Hopes for peace

LONDON — Hoping to prevent more killing by the Irish Republican Army, the British and Irish governments searched Monday for common ground in promoting peace talks in Northern Ireland. Both governments spoke of a need for compromise and insisted the Sinn Fein party had no place at the bargaining table until it disavowed the bloody tactics of its IRA allies./4A

Dole pulls out shaky win

Buchanan emerges as key challenger; Alexander runs third

Presidential hopeful Sen. Bob Dole and wife, Elizabeth, acknowledge supporters Monday night as they arrive at a victory party in downtown Des Moines, Iowa. Dole captured the Iowa Republican caucuses.

DES MOINES, Iowa — Sen. Bob Dole scored a shaky victory in Iowa's Republican presidential caucuses Monday night as Pat Buchanan emerged from the GOP field to ready a conservative challenge in next week's pivotal New Hampshire primary.

Former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander ran a solid third and hoped that would be enough to give his cash-poor campaign a fresh start for the five-week blitz of primaries likely to settle the nomination fight.

All the candidates vowed to press on, but Iowa's results were sobering to publishing heir Steve Forbes, who was a distant fourth, and may have dealt a fatal blow to Texas Sen. Phil Gramm, who ran fifth.

President Clinton was unopposed in the state's Democratic caucuses, and the bruising nature of the Republican race was a vivid reminder of Clinton's luxury.

Rivals rushed to assert that Dole's win was hardly convincing, noting that he ran 10 points behind his 1988 showing here. But Dole said his was hardly a weak showing, telling a victory rally, "We withstood a barrage of millions and millions and millions of dollars of negative advertising and came out on top."

With 97 percent of the vote counted, Dole had 26 percent to 23 percent for Buchanan. Alexander had 18 percent, Forbes 10 percent and Gramm 9 percent. Buchanan closed the Iowa campaign imploring supporters of anti-abortion longshot Alan Keyes to rally to his side and will head to New Hampshire wishing he had been more successful. Keyes got 7 percent, a remarkable showing given his shoestring budget. Indiana Sen. Dan Coats had 4 percent and plain-spoken businessman Morry Taylor 1 per-

Weak Gramm showing disappoints basin GOP leaders

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Local Republican leaders were disappointed with Phil Gramm's weak showing in the Iowa Republican Presidential Caucus, but were not surprised with Sen. Bob Dole's win.

"Well, I'm not surprised," local female Republican Women's Association member Margaret Rhea said of Dole's win. "He was not my favorite, but whoever is nominated, the Republican Party will have to vote for them," she said.

"I'm not really surprised by the results — I'm disappointed," said Ernie Angelo, a key political figure locally and member of the Republican National Committee.

"I'd certainly have liked to see Phil Gramm do better than he did," Angelo said.

Once the primaries are over, Ms. Rhea warned, party members must patch up their ideological differences and get behind the candidate. "If they do split, Clinton will walk right back into office," she said.

Midland County Republican Party Chairman Rick Strange believes that once the focus is off the primaries, Dole can defeat President Bill Clinton. "Once the primary season is over with, then the debate is not with ourselves," Strange said.

When the campaign focuses on the Democrats, Strange believes numbers in the polls will shift toward the Republi-

Victor faces nerve-wracking days ahead

DES MOINES, Iowa — It was a victory for Bob Dole, but a victory that nonetheless portends a nerve-wracking week ahead.

New Hampshire votes next, the state that killed Dole's hopes in 1988 and created Pat Buchanan in 1992.

While Dole was the clear winner in Monday night's Iowa caucuses, four out of every 10 caucus-goers preferred Buchanan and former Tennessee Gov. Lamar Alexander — underscoring widespread GOP uncertainty about the front-runner.

Dole was able to push aside the two rivals once believed to be his strongest opponents, multimillionaire publisher Steve Forbes and Texas Sen. Phil Gramm.

Still, Monday night's caucuses could prove more damaging to Dole — and to the Republican Party — in the long term.

Buchanan's strong second-place showing, reflecting the strength of Christian conservatives in Iowa, will pull Dole and the party further to the right.

Still, many analysts doubt that the former aide to Presidents Nixon and Reagan can go

County would streamline prosecutions

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The prosecution of criminal cases in Midland County would be strengthened and streamlined if a Commissioners Court's resolution to allow the District Attorney's Office to absorb the County Attorney's juvenile and misdemeanor criminal cases becomes law.

If implemented, the proposal would increase District Attorney Al Schorre's staff and caseload, which now is all felony cases, and would reduce County Attorney Mark H. Dettman's duties to county related civil litigation and to his advisory role to the Commissioners Court. His staff, too, would be reduced.

In a 4-0 vote, the Commissioners Court unanimously adopted the resolution. Schorre and Dettman hurrahed the proposal.

The measure would "add a lot of efficiency to the prosecution of cases," Schorre told the Commissioners Court. "It is not going to cost the county anything (additional funding) to do it."

Of the county's $18 million general fund budget, prosecution costs the taxpayers about $1.65 million. $1.08 million by the dis-

In grave matter, commissioners raise Fairview burial costs, fees

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

In a 3-1 vote, the Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday doubled the cost of adult burials — opening and closing graves — to $300 from $150 in the county's Fairview Cemetery.

And the commissioners left unchanged the cost of cemetery plots at $225 for adults and $100 for infants.

But they greatly increased — from $250 to $625 — the per-burial fee the county pays undertakers to bury indigent people.

Indigent burial fees include the $200-to-$450 cost of the cloth-covered, pressed-wood coffin for indigents, the body preparation and services. The coffin's price range is wholesale to retail.

The county provides the plot for indigent burials, and the county's sexton opens and closes the grave. Indigents are buried the day after death.

FDA clears first anti-baldness drug for over-the-counter sale

WASHINGTON (AP) — Balding Americans will be able to buy the hair-growth drug Rogaine by spring without stopping to see a doctor first.

The Food and Drug Administration decided Monday that Rogaine can be sold in drug stores alongside the shampoos and hair colorings, making it the only medically proven drug to fight baldness available without a prescription.

But while the move means people can buy a little hope against hair loss for about $30 a month, the FDA warned that not everybody should.

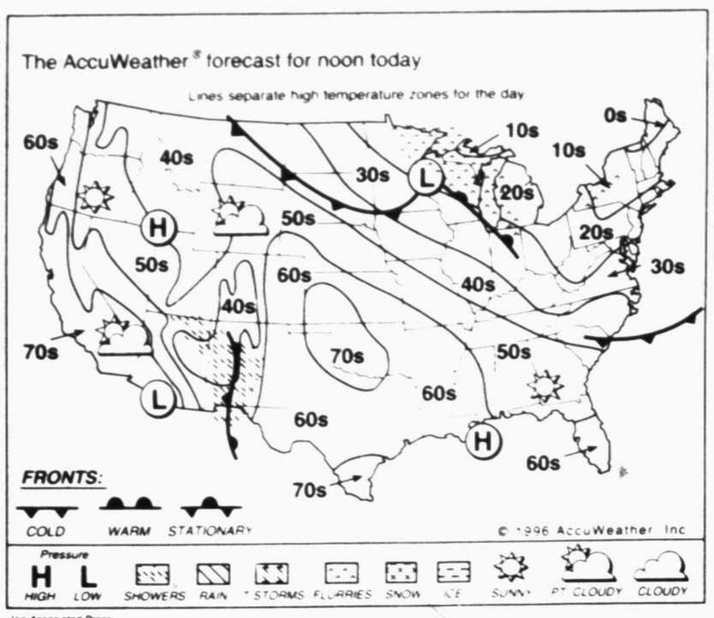

Some 40 million men and 20 million women suffer hair loss, most the hereditary form commonly known as male pattern balding. This is the only hair loss helped by Rogaine, which has been sold by prescription since 1988.

Even for those people, however, Rogaine doesn't always work, said FDA spokeswoman

STREAMLINE: County would shift criminal-case duties

(From 1A)

trict attorney's operations, and $568,000 by the county attorney's functions.

Dettman told the commissioners that "there is a potential for that (savings)" in the consolidation of criminal cases.

Overall, Dettman said, the consolidation "should be more efficient, because there is a lot of commonality of criminal acts. And one prosecutor could probably look at the total package of both juvenile involvement and adult involvement rather than having to have two separate entities."

Schorre heads a force of nine assistant prosecutors, and Dettman commands four assistant prosecutors.

If the proposal became law, Dettman's team of lawyers possibly would be transferred to Schorre's office.

"One day, they are going to be assistant county attorneys," Schorre said, "and the next day, they are going to be assistant district attorneys."

Schorre reasoned that by streamlining the handling of criminal cases, from simple assault and driving while intoxicated (DWIs) to robberies and murders, and placing them "under one organization, it ought to increase the efficiency of disposition.

"This way, a defendant can dispose of all his cases in one hearing," Schorre said. "He doesn't have to go upstairs (to the District Attorney's Office) to takes care of his felonies and downstairs to (the County Attorney's Office) take care of misdemeanors. It should free up time for both sets of courts - county court and district court."

The proposal comes in the final year of Dettman's four-year term in office. He is not seeking re-election. But two Midland attorneys, Republicans Janice Wolff Hinshaw, 29, and Russell Malm, 34, are seeking Dettman's $64,000-a-year job in the March 12 primary elections.

By their resolution, the commissioners are asking Texas Rep. Tom Craddick and Sen. Teel Bivins "to introduce legislation authorizing the 142nd District Attorney (Schorre) to prosecute all juvenile, misdemeanor and felony offenses occurring within Midland County."

The legislation, which would be proposed in 1997, would be inspired by the Commissioners' Court's wish "to streamline and promote the efficiency of criminal prosecution in Midland County."

Across Texas, there are jurisdictions, such as those in Dallas, Houston, San Antonio and Lubbock, that have combined county-attorney functions into district-attorney duties.

"Most of them combined the civil and the criminal," Dettman said.

Criminal district attorneys handle both criminal and civil litigations, as there are no county-attorney offices in jurisdictions of criminal district attorneys. In other instances, the district attorneys only handle misdemeanor and felony criminal cases, and county attorneys concentrate on civil cases and on counseling with the commissioners' courts in their jurisdictions.

The Midland County attorney would deal only with the civil aspect of the law. "No one wants to volunteer to be in that aspect of the job," Dettman said. "That's not the glamorous aspect of the job."

Midland County's proposed legislation says "the district attorney has all powers, duties and privileges conferred on district attorneys and prosecuting attorneys, including the prosecution of felonies, misdemeanors, delinquent children and children in need of supervision, asset forfeitures, protective orders, bond forfeitures and all other related proceedings."

Dettman said the nationwide move is to one-prosecutor jurisdictions.

Texas judicial districts, such as Midland's 142nd, coincide with counties — usually one-on-one.

"As far as prosecutors go, I think you will find that in most jurisdictions throughout the United States, it is just one prosecutor," Dettman said. "It is not a split system," such as a county attorney's jurisdiction and a district attorney's jurisdiction, which cover the same area.

"The reason we (in Texas) have a split system is when Texas was first founded, every county required the services of the county attorney for various reasons," Dettman said. "Districts were composed of five to 10 counties. And the district attorney would cover all of those and travel on the circuit as needed."

In recent history, "jurisdictions have become more compact," Dettmansaid, "and we ended up with each county having a full-time district attorney and a full-time county attorney."

Schorre said "there really is no downside" to the consolidation of Midland County's criminal cases in the District Attorney's Office. "Anytime you create a more efficient system, it is hard to say there is going to be any drawbacks to it."

cans. "I feel pretty confident," he said.

"As a Texan, I'm disappointed that Sen. Gramm didn't finish in the top three," Strange added.

"I think, whoever the Republican Party nominates will beat Clinton in the end — I'm very confident of that," Angelo said.

"The polls had showed pretty much this is the way it was going to be," said State Rep. Tom Craddick.

As a supporter of Phil Gramm, Craddick voiced disappointment that the senator did not have a better showing. "He ran a good race, but his message just didn't catch on in Iowa," Craddick said.

It is still early in the primary race, Craddick warned — there is still plenty of time for the numbers to shift. "It's still a wide-open race. I think it will be interesting to watch and see who comes out of the pack," he said.

Lou Brown, long-time Republican activist and member of the Republican Women's organization, said she was a little surprised by the strong showing of Pat Buchanan.

"I'm confused as to the big movement of conservatives from Phil Gramm to Pat Buchanan."

"He (Gramm) has always enjoyed good support from conservatives," Ms. Brown said. Ms. Brown said she had been witnessing the phenomenal shift of the very conservative to Buchanan.

"As Buchanan grew in strength, he was taking Phil Gramm supporters with him," she said.

Anglo said that he and many national Republican leaders believe that too much emphasis is being placed on small caucus areas like Iowa. After this year, there could be a shift in the way the party election process is conducted," he said.

Angelo said that there is still plenty of time for change, warning that Clinton only received 2.5 percent of the vote in Iowa and went on to win the election.

"It's too early to write anybody off," Angelo said.

"I didn't anticipate that Pat Buchanan would run as strong as he did," said local Republican activist Frank Cahoon. "I think this says that voters in Iowa were interested in a conservative candidate for president from the Republican Party — that's something that's going to be a new factor in the race," Cahoon said.

