SILLIMAN EVANS

SILLIMAN EVANS, Fourth Assistant Postmaster General, and former resident of Fort Worth, Tuesday announced his resignation from the postoffice department. He will become executive vice-president of the Maryland Casualty Company, of Baltimore.

Evans was recommended to the office of Fourth Assistant Postmaster General by James A. Farley, Postmaster General, with the change of administration in 1933.

Evans resignation will become effective April 21, if accepted.

IN ADDITION to the fact that the visiting Texans now in Washington are doing a great piece of advertising selling Texas to the National Administration and Washingtonites, they are clearly indicating to the administrative officials Texas' interest and support of the federal government and its gigantic relief and rehabilitation program.

More than a hundred Texas newspaper and business men, comprising the "Full House" special, a special train which left Austin Washington bound to sell Texas and Texas products to the east and capitol city, arrived in Washington Tuesday. The party was conveyed in private owned automobiles to the capitol where they were presented by vice-president Garner, Jesse Jones and Senators Connally and Sheppard to the President in his private office.

"You don't have to sell Texas to me", said the President, "and sometimes I think Texans are running the government", both remarks being very complimentary of the Lone Star state and its representatives.

The President expressed great confidence and faith in the present vice-president; Jesse Jones, RFC chairman, and the two Texas senators.

Final Readjustment of County Cot'n Contracts
Finished by Committee

The County Committee has completed the final adjustment of Coryell county Cotton Contracts to compare with government statistics in compliance with orders from the State Board of Review and Washington headquarters. The county Committee has been just as liberal in its allowance to producers as possible. The committee worked night and day for the past week in an effort to arrive at a fair and just readjustment.

Cards have been mailed out advising contract signers that they must come to the County agents office and sign the readjustment between now and Wednesday April 25 or their entire acreage reduction contract will be cancelled.

Contracts may be cancelled by producer if the adjustment is not satisfactory as the original contract was voluntary.

Quick and complete action is necessary in order to speed up the receipt of the first payment check.

ORPHANS PASS THROUGH CITY EN ROUTE TO SAN ANGELO

Hubert Johnson, manager of the Methodist Orphanage, at Waco, passed through Gatesville Monday evening en route to San Angelo. He had in his company seven of the inmates of that institution whom he was taking to the point of destination for physical examination.

Mr. Johnson was former superintendent of the Gatesville public schools prior to his appointment as orphanage manager.

Bill Satterwhite of Whitney, age 12, and John Buchanan of Mexia, age 20, inmates of the State Juvenile Training School, made a break for their freedom on Tuesday of this week but were recaptured on the same day at Goldthwaite.

Satterwhite, before the attempted escape, was house boy for Rev. and Mrs. V. F. Lemons. Buchanan was house boy for Mrs. Brown. It is thought that both of the boys stole the rifles with which they were armed from Rev. Lemons. Satterwhite stole the clothes he was wearing, when captured, from Rev. Lemons.

The boys made their escape about 8 o'clock on Tuesday and soon thereafter held up Dock Wallace of Turnersville and compelled him to drive them away from the institution. The car was later abandoned and another was stolen before the boys reached Goldthwaite.

Later in the day Sheriff Bledsoe and his deputies accosted the boys in some brushes not far from Goldthwaite and ordered them to surrender. The boys refused to surrender and opened fire on the officers. The officers returned the gunfire hitting Satterwhite in the hand and grazing his thigh with a bullet. The boys were finally captured at about 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, and authorities at the State Juvenile Training School were notified that the boys had been recovered. Employees of the institution left immediately to bring the boys back.

The opinion was expressed that Satterwhite's wounds were not serious.

RECKLESS DRIVING LOCALLY

Humanity is prone to consider crime, tragedy, carelessness and all things faulty and evil as foreign and distant. We never think of our own locality or our associates as being guilty of error and yet fault and error are our daily companions.

A campaign against careless driving and heedless pedestrians is now being forwarded in our nation. Many of our local citizens have read articles along this line and considered them meaningless locally. We have mentally shipped those things saying that they do not apply to Gatesville and Coryell county. Truly Gatesville and Coryell county are splendid places to live and the people who inhabit our towns and villages are as good as can be claimed by any section, but we are not guiltless.

In the last four months there have been at least ten automobile mishaps in this county. Some of these were serious others were not so serious but might easily have been fatal to someone. People have been injured, some slightly and others who will never recover. We would not say who is responsible, perhaps the responsibility would be hard to place definitely. We do say, however, that both pedestrians and motorists should exercise more caution. There are less than five out of 100 accidents which cannot or could not have been avoided.

