Bargaining issue widening police rift

Other county workers may form group

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

A sheriff's deputy Tuesday said he and other county employees want more of a voice in determining their salaries and benefits, and are prepared to form an organization so the commissioners' court will listen to them.

Tim Rogers said he circulated a petition because "employees are experiencing an increasing need for a system through which we, as county employees, may establish a clear line of communication with our elected officials."

Rogers said he wants to form a professional association — not a labor union — and estimated that nearly 50 percent of the county's workforce has responded favorably to the letter.

"The features of a job that determine the amount of power the employee has in the organization is the equivalent to how important the job is to the overall success of the employee. An employee with an essential task who is difficult to replace will be able to influence the employer to make changes.

Members of a Midland police group said Tuesday that their superiors are using scare tactics to turn the public against the idea of collective bargaining.

Midland Fraternal Order of Police representatives said a presentation by Deputy Chief Ron Aaron before Midland City Council earlier that day may further deepen a department rift over that issue and others.

Aaron presented councilmen a petition of 68 signatures, representing almost half the 149-member force, of officers who opposed the department becoming "unionized."

He said he circulated the petition because recent comments by FOP President Leonard Hendon, who said members of the association wanted collective bargaining and a civil service commission, may have been misunderstood.

"I felt like there was only one voice being heard," Aaron said. "There are two sides to every coin."

However, angry FOP members responding to Aaron's comments said more than just a handful of officers, including some not in the FOP, simply want collective bargaining and not unionization.

"I would say a majority of the working patrol officers support collective bargaining," said James McKay, a patrolman and FOP member. "They want to make City Hall deal with them."

McKay said administration is using the loathed term "union" to strike fear in citizens' hearts.

"That's a scare tactic being thrown in there to scare the public," he said. "They're going for the guts. They know we're not talking union.

"They use the term loosely. There's no way you can apply collective bargaining to the term union."

FOP member and patrolman John Champion said police administration went overboard with its petition and presentation before councilmen.

"I didn't think it was right what the administration did today (Tuesday)," Champion said. "Right now the morale at the police department is terrible. In the next couple of weeks we may see it divided up."

He pointed out that 81 officers, a majority of the department, did not sign the petition. He said many of them are afraid to voice their opposition to their superiors' views.

"They fear there will be retaliation from the administration," Champion said. "A lot of them are keeping quiet."

The desire for collective bargaining is more than one man's vision, the officer said.

"I personally don't see anything soon," Champion said of getting a proposal on an election ballot. "Maybe in the next year or two."

Officers would need a petition signed by 5 percent of the number of voters in the last general election to call a referendum for collective bargaining.

Having collective bargaining power would mean city officials would have to enter negotiations with police officials over salaries, health benefits and other employment conditions.

One battle in the collective bargaining issue is apparently one of semantics. Does having collective bargaining power mean the group is unionized?

Midland man indicted in pump-jack scam

Oil operator may have inspired up to $3 million in losses

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A group of more than 30 investors, most of them Midlanders, were swindled out of at least $3 million by a man who promised to buy pump jacks that never existed, investigators said.

One Midland man lost more than $500,000 over a two-year period, and the minimum amount believed lost by any single investor was $36,000, Sheriff Gary Painter said.

"As an aggregate amount, we believe it will exceed $3 million," Painter said of the losses.

Lowell Fuller, 54, 4502 Princeton Drive in Midland, has been identified by officers as the man behind the scheme, which has been likened to a "pyramid" scam.

Fuller, a long-time oil operator, has been indicted by a Ward County grand jury on three counts of theft over $20,000, and today was being held in Monahans on bonds totaling $150,000.

In addition, several civil suits have been filed against Fuller by investors. Judgments in lawsuits against Fuller signed by 142nd State District Judge Pat Baskin total nearly $755,000 in actual damages and nearly $1.7 million in punitive damages.

Results of the six-month criminal investigation into Fuller's activities by the Midland County Sheriff's office, Texas Rangers and Texas Railroad Commission are expected to be presented to a Midland grand jury, investigators said.

A special prosecutor from the TRC Austin office will handle the case, Midland District Attorney Al Schorre said.

According to a civil lawsuit filed by attorney Jeff Hinkley, Fuller told investors he "was in the business of rebuilding and selling oil field pumping units, and needed investors. The money invested would be secured through liens placed on specific pumping units which the defendant was having rebuilt. Additionally, the defendant promised a specific return on any invested funds."

Fuller also provided investors with documentation of "pumping units to be purchased, various oil companies to which said pumping units were to be sold, and cost and profit figures," according to the suit filed by Hinkley.

Butch Brazell, oilfield investigator for the sheriff's office, said individuals also were promised "commissions" on the pump jack investment as a way to attract other investors.

"This is something I have never worked before," veteran investigator Brazell said of the scheme.

In a typical pyramid, a buyer of goods is promised a payment for each additional buyer procured by him.

Smith leads Congressional opposition

From Staff Reports

Smith

U.S. Rep. Lamar Smith, R-San Antonio, arrived on the network news scene Tuesday with a live performance on the nationally acclaimed "MacNeil/Lehrer Newshour."

Smith, who represents the 21st Congressional District which includes Midland, is the ranking GOP member on the House Immigration Subcommittee. He represented the Bush administration's opposition to Congressional law indefinitely extending the visas of Chinese students in the U.S..

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Nancy Pelosi, D-California, was the other guest on the program which aired locally on Public Broadcasting System affiliate KOCV-TV in Odessa.

Press aide Sherri Burkholder said this morning that the congressman was pleased with the outcome of last night's debate — his second appearance on national network news since taking office in January 1987.

"His position is one that is very much in the minority," Ms. Burkholder said. "It was tough position to defend, but we believe he defended it very well."

Citing an administrative directive which allows the students to remain in the U.S. without fear of deportation to China, Smith told co-anchor Jim Lehrer that Bush was "on record as protecting the students."

He said, "No House member wants the students to go back" to China to face possible persecution.

But Ms. Pelosi argued that Bush can't be both flexible with China and protect the students. A law is more concrete than an administrative directive, which can be overturned at any time, she said.

"Everything we do in Congress sends a message," said Ms. Pelosi, adding that passage of this law and a congressional override sends a "clear message" that China will pay a price for cracking down on dissidents in the future.

"I have no doubt that the president cares about human rights and democracy," she said. "The fight is over the way to achieve this goal."

Smith said he favors the administrative directive over the congressional bill because it applies to "all Chinese nationals, not just students."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Override planned on Chinese student bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, newly convened for its 1990 election-year session, is preparing to hand President Bush an overwhelming foreign policy defeat and turn up the heat on the Senate to follow suit.

Leaders in both parties predicted a big bipartisan vote today to override Bush's Nov. 30 veto of legislation potentially extending the stays of thousands of Chinese students in the United States to shield them from political reprisals at home.

Bush today pleaded anew with lawmakers to let his veto stand, saying the students "are safe now and will be safe in the future."

Describing a meeting he had with Senate Republicans, Bush said he sought to point out steps the Chinese have taken to ease relations with the United States, such as accepting Peace Corps volunteers, muting "hostile propaganda" against Americans and easing harrassment of the U.S. Embassy, where a prominent Chinese dissident has been in hiding.

"I ask the Senate and the House to take a look at these things and take into account the totality of the policy," the president said. "I think there is some indignation about students (in Congress) but I think also there's a dose of political rhetoric up there. ... "

The Senate began its year on Tuesday debating an issue left over from 1989: clean air legislation that is more far-reaching and costly than Bush wants. Other thorny issues left over from the 101st Congress' lackluster first session loom ahead as well, including child care, parental leave, Bush's capital gains tax cut and the federal budget deficit.

The call to order brought the Capitol out of a two-month winter rest with friendly reunions, a flurry of bill introductions and speeches and optimistic predictions for the year ahead.

Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, led the Pledge of Allegiance in the House and received hugs and a long standing ovation. Brooks had a brush with death during the holidays while hospitalized for pancreatitis.

And a new House member was sworn in. Rep. Craig Washington wiped away tears after he took the oath to succeed Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, who died last year in a plane crash in Ethiopia. A day earlier, a judge back in Texas sentenced Washington to 30 days in jail for contempt of court, accusing him of leaving legal clients "in the lurch."

As it faces a new year, Congress and the president will have to confront a dramatically changing relationship with the Soviet Union and its implications for U.S. defense spending and relations with Eastern Europe.

House Speaker Thomas S. Foley promised the new session of Congress would be more productive than the last, including passage of campaign finance reform. And he said lawmakers will give careful study to a proposal by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., to cut Social Security taxes.

On the Chinese students issue Bush was making his fight in the Senate, where he hoped to win the 34 votes needed to prevent a two-thirds majority for an override. Republican senators were invited to the White House for breakfast today for a personal lobbying session with the president.

Lobbying on Capitol Hill Monday, Secretary of State James A. Baker III warned Republican senators a veto override could lead to a cutoff of the flow of Chinese students to the United States and a shutdown of cultural exchanges.

The bill's sponsor, Rep. Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., said her only motives in seeking an override vote were to offer irrevocable protection to as many as 32,000 students and to send a clear signal of disdain for Beijing's crackdown last June on pro-democracy demonstrators.

Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo., the Senate's chief vote-counter and a White House supporter on the China issue, seemed to be conceding defeat a day earlier when he said, "This thing is gonna be overridden, and it will be a dazzler."

At a hearing on Monday, he said he did not think Bush would get more than five votes. But a GOP source said Simpson's private tally had the vote much closer.

Simpson criticized Democrats for using the bill as a political blunt instrument in an effort to pare down the high approval ratings Bush has achieved in the polls following the U.S. invasion of Panama.

Meanwhile, Moynihan, formally introducing his Social Security tax cut proposal, said the administration is deceiving workers because the excess Social Security taxes being collected from them are being used to make the federal deficit appear smaller.

"These are insurance contributions, they are premiums paid," Moynihan told a news conference. "They do not belong to the government. If we are not going to save them we should return them."

His bill, which has drawn widespread interest but few sponsors, would roll back the tax increase that took effect Jan. 1 and reduce another increase scheduled for next year. That would save a worker with income over $51,300 about $600, and leave the Social Security system with just enough money to pay retirees' checks, Moynihan said.

The Bush administration says such cuts would lead to reductions in benefits or to efforts to raise other taxes. The Senate Finance Committee has scheduled hearings on the issue for Feb. 5 and 8.

COUNTY

"If, however, the individual task is not critical, and the employee can easily be replaced, employees are likely to consider other means, including collective action," Rogers said.

But Precinct 2 Commissioner Guy McCrary expressed concern over Rogers' petition, which he described as an "invitation to organize employees for the purpose of collective bargaining for increased pay and benefits."

"I don't know that a union of this type is legal. But I do know that collective bargaining would increase the cost of public services and taxes," he said.

According to McCrary, salaries make up about 90 percent of the county's $16 million budget. If salary costs increase, commissioners will have no choice but to cut existing services or raise taxes, he said.

Precinct 1 Commissioner Durward Wright agreed, adding that he doubts a collective bargaining body that forces the administrators of county government to negotiate salary and benefits will be looked upon with favor by the community.

Wright said he understands that county employees are frustrated over the lack of salary increases and rising cost of insurance premiums. Midland County is self-insured through an administrator and has a contract with Blue Cross/Blue Shield to act as administrator of the plan.

Rogers said the cost of employee health insurance is expected to climb nearly 50 percent over last year.

But Wright said commissioners are "going to get the information to the employees through the department heads. It's going to be far more detailed and far more considerate to the employees than the rumors now being circulated throughout the courthouse."

Convinced that the county employees are well-meaning individuals who have good intentions, Precinct 3 Commissioner Louisa Valencia supports the county employees attempts to form an association.

"All they want is more information," Mrs. Valencia said. "A lot of the problem is that there is a lack of communication between the employees and the court. I've been fighting that since I've been in office."

Sheriff Gary Painter, who has been an outspoken advocate of employee raises and increased benefits over the years, also supports his workers' involvement in creating the association, saying, "One person is perhaps not as effective as a body of people."

"They want to express their view and thoughts collectively to the commissioners' court. I try to properly represent them. I try to carry their interests to the court," Painter said. "They're not asking for a union, they're not trying to form one."

"They're merely trying to express an opinion," he added.

But County Attorney Mark Dettman doubts that Painter's assertions represent the opinion of a majority of county employees.

"If that represents the views of anyone in my office, I'd be very disappointed," Dettman said.

Dettman pointed out that state law permits a county employee to belong to a labor organization if they choose.

However, that labor organization cannot enter into any agreement on the behalf of a county employee. The worker must individually or through a representative present his or her grievances, he said.

McCrary said the petition implies that county employees have been denied access to commissioners' court to state their grievances, which is to the contrary.

"It's a rampant enough understanding that I find it hard to believe that anyone would feel that they've been denied access," he said.

In addition, the directive gives the president — not Congress — the power to make foreign policy; and allows cultural exchange programs between the U.S. and China to continue, he said.

Smith maintained that the administrative directive would continue to send the message that the U.S. is behind the students. "Why not see if this directive will work?"

He also argued that there is no precedent for an administrative directive being overturned; that many have remained in effect for years and do have the weight of law.

Smith said Congress just wants to set foreign policy and called the override vote "a narrow partisan attack — a chance to bash Bush."

But Pelosi rejected this. "It's a question of being pro-democracy," she said.

Smith seized on Pelosi's assertion that many congressmen took offense to the toast offered by National Security Advisor Brent Scowcroft to Chinese leaders during his visit to Beijing last fall.

"To criticize the toast," he said, "is an example of Congress' attempt at the micromanagement of foreign policy."

But Pelosi responded that it wasn't being picky, since the toast was delivered by an official U.S. representative.

She said the toast could easily have been interpreted as supporting the Chinese action in Tiananmen Square.

FOP

"From a legal standpoint, there does not have to be a union involved to have collective bargaining," City Attorney David Reagan said. "But as a practical matter, they would be operating as a union.

"What may be a union to someone may not be a union to somebody else. To some people the term union draws up bad connotations. To other people it doesn't."

Although a group can have collective bargaining power without being unionized, the organization probably would need the expertise a union offers to bargain effectively, Reagan said.

"To me when you say collective bargaining, you're saying union because you're dealing with an organization that would represent the firemen or police," Reagan said. "They'll constantly tell you it's not a union."

Whatever it is called, McKay said the petition aired Tuesday represents only the views of police administration and city management.

But the 68 names are those of 32 patrol officers, 15 sergeants, 12 lieutenants, three deputy chiefs, three detectives, two corporals and one other.

"Sixty-eight signatures are a small portion of the department," McKay said. "They all work in the back office together. I don't think they looked at all the facts before they circulated the petition.

"They feel they might lose control of the working man here, and I don't think they're ready for that yet."

Aaron said almost the entire force had an opportunity to sign the list. It initially had 72 names, but five officers later told the deputy chief to remove their names from the list.

Officers on the petition are showing support for opening communication lines rather than collective bargaining as a solution to improving relations with city officials, Aaron said.

"We have some grievances and we have some problems," he said. "I'm not going back into those. They've been aired enough. We think we're heading in the right direction."

After last November's salary referendum, when police officers and firefighters lost in their attempts at a 10 percent pay hike, city officials agreed to seek more input from all city departments.

They recently visited the departments to field input on how to build morale and improve efficiency. Officials are considering a list of 20 suggestions.

Still disgruntled with the city's efforts, Hendon said two weeks ago that collective bargaining and a civil service commission would be the only way to get City Hall to listen.

However, McKay said a majority of officers do not want a civil service commission, which also was addressed in Tuesday's petition.

A civil service commission would be the highest level in a municipal appeals process for employees who feel they were unfairly disciplined.

The committee would be comprised of three community members outside City Hall. They would be appointed by the mayor and confirmed by councilmen.

Instead of a commission, the city has an appeals board. After appealing to the city manager, a grievance can go to a board made up of two city councilmen and a mayor-appointed Midland citizen.

Hendon, who could not be reached for comment today, has said a civil service commission would be more objective in the employee matters.

A referendum also would be needed for forming a commission. To get it on the ballot, a petition must be signed by 10 percent of the number of voters in the last municipal election.

McKay said, "Some people like it and some don't. Some don't understand it, and ignorance breeds fear."

Aaron said better communication lines between the department and city administration can be formed without collective bargaining and a civil service commission.

Champion, though, said he is not seeing a sincere effort on the city's part.

"I think we need to all work together and we're not doing that right now," he said. "I think the police department needs to work together closer."

And if you're wondering why a reformed English should be called "Canadean" — well, why not?

"All the other languages of the world are linked to a nation," Culp said. "When they're linked to a nation, it removes any sense of fear. The world needs an international language, but it needs one that's rational."

Talking over coffee at a neighborhood fast-food restaurant, Culp detailed why he thinks the soft "c" in English should be changed to "s" as in "sentense," why Czechoslovakia should have been changed long ago to Checkoslovakia, why "Fast as Flite" on trucking slogans reads just fine to him and why the large American toy-store chain should change its name to "Toys Ar 'Us."

He puts out regular nuzeletters and has started a small nuzepaper, The Times Ov Toronto, that has made it through three issues.

"We urj all owr readers tu abandon the obsolete, annoying english langwaje, and tu adopt the emerjing, rasional canadean langwaje," an editorial calling for linggwistic chanj said. "It iz so eezy ..."

Culp, a gray-haired secondary schoolteacher, said he always was interested in language and created his Canadian in 1987, the centenary of the artifical language Esperanto that had been touted as the way to an international communication.

Most of the investors are from Midland, but officers say the Ward County case is only the first of several to be filed in other West Texas counties. Brazell said. Other investors are from New Mexico.

Brazell declined to cite a specific number of investors, say what happened to investors' money, and would not say if the investigation involves any Fuller associates.

Painter said investigators have looked "diligently" at Fuller's bank accounts and "the money isn't there."

"We don't know what happened to it," he said.

Hinkley said his client and others were talked into the investment by other investors.

"Typically, after the money was turned over, they were supposed to get their money back, with a profit in 60 days," Hinkley said. "You could either get your money back or reinvest it. It worked for a while, until too many people started asking for their money back."

Hinkley said his client was given contracts, naming specific oil companies and serial numbers. The plan was to buy old pump jacks, refurbish them and sell them at a profit to oil companies, he said.

"But there never was any equipment," Hinkley said.

On one of the contracts between Fuller and a Clovis, N.M. investor, the notation "thanks for rolling over your money" is written.

Hinkley does not know if he can get his client's money back.

"There's no way of knowing," he said. "We don't know if there is any money left. It is really an unsolved mystery at this point."

10 killed in Florida van accident

CLEWISTON, Fla. (AP) — A van carrying Mexican farm workers ran off a rural road and slid into a canal today, killing 10 people and injuring two, authorities said.

"All of them were still in the van when we got there," said sheriff's Lt. Bill Chamness. "They were drowned."

The driver and a front-seat passenger survived, but nine males and one female died after the van ran off the foggy road at a curve and into the canal about six miles south of this Lake Okeechobee farm community, Chamness said.

"We think it was probably due to dense fog," he said. "Evidently they got on the curve quicker than they thought, and instead of turning they went straight into the canal."

The survivors crawled out of the submerged van through windows, but the others were trapped inside, Chamness said.

He said all 12 people in the van were Mexican migrant workers.

The sheriff's office didn't receive word of the 7:30 a.m. crash until 7:46 a.m., authorities said.

Archaeologists trying to solve mystery of underground society

TEL MARESHA, Israel (AP) — Not far from the site where David fought Goliath, archaeologists are peeling the mystery away from a vast industrial complex in a network of artificial caves dating back at least 2,700 years.

Maresha, the likely birthplace of King Herod, flourished as a commercial center of about 5,000 people, said archaeologist Amos Kloner. Unique among the ancient cities, Mareshites established their industry underground. They raised pigeons, manufactured olive oil, stabled horses, collected rainwater and buried their dead in underground chambers chiseled from soft chalk limestone.

Kloner, who has spent 15 years excavating and mapping the network of more than 1,000 interlocking chambers, said the caves were in continuous use from at least the 8th century B.C. until 40 B.C. when Maresha was overrun by Parthians from ancient Armenia. Why they invested so heavily in underground development is still a puzzle, especially since there are no natural caves in the region.

Kloner, of the state Antiquities Authority, suggests the reason may have been simple practicality.

The caves were apparently created when the ancients quarried stones to build a hilltop fortress and surrounding houses, he said. "Maybe it was easier to use such chambers since the walls and roof were already in place."

The lifestyle, especially during the pagan Hellenistic period when Maresha reached its peak a few centuries B.C., is becoming clearer.

Teams have unearthed a fortress tower, ordinary houses, thousands of pottery vessels, figurines, a horde of silver coins and an almost perfectly preserved olive oil factory. "As far as the Hellenistic period is concerned, there is no site more important," Kloner said.

Particularly important are silver coins, the newest of which were dated 112 B.C. and found in a house above one of the cave systems. Kloner said the date confirmed Jewish sources about the conquest of the city by John Hyrcanus I, who forced the Edomites to convert to Judaism.

Pointing to an inscription found in a series of gabled burial chambers, Kloner translated the Greek: "The bones of Beretanu and Appolonius, the sons of Antipater." A later Antipater was the father of Herod the Great, and the name in Maresha may be further proof of Herod's origins here, he said.

Most figurines and other remains in the burial chamber were looted during the 1970s. In addition to the theft problem, the caves are dangerous, and are officially closed to the public. The hilly terrain is punctured with open pits from collapsed chambers, some concealed by overgrowth. The caves have no lights and in recent years, three spelunkers have been killed and a dozen injured.

The Jewish National Fund plans to open the site to the public by next year after the government spends about $1 million to make the site safe.

The caves, in the Judean foothills 30 miles southwest of Jerusalem, are along a highway built on a Roman road that passes Crusader ruins and the grassy fields of Shephela where David the Israelite defeated the Philistine champion Goliath. That confrontation was about the same time Maresha is first mentioned as an inheritance of the Tribe of Judah in the Bible (Joshua 15:44).

The most visually stunning finds are the olive oil works, where giant stone crushers, weights and storage chambers are virtually undamaged. The only things missing are the giant wooden beams used to squeeze the olive mash. The oil was drained along channels cut in the floor to a collection pit that could store 5,000 gallons. There are about 70 such factories in the caves, and Kloner estimated nearly half the oil, used for heating and lamps, was exported.

Another cave contains 1,000 holes the size and shape of modern loaves of bread and which housed thousands of pigeons. In fact, some contemporary birds have sneaked in and can be heard cooing. Underneath are 2-yard-high trenches Kloner said were used to collect the droppings for fertilizing crops.

"Even today, pigeon manure is considered by farmers to be the best," he said, adding that pigeons were also raised for meat and exported.

Government family affair

LINDEN, N.C. (AP) — Government is largely a family affair in this town of 440 people, where a councilman was sworn in last week with his uncle and two cousins.

"Raynortown," Stacy Raynor said with a grin, shortly after taking office Wednesday.

He was sworn in with incumbent councilman Thurman Jackson, Mayor Velma Davis and incumbent councilmen David, Keith and Wilkins Raynor.

David Raynor is Keith's uncle, Wilkins' second cousin and Stacy's third cousin.

"We're close-knit in town, and we have very, very few disagreements on the board," Mrs. Davis said. "That's part of the charm of being in Linden — the fact that we can have open discussions without problems."

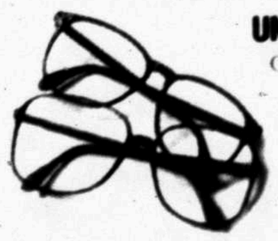

Jackson agreed and said he doesn't feel out-Raynored on the board. Jackson and Raynor are both common Linden names.

Soviets ban nationalist groups, protests

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet troops trying to put down a nationalist uprising in Azerbaijan raided the offices of unofficial groups in the republic's capital of Baku, arresting 43 people and seizing copying machines, local radio said today.