"I question that Dole will get the nomination. I think what we are seeing now is the dark horse of Pat Buchanan coming to the forefront... at this point I have to say that Pat Buchanan has better chance of getting the nomination than Dole does," Cahoon said.

Buchanan's outspoken criticism of the North American Free Trade Agreement may soon be a factor in Republican Party politics," Cahoon said.

"Christian conservatives have played a major role in this race. But also many working people are concerned with effect of NAFTA on their jobs," Cahoon said.

"It may give the Republican Party a little vigor — I'm encouraged," he added.

BALD: FDA clears hair-growth drug for OTC sale

(From 1A)

Ivy Kupec. It helps about 25 percent of men and 20 percent of women to very gradually grow back moderate amounts of hair, mostly on the very top of the head.

They must keep using Rogaine indefinitely to keep the new hair.

Some experts warned the FDA in November that an over-the-counter Rogaine would be overused by desperate consumers who refused to admit it's not helping their particular hair loss. So how long should people try Rogaine?

"We recommend people try it for four months, but we actually had people in clinical studies who took longer than that," said Dr. Joann Data of manufacturer Pharmacia & Upjohn.

People should try Rogaine only if hair loss runs in their family and isn't a sudden or patchy type that might come from an endocrine imbalance, infection, pregnancy or even such hairstyles as tight braids, Data said.

If people use Rogaine for the wrong type of hair loss, "it won't exacerbate the balding they do have," she said. "But say they have a fungal infection, it would prolong the time to diagnosis and appropriate treatment."

Pharmacia & Upjohn said it will sell nonprescription Rogaine for about half the price of the identical prescription version, $29.50 for a month's supply.

Sales will begin in April, with packages formulated as Rogaine for Men and Rogaine for Women to provide gender-based instructions and illustrations that show whether using Rogaine is appropriate and how to apply it to the scalp.

The FDA's decision comes at a vital time for the Kalamazoo, Mich.-based company. The patent on Rogaine, with annual U.S. sales totaling $96 million, expires Tuesday, and a generic manufacturer was poised to begin selling a competitor. Pharmacia asked the FDA Monday for three extra years of marketing exclusivity, under a little-known law that gives such a bonus when companies do extra research to prove a prescription product is safe to use over the counter. The FDA hasn't made a decision.

Rogaine, known chemically as minoxidil, is not for use by anyone under age 18, the FDA and manufacturer emphasized. Some doctors told the FDA in November that they feared child use of the over-the-counter drug because parents have sought Rogaine prescriptions when they didn't think their children's hair grew fast or thick enough.

Side effects are mainly skin irritation and itching. But people should see a doctor if they develop chest pain, rapid heart beat, faintness, weight gain or swollen hands or feet, Kupec said.

GRAVE: County raises rates for Fairview

(From 1A)

Increasing indigent-burial fees for funeral homes to $625 will allow the undertakers to break even on their indigent burials, said Commissioner James Brezina, the Commissioners' Court's liaison to the cemetery.

And the 100 percent price increase for opening and closing graves for adults was affected to "help offset expenditures," Brezina said.

Voting for the new rates in the 1885-founded cemetery were Commissioners Brezina, Guy McCrary and Henry Goulet.

Commissioner Louisa Valencia, who cast the negative vote, said that increasing the burial prices would results in more indigent burials, because some of Midland's poorer people could not even afford $1,000 toward a $3,000 funeral service. Mrs. Valencia had proposed a $250 fee for opening and closing adult graves instead of the $300 approved by the court in the 3-1 vote. The old fee was $150.

Instead of agreeing to increase indigent-burial fees to undertakers from $250 to $625, Mrs. Valencia recommended a $250 increase to $500.

"I'm saying the funeral homes are not losing at $500," she said. "They might have been losing at $250. But at $500, I don't think they will be losing, because it is going to leave them $300 to do the service." Mrs. Valencia placed the coffin cost at $200.

Outside the coffin, Mrs. Valencia noted that the county furnishes "everything at the cemetery" for indigent burials. "All they (undertakers) have to do is take care of the body — pick it up and bring it back to the cemetery. They are obligated to have the funeral (on the) next day."

Price adjustments allowed by the Commissioners' Court include increasing adult disinterments from $400 to $750 and placing a $400 cost of disinterring infants - children 2 years old or younger.

While the commissioners doubled the cost of burying adults, from $150 to $300 from Monday through Saturday, the cost of burying children — opening and closing the grave — was set at $100. A surcharge is added for services on holidays others than Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day when "no (burial) services are rendered" by the county. The surcharge is $125 for adults and $50 for infants. The county does not open and close graves on Sunday.

Previously, the county had not charged for opening and closing infant graves.

The cost of a cemetery plot for an infant was priced at $100. Previously, there was no charge.

IOWA: Race was too close, Dole aides concede cent.

News organizations projected Dole's victory as the caucuses began, based on surveys of participants as they arrived at their precincts.

Buchanan called his showing "a victory for a new idea in the Republican Party and national politics, a new spirited conservativism of the heart" he said would attract not only social conservatives but blue-collar workers worried about trade deals that send their jobs overseas.

New Hampshire is a Buchanan stronghold, the state where he got 37 percent to spark his 1992 primary run against President Bush. But Dole vowed not to stumble there this time as he did after Iowa got him off to a winning start in 1988.

Alexander said the results proved Dole a fragile front-runner and while congratulating Buchanan, he said the former White House adviser's protectionist trade views were "dead wrong." He said Iowa had winnowed the GOP contest to a three-man battle, as if Forbes did not exist, and that he was the candidate with the best shot of beating Clinton.

"Thank you Iowa, on to New Hampshire — let the future begin!" Alexander said.

Forbes said he was hardly through, insisting fourth place was "a good springboard into New Hampshire." But just two weeks ago, Forbes was threatening Dole for the lead, riding the crest of a $4 million TV ad budget that shattered all records in the state.

Gramm aides considered pulling resources from New Hampshire and saving them for South Carolina and the Southern states to follow.

The Iowa voting took place in 2,142 precinct caucuses and closed a nearly year-long campaign in the state. It appeared that turnout would fall short of 100,000, below the 1988 total and way below the record 130,000 predicted by state Republican leaders.

Among caucus-goers, Buchanan was the clear choice of those who described themselves as very conservative or members of the religious right. In an entrance poll, one fifth of the caucus-goers said they settled on their choice in the last three days; of those, Alexander and Buchanan were the clear beneficiaries.

Dole was the overwhelming choice of Iowa's elderly voters, and caucus-goers said Dole' age — he is 72 — would make no difference in his ability to be president. Iowans were split on the flat tax, Forbe's premiere issue, over the existing system — and even the flat-taxers preferred Dole and Buchanan to the millionaire publisher.

The caucuses were the first of three steps in allocating Iowa's 25 delegates to the Republican National Convention. An AP analysis of the straw poll results showed a mixed bag — Dole's support was likely to translate into eight delegates, compared to six for Buchanan, five for Alexander, three for Frobes, two for Gramm and one for Keyes.

After New Hampshire comes a five-week march through 30 states, with 70 percent of the GOP convention delegates to be chosen by the time California holds its March 26 primary. That breakneck pace puts a premium on momemtum and money. Buchanan and Alexander said they were funded at least through New Hampshire and would immediately scramble to replenish their campaign accounts.

Dole aides conceded the race was too close for comfort, but predicted Dole would march to the nomination. "The bottom line for Republicans is winning back the White House and when they look at this field, Bob Dole is clearly the one," said Dole spokesman Nelson Warfield.

VICTOR: Conservative Christians again could be important factor on to win the GOP nomination. That could make Monday night's results even more important to Alexander.

(From 1A)

"All along our goal was to win a semifinal to be Mr. Conservative in the race," declared Buchanan's New Hampshire campaign director, Peter Robbio.

"Clearly this makes Buchanan at this moment the one with momentum," said veteran GOP consultant Eddie Mahe. "The other thing it says is that, despite people like myself who discounted the Louisiana caucuses, they had an impact."

Alexander, like Clinton a former governor of a southern state, has conservative credentials but seems more likely than Buchanan to attract the support of moderates.

Alexander has long portrayed himself as the Republican who could most likely beat Clinton in a general election contest.

"We've got to put somebody up there in the debate in October who can stand up there with Bill Clinton, who's going to be very, very good in that debate, and we've got to paint a picture of our future that's brighter, more compelling than whatever Bill Clinton paints," he said in explaining his strong showing.

Remarkably, both Alexander and Buchanan were languishing in the single digits until just days before Monday's caucuses.

"It's a big boon for Alexander," Mahe said. "Alexander needed something. He is on the field, and the Forbes phenomenon was more noise than light."

Buchanan's upset victory last week in the Louisiana caucuses — in which his only serious contender was Gramm — helped catapult him into the limelight and all but ended Gramm's 1996 presidential aspirations.

More than anything, Buchanan's close second-place finish to Dole showed that Christian conservatives remain an important force in GOP politics, even though they may be proportionately stronger here than in many parts of the country.

Still, if Buchanan can hold his own in Tuesday's New Hampshire first-in-the-nation primary, the contest soon turns south — where conservative Christians could again be an important factor.

South Carolina's primary is on March 2, followed by group of Southern primaries, including Florida and Texas, on March 12.

Exits polls showed that, among caucus-goers, Buchanan was the clear choice of those who described themselves as very conservative or as members of the religious right.

Asked what mattered most in their vote, Iowans said conservative values — and of those, four of 10 voted for Buchanan.

Buchanan cleaned up the blue-collar vote and the anti-abortion bloc.

Furthermore, the votes of the two most conservative candidates in the race — Buchanan and conservative orator Alan Keyes — outpolled Dole.

Buchanan's strong showing also showed political professionals — again — that they were unwise to underestimate the combative Buchanan. He turned the political landscape on its head in 1992 when he scored a surprising 38 percent second place to incumbent President Bush — underscoring Bush's vulnerability.

Even so, many analysts suggest that Republicans seem unlikely in the end to nominate the divisive figure, who is at odds with much of the party establishment with his protectionist message of "economic nationalism."

Republicans won't nominate Buchanan "unless they want to self-destruct," said University of Virginia political scientist Larry Sabato. But Dole "is clearly not the consensus front-runner, either," he said.

Steve Wayne, a Georgetown University political scientist, said the only true victor in Monday's contest was President Clinton.

Dole found little excitement at his rallies in the closing days of the campaign — and he wound up portraying himself as a comfortable, if not compelling, choice.

Dennis Goldford, a Drake University political science professor, said Iowa had been "a no-win situation" for Dole from the beginning — even a big win would have been discounted as the victory of a neighbor.

The outcome "expresses some doubts about his candidacy as the Republican standard bearer," Goldford said.

Guinea mutiny has surprising results: Leader to remain in control

CONAKRY, Guinea (AP) — When the president of this downtrodden nation addressed mutinous troops Feb. 4, the results weren't what one might have expected from a mob that had just been firing cannons at his palace.

Rather than finish the job, they roared support for President Lansana Conte, and as suddenly as the two-day mutiny began, it ended.

"It's almost abnormal how normal everything suddenly became," said Deborah Grieser, the acting public affairs officer at the U.S. Embassy, which remained open through the nights of Feb. 2-3 for employees too frightened to venture home through the riotous streets.

To an outsider, little seems normal in Guinea. Not the new color TVs in every shabby government office. Not the tanks in the streets. Not the vendors selling popcorn, peanuts, ice cream and even women's underwear on the grounds of Conte's ruined palace.

Perhaps most surprising is that Conte is still in power after the two-day army uprising, which killed dozens of people and left his palace a charred wreck. The president now works out of a military barracks nearby.

If anything, the mutiny appears to have strengthened Conte's image and harmed that of the army, which is seen as having sat back and allowed a few rebellious soldiers to run wild over a pay dispute.

There's little argument the soldiers are underpaid — base pay for the 8,500-man army is about $70 a month, compared to more than twice that for the best-paid civil servants in the country of 6.5 million.

"But how can you have sympathy for people who would do that?" said Ibrahim Diallo, who works at a car dealership, gesturing toward the remains of the Palace of Nations. "This was the palace of the people, not something to be trashed by our own soldiers."

The Chinese-built seaside complex, lavish by all accounts, came under fire about 9 a.m. on Feb. 2, when a few soldiers rolled tanks up to its green, wrought-iron gates and opened fire.

The uprising spread to include about 2,000 men, who repeatedly shelled the palace — with Conte inside — then rampaged through the city looting businesses and hijacking cars, and shooting anyone who got in their way.

Conte, switching from his usual Muslim robes into his general's uniform for the occasion, emerged from the palace ruins early Feb. 4, promised the soldiers a pay raise and fired the defense minister they had accused of neglecting their needs.

Japanese make second attempt to open collapsed tunnel

FURUBIRA, Japan (AP) — A third dynamite blast failed Tuesday to remove a huge boulder that trapped people in a highway tunnel in northern Japan. Crews were planning another blasting attempt, but little hope was held out of finding anyone alive.

Anyone who survived the massive cave-in would now have spent three days and nights in freezing temperatures in their smashed bus inside the snowy mountain at the edge of the sea. Rescuers can see the vehicle, but they can't reach it.

