Head of Korea to meet opposition

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — In a major turnaround, President Chun Doo-hwan agreed to meet with the opposition to try to end fierce anti-government protests, a top official said today.

The statement came as thousands of students clashed with riot police near college campuses in Seoul in the 13th day of large-scale protests. Scattered violence was reported elsewhere in the country, but most protests were peaceful.

Yonhap, the Korean news agency, reported that about 20,000 students took part in demonstrations at 58 universities throughout the country.

Roh Tae-woo, chairman of the governing Democratic Justice Party, said after a meeting with Chun that the president agreed to meet with Kim Young-sam, head of the Reunification Democratic Party. Chun also promised to consider the release of political detainees, Roh said.

He didn't say when the meeting would take place.

"I recommended it is desirable that the president meet political elders and opposition leaders to work out settlements," Roh told reporters.

Kim has said he would meet with Chun if all those detained since nationwide protests began June 10 are released. Police say more than 8,000 people have been arrested. Most have been freed or sentenced to brief terms, but at least 300 face trial on major charges.

Kim has also demanded freedom for fellow opposition leader Kim Dae-jung, who has been under house arrest in Seoul since April 8.

Students hurled firebombs and rocks at police in vicious street battles around at least four major Seoul colleges. Police fired volley after volley of tear gas.

About 2,500 students clashed with police in the central city of Chonju and stormed a police station. Hundreds of students clashed with police in the streets of the southern city of Kwangju and about 1,000 students briefly seized part of a highway on Cheju Island off the south coast.

Pusan, the country's second largest city and scene of some of the worst anti-government protests in recent days, was largely quiet.

In recent days, the opposition has demanded direct talks between Kim and Chun as a precondition to negotiations on calling off the protests that have swept the country since June 10.

That was the day the Democratic Justice Party nominated Roh as its presidential candidate, and the opposition began a drive to force direct elections.

Roh said nothing today about the key opposition demand that the government repeal its April 13 decision to suspend talks on political reform until after the 1988 Seoul Olympics. Chun contends the delay is necessary to safeguard national stability and the games.

Senators oppose oil import fee bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — A coalition of Northeast and Midwest senators is poised to try to block a possible new oil import fee they say would benefit oil-producing regions at the expense of such states as Pennsylvania and Ohio.

The Senate is expected to consider the oil provision this week as part of a trade bill. The provision would empower the president to take corrective action as he deems necessary if oil imports are projected to rise to 50 percent of U.S. consumption within three years.

One of the instruments at his disposal would be an import fee designed to curb the nation's appetite for foreign oil.

The size of the fee would vary according to the the degree to which imports needed to be reduced.

For example, it has been estimated that a $5 per barrel fee would be needed to reduce imports from 55 percent to 50 percent of U.S. consumption.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, is pushing the bill. A plunge in oil prices caused by a stepup in production by Saudi Arabia last year hammered the Texas economy and prompted calls from domestic producers for a fee on imports.

The prospect of an oil import fee sent Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., and other Northeast and Midwest lawmakers scrambling last week to come up with a way to defeat the idea. Their strategy hinges largely on figures suggesting that an import levy would directly benefit a small minority of states.

"You'll notice that producers' windfall would exceed consumers' burden in just 10 states," said a letter distributed around the Senate by Heinz and Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y.

"Five of the states — Alaska, Texas, Louisiana, Wyoming and Oklahoma — would account for 93 percent of the windfall," the letter said. It said the other states that would gain are Kansas, Montana, New Mexico, North Dakota and Utah.

Bentsen said last week that the measure was needed because the danger of a cutoff of Mideast oil made it critical to encourage exploration for domestic oil supplies.

But Heinz and Moynihan said the fee would drive up consumer costs and take a special toll on the Northeast and Midwest, which produce only 2.6 percent of the nation's crude oil but account for nearly 40 percent of its gasoline consumption.

Imports represented as much as 46 percent of American oil consumed in 1977. The figure steadily dropped, and stood at 30 percent in 1984 before climbing back up above 32 percent last year, according to figures supplied by Heinz's and Moynihan's staff.

Among other senators opposing the fee are Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, and Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y.

Legislature returning to capital for budget session

Suzan Conder/Reporter-Telegram

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Legislature returns today to do what it couldn't during 140 days earlier this year and 52 days last year: put aside partisan politics and write a spending plan that'll keep the Treasury solvent through 1989.

Myriad plans have flooded the Capitol since last summer, but other than a "Band-aid" applied in September, Texas' leaders have yet to agree on the proper therapy to stem the oil-induced gush of red ink. Procrastination has moved the patient from serious condition to the intensive care unit.

Then-Gov. Mark White waited six months last year before he called lawmakers back for a special session. In the interim, Comptroller Bob Bullock officially increased the fiscal 1987 deficit from $1.3 billion to $3.5 billion.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and the Senate pushed for a complete solution, based on moderate budget cuts and extensive tax increases. White — facing a re-election challenge he lost anyway to Bill Clements — and the House balked. It took one and two-thirds special sessions to reach a stop-gap solution that whittled the deficit down to about $1 billion.

The 70th legislature convened here in January with that $1 billion hole, and nearly $5 billion more bad news from Bullock, lying in wait. For five months, Clements, Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis struggled and groaned, verbally sniping at each other to the point that it took a lobby-financed skeet shoot to bring them back to speaking terms.

While Clements introduced a spending plan that his own staff eventually acknowledged didn't add up, the budget committees in the House and Senate tried to write appropriations bills that supported their respective leaders' stance.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Grant Jones said "put it in" to so many requests for increased spending that the Senate's 1988-1989 budget would have required a $6.6 billion tax bill to balance. The House Appropriations Committee plodded through the budget three times before grudgingly coming out with a plan $5.8 billion above expected revenues.

House and Senate negotiators half-heartedly worked toward a compromise but gave up a week before the session ended when it became apparent Clements would never go for anything close to what they might have agreed to. They left town June 3 knowing they'd be back.

Crop failures leave migrant workers jobless

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Confusion over new immigration laws, coupled with crop failures brought on by heavy spring rains, is being blamed for an over-abundance of farm workers in Texas.

In the Rio Grande Valley, hundreds of migrant workers are without jobs because heavy rains have destroyed much of the area's fruit and vegetable crops, said Artero Villarreal of the Texas Employment Commission in McAllen.

"We're going to see some tough times," Villarreal said.

Terrance Travland of the TEC's Labor Management Analysis Unit in Austin was unable to estimate how many workers are needed to harvest the fruit and vegetable crops that survived the storm. But he added the numbers are well below those needed on the Pacific Coast, where farmers are facing the worst labor shortage in 25 years.

"The problems we're having in Texas are obviously different from those plaguing farmers in the Northwest," he said.

Travland said the problem apparently stems from the 1986 Immigration Reform and Control Act that Congress passed to help curb the flow of illegal aliens. The law also offers amnesty and temporary worker permission under certain conditions.

Many Mexican laborers who have worked illegally in vegetable fields and fruit orchards would be able to do so legally under the Seasonal Agricultural Worker Section, or SAWS.

The federal immigration law, which went into effect June 1, offers legal resident status to aliens who can prove they had been living continuously in the United States for five years as of Jan. 1.

It offers temporary legal residence to others who worked 90 days in perishable crops before May 1, 1986.

Employers who knowingly hire illegals face penalties, but enforcement of the law has been delayed until July.

But Walt Pilisko of the TEC's Midland office, said migrant workers who have filed forms in Texas hesitate to move northward until they receive amnesty even though there may be less work available in the state.

"A lot of the undocumented workers who were hoping to go north to work those crops are staying near the border," Pilisko said.

Pilisko said Permian Basin farmers rarely have an over-abundance of migrant workers because the area doesn't produce a lot of seasonal crops.

"Our seasonal crops, such as cotton and maze, need very little hand labor until ginning season," he said.

William Chambers of the Immigration and Naturalization Service in Dallas said officials are trying assure workers that they do not have to stay in the area where they filed amnesty forms.

That many workers in Mexico don't realize they can re-enter the United States on temporary visas if they have worked here in the past few years is a definite possibility, Chambers said.

He said the U.S. State Department is working in Mexico to explain the situation and process the paperwork so that the workers can begin moving north.

Workers are needed to help harvests in Washington, Oregon and Idaho and to help irrigation in Montana, state officials said.

TEC will begin verifying eligibility of job applicants'

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Assistant Business/Oil Editor

The Texas Employment Commission today will begin verifying the eligibility of job applicants so that employers can comply with the immigration reform laws enacted last year.

Under the TEC's program, employers will only be responsible for maintaining a file of certificates, one for each employee. The commission will maintain the verification form (the Immigration & Naturalization Service form I-9) and supporting documentation of proof of eligibility.

Necessary documentation for receiving the certificate needed by an employer consists of a U.S. passport, a certificate of citizenship or naturalization, a valid foreign passport with employment authorization or an alien registration card with photo.

Applicants without one of those five documents will be required to present either a photo driver's license or U.S. military card along with a Social Security Card, birth certificate or a valid INS employment authorization form.

Starting today, all individuals who seek employment through the TEC will be certified before they are referred to employers.

Superpowers joining forces to end war

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union are joining forces on a peace plan to end the 6½-year-old Iran-Iraq war and prevent an Iranian victory, a high-level Reagan administration official says.

Undersecretary of State Michael H. Armacost said Sunday the United States, Soviet Union and the other permanent members of the U.N. Security Council — Britain, France and China — have been discussing the plan "for several months in New York."

"We're working in the Security Council to engage the Russians and the other permanent members in a call for a cease-fire and return to boundaries, exchange of prisoners, other arrangements, backed by mandatory sanctions," Armacost said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation."

"And we have found, to our surprise, that that has elicited the support of all the permanent members, that is, a first resolution calling for a cease-fire," he said. "The question now is whether we can negotiate agreement on mandatory sanctions."

The United States and Soviet Union have been involved in the effort because "we share at least temporarily an interest in the region, an interest in preventing an Iranian victory in the Gulf War," Armacost said.

Armacost said U.S. officials working on the peace plan have found the Soviet Union to be "surprisingly cooperative."

"They don't wish to see a war which could end with Iran prevailing, with the stimulus that gives to Islamic fundamentalism and the threat it poses to their own Muslim population in Central Asia," he said.

Armacost reiterated that U.S. interests in the gulf remain the same.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, applauded any effort to end the war, but said it would not draw attention away from the administration's plan to reflag Kuwaiti tankers in the gulf.

"I think Congress would give whole-hearted support to anything that would increase the chances of ending that war and working with the Soviets or working with anybody. I think on that, the administration and Congress are pretty close in accord," Aspin said on the same program.

"It does not relieve the pressure in Congress to do something about this reflagging," Aspin added.

Syrian intelligence chief vows to free Glass

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria's military intelligence chief in Lebanon was quoted today as vowing to free kidnapped American journalist Charles Glass and the son of Lebanon's defense minister "at all costs."

"I am here in Beirut to free them," Brig. Gen. Ghazi Kenaan was quoted as saying by the state-run Beirut Radio. "The problem will be resolved at all costs, and I believe that will be accomplished soon."

But the Christian-controlled Voice of Lebanon radio said the kidnappers were demanding a guarantee that West Germany would not extradite Mohammed Ali Hamadi to the United States. Hamadi, a Lebanese, is accused of hijacking a TWA jet to Beirut in 1985 and killing a U.S. Navy diver.

The broadcast said the Hamadi guarantee was the kidnappers' main condition. But Lebanese police and sources close to the Syrian command in west Beirut denied that such a demand had been made.

Kenaan was quoted today as saying Syrian President Hafez Assad was "particularly concerned" about the abduction of Glass, Ali Osseiran and their driver in a south Beirut Shiite Moslem district Wednesday.

Kenaan traveled from Damascus to Beirut Sunday and conferred with Sheik Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah, spiritual guide of the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, Lebanon's most militant Shiite Moslem faction.

Brig. Gen. Saeed Bairakdar, commander-in-chief of Syria's 25,000 troops in northern and eastern Lebanon, and Maj. Gen. Izzat Zeidan, commander of the 7,500-strong Syrian army contingent in Moslem west Beirut, attended the meeting.

The three generals then held a 10-minute meeting with Lebanese Defense Minister Adel Osseiran, who said afterwards Assad has ordered Syrian troops in Beirut to "do the utmost" to release his son and the two other captives.

Osseiran, who heads a prominent Shiite conservative clan, has repeatedly accused Hezbollah, or the Party of God, of staging the abduction.

"I am very optimistic," Osseiran said. "I expect the release of Ali, Charles and the driver soon."

Fourteen kidnappers grabbed Glass, 36, Ali Osseiran, 40, and his driver Suleiman Salman, a policeman who doubles as a bodyguard, on a coastal highway in the Shiite suburb of Ouzai, a Hezbollah stronghold in a southern sector of west Beirut.

No group has claimed responsibility for the kidnappings.

Glass, of Los Angeles, is the first foreigner to be kidnapped since Syrian troops moved into west Beirut on Feb. 22 to curb three years of militia anarchy.

Kenaan himself had urged foreign diplomats and journalists who fled the kidnap-plagued Moslem sector of the Lebanese capital in the last two years to return after the Syrian deployment "on my personal responsibility."

"This probably accounts for Kenaan's personal intervention to handle the kidnap case," one source close to the Syrian general said. He spoke on condition of anonymity.

The Syrian command had earlier rejected an offer by the kidnappers to release Ali Osseiran and keep Glass, insisting that both be freed "quickly and unconditionally" along with Salman, the same source said.

Local radio stations have said the Syrian army might storm the Shiite slums on the southern edge of Beirut if the captives were not released promptly.

Glass, 36, left ABC television a few months ago to write a book about the Middle East.

Lawyer says caretaker should temporarily run PTL

TEGA CAY, S.C. (AP) — Lawyer Melvin Belli said today that a caretaker should run PTL while he helps Jim and Tammy Bakker fight to regain the ministry, but the Rev. Jerry Falwell called their efforts "un-Christian shenanigans" and said God would decide the battle.

"The odds are very, very much in favor" of the Bakkers returning to the TV ministry, Belli said Sunday after meeting with the couple for four hours in the PTL-owned home they are occupying on Lake Wylie.

Bakker said Sunday for the first time that he wants to regain control of the ministry he handed over to Falwell in March amid a sex scandal.

Belli, in an interview today before flying back to San Francisco, where he lives, said Pat Boone would be a good choice for temporary leader of the 518,0000-member ministry. He said Boone "has no axe to grind."

Falwell said in a telephone interview Sunday from his home in Lynchburg, Va., that the fate of PTL, which owes $72 million, is in the hands of the bankruptcy court.

"I am sure the federal court will take into consideration that it was under Reverend Bakker's leadership that the terrible violations which brought about the virtual collapse of the ministry occurred," he said.

Falwell added that Bakker had a full week to reconsider turning the ministry over to its present board.

"It was not until some of his dissident friends encouraged him to resume leadership at PTL that all of these un-Christian shenanigans began," Falwell said.

Belli said Sunday that Bakker wasn't properly advised when he gave up the ministry he founded to Falwell.

Calling Bakker his "finest client" in 53 years of practicing law, Belli said the defrocked Pentecostal minister's side has not been told. "We're going to tell it without venom," he said.

Belli said he wants to meet with PTL officials and the old board of directors. He also said he would like to set up a meeting between the Bakkers and Falwell.

Bakker said Sunday he wanted to make peace but had to seek legal counsel when the ministry's new leaders filed for reorganization.

"Our desires and goal is that the ministry continue, that all creditors be paid 100 percent and that all the partners have fulfilled the vision that we gave them to have a place for retreat," Bakker said.

When asked if he expected to resume control of the ministry despite recent allegations concerning his sex life and spending practices, Bakker said, "They accused Jesus Christ of the same thing. They said he was a wine-bibber, that he went out with publicans and sinners and prostitutes. Just because people accuse you doesn't change the call of God on your life."

BUDGET

The three weeks since has been a bad-news, good-news period. Saying the energy-dependent economy had yet to recover from the oil price slide, Bullock slashed his official revenue estimate by another $700 million. In response, Clements, Hobby and Lewis modified their positions enough that they enter today's session just $1.2 billion apart.

As of the weekend, here's where they stood:

— Clements upped his general revenue bottom line from $25.9 billion to "something like $27 billion." That translates into a $38.1 billion total budget that would require $5.5 billion in new revenues. He says that can come from a $2.9 billion extension of 1986's "temporary" sales and gasoline taxes, a state-run lottery and what he called "adjustments of various accounts."

Late last week, one possibility for those adjustments appeared to be a multi-billion-dollar bond package for highway projects, with lottery revenues backing the bonds and currently dedicated gasoline tax money shifted away from the highway program to cover other state expenses. The whole package would need voter approval as a constitutional amendment.

The Republican governor says he still wants to hold to 1987-level spending with "clearly identified and designated" increases in programs such as prisons, mental institutions, health and human services and public education. "We're going to curtail increased spending, and we're going to use as our baseline what we are spending in fiscal year 1987," he says.

"We're going to do what everybody else in Texas is doing, and that is curtail increased spending."

— Hobby reduced his general revenue proposal by $650 million to $28.2 billion. A $38.3 billion total spending package, the plan would require $6.7 billion in new state dollars to balance. Hobby says he is considering the road-bond alternative, but says otherwise it would take an average 2-percent surcharge on all state taxes to bring in enough money.

Hobby rejects Clements charges that "you can't tax your way out of a recession" by pointing to his proposed education spending increases. "I really don't see how anybody who is concerned about the future of this state cannot strongly advocate greater investment in education at all levels, kindergarten through graduate school," he says.

The Democratic lieutenant governor uses Louisiana — which cut an already underfunded education system to balance its oil-ravaged budget — as an example of what Texas should not do. He says leaders in Texas and other southern states that have increased education spending have "a greater vision of what those states ought to be.

"And that basically is what the argument is about: it is a vision of what the state really ought to be."

— Lewis, who played the unsuccessful mediator during the regular session, has moved to within shooting range of Clements' offer. Lewis and Appropriations Committee Chairman Jim Rudd put together a $27.2 billion general revenue — $38.3 billion total — plan that undercuts proposed increases for higher education and shifts more than $200 million of the tax burden to local school districts.

"There's no doubt about it, without additional taxes I can promise the people back home they're going to have a local tax increase," Rudd says. "There is no other choice at this point."

The speaker says he's considering the highway-bond proposal, but is hesitant to leave the budget to the whim of the electorate. "There's no use in having something that hinges upon whether it's approved by the voters," he says.

Lewis is leaning toward a lottery — which will require the voters' OK — and extending the sales tax to everything but food and medicine. "That's the only way we can go," he says.

Franklin Raines, a New York investment banker who specializes in helping cities and states solve their fiscal problems, says New York's and Massachusetts' actions during the mid-70s provide good models for Texas' recovery. "They balanced the states' budget in the short run in maintaining services, not greatly expanding them but maintaining the services that they had, primarily through tax increases," says Raines, who has been advising Hobby on the problems since last summer.

Those states used their regulatory powers and increased higher education spending to revive their economies in the long run, he says. "When the economy came around, then they were able to reduce taxes substantially."

In Texas, even the question of maintaining current services remains debatable. Hobby says the state must spend enough to keep doing what it's doing now even though that will cost more. Clements is more inclined to maintain current spending.

A recent Texas Association of Taxpayers report says lawmakers must convince the voters that they are doing all they can to hold down spending without jeopardizing vital services.

"If they are unconvinced — or simply confused — by what they are told, even the best of intentions may not be enough to persuade them of the wisdom of the actions eventually taken by the governor and the Legislature," the report concludes.

Statutes, court orders tie legislators' hands

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Why, a lot of Texans are wondering, do our state leaders have so much trouble balancing the budget? Why don't they just cut spending or raise taxes and be done with it?

Believe it or not, that's what they're trying to do. But — aside even from the massive size of the shortfall and the political machinations — it's not quite as easy as "cut a little here" and "tax a little there."

A ticking clock and a tangled web of constitutional and statutory requirements, federal court orders and formulas have significantly tied the Legislature's hands.

On the spending side, more than 85 percent of the state budget is locked in, dedicated or somehow controlled by decisions that lawmakers can't overcome simply by re-writing the appropriations bill. Some examples:

— The state's Constitution and school finance laws are set up so that the number of students in the classroom essentially dictates how much the state must spend on the most expensive portion of its budget. Current school appropriations total $10.4 billion, 40 percent of the budget. The Texas Education Agency estimates it will need an additional $421 million to cover increased enrollment for the 1988-1989 budget cycle.

— Federal judges have ordered costly reforms in the state's prisons, mental hospitals and schools for the retarded. At 1987 spending levels, those three programs cost $2.04 billion, or 8 percent of the budget.

— The Constitution sets aside 75 percent of all motor fuels taxes, all the sales tax paid on "motor lubricants" and 80 percent of car and truck registration fees for the highway program. That's about $2.9 billion for 1988 and 1989.

— Federal laws, backed by more than $4 billion a year in subsidies, virtually prohibit deep cuts in social services, highways and schools.

Texas' sales tax, which brings in 39.2 percent of the state's general revenue, was created in 1961. The corporate franchise tax, responsible for 6.7 percent, is 80 years old. Neither accurately reflects the changes in business structure that have occurred since, leaving many profitable businesses with little or no tax liability.

Oil and natural gas taxes, which provided huge amounts of income during the oil boom of the '70s, have declined to where they are estimated to bring in only 9.5 percent of general revenue for 1988-1989. The industry maintains that relief from some of that tax burden could help spur a recovery in the oil patch.

Once they convene this afternoon, lawmakers have about six weeks to balance the budget. Most state leaders agree that the time constraint, combined with the usual difficulty accompanying any tax bill, would make significant changes in Texas' tax structure near impossible during the special session.

Other taxes, such as those on alcohol and tobacco, have reached the point of diminishing returns. Fiscal experts say the revenue gained from any increase in those "sin taxes" would be almost offset by the reduced consumption higher prices would bring about.

KOREA

He has said elections later this year will be held under the electoral college system, which opponents charge favors the government party.

"The president also promised to give maximum consideration to preconditions set by the Reunification Democratic Party including the release of imprisoned people and the lifting of house arrest order for Kim Dae-jong," said Roh.

The government has said more than 8,000 people have been arrested since disturbances erupted June 10, with many sentenced to brief jail terms by summary courts.

Roh said he and Chun also discussed other reforms, including increased freedom of the press. He said the government would assemble a package of reforms to be released after talks with the opposition. He gave no details.

The latest developments came as the United States stepped up its efforts to help restore political calm in South Korea.

U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Gaston J. Sigur, the top Asian policy official, is due to arrive in Seoul on Tuesday to spearhead American efforts at helping restore calm.

TEC

"This shifts the liability for verifying worker eligibility and recordkeeping from the employer to the TEC, explained Nelson Geron, assistant regional director for the TEC in Midland.

Failure to comply with employer sanctions of the new immigration laws could prove expensive when civil penalties begin in mid-1988. Fines range up to $2,000 for a first violation and escalate to as much as $10,000 per violation on third offense.

Once an employee has satisfied the provisions of the eligibility law at one TEC office, that fact will be entered on the statewide computer system, eliminating the need to re-document eligibility if he or she moves to another area, Geron said.

WORKERS

The law also is affecting the garment industry, according to the Los Angeles Times, which reported that thousands of illegal aliens have quit their jobs in garment factories because of fear and confusion over the new immigration law.

In Oregon, crop losses could exceed $300 million unless more workers are found soon. Gov. Neil Goldschmidt has formed a task force to suggest ways to ease the worker shortage, which has resulted in the loss of about one-third of the state's strawberry crop, according to Associated Press reports.

Washington's Gov. Booth Gardner has asked National Guard and prison officials to consider allowing troops and inmates to work in fields. And in Idaho, Gov. Cecil Andrus said he is prepared to provide inmates already authorized to work outside prison walls, the wire service reported.

Steer This Way
By Jim Morris

If you have to drive through a flooded area, go very slowly to avoid shorting out your car's electrical system. Later, pump your brakes to help dry them.

If your car drifts or pulls to one side, have the alignment checked. Neglect will cause difficult and dangerous driving, and will hasten tire wear, too.

Soviets vote in regional elections

WORLD

MOSCOW (AP) — In a historic move, the Soviet Union allowed some citizens a choice of candidates in regional elections, although the Communist Party closely controlled the nomination procedure.

