Bush to offer vice president job to Cheney

By Ron Fournier

PHILADELPHIA — Gov. George W. Bush on Monday selected former Defense Secretary Dick Cheney to be his running mate, rounding out the GOP ticket with a Washington insider who played a pivotal role in his father's presidency.

Two highly placed GOP sources said Bush planned to make the offer this morning. Cheney has told associates he will accept it.

Bush spokeswoman Karen Hughes confirmed that Bush had made his selection, but said, "He has not yet notified that individual or told anyone else about his choice." Republicans open their presidential convention, where Bush will be officially nominated, next Monday.

Cheney brings the ticket a wealth of foreign policy experience and political stature — traits that Bush, a two-term Texas governor, lacks himself. He is a bridge between Bush and his father, former President Bush, who put Cheney in his Cabinet and promoted him for his son's ticket.

After promising an "electrifying" choice, Bush settled to take the safe route: Cheney is a rock-solid conservative who poses lit-

Cheney's quick smile masks a talent for quiet persuasion

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard B. Cheney, widely credited with helping mastermind the U.S.-led military victory over Iraq, by reputation is deliberate but decisive, a Washington insider who honed his skills of persuasion both in Congress and the executive branch.

Out of sight for most of the past decade, the 59-year-old Cheney is very much back in the public eye as Texas Gov. George W. Bush's choice as vice presidential running mate.

Bearing the heat without cool air a daily reality for some elderly

By Ian Heald

Monday's high reached 101 degrees. For many people, the summer heat has become commonplace, an issue of little significance. But for the city's senior citizens who can't afford air conditioning, the conditions have become downright unbearable.

In recent weeks, for example, 66-year old Arlena Johnson has had to face the reality that her 10-year old air conditioner may be on it last legs.

Stretched out on her couch getting her daily dose of "L.A Heat" on television Monday afternoon, Ms. Johnson had a towel in hand to continually battle the perspiration. The air conditioner had died again.

Ms. Johnson looked over at the air conditioner that sits in the kitchen window. "I've been here 30-something years and that's where we always put them," said

Pet owners advised to use extra care in summer's dog days

Kristine Aleman
MRT Correspondent

It's another hot summer day when breezes of warm air are refreshing and shade from a nearby tree is priceless. For most people, a trip to the nearby drive-up restaurant for an ice cold slush or a cool vanilla ice-cream cone settles that unbearable heat-triggered thirst. However, sometimes overcome by the overwhelming satisfaction, people forget about those who never fail to remember us, our dogs and cats.

The heat can be just as threatening to animals living in our backyards, if not more, as it is to humans.

"We get a lot of complaints about animals without water," said Gapi Bernal, assistant director of city of Midland Animal Control. "The problem is that people

Wells Fargo taking over Chase Bank in Midland

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

Chase Bank will be leaving the Permian Basin this fall as it completes the sale of its Midland branches to Wells Fargo & Co. and its Odessa branches to American State Bank of Lubbock.

Officials with the three companies said customers should conduct business as usual at their banks until the completion of the sale, expected in mid-November, pending regulatory approval.

"The decision was a difficult one," said Andy Lane, chairman of Chase Bank of the Permian Basin. "The Midland-Odessa markets are very competitive, with other banks and credit unions chasing customers with similar products. We were at a competitive disadvantage with fewer branches, having only one downtown branch and another branch with a drive-through."

After analyzing the corporation's strategic options and the cost of adding branches to be more competitive, Lane said it was decided to sell the locations.

"It's the right choice for the clients and for the employees," he said.

Ron Mullins, president and chief executive officer of Wells Fargo in Midland, said Wells Fargo has just begun to study Chase Bank's build-

Devon Energy will exit Permian Basin

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Devon Energy is joining a growing list of major and mega-independents to exit the Permian Basin as the Oklahoma City-based oil company announced Monday that it will close the Santa Fe-Snyder Midland office, resulting in the elimination of approximately 55 jobs from the Midland market.

Santa Fe-Snyder, which was acquired by Devon in June, has had a presence in Midland for more than 10 years after acquiring the assets of Adobe Oil and Gas, one of the Permian Basin's first publicly traded companies. Devon has production offices in Odessa, Sonora and Artesia, N.M., but has never had an office in Midland.

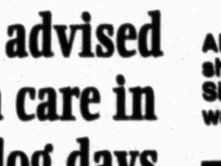

"Santa Fe-Snyder has 520 U.S. employees, and we will extend job offers to about 320 employees," said Vince White, spokesman for Devon Energy Corp.

He said he did not know at this time how many of the Midland office

Bomb threat empties Ector County Courthouse

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram
Mark Donaldson, chief bailiff at the Ector County Courthouse, waits at an entrance on Monday after a bomb threat was called in.

Staff reports

ODESSA — A bomb threat proved to be false but abruptly shut down business Monday at the Ector County Courthouse.

Sgt. Roy Gladden of the Ector County Sheriff's Department said a man called the Sheriff's Office dispatch station and said, "There were two well-placed explosive devices at the courthouse."

The caller immediately hung up after making the statement.

All 109 courthouse employees were sent home, roads were blocked off and a search for the bomb began, said Chief Bailiff Mark Donaldson, who is responsible for security in the Ector County Courthouse.

The courthouse remained closed for the entire day even though no bomb was found.

A trained, sniffing canine was borrowed from the Ector County Independent School District. The dog was unable to locate any trace of explosives in the courthouse either.

"The school district just bought that dog," Gladden said. "If they didn't have her, we would have had to wait for a dog to come in from Lubbock."

Investigators will now focus their investigative attention on the telephone call placed Monday morning to the sheriff's office.

"We will check for a recording of the call, trace the call and see if we can find anything," Gladden said.

ings and workforce, so it will be several weeks before any decisions will be made on keeping or closing buildings and which Chase employees will be offered jobs with Wells Fargo.

Obviously, Lane said, there will be overlap between the two banks, but "we held employee meetings this morning, with Wells Fargo management in attendance, and they said they plan to interview each and every one of our employees. I heard Ron speak this morning and I believe he was sincere in what he said to the employees."

With Wells Fargo's additional locations and plans to grow its Midland franchise, Lane said he believes most Chase employees will find new work with Wells Fargo. American State, which currently has no presence in the Permian Basin, he said, will most likely need every Chase Odessa employee.

Mullins said his company sees the acquisition as "a wonderful opportunity. Chase has a superb customer base we're looking forward to serving."

Chase also has quality bankers he believes will add depth to Wells Fargo, Mullins said. Key to the deal, he noted, is the acquisition of Chase's Permian Basin trust business.

Chase customers, he said, will benefit from Wells Fargo's additional locations, high-tech ATMs and other products.

Lane said his first priority is to ensure the transition from Chase to Wells Fargo runs smoothly and that the Chase employees are taken care of. Then, he said, he will study his options, including taking advantage of new opportunities within Chase.

PETS: Some animals need special care usually leave water dishes that aren't big enough, or they put too much water and the dogs usually spill when they're trying to cool off."

Lack of water and shade causes heat stroke in pets which can eventually lead to brain damage or death.

"The dog will go into high stress, start panting really hard and start slobbering," Bernal said. "It is exactly the same for cats."

Pet owners should watch for symptoms including restlessness, excessive thirst, lethargy, lack of appetite, dark tongue, rapid heartbeat, fever, vomiting or lack of coordination, according to People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals (PETA).

If a pet shows these symptoms, owners should gradually provide water to drink, apply a cold towel or ice pack to the head, neck and chest, or immerse the pet in cool water to lower body temperature.

"Sometimes there are state and/or local restrictions and guidelines regarding care of animals," said PETA Cruelty Caseworker Amy Rhodes. "Typically state and local laws will say that an animal has to be provided proper shelter from weather extremes."

Under Texas State Statute 4209, pet owners must provide adequate food, shelter and care, Bernal said. Those who believe an animal is being abused may contact Animal Control. If there is a case, it will then be referred to the police department for possible prosecution.

"Whenever a case comes in it is always dispatched as cruelty," Bernal said. "The officers will then assess the situation. They offer compliance recommendations to get (the pets) some shelter. It's usually just education."

Pet owners should take the following precautions to prevent heat stroke:

- Never leave a pet in a parked car. The temperature inside a parked car can climb well over 100 degrees in just a matter of minutes.
- Do not carry your dog in the bed of a pick-up truck. The heat brings added danger of burning the dog's feet on the hot metal.
- Do not take your dog jogging — except on cool mornings and evenings — and don't force exercise. Remember hot pavement can burn pets' paws.
- Trim heavy-coated dogs' fur, but leave an inch for protection against insects and sunburn. Keep an eye on areas where hair is thin, like eyelids, ears and nose.
- Provide shade and water for your pet. Keep drinking water in an anchored bucket or heavy bowl. Dogs should have a small wading pool.

HEAT: Seniors given new fans to beat heat

(From 1A)

Ms. Johnson. "I've been through about 8 or maybe 9 air conditioners. They were brand new when I bought them."

She'd like a new air conditioner, but with prescription medicine expenses and a limited Social Security income, Ms. Johnson said chances are slim.

"I can't really afford it," she said. "If I could I would've gotten one by now. On my Social Security check I'm doing good enough to stay afloat. It gets pretty rough sometimes, but I stay afloat."

Ms. Johnson recalled cooler times, back in the days when the 3-bedroom home, that housed 9 children, contained two or three extra fans, which when placed strategically throughout the house were able to cool the home with a continual rate of circulation.

"The air conditioner had three cycles," Ms. Johnson said. "We'd put a fan here and there. You could put a fan in each room, which would draw the cool air down the hall. And it seems like it's hotter than it used to be. Right now, it's not bad. But usually it's hotter inside the home than it is outside on a really hot day."

With the air conditioner on the fritz these days, Ms. Johnson said the sure-fire way to beat the heat is a daily visit to the Southeast Senior Center at 1803 E. Indiana Ave. "In the summertime, it's air conditioned," she said. "It's just pleasant. I go every morning unless I have a doctor's appointment. I go to the center to do ceramics, to play bingo, or just laugh and talk."

But, Ms. Johnson said she usually returns home in the early afternoon, a time of day that can provide unbearable temperatures in the home during the summer's peak hours. And if it gets to be more than 100 degrees, Ms. Johnson said she's not above moving her chair out to the carport. "It's because of the shade," she said, smiling. "It's a little more comfortable."

Help for senior citizens

Community and Senior Services of Midland has been distributing fans free of charge to senior citizens like Ms. Johnson all summer. Fan and cash donations from the community have allowed the center to distribute 85 fans to date, said Joni Cox, volunteer-homebound services coordinator for the senior center.

"We've appreciated all the contributions that the residents of Midland have put in," Ms. Cox said. "We're giving fans out to area elderly individuals over the age of 60."

But Ellen Smith, director of the Southeast Senior Center, said she believes there are at least 40 to 45 more elderly Midlanders in need of fans.

"We have a number of people who call and want to know if there are fans available," Ms. Smith said. "It's just been a blessing. A number of fans are needed still. We need fans to pull air into other rooms and help circulate the air. There is still a great need for them."

Those who would like to donate money or donate a fan, or those elderly in need of a fan, can contact community and senior services at 689-6693.

Upon learning about Ms. Johnson's situation, Ms. Cox had a fan delivered to her home.

VEEP: Cheney rose high in political ranks

dent Bush's defense secretary, was on the world's TV screens during his prosecution of the Persian Gulf War. Some of the hair's gone.

But he still has that seemingly permanent half-smile, a friendly look that comes with a disarming manner that helped him get along with Democrats even while amassing a deeply conservative voting record on Capitol Hill.

In April, when George W. Bush put Cheney in charge of his vice presidential search team, Bush called him "a man of enormous experience."

The highlight of Cheney's four years as Pentagon chief, from 1989 to 1993, was the resounding victory in the Persian Gulf War. During that time he also oversaw the Pentagon's first big wave of post-Cold War defense cuts — and characteristically cautioned Congress against cutting too deeply, too rapidly.

In November 1991, several months after the Gulf War ended, Cheney publicly worried about the future of the Soviet Union — which dissolved one month later — and foresaw an instability that continues today.

"We don't know what the hell is going to happen over there over the next few years," he said then. "We know they've got somewhere between 25,000 and 30,000 nuclear weapons."

Cheney was born in Lincoln, Neb., and his father was a longtime Agriculture Department worker. He attended elementary school and high school in Casper, Wyo.

He was football co-captain and senior class president, and won a full scholarship to Yale — Bush's alma mater. He attended Yale for one year but had to leave because of failing grades. He moved back to Wyoming where he worked for the power company stringing and cutting lines, before enrolling at the University of Wyoming, where he renewed a relationship with high school sweetheart Lynne Anne Vincent.

They married in 1964 and both went to the University of Wisconsin for doctorates. She earned her doctoral degree, but politics lured him to Washington in 1968, where he was a congressional fellow and became a protege of Michigan Republican Rep. Donald Rumsfeld, a close friend of President Gerald Ford.

When Ford tapped Rumsfeld to become his chief of staff, Rumsfeld made Cheney his deputy. When Rumsfeld left the White House to be defense secretary, Cheney moved up to become the youngest chief of staff ever, at age 34. He held the post for 14 months.

After Ford left office, Cheney returned to Casper, Wyoming and ran for the state's single congressional seat.

By The Associated Press
NAME Richard Cheney
AGE-BIRTH DATE 59, born Jan. 30, 1941
HOMETOWN Lincoln, Neb.
RELIGION Methodist
FAMILY Wife, Lynne, a native of Casper, Wyo.; two grown daughters, Elizabeth and Mary.
EDUCATION Attended Yale University, 1959. Received bachelor's and master's degrees in political science from the University of Wyoming, 1965 and 1966, respectively. Did doctoral work at the University of Wisconsin, 1966-68.
EXPERIENCE Deputy Assistant to President Ford, 1974-75; White House chief of staff under Gerald Ford, 1975-76; Wyoming representative, 1978-89; House Republican whip, 1988-89; secretary of defense under President Bush, 1989-93; chairman and CEO of Dallas-Based Halliburton Corp., one of the world's leading engineering and construction companies in the oil industry, 1995-present.
QUOTE "The vice president is always in a very difficult position in any circumstances. ... If he challenges the president in policy meetings, disagrees with him, he's viewed as being disloyal." — 1987, then vice chairman of the House committee investigating the Iran-Contra affair.

In Congress, Cheney quickly rose within the GOP power chain. He was one of President Reagan's most ardent supporters, backing him up on defense issues like the "Star Wars" missile defense system. He also voted against Democrats on almost every social issue, including abortion rights, gun control and the Equal Rights Amendment.

During the Iran-Contra scandal, as vice chairman of the congressional investigation commission, Cheney became of one Congress's most stalwart defenders of the Reagan administration. William Cohen, the current defense secretary and a former member of Congress, recalled Monday that he served with Cheney on the Iran-Contra commission and worked with him during Cheney's years at the Pentagon.

When the Air Force chief of staff, Gen. Michael J. Dugan, talked to reporters in unusual detail about U.S. war plans in the Persian Gulf in September 1990, Cheney said he went too far and fired him.

But Cheney, the former politician and Washington insider, also has a deft diplomatic style that was typified during the Gulf War, again, when he flew to Saudi Arabia to convince King Fahd that allowing U.S. forces into his kingdom would be wise.

In 1995, Cheney became chairman and chief executive officer of Dallas-Based Halliburton Corp., one of the world's leading engineering and construction firms focused on oil companies. Under Cheney's guidance, the company's stock price and profits have soared, as has Cheney's personal portfolio. In 1998, he made $2.2 million in salary and controlled another $10 million in Halliburton stock.

BUSH: Cheney gets clean bill of health to serve

tle or no political risk. Bolder choices were available, including abortion-rights Govs. Tom Ridge of Pennsylvania and George Pataki of New York.

Fashioning an impressive resume in two decades of public service, Cheney served as President Ford's chief of staff, six terms in Congress from Wyoming and four years as Pentagon chief, where he successfully executed the Persian Gulf War.

Cheney, 59, suffered three heart attacks by age 48, but a doctor commissioned by the Bush campaign issued a statement saying his health "should not interfere with a strenuous political campaign."

Bush, 54, plucked the former Pentagon chief from the private sector to head up his selection process, a three-month search that ended with Cheney's name atop the short list.

Returning home from his office at Halliburton Co. of Dallas, an energy company he heads, Cheney was greeted by reporters. "Have a nice evening," he said, waving the journalists away.

He emerged as the leading candidate Friday and was the only prospect under serious consideration after Bush emerged from seclusion from a weekend at his Texas ranch.

Even before the deal was sealed, Republican officials welcomed the prospect of a Bush-Cheney ticket.

Tennessee Sen. Bill Frist, a contender for the job until the end, called Cheney "a man with substance (with) serious broad experience in the public as well as private sector."

Sen. Chuck Hagel of Nebraska, another contender, said Cheney "represents the quality, character and experience that America is searching for in national leadership."

Vice President Al Gore, whose convention begins Aug. 14 in Los Angeles, is considering a number of candidates, including former Senate George Mitchell of Maine, Florida Sen. Bob Graham and Massachusetts Sen. John Kerry.

Bush had hoped to keep his selection a secret until his announcement, which is scheduled for Tuesday.

"No news today. No news today. No news today," Bush told reporters jostling for word of his choice outside the governor's mansion Monday afternoon. "I will let you know soon."

Former Missouri Sen. John Danforth lingered until the end on Bush's short list, but his prospects faded throughout the weekend as Bush mulled his options.

Among the GOP stalwarts who had been under consideration: Gov. Frank Keating of Oklahoma, Ridge and Pataki; former Gov. Lamar Alexander of Tennessee; Sens. Chuck Hagel of Nebraska and Fred Thompson and Frist of Tennessee; and Rep. John Kasich of Ohio.

With so much at stake, rumors and speculation buzzed throughout the GOP community here and in Washington. The hottest gossip: Retired Gen. Colin Powell, who has frustrated Bush with his refusal to serve on the ticket, had reportedly entered negotiations with the Bush camp.

Sources deep inside the Powell and Bush camps quickly denied the report.

All signs had pointed to Cheney for days. He changed his voter registration from Texas to Wyoming to avoid a hitch in the Constitution; he told business associates he had a good chance of getting the job and leaving his company, Halliburton Co. of Dallas; and he forwarded an all-clear health report from his doctors to Bush.

The health report came at the behest of Bush and his father, former President Bush, both of whom wanted to know whether Cheney's history of heart trouble would pose a problem in the campaign.

Sensitive to suggestions that the elder Bush is a quiet power behind his son's White House bid, campaign spokeswoman Karen Hughes said the call to Cheney's doctor was the only action taken by the former president in the review process.

Cheney served as defense secretary under President Bush, helping the president forge an international coalition in the Persian Gulf War. Before that, he served six terms in Congress from Wyoming and as chief of staff for President Ford.

Bush has faced questions about whether he is ready to be president, and advisers believe a running mate who knows his way around the White House — and around the world — would fill in the so-called gravitas gap.

In Congress, Cheney appealed to moderates, but racked up a conservative voting record and was a solid Ronald Reagan supporter. He was mentioned as a possible vice presidential running mate for Bush in 1992

BOMB: Trained canine used in search

(From 1A)

If apprehended, the caller could face a Class A misdemeanor, punishable by up to one year in jail, said Capt. Billy Clark with the Ector County Sheriff's Department.

The courthouse was expected to reopen today.

The Ector County Courthouse receives about three bomb threats each year, Gladden said.

"Everyone that's been called in since I've been here, they have never found a device," he said.

Although there is the possibility of a hoax, employees and security officials must strictly follow emergency and evacuation procedure, he added.

DEVON: Some employees to get severance package employees would be offered jobs with Devon and that most of the jobs remaining in the Permian Basin would be field jobs. White said the Denver office of Santa Fe-Snyder would also be closed.

The spokesman said those employees not extended job offers elsewhere in the Devon organization would receive severance packages but would be asked to remain on for a transitional period.

He said he could not put a time frame on the transition, which is expected to begin by the end of August when the transaction between Devon and Santa Fe-Snyder is complete.

Devon acquired Santa Fe-Snyder Corp. in June for a stock trade of $2.35 billion and $1 billion of debt. Santa Fe stockholders received .22 of a share of Devon for each share of Santa Fe-Snyder Corp.