"It's been going on so long, and they have blasted the rock so many times," lamented Ryoko Honma, a resident of the nearby fishing village of Furubira, where many of the 19 people trapped on the bus are from. "It seems useless to keep watching and hoping."

Having failed in previous attempts to topple the giant boulder into the sea with dynamite blasts, workers decided to try to completely crush the slab of rock with two blasts Tuesday.

But the first blast, around midday, only took out another chunk from the giant boulder, which is the size of a 20-story building. Workers were planning another blast later in the day, and were hoping to clear away the resulting rubble in order to get to the trapped bus, which had 19 people aboard.

The accident occurred on the rugged windswept coastline of Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost main island, about 550 miles north of Tokyo, when the boulder slipped off the mountainside and pierced the roof of the highway tunnel, trapping the bus in a shower of rubble.

The cause of the accident was not clear, but some officials speculated that the slab of rock may have broken free because of a fissure in the mountainside developed over the years by water.

Condom use necessary French Bishops say

PARIS (AP) — Contradicting Vatican doctrine against artificial birth control, the French Bishops Conference said Monday that the use of condoms is necessary to prevent AIDS from spreading.

Pope John Paul II has insisted that abstinence outside marriage and fidelity within marriage are the only legitimate weapons against the sexual transmission of AIDS. The Vatican had immediate comment on what apparently is the first time a bishops' conference has contradicted the pope's teachings on the subject.

"Many competent doctors affirm that a condom of good quality is currently the only method of prevention. In that respect, it is necessary," the bishops' conference said in "AIDS: Society in Question," a 235-page report.

"Those responsible for public health, legitimately worried about the spread of AIDS and the cost of treating it, support the use (of condoms)," the report said. "The church, suspected of being totally opposed to their use, sees itself accused of working in favor of death."

The report was written by the conference's social committee. A spokesman for the conference said the report reflects the official policy of the French Catholic Church.

'Many competent doctors affirm that a condom of good quality is currently the only method of prevention. In that respect, it is necessary.'

—Bishops Conference Report

Marc Gentilini, the president of a committee of Catholic French doctors, said the church "cannot be against the use of condoms, a method that prevents the transmission of death."

Even in his travels in Africa, where AIDS is rampant in many countries and wives are commonly infected by unfaithful husbands, the pope has refused to ease the church's prohibition on the use of condoms.

The condom ban is part of the overall church ban on artificial birth control.

"The use of condoms is understandable in the case where sexual activity is already part of the person's behavior and there is a need to avoid a grave risk," the report said.

Nevertheless, the report strongly defends faithfulness in sexual relations as a way of preventing the spread of AIDS and says sexual education for young people cannot be limited to encouraging the use of condoms.

It emphasizes that the issue cannot be decided by individual behavior and insists that the church has a duty to make its opinion known.

"AIDS is not someone else's illness," the bishops said. "The entire society is affected. When speaking of AIDS, it is necessary to take into account the history of each individual and the state of the society as a whole."

The Rev. Albert Rouet, bishop of Poitier, said it mirrored previous statements.

"We said what other bishops had said before us: When an adult, as mature as one can be in this domain, considers he can't do without sexual relations and there is a danger, it's better

Irish, British search to find common ground, peace

LONDON (AP) — Hoping to prevent more killing by the Irish Republican Army, the British and Irish governments searched Monday for common ground in promoting peace talks in Northern Ireland.

Both governments spoke of a need for compromise and insisted the Sinn Fein party had no place at the bargaining table until it disavowed the bloody tactics of its IRA allies.

The IRA broke its 17-month-long cease-fire last Friday with a bomb in the Docklands district of east London that killed two people, wounded 37 and caused an estimated $125 million damage.

Workers returning to the area's high-rise offices on Monday were met by police roadblocks and officers carrying automatic weapons.

"The IRA will never bomb their way to the negotiating table," British Prime Minister John Major said in a televised address to the nation Monday night.

Irish Prime Minister John Bruton said his immediate goal is to get a statement from the IRA's ruling council that the cease-fire has been reinstated.

In September 1994, when the IRA announced an end to its quarter-century armed campaign to end British rule in Northern Ireland, hopes were high that the province's troubles were nearing an end. Those hopes increased when Protestant militias that supported British rule declared a truce later in the year.

But the peace process became deadlocked over a demand by Britain and by Protestants that the IRA start disarming before talks were held on the province's future.

In Belfast, a group of women who lost loved ones in Northern Ireland's violence from 1969 to 1994 organized a rally for peace near City Hall — where President Clinton hailed the peace two months ago.

"I was sitting on me own, the TV off," said one of the speakers, Maria McShane, who lost her left eye and later her oldest son to the violence.

"Me sister rang me: 'Did you hear the news?' I cried and cried," Mrs. McShane said, her voice breaking.

Earlier Monday, Major told the House of Commons that "the ball is in the court of Sinn Fein and the IRA, if indeed that distinction means anything. It is for them to show through their words and actions whether they have a part of play in the peace process.

Persian Gulf rulers work hard to maintain control

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — Five years after the Gulf War, this oil-rich region is experiencing something new: pressure for change. And it's an uncomfortable feeling.

For decades, kings and sheiks have held absolute power in the wealthy nations of the Gulf.

Now, governments are facing challenges from dissidents agitating either for more democracy or for a return to stricter Islamic austerity. And some of the region's ruling families are in turmoil.

The king of Saudi Arabia, sidelined by a stroke, handed over power to his half-brother last month. Qatar's leadership changed hands last year in a bloodless palace coup. And a bombing Sunday in Bahrain put that country's political troubles in dramatic relief.

None of the governments in the gulf appears in imminent danger of collapse, but the recent rumblings have left the region unsettled.

In the latest disturbance, a bomb injured four people and wrecked the lobby of Bahrain's plush Diplomat Hotel on Sunday night, the second blast at a luxury hotel in less than a month.

The bombing capped weeks of anti-government protests in the tiny island state, a key center for the U.S. Navy.

Sporadic unrest began in December 1994, sending shivers through the country's local population — and its indispensable foreign workers.

"People have stopped venturing into the market" because of the unrest, said D'Souza, an Indian storekeeper in Manama's picturesque bazaar who — like many people in Bahrain — would give only his last name to a reporter.

"If it goes on, Lord knows what we'll do next. We might have to pack our bags and find a better place to start off."

Others were less worried.

"I think most people are aware of what region they are living in," said Michael Langton, the American director of the Bahrain Institute of Banking and Finance. "The Middle East is a volatile place, and people know that when they come here."

The anti-government violence began after Shiite Muslim opposition leaders began calling for the release of political prisoners, better job opportunities and a restoration of parliament, which was dissolved 20 years ago.

Shiites account for about 60 percent of Bahrain's population, but Sheik Isa Bin Salman Al Khalifa and his family dynasty, which dominate the government, are from Islam's Sunni sect.

The government accuses Iran, a mostly Shiite country, of orchestrating the unrest. The Bahraini leadership has responded by cracking down, arresting prominent Shiite preachers and hundreds of other people.

While the streets of downtown Manama are dominated by gleaming tower blocks that house international banks, the picture is different in the Shiite Muslim villages, the heartland of the unrest.

Children play on unpaved streets. People live in simple concrete or mud-lined houses. Slogans spray-painted on walls denounce the ruling Al Khalifa dynasty — but are quickly painted over by police.

Bahrain, the first gulf nation to strike oil in the 1930s, will also be the first to run out of the black gold. Output is down to a trickle and the spigots will be dry by around the year 2000.

The nation of 500,000 has turned to banking, services and subsidies from Saudi Arabia, which is connected to Bahrain by a causeway.

The Saudi kingdom has its own worries these days.

A car-bombing at a joint American-Saudi military headquarters in the capital, Riyadh, killed five Americans and two Indians on Nov. 13.

Authorities have yet to determine who is responsible, but suspicion has focused on Saudi dissidents seeking to drive American forces out of the kingdom.

Some 20,000 American soldiers, sailors and airmen are stationed in the region, a legacy of the Gulf War and the American commitment to keep oil flowing freely to the industrialized West.

The conservative Gulf leaders see the Americans as a shield against radical regimes in Iran and Iraq, but some citizens oppose any U.S. presence in Arab lands.

King Fahd, part of the dynasty that has ruled Saudi Arabia since it was established in 1932, fell ill with a reported stroke in November and temporarily handed over the reins of government to his half-brother, Abdullah, on Jan 1. Fahd may resume his duties if he recovers, but he's in his 70s and has a history of health problems.

The transition has gone smoothly and Abdullah has not introduced any significant policy changes, but it has touched off speculation about Saudi Arabia's stability and the future of the royal family.

In small, but super-rich Qatar, the new emir Hamad bin Khalifa Al Thani took power last June by deposing his father, who was on vacation in Europe.

The father has pledged to return to power and has been warmly received on visits to neighboring gulf states.

The new ruler, meanwhile, has boosted his country's reputation as the regional maverick, jumping into trade and political ties with Israel and provoking outrage among other Gulf countries.

Bosnian government sends two Serb officers to trial

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — The Bosnian government whisked two Serb officers out of jail Monday and onto a plane bound for a U.N. war crimes court. Under U.S. pressure to defuse a crisis with angry Serbs, the Bosnians agreed not to arrest more suspects without the court's go-ahead.

Dressed in heavy flak jackets and helmets, Gen. Djordje Djukic and Col. Aleksa Krsmanovic were taken by the NATO-led peace-enforcement mission from a central Sarajevo jail.

In a convoy bristling with guns, the two were transported to a stadium on the north side of Sarajevo, where a U.S. Blackhawk helicopter met them. The helicopter flew them to Sarajevo's airport, where they boarded a military C-130 Hercules transport bound for The Hague, Netherlands, seat of the U.N. war crimes tribunal.

The two Serb officers arrived at the Scheveningen detention complex late Monday night, according to a tribunal source who spoke on condition of anonymity. The tribunal has its own 24-cell holding block, which up until now has been inhabited only by one man, Bosnian Serb Dusan Tadic.

The officers' detention on Jan. 30 on suspicion of war crimes enraged the Serbs and endangered the international effort to build peace in Bosnia. Rebel Serbs had suspended contacts with the Bosnian government and the NATO-led peace force in retaliation.

NATO said the two men were being sent to The Hague for further investigation. The officers have not been charged.

The sudden move came after Richard Holbrooke, the U.S. mediator who crafted the Bosnian peace plan, flew in to try to break a deadlock in the peace process caused by the arrests. He was widely believed to be instrumental in Monday's transfer of the Serbs.

City, residents made a change

Hazardous conditions and criminal activity around vacant buildings in the 500 block of West Estes Avenue as recently as last October had made residents in that part of Midland concerned and fearful.

Residents had witnessed drug deals taking place around the buildings and vagrants and vermin were seen in the area.

But that was before the City of Midland teamed up with residents of that neighborhood to remove several old buildings to make the neighborhood safer.

Now residents feel safer and more secure, and are beginning to show pride in their homes and yards. In fact, the West Estes improvement is a prime example of how a city government can work with neighborhoods to achieve a noteworthy result for residents and at the same time remove an eyesore and breeding ground for accidents or criminal activity.

Heidi South, a resident of West Estes Avenue, noted that last fall residents "were afraid to walk down that street." After the problem was brought to the attention of city officials, the buildings were condemned and Midland City Council allocated $25,000 for demolition of buildings.

Ms. South had been told the city didn't have the necessary funds, but she notes, Mayor Bobby Burns found the money.

Today, more and more cities are having to find new and innovative ways to respond to the needs of residents. The case of West Estes Avenue's dilapidated buildings is an outstanding example of what can occur when cities join hands with residents and neighborhoods to bring about positive and constructive improvements.

We congratulate Mayor Burns, the Midland City Council and the residents of West Estes Avenue on this marvelous change.

Purchasing uranium won't end problem

Pressed for hard currency, Russia is forging a deal to sell large amounts of weapons-grade uranium to European buyers.

Though the European customers are supposed to use the fuel for nuclear reactors rather than bombs, U.S. diplomats are concerned that the agreement will hamper the cause of nuclear disarmament. They should be concerned for several reasons.

The buyers plan to use the heavily enriched uranium in relatively primitive reactors that run on bomb-grade fuel. ...

By selling the enriched uranium, Russia is only helping to sustain environmentally untenable reactors in Europe. It also stands to reason that as more enriched uranium circulates, the chance of its misuse increases.

The United States has developed a program to promote the conversion of these troublesome reactors to safe models.

After conversion, the reactors would no longer need enriched, weapons-grade uranium to operate. To sweeten the incentive, the United States has agreed to buy the enriched uranium stocks at these reactors and de-enrich them for use at conventional power plants. ...

But Russian officials have balked at the offer, apparently because they have even more uranium in their stockpiles and would stand to get more money from the Europeans.

Still, Russia should realize that what it stands to gain in hard currency, it will lose in even more potentially lucrative good will from the United States.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Tuesday, Feb. 13, the 44th day of 1996. There are 322 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Feb. 13, 1935, a jury in Flemington, N.J., found Bruno Richard Hauptmann guilty of first-degree murder in the kidnap-death of the infant son of Charles and Anne Lindbergh. Hauptmann was later executed.

