More Gas Lines

By The Associated Press

Panic-buying and the nation-wide protest by independent truckers brought new rounds of California-style gasoline lines to the South and East Coast today.

In Maryland, droves of motorists were topping off their gas tanks in anticipation of an emergency order by Gov. Harry Hughes to deal with the shortages. Morning rush-hour traffic in the Baltimore area was snarled by commuters caught in slow lanes, suddenly transformed into gas lines.

Uncle Sam Should Pay

WASHINGTON (AP)-A century ago, Gen. George Custer paid with his life for the government's policy of uprooting the Sioux Indians from land in the Black Hills of South Dakota. A century later, a federal court says Uncle Sam should pay the Indians for the land.

The U.S. Court of Claims ruled 5-2 Wednesday that the Sioux are entitled to $17.5 million for their land and 5 percent interest dating back to the seizeure 102 years ago.

CETA Refund Ordered

HOUSTON (AP)-A Houston job redevelopment agency has been ordered to pay back more than $318,000 in Comprehensive Employment and Training Act funds.

The Texas Department of Community Affairs, in a May 15 letter, asked the Houston Employment Area Redevelopment and Training Corp. to repay undocumentable portions of five CETA contracts ranging from drug rehabilitation programs to job training. The contracts awarded between 1975 and 1977 have since been terminated.

Pay Raise Unlikely

WASHINGTON (AP)-House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill said today he believes a pay raise for members of Congress and top-paid bureaucrats is dead this year.

But the Massachusetts Democrat told a news conference that supporters of the hike "got more votes than I anticipated" during a series of votes on the question Wednesday. And he added "you never can tell."

Most people in the civilized world not only heard of John Wayne, but they probably saw a bunch of his motion pictures. For a number of years it seemed that a John Wayne movie was drawing crowds every few weeks.

The Associated Press ran a simple list of his movie titles following his death from cancer, and it made a long story within itself.

His death ranks with Rudolph Valentino, Jean Harlow, Marilyn Monroe and Elvis Presley in news value for such events in the field of entertainment. Possibly the death of Wayne was not so shocking as the others, since nearly everybody was aware that he was fighting cancer, but there undoubtedly were some who thought that the Duke would lick this enemy just as he had triumphed over various adversaries on the screen.

John Wayne won us over back in the days when he was making western movies which came to the 10-cent theater every Saturday as the feature film on a weekend program that also included a chapter in the current western serial.

There were such stars as Buck Jones, Tim McCoy, Hoot Gibson, Ken Maynard, etc., who helped vary the Saturday afternoon fare for the younger set. And it was John Wayne who made a prophet out of us. He got our vote as favorite movie star and one who was likely to go on to greater success. One of our brothers scoffed at our selection and all but offered to wager that Bob Steele would be around longer than John Wayne.

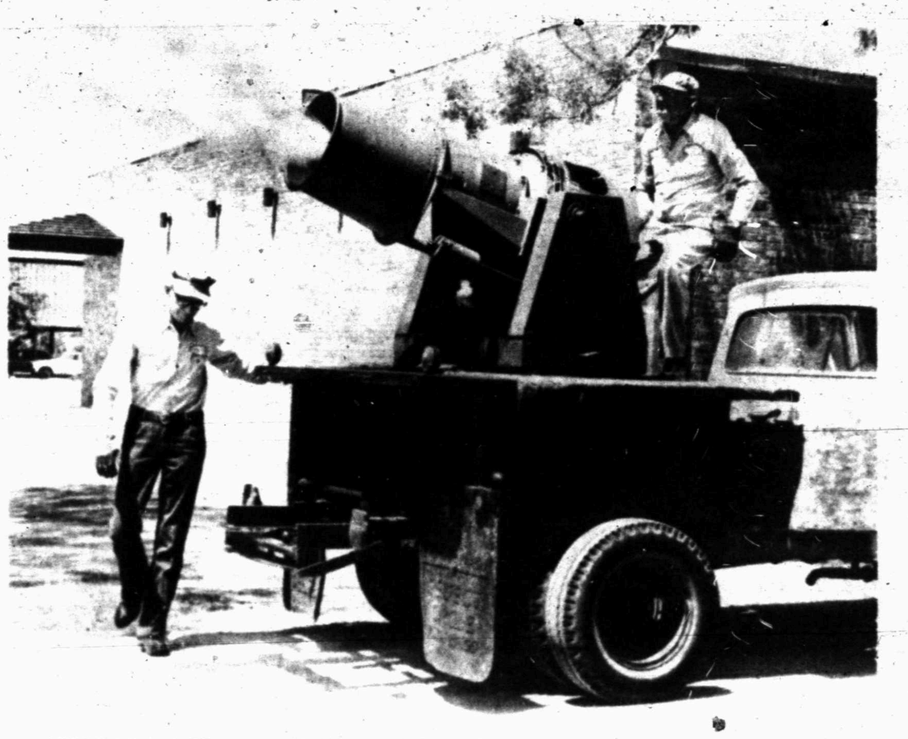

So, who knows where Bob Steele is today?

Anyway, no matter how many grade "A" movies he made in subsequent years, some of our best memories of John Wayne go back to those days when he made those westerns for Monogram that attracted the kids to the dime movie house every Saturday and provided them with something to discuss at school during the following week.

VECTOR CONTROL—O.H. Hooper, left, and Benerd Gleastin, two employees in the city-county vector control program, are shown with a fogging-type piece of equipment. The fogger produces a fine mist that can be aimed at shrubs and tall grass. Its purpose is to kill adult mosquitoes and flies. Annual War Declared On Mosquitoes, Houseflies

By JOHN LONG

A war is being quietly waged in Snyder. Instead of fallout, there is a fogger, and in place of weapons, there are hand-held spray nozzles.

The casualities in the war are confined to flies and mosquitoes, the spreaders of disease. They are the only quarry sought or killed in the Vector Control Program.

The program is aimed at keeping fly and mosquito populations in check. It is conducted through the Scurry County Health Unit, and is a joint effort by the City of Snyder and Scurry County.

"Neither the city nor the county has been bothered much by the pests or their diseases, which probably is attributable to the program.

"We've not had any big things from mosquitoes or any of the predominant diseases they carry," said Dr. Robert Pierce, county health officer.

"Flies and mosquites carry disease, but we don't see too much of it. But we're doing good to get rid of them," he added. "I think the program plays a big part. It reaches a lot more people than you think."

The vector program is conducted throughout Snyder and in communities in the county. It begins in the spring and continues through late fall. Then, the cold weather takes over and provides a natural check against pest populations.

Carter Heads For Vienna

WASHINGTON (AP)-President Carter headed for Vienna today, saying he is approaching his first summit with Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev "with hope but without false expectations."

At a departure ceremony on the White House south lawn, the president said his main goal at the summit and the "unchanging duty of every president" is to avoid nuclear war while maintaining U.S. security.

Carter left with modest goals for the summit, where the two leaders will sign a treaty to limit U.S. and Soviet strategic nuclear weapons.

He said the treaty "gives us enhanced national security and increased hope for a peaceful future."

Drop In Refining Capacity Offsets Rise In Imports

WASHINGTON (AP)—A sharp, unexpected rise in oil imports this week could mean no "generalized shortage" at gasoline stations this summer, Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger said today.

But that good news could be jeopardized by a troublesome, unexplained drop in refinery capacity, Schlesinger told a news conference.

He called that decline "disappointing, troublesome...irritating" and said the Deparatment of Energy will investigate and call in individual companies to account for their actions.

Schlesinger also said that long lines at service stations could persist, despite rising imports, unless the stations stagger their hours of operation rather than all close early in the day.

He recommended that each governor consider ordering that gas stations in their states stagger those hours to assure continuous gasoline supplies.