Devon will have 300 barrels of oil equivalent reserves in its Mid-Continent and Permian areas, most of which are in the Permian Basin.

School trustees need another look at budget

At the school board meeting today, trustees are to consider whether to give all Midland Independent School District (MISD) employees a 3.5 percent raise.

Teachers in MISD do a great job in an often challenging environment, performing arguably the most important job in town. They certainly deserve a salary increase, but how would the additional millions of dollars that raise would cost be funded?

A salary increase for teachers alone would cost the school district $2.5 million. Add in an identical increase for professional staff and auxiliary employees, and that would boost the expenditure by another $939,000.

That would be a total expenditure of $3.439 million — a major sum for MISD at any time. But that is particularly true when trustees have just set Oct. 7 as the date for a critical $72.2 million bond proposal. Those bonds would finance construction of a new Midland High School and extensive renovations to Lee High School — sorely needed improvements at this time.

School Board President George Lara said there has been discussion of possibly raising the school district tax rate by four cents to to the maximum allowable rate of $1.50 per $100 valuation. Such a tax hike would raise the money needed for the salary increases, but how would it such a tax increase at this time affect the vote on the bond proposal? Not very favorably we imagine.

We believe trustees should take another close look at the MISD budget to see if there is not some money that can be freed up from different areas to fund the much-needed salary increases. There is, for example, the unexpected $1.4 million windfall the district will receive from the state due to over-budgeting in education spending for the 2000-2001 school year. That could fund a large part of the salary increases even though that windfall is a one-time benefit. The increase in future years would have to be paid for in another way.

Have trustees fully anticipated the savings the district will realize from the elimination of busing as part of the settlement between MISD and the U.S. Department of Justice? Surely there will be some savings from that change.

Trustees need to be creative in their efforts to get teachers the raise they deserve and still avoid being wasteful with the taxpayer's money.

Today in History

Today is Tuesday, July 25, the 207th day of 2000. There are 159 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On July 25, 1866, Ulysses S. Grant was named General of the Army, the first officer to hold the rank.

On this date:

In 1868, Congress passed an act creating the Wyoming Territory.

In 1909, French aviator Louis Bleriot flew across the English Channel in a monoplane, traveling from Calais to Dover in 37 minutes.

In 1946, the United States detonated an atomic bomb at Bikini Atoll in the Pacific in the first underwater test of the device.

In 1952, Puerto Rico became a self-governing commonwealth of the United States.

In 1956, 51 people died when the Italian liner Andrea Doria sank after colliding with the Swedish ship Stockholm off the New England coast.

In 1978, Louise Joy Brown, the first test tube baby, was born in Oldham, England; she had been conceived through in-vitro fertilization.

In 1994, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Jordan's King Hussein signed a declaration at the White House ending their countries' 46-year-old formal state of war.

Ten years ago: The U.S. ambassador to Iraq, April Glaspie, met with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein to discuss Iraq's economic dispute with Kuwait. The Senate formally denounced Sen. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., for financial improprieties. Comedian Roseanne Barr sparked controversy with an off-key rendition of the "Star-Spangled Banner" during a double-header at Jack Murphy Stadium in San Diego.

Five years ago: A bomb exploded on a Paris subway, killing seven people and injuring at least 60. A U.N. war crimes tribunal indicted Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic, army commander Gen. Ratko Mladic, and 22 other Serbs for war crimes.

One year ago: The Woodstock '99 music festival in Rome, N.Y., ended in fires and looting. Lance Armstrong rode to victory in the Tour de France. Morocco held a funeral for King Hassan II.

GOP National Convention has been Clintonized

Those of us who follow politics because we take our profession and/or our citizenship seriously lament that the Republican National Convention appears to have been Clintonized. The physically challenged, racial minorities and plenty of children and women will be featured. Some Democrats call it window dressing, implying that the GOP doesn't care about such people. It is window dressing, but Republicans are dressing the window not to fool voters but to fool television.

Thomas

Because most people get their news only from television, their impression of Year 2000 Republicans will be largely shaped by the coverage, such as it is, of the Republican convention. Gov. George W. Bush is determined that Republicans will not look all white and male, all old and rich. Neither will there be any angry people, such as Pat Buchanan declaring war (cultural or otherwise) or Newt Gingrich announcing revolution (political or otherwise).

Sure, I'd like to see ideas floated from morning until night. Yes, I'd prefer nonstop bashing of failed liberal programs. Of course, I would appreciate marathon speeches characterizing the Clinton-Gore years as a 24/7 "Animal House" frat party with supposedly responsible men in positions of influence shirking responsibility, violating their oaths and behaving as if their offices were the spoils of war.

It would be nice to hear how the welfare state, so favored by liberals, has sentenced the poor to a life of poverty and dependency. It would be wonderful to hear how liberal Democrats stole credit for economic prosperity from the Republicans and how Gore advisor Bob Shrum must be auditioning for stand-up comic when he claims the Clinton-Gore administration should get credit for the current boom. This from a man who never saw a dollar he wouldn't tax or one he couldn't spend. This from a man whose party controlled the House for 40 years and never cared about the deficit or national debt until Republicans took over. Name the last tax-cutting Democrat. It was John F. Kennedy.

This is not your father's Republican Convention. Since Republicans in the post-Reagan years have lacked a candidate with the personality and skills of the former president's, they cannot win without appealing to the mushy-middle folks. They represent about 20 percent of the voting public, and they decide elections. And they mostly respond negatively to the politics of anger. One Buchanan speech is enough to pin the "hate" label on the GOP and sink them. Bush has made sure that won't happen at this convention.

The Philadelphia convention will be about understated contrasts. Everyone knows what Clinton-Gore have done, from illicit sex to illicit fund-raising. What this Bush production will show is decency, integrity, honesty and fidelity. That's why Laura Bush will speak on the opening night. Look for her to subtly present her husband as a man who can be believed and who is not only faithful to his word but also to his wife.

Media types will complain about a convention without content. That's because they won't be able to tag Republicans with their usual labels. Smearing Republicans is the only way they can hope to get their preferred candidate, Al Gore, elected.

The other parties — the ones with free food and drink — might be more fun and exciting than the one inside the hall, but George W. Bush is betting that a convention without controversy gives him the best chance to move into the fall campaign with a focus on his ideas rather than his having to repair a bad image. Political junkies may wish it weren't so. But until the public wants red meat again, they'll get the pablum they're asking for.

Drivers on the Loop have an obligation to drive safely

So much has been written to you recently about the drivers on the road near the Loop yielding. This is true, but those on the Loop itself also have an obligation to drive safely. They roar off that Loop at 60 miles per hour, which is legal ... but are entering a 45 mile an hour road. They need to slow down. The driver yielding often cannot see them when they drive so fast.

My suggestion: Have an exit speed of 45 mph, have it posted, and ticket those who do not obey the sign. There is an exit speed on all freeway exits. Why not on the Loop? It would make merging much easier and more sensible for all.

Midlanders should remember Baressi's failures, successes

Now that Joe Baressi has announced his retirement, we will undoubtedly be assailed by articles in the Reporter-Telegram praising his accomplishments and bemoaning the fact that we are losing his leadership. There are, however, a few things the people of Midland should remember about his career.

Midland Independent School District (MISD) is currently about $66 million in debt. Many of our elementary schools and one of our high schools are in an admitted state of complete disrepair. We are facing a bond election for over $72 million that will cost us approximately $150 million to pay off.

MISD has spent untold hundreds of thousands of dollars in attorneys' fees vainly fighting school desegregation directives. Check your school tax receipts of 19 years ago and compare them to your current and anticipated future taxes. Would you give this man a going away party if he was retiring as CEO of a company in which you owned stock?

Good coaches encourage positive behavior in kids, fans

Recently there have been some news accounts in the national press concerning poor sportsmanship and violence between parents and/or coaches in youth athletics. While the reports are undoubtedly true, it would be unfortunate to assume that this is the norm.

I have watched young boys and girls in sports in Midland for many years and have indeed seen some behavior on the part of the adults that was less than a good example for the children. But by far the majority of the volunteers and the parent spectators were good sports. My children and grandchildren (both boys and girls) have had so many good coaches that I am reluctant to single out any of them for fear of doing an injustice to some of the others. However, this year a grandson had two outstanding baseball coaches in the Little League program and I feel compelled to nominate them for the best example of models for youth athletic leaders.

Doug Christiansen and Dennis Papasan taught our grandson more baseball in one season than I learned in all the years I tried to play. The team learned a lot more than just baseball. The team wanted to win and they did a good job of it without having more pressure than young boys should have.

Doug and Dennis never yelled at the boys and were always ready to give them a pat on the back when they made a good play or when they pulled a bonehead error. The parents and other spectators were probably influenced by the coaches or were unusually nice. They also encouraged the boys and were always positive in their sometimes loud comments. Naturally this had a positive reaction on the players.

I saw enough games this year to be able to say almost all of the coaches and other involved adults who volunteer their time to lead the baseball, football, basketball, soccer, etcetera, are dedicated to good sportsmanship and deserve to be commended for helping our young boys and girls.

"Hats Off" to all these concerned sports lovers.

Abortion stance key in running mate selection

George W. Bush has a tough choice: Does he pick a running mate who supports a woman's right to choose on abortion or one who opposes it? That consideration, like the abortion issue itself, has faced Bush all along.

But on June 28, the U.S. Supreme Court put a spotlight back on the issue. The justices voted 5-4 to overturn as too broad a Nebraska law banning so-called "partial-birth" abortions.

While many Americans might not give much thought to the fact that the president names members of the Supreme Court for lifetime appointments, the narrow abortion decision certainly re-emphasized it. Several members of the court are older than 70, and the next president is expected to name three or more justices.

McNeely

Bush opposes letting a woman decide whether to end a pregnancy unless it involves rape or incest or endangers her health. He has said abortion won't be a litmus test for court appointments. But he's also said the justices he admires most are Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas — who both voted to uphold the Nebraska law.

As Bush's lead in polls over Democrat Al Gore narrows, his choice of a running mate will send a signal to those on both sides of the abortion issue.

Does he pick an anti-abortion running mate and solidify his religious conservative base — a tactic he used to win the Republican primary in South Carolina? Or does he seek to appeal to moderates and women with a pro-choice running mate?

Some think the most attractive possible running mate is Pennsylvania Gov. Tom Ridge — a decorated Vietnam veteran and a congressman for a dozen years before being elected governor in 1994. He's from a swing state that gave Bill Clinton a plurality in the past two elections. He's been a Bush friend for two decades.

Although he's Catholic, Ridge is pro-choice. He has some reservations on the issue, but not enough to keep him from drawing the ire of some of the Catholic hierarchy in his home state. Bush aides have hinted that Ridge's pro-choice stance could kill his chances.

New York Gov. George Pataki and New Jersey Gov. Christine Todd Whitman also have been mentioned, and both are pro-choice. Whitman even vetoed a bill to outlaw partial-birth abortions in her home state.

Three anti-abortion possibilities are Oklahoma Gov. Frank Keating and U.S. Sens. Chuck Hagel of Nebraska and Fred Thompson of Tennessee.

An Associated Press poll of GOP convention delegates found 49 percent of respondents said they could support a pro-choice vice presidential nominee; 22 percent said they couldn't. Bush may be reluctant to infuriate the staunchly anti-abortion people.

James Dobson, founder and president of a conservative group called Focus on the Family, warned Bush that a pro-choice pick could jeopardize his support.

"I appreciate Mr. Dobson's advice," Bush said. "But I get advice from all quarters. And I'm going to pick somebody who can be president of the United States and somebody with whom I can get along.... I hope he realizes, and I hope others realize, that this is a pick based upon two very important criteria: Can the person be the president? And, secondly, will there be a compatibility?"

Bush will choose soon which message to send.

'Caravan of Death' at heart of efforts to put Pinochet on trial

By Bill Cormier
Associated Press

SANTIAGO, Chile — The Puma pounced in October 1973, its rotors thumping as the military helicopter swooped down on cities in northern Chile in the aftermath of a bloody coup led by Gen. Augusto Pinochet.

At each stop, military men in combat gear bounded from the Puma with grenades, machine guns and the Chilean corvo, a curved knife intended for close combat.

The garb and weaponry seemed out of place for the small cities where the helicopter touched down, but investigators say they foretold what would come: a mission to shoot, slash and stab to death imprisoned political opponents, ushering in the reign of terror of Pinochet's 17-year dictatorship.

Seventy-two people were killed in the two-week, so-called Caravan of Death, which endures for many as the regime's most notorious human rights case. Chile's Supreme Court will begin deliberations Tuesday on whether Pinochet can be tried, and prosecutors say the Caravan case would be the one to carry forward.

Following the September 1973 coup that toppled Marxist president Salvador Allende, a few military officers hopscotched the country by helicopter, going to the jails and asking to see the lists of political prisoners.

"This is the mission that founded the dictatorship," said Patricia Verdugo, an investigative reporter who wrote about the caravan in a best-selling 1989 book, "The Claws of the Puma."

The Caravan of Death has been well known for years, but more details have emerged recently as investigators made it central to the charges against Pinochet.

AP Photo

Supporters of former Chilean dictator Gen. Augusto Pinochet burn a flag of the Communist Party during demonstration in Santiago, Chile, Friday. After three days of hearings, Chile's Supreme Court postponed a decision on whether Pinochet will have to face trial for human rights abuses under his dictatorship. No date was set for a ruling. The flag had a portrait of Salvador Allende, the Marxist President toppled in the 1973 coup led by Pinochet.

The democratic government that succeeded Pinochet reported that 3,197 people died or disappeared during the general's 1973-1990 dictatorship. Pinochet's lawyers have said vehemently and repeatedly that he had no part in executions or disappearances ascribed to his regime.

On July 19, the Supreme Court opened hearings to determine whether Pinochet could be tried in Chile, signaling a new chapter in a legal odyssey that began with his arrest in Britain in October 1998.

Seized in London while recuperating from back surgery, the general fought a 16-month legal battle, successfully fending off a Spanish judge's extradition request on torture charges. British doctors declared Pinochet unfit for trial and he returned home March 3.

"That arrest opened the floodgates and emboldened the Chilean judiciary," said Reed Brody of Human Rights Watch in New York.

Now 84, Pinochet suffers from diabetes, uses a pacemaker and had three mild strokes in London.

His lawyer, Ricardo Rivadeneira, told Chile's Supreme Court that Pinochet is in such poor health he cannot organize a proper defense. Chile normally exempts suspects from criminal proceedings only for insanity or dementia.

The Supreme Court must give final word on Pinochet's appeal of a lower tribunal ruling, which stripped the general of the immunity he enjoyed from prosecution as a senator-for-life. It is unclear if the 20 justices will first order medical tests to determine whether he is fit for stand trial, or immediately rule whether he could be tried.

Opponents contend Pinochet had clear control over the Caravan and sent a trusted "delegate" as mission leader. Alfonso Insunza, a lawyer representing relatives of a slain union activist, told the justices Pinochet was responsible "for the crimes of homicide, kidnapping and illegal burial of bodies."

Families of the victims insist trying Pinochet is the only way to attain justice. "The state has not yet confronted the central issue. This is a bedrock value for any healthy society," said Mario Silva.

His father, Hector Mario Silva Iriarte, was among 16 killed in Antofogasta on Oct. 19, 1973. A socialist in the Allende government, he surrendered to military authorities and was jailed.

Nineteen of the caravan victims are still missing. Until the bodies are found, the Supreme Court has agreed the cases can be considered kidnappings, and thus "ongoing crimes" exempted from a controversial amnesty.

One of the missing is Carlos Berger, director of a radio station in Calama who defied orders to cease broadcasting the day of the coup. Twelve others from the northern city also disappeared.

French challenge Yahoo's right to post Nazi memorabilia

By Angela Doland
Associated Press

PARIS — In France, it is illegal to sell swastika-emblazoned battle flags, SS daggers, and replica canisters of Zyklon B, the lethal gas that poured into the terrifying "shower rooms" at Nazi death camps.

But U.S.-based Yahoo! Inc. offers more than 1,000 such Nazi objects for sale through its Web auction site. The memorabilia are available to anyone in the world — including the French — with a credit card and a click of the mouse.

The collision of the Internet's global, borderless nature with local laws is a conflict being played out increasingly and often, as in a Paris courtroom on Monday, pits Old World laws and sensibilities against the practices of U.S.-based companies.

In Monday's three-hour hearing, Yahoo! defended itself against two anti-racism groups who sued to try to force the Silicon Valley company — owner of the Internet's most-visited Web pages — to prevent Nazi memorabilia and other content deemed racist from being seen in France.

Impossible, an expert witness called by Yahoo! testified, arguing in essence that there is no France on the Internet — that it would be technically impossible to keep French cybernauts off the disputed Web sites.

Prosecutor Bernard Fos asked the judge to order a team of experts to examine the technological possibilities of "filter systems" that would screen out French users.

Fos also recommended that Yahoo! be fined each day it breaks French law — which prohibits selling or displaying anything that incites racisim — while specialists weigh solutions.

Judge Jean-Jacques Gomez is expected to issue a decision in August.

In May, Gomez ordered Yahoo to pay more than $1,000 to each of the two advocacy groups that sued, ruling that Yahoo! had offended the country's "collective memory." He also ordered Yahoo! to find ways to block French users from its sites selling Nazi paraphernalia.

Germany also has strict laws against the dissemination of hate material and the easy availability of such information via the Internet has vexed leaders and judges there.

In November, the Internet bookseller Amazon.com responded to German government complaints by deciding to stop shipping Adolf Hitler's "Mein Kampf" to customers in Germany, where the book is banned.

A German court also heard one of the Internet's first major test cases, in which the former head of the CompuServe online service in Germany was prosecuted for failing to block access to child pornography sites. Found guilty in 1998 of distributing illegal pornography, Felix Somm's conviction was overturned last November.

In the Yahoo! case, lawyers for the advocacy groups, including the Union of Jewish Students and the Licra anti-racism organization, said Yahoo! should have made a "good faith" effort to keep users in France off the Nazi paraphernalia sites.

But they said Yahoo! has dragged its feet. If Yahoo! can't find the technology to block users dialing in from France, they argued, why not pull down the sites altogether?

"The point is that the company must show whether it wants to keep on promoting Nazism," said Ygal El Harrar, president of the Jewish students' group.

Lawyers for the Santa Clara, Calif.-based company say they've already pulled Third Reich paraphernalia from their France-based site, Yahoo.fr.

And more recently, they've added warnings to some pages with sensitive material, alerting French users that they risk breaking French law by viewing them.

Attorneys for Yahoo! argued that although screening software exists, no existing technology could effectively keep all French users from seeing racist sites.

They also said that blocking certain keywords, such as "Nazi," would hinder free speech and hurt people doing legitimate historical research.

"Imagine that we would decide to implement what's being asked of us," said Philippe Guillanton, chief executive for Yahoo! in France. "Tomorrow, a judge from any country could come to a Web publisher from any other country and ask them to pull down such and such because it's unacceptable in that country.

"The Web doesn't work that way," Guillanton said, arguing individual users are accountable for what they seek out on the Web.

"The Web is based around the concept of user responsibility," he said.

Like most of the Licra members at the hearing, Marc Knobel argued that there is a moral high ground in this case that should shield the French from the commercialization of Nazi objects.

"Europe has suffered through Nazism," he said. "We have a different approach: Banalizing Nazism is immoral."

Movie Star Fights Arthritis

HOLLYWOOD — As a result of his own affliction, recording artist, movie star and former spokesperson for the Arthritis Foundation, Frankie Avalon is fighting arthritis on several fronts, including his discovery of a breakthrough for pain relief.

Avalon vividly recalls the pain associated with his own case of arthritis. The pain in his fingers at times was so bad he couldn't even hold a golf club. His doctor confirmed that his condition was indeed arthritis. But, like many of the other 37 million arthritis sufferers in America, Frankie could not take the type of drugs needed to treat his condition because they upset his stomach. He tried dozens of over-the-counter (OTC) pain remedies, but not one relieved his pain.

Frankie Avalon

Frankie became desperate for pain relief when he was about to begin filming Back to the Beach with Annette Funicello. After visiting an herbalist, he finally found pain relief in a cream now called ZERO PAIN that contains ingredients derived from natural herbal sources.