On this date:

In 1542, the fifth wife of England's King Henry VIII, Catherine Howard, was executed for adultery.

In 1633, Italian astronomer Galileo Galilei arrived in Rome for trial before the Inquisition.

In 1635, the oldest public school in the United States, the Boston Public Latin School, was founded.

In 1741, Andrew Bradford of Pennsylvania published the first American magazine. Titled The American Magazine, or A Monthly View of the Political State of the British Colonies, it lasted three issues.

In 1914, the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, known as ASCAP, was founded in New York.

In 1920, the League of Nations recognized the perpetual neutrality of Switzerland.

In 1945, during World War II, the Soviets captured Budapest, Hungary, from the Germans.

Genuine compassion solution to poverty

Oh, The New York Times telephoned Marvin Olasky all right. When you're preparing a story about private sector responses to welfare cutbacks, you call the author of "The Tragedy of American Compassion."

Murchison

But the Times didn't quote Marvin Olasky. Unfortunately. Instead, it published a long doom-and-gloom story about social services going to the devil if Congress cuts welfare spending sharply.

Olasky was in Dallas after the story came out, making a speech. He shook his head. He knows the media's ways. He labors in their vineyard -- professor of journalism at the University of Texas, editor of World magazine, author, speaker. And he's an expert on what private charities can do when called on to do it, as was the case before Lyndon Johnson invented the welfare state.

According to the head of the New York Federation of Protestant Welfare Agencies, as quoted in the Times, "The Pollyanna-ish notion that churches will make up the difference (in spending) is not serious." Many private relief organizations get half their budgets from the government.

Welfarist thinking is firmly engrained in Americans after 60 years. Despite $5.4 trillion poured into anti-poverty programs since 1965, there are as many poor people as before. Defenders of the present system -- "welfare as we know it," to quote Bill Clinton -- are defending abject failure.

Can the private sector help? Perhaps only the private sector can help. Olasky says: "We had successful anti-poverty programs a century ago -- successful because they embodied personal, material and spiritual involvement and challenge."

And the secret of their success? Personal involvement with the poor. Compassion, to use a word politicians usually equate with the robbery of Peter for Paul's alleged benefit.

"In the 19th century," says Olasky, "volunteers opened their own homes to deserted women and orphan children. They offered employment to nomadic men who had abandoned hope and most human contact. Most significantly, our predecessors made moral demands on recipients of aid."

Olasky is for kindness and firmness both -- for making charity recipients work, for distinguishing between the lazy and the truly helpless, for infusing religion into social service.

While one is listening to such sentiments, a confession bubbles to the lips. It all sounds so ... Victorian. There is about it the feel of mustache cups, the aroma of asafetida bags. Do people act that way anymore? Should we expect them to?

An advance copy of a Christian newspaper, the Dallas/Fort Worth Heritage, comes to hand. There is a story about Sagamore Hills Baptist Church in Fort Worth: a largely white church in a largely minority neighborhood. The church raised $35,000 to buy winter jackets for children at a nearby elementary school. Since then, it has formed a partnership arrangement with the school, helping with the purchase of books, sponsoring rewards for achievement and encouraging the students to learn basic academic skills.

CHARLIE REESE

We must be reminded of forefathers wisdom

As the elections approach, and you start judging legislative candidates, you might keep in mind the three great legislative sins as outlined by American revolutionary Alexander Hamilton.

Reese

"It will be of little avail to the people," Hamilton said, "that laws are made by men of their own choice if the laws be so voluminous that they cannot be read, or so incoherent that they cannot be understood ... or undergo such incessant changes that no man, who knows what the law is today, can guess what it will be tomorrow."

That in a nutshell is how America has gotten so fouled up.

Our laws indeed are too voluminous to read. The laws number in the thousands, and their illegitimate offspring -- rules -- number in the tens of thousands.

In the current issue of Policy Review, former Attorney General Edwin Meese and Rhett DeHart have written an article about the intrusion of the federal government into local law enforcement.

Congress has created more than 3,000 federal crimes, which in the words of Meese range from "serious but purely local crimes like carjacking and drug dealing to trivial crimes like disrupting a rodeo."

This federalization of local crimes is not only a breach of the Constitution, but it is also stupid. Most communities have no federal law enforcement agencies stationed in them. And in the larger ones that do, the federal officers have more than enough to do, enforcing the truly federal crimes, than to get involved in purely local crimes -- all of which, of course, are already covered by state law and enforced by local law enforcement officers.

But to continue, many of our laws are so poorly written that they are incoherent. Judges often end up trying to figure out what in the heck the legislators meant or intended when they wrote the law.

For people with allegedly seven years (at least) of allegedly higher education, many lawyer-legislators or lawyer-staff members cannot, it seems, write a simple declarative sentence. They cannot throw the net of a paragraph over a thought. It is not uncommon these days for a single law to run to several hundred pages -- more pages than a novel.

"Let all laws be clear, uniform and precise," advised French writer Voltaire. "To interpret laws is almost always to corrupt them."

The third sin -- incessant changes -- is painfully visible when it comes to the tax laws. Changes in the tax laws played a significant, perhaps key, role in the collapse of the savings and loan industry. Yet hardly had the bad consequences of those changes been absorbed before Congress made more changes and is now talking about still more changes.

I'll tell you one consequence of all this talk about tax cuts and a flat tax code. Many extremely large economic investment decisions simply have been put on hold. Investments that would have been made, purchases that would have been made, factories that would have been built now don't exist because no one but a fool would make a long-term investment when, to use Hamilton's phrase, no man can guess today what the tax laws will be tomorrow.

All of these problems are our fault. We elect these idiots. And, if we retain idiots and add more, they will continue to increase the volume of laws, continue to write incoherent laws and continue to tinker incessantly with the laws so that everyone will remain in a state of uncertainty.

These idiots will destroy both liberty and economic prosperity, and probably do it unintentionally. Some of them not only don't know what they are doing, they don't know what they've done after they have done it.

Look for intelligence, clarity of thought and expression, mature judgment, honesty and a good grounding in history and moral philosophy before you vote for a man or woman to legislate. Otherwise, you are shooting your future in the heart.

MIKE ROYKO

Simpson uses television to get on with life

Staring at the TV screen, Slats Grobnik said: "You know, I got to give O.J. Simpson some credit."

Credit? For what?

"For not being a wimp and for going on TV and all those talk shows and standing up for himself against all the knocks against him in the media."

Royko

But he's obviously trying to profit by selling a video to the gullible that is filled with distortions, evasions and obvious lies.

"Hey, a guy's got to make a living. What do you want him to do -- apply for unemployment comp? Like he says -- he wants to get on with his life, which is the best thing to do with your life until you croak."

You mean that you think he is innocent, that he didn't do it?

"Nah, I'm like everybody else. I think he did it. Even people who say they don't think he did it, down deep they know he did. And I guess I was kind of teed off when he got acquitted. But like they say, we got to keep this all in perspective."

What kind of perspective?

"Well, it ain't like he does it all the time. If he really did it, that was the first wife he ever bumped off. And the first restaurant waiter. So the odds are he won't never do it again. Don't that count?"

Count? For what?

"He's a first offender. Until he made this one mistake, he was kind of a model citizen except for them spats with his wife. And chances are, he ain't a danger to society. I always thought that was something the law had to think about -- that everybody is entitled to one mistake."

Yes, but that was not one of your everyday mistakes. We're not talking about shoplifting or running a red light. We're talking homicide.

"Well, it's all the way you look at it. You ever been to the opera?"

Not as a habit, but yes, I have.

"Well, in some of the greatest operas, stuff like this happens. I mean, people got knocked off. And you ever read Shakespeare?"

He's a bit wordy, but yes, I've seen his plays.

"Same thing. I mean, they do some really bad stuff. But that don't mean they're bad people. It just means that their heads were messed up. And that's why in the opera and Shakespeare, we feel sorry for the people who goof up. It's what the literary types call a tragedy."

So you think we're supposed to feel sorry for O.J.?

"Well, when the opera or the Shakespeare play is over, and the stage is covered with all them dead stiffs, look at what the people in the audience do."

Such as?

"They stand up and they applaud and they cheer and they yell bravo, great job, and they go out to dinner and talk about what a terrific performance it was."

But that is theater.

"So? What do you think the O.J. case was? It was great TV theater and it still is. That's why the networks are still chasing him and Larry King would interview Kato the barking dog if it could talk. Or Kato the actor if it could think."

True, there is a certain morbid interest.

"It ain't all that morbid. One of the jurors popped up in Playboy showing off her bare bumpers and looking happy. And some of the other jurors have put out books and their pictures are on the covers looking as bouncy as if they were on a love boat cruise instead of bringing in a verdict in a murder trial."

Ah, you have finally used the key word -- murder. That is what we're really talking about.

"Uh-uh. That was last year and it's over. Now we're talking about a professional celebrity and the problems he's having getting on with his life. You know, O.J. is a golfer, and golf ain't cheap."

Then maybe he should give up golf.

"What's he supposed to do, bowl? Forget it. Bowlers don't bump off their wives. And if they do, the bowler is fat and his wife is fat, so who cares? Not the networks. When was the last time they did a special on a bowler who bumped off his wife?"

What does that have to do with anything?

"Because, face it, he's special. He was an All-American, an All-Pro, a super-duper star. And after he finished football, he became a professional celebrity. And nothing's changed. he's still a professional celebrity."

You have a point.

"So what do professional celebrities do for a living?"

I guess they go on TV and radio talk shows and display themselves for our enjoyment.

"Right. Today, you call a plumber for a frozen pipe and he might not show up. The pizza guy delivers it cold. A doc don't make house calls."

So?

"So, O.J. is just doing his job. He's a celebrity and he's acting like one. If everybody did their jobs the way he does, we'd be in better shape. So I give him credit."

I hadn't thought of it that way. But how long will this O.J. stuff be with us?

"Until O.J. is old and gray."

Then we can ignore him?

"No, then we'll have a banquet and make him the elder statesman of wife-killers."

Rubin exceeded authority on debt ceiling, GOP says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary Robert Rubin exceeded his authority when he tapped civil service trust funds to avoid federal default, a House Republican task force asserted Monday.

The task force called for legislation sharply restricting the government's ability to use the trust funds.

Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said Smith's call for Rubin's resignation was "an irresponsible insult that is wholly unbecoming a member of Congress."

As a whole, the 11-member House Task Force on the Debt Limit and Misuse of the Trust Funds did not call for the secretary's resignation, although one member, Rep. Chris Cox, R-Calif., previously joined House Rules Committee Chairman Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., in advocating Rubin's impeachment.

The task force complained that Rubin was misleading last fall in his warnings of the consequences of default as the national debt rose toward the government's $4.9 trillion borrowing ceiling.

"The secretary clearly could have been more forthcoming," the panel said. "(He) did not specify either to Congress or the public that failure to increase the debt limit would lead to disinvestment of certain trust funds, rather than a cataclysmic default."

Man vs. computer match enthralls chess 'whiz kids'

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — World chess champion Garry Kasparov was gnawing his thumb, brooding over how the heck he could beat the mega-computer he called "the monster."

His sneakered followers never lost faith, and when Kasparov defied a golden rule a few moves later by exposing his queen, they cheered: This was their kind of game.

Inner-city chess fans from Philadelphia's high schools were electrified by the chance this weekend to witness the match between man and machine.

"That was awesome!" said 15-year-old Jennifer Shahade, jabbing her fists in the air the day after Kasparov rebounded from an opening-round loss to IBM's Deep Blue. "I wasn't happy with all his moves, but, man, he's exciting."

Shahade and other youngsters came by the dozens to the Pennsylvania Convention Center to watch Kasparov battle a computer specially designed to defeat him.

Kasparov surprised the chess world when he lost Game 1 of the best-of-six series Saturday. It was the first time a grandmaster had lost to a machine under tournament conditions.

By Game 2 Sunday, the carnival-like atmosphere of the first day had ended, and youngsters and adults alike settled in for Kasparov's grim comeback. His victory in nearly six hours was heavily applauded. The match will resume Tuesday.

When IBM's Internet address jammed because more than 7,000 users a minute were looking for the move-by-move update Sunday, the teens kept the chess world up to the second by setting up their own relay system.

"We ran to the phone after every move and called a guy in Philly, and he put the data into the Internet Chess Club," said 12-year-old Caitlin Coslett.

While the attraction was partly Kasparov's celebrity, it takes more than that to keep a seventh-grader seated for six hours with nothing but 73 moves to watch, said chess coach Stephen Shutt of North Philadelphia's Masterman High School.

"Despite what you hear about the slide in popular culture, scholastic chess is growing enormously," Shutt said Monday. "Turn kids on to chess, and you'll see they love the strategizing, the scheming. Take a high-energy kid and give him a competitive thing, and he'll stay rooted to the spot."

The snowy-haired, soft-spoken math teacher is something of a celebrity for turning two of Philadelphia's inner-city schools into chess powerhouses. His first squad at Vaux Junior High School won seven straight national titles and inspired the movie "The Mighty Pawns."

Resnick: O.J. beat pregnant Nicole

NEW YORK (AP) — O.J. Simpson repeatedly kicked Nicole Brown Simpson while she was pregnant and belted her with wine bottles, Faye Resnick said during a deposition Monday.

