NTSB: Interview with driver could be released

Safety board reports it might release a 'public docket' on Nov. 15 train crash

By Joseph Basco
jbasco@mrt.com

As the National Transportation Safety Board continues to investigate the Nov. 15 train crash that killed four veterans, spokesperson Peter Knudson said the organization may open a public docket, or a collection of materials, on the NTSB website sometime this spring.

One of the documents included in this docket will be an NTSB interview with Dale Hayden, the Smith Industries-employed driver of the truck attached to the parade float. Knudson said the NTSB interviewed him on Feb. 20. Up to this point, Hayden has not spoken publicly about the incident.

Knudson said public dockets include the majority of the factual information the NTSB has collected about six months after an incident occurs. This material will not include any analysis, he said.

The analysis, which will include the board's conclusion, safety recommendations and probable cause of the crash, will be released 12 to 18 months after the incident occurred, Knudson said. A five-member board will publicly draft a report at that time and may choose to adopt or edit the report until they are finished.

The board's public meeting will be broadcast online and the final report will be posted on the NTSB website.

Four veterans — Marine Chief Warrant Officer 3 Gary Stouffer, 37; Army Sgt. Maj. Lawrence Boivin, 47; Army Sgt. Joshua Michael, 34; and Army Sgt. Maj. William Lubbers, 43 — died in the accident. Fourteen other people were injured.

Earlier this week, the Reporter-Telegram reported the NTSB anounced it is working to fulfill the victims' lawyers' Feb. 8 request for videos and other materials that Union Pacific Railroad Co. possesses.

Knudson said via email that the organization did instruct Union Pacific not to release the videos and other materials but currently are in the process of lifting that restriction so the plaintiffs' lawyers can use the materials for the civil case.

MATCH DAY JITTERS

Meredith Moriak/Reporter-Telegram

Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center medical student Stephanie Villarreal opens an envelope which contains the destination of her residency in pediatrics at 11 a.m. Friday at the Odessa Country Club. Villarreal, of Odessa, learned she will complete her residency at the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center in Lubbock. Match Day is celebrated at the 137 U.S. medical schools accredited by the Liaison Committee on Medical Education.

Local med students placed in residency programs

ODESSA — Moments after opening the envelope that contained information regarding where they will complete their medical residency, several medical students from the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center's regional Permian Basin campus reached for their phones to share the news with family and friends.

Some did so while crying tears of joy; others had large smiles on their faces. These 20 students were among the thousands of medical school students nationwide who found out Friday — National Match Day — where they will complete the next phase of their training.

"This week has been a roller coaster ride of emotions," said Midlander Matthew Helm, who will complete his residency in dermatology at TTUHSC in Lubbock. "There were moments of complete despair where I worried I might not get anything, but it's all worked out."

By the numbers

In 2011, the National Resident Matching Program enrolled 4,427 residency programs in the match, which altogether offered 26,772 positions. A total of 53,612 U.S. and international medical student applications were submitted for these positions; 27,682 were from U.S. senior medical students.

Match Day began in 1952 as a fair and impartial transition from medical school to residency and is celebrated at the 137 U.S. medical schools accredited by the Liaison Committee on Medical Education, according to a Texas Tech news release.

The weeklong process began on Monday when applicants were informed by email whether they had been matched to a residency program of their choice. It was not until 11 a.m. Friday that medical school students from across the country learned the name of the program where they will complete their residencies.

"This whole week has been a weird mix of happiness and anxiety," said Stephanie Villarreal, a 2005 Permian High School graduate, who will complete her residency in pediatrics at TTUHSC in Lubbock. "You're nervous because you don't know where you'll end up. I kept telling people it feels like I've had a knot in my throat all week."

Villarreal's decision to become a doctor was a result of her decision to always choose the most difficult and challenging subject areas in school. Additionally, Villarreal said she was motivated to become a doctor after having seen the work of her older brother, a doctor of family medicine, and older sister, who is completing the last year of her residency

Automated port at Big Bend to open soon

By Gary Martin
Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — Even as they wrestle with furloughs and other fiscal belt-tightening, U.S. agencies are quietly preparing to open a new automated border port of entry along the banks of the Rio Grande in Big Bend National Park.

The new port across the river from Boquillas del Carmen, Mexico, will reestablish an unofficial crossing used for decades by local residents and closed by the U.S. government after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

"It was almost like losing part of your family, because you knew those people and they knew you," said Ron Sanders, 68, an Alpine resident and employee of the national park concessionaire Forever Resorts.

MAY 2002
That's when the Boquillas border port was closed in the wake of the Sept. 11, 2001 attacks.

U.S. officials with the National Park Service and Customs and Border Protection say the structure is completed and equipment in place to begin processing "foot traffic" at the new border port, accessible by boat. The opening is expected within the next few weeks.

"We are just waiting for an opening date," said David Elkowitz, NPS chief of interpretation and park services.

The Boquillas crossing has the support of presidential administrations in both the United States and Mexico. Both countries have issued official notices about the opening.

The move comes as Congress continues to grapple with sequestration, across-the-board cuts in federal spending expected to impact border, law enforcement and other agencies.

Also, Democrats and Republicans have agreed that tightened border security will be a milestone in comprehensive immigration reform proposals that could include a path to citizenship.

Border and parks officials say they do not expect the opening of the Boquillas crossing to fall victim to U.S. budget cuts or furloughs.

"I don't know of anything that would delay us," said Bill Brooks, a CBP

Gov. Rick Perry has appointed two new Texas A&M University System regents and reappointed a third board member.

Perry appointed lawyers Tony Buzbee of Friendswood and Charles Schwartz of Houston as new regents and reappointed regent Morris Foster. The terms for all three expire Feb. 1, 2019.

Buzbee is a graduate of Texas A&M who received his law degree from the University of Houston. Schwartz is a graduate of the University of Texas, where he also earned master's and law degrees. Schwartz also received a master of laws degree from Harvard University.

The appointments announced Friday must be confirmed by the state Senate.

2 Texas men sought for sex assault found in Hawaii

Authorities say two North Texas brothers have been arrested in Hawaii as they were attempting to board a flight and flee charges of sexually assaulting a young girl.

Corsicana Police Chief Randy Bratton said 43-year-old Tarius Manuere and 40-year-old Noah Manuere were apprehended Friday as they prepared to board a flight in Honolulu to the South Pacific islands of Micronesia.

The suspects are each facing a single count of aggravated sexual assault of a child. Bratton declined to give the age of the girl, only saying that she's a "tween" who knew the Manueres. He said the assault occurred last year in Corsicana, about 50 miles south of Dallas.

Authorities had been searching for the brothers since early January.

HOUSTON

Doctor sentenced for role in Medicare scheme

A federal judge has sentenced a physician to more than five years in prison for participating in a Medicare fraud scheme that pulled in more than $20 million from false claims.

Authorities said 63-year-old Ben Harris Echols, of Houston, also was ordered Friday to pay restitution of $2.9 million. He was convicted in December of one count of conspiracy to commit health care fraud and six counts of false statements relating to health care matters.

Echols approved plans for medical care so that fraudulent claims could be billed by two home health care companies. He also signed treatment plans for Medicare beneficiaries not under his care.

Authorities said he conspired with the health care companies for payouts of $17.3 million and with other beneficiaries for additional claims of $5.5 million.

Texas seeks stay of judge's decision on cranes

Texas Attorney General Greg Abbott is asking a federal judge to stay a decision that found the state's water management responsible for the deaths of 23 endangered whooping cranes.

Abbott sought the emergency stay Friday. He argued Senior U.S. District Judge Janis Graham Jack overstepped her authority in a Monday order prohibiting Texas from granting new water permits on two rivers.

Abbott said the order could cause severe economic harm. A stay would allow the state to appeal the decision before it goes into effect. If a stay is not issued, Abbott says he will go to a federal appeals court.

Jack ruled that by not allowing enough freshwater to enter the bays, the state harmed the cranes' food supply leading to their deaths in 2008-2009.

Man who set fire to bar gets 15 years

A 24-year-old man who was kicked out of a Houston bar with a friend last year has been sentenced to 15 years in prison after pleading guilty to setting the place on fire and then trying to block the people inside from fleeing.

Gabino Silva pleaded guilty Friday to felony arson. Surveillance camera evidence from the April 2012 incident showed Silva and companion Jaime Mata barricading the front door of the bar, then pouring gasoline at the back door and igniting it.

People inside managed to get out safely through a third exit to the building.

Mata pleaded guilty to similar charges earlier this month and now is serving 30 years in prison.

Man killed after gun passed around at motel party

Authorities in North Texas say a man was fatally shot during a party at a motel room that drew more than a dozen people.

Waxahachie Police Chief Chuck Edge told The Dallas Morning News that 21-year-old Andrew Riley Kindred was arrested Friday morning about 50 miles away in Gun Barrel City.

Edge said Kindred was among some 15 people who gathered at the Waxahachie motel Thursday night south of Dallas. Witnesses said Kindred had brought a firearm to the party and several people were playing with it. The gun discharged at some point, killing 22-year-old Aaron Michael Garcia.

Edge said investigators are trying to determine if the shooting was accidental or intentional.

DALLAS

Man's sentence extended for beating fellow inmate

A member of the Aryan Brotherhood is facing an extended prison sentence after admitting he committed a federal hate crime by severely beating another inmate he believed to be gay.

The FBI said 27-year-old John Hall was sentenced Thursday to nearly six years, which will be added to the sentence he's currently serving in federal prison in suburban Dallas. He had been scheduled for release in August.

Authorities said Hall yelled homophobic slurs as he attacked the inmate in December 2011 by repeatedly punching and stomping on his head. The victim suffered a fractured eye socket, broken teeth and multiple lacerations. Hall pleaded guilty in November 2012 to violating the Matthew Shepard and James Byrd Jr. Hate Crimes Prevention Act.

It wasn't immediately clear why Hall was originally incarcerated.

Country music's Jack Greene dies in Nashville

Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Jack Greene, a longtime Grand Ole Opry star who earned fame with the hit "There Goes My Everything," has died in Nashville at 83.

The song showed off his deep voice, made him a star and earned him the single of the year and male vocalist of the year awards from the Country Music Association in 1967.

Grand Ole Opry spokeswoman Jessie Schmidt said Friday that Greene died in his sleep Thursday night at home from complications of Alzheimer's disease.

Greene performed regularly on the Grand Ole Opry beginning in 1967.

His other hits, mostly in the late 1960s, included "All the Time," "Are My Treasure," "Until My Dreams Come True," "What Locks the Door" and "Statue of a Fool."

He was nominated for a Grammy award three straight years.

"There was a whirlwind of events," he recalled in a 1992 Associated Press interview. "I'd go from one town to another, one radio station to another, one event to another. It was the highlight of my career."

His "There Goes My Everything" even spawned a competing pop version by Englebert Humperdinck.

"I had letters by the thousands from people who had lost loved ones," he said, about the reaction to his song. "It touched a lot of people's lives."

In the late 1960s and early 1970s, Greene recorded duet hits with Jeannie Seely including, "Wish I Didn't Have to Miss You."

He was a native of Maryville, Tenn., where he started in radio at WGAP. He was a singer-guitarist who played bass and drums in various groups, then got his break when Country Music Hall of Famer Ernest Tubb hired him to be drummer for his band in the early 1960s.

Investors in $7B swindle could soon get payout

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Investors in a $7 billion Ponzi scheme orchestrated by former Texas tycoon R. Allen Stanford could finally begin getting back some of what they lost in the next few months, after a recovery process that has dragged on for more than four years.

Investors will see only a pittance of what they put into the scheme. But the process got a boost this week as parties that had been battling each other for control of about $300 million in frozen foreign bank accounts and other assets once owned by Stanford reached an agreement to work together.

"The freeing up of funds ... is a good thing," Angela Shaw, a Dallas-area woman who founded the Stanford Victims Coalition after three generations of her family lost $4.5 million in the fraud, said Friday.

In a Ponzi scheme, money from new investors is used to pay old ones. Prosecutors said Stanford persuaded investors to buy certificates of deposit from his bank on the Caribbean island nation of Antigua then used the money to fund a string of failed businesses, bribe regulators and pay for his lavish lifestyle. Stanford, 62, was convicted last year on 13 fraud-related counts and sentenced to 110 years in prison.

Stanford's financial empire once spanned from the U.S. to Latin America and the Caribbean. In the wake of its collapse, a U.S. judge in Dallas and an Antiguan court both appointed people to try to recover assets. The U.S. Justice Department also undertook its own effort.

This week's agreement consolidates the efforts to take control of assets frozen in Canada, Switzerland and the United Kingdom.

"Without the ... agreement, the (parties) will be forced to expend substantial time, energy and money fighting over the Stanford assets," attorneys for Ralph Janvey, the receiver appointed by a judge in Dallas to oversee the recovery efforts, wrote in a court motion filed this week.

Prisons install cellphone-blocking equipment

Associated Press

BEAUMONT — The nation's largest state prison system is turning to electronic weaponry to combat the persistent headache of illegal cellphones smuggled to inmates.

Final testing starts next week at the first of two Texas Department of Criminal Justice prisons where equipment has been installed to block calls to and from unauthorized phones.