The secret to ZERO PAIN is in the special deep penetrating LipoCeutical® delivery base. Frankie says "Some people are calling ZERO PAIN a 'medical miracle,' but I feel 'breakthrough' is the most precise. I am not a pain expert, but I do consider myself an expert on suffering with pain. ZERO PAIN has certainly changed my life for the better. I firmly believe that there is no reason for anyone to suffer from arthritis pain, when ZERO PAIN is now available to everyone." © 2000 GCMG

VA Medical Center still coming to the aid of vets

BIG SPRING — George Bernhardt looked up from the table where he sat, surrounded by letters and boxes.

"I was in combat during Vietnam," he said, entering an office adjacent to the mail room. "When I came back, I suffered from PTSD — post traumatic stress disorder."

Bernhardt, who works for the Veteran Administration Medical Center in Big Spring, sat down slowly. The cabinet beside him bore a red and black bumper sticker proclaiming, "Forget 'Nam-Never!"

Before he came to the VA Medical Center, Bernhardt had turned to alcohol and drugs to ease his PTSD symptoms. His life came out of a downward spiral when he entered the center's substance abuse recovery program.

Within a year of completing his 28-day treatment, Bernhardt was employed by the facility in the warehouse, sorting mail and performing various other tasks. Instead of using narcotics, he was speaking to prison inmates and therapy groups about leading a drug-free life, a change he accredits to the "honesty and dedication of the people in the hospital."

"Somewhere along the line, somebody said the right thing to me," Bernhardt said. "They saved my life."

Hospital becomes home for 'special' couple

By Emily Statton
MRT Correspondent

BIG SPRING — Henry Sublett watched as his wife of 56 years slept, curled up tightly on a bed across the room.

He then turned to pick up a picture of a brunette in uniform from a table by his own bed.

"This is Loraine when she was a nurse in the Navy," he said, gazing at the picture. "She was beautiful."

He glanced at the white-haired woman she had become. "She's still beautiful."

The Subletts are the only couple living together in the nursing home at the Veteran Administration Medical Center in Big Spring.

"We are very selective about who stays in the nursing home," said Patient Representative Iva Jo Hanslik. "We only have three women total right now, and the Subletts are our first couple to stay here."

Sublett was a prisoner of war during the second world war, which gave him preference over others applying for one of the nursing home's 40 spots.

"I was in the Marines in the Philippines when I was taken prisoner," Sublett remembered. "The Japanese lined us up and were going to shoot all of us, when a negotiator ran out yelling 'wait a minute, wait a minute'."

As a result, Sublett was taken to a prison camp known as zero ward with 1,200 other American soldiers. Across from his prison, he could hear the screams of American women who had followed their hus-

Officials seeking librarian

So long, best wishes, and thanks a lot.

That pretty much was the Midland County Commissioners' Court's farewell to Sandra Wegner, the retiring Midland County Public Library's head librarian, on Monday a week before her retirement takes effect at age 62.

"We have an excellent library today," said County Judge Bill Morrow, who noted that "most of the credit" for that goes to Mrs. Wegner.

Commissioner Louisa Valencia, the court's liaison to the library, had hugged the librarian and cited her "outstanding and dedicated" service that was recognized by the court. "We want to thank you," Mrs. Valencia said. "And you know how much we will miss you."

Somewhere out in the wings, but where is yet to be determined, is Mrs. Wegner's replacement.

Mrs. Wegner is to retire on July 31 without a successor within the horizon.

"I do feel very fortunate to have worked for Midland County," she said. "I appreciate the job, and I appreciate the retirement."

Mrs. Wegner said she is confident that her staff will fare well. "They have lots to do" in running a library with a $1.2-million budget.

"I think what we (the court) will do is probably name an interim (librarian) to hold the position," Morrow said, until an administrative librarian can be hired at a $42,395 salary. But that would not be until mid-August at the court's next regular meeting. "I don't want to pre-

Battle to keep illegal aliens and drugs out of U.S. continues

By Richard Acosta

A clear message was issued by U.S. Border Patrol Chief Patrol Agent Simon Garza Jr. Monday afternoon during a Kiwanis Club meeting in Midland.

Garza

"Unless some action is taken, the Border Patrol will be unable to safely protect the United States border," Garza said. "We're trying to be proactive. But I foresee us trying to defuse a situation in the Marfa sector."

Garza was talking about the illegal alien and drug traffic that has been funneled to the Marfa Sector by the effectiveness of agents along other parts of the border.

During the luncheon, Garza explained what the Border Patrol does and how that impacts the Midland-Odessa area.

"Our primary job is to catch illegals," Garza said. "Secondly, we go after drugs. It may not seem like it, but I truly believe that every illegal we catch is another job that goes to an American and every ounce of drugs we find is one less that will be in our schools."

Garza also said that despite the drug busts, agents are keenly aware that much more is slipping through. One solution Garza said, to improving the situation would be to have more agents work the border.

The Marfa sector includes 420 miles of international border and includes most

Has anyone ever admitted wanting to be vice president?

bands to the Philippines.

"They did everything to them," Sublett grimly recalled. "We could hear them screaming, just screaming ... It drove some guys berserk."

The men did not fare much better themselves. By the time Sublett was released more than three years later, he was one of only two survivors from his original group.

"It was horrible," Sublett said of the war and his subsequent capture. "I had close calls several times."

During the heat battle, a bullet severed one of his main arteries. Fortunately, a nurse pulled him to safety and dressed his wound.

"She was a wonderful woman," Sublett said of the nurse. "She saved many other men that day."

Sublett looked at his feet briefly.

"When we were captured, the Japanese took that little nurse and cut her tongue out," he said without looking up.

Memories of the war led him to drink.

After his release, he arrived at a Veteran's Hospital in Long Beach, Calif. with only 72 pounds of flesh and a growing addiction to alcohol.

"It's strange," he laughed. "I was supposed to be on a flight home to Austin, but somehow I wound up in Long Beach and met the love of my life."

Loraine was a nurse in the hospital that took the ailing P.O.W. under its wing.

"I think the doctors were about ready to give up on me," Sublett said. "I had worms all in my stomach from the food in zero ward, and I wanted to keep drinking."

One day, however, he met a nurse who was determined to see him outlive the stomach disease and the shrapnel in his leg.

"She prayed with me," Sublett remembered. "She changed my life."

Under Loraine's influence, the man who once had used pages of a Red Cross bible to roll cigarettes became a Christian.

Free of his addiction and ready to begin a new life, he married Loraine in Las Vegas shortly after his recovery.

Now it is Henry Sublett's turn to take care of his bride. Loraine, who was diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease, made no movement as he wheeled her cot into the hallway.

"He takes her out and rolls her around almost everyday," Ms. Hanslik said, watching the couple move down the corridor. "They are just so sweet together, after all these years."

HOSPITAL: Vets are thankful for services offered

(From 1B)

The Veteran's Administration Medical Center in Big Spring is preparing to celebrate 50 years of working toward success stories like Bernhardt's. This month marks the birthday of the hospital, which serves veterans in 48 counties by providing a wide range of medical services.

Refreshments and a birthday cake will be served today in honor of the center's golden anniversary. Joe Pickle, the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce member who originally proposed bringing a veteran's facility to the city, will speak.

"We're very proud of the hospital," said Chief of Staff Darrly H. Powell. "Even in the 10 years that I've been here, we've had tremendous improvements."

A growing facility and the multiplying number of out-patients has allowed the hospital to serve many more of the veterans in its region than it did at its advent. A staff of approximately 400 keeps the medical center running smoothly, aided by over 400 volunteers.

Many of the volunteers and staff were formerly in service themselves.

Leo Welch, who has spent eight years manning the information booth at the hospital, was enlisted in the army during World War II.

He first came in contact with the VA Medical Center when he suffered a heart attack in 1992. After being treated in Big Spring, Welch offered his own services to the facility.

"I wanted to pay them back," he explained. "I've received so many benefits from this hospital."

Once a week, Welch leaves his post at the information desk to bring refreshments and bingo to the nursing home on the sixth floor of the building.

The nursing home, which provides housing for 40 veterans at any given time, was designed for hospital patients who needed extended care or rehabilitation. A screening committee determines who is admitted.

Ninety-three year-old Burvel Day has lived in the comfort of the nursing home for about 6 months.

"I enjoy some of the activities around here," said the World War II veteran. "I like to watch when they have dancing or music."

Burvel wheeled his chair out of the screened patio and into his room. An injury just below his knee has rendered him unable to walk.

"I was a farmer before I came here," he said, looking around the room he shared with another patient. On the bedside sat a ceramic garden house, a recent gift from his nephew. In the corner leaned a rod and reel.

"I went fishing when we had a reunion here," he reminisced. "I love to fish."

Burvel looked forward to the band that will be coming to play in celebration of the hospital's birthday this afternoon.

Festivities will begin at 3 p.m. at the outpatient clinic.

judge what the court will do."

The job's "top candidate," 62-year-old Gordon Alexander Grant of Denton, had turned down the post after the Search Committee and the Library Advisory Board had recommended the bilingual Grant. However, noted Morrow, he "wanted to hold another job" simultaneously as a consultant for the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). "And we just couldn't do that."

Mrs. Valencia, who said that she had recommended another library appointment be put on the court's agenda prior to Mrs. Wegner's retirement, asked, "Who's going to run it (the library)? We don't have anybody that's going to take Sandra's place."

Mrs. Wegner's library career began in 1974 under the tutelage of then-County Librarian Frances Williams. Later, she became assistant librarian under Mrs. Williams' successor, John Deats, who now is Midland College's $55,000-salaried library director. She was appointed head county librarian in 1990.

Morrow serves on the Search Committee along with Shirley Gist, president of the Library Advisory Board, Frank Bell, who is a member of the Library Advisory Board, and Bill Robinson, president of the Friends of the Library.

"I am on the search committee," Morrow said, "but the real search committee is the (Library) Advisory Board. They do all the work. They will be seeking (a head county librarian). We are going to look internally one more time and contact folks that we know" in the quest for a county librarian.

In other business, the commissioners:

- Tabled action on a request from Sanchez Mortician Services for more funds in transporting bodies for autopsies by medical examiners. Sanchez Mortician Services, which has a contract with the county for transporting remains to Lubbock and Dallas for Justice-Court-ordered autopsies, charges $75 for "removal of (the) deceased" and $50 for an "autopsy pouch" or body bag and $125 for a "disaster pouch" to be "used only for decomposed cases."

Currently, Sanchez reportedly charges $184 for a "round-trip" to Lubbock on autopsy cases, and $285 for a similar trip to Dallas. The Dallas cost is to be increased to $420.

Justice of the Peace David Cobos noted that "it is the family's decision what funeral home they want" for the decedent in carrying out the funeral.

"Each one of us, when we get there (at a death scene), we asked the family, 'What funeral home do you want?'" Cobos said. "And they specify, and that's the funeral home we call" when the next of kin can be located. "And that funeral home and the family make the arrangements."

Cobos said "the trouble lies" when no next of kin can be determined or located. "I don't feel like I can call Sanchez because the contract is to transport (for an autopsy)."

Cobos said he rotates the use of funeral homes when there is no timely survivors to give directions for final arrangements.

O.C. "Chet" Robbins, executive director of the Texas Funeral Service Commission, in a June 12 letter to Morrow noted that "the contractual relationship you have with Mr. (Oscar) Sanchez need only cover the costs to the place of autopsy" and "the transportation back to the Midland area."

The funeral commission's "primary focus is that the contractual relationship that binds the surviving family or other person authorized to make final arrangements for transporting the body anywhere begins only after that family member has made the choice and initiated the contract with the funeral home."

BORDER: Marfa needs agents

of West Texas and about half of Oklahoma. Garza has 182 agents total to look over it, or 745 square miles for every one agent.

U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, has been one of the big supporters of the Border Patrol and has said, "There are just not enough agents on the border."

Smith has sponsored several bills to get more agents hired.

However, Garza's fear is that because it is becoming increasingly difficult to cross the border in other parts of the country, soon even more people will head for his sector.

"The Marfa sector is where Arizona was seven years ago," Garza said. "It is only a matter of time before the traffic comes our way and we will have to be ready. But we have to start now. There's no way Marfa can support 200 new agents at once, which is what we will need with all the traffic does come our way."

DEAR ABBY

No matter what they call it, they are still shacking up

DEAR ABBY: A 70-year-old man wrote that he has been seeing a recently widowed woman, and they are considering living together. He asked how he should introduce a live-in companion to friends. You gave him a variety of choices, running the gamut from "best friend," "partner" and "sweetheart" to "friend."

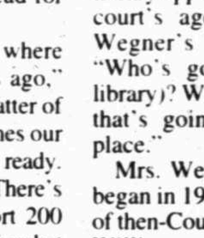

Abby, there is NO acceptable term to call someone you are shacked-up with. A person's age does not matter. If they are living together in sin, that is what it is!

We need to stop accepting unacceptable behavior. Your best advice for "Confused" should have been to do the right thing: Marry the lady. -- TIRED OF ALL THIS MISBEHAVING, SANTEE, CALIF.

DEAR TIRED: I disagree. The gentleman did not ask whether or not he should marry the lady. Times have changed. Seniors who live together choose to do so for a variety of reasons, which are usually well thought out. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Tell the 70-year-old Florida widower not to hesitate in calling the widow his wife. Long before governments issued licenses, a marriage was -- and still is -- essentially an oral contract. A license per se does not keep people married. A license is simply a matter of record against any litigation.

If an elderly couple has spelled out all their health and financial involvements for each other, let them be husband and wife. Our courts still rule fairly whether every detail is spelled out or a marriage license is in sight.

Van Buren

Certainly the license concept is good, as it prohibits underage unions and marriage falsifications. But for the government to use it as a gun to rob the elderly of pension or handicap benefits is a disservice.

Why California needs to charge a $60-plus marriage license fee (tax) is another issue. It's an impediment to the poor. Maybe Florida charges as much. Yes -- she can be his "best friend," etc., but in God's eyes and those of their witnesses, that couple can also be husband and wife. -- PASTOR WIL NUCKOLLS, FAIR OAKS, CALIF.

DEAR PASTOR NUCKOLLS: I admire your compassion and your wisdom. I know there are pastors such as yourself who are willing to perform "commitment ceremonies." I hope the couple in question takes your letter to heart.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-husband passed away recently. We were married for 17 years -- divorced for 16 — and we had three children. Both of us had happily remarried years ago.

Since his death, my closest friends (and even my sister) keep asking me, "Are you OK?" "Are you going to be all right?" I find this very annoying.

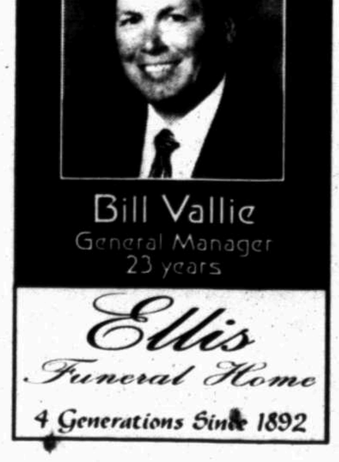

I think their sympathy should be expressed to my children instead of me. Have you any suggestions as to what I can say to them? — EX-WIFE IN KENTUCKY

DEAR EX-WIFE: Your certainly don't want it to appear that you don't care that your ex-husband has died. Simply say: "Yes, I'm fine. I'm sure the children would love to hear from you."

DEAR ABBY: I would like to add this to your "You Know When You're Getting Old" collection:

You know you're getting old when you don't recognize a single celebrity in the "Today's Birthday" column of your newspaper! — JOSEPH H. ZIMMERMAN, WILMINGTON, DEL.

Clinton planning to stay if a 'realistic chance' of agreement exists

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

THURMONT, Md. — Enmeshed in the tough details, President Clinton will extend the Mideast summit talks as long as there is "a realistic chance" he can hammer out a peace agreement between Israel and the Palestinians, his spokesman said Monday.

Duplicating the hands-on mediation of President Jimmy Carter at Camp David 22 years ago, Clinton met with a mixed group of Israeli, Palestinian and U.S. negotiators until after 5 a.m. and then got together with them again after a few hours' sleep.

"He will remain here as long as he believes there is some prospect of success," White House spokesman Joe Lockhart said at midday. "We are taking this day by day."

The Israelis said the talks were at a critical juncture. Top negotiator Shlomo Ben-Ami told Israel's army radio Monday that "the outcome ... will become finally or almost finally clear during the next two days."

Back Sunday evening from economic talks in Japan, Clinton was briefed by Secretary of State Madeleine Albright on her weekend in charge, met separately with Prime Minister Ehud Barak of Israel and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat, had dinner with them and their delegations and then began "trying to work through the details" with an array of negotiators, Lockhart said.

Clinton held another round of detailed talks Monday with negotiators — not including Arafat and Barak — making a "rolling assessment" of whether the substance and atmosphere of the discussions "have the potential to lead to an agreement," his spokesman said.

Similarly, Carter in 1978 took on much of the heavy detail work at a 13-day summit with the late Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and the late Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin that produced a peace treaty the following year.

Clinton's summit was in its 14th day Monday with no indication Clinton was ready to call a halt. Guardedly upbeat, Lockhart said, "As long as we are sitting here there is a prospect of agreement."

Implying Clinton was going for broke — an overall agreement instead of a partial accord — Lockhart said, "To reach an agreement, they need to work through each of the issues."

None is more difficult than Jerusalem, which Arafat wants split into Jewish and Palestinian parts, hoping to establish his capital in the older part of the ancient and historically contested city. Pope John Paul II proposed Sunday that it be made an international city, a suggestion from which the White House kept its distance.

Other core issues, all fraught with emotion and security implications, include how much of the West Bank will be relinquished by Israel, how many Palestinian refugees will be taken in by the Jewish state, and how many Israeli Jews will remain on the West Bank and in Gaza after Arafat turns the territories into a Palestinian state.

Barak's willingness to make concessions far exceeding those of his predecessors has weakened his political support at home. Three political parties have quit his government and his foreign minister, David Levy, declined to participate in the summit.

"No prime minister has the right to make concessions over Jerusalem," Ariel Sharon, the tough-minded former Likud foreign minister, told Israel radio. "Jerusalem is the birthright of the Jewish people."

On the Palestinian side, top Arafat aide Tayib Abdel Rahim said Arafat stood ready to provide all faiths with access to Jerusalem's holy sites — as long as that was part of a sovereignty pact.

"The solution is very simple — give full sovereignty of East Jerusalem to a Palestinian state," Abdel Rahim, who is in frequent contact with Arafat, told reporters in Gaza. "We are ready to have Jerusalem as an open city for all religions."

Since Israel took over east Jerusalem from Jordanian occupation in the 1967 Mideast war, all faiths have had access to their holy sites.

Arafat, meanwhile, is sensitive to other Arab leaders as the negotiations proceed.

After Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak traveled to Saudi Arabia on Sunday for talks with King Fahd, Saudi officials said the two leaders were anxious to ensure that at least part of Jerusalem would come under Palestinian sovereignty. Mubarak also was expected to talk in coming days with Syria's new President Bashar Assad and Jordan's King Abdullah II, in their capitals or his.

Parties split on gun laws, but trigger locks have some GOP appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats and Republicans heading to their national conventions stand far apart on whether gun controls should be tougher, yet many from both sides agree handguns should come with trigger locks, according to interviews by The Associated Press.

Four in 10 Republican delegates and eight in 10 Democratic delegates back the safety devices.

On gun control laws, however, some 68 percent of Democrats say current measures need to be stronger, while nearly as many Republicans — 61 percent— say the laws are "about right."

"The Second Amendment is the strongest law we have and this is enough gun control," said Republican delegate Richard Engle of Bethany, Okla.

Hardly, argued some Democratic delegates.

"We regulate bars a lot more than we regulate people who are selling guns," said Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb.

AP interviewed more than 1,800 Republicans and 3,500 Democrats.

That the two parties disagree sharply on gun control but less so on trigger locks isn't surprising because the devices fall into a "safe" area for both sides, said Bruce Buchanan, a government professor who specializes in presidential politics at the University of Texas at Austin.

"It's a way to have your cake and eat it, too," he said. "It's a way of showing some respect for fears about gun safety but at the same time not taking away the Second Amendment right."

Dale Emmons, a Democratic delegate from Richmond, Ky., and a member of the National Rifle Association, called trigger locks "a no-brainer."

Republican Kathy Lehman Holtzman agreed. The GOP delegate from Johnstown, Pa., said current gun controls are "about right" and favors the mandatory use of trigger locks — which she uses on her own gun.

