Horse and Mule Show Was A Great Success Saturday

Everybody was very agreeably surprised last Saturday at the large number of fine horses brought to Loraine for the show. 51 head of as good horses as you can find anywhere were in the show ring. The only disappointing feature of the show was the lack of mules. Only two mules were brought in by B. J. Phillips, but they were extra good ones.

The prize of $2.50 for the best horse weighing more than 1100 pounds went to Homer Wilson who had two very fine horses in the show. The $2.50 prize for the best horse weighing less than 11100 pounds went to Oren Lucas who had a span of young iron greys that were really danlies.

One of the largest crowds that has been in Loraine for a long time came Saturday to see the horses. And there were expressions on all sides about the good show. Most of us did not know that so many good horses were still in the country. We have been thinking all the time that the tractors had replaced the horse on the farm to a great extent, but that is not true around Loraine. Of course there are a number of tractors, and rightly so, but horses still do the work on many farms.

Rev. M. H. Godfrey, president of the chamber of commerce, is due the credit for putting the horse and mule show over in a big way. He really worked at the job.

HORSE SHOW SATURDAY

I want to thank those who so kindly brought their horses and mules to Loraine last Saturday. It was a great success in every way. 51 horses and only two mules, but they were good ones. 51 horses that would be a credit to any community. Loraine appreciates your interest in this and is going to show you that they do. Thank the men who acted as judges. Their work was satisfactory in every way.

Look out for the greatest event in years to be pulled off in Loraine right soon. A committee is at work at it now. Great offerings will be made to the farmers. Remember that when you buy in Loraine you have bought it as cheap as it can be had anywhere. The merchants in Loraine are your friends and are looking for bargains for you. Come and get them.

M. H. Godfrey,
President Chamber of Commerce

PRIMITIVE BAPTIST TO HOLD MONTHLY SERVICES

The Primitive Baptist Church will hold regular monthly services at their church in East Colorado, beginning Saturday afternoon at 2:30, and Sunday at 11 A. M. The regular pastor will be in charge.

METHODIST PASTOR TO TEACH IN ABILENE

Rev. J. E. Shewbert, will teach in a training school in Abilene which opens next Monday night and will close Thursday night. Rev. Shewbert has been invited to teach the course, "The Meaning of the Christian Religion." A large attendance is expected which will include many of the McMurry students.

COMMUNITY SINGING NEXT TUESDAY NIGHT

Lovers of singing in this community met last Tuesday night and elected Arnold Marshall president of the organization which is to promote singings in this community.

The first community singing will be held at the Methodist Church next Tuesday night, beginning at 7:45. Prominent singers from Sweetwater and other points are expected to be here to help in the singing.

All lovers of good singing are invited to attend Tuesday night.

Mrs. R. F. Brown of Bishop is here visiting her son, Edward F. Brown, and family.

CAR LICENSE MUST BE PAID BY APRIL FIRST

Bruce Hart, tax assessor-collector, issued a warning to car owners this week that license for 1939 must be purchased by April 1. He urged everyone to avoid a last minute rush if possible. He also asked that you take your 1938 license receipt with you to save time.

Early this week only 800 car owners, out of approximately 2000, had purchased the new license tags.

BRUCE BIBLE CLASS

Last Sunday was a good day for the Bruce Bible class. There was fine attendance but some members were absent. These are fine lessons we are studying and they are well taught and discussed. Come one, come all. Members of the class, visitors and strangers are twice welcome. Spring is almost here, come to Sunday School.

HAPPENINGS AT THE BAPTIST CHURCH

We are happy on the way although some of the Saints are getting behind with their church going and church support. It is a pity how some people think of their church. They never attend never pay, never pray, for these three things go hand in hand. Leave off one and all three are finally left off.

Our Sunday School had the same number as the previous Sunday. Are you to blame for it not going up? If we were as careless with our physical body as we are with our spiritual body we would have Yellow Fever to break out in our community at once. What does God think of your church loyalty? Better find out. After all the Sunday School depends largely on the loyalty of the Sunday School officers and teachers. If the teacher don't care you may expect the class to be the same.

We are praying that next Sunday will be one of the great days in our church. Will you help to make it so? I believe you will. God expects you to give your best. We will be looking for you next Sunday on time.

Quite a few of our people attended the workers conference at Buford Tuesday. It was good to be there, good preaching, good dinner. Dr. C. A. Powell of University Church, Abilene preached a great sermon. I wish you could have heard him.

I wish you knew how much you are needed at the church, how much you are missed when you are not there. Come next Sunday.

Agriculture Ass'n. Is Organized Here

At the invitation of the county agent 38 farmers met in the Loraine High School auditorium Wednesday night, March 15, to organize the Loraine Agriculture Association.

The meeting was called to order by Earnest Meadows. Talks were made by Mr. Holmes of the AAA, M. A. Stinson of Farm Security Administration, A. B. Kyle of the Soil Conservation Service, and J. C. Hall, explaining the advantages of organization. Mr. W. W. Porter of Colorado explained the Texas Agriculture Assocation.

With J. C. Hall acting as chairman the following officers were elected:

Thomas Riden, President
J. Wiley Walker, Vice-Pres.
Mrs. D. McCollum, Secretary
Edward F. Brown, Reporter

Following the organization a short discussion was held on one variety cotton, disease resistant maize and the cheese plant.

The next meeting was set for Tuesday, April 4. A program is to be planned by Mr. Riden, Mr. Walker and Mrs. McCollum.

It was announced that Mr. Weston of the Farm Security will be at the chamber of commerce meeting next Tuesday night, and also at the Loraine Agriculture Association meeting April 4 to discuss the financing of the Loraine cheese plant by the Farm Security Administration. All farmers of Loraine and surrounding communities are urged to come to the school building April 4, at 7:45 P. M. and to bring their families.

The Loraine Agriculture Association is an organization of families and not individuals. The dues are paid for the family. You do not need to be a member to attend the meetings.

Everyone come April 4 to enjoy a good program and hear some interesting discussions that will be of interest to farmers. The new county agent is supposed to be at the meeting. Come to meet him.

Take your home paper now!

Baskin Thanks People For Cooperation

I wish to extend to the people of Mitchell County "Thanks" for the hearty cooperation you have given to the County Agent's office during the past five and one-half years. May you continue to prosper.

Mr. Joe C. Williams, your new County Agent, will make you a good man. His training and experience fit him to serve you much more efficiently than I have. May your relationship with him be as cordial as has ours.

With best wishes for your continued success and happiness, I remain

Yours truly,
B. J. Baskin, County Agent

Trustee Election For April First

Election of trustees for the Loraine Independent School District will be held the first Saturday in April, which is the first day of the month.

Two trustees are to be elected. The names of the retiring trustees will probably be on the ballot along with others whose name may be placed on the ballot by anyone. To be sure that the name will appear on the ballot, however, it must be filed with the secretary of the board at least five days before the date of the election, which would mean that names of candidates for a place on the board should be filed not later than Saturday, March 25.

J. E. Shewbert, pastor

As we are in the season of Lent, we should be giving special attention to our spiritual life. This is the season that we should be reading the happenings of the latter part of Jesus' ministry and realize how that Jesus went to the cross for the redemption of mankind, and therefore he died for you and for me. If the world could only realize the love that was in His heart for every person and then conform their lives to the will of God through Christ. Let us make this a season of examination of our own lives and answer the call of Christ to our hearts for a deeper consecration. Our homes will be happier, our communities will be happier and our nation will be better off with such persons.

We appreciated thee fine crowd that came out to all services last Sunday. There were several visitors and members who had not been out before which we were glad to have with us. We are having some fine lessons in our S. S. study and you should be getting these for your spiritual growth. If you have not been coming, try and begin coming to S. S. next Sunday.

The pastor will be in the pulpit for both messages next Sunday and would like to see as many out as possible. We are planning to make both services deeply spiritual and helpful to you. Come and worhship with us.

Remember our revival which opens the first Sunday in April. Your pastor will appreciate every member doing what they can to make this revival what all that God wants it to be. Give God a chance to use you during these days.

District Conference will be at Snyder April 20-21st and then the great Uniting Conference of all Methodism will meet at Kansas City April 26th. So April is to be veryy important with us.

We will look for all of you out next Sunday.

GLEANERS CLASS MEETS

The Gleaners Sunday School class met in the home of Mrs. Vanda Martin Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Hamilton and Mrss. Emma Land hostesses.

After a short business session an interesting Bible study of chapters 6-11 of First Samuel was enjoyed.

Refreshments of sandwiches, potato chips, pickles, cake and iced tea were served to fourteen members and three visitors.

C of C Continues Saturday Programs

Free picture shows and other attractions in Loraine on Saturday are to be continued for an indefinite period. This decision was made in a meeting of the members of the organization at the bank Monday night.

A committee composed of Wiley Walker, chairman, R. K. Thornhill and J. L. Pratt was appointed to make arrangements for a colt show to be held in the near future. This show will possibly include other livestock. Announcement of the plans will be made when they are completed. J. B. Mahon and J. C. Hall are on a committee to provide a pen for the stock.

Jack Walker, Kirk Taylor and J. B. Mahon are to make arrangements for another banquet for the members of he organization and their wives. The banquet is scheduled for the first part of April. It was voted to hold such affairs at least once each month.