The secretary reported that crude-oil imports rose by 840,000 barrels per day this week over the previous week's level to 6.6 million barrels per day.

Imports recently have averaged 6.1 million to 6.2 million barrels a day, which would permit gasoline supplies this summer to reach 95 to 96 percent of last summer's levels, he said.

"If we get higher than projected arrivals...this supply figure can go even higher," he said.

Nevertheless, continuation of the present spurt remains 'a big 'if,' " Schlesinger cautioned.

He said the United States remains vulnerable to world oil exporters, and, "There is no guarantee this turnaround will continue."

He said Libya's leaders hint that they may reduce crude oil imports to the United States on political grounds; Nigeria is concerned over U.S. policy regarding Rhodesia Zimbabwe; Iran continues to be "somewhat chaotic;" and Saudi Arabia's policies are "open to change."

Public Invited To Welcome Delegation

All Snyder area residents interested in attracting a new industry here are being invited to be on hand at the airport Wednesday morning when officials of a firm are scheduled to arrive here.

Three officials of an industry that is considering this area as a plant site are scheduled to arrive here at about 9:15 a.m. Wednesday.

They will be met by officials of local agencies along with any other citizens who are interested. Following brief greetings at the airport, the visitors will begin tours of the area, including stops at other industrial plants, possible plant sites, and community facilities.

The Scurry County Industrial Foundation board, in a meeting Wednesday afternoon, expressed a desire for a good crowd of local citizens to be at the airport when the officials of the industry arrive. Officials of the firm have indicated that public acceptance will be a factor in arriving at their decision on a plant site.

Wildlife Art, Jewelry In Diamond M Exhibit

An art show featuring the wildlife artistry of Tom and Doris Tischler and jewelry of Sonya Haynie will open Sunday at 1 p.m. at the Diamond M Museum.

The Tischlers spent four years in Africa where Tom worked as architect for the Ethiopian government's Wildlife Conservation Organization. Tom, who received his architectural training at the University of Texas in Austin, specializes in bronze sculptures.

Doris Tischler's collection of paintings, sketches and watercolors include African and American wildlife. She attended the school of fine arts at the University of Texas at Austin where she later illustrated paleontology publications for the geology department.

Mrs. Tischler served as a staff artist for the Oral Maxillo facial surgery department of the University of Zurich in Switzerland from 1969 to 1971 and worked for two years as illustrator for the Imperial Ethiopian Government Wildlife Conservation Organization.

Miss Haynie, who attended junior high and high school in Snyder, teaches parttime at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin in Odessa. She instructs students in jewelry making, teaches art education and supervises student art teachers. She was Missionaries Visit...

Fosters Note Changes After Two Years Away

Two former Snyderites returning here for a visit say the town has grown.

That was the observation of Ken and Marilyn Foster who left Snyder two years ago to live in Quito, Ecuador. The couple, with associations in the missionary field, said they felt a divine calling to go to Quito.

Foster, a former coach at Snyder Junior High, is now a coach at Alliance Academy in Quito, and his wife is a kingergarten teacher at the school.

"We felt that our mission -- our job -- is working with m-k's, the children of missionaries," said Foster. That is in line with the academy's job, too. "It's primary thrust is the education of missionary kids," he said.

His wife is the daughter of missionaries who spent 30 years in the African nation of Nigeria. Even in Quito, Mrs. Foster often sees her brother and sister-in-law, Al and Connie McElheran, who are also former Snyder residents living there. The McElherans are involved in radio missionary work.

The Fosters themselves have lived in Nigeria and Canada. They have no regrets concerning their move to South America, and said they will live there "until we retire or until the Lord comes."

"We really like it there," Foster said. "It's a great place."

The Fosters came to Snyder last Saturday, and stayed until Thursday morning. While here, they stayed with the Harlan Amoxes at 2242 Sunset.

"I couldn't believe it driving in here," said Foster. "There's been a lot of growth and, I hear, a lot of industry is coming."

BACK IN TOWN—Ken and Marilyn Foster, along with daughters Valerie and (not shown) Heather, returned to Snyder briefly for a visit. The family left town about two years ago to go to Quito, Ecuador. The Fosters both teach at Alliance Academy, an English-speaking school which caters primarily to the education of children of missionary parents. The Fosters themselves have associations with the missionary field. (SDN Staff Photo)

unpredictable agency

If there is anything more unpredictable than the weather and most of the predictions about it, it will have to be the $10 billion Department of Energy (DOE). One day we read that this agency has asked the major oil companies not to buy foreign oil on the world market and before a week is over we are informed that DOE is urging oil firms to buy foreign crude to bolster supplies.

In the first story an oil company executive was quoted saying, "We were all set to go out and buy some of this oil and hell with the price, but Schlesinger's people got in touch with us and asked us not to. They were afraid we would get out there on the world market and bid up the price," the oilman said. "they talked about the balance-of-payments deficit, too. And one guy even mentioned that we'd make our allies mad if we bid up the price and caused them to pay more."

An energy department spokesman confirmed that the government had requested the companies not to buy spot-market oil. "We're asking them not to do it. If the supply situation remains tight, the spot-market price will become the standard. We shouldn't be a party to bidding it up and up. It is up to $25 a barrel in some instances."

The general world-market price for oil is now $18 per barrel but it is not likely to stay there much longer.

The second story, which we are reading today, reports that the Department of Energy has begun to encourage U.S. oil firms to buy more crude oil overseas on the world market, even at high prices. One DOE official explains that the policy of "requesting" the nonpurchase of crude oil on the higher-priced world market was not working very well in holding the prices down and the politically volatile gasoline shortage "is more important now."

The reversal of policy accompanies another switch in direction: this one on heating oil. Only a short time ago, government put pressure on the oil companies to cut gasoline production in order to build inventories of heating oil for next winter. Now DOE has switched and encourages the refineries to produce gasoline for a month instead of the heating oil. "We may have gone overboard on that one," an energy official said.

Long before the energy department was formed, governmental agencies had laid the groundwork for the crunch now facing us. Interference in the marketplace and loading red tape on the oil industry is now showing its debilitating effects.

It has been a popular pasttime to blame the oil industry, and politicians have played on that to draw attention away from the basic source of our energy problem. It seems that bigness in everything save government is all that is needed to create a useful whipping boy.

If any one of the big oil companies had been as reckless with investment of consumer money as the $10 billion federal agency DOE has been with tax funds, the reaction would have been terrific. But since it is a governmental agency the amount becomes just a set of figures that somehow does not relate to the pocketbooks of the people.

Governmental officials now are admitting that there is little they can do to get us out of the energy crunch. They have not yet admitted that most of the problem stems from bureaucratic interference in the normal course of trade.

Private enterprise and the marketplace may find and answers in spite of regulations and controls. A way out can be found faster and with much less damage to the economy without the "help" of the bureaucracy.

Dumping DOE and putting a curb on the activities of the Environmental Protection Agency would give the whole energy industry a great assist. When consumers find the real source of their problem (if they ever do) their misplaced ire may switch from the whipping boy to little "princes" who are the true cause of the energy users' plight.

adopting trouble

How do we decide who is our enemy and who is our friend?

There are enough wars going on around the world, enough overt and covert cruelty so that we could bankrupt our own nation within months trying to right all the wrongs in the world.

But we don't do that.

We adopt other peoples' troubles as our own--selectively.

One after another of the African nations which were so eager to get out from under British or French "domination" are now worse off than ever.

In Uganda, the counter-revolutionaries who overthrew mean Idi Amin are themselves divided.

There is all-out war or chronic tribal strife in five other African nations. Children slaughtered in the Central African Empire for refusing to wear uniforms.

In Asia--Cambodia, Thailand, Vietnam and Laos, Pakistan and Afghanistan.