"Trigger locks can save some young people's lives, and for that reason, I think it's certainly worth the extra effort it takes to get the trigger locks off," she said. "We're not talking about brain surgery here."

But Republican Joyce Lovelace of Acworth, Ga., said it takes too long to release the locks.

"I would hate to be fussing with a trigger lock if someone was trying to break into my house to rape me," she said.

Only eight percent of Democratic delegates opposed trigger locks on handguns or said they weren't sure. Among Republicans, one out of three delegates objected to requiring the devices, and 9 percent said they weren't sure.

Some Republicans said gun laws need to be more effectively enforced rather than expanded.

"Gun laws are as useless as the pimples on a boar pig if no one's going to enforce them," said Dallas Wood, of Paragould, Ark.

An AP poll conducted in the spring found a large majority of Americans — 76 percent — would back a law requiring guns to be sold with safety devices. About 20 percent opposed such a measure. As well, 60 favored stricter gun laws while 30 percent opposed them.

Among delegates heading to the national convention, 19 percent of the Democrats said current gun control measures were "about right," although many believed they needed tweaking. About 14 percent of the Republicans said they considered the laws "too strong," while 9 percent said they weren't strong enough.

Liz Smith, a Democratic delegate from the District of Columbia, said guns are too easily available, especially to children.

"You have to take a test and get a license to drive a car, you should have to do the same to own a gun," she said.

But Lovelace, the Georgia delegate, said the problem lies more with society and parents failing to take responsibility.

"I grew up in a house with a father in the sheriff's department. When he put his pistol on the dresser, we wouldn't dare think about touching it," she said. "It's about time for parents to pay more attention to what their children are doing and tell them 'no' once in a while."

Republican candidate George W. Bush has said he would sign a bill mandating trigger locks on handguns, although he would consider such a law impractical.

Vice President Al Gore said he would require manufacturers and federally licensed sellers to report gun sales to state authorities and ban certain assault-type weapons. He also would require child-safety locks.

"Don't Buy A New Air Conditioner Until You Know These 5 'Loopholes'!"

David Rydell
Wizard of Comfort

All air conditioning companies are not alike.
Your central air conditioner is probably the most expensive appliance you'll ever buy for your home. And since you'll be living with it for the next 10 to 20 years, it only makes sense to avoid a nightmare.
Here are the 5 most important things to know before you buy a new air conditioner.
1. Waste not. Many air conditioners are replaced that don't need to be. They can be inexpensively fixed compared to the age of the unit. And worse, the new system can cost almost as much to operate as the old one. Call us and we'll give you an exact way to know if your air conditioner should be replaced.
2. The money pit. Avoid spending a lot more money after you get your new air conditioner installed. Demand a written agreement that the installer will protect your floors and carpets, use wall protectors and thoroughly clean up after he's finished.
3. The clammy cave. New air conditioners can have different operating characteristics than your old one. If the installer isn't careful about the proper size and just sticks in the same size you have now, your home will feel cold and clammy like a cave.
4. Brand envy. You've seen all the big, expensive ads showing one brand over another. Now, here's the "dirty little secret" they don't want you to know. Only about one-fifth of the satisfaction you're going to get is the result of the brand you choose. The other 80% is how well it's installed. And there are 8 crucial procedures that should be properly done. If not, the brand is irrelevant.
5. Concrete guarantee. Some companies have a guarantee that stops as soon as they leave your concrete driveway. For your own protection, INSIST on a written 100% Money Back Guarantee For Any Reason.

If you've been told you need to replace your air conditioner, we will happily give you a FREE SECOND OPINION so you can have all the facts. Also, there is NO cost or obligation for one of our FREE estimates. Call now...

Mid West Glass can protect, beautify your business or home

Window film makes good business sense

If your building has large windows, or if it has lots of small windows, especially on the west side, the West Texas sun can be merciless.

Large windows let in lots of light, for sure, but they also let in too much heat and too much of the sun's damaging ultraviolet rays. Closing off windows with dark drapes may not be a good answer.

Window film from Mid West Glass can be the perfect solution because it lets you decide what to let in and what to keep out. Film can eliminate up to 100 percent of the UV rays that fade furniture, carpet and other furnishings. It can cut the sun's heat by as much as 80 percent (think of the savings in air conditioning you can realize from that). It can also soften the glare of the sun.

Reflective film makes it harder to see inside, giving more protection from theft where you keep merchandise or office equipment or machinery. Security protects glass from shattering when broken – the toughest film is almost impossible to break with a hammer and very difficult to cut with a knife—reducing "smash and grab" thefts, which account for 64 percent of all burglaries.

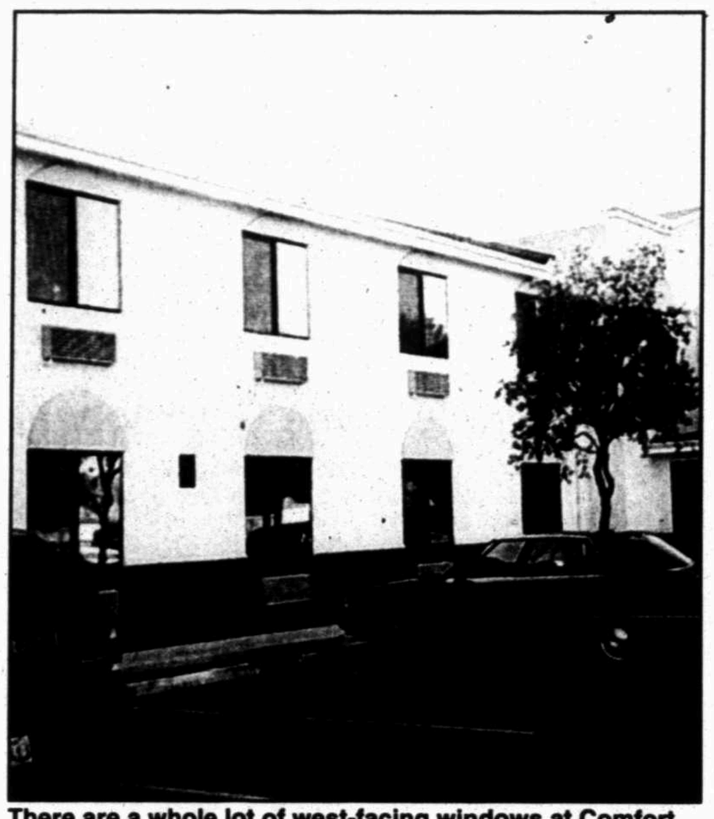

Because window film comes in a wide variety of attractive architectural colors, you won't sacrifice beauty—you can really improve the appearance of your building.

This is a surprisingly inexpensive decision to make. Film is one of the most economical window solutions there is. Its heat reduction features alone can help pay for the installation. Mid West crews install film quickly, with minimum interruption of your daily procedures.

No matter what kind of windows you have—if they take up a whole wall or are wallet-sized—if they are double pane or single pane, decorative, oddly shaped, on sliding doors or anything—Mid West can cut window film to fit perfectly.

All these benefits are true of home windows as well. Many homeowners appreciate the way film makes their home look as much as the protection it provides. And residential films come with a lifetime warranty on the color and against peeling, cracking or bubbling.

Fight back against the harsh West Texas sun. Let in as much or as little light as you want while curbing the heat and the damaging UV rays. Let Mid West show you how affordable this solution is.

There are a whole lot of west-facing windows at Comfort Suites. When Mid West Glass installed attractive window film there, it made a big difference in how much heat and UV rays got in to the rooms.

Mid-West Glass offers glass and windows for any use, as well as patio enclosures. Located at 906 W. Front, the phone number for a free estimate is 682-7373.

Seri-Tex owner Mario Peña checks a job on his big 8'x10' silk screen.

'We can silk-screen print on almost anything'

Seri-Tex owner Mario Peña has a long list of items he can print on—big and small. The usual; paper, cardboard, plastic, acrylic, fabric and the like; and the unusual, like metal, wood, ceramics and even some types of stone.

He can print just about any size, too, thanks to his large 8'x10' screen, perfect for big signs.

Seri-Tex is ready to print caps, t-shirts, decals, bumper stickers and other items with school colors, company logos, political slogans or anything you can think of.

They also do business cards, binders and invoices.

Prices are very competitive and Mari offers further discounts for large orders. Service is speedy, and extra fast emergency turnarounds are available.

The shop is downtown at Big Spring and New York. New York is the first street as you come out of the Big Spring Street railroad underpass heading south. Seri-Tex is in the front of the gray building that overlooks the underpass.

Seri-Tex is owned by Mario Peña. The phone number is 570-6674, or page Mario at 560-3483 and the address is 510 South Big Spring, at the corner of New York and Big Spring. Store hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Need it wired? Call J & S Electric

New construction or remodeling have always included wiring for electricity. But these days wiring is more than just a couple of duplex plugs behind a desk. Now wiring may involve telephone lines, computer network cables, security systems, intercoms/music systems, TV cables and other things. Why call a half-dozen different companies to do the wiring when you can have J & S Commercial Electric do it all?

Proper workmanship is especially critical on computer cabling. If wires, especially fiber optics, are installed incorrectly, they can rob your network of the speed your employees need to get their work done quickly. The line must be tested to verify its speed – J & S tests every line with the PentaScanner, which shows what speed of data transfer the line allows. J & S employees are certified in Pass and Seymoour and Panduit-Telcom, and for fiber optics they are certified in 3M and Valdo, with training in Seicor.

Let J & S take care of wiring and lighting inside and outside. Their boom truck can reach up to four stories for work on building lighting, parking lot lights and lighted signs.

If your installation involves automation control, J & S's Larry Martin has years of experience and training in a huge variety of automation systems. He can help you with anything from repairs and additions to complete design and implementation for systems of any size. Larry also does calibration and certification testing to Instrument Society of America (ISA) specifications.

While much of their experience is in commercial/industrial and in oilfield work, J & S is also looking to step into residential work. Their technicians bring the same experience and training to home wiring, security lighting and security systems, telephone wiring and other needs.

With the world becoming more and more wired, it's nice to know that some things are still simple. Call J & S when you need it wired for new construction, remodeling or just a change or repair.

J & S Electric services all types of electrical and wiring for residential and commercial clients. The phone number is 563-2209.

Frank Dedon (left) and Bill Frederickson of J & S Electric are ready to run just about any kind of wire for commercial, industrial and residential applications. Call J & S at 563-2209.

Call (from left, standing) Charles Jeffus, Rhonda Murphree, Forrest A. Wester, (seated) Phil Eager, Bhupen K. Agrawal or Joe B. Fortner for help with your retirement planning.

How much will you really need for retirement?

You may have heard the rule of thumb of retirement planning—that you will need 80 percent of your present annual income to maintain your current living standards in retirement. Though that is a good goal, every situation is different and you may need to save more or less than 80 percent.

Look into what kinds of activities you plan on doing and what some of your expenses will be. Here are some other factors you should consider:

Do you plan to travel? If you plan to travel a lot, you should save more money for these getaways. Also, if you have children and grandchildren who live far away, you may want to allocate some money for traveling to visit them.

Do you plan on having a part-time job? If you do, you may not need to save as much because your income will be supplemented by your paychecks. If both you and your spouse plan on working part-time, you may want to factor that extra income into your savings goal.

Are your mortgage loans, car payments and other loans paid off? If so, you may be spending less on everyday household expenses and bills. If your cars and home are paid off, you may have more retirement funds to spend.

Do you contribute to your company's 401(k) retirement plan? Because companies often make matching contributions to what you save in your 401 (k), you have the opportunity to save more than if you invested in other retirement savings plans that don't offer as much.

Will your children be in school/college when you retire? If they will, you may need more money for retirement. And if your kids still live at home, that will add to your expenses.

Are your parents physically and financially healthy? You may have nursing home expenses or home health care expenses if your parents become ill. Also, your parents may end up living with you or you may end up helping them out financially.

Will you have a company-sponsored health care plan after you retire? If your retirement package does not include health insurance, you should factor in the extra expense in figuring how much you need for retirement.

Are you planning to retire early? For early retirement to become a reality, you must plan for it now. Your planning should account for reduced social security benefits if you retire before you become eligible for full or partial social security payments in addition to just the added extra years you may spend not working for a paycheck.

And don't forget one of the most important considerations: longevity. People are living longer and, consequently, will need to save more. To help ensure your retirement funds will last as long as you do, work with your financial consultant to develop an investing program that is tailored to your individual lifestyle.

A.G. Edwards & Sons, Inc. is a full service brokerage firm located at 508 West Wall, Suite 725 (in the Empire Plaza Building). For more information, call 684-7335 or 1-800-460-7335. Office hours: Monday-Friday 8-5 or by appointment.

Let Allstar paint that school car

The most important thing about a school car is that it runs, right? Maybe yours sounds good but looks bad. It sure would be nice for it to look good, especially if you could improve its appearance without spending a lot of money.

That's where Allstar Refinishing comes in. Paint jobs there start at $199.95 for the most basic type. Other, more advanced painting is available as well.

Allstar can paint your vehicle at such a low price because that's all they do. Owner Allen Frasier explains it this way. "Just as a major fast food chain took an ordinary hamburger and turned it into a daily repetition, we at Allstar Refinishing and Collision Centers, Inc., take a large number of automobiles and paint them quickly and effectively in an assembly line." In other words, Allstar Refinishing Center specializes in painting cars right and quickly. Most work is done in about three days.

A typical Allstar paint job includes washing and wetsanding the vehicle, masking it thoroughly, then applying primer, sealer and the appropriate top coat such as urethane, acrylic or synthetic. The finishing coat helps protect the vehicle from the ravages of the hot West Texas sun and other corrosion sources.

Your school car will emerge shimmering and sparkling—a look it may not have had since it left the factory. Anyone would be proud to be seen at school or anywhere in a vehicle that looks this good.

If you'd like to add striping, graphics or some other design to your vehicle, Allstar can do the job. They also handle large vehicles such as delivery trucks and RVs.

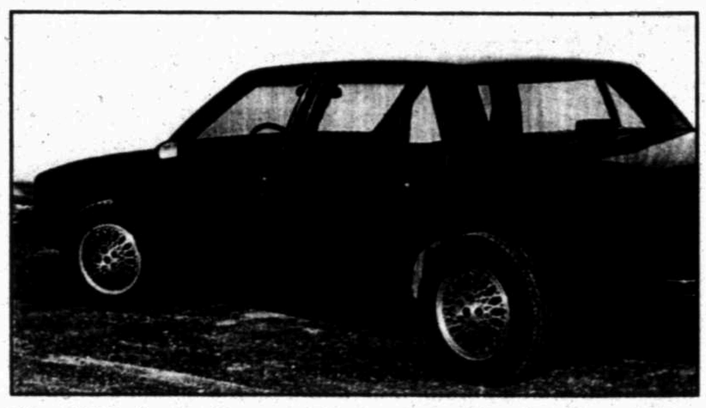

Whether your car will be attending school here in town or a college down the road, don't let any family member be embarrassed about it. Call Allen and let Allstar Refinishing Center make it look like a million bucks without costing you a fortune in the process.

Allstar Refinishing Center is located at 2800 W. Francis, west of Cotton Flat Road. They offer fast, affordable vehicle painting on cars and trucks. The phone number is 682-9722.

Allstar Collision Center is located at 2600 W. Elizabeth. The phone number is 683-2761.

This Oldsmobile is primed and ready for its new coat of paint.

Wow! This looks like new! Red ...or a school color would be perfect for your school vehicle this fall.

Energi's new web site will boost client convenience

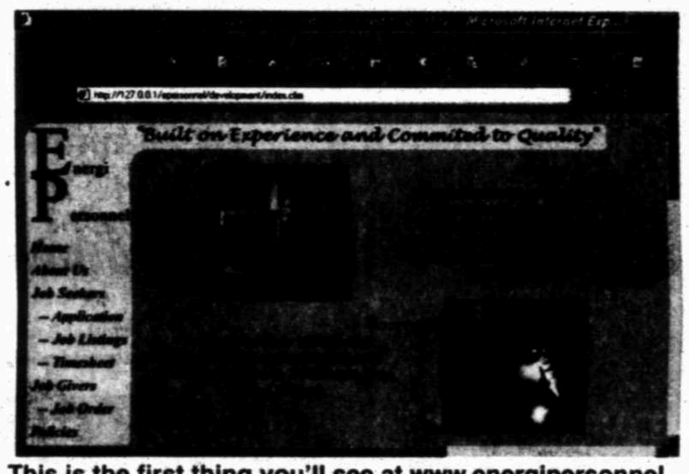

It's seven p.m. and you just remembered you need some extra staff for a project next week. Must you wait until tomorrow to place the order, or can you take care of it tonight?

If you use Energi Personnel, you can get online and place that order on their web site any time 24-7. The address is www.energipersonnel.com. After you place the order, you will receive an email confirmation and an Energi representative will contact you to discuss any further issues.

Owner Judi Hansler is excited to bring clients this convenience. "As far as we can tell, we're the only personnel company offering this type of service online," she states, adding, "We want to be leaders in offering clients what they need."

In addition to allowing orders any time, placing an order online will allow you to enter your job order just like you want. If you have placed your first online job order, the site will automatically show your company information so next time all you have to do is fill in the current order.

The web site will also add convenience for Energi employees. They can use it to update applications or to check and apply for current job listings and download time sheets. Energi's policies and procedures will also be posted so employees can double check vacation eligibility or time sheet and pay schedules.

This is the first thing you'll see at www.energipersonnel.com, Energi's new, very convenient web page. You can still pick up the phone and talk to a friendly voice, too.

Corporate clients may want to review policies and procedures as well as descriptions for such services as temp-to-hire. Soon, clients will be able to receive, by email, informative tidbits highlighting Energi as well as the staffing industry.

New clients who place an online order will receive a visit from an Energi representative—just like new clients always have. "This is an additional means of communicating—not a replacement for our personal service," Judi stresses.

Energi will continue to analyze both the job skills needed and the clients' corporate "personality" to ensure a proper match of company and personnel. "We continue to focus on saving clients' time and effort in the personnel realm," Judi assures. She considers her company to be a "matchmaker" between client and employee.

In addition to job skill and drug testing, Energi also works with employers who want to direct-hire. They can send you just the one or two best resumes, saving you the time-consuming task of placing an ad, wading through piles of resumes, interviewing and background checking.

In a further expansion of services, Energi also offers very reasonable and professional resumes. A new division—GeeWiliker/Energi now does web page design as well (Energi's page is an example of their work).

Energi Personnel is a full service staffing company with offices in Midland and Odessa. The Midland address is 4400 North Big Spring, Suite 202. The phone number is 683-7277. The Odessa address is 835 Tower Drive, Suite 16, phone 337-0440. Their web address is www.energipersonnel.com.

Congress hits political wall on visas, naturalization

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Despite support from both parties, major high-tech visa legislation has hit a wall in Congress: Democrats' d and Hispanics who say they hold a trump card in November's elections.

There's widespread support in Congress for issuing more H-1B visas, which let college-educated foreigners work up to six years in the United States. But the future of the visa bill, once considered a certainty to become law this year, is doubtful now that Congress has only a month to complete its work when lawmakers return after Labor Day from their party conventions.

Republicans blame the legislation's fate on Democrats' advocacy of temporarily relaxed citizenship rules for some Hispanics. Democrats argue it's only fair to help people at both ends of the economic spectrum.

Rep. David Dreier, R-Calif., who joined Rep. Zoe Lofgren, D-Calif., on one of the H-1B bills, said it was unfortunate that the issue "has been overtaken by transparent election-year politics which place short-term partisan goals over important national economic needs."

House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., said Republicans, as the majority party, can move the H-1B bill in any form they want. He said he's disappointed that "Republicans are beginning to play the blame game over who lost H-1B."

Immigration issues don't have to be part of the H-1B measure, but the GOP leadership must not ignore them, Lofgren said. "The Latino community is very focused on this," she said.

Under current law, 115,000 H-1B visas were available in the current fiscal year ending Sept. 30. The number drops to 107,500 in 2001 and to 65,000 the following year. The National Association of Manufacturers says the limit for this year was reached in March, which left U.S. companies unable to fill crucial jobs, "threatening U.S. performance in the global economy."