Demonstrations and strikes were banned in the city and activists were warned they face 30 days in jail if they try to organize protests, the official news agency Tass said.

Despite the ban, a general strike called to demand the withdrawal of Soviet troops paralyzed factories and transport in the city and activists said secessionist sentiment was on the rise.

The city has seen mass demonstrations almost daily for weeks.

Oil tankers blockaded the oil-producing Caspian Sea port, their captains threatened to blow up the ships if the military tried to break the blockade, an activist said.

Troops killed dozens of people Saturday in storming Baku to end bloody, ethnic clashes in the region that exploded Jan. 13 with anti-Armenian rioting in Baku. The official death toll in 11 days of violence stood at 170.

Authorities have blamed unofficial Azerbaijani organizations for inciting the anti-Armenian rioting and later clashes between armed bands of Armenians and Azerbaijanis in the neighboring republics.

Soviet TV said gunfire continued Tuesday night in parts of Baku, though activists and news reports said the city was quiet this morning.

WORLD

Soviet troops have been ambushed by militants and, in response to increasing threats, hundreds of military dependents have been evacuated.

On Monday night, militants killed two reserve soldiers and a woman bystander, Baku Radio said, according to British Broadcasting Corp. monitors.

Tass said today that more than 500 wives and children of navy personnel had been airlifted out of the region and that "militant groups continue to provoke clashes with troops and to seize weapons" in Baku.

"In several instances, terrorists dressed in military uniform took part in outrages," the news agency said. It did not say when the incidents occurred.

The Azerbaijani news agency Azerinform said the Azerbaijani People's Front, the grass-roots group that has led the republic's pro-independence movement, was not a target of the overnight sweep in Baku.

Tass, however, said the front's National Defense Committee, a militant arm of the group, had been specifically banned.

Tass quoted the military commander of the Baku area, Lt. Gen. Vladimir Dubinyak, as saying the Azerbaijani capital was calm Tuesday night with no new casualties.

"Forty-three people were arrested when the headquarters of illegally functioning informal organizations were neutralized," Tass said. "Many copying machines and propaganda facilities were confiscated."

On Tuesday, Radio Moscow described the situation in the region as "very, very tense" and said there was little progress in talks between leaders of the two republics on how to stop the conflict.

Fighting between the mainly Moslem Azerbaijanis and largely Christian Armenians has been centered around Nagorno-Karabakh, a disputed Armenian enclave in western Azerbaijan.

Also today, Niayaz Gajiyev, an Azerbaijani on a self-appointed investigative commission, said Russian residents were following the example of the military families and fleeing Baku. He insisted there was no real danger, although he said anti-Russian sentiment is rising due to outrage over the troops' activities.

Radio Moscow said anti-Army and anti-Russian sentiments were being whipped up by "irresponsible people" sending threatening unsigned letters and making anonymous phone calls. It did not elaborate.

Oil tankers and barges were still blockading, and threatening to blow up their ships if military vessels attempt to break through, said Arif Yunosov of the independent Social Democratic Group.

Elsewhere in Azerbaijan, there were reports Tuesday of individual skirmishes but also claims of greater order.

Armenian Communist Party leader Suren Arutyunyan said militants on both sides in the Shaumyan and Khanlar regions of Azerbaijan, located just north of Nagorno-Karabakh, had exchanged hostages. He made the statement on Yerevan Radio.

Tass said 10 freight trains made it through the Azerbaijani blockade to Yerevan for the first time in days. Armenia has nearly run out of fuel.

Activists in Baku said secessionist sentiment was rising around Azerbaijan.

Jeikhun Mula-Zade, a political scientist, said the Azerbaijani Communist Party leadership was meeting to consider breaking from its parent party in Moscow, as Lithuanian Communists did last month.

They have raided offices of unofficial nationalist groups and now are warning demonstrators on activists of possible jail terms.

Police protest presence of Indian army

SRINAGAR, India (AP) — Hundreds of policemen, waving rifles and shouting "Death to the Indian army," refused to work today, hampering government efforts to halt a violent Moslem separatist movement in Kashmir.

By mid-afternoon, the strikers agreed to go back to work, a police official and a strike leader said.

At least 57 people, mostly Moslem militants, have been killed since the government on Saturday launched a crackdown on militant secessionists who want to become independent or merge with Moslem Pakistan.

Jammu-Kashmir is the only Moslem-dominated state in predominantly Hindu India. About 64 percent of the mountainous northern state's 8 million people are Moslems.

One death was reported today. A Moslem militant was killed when paramilitary forces, fearing guerrilla attack, opened fire on a mob, a senior police official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The striking policemen, many of the brown uniforms of the state militiamen, stopped police vehicles in the streets and urged their colleagues to join the protest.

Muscovites can soon satisfy Big Mac attacks

MOSCOW (AP) — The golden arches are up and a crew of 630 is standing by, ready to begin serving the first Moscow Big Macs — which must taste the same as those bought at any other McDonald's in the world.

Quality control is the responsibility of Craig Sopkowicz of Milwaukee, who is putting the finishing touches on a training program for the Soviets hired to man the grills, cola dispensers and cash registers at the glistening new restaurant on Pushkin Square just blocks from Red Square.

Moscow McDonald's, a joint venture set up by McDonald's Restaurants of Canada, Ltd., and the Food Service Administration of the Moscow City Council, began its search for staff in November.

The response to an ad in Moscow's youth newspaper was overwhelming, with 30,000 applications for the available jobs.

"We had some applications from people who lived two days travel time away from Moscow," Sopkowicz said. "They really wouldn't have minded traveling two days to work here."

In the end, Sopkowicz and other McDonald's executives personally interviewed 4,100 applicants before finally deciding on the final 630 for the restaurant.

"We looked for applicants who lived close to the restaurant among other things," Sopkowicz said. "Most of those we hired are university students. Several of them speak English and about 30 percent have a second language other than Russian," he said.

The next step for Sopkowicz and his crew was the task of training the young Soviets to provide the kind of fast service required of all McDonald's establishments.

"First, we used video training tapes, dubbed into Russian. Then, all of our training manuals were translated into Russian, which made it easy for us because we worked alongside of them with the same manuals in English," he said.

Language for the Soviet crew will not be a problem. This restaurant is for the Soviet people, and not restricted to foreigners and tourists with hard currency like most of the other foreign-operated restaurants in Moscow.

Rubles will be the currency for purchasing Big Macs, although when 19 other planned McDonald's restaurants open over the next five years, about half will be restricted to hard currency customers.

At the training neared its end, and uniforms were being issued to the new employees, the work pace of Sopkowicz and other executives was frantic.

"Look at my feet," he said in an interview on a snowy morning. "I have to wear running shoes to keep up."

Sopkowicz has not had time to miss Milwaukee, not even the weather. "I don't really notice any difference. Milwaukee can be 20 degrees below, the same as it is here."

With the grand opening scheduled for next Wednesday the restaurant is getting the final distinctive McDonald's touches.

Menus, printed in Russian, offer fewer items than the typical U.S. McDonald's fare. The basic menu includes Big Mac, Filet-O-Fish, Double Cheeseburger, Double Hamburger, Cheeseburger, Milk Cocktail (milkshake), soft drinks, french fries and ice cream sundaes.

Prices, which have not been officially posted, will be roughly equivalent to those in Western McDonald's. This will make the the Big Mac a relatively expensive meal for a Russian, who earns about one fifth the average Western salary.

But Sopkowicz and other McDonald's executives are expecting hordes of customers and are geared up to serve 17,000 daily.

In the final days of training, the new staff is being drilled on the fact that a McDonald's is a McDonald's no matter where it is.

"We are explaining that they must be polite, friendly and say things like 'have a good day' and 'come back soon,'" phrases seldom heard in Soviet restaurants and shops.

But, Sopkowicz is optimistic. "All the people we hired, they all had a sparkle in their eye. They still have it," he said. "We had 4,100 people to choose from. We had the pick of the crop, easy to train and fully adaptable to our equipment, procedure and policy."

Bush starts 1990 in strong posture

President George Bush may have started his first year in office at a pace that brought out the critics, but his end-of-the-year support for Corazon Aquino's embattled presidency in the Philippines and the dramatic invasion of Panama to protect U.S. residents there and to install the duly elected government turned the tables.

For Bush, it was a good ending that leaves him in a much stronger position to start what some analysts speculate will be a battle of wills with the Democratically-controlled Congress.

The president's successes in Panama and the Philippines showed the American people that President Bush not only is a manager who works well with his advisers to make well-informed decisions, but also is a man who has a limit beyond which he cannot be pushed.

That's an important fact for members of Congress who likely will tangle legislatively with Bush in coming weeks over the capital gains tax and other domestic issues. Bush should have a tremendous advantage in working with the Congress over that wielded by his predecessor, Ronald Reagan, since he is more prone to work toward legislative compromise.

On the other hand, however, Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, facing unrest and challenges throughout the Soviet Union, also should recognize that in the Bush decision to invade Panama, he was seeing a new side of George Bush, and it was a side that the American people relished. Recent results indicate that Bush's approval rating exceeds 70 percent on some polls, higher than President Reagan ever enjoyed.

While the push for democracy has been strong in Eastern Europe in recent months and has raised hopes that a new and progressive relationship can be established between the United States and the Soviet Union, George Bush and Gorbachev are still playing an international "chess match" which necessitates strong positions. Although Gorbachev's positioning may be slipping due to the unrest and other domestic difficulties in the Soviet Union, Bush ranking is enhanced by the events in 1989.

War-mongering isn't the point, of course, but knowing fully one's opponent is — and Gorbachev has been given an important glimpse of Bush's resolve.

No doubt 1990 will be another important and trying year for George Bush, but he starts it with more muscle than he ever wielded in 1989.

Another View:

Avoiding violence

Another chapter in the history of the Gorbachev era is being written in blood in the Soviet republic of Azerbaijan. Hostility between a mostly Shiite Muslim population and Christian Armenians in their midst and resentment of a central regime seen as insensitive to local feeling has led to widespread violence and scores of deaths. Whether the dispatch of troops by Moscow to Azerbaijan and neighboring Armenia quells the violence leads to civil war as some already label the conflict or touches off unrest in other non-Russian republics, Mikhail Gorbachev seems to have entered the most critical phase of his leadership.

Most of what's known in the West about the bloody events in Azerbaijan and Armenia comes from official Soviet sources and some Azerbaijanis claim that Moscow is exaggerating the level of fighting to justify the declaration of an emergency. Yet other reports and a troubled history of Armenian-Azerbaijani relations suggests otherwise. For the second time in recent months Azerbaijanis have blockaded relatively isolated Armenia and an Armenian enclave surrounded by Azerbaijan to cut off vital supplies of food and fuel. Armenians living in the Azerbaijani capital of Baku have had to flee for their lives and many apparently have been killed.

Moscow might have prevented such widespread bloodshed had it been more responsive to early moderate demands by both Armenians and, in particular, the Azerbaijan National Front which sought not independence but more local autonomy, the right to visit relatives in neighboring Iran and less corruption among officials. Yet now with a newly radicalized Azerbaijani nationalist movement demanding independence and with a growing threat of the slaughter of Armenians growing out of a dispute over control of the Armenian enclave of Nagorono-Karabakh, the Kremlin probably has no choice but to react firmly to an explosive situation.

In these circumstances, the low-key response of the Bush administration — recognizing "the right of any state to ensure the safety of its citizens" but expressing the hope that "as little force as possible" will be used to restore order — seems appropriate.

Resolution of the conflict in the Caucasus is crucial not only in itself but as a test of how well Gorbachev can deal with other ethnic and religious challenges to Soviet rule. It's not surprising that after 70 years of hard-line Communist — mostly Russian — control over peoples brought into the Soviet empire against their will, Moscow still balks at answering legitimate grievances with genuine reforms. Yet that's precisely what Gorbachev must do and must persuade those who serve him to do if the Soviet Union is not to come apart in tragic and uncontrollable violence.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, Jan. 24, the 24th day of 1990. There are 341 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Twenty-five years ago, on Jan. 24, 1965, former British Prime Minister Winston Churchill died in London at the age of 90.

On this date:

In 1848, James W. Marshall discovered a gold nugget at Sutter's Mill in northern California, a discovery that led to the gold rush of '49.

In 1908, the first Boy Scout troop was organized in England by Robert Baden-Powell.

In 1916, the Supreme Court ruled that the federal income tax was constitutional.

In 1922, Christian K. Nelson of Chama, Iowa, patented the Eskimo Pie.

In 1924, the Russian city of Petrograd was renamed Leningrad in honor of the revolutionary leader who had just died.

In 1935, Bruno Hauptmann took the stand in the New Jersey trial on charges of kidnapping and murdering the infant son of aviator Charles Lindbergh.

In 1943, President Franklin D. Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Winston Churchill concluded a wartime conference in Casablanca, Morocco.

In 1978, a crippled, nuclear-powered Soviet satellite plunged through Earth's atmosphere and disintegrated, scattering radioactive debris over parts of northern Canada.

In 1982, the San Francisco 49ers won Super Bowl XVI, defeating the Cincinnati Bengals 26-21 at the Silverdome in Pontiac, Mich.

Reagan administration tried to kill WIC

WASHINGTON — Welfare was a dirty word in the Reagan administration, so dirty that even worthwhile programs had to fight for survival.

Jack Anderson

Congressional investigators are only now piecing together the story of how one program was put through the wringer for six years because Reagan administration officials couldn't accept the notion that it actually worked.

The program has the usual government mouth-boggling name of Special Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children, but it is simply referred to as WIC.

Since its inception in 1972, WIC, run by the Agriculture Department, has been an example of government at its best. Needy pregnant women and children receive medical care and food. For every $1 spent on WIC, the government saves $3 in later medical costs. About 3.4 million people are enrolled in the program, which costs $1.93 billion a year.

To the Reagan minions, it was just another welfare program being foisted on them by a Democratic Congress. So the first step for Reagan's Agriculture Department in 1981 was to stall an ongoing study that would have proved the value of WIC.

Congress had authorized the study in 1978 and expected it to be done within about three years for about $4 million. By the time Reagan's people finished it, the study took six years and cost $6 million. And then the department printed so few copies that it was effectively kept under wraps.

During the years of stalling, the Reagan administration consistently recommended less funding for WIC than the study results warranted and less money than a supportive Congress wanted to give WIC.

The first sign that something political was afoot came in mid-1981 when the investigator appointed to the study by the Carter administration was replaced by a Reagan appointee, Dr. David Rush.

Rush was no fan of WIC, until the figures changed his mind. His research team ended up writing a five-volume report that pronounced WIC a success.

That wasn't exactly what the administration wanted to hear, so the stall began. Reagan's appointees in the Agriculture Department took nine months to accept a draft of the report — a process that usually takes about two months. A wealth of material was tossed out and a wholesale rewrite of the summary was done, casting a less favorable light on WIC.

By the time the draft was approved and ready for print, it was the summer of 1985. Then the Agriculture Department began to backpedal in earnest. By law, government printing jobs must be done at the Government Printing Office. A loophole in that law says smaller jobs, up to 25,000 pages, can be taken to commercial printers.

The department treated the five volumes of the report as if each were a separate report and negotiated five separate printing jobs. Since the fourth volume was 489 pages long, that meant the printer could only produce 50 copies of it, for a total of 24,450 pages.

After six years and $6 million, the gutted study was finally distributed to a minuscule audience in January 1986. Only 50 people got all five volumes.

It may have been buried there if Rush had not cried foul in a letter to Congress which put its auditors at the General Accounting Office on the trail. We have seen a copy of the GAO's "restricted" report. It strongly damns the actions of the Agriculture Department officials.

A joint congressional hearing is scheduled today to investigate the fiasco and make sure it can't happen again. Leading the investigation are Sens. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, and James Jeffords, R-Vt., and Reps. Tony Hall, D-Ohio and Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif.

SHOOT TO KILL: The Chinese government has lifted martial law, but our intelligence sources say Chinese troops are operating under shoot-to-kill orders in the event of another uprising.

The orders were issued after a student-led uprising overthrew Romanian dictator Nicolae Ceausescu. The policy belies claims of the Bush administration that Bush's conciliatory attitude toward China has made a difference to the brutal government in Beijing.

MINI-EDITORIAL: At least three of the five senators who cozied up to savings and loan magnate Charles Keating stand a good chance of being defeated at the polls next time they run.

Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and John McCain, R-Arizona, couldn't get re-elected if they ran today. All five traded their public trust for Keating's campaign money.

They may discover that their campaign warchests will do them no good now that the voters have seen the multi-billion dollar price tag on the savings and loan bailout.

U.S. may get burned over promises to East

An assistant secretary came into the State Department kitchen and said, "Old Mother Hubbard, we need 5 billion bones for East Germany."

Mother Hubbard replied, "My cupboard is bare. Hungary cleaned me out last week."

Art Buchwald

The secretary sound ed grim. "Nation af ter nation is achieving independence but they can't do it without bones. Have you looked carefully?"

Mother Hubbard told him, "I know a bare shelf when I see one. If I were you, I'd inform the next country asking for bones that they are barking up the wrong tree."

"We can't do that," the secretary said. "We've been telling the people of every enslaved country that if they break the chains that bind them, we will supply them with everything needed to become a democratic nation."

"Look, I just store the bones. I don't make them. Before the White House tells Bulgaria to jump over to our side, they could at least check to see how many bones are left in the cupboard."

The secretary became agitated. "What's going on today is bigger than a bread basket. We thought that only one country would liberate itself this year — and perhaps another country would do the same next year. How could we have known that, they would all torch their governments at the same time? If you don't have any bones in the cabinet, do you have anything that Romania can chew on?"

Old Mother Hubbard went to the cupboard and opened the doors wide. "Do you see something that I don't? And why the pressure?"

"Guess who's coming to dinner? Lithuania, Estonia and Latvia."

"You're kidding."

"And Chile."

"Tell Chile to cool it — at least until we find some bones for Panama. Why don't we just issue junk bonds to the liberated countries and charge it to Bloomingdale's?"

An intern came in and announced, "Mr. Secretary, the Polish ambassador is out in the hall. He says that the president promised Lech Walesa 6 billion bones when he toasted him at the White House. He was wondering if he could have them now."

The secretary responded, "I was there and the president promised no such thing. Why is it that every time some freedom fighters liberate themselves, they come to us for aid?"

Mother Hubbard added, "Someone should tell Poland that knocking off communism does not guarantee them a Rose Garden. In any case, when it concerns bones, I'm not going to give any to El Salvador. Doesn't the president know that the cupboard is bare?"

The secretary said, "He does and he doesn't. Every time we tell him we have no bones, he says, 'We would if we cut the capital gains tax.'"

Mother Hubbard sounded upset. "Do you know what really gives me nightmares? I am so afraid that some day you will come into the kitchen and inform me that the Chinese have overthrown their leaders, and we have to give them bones."

"I don't see that happening soon," the assistant secretary assured her.

"I'd trust you more, but you are the person who declared that the Berlin Wall would never come down," Mother Hubbard reminded him.

"Can we talk about Central America?" the secretary asked.

"We can talk about it as long as we don't have to give them any bones," Mother Hubbard declared.

"We have to. None of those countries is going to come over to our side for peanuts."

'War on drugs' scores two dubious victories

WASHINGTON — In the past month, the U.S. government's "war on drugs" won two victories.

In Panama, the dictator accused of facilitating the international movement of narcotics was overturned, cornered, arrested and is in jail.

William Safire

In D.C., the mayor long-suspected of being the nation's most celebrated crack smoker was entrapped, arrested and will enter treatment. And Agnew-style plea bargaining.

Both victories followed invasions: one of a nation, the other of individual rights.

In Manuel Noriega's case, the invasion was justified by his declaration of war and threat to U.S. lives.

In Marion Barry's case, the inability of a prosecutor to get a grand jury to indict was no justification for the meanest kind of entrapment.

A former girlfriend of the target was induced or coerced to set him up. The U.S. for the first time became a party to the sexual seduction of an elected official, creating the circumstances for the commission of a crime.

In an act more familiar to KGB blackmailers than FBI agents, the misdemeanor was recorded by cameras hidden in the bedroom.

The publicity-grubbing U.S. attorney goes on television to characterize the charge as "corruption," as if it were a federal offense to be a poor role model. Good prosecutors persuade grand juries to make charges in an indictment and then shut up until trial or plea.

With that prosecutorial misfeasance noted (and where is the ACLU?), the fact remains that Marion Barry has been an embarrassment to drug fighters.

In this city, the widespread assumption has been that the mayor was a drug user; the message was that you could do drugs, deny it, "handle it" and get away with it.

Now that is reversed: every would-be drug bigshot on the streets knows that the fuzz busts bigshots, too.

The same convincing message has been sent by the Colombian government to the Medellin cartel.

Drug lords who declared war on the government only six months ago are now suing for peace, offering to stop their killings if the government will protect them from extradition to the stern U.S.

Evidently the cartel believes it is losing; the Bush government is making no deals.

All this is unmistakable progress in the "war."

A year ago, some liberals predicted defeat because the emphasis was on law enforcement rather than addict treatment.

Some conservative economists joined in the defeatism, waving the white flag of legalization — a route that would put cheap, mind-destroying chemicals in millions of school knapsacks.

Drug czar William Bennett denounces the defeatists, is counter-denounced by academics, but plugs ahead on all fronts.

How do you measure progress, or lack of it, in a war?

The casual use of cocaine has been declining, but the addictive use of the cheaper crack rages on.

You could deduce from this that the rich get cleaner and the poor get more addicted, but tolerated casual use has often been the bridge to addiction.

Blowing coke may be down but crack-caused violence is up.

Murders are increasing on the streets of Washington (we call our hometown Intifada West).

Lawmen suggest this gangland turf warfare is caused by a tightening of the market, but put this area down as no progress.

Anti-drug spending is rising.

Last year, we upped it by 50 per cent; this year, Bill Bennett asked for 24 percent more and will get half that in the coming budget.

Is the money going in the right direction?

The strategy, as I see it, is to spend the most on enforcement and prisons, limiting availability, raising prices and scaring addicts into treatment.

This increased demand for treatment should create pressure for its supply — and greater local response.

Meanwhile, "the war on drugs is not a metaphor," as the president told the defense secretary.

Despite the flap about our war ships off Colombia, we will see more of our military stopping drug-runners — especially at our Southwest border, formerly known as the Mexican border.

That escalation of the use of the military will be part of the second phase of the drug war strategy to be announced at the end of this month.

A computerized law enforcement intelligence center will be proposed to disseminate information that can be used in court, which the CIA cannot do.

The headline will be the death penalty for murderous kingpins. (Never put the story in the lead.)

The war is far from won, and a lust for testing is a danger, but our doggedly optimistic drug czar has earned a vote of confidence.

These early victories put us at "the end of the beginning."

Members of Japan's House of Representatives raise their hands in cheers of "Banzai!" as the lower house of Japan's Diet (parliament) is dissolved in preparation of Wednesday's election.

'Banzai!' shouted as parliament dissolved

By ELAINE KURTENBACH

TOKYO (AP) — Lawmakers shouted "Banzai!" as Parliament's lower house was dissolved today to make way for elections next month in which the once-invincible but scandal-plagued Liberal Democrats may lose their majority.

Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu, who took office in August after two disgraced predecessors resigned, told fellow party members after parliament dissolved that it was their duty to "restore the people's confidence in our party."

Shortly after the session began, Speaker of the House Hajime Tamura read an imperial edict written on parchment declaring the house dissolved.

The legislators then shouted three resounding "Banzais," — literally "10,000 Years," a wish for long life — and disbanded.

The 10-minute session allowed legislators just enough time to pass a bill on subsidies for rice growers and to approve plans for Emperor Akihito's younger son, Prince Aya, to marry commoner Kiko Kawashima this spring.

The Cabinet met later and said it would officially announce on Feb. 3 that the election will be held Feb. 18.