And in the Middle East--Israel and Lebanon, North and South Yemen, Iran.

In Europe, Ireland remains in ferment and Spain struggles with Basque separatists.

Closer to home, Latin America is in ferment.

Civil war in Nicaragua threatens to spill over into Costa Rica and, if it does, Panama is pledged to fight for Costa Rica.

While our Congress was debating giving our canal to Panama, Panamanians were supplying guns to Nicaragua.

The military-backed government of El Salvador is threatened with overthrow.

In Honduras, at least four organizations of peasants demand land reform--are seizing land or dying trying.

So if the United States wants to police the planet we could just throw darts at the map and start almost anyplace.

How do we decide?

This is important.

An entire generation of young Americans were turned off to their own government when we told them they had to go 6,000 miles from home perhaps to die to stop the advance of communism in Korea and Vietnam--but if they dared try to do anything about the advance of commission 90 miles from Florida they'd be thrown into jail.

Now some voices in Congress are talking about resuming the military draft. Another generation of young Americans deserves to know what for.

Where in the world will we elect to send them next and on what pretext?

Presently our White House and our State Department have selected South Africa and Rhodesia, Africa for economic sanctions.

The reason cannot be blamed just on injustices to blacks because there is infinitely more vicious black-on-black tribal terror in a dozen other African nations.

In the Middle East our government is torn between the preservation of Israel and the accessibility of Arab oil--so we supply money and weapons to both sides.

If we are looking for trouble, we need not look beyond our own nose.

We all have our warts.

And until anybody else threatens to come over here and start trouble here--young Americans demand and deserve better reasons than they've been getting for throwing themselves on somebody else's altar.

Although I do not suffer from a full-blown martyr complex, I am convinced that a portion of the tumbling-down-to-earth Skylab is going to strike me.

Skylab is the 77-ton space station launched several years ago by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. However, as the adage goes, what goes up must come down, and Skylab is coming down. Latest estimates put its final descent at sometime around the middle of July.

NASA has calculated the odds at 152-to-1 against a piece of Skylab harming human life anywhere in the world. But, I'm not just anyone, and I am singularly unlucky wherever I am.

The odds against any specific individual being clobbered, the space agency says, are 600 billion to 1. I, however, am not fooled by those impressive-sounding odds. I know the odds of me being hit come closer to being one on one.

I'm not saying that the whole Skylab is going to hit me, mind you, nor am I saying the biggest part of it is going to hit me. I feel that a piece just big enough to pound me into the ground will fall my way.

There is one man in town who disagrees with me. He feels the bulk of the space station is going to come his way.

Clay Scogin, a lieutenant with the city police department, claims to be one of the unluckiest people in the world. "If anyone across the face of the earth is struck by any part of Skylab, it'll be me," he lamented.

When I pointed out to him that the odds of him being hit are 600 billion to 1, he only shook his head. "They're referring to me," he said. "I'm one of the unluckiest men around. It's common knowledge and they must have it."

Defending my own hapless and luckless condition, I said I felt I would be the one hit by debris. Clay was steadfast in his lamentations.

"If you think you're going to be hit, get in line because it'll hit me first," he nearly cried.

I couldn't help but feel sorry for him, and for me, too. What this boils down to is a contest to see who is the unluckiest man in the world.

Clay and I have a diet cola bet on the outcome. Of course, only the loser of the contest -- that is to say, the survivor, the man who is not struck by Skylab and thus the second most unluckiest person in the world will get the diet cola. But, it will reveal for all time who the unluckiest man in the world really is.

WASHINGTON, D.C.--The true test of the greatness of a nation is never how well it deals with war, but how well it can learn to live in peace. Wars have always been the easy way to settle disputes, but peace has always been difficult to maintain. Nowhere is this more evident than in the Middle East today.

The roots of our culture, our religion, and our way of life all come from this region. Now, as in the beginning of civilization, this area continues to be one of the centers of world conflict. From the Assyrians, to the Babylonians, to the Macedonians, Romans, Turks, and Europeans this area has for 5000 years been subject to repeated wars and foreign domination. In recent history the Middle East has been involved in a 30 year war that has often had profound effects throughout the world. In 1956 an Arab-Israeli War also involved France and Britain because of the nationalization of the Suez Canal by Egypt. Soviet military intervention was narrowly averted. The 1973 Arab-Israeli conflict led to the oil embargo and rapidly escalating oil prices at a cost to the U.S. economy of billions of dollars.

But starting in November of 1977 with the visit of Anwar Sadat to Jerusalem the hopes for stability and peace in this region began to be a possibility. In March of 1979 a peace treaty was signed between Egypt and Israel. Though there are still significant obstacles to overcome, this action is a major step in the right direction.

All parties concerned are learning that the price of peace is never cheap. Anwar Sadat has been ostracized by his Arab neighbors and marked for assassination. Israel will have to withdraw from certain occupied lands making their strategic defense capability considerably more vulnerable. The American government will be required to pay $1.1 billion dollars in grants and provide $3.7 billion in military loans for Egypt and Israel.

It would appear that the motives of the United States to support peace in the Middle East are entirely altrustic--they are not. It is in our self interest that stability in this region be maintained. The continuous operation of the Suez Canal is vital to East-West trade. The flow of Arab oil is essential to the U.S. economy. There is a need for America to establish a military presence in the Mediterranean and the Persian Gulf which can effectively discourage Soviet aggression. A recent study was done by the Pentagon which found that the Soviet navy could only last eight days in the Mediterranean in the event of war--Why? Because of the effectiveness of the Israeli Air Force. So is $1.1 billion too much to pay for a chance at peace? I think not. The cost of war is astronomical.

letter to editor

To The Daily News:

I would like to thank the ones that made the workshop and seminar on drug information possible, and many thanks to the participants that attended. Thanks to the ones that contributed material things and spirit, the Snyder Police Dept., Scurry County Sheriffs Dept., the adult probation department and their hard work thanks to the county attorney and district attorney's office for their endorsement. Thanks to Dr. James Tully, Larry Genuchi, Donna and Paul Hurt, also Jenny Peveler, KSNY Radio Station, the Snyder Daily News, the Snyder Public Schools, Snyder Jaycees, Snyder Kiwanis Club, Rotary Club, Optimist Club, Lions Club, Chamber of Commerce and anyone else that may have worked on this program---many, many thanks.

The general concensus of the evaluation slips from the two programs indicated the people would like more workshops of this type.

Dr. Gayland Hurst said he would be more than glad to help us in any way that he could. His fee is very modest and what is left over from traveling expenses he puts into developing the program. He said it had been his experience in the past that on his second visit, the high school auditorium would be filled. Would some civic group like to have a part in this public awareness program? Dr. Hurst is a very good speaker and knows his subject well.

Thank you

WASHINGTON (NEA)--Money is still the mother's milk of politics, in spite of reformers' continuing attempts to reduce special interest influence in campaigns.

Several presidential candidates, particularly in the sea of Republicans, face a tough decision because of a 1974 law designed to control campaign costs.

The law allows a presidential candidate to get up to half his primary campaign money from a fund built by the $1 checkoff on the federal income tax form. But he must meet several conditions, including raising at least $5,000 in small contributions in each of 20 states and accepting a lid on all primary spending of about $14 million in 1980.

The availability of these funds was an important factor in Carter's campaign and undoubtedly could sustain another relative unknown in 1980. Total federal support for primary candidates was nearly $25 million in 1976. In addition Carter and President Ford received $21.8 million each from the general election fund.

But the leading Republican candidates are spending their money so quickly already that several soon will face a critical decision: is it more important to be able to spend freely supporters' money, or should they accept money from the special public fund with the mandatory spending ceiling?

The answer depends on how much a candidate expects to raise from private sources and his concern about any possible adverse public reaction to a freespending campaigner.