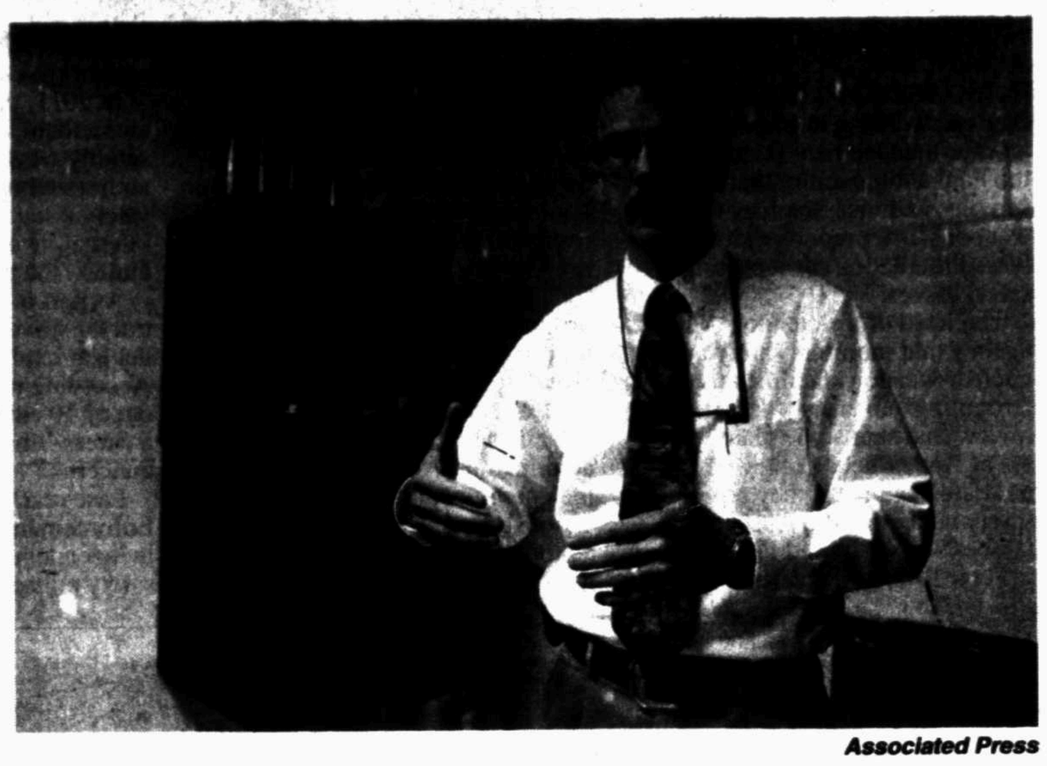
The equipment, known as a managed access system, also diverts text messages, emails and Internet log-in attempts from contraband phones. It should be in full operation at the Stiles Unit outside Beaumont and the McConnell Unit near Beeville next month. The two prisons together hold some 5,000 inmates and historically have been the worst of the more than 100 Texas prisons when it comes to cellphone smuggling.

The goal is to make cellphones useless, or at least not worth the risk of extended prison time or reduced privileges, said Michael Roesler, senior warden at the Stiles Unit.

"If the cellphone becomes the proverbial paperweight, the reward of taking a chance of losing their good time, their status, their class, their parole possibility, is too great a risk for them to hang on to," he said.

Contraband phones have been a problem in prisons around the country. Prison administrators consider them security threats, used by inmates to plan and coordinate escapes, run illicit businesses and threaten and harass crime victims or authorities.

In South Carolina, a corrections officer in charge of keeping contraband out of the prison where he worked was shot at his home in 2010 in a plan devised by inmates using smuggled phones.



Associated Press

Senior Warden Michael Roesler explains a cellphone-blocking system, left, at the Stiles Unit of the Texas Department of Criminal Justice system Wednesday in Beaumont. The new technology is being installed at the prison to divert calls, texts, emails and Internet log-in attempts from contraband phones.

Five years ago in Texas, a death row inmate made threatening calls to a state senator, prompting an unprecedented governor-ordered lockdown of the entire 150,000-inmate prison system to sweep for contraband.

Late last month, several gang members at the McConnell Unit were arrested after trying to sell stolen vehicles to Mexican drug cartel members in a scheme coordinated with illegal phones. The investigation also netted 17 former corrections officers accused of selling phones and drugs to prisoners.

Overall, Texas corrections authorities seized 630 cellphones from inmates in 2011 and 738 last year, including 110 from Stiles.

"It's something we take very seriously," said Tommy Prasifka, deputy director of the agency's institutional division. "We've worked very hard to come up with ideas, constantly looking at better ways, whether its technology or utilizing searches and shakedowns."

It's not clear why Stiles and McConnell have more contraband cellphones than others, Texas officials said, although they noted the prisons also have more disciplinary problems among inmates.

The managed access systems that are being installed won't interfere with 911 calls, but they will only other calls and communication only to and from registered devices. The top managers at the prisons will decide which ones can be registered.

The "brain" of the new system, locked in a closet a few steps from the warden's office, consists of two electronic boxes a bit bigger than two large microwave ovens, filled with blinking lights and wires and a couple of rows of boxes that resemble CD cases. The apparatus connects with a similar single box of electronics in the individual prison buildings. Those boxes receive signals from unobtrusive, plastic squares mounted in the buildings.

"It behaves as a cellular tower," said Mike Bell, the prison system's information technology director. "Based on ID numbers, if you're on authorized list, it allows the call to go through."

The system also tracks the number of attempted calls from various locations, giving wardens information on where to target searches.

Word of the new system already has trickled down to inmates, and authorities are aware of conversations suggesting different kinds of phones be tried to circumvent it, said Lori Davis, an agency regional director.

Nuke weapons plant, feds look at worker issues

Associated Press

AMARILLO — Officials say they are working to improve worker-management relations at the Panhandle facility that assembles and disassembles nuclear weapons, after reports that workers feared retaliation for reporting safety issues.

The head of a watchdog agency that monitors safety at U.S. nuclear weapons facilities found "troubling" an energy department review that said some plant workers at Pantex believe they will be retaliated against if they report safety concerns, the Amarillo Globe-News reported Friday.

Peter Winokur, chairman of the Defense Nuclear Facilities Safety Board, said at a meeting Thursday that nuclear safety must be paramount at Pantex. Board members met with top National Nuclear Security Administration and senior Pantex officials to discuss the results of the energy department's review.

"The nuclear explosive safety program must ensure the prevention of a main charge high-explosive detonation or an unintended nuclear detonation," Winokur said.

Neile Miller, NNSA's acting administrator, said the agency took the energy department's review seriously and is developing an action plan to correct issues raised by workers and the board.

"The results were sobering," she said of the review.

In 2011, the board learned about an incident when warhead disassembly work proceeded beyond authorized operations, a serious safety issue that also sparked an internal investigation by B&W Pantex, the plant contractor.

As part of its probe, the contractor surveyed personnel in its nuclear explosives safety division. According to the survey, "eight out of 10 employees believe it is a career-limiting move to raise concerns."

Last year, the DOE's Office of Enforcement and Oversight did an independent review of the plant's safety culture.

The agency's review came about after two plant workers safety board staffers "about perceived retaliation for raising a safety concern." The report said Pantex's senior management needed to work to gain the respect and trust of workers.

John Woolery, B&W Pantex general manager, said a member of management did not listen in 2011 when employees expressed safety concerns. The Work should have been suspended, he said, until concerns were resolved.

Pantex, located about 17 miles northeast of Amarillo, dismantles retired nuclear bombs and modifies weapons for the U.S. atomic arsenal.

The entrance to a closed down and vacant Internet cafe run by Allied Veterans is seen Wednesday in Casselberry, Fla. Florida's lieutenant governor resigned and nearly 60 other people were charged in a widening scandal of a purported veterans charity that authorities said Wednesday was a $300 million front for illegal gambling.

States wrestle with 'gambling' rooms in probe of Internet cafes

Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The charity-run businesses under investigation in a Florida gambling probe started popping up in strip malls about six years ago and rapidly spread as the unregulated stores became a billion-dollar enterprise.

One of the industry's biggest players was toppled this week when about 50 people were arrested in a handful of states, many of them charged with racketeering and conspiracy, authorities said.

They were all linked to Allied Veterans of the World, a veterans charity accused of masking a $300 million illegal gambling ring.

Allied Veterans had about 50 locations, but by some estimates there are 1,000 such storefronts across Florida. These so-called Internet cafes, which authorities said are actually small casinos with slot machine-style games, have mushroomed in Ohio, South Carolina, North Carolina and elsewhere.

"I'm thoroughly convinced they are illegal in every state in the union," said David Stewart, a Washington lawyer who works for the casino industry's main lobbying group, the American Gaming Association.

He compared the parlors to kudzu, a fast-growing invasive vine. "They grow when people aren't paying attention."

The scandal brought down Florida's lieutenant governor, who was questioned in the probe but not charged.

Authorities said charity leaders spent very little on veterans and lavished millions on themselves, buying boats, beachfront condos and Maseratis, Ferraris and Porsches.

Authorities said they were also looking into campaign donations and lobbyists.

An Associated Press review of the key players behind the charity showed they pumped more than $1 million into the campaign accounts of Florida politicians who had the power to regulate or put them out of business.

The businesses in Florida and elsewhere often operate in a gray area. The game makers argue they are legal sweepstakes because there's a predetermined number of winners, similar to a McDonald's Monopoly game or Coca-Cola's cap contest.

The alleged ringleader, the charity's attorney Kelly Mathis, wrote opinion pieces and argued before local governments the games were legal.

To label these businesses as strip mall casinos "is an unfair and inaccurate characterization of these businesses," Mathis wrote to tcpalm.com in 2011.

PORT

spokesman in Marfa.

Elkowitz said "sequestration will certainly impact the park, but the crossing is a priority."

The new border port is sought by residents of the Big Bend region, some of whom have family on both sides of the Rio Grande, said Rep Pete Gallego, D-Alpine.

Gallego said that as a kid he paid a quarter to cross the river at Boquillas in a rowboat. The reopening would join families and improve the business climate on both sides of the border.

"Restoring that local economy could be a real good thing for everybody," Gallego said.

Sanders said he began crossing the river at Boquillas in 1963, visiting with people in the small Mexican town and eating a restaurant there.

He said Mexicans came over to a small store in the national park to buy groceries: "fresh meats, produce and bread."

The new crossing will be a huge convenience for locals, and provide tourists to the national park with a chance to enjoy restaurants and protected natural areas in Mexico.

"I want it open," said Sanders, still working for the concessionaire who runs the small store on the U.S. side of the river. "It's not going to make us rich, but it's a little more business."

Sen. John Cornyn said the delay in opening the crossing has been the lack of infrastructure on the Mexican side of the river.

Cornyn said that even though the U.S. border port of entry would be automated, without dedicated immigration personnel assigned, it would be located in a facility where NPS and other federal employees are present.

The Boquillas crossing will give U.S. and Mexican tourists access to federally protected areas on both sides of the river, including Big Bend park in the United States and Maderas de Carmen and Canon de Santa Elena in Mexico.

It also will become the only border port-of-entry between Presidio and Del Rio, a span of nearly 290 miles by paved road.

There is no bridge at the Boquillas crossing.

Residents and tourists on both sides of the river had regularly crossed at Boquillas, often in a rowboat with "Victor," a Mexican national who made a living ferrying people over the Rio Grande, or by wading the gentle waters.

The cultural crossing, however, was closed in May 2002 when the U.S. government tightened security in the wake of the Sept. 11, 2001 terrorist attacks.

A decision to "reopen" the crossing with an automated port-of-entry, inside a NPS visitor center, came after consultation with Mexican counterparts and extensive analysis, according to CBP officials.

"This is unique. We've opened other ports, but this is unique in that it is automated," Brooks said.

"There is no bridge and there is no commercial traffic through the port," Brooks said.

In 2011 the NPS announced that the Boquillas crossing would reopen in April 2012, but that date slipped during presidential elections in both the United States and Mexico.

People using the automated kiosks will be required to have a passport or other documents accepted for entry under the Western Hemisphere Travel Initiative.

The NPS visitor center with the automated kiosks will only be staffed from Wednesday through Sunday, limiting crossings to just those days.

And even though the Big Bend region has a colorful history of smuggling, Elkowitz said current apprehensions in the area "are the lowest for the entire 2,000-mile border."

"There is still smuggling in the area," he said, but not like decades ago. And the number of Border Patrol and Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents has increased substantially since 2011.

"There's a lot of law enforcement down there now," he said.

Federal judge rules secret FBI letters unconstitutional

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — A federal judge has ruled that the FBI's practice of issuing so-called national security letters to banks, phone companies and other businesses is unconstitutional, saying the secretive demands for customer data violate the First Amendment.

The FBI almost always bars recipients of the letters from disclosing to anyone — including customers — that they have even received the demands, U.S. District Judge Susan Illston said in the ruling released Friday.

The government has failed to show that the letters and the blanket non-disclosure policy "serve the compelling need of national security," and the gag order creates "too large a danger that speech is being unnecessarily restricted," the San Francisco-based Illston wrote.

FBI counter-terrorism agents began issuing the letters, which don't require a judge's approval, after Congress passed the USA Patriot Act in the wake of the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks.

The case arises from a lawsuit that lawyers with the Electronic Frontier Foundation filed in 2011 on behalf of an unnamed telecommunications company that received an FBI demand for customer information.