It was up to the 59-year-old Kaifu, a former eduction minster, to decide when to dissolve the lower house. He was believed to have wanted a later election date so he could make a major policy address Parliament, but gave in to the wishes of party leaders with more clout.

An election must be held by July, when the current four-year term of lower house members expires.

Pressure for an early election has been building for a year since the Liberal Democrats became mired in scandals, and party leaders apparently chose mid-February to get the election out of the way before legislators become bogged down with the national budget, which must be passed by April 1.

The Liberal Democrats, who have governed Japan continuously for 34 years, could lose their majority in the lower house and therefore the right to govern. In July, they lost their majority in the less powerful upper house as voters registered dissatisfaction over bribery and sex scandals and an unpopular sales tax.

After just two months in office, Prime Minister Sosuke Uno resigned to take responsibility for the loss and Kaifu, widely considered an interim leader, was the surprise choice for party leader.

The upper house majority is held by opposition parties led by Japan Socialist Party leader Takako Doi, but it is the leader of the majority party in the lower house that traditionally becomes prime minister.

The Liberal Democrats face a tough challenge in retaining the 295-seat majority they have held in the 512-seat lower house since July 1986, although recent public opinion polls have showed support for the governing party outweighing support for the opposition.

The legislators then shouted three resounding "Banzais," — literally "10,000 Years," a wish for long life — and disbanded.

A poll released Tuesday by the national newspaper Asahi Shimbun showed 49 percent of those surveyed supported the Liberal Democrats while 30 percent supported the Socialists. The Asahi did not give a margin of error for the survey of 3,000 people.

Numerically, the Liberal Democrats are almost certain to outnumber any other party after the election. More than 300 Liberal Democrats are likely to run, while the Socialists are fielding just 160 candidates — well below the number needed to secure a solid majority.

While the opposition has a chance to form a combined majority in the lower house, analysts say ideological differences make unlikely a Socialist-led coalition with the second- and third-largest groups, the centrist Komeito (Clean Government Party) and Democratic Socialist Party.

The centrists are more likely to side with the Liberal Democrats, the analysts say. Party sources say the Liberal Democrats have been negotiating behind the scenes to gain Komeito and Democratic Socialist support if necessary after the election.

The Socialists currently hold 83 lower house seats, the Komeito 54, Japan Communist Party 26 and the Democratic Socialists 25. The remaining 29 seats are held by minor parties and independents or are vacant.

The Liberal Democrats have been struggling to restore their popularity after many party leaders became entangled in the Recruit scandal, in which over 150 members of the nation's elite were alleged to have profited from sales of shares supplied by Recruit Co., an information services conglomerate.

Allegations of influence-buying led to Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita's resignation and, coupled with the unpopular sales tax introduced in April, contributed to the Liberal Democratic defeat in the upper house.

The February election is widely seen as an opportunity for Japanese voters to pass judgment on the Liberal Democrats.

Japan launches its first lunar probe

UCHINOURA, Japan (AP) — Japan's first lunar probe lifted off today, billowing clouds of smoke and carrying Japanese hopes of becoming the third nation to reach the Earth's closest neighbor.

The slender M3S-2 rocket disappeared into the night sky over the Pacific Ocean from its launch pad nestled between mountains on Japan's southern coast.

Launch officials said it would take several hours before they knew whether the launch was successful. The rocket blasted off on schedule at 8:46 p.m. (6:46 a.m. EST).

If successful, the Muses-A satellite will be the first spacecraft to visit the moon since an unmanned Soviet vehicle landed on its surface in 1976. Only the United States and the Soviet Union have sent spacecraft to the moon.

Originally set for Tuesday, the liftoff had been postponed with only 18 seconds to go after an electrical switching problem cut off power to a hydraulic pump used to aim the nozzle of an auxiliary booster rocket.

Mission chief Hiroki Matsuo said Tuesday's delay was the first time in five launches of the solid-fuel M3S-2 that the countdown had been stopped in the final 60 seconds.

Overcast skies blanketed the remote oceanside launch site in southern Japan today and snow fell in nearby areas.

During Tuesday's launch attempt, winds blew volcanic dust and grit from Sakurajima, a nearby live volcano, over much of the launch area. But officials said the dust was not related to the electrical problem.

The three-stage red-and-silver M3S-2 rocket, which cannot lift much more than its 400-pound payload, is to carry Muses-A into an elliptical orbit that will bring it to within about 10,000 miles of the moon in eight weeks.

Just before crossing the moon's path, a smaller satellite will break off the Muses-A and go into lunar orbit and send data to the larger satellite on temperatures and electrical fields.

The Nissan Motor Co., Japan's second-largest automobile maker, built the three-stage, 62-ton M3S-2 engine used in the lunar mission.

Japan's first satellite was launched in 1970. Muses-A would be the 13th Japanese satellite in operation.

The Muses-A mission is being conducted by Japan's Institute of Space and Astronautical Science, one of two government-funded space agencies.

"This time we are going to the moon. But our objective is not the moon itself," Matsuo said. "Our institute is getting into interplanetary missions in the 1990s and for that we need to refine our technology."

In recent years, Japan has achieved a respected aerospace launch record, despite its late entry into the field, low budgets — $1.08 billion last year — and a shortage of good launch sites.

Japan's two main launch areas — in Uchinoura and in nearby Tanegashima — are only a tiny fraction of the size of space centers in other nations.

The Institute of Space, affiliated with the Education Ministry, focuses on scientific research, while the Science and Technology Agency, affiliated with the National Space Development Agency, develops satellites and rockets for applied uses such as communications and weather observation.

Kaifu's grasp on power grows more tenuous

TOKYO (AP) — Less than a month away from elections, Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu finds himself with more critics than supporters among the public and lukewarm backing in his own party.

Kaifu, 59, took office in August after two predecessors had resigned because of scandals and election losses by the previously invincible Liberal Democratic Party. Opinion polls show disapproval outweighing support, and anlysts say his situation is worse within the party.

The prime minister dissolved Parliament's powerful lower house Wednesday to begin the campaign for the elections Feb. 18. With Parliament disbanded, Kaifu will not be able to deliver a major policy speech before the vote or make progress on the budget and revising the unpopular sales tax.

"Inside the LDP, Kaifu is very, very weak," said Seizaburo Sato, a professor at Tokyo University. "He's not regarded by fellow LDP members as the best candidate for prime minister."

His position gives Kaifu the final say on dissolving the lower house and setting the election date, but other leaders in the party apparently decided on Feb. 18.

"This demonstrates Kaifu is weak. he has weak initiative," Sato said.

When Kaifu was chosen as party president and prime minister, he was viewed as an eloquent, little-known reformer. Party veterans saw the former education minister as an untarnished politician who could help restore the image of the Liberal Democrats.

So far, he has not been touched by problems that brought down his predecessors, Sousuke Uno and Prime Ministers Noboru.

Support ratings for Kaifu in public opinion polls have ranged between 35 percent and 45 percent, well above the single-digit ratings accorded Takeshita last spring.

A poll released Tuesday by Asahi, a major national newspaper, showed 37 percent of those surveyed supported Kaifu's government, compared with 35 percent in December. Asahi said the slight increase probably resulted from Kaifu's European tour Jan. 8-18.

Scarf dispute ends

ALTRINCHAM, England (AP) — A Manchester area school on Tuesday bowed to local Moslem criticism and partially lifted its ban on Moslem head scarves after two sisters wearing them were kept out of class for more than a month.

They can wear blue ones, in keeping with the school's uniforms, said officials at Altrincham Grammar School for Girls.

"We felt we had to take account of changes in our society," said Gil Thompson, chairman of the school governors. "From time to time it is necessary to change them (school rules) and we have modified them."

Fatima Alvi, 16, and sister Aisha, 14, had been sent home every school day since Dec. 14 when they began wearing their scarves to the school in Altrincham.

Soviets still could wage massive nuclear war

By STEWART M. POWELL
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union has virtually given up the ability to launch a surprise attack against Western Europe but retains the capacity to devastate the United States with an undiminished arsenal of nuclear weapons, the nation's top intelligence officers told Congress Tuesday.

The cautionary assessment by William Webster, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, and Army Lt. Gen. Harry Soyster, director of the Defense Intelligence Agency, came six days before Congress is scheduled to receive — and begin revising — the Bush administration's defense budget blueprint for the coming fiscal year.

Both Webster and Soyster said there had been dramatic reductions in Soviet forces across Eastern Europe as well as a diminished risk of "coalition" warfare against the Western allies by a seven-nation Warsaw Pact beset by turmoil.

"Overall, the conventional threat to the United States and our alliance partners in Europe has decreased as a result of changes in Eastern Europe and Soviet force reductions," Webster told the Senate Armed Services Committee in an unusual public session that lawmakers said was designed to alert American taxpayers to the threats that still loom from the Soviet Union.

The threat of "deliberate aggression" is "much reduced," Soyster echoed, with changes in Soviet troop deployments giving the United States ample warning time to respond to an impending attack "with deterrent measures and offsetting military activities."

Unilateral Soviet troop cutbacks now underway, deepened by the East-West troop reductions being negotiated at Vienna, "will likely preclude successful ground operations against NATO for other than limited objectives without significant regeneration of Soviet forces," Soyster said.

As chief of the Pentagon's independent intelligence agency, Soyster focuses on intelligence that would be useful to on-the-ground commanders in any conflict. Webster, as director of central intelligence, focuses on strategic and tactical threats to U.S. interests worldwide.

Despite different perspectives, the two intelligence chiefs outlined an unmitigated threat to the United States from Soviet nuclear weapons.

Long-range Soviet nuclear missile forces capable of striking the United States continue to be "modernized" with "generous funding," Webster warned. The crises besetting the Kremlin still have left Soviet strategic forces "unimpaired," Webster said.

The Soviet Union has deployed two new silo-based intercontinental ballistic missile systems in the past year, additional truck-mobile SS-25 missiles and railroad-mobile SS-24 missiles and launched additional ballistic missile-carrying submarines, Webster said.

Even upon completion of a U.S.-Soviet accord to reduce long-range nuclear weapons — an accord widely expected to be completed later this year — the Soviet Union will "likely be able to" target just as many crucial American targets in a nuclear war as it does now, Soyster said.

Testimony over the continued threat posed by long-range Soviet nuclear missiles came as lawmakers prepared for a bitter fight over the Stealth B-2 intercontinental bomber, considered among the most vulnerable weapons programs in the Bush administration's expected $282 billion defense spending proposal.

The $532 million aircraft, designed for missions against the Soviet Union, is being targeted by critics eager to trim defense spending in view of what they contend is a diminished threat of war with the Soviet Union.

Sens. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., and Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., claiming the plane will cost almost its weight in gold, filed legislation Tuesday to curtail spending on any more than the 15 aircraft now in production by Northrop Corp. in southern California.

"We've seen the (Soviet) threat change on TV every night," Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said as his panel launched a series of meetings to assess the Soviet threat as part of an effort to reshape the nation's defenses. "We'll be looking at this changed threat as the foundation on which we build the budget which we will be asking the American people to pay for."

WORLD IN BRIEF

Talks delayed in East Berlin

EAST BERLIN (AP) — Opposition forces have postponed talks with Premier Hans Modrow on entering his caretaker government, indicating their reluctance to be associated with the still-dominant but increasingly unpopular Communists.

In the latest demonstration of East Germans' growing impatience with the authorities, more than 10,000 skilled workers rallied in East Berlin Tuesday to denounce communism for squelching craftsmanship.

They demanded free market reforms to revive artisanship and many echoed increasing calls for reunification with prosperous West Germany.

A new round of warning strikes, bleak new economic data and the announcement of price hikes for farm products have added to the sense of crisis.

The official news agency ADN said Tuesday that the East German economy posted its lowest growth of the decade last year, expanding by 2 percent instead of the 4 percent called for by central planners.

Moslem protester slain

ASSIUT, Egypt (AP) — A Moslem fundamentalist, one of about 350 militants demonstrating outside a mosque, was shot to death during a clash in which police used tear gas and demonstrators hurled stones, officials said Tuesday.

Attorney General Abdel-Aziz Mokhtar said 11 people were arrested, most of them students at Assiut University, before the crowd dispersed late Monday.

Police initially blamed stray shots fired from within the crowd for killing Abdel-Sabbour Hassanein and seriously wounding another man.

However, the Middle East News Agency later said police gunfire killed Hassanein. "The security forces were forced to open fire after one of the demonstrators shot at them, and this led to the death," MENA said.

Libya says plane held

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Libya said Tuesday that authorities at Frankfurt Airport have detained a Libyan airliner, arrested and searched its crew, and that police beat some passengers, the Middle East News Agency reported.

In West Germany, officials with the Foreign Ministry, border authorities and Frankfurt airport police declined to comment on the report.

In a dispatch from Tripoli, Libya's capital, MENA quoted a Libyan government official as saying German police kept the Frankfurt local manager of the Libyan Airline from approaching the plane, identified as a Boeing 737.

The official also alleged that German policemen insulted and beat some of the passengers, MENA reported.

Haitian arrests noted

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — In a widening crackdown to silence political foes, Haiti's military rulers have arrested a leading business figure and ordered radio and television stations to broadcast only the news they approve.

Also Tuesday, the general heading the interior and defense ministries defended the weekend expulsion of four prominent politicians as retribution for their "insulting the head of state," Lt. Gen. Prosper Avril.

An Information Ministry statement told broadcasters that it must approve their local news reports, and ordered them to "refrain from relaying or broadcasting any information on Haiti from stations broadcasting" from abroad.

Noriega was 'coward'

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — The ground forces commander in the U.S. invasion of Panama says Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega was a coward who "never did anything worthy of a military man" after the operation began Dec. 20.

Noriega's main concern was to hide, Maj. Gen. Marc Cisneros said in an interview Tuesday.

Noriega took refuge in the Vatican Embassy on Christmas Eve. Under pressure from the papal nuncio, he surrendered to U.S. forces on Jan. 3 and was flown to Miami, where he awaits trial on drug trafficking charges.

"He never fought, rallied his forces or did anything worthy of a military man," Cisneros said.

Noriega's wife, Felicidad, and three daughters took refuge in the Cuban Embassy and is seeking safe passage to the Dominican Republic, but Panama has embezzlement charges pending against Mrs. Noriega.

Drug dealer writes letter

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The leader of Colombia's notorious Medellin cocaine cartel has written to a Bogota newspaper saying he wants to set them straight on a story: he still runs the cartel and his friends haven't deserted him.

"My freedom is the best proof I have to show the country that the people are not selling me out and that my friends are neither abandoning nor betraying me," Pablo Escobar wrote.

An article Monday in El Tiempo quoted security force officials as saying Escobar's principal allies were abandoning him as police and the military moved in, pursuing an all-out drug war by the government of President Virgilio Barco.

Officials deny master plan biased against east Midland

By DAVID MORRIS
Staff Writer

Midland city officials disagreed today with school board President James Fuller's assertion Tuesday that the city master plan "excludes development" in east Midland.

The Midland Independent School District board of trustees voted Tuesday to ignore the city's master plan when it chooses a site for a proposed new junior high school.

"The problem I have is that the city master plan excludes the type of development relative to the placement of a junior high east of Big Spring," Fuller said. "Our children are very much aware of the inequity that has been exhibited by the planning division of our city."

City Planning Director Richard Hennessy disagreed with Fuller's view of the city plan.

"The comprehensive plan was not written with the view of encouraging or discouraging growth in any particular part of town," Hennessy said. "The comprehensive plan does not indicate at all where the school now being considered should be placed. That's a school policy matter.

"I do not think the city plan would be adversely affected by placing a junior high school in any particular area of the city."

Hennessy said the city has demonstrated its commitment to east Midland through the Lamesa Road Project and the creation of an "enterprise zone" to encourage economic development there.

District One City Council member Bill Williams said the council is not "dictating growth in any direction."

District Two council member Jose Cuevas said Fuller's observations were "inaccurate."

"I think the council members we have at this point are committed to development of east and south Midland," Cuevas said.

He agreed with Fuller, however, that building the new school in east Midland would be a good idea.

"I think it would definitely promote growth, but I can't guarantee fast growth in a very short time," Cuevas said.

Residents of east Midland have been campaigning since last fall to have the proposed $8 million junior high built in their part of town.

Alma Marshall, one of about 20 east Midlanders at Tuesday's board meeting, told members they should work to reverse Midland's westward growth.

"We'd like for you to strongly consider building the school in east Midland and establish criteria which would not preclude that area," Ms. Marshall said.

East Midlander Viola Coleman said the self-esteem of students living in her part of town depends on the new junior high being built there.

"That is the one area that does not have a junior high school," she said. "If we had one there, it would mean a lot psychologically to that area because it says to us that this part of Midland is important, too."

The board voted to consider the following factors when deciding on a site for the school:

- Lot size (25 acres minimum)
- Location within two blocks of existing or planned collector or arterial street
- Proximity to existing or planned utilities
- Proximity to existing junior high schools (appropriate distance away from existing schools)
- Number of elementary students living or projected within a two-mile radius of the site
- Total projected student population density within a two-mile radius
- Proximity to safety hazards
- Area drainage and site topography
- Cost of site and site development
- Relationship to high school attendance boundaries if a pure feeder system is desired.

The board deleted a selection condition which called for following the city master plan.

Wilson Heidelberg, MISD executive director of auxiliary services, said the district owns one suitable junior high school site on the western edge of town near Scharbauer Elementary School.

He said buying a new site would add $80,000 to $325,000 to the cost of the school, depending on location.

A community meeting to discuss sites recommended by MISD staff is scheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 6 at 5:30 p.m. at Midland High School.

Several dirt roads in east Midland soon could bite the dust

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Several bone-rattling dirt roads in east Midland may finally be paved as part of $290,400 in planned projects, city officials said Tuesday.

Seven streets and a park parking lot have been selected for joint paving projects by the city of Midland and Midland County.

The proposed projects should be completed by summer's end, City Manager Fred Poe said.

The city will spend about $77,800 in Community Development Block Grant money on the projects, while it will cost Midland County an estimated $122,600 in services for its share.

Poe said the county owes the city services as outstanding debts for ambulance service outside the city. That service costs the city about $50,000 a year, he said.

Poe said city officials will meet with county authorities to discuss whether they can immediately fund all the projects.

"We anticipate that the county will do all of those," Poe said.

Midland County Commissioner Durward Wright said commissioners would "try to do it within the confines of our ability."

Commissioners last year agreed to consider performing up to two miles of joint paving work with the city in 1990. The city has proposed that the county pave about 1.5 miles.

City workers would excavate roads, install curbs and gutters and make utility adjustments. County workers would then build the caliche base and lay the pavement.

Councilman Jose Cuevas said he is delighted that most of the projects will be conducted in his electoral district.

"I think they're excellent choices," Cuevas said of the project sites. "Those streets have been one of the major concerns in my area. I think our trees are starting to bear fruits."

One project includes a $7,000 paving of a parking lot for Martin Luther King Park.

Poe said that although the street paving would not be significant in mileage, it would connect major paved thoroughfares.

Man gets 10 years probation in death of drinking buddy

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A jury deliberated nearly five hours Tuesday before handing a 10-year probated sentence to a Midland man who admitted being drunk when his car rammed a motorcyclist friend.

Leodegario Amezcua, 30, will have to serve at least four months in jail as a condition of the probation, prosecutor Wayne Frost said.

The jury also fined Amezcua $5,000, but the fine was suspended.

Amezcua pleaded guilty Monday to involuntary manslaughter in connection with the Sept. 19, 1988, death of Robert Napoles, 26, of Midland. He requested a jury trial for the punishment phase of the case in Judge Vann Culp's 238th State District Court.

Amezcua could have been sentenced to up to 10 years in state prison.

According to testimony, the defendant's 1973 Ford Mustang collided with a motorcycle driven by Napoles, who was thrown from the bike and pronounced dead at the scene. The accident occurred just south of Interstate 20, near the intersection of State Highway 349 and County Road 114.

The two men had been drinking together at a body shop minutes before the accident occurred, testimony showed.

Amezcua was uninjured, and 90 minutes after the accident took a breath test that measured 0.14, above the 0.10 considered intoxication in Texas.

In closing arguments, attorney Woody Leverett urged jurors to consider probation for Amezcua, a resident alien who has worked at the downtown Petroleum Club since 1982.

Odessa mayor admits wastewater should be used, not dumped

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

ODESSA — The quality of water being discharged from Odessa's two sewage treatment plants is good and should be used to the fullest extent, Mayor Don Carter said in opening comments at a Texas Water Commission (TWC) hearing today.

The TWC is conducting a three-day hearing on Odessa's permit renewals to discharge treated wastewater effluent from two plants into the draw. The hearing is in City Council chambers.

Carter noted that the very existence of life depends on the availability of water in our area." West Texans must place "a precious value" on water sources, he added.

"We are addressing the environmental issues," Carter said of the city's efforts.

In contending that treated wastewater is clean and of good quality, Carter displayed a bottle of clear water which he said came from a treatment plant.

Earlier, he displayed bottles of murky water which he said came from Colorado River Municipal Water District lakes in central Texas. CRMWD is the primary source of municipal water for Midland and Odessa.

Midland lawyer Paul Bohannon, who represents about 20 Midlanders who are protesting the flow of wastewater in Monahans Draw along their property lines, has told the TWC that his clients "under no circumstances wish to jeopardize" Odessa's wastewater treatment system.

"However, they want the system to work properly and with due regard not only to the environment but to the rights of private persons along the draw," Bohannon said in a letter to the TWC.

Bohannon said he was impressed with Carter's "responsible attitude" that not the environment but the health and safety of the people here is important.

"We have found muddy green water" flowing down Monahans Draw apparently from Odessa's sewage treatment plant. To counter Carter's claim that the water is clean and clear, Bohannon said he has found condoms flowing out of the tailgate pipe at the plant.

Bohannon said he and his clients, "respect and support Odessa in its need of treatment plants." But he suggested that the treated water be redirected for productive use and not discharged into Monahans Draw.

Disputing Bohannon's contentions, Carter said the flooding is not caused by the discharge of effluent.

In earlier pre-hearing comments, Mike Hughes, vice president for environmental health and safety for Rexene Products Co., spoke in favor of permit renewal for the city and noted that "water is a precious in the desert climate of West Texas."

Odessa, now operating the plants on interim discharge permits, is seeking five-year TWC permits to discharge daily 9.8-million gallons of effluent from its South Dixie Water Reclamation Plant and 19-million gallons from its East Water Reclamation Plant. The East Plant is east of Odessa but is in Midland County.

"It's not cut-and-dried," Bill Lockey, TWC district manager in Odessa said of Odessa's permit applications. "Just because someone has a permit coming up for renewal doesn't mean we have decided we are going to give it to them."

Following the Odessa hearing, TWC hearings examiner Leslie Limes will submit reports and transcripts of the hearing to TWC Commissioners Buck Jim Wynne III of Dallas, Cliff Johnson of Palestine and John Birdwell of Lubbock.

The commissioners Lockey said earlier, seem to be real conscientious about their position and the environment of the state of Texas." The commissioners may approve, deny or modify the discharge-permit applications.

Of Odessa's effluent discharge, about 2 million gallons daily is used by Rexene Products Company for industrial cooling, according to Lockey. And W.T. Averitt III diverts raw water for irrigation.

Among TWC staff people available to report their findings on the treatment plants are aqua-biologist Terry James, who has inspected the South Dixie Plant; geologist Tracy Payne, who has examined both the East Plant and South Dixie Plant; and geologist Ralph Johnson, who has inspected the East Plant.

While Odessa seeks to renew TWC permits, it is preparing a defense in two consolidated civil lawsuits pitting two Midland farmers — father and son — and a Midland businesswoman against the city of Odessa.

The trial is to begin Feb. 12 in Midland's 142nd Texas State District Court. Presiding judge is Pat Baskin.

George V. Anderson and his wife Dorothy, and George V. Anderson Jr. and his wife Diann, claim that the draw's flooding — caused by the combination of rainwater runoff and effluent — damaged their cotton crops southeast of Midland.

