ERNIE ARMSTRONG

Armstrong appointed district judge

A senate aide confirmed this morning that Snyder attorney Ernie Armstrong has been nominated to served as judge of the 132nd Judicial District.

A spokesman in Sen. Tom Haywood's office said Gov. George W. Bush made the appointment Thursday afternoon and the nomination would become official by being filed with the Secretary of State's office this morning.

Word of the appointment spread through the Scurry County courthouse Thursday afternoon, but a spokesman for the governor said a decision had been made but she would neither confirm nor deny that Armstrong, current district attorney, was the governor's choice.

Armstrong did not immediately return calls to the Snyder Daily News.

The governor's press office promised a formal announcement today. Armstrong, a Democrat, will replace Republican Gene Dulaney who reached mandatory retirement age last November. Since that time, Dulaney has been named a senior judge and has continued to hear cases on the 132nd District Court docket.

It was unclear when Armstrong would be sworn in as district judge. His appointment will now leave a vacancy in the district attorney's office, meaning another appointment by Gov. Bush.

Since the legislature is not in session, current appointments are not subject to senate confirmation. The judicial seat will be subject to the November, 1996 general election.

The governor's appointment office had delayed making a decision on several occasions over the past six months. Sen. Haywood, who represents Scurry County, reportedly supported Armstrong. Democratic Sen. John Montford of Lubbock, who represents Borden County, reportedly supported Democrat Pete Greene, current county attorney and former DA. Judge Dulaney said he supported the appointment of Armstrong.

Armstrong is in his third term as district attorney. He received his law degree from Baylor University School of Law in 1971 and spent the next four years as a crim-

Financial constraints slow industrial park's progress

Go-ahead on development of Snyder's industrial park is proceeding, slowed but not halted by a price tag estimated at more than $6 million.

"I just want people to understand that this is going to take time. We've got to be realistic. I think we may be giving the impression that we're going to go out there and do all these things right now, and we're not. It's just not financially feasible," Development Corporation of Snyder board vice president Roy Baze cautioned Thursday.

In a four-hour meeting, the board heard a preliminary report from Freese & Nichols, then voted to have the engineering firm submit a cost for the next step towards site preparation.

In other action, the board approved an administrative budget for 1995-96, funds for summer office help, a retirement plan and a third-party consultant contract.

The study cost to be prepared by Freese and Nichols is to be presented at the board's next regular meeting. If given approval, Freese & Nichols would then work up studies to:

—Provide the DCOS with information necessary to rough-grade the roadways in order to show tracts to industrial prospects. This would include a layout for a phase-in concept, allowing the DCOS to proceed with road construction as needed.

—Provide a design for the water capacity of each tract at the park. This would include cost estimates for each phase of utility construction.

Approval to work up cost estimates came after engineer Alan Greer unveiled Freese & Nichols' preliminary report on the industrial park, which is located northeast of the intersection of U.S. Highways 84 and 180. The information as presented outlines proposed roadways, grading and drainage at the 313-acre park, as well as utility needs and zoning classifications. Total cost of the completed project is estimated at $6,314,074, according to the report. Among the key dollar items are water tanks at $500,000, $300,000 and $187,000 and pump stations at $200,000 and $150,000.

Greer said those items should be paid for through a cost-sharing plan with the DCOS, the city and the eventual user.

Other key utility costs include 12-inch water line at an estimated

Rebels refuse offer of safe passage

BUDYONNOVSK, Russia (AP) — Chechen rebels holding up to 2,000 hostages after storming a Russian city refused an offer of safe passage today, as Russian officials said the death toll from that attack rose to at least 95.

"Freedom or death is our fate," said the Chechen commander, Shamil Basayev, whose rebels have vowed to blow up hospital where the hostages are held unless Russia agrees to end the war in their homeland.

Federal soldiers maintained a tight cordon around the hospital in Budyonnovsk in a tense standoff with dozens of heavily armed rebels inside.

"We are ready to meet any conditions in order to free the hostages because we understand how this can end," Deputy Prime Minister Nikolai Yegorov told reporters.

Basayev said his rebels killed five hostages Thursday while waiting for Moscow to grant his demand of letting reporters into the hospital. Doctors inside confirmed the killings took place.

The rebels have long threatened to carry the 6-month-old war in Chechnya into other parts of Russia, and Moscow worried the attack on Budyonnovsk — 90 miles north of Chechnya — marked the start of a major terrorist campaign.

The rebel leader and 200 heavily armed men stormed the southern Russian city of Budyonnovsk on Wednesday, shooting at random and taking hostages.

A funeral service for 36 of the victims was held at noon today, with military helicopters flying overhead to provide security for the mourners.

Doctors said today that 44 bodies lay in the building's morgue, and city officials said as many as 51 more had died in fighting elsewhere in the town of 100,000 people.