A Senate bill offered by Sens. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and Spencer Abraham, R-Mich., would raise the ceiling to 195,000 a year for three years and direct visa fee money to training U.S. workers. Rep. Lamar Smith, R-Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee's immigration panel, would remove all caps for three years. The Dreier-Lofgren bill would cap visas at 200,000 through fiscal 2003 and fund training programs.

House Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas, said the House can pass an H-1B bill this year if "we keep extraneous issues out of it."

But the White House, backed by Democrats, said this spring it wants immigration legislation this year to include more than H-1B. Currently, illegal aliens must prove they have lived in the United States since 1972 to apply for permanent residence. They want that changed to 1986.

The White House also wants to extend to Salvadorans, Guatemalans, Hondurans and Haitians a 1997 law that offered permanent residence to Cubans and Nicaraguans who were escaping strife in their homelands.

Smith said those steps would result in amnesty for up to 2 million illegal aliens.

"Amnesty is a catalyst for illegal entries," Smith said. "A little bit goes a long way toward encouraging people to enter illegally and wait for the next amnesty."

But Lofgren, whose San Jose district has both a significant high-tech presence and a significant Hispanic population, said taking up H-1B without considering the other issues in some form "will mean thousands of honorable persons in the United States living lives in limbo."

On the Senate side, Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., and Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., are working on the possibility of raising the immigration issues as amendments to an education bill.

Hispanic groups are lobbying hard for the more comprehensive bill and have made clear the outcome could affect votes in November.

"Latinos are a very critical voting bloc," said Cecilia Munoz of the National Council of La Raza, a Hispanic activist group. "Both parties need to stand up to the plate and show they are interested in our issues."

Scientists: Putting brain to use can slow deterioration

WASHINGTON (AP) — The brain is like a muscle: Use it or lose it.

That's the growing conclusion of research that shows fogged memory and slowed wit are not inevitable consequences of getting old, and there are steps people can take to protect their brains.

Mental exercise seems crucial. Benefits start when parents read to tots and depend heavily on education, but scientists say it's never too late to start jogging the gray matter.

People have to get physical, too. Bad memory is linked to heart disease, diabetes and a high-fat diet, all risks people can counter by living healthier lives.

In fact, provocative new research suggests these brain-protective steps, mental and physical, may be strong enough even to help influence who gets Alzheimer's disease.

"There are some things that, if you know you have a family history (of Alzheimer's) and you're just 20 to 30 years old, you can start doing to increase your protective factors," said Dr. Amir Soas of Case Western Reserve University Medical School in Cleveland.

It's also good advice for the average baby boomer hoping to stay sharp, or the mom priming her child for a lifelong healthy brain.

Most important: "Read, read, read," Soas said. Do crossword puzzles. Pull out the chessboard or Scrabble. Learn a foreign language or a new hobby. "Anything that stimulates the brain to think," he said.

And cut back on TV, Soas insists. "When you watch television, your brain goes into neutral," he said. So much so that Case Western plans to study whether people who contract Alzheimer's watched more TV throughout life than healthy seniors.

The stereotype of the forgetful grandma has its roots in now-outdated dogma. Just a few years ago, scientists believed the brain was wired forever before age 5, and that over the ensuing decades a person irrevocably lost neurons and crucial brain circuitry until eventually mental decline became noticeable.

Not quite. Scientists now know the brain continually rewires and adapts itself, even in old age; large brain-cell growth continues into the teen years; and even the elderly can grow at least some new neurons.

So cognitive decline doesn't have to be inevitable. Indeed, mental tests given for 10 years to almost 6,000 older people found 70 percent maintained brain power as they aged, lead researcher Mary Haan of the University of Michigan told an international Alzheimer's meeting this month.

What keeps brains healthy? Clues come from Alzheimer's research.

Case Western scientists studied 550 people and found those less mentally and physically active in middle age were three times more likely to get Alzheimer's as they grayed. Particularly protective: increasing intellectual activity during adulthood.

Numerous studies show people with less education have higher risks of Alzheimer's than the better-educated. Haan found less than a ninth-grade education a key threshold; other studies suggest a difference even between holders of bachelor's and master's degrees.

It's not just formal education. Reading habits between ages 6 and 18 appear crucial predictors of cognitive function decades later, said Dr. David Bennett of Chicago's Rush University. The theory: Challenge the brain early to build up more "cognitive reserve" to counter brain-damaging disease later. Bennett is preparing to test that by counting neurons in autopsied brains.

And remember that brain-muscle analogy? Brain scans show mental "exercising," such as London cabbies do while navigating without a map or pianists do when practicing, makes spots important for those intellectual challenges grow while less-used regions shrink.

But physical health is important, too. A healthy brain needs lots of oxygen pumped through healthy arteries. Haan studied people who have a gene called ApoE4, which significantly increases the risk of Alzheimer's. Brain function of gene carriers declined four times faster with age if they also had hardened arteries or diabetes. High-fat diets increased the risk seven times, Case Western researchers found.

That means exercising and eating right — the very things that prevent heart disease and diabetes — helps the brain, too. And Haan said it spotlights the next research frontier: Testing whether cholesterol and blood pressure treatments might prevent dementia.

Two killed in three-day hostage standoff in Florida

By Vickie Chachere
Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — A three-day standoff inside a suburban home ended Monday with the death of a hostage and the suicide of the murder suspect who began the ordeal, police said.

Authorities said the captor, Jamie Dean Petron, 41, killed himself with a shot to the chest and was found dead in the master bedroom. The hostage, Andrea Hall, 40, had been dead for several hours.

Hall and four other people were taken hostage Saturday, when Petron burst in through the home's garage after shooting and wounding a sheriff's deputy. He apparently did not know the family.

Two children were released Sunday, and two others, including a 9-month-old baby, were freed Monday by police, shaken but unharmed.

"This was a very scary and intense situation," Orange County Sheriff Kevin Beary said.

A SWAT team first entered the house around noon and discovered Hall's body in the kitchen, said Sheriff's Capt. Michael Foreman. The SWAT team quietly secured the house for three hours while Petron barricaded himself in the master bedroom, Foreman said.

Petron eventually shot himself in the chest and was found dead at 3:15 p.m., police said. When Petron killed himself, hostage Althea Mills, 16, was hiding in the bedroom's walk-in closet, holding the 9-month-old baby and talking with police on the phone, Foreman said.

Petron, suspected in Friday's shooting death of a Pompano Beach convenience store clerk, allegedly fled to the house Saturday after shooting a sheriff's deputy in the leg as the deputy tried to arrest him.

The home, in the Meadow Woods subdivision south of Orlando, belongs to Hall's sister, Thelma Mills, who escaped shortly after the standoff began. Mills' son, Norman West, 28, was shot but escaped Saturday, and he was in good condition Monday.

About 20 homes in the subdivision were evacuated during the crisis. Nearly 100 federal, state and local law enforcement officers were stationed around the home, which is located less than 10 miles east of Disney World.

Petron spoke with negotiators, but police had said they were concerned because of his broken promises and lack of demands. Police negotiators tried blaring sirens to keep him awake Monday and intermittently cut the power to the home.

After two children, Nicholas Hall, 8, and his 11-month-old sister, Nicolette, were released Sunday, Petron had said he would free the remaining hostages after the tape of a statement he made was aired on television. But Hall, Althea and 9-month-old Daniquea Akoon remained in the house until Monday.

On the tape, Petron said he didn't mean to hurt anyone.

"All I can say is deep in my heart I am really apologetic. Don't think I'm the devil. I'm not the devil," he said.

After Petron stopped answering the phone early Monday, police used a robot with a built-in speaker and microphone to try to communicate with him.

Petron became agitated and opened fire on the robot but missed, Orange County sheriff's spokesman Jim Solomons said. Solomons said the robot recorded some of the hostages crying and one of the hostages screaming, "He's going to kill me."

Records show Petron was sentenced to 20 years in prison in 1986 for attempted first-degree murder, forgery and battery on a law enforcement officer. He was released from prison in 1995.

Miller accepts appointment to Coverdell's Senate seat

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia's Democratic former governor Zell Miller was appointed Monday to the late Republican Paul Coverdell's Senate seat and said he will run for the remaining four years of the term in November.

Gov. Roy Barnes, a Democrat, officially announced the appointment Monday evening, saying Miller, 68, was the best-qualified person from either party.

"The one who didn't want it was the one who had to take it," he said. "It used to take seniority to get things done in the United States Senate. Now it takes stature. And Zell Miller has the stature it takes to get things done."

The appointment of Miller increases the number of Democrats in the Senate to 46. There are 54 Republicans.

Coverdell, 61, died of a stroke last week. In 1998, he became the first Georgia Republican since Reconstruction to be re-elected to the U.S. Senate.

"I accept this mission with a heavy heart and a profound sense of duty," Miller said. "The state we love lost one if its finest citizens."

Miller, 68, left office as one of the most popular governors in Georgia history. His approval rating soared above 85 percent, thanks mostly to his lottery-funded program that gave college scholarships to any high school students with a "B" average or better.

Miller praised Coverdell for his ability to build consensus between the two parties and said he would do the same when he gets to Washington.

On Nov. 7, any candidate who pays the $4,101 qualifying fee can take part in a nonpartisan election for the remaining four years of the term. If no candidate gets more than half the vote, the top two will meet in a runoff.

Miller's popularity with voters is expected to scare off any other serious Democratic candidates.

"I'm excited," Georgia Democratic Sen. Max Cleland said. "Georgians are fortunate to have someone of the quality and caliber of Zell Miller to step in. I can't wait to help Gov. Miller gain a foot hold up here."

Republican officials were attempting to unite behind one candidate, probably one of Georgia's eight Republican congressmen.

"I think (Miller's appointment) probably sends the strongest signal I know that we need to be focused and united behind a candidate in this race," state Republican Party Chairman Chuck Clay said.

Miller was elected lieutenant governor — the No. 2 office in the state — in 1974 and served for 16 years. He was elected governor in 1990 — beating Andrew Young and Barnes, among others, in the Democratic primary.

As promised, Miller gave Georgians a chance to vote on a state lottery, which passed. The lottery funds several popular education programs, including HOPE Scholarships, a plan copied by several other governors and President Clinton, a longtime friend of Miller.

Miller campaigned for Clinton in 1992 and pushed up the Georgia presidential primary in 1992 to help his fellow Democratic governor. Miller also introduced Clinton to campaign strategist James Carville.

The Georgia Constitution prevented Miller from running for a third term in 1998. Some Democrats suggested he run against Coverdell for Senate, but Miller instead retired and began teaching college courses.

"I think he'll be an excellent candidate and an excellent senator," said state Rep. Larry Walker, the House Democratic leader. "He'll be in the Sam Nunn, Richard Russell mold."

Dallas Cowboys fullback Robert Thomas takes a group of television photographers on a search for his lost golf ball while playing in the Cowboys Classic Monday at Wichita Falls Country Club. A group of Cowboys players, coaches and office personnel took a break from training camp to participate in the tournament.

Thomas thrives after change

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

WICHITA FALLS — This time last year, Robert Thomas was hoping his gung-ho attitude on special teams and experience playing linebacker in NFL Europe would help him make the Dallas Cowboys.

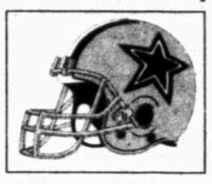

It worked. Thomas secured a job late in camp and became a starter by midseason ... at fullback.

Huh?

Thomas was switched from LB to FB in the final days of training camp because Dallas had a glut of linebackers and not enough fullbacks. The move had been in the works for a while, except nobody informed him.

"We had talked about it really all the way back to the draft," said coach Dave Campo, who was defensive coordinator last season. "But with him being in NFL Europe as a linebacker, we didn't think it would be prudent to call him and say, 'Look, you're playing linebacker over there, but you're going to be a fullback for us.' So we gave him a couple of weeks at linebacker, saw what we had at fullback, then made the move."

Dallas' lack of fullback depth was a big problem when Daryl Johnston suffered what proved to be a career-ending injury in the opener. Thomas wasn't ready to take over, so the Cowboys signed veteran Tim Lester and made him the starter.

Thomas, though, progressed quickly and by late October the job was his.

He started the final eight games, including the playoffs and did an admirable job. Slamming his stocky 6-foot-1, 252-pound body into the line, Thomas opened enough holes for Emmitt Smith to gain 1,397 yards, his most in four years.

The Cowboys were impressed enough not to seek a replacement in the offseason — no free agents, no draft picks.

"I feel real comfortable," Thomas said. "I don't have to worry about if they're going to send me back to defense or leave me here. I'm just focusing on what I need to get at — the little things — like learning to block better, run better, catch better."

TROUBLE FOR TEXAS

Trouble for Texas

Broken thumb puts Pudge out for rest of year

Associated Press

ARLINGTON, — The Texas Rangers lost star catcher Ivan Rodriguez for the rest of the season because of a broken right thumb, then blew a three-run lead in the ninth inning and fell in the 12th, 6-5 to the Anaheim Angels on Monday night.

On a frustrating night for the Rangers, they thought they had won in the 10th on a balk. But with Texas already celebrating, the call was reversed.

Rodriguez, the reigning AL MVP, was injured in the first inning when his thumb hit Mo Vaughn's bat on a swinging third strike as he threw to second base on Kevin Stocker's steal attempt. Stocker was called out by home plate umpire Gerry Davis on batter's interference.

"That's what happens when the team isn't going good," Rodriguez said. "What can I do? But I have a strong mind and I'll be ready for spring training."

Rodriguez said Vaughn did nothing wrong, and added the Angels first baseman left a message in the Rangers clubhouse expressing his sorrow.

"I don't think it was on purpose," Rodriguez said. "Mo is a very clean player."

Rodriguez, 28, played earlier this month in his ninth straight All-Star game. He has won eight consecutive Gold Glove awards, an AL record.

The Rangers' career hits leader was batting .347 with 27 home runs and 83 RBIs. Rodriguez will have surgery Tuesday.

Down 5-2, the Angels scored three times in the ninth, giving John Wetteland his sixth blown save in 31 chances. Bengie Molina hit an RBI double with two outs and Scott Spiezio followed with a home run.

Tim Salmon had three hits for Anaheim, including an RBI single in the 12th. He also homered.

Adam Kennedy led off the Angels 12th with a single off Tim Crabtree (1-6) and stole second. Kevin Stocker walked and one out later, Salmon singled.

Shigetoshi Hasegawa (7-2) pitched three scoreless innings for the win. Troy Percival pitched the 12th for his 23rd save.

In the 10th, the Rangers put runners on second and third with one out. With a 1-1 count on Gabe Kapler, plate umpire Gerry Davis called a balk and motioned for pinch-runner Scarborough Green to come home.

But the Angels argued and Davis, after huddling with his umpire crew, changed the call and kept the runners at second and third. Kapler fouled out and, after an intentional walk to Mike Lamb, Royce Clayton flied out.

Angels left fielder Darin Erstad tied a major league record for putouts by an outfielder with 12. He was the 13th to do it.

Rafael Palmeiro hit his 386th home run, moving past Dwight Evans into 37th place on the career list, and Kapler and David Segui also connected for Texas.

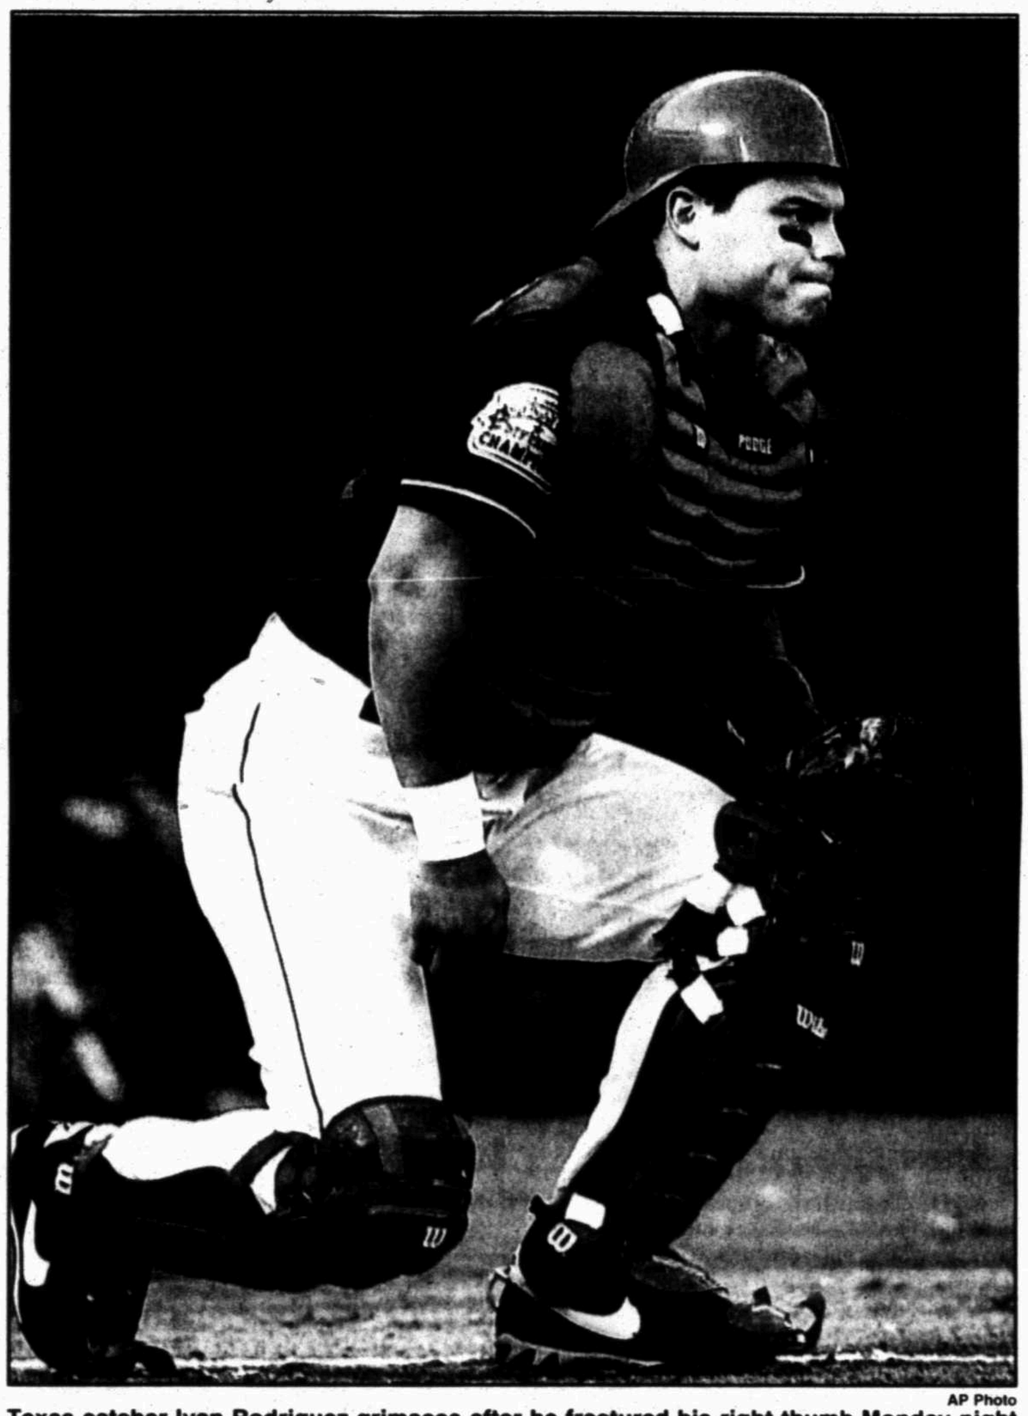

Kapler's solo homer in the fourth off Kent Bottenfield snapped a 2-2 tie. Texas made it 5-2 in the sixth on Segui's solo homer and Luis Alicea's RBI single.

Palmeiro hit a two-run homer in the first. His 25th home run barely cleared the right-field wall, just out of the reach of a leaping Salmon.

Salmon's 19th homer leading off the fourth tied it at 2.

Erstad led off the game with a triple and scored on Stocker's single.

Notes: Erstad had a triple and a double, the 12th time he's had two or more hits in his last 18 games. ... Salmon has 23 career homers against Texas, 10 at The Ballpark in Arlington. ... Bill Haselman came in to catch for Rodriguez. When Haselman was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the 10th, Texas was forced to use reserve INF Scott Sheldon as a catcher.