Glen Coon, J. C. Hall, Lewis Schwimmer and R. K. Thornhill were appointed on a committee to confer with J. W. King with reference to the cheese factory after his return from Dallas the latter part of the week.

METHODIST YOUTH TO HAVE YOUTH BANQUET

The Methodist young people are to have a banquet Friday night, March 17, in keeping with the Youth Crusade movement. In having this banquet we hope to create more interest among the young people of this community and to strengthen our church program for the youth of he land.

We plan to have Ruth Gillam our district director, J. W. Blassingame, our union vce president, and Eldon Mahon and Duane Bruce of McMurry as speakers of the evening.

The St. Patrick theme will be carried out.

Pre-Easer Revival at Methodist Church

The Mehodist Church will which will open Sunday morning of April 2nd and will close Easter Sunday night, April 9th. Rev. Shewbert, the passor, will do the preaching. Two services daily will be held, morning and night. A special service is being planned for the night of 'Good Friday' which will include the Supper.

Every one is extended a cordial inviatation to attend these services. All those that sing are invited to come to the choir each night and help in that way. Rev. Shewbert states, "We cordially invite all the friends of our church to come and be with us at each service. A revival should not only help the church holdng it, but also the other churches and our whole community. We will expect our members to give special attention to this one week of services by coming, praying and working. Let us not miss this opportunity. All too often Christendom makes Christmas a big affair and forget that without Easter the Christian message would practically be void. Its the Easter season that has given hope to the world and which as been the central part of the Christian message and gospel. Let us remember Jesus Christ died for our sins and "the third day He arose from the grave"

FIREBOYS SPONSORING GAME NIGHT TONIGHT

The Loraine Volunteer Fire Department is sponsoring a Game Night at the high school band room tonight. Forty-two, dominoes, bridge and other games will be played. A short program has also been arranged.

The firemen are sponsoring this affair in an effort to raise funds with which to buy slickers and boots to use at fires.

Attend the affair and help the firemen raise the necessary funds. They protect your property at all times and deserve your support.

European Crisis 'Postponed'; Delay May Be Fatal to Axis

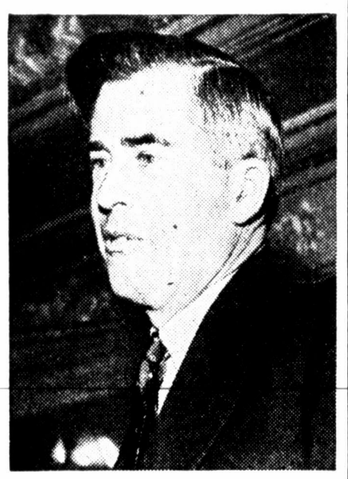

By Joseph W. La Bine

EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst, and not necessarily of the newspaper.

Domestic

In 1787 the constitutional convention wiped out trade barriers between states. Since then financially pressed commonwealths have sought to protect their own tradesmen and taxpayers from competition with non-residents by licensing, inspection, labeling and a host of similar regulations. By 1939 the barriers have grown so high that Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace claims it causes an incalculable economic loss to the nation. Forwarding a report by the bureau of agricultural economics, Secretary Wallace made these charges:

(1) New York city's inspection requirements bar milk and cream

SECRETARY WALLACE
He would hurdle the barriers.

from points west of the New York and Pennsylvania state lines, thereby raising prices on the metropolitan market.

(2) Trucking "wars" thrive in Arizona, Kansas, Oklahoma, Wyoming, Colorado, Georgia, Missouri, Maine and South Dakota, where restrictions are imposed against trucks from neighboring states.

(3) Many states virtually bar produce of other states by establishing unique trading, labeling and packaging regulations, quarantines, embargoes and "a bewildering maze of . . . other impositions."

Though the administration has thus far left remedial action up to states themselves, there is little reason to hope that 48 individual legislatures can work out a nation-wide system, or labor hand-in-hand to solve a problem in which each has a selfish interest. But federal intervention is broadly hinted in the Wallace report, one phase to cover interstate commerce of motor vehicles. The proposed plan: A vehicle properly registered in its home state and with the interstate commerce commission would be exempt from further registration.

Europe

The Ides of March brought disaster for Julius Caesar. The same Ides were scheduled by European observers to bring 1939 disaster to England and France via (1) conclusion of the Spanish war, (2) Italian territorial demands against France, and (3) a subsequent impasse in which London and Paris could choose between appeasing the Rome-Berlin axis or going to war.

The two major hitches in this schedule came in Spain, where Loyalists did not capitulate as expected following the surrender of Barcelona, and in the Vatican, where Pope Pius XI died. Obviously Italy could not free her hands for demands against France until she could withdraw troops from Rebel Spain. The pontiff's death brought a respectful pause in diplomatic warfare, coupled with international conjecture over the choice of his successor.

Whether the axis ever had a "plan" for March is questionable, but certainly the natural course of events would have brought a crisis. Today's most moot question in Europe is whether the unforeseen delay may not weaken the Rome-Berlin position. Speeding rearmament, forcing Germany into world trade submission, pledging aid to France, Great Britain has emerged a much stronger power the last 30 days.

One idea of the crisis-to-come has been offered by Journal Des Debats, conservative Paris newspaper. The alleged plan, which Berlin described as "ridiculous and laughable": Fascist states (Germany, Italy and Japan) would diffuse trouble for democracies throughout the world, part of that campaign being Tokyo's recent seizure of Hainan island in defiance of France. Other troubles would include Italy's Mediterranean demands and agitation against Britain in already troublesome Palestine and Syria. This done, and mobilization completed, Adolf Hitler would make a "great speech" setting forth ultimatums, shocking the world next day by making "territorial security" marches into Holland and Switzerland. This done, London and Paris would be given their choice of capitulating or watching Holland and Switzerland remain under Nazi domination.

Housing

Despite federal stimulus, home building has remained at low ebb since 1929, providing a good index of the times. In 1937 a hinted uptrend was cut short by rising material costs and labor troubles. But by the current spring U. S. housing has reached such deplorable shape that renewed building activity is inevitable.

Some idea of the industry's expectations has been voiced by L. Seth Schnitman, consulting economist and member of the army industrial college, who predicts the greatest residential building volume since 1929. Activity for the first three months of this year is 75 per cent greater than during the comparable period last year, representing total expenditures of $325,000,000.

Housing experts agree the initial stimulus was given by New York's Bowery savings bank, which recently cut about one-seventh in the interest rate for mortgage money on Federal Housing administration insured home mortgages. Picked up by other New York banks, then spreading westward across the country, the plan has given impetus to investment building operations.

England

From mid-May to mid-June, Great Britain's King George and Queen Elizabeth will be guests of the North American continent on a junket which most good Americans regard as a simple, friendly gesture. But as travel time approaches, the royal expedition is meeting with far more distracting bogeymen than Toronto's Dionne quintuplets, which are being shipped 180 miles under protest to curtsy before their queen.

From June 8 to 11 the royal party will visit the U. S. Because the entire journey was planned last winter in the heat of international chatter about "democratic solidarity," more than one anti-Chamberlain writer has tried to place the prime minister in a difficult position. A sample, by one Peter Howard in Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express: "Now the royal visit puts Chamberlain himself on trial. If it succeeds Chamberlain goes up. If it fails he goes down."

What Englishmen mean by "success" or "failure" of the American visit was finally brought into fairly close focus, but it still remained a doubtful quantity. Probable meaning: The visit will "fail" if U. S. citizens get the impression that King George and Queen Elizabeth are making a begging expedition to gain American aid in pulling England's chestnuts out of the European fires.

Defense

Six thousand airplanes would effectively darken the sky. Nose to nose, they would reach 45 miles; wing to wing, 52 miles. To build and maintain 6,000 planes, plus personnel and equipment, would cost about $300,000,000. Authorization for such a U. S. army air force has already passed through congress and the appropriation will follow close on its heels. This done, American aviation will be in good shape. But even today both army and navy boast new accomplishments:

Army. Principal delight of Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the army air corps, is the five-man, twin-engined, high speed "Airacuda," designed by 34-year-old Robert J. Woods after he "consolidated" the ideas of 500 army experts and 45 civilian engineers, draftsmen and engineers. Features of the Airacuda: Tremendous cruising range, two anti-aircraft cannon, four machine guns and aerial bombs which explode like anti-aircraft shells when dropped near enemy planes. General Arnold's opinion: "It's the most striking example of airplane development of the past year, anywhere in the world.

Navy. In choppy Carribean seas some 600 navy planes—one-third the entire force — recently provided "eyes" for U. S. battlewagons solving Fleet Problem XX. One spectator, President Roosevelt, watched the conduct of these planes and reportedly asserted the U. S. had naval air forces as good or better than any other. Said Adm. William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations: "The performance was the best I ever saw. They carried out their mission without an accident."

Congress

Most Americans do not realize that the bulk of New Deal reform measures have been adopted in one form or another. But practically everyone realizes the cost of reform has been tremendous, that the public debt now stands at $40,000,000,000, that the treasury has a current deficit of $2,200,000,000. With reform achieved, President Roosevelt is willing to join conservatives in two mutually desired ambitions, balancing the budget and helping business get back on its feet.

Chief arguments concern the method. New Dealers, whose program is voiced by Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins, would remove oppressive taxes and hope that the resultant boom would swell federal coffers, balancing the budget without eliminating "necessary" activities. Most businessmen and many congressmen would take an additional step—economy.