Meanwhile, sources said Simpson's lawyers were thinking of quitting the case because he has disregarded their advice not to talk to the media and may not be able to pay his legal bills.

Resnick, who describes herself as a close friend of Ms. Simpson, completed three days of questioning in the civil lawsuit filed against Simpson by the families of Ms. Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman.

Ms. Simpson and Goldman were slashed to death in front of her condo in the Brentwood section of Los Angeles in June 1994. Simpson was acquitted of murder Oct. 3.

Resnick's lawyer, Leonard Marks, said Resnick answered all questions put to her during the three-hour session by Simpson's lawyers.

He conceded that some of her testimony about what Ms. Simpson told her might be inadmissible in court because it is hearsay evidence. A judge must decide whether to admit it.

Simpson's lawyers did not speak with reporters after the deposition, nor did Resnick. Marks said Resnick planned to leave the country in several days because of death threats, but he did not say where she was going.

In a tell-all book she wrote on the case, Resnick alluded to Simpson beating his wife when she was pregnant.

Court documents released by the prosecution in Simpson's trial alleged he verbally abused his wife when she was pregnant with their second child, calling her a "fat pig" and once locking her out of their home after an argument.

In her deposition Monday, Resnick "testified that Nicole told her that while she was pregnant, that O.J. kicked her many times. And she also testified that Nicole said that 'kicking was O.J.'s favorite,'" Marks said.

Resnick also testified that Ms. Simpson told her Simpson beat her up and locked her in a closet, went to watch football, then returned and beat her again.

"She also swore in detail under oath that Nicole had accounted to her detailed beatings by O.J., including being belted by wine bottles by him," Marks said.

Resnick also testified that Simpson told her in 1994 that he "doesn't beat Nicole any more," Marks said.

Simpson has denied ever abusing his wife, except for one 1989 beating to which he pleaded no contest to misdemeanor spousal battery. Even then, he claims he was trying to fend her off.

Resnick, 37, has long contended that Simpson committed the killings and Simpson has blamed Resnick for somehow being responsible for the murders.

Federal blueprint to facilitate path for AIDS vaccine

N.Y. Times News Service

BETHESDA, Md. — To help speed development of an AIDS vaccine, federal health officials Tuesday released a blueprint for encouraging greater cooperation between industry and the government.

A major aim of the plan is to overcome unfavorable market forces that are causing drug and biotechnology companies to lose interest in developing an HIV vaccine. The number of companies involved in developing an AIDS vaccine has declined in recent years, in part because industry leaders believe that government officials have tended to arbitrarily change their minds in deciding whether to move vaccine experiments from one stage of testing to the next.

The federal plan was developed in part as a response to such criticism and to pressures to do something to stop the worsening worldwide epidemic of AIDS. An estimated 20 million people, mostly those in Third World countries, are infected with HIV, the AIDS virus.

The blueprint will detail in advance specific scientific guideposts that must be met to propel a vaccine along the licensing path. The criteria will be different for each type of experimental HIV vaccine, Dr. Anthony S. Fauci, who heads the National Institutes of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, said in releasing the document at a meeting here.

Although the details have yet to be negotiated between federal officials manufacturers of the vaccines, one criterion might be that a certain percentage of volunteers in study would have to develop certain types of antibodies or specialized immune cells before the next stage can begin.

A vaccine must pass through three stages of testing before it can be licensed. More than 20 experimental HIV vaccines have been injected into about 2,000 volunteers. But no vaccine has reached the third stage.

Republican credentials intact, Greenspan in line for 3rd four-year term as Fed chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alan Greenspan has been whispering economic advice into the ears of Republican presidents going back to Nixon, but that doesn't mean he can't be Bill Clinton's man.

Indeed, the Democratic president appears set to nominate Greenspan for a third four-year term as Federal Reserve chairman in large part because of his Republican credentials.

The White House insisted Monday that the president had received no recommendations yet from his National Economic Council, but administration officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said that there were no other candidates.

Some officials had expected the Greenspan appointment last week. But they said the announcement was delayed because of trouble filling two other vacancies on the seven-member Fed board.

The president had been expected to nominate New York investment banker Felix Rohatyn as vice chairman of the Fed to replace Alan Blinder, who resigned last month to return to Harvard.

But Rohatyn's proposed nomination appeared in trouble Monday, with Sen. Connie Mack, a member of the Banking Committee and chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, leading a charge to derail it.

Mack, R-Fla., circulated a Joint Economic Committee staff memo attacking Rohatyn's long-held liberal views in support of activist governmental solutions to various problems.

Noting that Clinton had declared the era of big government over in his State of the Union address, Mack said of Rohatyn, "It would be difficult to find a nominee more at odds with Bill Clinton's rhetoric."

Congressional sources, who also spoke on condition of anonymity, said that White House officials had been unable to find any Republicans on the Banking Committee willing to support Rohatyn, forcing the administration to reconsider whether to nominate him.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Mike McCurry refused to discuss the recommendations Clinton was receiving, but he said the White House was concerned "that these appointments to what should be and must be an independent board are becoming enmeshed in politics."

Private economists said that Clinton's trouble winning approval for Rohatyn, a Democrat, demonstrated the political risk of nominating anyone other than Greenspan, a Republican first nominated to the Fed in 1987 by Ronald Reagan and renominated by George Bush.

Various Democrats in Congress, including House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo., have complained that Greenspan has been overly concerned about fighting inflation and less worried about people losing their jobs because the economy was growing too slowly.

Analysts said that while the pro-growth Clinton might have preferred someone else as Fed chairman, he bowed to political realities.

"The Senate is now controlled by Republicans and this is an election year and the president is resigned to that fact," said Larry Chimerine, chief economist at the Economic Strategy Institute, a Washington think tank that has accused the Fed of pushing interest rates up too high in 1994 and being too slow to ease credit over the past 12 months.

But other analysts noted that Greenspan has worked hard to build ties with Clinton and has provided critical support at key times such as Clinton's 1993 deficit program and the 1995 Mexican bailout and more recently by warning of the consequences of not raising the debt ceiling.

In addition, while Greenspan's interest rate increases have been blamed for the sluggish economy, the Fed has cut rates three times since last July and those rate reductions should ensure an economic rebound by the time voters go the polls in November.

"The Fed has done a superb job in finessing this business cycle, setting it up to last a long, long time," said Allen Sinai, chief global economist at Lehman Brothers in New York.

Some economists predicted that the administration will quickly abandon Rohatyn for the No. 2 job in favor of some other liberal, but less controversial, nominee such as Harvard economist Benjamin Freidman or Peter Kenen, an economist at Princeton.

Midland Police Department Public Meeting

The Mayors Commission on vandalism and graffiti will be holding a meeting on these issues on Thursday, February 15, 1996 7:00 p.m. at City Hall, 300 N. Loraine in the council chambers. The public is invited and urged to attend this meeting to share their views on the vandalism and graffiti problems.

The goal is to cultivate ideas for solutions to these problems and to answer any questions the public may have. Several concerned civic groups will be in attendance along with law enforcement personnel.

Vandalism and graffiti affects and concerns all the citizens of Midland. The start to a solution is the combined efforts of citizens and law enforcement, so join us Thursday, February 15, 1996 at 7:00 p.m.

Gunman fires many rounds; no workers hit

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A man fired from Packard Bell for urging armed rebellion against his bosses shot up his former workplace with 50 to 60 rounds of ammunition Monday until he was wounded in the shoulder by a security guard.

No one else was hurt in the shooting at the computer maker's headquarters.

"It's really miraculous that somebody wasn't hit with at least a ricochet," police spokesman Michael Heenan said.

Phuoc Bui, 34, was treated at a hospital then booked at the county jail on attempted murder and kidnapping charges.

The kidnapping charge was filed because Bui grabbed a woman who works at the plant and forced her through a turnstile to get into the building, Heenan said.

Bui had been fired on Friday "for the kind of behavior that would make you suspect something like this — distributing literature to other employees about taking up arms against supervisors," Heenan said.

Bui entered the Packard Bell complex about 9 a.m. and went to his former worksite, a large packing room, carrying a 9 mm semiautomatic pistol and more than 100 rounds of ammunition.

Convicted murderer's appeal granted

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff writer

Despite a jury's conviction on murder charges, a local woman will receive a new trial after her appeal was granted.

Sherry Henderson could return to Midland as early as this spring to once again face a murder charge for the Nov. 27, 1993, shooting death of Angela Perkins-Belcher.

Ms. Henderson was found guilty of shooting Ms. Belcher at the Zodiac II club. She was sentenced to 50 years in prison during the August 1994 trial.

Testimony in the trial indicated the shooting happened after an altercation in the club left Ms. Henderson's sister, Monique Henderson, with a bloody head wound.

Witnesses testified Ms. Henderson retrieved a revolver from her car and went back to the club to find her wounded sister surrounded by a group of shouting people.

The jury found Ms. Henderson fired one fatal round in Ms. Belcher's chest.

The jury was not allowed to hear testimony detailing an ongoing "terror campaign" waged against Ms. Henderson by her ex-husband.

Testimony indicated both Ms. Henderson and her sister had been assaulted by the ex-husband on various occasions and that Ms. Henderson thought it might have been her ex-husband who had assaulted her sister on that night.

Grounds for the appeal centered around Ms. Henderson's entire state of mind at the time of the shooting, said Brian Carney, one of the prosecutors in the case.

Durir g the trial, 238th District Court Judge John Hyde would not allow testimony surrounding Ms. Henderson's claim that she was a battered spouse and was armed to defend herself.

"Our objection was that would be a valid reason if she had shot her spouse, but not in this case," Carney said.

No trial date has been scheduled at this time. However, Carney said he hoped the trial would go sometime this spring.

Ms. Henderson remains incarcerated pending the outcome.

A Day in the Life of...

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

What does it take to be a physical therapist? "A degree," quips Rick Gordon, owner of Texas Sports Therapy and Rehabilitation. Gordon likes what he does so well he doesn't view it all as work. "When do I have time for myself? A lot of work time is my time because I enjoy it so much."

Busy physical therapist finds time for himself, family

By Georgia Temple
Staff Writer

Physical therapist Rick Gordon could sum up his life in two words — busy and happy.

The owner of Texas Sports Therapy and Rehabilitation thrives on 10-hour work days. "I'm busy from about 7:30 a.m. till 6 or 6:30 p.m. everyday, basically working on patients all day long.

"I really enjoy doing what I'm doing. I like working with people. I don't really like the administrative part of my job, but I love the hands-on work."

To be a good therapist, Gordon said, "I think you have to know what you know, know what you don't know, and know when to refer a patient to someone else."

Communication is a valuable tool for a physical therapist. Gordon counts his ability to "communicate and understand where my patients are coming from and what their problem is" as his most valuable single skill.

He didn't always want to be a physical therapist. Initially this Permian High School graduate dreamed of a career as a pharmacist. School changed his mind. "I discovered I was much better at anatomy and physiology than I was at chemistry."

While in high school, he played basketball and baseball. His sports experience led to his interest in therapy. "I thought it would be a fun area to work in."

After completing a bachelor of science in physical therapy at the University of Texas Medical Branch, School of Allied Health Sciences, Galveston in 1979, Gordon worked in Austin before moving back to West Texas where he opened his first clinic. He feels more effective when he is self-employed than when he was working for someone else, as he did in Austin.

"The only drawback is the actual running the business part of it, which is not as much fun," Gordon said of having his own business. "All I want to do is treat patients. This gives me the freedom to do it the way I feel is best. If I'm working for somebody else I may not have that freedom. If I didn't own my own business, I might not be able to spend the time I spend with my patients. I

City wins grant to restore Russell pool

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The city has been awarded a grant for various improvements at the Doug Russell swimming pool.

A $30,000 grant from the Big Spring-based Dora Roberts Foundation will fund perimeter fencing, a public address system, life guard stands and umbrellas, life jackets, time clocks and repair and renovation of showers, according to Assistant City Manager Rick Menchaca.

"We anticipate the work to be completed by the beginning of the swim season, by the end of May," Menchaca said.

'We anticipate the work to be completed by the beginning of the swim season, by the end of May.'
— Rick Menchaca
Assistant City Manager

The improvements — especially those to the bath house and life guard stands — are much needed, according to Brad Swendig, swim coach for the Mabee Aquatics Center, which manages the city's pools. While the pool itself was renovated 10 years ago and is in "very good shape," other areas of the facility are "extremely old," he said.

Swendig added that the anticipated improvements should improve declining attendance at the public pool at 900 N. Midland Drive.

The grant was applied for by Em Carnett, a former recreation supervisor for the city of Midland, officials said. The City Council is expected to officially accept the grant today.

Meanwhile, the city continues with plans to build a new pool at Washington Park. Last month, the council authorized a contract to demolish the south-side pool in preparation for a more modern pool.

The new pool — expected to be 20 percent larger than the existing pool — will be built at a cost of about $850,000 and is scheduled to be open to the public in time for the 1997 swim season.

Another new pool will be constructed at a yet-determined location in east Midland to replace Ulmer Park pool. That pool is expected to be in use by the summer of 1998.