Basayev, speaking to reporters in the hospital, said the Chechen's ultimate goal had been to hit the Russian capital. "We did not intend to seize Budyonnovsk," he said. "We had another task — we wanted to get to Moscow."

Some 16,000 troops were deployed in Moscow — 850 miles northwest of Budyonnovsk — to guard against possible attacks. Patrols checked people's bags on the subway and halted motorists to search cars.

After sporadic negotiations by radio, the Russians said today the rebels had rejected their offer of safe passage back to Chechnya or a plane to take them to any country willing to accept them.

"Let them come and storm the place," Basayev said. "We are sick of watching our villages being bombed, and our women and children being killed."

Police said the rebels released two female hostages who were sick, but refused to free all children in the building.

Associated Press Television footage showed elderly people, women and small children sitting terrified in darkened corridors, guarded by gunmen in camouflage fatigues.

"Help us!" women cried as reporters allowed into part of the hospital Thursday night walked past.

Everyone is invited to participate. The event will be held on the south side of the Wal-Mart building.

SISD trustees to meet with attorney Saturday

Snyder Independent School District board of trustees will meet with an attorney Saturday to discuss a lawsuit involving student ranking.

The board will meet with attorney Kelli Karczewski, of the firm of Schwartz and Eichelbaum of Austin, at 5 p.m. in closed session.

The suit has been filed against the district on behalf of Holly Jones, who disputes the school's naming of Veana Clay as the top-ranked graduating senior of the Class of 1995 at Snyder High School.

Although Miss Jones and Miss Clay were named co-valedictorians, school officials said they will certify Miss Clay as the high-ranking student. As a result, she would be eligible for a scholarship offered through the Texas Education Agency.

A temporary injunction filed by Miss Jones is prohibiting Snyder ISD from designating Miss Clay as the top-ranked student with the state. A hearing to determine whether the injunction will remain in effect is scheduled for 9 a.m. Monday in federal district court in Lubbock.

Miss Clay had an honors point average of 7.073. Miss Jones had an honors point average of 7.0614. At issue is wording in the school's handbook which reads that students shall be ranked "at the end of four years of high school."

Miss Jones is a four-year graduate while Miss Clay graduated in three years.

Supporters of Space Station criticize latest GAO report

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressional report pegging the space station's cost at $94 billion through 2012 is based on inflated estimates, the chairmen of the House Science Committee and its space subcommittee said Thursday.

Reps. Robert Walker and James Sensenbrenner criticized a General Accounting Office report used this week by space station critics as further evidence that the program should be killed.

"The real truth about the space station program is it's on time, it's on budget and it's doing what Congress told it to do," said Walker, R-Pa., who chairs the Science Committee.

"Instead, the space station opponents who requested the GAO report took every chance to inflate the space station's real cost."

NASA estimates it will cost $17.4 billion to design and build the space station, which is an international venture, along with another $13 billion to operate it over a decade. Some $14 billion has been spent to date on the project, much of which is under development at the Johnson Space Center near Houston.

In releasing the report with other station foes earlier this week, Rep. Dick Zimmer, R-N.J., termed the orbiting laboratory "one giant parasite gorging itself on taxpayer dollars."

Renewing complaints made by NASA, Walker and Sensenbrenner, R-Wis., attacked the methodology of the report.

Included in the GAO total is $50.5 billion assigned to space shuttle transportation costs. Multiple space shuttle flights will be necessary to carry into orbit the various space station parts, where they will be assembled.

The congressional auditors took the space shuttle's total budget, dividing it by the number of flights flown rather than using actual costs, Walker and Sensenbrenner said. The GAO used a space shuttle budget that doesn't take into account cost reduction strategies being implemented by NASA, they added.

"The reader of this report should know that killing the space station will mean increasing, not decreasing, our use of the shuttle and the Russian space station, Mir," said Sensenbrenner, who chairs Science's space subcommittee. "Since I don't believe the American people will sit still for a space program that depends solely on Russians and robots for the exploration of space, readers should take these shuttle-inflated station estimates with a grain of salt."

The shuttle assembly and operational costs are inflated by $16 billion, according to a Republican staff analysis of the GAO report.

Zimmer and Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., on Tuesday defended the report's methodology, saying the station will absorb so much of the shuttle's work that the GAO was justified in including the estimated shuttle costs to launch, service and use the station.

Bumpers estimated savings from a shutdown at $14 billion to $15 billion over the next seven years. He said it makes no sense to keep the program alive just because the government has already poured some $14 billion into it.

Efforts to kill the station two years ago fell one vote short in the House. Station supporters bounced back last year, repelling a termination vote by a far healthier 278-155 margin.

Discuss impotence therapy with doctor

By Peter H. Gott, M.D.

DEAR DR. GOTT: What do you advise regarding long-term use of papaverine? Is there any harm done to the penis other than the needle and scar tissue? Some of my erections last six to eight hours.

