GOP zeros in on Hill

Thomas vows to stay in fight for nomination

■ Thomas supporters attack Anita Hill, attempting to discredit her as a witness.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — As Republican senators sought to discredit Anita Hill's shocking charges of sexual harassment, a bitter, besieged Clarence Thomas declared Saturday, "I'd rather die than withdraw" his nomination to the Supreme Court.

"I've never run from bullies," said Judge Thomas on the Judiciary Committee's second day of explosive, nationally televised hearings. "I never cry uncle and I'm not going cry uncle today."

Ms. Hill, a University of Oklahoma law professor, was not in the packed committee room for the seven hours of testimony by Thomas. On Friday, she had shocked the nation as she testified in lurid detail that Thomas harangued her for dates, described pornographic movies, and boasted about the size of his penis and his sexual abilities when they worked together at two federal agencies in the early 1980s.

Again angrily denying the charges, Thomas injected

Fire rips Soviet reactor

MOSCOW (AP) — A fire at the Chernobyl nuclear power plant destroyed part of the roof but did not cause a radiation leak or injuries, the government said Saturday.

The accident was certain to have political repercussions, intensifying calls to shut down the plant, where the world's worst nuclear disaster occurred in 1986.

The blaze Friday night, which also forced the shutdown of a nuclear reactor, was the worst accident at the Ukrainian plant since the 1986 disaster, which spewed radiation worldwide.

"We cannot sit on this powder keg any longer," Vladimir Yavorivsky, head of a Ukrainian parliamentary commission on Chernobyl, told reporters in Kiev, 80 miles south of Chernobyl.

Whether to close the plant quickly, or wait for a replacement to be built, already is a major campaign issue in the Ukraine's first popular presidential election Dec. 1.

The fire in a turbine room at the Ukrainian plant is likely to renew debate over the safety of Soviet reactors nationwide.

The plant's director, Mikhail Umanets,

Baker near deadline for peace conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eight months after it all began, the Middle East peace mission of Secretary of State James A. Baker III is still short of its goal and the calendar is bearing down on him.

The hope that a new spirit would arise in the region from the defeat of Iraq in February — and that it would bring Israel, the Arab nations and the Palestinians to the peace table — remained an unproved theory as Baker flew to Egypt on Saturday for another round of shuttle diplomacy.

Israel remains suspicious of Syria and the Palestinians, and the feeling is mutual.

And yet, the trip could be the clincher.

Baker is under pressure from the July announcement by President Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev that they intended to stage the peace conference this month.

U.S. officials say he is closer to the goal than ever before, and even if he does not hammer out the final details in Egypt, Jordan, Syria, Israel and with the Palestinians, Bush and Gorbachev may issue invitations anyhow in the expectation the guests would find it impossible to turn them down.

Toward the end of the trip, Baker plans to meet with Soviet Foreign Minister Boris Pankin to coordinate the next steps with Moscow.

The most positive sign would be a declaration by the Palestinians that they are ready to attend. The most helpful might be Soviet diplomatic recognition of

WWII plane fans renew love affair

As long as "big iron" warplanes roar into the wild blue yonder disturbing the air with their prop blasts, pilots and other aviation buffs will have their druthers.

Ryu Hatano has his bias. His passion is the Mitsubishi A6M2 Zero-Sen, the superbly agile and maneuverable Japanese fighter of World War II.

So does Fredric Arnold, who favors the Der Gabelschwanz (the fork-tailed devil), Lockheed P-38 Lightning.

Jim Peckham prefers the Martin B-26 Marauder, the fast and highly armed bomber which some pilots hated and called the "Widow Maker" and which others adored.

Former cadet recalls days at Midland air field

By Ed Todd

It's been nearly 50 years since Fred Huston last dropped practice bombs over the Midland Country from twin-engine AT-11s.

"Midland?" said Huston, who is in town this weekend for the Confederate Air Force Airsho'91 at Midland International Airport, "Oh, it was a good town, and so was Odessa."

"They had the Ace of Clubs in Odessa," he reflected.

Some years ago, though, a friend told him, the club burned to the ground and, he jested, "made a lot of cockroaches homeless."

Con artists steal homeowner's equity

N.Y. Times News Service

As long as there have been homeowners there have been home repair frauds. Now a sophisticated scheme described as home equity theft is spreading rapidly, and the authorities estimate that at least 100,000 people in 20 states have had their homes stripped of value.

The targets are usually people with little access to conventional credit or poor credit histories, the elderly and minority members. Most victims are women.

Sometimes loans are taken out, secured by their homes, without their knowledge; sometimes they know they are borrowing money but not what the costs will be or the consequences of defaulting.

In a typical case, Johnny Lee Tatum of Montgomery, Ala., a factory worker with a wife and three children, was approached last year by Charles Harper, a home improvement contractor, with a proposal for a $4,000 renovation to his home, according to Tatum's lawyer, Thomas Methvin. Methvin provided this account:

Tatum, 35, thought he was signing a repair contract and a $4,000 loan application. Unwittingly, he signed an agreement that used his home as security on a mortgage for $9,000 at 18 percent interest with $1,000 in fees that would be subtracted from the loan up front. The lender was Union Mortgage of Dallas.

Harper kept $7,700 of the loan pro-

Lean times

HOT SPRINGS, Va. — Despite assurances Saturday from the Bush administration that better days are ahead, leaders of some of the country's largest corporations said their own firms are facing lean times and the possibility that the country could be back in a recession in 1992. Members of the Business Council, composed of the chief executives of such corporate giants as General Electric and General Motors, said that a variety of problems from plunging real estate prices and shaky banks to continuing layoffs in America's service industries were acting as a drag on the economy. 10A

HOUSE: Homeowners lose equity in sophisticated scam

ceeds, gave $300 to Tatum and made no improvements on the Tatum home. Union Mortgage received the $1,000 fee and the right to collect a total of $18,000 over time, secured by the Tatum home. Tatum made payments on the loan for 18 months before he sought legal help.

In July, an Alabama state jury awarded $45 million to five families, including the Tatums, that it found had been defrauded by Union Mortgage. Union Mortgage, which is owned by Skopbank of Helsinki, Finland, is appealing the decision.

Harper, who was found by the jury to have been one of several agents for Union Mortgage, has not been charged with a crime, but he was a defendant in the civil suit.

Similar cases against a variety of institutions have been brought on behalf of people in Arizona, California, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Kentucky, Missouri, Michigan, Massachusetts, Maryland, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Virgina and Washington.

"This is standard business practice in poor, minority neighborhoods here," said Treena Kay, managing lawyer for Central Florida Legal Services in Sanford, Fla.

Millions of Americans have home equity loans or second mortgages; most financial institutions that do business with consumers either originate or buy second mortgages. And their activities are almost always above board, with interest rates comparable to those of first mortgages or tied to the prime rate.

The number of second mortgages involving fraud is a very small fraction of the total of an estimated $300 billion in second mortgages outstanding, although precise figures are hard to come by.

The loans in the fraud cases carry interest rates of 18 percent to 40 percent and origination fees of as much as 20 percent to 40 percent of the value of the loan, said John B. Long, a Georgia lawyer who has represented 20,000 homeowners in suits.

In some cases, salespeople offer home repairs, carpeting, satellite dishes, debt consolidation or even cancer treatment. Sometimes work is done but not to the customer's satisfaction; sometimes it is not even started.

Typically, lawyers say, a salesman has the owner sign a paper he says is a repair contract. In fact, it is a loan application secured by the home. Repairs can start the next day, which in many states violates a required three-day waiting period.

One night, the salesman returns with a stack of papers on a clipboard — the second mortgage, disclosure forms, the real work contract and sometimes blank forms. He has the homeowner sign each one, allowing only the line to be signed to be in view.

While some salespeople seem to be independent operators, many others seem to have ties to big lending companies.

Among the established financial institutions that have settled equity fraud lawsuits are Community Bank of Greater Peoria, Ill., which agreed to pay $4 million, and the Dartmouth Plan and 35 banks in Connecticut, which settled suits for $3.5 million.

The Landbank Equity Corp. and dozens of banks have made settlements totaling about $10 million in cases filed in South Carolina, Georgia, Virginia and Alabama. In these cases, the institutions either thought it likely that the salespeople would be found to be their agents, as in the Tatum case, or they recognized they were holding mortgages obtained through deception.

A recent report by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston concluded that most leading Boston banks extended business credit or bought paper from questionable lenders operating in neighborhoods that were largely unserved by the banks. Since the spring, the state Legislature has temporarily banned foreclosures if equity fraud is suspected, and the state attorney general has identified 300 equity fraud cases and filed three suits.

And for every case seen by lawyers, 100 go unchallenged because owners are too distraught, embarrassed or do not realize they have legal recourse, said Troy Smith of the Legal Services Foundation of Los Angeles.

In Los Angeles, Robert M. Youngdahl, a deputy district attorney, is prosecuting one mortgage lender, Kevin S. Merritt, on felony charges of using deception and forgery to acquire 22 homes and two churches.

Civil lawsuits against Merritt accuse him of having acquired more than 7,000 properties through dubious means. He has pleaded not guilty and is free on $400,000 bail. Merritt's lawyer, Donald B. Marks, said he did not believe there had been any criminal intent and that his client would be vindicated.

In California, the search for victims is computerized. Teams in cars cruise south-central and east Los Angeles, according to lawyers for homeowners and prosecutors. When they spot a likely home, rundown but valuable, they call the office on the car phone.

Using computers, the office checks county records and credit agencies, which can disclose if the spouse is dead, the children gone, the owner seriously ill. If the opportunity seems right, the salespeople are told to knock on the door.

People who take the bait often find the collection process can be dogged. "Lenders call 15 times a day; we're talking old people, absolutely panicked," Noreen R. Matts, an assistant U.S. attorney in Tucson, Ariz., said in a telephone interview.

Aside from the thousands of homeowners victimized, these equity schemes have hurt larger institutions.

For example, about 500 individual and institutional investors bought about $600 million in fraudulent second-mortgage securities from the Freedlander Mortgage Company of Richmond, according to an assistant U.S. attorney, David T. Maguire, who recently won a fraud case against the company.

Such institutional investors include the Federal National Mortgage Association, which is known as Fannie Mae; pension funds; mutual funds; insurance companies, and financial institutions. Fannie Mae's share was $215 million.

The investors were told that the mortgages had a 5 percent default rate, but in fact the rate was 30 percent, Maguire said. Last month, Eric Freedlander, the company's president, was sentenced to nine years in prison.

Why would an agency like Fannie Mae, established by Congress to stimulate the housing market by buying mortgage from lenders, do business with Freedlander?

Maguire said one $14.25 million pool of mortgage-backed loans that Fannie Mae bought from Freedlander in September 1984 carried 13.6 percent interest. The agency stood to earn 50 percent more than it would have on conventional 30-year fixed-rate mortgages, he said.

Robert J. Engelstad, senior vice president for mortgage standards at Fannie Mae, said the agency had begun buying second mortgages to improve returns. As a result of the Freedlander case, he said, the agency reduced its portfolio of second mortgages and strengthened its procedures to determine qualifications of the borrowers and the lenders.

Iran to withdraw revolutionary guards from Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Two publications reported Saturday that Iran's Revolutionary Guards contingent will be withdrawn from Lebanon after nearly a decade-long presence in support of Shiite Muslim militias.

Lebanon's top daily newspaper, An-Nahar, said the Beirut government has received official notification from Tehran of the decision to withdraw the corps based in the country and which has totaled 3,000 troops.

An-Nahar did not say when the withdrawal would begin, or provide other details including the source for its report.

Such a pullout would deprive Muslim guerrillas fighting Israel of their main logistical and training support and weaken the militias believed to be holding most of the nine Westerners still missing in Lebanon.

A Revolutionary Guard withdrawal also would heighten pressure on Israel to withdraw from the zone it occupies in south Lebanon as the United States seeks to organize a Middle East peace conference this month.

The weekly Ash-Shiraa magazine said the guards would be withdrawn in batches, with a minimal number staying on to offer unspecified social services to the Shiite Muslim community.

The Revolutionary Guards were sent to Lebanon in 1982 to help fight the Israeli army, which invaded in June to route the Palestine Liberation Organization.

After the invasion, the guards remained to spread the teachings of the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini among Shiites who comprise 1.2 million of Lebanon's 4 million people.

In 1983, the guards formed Hezbollah, or Party of God, and began training and arming young Shiites. Hezbollah has since grown into a sizeable group of between 3,000 and 4,000 hardcore fighters.

It also is the umbrella for kidnap groups holding most of the Westerners missing in Lebanon — five Americans, a Briton, two Germans and an Italian. The longest-held is Terry Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press. He was abducted March 16, 1985.

Hezbollah has refused to lay down arms and disband as requested by Lebanon. It is prosecuting a guerrilla warfare against Israel and its allied South Lebanon Army militia.

But under Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani, the government has been less interested with foreign initiatives and more focussed on domestic economic policy.

Sunny skies favor air show

Staff Report

More great flying weather is in store for the final day of Airsho'91, according to the National Weather Service forecasters at Midland International Airport.

Today's forecast calls for variable high cloudiness, a high in the low 90s and southwest winds 10 to 20 mph and gusty, NWS said.

Tonight will be partly cloudy with a low in the mid-50s.

Monday is expected to be sunny with a high in the low 80s.

After an overnight low of 51, Saturday's high was 88 compared with the record high for Oct. 12 of 98 set in 1979. The record low for today's date was 34 set in 1969.

STATE

Could the mercury really soar over 100 degrees on a mid-October day in South Texas?

It could and did Saturday, as record high temperatures for the date were recorded across the state. Highs of 101 were reached at Beeville, 99 at San Antonio, Kingsville, Del Rio and Cotulla, 98 at Victoria, and 96 at Austin, Houston and Hondo.

Elsewhere in the state, skies were mostly clear, but high temperatures were generally in the 80s.

Sinking air associated with an upper level ridge of high pressure was partly to blame for the hot, dry conditions. As air sinks, it is compressed and warmed, and this warming causes some of the moisture in the air to evaporate, the weather service said.

The Asscoiated Press contributed to this report.

Today: Variable cloudiness, high in the low 90s, southwest winds 10 to 20 mph and gusty.

CAF: WWII aircraft fans roll into town

(From 1A)

International Airport.

The CAF, which flies those rare and restored warplanes in its "Flying Museum" to re-enact major World War II air battles, Saturday attracted an estimated 45,000 people to the airshow. Aside from the air-power demonstrations, the grounds were rife with CAF and World War II memorabilia, including posters, photograph, pins, video tapes, T-shirts, model airplanes and Arnold's autobiographical "Doorknob Five Two" and warbird prints by aircraft artist Kenneth William Kotik of Missouri.

Hatano, a 63-year-old engineering adviser from Tokyo, came to the air show as a Confederate Air Force colonel mainly to view and touch his beloved Zero.

"I love her forever, the AM62," said Hatano. "She is very beautiful."

Hatano, much to his regret, never flew the Zero.

"I was in the last squadron at the Naval Academy" when the war ended in 1945. "I could not touch it, or ride in the Zero," he sighed.

About three years ago, Hatano joined the CAF in Tokyo and soon was off to Harlingen to see the CAF air-power demonstration. Now that the CAF is in Midland, he's flying to West Texas to see, touch and photograph the CAF's flying Zero, one of a very few Zeros in existence. Most of the 10,449 Zeros either were destroyed in combat or in post-war years.

Arnold, a Chicago newspaper artist-illustrator before the war, flew 50 combat missions in the P-38 in North Africa, Sicily and Italy and won the Distinguished Flying Cross before he, like P-38 ace Richard Bong, returned home to test the Army's new jet fighter, the Lockheed XP-80 Shooting Star.

"Actually, the P-38 was the finest airplane ever designed and every built — the best of World War II, including the German aircraft," said Arnold without a hint of equivocation. "It had extreme potential."

Arnold favored the P-38 Lightning over the famed North American P-51 Mustang whose pilots often complaint about the two-engine P-38.

"It could dive faster, climb faster," Arnold touted. "It had concentration of fire power. It was maneuverable. It protected the pilot. It has fantastic armament and armor plating for the pilot. And it could bring you home on one engine."

Airworthy qualities of the Lightning "made everybody look like a good pilot."

With seasoned pilots at the controls, "There was no touching the P-38" even by comparably experienced German or Japanese pilots in high-performance aircraft, including the Messerschmitt Bf 109 and the Zero.

America's top aces, Bong, who scored 40 victories against Japanese pilots, and Thomas McGuire, who scored 38 kills, both flew the P-38.

Bong was killed on Aug. 6, 1945, in test flying the P-80 Lightning.

The high-altitude P-38 fighter could take off from and land on short fields.

"The airplane was extraordinary. One of the longest-ranged planes ever built. it could go on enormously long missions. It was formidable."

But what stole recognition from the P-38 and gave it to the P-51 was the U.S. Congress. The P-38 cost the government about twice the cost of the P-51.

"The P-38 was costing Congress $125,000 each," Arnold said. "You could buy the P-51 for $65,000. So it was a matter economics. You could buy two for the price of one."

Even so, the P-38 was "The absolute best," said Arnold who was well aware that many pilots, including P-51 fliers, would contest his viewpoint.

Bray of Maidstone, England, favors the British Hurricane and Spitfire.

Born in 1935, Bray was but a lad when Adolf Hitler's Luftwaffe in 1940 repeatedly attacked England with the Junkers Stuka dive bomber, the Heinkel He-111 and Dornier 17 bombers, and the Messerschmitt Bf 109.

The British pilots in their Spitfire and Hurricanes, apparently against all odds, shot the Luftwaffe out of the skies much to the surprise of Hitler and Hermann Goering, Luftwaffe commander.

British Prime Minister Winston Churchill lauded his pilots: "Never was so much owed by so many to so few."

Without the fight in the Royal Air Force pilots and gunners, England "would have actually been conquered" by Germany. "There's no two ways about that, because the Germans were sitting on the other side of the Coast, planning their attack."

As the war progressed and the United States in December 1941, entered the war, American aircraft, mainly the B-17 Flying Fortress, flew on bombing raids out of England.

"The majority of the people, they appreciate their efforts," Bray said. He is member of the B-17 Flying Fortress Society.

Jim Peckham, a Martin B-26 Marauder test pilot during the war, flew the fast twin-engine bomber with much skill and knowledge, while others, particularly more inexperience pilots, often crashed the high-performance aircraft.

"It had a bad name, but the only reason is because too many of the students didn't have the proper kind of training, and a lot of the instructor pilots in the transition schools were afraid of the airplane,"said Peckham.

The Marauder just needed a pilot who understood its quirks and limitations.

The aircraft, known for its cigar-shaped fuselage and relatively short wings, landed fast — around 160 to 170 miles an hour.

"It had an approach speed a little higher than a lot of our airplanes in those days even cruised at."

Though the Marauder "scared people, it, really, was one of the greatest airplanes ever build. They lost an awful lot of airplanes, and it was because they didn't have the proper training."

"You had to know what you were doing. If you ever get behind a B-26, you'll get yourself in trouble real quick," Peckham said.

"We fellows who were test pilots had an advantage," he said. "We had an opportunity to really know everything about the airplane whereas students in transitions schools didn't have that opportunity. It really wasn't fair to them, you know."

MAAF: Bombardier recalls Midland days

(From 1A)

Huston, a World War II bombardier-navigator in B-17 Flying Fortresses over Europe, got bombing training in 1943 at Midland Army Air Field (MAAF), which is now Midland International Airport and site of the CAF's Airsho'91 this weekend.

The two-day show, which attracted about 45,000 aviation fans on Saturday, concludes today. Gates open at 8:30 a.m. Flying acts are to take off about 10:30 a.m. But the main event — the 2½-hour CAF air-power demonstration which re-enacts World War II air battles and aerial warfare — is to begin at 1 p.m.

The CAF's premier show is the "Tora! Tora! Tora!" act, which re-enacts the Dec. 7, 1941, Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

Huston, who hails from Oklahoma City, was a University of Oklahoma sophomore in 1942 when he "got called to active duty" and elected to go flying.

"I wouldn't have done anything else," said Huston. "I . . . wasn't going to carry a rifle. I didn't want to be at the bottom of the pecking order. I wanted to fly, so I went through cadet (training). That's the way you got a commission. That's the way you go to fly an airplane."

At MAAF, the cadets were called the "Hell-from-Heaven" men.

As serious as the training in the war effort was, it wasn't all grim.

"When I was here, we had an accident," he recalled. "We got to drop two 250-pound GP (general purpose) bombs. And one of the guys dropped in on somebody's sheep herd. It killed a bunch of sheep. We had mutton for weeks."

Aside from the mutton, the Army Air Corps chow at MAAF was about the best he had while training at state-side bases, he said.

After his training, Huston was shipped oversea to fly in the Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress, which, he surmised, though some fliers may disagree, was "the airplane that won the war."

On the flight line of the old MAAF Saturday were scores of warplanes, including the legendary B-17 Flying Fortress, which flew out of England and Italy and much of the war-torn world in raising havoc with the Axis powers.

"We were all heroes," Huston smiled. "Weren't we?"

BAKER: Time runs out

(From 1A)

Israel.

This is Baker's eighth trip since February, and while he has tentative approval from Israel, Syria and Jordan for a peace conference, many of the same issues and attitudes that dogged him at the start are still in his way.

The Palestinians, with whom he met at the State Department on Thursday and Friday, are resisting, maneuvering for terms that offer hope for self-rule on the West Bank and Gaza and might even hint at eventual statehood.

A list of Palestinian negotiators acceptable to both Israel and to the Palestine Liberation Organization remains to be drawn up. And Baker still is waiting for a public statement that would signal the Palestinians' readiness to negotiate with Israel.

Preferably, the statement would come in Amman, the capital of Jordan, where King Hussein has agreed to a joint delegation with Palestinians.

The Palestinian problem is Baker's biggest headache. But there are others traceable to 40 years of Arab-Israeli conflict and taking only different forms as Baker resolves one only to have another crop up.

The latest was the disclosure that Syrian President Hafez Assad is reluctant to attend a phase of the negotiations while his country and Israel were still at war.

Baker practiced some public damage control on Friday, telling reporters "it is not something that would prohibit or ban a peace conference."

Assad evidently remains willing to have negotiations over territory.

But Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Syria's backtracking on negotiations over water resources and weapons stockpiles "does not show a true and strong will for peace."

In the meantime, a steady stream of disputes with the Bush administration may have weakened Israel's confidence in the United States as a reliable partner sure to protect Israel.

FIRE: Soviet reactor burns

told reporters he saw no reason to shut down the station, which produces 30,000 kilowatts of electricity a day. He said it would take 30-45 days to repair the damage.

Public sentiment against nuclear energy is strong — a legacy of the April 26, 1986, explosion and fire at Chernobyl that spewed radiation around the world and caused at least 32 deaths in the worst disaster in the history of nuclear power.

Three of the power plant's four reactors have continued operating since then.

Yevgeny Ignatenko, a spokesman for the Ministry of the Atomic Power Industry in Moscow, said Friday's fire broke out as a turbine driven by the plant's No. 2 reactor was being idled for repairs. The 1986 disaster involved the No. 4 reactor, now permanently out of commission.

Ignatenko said that in the midst of the planned shutdown, "an automatic switch turned the reactor on again," producing a surge of current that ignited the insulating material on some electric cables.

His statement, carried by Tass, said the initial fire was extinguished within a minute. However, some hydrogen leaked into the turbine room and burst into flames, setting the roof ablaze and destroying a truss, the statement said. About 300 square feet of roof collapsed.

The fire was put out within 3½ hours late Friday, before it could spread into the reactor room, Tass said.

The reactor was shut down as a precaution.

"No injuries or radiation release were reported. The reactor is now being cooled," Ignatenko said on Saturday morning.

Both the Ukrainian government and the atomic power ministry quickly sent investigators. Prosecutors also opened a criminal investigation, the Soviet news agency Tass reported.

In Finland, the Center for Radiation and Nuclear Safety said it did not detect any abnormal radioactivity Saturday.

A spokesman for the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna, David Kyd, said the Soviets did not immediately report the incident to the IAEA, which would have been necessary if radioactivity had escaped.

"There was no indication of radioactivity having been released," Kyd said in an interview.

International experts consider many of the Soviet Union's 15 nuclear plants, including Chernobyl, to be inherently unsafe because of their design. But closing them would cause economic hardship at a time when the country's production of oil is declining and the coal industry has been battered by strikes.

GOP: Thomas adds racial note to hearing racial overtones into the hearing Saturday when he said the allegations were based on stereotypes about African American men.

"Throughout the history of this country and certainly throughout my life, language about the sexual prowess of black men, language about the sex organs of black men and the sizes, et cetera, that kind of language has been used about black men as long as I've been on the face of this earth," said Thomas.

"These are charges that play into racist, bigoted, stereotypes, and these are the kind of charges that are impossible to wash off," said Thomas. "I cannot shake off these accusations because they play to the worst stereotypes we have about black men in this country."

The remarks — coming after Thomas called the Senate's handling of the controversy "a high-tech lynching for an uppity black" — seemed aimed at forcing Democratic committee members to weigh racial politics as well as gender politics in their deliberations.

"It is unfortunately true that all 14 of us who are on that committee are white," said Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill., when asked about the resonance of charges of racism. "But some of us on that committee have been leading in the charge for civil rights for a long time."

The Senate is scheduled to vote Tuesday whether to confirm Thomas to succeed retired Justice Thurgood Marshall, the only African American ever to sit on the Supreme Court.

The forceful and starkly contrasting testimony between Thomas and Ms. Hill, both African American graduates of Yale Law School who pulled themselves up from roots of poverty, has left the committee and the nation divided on which is telling the truth.

"They're saying things so diametrically opposite, one of the two witnesses is lying," said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt.

"Anita Hill has offered to take a polygraph test. That offer stands," Emma Coleman Jordan, a member of her legal team, told the Associated Press.

Saturday's hearing was punctuated by frayed nerves and caustic exchanges between Democratic and Republican committee members who alternatively tried to bolster or break down the veracity of Ms. Hill's charges.

Democrats said nobody had shown why she would make up such charges.

In speeches barely disguised as questions to Thomas, Republican members attacked the credibility of Ms. Hill and her charges.

Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyoming, noted that Thomas had undergone five FBI checks and four Senate confirmation processes, the latest of which has lasted 105 days. "And what do we know about Professor Hill? Not very much," said Simpson. "I'm waiting for 105 days of surveillance of Ms. Hill."

Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, R-Utah, suggested that two of the most vivid charges against Thomas were lifted from other documents.

Ms. Hill testified that Thomas once asked her if a public hair was on his Coke. A similar line — substituting gin for Coke — was found in the novel "The Exorcist," he pointed out.

A reference to "Long Dong Silver," a pornographic movie character Ms. Hill said Thomas once described to her, also appears in a sexual-harassment case that Ms. Hill was likely to have come across as a law professor, said Hatch.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., said Hill may have committed "flat-out perjury" in contradictory statements about whether she was told by a Senate staffer that her charges could result in Thomas quietly withdrawing his nomination.

Democratic committee members emphasized the lack of a plausible motivation for her to make up such charges.

Despite hour after hour of testimony, Sen. Howell Heflin, D-Ala., told Thomas, "we get back down to the whole issue here is who's telling the truth, what the motives are. Is there any other thought that comes to your mind as to what her motive might be?"

Thomas said he did not know why Ms. Thomas, whom he had regarded as a friend and protoge, had come out with the charges against him. But he claimed that interest groups opposed to him helped to "concoct" her account.

"I believe that someone, some interest group, I don't care who it is, in combination (with Ms. Hill), came up with this story and used this process to destroy me," said Thomas.

Thomas angrily challenged the committee to subpoena James Brudney, an aide to Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, who was one of the first people to question Ms. Hill, and ask Brudney about Hill's motives. Metzenbaum said Brudney had acted properly and lectured Thomas on the severity of a charge of sexual harassment.

"God is my judge, not you, Sen. Metzenbaum," Thomas retorted.

The Republicans also aimed in advance to discredit Angela Wright.

CARTOONS: Thomas hearing supersedes kids' shows

after 10 a.m. EDT, prefaced them with a primer for children on what it was all about.

He delicately alluded to the graphic descriptions on Friday that were part of what law professor Anita Hill called sexual harassment by Thomas, her former boss, who angrily denies her accusations.

Warning that "you may hear some not very nice language," Jennings told young viewers that the two "have a very painful disagreement about some things the woman says the man did to her when they were working together.

"Though he never touched her, she says he said many things to her which were mean and disgusting, which made her feel threatened and very bad.

"You can ask your parents to tell you more, but the thing is, he says he didn't do any of them."

Jennings, who did an acclaimed children's special on the Persian Gulf conflict, later said in an interview that his primer on the Senate confirmation hearings seemed an obvious thing to do.

He ended ABC's coverage of Thomas' Saturday morning testimony by explaining to children how the Senate Judiciary Commitee works and the history of the Senate room in which the hearings were held.

The Watergate and Iran-Contra hearings were held there, he said, "but we've never heard anything quite like this."

Ratings for the Friday night hearings won't be available until Monday, while those for the daytime portions won't be available until later this week.

ABC, CBS and NBC said Saturday they don't plan full live coverage Sunday. But the networks, which have sports telecasts scheduled Sunday afternoon, said they'd air periodic updates on the hearing, scheduled to start at noon EDT.

After a recess in the hearings for lunch Saturday, NBC, citing contractual obligations, cut to a Notre Dame football game but said it would provide updates on the hearing in Washington.

NBC used the game's halftime period for an update, and resumed live coverage when the game ended.

CBS and ABC continued live coverage of Thomas' testimony, but unlike the morning's pre-emptions of cartoons, afternoon sports also prevailed.

CBS, also citing contractual obligations, cut at 3 p.m. EDT to a National League baseball playoff, while ABC switched to college football games a half hour earlier. The networks said they would provide updates on the hearings during their sports telecasts.

CNN has said it's providing extensive live coverage of the hearings, while PBS, C-SPAN and cable's new Court TV network are airing them live gavel-to-gavel.

Pope seeks to revive flagging church in 53rd trip

NATAL, Brazil (AP) — Pope John Paul II arrived Saturday hoping to stem a dramatic departure of worshipers to evangelical and Protestant sects in the world's largest Roman Catholic nation.

The pope's special Alitalia jumbo jet touched down at 5:31 p.m. (4:31 p.m. EDT) at the Air Force base of this impoverished provincial capital on Brazil's northeast Atlantic coast.

John Paul kissed the ground and was greeted by government, religious and military leaders. He reviewed the Brazilian guard and addressed several hundred in Portuguese.

"I come as a pastor to meet his flock and for them to meet me," he said. "My visit serves not only to stimulate the consolidation of the church, but justice and equality and the respect of human rights."

The pope's 53rd trip abroad began exactly 499 years after Christopher Columbus' landfall in the New World. He will visit 10 cities in as many days, but skip Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro, which he visited in 1980.

On his 10-day stay, he will speak to slum dwellers, landless Indians and to ecologists trying to save the rain forests.

John Paul later Saturday planned to close a religious congress that was held to prepare for the 500th anniversary of the advent of Christianity in the New World.

Since the pope first visited Brazil in 1980, Protestants, evangelicals and African cult sects have made dramatic inroads. Catholics now account for about 75 percent of the population, down from about 90 percent.

John Paul has noted the "dizzying diffusion of sects" in this nation of 150 million people and ordered cardinals in April to consider ways to halt the decline in church membership.

Some sects have doubled or even tripled in size to about 17 million. The number of non-believers has increased to about 10 percent of the population.

As he did in 1980, John Paul is expected to deplore the uneven distribution of income that places 60 percent of the country's wealth in the hands of 1 percent of the population. About 40 percent of the population lives in poverty.

After landing at Natal, John Paul will circle the country counterclockwise.

He will speak about land reform in Sao Luis, on the edge of the Amazon basin, where some private properties take hours to drive through.

In Brasilia, he will meet President Fernando Collor de Mello, a divorced and remarried Catholic who will be unable to take communion from the pontiff. The president has been the target of recent media attention because of marital spats and shooting incidents involving his brother-in-law.

At Cuiaba, capital of Mato Grosso state, John Paul is expected to appeal for preservation of the rain forests and defend disenfranchised Indians.

After praying at a slum of 150,000 people in Vitoria, he will end his trip in Salvador.

John Paul will celebrate the 500th anniversary of the advent of Christianity in the New World with a trip next year to the Dominican Republic, in addition to taking two trips to Africa and one possibly to the Soviet Union.

Prospects for the Soviet trip appeared to diminish on Friday when the Russian Orthodox patriarch of Moscow turned down the pope's invitation to a European synod in November.

Patriarch Alexi said in a communique that participation would deceive the Christian world on the "true state of relations between our churches," the Italian newspaper Corriere Della Sera said.

The report quoted him as saying, "The spirit of fraternity and ecumenical cooperation had begun to vanish because of almost shameless proselytizing" by the Roman Church in appointing bishops for new Soviet dioceses.

Agreement necessary for stability, Gorbachev says

MOSCOW (AP) — President Mikhail S. Gorbachev said Saturday that a treaty aimed at saving the economy from ruin would be signed Oct. 15 but that a political agreement also was needed to ensure stability.

Ten of the 12 Soviet republics agreed to sign the key treaty to create a new economic community among themselves at a meeting chaired by Gorbachev of the ruling State Council on Friday.

However, Gorbachev said in an interview on broadcast Saturday on national television, "If we don't decide the fate of the union, there won't be stability."

The hard-line coup attempt to oust Gorbachev in August derailed the scheduled signing of the proposed Union Treaty. It was intended to strengthen the powers of the republics and give them more control over their finances and natural resources.

"If we don't decide the fate of the union, there won't be stability,'

— Mikhail S. Gorbachev

Most of the Soviet republics declared some form of independence in the wake of the coup, complicating the drafting of another version of the treaty.

Even as the country spins apart, Gorbachev insists it must stay together.

"We cannot be divided," Gorbachev said. But the Soviet leader acknowledged, "We have to divide the powers."

For nearly all of its more than seven-decade existence, the republics were little more than appendages of the central government, which imposed political and economic policy from the Kremlin.

Gorbachev called Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin's decision for the giant republic to adhere to the treaty "responsible" and a "constructive" move toward keeping the country united.

WARBIRDS REVIVE SPIRIT OF 'T

The roar of World War II vintage aircraft at Airsho'91 awakened the memories of veterans and folks who grew up during the war.

Meanwhile, youngsters learned about a bygone era — but were split on their preference for the sleek jets of today or those fabulous planes of a generation past.

"Just the sound of them, they sound a lot different than the jets. They have their own characteristics," said Midlander George Horst, 66, of his attraction to the aircraft while videotaping the air show.

"They are more nostalgic than anything else, like going to a museum," added Horst, a World War II Army veteran.

For Rick Lewis, 55, a retired U.S. Marine Corps aviator from Weatherford, the old airplanes took on a more personal appeal.

"I flew T-34s as a student and I own an L-2," Lewis said.

"I just get a kick out of old airplanes. They are a bygone era. When they are gone they're gone . . . they are becoming antiques," he added.

Lewis was one of many at the air show old enough to remember the aircrafts during their heyday.

"Anybody from the second world war period, it's close to their heart, especially the ones who flew these planes," said Tony Doerfler, 60, a member of the Confederate Air Force Alamo Wing in San Antonio and a Korean War veteran.

Marion Allen, 68, of Odessa, didn't fly an airplane but was a B-17 tail gunner in the Eighth Air Force, 91st Bomb Group during World War II.

"That's a beauty isn't it?" said Allen, as a B-17 flew by.

Jerry Fortune, 58, of Sheffield, wasn't in the big war, but developed a love for the airplanes during his formative years.

"I grew up near Pensacola, Fla. It's the busiest airfield (group) in the world so we got to recognize all these airplanes as kids do sports cars today," said Fortune, who pointed out and named various aircraft.

"There seems to be something more personable about these gasoline engine planes," he said.

"You can't see many of them these days so this is a very unusual attraction," Fortune added.

Airsho'91 also brought back some special childhood memories for Ron Reed, 52, of Midland.

"It's real nostalgic for me. During World War II, we would watch simulated bombings in Pyote," he said.

"We use to drive over on Sunday afternoon and watch those simulated bombings . . . they dropped flour sacks," Reed said.

Childhood memories were also rekindled for H.C. Knox, 59, who attended the air show with his wife, Fern, 55, from Denver City.

"He's always liked World War II," she said.

"I was just in grade school when it broke out but keeping up with the current events and seeing these aircraft brings back old memories," he said.

"It's really a great thing they got this out here, the Confederate Air Force. I think it would be a good thing for schools to include as a field trip," said Knox, who along with his wife are school teachers.

"Like a history class," Mrs. Knox added.

For Jeremy Irvine, 16, of Odessa, the show helped bring alive his history lessons.

"You'd be reading something in history and you come here and everything falls into place — you get the feel of it," Irvine said.

"I though it was great. The main thing I liked was the Pearl Harbor bombing (re-creation)," said Irvine, who admitted he preferred aircraft of today over those at the air show.

His friend Shannon Anderson, 14, had more of a liking for the older aircraft.

"Totally excellent. I like the old planes. It brings back history that I never saw," Anderson said.

Nathan Sanders, 12, who accompanied Anderson, disagreed.

"I like the new planes better. They are louder and faster," he said.

Nicholas Hise, 11, and Todd McAdams, 13, both of Big Spring also split over today's jets vs. yesterday's airplanes.

Hise said he likes jets better but developed an appreciation of the older planes at the air show.

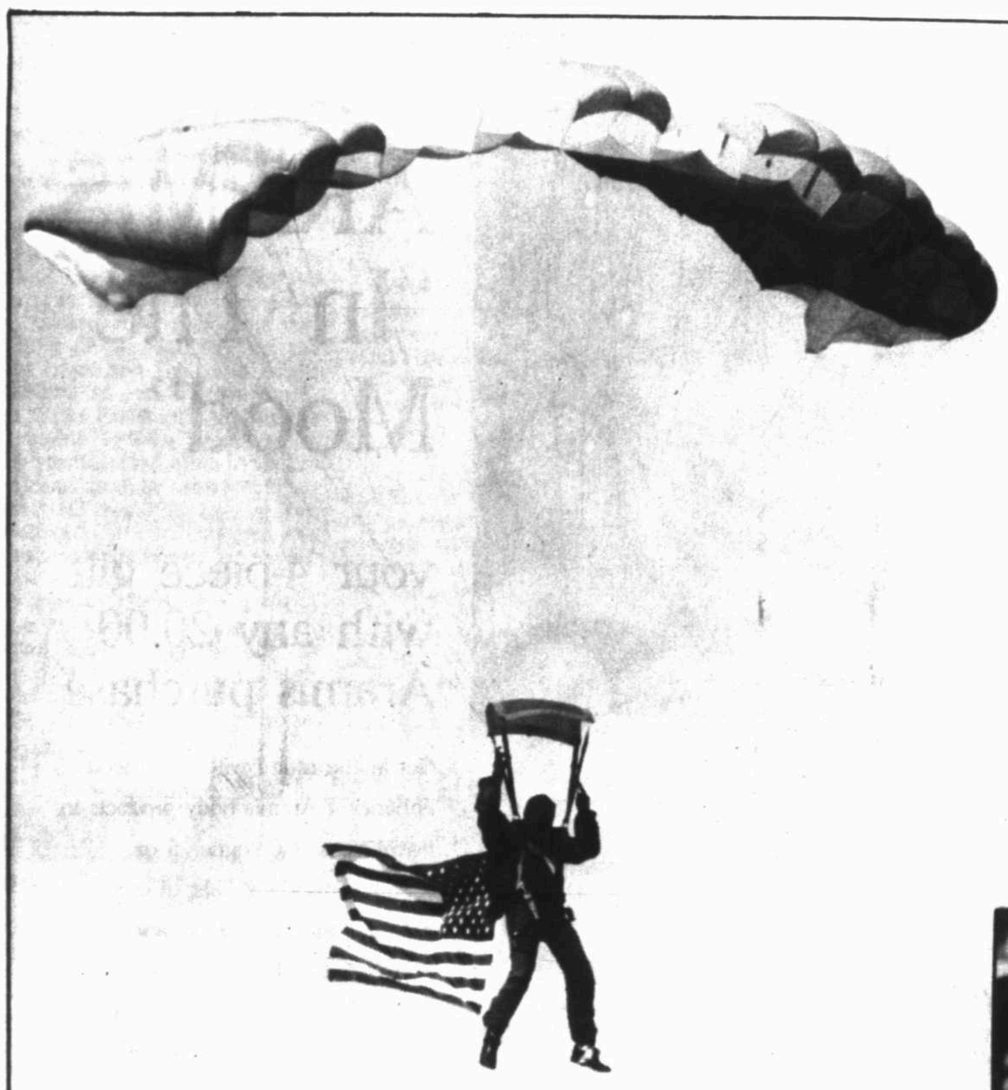

"The thing I like about them is they are swarming around in the air. When they fight I like that a lot," said Hise, whose grandfather was in World War II.

"It makes me feel like I'm in Desert Storm," he added.

McAdams, who expressed his opinion about the "old, neat planes," compared the war machines of the present and past.

"I think it was harder (to fly and fight) than today," he said

Haitian police seen as force in coup overthrow

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (NYT) — Just as a platoon of soldiers had finished setting up two 75-millimeter field guns outside the National Assembly here on Tuesday for the ceremonial salute to Haiti's new provisional president, a dozen or so blue-uniformed police officers showed up and ordered them to truck the guns off to another site.

The swearing-in of Joseph Nerette, a supreme court justice named by Parliament in defiance of international protest to replace the democratically elected president, the Rev. Jean-Bertrand Aristide, went off without a hitch.

Many observers here said the incident was one of the abundant signs that the Haitian police have been close to the center of power in the country since the coup that deposed Aristede on Sept. 30.

Heavily armed with shiny new Galil and Uzi automatic weapons said to be seized from a secret shipment imported by the deposed government, the 1,150-member police force now does everything from untangling traffic bottlenecks and manning roadblocks to directing civilian politicians in their decisions and movements.

Since the coup, members of the blue-shirted force, which is nominally part of the military but has its own command structure, have been seen coursing in and out of army headquarters.

Largely at police initiative, several of the capital's once-lively radio stations have been destroyed or so intimidated that they now give only highly sanitized news reports.

On Friday, the force reportedly arrested a popular singer, Manno Charlemagne, whose rousing Creole songs with leftist themes were highly sympathetic to Aristide.

"I would say they are in the ascendancy, but they are not in charge yet," said an expert on the Haitian police. The expert, who like most who spoke on the topic requested anonymity, said there were strong indications that the coup against Aristide began in the Fourth Company, a downtown police unit popularly known as the Cafeteria.