The government newspaper Izvestia said that in "several thousand" of the country's 52,000 districts, voters were given a choice Sunday.

The Communist Party remains the nation's sole political organization, and most candidates running for local government positions were either party members or individuals whose political activity was approved by the party.

The official Tass news agency reported that Sunday's balloting would elect 2.3 million deputies to city and regional governing councils.

Foreign reporters were barred from viewing the one multi-candidate contest in the Moscow region because it took place in a closed area.

Balloting in the Soviet Union is done on paper and the votes are hand-counted, so results in the multi-candidate elections will not be known for some time. Soviet media also have not said what, if any, results will be reported or when the outcome will be known.

During the last party Central Committee plenary meeting in January, Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev called for mult-icandidate elections for some government jobs, such as the local positions up for election Sunday.

Despite the predictable outcome of single-candidate elections, balloting is considered mandatory for Soviet citizens.

Most of the multi-candidate contests presented voters with a list of candidates slightly larger than the number of seats.

For example, if four deputies were to be chosen for a local governing body, a list of five candidates might have been given to voters, who would cross off one of the names.

Even the losers earn a place in the political process, according to the Tass news agency. Those who garner the least number of votes in the multi-candidate elections "will remain in the reserve," taking part in the work of the local councils and voting on some advisory matters, Tass said.

After voting in a single-candidate contest in Moscow, Gorbachev accused the West of "a deficit of realistic policy" and called on Western leaders to respond to Soviet disarmament proposals.

"They call upon us in the Soviet Union to do something else, to do more," Gorbachev said, referring to Western leaders.

"But I must say that today the Soviet leadership sees that there are many words from the West, but not many concrete steps," he said.

"We are prepared to cooperate with all forces. But there is a deficit of realistic policy in the West," he told about 50 journalists, mostly from Western countries.

He said disarmament initiatives are needed from the West, but that "the current generation of political leaders, at least in the major capitalist coutries, are concerned they may lose in public opinion."

Gorbachev did not provide details and did not take questions.

Soviet and U.S. officials have said the two sides are close to an agreement at arms talks in Geneva that would eliminate medium-range missiles from Europe.

Accused hijacker won't be extradited to U.S.

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Bonn will not approve a U.S. request to extradite the alleged hijacker of a TWA jetliner, out of fear for the lives of two West German hostages in Beirut, security sources told The Associated Press today.

But Attorney General Edwin Meese is expected to visit Bonn on Tuesday in an apparent attempt to get West German officials to change their minds, sources said.

Meese was to meet with Interior Minister Friedrich Zimmermann to discuss "security issues," said Roland Bachmeier, a Zimmermann spokesman. Bachmeier refused to go into details, but security sources said Meese was going to Bonn to discuss the Hamadi case and might meet with Justice Minister Hans Engelhard and other officials.

Chancellor Helmut Kohl and officials in the Justice, Foreign and Interior ministries made the decision not to extradite Mohammed Ali Hamadi, the sources said.

Instead of extraditing the Lebanese suspect, West Germany will place him on trial, the sources said. The decision will be made official in a Wednesday meeting of the West German Cabinet, the sources said.

Hamadi, 22, is one of four people indicted in the United States in connection with the June 1985 hijacking of a TWA flight 847 to Beirut, Lebanon, and the killing of a U.S. Navy diver who was a passenger.

He was arrested at Frankfurt airport on Jan. 13 when liquid explosives were found in his luggage. The United States requested his extradition soon after his arrest.

Bonn balked at the extradition request out of fear for the lives of Rudolf Cordes and Alfred Schmidt, who were taken hostage in Beirut soon after Hamadi's arrest in Frankfurt, the sources said. The kidnappers demanded Hamadi's release.

The security sources, who demanded anonymity, were confirming a report in today's editions of the Die Welt newspaper that said Hamadi would not be extradited to the United States.

Die Welt also said that Hamadi would be tried in West Germany on charges of murder and air piracy stemming from the TWA hijacking, as well as charges stemming from the explosives found in his baggage.

The security sources told the AP that Hamadi was expected to be tried in West Germany, but they did not know on what charges.

Government spokesman Friedhelm Ost said last week that a decision on Hamadi's fate would be announced after the Cabinet meeting this week.

Robert Heath, a spokesman at the U.S. Embassy in Bonn, said he could not comment on the matter.

Ex-rebel escapes injury in guerrilla ambush

MANILA, Philippines (AP) - A former Roman Catholic priest who was once the country's best known rebel escaped injury when Communist guerrillas ambushed his convoy in northern Luzon, killing eight of his companions, the military said today.

Lt. Col. Juanito Aquias said the former priest, Conrado Balweg, sent word through seven of his surviving companions that he was safe following the ambush Sunday night in the remote, mountainous Abra province about 200 miles north of Manila.

Aquias, deputy regional police commander in northern Luzon, said three soldiers were wounded and four others were missing after Communist rebels today ambushed their convoy as it was bringing the bodies Balweg's companions to a nearby garrison.

Military sources said Balweg was apparently hiding in the mountains of Abra, his home province. Aquias denied earlier reports that Balweg was in military custody.

The Communist New People's Army, which has been waging an 18-year-old guerrilla war against the government, had vowed to kill Balweg for breaking ranks and allying himself with President Corazon Aquino. Right-wing vigilantes also had placed him on their death list for his rebel activities.

The incident was the latest in a series of attacks throughout the country this month on police, government officials and locally prominent figures.

Balweg, whose guerrilla exploits are the subject of a popular Philippine movie, left the priesthood in 1979 to join the rebels.

He broke with the Communists in April 1986, two months after Mrs. Aquino took power, and organized the Cordillera People's Liberation Army.

Balweg agreed to negotiate for autonomy in the five-province Cordillera mountain region.

He and government negotiators reached agreement on a regional autonomy formula this year. But Mrs. Aquino has not approved it because of Balweg's demand that his Cordillera army be responsible for security in the region.

Shultz urges negotiation in South Korea

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz said today South Korea should negotiate with opposition leaders to achieve a peaceful, democratic transfer of power when the president steps down next year.

Shultz' top aide for Asian affairs, Assistant Secretary of State Gaston Sigur, is due to arrive in South Korea Tuesday. Shultz said without elaborating that Sigur would "see people with different points of view."

Shultz, at a news conference, said Sigur would tell officials "to resume the dialogue so that in Korea they can continue movement toward a peaceful transition of power as President Chun has set out and to have that take place through a democratic process that gives the Korean people a chance to express their views."

"That is what we're after and I think it is quite consistent with what the people of Korea are after," Shultz said.

A top government official said in South Korea today that President Chun Doo-hwan would meet with the political opposition to try to end anti-government protests that have raged nationwide since June 10.

The protesters' main demand has been direct elections, instead of the electoral college system, which critics say favors the government.

Chun, who has promised to step down next year, decided April 13 to suspend talks on political reform until after the 1988 Seoul Olympics. He contends the delay is necessary to safeguard national stability and the games.

Asked about the forthcoming talks, Shultz said: "What we believe should happen is a resumption of talks, not simply about the violence, but about the process through which a transfer of power will take and in a manner that reflects the will of the people in a democratic manner."

U.S. should pressure Korea, lawmaker says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration must pressure the South Korean government to support democratic reforms or the Korean people will hold the United States responsible for their lack of freedom, a key congressman said today.

Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Asian and Pacific affairs, said the only alternatives in the strife-torn nation are democracy or a military coup. He added that military rule would be an "unmitigated disaster" for both the United States and South Korea.

Solarz' comments came as Assistant Secretary of State Gaston Sigur begins a visit to Seoul during which he may meet with opposition leaders. Secretary of State George P. Shultz, in Australia as part of a Far East tour, said today that Sigur will "see people with different points of view." Shultz did not elaborate.

South Korean President Chun Doo-hwan agreed early today to meet with the opposition in an attempt to stem the violent protests that began June 10. Sigur said the talks are essential to resolving the turmoil.

"We believe the way to broaden the political base in Korea and to move the country toward democracy — which every political leader says he supports — that they've got to start talking to one another again," said Sigur, who travels to South Korea today.

"We've got to have in Korea a reopening of the discussions and the negotiations between the various political elements, the leadership of those elements from the government and the major opposition party," he said Sunday on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press."

Chun, who plans to step down in February, had broken off talks on a new election system two months ago.

But Roh Tae-woo, chairman of the ruling Democratic Justice Party, said today that the president has agreed to meet with top opposition leader Kim Young-sam, head of the Reunification Democratic Party.

Another opposition leader, Kim Dae Jung, said today that the talks raise the possibility that he will be freed from the house arrest imposed on him in April. Kim said that, if released, he will "make my best effort to control our movement to be non-violent and moderate."

Kim and Solarz were interviewed on NBC's "Today" program. The congressman said U.S. officials should apply a diplomatic "full-court press" to prevent a military takeover and encourage democratic reform.

"We need to make it clear to the Korean people that the United States is on the side of democracy lest they hold us responsible for the absence of political pluralism in their country," he said.

Sigur said that during his visit to Seoul he plans to press for reforms including release of political prisoners, freedom of the press and the right of peaceful assembly.

"I think what the Korean people would like to see would be an agreement among the government and the opposition as to just how to go about this.

Harlem facing new white invasion

By PETER ALAN HARPER

NEW YORK (AP) — Harlem, for generations the Promised Land for blacks seeking a better life, is facing a new wave of immigrants: whites moving uptown for scarce housing.

The cost of buying or renting in Manhattan has risen steadily for years, and neighborhoods once ignored by the upwardly mobile have been swept up in wave after wave of gentrification.

Now that trend has swept so far north along the Upper West Side that at Central Park's northern boundary a brand new condominium, Towers on the Park, is set to accept residents.

"Harlem is on the move," said Eugene Webb, chairman of one of Harlem's largest real estate companies, Webb and Brooker.

"Why? Land. You're going to run out of land. Everybody wants a little land. The only land left is in Harlem. That's why it's going to be rebuilt."

At Harlem's main western intersection, 110th Street and Frederick Douglass Boulevard, 2,200 units will be available in June 1988 when Towers on the Park is completed. Prices will range from $60,000, under income guidelines, to $200,000 or more, depending upon the marketplace.

On the other side of the park, at Fifth Avenue between 107th and 108th streets, the Daughters of Israel building is being turned into a condominium with a penthouse selling for $500,000.

"That's how real estate values are changing in Harlem. They're sold out," said Donald Cogsville, president and chief operating officer of the Harlem Urban Development Corp.

Apartment vacancy rates in Manhattan are under 2 percent. In 15 years, real estate barriers have tumbled; posh addresses used to stop at 72nd Street, then 86th, then 96th. New buildings and expensive renovations were completed on Broadway, on Amsterdam Avenue, on side streets.

On and on it goes.

AP Laserphoto

The Towers on the Park condominium, currently under construction in Harlem, is seen from Central Park West in New York Tuesday.

"It's paradise over there now," Webb said of once-declining West Side neighborhoods. "The same thing's going to happen in Harlem."

Foremost among those moving into Harlem, he thinks, will be young professionals.

"The yuppie comes to where the action is. He will creep further and further north," Webb said, energetically pushing up from his desk at his central Harlem office. "These people are going to move into Harlem."

Ten years ago, when New York was shaking off its fiscal crisis, Webb might have sounded like the wildest of speculators. But anyone who's watched as Upper West Side shot-and-draught bars and mom-and-pop groceries have been transformed into fashionable nightspots and boutiques knows he's probably right.

Harlem, however, poses unique circumstances. The gentrification process in such Manhattan neighborhoods as Soho, Tribeca and Yorkville pushed out the poor to make room for wealthier people. Harlem boasts longtime community and political clout that will be used to try to regulate redevelopment.

"Whatever development we have in Harlem should be part of a comprehensive program that looks at many issues besides building, such as jobs, housing, education and recreational facilities," said Manhattan Borough President David Dinkins. "I also maintain that the development, housing, jobs, profitable opportunities that result should be for the people who already live in Harlem."

U.S. Rep. Charles Rangel echoed Dinkins' view, adding that he was not about to allow outsiders to pluck the community in which he grew up.

And Noreen Clark-Smith, chairwoman of Community Board 10, which oversees central Harlem, said she had been instrumental in seeing there was affordable housing in Towers on the Park — and will continue to do so in other projects.

Harlem's 1980 population of 466,000 was about 49 percent black, 34 percent Hispanic, 14 percent white and the rest Asian and other.

Development is sure to mean a larger white population, and it appears that whites will be most likely to benefit financially from any building boom.

"Right now, Harlem is going to be developed by white people," Webb said. "I don't think we have the resources to go into big development."

Blacks live in Harlem but have never owned it, and redevelopment is forcing even the best-backed black entrepreneurs to the side streets.

A walking tour of Harlem winds past boarded-up buildings, tree-lined residences, expensive new co-ops and graffiti-scarred tenements. But buildings that sold for just a few thousand dollars five to 10 years ago are selling in the hundreds of thousands today. In 1980, the average property sales price was $140,000; in mid-1985, it was $450,000.

And while big building might seem to signal big changes, there's a lot more going on. "It's the smaller stuff, the renovation of brownstones beyond the headlines, that's helping in the rejuvenation of Harlem," said Ron Norwood, director of development at Webb and Brooker.

The current development is just the latest of Harlem's many metamorphoses.

Haarlem, the Dutch village, took over an Indian village in 1658. Gen. George Washington had his headquarters north of there. In 1873 the village was annexed by New York City and became its first residential and quite fashionable suburb.

Starting in 1904, real estate agents engineered the migration of blacks into the area to take over rentals that had gone begging. Many homes were divided into apartments or rooms, rents were raised and a legacy of over-crowding and poor maintenance began.

Debonaire Fred Astaire dies of pneumonia

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fred Astaire, whose debonair elegance and flowing, graceful style made him the most acclaimed dancer in movie history, died today of pneumonia. He was 88.

He died at Century City Hospital at 4:25 a.m., said spokesman Stan Otake. The spokesman said the dancer had been ill with pneumonia for a short time.

Astaire enchanted movie-goers for generations, dancing with firecrackers, coat racks and beautiful women from Ginger Rogers to Cyd Charisse with an ease that made ballet stars envious.

"I never thought a funny-looking guy like me would be suitable for pictures," Astaire once said, and a studio executive once dismissed him with the curt words: "Can't act...can't sing...balding...can dance a little." His only Oscar, in 1949, was honorary.

But ballet choreographer George Balanchine called him "the greatest dancer in the world." Ballet star Mikhail Baryshnikov praised his "perfection," and songwriter Irving Berlin said, "I'd rather have Fred Astaire sing my songs than anyone else."

For his part, the lean hoofer from the Midwest who was famous for white tie and tails but hated formal attire was likely to credit producers or his sister — his first dancing partner — with his success.

"I'm not trying to be modest, but I never thought about myself as No. 1," he told The New York Times when he turned 80. "I'm cold-blooded about dancing. I wanted to make it good, then make it better."

"I never cared for my singing voice," he said, and he added that there was no secret to his style — "Just practice, sweat, rehearsal and worry."

He was born Frederic Austerlitz in Omaha, Neb., on May 10, 1899, 18 months after his sister Adele. Their father was a beer salesman, and their mother had ambitions for her two children. She enrolled them in dancing school and took them to New York for professional training in 1906. Soon the youngsters were touring vaudeville under their new name, Astaire.

In 1917, the dancing pair graduated to Broadway with "Over the Top," and for the next 15 years they starred in New York and London with such shows as "For Goodness Sake," "Lady Be Good" and "Funny Face."

During "The Band Wagon," in 1931, Adele announced that she was retiring to marry Lord Charles Cavendish, son of the Duke of Devonshire. Astaire returned to the stage briefly before reluctantly trying his luck in Hollywood.

A Paramount executive who viewed Astaire's 1930 screen test dismissed him, but RKO signed him and loaned him to MGM for his film debut, dancing with Joan Crawford in the 1933 "Dancing Lady."

His first film for RKO was "Flying Down to Rio," and his partner was a leggy blonde named Ginger Rogers. The combination was magical.

IRS officers pressured to collect money

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three Internal Revenue Service officers told a Senate panel today that they feel great pressure from managers to seize taxpayers' property even though less drastic action might be more productive for the government.

Shirley Garcia of the Landover, Md., IRS office said revenue officers are given the message that "the more harassment they give the public, the more money they collect — it does look good on their daily report."

"It's now considered a quality error" if an officer does not seize the property of a delinquent taxpayer, said Robert Miller, a revenue officer stationed in Wheaton, Md.

Robert Brown, who works out of the Landover office and is preparing to retire after 26 years with the IRS, said he was once downgraded by superiors for trying to impress on new trainees that they should be courteous to taxpayers.

The three revenue officers testified before the Senate Finance subcommittee that oversees the IRS. The panel has uncovered evidence that some IRS managers routinely judge employees on the basis of how much tax money they collect and how much property they seize, in direct violation of written IRS directives.

Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa., a member of the subcommittee, said some of the IRS methods are tantamount to telling employees to "go out and act like mob-employed enforcers."

The subcommittee made public a memorandum that the chief of one of the agency's collections branches had sent to his group managers. The memo complained about poor performance by the revenue officers who collect overdue taxes.

"It appears the fewer cases that the revenue officers have assigned to them, the less work they do," wrote branch chief Wilbur E. McKean of the IRS Baltimore district office. "Where are you as managers?...The revenue officers that are performing above a satisfactory level will be rewarded, and the ones that are not will be documented with corrective action taken.

"Your midyear evaluations will be prepared in approximately 1½ months," the memo noted. "You will be evaluated on your accomplishments or lack of accomplishments. Need I say more?"

"The IRS forbids use of enforcement statistics to rate the performance of its managers or employees," spokesman Johnelle Hunter said in response to the memo. "It is clear that the memo that is being used today is in violation of this. We feel the branch chief misunderstood the guidelines."

Tornado kills one, injures two ne ar Detroit

Associated Press

A huge storm system deluged parts of Michigan today, swamping Detroit highways, after spawning a tornado that ripped through a mobile home park, killing a man and critically injuring his wife and infant son.

"After I heard a blast I looked out and could see everything going around and around — shingles, pieces of siding — it looked like squares in the air," said Dorothy Olsen, a resident of the Chateau Estates mobile home park in Novi about 30 miles northwest of Detroit.

Twenty-five to 35 of the mobile homes were severely damaged in Sunday's tornado, while 15 to 20 others sustained less severe damage, said Oakland County Sheriff John Nichols.

At least eight and possibly 10 tornadoes hit seven states Sunday, but no casualties were reported outside Michigan.

Two tornadoes and one funnel cloud were reported Sunday in southeastern Lower Michigan while thunderstorms drenched parts of the area with nearly 3 inches of rain, the National Weather Service said. Detroit got 2.18 inches in 24 hours.

Flood warnings remained in effect today along the Clinton River near Fraser in Macomb County and the Middle Rouge River near Garden City in western Wayne County.

Sections of several major freeways in the Detroit area remained closed today by high water, overburdened pumps and mud slides, said Michigan state police Sgt. Douglas Parviainen.

Thousands of residents remained without electricity today after the storm knocked out power to at least 15,000 Detroit Edison Co. customers, the utility said.

Thunderstorms could redevelop late today across the southern Lower Peninsula, weather service forecaster David Koehler said.

Small nuclear attack would cause starvation, study says

BOSTON (AP) — Mass starvation and a devastated economy would result if the United States came under a nuclear attack involving 1 percent of the Soviet arsenal, according to a computer-assisted study.

The study indicates an assault only on U.S. refineries and ports would result in massive numbers of starvation deaths and loss of transportation, energy production and major industries, said the main author, Kosta Tsipis of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

"There would be no more fuel for transportation, and if there's no transportation, there would be no food in the cities," Tsipis said Sunday. "Cities could neither receive nor ship out.

"Industry can't operate without transportation. People would go to the country for food, and industry would be left without labor. Within two years, you would have paralysis of the economy and mass starvation."

According to the study, titled "Nuclear Crash," survivors would face "near-medieval levels of existence" for decades.

The Soviet Union, if targeted with a similar attack, would be even more vulnerable than the United States because its industries are more concentrated and more often located in urban areas, the study said.

'Fairness' fight looming

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's veto of legislation to write the fairness doctrine into law sets up a protracted fight with Congress, both sides agree.

Reagan said the 38-year-old rule, which authorized the Federal Communications Commission to police the editorial fairness of radio and television broadcasters, is unconstitutional.

In vetoing the legislation over the weekend, the president, once a sportscaster with radio station WHO in Des Moines, Iowa, accepted the arguments of broadcasters who protested that the rule compromised their First Amendment rights.

The doctrine was aimed at ensuring that broadcasters present both sides of controversial issues and air divergent points of view. But a federal appeals court last fall held that the fairness doctrine was not a law and that it could be repealed by the FCC.

Women bare breasts in park

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — About 15 women exposed their breasts in a city park to protest a state nudity law, barely causing any reaction.

"This is as favorable an outcome as we could have hoped for," said Mary Lou Schloss, one of the organizers of Sunday's demonstration. "This is a victory because it shows that nobody has a problem with it. Life's going on as usual."

BERNARD GAVZER
For the Associated Press

There is one known murder every 28 minutes in the United States. That makes America the most murderous nation in the industrialized, developed world.

This country's murder rate is seven to 10 times greater than that in most European countries. Australia has less than one-fourth this nation's murder rate; Canada less than a third. For each 10 American males murdered each year, there is one male murdered in Japan.

We know more about the victims than the murderers.

Based on that, we've been able to arrive at certain conclusions, such as a homicide probability. Some people stand a greater chance of being murdered than others. This is based on a lifetime yardstick.

According to a special FBI crime survey on the probability of murder victimization, a white female has a murder probability of 1 out of 492. A young non-white male has a probability of 1 out of 43.

The FBI survey shows that the lifetime chance of an American citizen getting murdered is 1 out of 198 (when the whole population is taken into consideration).

If you look at all men, then the figure is 1 out of 134. For women only, it's 1 out of 380.

On the basis of race, a white man has a 1 out of 209 chance; a white woman, 1 out of 492. Among all white — men and women — the chance is 1 out of 292. For non-whites, it's 1 out of 69.

In the majority of murders — at least 57 percent, according to the FBI — the killer and the victim were known to one another.

Is there anything that can be done to prevent murder?

Some experts see the best prospects in dealing with family violence. They say the establishment of an array of community services, including counseling and intervention, would work if there were a long-range commitment behind it. In other words, there'd be a way of looking at the family and diagnosing what causes the stress misunderstandings and pressures that can lead to violence. This is not a pie-in-the-sky proposal, but a practical, economically feasible way to prevent murder.

One scholar who produced a significant work on confronting crime, Elliott Currie, who taught criminology and sociology at the University of California, Berkeley, and Yale University, writes:

"The general nature of the remedy is implicit in the diagnosis. If we are serious about attacking the roots of this American affliction, we must build a society that is less unequal, less depriving, less insecure, less disruptive of family and community ties, less corrosive of cooperative values."

There are, however, many criminologists who argue with that and tend toward more direct campaigns — for more prisons, tougher sentences, the death penalty. Nowhere does this argument become more heated than over handguns.

There are experts — including most police agencies — who firmly believe the incidence of murder would drop dramatically if people got rid of handguns.

Statistics for 1983 show that handguns were used in 44 percent of the murders, and shotguns, rifles and other firearms in another 14 percent.

Those who argue that getting rid of handguns is not the answer point out that there were more murders by knife in California than all murders by any means carried out in all of Canada.

Still others say that criminals fear the possibility of being shot by gun-wielding civilians.

Professor James Wright, author of "Under the Gun: Weapons, Crime and Violence in America," says: "The armed citizen or threat of the armed citizen is possibly the most effective crime deterrent in the nation."

Is there something you can do to prevent murder or avoid being a victim? Yes.

— First, does your family have a history of violence? What about the people you work with, or your friends? If you've been abused or beaten when things go wrong, you might consider the possibility that the violence could escalate and you could be killed. You can turn to a variety of agencies and civic and religious groups for guidance. (You can get a list of such groups by checking the Yellow Pages under "Human Services Organizations" and/or "Social Services Organizations.") — Second, use the police. If there is violence in your family, get help from the police when it erupts.

— Third, if you believe you are going to be seriously hurt, you might consider resistance. Use some tactics to give yourself a chance to get away or to bring help or to turn your assailant away in a life-threatening situation. You can scream, use self-defense tactics such as karate, take advantage of the environment.