Total 1939-40 budget estimates are $8,995,000,000, creating a new $3,326,000,000 deficit and zooming the public debt smack against its legal debt limit of $45,000,000,000—unless congress raises the limit. Far from willing to raise it, or even to approve the new budget, congressional Republicans have found strong support in rebellious Democrats. Their spokesman is Mississippi's Sen. Pat Harrison, who came out for a flat 10 per cent budget cut and a warning: "The country's credit is good and I don't think we have reached the debt danger point, but the stop-look-and-listen sign is up . . . A lot of this emergency stuff could be cut, and I'm in favor of cutting."

Senator Harrison has already found support in two studies:

Brookings. Surveying the new governmental reorganization bill (to consolidate and abolish executive agencies for the sake of economy and efficiency), Washington's thorough-searching Brookings institution claimed it was ill-conceived, that no economies would result. Of 132 agencies listed for reorganization, only 54 require legislative authority, and no legislation is necessary unless congress wants to "give the President authority to make laws by executive order." Suggestions: (1) Prune all present activities "rigorously;" (2) develop a "more consistent" program.

National Economy League. Reason for this survey was that "before lasting recovery and increased employment can be a reality . . . all doubts about national credit must be removed. The plan: Reduce next year's deficit from $3,000,000,000 to $500,000,000. Comparative budgets (000,000 omitted):

SENATOR HARRISON
Time to stop-look-and-listen?

Expenditure	President's Budget	League Budget	Saving

*Assumes business improvement from pared budget.

So potent are economy's new friends that the administration may well find its cautious business-wooing program a boomerang. Wading half way across the pond of conciliation when opinion favored a complete passage, Mr. Roosevelt has been left behind and confronted with charges of insincerity because Harry Hopkins—the man who started his program—would need business' support to win the 1940 nomination.

MARSHAL HENRI PETAIN

The "hero of Verdun" emerges from retirement to serve France in another crisis. Now 82, Marshal Henri Petain has been named ambassador to newly reorganized Insurgent Spain in an obvious gesture to win Gen. Francisco Franco's friendship by emotional appeal. Many years ago, as instructor in the French war college, Marshal Petain instructed Spain's new iron man, himself a famous Twentieth century militarist. Later, in 1925-26, Marshal Petain joined forces with Franco in leading the expedition that defeated Abd El Krim, Riff leader in Morocco. Petain also went to Madrid and negotiated an agreement with the governor of Premier Prima de Rivera.

Congress Takes Bit in Teeth to Restore National Confidence

Vast Resources of Nation to Be Made Available Again for All People; Old-Line Democrats Responsible for Sudden Determination to Assume Congressional Leadership.

WASHINGTON. — The dictionary defines the word, "confidence," as meaning: "trust in, or reliance upon, another; a belief in a person or a thing." The dictionary might well have added that confidence is something quite intangible but yet it is a condition of national or state thought about its governmental policies as well as a condition of individual thought. It might have added, further, that confidence can be destroyed more easily than it can be maintained, or recreated when it once has been destroyed.

In any event, the thing about which we have heard most in Washington lately is the necessity for establishing a feeling of confidence throughout the country. The necessity exists, it is explained freely, because the depression continues and millions of persons, who would like to work, are not working. In some places, where political face-saving is important, the movement is called "business appeasement," but that is a difference between tweedle-dee and tweedle-dum. It remains as an effort to recreate national confidence so that all of the vast resources of the nation can be made available again for all of the people.

All of this is only a prelude to the declaration that:

Congress has taken the bit in its teeth with a determination that indicates rather a unified effort to restore the country's confidence. It apparently is going to guide the policies and work out solutions for the various problems that are viewed as destructive of a feeling of assurance among the bulk of the people. In other words, congress seems to have assumed a leadership in national life that it has not had in recent years, and is moving sincerely to bring back prosperity.

President Hoover's Plans Wrecked by Stock Market

The course of events that has led up to the latest development (a development that has both political and economic significance) has been rather a wandering trail. It had its headwaters back in 1930 and 1931, when Herbert Hoover, then President, sought to stem the tide of rushing waters of depression by inviting dozens of business leaders to Washington for consultation. He was seeking to restore confidence, to encourage the country to feel safe. Those were days, it will be recalled when "prosperity was just around the corner." Mr. Hoover wanted to bring it out where it could be of some use.

Well, Mr. Hoover failed because the stock market crash had so destroyed the confidence of the country in him and in his policies of government that there was no possibility of recreating it. The folks simply would not believe in him, nor in any of his works at that time.

Along came the elections of 1932 and Mr. Roosevelt took over the job in 1933. Those days need not be reviewed, except to point out that no man ever had the complete confidence of a people as the new President held it. Congress did as it was told, thereafter. Of course, there were ups and downs but the scene was dominated by the personality of Mr. Roosevelt, a condition that continued through about six years.

That brings us to the mistakes in politics which Mr. Roosevelt made in 1938—reorganization of the government, proposed expanding of the Supreme court by appointment of six justices of his own choosing, charges that business leaders were attempting to submarine the New Deal policies and destroy the Roosevelt administration. This was the beginning. In quick succession, there came important gains for the Republicans in the 1938 elections, fear among many old line Democrats that their seats in congress were being jeopardized by mistakes of various New Deal agencies and laws, and in general a doubt that their party should be allowed to remain under New Deal leadership.

Old-Line Democrats Decide To Assume Leadership

And I believe it is the latter condition of belief among the old line Democrats that is chiefly responsible for the sudden blossoming of congressional determination to take leadership. Some observers hold the conviction that many members of the house and senate feel they should protect their own hides and that, to accomplish this, they must assume national leadership instead of leaving the policies to be theorized and blue-printed by such as Jerome Frank, Thurmond Arnold, Tommy Corcoran, Secretary Ickes, and others of that type. That is only saying numerous house and senate members believe the country has lost confidence in that sort of leadership.

Only recently, it may be recalled, Mr. Roosevelt voiced an assurance that business would have no new taxes to burden it. He spoke confidently about the future. Others, reflecting the President's position, including Secretary Hopkins and Secretary Ickes spoke pieces of an assuring nature. This is the same Mr. Hopkins who used to be head of the relief spending.

What happened? The stock market that ruined Mr. Hoover's administration showed its confidence in the new statements of 1939 with only a little less feeling than it did in the years when prosperity was just around the corner. The market dipped down only a few days, but if the stock market can be regarded as an answer for any question, the stock market must have said, "pfooey."

Anyway, there arose immediately the new and very potent movement in congress for a program of "business appeasement." One of the first things to happen was a declaration by Senator Harrison, Mississippi Democrat and one of the really powerful men in the senate, for a cessation of spending. Or, specifically, Senator Harrison demanded a curtailment of spending, a start toward a balancing of the national budget, in the belief that the whole country is fearful of the gigantic national debt.

Shows Days of Rubber Stamp Congress Are Gone

The foreign policies of the administration were dragged out onto the floor of the senate for examination under a magnifying glass. Of course, the senate did not force any real change in the international relations which Mr. Roosevelt has established. From long observation in Washington, I doubt that the senate's criticism of these policies was any too sound, but it had to engage in debate on the subject to let the country know it was watching everything that was being done. It obviously had the effect of demonstrating to the country that the days of the rubber stamp congress are gone, and it constitutes another bit of evidence of the new Washington leadership.

The real demonstration of congressional vitality, however, came the other day when Senator Harrison, as chairman of the senate finance committee, and Representative Doughton of North Carolina, as chairman of the house committee on ways and means, joined in a letter to Secretary Morgenthau, requesting a treasury statement on a tax program. The two congressional leaders urged a new and sound tax program and an administration reassurance against further heckling of business to the end that business would try to go ahead. What they were asking, therefore, were some signs which could give business, great or small, a feeling of confidence that the government at Washington would quit pulling hair.

It was a natural request of the treasury. The treasury always has provided the fundamentals of every tax program. Capitol Hill had read Mr. Roosevelt's pronouncement concerning "no new taxes" as meaning there would be no changes in the tax structure, however, and there were a good many legislators who felt revision of some, and abolition of other, taxes were advisable.

Congress Will Go Slow on Increasing National Debt

There are numerous signs that congress is not going to be in any hurry at all to pass a law that will allow an increase in the total national debt. Present law provides that the treasury may issue notes and bonds up to $45,000,000,000. The current total is not so far below that figure, and Secretary Morgenthau has asked congress to boost the limit to $50,000,000,000. Congress apparently is not so sure that there should be an increase in the debt limit. It is a type of confidence—rather, a lack of confidence—that is plainly visible. I believe the debt total will have to be increased because there is no provision made for enough taxes to offset the vast spending program for relief and national defense upon which Mr. Roosevelt has launched. There is no place to get that money, therefore, except by borrowing. So about the only good that can come from congressional barking on this score is to awaken the country as to the dangers of its great national debt.

From all of these things, one is pretty likely to get the hebeejeebees. One can hardly help wondering where we are headed. But it seems to me that there probably is need for a confidence that thus far has not been mentioned in this discussion. This is a confidence in fundamental Americanism. The voters of the country can compel sound government on the part of those who make the policies and, on the surface, it appears now that the voters are telling congress what to do.

Rabid Dogs Do Not Avoid Water

Dogs with rabies do not avoid water, although this erroneous opinion is common among the laity. Mad dogs are often very fond of water and will rush into it, thrusting their heads and swallowing with great difficulty. Rabid dogs have been known to swim streams in their rovings.