Let's think of the traffic problem as being a local problem. As long as drivers are reckless no child is safe going to and from school. Every car should feel it his binding duty to keep the brakes on his automobile in quick working order. We should all be more careful in both driving and walking. The strange thing about our driving is the fact that the fellow who is going nowhere and has forever to get there is the one who drives the fastest and almost invariably he is responsible, eventually, for a wreck.

... 80 million years of priceless filtering under earth!

Nearly every geological age has produced crude oil—but by and large the oldest ages seem to have produced the best of it for lubricating purposes. For this reason Sinclair uses the oldest Mid-continent paraffin-base crudes in making Sinclair Opaline Motor Oil—crudes which have mellowed and filtered under earth for an average of 80 million years.

Furthermore, Sinclair Opaline contains no petroleum jelly—that non-lubricating element which makes motor oil thick and sluggish when cold—thin and watery when hot. Sinclair Opaline has a genuine full body that is all lubricant—no waste. Try a crankcaseful. Note how seldom you need to add oil.

"The Last Round-Up"

This week brings to a close the seventh month which means we have only one mere month of school. We are truly headed for the last "round-up". Most students have a contented look on their faces because they know their time and efforts have been well spent but others are beginning to wonder to the extent that they question their teachers about their grades. It hurts them to realize that they have not put forth every effort. They realize that the "last round-up" will tell the tale—and sad for a few, it shall be!

Everybody is busy everywhere. The primary grades are working daily on their program for the closing week of school, the upper grammar grades are busy on an operetta, and the high school students are tussling at a play. The community is talking about the "last day" barbecue. Again, everybody is planning for the end as much as we hate to think of it.

Sports

It seems that everything nice refuses to come our way. The boys, soft ball team just couldn't win over Prairie Chapel last Thursday but the girls did their part when they beat the Prairie Chapel girls by a nice score. "We boys are waiting for this team to come up to see us again sometime", and we will show them what we can do. There'll be something new and different and a new tune to the old song this time, because they'll be afraid of the "big bad wolf".

"The Ghost Chaser"

Samuel Higgenbotham, that famous detective in "The Ghost Casher" is a "scream"—we might add, a rap, too. Anyway, you'll like him in the senior play, "The Ghost Chaser," which is to be presented in the near future. Stop look, and listen for the date. Believe us, you'll miss half your life if you don't see it—who can afford such?

Wouldn't It Be Nice

If Olen McBroom didn't always want first base?
If we could all have perfect lessons?
If the high school girls could get their hair set on Friday?
If Eugene Byrd would sit still for thirty minutes?
If John Culp would learn the theorms in geometry?
If Marvin Dreyer happened to get mud on his white trousers?
If Earl Bietendorf wasn't so big?
If Elizabeth Lindenberg could not chew gum?
If Mae Florence Culp would stop laughing for five minutes?
If Coryell boys could beat Prairie Chapel?
If Miss Hall would "set 'em up" to the Senior Boys?
If Dale Britain could go see his girl every night?
If John Culp wasn't so popular?
If Santa Claus would come May 18th and bring us a good grade?
If Miss Hoff could sing?

THE STORY

CHAPTER I—Seeking death by throwing herself from the summit of Lone Mesa, to escape dishonor, at the hands of a drunken desperado, Sonya Savarin allows herself to be rescued by her suddenly sobered and repentant attacker. The girl is a self-appointed physician to the Navajo Indians, living on an Arizona sheep ranch with her brother, Serge, his wife, Lila, and their small daughter, Babs. For a year she has been engaged to Rodney Blake, wealthy New Yorker, but her heart is with the friendless Navajos and she evades a wedding.

CHAPTER II

Sonya Gets a New Name.

BY EARLY dawn Sonya was up and dressed, her saddlebags replenished with such remedies as she might need for her battle with Old Man Death in the hogan beyond Chee wash. Darkness, full fed and watered, waited patiently in the patio. She stood in the dim kitchen with a cup of coffee in one hand, a hastily made sandwich in the other, and talked lowly to Lila.

"It's going to be a hard day, old dear," she said, "and I may not get back tonight. If I don't, don't worry. I'll be with Two Fingers and the babies and poor Little Moon. If she seems to be going, I'll not leave her."

"No," said Lila, "no, of course not. I know. What shall I tell Rod when he gets up?"

"He knows I'm going—I told him last night—but not that I might stay over. Tell him again how it is with Little Moon—and mention the babies."

"They're just dirty little Navajos to him."

"They're tragic babies, just the same," said Sonya sharply, "and he will have to see it. Well, so long. I'm off."

She set down her empty cup, pulled on her gloves, and went softly out.

She hugged Darkness' nose, which nudged her breast after a little rite that was common between them, and went up his tall side and into her old saddle with the easy grace of a working cow hand.