— Fourth, if there is a gun in the house, keep it locked away or even get rid of it.

Jury to reconvene in Davis lawsuit

By MIKE COCHRAN

FORT WORTH (AP) — With the threat of a mistrial looming, jurors today again faced the task of deciding whether Cullen Davis shot his stepdaughter 11 years ago and left her to die in the darkened basement of his $6 million mansion.

Three witnesses say he did. He and his former girlfriend say he did not.

That was the dilemma before the jury of eight women and four men in a $16.5 million dollar civil suit filed by the defendant's ex-wife Priscilla and her second husband, Jack Wilborn, 66.

They contended in consolidated wrongful death that Davis, 53, was the man in black who killed two and wounded two in an August 1976 shooting spree at the white sandstone mansion the defendant once called his "dream home."

It was their 12-year-old daughter Andrea who first encountered the bewigged man in black. He shot her once through the chest and left her to bleed to death on the floor of a basement utility room.

Mrs. Davis, 45, was wounded and her boyfriend, Stan Farr, 30, was killed. A young mansion visitor, Bubba Gavrel, now 33, was crippled by a bullet lodged near his spine.

The jury got the case last Tuesday. It deliberated 16 hours over the next three days and at one point Friday appeared hopelessly deadlocked at 8-4 in favor of the plaintiffs, two votes short of a verdict.

But Judge Claude Williams, overruling defense objections, urged the panel in a so-called "dynamite" charge to redouble its efforts to reach a verdict.

At noon Friday, the jury foreman disclosed that renewed discussion had brought members "closer to making a decision."

While the defense would like a clear-cut verdict, it conceded that a hung jury would be tantamount to victory.

The facts of the case seemed heavily weighted against Davis.

Aside from Davis' testimony, the defense revolved around the credibility of Karen Master Davis, 38, once the defendant's mistress and now his wife.

Karen claims she awakened at 12:40 the night of the shootings and that Davis was in bed at her side.

Priscilla Davis's lawyers tried without apparent success to discredit that testimony by showing the jury that she told no one about the critical 12:40 awakening until she testified in Davis' Amarillo murder trial in October 1977.

Amarillo jurors, with an acquittal, obviously believed her.

The Amarillo verdict required unanimity by all 12 jurors and compelled prosecutors to prove Davis' guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. The civil case requires agreement by 10 of the 12 jurors and a verdict based only on the "preponderance of the evidence."

For prosecutors then and plaintiffs now, the essence of the case against Davis was the eyewitness testimony of Priscilla, Bubba Gavrel and Gavrel's date that night, Beverly Bass, now 29 and Gavrel's wife.

But different rules of evidence permitted plainiffs greater latitude in presenting their civil case against Davis.

They brought "expert" witnesses who said the mansion shootings were an act of "expressive violence" and motivated by "anger, revenge and cruelty." It was their opinion that Davis was the killer.

A police officer who talked with Davis the morning of the shootings quoted a statement by the defendant that could be interpreted as an admission of guilt.

An investigator testified that the pickup truck Davis drove that night was later washed and wiped clean of fingerprints.

Jack Wilborn told how Davis, a born again Christian, came to him early last year and asked forgiveness for what Wilborn and others interpreted as the killing of Andrea.

The jury also learned that Davis settled a personal injury suit with Gavrel out of court last year.

Adding a bit of insult to injury, a witness who testified he'd seen Davis at a movie the night of the shootings clearly lied and the defense had to ask the judge to withdraw the testimony.

Plaintiffs expected a quick, favorable verdict. They were wrong.

Men charged in shooting of Polish immigrant

HAUPPAUGE, N.Y. (AP) — Two men have been arrested in the shooting of a Pole who came to the United States to earn money for an operation for his crippled son, police say.

"The robbery squad feels it's a bit of a Father's Day present for him," police spokesman Bill Kiley said of the arrests late Saturday and early Sunday.

John Ray Rose, 22, and William Tyrone Duff, 24, both of Riverhead, were charged with second-degree attempted murder and attempted robbery, accused of shooting Witold Wroblewski on June 4 at a gas station just outside Riverhead, about 75 miles east of New York, officials said.

"They wanted him to die," said Suffolk County Police Lt. John J. Horan.

He identified Rose as the alleged gunman and Duff as the driver of the getaway car. Both were unemployed, he said, and Duff had been released from prison in February after serving time for robbery.

Police were led to the men by another man who had been in the car that night, he said.

The man waited in the car during the attempted robbery, then asked what happened at the station and was told, "We just wasted that guy at the Metro station," police said.

A police car pursued the getaway car shortly after the shooting, apparently for a traffic infraction, but lost it, Horan said the informant told police.

If convicted, Rose and Duff face from 25 years to life on the attempted murder charge and 15 years to life on the attempted robbery count, Horan said.

Both were held without bail after pleading innocent, officials said.

No charges are expected against the informant, Horan said. He said the two men arrested had provided written confessions with prosecutors present.

Wroblewski was working at the station to raise $15,000 for an operation that would enable his 7-year-old son, Wojtek, to walk.

The boy has had four operations in Poland, but needs medical techniques not available in that country. Wroblewski came to the United States because his $30-a-week salary in Poland covered only living expenses.

The shotgun blast tore away most of his chin and lower jaw.

He remains at University Hospital at Stony Brook in stable condition.

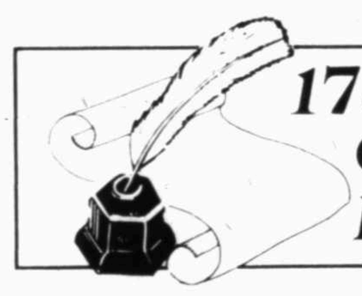

Meanwhile, people touched by his plight have contributed nearly $60,000, Horan said, and at least five hospitals have offered to treat Wroblewski's son for free, Horan said.

The lieutenant said he has called some people around the country who donated to the Wroblewski fund to personally thank them.

"You guys are all right out there," he said he was telling them.

Wroblewski, in an an interview last week, said the generosity of other Americans was likely to make him forget "these bad men who shot me."

Horan said he was "proud as punch" of the officers who helped make an arrest in the case.

PHILADELPHIA TODAY

After last night's heavy thundershower, the day was clear and cool.

The city's Street Commissioners met, all six present, paid several bills, ordered George Kitts to move the empty barrels and boxes from the sidewalk, and, finally, lent a hand to the Convention delegates:

"Upon Complaint to this Board of the very great difficulty arising from the Carriages passing in front of the State House, so that the Honb. Convention now sitting there, are much interrupted by the noise of the same — (Resolved) that a Quantity of Gravell now hauling out of the Sewer in Fourth Street, be laid on Chestnut Street, in front of the State House."

CONFEDERATION TODAY

The same four states (Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Virginia) and single delegate (Kean, South Carolina) as yesterday appeared in Congress, found no quorum, and dispersed.

CONVENTION TODAY

The Convention resumed discussion on the first branch of the national legislature. The clause providing "fixed stipends to be paid out of the National Treasury" was taken up. Oliver Ellsworth (Conn.) wanted members of Congress to be paid by the states. Hugh Williamson (N.C.) agreed; the new western states (Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio, etc.) would pay little in taxes and their representatives would oppose the original 13 states' interests. Nathaniel Gorham (Mass.), Edmund Randolph (Va.) and Rufus King (Mass.) opposed state payment because it meant state control. Roger Sherman (Conn.) wanted the states to determine the salary and pay it. James Wilson (Pa.) and Alexander Hamilton (N.Y.) opposed fixing the salary in the Constitution; James Madison (Va.) favored it.

Wilson moved that salaries be determined by the national legislature and paid from the national treasury. It was defeated, New Jersey and Pennsylvania aye, 7 no, New York and Georgia divided. Ellsworth's motion also lost. It was then agreed to change "fixed stipends" to "adequate compensation."

Next, the Convention agreed that members of the lower house should be at least 25 years old. Gorham then moved to strike out a provision making members of the first branch ineligible to office during their term and one year after it. Pierce Butler (S.C.) thought the provision necessary to prevent intrigue and collusion with the executive.

The motion failed, 4 aye (Massachusetts, New Jersey, North Carolina, Georgia), 4 no (Connecticut, Maryland, Virginia, South Carolina), 3 divided (New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware).

DELEGATES TODAY

William Samuel Johnson (Conn.) dined with John Anstey, commissioner from England for ascertaining the claims of the refugees. Anstey had visited Mount Vernon in December 1786.

George Washington dined at Robert Morris' and drank tea with Francis Hopkinson.

LOOKING BACK
How Much Will We Pay Us?

Members of the Constitutional Convention didn't really want congressmen to set their own pay, but they couldn't find a better method. Benjamin Franklin wanted members to serve without pay, but that wasn't practical. James Madison wanted to spell out congressional salaries in the Constitution, but others foresaw inflation, and decided that it wouldn't work. Madison then suggested that a congressional pay be set into the Constitution but linked to some commodity price, such as the price of wheat, which would change with the rate of inflation. Most delegates didn't think that was practical, either.

Thus, Article I, Section 6:

"The Senators and Representatives shall receive a compensation for their services, to be ascertained by law, and paid out by the Treasury of the United States."

Congressional salaries have risen from $5 per day of actual work in 1789 to $75,100 plus office expenses and a travel allowance.

Men who chased robber mistakenly arrested

OPA-LOCKA, Fla. (AP) — Two men who chased a robber from a fried chicken restaurant were arrested by police in the confusion and spent 17 days in jail before the case was dropped, a newspaper reported.

Jay Miller, 39, and Andrew Lane, 25, neither of whom had criminal records, were arrested after a May 3 robbery at a Church's Fried Chicken restaurant when a witness who gave three different versions of his name identified them as accompanying a man who made off with $52 from the cash register, the Miami Herald reported today.

The restaurant manager, Tina Warfield, said she tried to correct the witness, but Opa-locka police Officer Cheryl Odom told her to be quiet, the newspaper said.

Elizabeth Perry, the restaurant cashier and Miller's girlfriend, also was arrested.

"I said to the police, 'What are you doing? These men tried to catch the robber!' Tha's when they handcuffed me," she said.

Ms. Perry was jailed for armed robbery, but released on bond posted by her family the following day.

Bond was set for Miller and Lane but neither could raise the money, and they remained in jail until Assistant State Attorney Jerald Bagley decided the men could not be prosecuted based on the evidence.

The case against Ms. Perry also was closed.

In his notes on the case, Bagley said two robberies at the same restaurant prior to the May 3 holdup were carried out by a man meeting the same description — tall, wearing long braids.

State law gives prosecutors 21 days after an arrest to decide how to handle a case before it must go to a judge. Suspects who cannot raise bail can be held the entire three weeks.

"I don't have anything against the system," Miller said after being released from jail, "but sometimes, the system stinks."

Opa-locka police Chief Floyd Reeves would not allow Ms. Odom to discuss the case, but said the officer felt she had probable cause to arrest Lane, Miller and Ms. Perry.

"After making the arrest she forwarded the case to the state attorney. Then it's in their hands," he said.

Said State Attorney Janet Reno, "I'm not sure Chief Reeves understands the criminal-justice procedure in Dade County."

Ruling expected on acquitted officer

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — City officials say they're awaiting word from attorneys whether patrolman Farrell Tucker, acquitted of murder in the death of a fellow officer, must be reinstated to the force.

Assistant City Manager Bill Donahue said the city's attorneys could issue a decision today.

The city has 30 days from the date of official court notification of the jury's verdict to decide whether to allow Tucker to return to the force. The 36-year-old suspended officer said he would discuss returning to his job with Police Chief William O. Gibson today.

A state district court jury found Tucker innocent Friday of murder in the death of Stephen Smith, his best friend. Tucker claimed self-defense in the August shooting death.

Gibson, who returned Saturday from a vacation, said Sunday that he would consult with the legal staff and not rush into a decision.

Tucker was suspended without pay Oct. 22, the day he was indicted on murder charges.

Meanwhile, Smith's father, Leon Richard Smith, said he wanted to put his son's death behind him.

"We really and truly want to forget it. We lost a son, and if it took the judge and jury five hours in their wisdom to find him innocent, then they probabaly know more about it than I do," Smith said Sunday.

FCC's price plan doesn't 'compute'

Personal computers and a growing number of computer information systems provide millions of Americans access to huge data bases of up-to-date material on myriad subjects. These electronic libraries are so useful that university libraries are among their best customers.

Computer users tap into these electronic libraries via telephone lines, usually by dialing a local number that connects them to a nationwide computer network. The computer networks rent private phone lines and spread the cost among their users. Besides their vast storehouses of information, the computer networks provide their customers with up-to-date stock-market quotations, airline schedules, electronic mail and other services.

But now the Federal Communications Commission wants to charge the computer networks a fee of up to $5 an hour for all computer information transmitted over interstate phone lines. The fees would more than double the hourly cost of some of these information services.

The FCC proposal could drive the cost of computer databases beyond the reach of many individuals and limit university access as well. But it would have virtually no effect on large-business users, who could avoid the fees by building direct communication links to database vendors and bypassing the local telephone companies.

A smaller customer base could force many of the computer networks out of business and would discourage the survivors from making substantial investments to expand or improve their services.

The computer-access charge is analogous to the fee paid by long-distance companies for access to local phone networks. But there is a major distinction — as many as a dozen computer transmissions can share a single phone line, while a normal voice conversation ties up an entire line. Thus it makes sense to charge the computer networks less than is charged to the long-distance carriers.

Computer networks should not be exempt from access fees. But the fees should be based on a per-line or volume-of-data charge. The FCC needs to go back to the drawing board — or the computer terminal — and come up with a more equitable proposal.

Saturday night safety

It's not surprising that the Justice Department has launched a drive to get rid of the law authorizing the use of court-appointed independent counsel to investigate matters, such as the Iran-Contra scandal, where the department's own prosecutors may be constrained from carrying on a thorough inquiry. Attorney General Meese himself has criticized the law and is himself the subject of an independent counsel investigation.

In addition, the law is under legal attack by two men who also are targets of independent counsel investigations: Lt. Col. Oliver North, the former National Security Council operative who's at the center of the Iran-Contra inquiry, and former White House aide Michael Deaver, who has been indicted for perjury in connection with allegedly improper lobbying activities.

Now the Justice Department — in the person of Assistant Attorney General John R. Bolton, who, of course, works for Meese — is asking that Congress not renew the law when it expires in January or, if it does, that the president veto it. The law, Bolton says, is too expensive and "creates an opportunity for abuse of prosecutorial powers that our constitutional system cannot and must not tolerate."

There may be ground for concern about possible abuse. The lack of accountable supervision may, as Bolton contends, have led to unnecessary delays or unjustified expenses. The cost of the six special prosecutors now investigating cases could reach $6 million this year, Bolton says.

But considering what the $6 million is buying — protection of the Constitution and preservation of public confidence that official crimes are being thoroughly investigated and not covered up — it would be cheap at ten or a hundred times the price. The law may need some revision to increase the accountability of the independent counsel to the court that appoints him. But it is the only institution the country has, short of impeachment, to create confidence that if crimes are alleged against high government officials, particularly if there may be involvement by the president himself, they will be vigorously investigated.

Ironically, Ed Meese himself was a prime beneficiary of the law. Before his confirmation as attorney general, Meese was the subject of serious questions about people he had appointed or supported for federal office, many of them cronies or the relatives of cronies who had loaned him large sums of money at low or no interest. An independent counsel appointed at Meese's own request found there was insufficient evidence to bring charges against him. Had such a counsel not been available, there would be far more suspicion than there is now that the nation's highest law enforcement official was himself badly compromised.

The independent counsel law was passed in the wake of the 1973 Saturday night massacre in which Richard Nixon, in a desperate effort to cover up, fired Watergate special prosecutor Archibald Cox and forced the resignations of two other senior Justice Department officials. Cox had threatened to get a judicial order to force Nixon to turn incriminating White House tapes over to a federal judge. Without the law, the country could never be certain that some Saturday night a president wouldn't try again.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, June 22, the 173rd day of 1987. There are 192 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 22, 1940, Adolf Hitler gained a stunning victory as France was forced to sign an armistice eight days after German forces overran Paris.

On this date:

In 1611, English explorer Henry Hudson, his son and several other people were set adrift in present-day Hudson Bay by mutineers.

In 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte abdicated a second time.

In 1868, Arkansas was re-admitted to the Union.

In 1870, Congress created the Department of Justice.

In 1911, Britain's King George V was crowned at Westminster Abbey.

In 1937, Joe Louis began his reign as world heavyweight boxing champion by knocking out Jim Braddock in Chicago.

In 1938, Joe Louis knocked out Max Schmeling in one round in New York.

In 1944, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed the GI Bill of Rights.

In 1969, singer-actress Judy Garland died in London at the age of 47.

Five years ago: Less than 24 hours after giving birth, Diana, the Princess of Wales, left a London hospital with her husband, Prince Charles, and the couple's newborn son, who was later named William Arthur Philip Louis.

Government still willing to 'buy Japan'

WASHINGTON — "Made in Japan" continues to fascinate the federal government's computer buyers, no matter what President Reagan may do or say about unfair Japanese trade practices. And some government procurement officials seem willing to overlook just about anything in their zeal to buy Japanese products.

Jack Anderson

Consider this: One day after Hitachi's American distributor, ViON, agreed to plead guilty to 50 counts of fraud on an Army computer contract, the U.S. Customs Service awarded the distributor a $19 million contract for a Hitachi computer system.

As we have already reported, the Agriculture Department notified an American computer manufacturer on April 17 that it had lost out on a $48 million contract to the Hitachi distributor. As it happens, that was the very day the president announced tariffs on certain Japanese products as punishment for their manufacturers' violations of trade agreements between the United States and Japan.

The particular Hitachi computers the two agencies want aren't on the punitive tariff list. But the giant Japanese firm was one of several that had been dumping computer chips on the U.S. market, which was the reason for the tariff.

The Army's fraud case against ViON wasn't exactly a secret. After a two-year investigation, the company agreed to plead guilty to fraud on April 7. The next day, Customs awarded ViON the $19 million contract. The day after that, the company's formal guilty plea was entered.

The Agriculture and Customs computer contracts have been held up because of protests filed by IBM and StorageTek. The U.S. manufacturers both claim their bids on the Agriculture Department contract were several million dollars lower than ViON's. Only IBM has protested the Customs contract, contending that, while its bid was higher, its computer system is superior to the Hitachi system ViON offered.

The American companies' appeal is under consideration by the General Services Administration. A decision is expected this month.

The Army's fraud case against ViON came after investigators determined that the company had not provided the computer equipment it had agreed to, and which the Army had paid for, according to Lt. Col. Dave Burpee. ViON pleaded guilty to 50 counts of fraud and was fined $579,407.

As part of the settlement, Burpee said, ViON is required to inform the Army of any subsequent contracts it obtains from federal agencies. He said Agriculture and Customs were notified of ViON's guilty plea "so they can monitor their contracts more closely."

When our reporter Karen Talley inquired about the company's guilty plea, the Customs Service chief counsel, Mike Schmitz, admitted he knew about it, and added: "But they weren't debarred." That means ViON was not legally prohibited from obtaining future federal contracts — including the one it was awarded the day after it agreed to plead guilty in the Army case.

Agriculture and Customs purchasing officers say the Hitachi computers offered by ViON are best suited to their needs. IBM and StorageTek dispute this claim.

CASHLESS FUTURE?: Federal Reserve Board economists have looked into their crystal balls and seen a brave new world where paper money will be an endangered species, used only for small purchases and lighting bankers' cigars. Your paycheck will be deposited and drawn against electronically; loans will be approved (or rejected) by computers; and your funds will draw interest immediately. There will be no such thing as "idle cash" within 10 years, the Fed's seers predict. One drawback to this instantaneous banking, of course, is elimination of the 30-day "float" currently enjoyed by millions of credit-card addicts.

UNDER THE DOME: Sens. William Proxmire, D-Wis., and Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, have asked the Justice Department for its voluminous files on the investigation of General Dynamics' submarine-building Electric Boat Division. The department has said it doesn't have enough evidence for a successful prosecution. But the senators don't want Justice destroying the evidence it does have. They point out that a congressional investigation of the Newport News Shipyard was thwarted when Justice dropped its case — and destroyed the investigative files a few days later. Proxmire and Grassley don't want a repeat of this performance.

Jordan warned Reagan team of probe 'bite'

WASHINGTON — In the last secret memorandum he left for the incoming Reagan team, Hamilton Jordan prophetically warned that if the law permitting wide-ranging probes by special prosecutors was not severely amended it would rear up and "bite" the new administration, no matter how scrupulous it tried to be.

President Carter's chief of staff tried to pass that word directly to now-Attorney General Edwin Meese, who was President Reagan's counselor, and to incoming staff chief James Baker III and his deputy, Michael Deaver. They were too busy for Jordan, so he wrote a memorandum. Both Deaver and Meese have since become targets of special prosecutors.

Jordan, who was also targeted for investigation by a special prosecutor, and cleared, has not changed his mind that the law should be radically softened. That is what Assistant Attorney General John Bolton last Tuesday told Congress, where the law is up for renewal.

FOR BUSH — OR KEMP?

No fewer than seven "Members of the George Bush for President Committee" in Iowa, announced by George Bush Jr. early this year, have no intention of backing the vice president but, despite word from political insiders in the camp of Rep. Jack Kemp, have not become Kemp backers either.

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

Showing their versatility at getting the most out of the "commitment" game, one of the seven, Paul Liebbe, Louisa County GOP chairman, told us candidly that he does not know "whether I am on the Bush committee or some one else's." As of today, he told us, Sen. Bob Dole "would win" the Iowa caucuses.

The Kemp camp was correct on Harold Trupp of Waterloo, erroneously claimed by Bush. Trupp told us: "I have switched to Jack Kemp." When asked about that, a Bush operative produced a letter from Trupp stating: "You can count on me when you run for president."

McPHERSON CHALLENGED

Peter McPherson's nomination to become deputy secretary of the Treasury has been put on "hold" by Sens. Jesse Helms and Malcolm Wallop, with Helms demanding a full-fledged audit of his activites in the job he now holds as head of the Agency for International Development (AID).

Helms' letter to Comptroller General Charles Bowsher asked many questions about McPherson's airline travel, use of expense funds and whether he showed "favoritism or cronyism" in the award of "performance bonuses." He said he was not charging specific illegalities but had "unconfirmed information" that there may have been some.

The Finance Committee approved the nomination 11 to 0 on Tuesday, but Helms claims it did not have the Senate's OK to meet and that the vote was invalid. Senate insiders say one reason for anti-McPherson sentiment among conservative Republicans is his political alliance with Vice President George Bush and his plans to help Bush in his presidential campaign.

NIXON READS THE DEMOS

Former Preident Richard Nixon privately calls Sen. Joseph Biden the "most vicious" of the Democratic presidential candidates, but also the "best speaker" of them all.

That word has gone direct from political insider Nixon to the camp of at least one leading Republican presidential hopeful.

But the Democrat to be most feared, Nixon says, is not Biden. It is New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, whom the former president views as by far the strongest possible candidate in the nation. According to Nixon, Cuomo might be sucked into the race after the March 8 "Super Tuesday" primaries.

NUNN EDGING CLOSER

With a dozen moderate Senate Democrats pressing Sen. Sam Nunn to set up a presidential exploratory committee, the Georgian is sending out feelers that he is moving closer to a race, but will skip the Iowa and New Hampshire early-bird contests.

That would put him in the ring for the 17-state Super Tuesday, where he would be hard to beat in 14 Southern and border states — particularly with his fast-growing reputation as his party's acknowledged national security spokesman.

Nunn confides to friends that the experience of the late Sen. Henry (Scoop) Jackson has given him some concern. Jackson, regarded by Nunn as a mentor, once warned him to avoid running for president, based on his own unhappy experience in 1976.

CHARLEY REESE

Supporting totalitarian regimes isn't smart

In a fund-raising letter on behalf of the Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador, Rep. Mervyn Dymally, D-Calif., said:

"With 450 committees in towns and cities in all 50 states, and close working relationships with many other organizations, CISPES is ideally suited to inspire public opposition to the widening U.S. role in Central America."