THREE SHUTTERED HOUSES

SYNOPSIS

Driving home through a torrential rain, young, well-to-do Clint Jervies picks up a girl, scantily clad, running in terror-stricken flight down the road. She rides a short ways, leaves the car and runs into the woods. He decides to talk to his dear friends, Inspector Tope and Miss Moss, about his adventure. Clint still thinks of her as Miss Moss, his former guardian, though she and the Inspector are married. Clint, having settled down, now manages the Jervies estate himself. In three shuttered houses, all gloomy and forbidding, on Kenesaw Hill, near where Clint picked up the frightened girl, lived three families. In one house lived old Denman Hurder, his wife, who had been Ella Kenesaw, and his daughter, Kitty Leaford, and her daughter June. Living in a second house was Aunt Evie Taine, Uncle Justus and brothers Rab and Asa. The third held old Matthew Bowdon and his wife. Living on the estate was a man known only to June as "Uncle Jim." Following their usual custom the three families gathered in the Hurder home Saturday night, Kitty, June's mother, retired early with a headache.

Rab set the pan of milk on the bedside table. He said: "I've been telling June she ought to get out of this mausoleum once in a while. Kitty, why don't you let me show her around? Why don't we three go on a party some night? I'll get theater-tickets, and we'll have dinner in town."

Kitty said without turning her head: "Good night, Rab. I'm dead tired. June's all right. I'll take care of her."

"Think it over," Rab urged. "Everyone here is old, except June and me and you. And maybe Asa. And we're all old compared with June."

Kitty swung around. "Don't worry, Rab," she said, a slow passion in her tones. "I'm going to get June out of this. She sha'n't live as I've lived. Good night."

Rab made an amused grimace at June and went away.

June came behind her mother's chair. "Let me brush it," she offered softly. "Is your head bad?"

"I've got to sleep tonight," Kitty Leaford whispered. "Or go mad! This is one of my bad days. Warm the milk for me."

June took the milk into the bathroom, lighted the gas on the small burner there and stirred the milk so that it should not burn. By the time it was lukewarm, Kitty Leaford was in bed. June poured the milk into a glass, and brought it to her mother's bedside. The glass was not quite full.

"I can feel thunder in the air," said Kitty Leaford, and shuddered. She had prepared for the night, as she always did, with an elaborate care. June knew the ritual: massage — unguents — waving-irons in her hair—gloves saturated with an emollient to keep soft her hands. Kitty Leaford still served a beauty that had vanished long ago.

"I'll come in to you if it storms," June promised.

"Bring me a tablet," the older woman directed.

June hesitated. "Won't you be able to sleep without, Mother? With just the milk?" she pleaded.

Kitty said petulantly: "Don't argue with me tonight, June. I'm not fit to bear it. They're in the bathroom cabinet!"

June went back into the bathroom. She rinsed the pan under the faucet, delaying, trying to find some argument. She noticed that the milky water was slow to drain out of the basin. The trap must have become plugged.

Her mother called: "Hurry, June!"

The girl opened the cabinet and took out a familiar bottle. The bottle had no label. She removed the cork and let one tablet roll into her palm. She set the bottle down on the edge of the basin and was about to replace the cork when Kitty Leaford called:

"June, I'll take two tonight. I want to go to sleep quickly, sleep sound."

June made an unhappy gesture, and her hand touched the uncorked bottle. It fell into the basin, spilling tablets. She rescued it hastily. There was still a little water in the basin, and the spilled tablets were already half-dissolved. There were only three remaining in the bottle.

June stood in some consternation, and her mother called:

"What was that? June, did you spill them?"

"I tipped over the bottle," June confessed. "I spilled one or two."

"For heaven's sake, be careful," Kitty Leaford cried fretfully. "Doctor Cabler always cross-examines me when they go faster than he thinks they should. Bring me two."

June took one more tablet out of the bottle, so that she had two in her hand, while two remained. She put the bottle in its place and went back into the other room. She said:

"Mother, I wish you wouldn't take them both. You remember what happened that other time?"

"I took three that time," her mother retorted. "Two won't hurt me."

"You were awfully sick!"

"I must get to sleep," Kitty Leaford insisted. She picked up the tablets from her daughter's palm and dropped them in the warm milk. She waited a moment to give them time to dissolve. "These are harmless, June," she urged. "Practically! And they do make me sleep." She laughed feverishly. "Twice this many wouldn't really hurt me, June." Her eyes were haggard. "And I can't help it. If I don't sleep, I go mad."

She drained the draft. "That does taste strong," she said with a faint grimace. "Now run, baby. Kiss me, and go. I'll be asleep in a minute."

June kissed her, made her lie down, covered her over. She opened one window a crack. Kitty Leaford was not a fresh-air addict. June looked at her and saw that she was already half asleep. The girl turned off the light and slipped away.

At the head of the stairs she paused long enough to be sure the others were leaving. She heard someone slide the bolt on the front door, heard Uncle Justus say:

"I've fastened it, Denman."

Then murmuring voices toward the kitchen. They all went out that way; and after a moment Grandpa and Grandma Hurder returned to go into their own room, on the ground floor, in the east wing. Her mother's room and her own were in the west wing, over the big sitting-room.

A deep uneasiness possessed June. When her own door was closed and she was alone, she stood still, even her eyes unmoving. It might be, she thought, the sullen electric air which made her thus restless and full of a vague foreboding.

CHAPTER III

June undressed slowly, listlessly. There was nothing in life as she knew it which could provoke her to eagerness. Her movements were automatic, her thoughts went round and round a familiar circle.

This was her world. These folk who had been here tonight, and Uncle Jim, who lived in the hut by the pond. She thought of him now with a faint smile. There was sound mirth in him. He used to laugh at these people here; contrived nicknames for them all to make June smile. Grandma Bowdon was the Iron Hand, Aunt Evie the Velvet Glove. Grandma and Grandpa Hurder were the Conquered Provinces.

He never sought to make June laugh at her mother, she remembered now. Once or twice she had tried to persuade Kitty Leaford to go with her to meet Uncle Jim. "You'd like him, Mother," she had urged. "I know you would."

But her mother would never go.

The girl went mechanically about the business of preparing for the night. Her eyes drifted half-resentfully around the ugly room. She loosed her hair and brushed it slowly for a while, watching her reflection in the mirror above the marble slab. The house long since was still. When at last she turned out her own light and opened one of the tall windows, she saw Aunt Evie's house next door was dark and silent too.

Also she saw, far off, a flicker in the sky; she even heard the rumble of thunder. Yet the storm might not come this way, or if it did, her mother might not waken. She got into the big bed and lay without drawing any covering over her, for the night was hot, and the air was lifeless and still. The old house creaked all around her; mice scurried in the walls.

She must have slept at last, and for an indeterminate time. It was a gust of wind which woke her, a sudden quickening in the tempo of the night. Then lightning etched a net of flame across the sky, and the crashing thunderstroke burst in her ears.

June was not afraid of thunder-showers; but her mother, despite the drug she had taken, might have waked; June decided to go in and see. She knew the older woman would be, if she were awake, cowering now, and crying out as though from an actual physical pain. The girl got out of bed and crossed the hall to her mother's door.

Without opening the door, she listened, but she heard no sound from within. Yet still June hesitated, uncertain, uneasy for no reason. In the end she opened the door and spoke softly into the darkness.

"Mother, are you all right?"

But there was no reply, and June was reassured. She was about to return to her own room, when lightning flashed again, close by, and the glare of it was bright in the window by Kitty Leaford's bed. So June saw her mother for this instant, clearly.

And when the lightning passed, the girl stood still, her eyes dilated. There had been something alarming in her mother's posture, in the way she lay along the bed.

With an abrupt movement June turned on the light. An air-current coming from the open window in her own room blew her door shut with a reverberating crash; and she leaped with dismay at the sudden sound. But her mother had not roused—did not move as June bent over the bed.

Mrs. Leaford lay on her side, her head pillowed on her left arm; her right arm limp along the coverlets. June had seen her in a drugged sleep before, and there was nothing patently alarming in her appearance now. But though her mother lay on her side, her head was turned so that her face was upward. The posture looked uncomfortable; and June very gently tried to move her mother's head to the left so that it might be at ease.

But when June touched Kitty Leaford's cheek smeared with unguents, her heart turned cold.

June caught her mother's shoulders. She shook them; she cried:

"Mother! Mother!"

But Kitty Leaford made no response. June might as well have shaken a bolster loosely stuffed with sand.

The girl backed away from the bed, her hands pressed to her lips. She turned and ran down the stairs to the telephone in the hall.

The instrument was dead. She snapped on the hall light—an electric bulb hanging by one wire in the midst of the gas chandelier—and in that naked illumination she tried the telephone again, without response.

Terror was clamoring in her; she tried to fight it down, to think what she should do.

Grandpa and Grandma Hurder were asleep at the end of the hall, but she knew there was no help in them. Even if there were help anywhere.

Then the electric light faded and died, and June stood in the dark hall like a tomb. She was stifled by the blackness; she gasped for breath; and the front door blew open, banging against the wall, and the girl choked back a scream.

She was swept by desperate and nameless terror; a gust of rain came sweeping in, and June ran blindly to meet it, out through the door, into the full beat of the rain. The touch of it was sweet and cool.