"We are very pleased that the court recognized the fatal constitutional shortcomings of the NSL statute," EFF lawyer Matt Zimmerman said. "The government's gags have truncated the public debate on these controversial surveillance tools. Our client looks forward to the day when it can publicly discuss its experience."

Illston wrote that she was also troubled by the limited powers judges have to lift the gag orders.

Judges can eliminate the gag order only if they have "no reason to believe that disclosure may endanger the national security of the United States, interfere with a criminal counter-terrorism, or counterintelligence investigation, interfere with diplomatic relations, or endanger the life or physical safety of any person."

That provision also violated the Constitution because it blocks meaningful judicial review.

Illston ordered the FBI to cease issuing the letters, but put her order on hold for 90 days so the U.S. Department of Justice can appeal to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Illston isn't the first federal judge to find the letters troubling. The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New York also found the gag order unconstitutional but allowed the FBI to continue issuing them if it made changes to its system such as notifying recipients they can ask federal judges to review the letters.

MATCH

in geriatrics.

"The Class of 2013 has a record of excellence in course work, patient care and community service," said Steven L. Berk, M.D., TTUHSC executive vice president and provost and dean of the School of Medicine, in a news release. "We are proud of our students' accomplishments and share their excitement as they pursue their careers at outstanding teaching programs around the country."

TTUHSC students from the Permian Basin campus were matched at programs in Texas — including Galveston, Longview, Houston and Lubbock — and as far away as Los Angeles and Roanoke, Va.

Months before Match Day, students begin applying to residency programs in their preferred specialties. Students visit sites to evaluate and ultimately rank their preferred residency programs. At the same time, administrators at each site interview applicants and rank them. The National Resident Matching Program (NRMP) coordinates this process and makes the final match algorithm, which is designed to produce results for students to fill the thousands of training positions available at U.S. teaching hospitals.

Residency programs range from three to seven years based on specialty.

Helm, a 2005 graduate of Midland Christian School, said he would eventually like to work in the Permian Basin, a place he calls home.

North Dakota close to banning abortions at 6 weeks

Associated Press

BISMARCK, N.D. — North Dakota on Friday moved closer to adopting what would be the most restrictive abortion laws in the country, with lawmakers sending the Republican governor measures that could set the state up for a costly legal battle over the U.S. Supreme Court decision that legalized the procedure.

The North Dakota Senate overwhelmingly approved two anti-abortion bills Friday, one banning abortions as early as six weeks into a pregnancy and another prohibiting women from having the procedure because a fetus has a genetic defect, such as Down syndrome. North Dakota would be the first state in the U.S. to adopt such laws.

Supporters said their goal is to challenge the Supreme Court's 1973 Roe v. Wade ruling that legalized abortion up until a fetus is considered viable, usually at 22 to 24 weeks, though anti-abortion activists elsewhere have expressed concern about the strategy.

"It's a good day for babies," said Rep. Bette Grande, a Republican from Fargo who introduced both bills. The state's only abortion clinic is in Fargo, and abortion-rights advocates say the measures are meant to shut it down.

Gov. Jack Dalrymple hasn't said anything to indicate he would veto the measures, and the bills have enough support in each chamber for the Legislature to override him.

Debate Friday was brief, with the Senate taking about an hour to pass both measures. No one spoke against the so-called fetal heartbeat bill, which the Senate took up immediately after passing the genetic abnormalities bill. The votes were largely on party lines, with Republicans supporting the measures and Democrats opposing them.

Opponents, who have promised legal challenges to both measures if they become law, urged Dalrymple to veto the bills. North Dakota is one of several states with Republican-controlled Legislatures and GOP governors that is looking at abortion restrictions. But the state is better positioned than most for a long court fight: It has budget surplus nearing $2 billion thanks to new-found oil wealth.

The American Civil Liberties Union called the measures "extreme," saying they would make North Dakota "the first state in the nation to ban most abortions."

"In America, no woman, no matter where she lives, should be denied the ability to make this deeply personal decision," ACLU executive director Anthony Romero said in a statement.

Worker who set fire to sub sentenced

Associated Press

PORTLAND, Maine — A shipyard worker who set fire to rags aboard a nuclear submarine because he wanted to go home was sentenced to a little more than 17 years in federal prison Friday for the blaze that transformed the vessel into a fiery furnace, injured seven people and caused about $450 million in damage.

Casey James Fury also was ordered to pay $400 million in restitution by a judge who weighed his lack of criminal record and the severity of the fire before imposing a 205-month prison sentence.

The 25-year-old Fury, formerly of Portsmouth, N.H., pleaded guilty to setting the May 23 fire while the USS Miami was undergoing a 20-month dry dock overhaul at Portsmouth Naval Shipyard in Kittery.

The civilian painter and sand blaster told authorities that he wanted to go home because he was suffering from an anxiety attack. He told them he never envisioned such extensive damage when he used a lighter to set fire to a bag of rags that he left burning on a bunk in a state room.

The blaze quickly grew into an inferno spewing superheated smoke that billowed from hatches. It took 12 hours and the efforts of more than 100 firefighters to save the submarine.

LA Times hack: Security breach or harmless prank?

Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Federal prosecutors say Reuters' deputy social media editor conspired with a notorious hacker network to cause an online security breach that should be punished by decades in federal prison.

Fervent online supporters of Matthew Keys say the journalist was just taking part in an online prank that briefly altered the Los Angeles Times' website and he shouldn't even have been suspended from his job.

In an age when the line between tech superstardom and outright hacking grows increasingly blurry, the case against Keys, 26, lays bare sharp divisions about what constitutes Internet crime and how far the government should go to stop it.

"Congress wants harsh penalties doled out for these crimes because they don't want people defacing websites, but there has to be a way that we can bring the law into harmony with the realities of how people use technology today," said Hanni Fakhoury, an attorney at the San Francisco-based nonprofit Electronic Frontier Foundation.

Keys was charged Thursday with conspiring with the hacking group Anonymous to alter a Times news story in late 2010.

The federal indictment accuses Keys of giving hackers the information they needed to access the computer system of Times' parent company, Tribune Co. Tribune also owns a Sacramento television station Keys had been fired from months earlier.

A worker cleans an entrance to the Los Angeles Times building in Los Angeles in 2006.

An attorney for Keys said he is not guilty and that the government is overreaching in its zeal to prosecute Internet pranks.

"No one was hurt, there were no lasting injuries, no one's identify was stolen, lives weren't ruined," his Ventura-based attorney, Jay Leiderman, said Friday. "Mr. Keys was no different than any other embedded journalist. The story he was going after was inside this chat room, and he went there."

Keys was hired in 2012 as deputy social media editor for the Reuters news service. He didn't return a phone call seeking comment.

According to Keys' Facebook profile, he is single and works at Thomson Reuters Corp.'s New York office, where "I get paid to use Twitter and Facebook at work."

He was suspended with pay late Thursday, said Reuters spokesman David Girardin, who did not elaborate.

According to the indictment, a hacker identified only as "Sharpie" used information Keys supplied in an Internet chat room and altered a headline on a December 2010 Times story to read "Pressure builds in House to elect CHIPPY 1337." The reference was to another hacking group credited with defacing the website of video game publisher Eidos in 2011.

Keys is charged with one count each of conspiracy to transmit information to damage a protected computer, as well as transmitting and attempting to transmit that information. If convicted, prosecutors say the Secaucus, N.J., resident faces a combined 25 years prison and a $500,000 fine if sentenced to the maximum for each count.

However, first-time offenders with no criminal history will typically spend much less time in prison than the maximum sentence, said Mary Fan, a former federal prosecutor who specializes in criminal law and procedure at the University of Washington School of Law.

His indictment comes after recent hacks into the computer systems of two other U.S. media companies that own The New York Times and The Wall Street Journal. Both newspapers reported in February that their computer systems had been infiltrated by China-based hackers, likely to monitor media coverage the Chinese government deems important.

Anonymous and its offshoot, Lulz Security, have been linked to a number of high-profile computer attacks and crimes, including many that were meant to embarrass governments, federal agencies and corporate giants. They have been connected to attacks that took data from FBI partner organization InfraGard, and they've jammed websites of the CIA and the Public Broadcasting Service.

HOUSTON

US rig count up 24 this week to 1,776

The number of rigs exploring for oil and natural gas this week in the U.S. jumped 24 to 1,776, according to Houston-based oilfield services company Baker Hughes.

All gains came from natural gas, which ended the week at 431 rigs. Oil rigs were unchanged at 1,341, and miscellaneous rigs stayed at four.

At this time last year, there were 1,984 rigs in the U.S. Among them, 1,317 were listed as searching for oil, 663 for gas and four as miscellaneous.

There were 209 directional drilling rigs, an increase of 14; 1,131 horizontal rigs, up one; and 436 vertical rigs, up nine.

In Texas, there were 838 rigs exploring for oil and natural gas, an increase of three. At this time last year, there were 926 rigs in Texas.

Among other major oil- and gas-producing states, Louisiana saw the greatest gain at eight rigs, followed closely by Oklahoma at seven. New Mexico and Pennsylvania each gained two rigs, and North Dakota and Wyoming added one apiece.

West Virginia decreased by one rig.

Alaska, Arkansas, California and Colorado were unchanged.

In the U.S., 1,701 rigs were listed as on land, 22 in inland waters and 53 offshore. There were 51 rigs in the Gulf of Mexico.

Canada lost 77 rigs to finish the week with 503. There were 366 rigs listed as searching for oil, a decrease of 85, and 137 for gas, up eight. There were no miscellaneous rigs in Canada.

The total rig count in North America was 2,279, a decrease of 53.

NEW YORK

Oil and natural gas end the week higher

Natural gas and oil ended the week with solid gains, with one boosted by forecasts for colder temperatures and the other by signs that U.S. manufacturing is heating up.

The price of natural gas rose 6 cents, or 1.6 percent, to finish at $3.87 per 1,000 cubic feet. It gained nearly 7 percent for the week, boosted mainly by forecasts for cold temperatures in many gas-consuming regions through the end of the month. Jim Ritterbusch, president of energy consultancy Ritterbusch and Associates, said in a note to clients that he expects natural gas to make "a run at the $4 mark early next week" assuming no change in weather forecasts.

The price of oil rose 42 cents to end at $93.45 per barrel. It was up $1.50, or 1.6 percent, for the week on signs of improvement in the U.S. job market and manufacturing sector. On Friday the government said a strong increase in auto output boosted U.S. factory production by a seasonally-adjusted 0.8 percent last month.

Group threatens to sue feds over lizard

Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Environmental groups are threatening to sue the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service because the agency decided not to grant endangered species protections to a lizard found only in southeastern New Mexico and West Texas.

Federal officials have said the decision not to list the dunes sagebrush lizard was based partly on voluntary conservation agreements now in place in the two states.

But the Center for Biological Diversity and Defenders of Wildlife contend that the agreements between landowners and the Texas Comptroller's Office are confidential and not even the Fish and Wildlife Service can review them.

The groups say the agency will not be able to determine whether there are adequate protections in place for the lizards.

Similar voluntary agreements made with landowners and businesses in New Mexico are not confidential.

Brazil's new oil revenue law goes into effect

Associated Press

SAO PAULO — A new oil law that gives a greater share of royalty revenues from Brazil's vast oil fields to non-producing states went into effect Friday, and producing states filed appeals against it with the Supreme Court.

The law was published in the official gazette after President Dilma Rousseff signed it Thursday.

The new law shares oil royalties from existing and future drilling and production concessions more evenly among all of Brazil's 27 states instead of favoring top oil producers, such as Rio de Janeiro, Espirito Santo and Sao Paulo states.

The three state governments said on their websites they filed their appeals Friday. All three contend the legislation is unconstitutional because it breaches existing production contracts.

Officials in Rio de Janeiro, the largest producing state, have said the law will deprive Rio of $1.7 billion in 2013 alone, endangering preparations for the 2014 World Cup and the 2016 Olympics.

Rio state Gov. Sergio Cabral said the law would bankrupt the state and many of its municipal governments, 87 percent of which depend on oil-generated revenues.

The Espirito Santo governor, Renato Casagrande, has said his state stands to lose more than 10 billion reals ($5 billion) over the next seven years.

Congress approved the law late last year.

The law lowers the percentage of petroleum royalties shared among producing states from 26.25 percent to 20 percent. Rousseff vetoed that provision, but Congress overrode the veto last week.

Non-producing states will see their share increase from 7 percent to 21 percent, while the central government's share will drop from 30 percent to 20 percent.

The rest of money goes to municipal governments in producing states.

Obama says US must shift cars, trucks off of oil

Associated Press

LEMONT, Ill. — Envisioning cars that can go "coast to coast without using a drop of oil," President Barack Obama on Friday urged Congress to authorize spending $2 billion over the next decade to expand research into electric cars and biofuels to wean automobiles off gasoline.

Obama, expanding on an initiative he addressed in his State of the Union speech last month, said the United States must shift its cars and trucks entirely off oil to avoid perpetual fluctuations in gas prices. Citing policies that already require automakers to increase gas mileage, he said he expects that by the middle of the next decade, Americans will only have to fill up their cars half as often.