Charley Reese

An unclassified cable from the U.S. Embassy in El Salvador had this to say about CISPES:

"The FMLN/FDR (guerrilla outfits) continues efforts to activate its U.S.-based support network. Coordinated by the Washington, D.C.-based national office of Salvadoran Communist Party front organization CISPES, four activities have been initiated in the past few weeks."

Very interesting. Rep. Bill McCollum, a Florida Republican and a member of the committee investigating the Iran-Contra affair, also thought it was interesting and introduced the fund-raising letters and the cables into the record.

Dymally promptly accused him of McCarthyism. The left-liberal Democratic press (Washington Post, New York Times, ABC, CBS, and NBC) just as promptly ignored the whole business.

Certainly, in the left-liberal view, it is OK to probe the private fund-raising efforts of people wishing to support the Nicaraguan democrats even though obviously the Boland Amendment, which prohibited U.S. government appropriations from being used, in no way affected private citizens.

However, if one points out that it appears that members of the U.S. Congress are actively supporting organizations set up by the communist guerrillas in El Salvador who are seeking to overthrow the democratically elected government supported by the U.S. Congress — oh, well, then that's McCarthyism.

It's fine to question the motives of fundamentalist Christians or plain, old ordinary American patriots. It's OK to call them right-wingers or extremists or, in some cases, fascists, but one is not even allowed to inquire of a congressman why he is raising money for an organization which was created by the Salvadoran communist party for the specific purpose of supporting the communist guerrillas in their frustrated attempt to overthrow a democratic government.

I suppose it's legal for congressmen to support communist front organizations. It's certainly fashionable for the extreme left of the Democratic Party. In addition to Dymally's toting water for CISPES, Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., wrote a fund-raiser for the Nicaraguan Network, a Sandinista front group. Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., wrote one for New El Salvador Today, another FMLN support group.

It is a valid subject, however, for public inquiry. Once again, as in the Vietnam War, you have Americans crossing the line from dissenting from the policy of their own government, which all Americans have a right to do, to actively aiding organizations set up by totalitarians opposed to the U.S. government.

Secondly, you have organizations collecting money for alleged humanitarian purposes and enjoying a tax exemption while you have cables from the U.S. Embassy citing information that at least some of this money is going directly to the guerrillas.

According to the embassy cables, CISPES proclaimed at its 1985 convention that one of its goals was to provide political support for the FMLN/FDR.

Conservatives may not always be right or wise, but they are certainly smarter than the left-liberals. At least the people conservatives support are not people looking forward to the downfall of the United States or gloating over the murder of American servicemen.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Officials' security plans accidentally broadcast

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — Secret security arrangements for Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger were accidentally broadcast over the radio system of a taxi company, officials said today.

The security breach occurred over the weekend when Australia's Department of Communications gave U.S. security agents a radio frequency it thought was not used, said Joel Webster, a department spokesman.

However, the messages were clearly heard by the radio dispatcher of Sydney's largest cab company, Taxis Combined.

"We allocated the Americans that frequency because as far as we were concerned it was vacant. It was an unfortunate incident, but not too serious," Webster said.

Shultz and Weinberger, who arrived late Saturday, spent Sunday with Prime Minister Bob Hawke playing golf and discussing political issues. Shultz and Weinberger resumed talks today with Australian officials.

Worshippers arrested at Stonehenge

AMESBURY, England (AP) — Scuffles broke out at dawn Sunday between police and hippie-style vagabonds who assemble each year on midsummer's day at Stonehenge, the 4,000-year-old stone monument.

Wiltshire police said 43 people were arrested for breach of the peace after breaking down part of the fence surrounding the archaeological site. All were later released without being charged.

The arrests came as 60 white-robed, modern-day Druid sun worshippers prepared to celebrate the summer solstice, the longest day of the year, with a ritual sunrise ceremony at Stonehenge.

After the modern-day Druids completed their ceremony Sunday with the blowing of rams' horn trumpets, several hundred hippies were allowed into the monument where they formed a huge circle around the ancient stones and stood holding hands in the early morning sun.

Police said 350 of the vagabonds, sometimes referred to as hippies in Britain because of their 1960s lifestyle, were allowed to gather under escort outside the fence to watch the Druid ceremony when the sun rose at 4:57 a.m.

Wiltshire chief constable Donald Smith said the majority had been well-behaved though a few "hotheads" had broken down a portion of the fence. He said the number of arrests was much lower than previous years and he hoped similar arrangements might be worked out for future years.

A spokesan for English Heritage, which manages the site, said they were pleased with the outcome and that the Druids had been allowed to hold their ceremony.

About 500 vagabonds, who wander the countryside of southwestern England, have spent the last two nights camped on private land at Devil's Ditch, about eight miles away.

Under the new Public Order Act, which took effect on April 1, police are empowered to evict gatherings of up to 200 vagabonds from public and private sites without bringing charges.

The Druids were a religious order of priests, soothsayers, judges and poets in ancient Britain. Their religion centered on the worship of nature deities, and their ceremonies, chiefly held in oak groves and near lakes and rivers, included magic and animal and sometimes human sacrifices.

Stonehenge is a mysterious double circle of gigantic standing stones set in Salisbury Plain about 80 miles southwest of London. The site is thought to have been a center for pre-Christian worship and astronomical worship, since the sun rises over a certain stone.

Demjanjuk hurt on way to court

JERUSALEM (AP) — John Demjanjuk, a retired American autoworker accused of being a notorious Nazi death camp guard, hurt his shoulder in a police van today and was not present as his war crimes trial resumed.

"We are opening this session without the defendant, who was accidentally injured on his way to court. The defendant was checked by a doctor ...and requested that the trial start without him," said presiding Judge Dov Levine.

Israel Army radio said Demjanjuk injured his shoulder when he lost his balance in a police van carrying him from the Ayalon maximum security prison to court. Jerusalem police spokesman Rafi Levy said he had no information about the incident.

The trial resumed after a recess of more than a month during which prosecution and defense teams travelled to West Germany to question former Nazi SS officers.

The testimonies of Helmut Leonhardt, 71, a former clerk at the Trawniki camp, and of Otto Horn, 83, a former nurse at Treblinka, were heard behind closed doors and are due to be read into the trial record in Israel.

Prosecutors have presented an SS identity card they say was issued to Demjanjuk, 67, at the Trawniki training camp for death camp guards.

Demjanjuk's U.S. attorney Mark O'Connor says the card, which was obtained from Soviet archives, is a Soviet forgery.

Protesters ring U.S. base

TOKYO (AP) — More than 18,000 people demonstrated for peace and against U.S. military bases in Japan on Sunday by forming a 10.4-mile human chain around the Kadena U.S. Air Base on Okinawa, police said.

The protesters, standing in a thunderstorm, joined hands around the base in three five-minute intervals during a one-hour demonstration, said a police official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

He said the protest was peaceful and resulted in no confrontations between U.S. troops and the demonstrators.

Only a few U.S. military vehicles went in or out of the base during the demonstration, the official said. He said the protesters made way when military vehicles used any of the base's five gates.

Hironobu Gushiken, an official of the Okinawa Prefectural Council of Labor Unions, said in a telephone interview that "we completely surrounded the base with the human chain to demonstrate our appeal against U.S. bases in Japan."

Prisoners' demand met

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — About 500 prisoners in a jail in western Bangladesh have launched a hunger strike to press their demands on taking baths in the prison pond, a newspaper reported today.

The independent English-language daily The New Nation said the prisoners began the hunger strike Saturday at a prison in Faridpur, 90 miles west of Dhaka.

Bathing in the pond was prohibited following the drowning of a prisoner on May 6 under mysterious circumstances, the paper said.

...Col. Moksul Hossain Choudhury, the inspector general of police, told The Associated Press today that "prisoners had called off their strike Sunday after their demand was met by the authorities."

He said "the strike had lasted only few hours and not more than that, as suggested by some newspapers."

Hungarian has quintuplets

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — A 23-year-old Hungarian woman gave premature birth to quintuplets at a Budapest university clinic, the state-run news agency MTI reported.

The agency said a doctor performed a Caesarean section operation Sunday on Mrs. Gyoergy Benke to deliver the three boys and two girls. The woman's first name and condition were not given.

The babies, who were born approximately 1½ months early, each weigh between 2 and 2.7 pounds, the agency said Sunday. They were reported in satisfactory condition.

The woman was said to have undergone treatment for sterility in her hometown of Sopron, near the border with Austria.

It was the second birth of quintuplets in Hungary. The first set were born at the same clinic in January 1983, MTI said.

Chefs bake giant tart

LANDERNEAU, France (AP) — A dozen chefs claimed the world's record for the world's largest strawberry tart, after they combined 700 pounds of strawberries and 300 pounds of dough to create a 1,600-pound sweet, local officials said.

The tart, measuring 18 feet in diameter, was eaten Sunday by 2,500 people, whose donations were given to a cancer research organization. The bake was organized by regional strawberry producers in this Britanny area about 350 miles west of Paris.

The pastry chefs began to prepare the tart Friday and labored two days on the confection. It required 705 pounds of strawberries, 300 pounds of pastry dough and 480 pounds of pastry creme, a pastry chef said.

Town officials said the tart which previously held the record was about 14 feet in diameter.

France tests nuclear device

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — France exploded an underground nuclear device in the South Pacific today, the fourth time it had done so this year, scientists said.

The explosion on Mururoa Atoll, midway between Australia and Chile, measured about 15 kilotons, the equivalent of 15,000 tons of TNT, said Warwick Smith, superintendant of New Zealand's Department of Science and Industrial Research.

TORNADO or THUNDERSTORM

WATCH
(Conditions are right for a tornado or severe thunderstorm to form.)

WARNING
(A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)

High temperatures forecast for Monday June 22.

In North Texas, chance of thunderstorms entire area through Tuesday. Highs 90s. Lows 70s.

In West Texas, widely scattered showers and thunderstorms east of mountains tonight becoming mostly fair Tuesday. Lows tonight mid 60s north to mid 70s extreme south except mid 50s mountains. Highs Tuesday mid 90s mountains and north to near 100 Big Bend.

In South Texas, partly cloudy through Tuesday. Scattered showers and thunderstorms tonight most sections Tuesday. Highs mainly in the 90s, except upper 80s along the upper coast and near 100 southwest along the Rio Grande. Lows in the 70s except near 80 immediate coast.

Sunny skies in forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Sunny skies and hot temperatures are being forecast for Tuesday by the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. The high should be in the upper 90s.

Tonight, under partly cloudy skies, there is a 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. The low will be in the middle 60s with winds out of the south at five to 15 mph. Southerly winds will increase to 10-20 mph on Tuesday.

Sunday's high of 89 was 18 degrees below the record high set for that date in 1934. Today's low of 61 was one degree above the record low set for this date in 1973.

STATE

Winds gusted to 116 mph early today when a severe thunderstorm roared through an area near the town of Quemado in northwest Maverick County in South Texas, the National Weather Service said.

There were no reports of injuries or significant damage.

Another severe thunderstorm spawned a tornado funnel cloud near Clarendon in the southeast Texas Panhandle, the NWS reported. That storm also triggered marble size hail between Amarillo and the Oklahoma border, primarily in Hemphill and Wheeler counties.

Sunday evening, two tornadoes were spotted near Roswell, N.M., and another near McCamey, where winds were reported at 69 mph. High winds downed trees east of Carlsbad, N.M., where golf ball size hail fell.

Forecasts called for scattered showers and thunderstorms to spread over most of the state east of the mountains through Tuesday. Otherwise, skies will be mostly fair in extreme West Texas and partly to mostly cloudy through tomorrow.

NATION

Thunderstorms developed along a stationary front that scattered heavy rain across the northern Ohio Valley and Great Lakes region.

Showers and thunderstorms also were widely scattered from the Mississippi Valley to the southern Atlantic Coast, and showers were developing along a cold front from southwest Montana to central Nevada.

Today's forecast called for showers and thunderstorms scattered along the eastern half of the Gulf Coast, from the Great Lakes through the middle Mississippi Valley, the lower Ohio Valley and the Tennessee Valley, and through the middle and southern Atlantic Coast region to northern Florida; and rain scattered from western Washington into Nevada.

SHOP DILLARD'S MONDAY THRU SATURDAY 10-9; SUNDAY 1-6; MIDLAND PARK MALL. AMERICAN EXPRESS CARD WELCOME.

Time's Up

Gloria Teichmann, 59, a 12-year veteran of walking the beat, writes a ticket for a parking violation on east Wall Street.

It's your worst nightmare. You're late for an appointment, you don't have any change for the parking meter, and here comes the meter maid.

But instead of getting a ticket, you receive a smile and a quarter. You've just met Gloria Teichmann.

Ms. Teichmann, 59, an 11-year veteran as a City of Midland meter maid, is the exception to the general belief that meter maids delight in doling out lots of parking tickets.

Besides carrying a pocket full of quarters — which Ms. Teichmann often does just in case she meets a truly desperate motorist — she also carries a smile and a cheerful nature while walking her beat.

"After 11-years on the uptown beat I've made a lot of friends," Ms. Teichmann said. "I'll admit I don't know most of them by name, but whenever we see each other on the street, we'll stop and chat."

Another added benefit to working as a meter maid, claims Ms. Teichmann, is the healthy side of the job.

"I get a lot of exercise," said Ms. Teichmann. "I walk about 10 to 15 miles a day.

"The disappointing thing is every six months I need a new pair of shoes."

According to Midland Police Officer Ray Conklin, supervisor of the department parking control unit, downtown Midland is divided into three beats that contain 991 parking meters.

Ms. Teichmann chats with Tim Whalen, 40, of 70 Katie Lane, who is recalling how the meter maid would provide him and his father with a quarter when they were out of change.

Ms. Teichmann checks the identification number on a parking meter in front of the Midland County Courthouse.

Burial will follow at Resthaven Memorial Park, under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

H.G. 'Tink' Goodson

Services for H.G. "Tink" Goodson of Midland were to be today, 11 a.m., at Resthaven Memorial Park under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Pallbearers were to be David J. Mallams, Danny Hobson, Ron Wyatt, Greg Boler, James Hanlan and Brad Hanlan.

Southern Pines development becoming 'Rub Board Road'

SOUTHERN PINES (AP) — When it rains in this Montgomery County subdivision, there are no drainage ditches to catch the water. So the water puddles up in potholes, some nearly as wide as the road itself.

Jack and Ernestine Daniel and her husband joke they own lakefront property. Mrs. Daniel has nicknamed the subdivision, Rub Board Road, Slip 'n Slide Drive and Dip 'n Dive Drive.

"It about says it all," she said.

But Southern Pines isn't the only subdivision to have problems. Some subdivisions — planned and established during boom years — never turned out to be what residents expected.

Now, some subdivisions don't have basic services such as mail delivery because the roads turn into slick obstacle courses when it rains. And some school bus drivers won't travel the roads.

Hardly a Montgomery County Commissioners Court meeting goes by where residents don't plead for help. In response, the county has decided to go to court to try and solve some of the problems.

"In the past, I think developers thought 'what's the county going to do? They don't have the stuff to come after me,'" County Engineer Don Blanton said. "I think they realize the county means business now."

Last year, the county hired attorney Nelda Radabaugh to address the problems and get developers to comply with the county's requirements. She has sent numerous warning letters to developers asking them to upgrade their roads and drainage systems and has filed a lawsuit against one developer of the Southern Pines subdivision.

Ms. Radabaugh said most developers have been cooperative.

"But some of them are bankrupt, gone to Timbuktu, Kansas, hiding," she added.

In a mobile home subdivision named Park Place near Magnolia, residents hope a lawsuit filed by Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox against the developer will put an end to an odor emanating from the development on hot, humid days.

Residents want the developer to install a central sewage system or buy them out.

"When the wind blows just right, the smell can knock you over. It's like living in a cesspool," said resident Ralph Schafer, who paid $10,000 for a lot for his retirement home four years ago.

Stabbing puzzles students in wealthy Dallas suburb

UNIVERSITY PARK (AP) — The arrest of a high school honors student in the stabbing of a schoolmate has puzzled residents of this wealthy north Dallas suburb where street violence is almost unknown.

"We just don't have any answers," said Jim Gibson, principal at Highland Park High School, where the two teen-agers were students.

"It would appear totally out of character for either one of them to be involved in a stabbing incident," he said.

The knifing that critically wounded Garvin Donald Fitch came after a late-night argument last month on a street in this enclave of expensive brick houses and manicured lawns, police said.

Todd Sharpe, an 18-year-old honors student and winner of a scholarship for exemplary leadership and character, has been charged with attempted murder, authorities said. He is free on $5,000 bond.

Fitch, 17, remained in critical condition Sunday at Dallas' Parkland Memorial Hospital, where he was being treated for wounds to the chest and stomach.

The youths apparently did not know each other, police said. Neither had a record of misconduct.

Gibson said there were only two fights last year on campus where 1,400 students attend class, neither involving serious injury. Students didn't routinely carry knives, he said.

Both teen-agers' families and Sharpe's attorney, William T. Hill Jr., declined to comment on the case.

Sharpe's arrest shocked his friend, Glenn Krueger, who sang with him in the school choir.

"I've never known him to be violent," said Krueger, 17. He said he thought to himself, "Todd wouldn't stab anybody. Especially a fellow student."

The knifing upset many students, said Lee Hancock, a close friend of Fitch's.

"I think most were angry at first," said Hancock, 17. "Basically I really feel bad for both families and both kids."

Hancock said Fitch usually avoided trouble.

"If there's something everyone wants to go out and do and it doesn't sound too bright, he usually wants to go out and do something else," he said.

The school would not release the youths' grade point averages, but Sharpe's graduation with honors indicates he had an A average. Fitch, who begins his senior year this fall, is "about a B" student, Hancock said.

Early on the morning of May 31, Fitch and a companion were driving by a house where Sharpe was attending a party, when someone threw an egg at Fitch's jeep, police investigator J.V. McDonnell said. Fitch stopped his car, and Sharpe came out to the street.

"Sharpe and Fitch got into a little altercation, a little talking loud and a little swearing here and there and a little shoving," McDonnell said.

Fitch's companion began arguing with others at the party, distracting attention from the quarrel between Sharpe and Fitch, the investigator said.

"Next thing you know, the boy was stabbed," McDonnell said. "No one actually saw the stabbing."

The 2¾-inch-blade pocketknife used was a graduation present to Sharpe, McDonnell said.

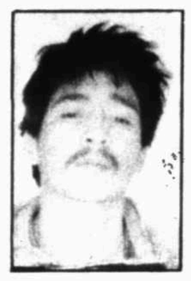

Less than a week after the fight, Sharpe was cheered as he received his diploma with other graduates.

The school had sought to prevent Sharpe from attending the ceremony, but state officials had rejected the idea because Sharpe had not been convicted, according to the Dallas Times Herald.

Copter crash kills nine people

FORT HOOD (AP) — A military helicopter crashed today during training exercises, killing nine people, authorities said.

One of the victims died at Darnall Army Community Hospital about an hour after the 9 a.m. crash, said base spokesman Maj. George Creach.

"So far, it looks like all of the victims are reserve officers," he said.

The UH-1 "Huey" helicopter apparently belonged to the 353rd Engineer Group, a reserve group from Oklahoma City, but most of those aboard were part of the 489th Engineer Battalion based in Little Rock, Ark., Creach said.

Creach said investigators could not immediately determine the cause of the crash.

The aircraft was part of a military training exercise called Starburst '87, the Texas National Guard's 49th Armored Division annual two-week training exercise, said base spokeswoman Jeannie Kitchens. About 12,000 people take part in the exercise, she said.

The helicopter crashed about a mile from the western boundary of Fort Hood, which is in Central Texas, authorities said.

"It's a utility-type helicopter. It's usually used to carry cargo," Creach said. "It usually has a crew of three, and it can carry up to eight passengers."

Houston oilman's widow dies

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Rhea Robinson, widow of former Houston oilman Ash Robinson and mother of the late socialite Joan Robinson Hill, died at age 86.

Funeral arrangements are pending for Mrs. Robinson, who died Sunday at a Pensacola hospital. She is survived by a grandson, Robert Hill.

Ash Robinson, who died in February 1985 at age 87, had been informally accused but never indicted of hiring the killers of his former son-in-law, John Hill.

John Hill, a Houston plastic surgeon, was married to the Robinsons' only daughter, Joan, when she died March 19, 1969, of an unknown infection.

On Sept. 24, 1972, John Hill was shot to death in his River Oaks home after he and his third wife returned home to find his mother and son bound and gagged. At the time, Hill was awaiting a second trial on a charge he murdered Joan Hill by withholding medical care.

Hill's first trial in 1971 ended in a mistrial.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

Stanton woman killed in rollover north of Lamesa

From Staff Reports

A 51-year-old Stanton woman was killed and her husband was injured early Sunday morning after she was trapped in a vehicle that crashed and rolled over on a county road north of Lamesa, the Department of Public Safety reported.

The accident occurred at 12:35 a.m. on FM 137, seven miles north of Lamesa, reports said. A 1981 Buick driven by Robert DeLaRosa of Stanton was traveling southbound on 137 when an oncoming truck failed to dim its bright lights. DeLaRosa swerved the car to the right shoulder and it rolled over, reports said.

The passenger in the car, Dolores Dominguez DeLaRosa, was trapped in the vehicle. She was pronounced dead at the scene by Dawson County Justice of the Peace Denise Dyess, reports said.

DeLaRosa suffered an injured shoulder and was taken to Medical Arts Hospital in Lamesa.

Women's group to meet

The Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce Women's Department will meet Wednesday at 6 p.m. for a quarterly meeting at the Plaza Club.

The featured speaker will be Ms. Johnnie Lou Avery of Avery and Associates in Big Spring.

Ms. Avery, an outstanding leader in the Big Spring community, is described by Texas Business as a "live wire" and "a constant cheerleader for her community and state."

At the meeting, the Ballet de Mujeres Professionals will provide entertainment.

Primary goal of MHCC Women's Department, organized by Darlene Gifford in March 1986, is to address women's issues and needs. Meetings are held on the fourth Wednesday of each month at 11:30 a.m. at the Plaza Club, excluding quarterly meetings which are held at 6 p.m.

All women are invited to attend the meeting. For more information call Elvia Hernandez at 682-2960.

Connally comes to airport

Former Texas Gov. John Connally will be in Midland Tuesday to address the effect possible budget cuts will have on education in Texas, it was announced today.

Connally will hold a press conference at 2:30 p.m. at the terminal building of Rich Air South at Midland Regional Airport.

Connally will speak on behalf of the Friends of Education, a coalition of business and civic leaders in the state working for the protection of education from legislative budget cuts. He will be joined at the press conference by education leaders from the Midland and Odessa area.

Man arrested near scene of several break-ins

From Staff Reports

A 27-year-old man was in city jail this morning and may be charged with burglary of a vehicle after he was arrested near the scene of several break-ins at a local apartment complex, police said.

The man was arrested at 4:35 a.m. Saturday as he walked through the LakePoint Apartments complex, 2439 Whitmire Blvd., according to Cpl. Jim White, police spokesman. White said the man was stopped by an officer in the area and "became very defensive when questioned."

An automobile battery and stereo that had been stolen from a vehicle were recovered from the man, White said.

White said police are investigating if the man is connected to two other burglaries that occurred at the complex over the weekend.

Police Roundup

Police reported 13 other vehicle burglaries between Friday and Sunday, including five at the Chateau Apartments, 1603 N. Midkiff. Among items reported stolen in the burglaries were a two-way radio valued at $1,300, three batteries valued at $115, a stereo valued at $80, and a .22 caliber rifle valued at $100.

Police are also investigating the burglary of a local liquor store. According to reports, 15 bottles of whiskey valued at $420 and nine bottles of tequila valued at $110 were stolen from a display at The Well, 4200 N. Midland Dr. Police said the burglary occurred about midnight Saturday after a rock was thrown through a plate glass window.

Liquor was also among the items stolen from a residence in the 2600 block of North Loop 250, police said. Seventy dollars in quarters, four shirts valued at $60, tennis shoes valued at $40, a pair of blue jeans valued at $25, a bottle of whiskey valued at $20, and a bottle of vodka valued at $10 were stolen between 2 p.m. and midnight Sunday, reports said.

An 18-speed bicycle valued at $600 and a bicycle computer valued at $75 were reported stolen from a vehicle in the 4300 block of Amistad Drive. Police said the burglary occurred this morning between 2:10 and 2:15 a.m.