Then she remembered that the front door was always locked and bolted. Uncle Justus had bolted it tonight. Why had it opened of itself?

Blind panic possessed her utterly; yet she clung to one thought: she must fetch Doctor Cabler.

She might have roused Rab or Asa, asleep next door. Rab had even a car. But she took no time to think of these things. She was already racing across the lawn; she found the gate in the hedge, and felt the smooth hard macadam under her feet, and ran swiftly. Occasionally lightning flashes illumined her way, kept her in the road.

She had gone halfway to Doctor Cabler's house when a car came down the hill behind her. She tried to run faster, to escape this pursuer; but this was vain, and she turned off the road, and fell, and scrambled to her feet and stood like a wild creature brought to bay.

The car stopped beside her, and someone asked a question.

She stammered something, for this was a man's voice, and June was not habituated to encounter strange men. But instantly, while he used some persuasion, she found herself in the seat beside him.

He offered her his coat, but she refused it. Then this young man beside her turned out the dash-light so that darkness drew a protective garment over her, and she was warm with gratitude to him. She said: "Thank you—" She watched him covertly, controlling her breath.

He asked some question, suggesting that she was afraid, and she told him that she was not afraid. Yet her knees were trembling and her fingers pressed her palms.

He spoke again, but she did not hear him. She watched the road, and at the beginning of the path through the wood to Doctor Cabler's house, she bade this young man stop the car. He did so, and she alighted, and ran away along the path.

But hidden in the wood, she stopped to look back; and she stayed there till he drove on, watching the headlights of his car till their gleam was lost behind a screen of trees.

When he was gone, she stood like one bereft, as though with him a part of herself had departed too. But then, in the darkness and the rain, terror returned to spur her on. She ran up the path and so came pounding on the Doctor's door.

At length a flashlight's beam came down the stairs; she could see it through the panel of the door. It struck her in the eyes through the glass; and at the same time the door opened. The light was in her eyes, and Doctor Cabler exclaimed:

"June! God bless me!"

She whispered:

"Come quick, Doctor Cabler!"

"Come in, June," he commanded, and led her into the hall and shut the door. "You're drenched. What is it?"

"Oh, hurry, hurry!" she cried. "It's Mother. She's dead!"

The word on her own lips struck her like a blow. She had not till this moment shaped this word even in her thoughts. "Oh, hurry," she repeated; and thought in a dispassionate apathy that the injunction was absurd. If her mother was dead, there could be no reason for haste. This had not occurred to her before.

"Eh?" the Doctor exclaimed. "Dead?"

"Yes," said June, in an empty tone. Even though the admission convicted her of folly, convicted her of having lost her wits, of having run without the slightest occasion half a mile through drenching rain, yet she had no doubt that what she said was true.

Kitty Leaford was dead. Of this, now, June was sure.

Hut in Which Romulus and Remus Were Suckled by She-Wolf Still Standing

There is one little spot in Rome that is missed by the hundreds of thousands of visitors who go each year to the Eternal city. Usually when a foreigner thinks of Rome, he thinks in terms of the Colosseum, the Forum or the Pantheon, writes Andre Simonpietri in "The Richmond Times-Dispatch."

If he is an artist, his desire is to see the Sistine Chapel and Michael Angelo's "Last Judgment," or perhaps Raphael's rooms. If he is an architect, he will want to visit St. Peter's Basilica and study Bernini's colonnade, or muse over the immense and inexplicable arches of the Baths of Caracalla. If he is a politician, he will try to pull enough strings to arrange an interview with Mussolini. If he is a Catholic, he will want to see the Holy Father and receive his blessing.

So, perhaps that is the reason so very few ever locate this gem, the "house" where Romulus and Remus, the founders of Rome, pillowed their baby heads in the furry side of the she-wolf.

You'll remember the story of how the two little waifs were found by the wolf on the banks of the tawny Tiber, and how the savage beast, her motherly instincts aroused, carried the foundlings to her lair. There she suckled them and nursed them through the weakness of infancy to sturdy childhood. When the two could feed for themselves, so the legend has it, the noble creature took herself off to a secluded spot and there let her animal soul speed on its way in peace.

Then the two youths went forth into the tribes that inhabited the Sabine hills, and there they bartered for wives. Upon their return they set about the business of founding a new race and a new city, after having divided their tiny domain.

Only Native Sporting Dog

The Chesapeake Bay Retriever is the only native American sporting dog. His parents sailed from England, however, and therein lies a story. More than 100 years ago, says the American Wildlife Institute, an English brig was wrecked off the coast of Maryland. The crew and cargo and two Newfoundland puppies, a male and female, were rescued by an American ship. These dogs proved wonderful retrievers. They were bred with the Maryland hounds and, through years of breeding and cross breeding, there emerged what we know as the Chesapeake Bay Retriever. By 1885 there had been developed a type of dog which often retrieved more than 200 ducks a day in the icy, rough waters of Chesapeake bay, but that, of course, was a long time ago.

PETER EXHORTS TO CHRISTIAN LIVING

LESSON TEXT—I Peter 3:8-18.

GOLDEN TEXT—But as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation.—I Peter 1:15.

Christians are not only "the called of Jesus Christ," but are also "called saints" (Rom. 1:6, 7). Peter had the same thing in mind when he (in v. 9 of our lesson) says that we "are thereunto called." Let us remember that when we are tempted to say that we "do not profess to be saints." "Dr. James Denney once remarked how odd it would look to see in the New Testament the statement, 'I don't pretend to be a saint.' It would be tantamount to saying, 'I do not take the call of God very seriously and I do not profess to live up to it.' When God calls, our answer is not a matter of indifference and . . . not a matter of presumption. 'It is not a life for which we volunteer, or on which we adventure of our own motion, or which we have to carry through our own resources; it is a life for which we have a divine summons, and that summons is our justification'" (Arnold's Commentary). All believers are called to live a consistent, powerful, useful Christian life, and God makes such a life possible.

I. Living for Christ (vv. 8-12).

To live for Christ one must be born again into the position of a true believer. Peter was not so foolish as to urge that his readers try to live a Christian life without first being born into the family of God. He therefore lays a foundation for his exhortations by discussing in the early chapters of his epistle the atonement of Christ and the position of the believer. Then he gives specific instructions to certain groups, leading up to the general plea for Christian life and testimony.

1. Among brethren (v. 8). Knowing what Christ has done for us, it might well be assumed that all of us who are His followers would love one another and do nothing but that which would promote Christian fellowship. But human nature prevails even in the Church, and sometimes displays its worst side there. Hence we need to consider this instruction of Peter that we cultivate unity, sympathy, and love among the brethren. Observe that this is not just a pious platitude which we may take or leave. It states our obligation to one another as Christians. Whatever others may do or say, let us be clear that we have obeyed this word of God.

2. With unbelievers (vv. 9-11). God has called us to live peaceably with all men. We will not cure evil by returning for it more evil. If our ungodly neighbors or fellow workers mistreat us by word or deed, we are not to retaliate in kind. We are to control our tongues—how much we need to learn that lesson. We are not to be tricky and deceitful, not to look for a fight, but to seek peace.

3. For our own good (v. 12). What blessed assurance we find here for the believer. The eyes of the Lord are upon both the good and the evil in the world. He knows. Consider also the promise of "blessing" in verse 9, of seeing "good days" in verse 10, the assurance of peace in verse 11. It is not only honoring to God, but good for us to live as Christians.

II. Suffering for Christ (vv. 13-18).

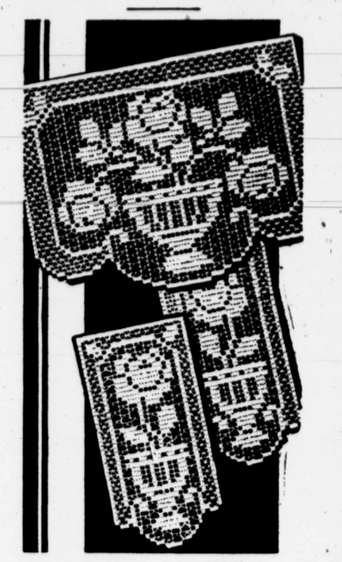

Peter was writing to those who were bearing bitter persecution because they followed Christ. Perhaps some were tempted to say then as they do now, "If there really is a God, if Christianity amounts to anything at all, certainly believers would not be permitted to suffer at the hands of enemies of Christ." Let us be clear that being a Christian in no way exempts us from the common experiences of humanity, nor does it assure us that we will not have to bear persecution and suffering. But (and here is a point of greatest importance), we are able to meet such difficulties in the name of Christ without fear or discouragement, for God is with us.

1. Not afraid (vv. 13, 14). The martyr spirit has not died out in the earth, and there are those in our day who stand unafraid before dictators and rulers who would destroy them because of their loyalty to Christ. "Be not afraid."

2. Not discouraged (vv. 15-17). The one who knows God's Word (and every Christian ought to know it) can give answer (v. 15) concerning his faith. Note that if we are punished for our own wrongdoing we may well be depressed, but if we meet persecution with a clear conscience (v. 16) we need feel no discouragement.

3. Not alone (v. 18). The path may be dark and difficult, but one thing we know, our Leader, Christ, walked an even darker and more desolate road. He it is who is now with us, yes, in us. Remember that "Christ also hath once suffered" (v. 18) and go on your way in victory.