The two neighborhood pools — 40 years old and in poor condition — are being replaced with amenities expected to increase attendance. Plans call for zero-depth pools — similar to a shore line from zero depth to 4 feet — with a water slide, a play area and perimeter fence.

Commissioners approve library changes

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Keep the noise down, you're in the library.

Always strive for excellence.

That, in brief, was the gist of the Midland County Commissioners' Court's approval on Monday of the Midland County Public Library's Code of Public Conduct and acceptance of the Library Advisory Board's long-range plan for the library from 1996 to 2006.

The library ought to be conducive to research and learning in a comfortable atmosphere and ought to fit the academic and practical needs of the community.

The adopted code calls for an orderly library that is relatively free of noise, obstructions and distractions, including those caused by roaming children.

"That's all right (for children to be in the library) if they behave themselves," said County Librarian Sandra Wegner. "We are happy for them to be here."

In general, "noise carries in this building," Mrs. Wegner said. "There are just a lot more noise-making things (such as telephones, computers, photocopiers) in the library now. A lot of the downstairs noise carries up the staircase."

Otherwise, "people also are used to more noise," Mrs. Wegner said. And from that standpoint, "we are not making progress; we are losing the battle."

In setting goals from 1996 to 2006, the nine-member Library Advisory Board devoted a year in studying library usage, public support, funding, staffing, volunteer work, facilities, collections, computers and electronic information services, circulation, audiovisual services, children's department, reference, periodicals, special collections and book stations.

"One of our goals," said Library Advi-

Empty stomach can be embarrassing if it goes off

More rambling thoughts

— Is there anything more embarrassing than sitting in the middle of an important business meeting and suddenly hearing your stomach begin to growl?

— Who else in the room can hear you?

— Does crossing your legs and squirming about in your chair really help to conceal the noise?

— Chess seems like an awfully dull game.

— Whatever happened to Tony Orlando and Dawn?

Ott

— There are plenty of problems with the medical profession, of course, but it is truly amazing the types of surgeries that can now be performed on an out-patient basis.

— There was a time when it was not unusual to spend a week or two in the hospital for a relatively minor operation.

— Men who wear their pants pulled way up high really do look like nerds.

— Why is it that every time you come across a scene or sight that would make a beautiful photograph, the camera is no where to be found?

— Overheard: "Land is the only thing that counts in this world because they don't make any more land."

— It must a horrible feeling to attend a giant company meeting knowing that layoffs are going to be announced.

All things considered, I wish I were on a sailboat right now.

— The image of the hardworking businessman rolling up his sleeves, loosening his tie and "getting down to work" seems to have been replaced by the cool, calm, collected man who always appears unruffled and in complete charge.

— I prefer the former.

— It must be awful to have done something so dreadful in the past that someone is now blackmailing you successfully.

— Overheard: "The rich are bored by money talk."

— While it may be with the best of intentions, couples who stay together "for the sake of the kids" must surely realize the kids know something is amiss.

— Why is it that when a man and a woman engage in a heated argument, both feel it absolutely essential to get in that last zinger?

GORDON: Therapst stays happy

make my own rules here."

In the decade he's been in business, Gordon has acquired a number of skills, including utilizing myofascial release and craniosacral therapy to treat numerous dysfunctions.

"We see a lot of people with chronic pain because we do craniosacral therapy — it's a gentle, non-invasive manipulative technique where very little pressure is used by the therapist. What the therapy does is palpates the motion of the cranial-sacial system, which is the skull, the spinal column and sacrum, which includes the brain and spinal chord.

"We use it to locate and solve problems basically, and it encourages your own natural mechanisms to improve the function of your brain and spinal chord to dissipate the negative effects of stress and enhance your general health and resistance to disease."

The techniques are "really good in helping to relieve chronic pain in a lot of people, not everybody but a lot of people."

Gordon has used the treatment for those suffering from chronic fatigue and fibromyalgia with "varying degrees of success.

"Some do real well and others don't do as well. You never know until you try it. It's very light, probably very harmless mechanically."

The therapy has had varying degrees of success. "I've worked with all kinds of things. Some sound almost too good to be true. People who've had headaches for 10 years get relief. Some people with low back pain get rid of it."

In addition to the hands-on therapy, Gordon also conducts work-hardening programs, functional capacity evaluations and pre-placement employment screening, impairment ratings and presents back safety programs to business and performs ergonomic assessments.

The majority of Gordon's patients have a physical disability following an injury or surgery. "Those are the people we see the most."

People can help themselves feel better physically. "Probably one of the easiest things to do is to improve posture," said Gordon. "It's much better when you're nice and erect as opposed to having poor posture and being bent over all the time as in someone who sits at a computer all day.

"You can change the setup, adjust your chair, you're work station — the height of the terminal, the height of the keyboard so you are in a better posture when you work. Then you can take little short stretching breaks several times a day."

His years of experience have validated his early impression of the field. "I think it's great. I like it."

At a Glance: Rick Gordon

Place of Birth: Abilene, Texas. May 19, 1954. "Moved to Odessa when couple of months old."

Family: Wife, Sue, a respiratory therapy instructor at Midland College, and two children, Ryan, 4 years old, and Allyson, five months old. Met on a blind date.

Hobbies and Interests: "All sports, skiing — water and snow, boating, reading. No one will think I know how (to read), but that's true."

Favorite movie: "Actually, I think it's 'Tequila Sunrise' with Michelle Pfeiffer. My wife will love that."

Favorite Food: "Chicken fried steak. Good Texas food. Southern food."

Favorite Vacation Spot: "It's a toss up between the mountains and a lake."

If you could go anywhere in the world, where would it be? "The Super Bowl, 'cause I just got back from there. Actually, how about Colorado. I should have said Disneyland. Right?"

If you could change anything about yourself, what would it be? "I'd be smarter."

If you won the lottery, what would be the first thing you would do? "Everybody says, 'Pay off your bills.' Pay off my bills. And, of course, help humanity."

Two free concerts scheduled today

From Staff Reports

Midlanders interested in putting some music into their lives are in luck tonight. Not one, but two free concerts will feature local and Texas Tech musicians. Cymbals will clash and horns will play at Midland College and at Lee High School. Both evening campus concerts will feature musicians from Texas Tech University in Lubbock.

In the Lee High School auditorium, 3500 Neely, the LHS Band will present its Mid-Winter Concert. The performance is set to begin with the Jazz Band at 6:30 p.m., followed by the Symphonic Band at 7 p.m., and the Texas Tech Trombone Choir. The Tech performance will include selections from their 1996 Texas Music Educators Association Convention.

The Lee Freshman High School Band will perform at 8 p.m. and then the Tech Trombone Choir will take the stage again to perform the second half of its program. The Lee High School Band will complete the concert, presenting its finale at 9 p.m.

Attending the concert will be special guest Denis Wick, former principal trombone player of the London Symphony.

At Midland College, 3600 N. Garfield, the MC Department of Music will present "Music from the Final 25 Years of the 20th Century" at 7 p.m. in the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium.

Guest artists for the event will include members of Texas Tech University's New Music Ensemble, conducted by Texas Tech School of Music faculty member Steven Paxton. Violinist John Gilbert, also of the Tech faculty, will be the featured soloist.

Taffy Richardson, a 1994 LHS graduate, will perform on flute and piccolo.

Both events are open to the public free of charge.

LIBRARY: County commissioners approve two new changes

(From 1B)

sory Board Chairwoman Mary Anne Dingus, "is to make the public more aware of the value of the library in the community and how important it is by bringing more people into the library and to diversify what we offer there even more than what we already have."

And one way to increase library awareness is to offer programming for children and adults that would bring to the library storytellers, authors, arts and crafts, writing workshops and speakers, including World War II veterans who could detail their war experiences and the war's impact on the world and on their lives.

"People are fascinated by that type of thing," said Mrs. Dingus, who noted that the library is a "very important community resource.

"Usage has got to remain high" for the library to develop its resources.

Foremost, the library is to "foster their (the citizens') love of learning," Mrs. Dingus said.

The mission of the Library Advisory Board's 10-year plan is to "provide the people of Midland County with library excellence through comprehensive materials and services for education and enjoyment."

To carry out the mission, Mrs. Dingus noted the need for the library to recruit more volunteers, to continuously "strive for excellence," to improve service, to possibly implement a patron self-checkout device, to "keep up with the electronic-information age," and to maintain a "quality staff."

Without a proficient staff, the library's resources probably "will not be worth much," Mrs. Dingus said. And enhancing and encouraging that proficiency would be upward adjustments in the library's salaries.

Salaries of Midland County librarians are "not as high" as many libraries around the state.

"In fact, they are just about one of the very lowest in the state," Mrs. Dingus said following her session with the Commissioners' Court. "It's practically impossible to recruit someone educated in library science when there are plenty of jobs available to them elsewhere.

"It is important for the Commissioners' Court to recognize that their (the librarians') training and education are very important," Mrs. Dingus said, "and that the library be properly managed and resources used in the right way."

The library has about 40,000 card-carrying patrons, noted Mrs. Wegner, and maintains approximately 260,000 items, mostly books, and carries about 148,000 different titles. A set of encyclopedias, for example, would be one title.

The "Library Code of Public Conduct," approved by the Midland County Library Advisory Board and the Commissioners' Court, follows:

1. No smoking or tobacco use in the library.
2. No food or drink consumption in the library.
3. No sleeping in the library.
4. No soliciting in the library or on library property.
5. No unattended young children in the library.
6. No use of abusive language in the library.
7. No pets or animals in the building except seeing-eye or hearing dogs.
8. No feet on library chairs or tables.
9. No restricting of passage in library aisles.
10. No activities or behavior that interferes with the rights of the public to use the library or the staff to do their work.
11. No excessive roaming in the building by minors.
12. Non-compliance (with the code) will result in loss of library privileges, which includes use of the building.
13. If parents are not available to take minors from the building or cannot be contacted, the police will be called.

Mrs. Wegner said that "roaming" the library out of genuine curiosity in the quest for knowledge is "one thing" and is acceptable. But "playing hide-and-seek" by youngsters, gluing light switches and setting the library for baby-sitting services are unacceptable.

PUBLIC NOTICE

On January 17, 1996, in Public Utility Commission of Texas (Commission) Docket No. 13575, Texas Utilities Electric Company (TU Electric) filed its Petition and Statement of Intent seeking to implement changes to its Rider PCR - Power Cost Recovery that would permit the recovery under said Rider of the cost of purchased power capacity from qualifying facilities pursuant to contracts executed on or before September 12, 1994, the cost of purchased power capacity and energy from qualifying facilities and other entities pursuant to contracts executed after September 12, 1994, as a result of Commission-approved solicitations or as otherwise approved by the Commission or as authorized by Section 2.051(x) of the Public Utility Regulatory Act of 1995 (PURA), including an incentive amount, and the cost of demand-side management resources for such resources approved by the Commission in connection with TU Electric's integrated resource planning process or acquired from Commission-approved solicitations or as authorized by Section 2.051(x) of PURA, including an incentive amount, in excess of the amount included in TU Electric's base rates for demand-side management resources. All of the revenues recovered under the proposed Rider PCR will be subject to reconciliation by the Commission. While TU Electric does expect that, over time, approval of the proposed changes to its said Rider PCR would increase its revenues, it is impossible to quantify any such increase, although it is reasonably anticipated that the increase would not be a "major change" within the meaning of Section 2.212(b) of PURA. The impossibility of quantifying the increase is because it is unknown at this time what resources or types of resources will be selected in the solicitations to be conducted after the Commission's Order on TU Electric's said filing, the costs of which and the applicable incentives would be eligible to be recovered under said proposed changes to said Rider PCR. TU Electric proposes to implement the proposed changes to its said Rider PCR on February 21, 1996, or as soon thereafter as permitted. All of TU Electric's customers and classes of customers in all territories over which the Commission exercises original jurisdiction will be affected by the proposed changes to said Rider PCR. Persons who wish to intervene in or comment upon these proceedings should notify the Commission as soon as possible, as an intervention deadline will be imposed. A request to intervene or for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission's Consumer Affairs Office at (512) 458-0256 or (512) 458-0221 for text telephone. The deadline for intervention in the proceeding is 45 days after the date the application was filed with the Commission.

Poultry giant sets sights on chicken plant near Pittsburgh Texas

LONGVIEW (AP) — Even though it hasn't secured the rights to buy or dispose of the water it would need, Texas poultry giant Pilgrim's Pride is determined to build a chicken plant near the East Texas city of Pittsburg.

The company settled on a Pittsburg area site after residents in and around Mount Pleasant rallied against plans to build a plant that is projected to dump 2.5 million gallons of water per day.

But the Franklin County Water District rejected Pilgrim's Pride's plans to buy water, and the city of Longview is among those fighting the company's intention to release wastewater into a tributary of Lake O' the Pines.

"It is a substantial discharge," Austin attorney Jim Mathews told the Longview News-Journal last week. He filed Longview's protest of the Pilgrim's proposal on Dec. 29.

The Texas Natural Resources Conservation Commission has received more than 500 letters from residents and officials objecting to a permit to allow such dumping. Both sides have requested a hearing, tentatively set for March 25, said TNRCC spokesman Terry Hadley.