In other reports, $100 cash was reported stolen from the Town West YMCA, 1012 Andrews Hwy., police said. The money was taken from an unlocked filing cabinet between 6 p.m. Saturday and 6 a.m. Sunday, reports said.

'Lost' diver fends off shark, swims 43 miles to safety

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A diver who got lost while swimming in the Gulf of Mexico was able to fend off a small shark and swim 43 miles to safety, authorities say.

Michael Metke of Harlingen, an experienced diver and swimmer, disappeared shortly after noon Saturday while diving off a pleasure craft with friends near the Port Mansfield jetties. He safely reached land about 4:30 p.m. Sunday, about 35 miles south of the ranger station on Malaquite Beach, a U.S Coast Guard spokesman said.

"He said he was bothered one time by a small shark that kept bumping into him," said Joseph Rock, Coast Guard quartermaster 2nd class. "He said he kept poking at it with his spear gun and it finally went away."

Metke drifted to shore as Coast Guard and private vessels joined in a round-the-clock search.

A Coast Guard helicopter and three cutters were dispatched from Port Aransas, Port Mansfield and Port Isabel.

The man's friends also hired two small-engine planes, chartered a boat and rented a 4-wheel drive truck to scout the waters and shoreline from Corpus Christi to the Port Mansfield jetties, a Coast Guard report said.

"He didn't have any apparent injuries; he was just tired," said Mark Arsenault, a Padre Island National Seashore park ranger.

"I would say he's real lucky to be alive," he said.

Metke landed on Big Shell Beach and a visitor drove him to the ranger station. A Coast Guard helicopter then transported him to Port Mansfield where he met his family, Rock said.

Swaggart accused of skimming cash from donations

DALLAS (AP) — The Rev. Jimmy Swaggart and his ministry have been accused by tax officials of skimming cash from contributions, but his attorney vehemently denies the allegations.

The television evangelist and his Louisiana-based Jimmy Swaggart Ministries also are accused in court documents of ignoring court orders to produce financial information, the Texas Lawyer reported in today's edition.

The ministry's lawyer denied withholding any relevant material and denounced the allegation that Swaggart had dipped into contributions.

The papers were filed in a tax dispute between officials in South Texas' Montgomery County and Jimmy Swaggart Ministries, the Lawyer reported.

The Conroe Independent School District, the city of Shenandoah and the county say Swaggart's radio station KJOJ owes $157,000 in taxes for three properties.

Swaggart contends the properties are tax-exempt.

Russell R. Graham, an attorney for tax officials, said in a letter to State District Judge John C. Martin that his clients believe Swaggart retained contributions for his personal use.

William D. Treeby, chief lawyer for Swaggart Ministries, denied the allegation.

"If any of that money went into Reverend Swaggart's pocket...that would be the death penalty," Treeby said. "We're not going to do that."

Treeby said Graham and other lawyers are trying to get publicity by pressing for the financial data.

A hearing is scheduled for July 17 on a motion for sanctions against the church for its alleged reluctance to obey discovery orders.

Swaggart's income, drawn from about $5.5 million in annual royalties from recordings and books, was $17,600 in salary and $34,000 in other compensation for an unspecified year, according to an interview.

METER

Four female officers, whom Conklin refers to as his "angels," walk the three beats contained inan area streching north-to-south from Indiana Avenue to Tennessee, and east-to-west from Carrizo Street to Baird Street.

According to Ms. Teichmann, the total amount of tickets written daily for parking violations varies both with the season and the economic times.

"During the boom, each officer would average between 200 to 250 tickets a day," said Ms. Teichmann, "but now its down to about 80 to 100 a day.

"When Midland's economy was better people used to leave dollar bills tucked under their windshield wipers when they didn't have change for the meter," claimed Ms. Teichmann, "Of course I couldn't touch it, but I would put a quarter in their meter."

The accomplishment Ms. Teichmann is proudest of after 11 years as a meter maid is not the number of tickets she has written, nor the many miles she has walked, but that "I've never had a blister," she said.

Realistic desert 'war' trains U.S. Army troops

Copley News Service

FORT IRWIN, Calif. — Dawn was just a promise in the black sky when the cold night was ruptured by a series of brilliant flashes and deep booms.

The thunder and lightning of artillery warned that a night of scattered jousting soon would give way to a clash of massive scale.

A few miles to the south, twin columns of tanks and armored vehicles of the "Soviet" 32nd Guards Motorized Rifle Regiment were racing to unleash a storm of cannon and missile fire against American troops enduring the artillery bursts among the barren ridges and wadis.

Fortunately for the tank crews and infantrymen of the U.S. Army's 5th Battalion, 194th Armored Brigade and D Troop, 10th Cavalry, all the gunfire would be harmless lasers and blanks and all the dying would be registered by electronic sensors on men and equipment.

But the battle unfolding on this late April morning was not a game. It is part of the deadly serious curriculum at the National Training Center, where Army units hone their fighting skills in conditions as close to actual combat as possible.

"It's the most realistic training I've ever seen in 27 years in the Army," said Brig. Gen. H.G. "Pete" Taylor, the center's commanding officer.

THE TROOPS of the Fort Knox, Ky., based units were in the ninth day of their 20-day tour at the center. The intense pace of training was taking its toll in mistakes by the tired and gritty soldiers, mistakes that apparently doomed them hours before the climatic battle began.

The mission of the training units, called "Blue Force" in traditional war game terminology, was to defend a 7x12-mile sector of this high desert country midway between Los Angeles and Las Vegas.

To protect this area, Lt. Col. John W. Norris had about 965 men from his 5th Battalion and supporting units, and 44 M-60 tanks and 51 M-113 armored personnel carriers, both Vietnam War-vintage weapons.

Attacking them were more than 1,000 men from two U.S. Army battalions permanently based at Fort Irwin to provide a Soviet-style opposing force, or "Op For" to test the training units. Their role is similar to the aggressor squadrons at the Navy's Top Gun and the Air Force's Red Flag air combat training programs.

The "Soviet" troops wear distinctive dark green uniforms, topped by rakish black berets. They fight with 194 aging U.S. M-551 Sheridan light tanks visually modified with fiberglass shells to resemble Soviet T-72 main battle tanks, BMP armored personnel carriers and other combat vehicles.

Although the "Soviet attack" came at dawn, the fighting started the previous day when aggressor scouts, on foot and in armored vehicles, began to infiltrate the Blue Force positions.

More than half of the scouts were "killed" in the nighttime game of hide-and-seek, most of them casualties of aggressive counter-reconnaissance patrolling by Blue Force tanks and M-113s.

DESPITE THEIR heavy casualties, the scouts had pinpointed virtually the entire Blue Force and revealed a potentially fatal flaw in its defenses.

"They are pretty weak in the east," said opposing force commander Lt. Col Douglas Macfarlane, pointing to the detailed data plotted on a battle map in his dimly lighted tactical operations center about 7 miles from the battlefield. "I think they want me to go west. If that's the case, then it's to my advantage to go east."

Macfarlane's plan to exploit the Blue Force weakness and his own troop's intimate knowledge of the terrain called for the regiment to attack in two battalion-strength columns, code named "Bayonet" and "Stiletto."

They would feint toward the U.S. positions, then swing to the east over apparently unfavorable terrain, bypassing the Blue Force units and striking into their rear.

The regiment's 3rd Battalion would follow as the customary Soviet second echelon, ready to exploit the breakthrough achieved by the assault columns.

At about 4 a.m., Macfarlane quickly dictated the final details of the battle plan, calling for barrages of smoke and simulated poison gas on the main Blue Force positions.

At 5:45 a.m., the battle escalated with mind-numbing speed.

With loud pops, more thick white smoke spread over the Blue Force positions on the brush-covered ridges. It was answered by a ripple of air and ground bursts to the southwest as Blue Force artillery greeted the first units of "Bayonet."

Faint clanking and grinding that marked the approach of "Stiletto" were drowned out in the roar of two small jets — U.S. Air Force A0-37s acting as Soviet "Frogfoot" attack planes — dashing in to rain simulated bombs and cannon fire on Blue Force positions.

At 6:20, a radio message indicated the Blue Force commander realized he had been outwitted and quickly flanked by the rapidly moving "Soviet" columns.

BLUE FORCE A-10 attack jets and AH-1 Cobra attack helicopters rush in to help the hard-hit ground units. Columns of dust coming down a distant ridge signal a counterattack.

But it is too little and too late.

At 7:20, a unit of Blue Force tanks rolled up a hill for a desperate last stand. They are quickly flanked and destroyed in close fighting with the swarming "Soviet" armor.

The controller radio announced that the first Op For units have crossed Range Road, their objective.

"It was a good fight," the senior controller announced, as he prepared to bring the battle to an end around 8 a.m. "Everybody got into the fight. Everybody did some dying and some killing."

THE KEY to the NTC training is what the units learn, not who wins or loses and, "I'm not sure you're not learning more when you lose. Obviously, it's more fun to win," Norris said with apparent embarrassment.

Equally embarrassed was 1st Lt. Victor Lopez, whose tank platoon was wiped out in its own mine field.

Capt. James Henderson, Lopez's company commander, said he and his men would benefit from the mistakes they made. "It opens your eyes when you look around and see three-fourths of the company's lights blinking," indicating the tanks were destroyed, he said.

"But that's why they have this place," Henderson said. "So you can make those mistakes here instead of when people die."

Electronic battlefield trains U.S. forces

By OTTO KREISHER
Copley News Service

FORT IRWIN, Calif. — Sgt. 1st Class Roger Newman was "dead."

The M-60 tank commander and his crew had been "killed" during a night of skirmishing that preceded an attack by a "Soviet" armored regiment in which much of their unit, 5th Battalion, 194th Armored Brigade, was "destroyed."

Although Newman's death obviously was simulated, there was nothing artificial about his fatigue and griminess after several long days and sleepless nights in this sun-scorched high desert country.

But he had only praise for the ordeal he and his men were going through.

"This is an extreme benefit I would not want to give up," Newman said "You're tired. You're distressed. But I wouldn't want to give it up."

The training is "100 percent better" than what the unit could have received at its home base, Fort Knox, Ky., he said as the men around him nodded.

Newman and about 4,000 other soldiers from the 194th Brigade and supporting units were being exposed to the Army's ultimate peacetime learning experience for combat troops — 20 days at the National Training Center.

With $100 million worth of computers, electronic sensors and communications equipment, a deadly efficient Soviet-style aggressor force and a Rhode Island-size expanse of diverse terrain, the training center gives Army troops what is widely considered the closest thing possible to actual combat.

THE TRAINING is so realistic it produces combatlike psychological reactions, soldiers and officers said in interviews.

"It puts you through the strain," said Sgt. 1st Class Robert Stansberry, another tank commander. "When you listen to the radio at night, you're sure the Op For (aggressor) guys are coming at you. Everyone gets trigger-happy in the night."

"It's a little scary," admitted Capt. James Henderson, Newman's and Stansberry's company commander.

Brig. Gen. H.G. "Pete" Taylor, the training center commander, said the facility has "done more for the Army to increase (combat) readiness than anything else.

CNS Graphic

"Equipment, doctrine and organization all are important, but if you can't put it all together, it's not good enough," Taylor said, adding that the center allows unit commanders to put all that together in a combat-like environment.

The Army reclaimed Fort Irwin's 1,000 square miles of desert valleys, ridges and barren mountains northeast of Los Angeles from the California National Guard eight years ago when the increased range and deadliness of new weapons created the need for a larger training area than ordinary Army posts provided, Taylor said.

The Army also was reacting to the same kind of Vietnam War experiences that led the Air Force and the Navy to create their Red Flag and Top Gun air combat training programs, he said.

Those experiences showed that if a pilot or soldier survived the first week or two of combat his chances of long-term survival went up dramatically.

"THE NTC provides a place where we can give the first 10 missions, the first 14 days of war, to a battalion-sized unit," Taylor said.

A key element of the realistic training, Taylor said, is the opposing force, the Soviet-style 32nd Guards Motorized Rifle Regiment. It is composed of two regular Army battalions permanently based at Fort Irwin, augmented on a temporary basis by two infantry companies and an engineer company.

Since the opposing force spends about 200 days in the field a year, fighting dozens of simulated battles, there appears to be nothing hollow in their claim to be one of the best combat units in the U.S. or the Soviet armies.

And Taylor makes sure that the opposing force attacks with the kind of numerical superiority U.S. troops would expect to face in Europe.

The Op For's numerical advantage, combat skills and intimate knowledge of the battlefield have left many commanders sharing the humbling experience of Lt. Col. John W. Norris, whose units were soundly defeated in the battle that "killed" Newman and Stansberry.

But Taylor emphasized that the mission of the NTC is "training, not testing" of visiting units.

TAYLOR SAID his operation-control personnel, who referee the battles and provide instruction to the training units, do evaluate the units' performance against the standards of Army doctrine. But any determination of a commander's fitness or a unit's combat readiness must be made by the unit's superiors, he said.

"Nobody gets fired because of what we say and we hope nobody gets fired because of what they do here," he said. Rather than have commanders fired for their mistakes, "we want them to make mistakes and learn from it."

Taylor added that while the main mission at NTC is to train the "heavy forces" — tank and mechanized infantry units — "almost as important is the lessons learned, the feedback into doctrine."

And because Army battle doctrine is changing, with the new Air-Land Battle concept emphasizing coordination of larger sized fighting units and closer integration of air and ground forces, the training center mission is changing.

To provide the combined arms combat required of modern warfare, the Army includes its own attack helicopters. It has brought the Air Force into the war games by incorporating the Air Warrior close-air-support training conducted from George Air Force Base.

Maj. David Ken, center operations officer, said nearly half of the close-air support missions flown annually in the United States — about 3,000 flights — are in support of exercises at Fort Irwin.

AIR FORCE units provide both the aggressor air strikes to test the training units' air defensive skills and the friendly air operations to teach ground commanders to coordinate their air support.

In the process, Air Force attack pilots learn how to conduct air-to-ground support missions in a realistic environment provided by electronically simulated anti-air guns and missiles.

Other unique features of the center are the electronic systems that realistically simulate gun and missile fire and record the battles for debriefing and analysis.

A sophisticated system of harmless laser emitters and receivers — similar in concept to the "laser tag" games sold in toy stores — has replaced the old war game method of random shooting of blanks and arbitrary referee determinations of kills.

With the Multiple Integrated Laser Engagement System (MILES), each individual weapon is equipped with a laser emitter that sends a distinctive coded signal. Each soldier and combat vehicle carries a set of sensors to detect the laser beams.

"Every unit that comes here leaves the desert a better unit," said Lt. Col John Schneeberger, who is ending a tour at Fort Irwin. "And the Army is better than when I came here four years ago."

DEAR ABBY

Man's family shuts him out after closing door on wife

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I recently married a lovely woman I'll call Carole. My mother did not approve of her because she was a divorcee with two children. (We are both in our late 20s.) My brother was my best man. My family came to the church but did not go to the reception. In fact, they walked out the side door immediately following the ceremony.

My brother is getting married soon and I had already agreed to be his best man. When the wedding invitation arrived, I was shocked to see that it was addressed to me only! I asked my brother if it was some kind of oversight and he said no, Carole was not invited because Mother didn't want her there.

I sat down and wrote my brother a letter because I couldn't tell him face to face how hurt I was. I also told him that unless my wife was invited, I could not be his best man. I asked him to please come to see me so we could talk things over. I heard nothing from him, so I called and asked if he wanted to talk, and he hung up on me. I haven't heard from him since.

The last line of my letter was: "When Carole and I took our marriage vows, we two were made one, and I cannot send half of me to your wedding."

Was I wrong? Should I have gone and left my wife at home? (She told me it was my decision.) — HURT IN LYNN, MASS.

DEAR HURT: You were not wrong. I applaud your loyalty. Please greet your lucky wife for me.

DEAR ABBY: A while back you answered a woman's query about the comparison of a man's eating habits to his lovemaking. She was in love with a man who ate fast and she was concerned that his quick satisfaction of his physical need for food might prophesy a similar quick satisfaction of his physical need for sex.

You advised her not to be concerned — if she loved him, she should marry him.

At the time, I wasn't sure of your advice. Now I am. Abby, you were right on the nose. I now know what great sex is, and it's with this man who eats like he hasn't eaten in six weeks. Please print this as validation of your advice to others, who, like me, put your advice on hold. Sign me ... YUM

P.S. On what did you base your conclusion?

DEAR YUM: Just common sense and good manners. A gentleman never keeps a lady waiting.

DEAR ABBY: How right you are to point out that constant tickling of a person is cruelty and should not be tolerated. My Irish mother told me at least 50 years ago of a situation that took place near her hometown in Ireland.

A neighbor had at least two wives pass away before anyone paid much attention to it. Then another neighbor reported hearing hysterical laughter coming from that house. Well, it was later learned that the man had been tying his wives to the bedpost, and tickling the soles of their bare feet with a feather! He continued until the hysteria did them in. In truth, they were tickled to death. — PAT HOLLINGSWORTH, BRITISH COLUMBIA

Military uses 'ultra-super' computer

Copley News Service

For the last 10 years, we've heard talk of how the coming generation of super-computers will revolutionize modern society. And while they undoubtedly will, these same sophisticated machines will only be of limited value to an even higher-flying military establishment.

According to H. John Caulfield, director of Applied Optics at the University of Alabama in Huntsville, the U.S. military has developed and is already using a unique "optical" computer that depends on light waves instead of cruder silicon or gallium arsenide chips to process information.

The new ultra-super computer is called an Optical Spectrum Analyzer, and its capabilities include the identification of enemy missiles' radio frequencies, speed and scrambling of target instructions.

Caulfield, who also is technical director of Strategic Defense Optical-Computing Research, is developing a less complex acousto-optical computer of his own that converts data to radio signals, then writes it in laser beams conveyed by a systolic array process.

Acousto-optical computers eventually will be placed inside robot reconnaissance vehicles in space, where they will locate, track and help destroy enemy missiles.

Wright tried to influence FSLIC, news reports claim

NEW YORK (AP) — House Speaker Jim Wright intervened with federal regulators on behalf of a longtime supporter whose savings and loan association was being investigated, according to published reports.

The Texas Democrat has been accused of helping several well-connected real-estate developers facing legal problems in his home state, said the reports in Newsweek's June 29 issue and today's editions of The New York Times.

Although there have been no charges of illegality, Wright repeatedly twisted the arm of Edwin Gray, chairman of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, which oversees the S&L industry, the reports said.

U.S. officials told the publications that Wright tried to limit federal efforts to regulate the thrift institutions, and blocked passage of a bill that would pump more money into an insurance fund for S&L's.

The publications said Wright urged Gray to re-examine the board's action against real estate developer Thomas Gaubert, a prominent Democratic fund-raiser and owner of Independent American Savings Association in Irving, Texas.

"I have done things as a result of his calls that I would not have done and never did before," Newsweek quoted Gray as saying.

Spokesmen for Wright and Gaubert told the Times that Wright was not seeking special treatment for Gaubert. They also said Wright had made other efforts to protect S&L's from what he considered questionable enforcement by the bank board.

The Reagan administration wants $15 billion allocated for the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, which bails out weakened thrifts. Until April, Wright insisted that $5 billion would be enough and said the FSLIC was too eager to take over Texas S&Ls that could recover on their own.

"For the first time, in the FSLIC we are seeing recurrent attempts to use political influence to prevent FSLIC from taking effective enforcement action against hopelessly insolvent thrifts," FSLIC deputy director William K. Black told the Times.

"Such interference from influential, powerful members of Congress will increase FSLIC's losses," he said. "Somebody's going to have to pay for the losses."

Wright "was always acting to help the industry generally rather than any specific institution," said his aide, Marshall Lynam.

In another case, Newsweek said Wright told Gray he wanted the FSLIC-appointed conservator of Westwood Savings & Loan in California to call off lawsuits seeking to foreclose on loans made to 16 syndicates of Dallas real-estate syndicator Craig Hall.

Newsweek said Wright made it clear the bailout bill wouldn't pass the House unless the board eased up on Hall.

Hall told Newsweek, "I talked to Jim Wright and a lot of other congressman — anybody who'd listen — to get the lawsuits pulled back."

A third Texan helped by Wright was Don Dixon, owner of Vernon Savings and Loan Association in Vernon, Texas, Newsweek said. Wright aide Phil Duncan said Wright merely asked Gray to delay the takeover of Vernon for one week.

The contact was made in December and the FSLIC didn't act until March.

Officials worry about border dwellers' health

EL PASO (AP) — Dr. Asencion Mena worries that polio, whooping cough and other diseases once conquered through immunizations will again trouble people living along the U.S.-Mexico border.

"We're too fragmented in the county," said Mena, medical director of the La Fe Clinic in El Paso. "Patient dumping from hospitals still exists."

Mena, whose clinic saw 55,000 low-income patients last year, was one of several health officials attending a three-day conference over the weekend on border health issues.

Although some attending the conference said the federal government is growing more concerned about the health of those living along the border, others questioned the government's sincerity.

They said the government is pledging to help solve problems on one hand while cutting back programs.

"There is an awareness that more needs to be done," said Herbert Ortega of the Pan American Health Organization in El Paso. "But we need to cry for help from the federal government."

Sonia Leon Reig, director of migrant health programs of the federal Health Resources and Services Administration, said the federal government is becoming more sensitive toward border health issues.

As evidence, she said, the U.S. Public Health Service plans to spend more than $2 million this fiscal year on health-related activities along the Texas-Mexico border.

The money is earmarked to expand border health care services to poor people, improve training for allied health personnel and improve adolescent health care.

"The needs are great. It will take a special commitment at all levels," Ms. Leon Reig said. "Our goal is to reduce morbidity and mortality and to improve environmental conditions along the border region."

Two major factors are influencing the heightened concern: The border's rapidly growing population and money to tackle health-related problems on the U.S. side.

Bishops' revelations may hurt Clements credibility

AUSTIN (AP) — Revelations that Gov. Bill Clements' knew, but kept silent about Southern Methodist University football players receiving under-the-table payments could hurt his credibility on some fronts, but should have no real side affects in other areas, political observers say.

"Those men who conspired to protect the governor did the public and the voters of Texas a great disservice," said Bob Slagle, the state Democratic chairman.

"His credibility will be suspect through the remainder of his administration. Being a liar is like being a little pregnant — you either are a liar or you aren't," Slagle said.

One Republican lawmaker said the disclosure by an SMU bishops' committee report last week may dampen Clements' efforts to remove two Texas Supreme Court justices recently chastised for judicial impropriety.

"When you have a mark against you, you can't point a finger at someone else."

— Rep. Terral Smith, Austin

"When you have a mark against you, you can't point a finger at someone else," said Rep. Terral Smith of Austin.

But Smith was among those who didn't think the scandal would affect upcoming state budget debate.

A 48-page report issued Friday said Clements, as chairman of the SMU Board of Governors, knew improper payments were being made to football players and allowed them to continue even though the school already was on probation for similar violations.

Sen. Kent Caperton, D-Bryan, said Clements' action "does bring into question a very serious question of moral ethics. But the voters would have to decide that, should he choose to run again."

But a political consultant and veteran observer of Texas politics said the issue may be moot.

"It's very difficult to do political damage to an incumbent who's not running again," said George Christian of Austin.

Rep. Eddie Cavazos, D-Corpus Christi, said "it is only appropriate that the attorney general read the report and see if any state law was violated."

"I think any credibility he had is gone," Cavazos said.

Clements, before and after the election, denied knowledge of payoffs at SMU, but in March admitted he decided to gradually "phase out" the payments.

A panel of four United Methodists bishops conducted a three-month investigation into the scandal. The bishops said Clements and several other members of the board of governors participated in an elabo te scheme to keep Clements' invo ment a secret.

Bus driver had just put on safety belt, woman says

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — The driver of a chartered bus carrying 32 people back to Louisiana from a church camp when it collided head on with a jeep is in a Texas hospital today recovering from a broken leg.

But it could have been worse, a passenger said.

Bus driver Arnold Lafferty "didn't have a seat belt on all the way from Dallas," said teacher Angela Bertone, 21. "When we stopped just five minutes before the wreck he put it on. It saved his life," she said.

Lafferty, 32, underwent surgery Saturday for a broken leg and was expected to remain in Tyler County Hospital in Woodville, hospital administrator James Moisbee said.

The two men riding in the jeep were killed instantly, and the other people aboard the bus were injured, Sheila Swan of the Texas Department of Public Safety said.