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for functional kidney disorder and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be warning of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

NOBODY'S BUSINESS

BY JULIAN CAPERS JR.

Austin—The prospect of a deadlock session of the 46th Legislature, which might end its 120-day regular sitting without passing any additional tax legislation, loomed large this weekend, as the House of Representatives prepared to begin floor consideration of the omnibus constitutional amendment carrying a 2½ per cent sales tax plus a 25 per cent hike on natural resource taxes, which its committees drafted and reported out last week. The split among house members over the sales tax feature was graphically shown, when it voted down efforts to set the amendment for special order, with 51 votes registered against it. The anti-sales tax group, which proposes to offer various substitutes for the sales tax feature, including stiffer rates on natural resources, a state income levy, and a gross receipts tax, caucused, and reported 56 votes pledged against the sales tax. Labor officially entered a vigorous protest against the sales tax. Various other groups, including retail merchants, are prepared to fight to the last ditch against the sales levy. But debate on the House floor, and the test votes which will follow shortly, will be the only true indication of whether sufficient House votes can be held in line to beat the sales tax.

Won't Pay The Bill

On the other hand, the very interests which have fostered the committee amendment built around the sales tax, will fight to the last ditch against a state income levy, which they cannot pass on to somebody else, or against higher natural resource taxes than the 25 percent which they seem willing to take, if it is coupled with a sales tax that will put most of the pension burden upon the poor, and "freeze" the rates into the Constitution.

Indicative of carelessness in preparation of the amendment is the revelation that the sales tax amendment, if it yields the revenue estimated by the committee, it will still fall about $9,000,000 short of the sum necessary to finance the social security program, including the $35,000,000 needed to guarantee an income of $30 monthly to all over 65—the plan urged by the governor after he had won the election, as a substitute for his earlier flat promise of $30 cash for everybody, which he made during the campaign. The committee estimated its amendment would raise $33,000,000 a year. It is proposed to devote $4,000,000 to teachers pensions and aid for destitute children. The committee estimated it would cost $26,000,000 to guarantee an income of $30 a month to all over 65, but later estimates place this requirement at $35,000,000. Thus, the committee appears to have made a little $9,000,000 error, which has added nothing to the popularity of its proposal.

Woodward Is Confirmed

Prompt confirmation of Walter Woodward, ex-Senator from Coleman, ex-president of the Texas Bar association, corporation lawyer and lobbyist who enjoys the friendship of most legislators, as Chairman of the Board of Insurance Commissioners and Life Commissioner, went far toward healing the breach over appointments between the Senate and the Governor. His confirmation followed withdrawal by O'Daniel of the name of J. C. Hunter of Abilene to be Highway Commissioner. If the Governor names some reputable East Texan now to be Highway Commission chairman, it is likely he will be quickly confirmed, and the battle over nominations will be over. The governor no longer sees the reporters, so hotel lobbies are full of rumors concerning a dozen prospective nominees for the highway post, without anyone having definite information.

Politics Is Evident

Proponents of legislation to effect budgetary and auditing reforms ran into a snag this week, when action on Sen. Geo. Moffett's bill to create a State Budget director, named by the governor, ran into strong opposition and aljournment was necessary to save it from defeat. Some senators do not want to pass the bill until the House and the governor have acted upon the bill already passed by the Senate, to permit the Legislature to name the State Auditor. Declaration was made on the floor that the Governor is trying to "horse trade" on the bill, and Moffett, while denying any such deal, declared if he were governor, he would never sign the auditor bill until the legislature had passed his measure permitting the Governor to name the budget director. Both measures are badly needed as a first step toward modernizing the fiscal setup of the State, but political manipulation prevent passage of either.

Test On Road Bill Up

This week probably will see a test of strength in the fight between certian County Judges who are sponsoring the bill seeking to have the State Board of County Bond Indebtedness assume $180,000,000 worth of "dead horse" county lateral road bonds. So, no indication has come from Washington that the Department of Agriculture will reverse its previous opinion that passage of the Conty Judges' bill would constitute diversion of gasoline tax money, and would result in Texas being penalized $4,000,000 of its Federl road aid allocation. under the Federal Hayden-Cartwright law. Sen. Clint Small plans to call up his bill renewing the present agreement to pay off bonds on county roads which have been taken into the state highway system, and will seek to amend it to incoporate the compromise plan of the Texas Good Roads Association. The latter plan proposes to refund to the counties payments made during past years on the bonds used for State roads by the counties, when the income from the 1 cent of the gasoline tax was insufficient to meet the payments in full, as it now does. Sen. Will Pace of Tyler will seek then to substitute the County Judges bill, with but faint prospect of success, unless the Washington ruling should be reversed.

The drivers' license law, which was stuck in committees for several weeks, has emerged with a favorable report in the House, and now seems assured of passage without too much butchering by amendment, leavng a stricter enforcement setup, and a 50-cent a year fee, although the latter may be reduced. Progress was also made at a public hearing on a new land vacancy law, designed to curb the "vacancy hunting racket", and give original purchasers of land on which vacancy claims are filed a broader preferential right to acquire the vacancies, instead of giving all of the "breaks" to scrupulous vacancy hunters. Simultaneously, Attorney General Gerald Mann filed suit to cancel a vacancy sales of 2,652 acres o f richproducing oil land in West Texas, made by ex-Land Commissioner Bill McDonald during his last week in office to R. L. York. York paid $3 an acre for the land, and the attorney general alleges his vacancy claim is void, and the price paid "so grossly inadequate as to shock the conscience s of reasonable-minded people". The house liquor Committee killed by a 13 to 4 vote the bill of the Hardin twins to abolish the State liquor control board, with both liquor dealers and dry spokesmen supporting the board.

The Home Is Half The Farm

By T. C. Richardson, Secretary Texas Breeder-Feeder Association

"Last call for breakfast in the dining car" sings the porter as he gongs the belated passengers into activity. They have only to weave their way to the tables and pay the price, to regale themselves on the fat of the land gathered from far and near and served by others --and what a price! Only farm folk can breakfast, dine and sup on the delectables of a daily menu without paying the pyramided cost of production, transportation, processing, preparation and service which compel the high prices on hotel and dining car bills of fare.

Do we need a gong to arouse us to our opportunities of high living at a low cost? Then let's "play like" (as children say) the gong is ringing for the last call--not only for breakfast, but for dinner and supper as well! It's that time of year when the good eats of summer, fall and winter are assured by planning and planting; or else are left to the uncertainties of accident and "cash income" from salable farm commodities. Too often we do without the best things of life on the mistaken theory that "we can buy them cheaper than we can produce" them.

All the elements of a first-class diet are farm-grown, and most of them are ready to use without going to town for processing. Here's what every member of the family needs for a year's wholesome and saisfying diet. Multiply these figures by the number in the family and you have the requirements for which planning and planting must be done early in the year.

Milk, 91 gallons; eggs, 30 dozen meat, 175 pounds (including fat for cooking;) potatoes, 200pounds green and yellow vegetables,200 pounds; other vegetables 200 pounds; citrus or tomatoes, 100 pounds; other fruits, 200 pounds; grain products (flour, meal, cereal) 170 pounds; butter, 20 pounds; sweets (sugar, syrup, preserves, etc.) 70 pounds; dried peas and beans, 15 pounds.

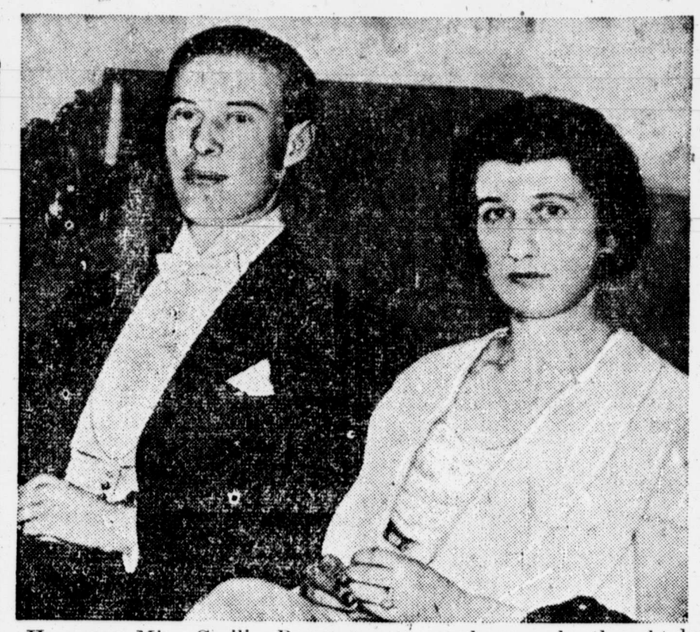

There is not a farm in the Southwest which cannot produce every item in this list except the sugar and grain products. Fresh meat (chicken, turkey, beef, veal, lamb or mutton, fresh pork) should beserved at least once a day for a wholesome, healthful and strength-giving diet, and dry beans or peas three times a week. They grow on the farm and go to the table without paying tribute to handlers and processors.