This expert and others said the company grew agitated when Aristide reinstated into the armed forces a confidant, Col. Pierre Cherubin, to head the national police.

Under Cherubin, diplomats and human rights experts say, the police were increasingly seen as a political tool of the president, often carrying out orders directly from the executive and cutting legal corners in its arrests and roundups of suspects enemies.

Several other informed observers said there were growing indications that as the Cafeteria began to chafe under these orders, some wealthy Haitians, discontented with what they saw as Aristide's increasingly threatening style, offered as much as $5,000 apiece to a limited number of enlisted soldiers and policemen for their participation in the coup.

Support for the coup reportedly grew as other units, particularly the Heavy Weapons Company, became persuaded that Aristide's specially trained 200- to 300-man presidential security force, known as the SSP, was preparing to disarm and disband the rest of the army.

This impression was encouraged by the taunts of members of the SSP, who according to one Haitian military expert told Heavy Weapons soldiers that their armored cars would soon belong to the presidential force.

Since Aristide's departure in exile, the head of the Cafeteria, Michel Francois, a 34-year-old major whom Haitian military experts describe as a classmate and rival of Cherubin, has become acting head of the police and the man many consider the most powerful officer in Haiti.

On Monday, when the legislature approved the replacement of Aristide with a provisional president as agitated soldiers fired their weapons into the air outside, Francois was seen on the steps of Parliament receiving a dossier from a deputy and giving the thumbs-up sign to some of his men.

Trouble meets proposed accord as fighting rages in Croatia

VINKOVCI, Yugoslavia (AP) — Fighting flared in Croatia on Saturday even as the republic and the Yugoslav army agreed to evacuation of troops from a Zagreb base in exchange for safe passage of a relief convoy bound for Vukovar.

The proposed accord met with trouble soon after it was reached. Two-thirds of the army vehicles preparing to evacuate were halted inside the federal Borongaj barracks, and the relief convoy was stopped for a third time from reaching Vukovar's trapped Croats.

However, a meeting Saturday between federal and Croatian commanders led to a plan for the convoy to make a fourth attempt to leave Sunday. Officials said the wounded, as well as women and children, would be evacuated.

Heavy fighting erupted overnight and drove more than 5,000 refugees from the Karlovac area of Croatia, further dimming hopes for a European-mediated peace plan.

From Karlovac, 25 miles southwest of Zagreb, the refugees fled to the neighboring republic of Slovenia — which joined Croatia in declaring independence on June 25, Zagreb radio said.

Officials in Karlovac, speaking by telephone, reported deaths but denied a Zagreb radio report of up to 64. An independent count could not be obtained.

Also Saturday, former U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance arrived on a fact-finding trip as special envoy to U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

Vance refused to comment on a possible settlement of the conflict. He said he would meet Foreign Minister Budimir Loncar, federal Premier Ante Markovic, Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic and Defense Minister Gen. Veljko Kadijevic.

Ethnic Serb militiamen and federal army forces launched attacks Friday night and early Saturday around Karlovac and in eastern Croatia. Some fighting continued there during the day.

Defense officials in Zagreb said Croatian fighters were forced Saturday to abandon the town of Lipik 60 miles southeast of Zagreb under pressure of an army tank-and-infantry attack.

They said the army also was training heavy artillery on the neighboring town of Pakrac and surrounding villages.

A 50-truck relief convoy that was turned back twice set out from Djakovo, about 20 miles west of Vinkovci, toward Vukovar, an hour after the first batch of soldiers and trucks left the Zagreb barracks.

After the convoy arrived in Vinkvoci, relief coordinator Miljenko Marjanovic said he had been told by the local national guard commander it was impossible to proceed because Vukovar was under constant bombardment.

He also insisted that the convoy would not go on without the protection of EC monitors, who had left for Zagreb for lack of safety.

But there was disagreement in the convoy about the delay, and special black-bereted Croatian troopers were impatiently waiting for the convoy to resume its perilous journey.

The army escalated its attacks after Croatian forces barricaded military garrisons.

Muslim insurgents launch missile attack on Jalalabad killing 17

PESHAWAR, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan rebels rocketed the heavily fortified city of Jalalabad in Afghanistan on Saturday, killing 17 and injuring 67 others, state-run Radio Kabul said.

Afghanistan's Soviet-backed government retaliated by heavily bombing guerrilla positions around the eastern city. Diplomatic sources in Kabul said several medium-range Scud missiles were launched from the city.

The broadcast, monitored in Islamabad, blamed Muslim insurgents financed partly by the United States.

Earlier this week, Afghan government warplanes stopped a 10,000-strong guerrilla assault on Gardez, 90 miles south of Jalalabad. Gardez is the hometown of several senior government officials, including Afghan President Najibullah.

Muslim guerrillas, headquartered in Pakistan, said they pounded Jalalabad with surface-to-surface rockets in preparation for another major offensive.

"This is just a test run to gauge the government's strength and retaliatory strikes," said Sheen Gul, a guerrilla commander.

The radio report did not identify the target. Insurgents claim they aim at only military installations although routinely acknowledge many rockets go astray, often hitting civilian targets.

Muslim insurgents said their original battlefield strategy was to launch simultaneous attacks on everal Afghan cities to unnerve the government and stretch its air power.

"Jalalabad and Gardez should fall together. That was our dream," said Abdul Rahim, a spokesman for the devout Muslim rebel group Jamiat-i-Islami, or Party of Islam.

But feuding between factions within the Afghan resistance has delayed the assault on Jalalabad.

Soviet soldiers withdrew from Afghanistan in 1989, but the 13-year-old civil war rages. Guerrilla groups have been struggling to unite their deeply divided ranks but so far have been unsuccessful.

Testimony reveals Gates as being truthful, evasive

WASHINGTON (NYT) — Robert M. Gates staked his nomination to head the CIA on an impassioned 20-point rebuttal to charges that he slanted analysis.

But a review of his testimony suggests that he was both truthful and evasive, careful and incomplete, that he effectively rebutted some allegations but offered technical and misleading denials of others.

The Senate Intelligence Committee, which is to vote on his nomination on Oct. 18, is struggling with the daunting task of sorting out the facts on a number of complicated, often murky issues.

While most of the Senate spent the week transfixed by the sexual harassment accusations against the Supreme Court nominee, Clarence Thomas, the intelligence committee's staff has been assembling thousands of pages of documents, testimony and affidavits dealing with accusations that Gates tailored intelligence reports and suppressed dissent, either because of his own pessimistic view of the Kremlin or to please his boss, William J. Casey.

The issue is so divisive, and senators and staff members so sensitive to accusations that they themselves may inadvertantly slant the data, that the report to committee members will not draw any conclusions about the seriousness of the assertions or the truthfulness of Gates's responses, some committee members said.

After the committee votes, it is expected to write a comprehensive report that will try to address and resolve some of the most sensitive issues as a guide for the full Senate.

Gates's rebuttal before the committee on Oct. 3 reflects a strategy of concentrated counterattack in which he focused primarily on the accusations of Melvin A. Goodman, a former senior analyst who now teaches at the National Defense University.

Goodman said that the output of the Directorate of Intelligence under Gates "was systematically politicized" and the agency's mission to provide objective analysis "was compromised and the professional integrity of its analysts undermined."

Gates did not directly rebut two other analysts who testified against him, and it was only when pressed that he addressed a number of issues raised by Sen. Bill Bradley, the New Jersey Democrat who has taken the lead in questioning the quality and veracity of much of the intelligence analysis produced under Gates's management.

Gates's rebuttal illustrates his own approach to intelligence, as he put it at the hearings, "telling it like it is, with the bark off."

But in defending himself, Gates also seemed to exhibit some of the same traits that his critics say flawed his tenure as the CIA's top analyst: selectively choosing his facts to make his case.

Both Democrats and Republicans on the committee have praised the chairman of the panel, David L. Boren, D-Okla., for making an extraordinary effort to be as thorough as possible. But the issue of tailoring intelligence is so broad that as of now, a number of accusations have not been fully aired before the committee.

The panel has not subpoenaed potentially important witnesses, like Morton I. Abramowitz, the former director of the State Department's Bureau of Intelligence and Research.

The staff is still petitioning the CIA for relevant documents, and in the last few days has received sworn statements from two more former agency officials who are also critical of Gates.

Mail-in lottery creates rush in immigrant communities

BOSTON (AP) — At 12:01 a.m. Monday, a window will crack open for thousands of immigrants looking to become legal residents of the United States in a rare, mail-in lottery that's creating a mad rush in Boston's Irish community.

The offer of green cards on a first-come, first-served basis has hundreds of people trekking to Virginia to drop off their applications at a post office in Arlington, the only one handling the lottery.

Other people are mailing hundreds of applications to ensure they are among 40,000 qualified applicants to be chosen.

"It's worth it to get the freedom to come and go where I want," said Seamus O'Tighnearigh, 25, who came here from Ireland three years ago and, like many of the hopefuls, has lived under a shroud of secrecy.

The cause for hope is a section in the 1990 Immigration Act that provides for 40,000 cards for foreigners who were put at a disadvantage by previous changes in the law.

The special visas — which will give those people permanent residence status — are available to people from 35 countries, mostly in Europe. But with help from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., the law set aside 40 percent of the visas — or 16,000 — for the Irish.

Word spread through Irish enclaves in such places as New York, Chicago and especially Boston, where officials estimate one-third of the residents have Irish ancestry.

Postal officials in Arlington have been flooded with questions about the program from illegal immigrants throughout the country.

"It's the top of the conversation," said Michael Foley, manager of the Black Thorn Bar in the heavily Irish neighborhood of South Boston. "These people feel they might never get a green card unless they marry an American."

Government officials say the offer of green cards is not only magnanimous but good policy.

"To have a shadow population in the United States means you have a very exploitable population," said Duke Austin, a spokesman for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Experts say illegal immigration from Ireland swelled in the mid-1980s as people fled the gloomy economy back home and headed for the glow of the Northeast.

Since then, the recession has slowed the tide of immigration, but thousands of undocumented Irish remain. The exact numbers are elusive, with estimates ranging from 40,000 to more than 100,000 Irish living in the United States illegally.

David Mooney, who was an undocumented immigrant until a few years ago and helps run the Irish Immigration Center in Boston, estimates the city is home to 10,000 illegal aliens from Ireland.

Many of these people move from job to job, working in construction, painting homes, playing music in bands or selling wares from pushcarts.

"You can't really get a decent job," Mooney said.

Getting the cards will be tricky. The State Department, which is running the program, won't accept applications that arrive before 12:01 a.m. Monday. Officials expect 5 million applications before the gateway closes at 11:59 p.m. Oct. 20.

Observers say letters that arrive after the first day probably won't stand a chance of being among the first 40,000 qualified applicants. Duplicates will be weeded out.

Some people have traveled to Virginia to deliver the letters in person, although postal officials say it gives them no advantage.

Townsfolk hold noses, wait for skunk invasion to pass

CORYDON, Ind. (AP) — People strolling downtown watch out for them. Some make sure the coast is clear before they'll venture outdoors.

This southern Indiana town has been infested by skunks — hundreds of them by some residents' estimates.

"It's nothing to see one walk right down the middle of the street here in town, big as you please. They're everywhere, and nobody's ever seen anything like it," Mayor Fred Cammack said.

The invasion began in early August, residents say. As the skunk population has increased, their fear of people has waned.

"We were sitting outside in the front yard one night and three of them came up and started walking toward us. I threw a chair at them, but it was just like they were tame," said bartender Shirley Austin.

Carol Norton let her golden retriever Honey Dew in the house one night only to find that it had been sprayed. After one month and a bath by the veterinarian, Honey Dew still reeks.

"They tell me it takes a good four to six weeks to get it all out," Ms. Norton said.

The nocturnal mammals emerge from their daytime hideaways around dusk, Cammack said. They descend on the town of about 2,500 and spend the night scavenging for food.

You just can't shoot the varmints in business and residential areas, the mayor said.

Business firms face tough times

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — Despite assurances Saturday from the Bush administration that better days are ahead, leaders of some of the country's largest corporations said their own firms are facing lean times and the possibility that the country could be back in a recession in 1992.

Members of the Business Council, composed of the chief executives of such corporate giants as General Electric and General Motors, said that a variety of problems from plunging real estate prices and shaky banks to continuing layoffs in America's service industries were acting as a drag on the economy.

The business leaders laid out their concerns Saturday for Michael Boskin, chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, who participated in a closed-door review of current business conditions.

While the executives presented a forecast of an economic recovery that they expect initially at least to be the slowest in history, Boskin insisted that confidence should improve in coming months as there is more evidence of an upturn.

But Boskin, speaking to reporters after his session with the business leaders, did not dispute that their mood was generally downbeat.

"It was clearly felt by many people in the room that there were considerable downside risks," said Boskin. He said many of the business worries focused on the lack of consumer confidence, which has depressed consumer spending, a key segment that accounts for two-thirds of the total economy.

"No one is saying the economy is healthy, but we believe it is improving and most people agree with that," Boskin said.

Boskin's meeting with the business executives was one of a series of discussions the Bush administration has held over the past two weeks in a search for ways to bolster economic prospects as the 1992 presidential election year approaches.

Boskin said the Federal Reserve likely would cut interest rates again in the coming weeks if business statistics and growth in the money supply remain weak.

The business executives also expressed a belief that the Federal Reserve will cut rates, with many of the executives calling for a bold move of a full percentage point reduction.

In its forecast, the Business Council said layoffs were likely to continue, especially in the service sector of the economy which employs 70 percent of Americans, as hard-pressed banks, airlines and other service industries continue to cut costs.

'No one is saying the economyis healthy, but we believe it is improving and most people agree with that.'

— Michael Boskin

Because of that, the business executives said the nation's 6.7 percent unemployment rate was likely to stay stuck at that level through much of next year, an ominous forecast for the administration in an election year.

The Business Council's forecast, prepared by a group of chief economists at the various companies, called for the economy to continue growing.

But many of the individual business executives were more pessimistic, expressing doubt over whether the recession has ended yet or whether the recovery might falter and topple the country into another downturn.

George Fisher, head of Motorola Corp., said a double-dip recession was "clearly possible."

He said the Bush administration should "develop an economic strategy that can persuade people" or run the risk of having the weak economy raised as a major campaign issue.

Howard Allen, chairman of the executive committee of Southern California Edison Co., said he believed it would be a year or more before his region of the country resumes economic growth because of a variety of problems, including cutbacks in the defense industry.

Roger B. Smith, who stepped down last year as chairman of General Motors Corp., said the administration should focus more on the economy because of the fragile nature of the recovery.

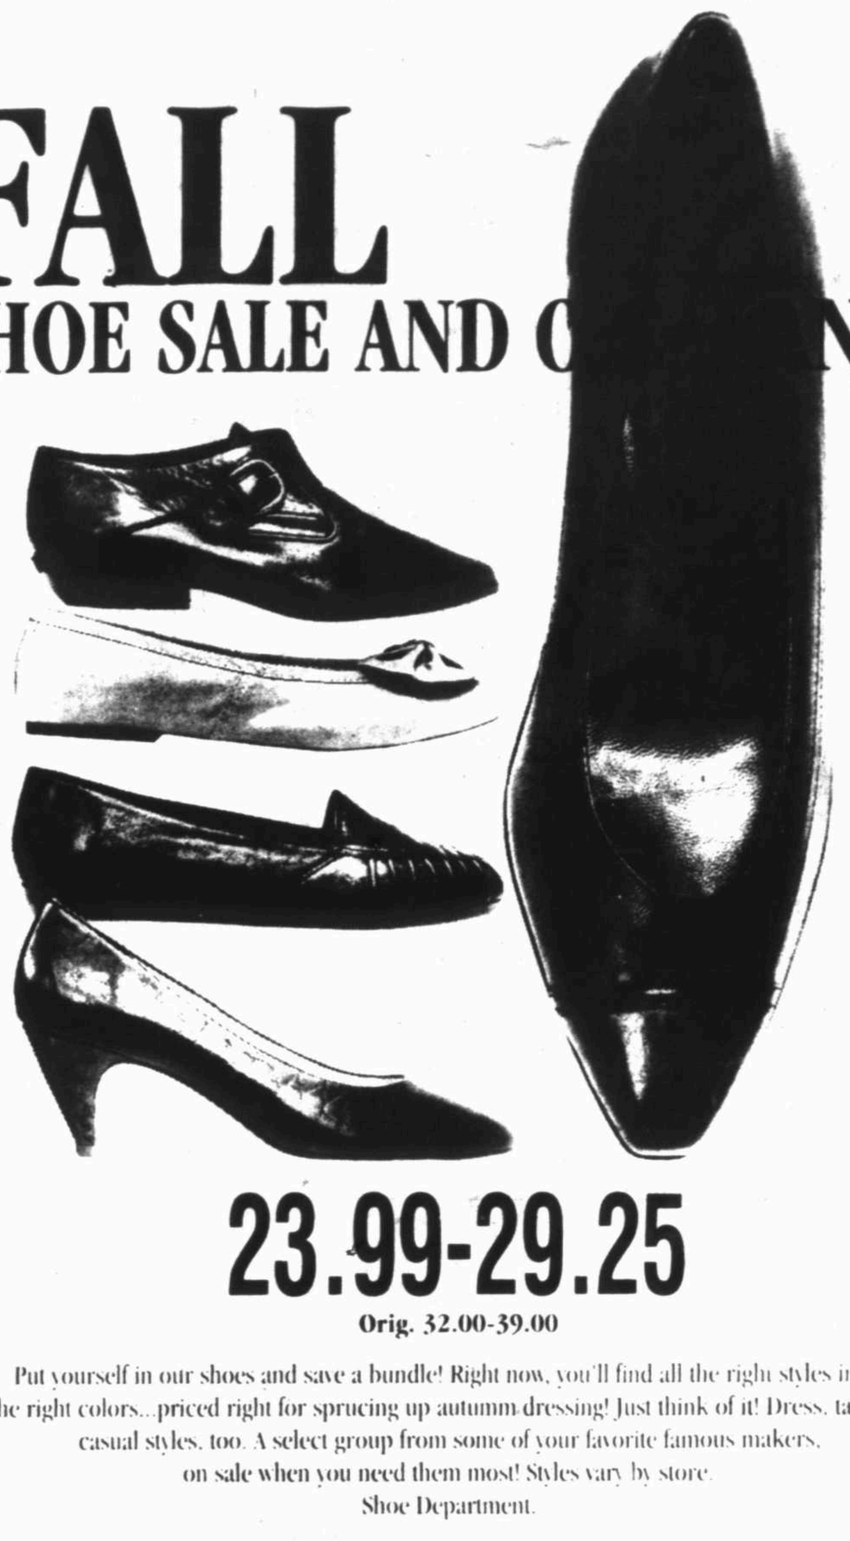

"They should be worried," Smith said. "All you have to do is look at the statistics."

Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, also spoke to the Business Council on Saturday and said that the weak economy would certainly be an issue in next year's presidential campaign.

"I have never been on such a long runway and such a long climb out of a recession in the history of man," he told reporters.

Woman gives birth to grandchildren as surrogate

ABERDEEN, S.D. (AP) — Twins were born Saturday to Arlette Schweitzer, the first American woman to bear her own grandchildren as a surrogate for her daughter.

"They are really sweet," said Dan Schweitzer, grandfather of the boy and girl, Chad Daniel and Chelsea Arlette. "I can't describe it. They're just like two little miracles."

Mrs. Schweitzer, 42, carried the babies for her daughter, Christa Uchytil, and son-in-law, Kevin. Mrs. Uchytil, 22, was born without a uterus, which made it impossible for her to have children.

Eggs were taken from Mrs. Uchytil's ovaries, fertilized with her husband's sperm and implanted in Mrs. Schweitzer's womb.

The twins were born five weeks early but were healthy with mature lungs, said obstetrician Dr. Gregg Carlson. They were deliyered by Caesarean section under a spinal anesthetic.

Mrs. Schweitzer was in satisfactory condition at St. Luke's Midland Regional Medical Center.

"It was an honor really," Carlson said. "When the first baby was born it was very unique. I can't describe it. I really can't. All the family and all the support people were cheering."

Mrs. Schweitzer was awake and Mrs. Uchytil was at her side, tears dripping down her cheeks as she watched her children arrive, the grandfather said.

Uchytil drove nearly 400 miles from his job in Rapid City and missed the births.

Chad was born first by one minute, at 1:21 a.m., and weighed 6 pounds, 3 ounces. He measured 20¼ inches long. Chelsea Arlette weighed 4 pounds, 7 ounces and was 18 inches long.

Carlson said the relationship between the surrogate and the donors was unique, but the procedure was not.

"This was a special instance where things just seemed to work out. Christa's mother was young enough yet to carry a pregnancy and I'm sure there are other families out there with the same circumstances," he said.

Rory King, the attorney for the family, said he consulted with state officials to determine the proper way to handle the birth certificate for the babies.

The document will list Kevin and Christa Uchytil as the parents, based on a sworn statement from Dr. William R. Phipps of the University of Minnesota, who performed the in-vitro fertilization and implantation.

Hospital officials were trying to handle intense media attention. Dale Stein, the hospital's president, said he hired six extra security guards and made the maternity ward off-limits to outsiders.

Stein said he had received dozens of requests to interview Mrs. Schweitzer and her family. King said he's been taking requests about every 15 minutes for news conferences, television interviews via satellite and photo opportunities.

"We just can't accommodate them all," he said.

Arlette Schweitzer sits in her Aberdeen, S.D., home in August.

Court voids university's ban against hate speech

MILWAUKEE (NYT) — In a case that could eventually have implications for colleges around the country, a federal district judge has voided a University of Wisconsin rule against hate speech, saying it is unconstitutionally broad.

The rule, adopted two years ago by the university's Board of Regents, barred speech that was intended to create a hostile learning environment through the demeaning of a person's race, sex, religion, color, creed, disability, sexual orientation or ancestry.

The rule called for punishment ranging from public service to suspension.

The American Civil Liberties Union challenged the rule on behalf of a student newspaper and several students who had been punished for violating it.

On Friday, the judge in the case, Robert W. Warren, agreed with the plaintiffs' assertion that their rights of free speech under the First Amendment were being violated.

The university had argued that the rule was allowable under the "fighting-words" doctrine, established by the Supreme Court 49 years ago.

In the case of Chaplinsky vs. New Hampshire, the court held that words intended to provoke imminent lawlessness were not protected under the First Amendment.

Representing the university, Nadim Sahar, an assistant state attorney general, contended that the rule met that test because it applied only to instances in which someone intended to create a hostile learning environment, infringing on the rights of another person.

But Warren wrote that the rule "clearly reaches beyond the narrow confines of the fighting-words doctrine."

"The problems of bigotry and discrimination sought to be addressed here are real and truly corrosive of the educational environment," his decision said.

"But freedom of speech is almost absolute in our land, and the only restriction the fighting-words doctrine can abide is that based on the fear of violent reaction."

Lawyers on both sides of the case have said it will be fought all the way to the Supreme Court. But if Warren's decision is upheld on appeal, it could prove frustrating for universities trying to find ways to cope with what seems to be a resurging tide of bigotry in recent years on campuses across the country.

Two struck by lightening near 'umbrellas'

TEJON PASS, Calif. (NYT) — Lightning crackled in the air over Christo's "Umbrellas," creating a breathtaking scene but prompting authorities to warn spectators not to seek shelter under the 20-foot-tall metal-framed canopies.

Onlookers said Saturday the lightning against the cloud-masked sunrise and thunder that rolled through the mountains offered dramatic viewing conditions for the 1,760 giant yellow umbrellas dotting the landscape. The "Umbrellas" project begins in Gorman, about 65 miles north of Los Angeles, and extends for 18 miles north into Kern County through the Tejon Pass.

At one clap of thunder, Christine Nazareth of Sao Paulo, Brazil, remarked "God is here with the umbrellas."

But despite spectators' enjoyment of the eerie scene, sheriff's officials issued a warning that the 2-story-tall metal parasols could act as lightning rods, after two people were hit by lightning in the vicinity of the Christo project, authorities said.

Judge, attorneys discuss Bush-Noreiga connection

MIAMI (AP) — Dancing girls, racial issues, Fidel Castro's point of view and a photo of George Bush with Manuel Noriega are among topics a judge and lawyers have privately discussed during the ousted Panamanian leader's trial.

The private conferences, known as sidebars, aren't heard by the jury or the public.

When classified issues arise, clerks turn on a box emitting an irritating electronic hiss that ensures no one else in the courtroom can hear the whispered discussions.

For Noriega's drug trial, transcripts of all such conferences are censored to prevent classified leaks. The process delayed until last week the release of records from the trial's initial days.

In the most dramatic sidebar, U.S. District Judge William Hoeveler chastised the defense for raising racial issues. The exchange came during testimony by University of Wyoming professor Stephen Ropp, who was tracing Panama's history.

Defense attorney Frank Rubino asked Ropp if, following the coup that brought Noriega's mentor Omar Torrijos to power in 1968, the new leaders had brought blacks into the country's power structure for the first time. Prosecutors vehemently objected, and Hoeveler called both sides to the bench.

The judge told Rubino he wouldn't allow him to start "race warfare" in the case.

In another sidebar, the judge pondered the difficulty of taking a deposition from Castro in Cuba, as the defense wants, to counter prosecution claims he mediated a dispute between Noriega and the Medellin drug cartel.

"What if it could be proved he was lying?" asked the judge. "We cannot do anything about it unless we have extradition treaties."

"In all due respect," Rubino responded, "we can invade their countries and seize them, just like we did General Noriega."

The defense also sought to introduce a photo of Bush meeting Noriega in 1983. The government objected, saying the judge had ruled in closed hearings the Bush meeting was irrelevant. Hoeveler agreed.

"You are getting into a prejudicial area for purposes that I might describe as rather obvious, and again I say that, to the extent possible, I am going to keep the politics and certainly current politics out of this," the judge said.

A report about six French dancing girls allegedly given to Noriega as a bonus for agreeing to protect the cartel's operations in Panama also was discussed in more detail in a sidebar than in open court.

The defense had asked for a mistrial after former Noriega aide Luis del Cid referred to "easy women" entering his commander's headquarters.

Lead prosecutor Michael Sullivan said he hadn't intended for del Cid to use that term.

"I thought he might say that they were dancers," he told the judge.

Rubino complained the reference was only "to smear my client in the face of these jurors. Numerous people on this jury are very serious churchgoing people."

Noriega is accused of taking bribes from the Medellin drug cartel. He faces up to 140 years in prison if convicted on all 10 drug and racketeering counts.

Swaggart picks up prostitute

INDIO, Calif. (AP) — A professed prostitute who was in Jimmy Swaggart's car when police stopped him for minor traffic violations claimed the evangelist picked her up for sex.

"He was just another john (customer)," said 31-year-old Rosemary Garcia.

"He asked for sex," she said after Friday's incident. "I mean that's why he stopped me, that's what I do, I'm a prostitute."

Swaggart, 56, was cited for driving on the wrong side of the road, driving an unregistered vehicle and not wearing a seat belt, said Police Chief Jerry Graves. A Municipal Court hearing on the citations was set for Nov. 15.

The Associated Press was unable to reach Swaggart on Saturday. No one answered telephone calls to the home of Clyde Fuller, a board member with Swaggart's ministry. Swaggart was driving Fuller's white Jaguar when he was stopped.

There was no answer Saturday at the offices or homes of Swaggart's lawyers, William D. Treeby and Phillip A. Wittmann. Calls to Jimmy Swaggart Ministries in Baton Rouge, La., were answered by a security guard.

In 1988, Swaggart resigned from the Assemblies of God, the nation's largest Pentacostal denomination, after a fellow preacher released photos of Swaggart with a New Orleans prostitute. In a tearful confession at the time, Swaggart admitted to an unspecified sin.

An Indio Police Department statement said Swaggart was stopped inside a 10-block area known for narcotics dealing and prostitution.

Ms. Garcia said she was sitting by a phone booth next to a truck stop when Swaggart picked her up Friday morning in this town 100 miles east of Los Angeles. She said Swaggart asked her if there were any motels in the area that showed pornographic movies.

Company tries to make up for mix-up

WORCESTER, Vt. (AP) — A postcard company that mistakenly labeled this scenic Vermont town as being in Pennsylvania is making amends by donating the goofed-up cards to Worcester.

The town board plans to dole out the more than 4,000 cards to its 900 residents, and anyone else who might want one.

"The company says they will recall the postcards," said Tom McKone, chairman of the board. "And we'll get all the postcards."

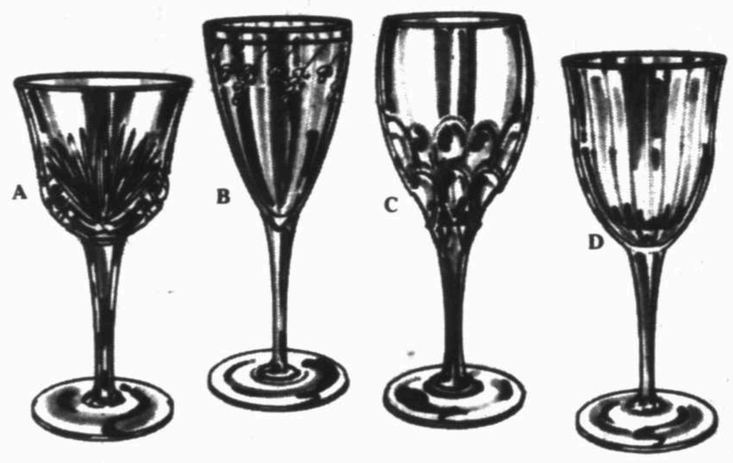

The scene on the card is unmistakably Worcester, with the town hall, elementary school, church, several houses and playing fields. But the company Impact New England put the photograph in its Pennsylvania series.

The company already has sent McKone a 45-pound box of the recalled postcards and more are on the way. And the company apologized to the town, McKone said.

"Virtually our entire town is in that picture," McKone said. "Our 900 residents can cut out the Pennsylvania, or whatever they want."

Riley tones down

NEW YORK (AP) — Pat Riley, the maestro of showtime basketball when coaching the Los Angeles Lakers, is keeping a lower profile in his first year as the New York Knicks coach.

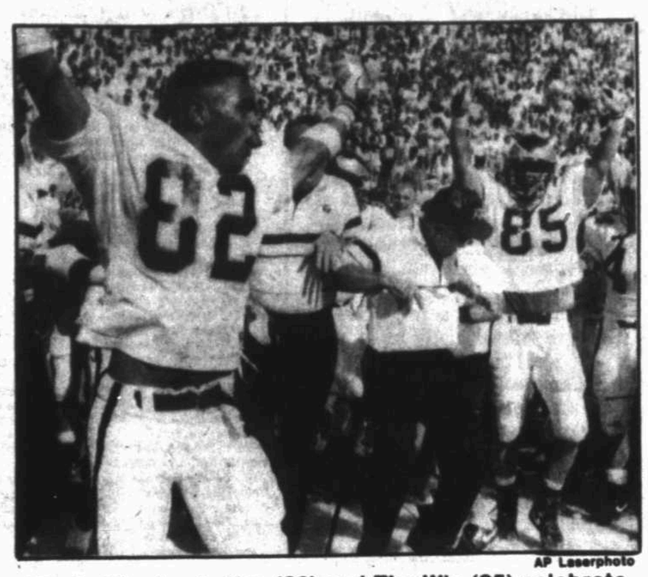

"I've tried to use him in ad campaigns and sell him. But he doesn't want to be sold. He doesn't want this to be Pat Riley and the New York Knicks," team marketing director Pam Harris told Crain's New York Business.

WACO — Rice coach Fred Goldsmith called his team's victory over previously unbeaten and No. 8-ranked Baylor the biggest for the Owls in three decades.

However, Baylor coach Grant Teaff was almost at a loss for words after Saturday's 20-17 upset in a Southwest Conference game.

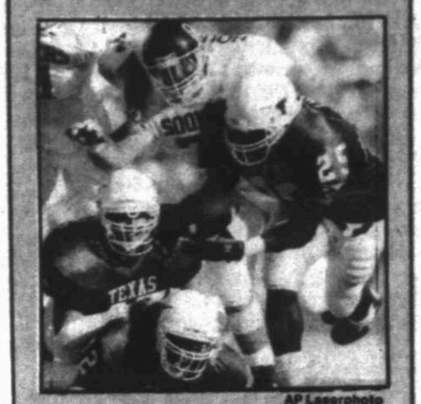

"This is definitely the biggest win in our program since the early 1960s," Goldsmith said. "It was a total win — offensive, defensive, the kicking game."

Rice (3-2 overall, 1-1-SWC) dropped Baylor to 5-1 overall and 1-1 in league play.

Teaff said he was "mystified" at the Bears' Jeff Ireland missing three second-half field goals, allowing Rice kicker Darrell Richardson to win the game with a 33-yard field goal with 2:39 to play. Ireland missed from 43, 45 and 27 yards.

Twins inch toward clinch

■ Minnesota finds itself one victory away from a second trip to the World Series since 1987 after Saturday night's 9-3 busting of Toronto in the SkyDome.

Associated Press

TORONTO — Another Dome dandy by Jack Morris has the Minnesota Twins heading to Homer Hanky heaven and maybe another World Series.

Morris pitched the Twins past the Toronto Blue Jays 9-3 Saturday night to give Minnesota a 3-1 lead in the AL playoffs. A victory Sunday in Game 5 would put the Twins in the Series for the second time in five seasons.

It was another big night for Mike Pagliarulo, who had two hits, drove in two runs and scored twice.

"Jack gave us a great performance," Twins manager Tom Kelly said. "He's been that way all year."

The Twins silenced the sellout crowd of 51,526 in the SkyDome with four runs in the fourth inning, sparked by Kirby Puckett's 426-foot solo homer leading off against loser Todd Stottlemyre. Pagliarulo, a surprising playoff hero, had an RBI single and Dan Gladden capped the inning with a two-run single.

Pagliarulo, who won Game 3 with a stunning pinch homer in the 10th inning, added an RBI double in the Twins' two-run sixth. He also made a diving backhanded stab of Roberto Alomar's low liner to third in the fifth. All this from a guy nobody wanted last winter — except the Twins.

"My third baseman got some key hits," Morris said. "After we got those four runs, I just went after them."

Toronto took a 1-0 lead in the second on Pat Borders' RBI single. Morris then got tough until Borders' run-scoring double in the sixth.

Morris, who survived a cold and a Toronto comeback to win Game 1 in the Metrodome, had a good forkball and used it often to get out of trouble. In the third, Toronto had runners on second and third with one out when Morris struck out Joe Carter.

"My fastball was good enough and I threw some forkballs that got some outs," Morris said.

In eight innings, Morris gave up two runs and nine hits. Steve Bedrosian fin-

Braves one up on Bucs

ATLANTA — Chop! Chop! Braves on top!

With Ted Turner and fiancee Jane Fonda leading the chants and cheers, the Atlanta Braves rewarded their faithful Saturday by swarming all over Pittsburgh and seizing control of the NL playoffs.

With 50,905 frenetic fans swinging tomahawks, Greg Olson, Ron Gant and Sid Bream swung home-run bats as the Braves won a postseason game in Atlanta for the first ever, pounding the Pirates 10-3 for a 2-1 edge.

Not a first-pitch home run by Orlando Merced, not John Smiley's great record in the daytime, not anything could deny the Braves and their boosters.

"This park has been good to us all year," Olson said. "We really didn't hit the ball well in Pittsburgh, and we were hoping we would come back to Atlanta and hit the ball like we've been all year."

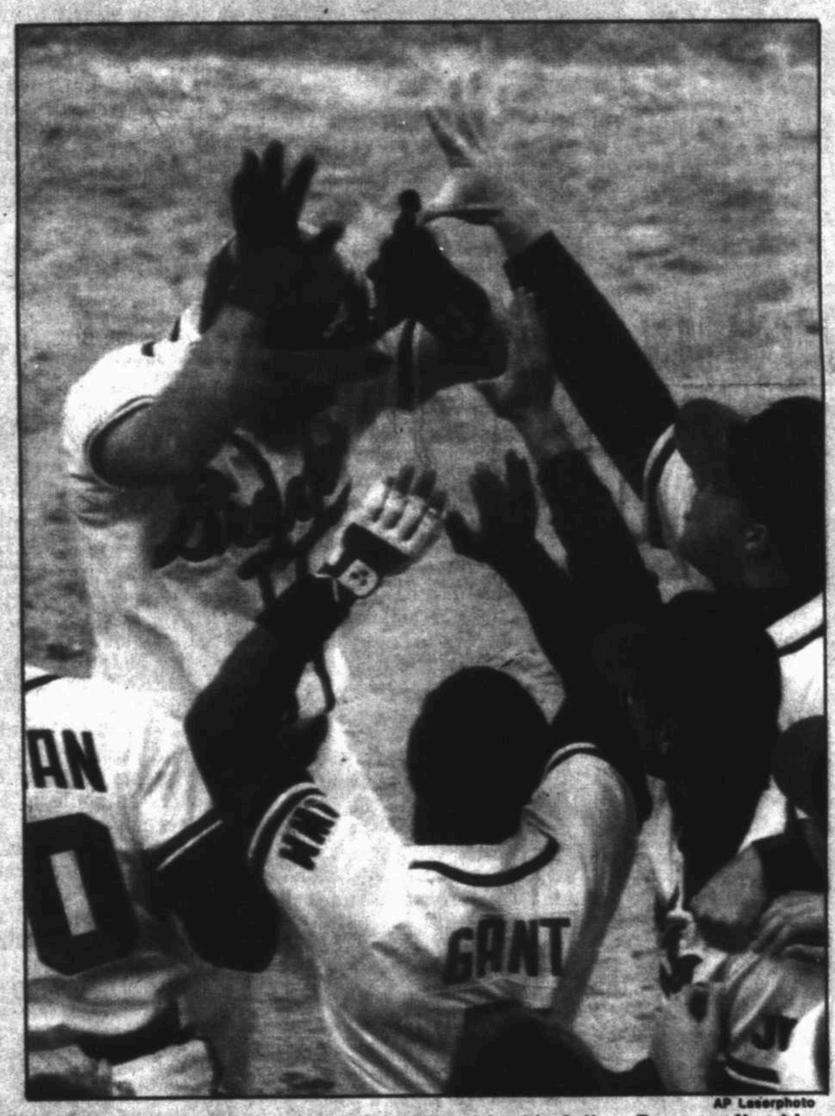

They did. Olson connected to cap a four-run first inning, Gant homered in the seventh and, after Alejandro Pena again rushed to the rescue, Bream hit a three-run shot in the eighth.

By then, the Braves' war chant was louder than ever. It started a half-hour before the game, and if the Pirates did not know they were in trouble then, it didn't take long to find out.

John Smoltz, baseball's best pitcher since the All-Star game, struggled but survived to win his seventh straight decision. The fans, led Turner, had an old-fashioned Southern ball.

"I did notice Ted doing the chop, and it's great for him," Smoltz said. "He's been a laughing joke for so long with this team."

Pena, who preserved Atlanta's 1-0 victory in Game 2 by keeping the tying run at third base, relieved with the bases loaded in the eighth and the score 7-3. He retired Merced on a foul pop on a 3-1 pitch and got Jay Bell, who also homered earlier to look at a called third strike.

AP Laserphoto

Pena, perfect in 13 save chances since the Mets traded him to Atlanta on Aug. 29, ran off the field and so did the rest of the Braves. That got the fans even more excited, and they began their celebration an inning early.

"My newly invented special: the double tomahawk chop," Fonda said, swinging both arms over her head.

Near Turner and Fonda in the owner's box, former president Jimmy Carter and wife Rosalynn also swung away.

MHS completes Lee sweep with spirited three game win

By Bill Price
Staff Writer

It was everything a cross-town rivalry is supposed to be.

Midland High's volleyball team started the second half of district play Saturday by coming from behind after losing the first game to take a 6-15, 15-5, 15-12 win over Midland Lee to remained tied for second place in the District 4-5A standings.

In other 4-5A matches Saturday, district-leading Abilene High kept its loop record perfect in a 15-9, 15-10 victory over Abilene Cooper, while Odessa Permian downed Odessa High 15-9, 8-15, 15-5.

AHS is now 7-0 in league play, while MHS and Permian are tied at 5-2 with Abilene readying to visit the Lady Bulldogs (11-5 overall) Tuesday night.

In Saturday's match, Lee (11-12, 2-5) entered the competition having won three of its last four matches, and the Lady Rebels kept that momentum in the first game by jumping out to a 10-3 lead.

Lee went on to win the game despite a a comeback try by the Lady 'Dawgs that MHS fans surely felt was partially thwarted by a scoring dispute with the scoreboard reading 10-5 Lee. But after the the mild one-point controversy at the scorer's table was over, the score remained 10-5 and MHS seemed to take on a different air.

Senior Mich Neatherlin began a rampage along about that point of the game, and she ended the match with 10 kills, five digs and a block.

It was her spark that seemed to lead the Lady 'Dawgs out of the first-game blues and into the win column. After Neatherlin saw to it the tide was turned, teammates Sally Gibson (six kills, three blocks), Bridgette Thackeray (nine kills, two aces) and setter Lisa Sanchez made sure that MHS remained on top.

Johnson warns Pokes not to take Cincy lightly

Associated Press

■ Cincinnati Bengals at Dallas Cowboys, noon, NBC (Cable Ch. 9).

IRVING — The Dallas Cowboys have reached a new winning plateau where they wonder and worry about being the favorite against lesser teams.

Such is the case Sunday when winless Cincinnati comes to Texas Stadium and coach Jimmy Johnson has warned his Cowboys (4-2), installed as seven-point favorites, about this "most dangerous" team and the pitfalls of the Great Open Date Malady.

Johnson told his team that the Bengals (0-5) demand and deserve respect.

"It scares me they have so much talent," Johnson said. "They have won and know how to win. They were in the playoffs last year."

Cincinnati coach Sam Wyche admits the Cowboys are playing a "dangerous team" on Sunday.

"Nobody thinks we can win on Sunday so we will be a team totally unleashed," Wyche said. "We're going to do something to shake this thing up. Strangers things have happened than for us to win Sunday."

Wyche said the losing streak has been hard on him and his team.

"I don't even go to a self-serve gas station anymore," he said. "I don't want to go in and pay for it and hear about it."

Almost as worrisome to Johnson as the wounded Bengals is the fate of MIAMI — Gino Torretta threw an 80-yard touchdown pass to Horace Copeland and Kevin Williams scored on a school-record 91-yard punt return during a third-quarter outburst as second-ranked Miami beat No. 9 Penn State.