The dead men were identified and James Arthur Bell, 34, and Marvin Edward Stubblefield, 32, both of Lufkin, Texas.

Fourteen of the passengers were teen-agers from Red Oak Baptist Church and 10 were from the First Baptist Church of Independence. Eight adults were on the bus, said Red Oak pastor Wilton Wall.

Some of the students aboard said the believe divine intervention protected them from injury.

"Luck had nothing to do with it," said 14-year-old Matt Hughes. "God was with us."

"It just made us more determined to beat the devil," said Mindy Smith, 17.

Miss Smith said she believed nearly everyone on the bus escaped injury because a woman blessed the bus before it left Glorieta, N.M., where the youngsters had been at church camp for a week.

Johnny Erdey III was in stable condition Sunday at the Medical Center of Baton Rouge, a nursing supervisor said.

Erdey, Kim Stokes and Sheila Neeson all were taken from the Tyler County Hospital to the Medical Center of Baton Rouge,said Red Oak youth and music director Jeff Smart.

Ms. Stokes and Ms. Neeson were treated and released, the nursing supervisor said.

Family dispute over will ends in two deaths

ROCKWALL (AP) — A man shot three family members, killing one and wounding the others, and then turned the gun on himself after a dispute over a will turned violent, authorities say.

Rockwall Police investigator Terry Garrett said a telephone operator who notified police of the shootings told officials she heard one of the fatal shots over the phone.

Claude Francis Fulton, 71, died at 1:22 a.m. Sunday in the emergency room at Methodist Medical Center of Dallas. He died of a gunshot wound to the head, Garrett said. Dava Lynn Williams, 23, of Dallas was found dead at the home with a gunshot wound to her head.

"She was near the phone so she probably made the call," said Garrett. The body of Ms. Williams, who police believe was Fulton's granddaughter, was transported to the Dallas County Medical Examiner for an autopsy, he said.

Mary Duvall, 71, Fulton's wife, was in serious condition in Methodist's intensive care unit, said nursing supervisor Barbara Phelps.

Angels have rough time in El Paso

From Staff Reports

EL PASO — The Midland Angels are finding rough going at the start of the second half of the Texas League baseball season.

After finishing strong but short in the first half race, the Angels fell to 1-3 in the TL West standings with a pair of losses to the El Paso Diablos here this weekend.

On Saturday, the Diablos edged the Angels 6-5 and came back on Sunday to win an 18-15 slugfest.

Sunday, Midland starting pitcher Mike Romanovsky got into big trouble real fast, giving up 14 runs in the first two innings to spot the Diablos at 14-3 lead.

But, that wasn't the hard part to swallow. In the top of the seventh, the Angels made it three straight four-run innings to take a 15-14 lead only to have El Paso tie the score in the bottom of the frame and win it on a Jesus Alfaro two-run double in the eighth.

Combined, there were 41 hits in the game and seven errors. Each team also stranded 13 base runners.

Midland's Joe Redfield and El Paso's Ernie Riles each had five-hit efforts to lead the hitting attacks.

EL PASO won Saturday's game in the bottom of the eighth when Garrett Nago scored from third on a wild pitch by Midland reliever Miguel Garcia.

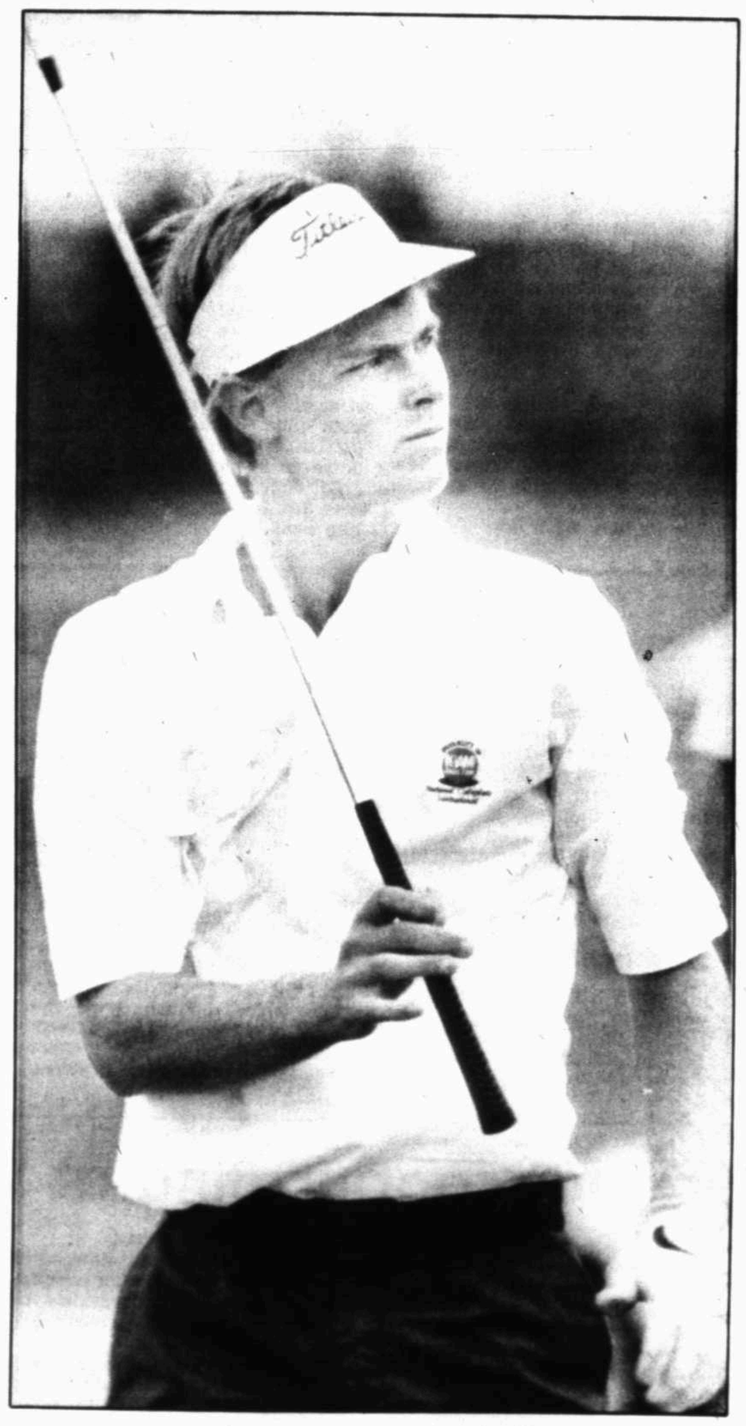

The game featured two new-comers, for Midland.

Norm Carrasco was demoted to Midland from AAA Edmonton after Mark Brouhard was called up and Bill Geivett, who has been on the disabled list all year with a broken thumb, was activiated.

ELSEWHERE AROUND the league,the Wichita Pilots remained tied with the Diablos for first place at 3-1 with a 5-4 victory over San Antonio. The Dodgers and Angels are tied for last at 1-3.

In the TL East, first half champion the Shreveport Captains remained perfect with a 4-3 win over the Tulsa Drillers, running the Captains' record to 4-0.

Abilene golfer Bob Estes watches his drive off the second tee Sunday in Men's West Texas play at Green Tree Country Club.

Estes wins '87 Men's WT

Whiteside one 20-footer from tie

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

It was all there. A Hitchcock finish with a drum roll introduction of Cecile B. proportions in the form of a spectacular lightning display to accompany a two-hour thunderstorm delay.

When the rains struck, Abilene's Bob Estes was preparing to tee off on 17 and Midland's Steve Whiteside was looking at a 20-foot eagle putt, which would have tied him with the University of Texas golfer and forced another playoff between the two antagonists.

Neither figured to be too much of a threat going into the final 18, but put Estes and Whiteside in a Men's West Texas Amateur, play it in Midland and it's like a Red Sox World Series.

Whiteside settled for a birdie and Estes played the final two holes in par for a final round 70 and a 72-hole total of 281. It was just enough to edge Whiteside, who started the day eight strokes off the lead, by a stroke. The Midlander finished with a 67.

"The 74 the first day killed me," said Whiteside, the 1985 Men's WT champ coming off the 18th green at Green Tree Country Club Sunday.

Estes dropped a tricky two-foot putt for his par on 18, but noted, "It was missable and the last thing I wanted was another playoff with Whiteside."

TWO YEARS ago at Ranchland Hills, Whiteside looked beat on the sixth extra hole but dropped an impossible putt to pull it out.

Going into the final round, Todd Brown, Abilene, who led or shared the lead each of the first three days, held a two-stroke lead over Bill Holstead — the two-time champion from Wichita Falls, who finished third — and a four stroke edge over Estes.

Nothing went right for Brown Sunday. He was three over at the turn and then splashed himself right out of contention, finding water on 13 for a six, took another dip on the par three 16th to double-bogey for a seven.

Whiteside couldn't have done much more than he did and when he was finished he just had to hope that Estes, entering his final year of eligibility at UT, would stub his toe.

Jeff Cranford blasts out of a sand trap and onto the third green at Green Tree CC in Men's West Texas play Sunday. The Odessan finished seventh in the tournament.

"Saturday I had a 72 that should have been a 70. It was on the back nine that I fell part...35-39 the first day and 35-37 Saturday," Whiteside analyzed.

Sunday he shot 33-34 with five birdies...4, 5, 13, 17, 18. On 11 and 12, he came out of high grass to salvage pars, but 16 was his undoing.

"It was the only hole I bogeyed," said Steve of the par three water hole. Faced with a long putt over a hump in the green, Whiteside felt he needed a birdie and went for it, too far, and wound up with what turned out to be a fatal bogey.

Estes bogeyed nine and 11 and admits it shook him up. "I was behind all through the tournament and I was playing uncertain golf. That didn't help."

But for the four days of play, Estes was consistent, no sensational rounds, but he shot two rounds at par and two one-under rounds.

He has two years to go for his degree and then hopes to go to Tour School and give the pros a shot.

ESTES WAS one of seven former Abilene Cooper golfers playing in the tournament. And while this group was in high school, the Cougars were the scourge of the state.

"We all started out together in grade school and I guess if anyone had a significant influence on our development, it was LeWayneHarris, who ran the Lazy T, a nine-hole par three course in Abilene.

"We all grew up playing that course. I guess that was great for our short game and putting. I really didn't become a good driver until the last couple of years."

Mike Standley won last year's shortened 54-hole WT Men's at-Lubbock, but passed up this year's tournament to turn pro.

Next year's tournament will be held at Wichita Falls.

Surprised Simpson nips Watson for first major title

By ERIC PREWITT
AP Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO — Scott Simpson was surrounded by guys with green jackets, Masters champions all.

But when the 87th U.S. Open ended Sunday, the 31-year-old Californian possessed his first major golf title. His closing round of 2-under-par 68 on the Olympic Club's Lake Course gave him a one-stroke victory over Tom Watson, the two-time Masters winner.

Spain's Seve Ballesteros, another man who has twice worn the traditional green jacket presented to Masters champions, finished five strokes behind Simpson in third.

"I'm actually surprised I won it, to tell the truth," Simpson said.

Watson was disappointed but not surprised at the outcome.

"Scott Simpson is a very fine golfer. He's proven he can come from behind and that he can win on tough golf courses. Does it surprise me? No," Watson said.

Simpson made three consecutive birdies starting at the 14th hole, going ahead to stay with his 15-foot putt for a 4 on the 609-yard 16th. He saved a par at No. 17 by coming out of a bunker and making a 10-foot putt, then parred the 18th to complete the tournament with a 3-under total of 277.

U.S. Open

Watson had three bogeys on the first five holes but no more in his round of 70, which included three birdies. His 45-foot putt for a birdie on the 18th hole was about two inches short.

"I have to admit I was hoping it wouldn't go in. I didn't want a playoff," Simpson said.

If Watson's putt had dropped, the course would have had its third Open playoff in history today. Jack Fleck beat Ben Hogan in a Monday showdown to settle the 1955 title, and Billy Casper beat Arnold Palmer in 1966.

"It felt good to be back in the hunt again," said Watson, who has gone almost three years without winning a tournament.

"I have nothing to be ashamed about, but I am disapointed," he added.

"To beat Tom is something special. He's beaten a lot of guys down the stretch over the years and he's always aggressive," Simpson said. "He gave it his best shot, I gave it my best shot, and I was fortunate to win."

Simpson won the NCAA golf title twice at the University of Southern California, joined the PGA tour in 1979 and has won three tour events including this spring's Greater Greensboro Open.

The victory Sunday was worth $150,000 and jumped him from No. 9 to No. 1 on the tour's money-winning list, with season earnings of $465,896. Paul Azinger and Payne Stewart, the top two on the list last week, failed to make the cut in the Open.

Ballesteros battled to within one stroke of the lead midway through Sunday's round, but fell back with bogeys at the 12th and 13th and finished with a 71 for his total of 282.

At one point there was a four-way tie for first involving Simpson and three Masters winners — Watson, Ben Crenshaw and current champ Larry Mize.

"I've had a good consistent career and made some money, but I've got a little less recognition than some of the other guys. That's been fine with me," Simpson said. "Maybe I'll get more recognition now."

Brower ends slump, homers Rangers past A's

Associated Press

The Rangers brought down the curtain at the Coliseum on Sunday, but it was a beleaguered understudy rather than a spotlit star who stole the show.

"We replaced power with power," said Texas Manager Bobby Valentine after reserve outfielder Bob Brower hit two homers, including the first inside-the-park grand slam in Ranger history, to help Texas earn a doubleheader split with the Oakland Athletics, 13-3. The A's won the first game, 7-3.

It was truly Fathers' Day for regular Rangers slugger Pete Incaviglia, who missed the doubleheader when he flew home to Texas to await the birth of his first child. His replacement, Brower, broke an 0-for-18 slump and doubled his RBI total for the season by driving in six runs on his two homers, his first hits since May 25.

"If someone can't play, that's when I've got to go out and make the best of the opportunity," Brower said.

His second-inning slam with two outs gave the Rangers a 4-1 lead off A's starter Eric Plunk, 1-4, and Texas added three more runs before the inning was over.

American League

"That's not the play that beat us," said A's manager Tony La Russa, who was more upset that Plunk walked the bases loaded. "He couldn't get the ball over the plate."

Plunk walked six batters and left giving up only the hit to Brower in just 1 2-3 innings. His mound opponent, Edwin Correa, fell behind 1-0, but then settled down to win his first game since April 28 by lasting six innings and improving his mark to 2-5.

"A new season began for me today," said Correa. "There's no looking back. You see (Texas teammate) Bobby Witt got a win yesterday, and that was his first in a while, so let's keep it up."

The Rangers head home to Arlington after a successful 5-2 road trip, including three out of four from the A's.

"We needed a good road trip," said Valentine. "Now if we can go home and play some baseball like we know we can, we'll get back in it. The best thing about this road trip was seeing our young pitchers get some wins."

Dave Stewart prevented a Ranger sweep of the series by pitching the A's to a first-game victory, allowing only four hits in six innings. Dennis Eckersley retired eight of the nine batters he faced and struck out five to pick up his second save.

"We were just determined to win a ballgame today," said Stewart, 8-7. "We came out today and scored a lot of runs. It makes your job easier."

Oakland designated hitter Reggie Jackson hits the dirt after being hit by a pitch by Texas' Bobby Witt. Jackson got the last laugh. The bases were loaded.

Oakland's Mickey Tettleton and Mark McGwire each hit home runs in the first game, Tettleton's second and McGuire's 22nd of the season. Both homers were off Ranger right-hander Jose Guzman, who pitched a complete game but was hurt by a five-run, second-inning A's rally.

Guzman was his own worst enemy, throwing away a grounder to the mound by Alfredo Griffin with runners at second and third, giving Oakland two runs.

Orioles 9-3, Tigers 5-9

Chet Lemon hit two home runs and Kirk Gibson, Matt Nokes and Darrell Evans also homered as Detroit defeated Baltimore after the Orioles won the completion of Saturday night's suspended game 9-5.

Gibson and Nokes hit two-run homers in the third inning, No. 8 for Gibson and 14 for Nokes. Gibson also had a homer and two doubles in the suspended game as the Orioles snapped a five-game losing streak. The game was halted after eight innings by a 1 a.m. American League curfew with the Orioles leading 9-4.

South All-Stars have too many pitchers for North, 5-2

HOUSTON (AP) — The South's Brian Bohanon took the victory but had the help of three others in pitching a two-hitter in a 5-2 victory over the North team in the 14th annual Texas High School Coaches Association All-Star game.

Overall, the state's best high school pitchers combined for 30 strikeouts as pitching pitching dominated as expected in Sunday's game at the Astrodome.

North Shore's Bohanon and Bellaire's Chris Cox combined to pitch five innings of no-hit ball for the South. The North didn't get a hit until a two-out, eighth-inning RBI single by McCullough's Dan Robinson.

Bohanon started and pitched three innings to earn the victory.

He looked impressive as he struck out six, including the entire side in the second inning. A walk and a throwing error by third baseman Peter Padia of Wharton allowed the only baserunners against Bohanon.

"It felt good to throw well in it, being my last high school game," Bohanon said. "There was no letdown, and I had no trouble with the hitters."

Cox relieved in the fourth and pitched two full innings, retiring all six batters he faced with three strikeouts.

North starter Butch Henry of El Paso Eastwood was the loser. Henry pitched three innings, allowing one run and striking out six.

The only South pitcher who had trouble was Converse Judson's Scott McCarty. McCarty pitched one full inning and walked all three batters he faced in the seventh before being relieved by Pearland's Kirk Dressendorfer. Dressendorfer struck out three batters that inning but his wild pitch scored Paul Gonzales.

Dressendorfer pitched the last three innings, with two hits and four strikeouts.

Eddie Knocker of state Class 5A finalist San Antonio MacArthur drove in the South's first run with a second-inning single, scoring Thomas Mileski of Willis.

The South scored twice in the fifth, increasing their its lead to 3-0, aided by the North's wildness. Matt Howard of Jersey Village walked three in the inning and had two wild pitches. The only hit of the inning was an infield single by Beaumont West Brook's Pat Abercrombie.

Howard walked in Cox for one run and Beeville's Steve Medina scored on Abercrombie's hit.

Pinch hitter Gilbert Price of Shiner led off the South's sixth with a triple just out of the reach of right fielder Fonta Castleberry. Price's triple was the first extra-base hit of the game. He scored two outs later on a single by Beeville's Steve Medina.'s single.

Price scored the South's last run in the eighth on a single by Dressendorfer.

Astros' Deshaies beats Dodgers for fifth straight, 6-1

Associated Press

Jim Deshaies knew he didn't have overpowering pitches. But he had a four-run lead in the first inning and that was enough to keep him going.

"I didn't have real good stuff today. The velocity on my fastball was down. But I concentrated on throwing strikes and the defense behind me was great," Deshaies said after the Houston Astros beat the Los Angeles Dodgers 6-1.

Deshaies, 7-2, won his fifth straight decision. He gave up one run on seven hits in eight innings. Deshaies struck out two and walked one. Larry Andersen worked the final inning, allowing one hit.

The Astros turned three double plays behind Deshaies, including two on hard-hit ground balls by Dodgers slugger Pedro Guerrero.

"We are playing well at all phases of our game right now," Astros second baseman Bill Doran said. "When you do that, you avoid losing streaks."

Two errors, a wild pitch, two walks, two infield hits and a clean single gave the Astros to a 4-0 lead in the first inning against Rick Honeycutt, 2-6.

With one out, Doran singled to right and Chuck Jackson got an infield hit. Both runners advanced a base when Honeycutt attempted a pickoff at second base and threw the ball into center field.

Doran scored on a wild pitch by Honeycutt, with Jackson advancing to third. Kevin Bass walked and Jose Cruz drove in Jackson with an infield single. After a walk to Dickie Thon loaded the bases, Bass and Cruz scored when Dodgers third baseman Phil Garner failed to field a grounder by Ronn Reynolds.

The Dodgers cut the lead to 4-1 in the third inning on an RBI single by John Shelby.

Billy Hatcher's solo homer in the fourth made it 5-1, and the Astros added an unearned run in the eighth.

Glenn Davis of the Astros went 0-for-4, snapping his 10-game hitting streak.

Buddy Bell hit a home run with one out in the 10th inning to give Cincinnati a victory over Atlanta. straight game.

Bell's fifth homer of the season came on a 1-0 pitch from reliever Gene Garber, 8-5. The victory went to reliever Bill Landrum, 3-1, who pitched the final two innings.

The Reds, who once trailed 5-2, cut the lead to 5-4 in the sixth and sent the game into extra innings in the ninth when Lloyd McClendon doubled and scored on Kurt Stillwell's single.

Ozzie Virgil drove in three runs with for the Braves with his 19th and career-high 20th home runs.

Cardinals 7, Expos 3

Unbeaten rookie Joe Magrane pitched seven strong innings and Vince Coleman's two-run triple sparked St. Louis over Montreal.

Magrane, 5-0, allowed three runs on six hits. The left-hander was making his first start since coming off the disabled list with a tender elbow. Bill Dawley pitched the final two innings for his second save.

Jack Clark, leading the major leagues with 66 RBI, hit a run-scoring single in the first off Bob Sebra, 3-8.

Steve Lake drew a two-out walk in the second, Magrane followed with an infield single for his first big-league hit and Coleman then tripled. Coleman, who has reached base in 50 straight games by either a hit or walk, scored on Ozzie Smith's double.

Mets 8, Phillies 3

Dave Magadan drove home three runs and Sid Fernandez pitched four-hit ball for 5 2-3 innings as New York sent Philadelphia to its sixth straight loss.

The Phillies have lost all four games under new Manager Lee Elia, who replaced the fired John Felske on Thursday. The Mets have won four in a row.

Magadan had an RBI single in the fourth inning against Kevin Gross, 4-7, and a two-run double during a four-run fifth.

Fernandez, 9-3, gave up two runs. He is tied for the league lead in victories. Roger McDowell pitched three innings for his eighth save.

Chris James and John Russell hit consecutive home runs in the sixth for the visiting Phillies.

Cubs 6, Pirates 3

Keith Moreland homered and drove in three runs and Chicago beat Pittsburgh.

Steve Trout, 4-1, won his fourth straight decision and for the second time since coming off the disabled list Tuesday. He yielded three runs on seven hits in 5⅔ innings.

Lee Smith pitched the ninth inning for his major league-leading 19th save.

Moreland hit an RBI double during a three-run first and connected for a two-run homer, his 11th, in the fifth.

Doug Drabek, 1-6, took the loss for the visiting Pirates.

Giants 11, Padres 2

Kelly Downs pitched four-hit ball for seven innings and Will Clark, Bob Brenly and Matt Williams hit home runs that led San Francisco over San Diego.

Downs, 6-3, had beaten the Padres twice by 1-0 scores earlier this season.

The visiting Giants scored four times in the first inning against Eric Show, 2-9, who retired just one batter. An error by shortstop Garry Templeton set up RBI doubles by Jeffrey Leonard and Chili Davis.

Brenly hit a solo home run in the fifth and Clark hit his 13th homer in the sixth. Williams connected for a two-run homer in the ninth.

Randy Ready hit a two-run homer, his first in the majors since May 8, 1986, in the San Diego fourth.

Seattle got the only run Guetterman needed in the first inning on singles by Phil Bradley, Scott Bradley and Jim Presley.

Twins 8, White Sox 6

Tom Brunansky homered and then broke a 5-5 tie with a run-scoring double in the eighth inning. Brunansky doubled off Chicago reliever Jim Winn after Gary Gaetti reached first on third baseman Tim Hulett's fielding error and went to second on a groundout.

The Twins added two more runs in the eighth on Roy Smalley's single and Greg Gagne's double. Kirby Puckett, Gaetti and Dan Gladden also homered for Minnesota, which hit all four homers off starter Floyd Bannister. Fred Manrique, Gary Redus and Harold Baines connected for Chicago.

Blue Jays 7, Brewers 6

Lloyd Moseby, Willie Upshaw and Fred McGriff homered for Toronto and rookie Jeff Musselman earned his sixth victory with three innings of one-hit relief as Toronto opened a one-game lead over second-place New York in the AL East. All three Toronto homers came off Chuck Crim in the first four innings.

Robin Yount and Rob Deer hit a homers for Milwaukee.