The United States as a whole eats nearly 70 pounds of beef, veal, lamb and mutton per capita, per year. Ironically enough the people who have to buy it eat more than those who grow it. Texas is a producer of great surpluses of all theses fresh meats, yet her people consume only 15.5 pounds per capita or less than one-fifth the average for the whole United States. Arkansas farm people consume only about 8 pounds of beef per capita, though every pound of beef must grow on some farm or ranch, and there is enough waste on the average farm to produce all the meat the family can eat. It is no longer necessary to eat fresh meat only at killing time, for either canning or freezing (or both) is within the reach of every family, making possible the daily meat service through the year.

There is no reason why we should buy navy beans from Michigan, limas and black-eyed peas from California, pinto beans from Colorado, when a few rows of each will provide a variety of these nourishing foods. The recommended menu calls for them three times a week, but a little forethought in planting will prevent the necessity of eating the same kind all the time.

To say nothing of the fact that garden vegetables are best when they go from garden direct to table, the money saved by producing and preserving the home supply of foods will buy something else which can't be raised on the farm—say a refrigerator, a washing machine, a radio, and a thousand other manufactures.

Freshman News

The "Fish" as we are usually called are going to have a part on the program Tuesday night and we are working fairly hard on it.

We have all lived through another six weeks and are all happy over it. There is just 3 more months of school and we hope by then we may all call ourselves "Sophs."

But time marches on and look for us in the paper next week.

The band played a street concert Saturday for the chamber of commerce Horse and Mule Show. They played a concert march, Colorado, and several other marches.

Everyone in the band enjoyed playing for the chamber of commerce and although some of them were not there the band played well. A few members came in just in time to be too late, as Mr. King said.

The band is looking forward to a trip to Lamesa Friday. We hope this trip will not be as dusty as the last.

Third Grade News

Our Citizenship club met Friday, March 10, and the following program was given:

May Dean Wilcox, chairman of the Good Manners committee, gave the program.

Some interesting talks and poems were given by different members of the committee, bringing out politeness and good manners. Then, as we have been studying Holland and letter writing in English, the following program was given:

Songs about Holland led by Tommy Jean Riden. Songs were "Hans is a Dutch Boy" and "The Dutch Windmills"

Different ways of addressing envelopes; letter writing in Holland; parts of a letter; kinds of letters; Poem, The Winds of Holland; punctuation of letters; the manners and customs of a Holland family.

After the program we voted on the three who had been the best citizens for the week. The three who received the greatest number of votes were Jeanine Day, Tommy Jean Riden and Delpha Crownover.

The president asked for new business and it being time to elect new officers the following were elected: President, Louise Graham; vice president, Marie Preston; secretary, Katie Lou McAnally.

The following new committees were selected to serve for one month: Tommy Jean Riden, chairman of Safety-First committee; Jackie Walker, chairman Thrift committee; Raymond Hackfeld, chairman character study committee; Larue May, chairman good manners committee.

Each child in the room was selected to help on one of these committees.

We adjourned to meet Friday, March 17, when the Safety-First committee will have charge.

We enjoy our Citizenship club and each one of us tries to be the best citizen during the week. Those who have been the best citizens up to this week were: Saledad Masqueda, Marie Preston, Louise Graham, Doris Peterson, Nellie Taylor, Lawanda Bollinger, and May Dean Wilcox. We enjoy being voted the best citizen, not only to receive the stick of candy, but because good citizenship means kindness, politeness, cleanliness, being careful, and application toward work.

The three who won in the 3rd grade room for story telling were Lawanda Bollinger, Louise Graham and May Dean Wilcox. There were three selected from the second grade also and the winner will be selected from this group.

We have a new pupil, Arthur Sanchez. We are glad to have him. He came to us from Santa Anna school.

Farm News

By J. W. King, Jr.

Mr. J. T. Draper and his son Joe Tom live on the south side of the road about a mile and a half west of Lone Star. They have a total of 280 acres in their farm with 240 acres in cultivation, all of which they work with teams. Speaking of teams, Joe Tom and his father have an excellent group of fine looking, gentle horses and mules. They have six brood mares, two mules and two horse colts, and in all have sixteen head of horses. They have in their possesion a state-owned stalion which is a full-blood registered percheron. This horse is five years old and weighs about 1800 pounds. The horse is very gentle and Joe Tom says he works the horse in the field, and from his appearence he makes a very good work horse.

Mr. Draper does not have a very large flock of hens but from his 125 Leghorn hens he gets about sixty eggs a day and sells about $18.00 worth of eggs per month which is a good income from his number of hens.

Joe Tomand his father at this time are raising sheep on a fairly large scale and at a very profitable return on their investment. A year ago the sixth of January they purchased fifty-seven head of sheep for $250.00. During last year they sheared $92 worth of wool above the cost of shearing and raised a hundred per cent lamb crop. The 58 lambs they sold brought them the low price of three dollars per head. but this brought the total value of the return on their investments to $266, giving them a net profit of sixteen dollars on their sheep for the first year. In addition to paying for their sheep and making a small profit. Mr. Draper says they still have their 57 ewes which are worth $4 a head, and 18 lambs in addition. These sheep represent a clear profit of a nice sum of money for this year. Mr. Draper and Joe Tom, in order to get the best possible results from their sheep, keep the lambs in a good shed at night and keep a rather close watch upon them in the day time The sheep are fed from a standard A&M hopper trough. Mr. Draper says he believes there is more money in sheep in proportion to the money invested than any other branch of farm enterprise.

Joe Tom is the owner of a fine bunch of Collie dogs. He has one registered Scotch Collie, a female. He has sold $75 worth of registered pups last year and this year has already sold $20 worth. He now has 7 pups for sale with registration papers.

Mr. Draper and Joe Tom use crushed feed to all of their stock. They grind their own feed in a handle mill and find it saves a fourth in the amount of feed consumed. I found the Draper farm very efficiently managed and the success Mr. Draper and Joe Tom have enjoyed has been due to careful thinking and planning, as well as hard work.

One is immediately attracted to the farm of Alvie Bennett by the enormous stacks of feed in his barnyard. Alvie says that on his place last year he raised 8 large sacks of fine feed of which he has six left. This feed has been a wonderful aid to him in running his farm since he works horses and mules and has other stock which consumes quite a lot of feed. Until the present time Alvie has been fortunate in having an excellent egg production fro mhis Leghorn and Ancona hens. At the present they have slightly decreased in production. He says he prefers the White Leghorn to any other kind of chicken. In addition to his chickens and horses, Alvie has 3 milch cows and several heifers which effectively round out his livestock.

Anyone desiring a description of a sandstorm could no doubt receive a very accurate one from Mr. H. G. Miles who was caused no little amount of trouble by a recent severe sandstorm. Several large feed stacks on the three places Mr. Miles works were literally blown over. He and his hired hands were endeavoring to restack the cane when I talked to him. This large quantity of feed is really an asset to Mr. Miles because he has an abundance of stock on his farms. Although he is using tractors he has 11 head of horses which he also uses in working his land. His flock of chiekens consists of 100 White Leghorn hens. 12 good cows well round out his stock.

Easter Costume Is Prettied With Beguiling Accessories

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

IN PLANNING your Easter outfit remember that fashions this season have gone utterly, enchantingly feminine. The whole story is one of softly styled suits, dresses and coats that are garnished with brain-storming accessories and breath-taking color schemes all of which bespeak womanly wiles and witchery.

It matters not how fundamentally simple and demure your costume starts out to be, by the time it has been accessoried in accord with fashion's idea of things for spring, it will have become a masterpiece of sophistication.

And so, in the forthcoming Easter fashion parade, eyes will shine from behind romantic veils as gaily colorful as blossoms in springtime, gloves will be worn that look as if they may have been dipped in Easter egg dyes, hats will be as sweetly feminine as flowers and wing trimmings and ribbons can make them. However, for news that is biggest news there's nothing quite so exciting as the irresistibly lovely lingerie touches of frothy frills and dainty lingerie neckwear fantasies that give a freshness to spring outfits.

When it comes to the costume-ideal to wear on a gladsome Easter day choose a suit. Style-leaders have already declared this to be a suit season. This year suit enthusiasm reaches a new high, especially so because the woolens that fashion them are beyond a doubt the handsomest that ere glorified the fabric realm. It would be beyond human imagination to conceive of weaves more eye-appealing than the gorgeous plaids and stripes that go to make up the jaunty jackets that partner with pleated or gored swing suits registering as "little girl" fashions for grown-ups on the new style program. And tweeds! We have gone so completely English on the subject of tweeds. There are suits and ensembles and gowns galore to choose from made of the daintiest most fetching woolens that ever you saw.

So, if your fancy turn to other than tweed why not a superbly tailored pencil-striped lightweight wool crepe suit such as centers the group pictured?

To the right in the picture, see what white violets and frothy white organdie do in the way of toning a sheer black wool dress up to a fascinating degree of femininie allure. The draped cowl of embroidered organdie with val edging as here worn is real news as to what's doing in the neckwear realm this spring. Top this costume with a white violet crowned hat, add a violet corsage and you couldn't look sweeter on a bright Easter morn.

To the left is a charming suit in navy serge with collar and cuffs of pique.

With a greater than ever suit season heralded for spring one can't possibly have too many blouses, and the big news in the blouse realm is the revival of the sheer handmade "baby blouse" exquisitely tucked and frilled, hand-embroidered and lace trimmed. See the picture of one of the newest lingerie blouses inset in the group below. It is of self-printed organdy. Note the new fluted collar with its tiny narrow lace-trimmed edge to add to its sheer daintiness.