DEAR READER: Papaverine is a compound that, when injected into the penis, causes an erection. Many men can be taught to inject this material themselves, in preparation for sexual activity. For such men, papaverine is a safe and reliable therapy for impotence. Ordinarily, erections achieved in this manner last up to an hour.

The primary complications of this treatment are constant erections (priapism) and formation of scar tissue (Peyronie's disease) that cause painful and/or crooked erections. Inasmuch as your erections last up to eight hours, you may be injecting too much. Ask your urologist about this.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Impotence." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Your newspaper column is superb and I never miss reading it. My daughter has been diagnosed with mild lupus. Would you please discuss this condition?

DEAR READER: Thank you for the compliment.

Lupus — an inflammatory disease of the lungs, skin, kidneys, and other organs — usually causes fever, joint pain, rash, pleurisy, lymph gland enlargement, headaches, renal disease, and a tendency for the blood to clot too quickly. The cause is unknown.

The diagnosis is made by blood tests and, sometimes, by biopsy. The course is unpredictable.

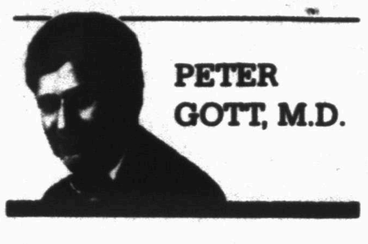

Mild disease requires no particular therapy, except for aspirin and other drugs to relieve achiness and pain. I hope your daughter has this form of the disease, because she will not need extensive treatment for several years. Nonetheless, mild forms can (and often do) progress to more severe lupus, which can be fatal and must be treated with large doses of cortisone for long periods.

In general, the type of therapy depends on the extent of the lupus and whether or not it progresses rapidly. Patients with lupus should be under the care of specialists in internal medicine.

To give you more information, I am sending you a free copy of my Health Report "Lupus: The Great Imitator." Other readers who would like a copy should send $2 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to P.O. Box 2433, New York, NY 10163. Be sure to mention the title.

Sex offender registration, others...

Bush signs several more bills

AUSTIN (AP) — Convicted sex offenders released from state supervision must register with authorities in the towns where they live for a decade under a bill signed Thursday by Gov. George W. Bush.

The new law is one of a package legislators sent the governor called "Ashley's Laws," named after 7-year-old Ashley Estell who was kidnapped and murdered in 1993 by a paroled child molester.

Sex offenders previously were required to register while on parole or probation, but the requirement ended when the state supervision ended. Under the new law, the registration requirement is extended for 10 years following the end of parole or probation.

In addition, if the convictions were for indecency with a child by contact, aggravated sexual assault and sexual performance by a child, offenders will have to register for the rest of their lives.

Another bill signed by the governor Thursday caps the amount of damages public employees can receive if they are retaliated against for reporting wrongdoing at a governmental agency.

Under the law, people who sue agencies for violation of the Texas Whistle-Blower Act, which protects employees who report illegal activity in an agency, can receive between $50,000 and $250,000 in compensatory damages, depending on the size of an agency.

Compensatory damages include pain and suffering and mental anguish.

In other bill signings Thursday, the governor approved legislation:

— Increasing the penalties for evading arrest in a vehicle.

A person evading arrest in a vehicle can be charged with a class A misdemeanor, punishable by up to a year in jail and a $4,000.

A person who injures another while evading arrest in a car can be charged with a third-degree felony, punishable by up to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

If someone dies as a result of a person fleeing in a car, the driver can be charged with a second-degree felony, punishable by up to 20 years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

— Making the reckless discharge of a firearm within a metropolitan area a misdemeanor punishable by up to a year in jail and a fine of up to $4,000.

Supporters of the bill say it is necessary because dozens of people are injured by random gunfire every year.

— Prohibiting the state from issuing tanning salon permits to sexually-oriented businesses.

Hospitalized children in 17th century England were commonly treated to two gallons of beer as part of their weekly rations.

Double life terms

FORT WORTH (AP) — A case the Palo Pinto County district attorney called "one of the most vicious, cold-blooded crimes that I have ever prosecuted" has ended with a life sentence for the accused.

William Cody Grim, 35, was sentenced to life in prison for using a deadly weapon to commit an intentional felony injury to a child. He also was given 20 years in prison on each of two counts of aggravated assault with a deadly weapon.

Grim, of Lebanon, Ohio, also was fined $10,000 Wednesday for each offense. Court officials said he will serve at least 30 years before becoming eligible for parole.

The punishment is for a December shooting that wounded Tammy Atkinson, a Breckenridge woman who used to date Grim, and a 10-year-old girl.

Palo Pinto County D.A. Jerry Ray said that during a highway encounter, Grim shot Ms. Atkinson three times in the back as she begged for help from motorist John Tolbert, who was in a car with his wife and two children.

Tolbert pulled the wounded woman into his car and sped off. Grim followed in his pickup and fired at least four shots into the rear of Tolbert's vehicle during the chase.