It was Miami's 41st straight victory at the Orange Bowl and 11th in a row overall.

The Hurricanes (5-0) broke a 6-6 halftime tie on Copeland's catch with 6:34 remaining in the third quarter. Two minutes and 19 seconds later, Williams zigzagged his way past a half-dozen defenders and raced into the end zone to put Miami ahead 20-6.

After Penn State (5-2) made it 20-13 on a 2-yard TD pass from Tony Sacca to Terry Smith near the end of the third period, Miami extended its lead to 26-13 on Torretta's 42-yard scoring toss to Lamar Thomas early in the fourth quarter.

No. 10 Florida 35
No. 4 Tennessee 18

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Shane Matthews threw for 245 yards and two touchdowns and 10th-ranked Florida's defense forced five turnovers and blocked a punt to key a victory over No. 4 Tennessee.

Errict Rhett also scored on runs of 3 and 4 yards as the Gators remained unbeaten at home under Steve Spurrier and took control of the race for the Southeastern Conference championship that Tennessee (4-1, 2-1) has won the past two years.

The victory also avenged last season's humiliating 45-3 loss to Tennessee, which finished behind Florida (5-1, 4-0) in the 1990 standings but still wore the crown and represented the league in the Sugar Bowl because the Gators were on NCAA probation and ineligible to win the title.

No. 11 Ohio State 7

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Freshman Chris Richardson kicked a 41-yard field goal with 36 seconds left in the game, lifting No. 20 Illinois to a Big Ten victory over 11th-ranked Ohio State.

The victory improved Illinois' record to 4-1, including a 2-0 mark in the Big Ten. Ohio State fell to 4-1, with a 1-1 conference record.

Illinois led 7-0 on Darren Boyer's 7-yard touchdown run in the first quarter. But the Buckeyes, scoreless for nearly 57 minutes, tied it when quarterback Kent Graham connected with Joey Galloway on a 44-yard touchdown pass play.

Quarterback Jason Verduzco then moved the Illini to the Ohio State 24, but on fourth-and-2, Richardson — who missed from 23 yards earlier — came on for the long kick into the wind.

'Day of Infamy' lives with CAF

The rising sun heralded another beautiful, peaceful morning at Pearl Harbor Naval Base in Hawaii on Dec. 7, 1941 — nearly 50 years ago. But another kind of rising sun was destined to turn it into, as President Franklin Delano Roosevelt proclaimed, "a date that will live in infamy."

That serenity was shattered by the Japanese Zeros that swooped down to destroy the U.S. Pacific Fleet anchored at Pearl Harbor. It was a brutal act by a struggling warrior nation attempting to cripple the giant called America.

It will always be remembered in that context, with the images of burning battleships, shattered aircraft, billowing clouds of black smoke, and dead or dying personnel emblazoned on the minds of Americans. Japanese pilots flew under the cover of darkness to leave death and destruction in the wake of their screaming Zeros.

The Confederate Air Force's Airsho'91 extravaganza, which is being held this weekend at Midland International Airport, should serve to bring back the memories of that horrifying attack which enraged Americans and compelled the United States to enter World War II. It also will serve as a reminder for many others of the horrors of war, of the commitment and the sacrifices, the tears of sadness and of joy, of the intense national pride, and the dawning of a new civilization from the ashes of war.

Airsho'91 is the Confederate Air Force's salute to America's legendary air power in World War II. It also marks the official celebration of the CAF's move to Midland, making the organization's exciting air shows and historic aircraft more readily accessible to Americans from throughout the nation.

Of course, the CAF reenactment of the attack on Pearl Harbor is not the only routine that spectators at Airsho'91 can enjoy. It's merely the headliner of the CAF's two-hour air power demonstration and a favorite of spectators.

The Confederate Air Force is an organization associated with this nation's heritage and all it stands for — the courage, honor, loyalty, patriotism and valor called to the forefront when our nation faces such a challenge.

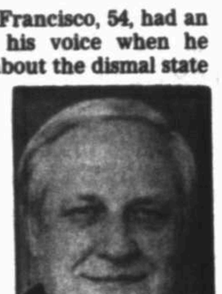

Yet the CAF represents more than mere air shows and great-looking vintage aircraft. It is a moment of history recaptured and on display for the benefit of all Americans. May we never forget the difficult lessons learned at Pearl Harbor, may we never again fail to see an approaching attack. The Confederate Air Force is a visible reminder of the need for vigilance.

Midland is proud to be the home base for the Confederate Air Force and respectfully salutes the men who keep the vintage aircraft flying!

Free trade should match with freedom

WASHINGTON — Francisco, 54, had an urgent tone in his voice when he called to tell us about the dismal state of politics in his hometown. Tomorrow, he said, thousands of people would march on the state capital, a city of roughly 1 million, to protest the inauguration of Fausto Zapata Loredo as governor. Francisco worried that the protest would turn violent.

Anderson

It wasn't Haiti, or any number of countries struggling between despotism and democracy. This was Mexico, our neighbor to the south, with whom the Bush administration is ready to open a free-wheeling trade relationship based on mutual interests.

One of those interests, democracy, may not be as mutual as Americans have been led to believe.

Take the case of Francisco's home state, San Luis Potisi. Zapata, the candidate of Mexico's ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, won the mid-term election in August. But many residents of the state claim the election was stolen. Just as Francisco had predicted, 30,000 protesters showed up at Zapata's inauguration in late September.

Then they held their own inauguration, swearing in the man they believe really won the gubernatorial election, Dr. Salvador Nava Martinez, who had broad support from the major opposition parties of the right and the left. Nava is now on a protest march to Mexico City and Zapata has been barred by protesters from reaching his office, except for one day when he had them forcibly removed.

A standoff between two gubernatorial candidates in the interior of Mexico may seem to be of little consequence in the United States. But a half-baked democracy in Mexico could embarrass George Bush as well as Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari. At a time when both governments are involved in sensitive negotiations over the free-trade agreement, fixed elections in Mexico look very bad.

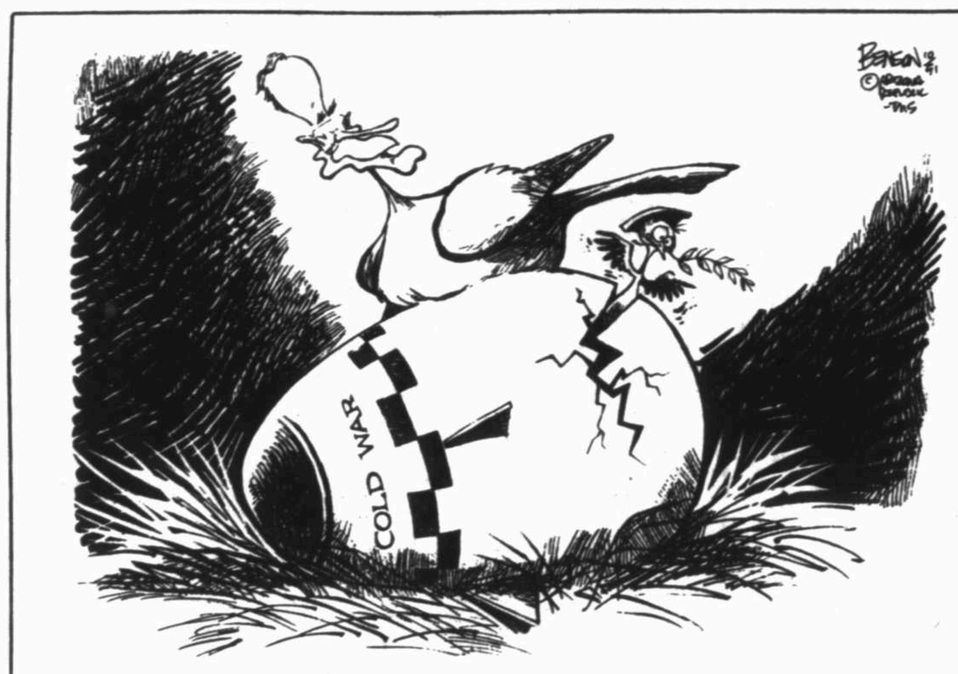

Although Bush has balked at putting any social conditions on the free-trade deal — human rights, environmental safeguards, fair labor standards — at the very least Americans have been led to believe democracy in Mexico is a given.

It is not. Both administrations would rather put the questions to rest, but evidence of voting fraud has grown since the August elections. In a forum on Capitol Hill last month, Andrew Reding of the World Policy Institute, presented the most convincing evidence to date.

Reding observed the Mexican elections in two states at the invitation of Mexico's largest conservative opposition party. Mexico and the ruling party, PRI, did not invite the United Nations or the Organization of American States to monitor the elections, so Reding ended up being one of the few independent observers. He brought back with him skewed official vote tallies that authorities apparently didn't bother to sanitize.

In 43 urban districts in the state of Nuevo Leon, which are traditionally conservative opposition strongholds, large numbers of ballots were declared invalid, resulting in victories for PRI candidates. In 56 rural areas where voter turnout is traditionally low, PRI won all of the votes with nearly 100 percent voter turnout.

Blame always belongs to somebody else

President Bush says the media did it. Not the butler. The butler never does it anymore. Everybody's been on to the butler for years. It must have been 1913 when I first heard a kid coming out of a movie tell a pal who was waiting to get in, "Don't waste your nickel, the butler did it." If not earlier.

Baker

Anyhow the butler hasn't done it in years. This is because hardly anybody has a butler anymore. The people who can afford butlers nowadays are mostly in prison, which makes you wonder why you never hear anybody say, "The butler's boss did it."

So knowing he couldn't pin the rap on the butler, Bush called a news conference the other day and said the media did it. In politics these days and even in high-flown ideological disputation, it is almost always the media that do the dirty deed.

At any given moment half the population is pinning the crime of the given moment on the media. Monitoring organizations, each as relentless as Javert tracking a stolen loaf of bread, are constantly alerting us to media depredations.

Still, it's surprising to find Bush doing the Charlie Chan, Hercule Poirot, Miss Marple number. Few presidents have been jollied so tirelessly by the media. The burbling of journalists in print and television about Bush's mastery of practically everything can make you grind your molars down to stubs if you hold that the journalist's first duty is to keep an eye open for clay feet on the mightiest of gods.

But back to our story: It was a Friday on television. CNN featured Robert Gates, Bush's nominee to run the CIA. Gates was insisting that, if given the job, he would never refuse to tell presidents things those presidents didn't want to hear.

This foolhardy announcement seemed to mark Gates as hopelessly unqualified for the job considering the history of what usually happens to people who tell presidents what they don't want to hear, which is that they don't last long. Anybody remember George Ball?

While Gates on CNN was reminding us of the reckless foolishness of telling presidents what they don't want to hear, Bush interrupted with a news conference to counter Democratic efforts to depict him as indifferent to the shabby state of the country's domestic affairs.

Somebody at the office had obviously made bold to tell him the Democrats were scoring with the line that while he was a crackerjack president of the Whole Darn World, as president of the United States he left a lot to be desired. What's more, the economy wasn't too good either.

JOHN POWERS

Legislators need fair compensation

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Legislature did a decent job of consolidating and streamlining state agencies this year to cut costs and improve efficiency.

When the Legislature next meets in regular session in 1993, it needs to make a decent effort toward genuine reform of itself.

The problems are well known and well documented: Special interest groups and their lobbyists have far too much influence. They all but write the laws, submit their own amendments to legislation and often can veto bills with a phone call.

The Texas governor should have such power.

It takes money to win an election, and special interest groups, trade associations and political action committees make campaign contributions.

Meanwhile, legislators complain — quite correctly — that they are not paid enough for the job they do. It is true in a few cases — and only an excuse in others — that legislators must rely on free lunches and other favors from lobbyists to get by during the five months they are in Austin every other year.

And the pressing need for special sessions has made serving in the Legislature almost an annual event.

"Citizen legislators" have to take time away from their own jobs to serve in the Legislature. They have to rent a place to stay in Austin during the session. Most have to travel between their homes and Austin every weekend.

We pay them $7,200 a year. Many legislators have to make commitee meetings at various times throughout the year, and all are on duty every day to answer constituents' complaints and help when they can.

We give them $30 a day for expenses during the session. Try finding a hotel room and eating three meals in Austin for $30 a day. We also pay lawmakers travel expenses for one trip a week to their hometown — 25.5 cents a mile for driving, 40 cents if they fly in a single-engine plane, 55 cents for a twin-engine and $1 for turbine or jet plane.

Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beamont, in discussing the pay raise issue earlier this year, said: "I really don't care about the pay raise. Just give me a per diem rate that covers my expenses. It shouldn't cost me money to come here and work."

Thanks to a ruling by Attorney General Dan Morales, legislators can get $85 a day for expenses now. But because most lawmakers fear the public reaction, only about half of the 150 House members, including Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, and no Senators collected the extra money.

Bork damage still overwhelms Washington

WASHINGTON — Now, at last, perhaps even Washington, which is usually the last to learn, even about itself, will at least dimly understand the radical damage done to public life by the Bork confirmation scandal. When that campaign turned political differences into occasions for moral assaults, and was crowned with success, the downward ratchet of civility clicked many times.

Will

Watching the stomach-turning spectacle of the ruining of Clarence Thomas, Americans far from this sick city must be wondering "How did it come to this?" Well.

It came to this when the anti-Bork mob obtained from a Washington movie-rental firm records of Bork's rentals, hoping to find embarrassing stuff and found instead, to their bitter disappointment, that Bork's tastes run to Fred Astaire.

It came to this when Planned Parenthood and other liberal lobbies ran anti-Bork ads containing mendacities so gross that, had they concerned groceries, no newspaper or broadcaster would have used them.

It came to this when Sen. Howell Heflin (D-Ala.), who, ludicrously, has chaired the whitewashing Ethics Committee (does the name Alan Cranston ring a bell?), lied, saying he voted against Bork because "the history of his life and his present lifestyle indicated a fondness for the unusual, the unconventional and the strange." Of course Heflin did not — he could not — provide a shred of evidence for this "fondness."

(If the smearing Heflin dislikes being called a liar, let me paraphrase for him Adlai Stevenson: If Heflin will quit telling lies about good people, I will quit telling the truth about him. The fact that he is regarded as an ethicist says all that needs to be said about today's Senate in which Ted Kennedy can wax indignant about disrespectful treatment of women and not be laughed out of the chamber.)

It came to this when Sen. John Warner (R-Va.) said he voted against Bork because he did not "get satisfactory answers" to questions he put to Bork in private. (Having waited three months, he saw Bork three hours before the vote and talked vacuously for 10 minutes.)

It came to this when the smearing of John Tower was done by leaking confidential reports accusing Tower of, among other things, drunkenness and sexual harassment at times and places when Tower was not present.

Trashing the truth is now so natural, so unremarked in Washington that there were only worldly smirks and shrugs when George Bush began the Thomas saga by saying two things he and everyone else knows are untrue — that Thomas is the person best qualified for the Supreme Court, and that his race was irrelevant to his selection. Then, continuing an execrable practice of the Reagan administration, Bush put Thomas into the hands of private-sector lobbyists.

They are "experts" on everything except anything that should matter, such as ideas, constitutional law — stuff like that. These expediters, who sell to clients their access to the White House and Congress, do not want to fight for anything because they do not want to fight with anyone wielding power. After all, next month these lobbyists will be lobbying senators about grazing fees or textile imports or whatever else they are by then being paid to believe in.

Soon these clever philistines had Thomas before the Judiciary Committee, cringing and groveling and — to his credit — suffering self-loathing as he said, under oath, such things as: He has never even discussed the Supreme Court's 1973 abortion ruling.

Having been coached into apparent inanity or actual dishonesty, Thomas made himself vulnerable to the kind of attack under which he now reels. Asking to be judged by his background rather than his convictions — by Pin Point, Ga., rather than his constitutional thinking — he made the vague question of "character" everything, which made anything relevant, and made him comprehensively vulnerable.

This dismal outcome was foreordained when Bush chose to construe the Bork episode the way most career Washingtonians did — as proof that ideas are trouble, and certainly not the sort of thing "realists" fight for. So Bush sent before the Judiciary Committee an empty suit named Souter. (If what were at stake were the Supreme Court of Kuwait, Bush might fight.)

Perhaps we are in a period when things must get squalid before they can get decent. Perhaps Americans shall now achieve the critical mass of disgust. Perhaps there will be a cleansing backlash, complete with term limits, against incumbents. It is simply not necessary — we can choose otherwise — for the Judiciary Committee to be the permanent plaything of Joe Biden, who has presided, grinning, over the degradation of the confirmation process.

Let us not, yet, question Anita Hill's sincerity in making her charges, or question the accuracy of them, as memory serves her, 10 years after the alleged events. But let us note how late they have leaked into what has become of Biden's process.

Time will, perhaps, tell the truth, and the importance, of the charges. But nothing can still the suspicion that even if the truth does matter for a moment, that moment will be a fleeting aberration in a city becoming increasingly carnivorous as it becomes decreasingly serious about governance.

Ford Chapman's story can now finally be told

A word about Ford Chapman. It was mid-January of 1968. A number of Midland's key republicans, including Ford and Gerry Chapman and Roseann and me, were preparing to attend Nixon's first Inauguration and Inaugural Ball.

At that time I was county chairman. Through the efforts of a tremendous organization, the republicans in Midland had been successful within a county that had traditionally been democratically controlled. Two of the leaders who had made that success possible were women. For many months they had labored day and night in organizing, phoning, mailing and in all the other activities that drive a political campaign.

They had received invitations to the Inaugural festivities, but did not plan to go because of the expense involved. Through inquiry Ford learned of this and phoned me to get together. At our meeting he handed me a cashier's check for $1,000 and asked me to see that they got the chance to go. Typically of Ford, he swore me to secrecy as to the source of the money because he did not want credit for it — he just wanted them to go and have a good time. He said they deserved it, and I agreed they certainly did.

When I presented them with the money they were ecstatic! That Inauguration was an experience of a lifetime and those girls thoroughly enjoyed it. They will never forget it.

Ford, bless you, I can tell it now!

Texas state lottery is backed by evil motive

My grandmother taught me that gambling was wrong and that people who promote gambling had an evil motive in mind.

Old Uncle Manning, who was addicted to the game of chance, told me that winners never gamble and gamblers never win.

Cousin 'Louie who did live in Chicago but came to Texas to find a job after the last auto layoff, says any state that depends on a lottery to fund their state business is dependable on a bunch of "losers" for their cash flow.

Now the decision for a lottery-vote for me is very clear:

Our state leaders must have an evil motive if they want to promote gambling as a way to raise state revenue, and since Texas is a state full of winners the lottery will fail to pay its own way.

Who wants a state run by a bunch of losers anyway?

Did Bush pay his own way to awards event?

As much as I enjoy country music and would love to attend the country music awards, it was great to see President George Bush and Mrs. Bush there.

Who pays for the Bushes to attend these events? If taxpayers pay for this, how much did this cost with the security and all?

In our country, you're innocent before guilty

I have recently become compelled to transfer certain information to the National Transportation Safety Board (NTSB). Because this particular agency failed to leave a contact number in their press release regarding Clayton Williams' company plane's crash in February 1990, I guess I have to try to reach them through the media, which is how they reached me.

The NTSB recently criticized Ken Mardis, the pilot for not first receiving a weather report before departing Midland for Dallas. The NTSB in their report proclaimed that if the Mitsubishi plane were not equipped with de-icing equipment the pilot should not have left unless being first apprised of the weather conditions. Then their report acknowledged that the plane was in fact equipped, but the status was unknown because the plane was burned so badly that the operating status of the de-icing equipment was undeterminable.

Being a neighbor of Ken Mardis and his lovely family, I have been deeply disturbed by this report. The NTSB had no basis for their conclusion and has not taken into account the character of this person.

The fact of the matter is, Ken did not even ride his motorcycle without checking it over an hour before taking his dog for a ride around the block. Furthermore he would not drive to the airport before checking his car, nor would he walk out the door without proper attire for the weather.

These are petty things, but they were important to him. He never failed at being careful at these endeavors. Not once, never. One can now see why he wouldn't take off in a plane without checking all of its instruments, including de-icing equipment. My guess is this equipment worked on the ground but did not perform in the air. Come on people, this is supposed to be a country where you are innocent before proven guilty, plus you are supposed to be in the service business, not district attorneys.

The NTSB would be better served by investigating why the MU-2 is the deadliest small commercial aircraft in the sky and ban the sale of these so-called planes in the meanwhile.

7-Eleven workers adhere to strict company policy

The selling of alcoholic beverages to minors is a concern that many parents of teenagers face today. So many of us often ask the question, "How do minors buy alcohol in the first place?" I would like to take this opportunity to commend the Southland Corporation for developing a strict company policy addressing this problem, and in particular Marcia Brant, an employee of the 7-Eleven at 2300 N. Garfield, for going over and beyond the "call of duty" to support this company policy.

Last weekend I stopped at 7-Eleven late at night to purchase a few items. There was a young man ahead of me in line buying a twelve-pack of beer. Ms. Brant asked for his identification showing him to be of legal age to buy alcohol. I was then amazed when Ms. Brant, noticing someone was in the car with him, replied that she would also need to see his companion's identification as well. The young man walked out the door and promptly drove away. Totally amazed, I questioned if she did this all the time. She responded "Yes, that is the company policy." I say, "Great job! Hurray to 7-Eleven and to Ms. Marcia Brant for caring enough to prevent the comsumption of alcohol by a minor!"

At the time when alcohol abuse is running rampant among our teenagers, it is truly refreshing to see someone going that extra step to help address and strive to eliminate this problem.

Congratulations to 7-Eleven and to their dedicated employees for a job well done, perhaps more businesses might go that extra mile in assuring that if Midland's teens are unable to purchase alcohol, Mildand's teens will be unable to consume alcohol. My hat's off to 7-Eleven, they certainly have my business.

READERS' VIEWS on: Expansion of Midland International Airport

City leaders' thought process is overtaxed

I have noticed in recent weeks that the mayor and the airlines serving Midland can't seem to agree on the proper terminology to be used for the proposed $3 per person airport tax. The mayor calls it a "use tax," the airlines a "head tax," when in fact what it is is a Taj Mahal tax.

The Taj Mahal tax is proposed to fund the spending of over $30 million to build a new terminal building at Midland International Airport, which in my opinion is outrageous. The airlines do not want this and I don't believe the majority of Midlanders want this. The only proponents of this issue seem to be our city fathers.

There is counter space and back office space in our current terminal building that has never been used since the last terminal expansion.

Gate 3 at our terminal is not currently in use and to my knowledge no other air carriers that would require jetway use are contemplating service to Midland.

Passenger boardings are down and no increases are anticipated by our two local air carriers.

The airlines have been assured by the City of Midland that the present terminal building will be totally re-carpeted in interim even though they want to demolish the structure.

There are improvements needed at the terminal, but the current plan proposed is ludicrous. Just ask our neighbors in Lubbock and Abilene what airport terminal overexpansion has done to their taxing districts.

Obviously the thought process of our city fathers has been overtaxed (no pun) recently. Maybe they should use some of their airline bonus miles earned at taxpayer expense and get away for a few days. It seems they need the rest.

Airport plan is costly, ill advised boondoggle

The most costly, ill advised, and unnecessary boondoggle in the history of Midland is presently being considered by our city council. It is unbelievable that these city officials are going ahead with plans to construct a new $30,800,000 terminal building and parking lot at the Midland International Airport during this time of skyrocketing taxes, economic recession throughout the Permian Basin, record federal government deficits, chaos throughout the world, and decreasing utilization of the present terminal building and parking facilities.

We don't really need a new terminal building enough to warrant additional obligation of the overburdened taxpayers of Midland. The present terminal has proved perfectly adequate for years, including times when there were considerably more passenger boardings than now. At this time there are only two airlines using the terminal, jetway 3 has not been used for some time, numerous ticket counters, offices, and other facilities are empty and unused. Both airlines oppose construction of a new terminal, feeling that it is not necessary.

We are told that the new terminal will be paid for by imposing a user fee of $3 for each boarding passenger, starting in 1992 and continuing for 20 years. Simple arithmetic shows that at the current boarding rate this fee will not pay for the principle, interest, bonding fees, cost overruns, and other expenses that always seem to suddenly come up in a government construction project. Where will the money come from to make up this shortfall?

If one wants to see examples of airport terminal folly, he needs to look no further than Abilene or Lubbock. Abilene has built a magnificent terminal which sits virtually empty as only commuter aircraft use the facility, and Lubbock's fine terminal has four jetways which are unused and therefore are not being paid for by the airlines. Frankly, I suspect that both of these fine cities were taken in by out-of-town airport planning experts or perhaps even by overzealous airport administrative staffs. These cities were led down the primrose pathway and now find themselves paying for unneccessary monumental edifices of bureaucratic bungling. Please don't let it happen here too!

Airlines should be given consideration

This letter is to join those opposing expansion of Midland International Airport. Expand for what, shrinking work and traveling force in the city? The FDIC, one of the largest users of air transportation, is virtually closed up in Midland, while others are curtailing theirs.

If we keep adding fees upon the two remaining airlines we have, what is to keep them from pulling out? Let's give their comments some consideration, instead of the foolish "We are going ahead regardless of what they think," like damn the torpedos, full speed ahead.

And the same applies to hiring the consultant that recommended raising parking fees. Wouldn't Premier Parking just love that? Isn't the city manager that accepted the airport parking recommendation the same one that hired the consultant from Ft. Worth to clean up the tar pit and the leaking fuel tanks in the city? That ended up costing untold thousands of dollars; and the job was never finished, and the consulting firm fired. What great decision making.

Heaven help us when Fred Poe retires if the apparent next in lines moves up. Hopefully the council will have enough sense not to let that happen, considering his record.

Taxpayers, citizens deserve larger room

Having attended the commissioners court's "town meeting" I for one am a disillusioned citizen and taxpayer. Standing outside in the hall were approximately 100 concerned citizens hoping to hear what was going on inside the commissioners courtroom, a room large enough to accommodate a mere 15 to 20 people at a meeting open to the public.

In the room was one judge and a group of commissioners apparently unconcerned about the citizens in the hall since there was a larger courtroom across the hall. This was a meeting that was important to the concerned citizens about to have their taxes increased, important because their trusted sheriff's department was about to be crippled by a small group of elected officials.

The "town meeting" allowed the public to speak, but why no one knows. The judge and the commissioners didn't listen to the people that spoke against their proposals to control the sheriff's operations; they didn't listen to the people that spoke against tax increases. County Judge Charles Seltzer said "we will proceed as planned." With all due respect to the judge and commisssioners, aren't you supposed to be representing the people? Dictators — we don't need any.

President Bush takes flak for recent domestic plague

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — The slings and arrows of outrageous fortune have plagued President Bush on domestic problems recently.

The Senate's incredibly inept handling of the sexual harassment allegations against Judge Clarence Thomas by his former assistant, law professor Anita Hill, caused the president to lose temporarily Senate confirmation of the man he had been urged by Republican rightists to support for associate justice of the Supreme Court.

Hearst

The ineptness led to the Senate Judiciary Committee's meeting Friday to hear the testimony of both Judge Thomas and Professor Hill. It turned out to be one of the most dramatic scenes witnessed in the history of Congress.

It quickly became a political battle royal between Democratic Committee Chairman Sen. Joseph R. Biden Jr. of Delaware and Sen. Orrin G. Hatch of Utah, the Republican hatchet man who wanted to assure Judge Thomas's confirmation for the Supreme Court by proving Hill a liar.

Reportedly at White House insistence, the judge was the first to testify. He reiterated, at times with emotional fervor, his flat denial that he had ever sexually harassed his former assistant.

In a much calmer, self-controlled manner, Hill listed numerous times when, she claimed, Judge Thomas had tried to date her and how he sought to arouse her sexually by describing bestial acts involving women.

Both spoke with such apparent sincerity that it was difficult to believe one was lying. If it was the judge, it was a great Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde theatrical performance. If Hill was lying, she played Ethel Barrymore at her best.

If the hearings fail to produce any corroboration of Hill's charges, Thomas will have cleared his name and he will become confirmed as associate justice by next Tuesday evening. That could be a somewhat tarnished victory for the president because the Senate Judiciary Committee's mishandling of the matter has made sexual harassment of women a fiery national issue. Many women are likely to remain dubious about the judge's character.

If Thomas had sought the chance to clear his name when it became apparent there would be an outpouring of rage by women, or if the Senate Judiciary Committee had promptly decided it was in the interest of congressional integrity to extend the hearings another week, the president could have been spared the anger and alienation of women's groups and lawmakers.

If Thomas succeeds in clearing his name, I am confident he will, as a justice of the Supreme Court, justify President Bush's trust in him.

Fate has also been dealing the president unlucky cards on the economy. The gross national product (GNP) grew 0.4 percent in the second quarter following two consecutive quarters of decline that pushed the unemployment rate up to 7 percent. The second quarter improvement led Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan to proclaim the recession was over. He said we were "well on the path" to "a solid economic recovery." This encouraged the president to say on Sept. 17 he did not think "that nationally we're in a recession." A week later he tempered his optimism by telling a news conference that while he had faith the economy is recovering, "all is not well." The Washington Post quoted his aides as saying he was having "a case of jitters" over the economic recovery that has been slower in coming and far more anemic than Bush had anticipated.

Arrows have also been hurled at Robert Gates, the president's nominee for director of central intelligence, not only by Democratic political partisans but by high-level Central Intelligence Agency associates of Gates when he was deputy director of the agency under the late William J. Casey.

Gates has been accused of corrupting the intelligence process at the CIA by tailoring analysis of covert actions in Iran, Nicaragua, Afghanistan and the attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II in 1981. He has also been accused of knowing more than he admits about the diversion to Nicaraguan contra freedom fighters of profits from the secret sale of arms to Iran in violation of U.S. law.

However, other high-ranking CIA associates of Gates staunchly defended his integrity and efficiency. He was brought to the White House in 1989 to serve as deputy national security adviser to President Bush.

The president has taken a lot of political flak over his selection of Gates as new CIA director. The Senate Select Committee on Intelligence will vote on his confirmation next Friday, and my guess is he will be confirmed.

Realizing they cannot hope to overcome the high odds against winning next year's presidential elections by criticizing President Bush's brilliant leadership in world affairs, the Democrats are striving to make domestic problems the major issue in the campaign.

When the going gets tougher for the president, I hope, and believe, the American people will remember that George Bush, with the cooperation that his persuasion secured from Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, has probably saved our country and the world from future danger of an all-out nuclear war that could destroy civilization.

MHS: Neatherlin's play helps 'Dogs avoid loss to Lady Rebs

(From 1B)

"Of course there are always team leaders, and I like to think that everybody on this team is a leader. But a lot of times we need something to spark us and that's what I tried to do," Neatherlin said.

Neatherlin, a two-year letter winner, also said she was pumped up by the thought of suffering another district loss.

"We usually lose one game that puts us out of the playoffs. We weren't going to let that happen again. We're real excited and ready for Abilene High Tuesday," she said.

In Game 2, the teams were within a point up to a 5-4 MHS lead, then the Bulldogs took off on a 10-1 scoring spree that tied the match at a game apiece and forced the third game.

The only way to describe the third frame is "classic," as the teams traded sideouts and points only after multiple volleys. The game was tied six times, the latest of which was at 9-9, and the teams recorded a total of 25 sideouts.

Then the Lady 'Dawgs began pulling away as a line violation, a net return from Lee and two Thackeray kills put MHS ahead 13-9. The next Bulldog point came on a blocked return by Gibson and Stephanie Saxon to make any future Bulldog serve for match point. But the Lady Rebs had one surge left in them.

Tanisha Mills, who led Lee with eight kills, slammed a defensive shot home that returned the serve to Lee, then Courtney McHugh drove two unreturnable serves across the net. Tekeira Strambler smacked her sixth kill of the match on the next point, and all of a sudden Lee was behind by just two, 14-12.

Finally, Thackeray's last spike of the match gave MHS the final possession it needed, as the Rebs called a time out with Saxon at the service stripe.

Lee coach Anita Corder called the time out to make Saxon think about her serve, but after the teams returned to the floor the junior came through with an ace to win the match.

"I had to pull Stephanie up off the junior varsity because we lost a couple of players to grades, and when they called the time out I looked at her and she had an 'oh no' look on her face," said Sonja Pittman, MHS coach. "We've been working on her serve, and I just told her to pick a spot and hit it there.

"I'm real proud of all the girls. We kind of had to juggle the lineup and had to come from behind to win. We had to all perform, but we did it."

For Corder, the silver lining to the loss was the way the Lady Rebs played, as Kim Blackburn, Tiffany Grafa and Carrie Zamora all had a good match.

"It was three games, a crowd pleaser. It was great volleyball and I told our kids they had nothing to be ashamed of. Midland High's a great team. They're just a little more polished than we are," she said.

UIL to re-evalutate expansion

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The University Interscholastic League will re-evaluate its proposal to expand the Class 5A championship playoffs in team sports, after Texas' education commissioner opposed the plan.

Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno had recommended that the State Board of Education reject the proposal, which was on the agenda for Saturday's board meeting. But the UIL pulled down the plan before the board acted.

Meno said he hoped the matter could be resolved by changing the proposal to ensure that it would not increase spending or take away from class time.

Under the proposal, the three teams with the best record in each 5A district would advance to the playoffs in football, baseball, boys' and girls' basketball, boys' and girls' soccer, and volleyball.

The UIL already has tried sending three teams to the playoffs in 5A football, with two championships determined among so-called large and small schools in the division. That two-year experiment began in 1990.

Without further board approval, only two teams would advance in the playoffs in 1992-93, according to the UIL.

"In no way do I want to damage interscholastic athletics. I participated myself all through middle school, high school and college," said Meno, who came from New York to take over the commissioner's post in July.

Blocked FG leads to 31-29 UTEP loss

Associated Press

PROVO, Utah — Brigham Young linebacker Scott Giles blocked Jason Gillespie's 45-yard field goal attempt with 20 seconds left to salvage a 31-29 Cougar victory over Texas-El Paso Saturday afternoon.

Giles heroics kept untainted a 378-yard passing day by Ty Detmer, BYU's 1990 Heisman-winning quarterback. Detmer threw three touchdown passes on the day.

BYU, which improved to 3-3 overall and 2-0 in Western Athletic Conference play, had led 31-23 going into the final quarter. But UTEP (3-3-1, 1-2-1) took advantage of two turnovers in the final four minutes.

O.T. Thomas returned his interception of a Ty Detmer pass 28 yards to give UTEP the ball on BYU's 34 with 4:05 left in the game.

Texas Colleges

Abilene Christian 24
Central Oklahoma 7

ABILENE — Running back Ethan Sheffield scored two touchdowns as Abilene Christian broke a 5-game losing streak with a Lone Star Conference victory over Central (Okla.) State.

Sheffield caught a 9-yard touchdown pass from Mike Fuller in the first quarter and added a 2-yard rushing TD in the third.

It marked the first victory for first-year coach Ronnie Peacock, whose Wildcats improved to 1-1 in conference. Central State fell to 1-4 and 0-2.

Glen Braxton scored for the Bronchos on a 1-yard run in the third quarter to tie the game at 7-all.

But Sheffield's 2-yarder put Abilene Christian back on top, and in the fourth quarter, Barry Reese kicked a 23-yard field goal, and Julian Richard returned an interception 23 yards for a touchdown.

Hardin-Simmons 17
McMurry 6

ABILENE — Tom Enloe threw a pair of touchdown passes to Clint Stewart as Hardin-Simmons beat McMurry.

Hardin-Simmons also had a potent ground offense with Matt Carroll rushing for 115 yards.

McMurry's only score came on a 4-yard run by Anthony Robinson with 12:43 left in the fourth quarter.

Nicholls St. 19

HUNTSVILLE — Broderick Davis and Curtis Thomas each rushed for more than 100 yards as Sam Houston State remained unbeaten with a victory over Nicholls State.

Davis scored two second-half touchdowns, on runs of 7 and 39 yards, for the Bearkats (4-0-1) in their Southland Conference Opener. He carried 13 times for 135 yards.

His seven-yard run put Sam Houston on top 14-13.

Thomas' 6-yard run made it 7-0 in the first period. He gained 119 yards on 26 carries, his eighth career 100-yard gain, tying a school record held by Tony January in 1978-82.

Nicholls State fell to 2-4 and 1-3 despite D.C. Robinson's 108 yards rushing on seven carries, including a 79-yard scoring run in the first quarter.

Skip Shelton kicked a school-record 53-yard field goal for Nicholls State as time expired in the first half.

Wilmington College 14

WILMINGTON, Ohio — Robert Simpson ran for 70 yards and two touchdowns as Tarleton State crushed winless Wilmington College.

Simpson scored on two short runs in the first period as Tarleton State jumped out to a 21-0 lead and Wilmington never recovered.

Tarleton, which led 31-7 at halftime, improved to 2-4. Division III Wilmington fell to 0-5.

Austin College 37
Howard Payne 32

SHERMAN — Tailback Jay Silva ran for 132 yards and three touchdowns as Austin College edged Howard Payne.

Silva's 2-yard dive into the end zone early in the fourth quarter gave the Kangaroos a 37-25 lead. He also scored on runs of 3 and 1 yard.

Austin College improved to 3-3 and 1-1 in the Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association. Howard Payne fell to 3-3 and 1-2.

Scott Lichner's 32-yard scoring strike to Royal Kyle with 6:05 left brought Howard Payne to within a touchdown.

ENMU 13
Angelo State 12

PORTALES, N.M. — Jodie Peterson's 45-yard field goal with 2:03 remaining lifted Eastern New Mexico over Angelo State.

Early in the fourth quarter, Angelo State (2-3, 0-1) took a 12-10 lead when Carl Jacobs kicked a 32-yard field goal. Eastern New Mexico (4-2, 2-0), winning its third straight, scored 10 points in the second quarter to lead 10-3 at halftime.

Eastern's Landrum Hale led all rushers with 153 yards on 29 carries and Todd Lacey completed 16 of 26 passes for 188 yards with one touchdown and one interception.

Angelo State pulled within a point in the third period on a 10-yard scoring pass from Danny Keeton to Darron Johnson. But the conversion kick was wide right, giving the Greyhounds a 10-9 advantage until Jacobs hit his 32-yard attempt.

Midwestern State 38
Sul Ross State 10

ALPINE — Quinton Snell caught two touchdown passes and Midwestern State University took advantage of seven Sul Ross turnovers.

The Indians, ranked 23rd in NAIA Division II, improved to 4-2 for the season and 2-0 in Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association play. It's the first time in 40 years that Midwestern has won three straight games. Sul Ross fell to 0-6 and 0-2.

The Indians picked off four passes and recovered three fumbles.

Red River trophy remains in Texas

Associated Press

DALLAS — At least this time it wasn't Peter Gardere's fault.

The Texas Longhorns upset Oklahoma for the third consecutive year Saturday on a 30-yard return with a fumble recovery by Bubba Jacques. The last two years, Gardere has beaten the Sooners with last-minute touchdown passes.

The Texas defense survived three missed field goal attempts before striking on Jacques' fumble recovery, conquering the previously unbeaten Sooners 10-7 in their annual Red River showdown.

Texas tackle James Patton, a terror all day in the Sooners backfield, knocked the ball out of the grasp of fullback Mike McKinley and Jacques, a senior who had never made a touchdown, scooped it up and scored untouched with 13:30 to play.

"The defense had to make something happen because our offense was having trouble," Jacques said. "I kept telling our line to tackle the ball, and it finally happened.

"I made a grab for it, missed it, then scooped it up and was all by myself. It was like winning the national title, beating them three years in a row. We showed the world what we're made of. Our defense is awesome."

The Sooners, of the Big Eight Conference, dropped to 4-1 while the Longhorns, of the Southwest Conference, leveled their record at 2-2.

The Patton-led Longhorns unleashed a furious pass rush on Oklahoma quarterback Cale Gundy, who completed only 5 of 17 passes for 69 yards and was sacked six times. Gundy had set Oklahoma passing records for completions and attempts going into the game.

"They missed three field goals and that was crucial," Patton said. "It took a lot out of them. We were lucky just to be behind 7-3 at the half. But we didn't take any chances in the second half. We put them back on their heels."

Texas coach David McWilliams said he wasn't sure at first if Jacques' touchdown would count. The ball has to be fumbled beyond the line of scrimmage.

"I was worried if you could advance a ball like that, but then I saw where the official marked the ball and I knew it was a live ball," McWilliams said. "After that, they had to throw to catch up and we knew it. It was a typical OU game except we finished the game with defense instead of making the big offensive play."

Patton had three sacks and tipped two pass attempts as Gundy ran for his life.

"We were just playing on emotion out there in the fourth quarter it was so hot," Patton said. "But our defense made play after play when it counted."

Oklahoma's Scott Blanton missed three field goals in the first half but the six-point favorite Sooners still led 7-3 on Gundy's 24-yard touchdown pass to Ted Long.

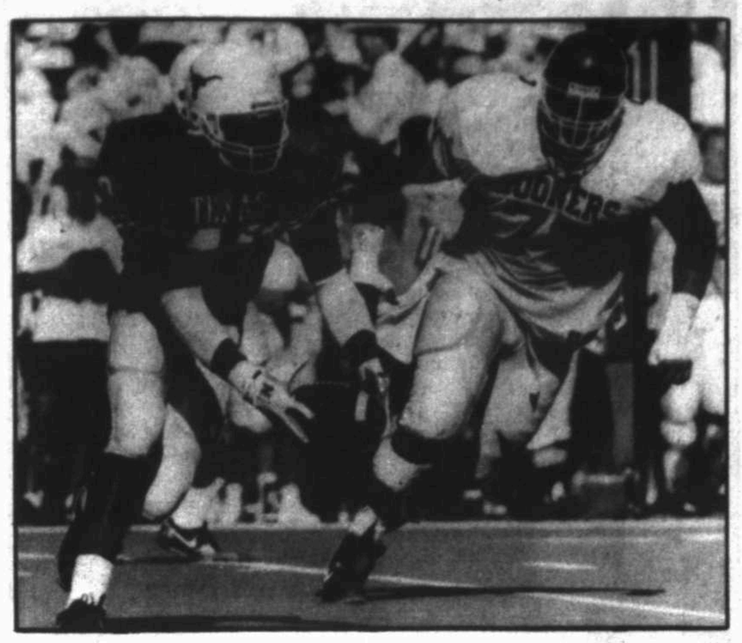

"The missed field goals hurt," Oklahoma coach Gary Gibbs said. "We didn't take advantage of our opportunities. We had our chances. It was a shame to lose the game when our defense played like it did."

Blanton, a freshman, said he might have been too excited.