Style Intrigue

Jacket costumes are having their big moment this spring. According to reports more jacket suits are selling than any other type. The jacket suit presents a particularly interesting theme in that it invites not only intriguing color schemes but also it affords opportunity for contrasting materials, features which designers are playing up most dramatically. The clever plaid jacket pictured has an individuality all its own in that the arrow-shaped contrast fastenings add an unusually interesting decorative note.

Back Comes Sheer Lingerie Blouse

All signs point to one of the biggest, best and most exciting blouse seasons that has ever gone on record. Which of course is the same as telling you that suits are "tops" this spring and to meet the demands of a suit nothing less than a well-stocked wardrobe of blouses will suffice.

The most important message about the exciting blouse furore that is now going on is the revival of the exquisitely sheer lingerie type which is that naive and innocent and young looking it registers on the style program under such endearing terms as baby blouse and it is just that—a confection of finest batiste or organdie all handworked with wee tucks, embroidery and lace edgings, just too lovely for words.

For practical daytime wear you'll be wanting several washable crepe blouses and the gypsy-stripe blouses are practical too and flamboyantly colorful tuning perfectly into fashion's mood this spring.

Gloves Are Worn In Dashing Shades

Your gloves must tune to the color scheme of your costume. The shops are showing doveskin slipons, also fine fabrics in all the new tones, tints and hues. Fuchsia shades lead and violene is also popular. Very smart are the new pink tones as well as a range of blues.

Seasonal Shades

Greens and browns will be leading shades for sports clothes.

Open Toes for Spring

There's nary a closed toe in the lot of smart shoes for spring.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Reveals Several Reasons Why Food Sometimes Disagrees; Warns Against Eating When Tired or Worried

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

A GREAT many people have the unfortunate habit of warning friends and acquaintances against this or that food, on the ground that it is "difficult to digest," or "is almost sure to cause digestive distress, especially if eaten at the wrong time of day or in combination with the wrong foods." Indeed, to hear some men and women recount the various dishes that are best left alone, is to wonder how they manage to find anything to eat at all, in view of the many good foods they consider taboo!

Certainly there is no objection to food as the topic of conversation. It is so basic to good health that it should be uppermost in the mind of every individual who desires to promote physical and mental efficiency. And it is also natural for a person to be guided by past experience in determining what he should eat, and what it may be advisable for him to avoid.

But it is a grave mistake for one person to warn another against any food or combination of foods on the ground that it will cause digestive distress. For the truth of the matter is that under proper conditions, a normal, healthy person should have no difficulty in digesting almost any food that has a place in the well-balanced diet.

Food Dislikes Often Unfounded

I once met a woman who told me that her contented-looking husband could, and did, eat most everything 'cept horseshoes. Menu planning was simple for her! And how different from the problems of the home-maker who must try to reconcile her menus, both with the food dislikes of various members of the family, and with the foods that they declare they can't eat, for fear of digestive distress.

It is true, of course, that individuals differ greatly, and occasionally a food that can and should be eaten regularly by most people, will cause distress in an individual case. But that is no indication that the food will have the same effect on another person, and it is misleading either to proffer or accept advice of this nature from friends.

It may be that the victim has an allergy to the food in question—that he reacts to it differently than the majority of people. But there is also the possibility that the prejudice exists because of some previous distress, caused, not by the food itself, but by the circumstances under which it was eaten.

Perhaps a clearer understanding of some of the mental and physiological factors influencing digestion would dispel many of the bugaboos that cause people to avoid various, wholesome foods and food combinations, and to warn others against them.

Emotions Influence Digestion

Scientists have established that the stomach is capable of reacting to almost every emotion and sensation that is experienced by men and women. Thus, how you eat becomes quite as important as what you eat. And any food or combination of foods consumed when you are tired, worried or angry, may cause acute distress, whereas the same food, when eaten at another time, may be digested without the slightest disturbance.

This indicates the folly of jumping to the conclusion that you can't eat this or that, and shows that one is scarcely justified in warning friends or relatives to avoid certain articles of diet.

There is a large amount of evidence that fear, anger or anxiety have the effect of diminishing the gastric secretions, and further, of arresting or slowing down the movement of the intestines.

If food is eaten under these conditions, it may remain stagnant in the alimentary canal, with the subsequent formation of gases and decomposition products. But instead of recognizing the true cause of the trouble, many people erroneously blame the food itself!

Medical men have frequently noticed that people often develop gastric disturbances when they suffer financial reverses, and continue to suffer from them until their financial condition improves—a striking demonstration of the importance of banishing fear and worry!

Never Eat When Tired

Almost any food may cause distress when one is suffering from fatigue. So it is unwise to sit down to a large meal when exhausted from too much physical or mental work. A brief rest before eating will put the body in much better shape to receive and assimilate the food.

Then, if the meal is served in pleasant surroundings, and if the food is flavorful and well cooked, the chances are that it will be digested satisfactorily by all normal individuals.

Be Tranquil at Mealtimes

In view of the fact that tranquillity of mind is essential to the proper utilization of food, homemakers should remember never to discuss unpleasant subjects at meal times. Don't nag the children about eating, or choose that time to discuss their lapses from discipline. Don't talk about finances or take up real or fancied grievances with your husband. Let such matters wait until the meal has been digested.

If these suggestions were more generally followed, it is almost certain that we would hear much less conversation about foods that cause distress, much more wholesome talk about the pleasures of the table.

TIPS to Gardeners

TRANSPLANTING is an important activity in almost every garden, but a gardener will save time and possible disappointment if he knows what should and what should not be transplanted.

The following should not be moved: Celosia, didiscus (blue lace flower), four o'clock, hunnemania, and perennial sweet pea. Because of their peculiar root growth, these flowers are damaged, sometimes even killed, when transplanted.

Flowers which may be transplanted with little fear of damage, as long as the moving is done properly, include ageratum, alyssum, snapdragon, aster, calendula, marigold, pansy, petunia, pinks, salvia, scabiosa, verbena, Canterbury bells, columbine, hollyhock, pyrethrum and viola.

There is a third division of flowers, according to Harry A. Joy, flower expert, whose lives will not be endangered by transplanting, but whose growth will be stunted. Both plant and blossoms will be smaller but earlier. Larkspur, zinnia, phlox, nasturtium and bachelor button are in this group.

To Check Constipation Get at Its Cause!

If constipation has you down so you feel heavy, tired and dopey, it's time you did something about it. And something more than just taking a physic! You should get at the cause of the trouble.

If you eat the super-refined food most people eat, the chances are the difficulty is simple—you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean heavy food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines.

If this common form of constipation is your trouble, eat Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day and drink plenty of water. All-Bran isn't a medicine—it's a crunchy, toasted, nutritious cereal. And it will help you not only to get regular but to keep regular, day after day. Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. Sold by every grocer.

Grow Full Rows instead of stragglers!

PLANT FERRY'S DATED SEEDS

Be sure about your garden seeds! It's easy to buy seeds in their prime—capable of producing first-class yields. Ferry's Seeds must pass rigid tests for germination and vitality each year. Only seeds in their prime are packaged, and each packet is DATED.

Grow a better garden this year by planting Ferry's Dated Seeds. Select them from the convenient Ferry's Seeds display at your dealer's. Exciting novelties to make your garden different, and popular flower and vegetable favorites. Look for this date mark on each packet: "PACKED FOR SEASON 1939."

WATCH GEORGE WOOD CLOSELY AS HE ROLLS UP HIS JOY-SMOKIN'

1 THE "MAKIN'S"! Ready with the paper, ready with the tobacco! And look at what he rolls—yes, sir, Prince Albert! His name is George E. Wood (insurance) and he says: "Start with Prince Albert and you're all set. I got a yen for P. A. and you're about to see why..."

2 LAYS RIGHT! P. A. snuggles right down in the paper, pinches up tight, thanks to its "crimp cut." "I'll say it rolls firm and neat," says Wood. "It's the easiest-handling 'makin's' tobacco I know of. That special cut helps Prince Albert to smoke cooler and taste mellower..."

3 ROLLS RIGHT! It's so easy to get the "hang" of rollin' 'em if you use P. A. The picture can't show how quickly Wood twirls up his "makin's," but it's only a matter of seconds. "And speakin' of taste," he says, "well, Prince Albert has more taste—more smoke-joy—and no bite."

4 READY? GO! Look at that smile on George Wood's face as he lights up his mellow-smoking "makin's" cigarette. "Show me a man with a P. A. tin peeking out of his pocket," he says, "and I'll show you a real contented smoker who's enjoying a smooth 'makin's' cigarette."

THE W. M. S.

The W. M. S. of the Methodist Church met at the church Monday afternoon in the study of "The Life of Christ".

The meeting was opened by singing "More Like the Master" and "Near the Cross." Prayer was offered by Mrs. Shewbert. The devotional was given by Mrs. Jim Johnson who used the 91st Psalm which was enjoyed very much by all.

Those who had part on the program were Mesdames J. G. Bruce, Harold Martin, J. E. Shewbert, T. C. Wilson, Lilly Bennett.

We were dismissed by saying the Lord's Prayer in unison.

On the fourth Monday we will pack a box for one of our mission homes. We want these donations to be as serviceable and valuable as possible. Don't send some old worn out gift, but a gift of love offering. Don't forget to send or bring any useful gift as we want to get our box off.

Come to the Mssionary Society and help a worthy cause.