"We've set some achievable but ambitious goals," Obama said, speaking at Argonne National Laboratory outside Chicago

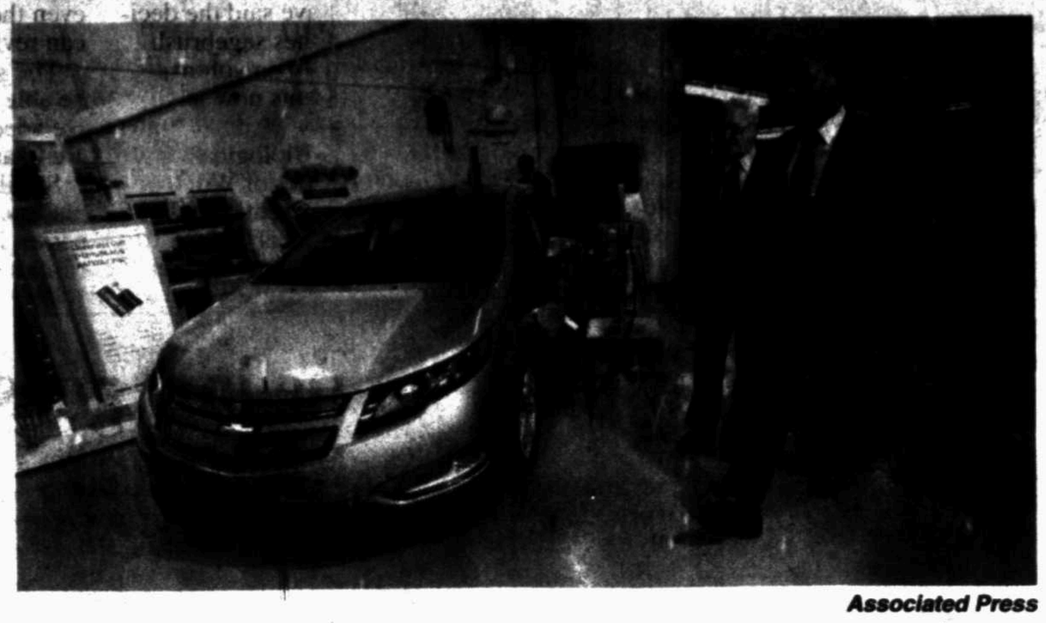
"The only way to break this cycle of spiking gas prices — the only way to break that cycle for good — is to shift our cars entirely, our cars and trucks, off oil," the president said.

Friday's speech, with its focus on energy, was designed to draw attention to what the White House says is one of Obama's top agenda items for his second term. That focus, however, has been overshadowed as the administration and Congress work on an immigration overhaul, gun legislation and deficit-reduction measures.

Obama cast his proposal as not only a clean energy plan, but as one meant to create opportunities for economic growth.

"I want the next great job-creating breakthroughs, whether it's in energy or nanotechnology or bio-engineering, I want those breakthroughs to be right here in the United States of America, creating American jobs and maintaining our technological lead," he said.

Obama spoke from inside Argonne's Advanced Photon Source, a ring-shaped facility a mile and a half around. The facility acts as a giant extra-bright X-ray that allows scientists to look inside objects at the atomic level.



Associated Press

President Barack Obama and Joint Center for Energy Storage Research Director George Crabtree walk past a hybrid Chevy Volt vehicle used for testing during the president's tour of the Argonne National Laboratory in Argonne, Ill., on Friday.

The initiative, proposing to spend $200 million a year on research, would be paid for with revenue from federal oil and gas leases on offshore drilling and would not add to the deficit.

The money would fund research on "breakthrough" technologies such as batteries for electric cars and biofuels made from switch grass or other materials. Researchers also would look to improve use of natural gas as a fuel for cars and trucks.

Obama's motorcade passed a couple dozen protesters standing in the rain at the Argonne entrance, protesting against the proposed Keystone XL pipeline, which would transport oil from Canada's tar sands to Texas Gulf Coast refineries. The Obama administration is considering whether to clear the project. White House spokesman Josh Earnest told reporters aboard Air Force one that "there's no question" that the types of green energy initiatives the president was talking about at Argonne would have more impact on climate change than whether Keystone is built.

"Thousands of miles of pipelines have been built since President Obama took office inside the United States of America and it hasn't had a measurable impact on climate change" Earnest said. "But what has had an impact, measurable impact, on climate change has been, for example, the car rule that the president has put in place that has greatly increased fuel efficiency and reduced carbon emissions."

Inside the national lab, Obama got a firsthand look at some of the cutting-edge vehicle research, including a room that can go to extreme temperatures to test the impact on fuel efficiency. He talked to engineers working on electric car batteries and on an engine that runs on diesel and gasoline to reduce fuel costs.

"We want to keep on funding them," the president said as he looked at the engine, developed with public and private funding from Chrysler. "That's what I'm trying to tell Congress."

The proposal is modeled after a plan submitted by a group of business executives and former military leaders who are committed to reducing U.S. oil dependence. The group, called Securing America's Future Energy, or SAFE, is headed by FedEx Corp. Chairman and CEO Frederick W. Smith and retired Marine Corps Gen. P.X. Kelley.

Creation of the trust would require congressional approval at a time of partisan divide over energy issues. Republicans have pushed to expand oil and gas drilling on federal land and water, while Obama and many Democrats have worked to boost renewable energy sources such as wind and solar power.

There were signs agreement may be possible. Alaska Sen. Lisa Murkowski has called it "an idea I may agree with."

Murkowski, senior Republican on the Senate Energy Committee, did not fully endorse the plan, which is similar to one she has proposed to use revenue from drilling for oil and natural gas on public lands that previously were off-limits to energy production to pay for research on new energy technologies.

White House officials said the president's proposal would not require expansion of drilling to federal lands or water where it is now prohibited. Instead, they are counting on increased production from existing sites, along with efficiencies from an administration plan to streamline drilling permits. The government collects more than $6 billion a year in royalties from production on federal lands and waters.

A spokesman for House Speaker John Boehner said Obama needs to expand drilling to get his support.

"For this proposal to even be plausible, oil and gas leasing on federal land would need to increase dramatically," the spokesman, Brendan Buck, said. "Unfortunately, this administration has consistently slowed, delayed and blocked American energy production."

Vatican criticizes campaign against pope

Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — The honeymoon that Pope Francis has enjoyed since his remarkable election hit a bump Friday, with the Vatican lashing out at what it called a defamatory and "anti-clerical left-wing" media campaign questioning his actions during Argentina's murderous military dictatorship.

On Day 2 of the Francis pontificate, the Vatican denounced news reports in Argentina and beyond resurrecting allegations that the former Jorge Mario Bergoglio failed to openly confront the junta responsible for kidnapping and killing thousands of people in a "dirty war" to eliminate leftist opponents.

Bergoglio, like most Argentines, didn't publicly confront the dictators who ruled from 1976-83, while he was the leader of the country's Jesuits. And human rights activists differ on how much blame he personally deserves.

Top church leaders had endorsed the junta and some priests even worked alongside torturers inside secret prisons. Nobody has produced any evidence suggesting Bergoglio had anything to do with such crimes. But many activists are angry that as archbishop of Buenos Aires for more than a decade, he didn't do more to support investigations into the atrocities.

On Thursday, the old ghosts resurfaced.

A group of 44 former military and police officers on trial for torture, rape and murder in a concentration camp in Cordoba province in the 1970s wore the yellow-and-white ribbons of the papal flag in Francis' honor. Many Argentine newspapers ran the photo Friday.

The Vatican spokesman the Rev. Federico Lombardi noted that Argentine courts had never accused Bergoglio of any crime, that he had denied all accusations against him and that on the contrary "there have been many declarations demonstrating how much Bergoglio did to protect many persons at the time."

He said the accusations against the new pope were made long ago "by anti-clerical left-wing elements to attack the church. They must be firmly rejected."

The harsh denunciation was typical of a Vatican that often reacts defensively when it feels under attack, even though its response served to give the story legs for another day.

It interrupted the generally positive reception Francis has enjoyed since his election as pope on Wednesday, when even his choice of footwear — his old black shoes rather than the typical papal red — was noted as a sign of his simplicity and humility.

There was one clearly unscripted moment Friday, when the 76-year-old Francis stumbled briefly during an audience with the cardinals, but he quickly recovered. And for the second day in a row, Francis slipped out of the Vatican walls, this time to visit an ailing Argentine cardinal, Jorge Mejia, who suffered a heart attack Wednesday and was in the hospital.

This upbeat narrative of a people's pope who named himself after the nature-loving St. Francis of Assisi has clashed with accusations stemming from Bergoglio's past.

The worst allegation is that as the military junta took over in 1976, he withdrew support for two Jesuit priests whose work in the slums of Buenos Aires had put them in direct contact with the leftist guerrilla movement advocating armed revolution. The priests were then kidnapped and interrogated inside a clandestine torture center at the Navy Mechanics School.

Bergoglio said he had told the priests — Orlando Yorio and Francisco Jalics — to give up their slum work for their own safety, and they refused. Yorio later accused Bergoglio of effectively delivering them to the death squads by declining to publicly endorse their work. Yorio died in Uruguay in 2000.

Jalics, who had maintained silence about the events, issued a statement Friday saying he spoke with Bergoglio years later and the two celebrated Mass together and hugged "solemnly."

"I am reconciled to the events and consider the matter to be closed," he said.

US clergy victims make demands of new pope

Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Most Roman Catholics are rejoicing at the election of Pope Francis, but alleged victims of clergy abuse in the U.S. are demanding swift and bold actions from the new Jesuit pontiff: Defrock all molester priests and the cardinals who covered up for them, formally apologize, and release all confidential church files.

Adding to their distrust are several multimillion dollar settlements the Jesuits paid out in recent years, including $166 million to more than 450 Native Alaskan and Native American abuse victims in 2011 for molestation at Jesuit-run schools across the Pacific Northwest. The settlement bankrupted the Oregon Province of the Society of Jesus. The order also paid $14 million to settle nine California cases.

"I would like to see this pope stand up and say to those cardinals, 'You need to square this away and change everything that was covered up,'" said Ken Smolka, a 70-year-old retired actor who claimed in a lawsuit he was abused as a teen by a Jesuit priest. "You need to get them on their knees, and let them spend the rest of their lives on their knees praying for the victims."

Pope Francis, who has already set the tone for a new era of humility and compassion, is likely to be sensitive to the plight of clergy abuse victims and aware of the need to work with the worldwide church to prevent more abuse, said Christopher Ruddy, an associate professor at Catholic University of America. Meting out punishment to individual cardinals, however, is much less likely, Ruddy said.

"My sense is that if a bishop really wanted to dig in his heels, it would be very difficult to get him to resign. We have this idea that the pope says something, and everybody just leaps. It doesn't really work that way," Ruddy said. "The bishops themselves have certain rights under church law and they have authority, so that's a hard thing to talk about."

Texas out of NCAA tournament first time since '98

Texas players sit on the bench during the final minutes Thursday's Big 12 tournament quarterfinal game against Kansas State in Kansas City, Mo.

By Jim Vertuno
Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas' long and miserable season would seem like it can't end soon enough. Coach Rick Barnes may not let that happen.

The Longhorns crashed out of the Big 12 tournament Thursday night and for the first time since 1998 won't be playing in the NCAA tournament.

But after his team lost 66-49 to No. 11 Kansas State, Barnes said he expects the Longhorns will keep playing next week in the lower-level College Basketball Invitational, which will announce its lineup on Sunday night.

Texas is 16-17. If the Longhorns don't play — and win — at least two more games, Barnes will have his worst losing season in 15 seasons at Texas. And that may be asking a lot of young team that has struggled to look inspired at times this season, even when all of its best players were on the court.

Texas is one of just six schools to play in the NCAA tournament each of the previous 14 years, but the Longhorns went into the Big 12 tournament needing to grab the champion's automatic NCAA bid to keep that streak alive. Kansas State ended those hopes with their third win of the season over the Longhorns.

"That's something we've never taken for granted. I certainly haven't. I think people act like it's easy to get to," Barnes said. "I'm disappointed. But we are who we are. We weren't good enough."

During most of that 14-year run, Texas made it look pretty easy. The Longhorns had to sweat out a few invitations but were a lock for the NCAA tournament most years. Barnes took the Longhorns to the Final Four in 2003 and to regional finals in 2006 and 2008.

But this year's miss is the culmination of steady postseason slide. Texas is 2-4 in the NCAA tournament since 2009 and hasn't made it past the first weekend of play since making the regional final in 2008. Despite those results, Texas athletic director DeLoss Dodds has said Barnes' job is safe.

Kassie Maddox doesn't care for the feeling she gets when she allows a couple runners on base without recording an out. But Greenwood's sophomore pitcher also understands she can get by with a little help from her friends.

Maddox faced serious trouble just once in a 3-0 shutout victory against Monahans at Greenwood High School in what was the District 4-3A opener for both teams Friday. But once was enough for Maddox.

With the Rangerettes (11-10, 1-0 in 4-3A) leading 3-0, Monahans (0-1 in district) managed to get its first two runners aboard with no outs in the top of the sixth inning. Haily Slade led off the inning with a single to left, while Nikki Salazar laid down a nice bunt and beat out the throw, placing runners on first and second.

"I'm always a lot more confident on the mound when I've got one out," Maddox said. "When those first two got on I kind of started freaking out a little bit. But I knew I had a team behind me that would

Figueroa helps Puerto Rico oust US from WBC

Puerto Rico	4

MIAMI — Once again, the United States could only watch as an opposing pitcher celebrated at the World Baseball Classic.