"I think I got caught up in the emotion of the game," he said. "I just didn't kick to my ability. I tried to ignore the heckling and everything but I just didn't get the job done."

The Sooners, behind linebacker Joe Bowden, dominated the Longhorns in the first 30 minutes of the clear, 93-degree day but Blanton missed from 32, 37, and 47 yards to help keep Texas in the game.

"This game was like the two before it and once again it didn't go our way," Bowden said. "I'm trying to figure out what else do we have to do to win. We play hard, execute and do what the coaches tell us"

Baylor rolled up 531 yards — 187 yards more than Rice — only to lose.

"I was frustrated. Our coaches were beside themselves," Teaff said.

Baylor drove deep into Rice territory twice in the first half without scoring. John Henry lost a fumble at the Owls 26, and Robert Strait fumbled at the 23.

Ironically, Ireland had kicked a career-best 58-yard field goal as the half ended, narrowing Rice's lead to 17-10 and appearing to give the Bears the momentum.

"We ain't no joke," Rice wide receiver Eric Henley said. "Baylor took us lightly today. ... People have to take us seriously or we're going to win."

Henry ripped off a 64-yard scoring run only 3:02 into the third quarter, tying the game 17-17 and sending the Baylor home crowd of 37,987 into a frenzy.

Baylor, 10th in the nation in total offense, drove against one of the smallest lines in major college football to the Rice 18, 22 and 9, but each drive ended in missed field goals by Ireland.

After the last wide kick, freshman sub quarterback Josh LaRocca guided Rice from its 20 to the Baylor 13, and Richardson kicked the winning goal against a 10 mph wind.

After the kickoff, Baylor moved to its 41 but Strait was stopped for no gain on fourth-and-one by defensive end Shawn Alberding.

Rice led at halftime 17-10 behind the running of Trevor Cobb, the nation's leading rusher, as well as key pass receptions by Greg Willig and a defense that jumped on two Baylor fumbles.

Cobb scored on a 12-yard run with 3:33 left in the first quarter and finished the half with 132 yards in 18 carries. He had 171 yards rushing for the game, about eight yards short of his average.

Arkansas' Tracy Calwell (9) catches the first Razorback touchdown pass against Houston Saturday.

Texas Tech 38, SMU 14

DALLAS — Robert Hall threw two touchdowns and rushed for another as Texas Tech snapped a four-game losing streak by routing Southern Methodist.

Tech (2-4 overall, 1-2 in the Southwest Conference) attacked SMU's defense equally on the ground and through the air for 398 total yards.

The Red Raiders defense, which bent but would not break, held SMU (1-4, 0-3) to minus-15 yards on the ground in the first quarter and finished with five sacks.

Hall, playing in relief of starting quarterback Jamie Gill, connected on four of his first five passes for 57 yards, including and a 14-yard touchdown to Anthony Stinnett.

Hall also hit Byron Hooper with a 14-yard touchdown toss early in the fourth quarter to put Tech up 28-0. Hall finished 12-of-25 for 152 yards with one interception.

When Hall wasn't passing or handing off to a slew of running backs, he scrambled for 22 yards, including a 5-yard touchdown run and several key first downs.

Byron Morris had 93 yards to lead eight Tech running backs who combined for 240 yards on the ground.

SMU, winless in 20 consecutive conference games, snapped the nation's longest losing streak at 13 games last Saturday in a 31-17 victory over Tulane.

But the Mustangs failed to retain the fire against Tech, botching scoring opportunities with three turnovers. Two interceptions came inside the Red Raiders' 20-yard line.

Both of the Mustangs touchdowns came late in the fourth quarter. Rongea Hill scored on a 1-yard run, but SMU's attempt at a two-point conversion failed.

SMU's final score came on a 4-yard touchdown pass from Todd Ritz to Derwin Ware in the final minutes. Ritz threw to Mick Rossley for a 2-point conversion.

Hill led SMU with 94 yards rushing.

Houston 17

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Jason Allen threw two touchdown passes, tailback E.D. Jackson made two huge plays without the ball and Michael James returned a pass interception 75 yards for a touchdown as Arkansas beat Houston.

James' interception came with Arkansas leading 23-17. Donald Douglas, subbing for a sick David Klingler, drove the Cougars to the Arkansas 32 and then threw for Marcus Grant. James cut in front of Grant and had a clear path up the left sideline with 3:38 to play. At the 2:03 mark, James picked off another Douglas pass in the end zone.

Arkansas (4-2) improved to 3-0 in the Southwest Conference. Houston (1-4), one of the preseason favorites, lost its fourth straight and is 0-2 in the league.

Allen's first touchdown pass to Tracy Caldwell came on the fourth play of the game and covered 16 yards. His second TD, a 4-yard flip to Kirk Botkin, broke a 10-10 tie with 15 seconds left in the half and gave Arkansas its first halftime lead of the year.

Jackson contributed moments earlier.

Allen was harassed into a weak throw which was picked off by Ryan McCoy at the Arkansas 44. He appeared headed for a touchdown, but Jackson wrestled him down by the face mask at the Arkansas 2. After the penalty, Klingler rolled right from the 1, drifted left and was sacked for a 9-yard loss by James Mallett.

BRAVES: Turner finally sees team win at home

(From 1B)

Turner saw his team win for the first time this year. He watched three early losses, and left another with the Braves trailing 6-0, a game they rallied to win. Down the stretch, Turner stayed away, fearing he was a jinx.

"I've had the team for 17 years and we've never won a playoff game," Turner said. "It's been called 'Loserville' for good reason."

Pittsburgh's loss further compounded its problems. Game 1 winner Doug Drabek cannot start Sunday night because of a hamstring injury, and Pirates manager Jim Leyland said his ace is "iffy" for Game 5 Monday. Instead, Randy Tomlin (8-7) will face Atlanta's Charlie Leibrandt (15-13).

Meanwhile, the Pirates, the best road team in the majors this year at 46-32, fell to 0-7 in Atlanta.

"They've got the hatchets. They're boisterous. That's what it's all about," said Leyland, who took a morning flight to Atlanta after his wife gave birth Friday. "That chop thing, that's great. But I don't think it had any effect on our team."

Whatever, Barry Bonds, Bobby Bonilla and Andy Van Slyke failed to drive in any runs for the second straight game.

That was partly because of Smoltz. He was baseball's top winner since the All-Star break, going 12-2, and he won his seventh consecutive decision.

Smoltz overcame a cold and Merced's line drive homer on the first pitch — the first home run off Smoltz in 96 1-3 innings — before leaving in the seventh after Bell's solo shot.

"Momentum and emotion run in funny ways, and right now it's on our side," Smoltz said.

Games in Atlanta usually are high-scoring, and Leyland picked Smiley, a 20-game winner, to start because of his 8-1 record in day games. But before Smiley got to look at the Braves, he and the rest of the Pirates saw the fans.

The drum beats began a half-hour before the game, and the chants and tomahawks swung into action. Nearly every Pittsburgh player went to the top step of the dugout to survey the scene.

Smiley had said he would use "tunnel vision" to block out the crowd. Instead, the only tunnel he saw was the one leading to the showers.

Merced's homer quieted the fans, for a moment. Then, with two outs in the bottom of the first, the Braves broke loose, just like always.

Atlanta, which scored only two runs at Three Rivers Stadium this week, had scored in the first inning in eight of its last 13 home games. The Braves did it again when Gant, David Justice and Brian Hunter hit consecutive doubles.

Then Olson homered deep to left field and circled the bases with arms spread wide. It came on his sixth wedding anniversary and marked his first home run since Aug. 10. All seven of Olson's home runs this year have come in Atlanta.

"This park has been real good to us," Olson said. "We really didn't hit the ball well in Pittsburgh."

Lonnie Smith, 0-for-10 in the series, was hit by a pitch with two outs in the second inning. He was caught off base by Smiley, but Merced threw wildly to second base, and Smith later scored when NL batting champion Terry Pendleton doubled for his first hit of the playoffs.

Rafael Belliard singled home a run in the third for a 6-1 lead before the Pirates chipped away. Barry Bonds singled in the fourth, stole second and scored on Lind's single, and Bell homered in the seventh.

ALCS: Jay comeback not impossible

ished, allowed Alomar's RBI single in the ninth.

Carter was limited to a DH role in Game 4 because of a mild right ankle sprain sustained Friday night while trying to climb the plastic-covered wall in right field. He went 0-for-5, striking out three times while stranding five baserunners.

"Joe wasn't feeling right," Toronto manager Cito Gaston said. "But once again, we left too many runners on base. It doesn't look good, but funny things can happen in baseball."

The Twins signed Morris as a free agent this year to provide their young starting rotation with some stability. He came through, winning 18 of his last 29 decisions during the season.

Morris pitched a six-hit shutout on Sept. 28 in the SkyDome and his victory in Game 1 improved his lifetime record in the Metrodome to 23-5.

Stottlemyre was strong at the start, but Puckett's homer changed that. Chili Davis doubled with one out and moved to third on a grounder. Shane Mack walked and Pagliarulo followed with a single for a 2-1 lead.

"I always had confidence in myself," Pagliarulo said. "It's very big to prove I belong in the major leagues."

After Greg Gagne was hit by a pitch, Gladden singled in two runs and was left holding the handle of the broken bat. It was that kind of a night for the Blue Jays.

Pagliarulo had his double in the sixth and Gladden singled in a run. Toronto errors led to Twins runs in the seventh and eighth, and Mack hit a sacrifice fly in the ninth.

Gladden, who broke an 0-for-13 slide with the single, had three of Minnesota's 13 hits and three RBIs.

Stottlemyre, with his father Mel in the stands, gave up four runs and seven hits in 3 2-3 innings. His ERA in two playoff starts, one in 1989, is 8.30.

Despite their position, the Blue Jays know a comeback isn't impossible. In 1985, Kansas City rallied from a 3-1 deficit to beat Toronto for the pennant.

It won't be easy, though. Carter isn't 100 percent and the Blue Jays will have to win two games in the Metrodome.

Three teams tied at Olds Scramble

Associated Press

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Teams from Virginia, South Carolina and Florida forged into a three-way, third-round tie Saturday in the Oldsmobile Scramble National Gross Division Championship.

Aquia Harbour of Stafford, Va., posted a 55 on the Walt Disney World Magnolia Course, while Links O'Tryon of Campobello, S.C., and Stonebridge Golf & Country Club of Boca Raton, Fla., had 56 on the Magnolia and Palm courses, respectively.

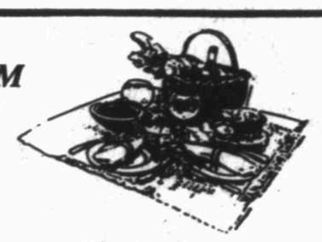

Saturday's round left all three teams tied at 46-under-par 170.

Aquia Harbour's PGA club professional Tom Lernihan was joined by amateurs Greg Howard, Jeff Howard, Jr., Jeff Howard, Sr. and Tim Rose. Competing for Links O'Tryon were pro Tom Mullinax with Ray Sharpe, Curtis Burnett, Babe Rayburn and Billy Henson; while pro Mike Anderson and Roy Ferri, Fred Simank, Charlie Peebles and Steve Schmidt represented Stonebridge.

The field was reduced to the 24 lowest-scoring teams for the final 18 holes Monday on the Magnolia Course. That round will be played with 24 PGA Tour players after a break from competition Sunday.

Eagles lead Bair to lead

RANCHO MURIETA, Calif. — Butch Baird made a pair of eagles en route to a 6-under-par 66 Saturday and a share of the lead with Lee Trevino after two rounds at the Raley's Senior Gold Rush.

Seniors

Baird and Trevino, who had a 70, were tied at 7-under 137 entering Sunday's final round in the 54-hole event on the Rancho Murieta Country Club's 6,701-yard North Course.

George Archer shot a 71 and was tied at 138 with Bob Charles, who shot his second straight 69. J.C. Snead, Bruce Crampton and Rocky Thompson were next at 139, followed by John Brodie and Harold Henning at 140.

Baird began the day four strokes behind first-round leaders Trevino, Archer and Crampton, but moved to 4-under on the 373-yard No. 4 when he hit an 8-iron out of the rough and into the cup from 138 yards out.

COWBOYS: Dallas hasn't beaten Bengals since '79

teams headed to an open date after the week they play.

Johnson's research shows that there is an open date hex.

"Of 14 games, only four won prior to the week they had an open date," Johnson said. "It tells me some people are taking open dates mentally before they get to it.

"Guys are setting up golf games and finding out where their families are going and making arrangements for the two or three days off instead of concentrating who they are playing on that Sunday."

The Cowboys face something of a budding hex against Wyche.

Dallas is 0-2 against Wyche although this is his first head-to-head meeting with Johnson.

Boomer Esiason directed the Bengals to victories of 50-24 in 1985 and 38-24 in 1988 over the Cowboys. Esiason has completed 31 of 54 passes for 470 yards, six touchdowns and has never thrown an interception against Dallas.

"Boomer is as good a quarterback as there is in the league,"

Johnson said. "Cincinnati can score a lot of points in a hurry. The only thing that has been killing them is turnovers. Boomer can take a team down the field in a hurry."

Johnson is even worried about what Dallas faces after the Cincinnati game — four road trips out of five games against Detroit, Houston, New York Giants and Washington.

"Those four games on the road give me concern."

The Bengals and Cowboys are 2-2 in their all-time series. Only four other teams have appeared on the Cowboys schedule as infrequently as the Bengals: Buffalo, Kansas City, the Los Angeles Raiders and Seattle.

Dallas hasn't defeated the Bengals since 1979 when it won 38-13.

Oilers, Jets have plenty to prove today

Associated Press

■ Houston Oilers at New York Jets, 3 p.m., NBC (Cable Ch. 9)

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — OK, Houston Oilers, show us something. Show us you can win on the road against a good team.

OK, New York Jets, show us something. Show us you are a good team.

Sunday's game at the Meadowlands seems to match two teams on the rise. The outcome probably will answer just how far the Oilers (4-1) and the Jets (3-3) have come — and how far they have to go to be Super Bowl contenders.

Houston has made the playoffs the last four seasons, the only AFC team to do so. But the Oilers haven't won the AFC Central nor gotten to the conference title game in those years.

Their victory at Cincinnati in Week 2 indicated the Oilers could win big road games. They had been routed the last four times they went to Cincinnati.

But two weeks later, Houston lost at New England, and the Bengals (0-5) turned out to be a weak team.

Are these the same old Oilers, dominant at home and underachieving on the road?

"I think we're better, we're more balanced," Warren Moon said. "We're more balanced on offense and also our defense is better and creating a lot more big plays and turnovers. The special teams are better and really have created a lot of points and turnovers and given us good field position.

"We let the New England game get away from us, I thought we still should have pulled it out.

"The next two weeks, we're on the road," he said of games at New York and Miami. "The next two weeks will determine if we're a better road team."

Coach Jack Pardee has insisted the Oilers become more focused on their jobs since he replaced Jerry Glanville as coach in 1990. He seems to have succeeded — 10 teams, including the Jets, have as many penalties as the Oilers' 39.

This is not as much of a trash-talking team and most of the cheap-shot reputation is gone.

"It's hard to win if the boys beat themselves," Pardee said. "We're still getting a few penalties, but not of the nature we used to."

With the problem eased somewhat, the Oilers still must overcome their travel troubles before they are regarded as an elite team.

"The competition level in the NFL is so keen," Pardee said, "that if you are not at your best, you probably won't win."

The Jets were not at their best last week, yet they edged Cleveland 17-14. Winning on the road has been less of a problem for New York, which has four of its nine victories under coach Bruce Coslet away from home.

For New York, this game provides a chance to get people to take notice. It also could serve as a catalyst toward contention: the Jets' next five opponents after Houston have a total of four victories.

"Consistency is the key word," Al Toon said. "We're going out now trying to win, trying not to make mistakes at critical times.

"The last two weeks, we've done what we had to do to win the game. We're getting closer to our final goal."

The Oilers obviously offer a major hurdle, although the Jets have won four of their last five against Houston. That includes a victory at the Astrodome last season.

A loss won't kill the playoff prospects for either team, but a convincing win by either side could be a major step up the NFL ladder.

Browns lucky to score at RFK

Associated Press

Art Modell, the owner of the Cleveland Browns, is happy with his new coach, Bill Belichick. But he's worried about his team's tendency to start slowly in most of its games.

The question this week is whether the Browns will get started at all.

Cleveland, a surprisingly competitive 2-3 this season, goes into Washington to play the Redskins, who have scored 102 points in three games at RFK Stadium this season and allowed ...

None. Zero. Zilch. Nil.

If the Skins, 6-0 overall, can blank the Browns, they will tie a mark unequaled in 59 years — since the Chicago Bears ended the 1932 season with four consecutive home shutouts over the Brooklyn Dodgers, Chicago Cardinals, New York Giants and Green Bay Packers.

That may not be too hard.

Cleveland has scored just 72 points in five games this season, fifth worst in the NFL. Last week, the Browns fell behind 14-0 to the Jets, came back to tie them, then lost 17-14.

"It's bothersome," says Modell, who can always see blue skies through the gray. "We can't consistently spot teams 14 points and come back in the second half."

The question is whether Cleveland can spot Washington any points.

The Redskins' 19 sacks — 11 by defensive ends Charles Mann and Fred Stokes —are second in the NFL and the Browns' offensive line is hardly their strong point. Moreover, Wilber Marshall, signed as a free agent three years agro, is finally playing back to his Pro Bowl seasons in Chicago after being moved to the strong side.

But Belichick, the architect of the Giants' Super Bowl defense last season, has done wonders with the Cleveland defense and he's had plenty of experience stopping Washington, who lost their last six games to New York when Belichick was there. Despite the loss of six defensive backs to injury, the Browns lead the AFC in defense.

In other games Sunday, Cincinnati is at Dallas; Indianapolis at Buffalo; New Orleans at Philadelphia; Phoenix at Minnesota; San Diego at the Rams; Miami at Kansas City; Houston at the Jets; Atlanta at San Francisco and the Raiders are at Seattle Sunday night.

The Giants are at Pittsburgh Monday night and Chicago, Denver, Detroit, Green Bay, New England and Tampa Bay all are idle.

Indianapolis (0-6) at Buffalo (5-1)

Help!

Not only are the Colts winless; not only are they the league's lowest scoring team (43 points), but they get the Bills when they're angry. Buffalo's 33-6 loss to the Chiefs Monday night was their worst in a non-strike game since 1985, a season in which they finished 2-14.

In fact, Marv Levy could see only two positives — the punting of Chris Mohr and the lack of serious injuries. Thurman Thomas' ankle shouldn't keep him out. And they get no better team on which to take out their anger than the Colts, who have lost most of their offensive line to injury.

One other stat for Indianapolis to savor: In three home games, the Bills have scored 122 points, or 41 a game; in three road games, they've scored 46, or 15 a game.

Help!

Giants (3-3) at Pittsburgh (3-2) (Monday night)

"We won't turn the corner until we win one on the road," says Ray Handley, whose sputtering Super Bowl champions got their offense straightened out a bit in a 20-9 win over Phoenix last week. Still, the Giants haven't won two straight in the Handley administration — either in exhibition or regular season.

They may not get Bubby Brister in this one, although Brister says his strained left knee ligament isn't bad enough to keep him out. If not, Neil O'Donnell is the quarterback.

The Giants' injuries are on the defensive line, although they could get John Washington back this week to augment pickups Lorenzo Freeman and Greg Meisner.

Miami (3-3) at Kansas City (4-2)

Under other circumstances, this could be a letdown week for the Chiefs, who were pointing at Buffalo from the day the schedule came out and did what they set out to do.

But they also remember the 17-16 loss in Miami in last year's playoffs that kept them from getting a shot at the Bills. And the loss of John Offerdahl for the season leaves a huge hole in the middle of the Dolphins' defense — right where Marty Schottenheimer will aim Christian Okoye.

The Dolphins, meanwhile, are missing not just Offerdahl, out for the season with a knee injury, but guard Keith Sims, which will make Dan Marino more vulnerable to Derrick Thomas, Neil Smith and friends.

New Orleans (5-0) at Philadelphia (3-3)

These might be the two best defenses in the league.

The difference is ... well, if Bobby Hebert isn't Joe Montana, he's a legitimate NFL quarterback. With Randall Cunningham and Jim McMahon out, the Eagles will go with Brad Goebel, with whom they built a 13-0 lead in Tampa last year before succumbing to two fourth-quarter touchdowns.

Goebel isn't likely to get respite from Pat Swilling, Rickey Jackson and friends, who haven't allowed a team 200 yards total in their last three games and have allowed only three defensive touchdowns all season. The Eagles have benched rookie right tackle Antone Davis, the No. 1 draft pick, who has been called for five holding penalties in the last two games.

Atlanta (2-3) at San Francisco (2-3)

Now Steve Young knows for sure — he's the franchise, at least for this season.

But that won't solve the 49ers' problems at running back — Young is the team's second-leading rusher and Keith Henderson, Harry Sydney and Dexter Carter are still fighting for the feature position. On the other hand, Tim Harris is now in town to provide a bookend pass rusher to Charles Haley.

The Falcons were supposed to be home for this one, but the Braves ousted them from Fulton County Stadium. They were, however, kind enough to give back Deion Sanders.

Raiders (3-3) at Seattle (3-3) (Sunday night)

Two teams whose mediocrity can be defined by their quarterback problems.

Seattle's Jeff Kemp has nine interceptions, more than 22 other teams. The Raiders' Jay Schroeder has the AFC's second-lowest completion percentage plus no running game minus Marcus Allen. Roger Craig's problems have continued 400 miles to the south with a 3.3 per carry average and it looks like it will be no go for Bo.

One plus for Kemp — he's getting a career year from Brian (not Bennie) Blades, who's leading the league in receptions with 36.

Phoenix (3-3) at Minnesota (2-4)

Once again the Cards are learning how the world turns, at least in the NFC East. After starting 2-0 they've gone 1-3, losing to the Redskins, Cowboys and Giants, all of whom they have to play again.

The Vikings, meanwhile, are learning what it costs when you mortgage the future for a Herschel Walker. They're 15-19 since they've gotten Walker and their 28-year-old Pro Bowlers like Joey Browner, et. al. are now into their 30s.

San Diego (1-5) at Rams (2-3)

John Friesz can say this much — he has five more touchdown passes than Jim Everett, who still has none at all after throwing 52 in the last two seasons. John Robinson keeps insisting his team is in the playoff race but it's hard to see how with that kind of statistic.

The Chargers beat the Raiders last week and would enjoy a sweep over the big-city guys to the north (although Anaheim is hardly Hollywood.) The surprise so far is Rod Bernstine, the running back with a receiver's number who is fourth in the AFC in rushing and has relegated Marion Butts to a backup role.

Record-setting Beck now trails

Associated Press

LAS VEGAS — Chip Beck followed up his record-matching 59 with a 68 — and lost ground in the exceptionally low scoring that has marked the $1.5 million Las Vegas Invitational.

"I'm happy to be just one shot back," Beck said Saturday after completing 72 holes of the five-day, 90-hole event at 264, a distant 24 below par.

That equals the most strokes under par for any previous 72 holes on the PGA Tour this year, but it was only good enough for a tie for fifth in this remarkable shootout.

Four others were tied for the lead at 25-under 263 with one round to go.

However, two of the four — Bruce Lietzke and D.A. Weibring — declined to claim any part of the lead.

"With the scores we've been ringing up, there are no leaders," Weibring said.

"He's right," Lietzke agreed. "You can't say anybody is leading. With the scores the course has been yielding, anybody within six or seven shots could win tomorrow — and I'd guess that's about 40 players.

"I'm not at all sure I can shoot 5- or 6-under tomorrow and be winning. I might have to go 7-under — and that might not be good enough, not with players shooting 60 and 61 and 59 and whatever.'

The overall scoring is among the lowest in the tour's history.

Police quiz teenager about AIDS vendetta

DALLAS (AP) — Police said Saturday they were investigating a teen-age girl's claim she wrote the so-called "C.J." letter to a magazine stating she has AIDS and is deliberately infecting black men.

The letter, signed with only the initials "C.J.," and a radio interview with its purported writer have prompted scores of requests for AIDS information and blood tests at Dallas hospitals and clinics.

In the letter, C.J. said she's trying to infect black men with AIDS as revenge against a man who gave her the virus.

A 15-year-old girl contacted police Friday claiming she wrote the letter, which was published in the September issue of Ebony.

The teen-ager told police she doesn't have AIDS but wrote the letter to promote awareness of the disease, which killed a member of her family.

But the girl said she is not the woman interviewed on radio about the letter, police said.

"Nothing has been corroborated at this point," police Sgt. Mark Johnson said Saturday.

Last week, prosecutors gave police a list of five names in the hunt for C.J., including one woman known to have the AIDS virus. The teen-ager was not one of the names on the list, Johnson said.

Schools need building funds, TEA says

AUSTIN (AP) — The $50 million provided by lawmakers for emergency school construction grants is "minuscule" compared to the need, which an ongoing study has so far pegged at twice that amount, a State Board of Education member said Saturday.

"It won't even wet the bottom of the bucket," said Will Davis of Austin, chairman of the board's school finance committee.

The survey by the Texas Education Agency includes information from 831 of the state's 1,052 school districts. Based on those districts, it would cost more than $100 million to replace school buildings that are in poor condition.

The inventory does not yet include Houston and Dallas, the state's largest school districts.

In addition, the study said, it would cost another $1 billion to replace portable buildings with permanent ones.

The inventory of school facilities was ordered by lawmakers to use in deciding allocation of state funds for construction.

The issue is part of the debate on equitable school funding. Because school districts have footed the bill locally for building classrooms, poor schools cite that as an area in which they are at a disadvantage.

A group of poor school districts has said the new school finance law, passed in response to a court order to equalize funding, does not include sufficient state money to address the problem.

Bob Aikin of Commerce, vice chairman of the Education Board, said that even the $100 million figure would be "at best, a down payment."

Based on past spending, new construction and renovation will cost at least $1 billion over the next several years, he said.

"There's a pretty good-sized construction and major repair backlog out there," Aikin said.

In the school districts surveyed, more than 95 percent of the rooms were in fair or good shape. The area of the state with the highest percentage of below-average buildings was the Lower Rio Grande Valley, it said.

On other matters:

■ The board approved a resolution in support of a proposed constitutional amendment to allow the sale of up to $300 million in state-backed bonds for loans to Texas college students. The proposal is on the Nov. 5 ballot.

■ The Texas Center for Educational Research reported that the weighted average tax rate for the state's new county education districts is estimated at 82 cents.

Aldine ISD orders metal detectors for schools

HOUSTON (AP) — The Aldine school district has decided to buy metal detectors for its junior highs and senior highs, another sign of the rise of violent incidents at schools across the state this fall.

Board members in the north Houston-areaa school district authorized the purchase of 44 hand-held detectors for $165 each this week. They also plan to buy six walk-through detectors for $3,250 each.

The 42,000-student district is trying to keep the rising incidence of violence in surrounding neighborhoods from filtering onto school campuses, spokesperson Judy Williams said.

"It forces the school to develop a fortress mentality," she said. "We are being forced because of situations in society to take these types of steps."

Three Houston-area students have been fatally shot at or near school.

Fort Worth police last week seized a gun from a middle school student who told them she expected a fight.

In Austin, authorities have confiscated deadly weapons from students, some of whom are in elementary school, more than six times this year. The number of weapons collected during the first month of the fall term is larger than those gathered during the entire 1990-91 year, officials say.

"It concerns me that we have any firearms," says Patrick Fuller, chief of the 17-member police force responsible for security at 120 Austin school properties.

State law prohibits students from bringing firearms, explosive weapons or knives with blades longer than 5½ inches onto school premises unless approved by school officials.

The Texas Association of School Boards has recommended that the ban be expanded to fireworks, clubs, nightsticks, razors, metallic knuckles and chains.

Aldine, a suburban school district, is dealing with problems usually associated with inner-city schools, Ms. Williams said. Six weapons have been seized so far this year, one from a middle school student.

Group studies economic development tax

Amarillo tax 'valuable tool'

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

Amarillo's economic development sales tax has been its "trump card" in the competition to attract and expand business there, officials said.

Garet Von Netzer, publisher of the Amarillo Globe-News, said the city's ½-cent sales tax, enacted two years ago to fund economic development, has given the city great advantage. With revenues from that increase, the city created Amarillo Economic Development Corp. (AEDC), run by a staff of four and governed by a board of five, to assist existing industries and recruit new prospects.

"The country has been and continues to be in a slow-growth mode," said Von Netzer, an early supporter of the AEDC. "Everyone is looking to slim down (business operations) and become more efficient. There are a lot of people courting all kinds of prospects and the competition is fierce."

Richard Brown, chairman of the AEDC board of directors, said the sales tax has worked as a valuable tool.

"It would be a mistake to assume it's a panacea, a cure-all," he said. "It's just another tool,

■ Committee ponders ¼-cent sales tax increase which would support existing businesses and attract new business to Midland.

By Debbie Lincecum
Staff Writer

A group of Midlanders is studying an economic development sales tax to determine if it might work to stimulate the local economy.

The Midland Chamber of Commerce more than a year ago organized a committee of its members and those from the Hispanic and black chambers that has since been studying the possibility of a ¼-cent sales tax increase, revenues of which would be used to fund economic development. They remain undecided about whether to recommend it in the local community, leaders said.

Enacting such a proposal would require recommendation of the City Council and a citizen vote.

Texas law allows cities to approve a ⅛, ¼, ⅜ or ½-cent sales tax and with its revenue, designate a corporation to support existing businesses as well as attract new business to the community.

"Economic development is an investment," said Janna King, chamber president and chief executive officer. "We've found that dollars invested in economic development and diversity have a very high rate of return."

In the last five years, the chamber has utilized $850,000 in city and private money to attract three California manufacturing companies. Isotrol/Isoduct, Fuel Harvesters and Jacobs Electronics have brought 115 new jobs with salaries of $2.76 million annually.

With sales tax revenues that could total $2 million annually, committee members said they believe more can be accomplished.

Forrest Allen, a board member of the Midland Black Chamber of Entrepreneurs, said recent economic development expenditures have benefitted the minority community. According to chamber information, the three companies that recently relocated to Midland filled about 33 percent of their new jobs with minorities.

"We've had some well-publicized problems," Allen said. "What's very important is when people are working, they work all day and go home at night. You don't have some of these problems.

"The cost (of the sales tax) is very small, but the benefits are limitless," Allen said.

Gregg Owens, past chairman of the Midland chamber, said the organization's accomplishments over the last five years have been a "test case" for economic development in the community.

"We've realized the benefits. There's no more direct investment in growth," Owens said.

"This is a broader-based tax," said Doug Henson, chairman of the chamber board of directors. "Everybody derives the benefit from growth. Why shouldn't they pay for it?"

King said companies looking for relocation possibilities as well as those who may want to expand need a reason for considering Midland.

Students thrilled to see author

■ Native Midlander Nell Robbins talks to Milam sixth graders about her children's book.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

After reading "Pennsylvania Parker and the Black Cat," some sixth graders at Ben Milam Elementary School met the book's author in person.

Native Midlander and former elementary school teacher Nell Robbins spoke to about 60 sixth graders on the writing process and publishing Friday.

"I wrote a fiction book," Ms. Robbins said. "It was just for fun. But it has real-life situations in it."

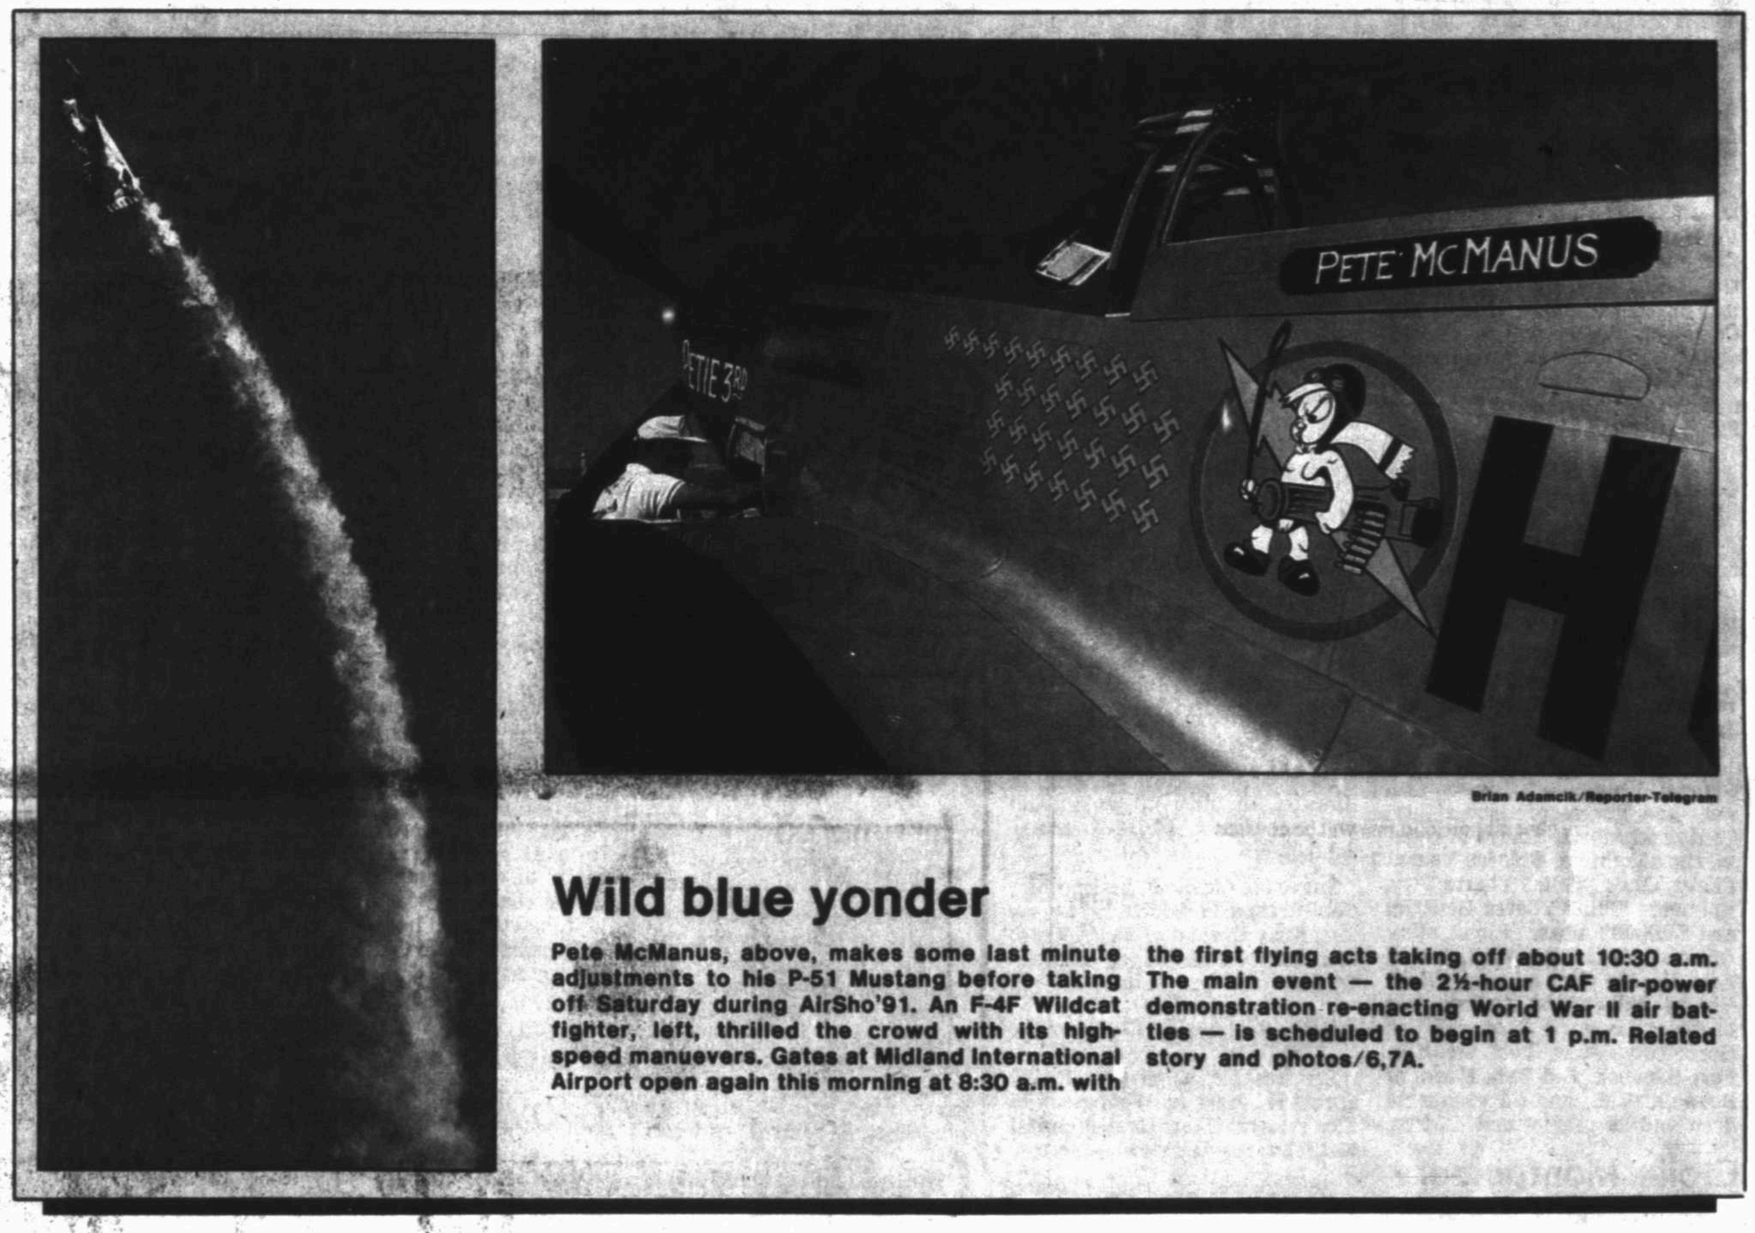

Her children's book features a young girl with long black hair named Pennsylvania Parker. The girl, who is somewhat of a loner, finds a black cat and makes it her constant companion. The school bully labels her cat a witch cat and labels Pennsylvania a witch.

"If they wanted a witch, she would give them a witch," reads the book's cover jacket.

So, Pennsylvania plays tricks on the children that make fun of her, and she scares some of them.

"You have to think of the consequences of your actions, though," Ms. Robbins told her young audience. "Some of the decisions the characters made were good decisions, and some were not."

Program affords job training for youths

■ Program offers on-the-job training and other skills training for disadvantaged Midlanders.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff Writer

In an effort to help economically disadvantaged youth in Midland overcome barriers to employment and acquire job skills for the future, the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA), based at the Private Industry Council in Midland, has set up an extensive eight-step training program.

Services offered range from on-the-job training to various basic skills training conducted at the Private Industry Council. The program starts Monday.

According to W.C. Wilson, field office manager at the Private Industry Council, the program is available to youths between the ages of 16 and 21, who are considered economically disadvantaged, based on the income earned by the applicant's parents in the last six months. Young men between 18 and 21 are required to have registered with Selective Service to be eligible.

"Those with the least access are those who need the jobs the most," Wilson said. "I feel like this is a well-rounded employment and training program. It can really help get the youth on the right track to successful employment."

With the help of nearly 40 area employers, the youths will earn a minimum of $5 an hour once they report to their jobs. Fifty percent of this figure is subsidized by the government while the rest is paid by each employer. Workers are not paid during the initial training stage of the program.

"We work with employers to put together a training outline and identify beginning and ending dates. We also allocate a certain amount of hours for the program before it starts," Wilson said.

The maximum number of hours alloted for the program is 1,040, which includes training and work hours. After these hours have been exhausted, the employer has the option to rehire the employee.

Through training, Wilson hopes to avoid any problems with the employees at their respective jobs.

"We try to identify and correct any problems beforehand. We certainly try to prevent them from occurring," he said.

Counseling will be provided to help the participants learn basic job etiquette such as being on time and calling in when ill.

Woman's murder trial to begin

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A Midland woman who allegedly shot and killed her ex-husband last year is expected to claim self-defense at her murder trial set to begin Monday in the 238th District Court before Judge John Hyde.

Celia Garcia Perez faces the charge of murdering her former spouse, Jesus Aguilar Perez, 46, who sustained four gunshots on Aug. 23, 1990. The incident occurred about 1:35 a.m. near Ms. Perez's home.

"It's my belief that the evidence will show ... that there was an argument going on between the two of them and that she was in fear of her life and therefore used a gun and shot and killed Jessie Perez," said defense attorney Glen Aaron.

The trial is expected to last throughout the week beginning with jury selection on Monday, according to Aaron and prosecuting attorney Jan Baker of the District Attorney's Office.

One issue expected to be contested will be whether Ms. Perez was beaten on the night of the shooting.

After-school fights basic fact of life for children

The scene took me back in time. So much so, in fact, I almost parked the car and watched for a few moments. My mind immediately raced back to Mark Twain novels and Norman Rockwell paintings.

Ott

It was the kind of thing where grown-ups — especially parents of young lads with red hair and lots of freckles — sorta shrug their shoulders, smile sheepishly at the heavens and say "Boys will be boys."

We're talking Americana here, with a small-town twist.

The episode in question was taking place in a vacant lot after school on a Thursday afternoon. Two boys — I'd guess them to be between the ages of 8 and 10 — were engaged in an all-out fight. Some might call it a tussle. They were rolling around on the ground, pulling hair, throwing an occasional punch and mostly kicking one another. A crowd of kids, probably classmates, had gathered to cheer on the combatants.

As I drove by I could see, and hear, the flurry of activity. The onlookers, both boys and girls, were waving their arms madly and shouting words of encouragement. There may have been side bets going, I really don't know.

But the point is, two young boys had decided to settle their differences on the field of battle. The time for talk had passed. In the words of somebody famous, probably a football coach, it was time to "put up or shut up."

And these young fellows had decided to "put up."

Some things never change.

If you reflect on your childhood with complete honesty, you can probably recall many similar scenes. After-school fights, while not something to be encouraged, are nonetheless a basic fact of life for your typical red-blooded American kid.

The occasional black eye, bloody nose and torn clothes are as much a part of the growing-up experience as sandlot baseball games and ghost stories around the campfire. Always have been, always will be.

No matter what you say or do, kids are going to engage in a certain number of these scuffles. You might as well grin and bear it.