Far to the south and west Sonya could see Lone Mesa. She loved the great tableland. Times without number she had climbed its steep trail on Darkness, to ride its three-by-five mile top, to sit in the sun beside its ancient pueblo walls with their rotting ladders to stand on its sharp-cut rim and scan the lone world below. Until yesterday nothing had ever disturbed her, nothing disputed her right of way—until yesterday.

At the thought her face flushed red with anger at the man who had ridden her down to the mesa's edge and pulled her from her saddle, his handsome face aflame with rapine. She felt the blood burn along her cheeks. It was resentment she felt, the fierce rage of indignation that anyone or anything should interfere with her freedom and her right to it. Her dark eyes were hot with it, her soft mouth set in a prim line. But the look she gave the mesa as she rode along beneath it was neither fearful nor resigned. It was a look of promise, as if some stubborn thing within her would take her to its lonely heights more often than usual now.

The sun came up as she and Darkness entered the broad mouth of Chee wash with its red sandstone walls, and a little later they came in sight of the hogan of Two Fingers. A round, low habitation of a single room, laid up of flat stones one above another, like flakes of prehistoric dough, it faced the east, as all hogans must. From its central rise a thin thread of smoke ascended. Something caught at Sonya's heart—it was so stark and poor a home, its people so helpless. Two Fingers met her beside the water hole. He was a man of around thirty, weathered like dark leather, his patient face as native to the land as Lone Mesa itself, and there was about him a simple dignity, as there was about the poorest of these Indians. He wore a blue flannel shirt, corduroy pants held by a silver-studded belt, and his hair was long and bound in two neat doubled flares on the back of his head. Though he spoke fair English and had a sizable band of sheep, this manner of wearing his hair stamped him as a "wild buck," one of those who had not yet become entirely civilized. For one thing, Two Fingers did not drink, and for another, he still worshipped his ancient gods. Sonya liked him.

Now she said, "Hello, Two Fingers. How is she this morning?"

"Bad," he said briefly and reached for Darkness' rein.

Sonya swung down and took off her saddlebags.

As she entered the hogan her lips set themselves in a sharp, unconscious line. Bad was right, she thought. There was the smell of death here. She would need to gird her loins today in all truth.

At first the dusky shadows hid the interior from her sight. Then, as her eyes adjusted themselves, she set down her bags and knelt beside the first heap of skins and blankets which lay on the sandy floor.

There were three of these flat beds. In the farther one the two children still slept heavily. In this one Little Moon lay panting with fever, her big black eyes beautiful in the dim light.

"Courage, little mother," Sonya said in Navajo, "I am with you."

The Indian woman smiled, touched her hand with timid fingers.

She took the draught which the other gave her presently, and watched her as she set about cooking oatmeal over the coals of the tiny fire.

This it was which had made Sonya the idol of these poor and silent people, this service of heart and hand which had saved them, literally, from death in many cases. She fought for what sanitation she could produce among them, taught them the importance of proper feeding in fevers, the superiority of mustard plasters over singsongs in pneumonia, and labored generally like a mother with her children.

Now she bathed the hot brown body under the blankets, gave Little Moon the thinned cereal as a drink, waked and washed the children, fed them the rest of the oatmeal, ate two pieces of fried mutton and some crackers with Two Fingers, and stood for a while outside the hogan in the morning sunlight.

She felt wonderful herself, strong and high within, as if she set her body against a wall and could not be backed down. This was the gauge of battle in her, that she knew, the deep determination to win in what she set herself to do, the passionate sympathy and pity which were like a steel blade in her.

She looked up at the high blue sky with its sailing, full white clouds, her mind an attitude of prayer, and turning, lifted the blanket which was the door, and went in.

Two Fingers gathered the babies and made ready to depart, according to her request made a moment back. She wanted the day alone, clear visioned for the crisis, nothing within sight to distract her. The man looked down at the woman on the low bed, holding one child, leading the other, and the woman looked up.

They said nothing.

It might be their last look on earth, their eternal parting, for all they knew, yet there was no outcry, no sign of sorrow, nothing but that deep look. Perhaps nothing more was needed.

Then Two Fingers went away, and the women were alone in the hogan.

"We must meet the enemy," said Sonya, still in Navajo—there was a comfort in it, a strength, it seemed—"but we meet him together. I hold your hand tight to mine. We must both fight, very hard. The medicine will fight, too. It is a good fighter. But not for a moment must we fall or sink or stop fighting. You understand?"

The other nodded.

"It is good," said Sonya.

And the day of battle began.

Somewhere out in the sand and rocks of Chee wash Two Fingers would be praying to his ancient gods, sitting quietly, perhaps, watching the babies playing with sticks, building corrals for their pebble horses. He had some mutton jerky in the pouch at his belt. He would feed them with it at noon.