This time it was 38-year-old right-hander Nelson Figueroa, who became the pride of Puerto Rico on Friday night when he led his team into the semifinals and eliminated the Americans, 4-3.

After Figueroa threw his last pitch to end the sixth inning, he leaped off the mound with a hoot like a kid at recess, then ran to catcher Yadier Molina to share a hug.

On Thursday, demonstrative Dominicans dominated the All-Star-laden U.S. lineup. The Americans endured a scoreless streak of 14 innings spanning the two defeats, and Figueroa limited them to two singles in six shutout innings.

J.C. Romero escaped a bases-loaded jam in the eighth and retired the final four batters for his first save. The last out triggered a pileup of Puerto Ricans behind the mound.

They advanced for the first time to the semifinals, which begin Sunday in San Francisco. They'll play the Dominican Republic on Saturday in the final game in Miami, which will determine seedings for the championship round.

Two-time defending champion Japan and the Netherlands round out the final four.

Figueroa (2-0) has a modest 20-35 record for six teams in nine major-league seasons, with his most recent big-league game in May 2011. After pitching in Triple-A last year, he dominated the Americans, allowing only a single by Brandon Phillips in the fourth and a single by Jimmy Rollins in the sixth.

Puerto Rico lost to the United States 7-1 on Tuesday, then staved off elimination Wednesday, rallying from a 3-1 deficit in the eighth inning to beat Italy.

The hits kept coming Friday, and the Puerto Ricans scored all four runs with two out. Mike Aviles had an RBI single in the first, and Andy Gonzalez doubled home two runs in the sixth.

Ryan Vogelsong (1-1) gave up two runs in 5 2/3 innings.

Fans reach out to San Antonio's Manu Ginobili (20) after he hit a 3-point basket during the fourth quarter of a Jan. 9 game against the Los Angeles Lakers in San Antonio.

By Jon Krawczynski

Here the San Antonio Spurs are again, running roughshod over the NBA and putting off their collective obituary for another year.

They're at the top of the Western Conference again, and it feels like they've been there forever. While everyone keeps waiting for Tim Duncan, Tony Parker, Manu Ginobili and Gregg Popovich to just give up already, they keep coming back, keep fortifying the supporting cast around them and keep winning.

"That's a championship team right there," Chicago Bulls center Joakim Noah said after the Bulls lost in San Antonio earlier this month. "They do all the little things. Play together, defensively, everybody's on the same page. They make very little mistakes. You've got to give credit where credit is due."

They've won at least 50 games in every season of Duncan's long career, aside from the lockout-shortened 1998-99 season, when they went 37-13 and captured the first of their four championships.

They haven't been as flashy as the Lakers. They haven't been as hip as the Heat. What

ARL. PANTEGO 6, MIDLAND CHRISTIAN 4

FORT WORTH — Arlington Pantego pitcher Zach Carter struck out 12 in helping the Panthers to a TAPPS 1-4A victory against Midland Christian on Friday at Fort Worth Southwest Christian.

The Mustangs, who were playing in their TAPPS 1-4A opener, took a 1-0 lead in the second inning, but then Pantego broke through with three runs each in the fourth and fifth innings to take a 6-1 lead. Meanwhile, the Mustangs struggled at the plate as they had a total of 15 strikeouts.

But Midland Christian plated two runs in the sixth and one in the seventh, but was not able to complete the comeback.

"We didn't pitch horrible, and we played good defense but we struck out 19 times and that will get you," Midland Christian coach Mike Munguia said. "(Carter) was good on the mound, but he wasn't good enough to strike us out 15 times. We just didn't adjust with two strikes."

Daniel Crooks was 2 for 3 with a double and an RBI, and Nolan Shattel added two more hits as Grant Little and Bailey Blain each drove in runs.

The two teams will play again at 10 a.m. today.

do their job and they did.

"I'm really blessed to have them on my team."

Maddox managed to get the next batter, Ally Leal, to pop out to Mayson Thompson at second, and got Baily Slade to hit a sharp grounder to third baseman Priscilla Acosta. Acosta chose to tag third for one out, then tried to double up Slade at first with a throw across the diamond.

The throw wasn't in time and an opportunistic Salazar managed to get to third on the throw, then Slade moved up to second when Greenwood first baseman Shawnda Price tried to make the throw back across the diamond to get Salazar.

But with runners on second and third with two outs, Maddox got Raquel Carrasco to ground out back to the pitcher's circle with Maddox making the play to retire the side.

She wasn't threatened again as she struck out the side in the seventh inning, securing the win for the Rangerettes. Maddox allowed five hits and no walks to go with 11 strikeouts.

"Kassie has done an amazing job," Greenwood coach Lee Anne Curry said. "She's still not 100 percent. I wish I could say she was, but we're really excited for her. She did an outstanding job today."

Greenwood wasn't the picture of consistency at the plate, but managed to get a few runs across in the middle innings. The first run scored when Acosta hit a soft liner that was just over the glove of Monahans shortstop Kimi Bailey with the bases loaded in the bottom of the third.

Greenwood's baserunners hesitated a moment, making sure the ball wasn't caught, which resulted in Jaden Shoults being thrown out at third. However, catcher Cassie Kraft scored on the play, giving Greenwood a 1-0 advantage.

Price followed with a single back up the middle of the diamond, scoring Maddox from second for a 2-0 advantage. Greenwood added an unearned run in the third after Kraft scored on back-to-back throwing errors by Monahans third baseman Baily Slade.

Greenwood finished the game with just five hits off Monahans pitcher Adriana Flores, who finished with seven strikeouts, but took advantage of the Lady Loboes' miscues in the field as well as a pair of walks.

"We're either hot, mediocre or cold at the plate," Curry said. "(Friday) we were mediocre. We are executing some things better, but that leaves us something to work on and save for later."

LUBBOCK CORONADO AT MIDLAND HIGH

Records: Coronado 13-7, 2-1 in District 2-5A; MHS 15-5, 4-0

Last game: Coronado 1, Abilene High 0; MHS 13, Lee 0

Notes: Midland High enters this game on a high note, having defeated Lee by run-rule in its last game to remain the only unbeaten team in District 2-5A. But MHS coach Barry Russell knows that'll mean nothing today against perennial power and second-place Coronado. "We're going to have to be really good against Coronado," Russell said after the Lee game, "I mean really good." ... Midland High has won its last four games and figures to have a Division-I pitcher, be it Stanford signee Tyler Thorne or Texas Tech signee Taylor Bridges, standing in the way of five straight. But Russell said today will be about the players in the MHS dugout, not who's on the mound for Coronado. "I don't know who we're going to get, and it doesn't really matter," Russell said. "Again, we've got to take care of the Bulldogs, and if the Bulldogs come out and play a little bit, we'll be in good shape." ... Coronado is off to a puzzling start in league play, with a 2-1 record, which was very nearly a 1-2 record. The Mustangs fell in eight innings on a game-winning hit-by-pitch against Amarillo Tascosa then survived a 1-0 game against Abilene High, who is still winless in 2-5A. A win against Midland High, however, will pull the Mustangs within a half game of the first-place Bulldogs in the standings.

Last game: Midland High 13, Lee 0; Central 1, Amarillo Tascosa 0

Notes: Lee suffered its worst loss of the young district season in its last game, falling by run-rule to crosstown rival Midland High. Now, the Rebels hit the road to take on Central, a playoff team a year ago whose only district loss is to Midland High. "Baseball's cruel, man," Rebel coach Brian Roper said with a laugh after the MHS game, "it is." Roper, however, wasn't worried about his team as it prepares to hit the road for three of its next four. "Our opponents aren't going to feel sorry for us," Roper said, "so we've just got to get back on our horse (today) and start playing." ... Lee won the only district game it has played on the road this season, defeating Odessa High in both teams' district openers. ... The Rebels are looking to improve at the plate as they have scored one run in the last three district games and had no extra-base hits during that span ... Central now finds itself in a three-way tie with Lubbock Coronado and Amarillo Tascosa for second place, sitting a game and a half behind first-place Midland High. Central defeated Tascosa in its last game, played Friday.

Sydney Betcher and Lexi Lopez each had three RBI for the Lady Dawgs in the win, while Brooke Ryan knocked in two runs. ... Cooper's lone win in district play thus far came against winless Amarillo Tascosa. The Lady Cougars have been run-ruled three times, including in Thursday's 18-2 loss to No. 2 Lubbock Coronado. ... Jacks drop 14th straight game

From staff reports

ODESSA — The Odessa Jackalopes lost its 14th straight game Friday night, falling to Topeka, 8-2 at the Ector County Coliseum.

The Roadrunners wasted little time taking the lead in the game as they scored a pair of goals in the game's first three minutes. Tyler Groat and Tyler Poulsen each scored, and then Groat added a goal later in the period.

Topeka added four more goals in the second, and then added another goal in the third.

Steven Haydon scored in the third period for the Jacks off assists from Brett Wagner and Dylan Rosen, and Matthieu Audet scored in the third period as Taylor Portner and Anthony Olguin each had assists.

Odessa is now 6-44-3 this season with 15 points.

Topeka goaltender Spencer Viele stopped 40 of 42 shots.

The two teams will play again at 7:05 p.m. today at the Ector County Coliseum.

MAVERICKS 96 CAVALIERS 86

DALLAS — Rodrigue Beaubois scored 18 points off the bench and keyed a fourth-quarter run to lead Dallas past Cleveland.

Beaubois had seven points and two assists in a 17-4 run that gave Dallas the lead for good to start the fourth.

Reserves Darren Collison and Brandan Wright each scored 13 to pace a Mavericks bench that outscored the Cavaliers' 60-19.

Cleveland's Dion Waiters had 21 points and Shaun Livingston chipped with 13. The Cavaliers, who were playing their second game without All-Star Kyrie Irving, shot 37 percent and turned the ball over six times in the fourth quarter.

ROCKETS 108 TIMBERWOLVES 100

HOUSTON — James Harden scored 37 points, Jeremy Lin had 24 and Houston rallied from 20 points down in the third quarter to beat Minnesota.

Harden also grabbed seven rebounds and handed out eight assists for the Rockets, who stayed two games ahead of the Los Angeles Lakers in the No. 7 spot in the Western Conference.

Derrick Williams and Jose Barea scored 19 points apiece for the Timberwolves, who led 59-39 early in the third quarter. The Rockets held Minnesota to only 16 field goals the rest of the way.

they have been is relentless and unyielding in the face of a clock that keeps ticking.

Sure, there are vulnerabilities.

Parker, who was putting together an MVP-caliber season, is out for at least another two weeks with a sprained left ankle. Ginobili has been bothered by a sore hamstring for much of the year and they've had more players start a game this season than any other team in the league. They've also had a few eye-opening losses — Phoenix at home, a 30-point loss to Portland and a 24-point loss at Minnesota — in the last 10 days that have gotten everyone's attention.

"We've got to get things together and go back to who we were," Ginobili said after the loss in Minnesota. "Because it's happening too often now."

It's always been about professionalism and precision in San Antonio. This year, there's been some hunger and humility added, giving the team an edge that may serve it well when it tries to end a six-year title drought this postseason.

That much was never more evident than on Tuesday when Timberwolves point guard Ricky Rubio sliced and diced them for a triple-double in the Minnesota's convincing win. Sure Duncan and Kawhi Leonard were not playing, but that didn't prevent Stephen Jackson — upset with the loss — from scoffing when asked about Rubio's performance.

"He's all right," Jackson huffed. "You know, I mean, I'm into winning championships. I'm not into guys playing all right, averaging 30 and 20 on sorry teams. I'm into winning championships. He got some upside. I'll say that. But it's all about winning to me. It's not about what you do on your personal stats."

A banner hasn't been raised on the River Walk since 2007. As dominant as they have been in the regular season, the Spurs have flamed out in the playoffs each year since then, including last year when they won 50 times in 66 games and won 20 straight through the end of the regular season and the first two-and a half rounds of the postseason. Up 2-0 on Oklahoma City in the Western Conference finals and looking invincible, the Spurs lost four straight games to the younger Thunder to fall short again in the quest for their fifth title.

Most teams would panic over the summer and make big moves to compensate. That's not how the Spurs do business. Duncan, Ginobili and Parker all returned, with only minor tweaking of the roster around them. Richard Jefferson was out, Nando de Colo was in. Cory Joseph was brought in from the NBDL to help when Parker went down and Leonard and Danny Green have continued to develop into promising perimeter threats.

BIG 12 TOURNAMENT ROUNDUP

NO. 7 KANSAS 88 IOWA STATE 73

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Perry Ellis scored a career-high 23 points, and seventh-ranked Kansas pulled away in the second half to beat Iowa State 88-73 on Friday night and reach the Big 12 tournament title game.

Jeff Withey and Elijah Johnson added 14 points each, and Ben McLemore finished with 10 for the top-seeded Jayhawks (28-5), who advanced to play No. 11 Kansas State today for its sixth Big 12 tournament championship.

Georges Niang scored 19 points and Melvin Ejim had 17 for the fifth-seeded Cyclones (22-11), who were trying to turn the tables after losing to the Jayhawks twice in overtime this season.

Instead, Kansas won for the 16th time in their last 17 meetings.

Ellis was a big reason why.