So, parents, say it one more time with conviction, "boys will be boys."

Generally, there are three kinds of "kid fighters."

First, there is the bully. We all remember him. He's the overgrown youngster who first started sprouting facial hair at the age of 3. He has the personality of a gorilla, and the breath to match. No one likes him and he knows it. So he expresses his frustration by beating the living daylights out of anyone who dares to look cross ways at him. He's a real handy guy to have around, especially if you happen to be organizing a Charlie Manson-type "family".

Then there is the young diplomat. He is one of those popular kids who is always around the action. When a fight breaks out, he's there. In fact, he starts most of them. But he's also quite shrewd. He throws three sucker punches and then somehow manages to maneuver himself on the side of the bully. He never even gets a scratch, but invariably walks away a winner. He is destined to become a U.S. senator. As a result, he should not be trusted. Ever.

Finally, there is the wimp. Those who find themselves in this category know only one style of fighting. When the first punch is thrown, they immediately fall to the ground and assume the fetal position. They also whimper a lot. When the fight has been concluded, they rise to their feet, dust off their britches and go about their business. These young boys will grow up to be normal human beings who will spend the bulk of their adult years sitting around a table reminiscing about how tough they were as children. They will be master storytellers.

That's it. Every kid falls into one of those three categories. There are no exceptions.

So think about it, parents. Would you rather unleash Charlie Manson, Ted Kennedy or a modest embellesher of the truth onto the world?

I thought so.

Rule No. 1: Teach your children the fetal position.

CITY: Group studies tax increase plan

(From 1C)

"We have to be aware of the reality ... (that) we need a tool for competition," she said. Throughout the state, 46 cities have implemented the economic development sales tax. They include Amarillo, Abilene and Big Spring. Lubbock voters will take up the issue Jan. 18.

"We're in direct competition with those cities," Allen said.

But the issue may not come easily. Committee members are well-aware of public hostility to any form of tax.

Currently, Midlanders pay a total state, city and county sales tax rate of 7.75 percent. The city's share is 1 percent and the county's ½ percent.

"People are angry about taxes," Owens said. "They're angry about how the federal and state governments are using their tax dollars. It creates a risk that the community won't take advantage of a situation that might benefit them."

"We have a lot of real important assets," King said. "Cities in this size range are among the highest in growth rates right now. But we need to capitalize on that."

"The movement in economic development now is not 'growth at no cost,'" Henson said.

Committee members said they are prepared for an intense educational process to let local voters decide.

"I hope the public can feel comfortable with what we're doing, comfortable enough to ask all the questions they need," Allen said.

"The worst thing we could do wold be rush into this," Owens said. "We realize the need for education is very important."

"If we do call a vote on this, I see it as having two equal purposes," Henson said. "Part of that is to tell industry that the citizens of our community stand for growth, that they're willing to support it."

A sales tax increase referendum could conceivably be called in January, but committee members said they have not yet determined their course of action.

AMARILLO: City officials say tax 'trump card' in competition

albeit a powerful tool."

Von Netzer said Amarillo's leaders view their sales tax-funded economic development corporation as a "tie-breaker" in the competition.

Kirk Folkner, an AEDC staff member, said the organization has two major focuses: business retention and expansion, which is executed by the chamber of commerce; and recruitment of new business, which the corporation controls.

"The corporation funds expansions of basic industries — industries that produce and distribute products," Folkner said.

Brown said basic industries are those determined to bring outside dollars into the community.

"We realize you do not create growth by exchanging dollars among yourselves," Brown said.

Since July 1990, the corporation has made 11 loans and utilized $11.7 million in sales tax revenues.

Amarillo has capitalized on its airport facility, recruiting three new aircraft businesses.

Local manufacturers, including those producing computer chemicals, veterinary vaccines and printing materials, have expanded with AEDC loans. The corporation made a $1 million loan to Iowa Beef Processors, which operates a slaughter and production company, allowing it to expand into tannery work as well.

Brown said the community was overwhelmingly in support of the increase. Two-thirds of those voting were in agreement, he said.

"That's incredibly strong when you consider the community is voting to tax itself further," he said. "It sends a strong statement that the people wanted it."

"Amarillo is as anti-tax as any city in the state," Brown said. "But in this case it was a choice to tax yourself for immediate benefit to yourself. That made the difference."

"With the competition like it is, you need your trump card," Von Netzer said. "That's what these economic development monies provide."

BOOK: Local author reads her children's novel to Milam students

(From 1C)

The author read questions written to her from the students and tried to answer all of them.

One of the youngsters wanted to know where she got her ideas.

"I was walking around a lake with one of my grandchildren when a black cat seemed to appear from nowhere," she said.

Ms. Robbins said it gave her the idea to have the cat appear out of nowhere when Pennsylvania befriends it.

The author said writing the book wasn't difficult. "Editing it was the hard part," she said. "Especially correcting the galleys and then approving the corrections."

When asked if she planned to write more books or sequels to the book, Ms. Robbins said, "Oh yes. If I didn't have to earn a living, I would write all of the time."

The sixth graders were somewhat disappointed to learn that publishing a book doesn't mean instant wealth. Ms. Robbins said that — other than an up-front fee — most authors receive a payment based on the number of books they sell.

The youngsters gasped, however, to learn that some romance authors receive $6,000 to $10,000 up front.

"I have a friend who writes romance novels," Ms. Robbins said. "Those kind of novels only have a shelf life of two to three months in the bookstore, though. If your books don't sell in two months, they are out of there."

Ms. Robbins advised students to write about what they know.

"If you write about something you know, then you can make it sound real when you describe it," she said. "And you don't need talent to write. You need to be able to fantasize and pretend, and you need to practice writing."

Milam teacher Lynn Hightower said the class was using Ms. Robbins' book as a reading lesson tool.

"We are also studying creative writing and how characters interact," she said.

Ms. Hightower said the author patiently signed about 90 autographs for the students during her visit.

"The children were thrilled about her visit," Ms. Hightower said. "They really identified with the characters and they want her to write another book."

Although Ms. Hightower's students had already read Ms. Robbin's book, she said they asked the author to read it to them again.

"There is something special about an author reading his or her own work," she said.

Petroleum Club manager part of delegation

Staff Report

Petroleum Club Manager Peter Ditlev is taking his skills to Eastern Europe as part of People to People International, a network for working professionals and educators in the hospitality industry.

"I'm especially looking forward to it, having been born and raised in Denmark," Ditlev said. "Eastern Europe has been close to us as it has the whole world."

Ditlev and others in his field were selected to join the National Club Association delegation for educating Eastern Europeans about the industry. The Americans will meet in New York Saturday for an orientation before their travel.

While traveling, Ditlev said, members of the group will attempt to advise club managers in planning, management and marketing skills, and development of joint ventures with other countries. They will try to help their contemporaries examine their client base and better use their work force, he said.

The travelers are planning to visit Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Bulgaria and the Soviet Union during a two-week period.

LOCAL/ AREA REPORTS

Girl injured

Staff Reports

ODESSA — A 5-year-old Odessa girl was injured when she fell out of a moving car in Ector County Saturday afternoon, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Norma Maye Jones remained in stable condition with head injuries at Medical Center Hospital Saturday night, officials said.

The accident occurred about 1:25 p.m. when the girl's mother, Debra Kirk Jones, driving a 1967 Volvo, was traveling north on Farm to Market Road 1936 and turned east on Blair Street, DPS officials said. The girl, not wearing a seat belt, apparently opened the back door and fell out, officials said.

Store robbery

A man got away with an undetermined amount of money during a convenience store robbery early Saturday morning, police said.

The Kent Kwik store at 2315 E. Front St., was robbed about 4:54 a.m., police said. A man walked in, asked for change, and when the clerk opened the register, the man made threats and grabbed money from the register.

The robber then fled the scene in an unknown make of car, police said.

JOB: Program provides youth with training search instruction, career awareness training and job retention training, will be conducted at the Private Industry Council. This training will typically take one week before the youths report to their respective employers, Wilson said.

Many of the participants were part of the Private Industry Council's Summer Youth Program.

"And sometimes a high school counselor will recognize a needy student and send him or her our way. We also do a lot of networking with other agencies, such as the Texas Department of Human Services, to find them," Wilson said.

Chuck Cowell, vice president of First City Bank, encouraged several community business leaders to become involved with the project.

"I think it helps give them an incentive to see what the world is like. It also helps keep them busy and off the streets," Cowell said.

TRIAL: Woman to be tried in former husband's death

(From 1C)

officers responded to a call in the 900 block of Weatherford Street and found Perez slumped half out of the driver's seat of a 1987 Buick Skyhawk parked in front of Ms. Perez's residence. He had been shot with a .38-caliber revolver twice in the right side of the neck, once in the upper left back, and once in the left middle back.

Perez was pronounced dead at 2:45 a.m. by Justice of the Peace Robert H. Pine.

Ms. Perez, 41 years old at the time, and Perez had been involved in an argument in the front yard of the residence, police said. She reportedly shot Perez through the passenger window while he sat in the driver's seat of the car, according to police.

Police arrested Ms. Perez without incident.

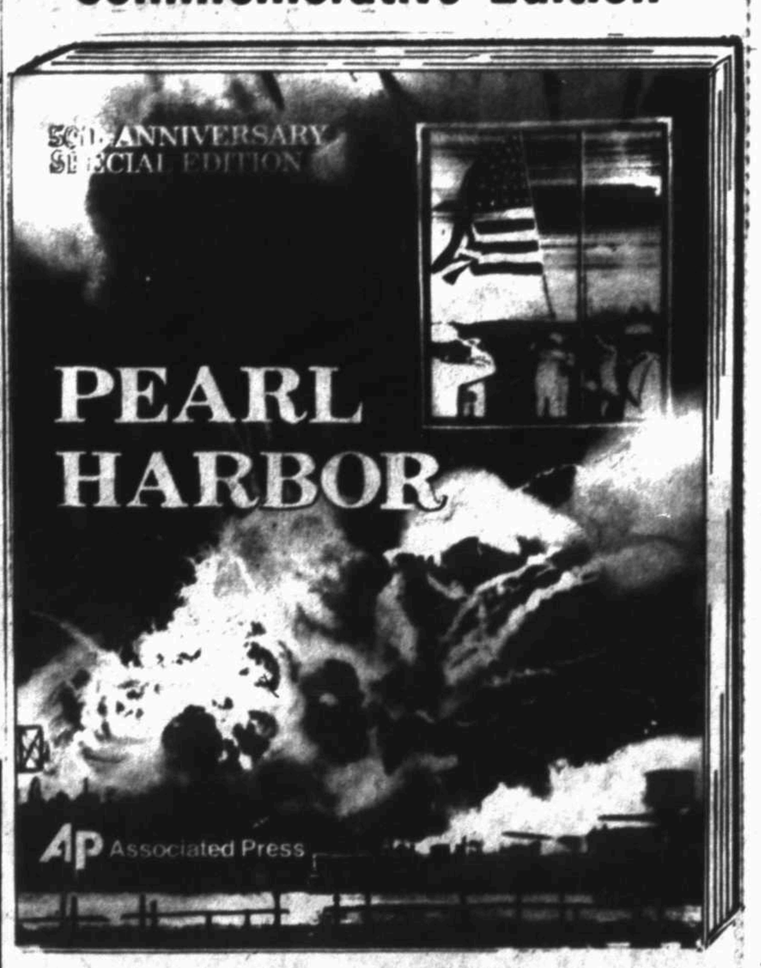

She was transported to Memorial Hospital and Medican Center where she was treated and released for minor injuries to her knees police believe were caused by deflected lead shrapnel from the bullets striking the car window.

Ms. Perez was subsequently released on a $10,000 personal recognizance bond set by Justice of the Peace Pine.

In convicted, Ms. Perez could be sentenced from probation to life in prison, said Ms. Baker.

Perez, who had been a cook for the Petroleum Club for about 20 years, and his wife had reportedly been divorced for about a year before the shooting.

Portion of AIDS memorial quilt to be displayed at Tech

Staff Report

A portion of the NAMES Project AIDS Memorial Quilt — an international memorial to those who have died of AIDS — will soon be on display in West Texas.

The quilt will be on display Oct. 17-22 in the University Center Ballroom at Texas Tech University.

The quilt is being displayed in honor of the 10th anniversary of the discovery of AIDS in the United States. About 200 panels — each 3-feet by 6-feet — of the 14,000-panel quilt will be exhibited.

The showing of the quilt also highlights HIV/AIDS Awareness Week.

The opening ceremony for the exhibit will be 8:15 p.m. Thursday. Panels will be unfolded during the ceremony and the names of more than 250 people will be read.

"The ceremony will be a solemn unveiling. The quilt is a powerful, visible symbol of the tragedy of AIDS," said Alan Bojorquez, a member of the HIV/AIDS Issues Awareness Committee.

Nominated for a Nobel Peace Prize, the quilt inspired the Academy Award-winning film "Common Threads."

The quilt panels were made by familes and friends of people who have died of AIDS.

The quilt will be displayed from 10 a.m.-10 p.m. Friday through Oct. 22. Sunday it will be open for viewing from 2-8 p.m. There is no admission charge.

The closing ceremony for the quilt will be 8:15 p.m. Oct. 22.

The play "Remember My Name" will be performed 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. Oct. 19, 2 p.m. Oct. 20 and 8 p.m. Oct. 21 and 22. Admission is $5 for adults and $3 for students.

The play is a multi-media, multi-character montage that revolves around the race to assemble a quilt of names for those lost to AIDS. It will be performed by Wild West Productions in the university's Agricultural Engineering Auditorium.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

MC to host Texas Junior College Choral Festival

By H.A. Tuck

Midland College, for the first time, is hosting the Texas Junior College Choral Festival this week. More than 200 singers from 22 Texas community colleges are scheduled to converge on the Allison Fine Arts Building for rehearsals on Wednesday night, all day Thursday and most of Friday in preparation for a free concert at 8 p.m. Friday in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium. The public is invited to attend the concert.

Tuck

Josesph Flummerfelt, Director of Choral Activities at Westminster Choir College, Princeton, N.J., is serving as guest conductor/clinician.

Following the concert, the singers will be guests of the college's Student Government Association for a dance at the Student Center.

Plaudits to Michael Jordan, coordinator of vocal music for MC, and Stan Jacobs, Fine Arts Division Chair, for selling Midland College as the site for this year's festival.

A summary of financial aid for the 1990-91 academic year, which ended Aug. 31, has been issued by Bill Burns, Director of Financial Aid.

The report shows that financial aid went to 2,109 students. The number of grants totalled 2,980 since some students receive aid from more than one source. The number of sources was 59 foundations, businesses, endowments, clubs, and individuals. Students received $2,276,543, an increase of 12.1 percent from the $2,000,484 which was allocated the previous year.

That impacts a large number of individuals and families in the Midland area. The money remains in the community to be turned over several times, while the students themselves are able to receive their education without leaving home or, in some cases, relocating their spouses and children. For many, it meant being able to keep present employment while upgrading skills or training for other employment opportunities.

Thanks to all those who provide the financial assistance. It's certainly money well invested!

I had the rare privilege of flying on a Confederate Air Force B-24 Monday as it, and a companion B-29, circled over Midland and Odessa.

While I was there representing the college and as a photographer, it was mostly just pure fun. Hope you have the opportunity to see these and the other CAF planes while they are on display today in Airsho '91 at Midland International Airport.

If you happen to drive toward the new CAF headquarters, look on your right for Hanger E ... which is where the college's new Aircraft Maintenance Technology classes will be taught, starting in January.

Not too many Midland companies have a customer list that includes A.J. Foyt; Mario, Michael and John Andretti; Al Unser, Jr. and Bobby Rahal. But Franz Weis does. VDS Racing Engines, the Midland-based company he manages, builds racing engines for an impressive list of drivers who race in the Indy 500 and other major car races around the world. VDS is one of only two companies authorized to build, rebuild and maintain Chevrolet racing engines. Franz expects the same kind of performance from his banker as his professional racing clients do from the engines they buy from VDS. So it's no surprise that Franz Weis banks with Texas National. He knows that his bankers are as professional as his clients. That's why we're Franz Weis' banker. And why we're Midland's Banker.

The Ones To Count On, Time After Time

No matter how it's measured... from sun dial to stop watch, hour glass to ticking clock... time is a universal standard, a reliable constant by which much is tested.

And who better meets the ongoing test of time than the industrious boys and girls, men and women, who so dependably deliver the newspaper to our homes. Morning, noon, or night. Every day or every week. A.M. or P.M. Whatever the time standard may be, it's the newspaper carrier we count on to bring us the news in its most complete form: the printed word.

In 1991, as we celebrate the 50th Anniversary of International Carrier Day, we honor the many newspaper carriers in the United States and Canada... and pay tribute to their reliability and resourcefulness. They truly are the ones we count on, time after time.

Anti-drug campaign kicks off next week

Staff Report

Midland's "Proud to be . . . Drug Free," an anti-drug campaign being held in conjunction with state and national Red Ribbon campaigns, is slated for the week of Oct. 20-27.

The campaign is a project that links — via red ribbons — millions of Americans "who are convinced that the war on drugs is winnable," according to campaign organizers. Local citizens will display and wear red ribbons all week to support the fight against drugs.

The Kick-Off rally for the local campaign will be at 7 p.m. Thursday at Chaparral Center on the campus of Midland College. Troupe RTF, a Top-40 teen group from San Antonio, will begin its "Living Proof Texas Tour" by performing at the Midland Kick-Off Rally.

Also performing will be the San Jacinto Junior High School band and local cheerleading groups.

The event has been organized by the Citywide PTA Council and the local Telephone Pioneers of America, and is being sponsored by MC, Glenwood Hospital, the Midland Reporter-Telegram, the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce and Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. There is no admission fee.

"We're seeking support from businesses, community leaders, educators and anyone else interested in demonstrating their intolerance to the use of drugs," said Dave Walker, Far West Texas Pioneer Club vice president and chairman of the local Red Ribbon Campaign.

"In addition to the rally," he said, "there are a number of activities scheduled during the week. Each school has its own activities planned, parks throughout the city will be decorated with red ribbons and the Odessa High-Midland Lee football game on Oct. 25 will have a red ribbon theme."

The Red Ribbon Campaign originated in 1985 when federal drug agent Enrique Camarena was murdered by drug traffickers in Mexico. The red ribbon has become the symbol to reduce the demand for drugs.

The program is designed to establish a parent/community network to support drug-free lifestyles, Walker said. "An effective network includes all of the community, including schools, parents, youth, religious organizations, businesses, law enforcement, service organizations, the news media, medical community, social service agencies and legislators," he added.

Synchronized lights control traffic flow

By Lyn Miller

A complaint often heard by the city of Midland Traffic Department concerns traffic signals. The light either stays on too long or not long enough. In an effort to better control the timing of traffic signals, the City of Midland has installed the Traffic Signal Synchronization System on the four main arterial streets which carry the majority of traffic into and out of downtown.

In 1989, the Midland City Council approved a request by the Traffic Department to submit an application to the Texas State Department of Highways and Public Transportation for a Traffic Light Synchronization Program grant, which was awarded in December 1989.

Monies for the grant were made available by the Texas State Department of Highways and Public Transportation from the State Oil Overcharge funds.

The purpose in initiating the synchronization system was to improve arterial traffic flow, reduce fuel consumption, reduce vehicle costs, reduce air pollutants, improve safety due to smoother traffic laws, and to encourage motorists to utilize arterial streets which are designed to move traffic safely from one side of the city to the other.

The project, which began in January 1990, involved the installation and retiming of new traffic signal equipment on four arterial streets: Andrews Highway, Midkiff Road, Garfield Street and Big Spring Street. New equipment, which utilizes Time Base Coordination, was installed at 28 intersections with each unit housing a coordinator for the system.

All signal times were run through a computer program which adjusted the lengths of cycles for the traffic signals on the four arterials. The sequence of the cycles change during the day, favoring inbound traffic during the morning.

Shortly after 11 a.m., the traffic signals go into an outbound progression mode and return to the inbound mode from 12:20 p.m. to 1:30 p.m. At 4 p.m. the outbound cycle begins to aid motorists traveling home from work.

Between the peak traffic hours, the signals stay in an average mode which permits a balance of progression in both directions.

On weekdays, the signals operate in a Free mode from midnight to 6:30 a.m., and on weekends, from 2 a.m. to 6:30 a.m. according to the traffic demand.

This system has created smoother flow on the arterial streets. Likewise, traffic coming from a side street will find that while the light stays on red for a longer period of time, it will also stay green for a longer period allowing more cars to proceed through the intersection.

Adjustments to the Signal Synchronization System are being made by the traffic department as current traffic demands on the arterials are realized.

The City of Midland is concerned about the welfare of its citizens and encourages motorists to "rethink" the routes currently being taken to work and school. Take advantage of the new Signal Synchronization System by utilizing arterial streets, rather than side streets, and enjoy smoother travel time.

For questions or comments concerning the new Signal Synchronization System, contact Gary Saunders, Traffic Coordinator, at 685-7280.

Lyn Miller, an employee at City Hall, coordinates the information for this column.

Naval Academy honors Hope

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The Navy thanked Bob Hope last weekend for his 50 years of entertaining U.S. troops by naming a performing arts center after him.

Midshipmen at the U.S. Naval Academy entertained the 88-year-old comedian with a musical salute by the Academy Glee Club and the Academy Band before dedicating the new Bob Hope Performing Arts Center.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Hope called entertaining troops "the luckiest thing that ever happened to me."

"I've made great friends, great memories. And now to have an honor like this. It's hard to believe," he said.

Hope first entertained U.S. troops at March Field in California in 1941. Over the next half century, he played before troops in Europe, North Africa, Alaska, Iceland, Vietnam and the Middle East.

Hope has performed almost every Christmas for veterans and service groups, and says he has no plans to stop.

"It's really been his life," said Hope's wife, Dolores, who sang "It Had to Be You" at the dedication ceremony.

Hope has faced several close calls going to or from performances. He once arrived at a Saigon hotel minutes after a bomb exploded. He crash-landed in Australia during World War II. He was told to put on a parachute over Alaska because the pilot couldn't find a runway hidden by fog.

Michael Blake visits libraries

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michael Blake, who wrote the Academy Award-winning "Dances With Wolves," is visiting libraries in 14 cities to encourage young adults both to read and write.

His trip, which began Oct. 3 and ends Nov. 1, also will kick-off a "Words for Love" writing contest for high school students, inspired in part by Blake's second novel "Airman Mortensen" (due out this fall by Seven Wolves Publishing) which is about first love.

The contest is being supported by the publishing company. The deadline for entries is Jan. 1, and submissions should not exceed 1,500 words.

Winning works will be chosen from each of the cities Blake is visiting and will be published next spring in a book. The introduction will be by Blake, and each participating library will receive a portion of the proceeds for its young adult services and programming.

Flowing Freely

a home designed for open living

Light and spacious, this home's rooms open easily to one another, creating a sense of warmth and hospitality. The foyer is flanked by a formal dining area to the right, a sitting room (now doubling as a home office) to the left. Straight ahead there's a wide-open 20-by-25-foot living area.

For superior energy efficiency and reduced carpet wear, this builder's own home was created without hallways. Gleaming Italian tile walkways set traffic patterns, define areas and add to the sense of light-filled openness.

The formal dining area boasts picture-frame paneling and chair railing. The upper half of the walls are covered in charming, subdued floral print paper, topped by a coordinated border. (The home-office could easily become a den, a study, music room, studio — a refuge suited to the interests or lifestyle of a entire family or one of its members).

Two skylights infuse the living area with streams of sunshine. A fireplace is nestled into the wall on the left. Then the area opens into another, smaller room, which in turn opens to the back yard.

And that's where a delightful surprise awaits. A large swimming pool, inviting during warm weather months, boasts an enchanting rock fountain. Water ripples into water in a soothing cadence.

Indoors again, a right turn from the living area opens to a truly spectacular kitchen. A skylight brightens the huge room. A cooking island is located in the center, cabinets and storage space abound. Glow lights beam from above cabinet areas, urging the profusion of plants to grow. An 8-foot long table-height bar is perfect for informal meals, coffee, conversation. A large laundry area is situated off the kitchen.

Bedrooms are sequestered in three areas. The master bedroom, located to the back and left of the living area, is large, with a huge walk-in closet. The spacious bath beside it has a sunken jacuzzi tub, a 5-foot-by-5-foot separate shower, vanity with double sink and plenty of storage space.

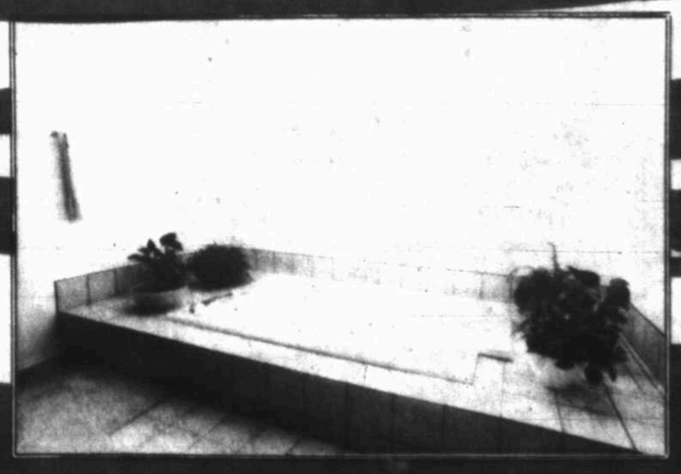

Either a right or left from the foyer ultimately will lead to an area with two bedrooms and a bath. This makes a total of three, quite separate sleeping areas and a total of five bedrooms and three baths.

Other amenities include a three-car garage, stereo system, sprinkler system, water purifier, insulated windows and outside storage. Also, pan ceilings and ceiling fans throughout, a dog run separate from the pool area, garage door opener.

The home is being offered by Don Harvey Realtors for $168,500.

Community welcomes long-awaited CAF

It was billed as "THE Airsho You've Waited 50 Years For." That may be, but it was certainly THE Airsho Midland had waited over two years for, ever since the visionary Ed Jones and Joe Mabee asked, "Since the CAF has to move anyway because of the Harlingen Airport expansion, why doesn't it move to Midland?"

There were a lot of players in the recruitment of this internationally recognized organization; our weather, the available space and the old Windecker facility, Mayor Carroll Thomas and a far-sighed city council, the Chamber of Commerce led first by chairman Steve Davidson then, certainly a privilege and an honor, by myself, and finally, the energetic, enthusiastic citizenry of Midland itself.

It's been fun and challenging as co-chair of the Grand Opening Committee with Bobby Holt, to be a part of Midland's welcome to the CAF and we've been delighted to be able to give office space and phones at Langston North to the volunteer CAF Hotline and Information Center.

Finally, "THE Airsho 91" was and is everything we expected it to be, as were the other opening festivities: the USO Dinner Dance and the Runway Memories fashion show: exciting, nostalgic, fun, exhausting, informative and jam-packed! West Texans really came through in welcoming and suporting the CAF, and I'm sure we'll all be back out again today. See you there!

An extra big thanks is deserved by all of our associates for the by far and away number one spot they earned in September's MLS sales statisties, Langston Realtors assisted in the sale of 60 properties, 40 percent of the month's total sales. And, with our wonderfully low interest rates, the incoming ARCO transferees, plus the normal "before-the-holidays" moves by in-towners, business continues to be very active. Now is a good time for anyone considering buying or selling to make their move! We hope you will call me or one of our 45 sales associates today.

Can Do!

Would you like to buy a home, but don't know where to begin? Do you have dreams of a special style or qualities you would like to find in your next home, but are unsure how to locate just the right place?

Choose a real estate agent with a "can do" attitude, and the perfect home can be yours. What is a "can do" attitude? It is a combination of three valuable personal traits- desire, willingness to work, and commitment.

No matter what kind, size or style home you would like to purchase, it exists, somewhere in your community. Locating the right home, and making it possible for you to own it, becomes much easier when you are assisted by an agent who knows how to make dreams come true.

Start with desire. If the agent you choose has a strong belief system, which includes achieving your objectives, you are more likely to encounter just the right home. An agent who believes in serving your needs will be dedicated to the hours, days or weeks of hard work required.

The agent's willingness to work is vital to the successful completion of your purchase. He or she will likely spend over two hours behind-the-scenes uncovering needed information about available homes for each hour spent in your presence. This represents many unpaid hours if the time spent does not result in the satisfaction of your housing requirements.

Committment is the final ingredient of a "can do" attitude. The agent must be willing to "keep on keeping on" until your purchase is complete. All details must be attended to, all requirements met.

Before beginning the actual search for your next home, identify the agent with the "can do" attitude. This highly knowledgeable individual can assist you by locating the right home, answering your questions, and providing mortgage information.

Don't look for your home without first locating the right agent. Can do!

If you'd like to purchase a home, but feel "out-of-touch" with what's happening in real estate, give us a call today or drop by our office.

How long does it take?
The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the distributorship. Collecting in person will be necessary though!
When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday, Sunday and holidays.
Do I ever get a day off?

RANDY'S TIPS ON SMOOTHER HOME SALES...

Typical everyday occurance in real estate: Seller signs contract with prospective buyer at either a reduced price or with a generous repair allowance subject to a home inspection. Inspection is ordered and there are several items that need replaced or repaired. Seller is shocked to hear that since his home is under contract, he can longer do those repairs (although some are very minor and he is capable) he is not a licensed repairman and the fine print of his contract prohibits that he be his own handyman. The labor charges add up in a hurry and suddenly the contract is in jeopardy because the contractual repair limit is not enough to cover the actual repairs by licensed repairmen. Avoid this problem when selling your home, call today and have your home inspected prior to committing to a sales contract. This allows you to do those repairs and save headaches and money later.

Gas dispute

SANTA FE — Officials of Meridian Oil have told New Mexico legislators that a state study linking the company to depressed natural gas prices is incorrect.

Meridian president Don Clayton said the New Mexico Land Office failed to use correct data in an analysis of the state's gas industry.

Clayton said the cause of low natural gas prices is a glut of natural gas from Canada, which is being imported by California utilities.

Those utilities have a "monopolistic" control over gas entering the large California market, he said.

Meridian is the largest producer of coal seam natural gas, which is produced from coal beds primarily in the San Juan Basin in northwest New Mexico.

A federal tax credit available to coal seam gas producers has made producing the gas more profitable, Clayton said.

But, he said, the tax credit is not responsible for the oversupply of natural gas in the United States.

Clayton appeared before the Legislative Finance Committee, which is looking into natural gas prices and wanted to question Meridian officials about the Land Office report.

Assistant Land Commissioner Gary Carlson defended the Land Office report, saying the data was accurate but may have attributed more production to Meridian than the company actually produced.

Prices up

Oil prices this week continued a slight climb upward, moving past $23. Prices are over 80 cents higher than last week and analysts say a concern over over supplies is the reason for continuing improvement. Oil prices this week were highest since early days of Gulf War. A year ago oil prices were $40.40, the highest mark in the conflict.

Guerrero ethics blasted

■ Williamson questions Guerrero fundraiser on night before crucial hearing.

By John Paul Pitts

Williamson

Barry Williamson, republican candidate for the Texas Railroad Commission, has blasted current TRC Chairman Lena Guerrero ethical judgement, for soliciting contribution from the oil and gas industry the day before a critical hearing.

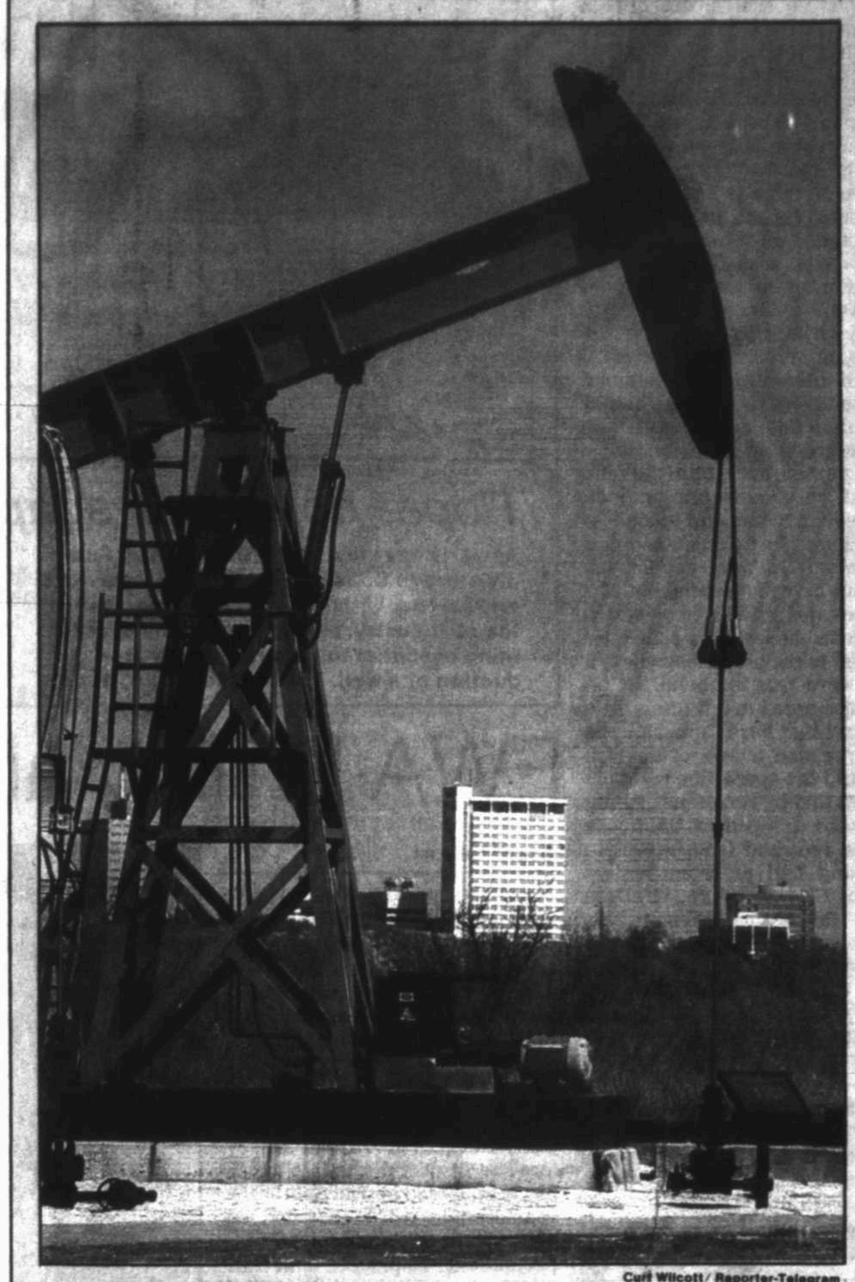

Williamson said it was wrong for Guerrero, to solialize and solicit funds from oil industry members the night before presiding over crucial hearings to amend natural gas proration rules.

A main item on the hearing agenda, in which Midland gas consultant Hans Hansen testified for the Permian Basin Petroleum Association was natural gas proration to correct market imbalances. Proration has the potential to substantially improve natural gas prices.

Williamson, a former energy official in the Bush Administration, said that Guerrero raised over $500,000 in campaign funds from oil and gas producers at a fund-raiser at the Four Seasons Hotel the night before the hearing began.

Said Williamson: "It's wrong for regulators to tie their fundraising so close to their regulatory activities. It's more than coincidence the fundraiser was scheduled the night before hearings that

Over 1500 tracts of University Lands, some previously unavailable for lease, are set to go on the market, and bids are due early next month.

The Board for Lease of University Lands says it is now seeking nominations for tracts to be offered in a sealed bid oil and gas lease sale scheduled for May 1992.

Wallie Gravitt, manager of University Lands, oil, gas and minerals interests in Midland, said that "any acreage located on Permanent University Fund lands not already leased is available."

Natural gas gains favor worldwide

■ In a maintenance mode in the U.S., natural gas is becoming the fuel of choice worldwide.

Staff Report

HOUSTON — Natural gas is becoming the fuel of choice worldwide, creating significant new investment opportunities for the U.S. natural gas industry, JOFREE Corp., Chairman Carl Freedenthal told Natural Gas Week's Eighth Annual Fall Symposium yesterday.

"Due to low prices and the current excess of deliverability, the American natural gas industry is in a maintenance mode," Freedenthal said. "But on an international level, it's a different story. Worldwide, natural gas is experiencing excellent growth, with gas supplying approximately 30% of the world's energy requirement. Demand has increased by 4 to 5 percent in recent years.

Freedenthal pointed our that natural gas prices in every country except the U.S., Mexico and Canada are close to parity with crude oil – at about $3.60 per million British Thermal Units (MMBtu) in

JOHN PAUL PITTS

Old wildcatters were a special breed

Pitts

"A special breed," is the phrase often used to describe pioneer wildcatters.

Not exactly trite, it is a phrase froth with accuracy. There was indeed, a rugged, go-for-broke, down-to-earth charm and quality about the old "wildcatters" that is missing from this generation of polished financial types and fresh-faced college boys who build oil companies by buying and selling production. And we can only wonder if 50 years from now, they will be telling stories about their exploits.

To say that we owe these old wildcatters a debt of gratitude would be a gross understatement. There is no telling how many tens of thousands of paychecks have been written in the Permian Basin as a direct result of the early efforts of the wildcatters.

But alas they are a vanishing breed. It would be futile to try and name them all, but Ford Chapman, who passed away this week, was one of the old wildcatters, and his life and style typifies this vanishing breed.

He started to work as a floor hand on a cable tool rig justy a few years after Santa Rita blew in, and was eventually able to buy his own drilling rig. Like most wildcatters of that day, he lived with his back to a financial wall and his nose to the grind stone.

Ford Chapman once told me of going for days without sleep, of pulling two 12 hour towers in a row, when a hand didn't show up. Often, he said, his only hot meal for days would be a can of pork n beans, wired to the exhaust manifold of his pickup and heated while driving from rig to rig.

Never having enough money, he spent much of his early drilling career on the financial edge, juggling bills, bartering and begging for more time.

But somehow, he survived adversity and financial set backs and went on to make some of the most significant oil discoveries in the Permian Basin, finding oil where it had not been found before and becoming a tremendously wealthy man in the process.

Just hours after he died, I visited with his wife Geraldine Ford. She said he seemed to love to get his back to he wall, because of the challenge. "He had to find a way to survive," she said.

She recalled: "Once we broke down, high in the mountains, and he was just like a little kid, because it was an adventure and challenge to find a way out. What kind of man would act that way?"

I counted it an honor to have known Ford Chapman and counted him as a friend. He was one of the first people I met when I came to Midland in 1975. I had come over from Pecos to do interviews for an Oil Progress Edition.

Already a legend in the business at that time, I had expected to get only the standard ten-question courtesy interview. But that was not to be the case.

From the start, we hit it off very well — perhaps because our political stripes matched and our roots were deep in West Texas. We talked on for the better part of two hours, about politics, the oilpatch, Wink, football. The ten a.m. interview dragged on into lunch and then we adjourned to the Blue Star Inn for another hour. Afterwards he took me to his home to inspect his state-of-the-art dark room and photographic equipment and that took another hour.

When he learned that I would be spending the night at one of the local motels, he invited me to spend the night at his house. But I declined to stretch his hospitality that far.

All the time I am thinking to myself: "Does he really know that I am just grunt reporter, or does he have me confused with somebody important."

But I was to learn that was just Ford Chapman. Over the years I have heard countless similar versions of his hospitality and generosity. Totally unpretentious, social status and financial rank played no part in his choice of friends, if he liked you, he liked you and that was that. You had a friend forever.

One of those he befriended in the early fifties was a young, not-so-important oilfield salesman in Odessa by the name of George Bush.

On news of Ford Chapman's death, Midland oilman Bobby Holt, a friend and confidant to President Bush, immediately called the White House to inform the President.

"Ford Chapman was a very special friend of the President," said Holt. "He asks about him frequently, and fondly remembers him as the seasoned oilman who took a young oilfield salesman from the East under his wing and taught him some of the ropes."

Politics probably played a role in the bonding. Both Bush and Ford were ardent Republicans at a time when there was only a handful of republicans in West Texas. "When we lived in Pecos, there were only two other republicans, besides Ford, and they were considered odd balls by the towns people," said his sister Mrs. J.V. Hardwick.

If Bush is credited with founding the Republican party in Midland, Ford Chapman can be credited with spreading the seeds of Republicanism throughout the Permian Basin.

"He would go into a town, rent a building, put up a banner and call a news conference to proclaim that the Republican Party had come to Marfa, or wherever." said Geraldine Ford. "He did that all across West Texas."

Ed Thompson, former executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association worked closely with Chapman who served two terms as president of the assoication. He remembers him as somewhat of a contradiction and very able.

"He was a very sweet man, if we can use that word to describe Ford Chapman, but he could be as tough as seven acres of jalapenos when he had to."

When it came to testifying before Congress, as he often did, Thompson said Chapman could match wits with Washington's best. "For an old jar head, he did very well."

Betty Orbeck, archivist for the Petroleum Museum, conducted 25 hours of interviews with Chapman and like others remembers him as a contradiction and a man who truly appreciated his friends.

She remembers once, as he worked on a museum project, hearing him comment to one of his drillers: "Just think Krebbs, a 100 years from now, people will come out here and read about us."

Orbeck described him as a self-made man, honest to a flaw. "He belonged to the old school where a man's word was his bond."

She also noted that it was a little know fact that Ford Chapman was a cultured man, a lover of classical music and the opera. She recounts the story told by two of his drilling hands who dropped by the house after he returned from a visit to China and had to listen to two hours of Chinese opera. "He was anxous for us to listen to his newest opera," said one of the hands.

Said Orbeck: "I think the only way to describe him, is simply to say that he belonged to a special breed."

Rope, dope and soap

An early day view of the Continental Supply store in Odessa. Supply stores played a critical role in the early development of the oil industry, selling practically everything essential to the drilling and production of a well. The phrase "rope, dope and soap" was used to describe the merchandise of early stores, which also served as a social center where oilfield hands would meet to chat. The store manager usually lived above the store, shown here, and was available 24 hours a day.

Sun moving pipeline unit offices

■ A plan to save Sun Co. $100 million a year will result in the company moving pipeline operations to Philadelphia.

TULSA (AP) — Sun Co. will move the headquarters of its wholly-owned pipeline subsidiary from Tulsa to Philadelphia as part of a restructuring plan aimed at saving the company $100 million a year.

Joe Swift, president of Sun Pipe Line Co., said Monday the move will take place early next year and affect about 30 positions in Tulsa.

Sun Pipe Line's Southwest Area office in Longview, Texas, will consolidate with the Mid-Continent Area office in Tulsa, spokeswoman Lynne Butterworth said.