Rebs plan trip to fill schedule

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Midland Lee has added a national high school power and almost 1,400 miles to its 2000 football schedule.

West Monroe, La., and Lee have agreed to play a two-year series with Lee traveling to Monroe on Sept. 22 of this football season.

The game now gives Lee a complete 10-game schedule. Lee still has an open date on Sept. 15, the week before hitting the road for the rare out-of-state game. It will be the first out-of-state game ever for the Rebels unless you count a couple of scrimmages played on New Mexico soil.

It is also the latest addition of a game to a Rebel schedule, coming in the latter part of July.

"We had pretty well given up on getting a tenth game," Lee coach John Parchman said Monday. "We had explored just about all the options we had, including looking at a couple of possibilities in Mexico. But that just didn't pan out for us."

Then West Monroe, which also carries the Rebel nickname, came calling.

"Actually, they (Monroe) found out that we needed a game where they had an open date also," Parchman said. "They called us and we just worked it out. We will go to Monroe on Sept. 22 (a Friday night game) and they will come to Midland next year.

"This turned out to be a real blessing for us. We were facing the possibility of have to go three whole weeks without playing a game and that's really bad for kids.

"Kids play football to play games and not sit for three weeks," Parchman said. "Still, when Monroe called, I was thinking, 'Yeah, we need a game, but golly, that's a long, long way from Midland.'

"What really sold me on the idea is the schedule for next year. We would open with Stephenville on the road, then play Longview on the road, have two open dates and travel to El Paso. That would mean it would be October before we ever had a home game. That's sure not attractive."

Monroe, some 60 miles east of Shreveport, is close to 700 miles from Midland. Parchman said that the team will bus to the Dallas area on a Thursday night and then drive from there into Monroe on game day. Of course, they will bus

Fleming tops list of Women's City qualifiers

Staff Report

A new threat for the Women's City Golf Championship emerged Monday at Midland Country Club.

Andra Fleming, new to the Midland golf scene, won the qualifying round at MCC with a 75 — a full four strokes over Jo Dickson and Shelly Winchell, both at 79.

Lisa Beck didn't have to play in the qualifying round, a perk for being the defending champion of the annual tournament.

Fleming's 75 places her as one of the major contenders in the three-day match play event that begins today at Hogan Park at 8:48 a.m. The semifinals will be held at Green Tree Country Club on Wednesday and the finals will be staged at Ranchland Hills Country Club on Thursday.

Fleming played on Andrews' state championship team in 1992 and again with Andrews' state runnerup team in 1993. She then played Division I college golf at the University of Texas-El Paso.

This is Fleming's first entry into the City field. She will meet Trina Albright (83 in the qualifying round), who has not won a City title, but is usually in the championship flight.

Defending champ Beck will play Becky Hakes (84) today. Beck has won three City titles. Hakes also has several appearances in the championship flight, but is seeking her first title.

Winchell and Dickson will square off in another championship flight match today. Winchell was a two-time Region I qualifier at Midland High and will play at Midland College this fall. Dickson is also a three-time winner of the City title and is always a threat to make a title run.

The final championship flight match will pit

Woods can make even more history at PGA Championship

By Doug Ferguson
AP Golf Writer

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland — Only four players had won the career Grand Slam until Tiger Woods completed the cycle with an unprecedented romp around the Old Course to win the British Open. Next up is a chance to join some really exclusive company.

Ben Hogan was the only player who won three major championships in one year, in 1953. That's what awaits Woods next month, when he makes his first visit to Valhalla Golf Club for the PGA Championship.

"I've always said you would like to have your game peak at four different times a year," Woods said. "That's something you always hope for and plan for. To actually have it happen is a different story. Hopefully, my game will be ready for the PGA."

Everyone else better hope he gets lost on his way to Kentucky.

Winning major championships is not an issue with Woods. Lately, the only drama is what kind of record will fall.

In the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach, he became the first player to finish in double digits below par (12 under), broke a 138-year-old record with his 15-stroke victory and tied the U.S. Open scoring record at 282.

A month later, Woods arrived at the home of golf and made even more history.

He won the British Open with a 19-under 269, a record score at St. Andrews and the lowest score in relation to par ever in a major champion. His eight-stroke victory over Ernie Els and Thomas Bjorn was the widest in 87 years.

Two majors — one the toughest test in golf, the other the oldest. Woods won them by a combined 23 strokes, playing 31 strokes below par.

"In one way, it is incredible to watch a guy play so much better than the rest of the world," Els said, a runner-up in all three majors this year. "In another way, it's tough to sit down here and talk about him every time.

"I might have to get used to it, but I guess that's the way it goes."

That's the way it's gone for just about everybody

Astros rough up Graves for third straight victory

Associated Press

■ NL Roundup

CINCINNATI — A rare off-night by All-Star closer Danny Graves helped the Houston Astros get something even rarer — a third straight win.

The Astros scored three runs in the final two innings off Graves, rallying for a 7-5, 10-inning victory over the Cincinnati Reds on Monday night that left them smiling and exchanging fist bumps in the clubhouse.

For the first time all season, the worst team in the majors had a real winning streak.

"That was the biggest win of the year for us," manager Larry Dierker said. "Believe it or not, it's the first time we've won three in a row all year."

A night that started with another long ovation for Cincinnati's Barry Larkin ended with boos and finally silence from the crowd of 28,741. The Reds captain got another half-minute ovation before his first at-bat, marking the end of his topsy-turvy week.

Larkin rejected a trade to the Mets on Sunday and then got a three-year, $27 million extension from owner Carl Lindner. Two banners said, "Thank You Uncle Carl."

As the ovation grew in the first inning, Larkin backed out of the box and twice waved toward the stands.

"It was nice again," Larkin said.

Things were looking real nice for the Reds after Ken Griffey Jr.'s bases-loaded triple put them ahead 5-2 in the fifth. But the Astros did something they've rarely done all season — they held their ground and rallied late.

Matt Mieske's two-run pinch-hit single cut it to 5-4 in the sixth, and Lance Berkman's sacrifice fly off Graves (9-2) tied it in the ninth.

Two-out RBI singles by Glen Barker and Bill Spiers off Graves in the 10th gave the Astros a rare close win. Houston is 6-25 in games decided by one or two runs this season.

Their record for stringing wins together is even worse.

"You never would have guessed that we wouldn't win three in a row until now," Barker said. "This is a big thing right now."

It was a deflating loss for the Reds, who slipped to 5 1/2 behind idle St. Louis in the NL Central. Graves has been nearly automatic this season, blowing only one save chance until Monday night.

"This was definitely a tough one," Graves said. "In this gan , those things are going to happen. In this role, you've got to accept failure. Tonight was one of those games where I'm just going to have to take it."

Graves gave up six hits, one walk and three runs in two innings, pushing his earned run average from 1.95 to 2.32.

"He's done a tremendous job all year," manager Jack McKeon said. "He just had an off-night."

The Astros' bullpen was on. After pulling ahead 5-2 on Griffey's bases-loaded triple in the fifth, the Reds managed just one base runner the rest of the way.

Octavio Dotel (2-5), the fifth Astros pitcher, got the victory by striking out four of the six batters he faced in two hitless innings.

Craig Biggio had a solo homer, a double and a single off Reds starter Pete Harnisch. Richard Hidalgo also hit a solo homer, his 29th, in the fourth inning as Houston went up 2-0.

Notes: Astros reliever Wayne Franklin made his major league debut in the seventh, facing Griffey with the bases empty. Franklin covered first for the putout on Griffey's grounder to the right side.

Dodgers 4, Rockies 1

DENVER — Kevin Brown pitched eight innings of three-hit ball and Gary Sheffield hit his major league-leading 34th home run Monday night as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Colorado Rockies.

Brown (10-3), who limited the Rockies to one hit in eight innings last Wednesday, struck out five and walked one. He is 6-2 in his last 10 starts.

Sheffield went 3-for-3 with a homer, triple and double, and drove in three runs.

Needing a single to become the first Dodgers player to hit for the cycle since Wes Parker in 1970, Sheffield was hit by a pitch in the seventh inning and walked in the ninth.

Clemens wins 5th straight start

■ AL Roundup

BALTIMORE — Roger Clemens won his fifth straight start as the New York Yankees ruined an impressive major league debut by Baltimore Orioles left-hander John Parrish with a 4-3 victory Monday night.

Glenallen Hill homered in his initial at-bat with the Yankees, who have won seven of 10.

Clemens (9-6) gave up three runs, six hits and a season-high tying five walks in six innings with six strikeouts.

Mike Stanton retired five straight batters and Mariano Rivera got four outs for his 23rd save in 26 chances.

Baltimore went 1-for-14 with runners in scoring position.

Parrish, a 22-year-old who never pitched above the Double-A level before this year, struck out nine, including Jorge Posada three times, and allowed only three earned runs, four hits and two walks in seven innings.

Twins 4, Red Sox 2

BOSTON — Eric Milton allowed four hits in eight shutout innings as Minnesota beat Boston for the first time in eight games this season.

Boston lost for just for the fourth time in 12 games since the All-Star break.

Before the game, Red Sox center fielder Carl Everett unexpectedly dropped his appeal of a 10-game suspension for bumping plate umpire Ronald Kulpa twice during a July 15 game.

Ron Coomer hit a two-run homer for Minnesota, which won for the fourth time in five games.

Milton (9-6), who gave up seven runs in three innings during a 14-4 loss to the Red Sox on July 4, allowed just one runner to reach second. He walked one and struck out eight for his first win in five July starts.

Bob Wells got one out in the ninth before allowing Nomar Garciaparra's double. Eddie Guardado relieved and got another out before Israel Alcantara hit his second career homer. Guardado then struck out Sean Berry to end the game.

Devil Rays 4, Tigers 2

DETROIT — Greg Vaughn had three hits, including a two-run single for Tampa Bay, which won for only the third time in 10 games.

Albie Lopez (7-7) improved to 4-0 career against Detroit, allowing two runs on five hits in seven innings.

Roberto Hernandez pitched the ninth for his 16th save.

Hideo Nomo (3-10) has lost three straight decisions and seven of eight. He gave up eight hits and five walks in 6 1-3 innings.

Juan Encarnacion led off the Tigers' fourth with a triple and scored on Bobby Higginson's grounder. Hal Morris hit a two-out single and came around when Brad Ausmus tripled.

White Sox 7, Royals 6

CHICAGO — Magglio Ordonez hit a go-ahead three-run home run and Carlos Lee drove in three runs for Chicago.

Ordonez hit his 24th homer off Mac Suzuki (5-5) with two outs in the seventh, while Lee had a two-run homer in the second and an RBI single in the sixth.

Johnny Damon had three hits and three RBIs and rookie Mark Quinn had a career-high four hits for the Royals, who dropped their third straight.

Kelly Wunsch (4-3) picked up the win with two-thirds of an inning in relief. Keith Foulke pitched two perfect innings for his 18th save in 20 opportunities.

RockHounds pound Drillers, salvage split on long road trip

Staff Report

TULSA, Okla. — Just like they had done in the previous two series against El Paso and Round Rock, the Midland RockHounds bounced back after a series-opening loss to earn a split against the Tulsa Drillers on Monday.

And the 'Hounds earned their split Monday by busting out with 15 hits and pummeling Tulsa, 13-3. Midland returns home to Christensen Stadium tonight after a 6-6 road trip and will host Texas League West leading El Paso at 7:15. The RockHounds trail the Diablos by five games in the standings and will host El Paso in eight out of the next 12 games.

On Monday, the 'Hounds played outstanding errorless baseball as both the offense and defense came to play.

Midland started things off in the first as Todd Mensik hit a two-run single off of Tulsa starter Leiby Guzman (6-8) down the right-field line to give the 'Hounds a 2-0 lead. Guzman wasn't around to watch the rest of carnage as he exited after the first inning because of strained groin.

The RockHounds got all the runs they would need in the second inning as Justin Bowles blasted his 10th homer, Jason Hart scored Jay Pecci with a sacrifice fly and Cody McKay doubled in Greg Martinez for a 5-0 advantage.

With Midland holding a 6-0 lead, the Drillers finally responded with two runs in the bottom of the fifth. Tulsa seemed to have the momentum at that point, until the RockHounds exploded for five runs in the top of the sixth as Hart led off the inning with a monstrous home run over the left field wall.

Midland added two more runs in the seventh, while Tulsa added a run in the eighth to close out the scoring.

Offensively, it was a big night for several 'Hounds as every batter in the lineup except for pinch hitter Brian Luderer scored or drove in a run. Oscar Salazar had a huge night with a 4-for-5 performance that included two runs, two RBIs, two doubles and a triple — his first triple of the year after leading all of minor league baseball in 1999 in triples. Hart also had a big night as he went 2-for-4 with three runs scored, two RBIs and his 25th home run of the year.

Eric Thompson (4-3) got the win on the mound for the RockHounds as he went seven innings and didn't give up a hit until the fourth inning.

Johnson gives up 200

Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Michael Johnson says he's finished with the 200 meters.

The Olympic gold medalist and world record-holder at the distance won't run that race again because of the "silly" trash-talking by Maurice Greene leading up to the 200 final at the U.S. Olympic trials.

"It's a huge relief because I was sick of it (the 200)," Johnson wrote Monday on NBC Olympics.com. "It was something that was a benefit for everyone but me. I didn't want this, but it was something that I felt, in my position, I have to give people the chance to try to beat me."

Johnson's coach, Clyde Hart, confirmed that Johnson is giving up the 200.

Hart said the 200s that Johnson had scheduled in Europe in August and September would have to be 400s — "or we won't run them."

"It was built up too much and just built up in the wrong way," Johnson said of his showdown with Greene. "Everyone was falling all over themselves to try to continue to build it up, and it was just something that I had no interest in being a part of, because it became so negative and not about track anymore.

"It became about who can talk the most trash and who can down the other person best. That's just silly, so I didn't want to have anything to do with it."

Johnson said that even if he had won the 200 at the trials Sunday, he probably wouldn't have defended his Olympic title at Sydney in September.

He didn't finish the race, pulling up with a severe cramp in his left hamstring before reaching the curve. Greene didn't finish either, pulling up with about 80 meters left with a strained left hamstring.

"It (the hype) got out of control because Maurice fed it," Johnson said. "He fed the out-of-control monster that it became because nobody got great soundbites from me. They got me defending myself and twisted and turned it to be trash talk and all that.

"But this was started by Maurice saying last year that I was ducking him and dodging him. Then, it even furthered itself by Maurice saying, 'I'll run against him any time and anywhere,' and then Maurice saying, 'He's not that great, he's not that good. His 200 meters was not that great. I would have broken the 200-meter record on the same track,' then saying, 'The track he ran the 19.32 on was illegal ...'

"And it just went on from there and kept on and kept on."

Johnson said he had nothing to gain from competing in the 200 or against Greene

"I knew from the very beginning that Maurice Greene was not going to be the guy that I would have to beat at the Olympic trials," Johnson said.

Johnson said he is looking forward to the Olympics because, "I think Sydney will be a lot more fun now. Not because there's nobody in the 400 that can run with me. It'll be a lot more fun because I don't have to be in the center of some kind of matchup or showdown that turns silly."

HISTORY: Woods aims for PGA

this year. Aside from two bad holes in the first round of the Masters — a double bogey and triple bogey — Woods might very well be going for the Grand Slam in one year.

He didn't have anything that remotely resembled trouble in the British Open.

The Old Course has 112 pot bunkers, but the only time Woods even glimpsed any of them was when he watched chief challenger David Duval flail away four times to get out of the Road Hole bunker on No. 17 in the final round Sunday.

"I was in a bunker every day," Woods said. "But it was on the practice green."

He made only three bogeys all week, two of them on three-putts. The British Open is regarded as the one major where luck is the best club in the bag, only Woods never needed a fortuitous hop over four rounds.

He knew exactly where he was going — into the history books.

"To win a major championship, it is a different thought process and a different understanding of the game," he said. "Most majors, you're going to have to go out there and understand that par is a wonderful score. It brings out the best in players, guys who can strike the ball the best, keep their emotions in check and make the big putts."

He was all that.

If par is a good score in majors, Woods has been simply great. Including his 4-under 284 at Augusta National, where he finished fifth behind Vijay Singh, Woods is now 35 under in the majors.

"It was a spectacular performance, to say the least," said Duval, whose triple bogey on No. 17 dropped him out of the top 10 in the British Open, and caused him to lose his No. 2 spot in the world ranking to Els.

Woods has been that way for over a year now.

Sunday was his 23rd consecutive round under par. He has six victories in 14 events this year, and 15 out of his last 27 over the last 15 months.

"He is something supernatural," said Tom Watson, who had been the last player to win the British Open and U.S. Open in the same year. "He has raised the bar to a level that only he can jump. Someone is going to have to use some Flubber in the bottom of their shoes to be able to jump over that bar."

Watson is the only player to win the British Open at five courses, none at St. Andrews, the old, gray town where golf has been played for more than 500 years — but never like this.

Only two other champions had won a British Open with four rounds in the 60s — Greg Norman at Royal St. George in 1993, and Nick Price in 1994. The Royal & Ancient Golf Club tried to toughen the Old Course by moving five tee boxes back and making the walls of the bunkers nearly vertical.

Look for a new rule next year that says anyone still in their 20s who already has won the Grand Slam must play with one hand tied behind the back.

Or use the gutta-percha ball.

Of course, Woods did that on the 342-yard ninth hole during a practice round. He still made par.

"What really stinks about it is the fact you can't control him," Paul Azinger said. "In every other sport, you can control your opponent. Except for this sport. You can only focus on your own game."

All the while, Woods is focusing on the record books.

THOMAS: New fullback relishes duty

(From 1C)

Dallas' faith in Thomas is even more impressive considering the team is going back to the power-running game used in their 1990s heyday, when Johnston led the way.

Johnston worked with Thomas last season to help him learn the finer points of the position. Thomas continued learning from Johnston this offseason by watching a videotape of his predecessor's greatest plays.

"Now that we're going to the offense that complemented his style, I was trying to learn what he did," Thomas said. "He's given me enough insight about what he was thinking that watching the film helped me say, 'OK, he saw this or that and that's why he did what he did.' "

It's one thing for Thomas to learn his role as it's drawn up in the playbook. However, the real test is knowing what to do when a lineman misses a block or when the defense pulls a surprise.

"The challenge isn't so much thinking like a fullback as much as reading and reacting without having to think about it," he said. "Because if you're thinking, you're slowing down."

On an offense in need of personality following the retirement of Michael Irvin, Thomas could be the guy to provide it.

He looks the part with his shaved head and elongated sideburns that almost connect to his goatee. His deep, gravely voice and sunny disposition help, as do his tendency to sing and hum during practice.

"Sometimes people get too tight and you've got to release the tension," Thomas said. "So I might crack a joke here or there to get people giggling. I like to keep the tempo light and keep people having fun, because when you're having fun, you work harder."

Jaguars suffer big setback: Searcy may be out for year

Associated Press

Mark Brunell might have to start scrambling again.

Leon Searcy, the Jacksonville Jaguars' Pro Bowl right tackle, could be out for the season after tearing a tendon above his right knee in practice Monday.

Searcy, who protects the left-handed Brunell's blind side, was hurt during 1-on-1 drills at the start of morning practice. Searcy rode off the field on a cart, clutching his right knee, wincing in pain. He'll need surgery.

The Jaguars said Searcy had a "significant tear" of the quadriceps tendon. The team didn't say how long the ninth-year tackle will be out, but bad tears of the quadriceps can take up to nine months to heal.

He has missed only two games since 1992 and only one since joining the Jaguars in 1996.

"It was a freak incident," said defensive lineman Renaldo Wynn, who was working opposite Searcy when the injury occurred. "You don't expect something like that to happen, especially with the caliber player Leon is. You've just got to bounce back."

Searcy is widely considered one of the best blockers in the league.

"He's pretty darn important," coach Tom Coughlin said. "But hopefully, it's not something we can't overcome."

■ NFL Camps

Panthers

Defensive tackle Eric Swann followed Reggie White to Carolina, signing a one-year deal Monday.

Swann, a 10-year veteran released by Arizona two weeks ago, turned down guaranteed offers from the Jacksonville Jaguars and Denver Broncos. He held out for the Panthers, who play in his home state, and for White, who signed with Carolina on Sunday.