Two Fingers Would Be Praying to His Ancient Gods.

It was the way of life in the solitudes, the way of death, all chance, all waiting.

Sonya in the hogan worked tirelessly. Regularly she fed the woman the thin warm gruel. Regularly, monotonously, she bathed her from head to foot. Regularly she slipped her thermometer into the parched mouth, reading it anxiously. As steadily she gave her medicines. At noon she saw no sign of hope, but rather her heart chilled in her at the rising figures in the tiny tube. The crisis was coming. It would be here by midafternoon. Her mouth set a little harder, her black eyes were narrow between their dusky lashes. She squatted patiently by the heap of skins and blankets, her fingers on Little Moon's hot wrist.

So the hours passed—and the crisis came, a tense, panting hour, with the silver thread in the tube running up a ghastly record, and the patient dark head rolling at last in unendurable suffering.

Sonya held the moving hands, bathed the drawn face.

"Hold tight—hold—tight—steady—steady," she kept saying in Navajo, "hold tight, little mother."

And after a timeless space when she neither moved nor took her eyes from the other's features, there came a creeping stillness, a hush, a cessation of movement. The weary head dropped sidewise, the thin loose hands became quiet. Sonya loosed them and reached for her stethoscope, her hypodermic filled and ready with its needle in a cup of sterile water. This was the crux, and she must not fail—for Two Fingers and the babies out in Chee wash somewhere.

She did not fail.

With the sun on the western rim of the austere desert the Indian came up the wash with one child asleep on his shoulder, the other on his back.

Far off he saw Sonya standing at the hogan's door and stopped a long moment, study with his eagle eyes her pose, her manner.

She stood tall and straight, and one hand was laid high up on the bleached pole of the doorway, the other rested on her hip. Her head was up, too, and at the sight Two Fingers swung out in a swift dog-trot.

"It is well, Blue South Woman," he said with conviction as he came to her; "you have saved her."

"It is well," said Sonya proudly and smiled into his dark face.

Without another word he went into the hogan and looked down at Little Moon, sleeping heavily with a sweat upon her skin.

So the night came down, blue with its dark sky, silver with its stars, and Sonya lay down on the second pile of skins and went to sleep with her hand on Little Moon's.

Two Fingers sat all night in the hogan's door, and none might know what was in his mind of gratitude and hope and silent joy.

AGED PIONEER SETTLER EXPIRES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Jim Cromeans, age 87, expired at the family home at Bee House early Monday morning after an illness of several years. Mr. Cromeans was born in August of 1846 in Mississippi but came to Texas and settled at Moseley Crossing in this county in the year 1858. He with his family settled in Cromeans Cove. The cove drew its name from the family pioneers who settled it, and those of the current series. During his life he was a member of several parties which went out to fight the Indians. He had a very active part in driving the Indians from this section of the country. For the past 48 years of his life he has lived on his farm near Bee House.

Funeral services were held at the Bee House Cemetery on Monday afternoon with Rev. Duffie as officiating minister. H. Y. Price of Evans, who had known the deceased for more than 60 years, delivered the funeral oration. The deceased had been a member of the Methodist Church at Bee House since 1875.

Crawford and Gable in 'Dancing Lady' Coming To Palace Sun. and Mon.

M-G-M's new and considerably anticipated co-starring vehicle for Joan Crawford and Clark Gable, "Dancing Lady," is the highspot of the entertainment features to be shown here this week. The picture, which has its first showing Sunday at the Palace Theatre, is reported to have been produced on an ultra-lavish scale with a cast which boasts a score or more of well-known stage and motion picture names as well as a hundred chorus beauties picked from some ten thousand applicants in various cities throughout the country.

"Dancing Lady" reunites Gable and the sparkling Miss Crawford for the fourth time. It is recalled that Gable first won attention when he played opposite the stunning Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer actress in "Dance, Fools, Dance." Later he again scored with her in "Laughing Sinners" and "Possessed." In the present picture Miss Crawford plays the type of role upon which she built her greatest popularity in "Our Dancing Daughters" and its equally successful sequels, "Our Modern Maidens" and "Our Blushing Brides." She is seen as a girl born to dance who fights her way to fame on Broadway.

Gable's role is another two-fisted characterization. He plays the part of a hard-boiled dance director in a musical comedy who eventually falls in love with the fresh chorine whom he has tried unsuccessfully to browbeat. Outstanding names in the large supporting cast include Franchot Tone, May Robson, Winnie Lightner, Fred Astaire, Robert Benchley, Ted Healy and his stooges, Gloria Foy, Art Jarrett, Grant Mitchell, and Sterling Holloway.