The new office, located in Tulsa, will manage about 4,200 miles of pipelines in Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas.

Sun Co. also is moving its corporate headquarters from Radnor, Penn., to downtown Philadelphia under a restructuring plan announced last week that will eliminate 900 positions, including 125 in Tulsa.

FWA Drilling announces restructuring

Staff Report

FWA Drilling Co. Inc. has announced a corporate restructuring which includes closing its operations in Oklahoma and West Virginia, streamlining its organization in Texas and reducing its fleet of 39 land rigs to a total of 26 rigs.

FWA, which now operates exclusively in Texas, remains headquartered in Wichita Falls with district offices in Midland and Tyler. The district office in Victoria has been closed and all South Texas operations will be handled out of the Midland office. A total of 16 permanent employees will ultimately be terminated, including seven in Oklahoma, four each in West Virginia and Victoria and one in Wichita Falls.

Following the planned sale of its surplus rigs, FWA will operate a total of 18 rigs out of Midland and eight out of Tyler. Four Oklahoma-based rigs will be relocated to Texas, two each to Midland and Tyler.

FWA President Tommy L. Knowles said, "This restructuring is in response to the difficult environment which persists in the domestic contract drilling industry. We've been operating in Texas for over 50 years, and we plan to continue being a key player here for the long haul. These actions make us a stronger, more efficient ongoing concern and enhance our ability to provide quality, reliable services in the Texas markets where we have historically performed well."

FWA is a component of the USX-Marathon Group, a unit of USX Corp.

ETHICS: Guerrero blasted

(From 1E)

He noted, that this was exactly the kind of behavior that undermined public confidence in the integrity of elected officials. "It appears that in the 'New Texas,' democrats like Lena have no ethnical problem with putting political pressure on the people they regulate."

Williamson asked: "What could oil and gas people say when Lena put the arm on them the day before she presides over a crucial hearing? And I expect she'll put the arm on a few to defend her unseemly conduct."

Guerrero defended her timing of the fundraiser and hearing, saying it was the only time she could get on Governor Ann Richard's busy schedule, but Williamson called it a "lame excuse, and an appalling lack of judgement."

"It's like a judge looking over his or her docket, seeing who will appear in court the next day, and hitting them up for campaign contributions," said Williamson.

He said that the Commissioners have a special responsibility to avoid the appearance of impropriety.

"Other state officials seem to recognize this. The Attorney General doesn't hold fundraisers soliciting business people, the day before a major anti-trust conference, and the Comptroller doesn't hold fundraisers soliciting corporate tax officials the day before issuing tax regulations."

Williamson said Guerrero's action was improper and the appearance unethical and called upon her to return every contribution, and allow an independent, outside review of the funds solicited.

"Return the money, clean the slate and stop leaning on the people you regulate," Williamson said in a response to Guerrero's explanation.

GAS: Gains world favor

(From 1E)

"There are four primary producing areas for potential growth internationally," Freedenthal said. "These include the Soviet Union, which has approximately 40% of the world's economically recoverable natural gas reserves, Asia, Latin America, and Africa. In both Latin America and Africa, much of the growth will come through development of liquefied natural gas (LNG).

"There are several exciting new projects on the drawing boards such as construction of a pipeline from Algeria to Spain," he continued. "There has also been talk of supplying gas from the Soviet Union to Japan and other Asian countries."

LANDS: Bid deadline near ed parties should be getting bids in order. The deadline is November 15 at 5 p.m., and nominations must be sent to P.O. Drawer 553, Midland Tecas 79702-0553, or delivered to 808 W. Wall.

He added that there is also a list of tracts located in Andrews, Crane, Ector and Pecos counties also available for nomination. These tracts had been unavailable for several years because of litigation, and advises that nominations be designated as to order of preference.

Gravitt said the provision for reduced royalties has been well recieved, but its impact probably would not be known until the sale in May.

The new lease sale terms call for reduced royalties based on production.

Lease terms approved by the board are five-year primary term, advance rentals of $5 per acre per year for years two and three, and $10 per acre per year for years four and five and a 25 percent royalty on oil and gas.

The 25 percent royalty will be reduced to 20 percent if production of oil or gas in paying quantities is established within the first 18 months of the lease term. This validates the 20 percent royalty rate for the entire lease and for the life of the lease.

The royalty will be reduced to 22.5 percent of production of oilor gas in paying quantities is established within the second 18 months (19-36th month) of the lease. This validates the 22.5 percent royalty rate for the entire lease and for the life of the lease.

The 25 percent royalty will be in effect for leases where production of oil or gas in paying quantities is established after the 36th month of the lease term or after the expiration of a valid dry hole extension for the second 18 months.

A dry hole and extension provision will also be in effect for royalty considerations. If one or more dry holes are completed on the lease, royalties can still be earned.

If an additional well or wells are commenced within the first 18 months, and by virtue of a 90-day extension, if needed, the production of oil or gas inpaying quantities is established by the end of the 21st month of the lease term, it brings a 20 percent royalty.

Mathewson

Dr. Christopher C. Mathewson will be the guest speaker at the Wednesday meeting of the Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists, at the Midland Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Dr. Mathewson will speak on "Registration for Geologists and the Regulation of the Geologic Profession."

He notes that the changing world has provided numerous metamorphic events in geology, one of which is the movement toward the registration of geologists and the regulation of the profession. The justification is to certify a minimum level of competence to protect the health, safety and welfare of the public. Registration of engineers and others that directly affect the public is obvious. The work of some geologists directly affects the public; others only study natural phenomena. Registration should be possible for all geologists; those whose work does not impact the public should be exempt. This objective has been met in the Suggested Geologist Registration Act adopted by the Council of Professional Geologists.

He is director, Center for Engineering Geosciences, Texas A&M University and holds a doctorate in geological engineering from the University of Arizona.

Oil traders try to handicap weather

By Dirk Beveridge

NEW YORK (AP) — It's almost the season when Mother Nature can shake the oil market as hard as rumors of an ayatollah's death, so traders are dusting off The Old Farmer's Almanac and tuning into the long-range forecasts.

At the New York Mercantile Exchange, futures contracts in home heating oil are the most vulnerable to fluctuations, or predictions of fluctations, in the weather.

Sudden cold snaps, like the one in December 1989, can send prices higher, but warmish weather can push them down.

Of course, forecasting the weather is often like forecasting a roll of the dice, as anybody who regularly watches television weathercasters can attest.

But that doesn't deter oil traders, who thrive on price movements that can lead to millions of dollars being won or lost in minutes. To them, figuring the weather is an important seasonal ritual.

"You look at five-day, 10-day forecasts, but beyond that it's unpredictable," said Thomas P. Blakeslee, an energy analyst at Pegasus Econometric Group Inc., in Hoboken, N.J.

Still, traders will try to seek out the long-term trends, though it's often hard to tell how seriously they take the effort.

Some traders think that since the past two winters have been largely mild, a cold one is due. Others think the greenhouse effect will keep things warmer.

Tales abound of traders who look out the window and see snow falling in New York City, then stock up on heating oil, regardless of what is happening elsewhere in the weather. Such trading can jolt the market, even moving other energy futures, although the effect is usually brief, analysts say.

"It might have a psychological effect with the locals," said Jorge Pinon, vice president at Bear Stearns Energy Services in Houston.

The "locals" are floor traders in New York who attempt to make quick money by speculating on short-run price movements.

They often try to buy heating oil before snow comes in, on the theory that the price will rise once the snow arrives and they can sell out at a profit, said David Gabriel, trading manager for Northeast Petroleum, a division of Cargill Investor Services in the Boston suburb of Chelsea.

"A couple of times last year, it was forecast to snow so they bought it a day before," Gabriel said. "Then, when it snowed, they sold it."

Sometimes that strategy backfires, when everybody buys heating oil before the snowfall and nobody wants any once they see the flakes, he said.

It could also be that oil market analysts use snowfall as the explanation for buying that has already taken place. Some experts doubt too many traders actually let the sight of snow prompt their buying.

"They don't have to look out of the window and say, 'Here's snow. I better start buying oil.' They look at the forecasts," said John Lichtblau, chairman of the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation in New York.

Chicago commodity traders constantly keep track of the weather, adjusting their focus in the summer to grains from the Midwest and in the winter to southern products such as orange juice and cotton. In the oil market, weather-watching is more of a winter phenomenon.

Some trading houses, including Minneapolis-based Cargill, have staff meterologists who spend most of their time helping agricultural commodities traders. About now, though, they also are passing on their weather wisdom to oil traders.

Gabriel said the in-house forecast is one of several he keeps track of, although it focuses more on the Corn Belt than the heating oil region.

But Victor Yu, vice president of futures for Refco Inc.'s Nikkhah Energy Group in New York, says he relied extensively on in-house weather forecasts when he used to work for Cargill.

"They would send us the daily weather predictions for the Northeast, so we could figure what that would do for heating oil demand," Yu said.

Oil traders also keep an eye out for hurricanes in the Gulf of Mexico, because they have the potential for damaging vital oil facilities, Yu said. A well-placed hurricane could send petroleum futures skyrocketing by causing supply disruptions, traders believe, so they'll stay on the lookout until hurricane season ends in late November.

"When Hurricane Gilbert was going to the Gulf Coast, we tried to map it out and decide where it would make landfall," Yu said. "We were probably about 100 miles off."

Some oil traders also keep copies of The Old Farmer's Almanac on hand for a quick reference on long-term trends, he said.

"They say, 'Well, the Farmer's Almanac is calling for temperatures to be two degrees colder than normal,'" Yu said. "I don't know if people really believe it. It's almost at the joke stage, actually."

API predicts decline in production

Staff Report

WASHINGTON — As the demand for natural gas increases into the next century, so will domestic production and overall U.S. supply, according to a study released today by the American Gas Assocation.

"In general, it's our assessment that the outlook is favorable for natural gas supply over the next 20 years," said Tenneco Gas Chairman and CEO RObert Thomas, head of A.G.A.'s Gas Supply Committee.

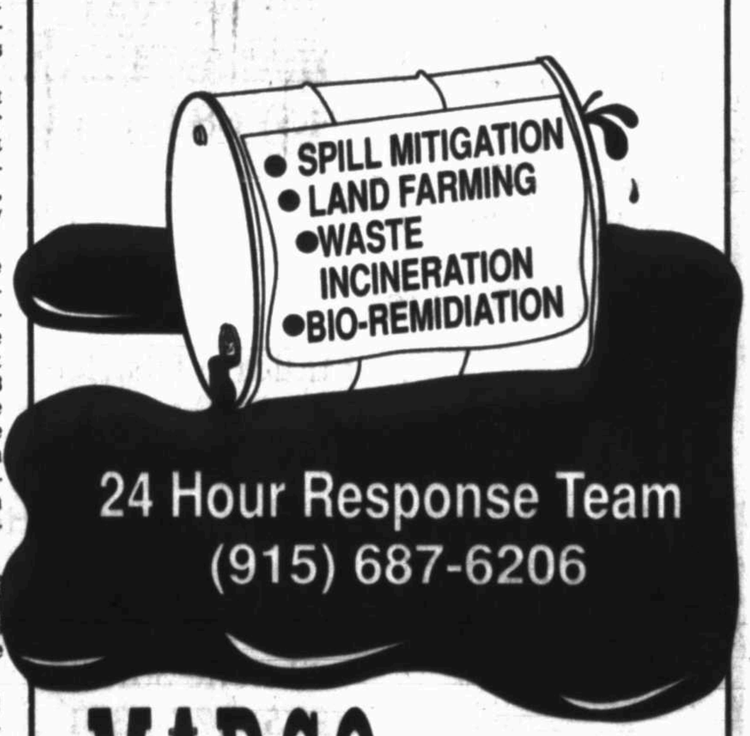

According to the report, The Gas Energy Supply Outlook 1991-2010, the available natural gas supply for the year 2010 should be between 20.4 trillion cubic feet (Tcf) and 22.3 Tcf, with 17.3 to 18 Tcf being produced within the lower 48 states. The rest of the supply will include imports from Canada, a small percentage of liquid natural gas shipped from abroad and may include contributions from Alaska.

"Natural has production in the lower 48 states is our nation's most important source of natural gas and will continue to be into the next century," Thomas said.

The outlook also listed several factors to support its supply projections, including a flexible transportation system composed of more than 1 million miles of underground pipeline. It already is capable of delivering amounts of natural gas energy that are greater than what is now delivered throughout the nation, the report said, with additional expansions planned or already underway.

Fina wants to sell pipeline subsidiary

DALLAS (AP) — Fina Inc. says it wants to sell its crude oil pipeline subsidiary, Fin-Tex Pipeline Co., by the end of the year.

Fin-Tex has a deepwater terminal and tank farm in the Gulf of Mexico near Corpus Christi, two 37-mile pipelines to Refugio and a 384-mile pipeline between Refugio and Crane County. The latter pipeline includes eight pump stations and 117 miles of gathering pipeline at five sites.

"The sale is being considered because Fina plans to concentrate its ownership of crude pipelines in areas that directly support the supply and tranpsortation functions for refining operations," said Michael J. Couch, Fina's vice president.

Hunt Oil sees victory in fight with Arabian Shield

DALLAS (AP) — Hunt Oil Co. says it is near victory in a four-year, $1 billion dispute with another Dallas company over rights to the giant oil field that made Yemen a major energy producer.

The Texas Supreme Court last week denied an appeal in the case by plaintiff Arabian Shield Development Co.

Arabian Shield had alleged that Hunt Oil in 1981 acted wrongfully to deprive it of an exclusive contract to explore and produce oil and gas in a 3.1 million acre tract of Yemen.

Hunt Oil chairman Ray Hunt, in a written statement, blasted the lawsuit and Arabian Shield, which filed it in 1987.

Pickens touts CNG autos

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — T. Boone Pickens, saying that big oil companies have everything to gain from selling natural gas to motorists, is calling for more service stations to offer gas in addition to gasoline.

Pickens, a Dallas businessman, is chairman of the Natural Gas Vehicle Coalition and powers his Cadillac with natural gas pumped from a compressor at his home.

"Although six major oil companies now have token natural gas refueling facilities, I'm skeptical about their long-term commitment," Pickens said in remarks prepared for delivery to the California Drive for Energy Security conference.

Pickens said the major oil companies have 60 percent of the nation's natural gas.

"My challenge to them is this: prove me wrong. Install natural gas refueling pumps nationwide," he said.

Pickens, general partner of Mesa Limited Partnership, also called on the White House to convert its vehicle fleet to natural gas.

"By getting behind natural gas, the administration can literally showcase this abundant domestic resource as the fuel of the future," Pickens said.

Gas expert discusses Canadian gas rules

Staff Report

CALGARY, ALBERTA — Will the Alberta government assume responsibility for stabilizing the North American price for natural gas by restricting supply? That was the question posed by JO-FREE Corp., President William A. Johnson at the Canadian Energy Research Institute's Tenth International Oil and Gas Markets Conference.

Johnson said he believes any effort by the Alberta government to adopt a role similiar to that of the Texas Railroad Commission in the 1970's, when it set U.S. oil prices through market demand prorationing, will be doomed to failure. He said he also believes that suggestions that the Alberta government work with U.S. state agencies to stabilize process would not work due to the prevailing surplus of delieverability in the U.S. and Canada and the likelihood that higher prices for natural gas would only elicit more production in those in those states and provices that don't belong to the cartel. Such an arrangement, he pointed out, could also violate U.S. antitrust laws.

Johnson said the U.S. government's special tax credits for coal bed methqne and tight sands gas are causing serious problems for the industry by further depressing prices. "Because these sources of gas are relatively expensive to develop and produce, the tax incentive was thought necessary by Congress to provide a sufficient profit motive so that producers would invest in them," he said. "The Congress has succeeded beyond its wildest dreams."

Johnson stated that the subsidy is a violation of the spirit, if not the letter, of the Free Trade Amendment with Canada.

DANGEROUS COUNTRY

Text and photos by Bill Modisett

GLENCOE, N.M. — As the sun climbed above the foothills of the Sacramento Mountains, showering the valley with warm rays of light, the grizzled old cook rolled the ball of dough out thin and taking a knife, deftly sliced it into narrow strips. He was making a cobbler and he peered at the hazy mountains surrounding his location, wondering when the riders would return.

He had pulled the chuck wagon over a small rise, just up from where the Rio Ruidoso gurgles its meandering way southeastward. This was dangerous country, he thought. Dangerous country.

The Kid had ridden through this valley hundreds of times and hidden out here. Billy the Kid, sometimes called William H. Bonney. And Dick Brewer, Tom O'Folliard, Charlie Bowdre and George Coe, too. Trouble stalked these hills.

A young Englishman, John H. Tunstall, had been shot down in cold blood because he challenged a band of outlaws that operated in the Pecos Valley, out on the Plains to the east of here, and the corrupt sheriff of Lincoln County, William Brady, who protected them, and that grievous act sparked what came to be known as the Lincoln County War.

The cook sadly shook his head as the thoughts ran through his mind. Lincoln County had been torn by violence, but it seemed at peace now as the sun was melting the morning chill.

They came from Colorado, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Tennessee, Oregon, Wyoming, California, Utah, Arizona, Louisiana and, of course, from Texas to celebrate an era, but it

Love and fantasy merge in Michael Elliot Brill's "The Masque of Beauty and the Beast."

"It's about unquestioning love that goes beyond physical beauty. The core of the play is not just the story of love between Beast and Beauty, but it's also about the beauty's love for her father," said Rene Brister Chambers, director of the Pickwick Players, Midland Community Theatre's youth performing troupe.

"Her sisters are pretty much the villain of the piece," said Ms. Chambers, who also is MCT's Educational Theater Director. "Her sisters are kind of the opposite of Beast. They're beautiful on the outside, and they are ugly on the inside. They're envious of her. They try to foil everything."

Ms. Chambers found the play's title intriguing.

"Masque means dance. I think it's almost a double meaning showing the poetic nature of the show by the language of the title. The language of the play is just beautiful."

The play is written in verse, which has presented additional challenges to the Pickwicks.

"They've learned a lot with it. They've had to learn to ignore the verse and go beyond and understand the meaning of the lines. And they're doing a good job."

The plays is presented with a narrator, who bridges from one scene to the next, and some special creatures, called grotesque, who help

DANGER: Symposium protects a heritage

was more than that. There were 7,500 in all. Some pulled flatbed trailers hauling restored 19th century chuckwagons. Others pulled horse trailers carrying their prized mounts. They competed in the roping at Tully's Arena, and entertained each other with cowboy poetry and songs. When the sun finally slipped behind the mountains to the west, they danced to the music of Johnny Gimble and the Former Playboys.

This was the 2nd Annual Old Lincoln County Cowboy Symposium, benefitting the Anne C. Stradling Museum of the Horse in Ruidoso, 12 miles up the valley from Glencoe, and the National Center for the Western Horse in Lincoln County. Ruidoso, of course, knows that the horse in another way is its claim to fame.

Glencoe sits along U.S. 70 at a point where the Great Plains of eastern New Mexico begin to rise in brushy foothills of the Sacramento Mountains. Lincoln, the tiny community that bears the name of the county that was named to honor Honest Abe, the 16th president of the United States, sits down the road to the east a few miles and up an adjoining valley watered by the Rio Bonito. It's a community — and a region — steeped in history and the lore of the West.

In "The Tragic Days of Billy the Kid," Frazier Hunt had described the situation that existed in southeastern New Mexico in the 1880's:

"The vast area had been left to the raiding Apaches and Comanches during the long generations of the Spanish and Mexican rule. The American conquest of 1846, followed by the Civil War, had brought in a few bold cattlemen. It was the attraction of their herds and the isolated security offered to outlaws, which a decade later served as a magnet to the gunfighters and killers who were run out of western Texas and Indian Territory, Colorado, Arizona and even old Mexico. Sprawling Lincoln County, and particularly the Pecos River area, was a haven to them...."

Today tourists can walk around behind John H. Tunstall's store in Lincoln and see two wooden crosses marking the graves of Tunstall and Alexander A. McSween, who along with cattleman John Chisum fought a corrupt political machine. Tunstall and McSween died in the Lincoln County War. Historical markers note sites throughout the region where particular events occurred, but they do not tell the entire story.

Authoritative books such as Hunt's and Robert M. Utley's "Billy the Kid: A Short and Violent Life," published in 1989 following the author's extensive research at the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library in Midland, shed more light on the real story of the Lincoln County War.

At the start of the war, wrote Hunt, "It probably didn't take the Kid long to figure out that the old-fashioned cattle feud was spreading out beyond the valley of the Pecos and swiftly turning into a dangerous war between two groups of powerful men, with the business and political control of Lincoln County as the prize." Billy went to work for John Tunstall, a man he respected and admired. But even Billy's presence could not prevent Tunstall from being killed by a posse of outlaws deputized by Sheriff Brady.

Utley wrote, "The killing of Tunstall touched off the Lincoln County War. None of the Englishman's supporters believed that he had been murdered while resisting arrest. Rather, they were certain that he had been murdered in cold blood by (Jimmy) Dolan gunmen masquerading as officers of the law...."

Frazier Hunt further addressed the "war" atmosphere noting, "The Kid rode into Lincoln County at the high moment of change which sooner or later came to every western frontier: the moment of growing-up; the moment when lawlessness and disorder, and crooked courts and illegal "rings" were finally compelled to give way before the forces of law and order, and the phenomenon called progress."

The Kid participated in the violence of the Lincoln County War, fighting with a group that became known as the Regulators. Utley wrote, "The true Billy the Kid, of course, was not any of the personifications of legend. Yet he possessed traits that in varying measure appeared in them all. He was a killer and an outlaw, though hardly on the scale represented by legend...."

After his death at Fort Sumner at the hands of Pat Garrett, Billy the Kid's reputation grew at the hands of what Utley calls the "pulp writers." Utley adds, "Except in its final months, therefore, the Kid's career did not measure up to his reputation. Although a superb gunman and arresting personality, he was a quite ordinary outlaw, of uncertain commitment, narrow practice, and ambiguous purpose. In truth, he seems to have had no particular purpose at all, but rather youth's penchant for submerging long-term goals in the pleasures of the moment. After the Lincoln County War, during the months of his reputed outlawry, he was a drifter psychologically as well as geographically.

"Even so, in the flesh and in legend, Billy the Kid embodies the frontier's affinity for violence. He also stands for much more, however, as evidenced by his steadfast appeal to generation after generation."

That appeal is what brought 7,500 people to Glencoe Oct. 3-6 to the Ruidoso Downs Super Select Sales Pavilion. That and the fascination with an earlier time, a way of life viewed by many as cleaner, more honest and virtuous.

Those who attended sprang from the Western heritage — they were ranchers, cowboys, Western enthusiasts. They listened to country music, poetry and browsed through the sales barn looking at the wares numerous artisans were offering for sale. It was the cowboy and his way of life that was on display here.

The way of life was epitomized by the 13 cowboy legends honored at this year's event, including seven-time World's Champion calf roper Toots Mansfield of Big Spring.

On Sunday morning, in the cowboy church service, Gene Grassie, a Church of Christ minister from Dexter, N.M. praised the activities of the cowboy symposium, noting "it's allowing us to protect a heritage that is important."

It was obvious that those present agreed with Grassie.

BEAUTY: Play is retelling of an old fairy tale

tell the story, Ms. Chambers said.

"They perform the magic of the transformations," Ms. Chambers said. "Their movement is somewhere between mime and dance. They do things like magically bring food and clothing to the merchant and to Beauty. In one scene, they are statues in the garden of the Beast.

"They help the audience understand a little bit about how Beast became Beast."

"The Masque of Beauty and the Beast" is a retelling of an old tale, Ms. Chambers said.

"It's a traditional telling of the fairy tale 'Beauty and the Beast.' It's not condescending to children. It's written so both children and adults can really enjoy it.

"And 'Beauty and the Beast' has such an universal theme — that you don't judge people by appearance, but by what's inside of them."

The play is presented from Beauty's perspective.

Kendra Alvey, a senior member of Pickwicks, plays the role of the Beauty.

Miss Alvey, the daughter of Jean and Larry Alvey, is a junior at Lee High School. Her favorite subject is Oral Interpretation, which is competitive drama.

"I'm always the evil character," said Miss Alvey. "I've never had a character like Beauty before. It's something really different.

"I get to use a lot of my own voice. It's a nice break. It's a lot easier than a lot of stuff I've done before. Emotionally, it's harder. I have to cry a lot."

Miss Alvey traces her interest in theater back to when she was 3-years-old.

"I came to the theater, and I saw 'Snoopy,' and I told my mom I wanted to be a Pickwick. Every year my parents would take me to different plays. I was really impressed. When I got old enough to try out, I tried out, and I've been involved ever since."

Miss Alvey, who was born in Carlsbad, N.M., has been a Pickwick through several MCT children's theater directors.

Ms. Chambers, finds it "exciting to train Pickwicks." She said, "They keep me young."

Currently, the average age in the 43-member troupe is 15. Ms. Chambers credits the membership, which she notes as the largest in years, to the recognition the troupe received for its trip to New Zealand and the quality of the organization.

"People want to be a part of a winner, a good thing," Ms. Chambers said.

The program includes class three hours a week. In their class work, students study acting, vocal music and creative movement — dance. Pickwicks also learn all the technical aspects of theater procedures.

past three years.

Miss Alvey, who finds Pickwicks "one of the best thing in my life right now," said the standards to qualify for membership in Pickwicks have been raised over the

"So every Pickwick is extremely talented and deserving," she said.

Ms. Chambers does not encourage Pickwicks to pursue acting as a full-time profession.

"I love theater, but it's a hard way to make a living. I hope that all of them stay involved with theater like in a community theater when they become adults."

Still there are members, Miss Alvey included, who hope to pursue a career in acting.

"I'd like to," Miss Alvey said. "It's kind of a hard career to get into and to make it in. If I have an opportunity to, I think I will."

The production by the Pickwicks, will be presented 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. Children's tickets are priced at $3. Adults are admitted free when accompanied by a child. For reservations call 682-4111.

This week, the production will be presented to the fifth and seventh graders in the Midland Independent School District.

Annual cook-off to take place

The Permian Basin Cook-Off Inc. will host its seventh annual "Feed for Need" chili, brisket, fajita and pork rib cook-off from 11 a.m. to midnight Oct. 19 at the Midland County Exhibit Building, Highway 80 East.

All entries in the event must be postmarked by Oct. 15.

Trophies will be awarded in first through fourth place for cooking teams, showmanship and cook pit or trailer. Special trophies will be awarded to media cooking and unique camp gourmet.

"In the past six years, the PBC has donated more than $65,000 to local charities," said a release from Judy Makowsky, president of PBC. "Our success is attributable to our cookers, sponsors, volunteers, members and ticket-holders who support us each year."

All proceeds from the PBC are distributed within the Permian Basin.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

■ Murphey to perform

Country singer Michael Martin Murphey will perform "A Night in the American West" with the Midland-Odessa Symphony at 8 p.m. Oct. 26 at Midland College's Chaparral Center.

Murphey

Murphey, who is perhaps best known for his song "Wildfire," has spent the past three years recording his latest album, "Cowboy Songs." During his Midland performance, he will sing a few of the authentic melancholy cowboy tunes from the album, combined with a mixture of modern and upbeat country and western swing.

Murphey attended UCLA and played in a group called 'The Lewis and Clark Expedition.' He is also known for his third album, "Blue Sky, Night Thunder." Three of the album's songs went Top 10 earning Murphey "Best New Artist" awards from both the Country Music Association and the Academy of Country Music.

Murphey said he got his inspiration for "Cowboy Songs" from growing up on ranches in Texas and Arkansas where "There was a lot of music sung while they were working.

"I've just found out over all these years that I'm the most comfortable personally when I'm standing on a stage singing a Western-style song. That's what makes me happy — it's what I do best."

Tickets are available at Luskey's in Midland and Odessa.

Reserved section seating will be sold for $20 and general admission tickets will be $12. Sponsor packages will be available at a cost of $500 for business or organization who wish to attend a reception at the Plaza Club, ClayDesta Bank Building.

For more information call the symphony, 563-0921.

■ Chili cook off set

McCamey — The fifth annual McCamey Chili Cook Off and Arts and Crafts Fair is set for Oct. 26.

Entry fee is $15 for chili or brisket or $25 for both. For more information call the McCamey Chamber of Commerce, 1-652-8202, or 1-652-3187.

■ Children to camp-in

Some of Midland's underprivileged children will be camping within the environmentally controlled confines of the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum this year.

A special grant provided by the ARCO Foundation gave funding for the project. Selected boys and girls from Casa de Amigos and the Boys and Girls Club of Midland will participate in the camp trips.

"The children and adult chaperones are armed with sleeping bags and tons of enthusiasm," said a release from Carey F. Behrends, deputy director of the facility.

Groups are assigned to various "camp sites" in the museum. Part of the fun is finding out why their camp has a special name. Other activities in the Camp-In include crafts, a museum scavenger hunt and group talent time.

All sessions begin at 7 p.m. and end at 7 a.m. Interested parties are asked to contact their local scout office or the museum for more information.

■ Zachery to play 'Jim'

Midlander James Zachery has been chosen to play one of the co-leads lead in Midland Community Theatre's opening production of 1992.

Although the musical is not scheduled to open until next February, a pre-audition was held to find a baritone to play the part of Jim, the runaway slave in "Big River: The Adventures of Huck Finn."

Auditions for all other parts will be held in early December.

Zachery attended Midland High School where he was named to the All Region Choir and All Area Choir and was an All State and All Southwest Plains football player. He also was a Blue Chipper football player and received a scholarship to Texas A&M. Zachery was drafted by the New York Jets in 1980 and played eight years of proball in the Canadian League.

An equity actor, Zachery has been on the television show "Wise Guys;" in the made-for-TV movie "Triumph of the Heart" with Mario Van Peebles; and in the feature films "Mystery Date" and "Neon Rider." He will play the role as a volunteer on equity waiver.

Zachery is the fitness coordinator for Midland's Central YMCA.

For more information about the upcoming auditions call MCT, 682-2544.

The three-day event, to be held at the College Station Hilton Hotel and Conference Center, is hosted by the Arts Council of Brazos Valley.

■ Museum offers display

ODESSA — Currently on display at the Presidential Museum, 622 N. Lee St., is an exhibition featuring the works of George Tames.

Many of the memories, the images, Americans have of official Washington D.C. were photographs Tames took for 40 years for The New York Times.

"His photographs demonstrate the workings of the most influential government in the world at the height of its power," said a release from the museum.

"You've got to bring out the egos of the powerful to make it believable, let them be what they are," Tames said. "They're human first, before all else."

The exhibit will remain through Nov. 16.

In addition, an exhibit entitled "Through the Perilous Night" opens Thursday in the main gallery. This exhibit is being held in cooperation with Airsho '91 and the opening of the American Airpower Heritage Group museum at Terminal. It will remain through the end of December.

Both exhibits may be viewed during the museum's standard working hours of 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. No admission is charged. For more information call 1-332-7123.

■ Nose art on display

ODESSA — On display at the Art Institute for the Permian Basin is an exhibition of World War II nose art from the collection of the American Airpower Heritage Museum.

"The Classy Chassis: World War II Nose Art" will be shown in the Rodman Gallery of the Institute through Nov. 3. The exhibit, which is in honor of the Confederate Art Force and the AAHM, includes other war memorabilia, such as ration books, victory letters, knitting patterns of warm clothes for the battlefield and selected items of clothing and popular music from the war period. The pieces of nose art will be in the collections of the Confederate Air Force following the exhibition. The memorabilia has been collected from various members of the Permian Basin community.

The pieces of nose art in the original collection were salvaged from planes after the war and eventually were donated to the CAF and housed in Harlingen. The phenomenon of nose art has its roots in ancient history when chariots and even ships were given personal names and often had a work fo art painted on them to personalize them.

During WWII, flight crews painted the names and pictures of movie stars, their sweethearts back home or copies of Vargas Girls from Esquire magazine on the nose of their planes, on their flight jackets, on tanks and nearly every other instrument of war. The practice was continued during the Korean War but discontinued by military order during the Vietnam War. Recently, however, some examples of nose art have reappeared on American planes in Europe.

Hours at the Institute are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. For more information call 1-368-7222.

HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Pay more attention to family affairs. A harmonious home sets the stage for greater business success. A romantic interlude that takes place during the winter holidays pushes you toward a major decision. New financial gains are likely early in 1992. Review investments in March. Experts can help you get more for your money. Be careful not to mistake physical attraction for true love next summer. The ideal mate will share your wide-ranging intellectual interests.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: cartoonist Herblock, comedian Nipsy Russell, former Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, singer Marie Osmond.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Thoughtlessness is not one of your faults. You know exactly how to honor someone who should be remembered! Pay no attention to promises from an insincere person. Your own efforts will suffice.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Romance occupies your thoughts and a good deal of your time now. Let the better side of your nature take over. A compromise will help ease the tension between you and a loved one.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Refuse to have anything to do with a risky financial venture. There could be trickery afoot! Entertaining at home holds great appeal tonight. Keep the guest list short and the menu simple.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It would be better for all concerned if others follow your suggestions for today's activities. Be tactful but persistent. Visit an older person confined to the hospital or a nursing home.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Follow precedent when conducting your business affairs. Newer methods may not work as well as you think. Get together with close friends and relatives to discuss an upcoming event.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Since you cannot control national or world events, you would be wise to pay more attention to developments close to home. Sharing a secret with your loved ones leads to new rapport.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Although you prefer to do things by yourself, you should not reject any genuine offer of assistance. Be cautious in your financial dealings this afternoon. Romance intensifies.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Peer pressure could make you angry. Think of the future, not the past. A phone call to a sibling will cheer you both. Some outdoor fun proves invigorating. Invite a friend along.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A new romance could upset certain family members. Make your own decisions, but remember that "where there's smoke, there's fire." Trust the judgment of those who know you well.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Give full rein to your creativity. An income-producing hobby will make it easier for you to lead the kind of life you want. Greater diplomacy will improve a longtime love relationship.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Adventure is part of this happy day. Choose your party guests carefully so that everyone will have a good time. Your sense of humor makes you very popular.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If a desire for power is all that motivates you, you will not get very far. Reasoning with someone works better than issuing an ultimatum. You could discover a new love this weekend.

One of the advantages of duplicate bridge is that a hand gets played many times and you can review the results to find out how it was tackled at the various tables. Three no trump was the popular contract when this hand was dealt in a pair event, but it was not always made. Let's see why.

South showed a balanced hand of 19-20 points with the jump rebid of two no trump. North had just enough to raise to game.

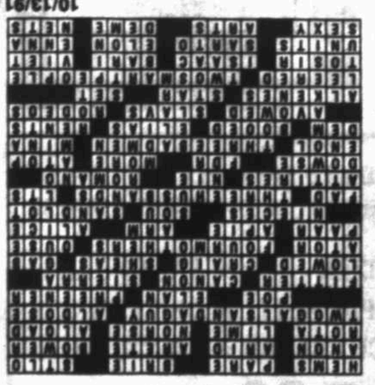

West led a low spade, and we salute those declarers who made the correct play of the jack from dummy—after all, West could have been underleading the king-queen. All declarers held up the ace of spades until the third round—technically correct—and then had to develop four tricks in diamonds to bring home the contract. A 3-2 diamond break was necessary.

The optimists banged out ace, king and another diamond. Those declarers went down in quick time. Others cashed the diamond ace, then crossed to the king of hearts to lead another diamond. When East produced the queen, declarer allowed that defender to hold the trick and all was well. But that line of play failed at some tables where East was alert enough to jettison the queen of diamonds under the ace. Now West had to get in with a diamond to cash spades.

Those declarers with impeccable technique demonstrated that the contract should always be made. After winning the ace of spades, they crossed to the table with the king of hearts to lead a diamond. Had East gone up with the queen, the defender would have been allowed to hold the trick and the contract would have been secure. When East followed low, declarer won the king of diamonds, returned to dummy with the king of clubs and led another diamond. When East produced the lady, declarer ducked and nine tricks rolled home.

NEW ZEALAND

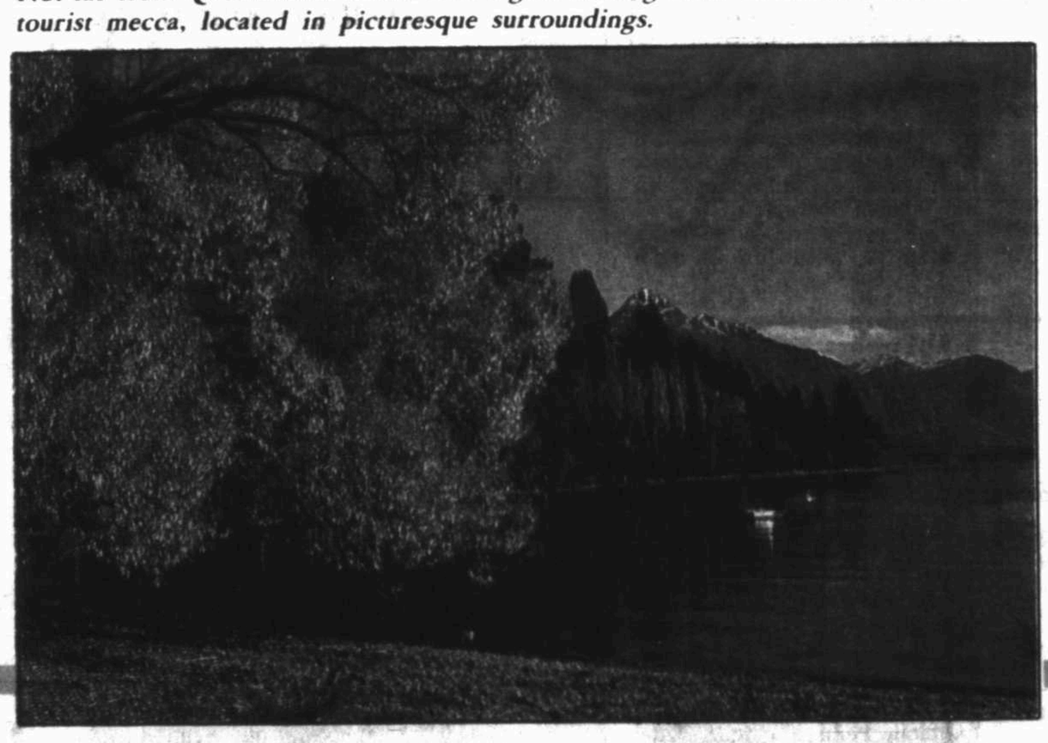

This is the "Church" in Christ Church, New Zealand, the South Island's park/garden town that some claim is more English than England.

From Queenstown, visitors can view The Remarkables, with the Mount Coronet ski fields perched atop, sporting an early fall snow coating.

Not far from Queenstown is the 1880's gold mining town of Arrowtown, now a tourist mecca, located in picturesque surroundings.

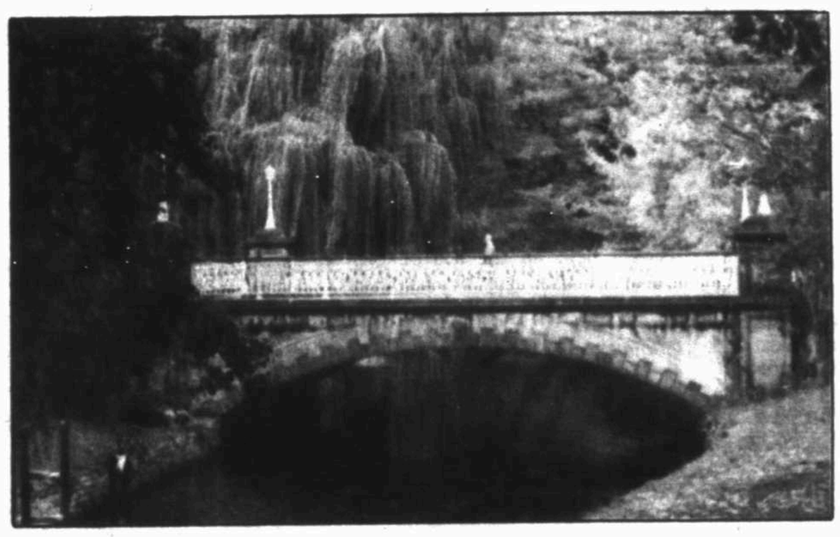

Autumn touches the shores of Lake Wakiptu in a park at the edge of Queenstown.

QUEENSTOWN, New Zealand — On a visit to New Zealand in 1895, Mark Twain observed, "The people here are Scots. They stopped here on the way to heaven thinking they had arrived."

Some things never change.

The Scottish settlers founded Dunedin (Gaelic for New Edinburgh) in 1848 on the South Island. Our tour's arrival was in Auckland, on the smaller, volcano-pocked, population-packed North Island. However, it was the pristine, scenically spectacular South Island with its jagged snow-capped Southern Alps that stole the heart.

If you don't believe Christ Chruch is a touch of Merry Olde England half a world away, the Avon River, running through the center of town, offers proof.

Auckland is a city of 800,000 plus. Wellington — the capital, also on the North Island — is 300,000. That makes a pretty good dent in the overall population of 3 million Kiwis. Throw in another 300,000 for Christ Church on the South Island and you get the idea. The sparsely populated South Island, in comparison, makes wide open West Texas seem like downtown Hong Kong.

Speaking of Hong Kong, cosmopolitan Auckland, complete with pagoda skyscrapers and its blend of Polynesians, Maoris, Orientals and Kiwis, perhaps is a hint of what we imagine Hong Kong might be like. Its narrow busy streets bustle with activity on weekdays. After noon Saturday, Auckland has much in common with downtown Midland.

Once there were 62 volcanos in the Auckland area. Now there are 25. Many of the extinct spewers of lava now are parks, but you have to watch your step. Cows instead of mowers are used to keep the steep slopes trimmed.

Although West Texans take perverse pride when impressing Yankees with the tenacity and violence of the winds in our neck of the world, we could get an inferiority complex here.

For example, one Quayside skyscraper had a canopy over the lower floors. When we inquired what it was for, we were told, "It's not to catch suiciders." (The economy is ailing here, too). "It's to keep pedestrians from being blown over by the wind when it caroms off the upper floors."

15th Midland Jazz Classic presented

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

The 1991 Midland Jazz Classic ended on a high note last Sunday afternoon at the Holiday Inn Country Villa. The event, held for the 15th consecutive year, always brings together a phenomenal wealth of talent, and jazz aficionados gather from all over the United States and as far away as France. Ulane Bonnel, sister of Midlander Lunelle Zeeck, plans her yearly visit to the States from her home in Paris to coincide with the jazz party.