When the two wound up trapped on a dead-end street, Ray said Grim walked up to Tolbert's vehicle and fired a shot that struck the 10-year-old girl in the elbow, and then he fired the remaining bullets into Atkinson.

Testimony showed that Grim threw the empty pistol onto the hood of Tolbert's vehicle and said, "I've done what I came to do."

The 10-year-old girl is being treated by bone specialists in Fort Worth. "She still cannot lift a dish or a saucer with that arm," Ray said.

Fight brewing over adding toad to list

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is reasserting its power to enforce the Endangered Species Act in a sternly worded message to a hostile county board in Nevada that refuses to recognize the law.

Michael Spear, agency regional director in Portland, Ore., underscored the authority in a letter to the Nye County Board of Commissioners about a petition to list the Amargosa toad as an endangered species.

"The service can indeed enforce the ESA on state or private lands," Spear said in a June 5 letter to the board, which the agency made public on Thursday. "To the extent that you are implying that federal public lands actually belong to the state, you are incorrect."

The Justice Department filed a lawsuit against the county in December over its contention that the state controls public lands and federal officials have no jurisdiction.

Last month, the five commissioners told the Fish and Wildlife Service's state supervisor to stay off the state's lands.

"Nye County does not consider the ESA to be a valid law because the federal government does not have the constitutionally granted authority to pass such laws," the board said in a May 2 letter to State Supervisor Carlos Mendoza in Reno, Nev. "The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service does not have the jurisdiction or authority to come onto lands owned by the State of Nevada or private lands to enforce the ESA."

Spear said in a telephone interview from Portland on Thursday he didn't want the county's opinion to go unchallenged. Spear, whose region covers much of the West, wrote in the letter, "No court, anywhere, has ever held the ESA to be constitutionally invalid on its face. ..."

Agency officials will work closely with local authorities, Spear said. But "an invitation does not have to be extended in order for the Fish and Wildlife Service to carry out its congressional mandate with respect to the ESA."

In September 1994, a Boulder, Colo., environmental group, Biodiversity Legal Foundation, petitioned the Fish and Wildlife Service to list the toad as an endangered amphibian. The organization said only 30 of the toads were counted last year in their prime habitat, a 9-mile stretch of the Amargosa River and springs near Beatty, about 115 miles northwest of Las Vegas. That compares to thousands of toads counted in 1958, according to the service.

You might control your fate

By Phillip Alder

Lord Nelson once sent this memorandum to his fleet: "Something must be left to chance; nothing is sure in a sea fight beyond all others.". At the bridge table, though, this isn't always true. In today's deal, for example, West has a chance to defeat four hearts.

South's three hearts was aggressive, but he felt that a two-heart rebid, which would have been non-forcing in his methods, was more of an underbid.

After winning the first trick with the spade king, West could have sunk the contract without trace by switching to the diamond jack. Suppose South wins with the diamond ace and returns a spade. The defenders take the trick, cash their diamond winner and exit with a trump. South wins in hand and ruffs the spade queen in the dummy, but then what? He is stranded in the dummy, unable to stop West from getting a club ruff to defeat the contract.

However, all three Wests who faced this problem switched to a trump at trick two. The first skipper — sorry, declarer — drew trumps and led a club. When West's singleton king appeared, he was allowed to win the trick. Now West had to cash the spade ace to stop the overtrick.

At the second table, West did better. On the third round of trumps, he discarded the club king! The pirates overran South's vessel.

The last declarer led a club immediately, ducking West's king. He had fired the winning volley.

If Lord Nelson had defended this deal correctly before a sea battle, would he have scored a victory on the Victory?

Scientists pursue pig cells as new treatment for diabetes

WASHINGTON (AP) — A single injection of pigs' pancreas cells allowed diabetic monkeys to go without daily insulin shots for as long as two years, an experiment Canadian researchers called promising enough to try on people.

Islet cells make insulin, a hormone vital to the body's ability to use sugar. Doctors have transplanted human islet cells, from cadavers or aborted fetuses, into a handful of human diabetics, whose bodies lack the insulin they need to live.

But these transplants haven't been tried enough to prove they work, and there aren't enough human islet cells available for mass testing. So a team from the University of Toronto turned to pigs, and reported Thursday that the transplants are promising enough to begin testing in a small group of people later this year.

"We are very confident," Dr. David Zhou said at the annual meeting of The Endocrine Society. "The limited supply of human islet cells makes this the way to go."

The American Diabetes Association cautioned that Zhou's work is very preliminary.

"It's encouraging, with a caveat ... that it's not unusual for these things to run into problems" at this stage of development, said Richard Kahn, the foundation's chief scientist. "Keep your fingers crossed, but I think we're some time away from saying we've got it."