And a draw neighbor, Louise Gay, claims in another suit that the flooding was detrimental to her horse-stabling business.

A similar suit, lodged in 1983 by Midland farmer Lee Bell, was resolved in Stanton last year when a Martin County jury awarded Bell $454,000, in actual and exemplary damages. Odessa is appealing the verdict.

Odessa denies any liability in the flooding of Monahans Draw "because of the nature and characterization of the draw and because of the ownership by the state of Texas of the draw and the waters in the draw." Additionally, Odessa claims the city is "protected by the doctrine of governmental or sovereign immunity."

Big Spring mayor faces second recall effort

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant City Editor

BIG SPRING — Mayor Max Green is facing the second recall effort of his nine-month term, after his refusal to resign at Tuesday's regular city council meeting.

Council member Pat DeAnda, who organized the first, unsuccessful recall effort, said after Tuesday's meeting that the chances of the current petition's success are "excellent."

"The mayor pushed the wrong buttons and the whole community got involved," Ms. DeAnda said, referring to Green's recent allegations of illegal activities within the city's police department.

Green opened Tuesday's meeting by reading a prepared statement that read in part, "The people who elected me are still telling me to 'Hang in there, Max.' It is now my intent to hang in there and do my best to improve my community."

He concluded, "I will not resign as mayor of the great city of Big Spring, Texas."

Sparse applause greeted his statement as a voice in the back row of the crowded chambers muttered, "Then you will be recalled."

Carie Dunnam, a 28-year-old Big Spring native, filed an affidavit with the city clerk's office late Tuesday that she is preparing petitions seeking a recall election.

Ms. Dunnam, a former teacher who presently does not work outside the home, said she was not involved in the first recall drive.

"I thought he should be given a chance to prove himself a leader," she said of the September petition drive spearheaded by Ms. DeAnda's daughter Michelle DeAnda Rodriguez.

But in recent weeks, Ms. Dunnam said she has been "appalled by the lack of common sense" exhibited by the mayor. She said he has "embarrassed and humiliated the city because of a failure to handle things by correct procedures."

Council member Gail Earls, who called for Green's resignation during a special council session on Friday, said following Tuesday's meeting that she will offer her support to the anti-Green forces, but stopped short of volunteering to collect signatures.

Ms. Dunnam said her group will attempt to collect at least 1,200 signatures within the allotted 30 days. A total of 894 verified signatures — 35 percent of number of voters in the last regular city election — are needed to present the petitions to the council, she said.

Once petitions are verified, the mayor would have a five day "grace period" in which to resign, and barring that, the recall election date would be set within 10 days.

Green said following Tuesday's session that he was aware of the petition drive, but refused further comment on the effort.

During the open forum segment of the meeting, citizen Richard Lauderdale challenged the mayor: "Do you not feel you owe our police chief and police personnel an apology?

"Do you really feel you can be an effective mayor of the great city of Big Spring?"

Green responded that the public apology he made to Police Chief Joe Cook last week was "adequate," and "Yes, I can be an excellent mayor. Let's go forward and not dwell on the past."

Lauderdale was the only member of the public commenting on the subject during the meeting, but his offer to be the first signature on a recall petition was met with applause from the crowd.

Girl testifies 'respect' led her into sex with karate teacher

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

A 16-year-old girl told jurors Tuesday she had sexual contact with her karate instructor over a period of several years because of a time-honored relationship between teacher and student.

"You don't talk back or say no," the youth said, referring to 34-year-old Juan Antonio Lopez as "someone you look up to with a lot of respect."

Lopez, a former Odessa karate instructor who now lives in San Antonio, is charged with a count of aggravated sexual assault and two counts of sexual assault. Testimony began Tuesday before Judge Pat Baskin in 142nd State District Court.

The assaults alleged in the indictments against Lopez occurred in January 1986, and February and March of 1989.

The victim told prosecutor Randy Fluke she began taking lessons from Lopez, who holds an eighth-degree black belt, when she was 8 years old. She then recalled each of the incidents for jurors.

On cross-examination, defense attorney Tom Morgan questioned the girl about several statements she had given sheriff's investigators. In them, she told officers of her fear of Lopez because of his prowess in the martial arts.

But Morgan showed the girl subpoenaed long-distance telephone records that showed she had called him in San Antonio more than 100 times between November 1988 and March 1989.

"Most of the time he told me to call him," she said. "Some of the time I wanted to call him."

The youth disagreed with Morgan that discrepancies in her statements to officers about the location of the assaults meant she had been "caught in a lie."

DRAW—

Bell had charged that the effluent from the two Odessa plants combined with runoff to flood some of his low-lying cotton acreage.

"It (Monahans Draw) will handle the rain, and it will handle the effluent," Bell has said, "but it won't handle both."

The Anderson farmland is downstream from Lee's acreage.

Odessa is represented in the suit by City Attorney Joel Roberts and retained lawyer Jim O'Leary.

However, Paul Bohannon, the Midland lawyer who represented Bell in the older lawsuit and is representing the Andersons and Ms. Gay in the pending cases, said the Midlanders "have never attempted to shut them (Odessa) down.

"We just want them to redesign their processes to convert the water to productive use," such as the irrigation of parks and golf courses, instead of just discharging the waste water into the draw.

Monahans Draw is a tributary to Mustang Creek in the Colorado River basin.

Last year following the Bell trial, Odessa Mayor Don Carter acknowledged that Odessa has considered constructing pipelines to the north to irrigate golf courses, the campus of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin (UTPB), and public parks with the effluent. Draw water is used in agricultural irrigation and industrial cooling.

In a similar move, the city of Midland has installed underground pipelines to divert its effluent from Midland Draw to lagoons in the Spraberry area southeast of Midland.

The Midland wastewater is used in agricultural irrigation. Midland opted for the Spraberry route after residents in the Greenwood area complained of Midland's effluent overflowing the bounds of the Midland Draw and flooding their land.

Stations draw viewers for anti-drug special

DALLAS (AP) — Four television stations garnered almost three-quarters of the people watching television here Tuesday night in an unprecedented cooperative prime-time program focusing on drugs.

The three broadcast network affiliates and one independent station pre-empted two prime-time viewing hours to simultaneously broadcast "Texas Crackdown!", a locally produced program about drugs.

Dallas and Fort Worth newspapers joined the effort with drug quizzes in their Tuesday editions, and teachers in the Dallas-Fort Worth area assigned light homework loads so their students could watch the show.

Overnight Nielsen rating reports showed that 75 percent of the people watching television in the Dallas-Fort Worth market were watching "Texas Crackdown!" Tuesday, said WFAA-TV president and general manager Dave Lane. On a normal viewing night, the percentages would be in the mid to upper 60s, Lane said.

SENTENCE—

"I think he is deserving of your trust," Leverett said. "I think he deserves a chance to prove himself. And probation is one way to give him that chance."

The attorney disputed Frost's contention that his client tried to flee after the accident, and said his level of intoxication was not as severe as in most drunken-driving cases.

"He was impaired, but he was not impaired to that great a degree," Leverett said.

But Frost reminded jurors that the defendant bragged of a "pretty good" performance on a videotape made after his arrest and shown to the panel.

"Well, 'pretty good' killed somebody," Frost shouted.

He asked jurors to sentence Amezcua to prison and send the community a message "that we do not tolerate drunk drivers in this county."

Frost said drivers who are drunk should not be able to get away with "one free killing" and receive probation.

Hazardous waste now decreasing

Copley News Service

U.S. chemical plants are producing less hazardous waste.

A study of 221 plants found that the amount of solid hazardous waste generated has decreased 56 percent since 1981, while wastewater volume has decreased by 10 percent.

Reasons: More companies are disposing of their waste through recycling, deep-well injection and incineration.

Another benefit: The use of landfills has also decreased by 65 percent.

In other action at Tuesday's meeting, councilmen approved hiring the Shearson Lehman Hutton consultant group to help find the city an investment manager.

City Attorney David Reagan said the city is ready to invest in Treasury bills and other investments backed by either state or federal governments.

"Unless you're really in that field, you have no idea whether an investment is good or bad," Reagan said. "We've never invested our funds outside a depository basis.

"We need one of these Wall Street type people to advise us what to invest in."

Development takes decade

In the development of a new material, a decade usually elapses between the test tube and the marketplace.

Acappella group to perform Thursday at Midland Center

Acappella performs at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Midland Center, corner of Main Street and Wall Avenue.

Sponsored by the Churches of Christ, this Christian singing group has just had its latest album, "Sweet Fellowship," nominated in the Billboard Inspirational Category for Album of the Year. Proceeds from Thursday's concert go to the Victory Tree Orphanage, Bangkok, Thailand, sponsored locally by the Sixth & Jackson Street Church of Christ in Odessa.

Admission is $5.

Acappella began in 1982 when songwriter, arranger and former lead singer, Keith Lancaster pursued his dream of full-time music ministry.

His desire was to establish, says a release from the group's booking agency, Charles Dorris & Associates, Inc., Nashville, Tenn., "An a cappella group dedicated to the goals of glorifying God, encouraging Christians, reaching the lost and providing a lyrical and musical alternative to what the world has to offer."

The Christian music community first became aware of the group when its first single, "Acappella," hit No. 29 on the CCM charts in 1986. Another single, "More Than a Friend," followed the first release's lead up the charts while the albums, "Conquerors" and "Better Than Life," also found places in the Top 40, holding spots on the charts simultaneously for some time. More recently, the 1989 album, "Sweet Fellowship," broke onto the CCM and Billboard Inspirational rankings on the strength of the upbeat single "Well On My Way" and added a dimension of soulful sound Acappella had never boasted before.

"Our goal is to minister through our concerts and through our albums as well," says Lancaster, who has produced all of the group's records to date. "We have seen, first hand, how Christian music can change lives."

Victory Tree Family Home is an orphanage for abandoned babies and small children started by Art and Judy Lynch, who arrived in Bangkok as missionaries from Odessa in 1982.

The orphanage started in 1985 with six children and now has 30 children.

Death row inmate Clarence Brandley went shopping for a diet drink after he was released Tuesday from the Ellis 1 Unit near Huntsville. Brandley was freed from prison 10 years after he was arrested on raping and killing a teenager.

Freed inmate attends Baptist church

HOUSTON (AP) — After nearly a decade on Death Row, Clarence Lee Brandley used his first day of freedom to go to the church where his family and friends had held regular vigils for his release.

Amid applause and shouts of "Thank you, Jesus" from supporters, a soft-spoken Brandley emerged from the Creston Baptist Church in northeast Houston late Tuesday after praying with his family and church leaders.

"I just recall the words of Martin Luther King: 'Free at last. Free at last. Thank God Almighty ... free at last,'" said the Rev. Ozell Brandley, who cheered his brother's release along with neighbors of the small church.

Brandley, 38, who once came within five days of execution, was released on a $75,000 bond Tuesday, a month after the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals threw out his capital murder conviction for the 1980 rape-slaying of a 16-year-old Bellville girl. The court issued its final mandate in the case Monday, confirming its decision that Brandley did not receive a fair trial.

"We prayed for him continually," said Margaret Clark, Brandley's sister. "This is my church and this is where we prayed for him every Sunday and Wednesday and sometimes Tuesdays."

Women with their hair in curlers and babies slung on their hips waited patiently outside the church for Brandley, who maneuvered around television cameras and journalists. A few men chanted "We Shall Overcome" as teen-agers asked the freed prisoner for his autograph.

But Brandley said little except that he was happy to be off death row, planned to spend time with his mother and four children and would move anywhere except Montgomery County, where he was convicted.

"It's a great feeling just walking outside the gate, knowing I'm standing on some grass — not concrete — and no nonstop handcuffs," Brandley said earlier Tuesday as he left the Ellis 1 Unit at Huntsville where he was incarcerated for more than nine years.

At the church, Brandley bowed his head and exclaimed "Amen!" as the Rev. Leroy Ross of the thanked God, saying, "You have indeed freed an innocent man from execution and after nine and a half years of being on Death Row."

Meanwhile, Montgomery County District Attorney Peter Speers said Tuesday he will pursue an appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court, but wouldn't seek another trial for the former Conroe High School janitor if the high court refused to hear the case.

"I believe that serious errors in constitutional interpretation were made by the (Texas) Court of Criminal Appeals in its decision and that therefore this appeal will not be frivolous," Speers said. "I realize, however, that the chances of success at that level are purely speculative."

Speers has contended Brandley is guilty of the capital murder of Cheryl Dee Fergeson, who was attending a volleyball tournament at the Conroe school in August 1980 when she was slain.

A third trial would be virtually impossible because of the time that has elapsed, lost evidence and corrupted witnesses, Speers said.

Brandley's attorneys have claimed their client was the victim of racism. Brandley is black and Miss Fergeson was white.

Brandley's first trial ended in a hung jury, and an all-white jury convicted him of capital murder in his second trial.

"As much as we'd like to think this is the 1980s or 1990s and racial prejudices are behind us, race was a major factor in the prosecution and the investigation," said Paul Nugent, one of Brandley's attorneys. "As much as we don't want to believe it, (Brandley's case) was tainted by racism."

In 1987, retired State District Judge Perry Pickett of Midland recommended Brandley get a new trial because the previous two had been racially discriminatory. The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals agreed in its Dec. 13 ruling, saying the investigation "lacked the rudiments of fairness."

Evidence revealed during the 1987 hearing showed contradictory testimony from other janitors — all of whom were white — and questionable investigatory tactics by the state.

Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox said Tuesday he would not join Speers in seeking the U.S. Supreme Court ruling.

"It would be inappropriate to try and reinstate a jury verdict that came out of a trial that was racially tainted," Mattox said in Austin.

C.L. "Buck" Fergeson, the slain girl's father, said he was upset that Brandley was free. "I'm still convinced he's guilty, and I hope Speers is going to do everything he can to rectify the situation."

Brandley's family credited the work of defense attorneys, a coalition of supporters, the media and a higher power in helping attain the former janitor's freedom.

Key Brandley witness jailed in sexual assault of girls

CLEVELAND (AP) — A former janitor who became a key witness in the prosecution of former death row inmate Clarence Lee Brandley remained jailed today on charges of sexually assaulting two young girls.

Henry "Ickie" Peace, who had been Brandley's co-worker at Conroe High School, has been jailed without bail since Friday on five counts of sexual assault, Liberty County Sheriff O.J. Stewart said Tuesday.

Stewart said the parents of the girls, both under 14 years old, notified authorities in late November that the two had been assaulted several times between May and November.

Justice of the Peace Judge Charlie Morgan charged Stewart with the offense and ordered him held without bail.

Peace, who is unemployed, apparently was a friend of the girls' families and supervised the children from time to time, Stewart said.

Peace testified in an October 1987 evidentiary hearing that questioned Brandley's conviction. The hearing resulted in a judge recommending the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals grant Brandley a third trial.

In the hearing, Peace said he told a Texas Ranger that another janitor, not Brandley, had raped and strangled Cheryl Dee Fergeson in August 1980. Peace and Brandley had looked for the girl after she was reported missing and Peace located her body.

Prosecutors say there is no evidence linking Peace to the slaying.

STATE

State board to weigh WTSU, A&M merger

AMARILLO (AP) — Proponents of a plan to consolidate West Texas State University into the Texas A&M system said the smaller school would benefit from the union, but some opponents have another project in mind.

The two sides are headed for a showdown Thursday in Austin, where a Coordinating Board committee will decide whether to recommend that the full board approve the merger in its meeting Friday.

Despite opposition from the staff of the Higher Education Coordinating Board, the proposal's backers said Tuesday they are optimistic they will succeed.

The Amarillo Chamber of Commerce has chartered a 150-passenger jet to fly supporters to the hearing, and 80 people had bought $200 tickets by Tuesday.

"I think just that demonstration of support would show the Coordinating Board that the people in this region support the proposition," said Steve Ahlenius, government affairs director for the chamber.

Supporters contend that making West Texas State part of the A&M system would improve the 6,000-student school and bring more research dollars to the campus in Canyon, 16 miles south of Amarillo.

But Coordinating Board's staff advisers contend that a merger would be premature, and say it would make more sense to merge West Texas State with Lubbock-based Texas Tech.

Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, said he hopes the show of support "will move some of those (Coordinating Board) members who appear to be uncommitted."

The merger's backers had thought that Friday's vote was just a formality. The Legislature has approved the plan, as have the West Texas and A&M system regents.

But in a report last week, the Coordinating Board's staff recommended the panel veto the proposal because of program duplications with Texas Tech and opposition from Texas A&M alumni.

Texas Higher Education Commissioner Kenneth Ashworth wrote in the report that a merger would be another step toward the eventual consolidation of all Texas public universities into the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems.

Any mergers should be delayed pending a study of the issue by a panel appointed by the Coordinating Board, he wrote.

But Ben Latham, a Coordinating Board member from Amarillo, said the staff was supposed to study whether the merger would be economical or result in program duplications.

"I think the staff, in their zeal to cover the whole issue, probably covered more than the Legislature charged them to look at," said Latham.

State Rep. John Smithee, R-Amarillo, disputed the findings.

Policeman, 2 others hurt in San Antonio shootout

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A shootout erupted between police and suspects in a car, leaving one officer and two other people wounded by gunfire and two others suffering minor injuries.

"We do not believe the injuries are life-threatening or will keep him from returning to duty, hopefully, very shortly," Police Chief Bill Gibson said of injured officer Raul Alonzo, 27.

Alonzo was shot Tuesday when gunfire broke out about 12:30 p.m. as he and officer Danny Robles stopped a car after turning up police warrants through a computer check, Gibson said.

A single shot from a 9 mm semi-automatic weapon entered Alonzo's arm, traveled into his lower abdomen and exited through his buttocks, police spokesman Sgt. Paul Buske said.

Alonzo was taken to Medical Center Hospital, where he was in stable condition, a hospital spokeswoman said.

As police rushed to the scene, so did Mayor Lila Cockrell, who later held a news conference with Gibson.

"Our prayers are with officer Raul Alonzo and with his young wife, who I understand is expecting a child," Mrs. Cockrell said, adding that she also planned to visit the officer at the hospital.

The mayor denied her actions were because of the city's battle against a tax rollback effort.

San Antonio voters will go to the polls Feb. 3 to decide whether to roll back a tax increase of more than 12 percent. City leaders have said the planned addition of more police officers is one reason higher taxes are necessary.

Buske said the shooting occurred as the two officers approached the stopped car.

"As they walked up to the vehicle the person in the right front real quickly swerved around and fired," Buske said.

When that happened, both officers began shooting, he said. It was believed one officer emptied his service revolver and another fired four shots, he said.

Police Lt. Albert Ortiz said there were five people in the car. Three of them were released by police following questioning and the others were jailed following medical treatment.

Lorenzo Rodriguez Santana, 22, who suffered a gunshot wound in the back, was charged with attempted capital murder and was being held in the Bexar County Jail in lieu of $500,000 bond.

Orlando Colin, 19, was charged with unlawfully carrying a weapon and was being held in lieu of $800 bond.

Police recovered a 9 mm weapon and a 380 semi-automatic weapon at the scene, according to Buske.

About 25 blocks south of the shooting, officer Ruben Rendon, 51, was injured when his car and another vehicle collided as he tried to get to the shooting to help.

Last arguments in 'Dumpster Lady' trial set to begin

DALLAS (AP) — Amid thousands of coupons stacked on a federal courtroom floor, final arguments are scheduled to begin today for a self-described trash scavenger accused of mail fraud and conspiracy.

Suitcases full of coupons have been introduced as evidence in the trial of Connie Arvidson, 34, whose obsession for manufacturers' coupons grew into a profitable business.

Known as "Coupon Connie" and the "Dumpster Lady," Mrs. Arvidson is accused of mail fraud and conspiracy in a $2 million distribution of coupons prosecutors say were fake.

The manufacturers' coupons for everything from soap to soup have been stacked in boxes between the judge's bench and lawyers' tables in Judge Sidney Fitzwater's court since the trial began Jan. 8.

Mrs. Arvidson faces up to 30 years in prison and fines up to $1.5 million if convicted of all charges against her. The Boca Raton, Fla., resident was indicted along with nine others in June 1989 in the alleged counterfeit scam.

The indictment alleges that coupons for food and other products were printed and distributed nationwide from Texas.

Mrs. Arvidson, accused of knowingly buying and distributing fake coupons, staunchly maintains her innocence. She has turned down two plea-bargain agreements from federal prosecutors that would have sent her to jail for up to 18 months.

"We are counting down to the end, so I am getting stronger," Mrs. Arvidson said. "I know the jury's going to let me go home and be with my little girl."

Mrs. Arvidson, who estimated she pulled in $200 a week at her rebating peak, said the expense of the trial combined with a recent bank foreclosure on her property have forced her to file for bankruptcy.

"I just want the trial to end," she said. "I can't borrow anymore money from relatives to stay in a cockroach motel here. I have no money for anything."

Boxes of coupons stacked 4 feet high in the courtroom are the nightmare of 47 companies whose coupons allegedly were counterfeited and distributed illegally through the mail.

Mrs. Arvidson is on trial with David Rees and James Floyd Richards, both of San Antonio. The seven others indicted in the case have agreed to cooperate with prosecutors in exchange for leniency. Several of them have testified against Mrs. Arvidson.

Charges against Rees and Richards relate to the alleged printing and distribution of coupons, prosecutors said.

But Mrs. Arvidson said she plans never to clip another coupon. "There's more to life than just coupons," she said Monday.

Prairie set on fire to aid wildflowers

AUSTIN (AP) — Researchers and volunteers have torched several acres of prairie — all in the name of science — at the National Wildflower Research Center east of Austin.

Scientists hope to gain research material from the destruction by studying the effects of fire on different grasses and trees.

Lady Bird Johnson, with the support of an all-star group of trustees, including former President Gerald Ford, started the research center seven years ago to study plants native to what used to be the southern part of a massive mid-continent prairie.

Nearly all of that prairie is gone, having fallen victim to plows, cattle and residential development.

Repaired B-1 bomber returns to home base

DYESS AIR FORCE BASE (AP) — A B-1 bomber damaged three months ago in California when its nose gear jammed has returned to its home base following repairs, the Air Force said.

The plane is up to "100 percent commission status," said the aircraft commander, Capt. Jeffrey K. Beene.

"We put it through all the motions on the way home (and) there were no discrepancies," he said. "I was really impressed, he added.

Air Force crews repaired the craft for an improperly connected pressure valve and a broken hydraulic seal that occurred during a training mission Oct. 4, said Air Force spokesman Dennis Shoffner.

The nose gear jammed in its up position, and the pilots set the bomber down on its main landing gear, then gently eased the nose to the ground as the B-1 ground to a halt, Shoffner said.

Dallas housing offer 'token'

DALLAS (AP) — The city's offer of 58 vacant, rundown apartment units for homeless people is a token gesture, say advocates of the homeless who are vowing to renew their fight for adequate housing.

The Dallas Housing Authority offered Monday to turn over The Pebbles Apartments in northeast Dallas to a group of homeless people and housing advocates.

The DHA offer follows demonstrations that led to the arrests of 16 people earlier this month as they squatted in an abandoned West Dallas apartment complex.

City officials also would help housing activists find sources of funding to renovate the units, said DHA executive director Alphonso Jackson, although city funds would not be used for the renovations.

West Dallas ministers, local leaders of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference and Concerned Citizens to Save West Dallas are among the protest group members.

Leaders said they were appalled at the condition of The Pebbles apartments, which have been boarded up and vacant for more than a year.

"I wouldn't let my dog in there," said Rev. Arris Wheaton, who ministers to homeless families.

Under Jackson's proposal, the housing authority would lease the complex for an unspecified nominal fee to a non-profit entity to be formed by the activists.

Port Arthur next Vegas?

PORT ARTHUR (AP) — It's far too early to plan a vacation around them, but the Port Arthur City Council has taken the first step in a proposal to locate Las Vegas-style gambling casinos on a city-owned island park.