McKnight-Harrison

There were a few musicians here this year, who were present for the first Classic in 1977, and two of those, Milt Hinton, who is noted as the most recorded jazz bassist, and Jack Lesberg, bass player and musical director for the four-day jazz party, have played at every Classic since.

The musicians were honored at several social events during their stay in the Tall City. A Texas-style barbecue was held at the home of Jere and Bus Hubbard. Also hosting were Mignon Pearson, Ann and Don Wambaugh, Camille and Bill Leifeste, Mim and Ish Curry, Max Howard, Wayne Weekes, Ms. Zeeck and Ms. Bonnel.

A Saturday afternoon party was held at the home of Billie and Jim Ross and allowed jazz fans the opportunity to meet and visit with the artists. Co-hosts were Marcie and Max Christensen, Georgia and Bobby Crues and Mike FitzGerald.

Among the jazz lovers who dropped by were Janet and Bob Pollard, Virginia and Bob Jones, Peter Ditlev, Ruth Cole, Bill Pennebaker and Annette and Clark Wilkinson.

Zelda and Louis Hochman brought the festivities to a close with a dinner party for the musicians at Luigi's Restaurant following the Sunday performance.

THE MIDLAND WOMAN'S CLUB held a very successful fund-raising luncheon and fashion show recently at the clubhouse in Hogan Park, according to Jane (Mrs. Robert) Ward, ways and means chairman.

The beautiful clothes from Robbie Casey's were modeled by club members Sarah (Mrs. Lowell) Branum, Dorothy (Mrs. Loyd) Sanders, Gerry Griffin, Dolly Benson, Mary Kay Rattan, Dorothy Foster, Gladys Mitchell, Polly Tharp and Mrs. Ward, as well as Elinor Cleckler of Odessa, Sandy (Mrs. David) Sledge and Bonnie (Mrs. Stan) Beard.

Members and guests enjoyed the delicious lunch, which included a chicken salad plate and cheesecake, topped with orange marmalade sauce, for dessert.

Tables were colorfully decorated with fall leaves and pumpkins.

Among those seen at the event were Frances (Mrs. Jack) Brown, Annice Sewell, Margaret Bissell, Dimple Currie, Leona Bryant Smith, Minnie German and Margaret (Mrs. Tom) Coleman.

Co-chairmen for the event were Mrs. Branum and Mrs. Sanders. Marie Bond was decorations chairman. Hazel Smith is the Woman's Club president.

ALTHOUGH IT HAS BEEN some time since she resided in Midland, the Queen of England's look-alike, Jeannette Clark Charles, still likes to visit here when she and her husband, Ken, spend holidays in America. They now make their home in Dansbury, Chelmsford, in Essex County, England.

No doubt readers have seen Jeannette at one time or another on television as she has appeared on commercials and programs impersonating the Queen. She recently was seen as Queen Elizabeth when the movie, "The Naked Gun," aired on TV and with the Pittsburg Steelers in London on the program, "Sports Follies." She also was asked by international designer, Franko Marchione of Milan, Italy, to reprise the Queen's role at the introduction of his perfume in New York. Her uncanny resemblance also brought her "Cover Girl" status. She was asked by Life magazine to pose in Queen's regalia for the cover.

While in the States recently, the busy lady flew out to Midland with her husband for a day's visit with longtime friends Doris and Printus Burkhart. The Burkharts hosted an informal luncheon for the pair, and guests included Beth and Tommy McLaughlin, Jean Sauze and her father, Frank Sauze, among other friends.

Jeannette came to Midland in the 1950s and was a nanny for a local oilman's family before going to work for Cities Service Co. She and her husband, also a Briton, met in Midland and later married in Calgary, Canada.

She says in her book, "Jeannette Charles — The Queen and I," "I'll always remember Midland with the most affection, the town that brought me such a wonderful husband."

The couple had one request while here, and that was for Mexican food. Their hosts took them to El Chico Restaurant, and unsuspecting diners ate in the presence of the "Queen."

NEW ZEALAND: Kiwis exhibit ingenuity

one example of the Kiwis' ingenuity. The barrier that divides the traffic lanes can be moved to accommodate rush hour traffic. At the far end of the bridge, there are two barriers, creating a buffer zone. This alledgedly is for cars that are blown across the bridge.

More ingenuity ... when the bridge was overpowered by the volume of traffic, Auckland fathers hired a Japanese firm to prefab four extra lanes in two sections. Floated by barge to New Zealand, the extra lanes were added to the outside of the bridge. The additions are known as the "Nippon Clip On." Word spread to the States and not long ago, a letter to the Washington Post suggested the New Zealand example be copied in relieving congestion on the Woodrow Wilson Bridge over the Potomac in Washington, D.C.

WEST TEXANS own boats, but the people of New Zealand carry it to an extreme. One in every seven New Zealanders owns a boat, supposedly the highest per capita ratio in the world. In fact, they build multi-story garages for boats along the harbor... oops, harbour.

Kiwis even have cameras on street stop signs. If you don't stop, you get your picture taken. In a few weeks, you get the picture and a $50 fine with it, along with a three-point penalty. If a person collects just 12 points over a three-year period, then they take the bus. In Australia, there are cameras that automatically activate when the highway speed limit is exceeded.

Not far from Auckland is the Rotura, the Kiwi version of Yellowstone's geysers complete with boiling mud and thermal springs, but it's the South Island that is the piece de resistance.

Queenstown, in the southern portion of the South Island, is so remote that it gets only two television stations, both from Dunedin. An apology accompanies one of those stations with the promise that the "inconvenience" is temporary, but, really, who cares.

Queenstown is just being discovered as a tourist heaven and is the Kiwi reply to Lucerne. It is located on the shores of Lake Wakatipu. A Singapore firm recently bought five percent of Queenstown's waterfront and the Japanese are putting the finishing touches on a golf course east of the city in the beautiful sheep, cattle, red deer farm valley at the foot of the snow-capped majestical Remarkable Mountains.

Reports are that the Americans are coming with plans for a 27-hole PGA caliber golf course and the inevitable condos.

The Walter Peak Sheep Station — located a half hour from Queenstown by boat and a must stop for the sheep, woolmaking, Highland Ayreshire demonstrations and barbecue dinner — is located 70 miles by dirt road from the main highway. Walter Peak also has been purchased by a Singapore based firm, but it is still run by the pioneer McKenzie family.

QUEENSTOWN IS the gateway to New Zealand's "Siberia," where Dreadful and Awful are located along with Milford Sound and its famed watefalls and the fiords. Some claim this is the greatest "tramping" country in the world. The mountainous terrain where snow-capped peaks, glaciers and rain forests rub elbows is virtually uninhabited, untamed and unspoiled and boasts an annual rainfall of 300 inches to help keep it that way.

New Zealanders like their fun a little bit on the wild side, such as powerboat rides in which the jets cross their own wakes to come within touching distance of the rocky walls in the narrow Shotover River Gorge.

The ski fields of the Southern Alps are a long way up, since the Alps base is so close to sea level. Ski season was still a few weeks away, but even from halfway up Mount Coronet, the ski resort was still several thousand feet above. One could only wonder what it would be like trying to drive to the top when winter brought the snows down into the valleys. It's probably one of the reasons heliskiing is so popular in New Zealand, that and the fact that so much virgin snow would be otherwise inaccessible.

Rugby Union is the national sport and the All Blacks are the national treasure, much as the Dallas Cowboys once were America's Team. The temptation to purchase one of the rugby shirts with the insignia "All Blacks" was resisted in the interest of saving explanations that the name had nothing to do with skin color.

Actually, the All Blacks were once the All Whites, that is, they dressed in all white uniforms, but the tradition of never washing those uniforms eventually resulted in the switch to all black uniforms to promote a more hygienically acceptable image and save on season-ending laundry bills.

THE NATIONAL MANIA is bungee jumping.

Stopping at a bridge over the Shotover River Gorge, the fun began when the victim's ankles were tied together at the end of a long rope. After paying $55 to $85 for the privilege, the jumper swandives from a platform into the canyon and bounces at the end of the rope, adjusted for weight and desired length of the fall. The survivor is either fished out of the water or gaffed from a boat below, depending on the length of the rope. Since this was Autumn and the water around Queenstown was cold, our jumpers bounced before reaching the water.

Of course, I wanted to jump, but was told someome had to take the pictures. My safety net was two cameras. In Sydney, it was learned that bungee jumping is frowned upon, because, among other hazards, the eyes have been known to pop out of their sockets.

My eyes did pop out on the flight in the Cessna 185 from Mount Cook airport to a ski landing on the Tasman Glacier, the world's longest glacier at 18 miles long and two miles wide.

Crowding into the small plane with pilot Chris Cooney and two other passengers, we buzzed over the lower gray-green reaches of the Murchison and Tasman glaciers, which run together at this point, and began to ride the air currents. Zooming from cloud to cloud while flying against, into and between the jagged peaks, was like something out of a James Bond movie.

As we prepared to land, the knees were swung against the bulkhead to give the pilot room to crank the skis into landing position. The shadows gave way to bright sunlight as the plane touched down on Tasman, a mile from the summit of fearsome Cook. The surprise was that atop the 500-yard deep glacier, it really was not that cold, even at 4:30 p.m.

COONEY EXPLAINED that it was a little too early for skiing, "but skiers can usually make a couple of runs a day. That's about all they have time for or can afford, since there are no lifts and the only way up is to hike or fly."

A couple of days later, one of the passengers, a former flyer himself, asked if I had noticed that during one of those turns against the mountains, the wing tip had left a trail in the snow. I hadn't, again having a camera to thank.

The Hermitage, opened in 1884, provides accommodations for adventurers who come to Mount Cook to do more than take one of the dozen shuttle planes that ferry some 50,000 thrill seekers to the landing and mandatory snowball fight on Tasman, one of Cook's five glaciers, between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Mount Cook is a formidable challenge at 12,349 feet, the highest peak in the Southern Alps. Some 150 climbers have lost their lives trying to scale Cook.

From Twizel, an hour away in the valley below, it's 10,707 feet to the top of Cook.

One of the guides who conducts tramps for over-40 and under-40 hikers in the Mount Cook National Park pointed out, "These mountains are very close to the Himalayas in terms of their vast relief and difficulty of climbing. There is nothing in the Pacific Northwest, the Rockies or Europe to compare with Cook, Mt. Tasman and the others in Mount Cook National Park."

Twenty two of the 34 peaks in the park are over 10,000 feet and proved a good training for Edmund Hilliary, who went on to conquer Everest.

WHILE TRADITIONAL U.S. resort activities such as golf, tennis and swimming are missing, there is plenty to do, in the form of bush walks, farm tours, jeep trips, fishing safaris, helicopter flyovers and just enjoying the changing moods of Mt. Cook.

But New Zealand was not without its ultimate humiliation. With a three-hour wait before the three-hour, two-time zone flight from Christ Church to Sydney, I ventured into the airport lounge to pass the time with a Pint O' Bitter, my first visit ever to an airport lounge.

Before I was halfway through, they came looking for me and literally pulled me out of the lounge by the ear, in front of all those people.

"We've got three hours to flight time," I protested.

"No we haven't. You've got to go through customs and we board the plane early. Now get a move on."

Of course, I'm going back, if only to finish that beer.

Catch A Rising Star makes laughter Universal

By Jody Leader
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — The latest addition to Universal Studios' sprawling lot is not a theme ride, but a new comedy club, Catch a Rising Star.

Squirreled away next to Victoria Station restaurant, near the gift shop, the club had a quiet opening June 28 and since then has been serving up fine comedy, drinks, appetizers and scrumptious desserts.

Yes, scrumptious desserts, from Victoria Station's kitchen — Snickers candy-bar cake, banana-split cake, peanut-butter ice-cream pie with hot fudge, strawberry shortcake, blueberry cheesecake, chocolate mousse and more. There might as well be a two-dessert minimum.

The club is part of a chain owned by Richard Fields and Rick Newman, who also have Catch a Rising Stars in Las Vegas; Reno, Nev.; St. Louis; Princeton, N.J.; Cambridge, Mass.; and, for the last 20 years, New York City.

The new Universal Studios club opens in a market already experiencing decreased comedy-club attendance. Fields and Newman are banking on a joint partnership with Universal — and the crowds that annually swarm through the movie theme park — to see them through.

It's a comfortable, intimate space with only 100 seats, making it one of the smallest permanent comedy clubs around. The stage is set up like a cozy den, with a small bookshelf, an old, black wall telephone and a window looking out on a nighttime sky of (surprise) twinkling stars. Fields says it's practically identical to his New York club stage, but the Elvis Presley souvenir plate displayed on the bookshelf gives it a distinctly Hollywood feel.

The atmosphere is low-key, a far cry from the hustle and bustle of tourists swarming about outside. Mirrors and floor-to-ceiling black curtains line the walls. The waitresses wear black T-shirts and black jeans.

A carved-glass partition separates the showroom from the bar in the back, where the comedians smoke and pace, waiting for their turn at the mike. If the club room is full, you can sit at the bar and almost make out the comedians on stage, through the glass. The sound back there is crystal clear, however, piped in from the stage.

If Saturday night's lineup — five veterans of the New York club — is any indication of the talent we can expect from Catch a Rising Star, this should be a choice spot. Master of ceremonies Lou Dimaggio kept up a witty banter with the audience. Jack Mayberry talked about the drought ("I went out to Sea World. They got a big brick in the tank with Shamu") and the Persian Gulf War ("They were dropping bombs over there that cost $1 million. You shouldn't drop anything that costs $1 million. You got to have it bronzed and up on the mantle").

Rick Overton, who "uses DePalma's films as a blueprint for his life," screwed up his face and voice to become Roger Moore, Sean Connery, Michael Keaton, Jack Nicholson, Christopher Lloyd and William Shatner.

The comedy's fine, but the management still needs to work out a few kinks. There are absolutely no signs directing patrons to the club from the parking lots. The valet-parking stand is almost impossible to find. Inside the club, the stools that surround the raised tables in the back of the room get more than a little uncomfortable after a half-hour. And it's a real hike down two flights of stairs to the restrooms.

But we quibble. Catch a Rising Star is a welcome addition to the Los Angeles comedy scene. And don't forget: After the sugar rush you'll get from that hot-fudge brownie, you'll enjoy the show that much more.

Root knot nematode difficult pest to erase

By Deborah A. Benge

One of the most common, destructive and difficult pests to control in the garden and flower bed soils of the Permian Basin is the root knot nematode. Most gardeners have encountered this pest, but few have had satisfactory control over it.

Benge

This unseen enemy, the nematode, is a microscopic worm-like animal that lives in the soil and feeds on the roots of developing plants. Although there are several types of nematodes found in vegetable and flower gardens, the root nematode is particularly damaging to many plants. Conservative estimates show that the root knot nematode is the single most damaging pest to gardeners and that it can be found in at least 50 percent of all home gardens.

Plants infested with root knot nematodes are usually stunted, yellow in color and often die prematurely. When removing unproductive plants, examine root systems for the presence of characteristic "knots" or galls. Okra, tomato, bean, cucumber, marigold and mulberry are good indicator plants. By examining the roots of some of these, you can look for the tell-tale galls. Roots should be dug and not pulled from the soil, washing the roots will help you get a better look. With legumes, like beans and peas, don't confuse the nitrogen fixing nodules on the roots with root knot nematodes. Nitrogen fixing nodules attach to the side of the root whereas, root knot galls are formed with in the root and cannot be removed without destroying the root.

Traditionally, nematode control has emphasized the use of soil fumigants, and these may still be required in severe cases. Now, however, Extension personnel are emphasizing "Earth-Kind," a new very environmentally responsible approach.

The "Earth-Kind" approach to nematode control encompasses four major steps including the use of "Elbon" cereal rye in the fall, resistant varieties and crop rotation both spring and fall, and soil solarization in the summer.

Because, now is the time plant, this article will concentrate on the method of planting cereal rye.

After several years of testing, cereal rye has proven to be the fastest growing, most cold-tolerant annual grass available to home gardeners in Texas. Gardeners should be careful to purchase "Elbon" cereal rye rather than annual rye, however. Annual rye is used to overseed lawns and is not recommended for use in your vegetable garden.

There are many advantages to following this practice of planting cereal rye in your garden. It beautifies this otherwise drab winter area with welcome greenery. It protects your precious topsoil from wind and water erosion. When incorporated in late winter, it will add high amounts of organic matter to the garden soil. This type of "green manure" corp decomposes rapidly and does a wonderful job of:

- making sandy soils hold much needed moisture and nutrients,
- making clay soils friable and easier to work with better drainage,
- and adding organic matter to our organic matter poor soils for better plant performance.

This additional organic matter also helps by increasing the populations and activities of nematode-trapping fungi, predacious nematodes (yes, there are many helpful nematodes as well as a few harmful, and encouraging the internal parasites of nematodes.

As if these benefits were not enough, research has shown that "Elbon" cereal rye to be one of the most effective non-chemical controls for root knot nematodes. The roots of "Elbon" rye serve as a trap crop for the pest. Once nematodes enter the cereal rye roots, they cannot escape and are doomed. When the rye decomposes, it releases organic acids which further reduce nematode population while helping to somewhat reduce the alkalinity of certain garden soils.

In that portion of the garden not being used for winter vegetables, you can start planting cereal rye right now and continue through late fall. It can be planted as late as early November and still produce a good stand by min-January.

Cereal rye can be planted by merely seeding directly on top of the garden soil. Apply seed at the rate of one to one-and-a-half pounds per 100 square feet of garden area to ensure good coverage and adequate growth. Rake seeds in lightly and keep moist until they're established. Once the rye is established, be sure to water regularly and to fertilize lightly every month for maximum growth. Dried blood is a very rapidly available organic fertilizer and an excellent choice for this use. Shred rye before it forms seed heads with a string trimmer or lawnmower and till into the soil one month prior to planting so that the extensive and very beneficial rye root system will have adequate time to decompose.

Seed of "Elbon" cereal rye will be available from many local nurseries.

Now you have a choice of how to control one of the garden's worst enemies — nematodes. Use of the "Earth-Kind" approach to nematode control will protect your garden crops while it enables you to safeguard and beautify your home and community environment. Remember, "Earth-Kind" to benefit humankind. The "Earth-Kind" tabloid is still available at participating nurseries, go by and ask for your complimentary copy.

Arania, the Black Widow Bride, hosts this year's Fright Nights event at Six Flags Over Texas. She is said to have married and buried 13 husbands, each of whom met their fate on Halloween night. The theme park's event began a four-weekend run on Friday.

'Fright Nights' showcases Halloween

Staff Report

ARLINGTON — The largest Halloween event in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, Six Flags Over Texas' Fright Nights, will feature a new "horror hostess" this year.

The event began Friday, and will continue through the first weekend in November.

This year's celebration will star Arania, the Black Widow Bride, a fantasy character created exclusively for the Arlington theme park.

Legend has it that Arania has married, and buried, 13 husbands. Their fictional deaths were supposedly caused by everything from a falling chandalier to an attack by a giant man-eating, carnivorous plant.

The park's largest, walk-thru haunted house, titled "Arania's 13 Rooms of Doom," will feature re-creations of the rooms in which the mysterious deaths occurred.

Still another attraction is "Arania's Graveyard of the Living Dead," the spot where the husbands were laid to rest. However, they have a habit of reappearing. Arania complains, "The darlings just won't stay put."

The March of Dimes sponsors the third haunted house, "Arania's Bloodline," which features the Black Widow Bride and her relatives. The park's Cave Ride also is full of ghosts and ghouls for the Halloween season.

Small children are invited to visit the "Scary Tales Haunted House," in Looney Tunes Land.

Arania appears in a Halloween-themed musical production, "Arania's Nightmare," in the Southern Palace Music Hall.

Even Six Flags' familiar Old West gunfight show takes on a Halloween look.

Elsewhere in the park, visitors will find a fortune teller, a "mad" organist, a Halloween marionette show and magicians.

This is the forth year for the event which last year drew more than 140,000 persons.

The event will be 6 p.m.-midnight Fridays, 10 a.m.-midnight Saturdays, and 10 a.m.-10 p.m. Sundays. Fright Night will not be staged Oct. 18.

There is no extra charge for the Halloween attractions, with the exception of a requested one dollar donation at the March of Dimes haunted house.

The park will be in full operation, including rides.

Adult tickets are $21.95. Children under 48 inches tall and senior citizens age 55 and over are admitted for $15.95. Children age 2 and under are admitted free. All prices are plus tax.

Mansions are backdrops for beautiful weddings

By Andree Brooks
N.Y. Times News Service

NEWPORT, R.I. — In a scene evocative of the grand parties given by Newport millionaires around the turn of the century, the gilded ballrooms of several beautifully restored mansions here were ablaze with light on a recent Saturday night. Under the flicker of candelight, couples in formal attire swirled around the dance floors.

Along Bellevue Avenue, Newport's mansion row, the scene is repeated on many weekends, as more couples choose such fairytale settings for their weddings.

Some mansions here are particularly popular. Rosecliffe, for example, was designed by Stanford White after the Grand Trianon at Versailles and originally was the summer home of Teresa Oelrichs, whose father discovered the Comstock Lode. It is already tightly booked through 1992. But Hammersmith Farm, where Jacqueline Bouvier married John F. Kennedy in 1953, has 15 weekends open in 1992.

ALL ACROSS THE country, elegant historic homes, former plantations and museums have opened their ornate doors to weddings and private parties. The trend started in the late 1970s, when a handful of these houses started renting their rooms to help cover maintenance costs. Today, almost every county has at least one such mansion available, according to officials at the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

"You feel like a princess, and every little girl dreams of becoming a princess one day," said Dr. Annlouise Assaf, who married Lynn Alan Potter at Rosecliff in August, in a ceremony that re-created the "white" parties given by the mansion's original owner; the bridesmaids wore white, too.

Barbara Tober, editor in chief of Bride's Magazine, said that a wedding in a historic house fits nicely into the plans of the tradition-minded 90s couple, in the same way sailboats or ski slopes became wedding-site choices by less-conventionally minded couples in the 60s.

Mansion directors agree. "We've had an onslaught of brides in 1991," said Page Nelson, a private-events manager at the Decatur House, a circa 1819 federal brick townhouse on Jackson Place in Washington, a few steps from the White House.

A wedding in a rented mansion or historic house generally costs a bit more than one in a hotel or catering hall. Typically, a mansion charges $2,500 to $4,500 for five to seven hours. This normally includes use of the ballroom, a terrace and gardens, and some upstairs rooms for dressing and preparation.

IN A HOTEL, it is customary for the use of the ballroom and the equipment to be included in the catering cost.

Couples can save a good deal of money by getting married on a weekday. For instance, the Lyman Estate, a federal mansion in Waltham, Mass., that was built in 1793 as the summer home of Theodore Lyman, a shipping magnate, charges $3,200 on weekends, $1,500 on weekdays.

Supplying your own liquor also saves money. That is what Margaret Ullery did when her daughter, Jennie, 25, married Eric Romano Jr., 24, on the lawn at Rosecliff in Newport on a recent September afternoon. The couple had fallen in love with the setting while touring the mansion the previous year.

Mrs. Ullery bought $800 worth of liquor at her local package store for the reception for 131 guests. She was able to return unused bottles for a refund of $200.

For a similar-size wedding at the nearby Newport Marriott, an open bar would have cost about $1,300, said Fran Martinelli, director of catering at the hotel. Most hotels do not permit wedding parties to provide their own liquor.

Some bridal parties expect the rental costs of the mansion to be tax-deductible because payment is normally made to the foundation or nonprofit trust that operates the place. But the Internal Revenue Service says no.

"Where the function performed by the charitable foundation is indistinguishable from one performed by the for-profit sector, the sum is not deductible," said Julian Block, a lawyer in Larchmont, N.Y., and author of "Julian Block's Year-Round Tax Strategies" (Prima, $12.95).

Author advises on divorce recovery

By Terry Lee Goodrich
N.Y. Times News Service

When it comes to trauma, psychologists are fond of ranking divorce right up there with the death of a loved one. But there are a few major differences, Christine Archambault says.

"After your divorce, no one brings a casserole," says Archambault, Divorce Anonymous cofounder and co-author of the book "Divorce Recovery: Healing the Hurt through Self-Help and Professional Support."

"When we lose a spouse to death, people rally round, fly in, come to the wake, bring food and drink," she says. "Even if they don't know what to say, they say, 'I'm sorry. I don't know what to say. Call me if I can ever do anything.'

"But when you get divorced, everybody takes a couple steps backward. Or they'll say things like, 'I knew at the wedding it wouldn't last.' They'll tell you every move your ex makes. Or they'll say, 'I don't know why you stayed on through all those affairs.' And you're thinking, 'What affairs?' "

While time is touted as the healer of all wounds, knowing where to get support — and how to help oneself — can lend time a helping hand, Archambault said. Accordingly, the book she and psychiatrist Allan J. Adler wrote offers advice not just for the emotional trauma, but for the legal and financial aspects.

BOTH AUTHORS have been through divorces themselves, so they know firsthand the grief, anger, bitterness and depression that divorce brings. They decided such a book could provide a needed service in the divorce-prone United States. Half of all marriages end in divorce, and when divorced people who have children remarry, there's only a 40 percent chance that the marriage will survive.

But they took care to be certain the book was relatively short — a slim, 150-page paperback.

"It would have to be that way, because people going through a divorce have a very short attention span," Archambault says wryly. "They're going through a lot of pain."

A number of hospitals and community colleges are using the book as the basis for courses and programs. Offered through Psychiatric Institutes of America and produced by Bantam Doubleday Dell, the book may be obtained by writing PIA, 33 Union Place, Summit, N.J. 07901; (800) 526-4494. Cost is $8.95. It is not available in bookstores.

One chapter of the book is solely devoted to the topic "Who Asked for this Divorce (and What Difference Does It Make?)."

"A marriage ends in one of two basic ways," Archambault says. "There's either what I call the 'luxury of the deteriorating relationship' — where both people have had the chance to think, 'Gosh, we may not make it,' and it dies a natural death; or one or the other decides it's time to pull the plug.

"It's much different if someone comes home and says, 'I'm not happy, and by the way, there's someone else.' That creates an immediate crisis for the non-initiator — but the initiator has been doing some advance emotional work."

SHE AND co-author Adler advise the non-initiator to "buy a little time. This is no time to go running to an attorney in a confused, almost deranged state of mind and say 'I'll show them.' You've got some critical decisions to make.

"Say, 'If this is not negotiable, I need some time.' It may be the other person is waving a flag — they may want to shock you into going for counseling."

Even if the marriage is not salvageable, Archambault recommends therapy for dealing with feelings as a couple dismantles the marriage.

"There are actually two divorces — the financial and legal one, and the emotional," she says.

On the financial/legal end of it, one suggestion the authors make is to try mediation.

"If you're trying to do this civilly and equitably, you might try a mediator, and then take a draft to the attorney of your choice to review," Archambault says. "Then, if you need to, go back to the table and work out the details.

"It'll be cheaper and not adversarial, and I think, psychologically, it's more satisfying."

Other areas the book deals with:

■ Breaking the news of divorce to the children. "You're doing your kids an enormous disservice if you both put on your little happy faces and suddenly say, 'We're getting a divorce.' I knew a couple that did that, thinking they were doing the right thing — but for the kids, it was like an earthquake."

CHILDREN ARE entitled to both a father and mother, so "renegotiate the terms of the relationship as soon as possible — not just husband and wife, but co-parents. Try to preserve each others' image. Don't carry stories back and forth. It doesn't help the children to hear one parent knock the other."

How parents act during their divorce is a role model for how their children will handle theirs.

Unpleasant as it may be, "divorce is a fact of life," Archambault says. "It's important to do healthy things for ourselves, be civil, instead of going through a string of one-night stands and crazy relationships just to fill the void.

"If you come home and scream and tell the children to go into their rooms and then pour a double Scotch and cry all night, you're showing them the other way to handle it."

■ Self-help: "When people finally come out of the shock, they have a tendency to either isolate themselves too much or become perpetual-motion machines," Archambault says.

"Even if these changes are welcome, adjustment is never easy. Be gentle with yourself; take baby steps. It's the extremes that get us into trouble. Sometimes you need to get into bed, get into the fetal position and suck your thumb. ... Sometimes you need to call a friend and say, 'I'd love to go to dinner and a movie.' "

EAT HEALTHY foods, get enough sleep and exercise.

"Do something with that energy, during those times you think you're going to explode," Archambault suggests. "You may not feel energy at first, but you will. ... If you're really, really angry, try racquetball. Let endorphins be your drug of choice."

■ Getting organized. Organization may not be the first goal that comes to mind when getting a divorce, but that can make it easier from a practical standpoint, say Archambault and Adler.

Archambault recommends a simple tool — a five-section spiral notebook.

"In one section, keep a record of conversations with your attorney of when something will be done or ready. One of the main complaints (about lawyers) is lack of communication between clients and attorneys," Archambault says.

In the second section of the notebook, devote the space to emotions.

"Write what you're feeling," Archambault says. "If you wake up at 4 a.m., write your mind chatter, even if it's only a couple of sentences. It's very important to work through this.

"That's why people get stuck: They don't grieve the death of the dream. So many people think they miss the person, but often it's the structure of the relationship as well."

Devote the third section to recording conversations with the children about the divorce and monitoring their behavior so you can help them cope.

"They may be hearing horror stories at school," Archambault says.

SHE SUGGESTS Section 4 of the notebook include goals for the future and ways to develop skills; and that Section 5 be the "If I live to be 100" section.

Larks, owls can learn to adapt to sunshine versus moonlight

By Georgia Dullea
N.Y. Times News Service

Midnight in Los Angeles. A blond woman in a nightgown stares from a window of a bluish-gray house into the backyard where a man sits in the window of a bluish-gray hut. The man looks up from the glowing screen of a word processor.

They wave.

"Come to bed," Jennifer Marcus calls from the house.

Richard Marcus calls back from the hut. "Soon."

Theirs is the marriage of lark and owl, morning person and night person. Social scientists are watching couples like the Marcuses whose peaks of energy differ during the day because their internal clocks are out of sync.

As a lark, Mrs. Marcus loves beginnings, sunrises, breakfasts. Marcus curses the sun and has trouble with his shoelaces in the morning. He moved from the East Coast to the West Coast 15 years ago, and he is "still on New York time."

The bluish-gray hut is his office. "I finished the hut myself," he said. "At night."

Marcus makes his living writing for television and films. When they were dating, Mrs. Marcus recalled, "he told me he liked to write in the morning, but he never said 3 in the morning."

Married for 11 years, the Marcuses have two children: Amanda, age 5, a definite lark, and David, 22 months, a probable owl. "It's hard to tell with David," Marcus said. "He's up for 22 hours, like CNN."

Larks and owls can fly. "I suppose it would be nice if we always got into bed together," Mrs. Marcus said. "But Richard doesn't work every night."

Larks and owls can adapt. "This morning I got up early, which I hate to do, to watch kids so Jennifer could exercise," Marcus said.

He sounded shaken by the experience. "She exercises between 6:30 and 7:30 and I love her and she's a wonderful person, but this is a sickness," he said. "There should be a telethon for people like this."

From a close-up of one nest, we now move to a more bird's-eye view of lark-owl marriages around the country. It is based on a study published in a recent issue of The Journal of Marital and Family Therapy.

The title: "Morning and Night Couples: The Effect of Wake and Sleep Patterns on Marital Adjustment." The study drew on a survey of 150 couples in Montana, Utah amd Alabama, who were divided into morning couples, night couples and "mismatched" or morning-night couples on the basis of written responses to questions like these:

■ Is getting up in the morning usually easy or difficult for you?

■ Is staying up late at night usually easy or difficult for you?

■ If you had to choose one of these activities, which would you typically prefer: A.) a physical, outdoor activity during the day; B.) an evening activity at home with friends?

The study confirmed what its three authors — marriage and family therapists from Brigham Young University and the University of Nebraska — suspected.

Compared with morning couples and night couples, lark-and-owl couples spend less time together — as much as 45 percent less. And larks and owls have more fights and less sex than birds of a feather.

Since sleep-wakefulness patterns are set by the body's circadian rhythms, even the most devoted mismatched couples have trouble getting together.

"Most people cannot change their pattern more than an hour and a half," said Jeffry H. Larson, a Brigham Young professor and one of the study's authors.

Unless lark and owl happen to be experts on circadian rhythms, each tends to blame the other when their lives do not mesh and their needs are not met.

The lark resents the owl for, say, sleeping late on weekends, while the owl resents the lark for dozing at dinner parties.

"You're lazy" says the lark.

"You're no fun," says the owl.

But larks and owls who stay in the same nest seem to have better problem-solving and communication skills than matched couples. Though the researchers did not look at how mismatched couples coped, they speculated that some spouses might demand less of each other or might find "other support systems."

While the owl sleeps, the lark jogs with a neighbor. While the lark sleeps, the owl and a friend go to a movie.

Couples in the study were described as young — the mean age was 30 — married about six years, with two children.

"A major advantage for mismatched couples is that parents are available at both ends of the clock to care for babies," said D. Russell Crane, also of Brigham Young.

Crane did not mention this, but anecdotal evidence suggests that when the stork appears, the owl goes into hibernation. Any number of larks are owls with small children.

For a long-term success story, we now move to the nest of Laneta and Bill Goings in Toledo, Ohio, who have been married for 26 years and have two daughters, a lark and an owl.

"We each have our own space," Goings said. "We don't want to run together, get up at the same time, do the same things, be with each other all day."

Dawn finds Goings in bed and Mrs. Goings in the basement doing aerobic exercises. Hours later she leaves for her job as an administrative assistant at The Toledo Blade newspaper. Goings, who owns a microfilm service company, jogs at a gym at night before joining his wife for dinner.

"She's winding down and ready to sleep at 9, but my clock says ready to go," said Goings, who spends the last two hours of his day alone in front of the television set, flipping channels. "I'll watch two programs at once — a basketball game and a story."

"I can't stand that," Mrs. Goings said.

Yet they have things in common. Both enjoy walking the trails of a natural preserve near their home. They have the same discussion every summer.

"I always say, 'Let's go for a walk at 6:30 in the morning when the birds are chirping,' " Mrs. Goings said, "and he always says, 'Let's go at 6:30 at night' — when the mosquitoes are biting."

Goings added, "Sometimes I go on her time, sometimes she goes on my time. We compromise."

Compromise is a magic word, say therapists who work with lark-owl couples. But while no way is the right way, society still favors larks over owls, they add.

"Puritanism," said David Olson, a family psychologist at the University of Minnesota. " 'Early to bed, early to rise.' That we have these phrases in our culture is no accident. It symbolizes where we came from."

During lean times, more couples opt for one child

Some parents are deciding it is better to give one child the best rather than two half as much

EDITOR'S NOTE: Once upon a time, the birth of a first child was a brief stop on the road from newly married to a family of five plus a dog named Spot. Today, however, that firstborn child is frequently the last for frazzled parents short on time and money. This story, one in an occasional series on the changing family, examines some of the pros and cons of having, and being, an only child.

By Leslie Dreyfous
Associated Press

Gail and John Duncan came to parenthood slowly, postponing the decision into their late 30s while building competitive careers and enjoying a lifestyle earned through hard work.

By the time they decided to have their first child, it was clear they would have no more. Their schedules were already so full, and money so tight. Both practically and emotionally, one was all they could afford.

"It's better to give one child the best than to give two children half as good," said Gail, 42, an advertising copy writer in New York. "One is affordable. One is manageable. One is a handful, as it is."

The Duncans have found happiness in an only daughter named Phoebe. Like a growing number of couples, they've decided that one child works for them where two could not.

"Instead of having an army of children, we have time to devote to one child," said John, 46, who runs his own interior design firm. "And she's learned to dovetail, to work together with us in our busy lives."

The baby-boom generation faces an economic and social equation vastly changed since their parents were starting out. Today's parents often spend more raising one child than their own parents spent on a brood a few decades back.

MILLIONS OF COUPLES have adapted by scaling back the 1950s nuclear family ideal to suit contemporary realities such as the dual-career lifestyle and the high cost of child care, education or simply stocking the fridge.

"Middle-class parents want their children to have private schools, a car, a VCR and a college education," said Edward L. Kain, a Southwestern University sociologist and author of "The Myth of Family Decline."

"But this generation is looking at downward mobility, and a great way of insuring against that is to have fewer children and put more resources into the ones you have."

Indeed, that's what many have done. The number of women 40-44 years with an only child more than doubled from 598,000 in 1978 to 1.2 million in 1988. And over the same decade, the number of women 30-34 who said they planned only one child surged from 1 million to 1.7 million.

"It's been a dramatic trend toward smaller families," said Martin O'Connell, a demographer at the Census Bureau. "It's much more common to be an only child today than it was a decade ago."

Whether by choice or financial necessity, it's also far more common for that child's mother to work outside the home. As a result, busy parents are often exhausted just imagining a larger family's exponential demands.

"Two children does not mean one more than one. Two children is like 600 children," said Wendy Reid Crisp, director of the National Association for Female Executives and the mother of an only son.

"According to the taboos, having three children you can barely afford is doing the right thing," Crisp said. "But I think the idea of having only one child because that's how many you can afford to provide well for is a very honorable idea."

FOR A GROWING number of women, it's also proved de facto reality. Couples increasingly have delayed childbirth well into their 30s while pursuing career and other commitments.

The parents of many only children found that, by the time they'd negotiated the right time to have a baby, the biological clock had ticked on until it was too late to bear a second child.

"Many women who started having children at 35 and up must go to great lengths to have a second child, but many do it anyway," said Susan Ginsberg, editor of Work & Family Life newsletter.

"Some feel the family isn't complete without two kids and others are driven by an inner need not to have an only child," Ginsberg said. "Many just don't want to put all their eggs in one basket."

Though a pragmatic and increasingly common option, many prospective parents still resist raising an only child because of firmly rooted stereotypes, however erroneous.

"I'm old enough to have been raised with all the stigmas and taboos," said Susan Newman, mother of an only son who was "supposed to be spoiled, demanding, selfish, unable to share, antisocial and therefore lonely."

But through her own experience and scores of interviews for her book, "Parenting an Only Child," Newman happily discovered otherwise.

"Only children are no different than other children," she said. "They are very successful, very well socially integrated and very happy."

IN FACT, FAR from feeling deprived, many siblingless adults say overall they're better off for it.

"It gave me the confidence to take leadership roles in student council, sports, drama, everything I do," said Meredith Varga, a freshman at Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pa. "It's something my parents instilled in me because I got all that attention."

Contrary to images of the only child as loner, Ms. Varga learned early on to be outgoing and personable. Without brothers and sisters, she had to make friends when school was out or the family was on vacation.

"There were times when I was a little lonely and felt deprived. And sometimes people said I was overprotected or my parents focused too much on me," Ms. Varga said. "But we share so much love. We're all we have."

John Armour is also particularly aware of his special strengths just now, as he too stretches his wings and starts his first year away at college.

"At the dinner table growing up, everything was adult talk and I think that made me more mature and articulate. My parents gave me a head start," he said from his dorm room in Rochester, N.Y.

"Only children get a lot of goodies they wouldn't have otherwise: camp, private schools, trips. From the time you enroll them in nursery school, you're forking out gobs of money," said Armour's mother, Nancy, who lives with her husband in suburban Dallas. "There aren't many people who can multiply all those goodies two or three times."

STILL, MANY PARENTS worry that the "goodies" are not enough. And so, the inevitable and often agonizing questions arise: Is it fair to the child? Will the only child grow up too quickly, or feel too much under pressure?

Katherine Harrison, herself an only child, considered the pros and cons before deciding she'd like to have at least one sibling for her 18-month-old daughter.

"There is a specialness in being an only child, but I would have liked to have siblings not only growing up but as an adult," said Ms. Harrison, 30, whose novel, "Thicker Than Water," is narrated by an only child.

As adults, many only children face alone the physical and emotional burden of caring for elderly parents. Ms. Harrison, whose parents and grandparents are dead, was spared that trial.

"But I'm left feeling there's something missing," she said. "I have this longing for a sense of shared history, and a real sense of being alone in the world."

Eleni Otto is self-reliant, confident and independent — qualities she attributes to growing up with plenty of parental attention and support. She would not change her only childhood. And yet, there were compromises.

"When it's just one, you can be very sucked into your parents' lives and whatever they're dealing with," said Ms. Otto, of Seattle. "You're very focused on pleasing them."

IF SHE HAD it to do over, Ms. Otto's mother, Shirley Bergen, would give her daughter a little brother or sister to ease some of the pressure. But that's hindsight.

"At the time, I didn't see my decision as selfishness. I just thought it would be easier to focus and handle living with one child," Mrs. Bergen, 59, said from Madison, Wis. "But now, I look back and wonder. ..."

"In the end, I guess, it's not how many kids you have," she said. "I guess in the end, it's how well you love however many you have."

Issues to consider before having second child

Associated Press

Here are some discussion points for couples who are deciding whether to expand their family or to stop after having one child, according to Susan Newman's "Parenting an Only Child."

■ How will more children affect my marriage?

■ Will our personal freedom be curtailed by another child?

■ How will family life change if we have more than one child?

■ Are you prepared to give up the love affair with your firstborn?

■ What happens to the inner workings of the threesome if it becomes a foursome?

■ Can partiality be avoided when there is more than one child?

■ What if there are personality clashes within the threesome?

■ What does the only child think is the perfect family size?

■ What are the cost implications — big and small — of one versus two or more children?

■ Is your home attuned to your taste, your needs, and the times?

■ Can you "afford" a second maternity leave?

■ Can you juggle the logistics — and aggravation — of more child care?

In babies' names, 'everything old is new again'

By Paula Monarez
N.Y. Times York Times

LOS ANGELES — Remember the names Hannah and George. Eighteen years from now that's what will be appearing on a lot of college applications, according to Linda Rosenkrantz, co-author of "Beyond Jennifer and Jason: An Enlightened Guide to Naming Your Babies."

When it comes to naming their children, today's parents are relying on tradition, Rosenkrantz said.

Although Ashley, Jessica and Amanda are still tops, names like Claire, Grace and Katherine are becoming popular again. For the boys, Jason, Andrew and Jeremiah, remain favorites, but James, Edward and William are gaining ground.

"The excesses of the 1980s are gone," Rosenkrantz said. "Babies' names are more austere. They are more serious, adult, responsible names. Everything is leveling off and becoming simpler."

Naomi Kline, a licensed vocational nurse who works in the maternity ward for Kaiser Permanente Hospital in Panorama City, said naming baby is a task parents take seriously. "Most of them have a name when they come to give birth," she said. "But they are so caught up in the delivery that they often forget it and their own name.