Pigs were chosen because diabetics for years used porcine insulin, which has just one amino acid different from human insulin. Early results with pig islets have persuaded five biotechnology firms to pursue the possible treatment, experts said.

Zhou and Dr. Anthony Sun culled islet cells from pig pancreases and encased them in a semipermeable membrane made of seaweed extract. Lab tests showed the membrane protected the islet cells from the immune system, which normally attacks foreign cells, while allowing the newly produced insulin to enter the body.

The islet transplants worked in small animals, so the researchers tested monkeys, traditionally the last step before a human trial. Seven diabetic monkeys received between 30,000 and 70,000 porcine islet cells in a quick fluid injection to the abdomen.

Blood tests showed the monkeys began producing insulin. When Zhou injected them with large doses of glucose, that insulin quickly brought the blood-sugar overdose under control, he reported. The monkeys haven't needed insulin for between six and 26 months and counting, and haven't shown signs of rejecting the cells, he said.

Astros fall to Phillies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The Philadelphia Phillies are so banged up that even some of their substitutes are limited in what they can do.

Reserve Tony Longmire can't play the outfield because of a strained groin — but he could still swing the bat well enough to deliver a two-out, pinch-hit three-run home run in the ninth inning that lifted the Phillies to a 4-2 victory over the Houston Astros on Thursday night.

It was a much-needed victory for a Phillies team that had blown three-run leads in the previous two games of the series, and that got more bad news on the injury front before the game.

And Thursday, two more starters, catcher Darren Daulton and shortstop Kevin Stocker, were out of the lineup after being hit by balls the night before.

Daulton had a sore right hand after taking a foul tip, while Stocker had a sore right leg after being hit by a pitch. Both are considered day-to-day.

The Phillies were left with a lineup that had Jim Eisenreich, with 39 homers in eight major-league seasons, batting cleanup. Philadelphia's sixth, seventh and eight hitters were Gary Varsho (.265), Lenny Webster (.219) and Randy Ready (.136).

Yet it was Varsho and Ready who got crucial hits off Astros' closer John Hudek in the Phillies' ninth-inning comeback.

The Astros had just taken a 2-1 lead in the top of the ninth on pinch-hitter Dave Magadan's RBI single and they had to feel confident with Hudek, who recorded saves in all seven of his previous chances, on the mound.

But Varsho lined a one-out single to right. Then Ready, who had only one hit in his previous 30 at-bats, fought his way out of an 0-2 hole to poke a single to left.

"It's no fun being 0-2 right away," said Ready, who said although he'd never faced Hudek before, he knew he'd see a steady stream of fastballs.

"His best pitch is a fastball. He's not going to get beat with his second or third pitch," he said. "He's trying to end the game with his best pitch."

Longmire pinch-hit for Ricky Bottalico (3-1), who got the final two outs of ninth to get the win.

After giving up the winning homer, Hudek (2-2) stayed by himself in the tunnel behind the Astros dugout for 15 minutes before entering the clubhouse.

Microsoft, government...

Federal appeals court reinstates settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal appeals court today approved the government's antitrust settlement with Microsoft Corp. over software discounting, ruling that a lower court judge erred by rejecting it.

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit held that a lower court judge should not have rejected the settlement, which required Microsoft to end discounts to personal computer manufacturers.

The three-judge panel also disqualified the judge who had rejected the proposed consent decree. It ordered the case sent back to U.S. District Court and reassigned to another judge with instructions to grant approval.

The decision was good news for Microsoft investors, who pushed the stock up $1.75 to $86.62 by late morning on the NASDAQ exchange.

Stock analyst Rick Owens with Pacific Crest Securities in Portland said today's decision resolves some uncertainty in Microsoft's favor.

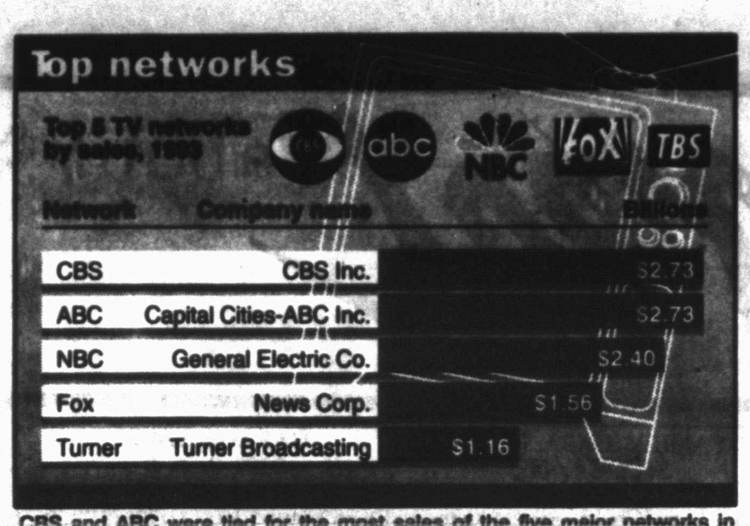

"I think it is positive. I think most people thought it would ultimately go this way," Owens said. "This obviously confirms, and removes the uncertainty."