The council acted Tuesday after hearing from three citizen action groups urging them to include a straw poll vote on the May 5 ballot when the city will elect a mayor and four council members.

No formal action could be taken on the issue because it was not listed as an action item on the meeting agenda.

But Council member Mary Ellen Summerlin, an announced candidate against incumbent Mayor Malcolm Clark, moved that the city attorney be instructed to prepare a May 5 casino referendum ordinance for the council's Feb. 6 meeting.

Accident grounds Marfa balloon used in drug fight

MARFA (AP) — A giant radar balloon hailed as a crucial weapon in the war against drugs when it was launched last year remains on the ground undergoing testing.

The balloon has been grounded since Dec. 29, when a similar balloon in Eagle Pass had to be deflated because a tether cable snapped. Judy Turner, U.S. Customs spokeswoman in Houston, said Tuesday the balloon is not usable and will have to be replaced with another balloon.

"Because of that incident, it's my understanding they're looking at the one in Marfa to make sure it is sound," Ms. Turner said.

The Marfa balloon was the only one of three radar balloons in Texas actually in operation. Another balloon is in place in Rio Grande City, but has not been officially launched.

General Electric, which manufactures the balloons placed in Texas, was supposed to have turned the Eagle Pass aerostat over to Customs by now for use in tracking drug smuggling aircraft, but that has been delayed by the accident.

But Ms. Turner said the launch date of the Rio Grande balloon remains on schedule.

Other aerostats are operating in Yuma, Ariz. and Deming, N.M. They were manufactured by Westinghouse.

Ethnic communities split as Miami officer faces sentencing

MIAMI (AP) — Blacks wanted a harsh sentence for a Hispanic policeman convicted of killing two black men, but that could enrage Hispanics. And a law professor said "not even Solomon" would choose to be in the judge's shoes.

Dade Circuit Judge Joseph Farina was to consider recommendations from prosecutors and defense attorneys today before sentencing William Lozano, 31, for two counts of manslaughter. The killings a year ago this month sparked race riots in Miami.

Under state sentencing guidelines, the suspended officer faced a 12- to 17-year prison term. The judge, however, was allowed to impose a sentence ranging from probation to 45 years in prison.

NATION

A defense attorney, Mark Seiden, said an appeal would be filed immediately after sentencing, a move prosecutors acknowledged will keep Lozano out of prison for some time. He has been free on $10,000 bond.

There is "no reasonable way" Lozano could be kept in jail pending the outcome of the appeal, said John Hogan, lead prosecutor in the case.

Dade County's Community Relations Board has stressed to blacks that it was unlikely Lozano would get the maximum sentence given his background and that he is a first-time offender.

"They have to be a little realistic," said crisis coordinator Willie Sims.

"Not even Solomon could decide this one to satisfy everyone," said D. Marvin Jones, an associate professor of law at the University of Miami.

A light sentence would send the message that "black life comes at a discount," said Jones, who is black. "The sentencing is very symbolic. This case is a metaphor for racial problems in Miami."

Lozano shot and killed motorcyclist Clement Lloyd, 23, as he fled from a squad car pursuing him for running a stop sign. Lloyd's passenger, 24-year-old Allan Blanchard, died later from injuries sustained when the motorcycle crashed.

The Jan. 16, 1989, deaths led to racial unrest here for the fourth time in the 1980s, all linked to the killings of blacks by white officers. In two of those cases, acquittals of the policemen had sparked racial violence, and police geared up for possible renewed rioting as Lozano's trial neared an end last month.

But on Dec. 7, a six-member, racially mixed jury convicted Lozano, and the black neighborhood of Overtown held impromptu celebrations in the street where Lloyd and Blanchard died.

Police did not anticipate any trouble after Lozano's sentencing nor were any plans made to mobilize the entire force today.

"We're not doing anything differently," said police spokesman Angelo Bitsis. "It's going to be a normal operation."

Many blacks have called for Colombian-born Lozano to receive the stiffest penalty possible.

"I don't know if he should get life," said Clemon Gardner, who lives in the predominantly black Liberty City section, "but I think he should pay for the crime."

But there also has been a groundswell of support for Lozano, especially from the Hispanic community and fellow officers, some of whom wore black wristbands in solidarity with the convicted policeman.

Carlos Lopez, station manager for Colombian-oriented WOCN-AM, said thousands of letters had been received urging the judge not to send Lozano to prison. The station also collected $40,000 for Lozano's defense, Lopez said.

Defense attorneys said they've collected more than 10,000 signatures from people urging the judge to free the officer while he waits out his appeal.

Man accused in death of homeless man

NEW YORK (AP) — Three days ago, Rodney Sumter stood on a subway platform, waiting for a train with his 3-year-old son. Today, he stands accused of fatally beating a homeless man who had taunted him, spit at him and punched him in the face at the station.

Friends and family of Sumter, who was fired last week from a job teaching construction skills to homeless men, said he acted in self-defense.

"He was protecting himself and his son from an unprovoked attack that he tried to escape," Sumter's lawyer, Lewis Tyson, said Tuesday as they left the Manhattan Criminal Court building.

But an activist said the death was typical of the life-threatening horrors New York City's homeless face every day.

"This has been portrayed to me as, 'New Yorkers now have reason to be afraid of the homeless.' I think the homeless have reason to be afraid of New Yorkers. This man is dead," said Keith Summa, advocacy director of the Coalition for the Homeless.

Sumter pleaded innocent Tuesday to first-degree manslaughter and was released without bail.

Although there are no statistics on violence involving the homeless in the subway system, "there are more incidents now than compared to 10 years ago," said Transit Authority police spokesman Sgt. Robert Valentino.

Two other men were in court Tuesday on charges they shoved a homeless man to his death beneath a subway train. Summa recited a litany of incidents where homeless victims were beaten, battered and set aflame.

Little is known about the dead man in the Sunday night case involving Sumter.

Identified only as John Doe, he was believed to be in his 60s. He was a denizen of the midtown Manhattan station where he died; he now seems destined for a Potter's Field burial.

Sumter, 39, had no criminal record. He is married and lives in Harlem. He worked as a plumber at various construction sites since coming to New York in 1980.

Earlier this month, he began work as a $20,000-a-year construction supervisor training homeless men recruited from a city shelter. The program is operated by the John Doe Fund, an advocacy group for the homeless.

"He is one of the nicest guys," said Greg Powell, a supervisor on the project. "He would try to stop a fight, not start one."

George McDonald, the fund's executive director, said Sumter was dismissed Jan. 17 because of personal problems at home. He said Sumter had been "distracted, and had come to work late."

According to police, the confrontation began at 11 p.m. Sunday as Sumter and his son waited at the 59th Street station for a train home after seeing the movie "Back to the Future II."

The homeless man began verbally harassing Sumter, and at one point spit at him, said transit police spokesman Al O'Leary.

The word is German, formed from the verb "kitschen" meaning "to slap a work of art together," and from the German dialect word meaning "to scrape up mud from the street." Grand jury investigates possibly perjury by Barry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Grand jury testimony by a former model who helped the FBI arrest Mayor Marion Barry in a cocaine sting is part of an investigation of possible perjury by the mayor, law enforcement sources say.

Rasheeda Moore, 38, testified for 2½ hours on Tuesday in the investigation of whether Barry lied under oath by denying he used drugs, the sources say.

Ms. Moore, identified by law enforcement sources as the woman who cooperated with the FBI in last week's arrest of Barry on a cocaine possession charge, testified in secret.

She has recently told investigators about using crack cocaine with Barry on numerous occasions during a lengthy romantic relationship, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Ms. Moore's accounts of drug use with Barry during a weekend trip to the Virgin Islands in 1988 back up testimony by convicted drug dealer Charles Lewis, who also is cooperating with the investigation, according to the sources.

Lewis, who Friday received a 15-month prison term for cocaine conspiracy, has testified he bought drugs for Barry and smoked crack cocaine with him in a downtown hotel in Washington and during the March 1988 weekend in the Virgin Islands.

The year-long investigation of Barry was touched off by reports that the mayor was in Lewis's room at the downtown Ramada Inn on Dec. 22, 1988, when city police went to investigate reports Lewis was selling drugs.

The officers abruptly and inexplicably left the hotel after learning the mayor was in Lewis' room.

Last Thursday, the mayor was videotaped by FBI agents smoking a small amount of crack cocaine after purchasing the drug during a visit to Ms. Moore's room at the Vista International Hotel, according to sources.

The mayor was arrested and later charged with misdemeanor possession of cocaine by FBI agents who monitored the episode on a surveillance camera in an adjacent room.

Ms. Moore began cooperating with the investigation several weeks ago following her arrest in the Los Angeles area on a charge of driving while intoxicated, according to one source.

The sting operation was approved at the highest levels of the FBI and was carefully planned to avoid any defense claims the mayor was entrapped, according to sources.

The mayor, in sworn grand jury testimony last year, denied allegations of drug use, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

An undercover operation to catch the mayor on a misdemeanor drug charge would not have been approved if there had not been suspicions that Barry lied to the grand jury when questioned about drug use, the sources said.

One source said an indictment from the grand jury was not expected soon, adding that the panel had to consider a complicated set of evidence.

FBI agents instructed Ms. Moore not to suggest drug use and she was told not to use crack cocaine herself, sources said. Barry inquired about getting some drugs shortly after he entered the room, according to court papers.

U.S. Attorney Jay B. Stephens indicated last Friday that more charges were likely to be brought in "an ongoing investigation of a broader range of allegations our office has been pursuing since last January, following the Ramada Inn incident."

The prosecutor said he viewed Barry's arrest "not as the end of an event but as part of an ongoing investigation."

The probe, sources say, also is focusing on allegations of contract fraud in the District of Columbia government, where several of the mayor's top associates have been convicted of federal corruption charges in the last five years, sources say.

Man who tried to kill son being released

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A man who set fire to his son seven years ago was being paroled today under orders to wear an electronic leash and stay away from the boy. But the youngster said he is keeping a BB gun by his bed just in case.

Rothenberg

"I'd shoot his eye out if he ever came over. I'd blind him," said David Rothenberg, who was 6 when his father, Charles Rothenberg, tried to kill him.

The boy, now, 13, was severely disfigured by the fire.

Prison officials sought to keep Rothenberg's whereabouts secret and said only that he was being released sometime today on a three-year parole.

On NBC's "Today" show this morning, Tipton Kindel, a spokesman for the state Corrections Department, remained tight-lipped about whether Rothenberg had already been released.

"He will be under the strictest parole ever for a California parolee," Kindel said. "He will be leaving prison, but he will not be a free man. He will be in the custody of at least one parole agent 24 hours a day. In addition, he will be required to wear an electronic surveillance monitor at all times.

"He will not be allowed to leave the jurisdiction to which he is being paroled. He will not be able to go to the county where his son lives. He will not be allowed to have any contact with his son, his ex-wife or her current husband."

Rothenberg, 49, was moved this week from the prison in San Luis Obispo to "one of the 18 prisons within the state," Kindel said Tuesday.

If Rothenberg violates parole, he will be returned to prison for 30 days to a year. He also must submit to weekly psychiatric counseling.

David lives in Orange County with his mother, Marie, and stepfather, police Officer Richard Hafdahl, who helped in the investigation of the fire.

Asked in the "Today" interview what is being done to protect David, Kindel said that if Rothenberg is ever "not where he's supposed to be, then the family, David, will be notified immediately."

Rothenberg set fire to his son in a Buena Park motel room in 1983 after a telephone argument in which his estranged wife said Rothenberg would not be able to see the boy again.

AP Laserphoto

Rothenberg had taken the boy on a holiday to Southern California from New York, where the boy was living with his mother.

"If I can't have him, nobody else can," Rothenberg said when arrested six days later. He told authorities he was going to kill himself but was too much of a coward.

David, dragged from the inferno by motel guests, suffered third-degree burns over 90 percent of his body.

Rothenberg was convicted of attempted murder, arson and other charges and got the maximum, a 13-year prison term. The sentence was cut in half because of good behavior.

If he had been convicted today, Rothenberg would have faced up to life in prison. But sentencing laws at the time required his release after less than seven years.

In a letter last month to the Los Angeles Times, Rothenberg called his own release "an unforgivable act."

Prison officials kept the relocation plans secret, fearing a repeat of the hysteria surrounding the 1987 release of Larry Singleton.

Singleton, who had raped a teenager and left her for dead after hacking off her forearms with an ax, had to be moved repeatedly from Northern California communities, where he was rejected by an outraged public.

Kindel acknowledged in the "Today" interview that if Rothenberg's location is revealed it could be a problem for the Corrections Department, and said "another high-profile parolee" — an apparent reference to Singleton — cost the state more than $2 million to move him from location to location.

"We're hoping to convince the public that not only is its safety assured, but so is the safety of David Rothenburg, so that perhaps they will simply ignore this man and shun him and not give him the media attention that we've learned he actually enjoys," Kindel said.

Kindel said the department has received several calls from talk shows "that had already been promised that he was going to be a guest on their programs."

David said he would always live in fear of his father.

"He will be out there, free. He probably has people out there right now looking for me. I will have to live the rest of my life on the line ... always looking behind me," the boy said recently.

Bundy's late confessions still mystery

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — The motive behind a series of final-hour confessions by serial killer Ted Bundy remains a mystery today, the first anniversary of his death in Florida's electric chair.

Homicide investigators still question whether Bundy's confessions in 23 killings in Washington state, Idaho, Utah and Colorado shortly before his execution were merely a desperate gamble to prolong his life.

An investigator with the attorney general's office in Washington said Bundy was trying to "save his neck" by exchanging information for time.

"He had two things in mind. One was to get law enforcement to intervene with the governor by saying he'd been cooperative and we need more time and the other was to play on the sympathies of the victims' relatives to have them contact the governor and speak on his behalf," said Bob Keppel, who interviewed Bundy in the days before the execution.

But Dennis Couch, a Utah investigator, said by the time he talked with Bundy 36 hours before the execution, the serial killer "looked like a whipped puppy.

"I had the feeling that he knew he was defeated and it was the end of the line," said Couch, of Salt Lake County. "I felt at the time that he was sincere in trying to find the bodies for the families."

In the end, the confessions won the former law school student no extra time.

He was strapped into electric chair on Jan. 24, 1989, for the 1978 kidnaping, rape and murder of a 12-year-old Lake County girl. Her body was found in an abandoned pigsty. He also was condemned for the slaying of two young women in a sorority in Tallahassee.

Diana Weiner, an attorney who arranged the final interviews with investigators, said the day before his death Bundy filed a written request for a 30- to 60-day extension with the governor's office. He had offered to fully answer questions of investigators and be examined by doctors and psychiatrists in hopes they could better understand his behavior, Weiner said.

"He wanted to die having left a more full understanding with the public of what the underlying factors were in his behavior so that we as a society ... would be able to take steps to prevent the kind of behavior he committed," she said.

Gov. Bob Martinez, who signed the death warrant Jan. 19, did not respond to the request.

Investigators in Idaho, Washington and Utah said the information given by Bundy in his final days has not led them to any more bodies but helped tie Bundy to killings and disappearances.

"I think he just confirmed what circumstantial evidence we in the state of Washington assumed all along — that he was the killer. We did not find any remains," Keppel said.

Keppel said Bundy admitted to 11 slayings in Washington, but they had only tied him to eight.

Bundy also told Utah authorities where he left three bodies.

Bush trys to sustain students legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush, lobbying to sustain his veto of legislation to protect Chinese students from deportation, said today Congress "will have only itself to blame" if it overrides his veto and authorities in Beijing retaliate.

In a wide-ranging morning news conference, Bush also sidestepped a question on the use of force by Soviet authorities attempting to put down civil disorder in the distant region of Azerbaijan — but indicated his trust in Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev. "Anytime you have a use of force and a loss of life we have concern, but I don't believe I can judge that right now," he said.

Of Gorbachev's future, he added, "I hope that he not only survives but stays strong."

The key event today for Bush was congressional consideration of his veto of the Chinese student legislation. The House was expected to vote to override the veto later in the day, and Bush met before his news conference with Republicans in the Senate in hopes of sustaining his veto there.

Congress has upheld each of Bush's previous ten vetoes. Bush said he had taken steps to provide protection to Chinese students studying here at the time of the crackdown in Tiananmen Square last June. "Not one was sent back," Bush said of the students. "They were safe then and they are safe now and they will be safe in the future."

He said the legislation was unnecessary and suggested it invited retaliation against American scholars in China.

But many lawmakers, upset with Bush's diplomatic overtures to Beijing, favor legislation anyway to give automatic visa protection to the estimated 32,000 Chinese students in the United States.

Meeting with reporters four days past his first anniversary in office, Bush also:

■ Lambasted a plan by Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., to reduce Social Security taxes as a "sleight of hand" that could lead to increases in other taxes or to reductions in Social Security benefits.

■ Offered his widely anticipated endorsement for creating a new Department of the Environment. He said worldwide environmental challenges are "so important that they must be addressed at the highest level."

■ Indicated he would soon propose a change in the Pentagon budget that "begins the transition" to a military more geared to events outside Europe, while "continuing to meet our inescapable commitment" to NATO. Pentagon officials have been studying alternatives in military spending and strategy in response to the wave of democracy sweeping Eastern Europe.

■ Said he would unveil the second phase of his anti-drug strategy on Thursday, continuing a busy period that includes submission of his first full budget next Monday and his first State of the Union address Wednesday night.

■ Said he had not yet settled on the details of an aid package for Panama. He said he regretted the loss of Panamanian lives as much as the lives of Americans lost.

"You have to feel concerned about that but you have to look at the broader picture," he said, claiming that a hige majority of Panamanian citizens approved of the invasion. The Pentagon says about 200 Panamanian civilians were killed during the fighting last month.

Asked about Soviet unrest in Azerbaijan, Bush said he didn't know whether the volatile situation there posed a threat to Gorbachev's political survival, but acknowledged, "He's faced with an ethnic problem there, an internal problem of enormous dimensions."

Government trying to protect secrets

MIAMI (AP) — The potential leak of CIA secrets in the trial of Manuel Noriega has led the government to draw up tough security guidelines that would force defense attorneys to sign oaths and submit their work for review.

In another motion filed in U.S. District Court Tuesday, prosecutors asked for more time to go through mounds of documents being uncovered since the Dec. 20 invasion of Panama, according to a published report.

Some defense attorneys balked at the proposed regulations, which must be approved by U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler.

"Who's going to decide what is and what isn't classified information — the government?" Kenneth Swartz, an assistant federal public defender representing Noriega co-defendant Luis del Cid, said Tuesday.

But the motion by Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael P. Sullivan insisted the rules are necessary "to protect the national security of the United States."

"The unauthorized disclosure and uncontrolled dissemination of such information would cause exceptionally grave damage to the national security of the United States," it said.

The government requested a hearing on its motion, but no date has been set.

Noriega is scheduled for a bond hearing Friday. Attorneys for the ousted Panamanian dictator have said they need some documents to counter the government's contentions that he should be denied bail because he was likely to flee.

The government said the security guidelines were prompted by a Classified Information Procedures Act notification from Michael O'Kane, attorney for indicted pilot Daniel Miranda, another Noriega co-defendant in the February 1988 drug-trafficking indictment.

O'Kane has been outspoken in calling Noriega a tool of the United States who acted with CIA approval.

"The hidden agenda of the government is not to release any of this stuff," O'Kane said Tuesday.

He acknowledged his search for sensitive documents is designed to force the government's hand. The government's unwillingness to release such information could help free his client, he said.

Defense lawyers also criticized the government's motion for more time to produce documents as evidence it is unprepared, The New York Times reported today.

But the prosecution motion said, "Due to the recent events in Panama, evidence is still being gathered and analyzed."

Also filed Tuesday was a motion for del Cid demanding that he be released from an 4-by-8-foot punishment cell at the Metropolitan Correctional Center southwest of Miami. Defense attorney Sam Burstyn said the confinment is cruel and unusual punishment.

Noriega, by contrast, "is being given guest quarters usually reserved for the most elite of federal prisoners," Burstyn wrote.

"The facilities that are being occupied by co-defendant Noriega are capable of housing several additional pretrial detainees," said the motion, which asked that del Cid be allowed to join his former boss at the federal courthouse apartment cell.

Noriega's attorneys, meanwhile, have submitted addresses of two homes and three military offices raided by U.S. troops during last month's invasion of Panama, and are asking for an inventory of all materials taken from them.

Analysis determines Noriega cache to be 'voodoo substance'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon says its military officers probably shouldn't have made claims during the Panama invasion that a large cache of cocaine was found in a guest house frequented by Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega.

"You have to do lab tests on things to be 100 percent sure," said Defense Department spokesman Bob Hall.

"The best they could determine was that it was some bonding substance used in voodoo rituals. That's the way it was described to us by Army experts. At first, it could have been mistaken by a layman as cocaine."

The spokesman acknowledged Tuesday the substance was not cocaine and tests on the material were made after the find was touted by U.S. military officers. Gen. Maxwell Thurman, the commander of the Panama-based Southern Command, had pointed to the alleged drug find as evidence of Noriega's alleged connections to narcotics.

One report said the substance may have been tamales, but the military says that's not so.

Bush plans extra precautions for Colombia trip

By MATTHEW C. QUINN
Reporter-Telegram Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The White House is considering extraordinary security steps for President Bush's trip to Colombia next month in the wake of intelligence reports suggesting Bush's plane might be subject to missile attack by the drug cartel, senior officials said Tuesday.

The officials said the reports were unsubstantiated and that there is no thought in the White House that Bush will cancel his plan to attend a four-nation drug summit in Cartagena, in the heart of Colombia's cocaine-producing region, on Feb. 15.

Bush, a key aide said, "feels very comfortable" with his plan and is determined to use his presence to underscore support for Colombian President Virgilio Barco, who has been waging a bloody five-month battle against the cocaine cartel in his country.

But officials confirmed an account by CBS News that the administration has received intelligence reports suggesting that Colombian drug lords might be smuggling shoulder-held surface-to-air missiles into Colombia for an attempt to shoot down Air Force One as it carries Bush to and from Colombia.

One senior official, who spoke on the condition of anonymity, said that despite the reports, the U.S. government has no indication that surface-to-air missiles have actually been obtained by the Colombian drug cartel. But he added: "You never know for sure."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said earlier he had been unable to substantiate that the White House had received such intelligence reports, and Colombian Ambassador Mosquera Chaux was quoted by The Associated Press as dismissing them as "a simple rumor."

But senior officials said the possibility, no matter how remote, of a missile attack on Air Force One was indeed being taken seriously.

One official said, "There are a lot of different possibilities" under consideration for getting the president to Colombia safely.

One, he said, was flying Bush aboard Air Force One to a nearby Caribbean island and then bringing him to coastal Cartagena over water. "There are a lot of islands around there," the aide said, without elaboration.

Midland High's Kneecap Crew bashes Abilene

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Editor

OK, so Midland High's short, and sometimes stubby, Bulldogs are living in a District 4-5A basketball cloud. But that cloud has a silver lining worthy of Disney World after Tuesday night's 76-62 demolition of 4-5A power Abilene High.

The Eagles came trucking into Chaparral Center with a perfect 5-0 district mark and left wondering why old Walt had deserted them in favor of these overachieving Bulldogs.

Not one of these Bulldogs stand taller than 6-foot-2. You might say this is the "Kneecap Brigade" because they look at a lot of kneecaps. But despite this small obstacle, MHS ran over, past, through and around the Eagles in model fashion that even says these 'Dogs' just might even be a playoff contender.

No one really wants to believe that, but this crazy Purple Pack refuses to be beaten. In fact, with a 5-1 loop mark to end the first half of 4-5A play, you have to say Bulldogs in the same breath as Eagles and Bobcats.

San Angelo's Bobcats upended Odessa Permian, 75-68, Tuesday in Odessa, leaving MHS, San Angelo and Abilene all tied at 5-1. Amazing? No, it's downright scary.