Vikings

First-round draft choice Chris Hovan signed Monday, giving Minnesota all of its players in training camp.

The All-American defensive lineman from Boston College, the 25th overall pick in April, was expected to report to camp Monday night.

With the retirement of Jerry Ball last week, Hovan — who can play end or tackle — is expected to compete for a starting position on the defensive line, which also lost Chris Doleman to retirement and Duane Clemons to Kansas City.

Rams

It seems a change of mind is working well for Mike Martz, the new coach of St. Louis

When Martz took over the Super Bowl championship team from Dick Vermeil, he was not going to hire an offensive coordinator. Instead, he was going to do it himself.

About a week before training camp, however, Martz elevated running backs coach Bobby Jackson to offensive coordinator. He also made receivers coach Al Saunders an associate head coach to take care of administrative details that might have bogged him down.

Packers

Offensive lineman Chad Clifton, a second-round draft pick, signed a four-year contract.

Clifton held out of the first week of training camp while his agent and the Packers worked out a deal. The negotiations were difficult because so few second-round picks have signed contracts, said Andrew Brandt, Green Bay's chief contract negotiator.

Saints

Offensive guard Chris Naeole has a sprained ligament in his left knee.

Naeole injured the knee in a hard fall late in the Black & Gold scrimmage Saturday and had to be helped off the field. Tests conducted Sunday indicated the ligament was not torn and there is no word on how long he will be out of practice. Naeole injured the same knee during his rookie season.

Patriots

J.R. Redmond made his first appearance at training camp, but it will be a while before the former Arizona State running back makes it to the practice field.

Redmond, the Patriots' third-round draft choice, signed a four-year, $1.7 million contract Saturday after missing the first week of the Patriots' camp. He is still recovering from minor surgery on a groin muscle tear in June.

Summerall may retire after 2001

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fifty years of involvement with the NFL might be enough for Pat Summerall. Then again, they might not.

Summerall announced his retirement — sort of — as an NFL broadcaster Monday, effective after the 2001 season.

His final assignment for Fox Sports will be the play-by-play call of the Super Bowl in January 2002. As the 70-year-old Summerall made clear at a news conference, however, nothing is etched in stone.

"It really is Pat's call, Pat's decision," said David Hill, the chairman of Fox Sports Television Networks. "We'll do the next two seasons with Pat and John (Madden)."

Summerall and Madden, a former head coach of the Oakland Raiders, have been one the most prominent sports television teams for 19 years, calling NFL games at CBS for 13 seasons and at Fox the last six.

Summerall and Madden have broadcast seven Super Bowls — more than any other network broadcasting team. In total, Summerall has worked 15 Super Bowls on network television — the first five as a game analyst and the rest doing play-by-play.

His contract expires after the upcoming season. Fox will give him a one-year extension that will allow him to call a record 16th Super Bowl.

Dollar higher

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar was higher against most other major currencies in European trading Monday.

The euro was quoted at 93.20 cents in late European trading, down from 93.32 cents Friday. Later, in midday trading in New York, the euro traded at 93.24 cents.

Other dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Friday, included 108.87 Japanese yen, down from 109.10; 1.6680 Swiss francs, up from 1.6626; 1.4632 Canadian dollars, down from 1.4704.

The British pound was quoted at $1.5129 down from $1.5153.

In midday trading in New York, the dollar bought 108.85 yen, and the pound was worth $1.5142.

Based on euro rates, the dollar is worth 2.0981 German marks, up from 2.0947; 7.0367 French francs, up from 7.0254; 2.3640 Dutch guilders, up from 2.3602; 2,077.10 Italian lire, up from 2,073.76.

Gold falls

Gold closed in London at $279.10 bid per troy ounce, down from $279.30 on Friday. In Zurich the bid price was $279.10, down from $279.15. In Hong Kong, gold closed at $280.15 an ounce on Monday, up from $280.05 on Saturday.

Silver closed in London at $4.93 bid per troy ounce, down from $4.96.

Business Highlights

LONDON (AP) — By landing its first firm order for the planned A3XX super jumbo jet Monday, Airbus Industrie has stiffened its challenge to U.S. rival Boeing Co. as the world's leading builder of passenger aircraft.

Airbus won a $1.5 billion order from Emirates Airlines for seven of the double-decker planes at Britain's Farnborough International Air Show. Air France pledged to buy 10.

NEW YORK (AP) — Nortel Networks plans to spend another $1.9 billion on expansion to meet explosive demand for fiber-optic gear that speeds up the Internet, including $1.2 billion in a business the Canadian company may be trying to sell to Corning.

The investment, which is in addition to the $660 million Nortel has already said it will spend to increase production of optical network equipment, was announced Monday amid reports Corning is negotiating to buy a part of Nortel's business that makes lasers and other components.

WESTLAKE VILLAGE, Calif. (AP) — Offering free Internet access to anyone willing to surrender personal information and submit to a constant barrage of on-screen ads, NetZero Inc. has in less than two years attracted more than 4 million registered users.

But NetZero is under attack by scores of imitators, and investor skepticism has pushed down its share price more than 80 percent. Serious questions are being raised about businesses predicated on giving away Internet access alone.

Deutsche Telekom buys VoiceStream

By Hans Greimel
Associated Press

FRANKFURT, Germany — Europe's biggest telecommunication company, Deutsche Telekom, took its first step into the U.S. market Monday with its planned $46 billion acquisition of VoiceStream Wireless Corp., the nation's eighth-largest wireless carrier.

Still, investors weren't sure the VoiceStream acquisition was the big mergworse, falling $18.125 to $131.625 on the Nasdaq Stock Market. Deutsche Telekom was looking for, and sent shares of both companies plunging more than 10 percent.

The deal also faces potential opposition in Washington because of the German government's large stake in the telecom company. European officials say, however, that any opposition could have implications regarding previously established World Trade Organization agreements.

If successful, Bonn-based Deutsche Telekom AG would gain an international reach to 375 million customers and a toehold with one of the few U.S. telecom companies using the GSM standard, the most popular digital cellular standard in the world.

While most U.S. carriers use the rival TDMA and CDMA technologies, VoiceStream has the broadest reach of any GSM company in the United States, reaching 2.3 million customers throughout the nation. In comparison, industry leader Verizon Wireless has nearly 26 million customers.

"While GSM is used by virtually every carrier in Europe, it is unique in the United States," VoiceStream chief executive John Stanton, who will stay with the year-old Bellevue, Wash.,-based company, told a televised news conference in New York.

Equipped with so-called SIM cards — tiny microchips easily swapped between phones — the phones can be programmed with credit information, bank account data and personal buying preferences. That allows people to more easily use their phones to deposit paychecks, check their stock portfolios or charge taxi rides to a credit card.

It also makes it easier for Americans to use their phones when traveling to Europe or other regions using GSM. In Europe, GSM technology switches to national carriers as soon as users cross borders.

"It's about one to two years ahead of other cell phone networks in the United States," said Dennis Gross of London-based Williams de Broe. "There is tremendous potential for growth."

Under terms of the proposed deal, Deutsche Telekom is giving 3.2 of its shares plus $30 a share in cash for VoiceStream shares. Based on Friday's closing prices, that's equivalent to $195.75 per share, a 23 percent premium above VoiceStream's closing price of $149.75.

But worried investors sent Deutsche Telekom shares plunging 6.48 euros to 48.79 euros ($45.57) in Frankfurt, dropping the value of the deal from its initial value of $50.7 billion. VoiceStream fared even worse, falling $19.75, or 13 percent, to close at $130 Monday on the Nasdaq Stock Market.

On top of the purchase price, Deutsche Telekom will assume $5 billion in VoiceStream debt and invest another $5 billion in cash to help the company bid later this year for U.S. frequencies in the next generation of wireless-phone networks.

While the deal is seen as a big step into the U.S. mobile market, analysts said Deutsche Telekom still needs to nail down a U.S. presence in fixed-line, high-speed data and Internet transmission, something a deal with Westwood, Kan.,-based Sprint Corp. or Denver-based Qwest Communications International Inc. would have secured.

'The Plant' takes seed as King's latest online venture

By Seth Sutel
Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Stephen King's latest online publishing effort got off to a smooth start Monday as thousands of users downloaded the first installment of "The Plant," a new serial novel, and most readers seemed to be abiding by the honor system and paying the $1 per copy King is asking for.

King said putting the new novel in the easy-to-use PDF file format helped avoid the technical glitches that occurred in March when readers got stymied trying to download his novella "Riding the Bullet," which came in an encrypted format.

On the first day of his new publishing experiment, King made the rounds of the morning talk shows, appearing on "Today" and "Good Morning America," where he told host Diane Sawyer he was testing behavior on the Internet.

'We have a generation of computer jockeys that we've raised on Napster and MP3 who have gotten the idea, the mistaken idea, that everything in the store is free. And I'd like to see if we can't re-educate these people to the idea that the fruits of talent cost you money.'
— Stephen King, bestselling author

"We have a generation of computer jockeys that we've raised on Napster and MP3 who have gotten the idea, the mistaken idea, that everything in the store is free," King said. "And I'd like to see if we can't re-educate these people to the idea that the fruits of talent cost you money."

King's premise is simple: He's putting up at least the first two installments of "The Plant," but will only continue to post and write new ones if at least three-quarters of the readers choose to pay for them.

Marsha DeFilippo, an aide who is working with King on the project, said that as of Monday afternoon there had been about 34,000 downloads and that about 75 percent of the users were paying their dollar right away by credit card. Readers also have the option of mailing payments to a post office box.

King's latest venture has caused a ruckus in the publishing industry, which is still coming to terms with the implications brought to their business by the Internet. Simon & Schuster worked with King on "Riding the Bullet," but is being left out of "The Plant."

Simon & Schuster says it doesn't expect to lose its business with King, and for his part King says he still loves writing and reading books.

Nonetheless, many publishers are waiting to see if King can successfully eliminate his publisher as an intermediary between himself and his readers — and still make money.

"I think the publishers might heave a sigh of relief if it doesn't work," King told Sawyer. "But I think we've got a chance here to change the way people think about stories."

Texas Instruments reports increase in earnings

DALLAS (AP) — Texas Instruments Inc. reported Monday that second quarter earnings increased by 35 percent due to strong sales of computer chips for semiconductors, wireless services and digital subscriber line and cable modem products.

The Dallas-based company said it earned $623 million in the three months that ended June 30. That was up from a profit of $463 million a year ago.

The earnings were 31 cents a share, 1 cent better than the expectation of analysts surveyed by First Call/Thomson Financial and an increase from 23 cents in the year-ago quarter.

Total revenue was $2.84 billion, up 19 percent from $2.4 billion. The bulk of the gain came from $2.41 billion in sales of semiconductor chips, up 22 percent from a year ago.

During the quarter, Texas Instruments also began to realize gains from the 1998 divestiture of its memory business to Micron Technology Inc.

On Monday, Texas Instruments' shares rose about 7 percent, up $4.50 to $68 on the New York Stock Exchange.

For the first six months of this year, the company has earned $1.2 billion, up from $770 million for the same period in 1999. Profits for the January-June period were 58 cents a share, up from 40 cents a share in 1999.

Total revenue for the first six months increased to $5.5 billion from $4.5 billion in the second quarter of last year.

The company expects accelerating growth in its semiconductor business in the third quarter and is raising its capital expenditures to support strong customer demand.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Cash value life insurance returns tend to be sub-par

By Eric Tyson

Q: I don't agree with your recent response to a reader about flexible premium adjustable life insurance in which you said, "The biggest problem with such policies is the high cost, especially in the commissions, which are effectively deducted from the ca sh value." The vast majority of the commissions were paid in the first year of the policy, which is long since over. The high costs you referred to can be seen in the early surrender charges. When surrendered early, the policyholder will face the highest charges he could be exposed to. Rather than getting rid of the policy, if the insured makes no payment, the insurer will deduct the monthly insurance and administrative costs that will compare favorably with the cost of term insurance. Those costs will b e paid with the tax-deferred earnings of the cash value. It certainly is OK for you to have a bias toward term insurance because of its simplicity, but incomplete comparisons do our industry a disservice.

Tyson

A: You are correct that the bulk of the early surrender charges shows up in the early years of a cash value life insurance policy sold through a broker such as yourself. However, this is somewhat of an illusion because the more years that an insured keep s such a cash value policy, the more years the insurer is earning hefty management fees on the investment balance in the account. That's how the insurer can "afford" to have the early surrender charge go down over time.

In the event that the insured stops putting money into the policy, so long as there is sufficient cash value, you are correct that the cost for the life insurance coverage can be deducted from the cash value. However, I disagree that those costs will com pare favorably, especially with the most cost-competitive term policies in the marketplace today.

I do feel that quality term life insurance is the way to go for the vast majority of people needing life insurance – but not because of its simplicity but rather its cost-effectiveness. In addition to the commissions, cash value life insurance offers no upfront tax benefits on the amounts contributed, and the investment returns tend to be sub-par.

With retirement savings plans such as 401(k)s, 403(b)s, Keoghs and SEP-IRAs, your contributions generally save you on federal and state taxes. In addition, through such plans you generally have access to superior investment funds and better returns than through a cash value life insurance plan.

Q: I'm in junior high school and want to invest in the stock market. Would it be a good idea for me to invest in a smaller company or a larger company? I have about $100 to invest, and I want to use the money I make for retirement.

A: Congratulations to you (and your folks) for getting interested in investing and stocks as a teen-ager! I wouldn't be so attached to investing this money for your retirement ... you've got a long life ahead of you, and you may want the money for some o ther purpose – college or graduate school, a home purchase, small business start-up, etc.

Given the amount that you have to invest, I would encourage you to not think in terms of selecting a company – either large or small – to invest in. Instead, consider a diversified mutual fund that invests in a variety of companies of different sizes a nd in different industries. You won't be able to develop a diversified stock portfolio cost effectively with the amount that you have to invest. Hence, my mutual fund recommendation for you.

That said, one problem with mutual fund investing in your situation is the relatively small amount that you have to start with. Many mutual funds have initial investment requirements in the thousands of dollars. You can, however, gain entrance to some of the best funds if you can commit to having a regular amount (such as $50) sent electronically from a bank account. Perhaps your folks can work with you to accomplish that goal.

LEE: Rebels plan trip to Louisiana

back to Midland after the game.

West Monroe is a national high school power. West Monroe won USA Today's national championship in 1998 and won four state championships in Louisiana in the 1990s ('93, '96, '97 and '98). West Monroe lost to Evangel Christian in the Louisiana state title game this past season. Evangel Christian is the team that placed second in the USA Today national poll behind Lee in 1999.

Even though the idea is new, this is expected to be another high profile game for these two teams and should be highly anticipated.

"I really think this game will have some national interest," Parchman said.

Lee is already scheduled to play in the HEB Classic in San Antonio on Sept. 1 against Victoria Memorial, the largest school in the state. The HEB Classic, only in its second year, has already been hailed as a major "kickoff" to the high school football season.

"No one can say we run away from the competition," Parchman said. "We have (Victoria) Memorial, Longview and West Monroe for our first three games. That's about as tough as it gets."

Lee has a 23-game winning streak going into the season (third best in the state behind Celina, 24, and Stephenville, 26). It will be very difficult to maintain that pace with this schedule.

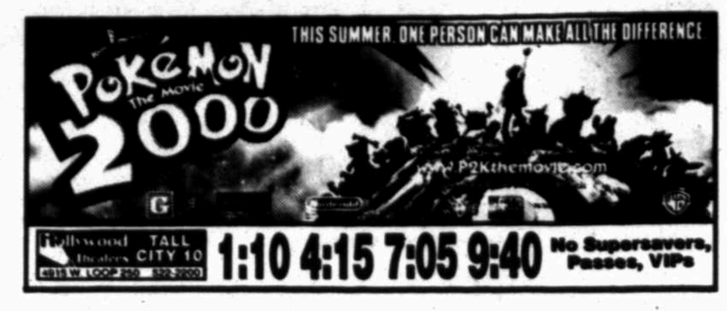

"So what if we lose," Parchman said. "It's better than sitting for three weeks. We're going to test the theory of playing good people makes you a better team. We'll see."

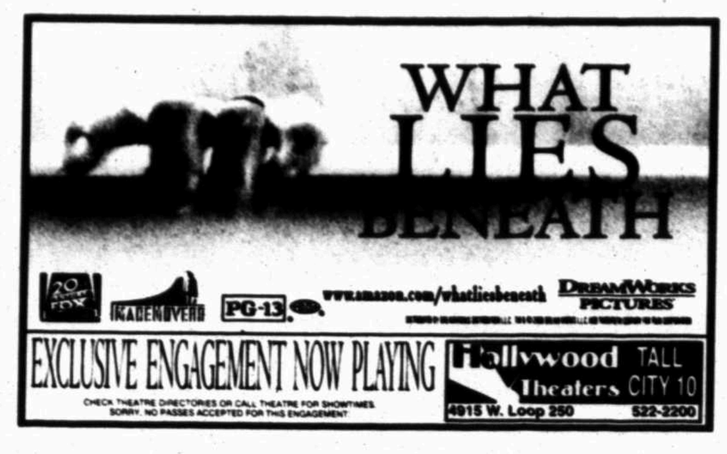

Parchman said that West Monroe will pay some of Lee's travel expenses this year and Midland would do the same for West Monroe next year.

Lee will play in the Alamodome on Sept. 1 against Victoria Memorial and will host Longview at Memorial Stadium on Sept. 8. Lee will then have the open date on Sept. 15 before facing the out-of-state Rebels. Lee will also have one more trip to El Paso before district play begins.

"At least, there won't be any travel when district play begins," Parchman said. "We have both Abilene schools in Midland this year. That means we just have two trips to Odessa."

Rebel Note: Parchman said that Andy Brewster has landed a scholarship to play football for the University of North Texas. Brewster started at center at Lee during the back-to-back state championship runs. Brewster joins a large group of former Permian Basin football stars at UNT. Midland High's Randy Gardner signed with UNT last February. Brothers Corry and Fred Pertile, former Rebels, are seniors with the Mean Green this season, as are Odessa Permian products Ja'Quay Wilburn and Heath Moody. Lee's Brian Boyd and MHS' Luke Conder are also playing at UNT.

Young children feel pressure too

By T. Berry Brazelton, M.D., with Joshua Sparrow, M.D.
New York Times Special Features

Five-year-old Teddy was being introduced to soccer. All the older kids in his neighborhood played, and Teddy had been kicking and racing after a soccer ball since he was 3.

Brazelton

"Teddy can kick pretty good," an older boy said one day. "But he doesn't follow up."

Hearing that, Teddy's face fell. He turned to his grandfather, who was visiting, and asked for help.

"Teddy, I'm no good at soccer," his granddad told him.

With that, the boy's eyes filled with tears, and he dissolved. "I'll never, ever be any good at soccer!" he said.

Teddy's self-esteem seemed to have disintegrated in a matter of seconds. At 5, he was already familiar with the pressure to succeed that our society increasingly imposes on youngsters.

Concerned, Teddy's grandfather promised to help the boy. The two spent many hours over the next weeks kicking a soccer ball back and forth.

When he played in his first game, Teddy was terrific. His kick was amazingly accurate, but then he'd linger to admire the ball's trajectory.

"Teddy, run after it!" his grandfather called from the sidelines. 'Don't just stand there!"

Teddy looked up, his eyes verging on tears again. Seeing that, his grandfather realized he had made a mistake — one that's all too common these days. He had added to the pressure the child was already feeling.

All families today live with pressure. Parents — and grandparents — want their children to do well, to be prepared for our competitive world.

But sometimes this wish results in excessive pressure on the child. Pressure to perform in school. Pressure to achieve on the athletic field. Pressure to make lots of friends. Pressure not to melt down or be a crybaby.

Part of the problem is that parents today are under a lot of pressure themselves. Sometimes this gets passed on to their children.

It's important to recognize that children also pressure themselves. Watch a child who's trying to learn to walk. He's up and down, up and down all day long. The inner pressure to learn a new task drives him to succeed. But this same inner pressure also rewards him. You can see it in his face when he realizes, "I did it! I walked alone!"

Pressure has its benefits when there is success. But failure under pressure can lead to feelings of inadequacy and hopelessness if a child believes he can't live up to his family's expectations.