The decree had been criticized by rival software companies as a mere slap on the wrist because it allowed Microsoft retain its strong dominance in the market.

On Feb. 14, U.S. District Judge Stanley Sporkin had rejected the settlement, saying he did not have enough information to determine if the deal was in the public interest.

Sporkin, a former enforcement chief of the Securities and Exchange Commission, had criticized the Justice Department's antitrust division for not pursuing a broader case against Microsoft.

Since the consent decree was reached last summer, the Justice Department went to court to block Microsoft's $2 billion acquisition of Intuit, Inc., a maker of personal finance software. Microsoft announced last month that it was dropping plans to acquire Intuit rather than fight the Justice Department.

CBS and ABC were tied for the most sales of the five major networks in 1993, with NBC running a close third. Far behind were both Fox and Turner.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was either an actor's performance of a lifetime, or an innocent man's sincere demonstration that he doesn't have the hands of a killer.

Either way, O.J. Simpson's effort to put on gloves that prosecutors say he wore during two murders was one of the most dramatic moments of his trial.

Jurors were wide-eyed Thursday as a grimacing Simpson approached them, struggling to pull on the left glove that was found near the mutilated bodies of his ex-wife and her friend. He tugged at the tops of the fingers to show that his hand wasn't all the way in.

He appeared to have less trouble getting his hand into the infamous right glove, which was found on his estate and DNA experts say is stained with the blood of both victims and Simpson.

Jurors followed Simpson's hands with their eyes as he turned his wrists at different angles, extended his fingers and stretched his arms toward the jury box. When Simpson walked back to his seat, several panelists began writing in their notebooks.

But Simpson's supporters were ecstatic after court.

"You see, those gloves don't even fit," said a beaming Carmelita Durio, Simpson's sister.

DCOS hears report

$460,000 and 10-inch sanitary line at $183,000. Road evcavation was estimated at $368,000, asphalt pavement at $986,400.

A preliminary schedule for development of the industrial park indicated roadway grading could be completed by November and construction of the first phase of improvements could be finished by April of 1996. But Baze called it unrealistic, due to financial constraints.

"I don't think we could be ready (financially) by November to do this. Let's just leave the time off," said Baze.

Earlier in the meeting, the board approved a confidentiality agreement with Freese & Nichols. The agreement authorizes the firm to release some information, primarily pertaining to the industrial park, but prohibits the release of any information about a prospective client.

DCOS board members approved an administrative budget of $107,350 for 1995-96 — an amount identical to the 1994-95 budget. The budget includes no pay increases for the corporation's two staff members.

The staff had bcome eligible for retirement benefits, however, and the board approved a one to one matching plan of up to five percent of base salary.

The board also approved hiring of summer help from June 19 through Aug. 16, at a cost of $1,342.55. The proposal originally stated that the Board of County Development would pay for position, but DCOS board members — noting that the employee would be utilized almost exclusively by the DCOS — felt it more appropriate for the corporation to foot the bill.

The board also authorized spending $250 for a uninterrupted power supply, approved previous minutes and payment of bills and elected to send to committee a request for a business reply card form.

In one other item, the board approved a third party consultant contract form. The form could be used if someone promises, for a fee, to bring industry to Scurry County. As stipulated Thursday, a final consultant contract would still have to be approved by the board. The form was approved 3-2 with John Fagin, Jack Gorman and Bill Seale in favor of it and Baze and Roy McQueen opposed.

All board members were present.

Gas kills man

VINTON, La. (AP) — A 60-year-old Texas man was found dead in his mobile home, apparently from carbon monoxide poisoning, authorities said.

James Bilbo of Beaumont was found at 9:40 a.m. Thursday. A generator connected to an air conditioner had apparently produced carbon monoxide fumes, Assistant Police Chief Dwayne Dupre said.

Bilbo was asphyxiated by the odorless, colorless gas, Dupre said.

Police said there were no signs of foul play.

A 34-year-old male was taken into custody at Municipal Court at 10:06 a.m. and transported to the county jail to lay out fines for Class C assault.

Defense decries fed leaks

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Weapons found in Terry Nichols' home are similar to those stolen in a robbery that federal officials believe may have helped to finance the bombing in Oklahoma, newspapers reported today.

The Dallas Morning News and the Detroit Free Press cited unidentified officials in their reports on the guns. Nichols' attorney, Michael Tigar, has complained that such government leaks are unfair and should be stopped.

"In this case, one abuse has bred another — the government claims the right to inquire at leisure and leak at will," Tigar said in a motion filed in U.S. District Court on Thursday.

Tigar is seeking a hearing to determine the extent of what he calls government misconduct, including efforts to keep witnesses from cooperating with defense investigators.