Red Sox 4, Yankees 2

Rookie Ellis Burks hit a two-run homer in the eighth inning after Dwight Evans tied the score with a two-run shot in the seventh. Boston, held to two hits for six innings by Bob Tewksbury, finally caught up with the right-hander who was recalled from the minors on Saturday.

Boston's Wade Boggs went 3-for-4 in raising his major-league-leading batting average to .375 and extending his hitting streak to 22 games, longest this season. Roger Clemens, 6-6, allowed seven hits in pitching his seventh complete game in 15 starts.

Sports in Brief

Auto Racing

DETROIT — Ayrton Senna dominated the field in the Detroit Grand Prix, breezing to his second straight Formula One victory and second consecutive triumph in the streets here.

Senna, 27, of Brazil, won at Monaco three weeks ago. That was his first victory since winning last year's Detroit race.

This time, Senna beat Nelson Piquet by 33.819 seconds, running the entire 63 laps, (157.5 miles) without a pit stop. He was the only leader who did not stop for fresh tires...

RIVERSIDE, Calif. — Tim Richmond won his second consecutive NASCAR stock car race, taking the checkered flag two seconds ahead of Ricky Rudd in the Budweiser 400 at Riverside International Raceway.

Richmond averaged 102.183 mph in the 95-lap event for his fourth victory over Riverside's 2.62-mile road circuit...

Baseball

NEW YORK — Tom Seaver wanted to finish his career by pitching for the New York Mets. He made it back to the Mets, but not to the mound.

Seaver was to retire today, ending his comeback try. He did not think he could pitch well enough to return to the Major Leagues and the Mets called a press conference to make the announcement.

"I know he wanted to help us win a championship. But I also know he's very disappointed with his progress," Mets Manager Davey Johnson said...

BOSTON — Right-hander Dennis 'Oil Can" Boyd, disabled by a sore right shoulder since the start of the season, will be activated today in time to start against the Milwaukee Brewers.

Boyd, who had a career high 16 victories in 1986, will make his 1987 debut after three outings with Pawtucket of the International League...

Bowling

SEATTLE — Mark Roth has averaged 236 pins per game through the second round of the $125,000 Columbia 300 PBA Open.

Roth who is second in all-time PBA earnings and tournament wins, rolled all of his 12 games through the second round above 200. His total pinfall is 2,832.

Mother Nature not cooperating at Wimbledon

LONDON (AP) — The start of the 101st Wimbledon tennis championships was held up by rain today and organizers said they were pessimistic about the prospects for much play on the opening day.

Thousands of spectators, clad with umbrellas and raincoats, poured through the wrought iron gates of the All England Club, braving a persistent drizzle and hoping for a prime position to watch the action.

But to their frustration, the 14 famed grass courts stayed under tarpaulins and the scheduled 7:30 a.m. EDT start was delayed.

Play on the two show courts, Centre and No. 1., was not due to begin until 9 a.m., with two-time defending champion Boris Becker playing the first match on Centre against Karel Novacek of Czechoslovakia.

But tournament referee Alan Mills said Becker's return to the court where he became a star almost certainly would be held up as well.

"It's disappointing and frustrating, but there's nothing we can do," Mills said. "Even when it stops raining, the courts would have to be deflated and would then need more time to dry out."

Mills said the forecast was showers throughout the day, with brief periods of dry weather in between.

"If that happens, it does not look too promising for the day but as soon as we can get started, even if only for a short time, we will," he said.

Two years ago, only one match took place on the opening day when Ivan Lendl played Mel Purcell. Mills said it was too early to worry about the rain, which has lashed down on most of Britain for the past two weeks. The forecast calls for rain throught at least Thursday.

"In 1982, we had only two clear days throughout the whole of the tournament and we still finished on time," Mills said.

He said there was no chance of extending play to the middle Sunday of the tournament, traditionally a "dark" day.

"That does not look a possibility. We are just not geared up to it," Mills said. "In any case, the forecast is much better for later this week."

Wimbledon's grass signifies only one thing for Becker and Martina Navratilova — success.

Becker has lifted the men's trophy the past two years, while Navratilova has carried off the women's title the past five years.

Becker was favored to become only the seventh man, and the third in modern times, to win three successive singles titles in the world's most prestigious tournament.

Navratilova, however, looked a bit wobbly after a winless year and a growing confidence crisis.

"If I am not confident now, when will I be?" Becker said after completing his Wimbledon preparation by winning the Queens Club championships last week.

"I won Wimbledon, then I won it again, and I'm a much better player this year," Becker said.

By contrast, Navratilova hasn't gone into Wimbledon in seven years without a tournament title. She is winless this year.

Defeat in the final of the French Open by Steffi Graf, followed by another loss, this to Helena Sukova, in the championship match of the Eastbourne championships on Saturday haven't been the best preparation for the world's top-ranked woman player.

The loss to Sukova was Navratilova's first on British grass in 69 matches stretching back six years.

Wimbledon, she hopes, will put her back on the right track.

"I'm very down and not brimming with confidence but I'm still going to be the favorite to win Wimbledon," she said after losing to Sukova.

Navratilova, like all her leading rivals for the women's title, has until Tuesday, traditionally known as "Ladies Day," to think about her first-round opponent, Claudia Porwik of West Germany.

Some women seeds were on the first-day program, including No. 7 Gabriela Sabatini, No. 8 Manuela Maleeva, No. 11 Lori McNeil and No. 12 Catarina Lindqvist.

But most of the attention Monday focused on the red-haired Becker.

For the second successive year, the 19-year-old West German had the honor of playing the first match of the tournament on Centre Court, this time against Karel Novacek of Czechoslovakia.

After Becker, Australia's Pat Cash, the No. 11 seed, faced Marcel Freeman of the United States.

Today's schedule also included Ivan Lendl of Czechoslovakia, the top-ranked men's player but the No. 2 tournament seed, against Romania's Christian Saceanu. Third-seeded Mats Wilander and No. 4 Stefan Edberg, both of Sweden, and Americans Tim Mayotte and Brad Gilbert, seeded 10th and 12th, respectively, also were in action.

Mayotte, Gilbert and veteran Jimmy Connors, who was not due to play until Tuesday, are the three biggest American hopes for the men's championship in the absence of John McEnroe. McEnroe pulled out earlier this month for the second straight year, this time because of a back injury.

Okamoto sets Keystone mark, tops $1 million

HERSHEY, Pa. (AP) — A record round at the Lady Keystone Open gave Ayako Okamoto the key to the LPGA's millionaire club.

The 36-year-old native of Hiroshima, Japan, surprised the field Sunday with an 8-under-par 64 on the 6,348-yard West Course of the Hershey Country Club. The previous tournament record was a 65 shot by Amy Alcott in 1984.

Okamoto put together a round that included eight birdies and 10 pars to finish with a 54-hole total of 208.

Okamoto boosted her career earnings to $1,021,300 by winning the $42,500 first-place check in the 54-hole Lady Keystone.

Laurie Rinker had a final round 67 to finish one shot behind Okamoto. Martha Nause's 71 gave her a 210.

Ok-Hee-Ku, who led the first two rounds, had a 75 to drop into a fourth- place tie with Cindy Hill and Cathy Gerring at 211. Val Skinner's 67 enabled her to finished seventh at 212.

Okamoto said the key to her victory was her putting. She had only 24 putts for the round.

"Putting is something I don't practice very much," she said. "I only spend maybe five or 10 minutes a day on it."

Okamoto started the day at even par, eight shots behind Ku, the Korean player who was trying for her first tour victory.

"I didn't think I had a chance to win no matter what I shot," Okamoto said. "I felt one of the leaders would shoot two or three under par.

"I did tell my caddy I would play a lot better."

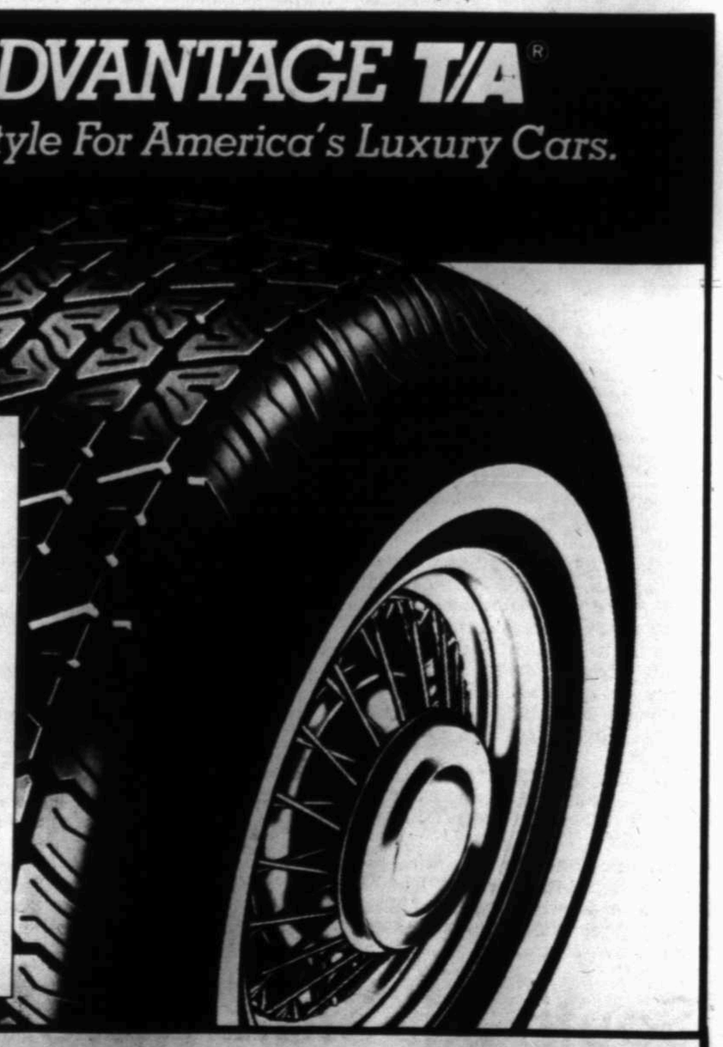

Okamoto had an opening-round 70 and a second-round 74 to go with her 64.

"I was fortunate to chip into the cup on two holes," Okamoto said. "That gave me the chance to win."

Okamoto used a 9-iron to run a 30-yard chip shot into the cup on the 405-yard starting hole. She followed that with a blast out of the bunker at No. 4.

Paul Hopson, 66, returns a backhand during the Century Doubles tennis tournament at Ranchland Hills Country Club this weekend. Hopson and partner Neil McClung, 36, won the tournament, which requires the age of teams to total 100 or greater. They defeated Bill Harris, 54, and David Legg, 45, 7-5, 7-5. In consolation, Joe Gifford, 57, Ken Moore, 42, defeated Wayne Westerman, 50, Ray Beldon, 51, 7-5, 7-5.

Williams stops Cooper, wants title shot at Tyson

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Carl "The Truth" Williams had his fists landing all over Bert Cooper, but his thoughts were on boxing's No. 1 name, Mike Tyson.

Williams stopped Cooper at the start of the eighth round Sunday of a nationally televised, scheduled 12-round United States Boxing Association heavyweight title fight.

The victor said if he could beat Cooper, he could eventually take on Tyson, the World Boxing Council and World Boxing Association heavyweight champion.

Cooper's trainer, former heavyweight champion Joe Frazier, refused to allow his fighter to answer the bell for the eighth round.

Williams ranked fifth by the International Boxing Federation, floored his Philadelphia opponent with a counter left hook in the opening round. Cooper rose easily and answered with a body combination, but never established his power thereafter.

Williams utilized a nine-inch reach advantage to jab effectively and land chopping right hands. Williams, from White Plains, N.Y., connected with a barrage of sixth-round rights and nearly decked Cooper with a left-right combination at the bell.

After Williams dominated the seventh, Cooper was not allowed to continue and fell to 16-2 with 13 knockouts.

Williams improved to 18-2 with 14 knockouts.

Williams familiarized himself with the 21-year-old Cooper's plodding style by waging simulated fights in the gym.

"We put Carl in four 12-round fights, with referees and a judge on the scene," said Carmen Graziano, Williams' trainer. "All the fights turned out just like this one. He stayed out of trouble. It's good for him psychologically when he sees Cooper and knows that he already beat guys like him in the gym."

The 27-year-old Williams looked sharp despite fighting for the first time since a February 1986 knockout loss to Mike Weaver.

"Most guys would be thinking, 'Hey, what's my manager doing? This is not progress.' I don't want a tough return fight," Williams said. "I wanted Cooper because he reminds me of Mike Tyson. I figured if I get past Cooper, I'll be able to beat Tyson."

Williams said he sparred with Tyson during the early stages of the latter's career.

TUESDAY, JUNE 23, 1987

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: A new relationship acts like a good luck charm this year. New career and financial gains are recorded. Your shy side emerges at times, slowing you down. Deal with your feelings openly and honestly. Learn to delegate some responsibilities so that you can deal with more important matters. Family members need to play a less dominant role now. Let them know you make your own decisions. Be polite but firm.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: country star June Carter Cash, award-winning choreographer-director Bob Fosse, golf great Lawson Little, author Anna Chennault, former Secretary of State William Rogers, the Duke of Windsor (Edward VIII), actress Irene Worth, American humorist-writer Irvin S. Cobb.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are highly inventive. Try several ways to solve an old puzzle. Answer correspondence without delay. A friendship may not live up to your expectations. Do not fret. Other pals rally around!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Give offspring more latitude in making important decisions. Letting go will be a plus, not a minus. A relationship changes for the better. The financial news from abroad is heartening. Take a trip.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You have great inner strength when you need it most. Spend time and money to make your home or work environment more comfortable. A flirtation is unlikely to develop into something meaningful.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Stay flexible and you will be able to accomplish more. Teamwork will boost profits. A friendship based on high ideals could be put to the supreme test. The outcome will please you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Know your priorities! Separate your professional life from your personal life. Make it a point to get more exercise. You are in the middle of a lucky financial cycle! Invest after consulting experts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Ask for assistance from those you have helped in the past. Get sound advice before taking a major risk. You need to follow through on business travel plans. Avoid getting involved in power struggles.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Others appreciate your no-nonsense approach to business. This is not a good time to take unnecessary risks. Stick to conventional practices. Someone's indecision makes you restless.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A little patience will help you smooth some ruffled feathers. New teamwork is possible! A favorite plan meets with unqualified approval. Seize this golden opportunity to advance your personal interests.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Persistence and determination have brought you to the brink of success. Do not blow it! Ignore a co-worker's eccentric behavior. A message or telephone call brings cheering news. Share glad tidings with partner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Everything turns out better than you imagined. You feel deep satisfaction over a project you instigated. Someone new seems to have a romantic interest in you.

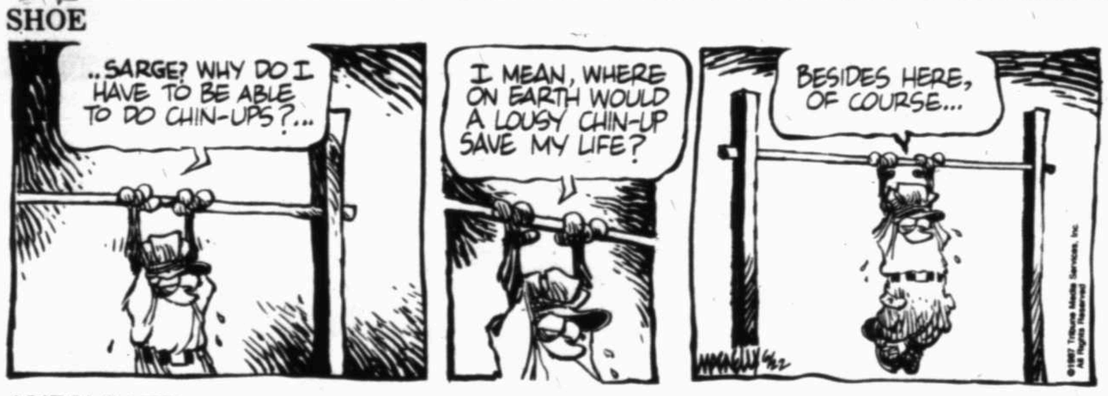

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You will continue to influence others with your strong sense of values. Use your keen sense of humor to get over some minor hurdles. Your intuition is right on target regarding a loved one.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You may feel that someone has crossed you. Find out the facts before you fling any accusations around. Your practicality gives way to your emotions later today — for all the right reasons!

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ52 ♡AQ6 ◇AJ982 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North

What action do you take?
A.—Not only is your hand too strong for a two diamond overcall, but that action would risk losing the spade suit. Our choice is a takeout double, despite the shortness in clubs. Should partner respond two clubs, we think you are good enough to correct to two diamonds.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ52 ♡AQ6 ◇AJ982 ♣6
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	Dbl	Pass	1 ♠
Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Don't be satisfied with a mere raise to two spades. With your honors situated behind the opening bid, we feel your hand is easily worth some 20 points. It's a question of whether you should make a non-forcing jump to three spades or raise to game. Since partner might have a bust, we slightly prefer the more conservative course.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AK107 ♡AQJ ◇A1093 ♣72
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	Pass	1 NT	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Your intermediate cards and prime controls made your hand a whit too good to open one no trump. Now you have an easy invitational raise to two no trump, asking partner to go on to game if he is near maximum for his original response.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠AJ874 ♡9 ◇AJ73 ♣K102
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?
A.—Did you think we were trying to trick you again? Even after the raise you have a minimum opening bid, and while we can think of some hands that partner might have where game would be cold, there are many more where even two spades might not be safe. Pass.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q873 ♡95 ◇A10982 ♣63
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Dbl	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—In response to partner's takeout double, it is always wiser to prefer a four-card major to a five-card minor. This is particularly true when partner has doubled a major-suit opening bid, for he usually promises at least four cards in the other major or a very strong hand.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠953 ♡QJ952 ◇J63 ♣85
Partner opens the bidding with two no trump. What do you respond?
A.—Even if your range for a two no trump opening bid is 21-22, you would be masterminding the auction were you to pass. The correct action is to bid three hearts, inviting partner to raise to game if he has three-card or better heart support and taking your chances at three no trump if he does not.

JVC Jazz Festival serves up spicy fare with Brecker Band, McCoy Tyner Trio

Miles Davis

NEW YORK (AP) — Saxophonist Stan Getz was the headliner, but the JVC Jazz Festival concert produced three satisfying sets as the more modern Michael Brecker Band and McCoy Tyner Trio also played at Avery Fisher Hall.

Getz came on last in the long concert Sunday night, following density with a thread of clarity. He stepped forward to shine as a soloist less often than he sometimes does, and came across as definitely more a part of his quartet, backed by pianist Kenny Barron, bassist Rufus Reid and drummer Victor Lewis.

When his playing did dominate, they gave understated support behind him. Even when he was emphatic, Getz flowed warmly in and around the tune.

They played Barron's "Voyage," Jimmy Van Heusen's "I Took a Trip on a Train" and Billy Strayhorn's beautiful, pensive "Blood Count." Getz also played "The Wave" for "the old folks" who remember his bossa nova days.

Brecker has humor, too, at one point imitating Miles Davis' stage deportment, dipping his instrument to the floor to hit a low note. He dedicated one tune to the phenomenon of 60 or 70 New York City pizza parlors all called "Original Ray's."

Earlier Sunday evening, at the festival's daily solo piano concert, Weill Hall at Carnegie Hall had been filled with virtuosity — by George Shearing. One of his numbers was "Taking a Chance on Brahms," a solemn beginning that turned playful, combining a popular song, improvisation by Shearing and quotations from "E Major Intermezzo" by Brahms.

• • •

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian Arsenio Hall will be this week's guest host on "The Late Show," which has jumped 10 percent in the ratings since Joan Rivers was dropped as permanent host, Fox Broadcasting Co. says.

The show had an A.C. Nielsen Co. rating of 2.2 for the week ending June 12, compared with 2.0 for each of the previous three weeks, Fox said Friday.

Ms. Rivers was replaced last month by a series of nightly hosts after the show lost in the ratings to "The Tonight Show" with Johnny Carson on NBC.

Hall's stint as guest host begins tonight, Fox said.

• • •

Newman

DETROIT (AP) — Actor Paul Newman says auto racing is a nice sideline.

Before Saturday's Motor City 100 Trans-Am race, the 62-year-old actor-director laughed when asked why he competes at his age.

"That's about a 25-minute question," joked Newman, who receives about $3 million per film. "It's the money. I can't find a good script."

Newman drove his Nissan 300ZX Turbo to a fifth place finish in the race won by Scott Pruett.

• • •

NEW YORK (AP) — Director Stanley Kubrick was excited by the novel that inspired "Full Metal Jacket," and is satisfied with the new Vietnam War film, according to a published report.

"I'm happy with the picture," Kubrick said in an interview published Sunday in The New York Times. The movie opens Friday.

"My films have all had varying critical opinion and it's always been subsequent critical reaction that settles the scores," he said.

Kubrick said he was inspired to make the film after reading "The Short-Timers," by ex-Marine combat correspondent Gustav Hasford.

Kubrick's other movies include "2001: A Space Odyssey," "Dr. Strangelove," "Lolita" and "A Clockwork Orange."

BERNARDSVILLE, N.J. (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Millicent Fenwick says she's cutting back on speaking engagements as she enjoys retirement, but continues to smoke a pipe even though "it's a dirty, stupid habit."

"I can't count on myself to turn up, therefore I don't take dates or commitments," said the 77-year-old Republican, who served four terms in Congress.

Ms. Fenwick, who inspired the eccentric Doonesbury cartoon character Lacey Davenport, said she continues to smoke a pipe in the privacy of her 50-room mansion.

"It's a dirty, stupid habit," she said in an interview published Sunday by the Newark Star-Ledger. "If I ever felt that anyone had been influenced to start smoking on account of me, I would feel very, very badly."

Her congressional career ended in 1982 when she lost a Senate bid against Democrat Frank Lautenberg, who currently holds the seat. She spent the next 3½ years in Rome as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization.

• • •

BOSTON (AP) — U.S. Rep. Barney Frank, one of two openly avowed homosexual congressmen, says his sexual preference is irrelevant to his politics and of little concern to most of his constituents.

"Hardly anyone is interested in the sex life of a boring, middle-aged politician," Frank said Sunday after delivering a commencement speech at Northeastern University.

Frank, D-Mass., said he's encountered less criticism than he expected since he made headlines last month by revealing his homosexuality.

"As long as a person is kind, loving and caring, not much else matters," he told the 4,033 graduates at Boston Garden.

The other openly homosexual congressman is Gerry Studds, also a Massachusetts Democrat.

CHILMARK, Mass. (AP) — Five years after his death, John Belushi's fans continue to file past his grave, marked by a streaked boulder that says simply, "Belushi."

"It's surprising how many teens come, how many college kids, because they were little when he was big," says Basil Welch, caretaker of the Abel's Hill Cemetery.

Up to 40 Belushi fans travel the quiet, winding road to the cemetery each day in the summer, Welch said. Some leave mementos, others only footprints in the dust and grass.

"Sometimes, they come to have a drink with John," says Welch, who picks up their beer bottles and other tokens. "Someday this novelty will wear off, but it hasn't yet."

Dozens of shells from the beaches on this island of Martha's Vineyard surround the 5-foot gray-blue marker, streaked with green and pink. The stone came from the beach in front of Belushi's home here, Welch said.

Dollar rising

LONDON (AP) — The dollar rose against all major foreign currencies except the Canadian dollar in early European trading today. Gold prices dropped.

European currency traders said the dollar was boosted by a generally bullish market and by dealers exchanging their British pounds for dollars.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day begins, the dollar rose to a 10-week high, closing at 145.30 yen from Friday's 144.49. Later, in London, it was quoted higher at 145.45 yen.

Other dollar rates at mid-morning, compared with late Friday's rates:

—1.8330 West German marks, up from 1.8280

—1.5245 Swiss francs, up from 1.5185

—6.1185 French francs, up from 6.1025

—2.0651 Dutch guilders, up from 2.0600

—1,324.50 Italian lire, up from 1,321.50

—1.3370 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3390

In London, the British pound was quoted at $1.6105, down from Friday's $1.6185.

GOLD

The dollar's continued strength forced gold prices down in Europe, dealers said.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $443.25 a troy ounce, compared with late Friday's $448.00. At mid-morning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $443.60.

In Zurich, the bid price was $444.50, down from $449.50 late Friday.