"We felt like the TNRCC would rule that we would need one (a hearing) anyway," Cliff Butler, chief financial officer with Pilgrim's Pride, told the newspaper.

Butler said he's "confident" the plant will be built and its water needs fulfilled. Another route the company might try is to buy the state's interest in the lake, though the FCWD is also interested in buying the share.

Lake area residents are skittish about the plant.

"We just are aware of Pilgrim's past record, environmentally speaking, and are concerned," said Susan Nugent of Gilmer, referring to the $500,000 TNRCC fine imposed on the company last year for violations of air, water and waste standards.

Empathy among similar small East Texas cities struggling to attract industries has limited the outcry from other towns in the region.

"Smaller cities feel like we have to get what industries we can get," said Jefferson Mayor Charles "Bubba" Haggard. "Pittsburg has a hometown boy (Bo Pilgrim) that wants to put an industry in there," he said. "But we wouldn't want Pittsburg to take a stand against our (International Paper) plant."

The Northeast Texas Water District has no qualms about taking a stand against Pilgrim.

"The official position of the board is that we oppose the issuance of a wastewater discharge permit because of water quality concerns it might cause and the impact it might have on Big Cypress Creek.

Warren Moon to stand trial

RICHMOND (AP) — Warren Moon heads to court today to face a spousal abuse charge pursued by prosecutors despite desperate pleas from the quarterback's wife to drop the case.

The misdemeanor domestic violence case has taken several different turns in the seven months since Moon's panicked seven-year-old son Jeffrey placed a 911 call to police.

With trial set to begin before Fort Bend County Court-At-Law Judge Larry Wagenbach, it has become a test of wills between Moon, who has refused to enter a guilty plea, and prosecutors who have threatened to put his wife, Felicia, and son on the witness stand despite heavy media attention.

"I'm very confident that it's going to work out okay," Moon, looking relaxed, said Sunday while attending the NBA All-Star game in San Antonio.

Felicia Moon has repeatedly pleaded with Fort Bend County prosecutor John Healey to drop the misdemeanor assault charge, saying Healey is using his authority to take a private family matter public.

Healey refused to divulge how many times he has pressed a domestic violence case despite a victim's refusal to press charges.

"I am not going to provide that information," said Healey, who said The Associated Press should hire an attorney to obtain such information from his office. "I am not in the habit of going through our records and computers to answer general questions."

From one point of view, this is a case about a celebrity couple who simply want to make an unseemly matter go away. From another, it's about whether celebrity couples with problems are being held to a higher standard than the public.

Moon has admitted that he "lost control" during an argument with Felicia Moon last July 18, but his attorney says the Minnesota Vikings star he has rejected several plea offers.

"They want a trial. We're going to have a trial," said attorney Rusty Hardin. "I just cannot live with somebody walking in and pleading guilty to something he's not guilty of."

The Moons and their four children have kept their primary residence in Missouri City in Fort Bend County, just south of Houston, ever since his days as a quarterback for the Houston Oilers.

The county, which boasts several high-income housing developments, is a favorite among sports celebrities. Hakeem Olajuwon and several other members of the Houston Rockets live here.

UTPB to offer new degree pending review

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Establishing a master of professional accountancy degree program at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin is one step closer to becoming a reality, according to UTPB officials.

The UT System Board of Regents recently accepted UTPB's proposal at the regents' meeting in El Paso. The proposal was accepted and forwarded to the Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board for review.

The 36 semester credit hour program, which will be offered through the UTPB School of Business, is designed to build upon and integrate with the existing bachelor's degree plan in accounting.

Gary Klein, dean of the School of Business, said, "We're pleased with the possibility of offering a new program in our school. It will give accounting students the opportunity to reach their professional goals, whether it is to satisfy new curriculum requirements for the Certified Public Accountancy (CPA) examination, or to provide current CPAs with continuing professional education credit."

The MPA degree is designed to meet the new 150 semester credit hour requirement mandated by the Texas State Board of Public Accountancy, which goes into effect in 1997.

The MPA program is the second new graduate program at UTPB awaiting final approval. A proposal for a master's of science in criminal justice administration was also approved by the UT System Board of Regents in 1995.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Be honest about your expectations. Otherwise, hidden resentments could undermine a close relationship. Someone in authority may not be aware of your special talents. Look for ways to showcase them. A promotion or new job perk is featured in August. Real estate investments are favored throughout the fall. Decide what you want most and go after it! Break with tradition and spend the winter holidays in an entirely different way.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: record-setting pilot Chuck Yeager, actress Kim Novak, golf great Patty Berg, opera singer Eileen Farrell.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You have more options than you realize. Check carefully to see that nothing has been overlooked. A visitor from abroad offers wise advice; follow it! Show your appreciation for a favor in tangible ways.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An older individual may try to oppose your efforts. Straighten out any misunderstandings with your co-workers before they escalate. You win big when you make the first move! Show more trust in a young person.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Past efforts begin to pay off. Enjoy the fruits of your labor! Business trips are productive if you see key people. A plan you implemented recently is working out well. Continue to curb spending.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An investment opportunity may have you puzzled. Seek more information before making up your mind. A friend who owes you money may try to borrow more! Say "no." Reading books enhances your vocabulary.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): When you speak, others listen attentively. Use your well-known powers of persuasion to attain greater financial security. Your magnetic personality attracts both influential people and new funding.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Business associates will be impressed by a bold approach. Do what you can to nurture an important professional relationship. Good ideas and streamlined procedures will move things forward.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Rapport may be difficult to establish today; accords could stall. Stick to tried-and-true strategies. You have the vision needed to shepherd a winning project to completion.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Others may be overly optimistic today. Verify a pledge before proceeding. Promise only what you know you can deliver. Striking a better balance between work and play will restore domestic harmony.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You receive encouraging news. Do not be afraid to show your feelings. To stay within a budget, make certain you really need the sale items you purchase. Tread lightly in romance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Give top priority to intellectual pursuits. Tasks that challenge your mental prowess give you a feeling of accomplishment. Heed the advice of a trusted elder.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Allow extra time for trips and meetings. Your skills as a mediator are sorely needed. Take control of your financial destiny. A family member could introduce you to someone who is perfect for you!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Smarten up! Do not let a critical attitude or irritable mood rock your love boat. Patch up a deteriorating relationship with your sensitive touch.

Opening lead: Eight of ♠

The mighty do things on a grand scale. Just as bridge experts are capable of grand coups, so too can they commit colossal blunders. We once watched a pair of national champions allow declarer at three no trump to score two tricks in a suit with J x in dummy opposite Q x in hand — and the defenders had led the suit at trick one! Here's another example. Sitting East-West were two of Europe's great players.

We are not enamored of East's one-no-trump overcall, but anything else is as flawed. The rest of the auction is normal, although East could not have been delighted at the proceedings.

West led the eight of spades, and it might seem that declarer must lose three spade tricks and one trick in each of the other suits. But watch what happened.

East won the first trick with the queen of spades and, after much thought, found the only card to give declarer a chance to land the contract. At the second trick East switched to the nine of clubs!

There would have been no tale to tell had declarer followed low. Fortunately, South covered with the ten. West thought that declarer held Q J 10 in the suit and, reasonably enough, elected not to sacrifice the king and give declarer three tricks in the suit rather than two. So West played low! In the fullness of time declarer set up a long spade as the fulfilling trick. Two hearts doubled and made!

She's not just Tina Turner anymore: France bestows its highest arts title

PARIS — She's not just Tina Turner any more. The singer is being made a Chevalier of Arts and Letters, France's highest arts honor.

France makes Tina Turner a Chevalier of Arts and Letters.

"She's won a Grammy, but she's never had anything like this before, never anything as posh and prestigious," said her publicist, Bernard Doherty.

Turner, 56, had a recent hit in "Golden Eye," the theme song for the new James Bond film of the same name. Doherty said Turner just finished a new album, "Wildest Dreams," which will be released on April Fool's Day.

NEW YORK — Here's how Karen Finley suggests celebrating Valentine's Day: Call ex-lovers and hang up on them, and dash to the supermarket in a heart costume for Oreos, Ring Dings and a quart of beer.

That and other suggestions by the performance artist perhaps best known for smearing her body in chocolate have been shelved by Crown Publishers, longtime publisher of Martha Stewart's how-to books on gracious living.

Publisher Chip Gibson told The New York Times it didn't make sense to publish a parody that takes "potshots" at Stewart. He noted that the Finley project had been approved by a previous publisher.

"We have to be very careful in selecting what we publish," Gibson said in Monday's Times.

Finley called the decision censorship. "It's so bizarre," she said. "The fear of offending has become so pervasive that there's a chilling effect on publishing."

Stewart told the Times she had nothing to do with the decision.

NEW YORK — Placido Domingo and the Met have both done "Otello" 203 times.

The tenor sang the title role in Verdi's opera for the 203rd time at Saturday's performance by the Metropolitan Opera.

It also happened to be the 203rd performance of "Otello" at the Met, which opened its doors in 1883.

Bass James Morris, who sang Iago, had his own numerically significant occasion: He was honored during intermission for his 25th anniversary with the company.

"People keep wishing me another 25 years," Morris said. "I tell them you won't want to hear me."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — It got so cold in Bosnia that country singer Mark Collie had to perform as the troops crowded around a stove.

"By the time we were done they were dancing and singing along," Collie said Saturday in a phone call from Tuzla, Bosnia.

"A couple wanted to play along on guitar, but they had just come off duty and they couldn't even hold a guitar because their hands were so cold."

Collie, whose current album is "Tennessee Plates," did the show for about 100 GIs with singer Lisa Stewart.

LOS ANGELES — Brian Henson is settling in as head of the Muppets entertainment empire his father left him when he was just 26.

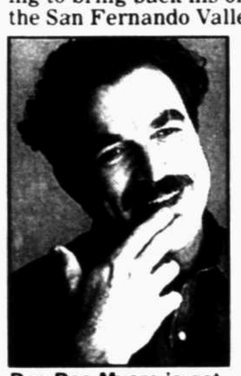

"I have a very capable co-president who runs the company on a daily basis, and I have great attorneys who know what to do," he said in Monday's Orange County Register. "I don't mind the business side ... but naturally I prefer the creative side."

Henson directed the Muppets' latest big screen adventure, "Muppet Treasure Island," which opens Friday.

Jim Henson died six years ago at age 53.

LOS ANGELES — Tom Selleck is trying to bring back his old neighborhood in the San Fernando Valley.

Dee Dee Myers is getting a kick out of striking back.

The "Magnum, P.I." star, his father and two brothers are demolishing a boarded-up automobile plant in a run-down, crime-ridden section of Van Nuys and building a $100 million shopping complex.

"Maybe we can change some of the personality of the neighborhood," the 51-year-old actor said in Monday's Daily News of Los Angeles. "We're not in business just for civic purposes. But the valley is where we grew up, and with all of Dad's experience in the valley, it seemed a good fit."

The family's Selleck Properties is developing the 68-acre site with Voit Cos.

JWA, Swartz host Mardi Gras themed style show, benefit

By Linda Anderson
Staff Writer

Mardi Gras came to Midland a little early this year as the Junior Woman's Association (JWA) of Midland proved once again that you can have a fun and support a worthy cause, all at the same time.

JWA's 1996 Fashion Show was presented Monday at Midland Center. This annual event raises funds for the Pediatric Ward of Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, and for the Community Children's Clinic. This year's benefit also was hosted by Swartz.

Decorations carried out a Mardi Gras theme, with the traditional colors of yellow, green and purple decorating both the tables and the stage. Centerpieces included Teddy bears dressed in Mardi Gras costumes.

The event started off with a luncheon, catered by Murray and the Frenchman, which included Forest Salad, Chicken Crepes with Mornay Sauce, Rice Pilaf, asparagus, rolls and walnut muffins, and for dessert, Phyllo Cups with Chocolate Raspberry Mousse and Lemon Sauce.

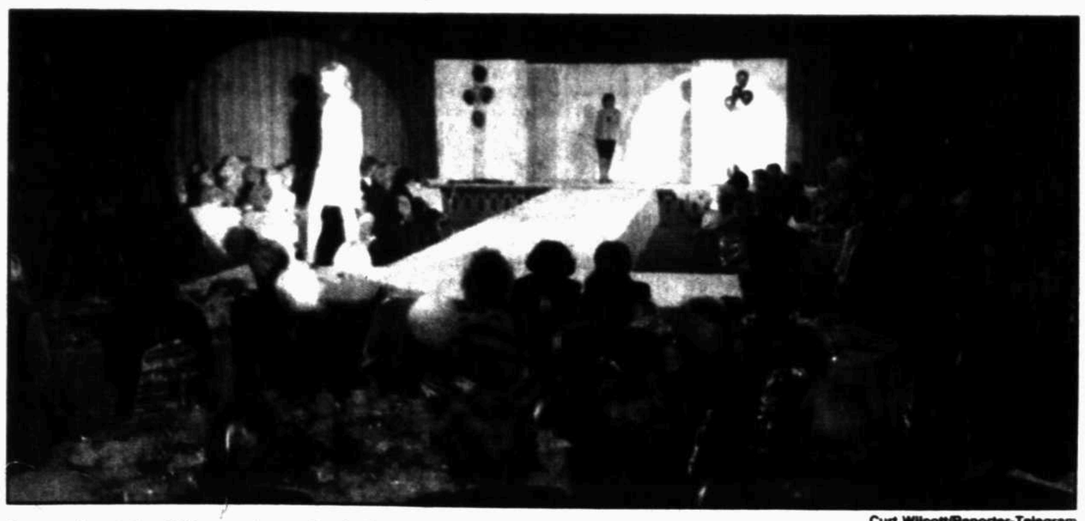

While the crowd of approximately 430 enjoyed their lunch, winners of door prizes were announced. Items included dinners from local restaurants, gift certificates from local merchants and accessories for the home from gift shops.