This was supposed to be the point in the 4-5A script where MHS fell off the league pace. They lost to San Angelo and most expected that they would lose to league leader Abilene High. Well, an upset isn't so rare in this league, but a demolition derby through a league leader is. And that's just about what you have to call this one.

There did seem to be some confusion in the MHS post-game locker room at just how these Bulldogs turned the stunning trick.

Head coach Jack Stephenson said, "From the mouths of babes sometimes comes the best remarks. My son told me before the game that you sell the tickets with the offense and win the game with defense. I think that was what we did out there tonight.

"I really felt we were evenly matched going into the game, and I know it sounds crazy, but we really play better against a team that runs the press against us. We had a 29-13 advantage in rebounds in the first half and that was a big key. It was a great defensive game."

But the MHS offense wanted its own say.

"We can run even if we don't have size," said Keith Gilbreath, who had 13 points in the game. "It's to our advantage when we play a team that runs because we feel like if we can get down court and shoot without setting something up, we don't need the great height."

Starting guard Albert Ray agreed, "No one can run up and down the court like we can. This was our type of game."

But even if all couldn't agree if it was running or defense as the key, all thought it was probably MHS at its best.

"I think we played better than we have all season," said reserve Johnny Mackey, who came off the bench for seven points and six rebounds.

Lee girls scare Cooper

By BILL PRICE
Sports Writer

For upset-minded Midland Lee, the third quarter was a disaster. For the Abilene Cooper girls, it was business as usual in a 64-45 District 4-5A basketball win over the Lady Rebels Tuesday night at the Lee gym.

The Lady Rebs fell to 5-18 overall and 1-7 in 4-5A, while Cooper went to 14-7 and 5-2, taking over sole possession of second place from Odessa Permian, who fell to San Angelo Tuesday.

But not before Lee showed it could play with a district frontrunner — at least for one half. The Lady Rebs played the Lady Cougars to a 15-15 tie after one quarter and were behind at half time by only five points, 35-30.

Lee even started the second half with a flourish as Mary Ann Isom nailed one of her four three-pointers to cut the lead to three points. After two baskets by Cooper's Holly McMillon, Marcia del Llano sank a layup for Lee to make the score 39-35 with more than half the third quarter remaining.

Little did the few fans present realize, however, that del Llano's bucket was to be Lee's last for more than eight minutes. The Lady Rebels did not score again until 4:20 remained in the game, which was essentially over with the score 55-37.

A little adjustment in the Coogs' full-court press by Cooper coach Gene Hudson was effective in keeping the ball out of the hands of Isom, Lee's leading scorer, and eight turnovers by the Lady Rebs squelched the possible upset.

"We didn't shoot very well in the first half, we didn't run the offense very smoothly in the first half and we just didn't do anything very well in the first half," Hudson said. "We tried to put pressure on them but they were getting the good outlet pass to Isom.

Mason-less Tors stay the course

Second-ranked Lamesa overcomes Denver City, 75-67

By BILL GRIMES
Sports Writer

LAMESA — Most teams feel the loss of a top player.

The Lamesa Golden Tornadoes are not most teams.

Nobody in the Tor fold denies that they miss senior standout Dwight Mason, who was ruled academically ineligible last week after failing a government class. Who wouldn't miss an all-state candidate?

District 3-3A foes might wonder about what Mason's loss has meant to the Tors, ranked second among state Class 3A teams.

A 75-67 win over the Denver City Mustangs Tuesday at the Lamesa Middle School gym was the Tors' second straight victory without Mason, enabling Coach Wayne Roberts' team to remain a perfect 7-0 in district play at the halfway point.

Roberts said the key to surviving a Mason-less six weeks is to get his other Tors to play as a unit.

"We're not making any adjustments," he said. "We're just going out there and making sure everyone knows what they're supposed to do."

Junior guard Bert Butler said the Tors aren't in a position to rely on one person for everything.

"We have to stay unselfish and not let one person do it all," Butler said. He added that the Tors seem to be picking up momentum despite the loss to Mason.

"It's a good feeling to know that we're a little bit ahead in district right now."

A little bit is right. The Tors hold a slim one-game lead over Slaton and lead Brownfield by two.

Mason will miss the rest of district play before returning in time for bi-district action no earlier than Feb. 22. The 6-1 swingman missed the last few games of last season for disciplinary reasons, but the Tors still pulled out a bi-district championship before losing big to Dimmitt in area playoff action.

Lamesa, 21-2 overall, got off to a rocky start Tuesday thanks to Denver City guard Brent Chamberlain. The 5-10 junior scored nine points in the first three minutes of the game to fuel an 11-2 Mustang run, but was only three-for-11 from the field thereafter.

Meanwhile, Lamesa was ice-cold at the outset, especially from three-point range. The Tors were one-for-seven from 19-9 and beyond in the first quarter, but got back into the game later in the period with strong inside play by Brandon Sheppard and Lavert Hawkins.

Denver City maintained its lead until early in the second quarter, when Butler fueled an 8-2 run with six points in 71 seconds. Butler gave the Tors the lead for good on a short jump shot with 5:20 left in the first half.

The Tors were never really able to finish off their visitors until the final minutes, however. Lamesa never led by more than 11 points, and the Tors were even in danger of losing the lead after Denver City pulled to within one on two free throws by reserve Shawn Robinson with 5:42 left in the game.

Butler and Hawkins canned successive three-point bombs only 30 seconds apart to push the Lamesa lead back up to seven, and the Mustangs were more or less finished.

Cougars hammer Rebels, 79-55

From Staff Reports

ABILENE — Midland Lee's basketball Rebels continued to find rough going on the District 4-5A road with a 79-55 loss to Abilene Cooper.

Both teams left the floor with identical 2-4 loop records, but it was only the fifth win for the Cougars in 21 games this year. Lee is 11-12 for the season.

Lee held Mitch Royals, the district's leading scorer, to only 16 points, but Mike Thompson came through with a big 23-point effort to fuel the Cougars.

Lee got 18 points from David Meade and 13 from Greg Crowe.

The Rebels got off to a fast start in the game, holding an 18-14 lead in the first quarter. But Cooper outscored Lee by 13 points, 23-10, in the second period for a 37-28 lead at the half and it didn't get any better as Cooper outscored Lee by a 42-27 margin in the second half.

Lee now returns to Chaparral Center Friday night against cross town rival Midland High. Lee owns a 2-2 record at the Chap, but lost to Abilene High by only one and by six to MHS.

Becker ushered from Australian Open field

Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — A wild celebration by serene Swede Stefan Edberg — he raised both fists and smiled — punctuated a victory that could help him vault past Boris Becker in the chase for Ivan Lendl's No. 1 spot.

Edberg, ranked No. 3, said he was "pumped" as he reached the semifinals of the Australian Open today along with No. 1 Lendl, while No. 2 Becker went bye-bye.

That narrowed the gap between Edberg and Becker in the tour computer rankings, and spoiled the West German's chances of catching Lendl at least until the summer.

If Edberg goes on to beat fellow Swede Mats Wilander, Becker's conqueror, in the semifinals and win the Australian for the third time, he could take over the No. 2 spot and move within striking distance of Lendl.

Edberg may not have an easy time beating Wilander, who whipped precision passing shots through swirling winds against the net-charging Becker to beat him 6-4, 6-4, 6-2.

That kept Wilander on track for a fourth Australian championship and ended Becker's bid for a third straight Grand Slam title to go with his Wimbledon and U.S. Open triumphs.

Lendl will have an equally tough semifinal opponent in Yannick Noah, the diving, leaping Frenchman who beat him in a tuneup tourney in Sydney.

Noah, who will play in his first Grand Slam semifinal since he won the 1983 French Open, scored a 6-3, 7-5, 6-2 victory over Mikael Pernfors. Pernfors, the Swedish-born former NCAA champion made the quarters on the default of John McEnroe.

It was a wacky day of weather at the National Tennis Center, where at least 50 fans among the crowd of about 20,000 were treated for heat exhaustion.

The temperature on the rubber-bottomed hard courts hit 115 degrees, down from the 140 degrees on Tuesday, but the dry, hot winds of up to 35 mph tossed around baseline shots. Away from the court, the temperature reached 99 degrees.

Elway assures win for Denver

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — In the great tradition of Joe Namath, John Elway offers a Super Bowl guarantee.

"Get another point-and-a-half," the Denver quarterback said, "and I guarantee we'll cover the spread."

This is somewhat less dramatic than Namath's assurance that the New York Jets, 17½-point underdogs, would beat Baltimore in the 1969 Super Bowl. But then Elway's Broncos are only 12½-point underdogs to the San Francisco 49ers, and so have less ground to make up.

Elway knows that covering the betting spread won't be quite enough for Denver, a three-time Super Bowl loser. The town and the team have begun to develop a complex about this game. Elway has lost two of those games, both in blowouts, and recognizes that you don't have endless chances.

"To be the quarterback I want to be in my career, I've got to win this game," he said. "This is my third opportunity. I haven't taken advantage of the others. A lot of guys don't even get the opportunity."

The Broncos are longshots partly because of their sad Super Bowl history — losing by 17 points to Dallas in 1978, 19 to the New York Giants in 1987 and a whopping 32 points to Washington in 1988.

The last two defeats came with Elway at quarterback, playing catch-up both times, and forced to throw more frequently than he might have liked. His Super Bowl log is a less-than-glowing 36-for-75. The loss to Washington, constructed on a record five-touchdown second quarter by the Redskins, was the more galling to Elway.

"We were out so fast it felt like a waste," the quarterback said. "You work so hard, to give it all back in 10 minutes, that was most disappointing."

There is a flip side to the past failures and Elway knows it. "People are not giving us a lot of chance," he said. "If we win, it will be the greatest upset of all time. If we lose, well, we're supposed to lose."

So he takes a carefree attitude into the game, one that allows him to joke about serious business like betting lines. "Even though we don't have a chance, we'll do the best we can," he said sarcastically.

"Only one other team has a chance to be world champion," Elway said. "I'd rather go to bat and take my chances than not go to bat. I'll risk humiliation for the chance."

Still, if the Broncos fail again, Elway knows he will be 0-for-3 and that the burden for explanations will fall squarely on him. That goes with the territory for a quarterback.

"You learn as time goes on that the power of that microscope you're under gets greater and greater," he said. "The fishbowl gets smaller when the expectations are higher."

QB Talk

Game announcers also practicing

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Like the Denver Broncos and San Francisco 49ers, John Madden and Pat Summerall are spending the week going over their game plans, practicing and meeting the press.

"I think it'll be a high-scoring game. If I had to predict, I'd say 31-21, San Francisco, something like that," Summerall said as a couple of dozen reporters scribbled away or held microphones toward him.

In the midst of the Super Bowl hype and hoopla, CBS made Summerall and his broadcast sidekick, Madden, available for interviews. And with 2,400 members of the media in town for the big game, all looking for a story with a different angle, reporters turned out Tuesday.

Summerall opened it up, analyzing the teams and discussing what he expects to see Sunday.

A former player and a long time play-by-play announcer, on this day Summerall was also an expert. The 49ers, he said, with an offense perfectly designed for Joe Montana and a defense that is underrated, rank with the all-time great teams.

The reporters nodded and took notes.

Madden charged into the room trailing a line of reporters behind him and pulling away the cluster around Summerall.

Wearing sneakers, navy blue pants and a nylon windbreaker, Madden looked relaxed. He smiled easily around the huge unlit cigar that stuck out of his mouth.

"Elway should be the difference in this one," Madden said.

He chatted on about The Game and about football in general, gesturing, waving the cigar around.

Summerall moved to a small room down the hall to finish up his interviews.

"I don't find this unusual," he said of his role as analyst, "I've been doing it for so long."

Summerall and Madden, who have worked together since the 1980-81 season, will spend more than 60 hours watching tapes and preparing for Sunday's broadcast, Summerall said.

"We started last Thursday. This game is harder than most. It's the most demanding, the biggest," Summerall said.

The pair feel comfortable with each other on the air, Summerall said.

"What we do during the game is pretty spontaneous. We work well together. One of the keys to not stepping on each other is looking at each other when we're talking. We look into each other's eyes so we can tell when the other is done talking. It's not easy, but it's comfortable," he said.

Down the hall, the crowd around Madden had grown. Reporters smiled as they listened to his thoughts on the teams. Some took notes but many more seemed to just enjoy listening to the affable former coach.

Madden bemoaned the lack of big defensive linemen these days. He said their disappearance has led to the three-man line.

"The three-man line is boring. There's never been a fearsome threesome. Never a dynamic duo," he said.

The reporters chuckled and moved in closer. Madden, everybody's good old boy, was in top form.

A CBS official tried to wrap it up, but Madden wouldn't be rushed, sitting still and chatting on.

On the way out of the room, he stopped to introduce himself to a reporter.

"This way, John," the CBS official said, leading him to a session with the New Orleans CBS affiliate. "WWL is set up in here to do an interview."

Former NFL quarterback Archie Manning waited in another room to tape a segment for the local station's pre-Super Bowl show.

"Sure thing," Madden said, ambling out of the room, trailing a line of reporters.

Some of the 50 or so reporters tagged along to watch.

Chap netters in Corpus for ITCA Indoor tourney

From Staff Reports

Midland College takes its top-ranked men's and women's tennis teams to Corpus Christi this week to open spring action. The Chaparrals are competing in the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association Junior College Indoor Championships Thursday through Saturday at The Athletic Club of Corpus Christi.

The Chaparrals currently are listed first in both men's and women's teams by the Volvo ITCA ranking committees.

"We aren't sure which teams from outside Texas are coming to this event," said MC coach Joe Williams, "but just having all the Texas community colleges represented will pretty well assure a national tournament."

Among the men's teams, Texas schools are listed in eight of the Top 10 spots. For the women's teams, Texas teams have five of the top ten. Williams is taking Midland College's top six men and top six women to the Corpus Christi tournament.

"This tournament pretty well determines much of the team and individual ranking for the remainder of the spring season, so we need to play well and defend those top rankings we now hold," Williams said.

Among the men's teams, the rankings include: 1. Midland; 2. Cooke, Texas; 3. Broward, Florida; 4. Tyler, Texas; 5. San Jacinto, Texas; 6. Santa Fe, Florida; 7. Odessa, Texas; 8. McLennan, Texas; 9. Temple, Texas; and 10. Paris, Texas.

Women's team rankings are: 1. Midland; 2. Abraham Baldwin, Georgia; 3. Anderson, SC; 4. Tyler; 5. McLenna; 6. Temple, 7. Odessa, 8. New Mexico Military; 9. Palm Beach, Fla., and 10. Brunswick, Georgia.

In men's singles, Midland College has the following rankings: 4. Jesper Witt; 6. Mohamed Ridaoui; 16. Amine Kadiri; 21. Bernt Gade; 30. Pepe Garcia and 40. James Homan. Kadiri and Ridaoui are ranked second in men's doubles; Gade-Witt are ninth; and Garcia-Homan are 17th.

Women's singles has Janneke Garos ranked first, Sharia Barone is third, and Alison Bradford is tenth. Maria Lencina is 28th, and Maria Jimenez is 45th. The Garos-Barone tandem is ranked first in women's doubles. Bradford and Lencina are ranked 12th.

Kadiri and Ridaoui last week received word they would play at the Rolex ITCA Small College Indoor Championships in Minneapolis Feb. 6-8. They had lost to the Tyler team of Mike Martinez and Mike Tremblay in the Southwest Rolex ITCA Small College doubles championships last fall. But Tremblay has suffered a wrist injury, so the Tyler team has had to drop out. Kadiri and Ridaoui had an earlier win over the Tyler duo, so the change shouldn't affect results too much.

Midland College already had Garos going to the Rolex ITCA National Small College championships in singles, plus competing in the doubles with Barone. This puts the Chaps in three of four small college brackets at Minneapolis.

Williams smiles a bit over his women's doubles, since Bradford teamed with newcomer Maria Vago to reach the quarterfinals of a United States Tennis Association qualifying professional tournament two weeks ago in Midland. The Chap duo had only met a week earlier and went on the court without having played a match together. Williams now will team Lencina and Jimenez at the No. 3 doubles position.

Another midterm addition for the women's team, Ann-Marie Smalt, won a tune-up tourney last weekend in Odessa, beating MC teammate Missy O'Neill in the finals.

Angels complete front office moves

From Staff Reports

The Midland Angels recently rounded out their front-office staff by hiring two former major league employees and a veteran minor league broadcaster.

Charlie Dowd, Jr. is the new Director of Marketing, while Mike Deichert will serve as the new Director of Group Sales and Russ Langer as Director of Broadcasting.

Dowd, 27, joins the Angels after serving as a sales representative with the New York Mets. Deichert was most recently a group sales representative with the Texas Rangers.

Langer, 29, spent 1989 as the radio voice of the Class A Springfielf Cardinals. He has also done play-by-play for the Vero Beach (Fla.) Dodgers and the New Mexico State University football, basketball and baseball programs. Langer replaces Deene Ehlis, who took a similar position with the Class AAA Iowa Oaks.

Angels general manager Monty Hoppel is glad to finally round out his staff on the eve of his first season in Midland.

"Charlie and Mike are first-class additions to an already strong staff. They both come highly recommended and both have a great desire to become top administrators in the minor leagues.

"Russ is a great addition. He is a great broadcaster with a lot of experience and I look for him to play a big part in all areas of the Angels operation," Hoppel added.

THURSDAY, JANUARY 25, 1990

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Some of the things you do will be both controversial and financially rewarding. Let your conscience be your guide. Retirees could get unexpected assistance in March. Pinpoint your main goal and use all your resources to attain it. Those in sales will record the greatest gains in August. Do not try to rush what could develop into a permanent romantic alliance. Partner needs time to think things through.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: writer Virginia Woolf, Philippine leader Corazon Aquino, actor Dean Jones, singer Anita Baker.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your mate or business partner gives you some excellent inside information. You could be in line for a glamorous job. Your skill at communicating is a big plus.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your writing skills are a valuable asset. A subtantial raise or promotion is in the works. Partnerships are going through positive changes. Spreading yourself too thinly could prove costly.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Meetings with business contacts will be productive today. Be open to suggestions. Your life takes off in an unusual but rewarding direction. Guard against extravagance if entertaining at home.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Those who aim too high could get shot down. Avoid speculative ventures. Changing your work routine boosts productivity. Winter vacation trips enjoy favorable influences. Join forces with a friend.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Those who are self-employed do brilliantly, especially if involved with the arts or advertising. Financial gains depend on your special talents. An influential person admires your originality.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An excellent day for making sweeping changs. Your ideas could meet with some resistance. Hang in there and you will get wonderful results! A social event brings more affection your way. Avoid flatterers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be alert to gossip that can hurt your reputation. Real estate ventures bear careful investigation. Cope with contrary co-workers in a positive manner. A sense of humor and genuine smile will help.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An easygoing attitude will serve you best today. Welcome an opportunity to mix business with pleasure at lunch. You can let your hair down. Show your romantic partner more appreciation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Use your time and energy judiciously. Make allowances for last-minute changes. Punctuality will impress higher-ups. An employer asks tough questions; be straightforward. Candor is essential.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your relationship with an older co-worker improves. Accept this person's help without looking for ulterior motives. Keep a close eye on your money. Come to grips with postponed household chores.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Give others the room they need to make changes and a financial sacrifice may not be necessary. A business venture sounds lucrative but bears further investigation. Ask for help in solving a family problem.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A good day to ask for and receive favors. Count your lucky stars! Religion begins to play a stronger role in your life. Act and dress conventionally when you deal with conservative customers.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠ Study this hand, then tell us what you think the result should be at duplicate and at rubber bridge. Suggest a line of play at each form of the game.

Another auction that depends on simple arithmetic. After North's two-heart bid, South's hand is worth 20 points and, even if North has a dead minimum for a single raise, there are sufficient combined assets to merit a shot at game.

Go to the top of the class if you suggested that, at duplicate, declarer should go down one trick, but South can guarantee 10 tricks at rubber bridge. The great disparity between these results is that duplicate pays handsomely for overtricks, whereas rubber bridge does not.

At duplicate, declarer should win the first club trick and, despite the appearance of the queen, run the nine of hearts. As the cards lie, that loses to the king and the ten of clubs comes back. East ruffs away the ace and, as long as East carefully jettisons one of his spade honors to allow West to win the third spade with the ten, declarer must still lose a trick in each black suit.

At rubber bridge, declarer wins the opening lead and immediately plays a trump to the ace and another. No matter how the hearts lie, declarer can lose no more than one trick in each suit except diamonds.

Why not play that way at duplicate? The chances of the trump finesse working are 50 percent, whereas a 6-1 club break occurs only one in 16 times. And if, indeed, East holds a singleton club, that defender is far more likely to hold trump length, headed by the king. Therefore, the finesse is well worth the risk.

Kathleen Turner glad to sink her claws into Williams' 'Cat on a Hot Tin Roof'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Kathleen Turner is thrilled to be playing the sultry Maggie in Tennessee Williams' "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," but stressed that she doesn't identify with any of the characters she portrays.

"Nah, come on, it's acting, guys. It really truly really is," she told reporters Tuesday. "It's fun to be able to play these women with all this wonderful power and allure — and intelligence, I'd like to add. But it's acting. It's just fun. I'm really not like that at home."

The play began a two-week run Tuesday at Pittsburgh's Benedum Center. After that, it goes to Boston, Philadelphia and then Broadway.

Miss Turner said she always had intended to portray Maggie, a beautiful Southern woman who pines for a husband who shuns her.

"Maggie is so brave," she said. "She changes so fast and thinks so fast. I like the level of aliveness."

Appearing with Miss Turner are Charles Durning, Polly Holliday and Daniel Hugh Kelly.

The production is nothing like the 1958 film with Elizabeth Taylor, Paul Newman and Burl Ives, Miss Turner said.

Miss Turner, 35, started in theater but movies made her a star. Her credits include "Body Heat," "Romancing the Stone," "Prizzi's Honor," "Peggy Sue Got Married" and "The Accidental Tourist."

She currently appears with Michael Douglas in "The War of the Roses."

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There's no truth to the rumors that Michael Jackson's chimpanzee Bubbles has died, Jackson's publicist announced, and "when Bubbles heard about his demise he went bananas."

Jackson

"Like Mark Twain, his death is grossly exaggerated and he's alive and doing well," publicist Lee Solters said Tuesday.

A fire in Jackson's Santa Barbara menagerie last month destroyed a giraffe barn, but the animals were evacuated safely. Jackson's private zoo includes ostriches, llamas and boa constrictors.

• • •

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conductor Mstislav Rostropovich is returning to his native Soviet Union with a concert tour, but rejected any notion that he might end 16 years of exile in the West.

Asked during an interview Tuesday on his feelings about next month's visit, he replied: "How would you feel about going to the planet Mars?"

Rostropovich

Rostropovich, music director of the National Symphony Orchestra, said he and his wife, soprano Galina Vishnevskaya, were happy Soviet authorities had decided to restore the citizenship stripped from them in 1978.

But Rostropovich is reported to have told friends he cannot reconcile with the Soviets until they also restore the citizenship of his close friend, Nobel Prize-winning novelist Alexander Solzhenitsyn, who lives in Vermont.

Rostropovich and the National Symphony leave Jan. 29 for a tour of Japan and the Soviet Union, where they will give four days of concerts in Moscow and Leningrad.

The first concert, in the Bolshoi Hall of the Moscow Conservatory, will feature Tchaikovsky's "Pathetique" symphony, the last work Rostropovich conducted — and on the same stage — before he fled to the West in 1974, complaining of harassment and limits on his artistic freedom.

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ted Danson and the other regulars of "Cheers" left their studio barstools to march in protest of aerial pesticide spraying of the Mediterranean fruit fly.

Danson

"If we don't jump up and down and say toxins are not the answer, then nobody is going to look for other answers," said Danson, who plays bartender Sam Malone on the NBC comedy series.