For example, John B. Connally would prefer not to accept the public funds. Perhaps mindful of last year's Senate elections in which candidates spent as much as $7 million in a state, Connally has determined he could easily spend close to $30 million before next July's GOP convention.

But Connally and his advisers are worried about the adverse impact of a rich Texan and his oil cronies seemingly "buying" the nomination.

Connally's decision may be affected by Ronald Reagan's. With a computerized mailing list of almost 500,000 supporters, Reagan would have no trouble raising more than $14 million. But his advisers feel it would be very difficult to reject the matching funds and the spirit of the 1974 law.

Other candidates will have no conflict. Sens. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee and Robert Dole of Kansas probably would take the federal money. As a Dole aide points out, he could spend $14 million in the campaign simply by raising $7 million himself; but if he rejects public financing, Dole would have to spend close to $20 million in fund-raising to have $14 million for campaign spending.

Primary proliferation and campaign costs ultimately may force the creation of a single national primary or, perhaps, regional contests.

Either step would make national campaigns more civilized; candidates could spend less time worrying about fundraising and more time discussing their differences in style and philosophy.

West's two-club bid was a Michaels' cue bid designed to show both major suits and little else. This nuisance bid backfired. First, it got North and South to seven clubs. Left to themselves they might well have stopped at six. Then, it told South how to play the hand.

He ruffed a heart in dummy at trick two, came to his hand with a trump and stopped to plan how to continue against all four trumps in the East hand.

He couldn't ruff out the last two little hearts. He would run out of his own trumps before East ran out. He could not cash the spade and diamond winners and then cross ruff. East would almost surely ruff the second spade.

There was another way to handle his problems. A spade-heart squeeze against West.

So he ruffed a second heart. Then he cashed dummy's ace and king of diamonds to discard one spade. Led and overtook dummy's last trump. Ran the rest of his trumps to come down to a three-card ending.

Dummy held A-K-8 of spades. Declarer held 7-5 of spades and the 10 of hearts. West could not keep three spades and a heart and just gave up.

Rose Is Symbol Of Dad's Day

Roses have been associated with Father's Day almost since the occasion's first celebration. Mrs. John Bruce Dodd, who launched Father's Day in 1910, personally selected the rose as its emblem.

The Red Rose is a living symbol; the White Rose marks remembrance.

The rose, the official flower of Father's Day, is also the choice of the American public as the U.S. national flower, according to James C. Krone, Executive Vice President of Roses, Inc., the national rose growers' organization.

Mr. Krone noted that the rose was the landslide winner in a nationwide poll conducted by Florists' Transworld Delivery, the floral delivery cooperative, to determine which flower Americans preferred for the national bloom.

"The United States is one of the few countries in the world that doesn't have an official national flower," Mr. Krone said, "but we hope Congress will finally act and name the rose, the 'people's choice.'"

Remember Father

The finger with a bow—as identified with remembering as the nose on a face.

Now, it's been adopted and adapted as a rememberance device associated with Father's Day and the date on which it falls.

Maybe someday everyone will use the "Father's Day Finger" to remind themselves and others that Father's Day is coming—the third Sunday of every June.

Will Apple of Her Eye Turn Into A Mince Guy?

By Abigail Van Buren

(1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.)

DEAR ABBY: Our only child has been ice skating since he was 6. He's had lessons, has won medals, and we're very proud of him. He is now 12 and wants to take ballet lessons.

I have mixed feelings about this, Abby. I am proud to have my son excel in athletics, but I just don't feel the same way about ballet. I have the feeling that ballet is for sissies, or the gay boys, and I want our son to be all man.

Should I let him take ballet? Or do you think if he does have any effeminate tendencies it would tip the scales in favor of his going the gay route?

UPTIGHT MOM

DEAR MOM: Let him take ballet if that's what he wants, and don't worry about tipping the scales in favor of his going the gay route. If that's not his natural direction, he won't take it. Originally, ballet was danced exclusively by men, you know. And some male ballet dancers are among the world's finest athletes.

DEAR ABBY: I have a very dear friend who is getting married in a church. My husband says we should not go to the wedding or send a gift because this couple has been living in sin for a year and a half.

She is still my friend and I think we should go regardless. What is your opinion?

SAN ANTONIO ROSE

DEAR ROSE: Attend the wedding, give a gift, and let your husband stay home if he wants to. If this couple is to be judged for their "sins," let the Lord do it.

DEAR ABBY: Why is it that when people have trouble seeing they go to a doctor and get glasses, but if they are hard of hearing they refuse to get their hearing tested?

My mother asked us to repeat everything we said, but if we suggested that she might be slightly deaf, she angrily insisted that there was nothing wrong with her hearing! This is how we solved the problem: When mother was present, we spoke in normal tones, refusing to shout or repeat anything. Consequently she was left out of all the conversations. When she complained, we reminded her in tones that she could hear that we saw no reason to repeat or yell since we believed her when she said there was nothing wrong with her hearing.

After a while, mother decided that perhaps she could have her hearing tested. We took her to an audiologist and, sure enough, she had a 40 percent hearing loss in one ear and 60 in the other! Now she wears a hearing aid and no longer has a problem. And neither have we.

US IN DENVER

DEAR US: Thanks for a good suggestion on handling folks who turn a deaf ear to suggestions that they get their hearing checked.

DEAR ABBY: How could you define a good friend?

CURIOUS

DEAR CURIOUS: "To know someone here or there with whom you can feel there is understanding in spite of distances or thoughts unexpressed...that can make of this earth a garden." (GOETHE)

Inflation Perils Health

By Gaynor Maddox

Nutrition is suffering as a result of the soaring inflation in food prices.

A recent national survey, "Family Health in an Era of Stress," indicates that 48 percent of American families are reducing the quality of their diets to cope with higher prices. They are cutting back despite warnings from experts that doing so risks health and vitality.

The same percentage of American families are cutting back on visits to doctors and dentists. They are even putting off buying eyeglasses.

These are a few of the findings of this survey sponsored by General Mills and conducted by the research organization of Yankelovich, Skelly and White.

The study was based on a national cross section of 1,254 families and included 2,181 interviews with various household members, including teen-agers.

Despite all the information on health and nutrition provided by the government and the media, only one in four families appears to follow good health practices, including eating a sensible and affordable daily diet.

Maybe the public doesn't want sound nutritional advice. Maybe people prefer reading about fancy cakes and pies. Many seem to live for today rather than worry about tomorrow.

Nutrition was only one of the health issues covered by the survey. Others included exercise, alcohol and cigarettes.

According to the report, physical fitness still attracts only one-third of American adults.

The report states: "Among the adults who do exercise regularly, generally it is the young (41 percent), the old (39 percent), the more affluent (43 percent) and the suburban residents (39 percent) who are more active than other groups, with men and women showing equal enthusiasm."

Americans' choice of leisure activities is strongly influenced by the need to unwind from job or household pressures, the survey notes.

"While more than half of the adults surveyed say they prefer to sit around and relax," the report continues, "one in four will choose to go out to a movie, bar or restaurant and a like number will seek some physical exercise. Even among regular exercisers, almost as many prefer to relax (38 percent) as to exercise (41 percent)."

Teen-agers seem more interested in physical fitness than their elders. According to the survey, two out of three teens say they exercise several times a week, as opposed to one out of three of their parents.

Ironically, the report also shows that a majority (60 percent) of American families today are ready to accept a more active approach to health care, with emphasis on preventing medical problems. However, only a minority of them appear to be taking meaningful action in that direction.

Moisturize Sunburned Skin

"Everyone knows the dangers of sun exposure. But do you know what to do after you've exposed your skin to the sun? How do you stop feeling itchy, burny and miserable?

If you generally tend to sunburn, but find that this last exposure was a real killer, you should check to see if you've done anything that was different this time.