Nichols and Timothy McVeigh are being held without bail in the April 19 federal building bombing that killed 168 people and injured more than 500. They face the death penalty if convicted.

One of those injured in the bombing was going home from the hospital today after spending a month in a coma. Patti Hall, 57, was one of the first people rescued from the federal building. Both of her legs, knees and ankles were broken, along with her pelvis, collarbone and an elbow.

Ms. Hall worked in the Federal Employees Credit Union, where 18 of 33 employees and four customers were killed by the blast.

Tigar also asked the judge to order that the defense be given "all material provided by the government to the media" at the same time the media receives it.

The U.S. attorney's office would not comment on Tigar's motion.

Militia generates cross fire with senators

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was an extraordinary scene: The witnesses, some decked out in military camouflage, used words such as "tyranny" and "servitude" to describe government encroachment into ordinary citizens' lives. Senators fired back, describing the views of these self-styled citizen militiamen as "extreme" and "abhorrent."

The setting was a Senate subcommittee hearing Thursday called by Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., in the wake of the April 19 federal building bombing in Oklahoma City. Specter, who's running for president, said he wanted to determine whether the burgeoning militia movement posed a threat to safety and the federal government — and to what extent the government might pose a threat to militia members' rights.

Some of the verbal exchanges were sharp.

"The federal government needs a good spanking to make it behave," Norman Olson, the member of the Michigan Militia who was wearing military fatigues, told the senators.

James Johnson, a member of the Ohio Unorganized Militia, said the government was increasing taxes and regulation to the point of leading citizens "down the road to involuntary servitude."

"With the increasing polarization between the tax-paying citizens and government, the only thing that stands between what is going on now and armed conflict is time," Johnson said.

"We stand against corruption and the tyranny of government," Olson told Specter. 'We're coming to believe you all stand for that corruption."

Specter's reply was testy: "I don't take that lightly, your comment that I represent corruption. And I'd like you to prove it."

Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., asked the five militia witnesses if there ever were circumstances under which people could take the law into their own hands. Each said no.

"Absolutely not," said Robert Fletcher, a militia leader from Noxon, Mont. "At no time have we espoused any such action. We are a defensive concept."

There are more than 220 militias nationwide, Specter said. The militias operate in about 40 states, said Robert Bryant, an assistant FBI director.

Law enforcement officials also testified before the Senate Judiciary subcommittee on terrorism, technology and government information that Specter chairs. All agreed the militias were "disturbing and dangerous."

"Federal and local enforcement personnel have been threatened, harassed, assaulted and shot" by militia members, said James L. Brown, deputy associate director for criminal enforcement at the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

The lawmakers said they felt current laws were adequate to handle violence on domestic soil or investigate threats of violence. However, they favored the anti-terrorism bill the Senate passed last week in response to the Oklahoma City bombing that killed 168 people.

The $2 billion Senate package includes provisions to enlarge federal law enforcement agencies and the government's wiretapping authority.

Olson said he understood "the dynamic of retaliation and revenge — when justice is taken out of the equation."

Specter asked Olson if he was referring to the Oklahoma bombing.

"You're trying to lay at the feet of the militia some culpability," Olson said. "You're trying to make us something we are not, much as the press has done."

Olson said he believed "foreign interests" were involved in the Oklahoma bombing. Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols, the only two people charged in the explosion, were both Americans. Nichols and his brother, James, reportedly attended meetings of the Michigan Militia.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., testified that the internal publications of the Wolverine Brigade of the Southern Michigan Regional Militia were full of "paranoid conspiracy theories."

"Extreme hate rhetoric contributes to an incendiary atmosphere in which an unstable individual will take the rhetoric seriously and light a match — or a fuse," Levin said.

Feinstein said she was concerned about reports of militia members stockpiling weapons.

"I see nothing in the Constitution that provides for these kinds of private armies," she said, estimating that California was home to 35 militia groups.

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., said he found the views of the militia "abhorrent."

The blue whale is the biggest animal ever to live on earth. Its tongue weighs as much as an elephant, though it eats mostly tiny shrimp called krill.

Dear Abby

Daughter Sinks Her Chances By Taking a Topless Swim

by Abigail Van Buren

© 1995 Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I have been reading your column for many years and have agreed to take your advice on this problem:

We have a beautiful daughter who will soon celebrate her 18th birthday. (I'll call her "Cindy.") A few years ago, we decided we would make her 18th birthday really special by surprising her with a brand-new car.

Last Saturday, my wife was out of town and I returned home unexpectedly due to a fire at the plant where I work. As I came around the back of the house, I heard Cindy and her friends laughing and shouting in the swimming pool as usual, but my daughter and her girlfriends were not wearing the tops to their bathing suits! To my horror, there were several boys in the pool with them!

Now I no longer feel like buying Cindy a car for her 18th birthday. My wife disagrees, and says the punishment is too harsh. What do you say, Abby?

