southern Oklahoma, it was pointed out. This has been in line with the announced goal of business leaders here to constantly expand and improve local industries, it was said.

The third feature of the expansion is the offering of an investment opportunity to the small investor and the "average" investor, Mr. Featherston explained.

Small Investor

"The large investor finds no lack of opportunity to make use of his money, while the small investor and the average investor is often hard put to find use for his capital or savings, especially in local enterprises. We feel that the opportunity of the public to make small commitments in a Wichita Falls institution will prove very popular."

In this connection, the company is to provide for the partial payment plan for the purchase of the stock, with the payments in regular monthly installments as in the purchase of automobiles.

A prospectus giving the capitalization of the company, details of management, history, dividends, and other information has been prepared. In regard to the stock, the announcement says:

"Participating preferred shares, par value $100, are preferred both as to assets and 7 per cent cumulative dividend over common stock, and are callable wholly or in part, at any dividend date, one sixty days notice at $105 per share and accrued dividends. Dividends are payable quarterly from Jan. 1, 1929. The participating preferred shares participate equally with the common stock in any further distribution of corporate earnings up to and not exceeding 3 per cent on the preferred shares outstanding, after the common stock of the corporation has received 16 per cent dividends in one year.

Officers and Directors

"The corporation is primarily an automobile finance corporation, purchasing secured automobile paper from authorized dealers of satisfactory financial standing. In most transactions the endorsement of the dealer is required in addition to the chattel mortgage on the motor vehicle involved. The amount loaned never exceeds two thirds of the retail cash price of the automobile."

The statement of the company shows an increase of assets from $290,383.37 as of June 30, 1925, to $748,168 as of Dec. 31, 1928. Officers are C. H. Featherston, president; W. L. Hawkins, vice president; Solon R. Featherston, vice president and treasurer; James L. Pollard, assistant treasurer; W. B. Featherston, secretary; Miss Maymie Kuhfuss, assistant secretary.

Directors are C. H. Featherston, W. L. Hawkins, N. M. Clifford, W. L. Robertson, Solon R. Featherston, W. F. George and Charles I. Francis.

Realtors to Tour Weeks Farms On Eve of Opening

Plans for the organization of the realtors of Wichita Falls into a sales force for the colonization of large irrigated tracts near this city were discussed by Charles Weeks, California expert, in his address Tuesday noon to the members of the Real Estate board in its biweekly meeting at the Kemp hotel.

Local real estate men were asked to gather at the Westmoreland swimming pool at 10:30 o'clock Friday morning to go over the little farm community with Mr. Weeks, and to receive literature and instructions preparatory to the formal opening of the project Saturday, Feb. 2.

James Yeths, sales manager who came from California with Mr. Weeks, will be in charge of the sale of lots in the Westmoreland "garden farm" tract, and of 5-10-15 and 20 acre farm in the Rancho Vista plot just west of it. A five per cent commission will be paid for sale of land in these areas, it was announced.

Mr. Weeks also discussed the marketing association which will handle all eggs produced on the community farm, and stated that the highest current prices will be obtained.

J. M. Baber, president, presided at the meeting.

FIRE ROUTS HOTEL GUESTS

Aged Lodger Awakes Too Late for Excitement

Occupants of a rooming house located on the second floor at 721 Ohio avenue rushed into the street early this morning when smoke from a fire in the rear of the first floor brought most of the city's fire equipment to the spot.

The firemen's chief difficulty was in locating the source of the smoke which filled all of the back part of the building.

The smouldering fire was quickly extinguished when finally located.

The lower floor of the building is partitioned into two rooms, a barber shop occupying half of the front portion, a tailor shop formerly half of the front and most of the rear.

One lodger in the rooming house, who slept soundly through the early part of the excitement, attempted to descend by a ladder from the window of his room. Firemen directed the aged man to a safer method of gaining the street and assured him there was time to don his trousers before leaving the building.

Damage was confined to the point of origin of the fire and did not run high.