Believe it or not, you can get a severe sunburn from relatively little exposure if the sunshine is interacting with other elements in or on your body.

For example, lime, a very popular fragrance for the summer, is also extremely photosensitizing. (That's when your skin becomes especially sun sensitive.)

Another agent that works this way is oil of bergamot, a substance found in most perfumes. You may find yourself blistered in areas where you've applied a photosensitizing agent, and not burned at all in others. So check the ingredients on the label before you apply and venture outdoors.

Certain artificial sweeteners that contain saccharin can also cause the skin to become photosensitive, as can antibacterial deodorant soaps, many tranquilizers and even some diuretics.

If you've been involved with any of the above named substances, you'd better think carefully before you step out into the bright light of day.

But maybe it's already too late. You've done everything you shouldn't and you're burned.

First of all, you've got to hydrate your skin—put back some of the water that it's lost. You will find that the combination of sun and water exposure is what causes the skin to dry out.

Take a lukewarm bath in plain water. After you've soaked about ten minutes, add a bath oil that floats on top of the water, rather than one that disperses in it, so that your skin will be able to "soak up" the maximum amount of needed water.

Soak for an additional few minutes. As you rise, the oil will leave a thin coating on the skin that will help to seal in the water that the skin has absorbed. Pat dry.

Then apply a moisturizer. A new one, Lactic-Care™ from Stiefel Laboratories, Inc., is a good one to try. This product contains lactic acid and urea, an important component of natural skin, sodium PCA, and other compounds that attract and help hold moisture.

Once the skin is properly hydrated, it will not be as parched, and this prevents peeling. It's only the dried-out skin that peels off. But to prevent peeling, you've got to keep up your routine.

A good overall body moisturizing regime daily, during the summer months and afterwards, will also help you to maintain the tan that you've worked so hard to get!

Fresh oysters should be bought alive and only if their shells are tightly closed.

Shah Says Iran Destroying Itself

CUERNAVACA, Mexico (AP)-Iran no longer has a government and is destroying itself, says Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, speaking out at his first full-scale news conference since leaving his homeland for an uncertain exile five months ago.

"My heart is bleeding. My country is destroying itself," the deposed ruler told reporters Wednesday beside a pool in the garden of the palatial villa he has rented. His wife, Empress Farah, attended the news conference with him but said nothing.

"I left my country to avoid the spilling of more blood, but since I left there we've had a bloodbath," he said, referring to the execution of some 250 of his supporters by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's militant Islamis regime.

"I don't believe there is a government in Iran because the bloodbath and the fighting between brothers cannot be stopped," he said. "My country is destroying itself."

Some of Khomeini's leading associates have called on their supporters to assassinate the shah because the governments that have given him refuge so far have refused to extradite him to Iran. But "I do not fear being assassinated," he declared.

"I am a religious man. I believe in providence. All depends on that," said the 59-year-old Moslem, lifting his hands.

The shah said it was "too early" to say whether he would seek permanent asylum in Mexico, the fourth nation he has visited since leaving Iran. He arrived Sunday from the Bahamas.

Asked if he planned to go to the United States, he replied: "This depends if one is welcome or not." He refused to say whether he had been refused admittance by the U.S. government, once one of his closest allies.

Clements Says OK To Roadside Naps

AUSTIN (AP)-Gov. Bill Clements thinks a sleepy motorist should be able to legally take a nap in a state roadside park.

A House bill HB1540 that would outlaw such naps was one of several bills vetoed by Clements Wednesday.

Clements said the bill had some good parts to it, such as preventing sale of merchandise or solicitation of funds at state roadside parks. However, the bill also prohibited anyone from sleeping in a car overnight nor could anyone sleep in a trailer or recreational vehicle in a roadside park.

"This goes against one of the reasons for the creation of these rest areas," Clements said. "A person, who may be sleepy would have the alternative of driving on, or stopping beside the road to sleep, both of which could be very dangerous."

Price Of Gas Shot Down

HOUSTON AP—The owner of a West Side service station says he lowered his $1.20 a gallon price for gasoline after someone fired bullets through a window and the canopy at the station.

Ken Catmull lowered the price to 99.9 cents for premium, 98.9 cents for unleaded, and 97.9 cents for regular.

Catmull said the shots were fired by unknown persons Tuesday night and he lowered the prices Wednesday morning after a conference with his Washington lawyer.

The station, Catmull said, is being audited by the Department of Energy. He said DOE officials had indicated the audit would be completed Monday but advised him Wednesday they were still at work.

Catmull said he originally raised his prices to the high level in an attempt to maintain normal operating hours at the station which also handles a large volume of beer and cigarette sales. He said he now will be reducing his hours of operation.

The high prices did not seem to bother customers.

"I'll buy it wherever I can get it," said Walter Jager while putting $14.50 of gasoline in his pickup truck.

A woman told newsmen she did not want to wait in lines at stations with lower prices.

Long lines were at most Houston stations that were open early Thursday. Most prices were 15 cents or so below those set by Catmull.

Sentenced For Killing Mother

ELY, Nev. (AP)-Cecil Poole, 14, showed no emotion as the judge who sentenced him to 30 years for the September shooting death of his pregnant mother said the boy should be "under control until age 44, at which time he may become a responsible citizen."

Poole, tried as an adult, was the youngest person ever convicted of murder in Nevada. He will be sent to the state Youth Training Center until he is 18, then transferred to prison. He will be eligible for parole in five years.

Carnival Goers Dusted By Volcano

KINGSTON, St. Vincent AP—Dust and 'steam belching from this Caribbean island's Soufriers volcano rained down on islanders at a weekend carnival leaving them looking like "cement factory workers covered from head to toe with white dust," witnesses said.

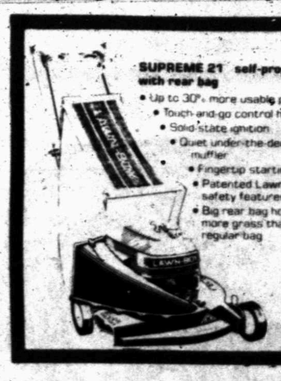

Authorities said there were no injuries.

Dr. Keith Rowley, a geologist monitoring the volcano which exploded with a fury seven weeks ago, said it "may not erupt violently again for some time, but we cannot be positive it won't."

Rowley said the steam and dust coming from the crater are normal post-eruption occurrences.

Property Tax Bill Signed Into Law

AUSTIN (AP)-Gov. Bill Clements signed into law Wednesday a bill that will abolish multiple tax appraisals within a county and substitute a single countywide appraisal office.

The measure also would ban the 10-cent per $100 valuation state property tax.

The bill, by Sen. Grant Jones, D-Abilene, barely cleared the 66th Legislature after bing rejected in 1975 and 1977.

Clements said he was signing the bill with the understanding that an "imperfection" would be corrected in a special session or at the 1981 regular session.

The governor said in a statement a House amendment to the bill banned the use of assessment ratios for property taxation and would require assessment at 100 percent of market value.

Critics said the change to full market value assessment might have the effect of sharply increasing franchise taxes of more than 140,000 corporations, Clements said.

He added he had disucssed the provision with Speaker Bill Clayton, the Senate sponsor and others and had been assured corrections would be made before 1982, when franchise taxes would be affected.

The bill, promoted for six years by Rep. Wayne Peveto, D-Orange, squeaked by the Senate, 15-14, two days before the Legislature adjourned. It earlier passed the House 65-63.

Three of the four senators from Clements Republican Party voted against the proposal, with only Sen. Walter Mengden supporting it.

Under the measure, a five-member board would be elected in each county to administer appraisal districts. Counties could have independent tax appraisal offices, but Peveto predicted most would voluntarily join the new districts.