In 1981, Dr. David Elkind of Tufts University in Boston wrote a groundbreaking book, "The Hurried Child," in which he outlined the many ways we push our children to achieve — often beyond their capacity. We want them to start learning while they are in the uterus (so we play them Mozart tapes). We buy mobiles for the infant on his back to study. We teach toddlers to count and read letters. From then on, we add pressure to perform and succeed in many different areas.

Parents often ask me how to determine whether the pressures on a child actually serve her development, or whether they are more than she can tolerate. I always advise them to watch the child in action. If she seems eager to participate in an event, if she strives for success, her face glowing as she achieves it, then you have not overwhelmed her. On the other hand, if she frowns as she strives, if she crumbles as she tries to achieve the goal, if she melts down or tries to divert you — you are probably going too far.

Parents can't protect their children from all the pressures of our society, but we can moderate whatever pressure to please us we unintentionally place on them. And we can help them learn to cope with other pressures by modeling stress-management skills.

Here are some tips for getting pressure under control:

- Stop to consider the pressures in your own life that may filter through to your child. Which of these do you have choices about?
- Put pressure into perspective, and decide when it's really worth it.
- Talk with your child about pressure she feels. Help her become aware of the difference between self-imposed pressure and pressure imposed by others.
- Re-examine values and priorities. Consider the value of altruism, of responding to others' needs. Ultimately, this may feel safer than to always be "looking out for No. 1," which can be lonely and can heighten feelings of vulnerability.

STRESS-MANAGEMENT TIPS FOR PARENTS

- Drop everything when you come home from work. Relax with family first. Making supper, returning phone calls, checking mail can wait.
- When you take a weekend or vacation away with your family, leave your laptop and cell phone at home. Don't call the office.
- Identify stress-reducing measures for you and your child — for example, a day of rest. There is a reason why more than one religion has insisted on this family time, when all work is put aside.
- Plan family times for simply having fun, being silly, being together or relaxing.
- Make a habit of undemanding family activities or one-on-one outings with each child: Visit the zoo, make a big indoor tent and sleep in it, wash the dog, turn cartwheels, build a fort, get out the family photos and make an album, play hopscotch, play board games, daydream, go for a long walk, meditate, talk, climb a tree, watch the sunset. The goal is not the product, but the process.
- Re-examine your schedule and your child's. Are a child's symptoms of too much pressure telling you that it's time to consider "downsizing?"

Let's go to the library!

For summer fun out of the sun — and maybe answers to some serious questions — the public library is the place to be

EDITORS NOTE: This is Part II of a two-part series on Midland County Public Library and some of its programs.

By Lana Cunningham

The young boy looked up at the library employee and, in an anxious voice, asked about gangs. "I need to get out of a gang," he said in quiet desperation.

"We found him a phone number with the Police Department," said Children's Librarian Barbara Davis. "We wonder if he called."

Midland County Public Library no longer is just a place to go for story time, to check out the latest novel or to complete a homework project. It has become a life resources center because employees must deal with a wide range of human problems that walk through the doors each day. From physical abuse or gangs, from hunger to learning disabilities, the library staff has become a resource of referrals.

At the same time, the county library strives to keep up (as money allows) with the latest technology, including computers and software. And no longer does a child go to the library for books. It now is a place to play games (educational, of course) or to find assistance for that dreaded annual science fair project.

Mrs. Davis summarized a librarian's job today: "The children's librarian is a teacher, friend, cheerleader, provider, juggler and advocate ... for both the parent and the child. All at the same time, he/she must push the timid, hold in check the over-achiever and cultivate a strong sense of humor!

"THE LIBRARY is not just about books," she added. "If we see a child who we think is in danger of child abuse, we have to report it. We've never had to. But we do give people the opportunity to help themselves."

That opportunity has included discovering physical abuse within a family who frequents the library. "We have asked if they have contacted anyone at Safe Place (the shelter for abused women and their children) and if we can look up the phone number for them," said Mrs. Davis. "We've had a couple of families come back and say they were at Safe Place. One said, 'We're at the end of the tunnel and we're free.' "

Occasionally, a library staff person will notice problems in a child. "There was one family who came in often and I don't think the child could hear a thing," said Mrs. Davis. "At the age of 4, we couldn't understand a word he said. We convinced the parents to have the child tested, and they found he had speech and hearing problems."

Recently, a grandmother came to Mrs. Davis, seeking a book with the alphabet. "My granddaughter is 5 and doesn't know the alphabet. Can I get her ready in time for school?" the woman asked.

The child, said Mrs. Davis, apparently had been tossed around the family and finally landed on the grandmother's doorstep. "We told her how to approach Midland Independent School District for help."

MISD often is the referral point given to parents. "We tell parents to go to their pediatrician for advice and to ask MISD to evaluate their child. A lot of grandparents are coming in for help to raise their grandchildren. We finally changed the rules so grandparents can get library cards for their grandchildren," she said.

And then there's the family that stays and stays at the library. "When they're still here after eight hours, we know there's a problem ... maybe they need food." Again, the library hands out names and phone numbers of agencies that can provide assistance.

Other areas parents seek help in include care for babies, potty training, thumb-sucking and teaching manners.

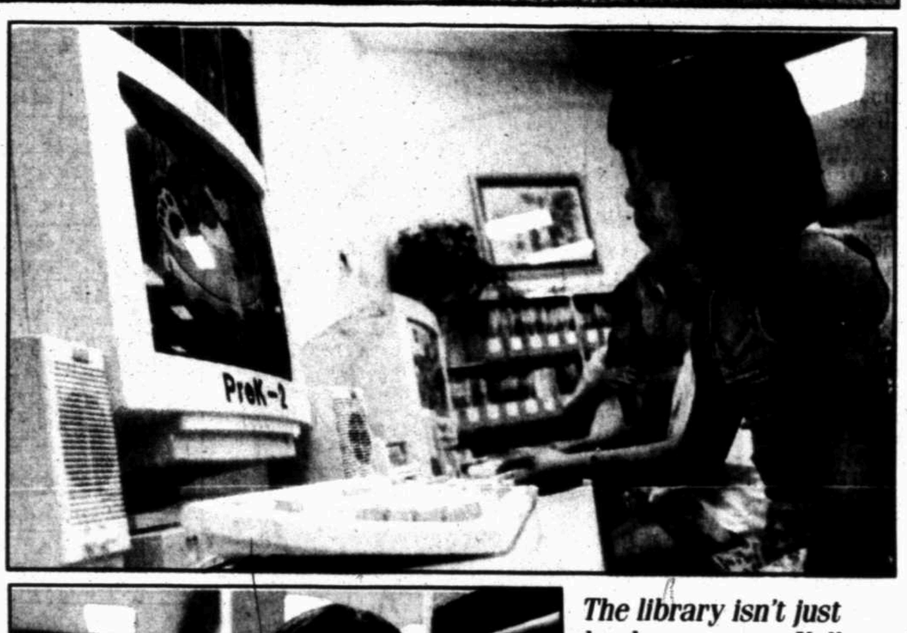

Technological advances keep the library on a schedule of change. With computers controlling the marketplace, Midland's library went on-line with the card catalog several years ago. "That put a wrinkle in some people's underwear," joked Mrs. Davis about the public which was accustomed to pulling out drawers of cards listing all the books.

"Some people still refuse to use a computer to look up a book.

"My grandmother wouldn't use a telephone," Mrs. Davis reflected. "She didn't get one until the late 1960s and even then it took 10 years for her to really use it. I decided I wasn't going to be a grandma like that when it comes to computers."

Computers then were installed throughout the library for patrons' use. In the Children's Department, all computers often are in use. During summer, they seek out the computer games. One afternoon, two children not over the age of 3 were playing games on the computers while the mothers sat next to them, helping push the mouse.

"Children are teaching the parents," she noted. "We're pushing these computers for kids who don't have computers at home. We would love to have classes for kids on how to use the Internet. Our Internet is filtered, but the kids have to learn how to use it.

Photos by U. Frank Williams Jr. /Reporter-Telegram

During summer, children of all ages swarm through the library. Many seek books, attend story hour or other special programs or stand in line to play on the computers. Others, however, find games, puzzles, Legos and other toys to occupy their minds.

"The one toy that is used the most is the Viewmaster," said Mrs. Davis. "Children can go at their own pace." One mother, perturbed that a broken Viewmaster had not been replaced, plunked down $5 on the desk in the Children's Department and told employees to go buy another.

The toy area includes baskets of toys on shelves. "We provide toys that kids can 'do' and not watch. We don't have anything with a battery."

One recent morning, a mother was sitting on the floor playing tic-tac-toe with two daughters. Two other mothers, sitting nearby, helped their young sons put together puzzles. "We love to see the mamas and papas doing something with their children," she said.

Older children prefer board games such as Strategy, Sorry or chess, which challenge their minds.

When school doors open in mid-August, the idea of a science project will loom over the heads of many students. The public library offers books with ideas for those projects and how to accomplish them. In addition, workshops on projects are held for students in grades three though six. "We give assistance to hundreds of kids on these projects. If a child gets started on something he wants to do, he'll follow through." Recently, the library received a $2,400 grant to purchase Spanish language science materials.

WHILE TRYING to keep up with new technology, the library staff also wrestles with what to keep and what to toss. "Do we get rid of cassette tapes and have only CDs?" said Mrs. Davis of one question that has been raised.

And some people contend that books as we know them today will vanish into computers. "Until you can put a computer on a bathtub and read, you're going to have books," she laughed.

A librarian no longer has the single duty to keep track of books. He or she must keep track of people, their feelings, their needs. A librarian, Mrs. Davis added, "must be ready to laugh, cry, search, fail, succeed ... all in a day's work ... and be ready to do it again the next day!

"Just when the body and spirit tires, some child or some parent will greet you with a homemade drawing, a broken-cookie-offering, a quiet smile, a flower from their garden, telling of a need you met.

"No salary can compare. I'm no longer tired — I have the strength to leap whatever hurdles tomorrow may bring to my department door ... even those with abused, neglected, seriously ill or poverty-stricken children."

Who wants to step on millionare's toe?

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP) — The "Who Wants to Marry a Multimillionaire" groom says he was assaulted early Sunday by a fan who hurt his toe.

Rick Rockwell said a fan who stopped to chat with him late Saturday after his comedy show at a local nightclub followed him back to his motel room. The two scuffled after the fan looked in his window, Rockwell said, and the man stepped on his toe and took off a toenail.

Authorities are investigating the incident as an assault and have a suspect, police Sgt. Kevin Kallinen said.

Rockwell gained fame by marrying Darva Conger on the Fox TV special "Who Wants to Marry a Multimillionaire" in February.

The show quickly turned into a fiasco when Conger, who posed nude in Playboy's August issue, filed to end the marriage days after the two returned from a Caribbean honeymoon. Rockwell's status as a multimillionaire also was questioned just days after the broadcast, and it was disclosed that a former fiancee obtained a restraining order against Rockwell in 1991 for allegedly hitting and threatening her. Rockwell denies the allegations.

WESTLAKE VILLAGE, Calif. (AP) — Erin Brockovich challenged "20/20" TV reporter John Stossel to drink water with the carcinogen chromium 6 after Stossel questioned the research she used to gain a $333 million settlement.

Brockovich, a legal aide, helped win compensation for residents of the small desert town of Hinkley whose water was found to be contaminated by Pacific Gas & Electric. Her story was told in the movie "Erin Brockovich."

Stossel questioned the harmful effects of chromium 6 in the "Give Me a Break" segment of the ABC news magazine that aired last week.

"Chromium 6 is toxic, chromium 6 is poison," Brockovich said Friday. "I want Mr. Stossel and his family to start drinking chromium 6-laced water day in and day out, just like the people in Hinkley did every day."

When asked what he and his family would do, Stossel said: "I wouldn't like them to drink the water, but let's not terrify people unless we know it's true."

An ABC News statement said Stossel never claimed drinking chromium 6 was safe. Brockovich has asked Stossel and his producer to apologize for what she called a dangerous and misleading broadcast.

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Italian tenor Andrea Bocelli canceled his sold-out performance under the Acropolis on Monday due to ill health, organizers said.

The 41-year-old Italian singer was to perform in the 1,800 year-old Herod Atticus amphitheater at the foot of the Acropolis. More than 4,500 people will have their tickets refunded, organizers said.

Bocelli, who has been blind since age 12, was scheduled to perform with American conductor Lorin Maazel as part of the Hellenic Festival, a summer-spanning series of cultural performances. They did not say what was wrong with Bocelli.

The Tuscany-born vocalist is known as much for his traditional operatic singing as for his pop ballads. Bocelli's platinum album "Sacred Arias" currently tops the classical charts. His 1999 album "Sogno" received a Golden Globe award.

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The Rev. Billy Graham won't be attending the world gathering of evangelists in Netherlands in person.

Instead, the ailing 81-year-old evangelist plans to take part in the conference through a satellite link.

He announced late last week that he was not well enough to attend the Amsterdam gathering, which begins Saturday and runs through Aug. 6. Some 10,000 are expected.

Graham has spent more than a month at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., after undergoing a procedure to relieve fluid buildup around his brain. Graham, who has Parkinson's disease, is undergoing physical therapy.

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — Billy Blanks is being sued by one of his former karate teachers.

The flap is over a 1973 footage of the Tae Bo guru as a teen-ager.

Tom Myers said he sent Blanks' agent, Paul Monea, the footage but was never paid. The tape shows Blanks in one of Myers' karate classes.

Myers, a coordinator for inmate services at the Erie County Prison, said Monea agreed to pay him $4,000 for the copyrighted material, which includes two videotapes, two audiotapes and 10 photographs.

The suit filed July 17 in Erie County Court seeks $5,000.

Blanks, 44, learned karate under Myers' tutelage, but the two had a falling out and Blanks later taught the sport at a competing studio.

Blanks' attorney, Mike Balikian of Los Angeles, said his client had no comment because he had not seen the lawsuit.

The Stars Show the Kind of Day You'll Have: 5-Dynamic; 4-Positive; 3-Average; 2-So-so; 1-Difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Tuesday, July 25, 2000:
Don't minimize your opportunities. Spread your wings, take risks and go to the next step professionally. You sometimes fret and worry a lot. Find a new way to beat stress. You need plenty of downtime. Your charismatic personality magnetizes others. If attached, a partner adores you but often acts unpredictably. Learn to understand your sweetie better and see how insecurity could be a motivator. If single, don't count on a long-term relationship until it has arrived.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★★ What felt like a problem yesterday opens up today. A change in perspective allows you to say yes. Another encourages you to let go and indulge. The question remains: Why not? A relationship adds merriment and excitement. Schedule some time with this person. Tonight: Your treat.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★★ What another said suddenly makes sense. Act on a suggestion, but add your own style and personality. Curb a tendency to go overboard, especially with family and domestic matters. Others react unexpectedly. Do you need more freedom at work? Tonight: Whatever makes you smile.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★ Be of the mind and not of the word right now. Explore options. Listen to others' suggestions. Keep your own counsel as you make judgments about what others are thinking. Your sense of humor might go wild, but be discreet about what you say. Tonight: Take a walk and think.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★★ You might be bewildered by a partner, but a conversation helps you clear the air. Discussions help you and another see eye to eye. Often, even the same word means something different to each of you. Create greater security and understanding step by step. Tonight: Make an important meeting.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★★ Take charge where others back off. What your mind keeps telling you about a work-related matter is right on. Your ebullient personality draws others, but it sometimes adds too much play to the office setting. A partner acts up, but he does express an interesting point of view. Tonight: In the limelight.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★★ Make calls. Don't settle for what you are being told. A meeting directs your focus. Let go and scratch a plan or project that won't work. Why bother to continue? Your flexibility and quick action allow another to feel safe about your abilities. Tonight: Rent a movie.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★★★ A boss overwhelms you with ideas and directions. Pace yourself, with an eye to getting the job done. Be more aware of how much you do to please a key associate or partner. He actually drives you, in a sense. A child rebels, despite your appeals. Tonight: Dinner for two.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ News casts a whole new light on present projects. You might need to regroup. Explain to a family member that you will have less time than you had anticipated. Bosses reward you for overtime and a job well done. Ask for what you want. Tonight: Much to do and so little time.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★★★ Dig into work, applying insights from key associates. Calls and news from a distance overwhelm you, but they put a smile on your face. Unexpected news proves to be enlightening. Bone up on your communication skills, adding a touch more diplomacy. Tonight: Work only as late as you need to.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★★ You might be more vested in a partner's reaction than you realize. Take a step back and look at what is going on. Creativity allows you to work your way through a difficult spot. Use caution with finances, because a wild card follows you. Tonight: Enjoy a partner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★★ Just because another sees a situation differently than you do doesn't mean he is right. Work on finding a compromise. Professional relationships benefit. Don't pull out and refuse to deal with another. Stay in for the long term. Let others build confidence in you. Tonight: Buy flowers on the way home.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★★ You feel like a communications satellite since so much is going on. You easily become overloaded. A new friend has many fun suggestions that distract you. Block non-work-related e-mail at work. You know you have a tendency toward distraction. Tonight: Browse through a favorite store on the way home.

Opening lead: King of ♣ Study all four hands in the above diagram. Would you rather play or defend six hearts after the lead of the king of clubs?

In the North-South methods, a two-over-one response to an opening bid was a game force. That enabled the auction to proceed smoothly, with South stopping in the small slam on discovering that an ace was missing.

West led the king of clubs. How do you fancy your chances?

At first glance it looks like a no-brainer. You elect to play. After winning the king of clubs with the ace, you cash three rounds of spades, discarding dummy's remaining club. Now the ace of hearts is your only loser, so you lead a trump.

Not quite. If you adopt that line, West wins the trump lead and plays a fourth spade, and East's nine of trumps becomes the setting trick.

That does not mean you should elect to defend. You simply overlooked a simple precaution which would have assured the slam. Before touching trumps, cash the ace and king of diamonds, discarding your last spade. Now there is nothing the defenders can do to stop you from taking 12 tricks.

Is six hearts a good contract at rubber bridge? It is unwise to risk hard cash when you can bank a certain vulnerable game, but here the slam is about a 70-percent shot, and the slam bonus makes the risk worthwhile.

NOTICE OF ELECTION

TO THE RESIDENT QUALIFIED ELECTORS OF NORTHWEST MIDLAND COUNTY FRESH WATER SUPPLY DISTRICT NO. 1:

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that an election will be held within Northwest Midland County Fresh Water Supply District No. 1 on August 12, 2000, as provided in the Order duly passed by the Board of Supervisors of said District, which Order is substantially as follows:

AN ORDER BY THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF NORTHWEST MIDLAND COUNTY FRESH WATER SUPPLY DISTRICT NO. 1 CALLING AN ELECTION TO DETERMINE IF SAID DISTRICT SHALL BE ESTABLISHED AND TO ELECT FIVE SUPERVISORS AND A TAX ASSESSOR-COLLECTOR FOR SAID DISTRICT; APPOINTING OFFICERS TO CONDUCT SAID ELECTION; AND CONTAINING OTHER PROVISIONS RELATED TO THE SUBJECT

WHEREAS, by its order adopted on May 22, 2000, the Commissioners Court of Midland County, Texas, granted a petition for creation of Northwest Midland County Fresh Water Supply District No. 1 (the "District") and in said order named as five temporary supervisors and tax assessor collector for the District the respective persons named in said petition;

WHEREAS, said supervisors have qualified as required by law and the Board of Supervisors (the "Board") of the District has met and organized;

WHEREAS, the Board hereby finds and determines that it is necessary and proper to order an election to be held in the District on the date and for the purposes hereinafter set forth;

WHEREAS, it is further officially found, determined and declared that the meeting at which this Order has been considered and adopted was open to the public and public notice of the time, place and subject matter of the public business to be considered and acted upon at said meeting, including this Order, was given, all as required by the applicable provisions of Tex. Gov't. Code Ann. ch. 51; Now, Therefore

BE IT ORDERED BY THE BOARD OF SUPERVISORS OF MIDLAND COUNTY FRESH WATER SUPPLY DISTRICT NO. 1:

Section 1. Findings
The statements contained in the preamble of this Order are true and correct and are adopted as findings of fact and operative provisions hereof.

Section 2. Election Ordered
An election shall be held within the District on August 12, 2000, to determine if the District shall be established and to elect five permanent supervisors and a tax assessor-collector for the District.

Section 3. Election Day Polling Place, Early Voting Polling Place