NO. 11 KANSAS STATE 68 NO. 14 OKLAHOMA STATE 57

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Rodney McGruder scored Kansas State's first nine points of the second half and led the 11th-ranked Wildcats past No. 14 Oklahoma State 68-57 Friday night in the Big 12 semifinals, setting up a title match today against rival Kansas.

McGruder, a career leader in 10 of 14 categories for the second-seeded Wildcats (27-6) scored 25 points as the Wildcats avenged a loss to Oklahoma State in the regular season finale that forced them to share the league title with the hated Jayhawks. The 6-4 McGruder had 24 points the night before against Texas.

Angel Rodriguez, Kansas State's 5-11 point guard, acquitted himself well against Marcus Smart, his bigger and more celebrated Oklahoma State counterpart. Rodriguez had 17 points, four assists and three steals. He had two 3-point buckets while the Cowboys (24-8) were threatening a second-half comeback.

TEXAS

From 1B

Looking back, Texas' bad 2012-2013 season started to unravel before it even began. Myck Kabongo was sidelined for 23 games with an NCAA suspension for receiving improper benefits on a trip to Cleveland last summer, then misleading school investigators when asked about it.

Kabongo was one of the top guards in the Big 12 and Texas' young lineup clearly missed its floor leader. The Longhorns were 10-13 without Kabongo, including an embarrassing loss to Division II Chaminade in the Maui Invitational in November, and started 0-5 in the Big 12, their worst losing streak under Barnes.

Texas won six of its last nine when Kabongo returned. Assuming Texas would have won two out of every three games with Kabongo all season, the Longhorns would be hovering around 21 wins and sitting with at least a good chance of making a 15th consecutive NCAA tournament.

Longhorns forward Jonathan Holmes wouldn't use Kabongo's absence as an excuse for the bad start in the Big 12.

"We just never gave ourselves chances to win," Holmes said.

Texas hasn't played in the National Invitation Tournament since 1986 and that tournament hasn't invited a team with a losing record since it was taken over by the NCAA in 2006.

Barnes said he expects the Longhorns will play in the CBI and Texas would be the first Big 12 team to play in that tournament in its six-year history. Last year, the CBI invited Washington State at 15-16 and the Cougars made it to the championship.

Tournament spokesman Ray Cella would not say if Texas as among the teams the CBI wanted this year.

"We're looking for teams that are playing well at the end of the season, teams that want to continue to play," Cella said. "We've all seen teams that don't really want to keep playing and that's not fun to watch."

Texas' bigger question is Kabongo's future with the team, not over just the next few days or weeks but next season.

The trip to Cleveland that caused him so much trouble came when Kabongo was considering going to the NBA after this freshman season. The NCAA determined Kabongo improperly accepted airfare and personal training instruction. Kabongo chose to return to Texas last year, but will face the same decision again. Kabongo wouldn't talk about it after the loss to Kansas State.

AMARILLO TASCOSA AT MIDLAND HIGH

When/where: 2 p.m. today, Grande Communications Stadium

Records: Midland High 10-5-4, 7-4-2 (23 points) in District 2-5A; Amarillo Tascosa 7-11-4, 2-8-4 (10 points)

Last game: Midland High 2, San Angelo Central 2; Lee 0, Amarillo Tascosa 0

Last meeting: Midland High 4, Amarillo Tascosa 1 on Feb. 13

Notes: The Bulldogs came away with a frustrating tie against San Angelo Central on Tuesday after being up by a goal, but the tie didn't hurt their spot in the District 2-5A standings. Midland High is still in third place in the league table, one point behind Lee and two points ahead of San Angelo Central and Odessa High. A win today by Midland High wouldn't put it in the playoffs but would help solidify its position. ... Even though the Bulldogs beat Tascosa by three goals in February, Midland High coach Warren Cottle said the Rebels are still a dangerous team, especially after Tuesday's tie with second-place Lee. "That coach is very, very good, and you can see it in the results the last couple of weeks, they've been doing some good things," Cottle said. "They are a very good team." ... Cottle said that forward Nico Francino is questionable for today's game because of a head injury suffered on Tuesday against San Angelo Central.

Next: Abilene Cooper at Midland High, 7:30 p.m. Tuesday; Amarillo Tascosa at Odessa Permian, 2 p.m. March 23

LEE AT ABILENE COOPER

Last game: Lee 0, Amarillo Tascosa 0; Odessa High 1, Abilene Cooper 0

Last meeting: Lee 2, Abilene Cooper 0 on Feb. 12

Notes: Tuesday's tie against Amarillo Tascosa helped keep the Rebels in second place in the 2-5A standings, but it didn't help their chances of coming closer to clinching a playoff spot. Lee can clinch a spot in the postseason today, but the Rebels need to win first. Lee's tie against Tascosa was its sixth of the league season, which equals the number of wins for the team. ... Cooper is still in the playoff chase with 16 points and in sixth place, but needs a win today to keep its postseason hopes alive. That factor is something that coach Scott Hicks said is something his team has to remember today. "Realistically, if they can win out and get a little help they are still in it," Hicks said. "It's a big game and we need to go play well. That's all we can do." ... Cooper had a chance to pick up a point on Tuesday but a late goal by the Bronchos put the Cougars' playoff hopes on life support. ... Lee will be without defender Jason McAfee for the second straight Saturday.

Last meeting: Midland High 3, Amarillo Tascosa 0 on Feb. 13

Notes: The Lady Bulldogs are one win away from clinching a playoff spot. If Midland High wins today, it will clinch the fourth, and final, playoff spot out of District 2-5A. ... The Lady Bulldogs will be without coach Ryan Dunlevy today as he will be serving a one-game suspension for his red card from last Saturday's match against Odessa High. The suspension was administered by Midland ISD athletic officials. Dunlevy said that assistant coach Meagan Lasley will lead the team today. ... Midland High picked up a point on Tuesday against league-leading San Angelo Central. Madison Scribner scored Midland High's lone goal. ... Notes: The Lady Rebels will try to move up the 2-5A standings with a victory today as they are in a three-way tie for sixth place. Lee is tied with Lubbock Coronado and Abilene Cooper for the sixth, each with 10 points. ... Lady Rebel coach Brian Pollard said that Amanda Peterson (back), Alyssa Carr (knee) and Morgan Barr (concussion) will miss today's game because of injuries. ... Pollard said the key will be keeping pressure on the Lady Cougars to be able to break Lee's recent scoring drought. Girl fails to measure up to her own high standards

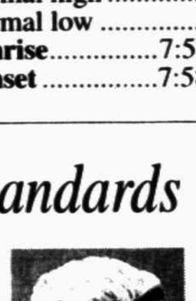
DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.



DEAR ABBY: I have a problem. Basically, I don't like me. I am self-conscious about my weight, my face, my personality. I'm not pretty. I have heard so many times I should "just be myself" that I am sick of it! I don't want to be myself because I don't like myself.

All of my friends are either beautiful, witty, kind or whatever. And I am not, I guess. Please tell me what to do about it. — COMING UP SHORT IN OREGON

DEAR COMING UP SHORT: I do have a few suggestions, and the first is to stop being your own worst enemy. The more you dwell on what you think you lack, the more you will amplify those things. Find one thing you like about yourself and build from there.

Because you're self-conscious about your weight, do something about it by adopting a healthy eating and exercise plan. While you may not be a cover girl, you can be well-groomed. More important than being "witty" is to be a good listener. Remember that, and people will think you are a great conversationalist.

The more you brood about yourself, the lonelier you will become. The more you think about helping others, the less time you will have to think about yourself.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are in our mid-40s and have four beautiful daughters. A boy who dated one of them has become a family friend over the past few years.

"Brett" is a nice young man and has always been helpful with our family. The problem is, Brett texts and calls my wife on a daily basis. The conversation is benign, but I can tell he has a crush on her.

I have asked my wife to stop communicating with him so often, but she insists it's "just a friendship" and nothing is going on. My point is that there IS something going on — from his side — even though she may not realize it.

We have gone round and round about this to the point of exhaustion. Should I let this go or continue to insist that their relationship be redefined? — UNEASY IN FLORIDA

DEAR UNEASY: Looking from the outside in, I suspect that your wife is enjoying all the attention she's receiving from this young man. She's in her mid-40s and it has to be flattering. This is not to imply that the communications will lead to anything more. So step back, find your sense of humor and try to be less heavy-handed until this blows over. Because it will.

DEAR ABBY: My stepfather died recently. I found out when I saw his obituary in the newspaper. It described him as a "loving husband and father," and while I know that's a fairly generic epitaph, nothing about it is true. He was an alcoholic who had several affairs while married to my mother. He also abused me and my stepsiblings physically and sexually.

It's bad enough that he died without having to face the consequences of his actions, but it kills me to know that "loving husband and father" is how our community and history will remember him now that he's gone. Is there anything I can do to get some form of the truth out there? — ANGRY IN TENNESSEE

DEAR ANGRY: Yes, there is. Just keep talking and the word will get around.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, March 16, 2013:

This year you enjoy your surroundings and your interactions with others. You will flourish in your present environment, as you will meet new people and bond more deeply with friends and loved ones. Travel could present complications. Be aware of these limitations. If you are single, you might stumble into a very intense romance. If you are attached, your first child could become a topic of conversation. Keep an open mind. If you are childless, your status might change this year. GEMINI loves to tease you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★ Check out the costs of certain desired items. It is possible that you are considering making a change in your work or lifestyle. This experience could be a fabulous vacation. Know what you desire, and you will be OK. A partner could be testy. Tonight: Treat yourself for a change.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ Beam in more of what you desire, and allow others to have a greater freedom of expression. Your judgments prevent you from seeing others openly, and this could cause you to be hard on yourself. Walk in someone else's shoes in order to gain understanding. Tonight: You can have it all.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★ Honor the need to retreat or take a vacation. A partner, relative or dear friend might have an opinion here, but your need to get away rises above it. Trust that you will be better for the experience. Tonight: Start daydreaming about how you want to revitalize your life.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Zero in on your priorities, and know full well where you are going. As sensitive as you are, you always feel better having friends' support — it doesn't matter what you are doing. Bring others together. Tonight: Get down to basics.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★ Take charge. Whether you're with family or friends, you know what to do. Someone might indicate that he or she does not appreciate your change of plans. Make a point of letting this person know that you will make special time for him or her. Tonight: Happiest at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ Express your desire for a different type of situation by making a game plan. Wherever you decide to go, you will have an opportunity that opens up doors for you. Communication with a relative could be touchy. Indulge this person. Tonight: Follow the music.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Don't let your insecurity mar a great relationship. Make a point of doing something that builds your confidence, whether it be shopping or getting a massage. Postpone a meeting if you must. Tonight: Go along with someone else's suggestion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Others express their high energy and genuine interest in your plans. Resist being mysterious, and share what you have in mind. You will have a better time with friends or loved ones as a result. Allow yourself to go with the flow. Tonight: Follow through on plans.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★ Get into a favorite project, and don't allow yourself to be distracted. Think before you leap, and understand your true motives regarding a long-term goal. Act accordingly. Don't do anything that could create a problem for you. Tonight: Catch up with a favorite person.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ You'll get to the root of an issue in an upbeat way. Someone will understand your message, though he or she might need to think it over first. A brainstorming session could evolve into a unique adventure. Tonight: In the whirlwind of life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★ You might be more grounded than you realize. You are capable of tremendous flexibility, but you are likely to stay within your values. Someone might come down hard on you. Decide what you want to do about this behavior, if anything. Tonight: A must appearance. . .

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ You can make a difference if you keep a conversation open. A discussion might be hard at first, but in the end, everything will work out. Listen to others' suggestions more openly. Let go of something that you can't seem to make a decision about. Tonight: With friends.

Girl fails to measure up to her own high standards

DEAR ABBY

Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069. Her column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem. Basically, I don't like me. I am self-conscious about my weight, my face, my personality. I'm not pretty. I have heard so many times I should "just be myself" that I am sick of it! I don't want to be myself because I don't like myself.

All of my friends are either beautiful, witty, kind or whatever. And I am not, I guess. Please tell me what to do about it. — COMING UP SHORT IN OREGON

DEAR COMING UP SHORT: I do have a few suggestions, and the first is to stop being your own worst enemy. The more you dwell on what you think you lack, the more you will amplify those things. Find one thing you like about yourself and build from there.

Because you're self-conscious about your weight, do something about it by adopting a healthy eating and exercise plan. While you may not be a cover girl, you can be well-groomed. More important than being "witty" is to be a good listener. Remember that, and people will think you are a great conversationalist.

The more you brood about yourself, the lonelier you will become. The more you think about helping others, the less time you will have to think about yourself.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I are in our mid-40s and have four beautiful daughters. A boy who dated one of them has become a family friend over the past few years.

"Brett" is a nice young man and has always been helpful with our family. The problem is, Brett texts and calls my wife on a daily basis. The conversation is benign, but I can tell he has a crush on her.

I have asked my wife to stop communicating with him so often, but she insists it's "just a friendship" and nothing is going on. My point is that there IS something going on — from his side — even though she may not realize it.

We have gone round and round about this to the point of exhaustion. Should I let this go or continue to insist that their relationship be redefined? — UNEASY IN FLORIDA

DEAR UNEASY: Looking from the outside in, I suspect that your wife is enjoying all the attention she's receiving from this young man. She's in her mid-40s and it has to be flattering. This is not to imply that the communications will lead to anything more. So step back, find your sense of humor and try to be less heavy-handed until this blows over. Because it will.