Earlier, in Hong Kong, gold fell $2.80 dollars from Saturday's close to finish at $444.43.

Silver was quoted in London today at a bid price of $7.00 a troy ounce, down from Friday's $7.41.

Oilmen temper celebrations with realism

By STEWART TAGGART
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — As the price of a barrel of oil broke the $20 mark, some oilmen in the hard-hit energy-producing states greeted it by popping open the champagne, while others cautioned the price rise means little.

"It feels better with $20-a-barrel oil, doesn't it?" said Dale W. Steffes, founder of Houston-based Planning and Forecasting Consultants. "There are a lot more happy people in Houston."

In the Panhandle town of Perryton, Chamber of Commerce officials celebrated by stopping motorists and by going door-to-door in the business district passing out non-alcoholic champagne.

"Oil is down, we've been down," said Bruce Jones, chamber president. "Now oil is back, our community is back and Texas is back."

The news also was well-received in Louisiana.

"The attitude of people has gotten better and that's a prelude to spending money," said Alfred Lamson, an independent oilman in Lafayette, La. "You can go to the Petroleum Club and see people smiling and laughing out loud again."

But most say it isn't likely to cause a dramatic turnaround in the nation's energy industry.

"There is still a lot of uncertainty," said John E. Watson, president of the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association. "There is no assurance over the next year or so as to where the price of oil will go."

"We were stacking rigs when the price of oil was $28 a barrel," said Mike Cantrell, an Ada, Okla. oilman. "It sure doesn't mean anything significant as far as the health of the oil and gas industry."

Nevertheless, for the shell-shocked oilpatch, watching futures prices for benchmark West Texas Intermediate crude close over $20 per barrel last week was cause for hope.

Last Monday, futures for July delivery closed at $20.27 per barrel, topping the $20 mark for the first time in 18 months. The price closed above $20 for the next four sessions, ending the week at $20.66.

Last summer, prices fell below $10 per barrel.

Higher prices provide incentives for U.S. energy companies to search for and extract oil from higher-cost domestic sources.

While Middle East producers can extract and ship a barrel of oil to market for about $3 per barrel, domestic oil costs about $17.50 on average to produce, according to the National Petroleum Council.

The United States imports about one-third of its oil, a figure expected to grow in coming years. Nearly two-thirds of the world's proven oil reserves are in the Middle East.

Despite the celebration, most industry experts say price stability is needed at the $20 level or higher before a major improvement occurs in the outlook for the domestic energy industry.

"If it (oil prices) will hold for 60 days, I think it will cause increased drilling in the country because it will bring about increased confidence," said L. Frank Pitts, owner of Dallas-based Pitts Oil Co.

"(But) if you really want a great deal of drilling activity, you need a $25 price (per barrel) or more," he said.

"OPEC countries, mainly Saudi Arabia, are in a position to control the price of oil," said Pitts. "They want to hold prices down so there is no encouragement for alternate sources of energy, assuring they have a market into the next century."

John Sauer, general manager of planning and administration for Conoco Inc. in Houston, agrees.

"It is the kind of price OPEC has been seeking, so it shouldn't have been particularly surprising," he said. "Other than being a round number, I think there is nothing particularly psychological about it."

"We could lose track of the big picture by thinking this means the energy crisis is over," said F. Don Covey, president of the exploration and development division of Mitchell Energy and Development Corp. "We import too much; $20 oil doesn't change that."

Hoteliers target Allegis' Westin, Hilton properties

CHICAGO (AP) — Two of the nation's largest hotel chains are working together in an attempt to take over the beleaguered Allegis Corp. travel conglomerate, a business journal reported today.

Representatives of the Marriott Corp. and the Pritzker family, owners of the Hyatt Corp., have discussed a possible deal with investment bankers whose clients are interested in Allegis, according to Crain's Chicago Business.

According to the journal's sources, who were not identified, the Marriott-Pritzker interests would acquire Allegis' Westin and Hilton International hotel properties and sell off its United Airlines and Hertz units to finance the deal.

The hotel units would sell at a lower price than if the units were auctioned, as Allegis is now contemplating. But any bid by the two chains would have to top the payout to shareholders of an asset auction when Chicago-based Allegis is broken up, the journal said.

In addition to the talks with investment bankers, Marriott officials have queried two of the three major unions representing United Airlines about the possibility of a buyout, the journal said.

Moreover, Pritzker representatives continue to hold meetings with the United branch of the Air Line Pilots Association, Crain's said.

"There are at least two hotel parties trying to line up a deal," said John Peterpaul, vice president of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, which represents one-third of United's 61,000 employees.

Telephone calls to a Pritzker office and home in Chicago went unanswered Sunday night. A call to the Marriott Corp.'s headquarters in Washington, D.C., was answered by a recording.

Earlier this year, Allegis rejected a proposal by the pilots' association to buy United for $4.5 billion. On June 4, the pilots' union offered a new proposal, under which ownership of United would be transferred to employees and shareholders, while the company's non-airline businesses would be sold.

Jet Capital seeks exemption

HOUSTON (AP) — Jet Capital Corp., the holding company that controls 34 percent of industry giant Texas Air Corp., asked to be exempt from Securities and Exchange Commission reporting requirements, records show.

Jet Capital is headed by Frank Lorenzo, who started the company in 1969 and owns 50.7 percent of its stock, according to a Texas Air proxy statement. Lorenzo is chairman of Texas Air, which owns Continental Airlines and Eastern Airlines.

Under federal regulations, because of Jet Capital's large holdings of Texas Air stock — 34.1 percent — it can be subject to reporting requirements as an investment firm. On June 2, however, Jet Capital asked the SEC to exempt it from that classification.

At Texas Air's annual meeting in May, stockholders voted to increase Jet Capital's voting power in the company to 34.1 percent from 20.8 percent.

In the filing, Jet Capital said it proposed "to diversify its business beyond the airline and airline-related businesses it currently manages through Texas Air by acquiring other businesses, which it will operate either directly or through majority-owned subsidiaries."

Greyhound guarantees bus service to Trailway towns

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Greyhound Lines Inc. today said it had reached agreement to take over the financially ailing Trailways Corp. in an $80 million deal that will leave the nation with only one national inter-city bus company.

Greyhound chairman Fred Currey said that Greyhound will guarantee continued bus service to the cities and towns served exclusively by Trailways.

He said the precarious financial position of Trailways, a privately held company, had endangered service to those cities and towns. Trailways, a smaller line than Greyhound, predominantly serves the South and East Coast as far north as New York.

"Without intervention, the collapse of Trailways is imminent," Currey, the chairman and president of Greyhound, said in announcing the agreement.

"If that happens, public transportaion will be disrupted in parts of 17 states where Trailways has the only bus service to some communities, and several thousand people will be out of work," he said.

The sale is subject to approval by the Interstate Commerce Commission. Currey said the companies filed an application today with the ICC seeking an immediate preliminary approval and final approval.

Currey said there was no decision on what will happen to Trailways' 2,200 employees.

Under the agreement, Greyhound will pay $80 million to buy 450 of Trailways' 1,200 buses, some of its terminals and garages, and undisclosed other assets, said Greyhound spokesman George Gravely.

Both companies are based in Dallas. Greyhound, with about 10,000 employees, serves all 48 continental states.

Greyhound, after the purchase, will have projected revenues of around $800 million. Trailways' current revenues are about $150 million, said Currey, who had headed Trailways Corp. from 1975-1979.

Greyhound itself was purchased by a group of Dallas investors, primarily Currey and two partners, only three months ago. The group paid more than $350 million for the 75 year-old bus line, which was then facing financial trouble.

The officials said that for the immediate future Greyhound would continue to operate the Trailways buses and routes under the Trailways name. They said Trailways drivers and other employees would continue operations and would be considered for positions open in the Greyhound company.

"The key point about this transaction for us is we intend to guarantee the continuity of service to cities and towns served only by Trailways," Currey said in an interview.

Gravely said Greyound was launching a growth program by bidding on new commuter contracts and trying to go take van service into rural areas abandoned by bus service.

In addition, he said, all pending applications for abandonment of service by Trailways will be withdrawn.

The transaction would leave Greyhound the only national inter-city carrier, but company officials said they expected preliminary government approval within two to three weeks because Trailways was in danger of failing.

"Trailways has abandoned all service in seven states and more than half its service in three others in the past year," Gravely said.

"Trailways is a failed company," he said. "They are very close to financial collapse. Without a rescue by Greyhound, they will shortly go out of business."

Reagan vows to veto trade bill

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan vowed anew today to veto congressional legislation containing provisions requiring mandatory retaliation against U.S. trading partners using unfair trading practices.

At the outset of a meeting with congressional Republicans, Reagan delivered a statement in which he reiterated his opposition to legislation that recently passed the House by a narrow margin.

That bill included the so-called Gephardt amendment, named for Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, who is seeking the Democratic Party's 1988 presidential nomination.

Reagan said that bill "would move us exactly in the wrong direction, toward high tariffs and trade barriers, trade-distorting subsidies and slow growth and shrink world markets, destroy jobs."

Without mentioning the Gephardt amendment, Reagan added that "I would have no choice but to veto that bill in its present form."

Present at the meeting in the Cabinet Room were an array of GOP lawmakers, including Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas, and Cabinet members, including Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige and Energy Secretary John Herrington.

Reagan said the administration "has been working closely with the various Senate committees ... to craft a bill that enhances prospects fo U.S. exports."

"There will be some problems that we'll be discussing here today," Reagan said, without specifying what differences exist within the GOP.

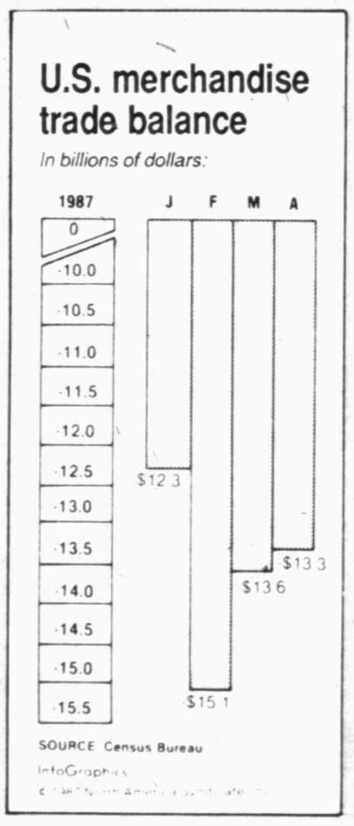

The president declined to take reporters' questions.

In his statement, Reagan said, "The United States cannot and will not allow itself to become party to a trade war."

"We must continue to go forward on a positive course, opening up markets where they're closed," he added, "working to expand world trade and the millions of jobs it creates, rather than shrinking the global economy and sending millions out of work."

The deficit in the broadest measure in U.S. foreign trade, known as the current account, shrank to $37.1 billion in the first quarter of 1987, down from a record $38 billion figure in the fourth quarter of last year.

Reagan has spoken out several times against the Gephardt amendment, without ever mentioning it by name.

Florida officials defend ad sales tax

By JON NORDHEIMER
New York Times News Service

MIAMI — National advertising agencies, manufacturers and publishers are canceling sales conventions and meetings in Florida to protest the state's new 5 percent sales tax on professional sales and services. The tax goes into effect July 1.

The boycott is intended to put pressure on state legislators to repeal the part of the tax bill that imposes the tax on publishers and broadcasters carrying ads in Florida.

So far more than 60 meetings have been canceled, for a potential loss to the state's hotel-motel-restaurant industry of some $20 million, according to the Florida Hotel and Motel Association. An association spokesman, Tom Waits, said a survey now under way is expected to show that the losses may eventually reach $100 million and lead to a drop in travel-tourism employment in the state.

"There's nothing we can do except stand by and be punished," said Joseph Freni Jr., general manager of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in Naples, Fla., a 463-room gulf coast resort that has already been notified of cancellations representing nearly 4,000 room-nights. "And the boycott seems to be gaining strength."

But key state officials said they would not give in to the pressure and asserted that the tax would not be repealed. It covers television and radio commercials and newspaper and magazine advertisements.

The tax bill was approved by legislators in April over fierce opposition from lobbyists who said the provisions extending the tax to advertising were unconstitutional and would prompt retaliation against Florida.

Now several companies with giant advertising budgets — including the Kellog Co., the General Foods Corp. and Kraft Inc. — have said they are canceling all sales meetings in Florida and plan to halt their local advertising on radio and television in the state when the new tax becomes effective.

In addition, meetings have been canceled by the Magazine Publishers Association, General Mills Inc., Johnson & Johnson, the American Association of Advertising, and the Procter & Gamble Co., among a long list of other national organizations.

A spokesman for Gov. Bob Martinez said Friday that the state had no intention of retreating.

"The bottom line is the governor sees no reason to change his mind when the decision he made in the first place is right," said Jon Peck, deputy press secretary. "He is holding the line."

Bud Gardner, chairman of the House Finance and Tax Committee, warned on Friday that advertisers and manufacturers might run into a backlash from Florida's 12 million consumers if they persist in the boycott.

"So far there's been little public outcry about the tax," he said. "All the squealing is coming from the advertisers and their clients. Frankly, if they take a realistic look at the net result of a decrease in sales as a result of withdrawing ads from the state and compare it with the fairly inconsequential costs of the tax, they'll see they're going to lose money by fighting it."

AP Laserphoto

Ray Davis, general manager of WNFT television in Jacksonville, Fla. cites $500,000 worth of advertising cancellation as reasom enough to oppose his state's inclusion of advertising in the sales tax base. "We don't have a giantic network to fall back on," Daivs said of the law, which takes effect July 1.

Stock Market Gains

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained this morning in active trading, helped by a stronger dollar, foreign interest in U.S. equities and an effort by institutional investors to put unused cash to work before the quarter is over.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 18.38 points to 2,439.23 as of 12 noon EDT on Wall Street. Broader market indicators also improved.

Advancing issues held about a 7-5 lead over losers on the New York Stock Exchange, where 785 stocks gained, 582 declined and 405 remained unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 82.50 million shares in the morning session, compared with 114.13 million Friday morning.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .81 to 173.34. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index rose 0.68 to 339.22.

Among the most notable blue-chip issues traded today, Merck rose 2 to 167¾, General Electric rose 1½ to 54⅞ and IBM rose 1¼ to 162⅝.

Acco World rose 5⅛ to 28⅝ after American Brands said it would acquire the company for $29 a share.

Precious metals stocks declined broadly, reflecting a drop in gold prices linked to the dollar's strength. ASA fell 2 to 55¼ and Homestake Mining dropped 1¼ to 32⅞.

Gasoline price inflation cools

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gasoline prices may climb throughout the summer even though moderating wholesale price increases slowed hikes at the retail level during the last two weeks, an analyst said.

The average pump price for all grades rose about one-third of a cent per gallon during the period, said Trilby Lundberg, president of the bi-weekly Lundberg Survey and publisher of an oil industry newsletter.

By comparison, prices rose an average 1.15 cent a gallon between May 22 and June 5, and .97 cent a gallon in the two weeks before that.

But prices could rise sharply in the coming weeks if more vacationers take to the roads and boost demand, Ms. Lundberg said Sunday.

On Friday, the nationwide average price for all grades of gasoline, including taxes, was 99.12 cents a gallon.

That was up 0.38 cent per gallon since June 5.

"There has been a bit of a slowdown in wholesale price increases, but this is only June 19," Ms. Lundberg said. "We could easily see further price increases this summer."

At self-service pumps, motorists paid an average of 91.48 cents a gallon for regular unleaded, $1.0469 for premium unleaded and 87.74 cents for regular leaded.

Full-service prices were $1.1786 for regular unleaded, $1.2742 for premium unleaded and $1.1399 for regular leaded.

The average price Friday was up 2.62 cents a gallon from the year before, but 24.50 cents a gallon less than in June 1985.

Gas station operators in increasing numbers are depending on convenience stores to bring profits, Ms. Lundberg said. The stores attract customers and ensure a steady flow of revenue even when the volatile wholesale gasoline market makes profits at the pump hard to predict.

Fields introduces gas transportation rate deregulation

HOUSTON (AP) — Rep. Jack Fields says legislation he introduced to deregulate oil pipeline transportation rates is needed to remove uncertainty over rates.

Fields, R-Humble, and Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., last week introduced the measure, which does not provide for complete deregulation.

Under the proposal, oil pipelines would still be required to act as common carriers with an obligation to provide non-discriminatory, non-preferential transportation services.

The bill would provide procedures within the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission by which shippers could challenge discriminatory actions by pipelines.

Fields said consumers now can get reasonable transportation rates without the need for government regulations. The industry, he said, is a lot different from the industry that existed when rate regulation was imposed by the Interstate Commerce Act at the turn of the century.

Deregulation is necessary to remove the uncertainty over rates created when FERC took over the job of regulating rates, he said.

"The consumer will suffer if the current regulatory quagmire discourages new investment in oil pipeline facilities," Fields said. "Shippers may then be forced to use more expensive and less efficient modes of transportation."

Reagan says the amendment's call for mandatory retaliation against countries found to have gained an unfair trading advantage through unfair practices would unduly lessen a president's ability to negotiate settlements to trade disputes.

LDBrinkman to sell flooring operations

KERRVILLE (SWN) — LDBrinkman Corp. has contracted to sell its Irving-based L.D. Brinkman & Co. (Carpet and Floor Products) for $57 million to John Crowther Group PLC. The price represents approximately $5.18 per fully diluted share and the after tax value has not been determined. Forty-five million dollars will be paid at closing, with $5 million to be paid one year after closing and $7 million to be paid two years after closing. The deferred payments will bear interest at prime, less 1/2 percent which will pay a portion of the cost of a bank guarantee securing the deferred payment. The $57 million purchase price is approximately twice book value of the Jan. 31, 1987 balance sheet and any profits up until closing will be for the benefit of the seller.

LDBrinkman Corporation has been assured that it will receive a fairness opinion from Rothschild Inc. Prior to closing, requisite approvals are required and various conditions are to be satisfied. Following closing of the transaction, it is intended to change the name of LDBrinkman Corp. to LDB Corp.

The company presently intends to continue in the pizza business through Mr. Gatti's, Inc. and may use a portion of the initial purchase price to accelerate the growth of that business. Management will also review alternative investment opportunities.

John Crowther Group, PLC is an English corporation with manufacturing and distribution expertise in both textiles and floor coverings.

TAX

Groups representing those opposed to the tax, including advertisers, lawyers and broadcasters, are filing briefs with the Florida Supreme Court, which will consider the constitutionality of the new tax. Advertisers and publishers have called the tax a violation of First Amendment guarantees of free speech.

"Florida is a very good cereal market for us, but there is very strong feeling in the industry that businesses shouldn't be forced to tax the consumer, and this is a consumer tax," said Michael Simpson, Kellogg's executive vice president for marketing.

While other states have tried to tax professional services, none has gone as far as Florida by extending taxation beyond state lines. Simpson and his counterparts in other national companies with big advertising budgets make no secret of their concern that the Florida tax could be copied by other states seeking new sources of income. Texas was described as studying the Florida law as a possible way to bolster its sagging revenues amid the oil and gas slump.

If Texas enacts a similar tax, then the third and fourth most populous states — Texas and Florida — would be taxing advertising. Together, these two states represent one-tenth of the nation's population, and manufacturers could not withhold advertising from so powerful a market without running the risk of a significant drop in sales.

While companies scramble to decide what to do as Florida's tax draws near, it remains unclear just who is expected to pay it.

State officials hope to clear up most of the confusion when a 340-page book of new tax regulations is published this week. The tax is expected to generate $750 million in new revenues the first year and $1 billion by the second. Lawyers in the state's Department of Revenue said the trickiest part of completing regulations for administration of the tax is in broadcast and billboard advertising.

"Broadcasting is a real problem because of overlapping audiences and differences in how audiences are measured," said William Townsend, an attorney in the department.

Publishers of nationally distributed magazines and newspapers are exploring ways to offer advertisers new rates that would let them drop their ads in issues distributed in Florida, thereby avoiding the tax. National Geographic, for instance, has already announced such a plan.

But network television, which is to be taxed on the basis of a formula tied to the size of the Florida audience watching a broadcast, is not expected to have that kind of flexibility.

Critics of the tax say its administration is going to cause a nightmare that the legislators never envisioned.

"I seriously doubt it can be enforced," said Richard C. McFarlain, a lawyer and lobbyist for the Florida Bar Association, which opposes the tax on constitutional grounds. Although a bill passed this month reduces some of the coverage of the original tax bill — for instance, by exempting lawyers' fees in bankruptcy cases — lawyers in Florida are among the strongest opponents of the new tax, which is expected to draw $155 million in the first year from legal fees, McFarlain said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

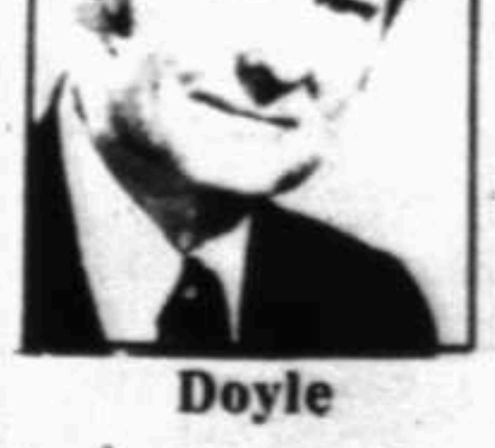

Attention to detail fends off IRS

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I sold stock before the ex-dividend date for the next dividend. As you have pointed out, the person who bought the shares I sold is entitled to that dividend. However, the stock was not transferred out of my name by the dividend record date. As a result, I received the dividend check.

My brokerage firm phoned and said I should endorse the dividend check, send it to them and they will see to it that the rightful person receives the money. I did.

What happens when I file my 1987 income tax return? I will receive a Form 1099-DIV, showing I received the dividend. If I don't report it, I'll be in trouble with the Internal Revenue Service. But I shouldn't have to pay tax on a dividend I couldn't keep.

Doyle

A. You're correct on all points. With some attention to detail, you can square things away on your return.

Because the IRS receives copies of all 1099s, be sure to list that dividend and all other dividends you receive this year on your return. Below that, show the amount of the dividend you sent back as a negative amount of dividend income and deduct it from your your total dividend income. That deduction will offset the reported income amount of the dividend you didn't keep and, as a result, you won't pay tax on that dividend.

You can label that negative dividend as a "nominee distribution." And, to fend off IRS queries, attach a note to your return explaining exactly what happened.

Dividends were reported on Schedule B, Form 1040, for 1986 and previous years. That's probably where they will be reported for 1987, although we won't know for sure until the final version of new federal tax returns are printed. There will be lots of changes in tax forms because of the Tax Reform Act of 1986.

Q. My niece recently inherited 2,880 shares of stock, now trading around $80 a share and paying $4 per share annual dividends. Could she, through a broker, get the certificate broken down to eight or 10 certificates so she sell them one at a time?

A. It's doubtful she has just one certificate. If the stock already is registered in her name, it's more likely that she has an 80-share certificate and a number of certificates in larger denominations, such as eight for 100 shares and two for 1,000 shares.

Typically, one certificate is issued for from one to 99 shares. Above that number, certificates usually are issued in 100, 500, 1,000 and higher share amounts.

If your niece has only a few large denomination certificates, she can have them reissued in smaller "pieces." A brokerage firm or bank will handle that chore and normally charge a fee. She can save that cost by dealing directly with the stock's transfer agent.

However, there's no need to go through all this. If she wants to sell, say, 100 shares out of a 1,000-share certificate, she can do so. She'll deliver the 1,000-share certificate to the broker handling the sale. Then she'll be paid for the 100 shares sold and receive nine 100-share certificates for the stock she didn't sell.

If the stock is not registered in your niece's name but is held by a brokerage firm in "street name," she can order her broker to sell any number she chooses.

Q. Exactly what is a "street name?"

A. It's the nickname given the arrangement through which a customer leaves his or her securities with a brokerage firm. The brokerage becomes the registered owner and acts as the customer's nominee. The customer remains the beneficial owner — the real owner of the securities the brokerage is holding.

The term "street name" is a takeoff on New York City's Wall Street, still the center of the world's brokerage business.

Q. If I have my stock in street name, do I lose my right to vote at the annual meetings of companies in which I own shares?

A. No! The brokerage firm with which you have left the stock is required to send you proxy statements so that you can exercise your voting rights.