He was joined at the Los Angeles Federal Building Tuesday by cast members Kirstie Alley, Woody Harrelson, George Wendt and John Ratzenberger. The demonstration was organized by the Coalition Against Malathion.

State officials are spraying malathion in Southern California to stop an insect infestation that threatens the state's $1.5 billion fruit industry.

• • •

LONDON (AP) — Rock star David Bowie announced a six-month world tour and said it would be the last time he sang his smash hits on stage.

Publicists will advertise telephone numbers and ballots for fans to choose the tour's songs — from hits like "Young Americans," "Rebel Rebel," "Changes," "Suffragette City" and "Let's Dance."

"I won't be doing them ever again," Bowie told reporters Tuesday. "There's no point continually doing songs and reflecting on a past."

The 42-year-old Bowie, whose real name is David Jones, will appear in Canada, Britain and Holland in March before going to the United States, Australia, Japan and the rest of Europe.

The British-born musician said he will be accompanied by a four-piece band in simple stage settings but added: "Knowing me there will be a fair amount of theatricality about it."

• • •

CHICAGO (AP) — Four Playmates and a bronze bunny greeted visitors Tuesday to Playboy Enterprises Inc.'s new headquarters, a gleaming corporate hutch that reflects the company's hopes for rebounding profits.

The new digs mark a slight departure in image for the publishing and video company built on flesh and fantasy. The Playboy sign atop its former skyscraper headquarters on Michigan Avenue will be going into storage with founder Hugh Hefner's round bed and other icons of Playboy's racier past.

Hefner skipped the invitation-only headquarters housewarming party Tuesday night. At 63, the one-time king of the swinging singles is working on his autobiography and settled in his Los Angeles mansion with his pregnant wife, former Playboy centerfold Kimberley Conrad, 26.

Hefner still owns about 70 percent of the company's stock but daughter Christie Hefner, Playboy's chairman since November 1988, runs the Chicago-based company. She has run Playboy's day-to-day operations since 1982, when she became president.

Playboy's new headquarters atop a 16-story downtown building fronting Lake Michigan are smaller — 100,000 square feet compared with 125,000 in its old building — but feature airier office space and a two-story, skylit atrium displaying valuable company-owned artworks.

BULLDOGS

MHS never trailed in the game after taking a 10-8 lead with 3:32 left in the first quarter on two free throws by Rodrick Hickey. Hickey scored 14 of his 18 points in the first half and 10 in the second period while the Bulldogs built a firm 15-point lead, 40-25, with 2:15 left before the half.

Abilene High had a couple of major surges in the second half, cutting the MHS lead to 49-43 in the third period and to 67-58 with 3:38 left in the game. But it was at the latter point when the Eagles gave up the ship. Michael Grant, who led the comeback with eight points in the fourth quarter, was called for a technical foul and Gilbreath sank two free throws for an 11-point margin and AHS never threatened again.

"We knew as soon as we beat Hobbs (N.M.) that we could run with the best of them," said Michael Wright, who led all scorers with 20 points, including 10 points in each half. "This was a must win for us because it was either third place or a tie for first. We knew which one of those choices we wanted."

Abilene High coach Gerald Coppedge agreed with it all.

"They beat us and you can't say much more about it," said Coppedge. "We weren't hitting and we certainly weren't on the boards."

Coppedge wouldn't look too far ahead at the second half stretch run as far as his Eagles are concerned.

"All I have my eyes on right now is Abilene Cooper. That's enough to worry about right now without trying to figure out what is going to happen down the road. I'm sure Cooper will be all we can handle right now."

One other impressive thing about the MHS win was the fact that Scott Melzer scored only seven points in the game. Melzer entered the game as the district's third leading scorer, but hit only two of 17 shots from the field. If nothing else, MHS proved that it is not a one-dimensional squad. And even though Melzer didn't have the scoring touch, he came up with five steals and broke up several breakaway threats by the Eagles. He plays hard regardless of the numbers.

The Bulldogs also have a worrisome matter to take care of Friday when they face cross town rival Midland Lee at the Chap. The Bulldogs have beaten Lee twice this year and both have been narrow victories.

The MHS junior varsity made it a stellar day for the Pack. The Bullpups rolled over Abilene High 89-73 to go 22-1 for the season and 6-0 in 4-5A play. Tyler Beard led the way with a game high 22 points while E.J. Johnson had 17 and John King 13 points. The AHS JV got 17 points from both Alan Hewitt and Gabriel Aldrete and 10 more from Patrick Pope.

San Angelo part of three-way tie

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — In downing Odessa Permian 75-68 Tuesday night, San Angelo sent the District 4-5A boys basketball lead back into a three-way deadlock.

The Bobcat win, coupled with Midland High's 76-62 win over Abilene High Tuesday, put San Angelo, MHS and AHS all at 5-1 in league play.

The Bobcats trailed the Panthers 34-30 at half time, but a 26-point third quarter helped San Angelo overcome the deficit. Permian aided its own demise in third by posting only 13 points in the period.

Scoring in double digits for the Bobcats were Ty Brown with 19 points, Dewayne Lofton with 17, Joe Lavender with 14 and Corey Grays with 12. Devorik Alford led Permian with 16 points, Craig Reeves scored 12 and D.J. Ross put up 11 points.

San Angelo is now 14-11 overall while Permian fell to 8-14.

LADY REBS

"So in the third quarter we changed from a trapping zone press to a full-court man. We try to disguise our zone and man, and in the man we just stay close to them the length of the court and try to make them turn the ball over."

That was exactly the fate that befell Lee, even though Cougar wing Holly McMillon and 6-2 Cooper post Brandai Prince had a lot to say about the outcome of the game.

McMillon finished with a game-high 21 points and Prince scored 19, including eight in the first quarter. Kelly Huff, another Cooper wing, added 12 points for the Lady Cougars.

"They just had too many guns. They have a good post game and a good outside game. Prince is so much bigger than we are, she just dominated. Then they hit the outside shots, too," said Shirley Stephenson, Lee coach.

"We just had a few turnovers there (in the scoreless streak) and it just fell apart."

Isom ended the game with 20 points for Lee, and Tiffany Grafa followed with eight.

In other 4-5A games, San Angelo kept its district slate perfect by downing Odessa Permian 63-48, and Midland High fell to Abilene High 54-38.

In junior varsity play, Lee fell to Cooper 37-30. Trenna Johnson scored eight points to lead the Lady Reb JV.

TORS

The Tors belied their run-and-gun reputation with a slowdown offense for much of the second half. Roberts said the mini-stall was a way to draw out the slower Mustang defenders for easy buckets.

"I feel like we've got real good shooters and ballhandlers, and this is something we've been doing from time to time to take advantage of that," he said.

Hawkins led all scorers with 25 points, while Butler added 15 and Redd Hall 12. Hall led the Tors with 10 rebounds despite running into foul trouble.

Girls

Lamesa 62, Denver City 48

Coach Cary Simpson's Lady Tors, 14-5 overall and 7-2 in district play, remained in the race for a playoff berth by outscoring the Fillies 39-23 in the second half.

Lamesa leads third-place Lubbock Cooper by one game with five remaining. Slaton remains undefeated in district play.

Mustangs fall two games back

From Staff Reports

PECOS — The Andrews Mustangs' hopes of pulling even with district leader Pecos fell short Tuesday night with a 57-50 loss to the Eagles.

Pecos was paced by Tommy Cobos, the team's point guard who led all scorers with 25 points. Cobos made four from three-point distance to help his scoring effort.

Andrews hung tight thanks to senior post Ara Baten who had 22. Baten, though, was the only Mustang to make it into double figures against the Eagles. The Mustangs were down by six, 48-42, with just six minutes left in the game before Pecos pulled away.

The loss drops Andrews to 5-2 in district; Pecos retains its perfect mark at 7-0.

Lakers again showing signs of brilliance

NBA Roundup

Associated Press

The Los Angeles Lakers formulated a simple game plan: Stop Patrick Ewing and make the rest of the New York Knicks pick up the slack.

It worked to perfection Tuesday night. Ewing, averaging 27.6 points, was held to 12 on 4-of-16 shooting as the Lakers dealt the Knicks their fourth consecutive loss, 118-97.

"If he starts dominating, you're in trouble," said Magic Johnson, who had 10 of his 13 assists as the Lakers opened an 18-point lead in the first half. "He did what he is supposed to do. He kicked the ball out, but the other guys didn't hit their shots."

New York shot 43.8 percent to 58.3 by Los Angeles. In the first quarter, the Lakers opened a 30-16 lead by making 60 percent to the Knicks' 33 percent.

"It seemed like there were five guys around me at all times," Ewing said. "I felt like I was in college again with the zone defense."

"We had total vision on Patrick," said Byron Scott, who scored 15 of his 19 points in the first half. "We swarmed him."

Johnson said the Knicks "are better than they showed us, but they ran into a team that played well on both ends of the court."

Knicks coach Stu Jackson berated his players.

"Obviously, we got beat by a much better basketball team," Jackson said. "Our effort and execution, both offensively and defensively, I would term as high-schoolish."

The Lakers now have the best record at home (18-1) and on the road (11-8) in the NBA. New York is now 17-2 at Madison Square Garden.

James Worthy added 18 points for Los Angeles, while Rod Strickland had 16 and Charles Oakley 15 for the Knicks.

Suns 118, Heat 99

Phoenix tied a club record with its ninth straight victory behind 32 points by Tom Chambers.

The Suns, 11-1 this month, also won nine straight in 1972, 1979 and last season. They will attempt to break the record Thursday night at Charlotte.

Kevin Johnson added 21 points for the Suns. Miami, led by Tellis Frank with 17 points, has lost three in a row.

Pistons 107, Bulls 95

Chicago's team-record home winning streak ended at 15 games with Isiah Thomas and Vinnie Johnson combining for 17 fourth-quarter points to lead Detroit. Thomas finished with 26 points and Johnson 10.

Leading 80-79 with 8:54 left, the Pistons outscored the Bulls 15-6, with Thomas scoring nine straight points. The victory was Detroit's 10th in 13 games.

76ers 103, Cavaliers 88

Charles Barkley had 32 points and 15 rebounds to lead Philadelphia to its fifth straight victory and deny Cleveland coach Lenny Wilkens his 700th NBA victory.

Barkley, who reached double figures in scoring and rebounding for the seventh time in eight games, had 14 points in the third quarter, including all seven during a 7-2 flurry that put the 76ers ahead 72-55 midway through the period.

Hawks 106, Hornets 101

Atlanta got 29 points and 16 rebounds from Moses Malone to break a six-game losing streak. Malone made six free throws in the last 1:19 and 13 of 14 in the game as the Hawks won on the road for the first time in eight games.

Jazz 102, Rockets 94

Karl Malone had 37 points and 18 rebounds, leading Utah to its seventh straight victory. Mark Eaton added 14 points and 15 rebounds, both season highs, for Utah.

Trail Blazers 119, Bucks 90

Jerome Kersey and Terry Porter scored 19 points apiece as Portland stopped Milwaukee's four-game winning streak.

Warriors 109, Timberwolves 102

Mitch Richmond scored 27 points and Chris Mullin 26 as Golden State extended Minnesota's losing streak to seven games.

Tarpley makes early return from suspension

Associated Press

DALLAS — Forward Roy Tarpley, reinstated to the Dallas Mavericks after his suspension for violating terms of his substance abuse after-care program is playing again sooner than expected — with his coach's blessing.

Tarpley came off the bench in the fourth period Tuesday night against the Washington Bullets, scoring 11 points in 12 minutes before the Mavericks won 129-105.

"The game dictated giving him the opportunity to relax and do it, rather than having to go in on a 4-point game under a lot of pressure," said Mavericks coach Richie Adubato. "So we were very lucky tonight.

"Roy is going to have to be accepted by our team and to earn a lot of his playing time."

Tarpley, who had not been expected to play until Friday, said it felt good to be back on court.

"I felt it was okay, you know. It was a mixed reception but it felt good," he said after the game. "I expected that and I'm glad it's over with now. So hopefully it will get a little better Friday."

That's when Tarpley, who was reinstated following a strict drug after-care program, is expected to play against the Sacramento Kings.

"We are going to trust him but it really won't be the same as the last couple of times, where we really honestly believed that he would never have a problem again," said center James Donaldson.

Tarpley, who was left alone throughout his latest suspension on orders of Mavericks owner Donald Carter, made the recovery on his own, said Dr. David Lewis of the ASAP Family Treatment Center in Van Nuys, Calif.

"Mr. Carter was taking a 'tough-love' approach," said Lewis, who lifted the suspension Monday. "A person who's an alcoholic or an addict needs to take responsibility for the recovery.

"That's one of the things I saw Roy doing for the last two weeks, for sure. He was enthusiastic, focused on his own recovery."

When asked what was the toughest part of returning from a 34-game absence, he quipped, "Akeem," referring to Houston Rockets All-Star center Akeem Olajuwon. But he said he wasn't worried about starting for the team.

"We can't be married to the guy, emotionally, anymore," team captain Rolando Blackman said. "I don't know if he can handle himself, at this point. We thought that before, and he couldn't."

It's not same Texas say economists

By JOHN A. BOLT
AP Business Writer

ADDISON, Texas (AP) — A bright economic future awaits Texas, if business will just get on with it, says a business consultant who complains that too many executives have a hankering for the past.

"It distresses me over and over to hear bankers, S&L executives say something like, 'man when are we going to get back to the days like it used to be?'" consultant William R. Carden said Tuesday.

"My answer to every one of them is, 'Never!'" Carden said during an economic outlook conference. "The thing that's holding many Texas businesses back is the old slogans, the old cliches, the old beliefs and the old ideas that held sway before."

Until the oil price-induced collapse of the mid- and late 1980s, the Texas economy grew rapidly based on easy money and confidence, Carden and other analysts said; business was done with a handshake and a pat on the back.

It's a new day, Carden said, as what has long been common practice elsewhere arrives in Texas.

"The age of banks in Texas acting as venture capitalists for the state is over," Carden said. "Those days, like Tara, are gone with the wind."

"It's going to be painful for Texas banking and for commercial interests in Texas banking to go through this transition, but historically banks in other states, other than a few frontier states like Texas, have not played that role," Carden said.

"A lot of small business people in Texas are screaming and crying — we've got a lot of bankruptcies, a lot of disruption — because we're in this era of transition until a true venture capital network does emerge."

Economist Ray Perryman said old banking laws, which prohibited branches, resulted in thousands of small banks where loans were granted as much on good will as on good credit.

Money was loaned based on nothing more than a financial statement and sometimes less, Perryman said. "Just give the boy the money," was a common theme, he said.

"These days," Carden said, "they not only want a financial statement, they want cash flow statement, they want sources and uses statements and they talk to you about primary and secondary sources of repayment.

"Businessman after businessman I've heard scream bloody murder saying, 'What is this all about? I used to come in and give you my financial statement, sign a note and that was it.'

"Those days are over," Carden said.

"Banking in Texas had forgotten one of the basics of the industry," Carden said. Bankers quit asking "when are you going to pay it back and how are you going to pay it back?" he said.

Despite the shortage of capital, Carden said Texas's economy can regain robustness.

"The '90s are a new decade. They have the potential of being a Golden Decade for Texas again because the people and the resources and the climate that made this state what it was in the '40s, the '50s, the '60s and the '70s are still here.

"But we're never ever going to realize that Golden Decade if we try to do it ... with the old ideas and the old cliches," he said.

"What the state needs now more than anything else is men and women of moral courage: courage to believe in themselves, courage to believe in this state, courage ot believe in the power of ideas, to believe in the new capital of information, to take risks with new kinds of technology, to create, not a replica of an age that disappeared, but to create a new golden age that will far surpass anything that we ever had before."

Western states lead in personal income

WASHINGTON (AP) — Western states led the nation in the growth of non-farm personal income during the year ending last Sept. 30, the Commerce Department reported today.

The Plains States posted the largest increase, up 9.2 percent, followed by the Far West with a 9.1 percent gain and the Rocky Mountain region with an 8.7 percent advance.

Personal income in the remainder of the country trailed the national average of 8.5 percent growth, according to the report by the department's Bureau of Economic Analysis.

NATION

South Carolina, where Hurricane Hugo hit hardest last September, was the only state with a decline in personal income over the last year, it said. It posted a 0.9 percent drop.

But, the report added, if the effects of the damage caused by the hurricane were excluded, personal income would have increased 9.4 percent in the state.

Hugo had an adverse effect on peronal income throughout the Southeast, slowing growth in the region to an 8.3 percent increase.

Other regions trailing the national average were the Mid-Atlantic, up 7.4 percent; New England and the Southwest, up 8.2 percent; and the Great Lakes, up 8.1 percent.

States with the fastest growth in personal income were: North Dakota, 16.9 percent; Alaska, 15.3 percent; South Dakota, 13.4 percent; Nevada, 13.3 percent; Washington State and Hawaii, 11.1 percent each; Utah, 10.6 percent; and Minnesota, Florida and Iowa, 10.3 percent each.

States with the slowest growth, in addition to South Carolina, were: Wyoming, 5.4 percent; West Virginia, 6 percent; Oklahoma, 6.8 percent; Arkansas, 6.9 percent; Michigan, 7.2 percent; Louisiana, 7.3 percent; Nebraska, 7.4 percent; Kansas, 7.5 percent, and Ohio, 7.6 percent.

The Commerce Department focuses on changes in non-farm income as better indication of a region's prosperity because of the often erratic nature of farm income.

THRIFT BAILOUT

Administration doubts $50 million is enough

Robson

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior Bush administration official is casting new doubt on whether the $50 billion savings and loan bailout enacted last August will be adequate.

"I can't tell you with certainty that the $50 billion is going to be enough" to handle failed S&Ls over the next 2½ years, said Deputy Treasury Secretary John E. Robson, the department's No. 2 official.

Robson's testimony to the House Banking Committee marked a subtle shift in the administration position. Although officials previously acknowledged the $50 billion could fall short, they had always maintained they knew of no reason why their estimate would prove wrong.

Resolution Trust Corp. officials, including Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. Chairman L. William Seidman, were scheduled to testify today.

On Tuesday, Robson said Treasury's Office of Thrift Supervision is compiling a new "watch list" of weak S&Ls which "may indicate resolution costs beyond the original estimates."

The Resolution Trust Corp., the new agency created to handle failed thrifts, had taken over 342 institutions by the end of last week. It had said it was expecting another 200 S&Ls from the thrift office. Robson acknowledged the new watch list, due to be completed early next month, likely would be bigger.

Robson was representing an administration oversight board which controls the purse strings and policy of the bailout. Also appearing were oversight board members Alan Greenspan, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, and Jack Kemp, secretary of housing.

In other S&L developments:

—The House committee subpoenaed financier Michael Milken to testify in its investigation of the role of junk bonds in the collapse of Charles H. Keating Jr.'s Lincoln Savings and Loan Association of Irvine, Calif., and other thrifts. A spokesman for Milken declined comment.

The former junk bond trading chief for Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. is expected to stand trial later this year on securities fraud charges. In April 1988, he invoked his constitutional protection against self-incrimination to avoid testifying to Congress.

Also subpoenaed were Ernest Garcia and Fernando Acosta, Arizona businessmen involved in land deals with Lincoln.

—The government sold $5 billion in 40-year bonds to finance its bailout of the savings and loan industry, the first time in 35 years it has sold paper of more than 30 years' maturity. The bonds, issued by the Resolution Funding Corp., sold at an average yield of 8.6 percent.

Supply rise sends oil prices down

From Staff and Wire Reports

Crude oil futures declined again this morning, dropping 21 cents from Tuesday's close to rest at $21.39 per barrel for March contracts.

On Tuesday, expectations of a buildup in petroleum supplies in the nation's storage tanks sent oil futures prices tumbling on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Analysts said investors sold energy contracts ahead of the American Petroleum Institute's weekly inventory report, which was released after the close of trading.

The report showed, as investors expected, increases in heating oil and gasoline stocks. Crude oil supplies declined.

In trading on the New York Merc, the March contract for West Texas Intermediate, the main grade of U.S. crude oil, fell 17 cents to $21.60 per 42-gallon barrel. The April crude oil contract declined 13 cents to $21.02 and May lost 12 cents to $20.63.

Among refined products, heating oil for February delivery fell 1.71 cents to 59.28 cents a gallon, March declined 0.93 cent to 57.07 cents and April ended 0.32 cent lower at 55.18 cents a gallon.

Wholesale unleaded gasoline for February delivery dropped 1.02 cents to 59.62 cents a gallon, while March lost 0.74 cent to 60.58 cents and April slipped 0.43 cent to 61.51 cents a gallon.

Analysts said imports and continued strong refinery output in the face of weakening demand contributed to the buildup in energy inventories.

"Looks like a lack of demand for heating oil because of the warmer weather," said Tom Bentz, director of futures trading for United Energy Inc. "On crude, it's imports and refinery runs."

According to the API, a trade association representing mainly large oil refiners, gasoline stocks rose 4.6 million barrels in the week ended Jan. 19 to 219.5 million barrels; heating oil stocks rose 3.4 million barrels to 111.8 million; and crude oil declined 1 million barrels to 344 million.

Most of the decrease in crude oil was from one geographic area, while inventories in other regions rose, analysts said.

Dollar falls in slow trading

LONDON (AP) — The dollar fell in early European trading today. Gold prices rose.

Foreign currency dealers said the volatility of the past few days may have come to an end and, barring any political developments in the Soviet Union, they expected little movement for the rest of the session.

In London, the dollar fell against the British pound. It cost $1.6583 to buy one pound, compared with $1.6480 late Tuesday.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $414.10 a troy ounce, up from $413.00 bid late Tuesday. At midmorning, the city's major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $413.75.

In Zurich, the bid price was $413.50, up from $408.50 bid late Tuesday.

Stocks plunge 61 points in first half hour of trading

NEW YORK (AP) — A new wave of selling swept throught the stock market today, extending Wall Street's early-1990 slide as worries mounted about rising interest rates and pressure on the Japanese market.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 194.83 points over the past three weeks, fell another 61.49 to 2,553.83 in the first half hour of trading.

Losers overwhelmed gainers by about 16 to 1 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 68 up, 1,087 down and 224 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 39.25 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Traders learned overnight of a sharp decline in the Tokyo stock market, which has been unsettled lately by rising interest rates in Japan.

Analysts said that intensified fears that rates would have to climb further in this country to stay competitive in the international marketplace.

A sale by the government Tuesday of 40-year bonds to finance a rescue plan for troubled thrift institutions drew a very chilly reception from investors.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Federal deficit increases $14.6 billion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal budget deficit increased $14.64 billion in December, putting the deficit so far this fiscal year at more than two-thirds permitted for the entire year, the government said.

Combined with the $55.05 billion deficit for October and November, the imbalance at the end of December totaled $69.69 billion, compared to $67.58 billion at the same point in fiscal 1989, the Treasury Department said Tuesday.

Regulators suspend Miami bank's trading

MIAMI (AP) — Federal regulators have suspended trading of CenTrust Savings Bank stock and charged the thrift with manipulating fiscal reports to conceal its precarious finances and massive junk-bond holdings.

The week-long stock trading block against Miami-based CenTrust, implemented Tuesday, is the first such action by banking officials since 1983 and unleashed speculation the thrift could be the first to sink under the burden of volatile, high-risk junk bonds.

House Banking board summons Milken

WASHINGTON (AP) — Billionaire financier Michael Milken was subpoenaed by a congressional committee investigating the role of high-risk junk bonds in thrift institution losses.

The House Banking Committee on Tuesday voted 31-1 to summon Milken and two men involved in land deals with Charles H. Keating Jr.'s Lincoln Savings and Loan Association of Irvine, Calif.

California may export oil to Japan, Pacific Rim

N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — A federal task force led by the Commerce Department is endorsing a proposal to allow independent oil producers to export California crude oil to Japan and other Pacific Rim nations.