DEAR ABBY: My stepfather died recently. I found out when I saw his obituary in the newspaper. It described him as a "loving husband and father," and while I know that's a fairly generic epitaph, nothing about it is true. He was an alcoholic who had several affairs while married to my mother. He also abused me and my stepsiblings physically and sexually.

It's bad enough that he died without having to face the consequences of his actions, but it kills me to know that "loving husband and father" is how our community and history will remember him now that he's gone. Is there anything I can do to get some form of the truth out there? — ANGRY IN TENNESSEE

DEAR ANGRY: Yes, there is. Just keep talking and the word will get around.

JACQUELINE BIGAR'S STARS

The stars show the kind of day you'll have: 5-dynamic; 4-positive; 3-average; 2-so-so; 1-difficult

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, March 16, 2013:

This year you enjoy your surroundings and your interactions with others. You will flourish in your present environment, as you will meet new people and bond more deeply with friends and loved ones. Travel could present complications. Be aware of these limitations. If you are single, you might stumble into a very intense romance. If you are attached, your first child could become a topic of conversation. Keep an open mind. If you are childless, your status might change this year. GEMINI loves to tease you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★ Check out the costs of certain desired items. It is possible that you are considering making a change in your work or lifestyle. This experience could be a fabulous vacation. Know what you desire, and you will be OK. A partner could be testy. Tonight: Treat yourself for a change.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★ Beam in more of what you desire, and allow others to have a greater freedom of expression. Your judgments prevent you from seeing others openly, and this could cause you to be hard on yourself. Walk in someone else's shoes in order to gain understanding. Tonight: You can have it all.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★ Honor the need to retreat or take a vacation. A partner, relative or dear friend might have an opinion here, but your need to get away rises above it. Trust that you will be better for the experience. Tonight: Start daydreaming about how you want to revitalize your life.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★ Zero in on your priorities, and know full well where you are going. As sensitive as you are, you always feel better having friends' support — it doesn't matter what you are doing. Bring others together. Tonight: Get down to basics.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★ Take charge. Whether you're with family or friends, you know what to do. Someone might indicate that he or she does not appreciate your change of plans. Make a point of letting this person know that you will make special time for him or her. Tonight: Happiest at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ Express your desire for a different type of situation by making a game plan. Wherever you decide to go, you will have an opportunity that opens up doors for you. Communication with a relative could be touchy. Indulge this person. Tonight: Follow the music.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★ Don't let your insecurity mar a great relationship. Make a point of doing something that builds your confidence, whether it be shopping or getting a massage. Postpone a meeting if you must. Tonight: Go along with someone else's suggestion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ Others express their high energy and genuine interest in your plans. Resist being mysterious, and share what you have in mind. You will have a better time with friends or loved ones as a result. Allow yourself to go with the flow. Tonight: Follow through on plans.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★ Get into a favorite project, and don't allow yourself to be distracted. Think before you leap, and understand your true motives regarding a long-term goal. Act accordingly. Don't do anything that could create a problem for you. Tonight: Catch up with a favorite person.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★ You'll get to the root of an issue in an upbeat way. Someone will understand your message, though he or she might need to think it over first. A brainstorming session could evolve into a unique adventure. Tonight: In the whirlwind of life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★ You might be more grounded than you realize. You are capable of tremendous flexibility, but you are likely to stay within your values. Someone might come down hard on you. Decide what you want to do about this behavior, if anything. Tonight: A must appearance. . .

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★ You can make a difference if you keep a conversation open. A discussion might be hard at first, but in the end, everything will work out. Listen to others' suggestions more openly. Let go of something that you can't seem to make a decision about. Tonight: With friends.

In downtown Houston, a nonprofit bar, kayaks and more

By Helen Anders
Cox Newspapers

HOUSTON — Mixologist Mike Criss has just presented me with a lovely color-tiered cocktail called a Queen's Park Swizzle. He thought the mojito I ordered was too ordinary. This is a fancier version with bitters.

"This drink comes with instructions," says Criss, who's also the general manager and came from the popular bar Anvil on Westheimer Road. "Do not stir it. Just drink it from the top." It's delicious.

Where am I consuming this amazing drink? At a nonprofit bar. Yes, that's exactly what it is — the Original OKRA Charity Saloon. OKRA — Organized Kollaboration on Restaurant Affairs — is a nonprofit consortium of successful Houston restaurant and bar owners founded by Anvil's Bobby Heugel. The saloon, which also serves tasty sandwiches and noshes, pays its staff and gives what's left over to a different charity every month.

It's an example of the sort of innovation going on in the area around Market Square, a block of urban park with food and drink, a dog run and space to take a breather from hurried Houston.

Bounded by Milam, Congress, Travis and Preston streets, Market Square was truly the center of the city in the 1900s, when City Hall was located there. Two city halls burned down and one was demolished when City Hall moved in the 1960s.

A few years ago, the block reopened as a planned urban park with a water feature, a James Surls sculpture, landscaping, the dog run and an outdoor outpost of Niko Niko's Mediterranean restaurant that serves food and drink, including beer and wine, until 8 p.m. — later when there are concerts or other public events in the park. Go to marketsquarepark.com for a list of what's going on.

At the edge of the park, Lauren's Garden is a memorial to the Sept. 11 Flight 93, whose passengers included Houstonian Lauren Catuzzi Grandcolas. Across the street stands a contemporary clock tower that houses the 1904 clock from a former City Hall.

A spirited tour of Galveston's old haunts

By Helen Anders
Cox Newspapers

GALVESTON — If you believe in ghosts, believe that Galveston is probably the most ghost-infested city in Texas. Plagued over centuries by deadly storms, cannibalistic Indians, pirates and pestilence, it's seen a lot of people die in an untimely manner.

So, I wasn't surprised that a mere one day of ghost-hunting here turned up all kinds of spirited stories and a few genuinely eerie moments. I started in my hotel, the Galvez. More than 100 years old, it's said to be haunted by a young woman who stayed in Room 501 and kept watch for her mariner fiance in the hotel's turret. When she heard his ship was lost at sea, she hanged herself in the turret. Turned out the guy survived the shipwreck.

Guests can't go into the turret, but spirited Galvez concierge Jackie Hasan led me on a ghost tour of the rest of the hotel. We started with a portrait of Bernardo de Galvez, the Spanish viscount of Galveston. She says some people see a skull in the painting. My own photo of the portrait, when blown up significantly, does have a flash bounce that's sort of skull-shaped. It's one of those things you can call a skull if you want to and a random flash pattern if you don't.

At this point, Hasan directed me to download Ghost Radar Classic, a free app, to my phone to track presences. I downloaded it, then forgot about it, but it would come into play later. We looked at a few photographs of the hotel's lobby on the hotel's walls in which faint body outlines seemed to appear. Eerie.

We moved on to the haunted ladies room off the lobby. A hotel worker, Hasan says, heard her name whispered in there. It felt cold — ghost or air conditioning? Then it was time to go up to the dreaded Room 501, a lovely one with a view of the Gulf of Mexico. Even the hallway approaching it felt glacial. We concluded the tour with a trip to the eighth floor (near the turret) without incident and spent some time looking at guests' photos of ghostly apparitions.

Tours like mine are part of a popular Halloween overnight Ghost Dinner package. If you stay at the Galvez at another time of year, though, ask about ghost tours. If it's a slow day, you might be able to book one.

I was back in my room before I remembered the Ghost Radar app. I looked at my phone. Half a dozen ghosts were on the radar. And, what's this? My phone began to talk. "January," it (supposedly a ghost) said. "Join. Up. Coming. Ellen. January." Ellen? Really? That's too close to my name for comfort.

App or no, there were ghosts in my room, 442. The TV turned itself on at random moments, and the overhead lights did the same thing in the middle of the night. I was reminded of another visit to

Laid-back beach, lost in time, in carefree hippie haven of Zipolite, Mexico

By Jody Kurash
Associated Press

ZIPOLITE, Mexico — "You're going to like it here in Zipolite," Daniel Weiner, the owner of Brisa Marina hotel said with a wry smile as he handed me the keys to my quarters. "You're not going to want to leave in five days."

A few lazy days later, I began to realize why so many guests rent their rooms by the month. Whether it's the laid-back vibe or the tranquil setting, Zipolite has a way of making people stay longer than expected.

A sleepy town with one main street and no ATMs, Zipolite (pronounced ZEE-poe-LEE-tay) is one of many tiny coastal pueblos that dot the Pacific in Mexico's Southern state of Oaxaca. Stretching from Puerto Escondido to Huatulco, the region is sometimes called the Oaxaca Riviera.

The hippie crowd discovered Zipolite in the 1960s and since then it has slowly evolved into an offbeat tourist spot popular with a certain type of visitor. Its pristine beach stretches 1.2 miles between two high cliffs at either end, and the crowd is fairly evenly split between middle-class Mexicans and free-wheeling liberals from across the globe. Old hippies, young adventure-seekers, and locals all mingle with a flower-child type harmony.

It feels light years away from the areas of Mexico that tourists now avoid because of drug violence. Not only has the U.S. State Department spared Oaxaca from its travel warnings about Mexico, but Zipolite in particular seems lost in time, a place where visitors think nothing of leaving their belongings unattended on the beach and backpackers sleep in hammocks strung along the coast.

Zipolite also has a few claims to fame. The climactic beach scenes in the Mexican blockbuster movie "Y Tu Mama Tambien," were filmed here. And it's gained notoriety as one of Mexico's few nude beaches, although the majority of sunbathers remain clothed. (Farther east, past an outcropping of rocks is the cove known as "Playa de Amor" where nudity is more openly practiced.)

Mike Bolli, a retiree from Vancouver, Canada, says he has been visiting the area for the past 10 years without "accident, issue or injury."

"I have only ever met the nicest and friendliest eclectic mix of locals and visitors — it's a great throwback to the '60s," Bolli said. "So it's all good and safe from my viewpoint."

Zipolite has no high-rise hotels. Many of the beachfront structures are thatched-roof palapas, umbrella-shaped huts with no walls. Brisa Marina itself started off as a wooden structure with a palm roof, but after a major fire in 2001 that destroyed 23 buildings, Weiner rebuilt it with cement.

Visitors expecting a party-all-night Cancun-like atmosphere with fishbowl-sized margaritas and waitresses in bikinis passing out shots of tequila will be disappointed. There is a night life here, but it's nothing like that. Instead, folks gather on the beach in an end-of-day ritual to watch the brilliant sunsets. Many restaurants and bars offer live music and entertainment. And the only paved road in town turns into a carnival-like scene at night, with artists and jewelry makers selling their wares, while musicians, jugglers and fire dancers perform for tips in the street.

"Zipolite after six is awesome," Bolli said, "with all the dreadlocked kids hoping to sell their creations along with a great choice of different restaurants. It's not overcrowded but you can find a crowd if you want."

Some of the most interesting diversions can be found at Posada Mexico, an oceanfront restaurant. One night I watched a Cirque du Soleil-like acrobatic performance and another night I rocked out to Cainn Cruz, an amazing child guitar prodigy who brought the house down with his covers of Pink Floyd, Led Zeppelin and AC/DC.

Adding to the groovy ambience is Shambhala, a spiritual retreat perched high on a hill in a bucolic setting. Tourists are welcome to hike up the resort's stair pathway where a meditation point sits atop a cliff overlooking the Pacific. Shambhala advertises the "Loma de Meditacion" as a sacred location where visitors may experience a higher consciousness and oneness with nature. The centre rents rustic cabins and hosts visiting artists and healers.

The name Zipolite is said to derive from indigenous languages. Some sources say it means "bumpy place," a reference to the local hills, and other sources translate it as "beach of the dead," a reference to strong ocean currents. The beach has volunteer lifeguards and areas with dangerous currents are marked with red flags.

Weiner, who has a deep tan, a working uniform of board shorts and flip-flops, and a crusty, carefree sense of humour, splits his time between California and Zipolite. He's owned his hotel since 1997 and estimates that about 50 percent of his guests are repeat customers.

"This gets us through swine flu times, protests, drug war scares, etc.," he said. "People come back knowing we are OK, and they tell their friends too."

And sometimes they have a hard time leaving. As Weiner predicted, after a few days in Zipolite, I called the airline to change my flight. I had to stay another week.

If You Go...

ZIPOLITE, MEXICO: Beach town in Oaxaca on the Pacific, http://mexicobeaches.net/zipolite/

GETTING THERE: The closest airports are Puerto Escondido, an hour's drive west, or Huatulco, an hour south. You can take a bus or taxi from either airport. The closest bus station is in Pochutla, 20 minutes away by taxi or shuttle.

MONEY: The closest ATM is in nearby Puerto Angel, 10 minutes by taxi. The nearest bank is in Potchutla. Most hotels will accept and/or exchange U.S. dollars or euros.

LODGING: Brisa Marina offers oceanfront rooms with balconies and hammocks as well as less expensive courtyard options. Guests can also relax on the large beachfront ramada (shaded outdoor area). Nightly rates range from 200-650 pesos ($16-$51) depending on the season, http://www.brisamarina.org . A spiritual retreat, Shambhala, offers lodging on the hill at the western end of the beach, http://shambhalavision.tripod.com/id2.html .