The bill also would abolish the 10-cent per $100 valuation state property tax.

Taxpayers could hold tax hikes to 5 percent after petition for an election. A rollback election would be effective, however, only if 25 percent of all the voters participated.

Local governments would have to give notice of all tax increases.

The measure would not be fully implemented until 1982.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Use mild soap instead

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have some acné on my face and shoulders. I go to a health spa where there's a steam room and a sauna. Which one would be better for improving my acne and complexion or is it better to use both? How long should I stay in the sauna or steam room?

I also use a liquid cleanser with fine particles in it to wash my face. Is it better to use this kind of cleanser or would a clear soap be better?

DEAR READER — There's no known relationship between either a sauna or steam room and acne. Don't expect any improvement in your acne because of either. Ultraviolet light or simply suntanning yourself in the natural sun sometimes helps improve acne. Of course, you'd need to take the usual precautions to avoid damaging your skin as from sunburn.

I'm sending you The Health Letter number 8-2, Acne Can Be Treated, to give you some general information and guidelines on what causes the problem and what can be done about it. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

As The Health Letter I'm sending you points out, the problem is caused by excessive oily secretions from your own skin. One goal in treatment is to decrease the oily secretions. It follows that you do not want to add any oily material to your skin. I don't know what kind of cleanser you're using, but if it contains oils in it, you don't want to use it.

Likewise, you wouldn't want to use soaps that are advertised as containing oils either. This includes some brands of bar soap. A good gentle soap with warm water is the best soap cleanser you can use. If you soak the skin well, it will help to remove plugs, it will soften the blackheads and sometimes promotes drainage. You could get some similar effect from your steam bath but the local effect with a warm wash cloth is probably better.

You can also help to clean the skin by cleansing it with alcohol sponges. Alcohol mixes well with oils and enables you to wash them off easily.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My friend was told she has pancytopenia which occurred as a result of a new medicine she took for arthritis. She's also been running a temperature for a week, apparently with an infection caused by the injections of the medicine. She's been hospitalized for six weeks and her symptoms are so like leukemia, but the doctor says no. Can you shed some light on what pancytopenia is?

DEAR READER — Pancytopenia merely means a reduction in formation of all the different types of blood cells, both red cells and white cells. It's usually the result of some depression in bone marrow production. Such problems do occur as complications of some medicines.

In the absence of adequate amounts of white blood cells to protect against infections, it's easy for a person to develop an infection and the infections are harder to treat.

If this is simply a reaction to the medicine that your friend has received, the likelihood is that with the good medical supervision she's obtaining she will recover.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) An individual who has always been difficult to get along with will rub you the wrong way again today. Don't be argumentative just because he is.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Owing to a lack of foresight, you may involve yourself in a situation today which you can't handle. It could prove embarrassing.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) A possible reason you're not getting complete cooperation today is because you're hesitant to let others share the applause.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Pay a little more attention than usual to your assigned tasks today. Unless you give them some extra care, the results could be disappointing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) If there's a problem brewing among friends with whom you mix socially, don't take sides. You're the one who'll come out on the wrong end.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You may feel stymied today by the very people you love. They love you, too, but conditions are such that they have to attend to other things first.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It won't do you any good to think about how things should have been. Face up to reality and begin to work from there.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) A friend who has done so before might pull another boner which could end up being expensive for you. Don't be a fall guy.

Worldwide Mission Effort Pledged By Baptists

By George W. Cornell
AP Religion Writer

HOUSTON (AP)-The banners waved. The music soared. The multinational garb glistened in the floodlights at Houston's Astrodome and thousands of Southern Baptists resounded their determination to present Christ to all humanity by the century's end.

"Bold Mission Thrust" is the name of the endeavor and a giant rally was staged last night to boost ardor for the cause. Evangelist Billy Graham termed it a "magnificent obsession" to unleash truth in a benighted world.

"Let us get on with this obsession with a new dedication and fervor that we had never known before," he told about 48,000 overflowing the big sports arena. About 3,000 of them stood in corridors or outside.

"God is not calling us tonight to a playground or a sports arena-he is calling us to a battleground," Graham said.

The spectacular rally, beamed by satellite to television outlets and to simultaneous rallies in a dozen other cities, featured a procession of 144 flags of states and foreign nations where Southern Baptists carry on mission work.

"All Hail the power of Jesus' name," said an 8,000-voice choir.

At one point, 1,100 newly appointed missionaries, some dressed in the regalia of the areas where they will serve, were commissioned by the denomination's outgoing president, the Reverend Jimmy Allen of San Antonio.

"No matter what it costs, this worldwide mission thrust must be our priority," said the Rev. Baker James Cauthen of Richmond, Va., retiring head of the denomination's mission board.

The affair came on the second night of the annual convention of the 13.2 million-member denomination, the nation's largest Protestant body. It already has about 3,000 foreign missionaries serving in 94 countries, a corps increased by additions to it last night.

Some of the new ones however, were for domestic posts.

With the 3-day convention ending late today, a conservative coalition that boosted the Reverend Adrian Rogers of Memphis into the denominational presidency abandoned efforts for further action's to crack down on so-called "liberal" teachings about the Bible.

Rogers said he favored an inquiry "if fair and balanced" into seminary teaching, but such a possibility was shelved for the present to give seminary's and denominational agencies a chance to take any necessary corrective steps voluntarily.

"I don't want any witch hunt" Rogers said. "We already have processes for removing any one that ought to be removed."

The conservative coalition also dropped plans to back a hand-picked slate for trustee posts of denominational institutions and agencies. Nominations made by a committee of Allen's outgoing administration were approved without contest.

Also, a coalition-backed resolution demanding that the seminary professors subscribe to biblical "inerrancy" and other specified beliefs, such as a "personal devil and literal hell," was withdrawn in a mood of conciliation.

Biblical "inerrancy," a position held by the conservative group, means that each specific word of the Bible was divinely inspired, not just its ideas.

The convention also turned down a proposal to bar ordained women from missionary service.

The convention approved an $83 million budget for worldwide missions in 1979-80 and adopted several resolutions, including:

-Endorsed the SALT II agreement between the U.S. and Russia to limit nuclear missiles but called it only a first step toward "future greater strides in multilateral nuclear arms reduction."

-Voiced support for public schools despite sharp criticism of them.

-Turned down a proposal that would have favored a constitutional amendment to upset the 1973 Supreme Court decision allowing abortion.

-Declared further nuclear power plants should be built "only when the safety of their operation and waste disposal can be assured."

-Condemned child abuse as "one of the serious moral issues of our times."

-Urged Congress to appropriate funds for overseas development to combat hunger in impoverished regions.

Program Planned By Texas Oilmen

DALLAS (AP)-Texas independent oil operators are planning a national program aimed at counteracting inaccurate statements about the industry and educating the public on oil and gas issues.

Chester R. Upham Jr., president of the 4,000-member Texas Independent Producers & Royalty Owners Association, said the program will be positive.

"We need aggressively to open up," Upham said after the trade group concluded its 33rd annual meeting Tuesday by authorizing activation of the program.

The use of advertising was authorized and one of the objectives of the program involves quick responses when association officials believe the industry is being unjustly attacked.

The largest rodent in the world is the capybara, which lives in the Amazon rain forest. National Geographic says that when it is full grown it can be four feet long and weigh up to 100 pounds.

Researchers Fear Monkey Shortage

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON AP—The small brown monkeys with big ears and large eyes can't even imagine the fuss they are causing.

They sit quietly at the center of international wrangling over lofty questions of justifiable research versus animal rights. Meanwhile, their availability for research decreases, and some persons fear a serious shortage of the valuable research animal.

Some say it is cruel to experiment with animals, others that it is necessary to help man conquer diseases and afflictions. In between is the rhesus monkey, a bare-faced creature standing two-feet tall as an adult, not counting its 12-inch tail.