"I think we are winding back to where we started from," she added. "I'm starting to see a lot more biblical names and less of those yuppie names."

Feather beds can take a hike

N.Y. Times News Service

Dr. Richard Malcolm, a Cortland, N.Y., physiologist and physicist, has invented an inflatable down sleeping-bag system that includes a waterproof tent. The bag can be inflated to diffuse the interior goose down, which provides the warmth.

The bag comes in large and small versions: the Cocoon 4 and the Cocoon 4/SL (for shorter and lighter).

The down mattress inflates to a thickness of 3½ inches; there are also a down-filled blanket and an orthopedic pillow.

The blanket, inflated, warms a person in temperatures as low as minus 45 degrees Fahrenheit, Malcolm said. He said that not inflated, it was comfortable at room temperature, about 70 degrees.

The Cocoon 4 and tent weigh 9½ pounds; the 4/SL weighs 1¼ pounds less because it is 6 inches shorter and 6 inches narrower and does not have the pillow. The Cocoon 4 is $676; the Cocoon 4/SL, $560. Call Envirogear at (607) 753-8801.

Celebrity confessions of child abuse — truth, publicity?

By Sylvia Rubin
N.Y. Times News Service

AP LaserPhotos

Beach Boy singer Brian Wilson, left, and comedienne Roseanne Barr Arnold are just two of many celebrities who have come forward recently with confessions of child abuse.

The whispers have turned into shouts. From the covers of magazines, on talk shows and in their autobiographies, celebrities are telling the world about their abusive childhoods.

The last few weeks have brought an unprecedented number of celebrity confessions:

■ Singer Sinead O'Connor, in a cover story in Spin magazine, says she was severely beaten by her mother. "I grew up in a state of terror," she reveals. "I was beaten up every single day."

■ Beach Boy Brian Wilson talks about his abusive father in his new autobiography, "Wouldn't It Be Nice," says his father beat him with a "splintered two-by-four."

■ Roseanne Barr Arnold, in People magazine last week, told of sexual abuse by both her parents.

■ La Toya Jackson hints in her autobiography that her older sister, Rebbie, was sexually abused; Jackson's husband-manager, Jack Gordon, went on the record saying that La Toya was "constantly abused by her father."

■ Oprah Winfrey also has broken the taboo by revealing she was sexually abused, the first time at age 9 by a distant cousin.

■ Marilyn Van Derbur Atler, Miss America 1958, recently told of repeated sexual abuse by her father during a 13-year period.

'Child abuse is so stigmatizing and so hard to talk about, that I think it's extremely unlikely that a celebrity would want to be seen as an abuse victim if they weren't.'

— Tiffany Weissmann Wind
research coordinator, Kempe Adult Survivors Program

IT SEEMS INCEST and abuse survivors DO want to talk. But will they be believed? Will the accused deny the charges?

The public may be more willing to believe a Marilyn Van Derbur Atler, who lives quietly in Denver, than a Roseanne Barr Arnold, known for her outrageous antics, or a La Toya Jackson, who, it has been implied, wrote a revealing autobiography of her family, including allegations of emotional and physical child abuse, for the publicity.

Tiffany Weissmann Wind, research coordinator for the Kempe Adult Survivors Program in Denver, at the Kempe National Center for Prevention and Treatment of Child Abuse and Neglect, disagrees.

"Child abuse is so stigmatizing and so hard to talk about, that I think it's extremely unlikely that a celebrity would want to be seen as an abuse victim if they weren't," Wind says.

Research has shown that false reports of child sexual abuse run about 6 percent, says Brian Abbott, executive director of the Giarretto Institute in San Jose, which treats abused children and trains professionals.

Hanah, a California incest survivor who doesn't want her last name used, has no doubts about the validity of child abuse confessions.

"I feel that Roseanne is very courageous to speak about it. It made me very angry that her father cries on TV, saying that he loves her. It's very typical for most parents to deny the accusations. It makes me very angry that her parents are making it sound as if she's lying. Survivors do not lie."

ARNOLD CLAIMS HER father "used to chase me with his excrement and try to put it on my head."

O'Connor describes an out-of-control mother, "a very unhappy woman who was very, very violent and found it very difficult to cope with life. ... I was beaten up very severely with every kind of implement you can imagine yourself being beaten with. And I was starved, I was locked in my room for days at a time without being fed, with no clothes. I was made to sleep in the garden of my house overnight. I lived for a summer in the garden of my house."

Both Arnold, who has been in therapy, and O'Connor, who is an advocate of 12-step programs, said they decided to talk because it might help others.

Arnold told People magazine, "I want to enter my voice into the mix. I want to be one more person who speaks out and up about incest, to give it a name. With a name and a visible form, we can treat it, contain it, destroy it."

Researchers say 200,000 to 360,000 cases of child sexual abuse occur each year in the United States.

In most states, including California, teachers, doctors, day-care providers and others who come into contact with children are required to report any incidences of suspected sexual abuse.

"Teachers have to support the child and let them know they believe them and explain to them that talking about to a professional will help them," says Rosa Florezhart, a therapist and supervisor with the Child and Adolescent Sexual Abuse Resource Center at San Francisco General Hospital.

BUT THERE IS no guarantee that a child will be exonerated by telling all. Abbott says he is not surprised Arnold's parents denied her accusations, or that Jackson's parents do not wish to discuss the book.

"Part of the recovery process for the victim is to stop taking the blame for sexual abuse and not to expect the offender to say they are sorry or admit to any wrongdoing. The survivor has to grieve the loss of that parent relationship that every child should have."

Arnold's parents are considering suing People magazine; they've retained San Francisco lawyer Melvin Belli to represent them. Jackson's parents called their daughter's confession "a pack of lies" and wouldn't comment further. Members of Brian Wilson's family have asked the courts to declare him incompetent.

Florezhart said she believes breaking the taboo of silence can be important, but hopes the victims have already obtained professional help before going public.

"Have these celebrities been through therapy and worked all this out, or are they just talking about this for the first time?" she asks.

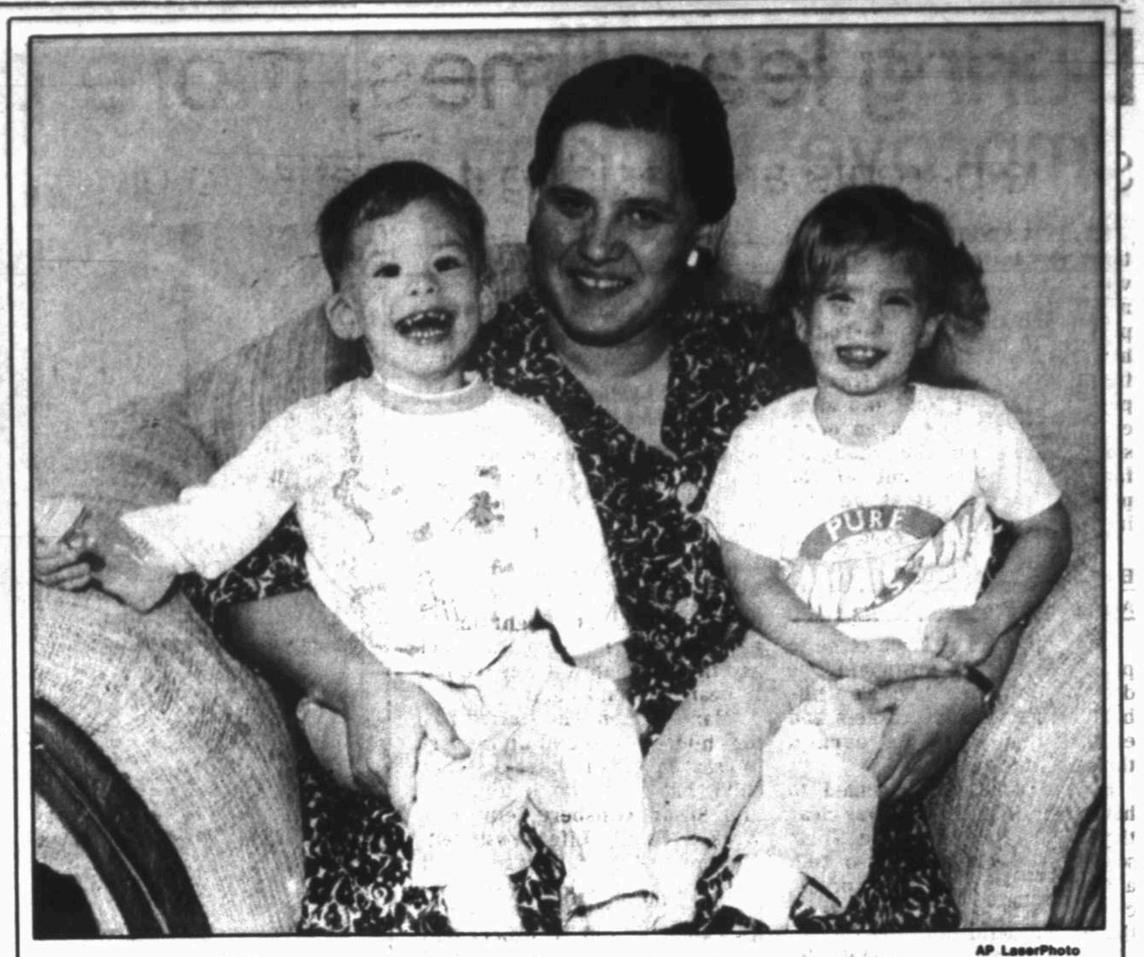

"Incest victims have to confront their mothers, their fathers, the uncle, whoever did this to them and work all that through before they should tell the world, or even their friends."

OFTEN, THE TRAUMA stays buried for decades, emerging much later in life. It is relatively common for women in their 20s and 30s to suddenly remember early childhood abuse, experts say.

That's when the flashbacks generally begin, often triggered by another trauma, perhaps being raped, or learning that her own child is being abused. Long-repressed memories can contain elements of truth or, some experts say, be pure fantasy or distortions.

Says Wind, "The reaction that La Toya and Roseanne may be getting in some circles is the same reaction that abused children may get from the outside world — that she is lying, or exaggerating, or making a big deal out of nothing.

"But as more and more people come forward with these revelations, people may begin to realize that this is the truth; then society as a whole will be more willing to believe its children."

Kevin Lopez, 2, left, and twin sister Lorraine sit on their mother Blanca Lopez's lap at their home in Elgin, Ill. His parents' unsuccessful search for a bone marrow donor to help cure Kevin of a rare form of muscular dystrophy highlights the difficulty Hispanics and other minorities have in finding people to make such donations.

Family's search for marrow highlights minorities' hurdles

By Elliot Spagat

CHICAGO (AP) — For more than a year, Santos and Blanca Lopez have searched in vain for bone-marrow donors for their 6-year-old son, who is dying of a rare brain disorder.

Doctors say Michael Lopez probably won't recover — he lies in a nursing home, blind, deaf and fed through a tube. And the couple's 2-year-old son, Kevin, was diagnosed with the same disease in January.

The family's unsuccessful campaign dramatizes the difficulty Hispanics and other minorities face finding bone-marrow donors. Such transplants are most common among leukemia patients but also are used to treat other diseases.

About 20 percent of white patients in need of a donor find one, compared to about 12 percent of Hispanics, 4 percent of blacks and 1 percent of Asian-Americans, said Dr. Paul McCurdy, project officer for the National Bone Marrow Program at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md.

According to the 1991 World Almanac, whites account for 84 percent of the U.S. population, blacks for 12 percent and Hispanics for 8 percent.

The National Marrow Donor Program, the nation's largest registry, said 779 of 812 transplant recipients since December 1987 were white.

"I get upset sometimes because I think things would be different if people cared more," Mrs. Lopez said last week. "It might not be that people don't care. It might be fear."

A bone marrow transplant requires a much more precise genetic match than a blood transfusion or kidney transplant. The chance of a match is better among donors and patients of the same race.

THE MARROW IS usually extracted from the back of the hip with a needle, McCurdy said. The donor is anesthesized, must stay in the hospital overnight and may feel pain for two or three days, he said.

About 10,000 Americans need the transplants, he said.

The Lopez children have adrenal leukodystrophy, a hereditary disease that makes the body unable to break down fat, said Dr. Eugene Schnitzler, who is treating them.

"It's a very strange disease," Schnitzler said Tuesday. "Out of nowhere you develop these horrible symptoms."

Kevin has yet to suffer the horrors plaguing Michael: blindness, deafness, an inability to walk and difficulty swallowing.

Friends of Kevin Lopez, a volunteer group headed by the owner of a Chicago T-shirt store, Matthew Alschuler, held several donor drives in the Chicago area. Hundreds of people have been tested, but none has matched.

Kevin appeared on a Spanish-language TV station and 20,000 fliers were distributed in Hispanic neighborhoods in April announcing a drive to test potential donors at a high school.

"Hardly anyone showed up, maybe 120 people," Alschuler said. "I don't know what it is. (Hispanics) are just a hard group to reach."

A federal fund for minority testing largely defrays the cost of tissue-testing, which runs $50 to $65 for each volunteer. The federal government and a private insurer pay the boys' medical bills.

Liz Quam, spokeswoman for the Minneapolis-based National Marrow Donor Program, said educational programs in the past were lacking. The number of minority volunteers has increased dramatically since a nationwide educational campaign began last year, she said.

The campaign targets minority communities with TV and radio announcements as well as speeches at churches and colleges.

THE REGISTRY REPORTED a 472 percent increase from September to July in Asian Americans who have signed up to donate. The increase was 319 percent for American Indians, 294 percent for Hispanics, 181 percent for blacks and 101 percent for whites.

Still, 72 percent of the program's 406,379 volunteers are white, 5.4 percent are Asian American, 3.4 percent are black, 3 percent are Hispanic and 0.7 percent are American Indian.

Mrs. Lopez, 30, is a data operator for an insurance company in South Barrington. Her 32-year-old husband works for a company that makes car sealants. They visit Michael every night at a nursing home near their home in Elgin.

The couple, who emigrated from Puerto Rico in 1979, also have a healthy daughter.

Of their tragedy, Mrs. Lopez said, "sometimes it's so big you can't believe it's happening."

Users say pills improve thinking

By Lori Moody
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Jeff Mandel believes he has found the secret to clear thinking, social grace and enhanced brainpower — in short, the secret to be a successful film and television writer.

Drugs.

But not just any drugs. Everyday, Mandel swallows more than a half dozen "smart drugs," which are legal, to "keep my brain healthy." His pill bill runs between $90 to $110 a month.

"All these drugs in combination really put the solution to any problem right at your fingerprints," the 39-year-old Los Angeles resident said. "The time it takes you to identify a problem, figure it out and know what to do, that time has been reduced to practically zero."

Mandel is just one of an untold number of people taking so-called "smart drugs" — substances that advocates claim increase intelligence and enhance memory but critics denounce as unproven and potentially risky.

"Nothing has been shown to improve human memory," said Peter Davies, a professor of pathology and neuroscience at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York. "It's a fad and a potentially dangerous one.

"I don't see any difference in taking Piracetam (an unapproved drug in the United States) and snorting a gram of cocaine."

SOME OF the drugs touted as "smart drugs" were developed to treat Alzheimer's disease or other problems associated with aging but have proven ineffective, experts say.

While some so-called "smart drugs" are federally approved and available over the counter, smart-drug users generally buy their supplies by mail from other countries by taking advantage of a loophole in the law.

In July 1988, the Food and Drug Administration established a "personal importation policy" to allow people with serious ailments and no available treatment in this country to get unapproved drugs mailed or carried into the United States. The move was in response to people with AIDS.

However, the person can get no more than a three-months supply at a time and must be able to provide the name of a doctor responsible for his or her care, said Rosario Vior, a spokeswoman for the FDA's Los Angeles district.

She said the FDA has not found any drugs that enhance mental prowess.

"They are basically abusing the whole purpose of this clause," she said. "There is no drug approved for increasing intelligence or enhancing memory."

The FDA monitors imported drugs but "not everything is caught like we'd like," Vior said.

"I can tell you, the FDA is working on this," she said. "It has some current cases in this particular area. There's nothing we can share at this time."

John Morgenthaler, co-author of "Smart Drugs & Nutrients" published in January 1990, said he has been researching "smart drugs" for his own use for the past 10 years and takes several types. The book lists several compounds and nutrients, dosages and possible side effects.

BUREAUCRACY AND the high cost of getting drugs available in other countries keeps them from being approved in the United States, he said, adding that his book cites more than 250 research papers. He co-authored the book with Ward Dean, a physician in Florida.

"Our medical system operates on a paradigm of treatment of disease," said Morgenthaler, of Santa Cruz. "We don't think of improving people, performance enhancement."

As baby boomers get older, they will look to drugs to stop the declining affects of age on the brain, Morgenthaler said.

"There's no way this is a fad," he said. "What we're seeing here is a beginning of a long-term trend."

Experts say the drugs remain unproven. "If I could really prove I had a drug that improved intelligence, I'd be taking it myself," said Davies, at Albert Einstein College. "If you had something that could improve IQ by 10 points, (imagine) what the market would be.

"If you had a reasonable idea how to do that, I could raise $10 million tomorrow."

Experts say they are concerned that the people with neurological problems may look to "smart drugs" for help and fail to get legitimate treatment when it becomes available.

Smart-drug users also risk potential side effects, scientists and researchers say. For instance, Hydergine, an FDA-approved drug to treat Alzheimer's disease, can cause nausea and changes in blood pressure, researchers say. Early symptoms of Alzheimer's, the fourth leading cause of death in the United States, include forgetfulness, agitation and confusion.

No drugs have been found to stop the progression of the disease, officials said.

SMART-DRUG ADVOCATES claim Vasopressin, an FDA-approved drug used to treat diabetes, increases memory and learning ability. But the drug can cause nausea and cramps, and at high doses, narrow the blood vessels and increase blood pressure, according to the American Medical Association Guide to Prescription and Over-the-Counter Drugs.

Davies said that healthy people face potential risks by using the drugs in combinations and amounts that have not been tested. "My concern in this area is that the kind of studies we've done in Alzheimer's patients were quite short term," he said. "We didn't encounter problems in toxicity. We didn't do anything close to the doses people are popping."

Ida Hellander, a researcher for Ralph Nader's watchdog Public Citizen Health Research Group in Washington, D.C., questioned how effective the drugs could be on healthy people when they have not worked on Alzheimer's patients.

People should not take drugs for other than the approved use, she said. Some "smart drugs" could potentially be dangerous, like Dilantin, an epilepsy treatment, which can cause blood cell abnormalities, Hellander said.

David Brown, a 30-year-old science fiction writer, said that except for a stomach ache the first time he used Hydergine — which increases the blood flow in the brain — he has not experienced any other ill effects since he began taking it regularly a year ago.

Brown said he also began taking Piracetam, a drug developed to treat brain disorders that hasn't been approved, six months ago.

"SMART DRUG" advocates say Piracetam promotes the flow of information between the right and left hemispheres of the brain. Morgenthaler's book warns users that the drug can increase the effects of other drugs, like amphetamines, and in rare cases, cause nausea, gastrointestinal distress and headaches.

"I read all the literature," Brown said. "So far as I can tell from my own use and everything I've read, they're pretty free from side effects. Anything I put in my body, I put in with great caution."

People have been looking for ways to boost their intelligence for centuries, said Dr. Ronald Lawrence, an Agoura Hills neurologist and psychologist. Red wine concoctions were thought by the Italians to enhance memory. Oysters and clams were believed to not only improve the mind but bolster the libido.

These days people are looking for an easier way and turn to pills, Lawrence said. "Americans want to solve everything with a pill," he said. "Pills cure everything, take care of everything. Sort of like 'get smart fast, pop the pill.'

"Of course, you have side effects and all the other stuff."

There may be a psychological factor that comes into play. Some people may really think they are feeling the effects from the drugs because they believe the claims are true, he said.

"Now we know more than ever in the history of healing, the mind can literally cure the body in many cases, not all, if the mind really thinks that's going to happen," Lawrence said.

WHILE THERE are no drugs proven to enhance memory or make people smarter, research is showing that serious contenders for improving human cognitive ability is growing all the time, said Thomas Chase, chief of the experimental therapeutics branch at the National Institutes of Health in Maryland.

Most important, scientists are beginning to understand what causes Alzheimer's disease, he said. "The concept of "smart drugs" is not so far off," Chase said. "It's within our grasp. I think there will be some elements we'll be able to use before long."

DEAR ABBY

Wife says 'cut' to husband's insistence that he film sex

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Like many others, I never thought I'd be writing to you. My husband and I have been married for 20 years. About two years ago, he started getting very bullheaded and selfish — even the people at work mentioned it.

Van Buren

Our sex life was always OK until about two months ago, when he bought a video camcorder and announced that he wanted to videotape us having sex! Abby, I have never been a prude, but that's where I draw the line. I tried to talk him out of it, but he said he would not have sex with me again unless it was on film.

I asked him to go to counseling with me. He refused — saying I was the one with the problem. I asked him to have a medical checkup. He refused. I tried to tell him how degrading it would be for me, etc., but to no avail. He has been badgering me every night for two months!

I am at my wit's end. I am sick to death of his badgering, and I don't know what to do. I've even thought of divorcing him, but I still love him, and we are just approaching the time when we could travel and enjoy life.

I'm signing my real name, city and state, but please don't use them in your column, as I would be very distressed if anyone we knew found out about this. — LIVING A NIGHTMARE

DEAR LIVING: You surely know that your husband is a sick man. You absolutely must get him to a doctor for a psychiatric evaluation. Please don't treat this as anything other than a potentially life-threatening illness. Your husband's behavior could be symptomatic of a brain disorder (possibly a tumor). You must talk to your family physician about your husband's sudden personality change. And please write again and give me a progress report.

DEAR ABBY: Maybe you can shed some light on a problem that has been bothering me. Can you tell me why my husband, who is nearly 70 (but in excellent health), has in recent years become more and more "allergic" to soap and water?

Many of my friends of approximately the same age have confided to me that they have the same problem with their husbands. Is there a psychological or physiological explanation for this behavior — or is it just another way men have of aggravating their wives? — COLUMBUS, GA.

DEAR COLUMBUS: I have heard this complaint before, but it applies to women as well as men. There is no single explanation, but I offer the following: As a person ages, one's senses — hearing and sight — grow dull, so why not the sense of smell as well?

Some older people may find it difficult or inconvenient to bathe daily. It's also possible that they do not change their undergarments daily. Arthritis might also make it painful to wash themselves thoroughly.

DEAR ABBY: I thought I'd share with you a very poignant letter that appeared in the San Francisco Chronicle recently. Perhaps you will want to share it with your readers. — S.K. IN HAYWARD, CALIF.

DEAR S.K.: I think it is well worth sharing with my readers. It appeared in the "Letters to the Editor" section, and here it is:

LOOKING FOR A PARADE

Can I march in your parade, too? I came back from World War II after being in five battles, and I don't remember any ticker tape.

We were near Japan on VJ Day and didn't get to participate, unlike some of the lucky National Guardsmen in the latest short war.

In 1945, we were so jumpy from kamikaze attacks that we had a general quarters alarm after the Japanese surrendered. It was very remote from the joyful madness I saw displayed in pictures of Market Street.

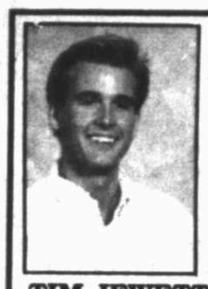

Our ship's company had not seen civilization in over a year, and it was another eight months before I was mustered out.

Can I be in your parade now? — ROBERT L. HEATON, LAFAYETTE, CALIF.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "GOT IT BAD IN HARTFORD, CONN." Please send "Mr. Wonderful" on his way. There is no situation as hopeless as a single woman who's got it bad for a married man who never had it so good.

"How to Be Popular" is an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person. To order, send a long, business-size, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. Costumes are imaginative

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The variations of Halloween costumes are as limitless as the imagination, so it's usually the depth of the wallet that defines the detail of the demon.

With adequate funding, there's Robin Hood and his Merrymen; Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles; Clowns, both Bozos and Hobos; Bart Simpson; Killer Tomatoes (and other edibles, such as M&Ms, Snickers, Hershey Kisses); Ariel "The Little Mermaid" and Prince Eric; baby dinosaurs; scary monsters, such as witches, ghosts, mummies, vampires and devils; cartoon characters, including Mickey & Minnie Mouse, Snoopy, Garfield, the Flintstones, Jetsons.

But for the creative, the patient and the thrifty, consider making a costume yourself — it's not as hard as you think.

The variety of Halloween sewing patterns has grown tremendously in recent years.

These can be used for individual parts, to make ears, or a hat, a cape or skirt, as well as to make a complete costume from scratch.

Just be sure to make the costume roomy enough so that sweaters or jackets can be worn underneath, in case it's cold outside.

The craft-hobby and fabric markets offer supplies that even the novice seamstress can handle.

In fact, with some of these products, children as young as toddlers can help make their own costumes.

Here are a few tips from the Craft & Hobby Information Bureau:

■ A myriad of fabric paints, especially those that glow in the dark, can jazz up any costume. These paints also can be a safety feature because they make costumes visible when trick or treating at night.

■ Pre-cut felt shapes come in different Halloween motifs. A moon or star, for example, can be glued onto a ready-made witch hat; a ghost and pumpkin surrounded by the word "BOO!" can be adhered to a trick-or-trick bag.

■ Simple, plain paper eye masks can be painted any color and decorated with pipe cleaners for whiskers to make a cat mask. Cat ears can be cut from felt and glued onto a black headband. Don a black leotard and leggings, and voila!, you have a scary Halloween feline.

Other Halloween costume decorating tips:

■ Create feet and paws for animal costumes with old tube socks, mittens and gloves by gluing on "nails" cut from felt or painting toes and pads on the bottom.

■ Print your own Halloween motifs on fabrics with printing blocks cut from sponges or potatoes.

Matriarch keeps eye on business

By Theresa Humphrey

TILGHMAN, Md. (AP) — Miss Alice leaned on the deck rail at the water's edge and talked about her husband.

"He wasn't one to splurge," she said. "He liked to travel, go a lot of places."

She gazed around, wondering what Levin F. Harrison would think of the business these days. Since his death 12 years ago, it has grown to what the family says is the largest charter boat fleet on the East Coast.

"It has changed," she said. "I keep thinking of my husband. If he could see now what it's like."

Alice Harrison, known as "Miss Alice," is the 86-year-old matriarch overseeing Harrison's Chesapeake House, a rustic country inn and charter boat fishing operation on tiny Tilghman Island, where she was born and raised.

She travels to the Caribbean and might spend a month or two in winter at her daughter's place in Florida, but she always comes back to Tilghman — once a thriving town that included a bowling alley, seafood packing houses, a doctor and undertaker but now is little more than a village with some old-timers, the elementary school she attended and the encroaching development of summer homes overlooking the Chesapeake Bay.

AP LaserPhoto

Alice Harrison, known as "Miss Alice," shows James Haskins how to make crab cakes at Harrison's Chesapeake House on Tilghman Island, Md., in June. Miss Alice is the 86-year-old matriarch overseeing the restaurant, country inn and charter boat fishing operation on the island.

MISS ALICE also watches over three subsequent generations: her two children, their four boys and two great-grandsons. Her son, Levin F. "Buddy" Harrison runs the business and is largely responsible for its expansion from 20 rooms to 73; the addition of a bar; and growth from one dining room to three.

There's a deck on the lawn at the water's edge. The 15 boats include the Lady Alice, named for Miss Alice and Beaudacious, named for her first great-grandson, Levin F. "Beau" Harrison V.

Executives come from all along the East Coast for a day or two of charter fishing. Couples come for a romantic weekend. And the locals from the Eastern Shore come for the family style dining at the inn.

Any Harrison able to work is involved. Buddy Harrison and his son Bud run the fishing fleet in Tilghman. Buddy's wife, Bobbie, is general manager of the inn; Bud's wife, Leslie, works there. Harrison's other son, Chuck, runs the family's restaurant in Baltimore, along with Harrison's sister, Sondra McGee. Mrs. McGee's sons, Devin and Dickie, also work there.

The Harrisons own an oyster packing house on the island. And Harrison said they own about 40 percent of the property on the 3½-by-1 mile island.

Miss Alice said she would have been disappointed if her children had not followed in the business.

"I wanted it to be for the simple reason that when you work a business up from nothing ... you don't want it to go out of your hands. You want your family to be a part of it," she said.

HER FATHER-IN-LAW started the business "in the horse and buggy days," Miss Alice said. When the steamboat from Baltimore docked, he would meet the guests "and bring them up in the buggy and they would stay sometimes the entire summer. They had the old rail out front to hitch the horses to."

She and her husband took over when his parents died.

Before he died, Miss Alice's husband told her, "Don't get in Buddy's way," when it comes to the business, and she doesn't. But she hasn't exactly taken a back seat.

She pointed to a chair and table in the middle of the lounge and bar area and said that's where she feels most comfortable. "I can see everything that goes on in the dining rooms and everything in the kitchen.

"I'm not just sitting here just to sit," she said. "I'm sitting here to watch and see that everything's going all right, see that they're taking care of the customers."

Miss Alice, taught to cook by her mother, has been working in the inn's kitchen since she married into the business at 27.

The menu consists mostly of her recipes, and she does most of the seafood dishes and baking, starting around 8:30 a.m. Her specialties are crab cakes — with a little mustard and the lumps of meat intact — stewed tomatoes, Southern fried chicken, and a black forest cake that takes six hours to make.

"All of this has been years and years of Miss Alice working with food and as the business has grown, her recipes have grown too from what the original menu was," said Buddy's wife, Bobbie. "Her niche and her art are with food and all these recipes have become a result of that."

"APPEARANCE MEANS everything, taste. If you listen to her she'll learn you a lot," said Lorraine Tucker, who's been working in the kitchen for 12 years.

Miss Alice has shown the staff "a hundred times" how to make pie crust, but none can top hers.

"I think it's in the touch," she said. "I think you have to know what that texture is to make a good crust. I've been doing it about 60 years. It's all in caring."

After a day in the kitchen, Miss Alice often joins guests on the porch for small talk. Or, if she holds court at her table in one of the dining rooms. All the while, she keeps an eye on the staff.

Miss Alice said her secret of life is hard work. "I think that is what keeps a person going. You know if you get up in the morning and you have no goal to reach, you have nothing. You wonder, 'what am I going to do today?' I think as long as you can keep going, it keeps you alert. Keeps your mind active, your body also," she said.

'Widow women's club' brings members support, friendships

By Bill Whitaker

ABILENE (AP) — Seven long years have passed, but Edie Miller still recalls, and in sharp detail, how she enlisted the first member of what you might very respectfully call a "widow woman's club."

Edie, who in 1984 had only recently become a widow herself, resolved she was going to get a friend experiencing similar grief out and about — even though her morose friend loudly insisted she wasn't going anywhere.

"Oh yes, you are!" Edie snapped. "I'm coming over and I'm gonna pound on your door till you come out!"

Thus began a merry group of widows who, besides meeting early each Saturday morning at Grandy's, gather somewhere different once a month, either to drive to an out-of-town cafe, picnic at Dorothy Whittington's ranch near Cross Plains (chiggers be danged) or frolic at a "pajama party."

No, there's no membership due and no official name for this spunky group of 40. Only thing is, you have to be a widow to participate.

"THIS IS for all those widows who had trouble adjusting to the loss of a loved one," Edie said during a special meeting of the group at Grandy's on a recent morning. "It's just grown and grown, and this is the most wonderful bunch of people you'll ever meet."

Juanita Norwood, 73, who lost her husband almost four years ago, is quick to testify to the group's optimism. In fact, after Edie made a remark about how she wouldn't let anyone in the group collapse into pathos and despair, Juanita chimed:

"Yeah, I'm so happy when I leave here, I can go home and tear the house down."

Certainly, things are livelier when the widows get together. Edie, 69, a cheerful, elegant woman, recalls one occasion when some of the widows got dressed up in baby doll pajamas and spent the night at one widow's home — which was fine till several found themselves in a dark hallway.

"There we were," Edie recalled, "groping in the dark and patting the wall, and we caught ahold of each other and just about scared ourselves to death."

Another time, the widows decided to throw a surprise party for Juanita, then ailing from cancer. With some help, they tricked the former Timex and Farrington Oil Company employee into dropping by Alma Helton's house where she found not only the widows waiting but members of her own far-flung family.

"They said I was such an inspiration to them that they wanted to throw a surprise party for me," Juanita recalled. "They made me queen for a day — I mean, they really did. They had a red carpet rolled out, put a crown on my head and gave me roses.

"It was the nicest thing that ever happened to me," she said.

ABSENT MEMBERS take their missed meetings seriously, such as Jane Hefner. Despite a trip to San Antonio for back surgery and a slow period of recuperation, Jane continued to phone regularly, just to keep up with the widows' activities.

At one recent meeting, the women presented Mary Allred, education minister at Calvary Baptist Church, with a camcorder the group won by collecting thousands of dollars worth of Grandy's receipts, green stamp-style. They turned them in for a prize offered by Grandy's.

Manager Terry Brown said the widows accomplished this task pretty much on their own — which gives you some idea of how often they go to Grandy's. However, they did have some help.

For one thing, 84-year-old Britt Smartt, who sometimes sits near the widows with his wife, Mattie, showed no reluctance about asking customers if he could have their receipts. He'd often show up at the widows' tables with pockets full of Grandy's stubs.

"Everybody who'd get up to leave, he'd go and say, 'You gonna keep your receipt?' " Edie said. "And most of the time they'd say no. And since it was the same people coming to Grandy's every Saturday, they just got to where they automatically gave him their receipts.

"Mr. Smartt's pretty special," she said. "We kind of made him our mascot."

FOR THE RECORD, Britt relishes being the only man present and Mary Allred, who isn't married, obviously enjoyed her time with the group. But make no mistake about it: the core of this group involves widows, and if one of them remarries — well, they wish her the very best but she's out.

"Of course," said 80-year-old Leola Williams, a retired LVN, "we haven't had but one get married."

"Yes," Edie joked, "they're afraid we'll still have more fun than they will."

"Amen," Britt said.

Music can help hospitalized children, adults in recovery, singer says

By Betty Webb

N.Y. Times News Service

Just whisper the word "chemotherapy" to most adults and watch them pale with fear.

But not Noel Paul Stookey, of Peter, Paul and Mary. He makes recordings for The Celebration Shop, a non-profit organization that, through song, eases children's fears of hospitalization and chronic illness.

A 16-song album, "Friends of the Family," contains "Hospital Rap," a child's-eye view of CAT scans, EKGs, spinal taps and chemotherapy. Another song, "I'm A Little Cookie" deals with a child's fears that his surgically altered appearance may diminish his ability to be loved.

One of the album's most poignant songs, "Why Me," forthrightly addresses that unanswerable question.

Almost unbelievably, these songs about illness and surgery manage to be warm, educational — and very funny.

Stookey became involved in the project when Celebration Shop president and founder Jim Newton approached him after a concert. One of Newton's friends had a child with cancer, and Newton wanted to know how he could help.

Says Newton, a singer himself, "I'd performed several concerts at hospitals, and the medical staffs had all told me how great the need was for children's materials. So I went to the children themselves, and they actually helped me write some of the funnier lines on 'Hospital Rap.' "

Newton credits Stookey for the high recording values of the tape, which took three years and more than $100,000 to produce. Stookey also was instrumental in getting corporate funding for the project, notably from Northern Paper Products.

Says Newton, "Northern purchases the tapes from us then sends us into the children's hospitals where we donate the tapes and accompanying coloring books to children. But much of the time, when we go in to sing, the children already know all the songs. They just love them."

Newton and Stookey also recorded "Children At Heart," a collection of songs for adults in various recovery programs.

On this album, songs such as "One Day At A Time" and "Higher Power" encourage adults to find their own inner strength, while "TV Rap" and "There's an Elephant in the Living Room" offer a comic yet insightful commentary on the skewed ways dysfunctional families view the world. Stookey is excited about his work with the organization.

For more information about Friends of the Family or Children At Heart, call the Celebration Shop Inc. at (817) 268-0020, or write them at P.O. Box 355, Bedford, Texas, 76095. Cassettes are $10, C.D.s $12, coloring books (in English or Spanish) $2.75. Add 15 percent for shipping and handling.

Sex stories new national obsession

By Erma Bombeck

One of the greatest spectator sports in America today is sex. It has replaced the Super Bowl, the World Series and the Indy 500.

Bombeck

Our fascination with peeking into the private lives of people we don't know is as compelling as an accident where cars slow down to gawk. Now we have come to a complete stop. Every day there are half a dozen talk shows that make us privy to every problem, from women who won't make love unless they smell burnt popcorn to auto mechanics who are turned on by a stuck accelerator. There are another half-dozen magazine-type shows that lift the most sexual, bizarre headlines of the day and give viewers an in-depth rerun.

But that isn't enough to satisfy the insatiable appetites of inquiring minds.

Kitty Kelley tells us her version of what happened in Nancy's bedroom while the president was presidenting. Geraldo reports of a sexual scoreboard over his bed (and I can only assume an applause sign). A day without a Kennedy in the news is like a Florida day without sunshine.

And still the crowds scream for more. No one cares what Mike Tyson's fighting weight is. They want to read the details of his buttock bouts. Home videos of Julia Roberts and Kiefer Sutherland partying are bootlegged to a hungry TV audience. The popularity of a TV show, "Love Connection," where couples describe in some detail their evenings together, is a catalyst for five new copies this fall ranging from "Kiss and Tell" to "How's Your Love Life?"

As a national election looms, it is inconceivable to imagine how anyone is going to get elected president if he doesn't come up with a sizzling sex life. If you're an editor and a candidate has a plan to reduce the deficit and bring jobs to 2,000 people, and the other candidate frolics nude in the Tidal Basin every day with a cupcake from the secretarial pool, which one is going to grab your headline? Grow up.

Forget the Iran-contra affair, the economy, the homeless, health care, environment issues, the jobless, drugs, education, abortion and Supreme Court appointments. George Bush is going to have to come up with something pretty spectacular to get people's attention. He's going to have to create a "Kennedy" tryst with Margaret Tutwiler, an Eisenhower liaison with his driver, or even a simple Carter lust-in-his-heart. Something!

Makes you have more respect for Harry Truman, doesn't it? How did the man ever get elected?

'Football fever' infecting new television season, movies

By Yardena Arar
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Football fever is afoot — in Hollywood.

Take a good look at the movie marquees and prime-time television. On the big screen, you've got Scott Bakula playing a thirtysomething freshman college quarterback in "Necessary Roughness" and Ken Wahl playing a pro quarterback-turned-crimebuster in "The Taking of Beverly Hills."

Meanwhile, a goodly share of the audience that isn't married to ABC's Monday Night Football is watching Burt Reynolds as an amiable former NFL star turned amiable husband, father and small-town high school coach in "Evening Shade."

The following night comes a personal favorite, Craig T. Nelson as the well-intentioned (and, of course, amiable) but unmistakably chauvinist title character of "Coach" — a whole sitcom built around the game.

(Let us not forget, while we're on the subject, the first such endeavor — Home Box Office's "First and 10," once a steady source of employment for O.J. Simpson and a kinder, gentler, pre-"Designing Women" Delta Burke.)

FOOTBALL HEROES have been screen staples for quite some time now: Not that long ago, one of them lived in the White House. Ronald Reagan's portrayal of George Gipp in 1940's "Knute Rockne, All-American" may not have been the high point of his acting career (let others debate what was), but it's probably the one turn that keeps him from being remembered only for "Bedtime for Bonzo."

In Reagan's day, football was still a metaphor for everything manly and admirable in the American character. You went out there and gave your all for your team and surely victory would follow (never mind that someone on the losing side surely had tried just as hard).

It wasn't until the '70s that films like "The Longest Yard," "Semi-Tough" and "North Dallas 40" began suggesting that football was not fun and games.

Reynolds starred in the first two of those three films, and that history makes his Emmy-winning performance in "Evening Shade" all the more appealing.

Here's a guy who has survived the football wars and gone on, with only an occasionally twinge of regret, to the really important things in life: marriage, family, community and a delightful ongoing semi-serious feud with a father-in-law (Hal Holbrook) who feels his daughter married beneath her. He's undoubtedly one of the gifted Linda Bloodworth Thomason's most endearing creations.

In some ways, "Necessary Roughness" is a direct descendant of the films about football's seamier side. Bakula plays a one-time high school sensation cheated out of a college — and possibly professional — career by the untimely death of his farmer father. He belatedly gets to take his shot when a fictitious Texas college is forced to rebuilt its squad from scratch: Its championship team and their coaches were all kicked out for breaking the National Collegiate Athletic Association regulations.

GIFTED BAKULA'S character may be, but without a real team to back him up his efforts are not only useless, he himself is subjected to bone-crushing (pumped-up sound effects make this description seem literal) bodily damage.

"Necessary Roughness" isn't great football comedy (you have to go back to the Marx Brothers in "Horsefeathers" for that), but a fine cast and a deft approach to the slight story make for a pleasant diversion.

There isn't much to say about Ken Wahl in "The Taking of Beverly Hills" because, frankly, there isn't much to say about the movie.

Which brings us to "Coach," in which Nelson plays essentially the kind of dumb jock Kozack was talking about, yet manages to be likable anyway.

LIKE THE football hero, the dimwitted athlete is another durable national stereotype. But Nelson's character has an essential decency — innocence, even — that saves him from his worst self. In a way, he's a sort of late-'80s/early-'90s Archie Bunker, the principal victim of his preconceived notions.

One of the most underappreciated comedies on TV, "Coach" consistently delivers.

Pollution criminals face prosecution

MORRISTOWN, N.J. (AP) — The U.S. government is getting tougher on companies and corporate executives responsible for polluting the environment.

Criminal prosecutions of environmental violators, which numbered 40 in 1983, rose to 134 in 1990, according to J. Michael Nolan, partner with the Pitney, Hardin, Kipp & Szuch law firm.

He says 258 corporations and 552 individuals have been indicted for environmental crimes since 1983.

A total of $72,590,750 in criminal penalties was assessed, and more than 361 years of imprisonment imposed.

Nolan says that since the government began enforcing environmental laws with criminal prosecution instead of civil proceedings, cases have been concluded in months instead of years.

Texan fastest runner

GAINESVILLE (AP) — Olympic sprinter Charles W. Paddock, born here in 1900, was known as the "world's fastest human" in the 1920s.

Paddock was a member of the 1920, 1924 and 1928 U.S. Olympic teams, winning the 100 meters in 1920.

During World War II, he was a Marine Corps captain and was killed in a plane crash in Alaska.