DINING: Zipolite is home to an impressive variety of quality restaurants with many beachfront choices, including several authentic pizzerias and trattorias, thanks to a number of Italian expats residing locally. For a romantic candlelit experience on the beach with entertainment, try the restaurant at the Posada Mexico inn. You can enjoy the entertainment without dining there by spreading your blanket on the sand nearby.

Houston

From 1C

The park has been a catalyst for new restaurants and bars to take up residence in nearby century-old buildings, serving business folks in the daytime and residents of new downtown residential buildings — as well as tourists — at night and on weekends.

Newer spots such as Hearsay Gastro Lounge (218 Travis St.), which opened in 2009 while the park was being built, thrive along with stalwarts such as Warren's Inn (307 Travis St.), long considered one of the city's best dive bars. OKRA Charity Saloon moved into 924 Congress St. in late December.

It's all good urban fun, yet a block away, where Franklin and Louisiana streets intersect, is an entirely different vibe. Buffalo Bayou meanders through the north part of town at this point, and you can put a kayak or canoe in or take a pontoon boat tour (buffalobayou.org/boattours.html). It's an entirely different way to see the city.

The banks along the bayou's route are undergoing a major $50 million redevelopment with trails, pedestrian bridges, art features, restrooms, dog parks and such. The entire project is scheduled to be finished in 2015, but it's well under way, as you can tell from all the runners and bikers on the trails.

Need somewhere to stay around here? Hotel Icon (hotelicon.com; rates start at $255 including free Wi-Fi), in a 1911 bank building at 220 Main St., was recently renovated — gone are the heavy curtains; its big rooms have a lighter, luxurious look — and sits right on the light rail line, which can whisk you down to the museum district.

Ghosts

From 1C

Galveston, when my bathroom door kept slamming shut at the also-haunted historic Tremont House.

Time to move on to other ghosts. I headed for the cemetery at Broadway and 42nd street. As I stepped into the graveyard, my Ghost Radar advised, "Whistle." Very funny. This cemetery was raised along with the rest of the city after the 1900 hurricane. If authorities could find your relatives to claim your grave, you were raised. If not, you were covered over, and others have since been buried atop you, according to Joseph Pellerin of Galveston Graveyard Tours (galvestongraveyardtours.com; $10 hourlong tours available year round).

Buried here are many eminent Galvestonians and some not so eminent — a woman who poisoned her children. The 1888 crypt of George C. Rains, who ran a waterfront saloon called the First and Last Chance, has bushes growing out of it. Civil War Union soldier Edward Lea's grave reads, "My father is here," reportedly his last words when he was killed during the Civil War's Battle of Galveston. His father fought that day for the Confederacy under Gen. John B. Magruder, also buried here. My phone intoned, "Edward." The app was starting to creep me out, so I turned it off.

Next up: The Haunted Harbor Tour ($15 adults; $13 children), a boat trip launched from Pier 22's Texas Seaport Museum (tsm-elissa.org). While a historian read a detailed narration of the island's past — maybe a little too detailed when it came to describing people boiled and eaten by the Karankawa Indians — we sailed past various haunted sites, such as Pelican Island, where pirate Jeanne Lafitte's ghost supposedly checks on his treasure. We cruised around the scuttled remains of the Selma, a World War I concrete ship (seemed like a good idea at the time) where ghosts apparently frolic.

Perhaps most impressive, we floated back behind the University of Texas Medical Branch to see The Face. There's a man's face on the wall of Ewing Hall on the campus. Legend has it that the face is that of the property's former owner, irked that his heirs sold the land. Another story says it's the face of a killer. Whatever, it's clearly a face. UTMB authorities say it's water marks. Balderdash. They tried to pressure-spray the guy off. He reappeared. So they sand-blasted his visage. He reappeared on another of the building's concrete panels.

Finally, after dinner, I toured one of Galveston's many haunted mansions, the home of Michel B. Menard at 1604 33rd St. Built in 1838, it's the island's oldest house. One of the city's founders, Menard died in 1856 of cancer. The Ketchum family moved into the house and was there during the 1900 hurricane, which the house survived. Edwin Ketchum was the city's police chief and worked long and hard to rescue people and calm Galvestonians.

Ghosts here might include Menard himself or perhaps soldiers who were treated for yellow fever when the house was a makeshift hospital during the Civil War. But my money is on the 10 bodies found washed up in the yard during the 1900 hurricane.

If Galveston's real ghosts aren't enough for you, hang out with the man-made ones at Haunted Mayfield Manor (2313 Harborside Drive; $10; hauntedmayfieldmanor.com), a traditional haunted house that's open year-round. Things go bump in the night here — loudly and frighteningly. Galveston's real ghosts are probably rolling their eyes.

Final Notice and Public Explanation of a Proposed Activity in a 100-Year Floodplain

To: All interested Agencies, Groups and Individuals on 3/16/2013: This is to give notice that Midland County has conducted an evaluation as required by Executive Order 11988 and/or 11990, in accordance with HUD regulations at 24 CFR 55.20 Subpart C Procedures for Making Determinations on Floodplain Management, to determine the potential affect that its activity in the floodplain and wetland will have on the human environment for Community Development Block Grant Program under contract 712055. Midland County's Sewer Improvements proposes to install 75 OSSFs, mitigate existing OSSFs, soil and site evaluation, permits/fees, and all associated appurtenances within Colonias bounded by I-20, CR 1230, CR 140 and SH 349, south of Midland, Midland County. The project shall include activities within approximately 1/2 acre per site of the 100-year floodplain. Midland County has considered a reduction in scope, alternate locations, and no action to minimize adverse impacts and to restore and preserve natural and beneficial values. This project shall comply with state and local floodplain protection procedures. Midland County has reevaluated the alternatives to building in the floodplain and has determined that it has no practicable alternative. Environmental files are available for public inspection, review and copying upon request during regular business hours at the County Courthouse. This activity will have no significant impact on the environment for the following reasons: The project involves rehabilitating existing infrastructure, there shall be no significant increase to impervious surface, and best management practices shall be employed during construction. The primary purposes for this notice include (1) People who may be affected by activities in floodplains and those who have an interest in the protection of the natural environment should be given an opportunity to express their concerns and provide information about these areas; (2) An adequate public notice program can be an important public educational tool to disseminate information about floodplains and facilitate and enhance Federal efforts to reduce the risks associated with the occupancy and modification of these special areas; and (3) As a matter of fairness, when the Federal government determines it will participate in actions taking place in floodplains, it must inform those who may be put at greater or continued risk. Writterl comments must be received on or before 3/25/2013 by Midland County at 500 N. Loraine St. Midland, TX 79701. (432) 688-4310. 3007 Meadowbrook

Looking for a house that is move-in ready AND has bonus amenities? 3007 Meadowbrook is just that and more! Built in 1979, it features 2,573 square feet of living space (per APPR) with four bedrooms, three full baths, two living areas, two dining areas, fireplace, two car garage and fully insulated shop/RV garage and storage. Mature landscaping and beautiful trees tower over the front of this brick home and in back there is a parking pad in addition to access to the garage and shop. Schools for this neighborhood include Emerson Elementary, Goddard Jr. High and Midland High. Quick access to major streets will quickly have you on your way to any destination in Midland.

The front door opens to oversized white tile that flows throughout the home. On the left is formal living with windows to the front. On the right is formal dining where a built in china cabinet allows for display of your favorite dishes and keepsakes. An iron chandelier hangs over the spot for your dining table; another door conveniently leads to the kitchen.

Ahead of the entry is the den where a brick fireplace grabs your attention. Built in shelves to the right of the den as well as on one side of the fireplace provides bonus storage space. You will enjoy entertaining here as it is open to the place where everyone gathers---the kitchen! Guests and family can dine/visit at the bar seating or at the informal dining area. You will have a view of the back yard that has been turned into a large patio area. It is perfect for tables and chairs and will keep you from having too much yard to maintain. Your kitchen has double ovens and sinks and walls of white cabinets for small appliances and dishes. A hallway off the kitchen leads to the laundry room where there is hanging space for clothing and a door opening to the garage. Also on this hallway are a full bathroom and a sequestered bedroom with a built-in desk. All the bedrooms have nice-sized closets, carpet and ceiling fans.

To the left of the den is a hallway taking you to the three remaining bedrooms. The first one faces the front of the house and has use of the full bathroom located on the hallway. Another bedroom, facing the side of the house has open access to this bathroom which can be shut off making it a wonderful guest bathroom. At the end of the hall is the master bedroom where you will love having two walk-in closets as well as a wrap around his and hers sinks/vanity. An exterior door opens to the backyard.

Outside, there is a fully insulated shop for you to use as a workspace/hobby area and it is tall enough for RV parking. An automatic garage door on the shop provides easy access. Inside the shop, you will be excited to see a separate storage room with overhead skylights. Your holiday storage problems were just solved! Security is not a problem with the 7' fence around the backyard.

Additional amenities to this home include: built-ins, high ceilings, shades/blinds, tile flooring, automatic garage door opener, alley access, low maintenance yard and lots of parking space! Listed at $259,900, you can move in now! For more information, contact Sandy J. Hanson at (432) 638-3819. MLS#93619.

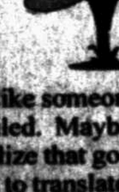
Ask the Guys

Dear Classified Guys,
Last month I finally got my driver's license. I'm very excited because now I have independence from Mom and Dad. Since I've been doing well in school (I recently made the honor roll), my Dad said he would buy me a car. How great is that? He's been reading the classified section and calling some ads. The problem is that he only wants to spend about $2000 and all of those cars are more than five years old. Most of my friends drive cars that are worth a lot more than that! Some even drive their parent's SUV's or sports cars to school. I don't want to be the only one pulling into the school parking lot with a wrecker. How do I convince my Dad that he should be looking at higher priced ads? After all, my grades are good and I've been his paycheck so I know he can afford it.



Carry: It sounds like someone might be a little spoiled. Maybe your dad doesn't realize that good grades are supposed to translate to a BMW convertible?

Cash: First of all, congratulations on your good grades. It's very important to do well in school, not just for recognition, but for your future as well!

Carry: However, you should also be grateful that your parents are willing to help you out with your first car. Regardless of your father's paycheck, they do have reasons for their decisions.

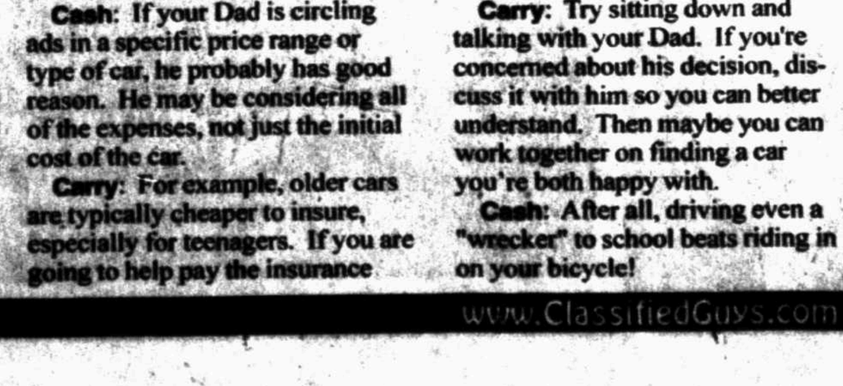
Cash: If your Dad is circling ads in a specific price range or type of car, he probably has good reason. He may be considering all of the expenses, not just the initial cost of the car.

Carry: For example, older cars are typically cheaper to insure, especially for teenagers. If you are going to help pay the insurance premium, you may be very thankful for his decision.

Cash: With an older car, you and your Dad may not be that upset over minor dings or dents that "just happen" in the school parking lot. However, if you were driving a new car, the smallest scratch could be a big issue.

Carry: Try sitting down and talking with your Dad. If you're concerned about his decision, discuss it with him so you can better understand. Then maybe you can work together on finding a car you're both happy with.

Cash: After all, driving even a "wrecker" to school beats riding in on your bicycle!



Fast Facts

Cruise Control

Before you hand your child a set of car keys, ask yourself if they will be driving safely. A survey of over 1000 people ages 15 to 17 was conducted by the Allstate Foundation. The results found that over 60% use a cell phone while driving. More than 69% speed to keep up with traffic, 64% speed to go through a yellow light and 47% admit that their passengers sometimes distract them while driving. With statistics like that, it's no wonder teenage accidents account for over $40 billion dollars a year in damages.

Joy Ride

Do you know how your kids are driving? According to The Insurance Institute for Highway Safety (IIHS), the leading public health problem for teenagers is auto accidents. Fortunately, technology offers some options for parents. In addition to bumper sticker campaigns that allow other drivers to report erratic driving, there are now many GPS systems and on-board video cameras that allow you to track your child's destination and speed right from your PC.

Back Seat Driver

My daughter was exceptionally nervous for her driving test so the instructor allowed me to come along, provided I sit quietly in the backseat. My daughter did extremely well throughout the test. However, the instructor was overly critical.

On the last street my daughter was directed to parallel park the car. At the first opening, she pulled up, signaled and backed in perfectly. Looking out the window, the instructor again criticized her saying he would have to deduct 15 points for the parking.

I couldn't take it anymore and burst out, "15 points? That parking was perfect!"

The instructor calmly pointed out the window and replied, "Yes, but she parked in front of a fire hydrant."