At present, such action is discouraged by federal regulations.

The independents — producers of crude who have no refining and retailing operations of their own — have been lobbying for the change since the oil-price crash of 1986.

The task force's proposal is surprising, coming at a time when oil imports are rising and U.S. crude production is declining at record speed — themes that many in the oil industry have stressed in public statements.

The task force report, sent to Congress last week, is being hotly challenged by independent refiners and is likely to be scrutinized closely by maritime interests and some consumer groups.

It states: "There appears to be an abundant supply of California heavy crude oil — much of it in excess of the existing capacity of the refineries to upgrade and convert into the needed transportation markets. ... Pacific Rim countries which are always seeking new sources of supply, would likely welcome a certain amount of California heavy crude if prices are favorable."

The task force includes representatives not only from Commerce, but also from the U.S. Energy, Interior, Transportation and Treasury departments.

The American Independent Refiners Association contends it would be "unwise to export a strategic commodity like oil when it's being heavily imported."

Nearly half the oil consumed in the United States is imported, and this jeopardizes national interests, said the association's president, Tom Temple.

California crude-oil supplies are the lifeblood of the state's independent-refining business, he added. Exporting crude, he claimed, would lessen his group's ability to compete with the integrated producers.

Exports should be limited to 15,000 barrels per day in the first year, 20,000 in the second year and 25,000 in the third, the task force suggested.

This would amount to only about 1 percent to 2 percent of the state's current refined-product consumption and would not "pose problems in terms of meeting national energy requirements," the report said.

It added that the exports could be made either in exchange for an equal amount of imported crude products — a practice permitted by existing regulations — or without such an exchange.

TEXAS

Perryman predicts that if the price of oil averages between $17 and $21 per 42-gallon barrel, employment will grow 2.1 percent and personal income will rise 7.9 percent in the next two years as the gross state product — the value of goods and services — rises 3.1 percent after adjustments for inflation. Those levels are about the current rates, he said.

Growth would be greater, Perryman said, if oil maintains a price between $21 and $24 per barrel. Since the first of the year, the price of West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark U.S. grade, has fluctuated between $21.62 and $23.68.

SPACE

Contractors will develop 17,000 mph space plane

N.Y. Times News Service

Rather than compete individually, four of the nation's biggest defense contractors say that they will jointly develop the prototype for the National Aero-Space Plane.

The aircraft is designed to fly 25 times the speed of sound and has been in the planning stage since 1985. The experimental plane would be able to take off from an ordinary runway and fly directly into orbit.

If the government approves the design, a prototype is scheduled to be built and flown in 1997.

The contractors are General Dynamics Corp., McDonnell Douglas Corp., the Rocketdyne and North American Aircraft divisions of Rockwell International Corp., and the Pratt & Whitney division of United Technologies.

"We are putting together good technology ... and (it) will increase our efficiency given the constrained operating budget we're working with," Barry Waldman, a 26-year Rockwell veteran who was named program director of the development team, said Tuesday.

Waldman said the team will set up an office for the program, probably in Palmdale, Calif.

Together, government and industry have invested about $1.6 billion in the program since 1985, an Air Force spokeswoman said. The program has been a target of federal budget cutters and the decision on whether to build it was delayed from the fall of 1990 to 1993.

The program's cost is now estimated at about $5 billion.

The companies have submitted a team agreement to the government for approval. Fred Heinemann, marketing manager for Rockwell's Rockedyne division, said the agreement could be approved this week.

But JoAnne Rumple, an Air Force spokeswoman at Wright Patterson Air Force Base in Ohio, said it will "take us a few weeks" to evaluate the proposal.

"We are enthusiastic about the idea of teaming," she said, adding that the Air Force was planning to ask the contractors to work jointly on the program.

"We were going to ask the contractors to do what they did on their own," she said.

The contracting team's proposal must meet the Air Force's program requirements and acquisition policies, she said.

The agreement will help reduce technical risks of the program, according to Bob Budica, engineering programs vice president at Marquardt Co. in the Los Angeles suburb of Van Nuys, which has constructed engines and engine test equipment for the NASP.

By 1991, the companies are scheduled to submit a design for the plane for approval. If approved by Air Force and NASA, the plane would go for a flight test in 1997 and go for a flight into orbit for 1999. Two experimental planes are to be developed as part of the program.

Commercial jets fly at about 500 miles per hour. The NASP will have a top speed of 17,000 miles per hour.

In the past, the companies have worked together on researching and testing different materials to use in the plane's construction, Rumple said.

Waldman said he expected the program office to consist of about 100 people working on the plane. But the design work for the plane will continue to be conducted at each company's individual facilities.

Stock Market Loses

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market suffered another broad setback today, extending Wall Street's early-1990 slide as worries mounted about rising interest rates and pressure on the Japanese market.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 194.83 points over the past three weeks, fell another 43.92 to 2,571.40 by noon on Wall Street.

Losers overwhelmed gainers by about 12 to 1 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 129 up, 1,420 down and 265 unchanged.

Traders learned overnight of a sharp decline in the Tokyo stock market, which has been unsettled lately by rising interest rates in Japan.

Analysts said that intensified fears that rates would have to climb further in this country to stay competitive in the international marketplace.

A sale by the government Tuesday of 40-year bonds to finance a rescue plan for troubled thrift institutions drew a very chilly reception from investors.

As the outlook for interest rates has worsened, investors have begun to face the possibility that the recent slowdown of the economy might deepen in the months ahead.

Brokers also said a weak attempt by stocks to rally on Tuesday left many traders unimpressed and disheartened.

Annual event benefits children's programs

By LINDA ANDERSON
Lifestyle Writer

A simulation of the South's most famous celebration began a little early this year, as the Junior Woman's Association's 20th annual benefit luncheon and style show, themed "Mardi Gras," was presented 11 a.m. Tuesday at the Holiday Inn Convention Center. Decorations were brightly-colored masks and balloons, glitter and streamers, and guests were seated by members of Junior Woman's Association, who were dressed in costume, Mardi Gras-style.

About 450 Midlanders enjoyed the luncheon, which included smothered chicken breasts, vegetable medley and filled pastry, and viewed the runway modeling of the spring collection of Ungaro Ter, courtesy of Julian Gold. The clothing featured such bright solid colors as green, fushia and yellow, as well as floral prints, stripes and checks, and included body-hugging dresses, separates and slacks. Lots and lots of short skirts — about 2- to 3-inches above the knee — dominated the runway.

Funds raised from the event will benefit the Midland Memorial Hospital Pediatric Equipment Fund and The Clinic of the Community Children's Ministry.

Marcie Carter, chairman of the fund-raiser, said the proceeds donated to MMH's pediatric unit will be used for a new call system from the children's beds to the nurses' station.

According to Kay Baker, arrangements chairman, "Most of the money (raised for the children's clinic) will be used to buy medicine."

The women said last year's benefit raised about $22,000, and this year's was expected to bring in about $27,000.

Teresa Deso, a registered nurse and volunteer for the children's clinic, said the clinic, which was organized by a group of women who saw the need in the community, treats children of low-income families who can't afford to see private physicians. The clinic accepts patients from infancy through 14 years of age.

This pants outfit with fushia jacket and print blouse was a crowd-pleaser at the Junior Woman's Association's 20th annual luncheon and style show.

Funds raised by last year's luncheon and style show "helped pay a pharmacy bill that was over $9,000," Ms. Deso said. Most of the medicine prescribed at the clinic are antibotics, she added.

"Last year we saw over 3,000 children and filled over 5,000 prescriptions."

Laurie Johnson of MMH said, "The hospital is very grateful for all the money the Junior Woman's Association has donated through the years." The organization, she said, has provided "a total of $75,000 donated to the pediatric unit."

Special benefactor for the event was First City, Texas. King's Court sponsors were Mrs. Earle M. Craig Jr., NCNB Texas and Mrs. James W. Walton; Queen's Parlor members were Mrs. Leonard Busby, Mrs. John L. Cox, Mrs. William D. Kleine, J. McShane Inc. and Posey Pipe and Equipment; and Princess Garden members were Atwell and Associates, Mr. and Mrs. George Barton, Mrs. William Black, ClayDesta National Bank, Mrs. Kelly Cox, Mrs. Robert Fitting, Kerr-Fitzgerald-Kerr, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Mabee, Frances Metcaffe, Mrs. Bruce Pearson, Permian Basin Bnai Brith Youth Organization, Mrs. William G. Ross, Mrs. Jack Samples, Sloan Brothers, Buick-Mazda-Daihatsu, Staley Oil and Gas, and Walkie-Talkies.

Special contributors were The Phoenix at the Houstonian, Randy's Fine Jewelry and Sam Hollis Photography.

Chairmen for the event were Mrs. Glen Carter, chairman; Mrs. Stephen Floyd, assistant chairman/sponsors; Bonnie Lawson, reservations; Mrs. Marvin Baker, arrangements; Mrs. Joe McShane, publicity; Mrs. Jerry Hamilton, invitations; Mrs. James Henderson and Mrs. Carter, decorations; Mrs. Joe Sloan, door prizes, and Mrs. Robin Smith, mailing.

Officers of the club are Mrs. Tommy Thompson, president; Mrs. Floyd, first vice president; Mrs. Baker, second vice president; Mrs. Smith, recording secretary; Mrs. Henderson, corresponding secretary; and Mrs. Dan O'Neill, treasurer.

DEAR ABBY

Woman pleads to get sister's license revoked

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: How do you tell an older member of the family that it's time for her to quit driving? My 78-year-old sister has no business driving. Her hearing and eyesight are not what they used to be, and neither are her reflexes. She should not drive in heavy traffic or on busy expressways.

She terrifies her passengers as she runs red lights, drives over curbs and makes left-hand turns from right-hand lanes. If anyone criticizes her driving, she says, "I've never had an accident in my life!" (She's lucky. Also, when the other drivers see the way she's driving, they get out of her way.)

Would it be better if I told her flat-out to quit driving and let her be mad at me? She may not speak to me again, but wouldn't that be better than letting her kill somebody — or herself? — HER KID SISTER

DEAR KID SISTER: Contact your Department of Motor Vehicles and tell someone there what you have told me.

Include your sister's full name and her license number, and suggest that she be retested. I am assured by the Los Angeles Police Department that the DMV will do the rest.

If your sister flunks her next driving test, some lives may be saved — including her own.

DEAR ABBY: I was shopping in the city (I live in a suburb), and just as I was coming out of a large department store, a nice-looking, middle-aged man approached me and said politely, "You are such an attractive young woman — would you mind if I took your picture?" (I then noticed a small camera in his hand.)

I was alone and rather startled by this question, but I must admit I was rather pleased by the compliment, so I smiled and said, "All right — go ahead."

He took my picture, then whipped out a pencil and piece of paper and asked, "Where shall I send it?"

Without thinking, I gave him my name and address, then hurriedly went about my business. This happened three weeks ago, and I haven't heard from him. When I tell this to friends, some say the man was using the "May I take your picture" trick as a way to meet me.

Now I am wondering if I was foolish to have given him my name and address. — FOOLISH OR NOT

DEAR FOOLISH: He may have been harmless and sincere, but on the chance that he wasn't, you'd have been wise to have said, "Thank you very much" and kept walking.

DEAR ABBY: I have a co-worker who drinks on the job. She thinks no one knows, yet the smell is overwhelming at times. Other co-workers have made comments to me. My response has been a rather non-committal shrug of the shoulders.

Now, upper-management has confronted me, asking if I have witnessed her drinking or seen any actual bottles, which I have not. They are watching her. Meanwhile, she thinks she's getting away with something.

I would like to see her get help — not fired. — KEEPING MUM

DEAR KEEPING MUM: If ever a person needed a friend, your drinking co-worker does. Be that friend and tip her off. Also suggest that she attend just one meeting of Alcoholics Anonymous. You may be saving not only her job, but her life.

DEAR ABBY: In regards to "Teacher in Laramie" and the pain of unjust punishment meted out by teachers, I had a problem in high school when my dad was building a garage during hunting season. He needed my help in bricklaying and I asked to be excused from two classes in order to help him.

I received an "F" for that day in each class while other students received a passing grade when they went hunting with their dads to kill deer or whatever.

I always felt cheated for being punished for doing something constructive while others were excused to be destructive.

Thanks for letting me get this off my chest, Abby. It's been 20 years and I'm still resentful. — JIMMY IN PORTLAND

DEAR JIMMY: For some reason, the hurts suffered in high school stay with us all our lives. It's not healthy to harbor such negative thoughts. But it's human.

Cereal makers dispute study

Associated Press

With more than $75 million in advertising on the line, two of the country's largest cereal makers have challenged a new study that claims oat bran doesn't lower cholesterol levels, and the companies said they would continue promoting the fiber in their products.

"There is no reason to change the marketing of our products," said Steve Garthwaite, senior vice president for research and development at General Mills Inc., a Minneapolis-based food products company. "One study doesn't refute the 50 previous tests that show oat bran is indeed beneficial."

Scientists at Chicago-based Quaker Oats Co. agreed. "There is a clear cholesterol-lowering effect when you use oatmeal or oat bran," Fred Shinnick, a company research scientist, told The Associated Press.

Whether oat bran does reduce cholesterol is a question of great financial importance to companies such as Quaker Oats and General Mills.

Quaker Oats is spending $35 million on an advertising campaign to promote its new cold Oat Bran cereal. The campaign answers Kellogg's $40 million launch of Heartwise, another oat bran cereal.

And General Mills is reportedly ready to spend $32 million advertising Benefit, its new oat bran cereal now in test markets.

In part, the cereal makers are basing their ad campaigns on some 50-plus studies released during the past 25 years that concluded oat bran is beneficial for people with high cholesterol levels.

Survey finds nursing home abuse goes unreported

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government survey of health experts and advocates for the elderly shows near-unanimous agreement that physical and emotional abuse is a problem in America's nursing homes and widespread concern that mistreatment often goes unreported.

For each of seven types of abuse, more individuals thought the situation was worsening than believed it was improving, according to two draft government reports obtained Tuesday.

"While there are no exact statistics on institutional abuse, any abuse is unacceptable," the reports said.

The costs of abuse "are measured in the physical and psychological damage incurred by the resident as well as by the economic costs of treating the abused resident," they said.

Both reports from the inspector general's office of the Department of Health and Human Services were based on a survey of 228 people in 35 states who work in state and federal government, nursing homes and advocacy groups. The reports are in draft form and subject to revision.

No state-by-state breakdown was available.

The reports conclude abuse-reporting systems are inadequate, follow-up on complaints is ineffective and state and federal oversight to prevent abuse needs strengthening.

The reports also recommend the federal government require better training for nurses aides about aging, suggest ways to cope with stressful situations and promote more research and education on how to improve staff stability in nursing homes and control abuse.

Medical personnel, other patients, families and visitors all contribute to the problem, but nursing home aides and orderlies are the biggest abusers, according to the reports.

The reports said many things contribute to abuse by nursing home workers, including low staffing levels, high stress, inadequate training, high turnover, job frustration, belligerent patients, low wages, lack of empathy for the elderly and increasing numbers of severely ill residents.

"Faced with heavier levels of care, such as residents with more debilitating diseases, frustrated staff take out their stress on the residents," said one unidentified official who participated in the survey.

The report divides abuse into seven categories: physical abuse, misuse of restraints, verbal or emotional abuse, physical neglect, medical neglect, verbal or emotional neglect and improper use of a resident's personal property.

Ninety-five percent of those surveyed said there were problems in all seven areas. Thirty percent said physical neglect was the most prevalent problem; 16 percent said verbal and emotional abuse, and 14 percent selected verbal and emotional neglect.

The reports said most research on abuse of the elderly focuses on family members and caregivers at home, and suggests 1 percent to 10 percent of the non-institutionalized elderly may be abused.

Although there is less information about abuse in nursing homes, one 1988 study found 36 percent of surveyed nurses and nurses aides had seen at least one incident of physical abuse in the preceding year and 10 percent said they themselves had committed one or more physically abusive acts.

The HHS survey found nursing home industry officials often view the abuse problem as minor, but a significant number of state oversight agencies and advocates for nursing home residents see the problem as serious.

Fifty-one percent of those interviewed believed abuse is only sometimes or rarely reported by nursing home staff, suggesting many cases go unreported each year, the reports said.

The reports said workers may not report abuse because they fear for their jobs, are loyal to other staff members, fear retaliation, fines, penalties and bad publicity, lack sufficient facts, and don't recognize less blatant forms of abuse.

The survey also found doctors often fail to report abuse, with 66 percent of those interviewed reporting physicians who attend to patients at nursing homes rarely or never report it.

NATION IN BRIEF

Junk dealer pledges cooperation in search

ENTERPRISE, Ala. (AP) — FBI agents dug up two septic tanks and questioned a salvage store owner in their probe of the mail-bomb slayings of a federal judge and a black civil-rights attorney.

But they declined again Tuesday to say whether Robert Wayne O'Ferrell might be blamed in the bombings.

"I would not comment that he is a suspect, only that he is one of a number of people we have interviewed," FBI Special Agent Chuck Archer said.

O'Ferrell's father, J.C. O'Ferrell, said the FBI had questioned him about the activities of another son, 49-year-old James "Buddy" O'Ferrell, an independent trucker who lives in McKenzie, 80 miles west of Enterprise.

"They were trying to say my two sons had something to do with that bombing up in Birmingham," J.C. O'Ferrell said. "They asked had I ever heard either one talk bad about colored folks, or if my sons ever made threats on any judges. I said, 'No, my children weren't raised that way.'"

The father said the agents fingerprinted him and took blood and hair samples from his farm in southwest Alabama.

FBI agents ate lunch with Robert Wayne O'Ferrell and spent much of Tuesday talking to him, but he has not been charged.

"I don't have anything to hide," he said. "When it's all over with, I'll be glad to get with the media and go into details."

Secord gets 2 years probation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Iran-Contra figure Richard Secord today was sentenced to two years' probation for concealing from congressional investigators the fact that he paid for a $13,800 security system at Oliver North's home.

Secord, enlisted by North to arm the Nicaraguan rebels and assist the Reagan administration's secret arms shipments to Iran, has already suffered enough in the scandal, said U.S. District Court Judge Aubrey Robinson.

"It is my judgment that there has been punishment in this case," Robinson told the retired Air Force major general.

Secord's lawyer, Thomas Green, told the judge that his client's life has been "in tatters" since October 1985 when one of the airplanes in North's aid network was shot down over Nicaragua while carrying supplies for the rebels.

The shootdown, which took place in the last days of a congressional ban on military aid to the Contras, led to the exposure of the secret resupply network overseen by North, a National Security Council aide, from his offices in the Old Executive Office Building next to the White House.

Iran-Contra prosecutor Reid Weingarten contended that Secord should be treated more harshly than North and former national security adviser Robert McFarlane, who also were sentenced to probation in the affair.

"I deeply regret not being more candid" with congressional investigators about the 'Enterprise' and North, Secord told the judge. "If I could correct this I certainly would. I will regret it for the rest of my life."

Body exhumed to lift 'curse'

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — A pre-school teacher's body was exhumed and photographs of her Hmong pupils were removed from the casket to help lift the curse that the youngsters' parents believed the children were under.

The grave of Headstart teacher Charlotte Bell, 61, was opened Tuesday at the urging of several of the parents, who are from the mountains of Laos in Southeast Asia.

Buying a beloved picture "is an honor to a lot of people" but a "disgrace and dishonor to the Hmong," said Angela Mann, director of the local Headstart program.

"The parents felt their children were cursed. They would have bad luck for the rest of their lives. I didn't want that on my head."

Bell had been hospitalized in December for pneumonia. She received a get-well card made by a colleague, Mann said. Shaped like a Christmas tree, the card included photos of her 36 students, more than 20 of them Hmong.

Bell died of a stroke Jan. 1, and her family tucked the card in the casket before the burial at Crystal Lake Cemetery in Minneapolis.

Hmong parents learned the pictures had been buried and demanded them back. Burying the pictures separated the children from their spirits, exposing them to bad luck, illness and early death, they said.

Sixteen children were kept home by their parents unless they were reunited with their spirits, Mann said.

From van, men publish magazine

NEW YORK (AP) — James Crotty and Michael Lane don't wait to return home to spin tales of their latest travels. In fact, they don't return home at all.

Crotty, Lane and their two cats have been on the road for four years and 85,000 miles publishing a totally mobile magazine: Monk.

They eat, sleep, travel and work in a 26-foot 1986 Fleetwood motorhome. A solar-powered Macintosh computer is mounted on the dashboard; ads are sold by Lane, 39, and Crotty, 30, from phone booths. A mailing address described as a "suite" is actually a 5-inch by 10-inch postage box in Santa Fe, N.M.

What started as a newsletter has turned into a magazine with a circulation of about 30,000 and a cover price of $2.95 ($3.75 abroad).

"Monk is about life on the road. In each issue we describe the latest segment of our travels and encounters with the lucky victims of our latest pit stop. Everyone from dogs to dancers, vision queens to country singers and occasionally, even real live monks," the two Monks wrote in their seventh issue, July 28. "We are a gentle tickle in the side of the earnest seeker, the frazzled housewife and the corporate climber, though we can also be quite useful. In fact, thousands of readers use our quarterly rag to teach dogs how to fetch."

Lyrical, philosophical, kind of zany — that's the kind of thing readers expect from Monk and its founder-editors, New Age hippies who held down a series of jobs in San Francisco before they answered the call of the open road.

"We represent a new style of spiritual nomad who is not bound by religious norms," they say, a kind of "traveling soap opera, flop house and nunnery all rolled into one."

Originally, they were fed up with rising rents. But Crotty said the Monks' odyssey was also a quest for simplicity in their lives and resulted from a "burning desire to create a lifestyle that was completely mobile."

"That's obviously a dream of a lot of people or mobile homes wouldn't be so popular. We were just a little more passionate about that than most."

The magazine describes their adventures, in a stream-of-consciousness, chatty, gonzo style. Occasionally, people they encounter contribute articles.

"It's like Charles Kuralt with Jack Kerouac and they pick up Laurel and Hardy hitchhiking and then go on an adventure," Crotty said.

Follow the Monks to New Mexico, where "it's high, it's clear, it's desert and it's peyote land." Follow them to the "scene of the crime" — White Sands Missile Range, where one of the first nuclear test blasts occurred on July 6, 1945.

Listen as the Monks expound on turbans, China Cola, the benefits of geese in weeding farms, how Arkansas got its name and "What You Won't Learn Through The Arkansas Department of Tourism."

The magazine's advertisements offer all-natural sunscreens, herbal toothpaste, the secret to instant memory, massage tables, Indian-style ceremonial drums and "The X-rated Bible."

With advertiser and reader support, the Monks break even. Eventually, Lane hopes to distribute Monk in Europe and to travel overseas. For now, they explore the United States, changing directions on a whim.

Last winter, they were in Minnesota and chose to go to Mardi Gras in New Orleans. But the van slid off an icy road, and about 30 residents of the tiny village of Calico Rock, Ark. to emerge with shovels. "We almost lost the van and ourselves," Lane said. "These people all came out and rescued us and helped us get started. It was touching.

"Being on the road you have to open up to all people. There're a lot of people traveling like us in vans but they would never have these chance encounters because they will just stick to certain tourist centers, or what's expected."

As a result, stereotypes crumble along the way. "In the South we thought they were going to be a bunch of bigoted racist rednecks, and though that exists, everyone you run into is really open-minded. Most people everywhere are incredibly friendly," Lane said.

"This is a simple journey that many people have carried out. We just got very complex about it," Crotty said. "We go to places that are unheralded or to places that you dare not go with a motor home, and Manhattan fits into the latter category. Absolutely no motor home magazine will recommend that you go to Manhattan."

There is a reason, of course. While in Manhattan, the van was parked in a garage. But that didn't prevent thieves from stealing a bicycle from the Monks, who were last reported more safely ensconced in North Bergen, N.J.