This heavy-browed animal with close-set eyes is revered in India as the reincarnation of Hanuman, the Hindu monkey god.

While not considered a god by American scientists, the rhesus has become invaluable because of its biological similarity to man. It is considered practically irreplaceable in some work.

"There is a shortage of rhesus monkeys and we are in trouble," says Dr. Robert Whitney, director of the Animal Resources Program at the National Institutes of Health. NIH is the lead department in the federal Interagency Primate Steering Committee, which deals with research animal issues.

Whitney says scientists are not yet complaining too much about the shortage because bans on the export of monkeys from producing countries are relatively new.

"But there is going to be a real crunch five or six years from now if they don't get monkeys elsewhere," he said.

Critics of traditional animal research say they will continue lobbying internationally to cut off, or at least cut down, the supply of animals. They say much of this animal work is unnecessary and uncontrolled.

"There are very good alternatives to a lot of animal research that have been developed," says Shirley McGreal of the International Primate Protection League. "In a hundred years, people will look back to our concentration camps for monkeys and be appalled."

The league and other groups claim responsibility for much of the current shortage because of their campaigns in supplying countries.

The rhesus squeeze began about four years ago when India, the biggest exporter, cut its annual supply to the world from 50,000 to 20,000 monkeys. U.S. researchers traditionally use about half of the world's monkey exports.

In April 1978, India ended all exports because of claims animals were mistreated in laboratory experiments and also used in military radiation research.

The latest blow came last January when Bangladesh, the next-largest rhesus supplier, stopped all exports. Concern about possible military experiments, conservation and disagreements with animal trading companies were cited as reasons.

American officials say there are indications Bangladesh, after getting assurances about the proper use of the animals, may resume limited rhesus trade in the near future.

Judge Orders Rolloff Homes Be Licensed

CORPUS CHRISTI, (AP)—Evangelist Lester Rolloff's usually resonant voice trembled a bit as he stood in front of the live television cameras.

Hours before, the feisty preacher was told by a state judge to get licenses for the Rolloff youth homes.

"I cannot imagine my home state--The Lone Star State--committing such a crime. It is completely disrespectful of the word of God and the Constitution of the United States," he said during a half hour television special Wednesday night.

But the quiver was gone from his voice an hour later when he was back on his home turf--the People's Church next to his Rebekah Home for Girls.

"We know what it is to be betrayed," he bellowed. "And we have been. No doubt about that."

But Roloff said that's to be expected when a Christian tries to follow the life of Christ.

"You're going to meet a Judas."

The church was filled with residents of his homes and local followers. They shouted "Amen" as Roloff laid down the battle plan for what could be his last stand. A state judge in Austin Wednesday gave Roloff until next Tuesday to seek state licenses for the homes. Roloff has long declined to get the licenses--seeing it as a violation of the separation of church and state doctrine.

The Battery section of New York City received its name from a military installation the British built there against attack from the French in 1683. The British dumped dirt into the harbor to extend the shoreline so a platform could be built for a battery of guns.

New Study Indicates...

Family Doctor Shortage May Ease By Mid 80s

NEW YORK (AP)-Nearly 20 percent of all Americans get most of their medical care from a gynecologist, cardiologist or other specialist rather than from a general practitioner, a new study shows.

The report, described as the largest ever on how doctors spend their time, is the latest in a continuing debate over whether medical schools are turning out enough physicians for personal care.

The study, published in today's edition of the New England Journal of Medicine, concludes that this trend may bring an early end to a shortage of family doctors - possibly by the mid 1980s.

Dr. David Rogers, one of six authors of the report, said it proves there is a "hidden system" of medical care in the United States that will make up for projected shortages of so-called "primary care" physicians - doctors who treat the headache, sore throat, upset stomach and other minor ailments.

Rogers is president of the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, which co-sponsored the report.

A recent National Academy of Sciences report projected shortages of primary care physicians well into the 1990s, and critics of medical schools today say there are too many specialists.

As a result, federal guidelines require an increasing proportion of medical school graduates to spend their first year of residency in general care areas. Next year, the proportion will be 50 percent.

However, the new report, based on records of the daily activities of 10,000 doctors, predicts the general-care shortage will end shortly after 1985.

Mosquitoes

the program against them is partly conducted by spraying trash dumpsters. Mosquitoes, however, are spawned in water and the program against them is conducted differently.

In the mosquito program, the two employees in vector control deal not only with bodies of water, but also with minute amounts of water found in buckets, cans, and tires in people's backyards and alleys.

"We have even found mosquitoes in ice cream freezers," said one man with the program.

Mosquitoes, he added, can breed in water-filled soup cans and can keep breeding every three to five days until the water dries up. Their spawning grounds, in even small towns, are nearly limitless.

"You'd be surprised at how many can hatch out of a tomato can half full of water," said O.H. Hooper, the driver of the vector control truck. "One (abandoned) auto tire can hatch out a million," he added.

If local residents do not need the water-containing vessels, said health unit officials, they should be hauled off. If residents intend to keep them, they should try to keep water out of them. If it rains and the articles collect water, the mosquito populations can be decimated by applying a little kerosene to the water.

The clearing away of debris and the maintenance of relatively clean backyards and alleys are important factors in the program, and homeowners can help, said department officials.

"Most everyone feels it's someone else who raises the mosquitoes and flies," said one official.

"If you could put something in the paper about how people can help us," said Hooper, "it would be a wonderful help to us and to them, too."

Miss Haynie received her masters degree from San Miguel de Alend in central Mexico and earned a bachelor of arts from Texas Tech University.

"Snyder is not used to seeing an art show without a western motif, "Terry Gilbreth, director of the Diamond M Museum, said. "Miss Haynie's jewelry and the emphasis on wildlife will be a unique experience."

The Tischlers and Miss Haynie will be present for the Sunday showing from 1 to 5 p.m. Their art will be on display through June 30 at regular museum hours, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Most of the art will be for sale.

Rules Committee To Consider Proposal Now

NBA Coaches 'Yea' Three-Point Play

WASHINGTON AP — Look out for Downtown Freddie Brown. Keep an eye on Rick Barry and Rudy Tomjanovich. Whoooee — there goes Brian Winters and Kevin Grevey. Hold on, here comes Louie Gampier.

The bomb from the arena parking lot may be back.

The National Basketball Association general managers and coaches voted overwhelmingly Wednesday to adopt the three-point field goal. It was a staple of the old American Basketball Association and rewards baskets made from distances of 22 feet or more.

The recommendation, passed 15-7 by general managers and 15-5 by coaches, will be considered by the NBA Rules and Competition Committee next Wednesday. The 11-member committee will then pass the proposal, along with its opinion, to the league owners the next day at their annual meeting at Amelia Island, Fla.

The owners will have the last say on the rules change, but spokesmen for the general managers and the coaches believe their heavy vote in favor will carry much weight.

"We feel we are the most knowledgeable about the game," said Jack Ramsay of the Portland Trail Blazers, president of the coaches association. "Our opinions are not given lightly. It is our hope that our recommendations will be accepted."

Ramsay said the coaches were persuaded to approve the three-point field goal by the former ABA members who "said it took some of the physical contact out of the basket area. Basketball is not a tug of war where physical strength is dominating. It is a game of finesse."

"I'm still not pleased with the premise where distance is rewarded but if it takes away the pushing and shoving, it's good for the game," Ramsay said.

Jerry Colangelo of the Phoenix Suns, chairman of the general managers' group, said the GMs voted for the three-point play because "the former ABA people said it would add excitement to the game. If you can add excitement, then that is a plus."

Both the NBA general managers and the coaches rejected a proposal to legalize the zone defense —the GMs by a vote of 20-2, the coaches 19-1.