DISAPPOINTED DAD

DEAR DISAPPOINTED: If you want to punish your daughter because she and her girlfriends were topless in the pool in the presence of boys, please find another way. I agree with your wife. The punishment doesn't fit the "crime."

DEAR ABBY: How does one calculate a wedding anniversary? Is it the number of years two people have been married to each other? Or can it be the total number of years a person has been married to one, two and possibly three mates?

This is not a gag, Abby. Let me explain: My wife and I are both in our 70s, and neither of us is in the best of health.

My wife was widowed twice. I lost only one mate after having been married to her for 21 years.

My wife recently realized that with more than 48 years of being married, she has never celebrated a 25th anniversary. To reach that point together, we have several years to go — and may not make it. However, if we add up all her married time, we will reach 50 years of marriage in 1996. Is this an anniversary? Can we celebrate with a party?

GOING FOR THE GOLD

DEAR GOING FOR THE GOLD: Of course you can celebrate your forthcoming anniversary. But count only the years that you and she have been husband and wife. In order to qualify for a silver or golden wedding anniversary, the couple must have been married to each other for 25 or 50 years.

DEAR ABBY: The letter in your column from "Indiana Mom," who complained that her daughter's boyfriend was eating her out of house and home, floored me.

Abby, in this day and age, when kids are faced with drugs, date rape, peer pressure, pregnancy, AIDS, violence at home and in the schools, plus a multitude of other problems, "Indiana Mom" is upset because her daughter's boyfriend eats a lot!

Mom needs to do a reality check, rearrange her priorities, and buy another dozen cookies for her lucky daughter and the hungry boyfriend.

Robert Fulghum said it best: "Life is lumpy. And a lump in the oatmeal, a lump in the throat and a lump in the breast are not the same lump. One should learn the difference."

Astro-graph

By Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

Saturday, June 17, 1995

Your probabilities for success look strong in two areas for the year ahead. One is where your social life is concerned, the other is focused on your career.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Keep in mind today that give and take is a two way street. Try not to be an enthusiastic receiver and a reluctant reciprocator. Treat each gesture equally. Trying to patch up a broken romance? The Astro-Graph Matchmaker can help you understand what to do to make the relationship work. Mail $2.75 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 4465, New York, NY 10163.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) If you are hired for a specific task today, ask your employer to put everything they expect in writing. If you don't, there will be trouble later.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Unfortunately, you can't put too much stock in the promises of bigwigs and hotshots today. Their offers might have very little substance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) It will take more than your charm and good looks to get you by in contested career situations today. When challenged, don't underestimate your opposition.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Your statements, opinions and positions will probably get challenged today, so have your facts ready to back up what you say. If you can't, you could look bad.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Double check all your ledger entries today to avoid possible mistakes. If not, you might show a deficit where you thought you had a profit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Strive to be self-reliant today. Persons you can usually lean upon may not presently be in a position to help you too much.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be charitable today, but also make sure you're helping the right persons for the right reasons. Do not let anyone take advantage of you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) This could be a very enjoyable day for you if you practice moderation in all things. Excesses in any form will take the edge off of your pleasure.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Try not to make things unnecessarily hard today by thinking that others are getting the breaks denied you. You wouldn't want to be in their shoes.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You usually find braggarts unappealing. Today, however, your pals might find reasons to think you have become one.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Unless you truly know what you're doing, don't try to manage someone else's resources today. You could make some costly errors.

Ex-Boy Scout leaders are charged with rape

CRANSTON, R.I. (AP) — At the entrance to the Champlin Boy Scout Reservation is a sign stating the camp's purpose: "To help boys to be physically strong, mentally awake and morally straight."

For at least two boys, though, it was a place where they were allegedly given alcohol, shown pornographic movies and raped in the wilderness by their Scout leaders.

Two former leaders have been charged with rape, and police said Thursday they believe more boys were victimized as far back as 1981.

"This will be a long and involved investigation," Police Chief Augustine Comella said. "A lot has gone on at the camp over the years."

A 25-year-old man who led police to Paul Tondreau and Kenneth Gaspar said they used fear to prey on campers.

Tondreau said he was a Vietnam veteran who had violent flashbacks while sleepwalking and "could lash out at any time and kill you," according to the man, who spoke on the condition of anonymity. He said Tondreau would "sleepwalk" into his tent at night and rape him.

Tondreau, a 48-year-old carpenter at a hospital, was arrested Monday and faces two rape charges.

Gaspar, 37, is a computer maintenance man for a cable television company. He was barred from the Boy Scouts last year after being convicted of molesting a 12-year-old boy, who wasn't a Scout, and receiving a 30-year suspended sentence.

Both men were being held pending bail hearings.

The 25-year-old man said that based on what he has seen and heard, he believes the men assaulted at least 20 other boys.

The man said he was assaulted nearly 40 times over three years, starting when he was 14.