Each team had one vote in the separate meetings. However, two Clubs—Cleveland and Salt Lake City, formerly New Orleans—did not have representatives at the coaches meeting.

The two groups voted differently on only one of the 10 proposed rule changes during the two-day annual meeting of the general managers, coaches, team doctors, business managers and public relations directors.

On a proposal to add a broken line three feet from the sideline to protect a player inbounding a ball from the defensive man, the coaches approved 11-9 while the general managers rejected the idea 14-8. The general managers said it would just give the referees another area in which they must use their judgment.

Niekro's Knuckler Kabs Another Houston Win

PHILADELPHIA (AP)-Joe Niekro explains his success about as easy as his tantalizing knuckleball that creates it.

The 34-year-old Niekro won his ninth straight game and 10th of the season Wednesday night, 4-3 over the Philadelphia Phillies. He's the winningest pitcher in the National League, and tied with the New York Yankees' Tommy John of the American League.

Niekro got offensive help from Cesar Cedeno, who drove in three runs with three singles, and Art Howe's third home run of the season. Terry Puhl contributed four singles, two stolen bases and two runs scored.

"There's no great secret as to why I'm winning," said Niekro, who hasn't lost a game since April 29. "I'm simply being fairly consistent with the knuckleball and my slider and fastball. I'm throwing strikes."

Niekro said one of the things contributing to his effectiveness is the Astros' ability to give him early leads. Houston has scored in the first inning in 26 games this season and won 18 of those.

They did it again Wednesday night.

The first three batters in the game, Puhl, Craig Reynolds and Cesar Cedeno singled and it was 1-0 against Phillies' starter Dick Ruthven. They made it 2-0 in the third with Puhl ripping his second single, stealing second and scoring on Cedeno's second of three singles.

The Astros put it away in the fourth, after the Phillies picked up a run in the bottom of the inning. The run came on a walk and fielder's choice, Larry Bowa's double, and an outfield throwing error.

Howe opened the fourth with his home run. Alan Ashby doubled and moved to tird on Niekro's infield out. Puhl was hit by a pitch and Reynolds flied out, but Cedeno, emerging from a slump, rapped his third straight single for his third RBI and Niekro had enough to win.

Jazz Gets New Name

SALT LAKE CITY (AP)-Jazz owners Sam Battistone and Larry Hatfield today announce a new name for the National Basketball Association team they are moving from New Orleans to Salt Lake.

Battistone and Hatfield, arriving in Salt Lake Wednesday night, said the new head coach would not be announced at today's news conference.

Tom Nissalke, former coach of the Houston Rockets, is considered a leading candidate for the post.

Nissalke, in Laredo, Texas, for a basketball clinic, had been quoted Wednesday as saying he had come to terms with one of three National Basketball Association teams looking for a head coach.

However, Nissalke was quoted by The Salt Lake Tribune in this morning's edition as saying he had not yet come to terms, and that the reporter who had quoted him "was premature."

Nissalke met with Jazz owners in California last week and "We talked about some possibilities," he said.

"I'm very interested and I would like to have it. But until it's set, I can't say anything," he said from his home in Houston Wednesday night.

Olympic Lure Calling Carter

DALLAS (AP)-Michael Carter, who holds a national schoolboy record in the shot put, says he may pass up his freshman football season at Southern Methodist University to prepare for possible Olympic competition.

Carter said, however, he will meet with SMU football coach Ron Meyer before making a final decision.

Carter, who broke the schoolboy shot put record seven times this year while competing at Dallas Thomas Jefferson High School, is one of several blue chip schoolboy football players recruited by SMU.

Carter, a 6-2, 205-pound lineman, said he had an agreement with Meyer that he would not have to play football his freshman year.

"I thought about it a long time," Carter said.

Carter says his goal is to toss the 12-pound high school shot 80 feet. His best mark so far is 77 feet, a national record he set May 5 in a track meet at Abilene.

"Eighty feet is still my goal. That's what I'm hoping for. It's possible," Carter said. He had two more meets to compete in as a schoolboy.

Should Carter decide to pass up his freshman year in football he would have three years remaining to compete for the Mustangs since freshmen cannot be redshirted.

Meyer said he wants to discuss the matter with Carter before any decision is made.

"I haven't talked to him about it. I want to sit down with him before I comment on his decision," coach Meyer said.

Bando's Homer Does It

Brewers Nip Texas

ARLINGTON (AP)-Sal Bando just wishes he knew how he did it.

"It's the first time I've done anything in a long while," said Bando of his eighth-inning homer Wednesday night which carried Milwaukee to a 5-4 victory over the Texas Rangers, snapping a four-game losing streak.

"I'm in the worst slump of my major league career. It has been a struggle. If I knew what to do to correct my problem, I'd do it," said Bando, hitting a mere .218 at gametime with only three homers.

Bando's homer keyed a two-run inning which drove Fergy Jenkins from the mound.

Jenkins has long been a nemesis of the Brewers with nine lifetime victories.

"It feels good to beat an outstanding pitcher like Jenkins," Bando said. "In fact, he should have had a perfect game against us a week ago. We only got two scratch hits."

Moose Haas struggled to his fourth victory in nine decisions while Jenkins dropped to a 7-3 record.

Texas went ahead 3-2 on Pat Putnam's two-out single in the sixth inning, but the Brewers tied it in the seventh on Charlie Moore's RBI single.

Bando led off the eighth with a towering homer, and a double by Gorman Thomas and a run-scoring single by Sixto Lezcano drove Jenkins from the game.

Haas needed relief help from Jerry Augustine and Reggie Cleveland in the ninth inning, when the Rangers scored a consolation run on Richie Zisk's run-scoring single.

In tonight's final game of the series, Doyle Alexander, 3-4, meets the Brewers' Bill Travers, 3-3.

Camels were used in 1854 to build the Caribou Trail into the interior of British Columbia. Wild camels were still seen in the province as late as 1925.

Navratilova Dumps Siegel; Chichester Meet Underway

CHICHESTER, England (AP)-Martina Navratilova swamped 18-year-old Linda Siegel 6-0, 6-0 in the rain-delayed first round of the $75,000 Chichester grass-court tennis tournament.

With two complete days lost to the weather and only eight singles matches completed, the organizers decided to switch the final from Saturday to Sunday.

Billie Jean King won her first round match 6-1, 7-6 against Anne Hobbs. Pam Shriver defeated JoAnne Russell 7-6, 6-4 and nearly met a world record. Shriver won the first set tiebreaker 13-11. That was only 2 points short of the longest tiebreaker ever recorded in women's play.

The two top British players, Virginia Wade and Sue Barker, both struggled against lesser-known American opponents. Barker, seeded No. 4, defeated Rayni Fox 7-5, 7-5, while Wade downed Laura Dupont 7-5, 6-2.

Fuchs Hurls Javelin Best

DRESDEN, East Germany (AP)-Olympic champion Ruth Fuchs set a world record in the women's javelin with a toss of 228 feet, one inch in an international track and field meet. Fuchs, an East German, bettered by some 8 feet the old mark set in 1977 by Kathy Smith of the United States.

Dodger Players Lead In All-Star Voting

NEW YORK (AP)-Cincinnati's Johnny Bench, Greg Luzinski of Philadelphia and Davey Lopes of the Los Angeles Dodgers lead at their positions in balloting for the national League All-Star team, the commissioner's office said today.

Bench, who has started every All-Star game since the voting was returned to the fans in 1970, moved into the top spot for catchers with 346,474 votes, 10,923 ahead of the St. Louis Cardinals' Ted Simmons.

Luzinski leads balloting for outfielders with 442,588 votes. George Foster of Cincinnati has 374,624 votes, and the Pittsburgh Pirates' Dave Parker 390,818 in the race for the other starting outfield positions.