After lunch, fashions from Swartz — both ladies' and children's — were shown on the runway. The show began with women's casual wear and progressed through day and office wear, sportswear and cocktail/after 5 p.m. styles with touches of glitter. Bright colors predominated in the more casual styles, with classic black and white preferred for office wear and more formal designs.

Children's clothing included both play clothes and dressier outfits. Bright colors were the favorites in the children's clothing too, and the young models paraded down the runway to such tunes as the theme from "Sesame Street."

Using children as models was a new concept for this year's Junior Woman's Association benefit style show. These three young girls are modeling fashions from Swartz.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram
Approximately 430 people made their way to Midland Center Monday for the Junior Woman's Association's annual benefit style show to raise funds for the Pediatric Ward of Memorial Hospital and Medical Center and Community Children's Clinic.

Using children as models was a new concept in this year's fashion show, according to Sharon Ryan, president of JWA of Midland. "Our objective and goal is for the children of Midland, so we thought we'd try this." The 30 children who modeled during the fashion show were volunteers from the community, she added.

The goal of this year's fund-raiser was $15,000, Ms. Ryan said, and part of the money will be used to buy equipment for Memorial Hospital and Medical Center's Pediatric Unit. "We get a 'wish list' from the Pediatric Ward each year and we try to meet it, depending on how much is raised," she said. "We donate the money to purchase equipment."

For the Community Children's Clinic, "we donate (its) yearly operating expenses," Ms. Ryan said. "They are supported solely by donation."

The clinic, which was founded in 1983, serves financially disadvantaged children in the area, according to Melisa Sheward, president of the board of directors for the clinic. About 3,300 children received medical help from the clinic last year, she added.

In addition to the style show fund raiser, JWA members also volunteer for many community organizations, including the Cerebral Palsy Center and Hearthstone House, and provide gifts, clothing and food to needy families at Thanksgiving, Christmas and Easter, according to information from the club.

This year, Ms. Ryan said, JWA of Midland received the Outstanding Philanthropic Organization Award from the Permian Basin Chapter of the National Society of Fund Raising Executives.

The 1996 JWA officers and committee members for the fashion show are Ms. Ryan, president; Michelle Tobias, vice president; Jessica Carlile, second vice president; Pat Weaver, corresponding secretary; Deb Solari, treasurer; Sabrina Statton, recording secretary; Teresa Clingman, on-site; Carmen Eiker, door prizes; Machelle Morris and Kayla Kuykendall, sponsors; Risa Walker, reservations; Mindy de Compiegne, arrangements; Maureen Moore and Gia McEntire, decorations; and DeAnn Holcomb and Ms. Clingman, publicity.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram
A crowd of more than 400 people were treated to a style show featuring casual, office and evening wear presented by Swartz Clothing and Gifts as a part of the annual Junior Woman's Association style show benefit Monday at the Midland Center.

Heart Beat '96 spotlights romance, healthy hearts

By Linda Anderson
Staff Writer

A romantic evening was just a heart beat away Saturday as the American Heart Association (AHA) presented Heart Beat '96. An annual fundraiser for the AHA, the event filled the Midland Hilton ballroom with about 350 partygoers who enjoyed dining, bidding on silent and live auction items, and dancing to the music of The Project Band of Dallas, produced by Wemus Entertainment.

Attire was casual, or guests could dress as their favorite romantic couples. Many were just dressed as themselves in comfortable chic because, as one guest put it, "we're our own romantic couple."

Decor, of course, was full of hearts and candy, as benefited the romantic theme of the evening, its proximity to Valentine's Day and its emphasis on healthy hearts. Silver tablecloths covered the tables and large red hearts soared above them, while each table was sprinkled with Valentine candy — conversation hearts, red and white peppermint bark and, of course, foil-wrapped chocolate kisses.

The menu featured a "heart-healthy taste of Italy," with such foods as boneless chicken, salad, several varieties of pastas, bread and assorted cookies.

Silent auction items included art works, trips, portable telephones, sports packages, memberships in the YMCA, golf lessons and beauty make-overs.

Live auction items included sports memorabilia from the Dallas Cowboys, Houston Oilers, Houston Rockets and Texas Rangers; and Texas memorabilia including a State of Texas flag donated by State Representative Tom Craddick, autographed copy of "The History of the United States Capitol" signed by U.S. Congressman Henry Bonilla, a pair of gold plated enamel cufflinks etched with the U.S. Senate seal donated by U.S. Senator Kay Bailey Hutchison and a copy of "Inaugural Addresses of the Presidents of the United States," signed and donated by U.S. Senator Phil Gramm.

One favorite live auction item was a female AKC registered dachshund puppy donated by Barstar's Kennels in Odessa.

Lori Jons Dawson, regional director of AHA in the 21-county Permian Basin, said the AHA was "hoping to net over $60,000 — it will be a record" from this year's Heart Beat benefit.

Funds raised will benefit the AHA's on-going research and education programs. "About 32 cents on the dollar goes directly to research in Texas," she said. About "32 cents goes to professional and public education on the prevention and treatment of heart disease." Another 14.7 percent goes to fund raising, 13.3 percent to community service and only 7 percent is used for administration and management, she said.

"Several years ago a research team from Texas won the Nobel prize for discovering how cholesterol works," Mrs. Dawson said, adding that on-going research in heart disease continues to make new discoveries. "Thirty-five years ago we didn't have CPR. Look how far we've come! But we still have a long way to go" in the fight against heart disease.

DEAR ABBY

Good friend's bad grooming habits are source of embarrassment

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have a profound sense of guilt writing this letter, because the friend I describe is a marvelous mother, a devoted grandmother, and a smart, generous and thoroughly delightful woman. The problem? Her appearance and personal grooming are her lowest priorities. When we are together (especially in public), I find myself being silently critical and embarrassed.

Van Buren

She lives out of town and visits me twice a year for two or three weeks. On her last visit, she brought clothes I've seen her wear for 20 years: torn skirts, stained blouses, and scuffed and worn shoes. When she entered my home, she kicked off her shoes. Barefoot, her feet were dirty, including her toenails, and she seemed oblivious to anything but her own comfort.

This has nothing to do with money. She is well-fixed financially, travels extensively, has exquisite jewelry, etc. When I offer to take her shopping, she replies, "What for? I have plenty of everything I need."

I love her dearly and wouldn't hurt her feelings for the world. Abby, have you — or any of your wise readers — any suggestions on how to deal with this? Frankly, I don't think she'll ever change, and I question if I can change my discomfort with her appearance. — UP A TREE DOWN SOUTH

DEAR UP A TREE: If you want the situation to change, hinting isn't going to do it. Your friend needs to be told to clean up her act, buy a few new duds, and get a pedicure before she goes shoeless in public.

DEAR ABBY: In response to the question raised by Polly Schrock regarding the longevity of persons celebrating their 75th wedding anniversary and each living to an age of more than 100 years: There's such a couple in my family.

My grandfather's younger brother, William Wonder Wellman, was born on Feb. 3, 1873. Elsa Casebier was born on April 9, 1877. They married on Dec. 31, 1899, and had five children who grew to adulthood. William and Elsa had been married 76 years at the time of his death on Jan. 9, 1976 — one month short of his 103rd birthday. Elsa died in August of 1979 at the age of 102.

I visited the Wellmans in 1971. At that time, they were living in their own home. William was 98, and he was growing tomatoes and still mowing his own lawn (with a push mower). At the insistence of his children, he had quit driving five years earlier. When I arrived, he had finished painting his neighbors' garage — a task he'd sought to keep himself busy.

What a blessing to have health of mind and body. — RICHARD WELLMAN, SEAFORD, DEL.

DEAR RICHARD: I agree. And what a blessing to have readers like you to share such uplifting stories.

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the 62-year-old retired widower, who declined an introduction to a lady because she was a smoker, really got my attention. Where is this man? We need him in Atlanta!

I'm a 53-year-old, single, childless, professional female in search of a good man who dislikes cigarette smoke. I've lived and worked in Atlanta for 30 years and have never found a decent, honest, financially secure "significant other." (And this goes for most of my girlfriends, mainly teachers, who are now retiring.)

Abby, if you have the space, please mention Atlanta as the ideal place for men to retire. We're only four hours from the ocean. Thanks. — S.P. IN ATLANTA

DEAR S.P.: You're welcome: consider it done. But you failed to mention the 1996 Summer Olympics, another attraction to your fair city. Perhaps you'll find romance in the "No Smoking" section.

MHS meets Lee in showdowns

■ Soccer cousins miss opportunity to play against each other when Midland High meets Midland Lee today.

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

Even bloodlines can't take away from the fierce sports rivalry that comes when Midland High faces Midland Lee. But it does make for an interesting side attraction in soccer.

That will be one of the many aspects of the Midland High-Midland Lee girls soccer game today at 4:30 p.m. on the Lee Soccer Field.

The relationship between Midland Lee senior midfielder Christi Johnson and Midland High keeper Tina Richardson is that of first cousins. They will also tell you they are the closest of friends. They talk on the phone and are there for each other no matter the situation. The fact they wear the same number (4) when out in the field is also an interesting similarity.

"We do everything together," said Richardson. "We're like best friends."

"We're cousins and sisters," said Johnson. "We've been through a lot of things together."

Today's game should have been the last time the two had to do battle. However, Johnson's soft red card received in Lee's previous game versus Odessa Permian will sideline her for the UIL mandated one-game suspension. That draws mixed feelings from both players.

"I'm very disappointed because it is the last time to play Midland High and it is on our home field," said Johnson. "I want Lee to win, but I know she will do well."

■ Midland High and Midland Lee boys rank No. 1 and No. 2 in district soccer race.

Midland Lee's Rebels have been waiting four weeks for this. But the Midland soccer community has been waiting eight years.

Lee and Midland High are in their eighth season of UIL soccer. Today, for the first time, the two schools meet as the first and second place teams in district. The 4:30 p.m. game at the MHS soccer field should attract one of the biggest crowds in Midland high school soccer history.

The Bulldogs (6-0) have held the first-place spot in District 5 for 21 straight weeks, since the first game of the '94 season. Lee, which hasn't made the playoffs in the last three seasons, is alone in second place at 5-1 after falling to the Bulldogs 2-0 Jan. 16.

"I'd say this is probably the most confident I've seen our team against Midland High since I've been at Lee," said Lee senior sweeper Salvador Bombara. "It has to do with (the first game against MHS) but more importantly it has to do with the way we played the next five games.

"It'd be really, really big" for us to win.

The Bulldogs realize Lee has the best team it has had in years. The Rebels are two games ahead of third-place Abilene High and Odessa High.

"I expect it to be a lot tougher game than the first time," MHS goalkeeper Eric Rogers said. "They're on a winning streak just like us."

Both teams have won six games in a row. Midland High has beaten

World record 100

TAMPERE, Finland — Frankie Fredericks of Namibia set a new world indoor record of 10.05 in the 100 meters Monday.

The former indoor mark was held by Olapade Adeniken of Nigeria with a time of 10.13 set last year.

Fredericks, 28, was the Olympic silver medalist in the 100 meters in 1992 in Barcelona.

"This raised my confidence for the season. As the race was arranged for me, with bonuses for a record, and I knew about it for two weeks it showed that I could take the pressure put on me," Fredericks said.

"I had a good feeling since I did the 60 meter in 6.52 and the 200 in 20.36 in Belgium a week ago," he said.

Fredericks' manager, Jukka Harkonen, thought that the 10.05 was superb considering that "the track is old, uneven and hard after accommodating a lots of transportation for fairs during the last years."

Tech starts Big 12

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech and Kansas State will kick off Big 12 football Aug. 31 in Manhattan, Kan.

An announcement Monday from Tech said the game — originally scheduled for Nov. 2 — likely will start at 2:30 p.m. and be televised on ABC.

Kansas State ended the 1995 season ranked No. 7, while the Red Raiders finished at No. 23.

The teams are forming a new conference next season with Baylor, Colorado, Iowa State, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, Texas and Texas A&M.

NBA ALL-STAR BREAK

Jordan's turquoise-tinged nightmare

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

SAN ANTONIO — It'll go down in NBA history as Michael Jordan's turquoise-tinged nightmare.

It was the night he returned to the All-Star game after a three-year absence, sat on the end of the bench for the fourth quarter, then stood at center court in his teal All-Star uniform and felt as out of place as he looked.

It was the night Air Jordan was deflated by boos.

He was voted the MVP, but to the 36,037 fans at the Alamodome, those initials did not stand for Most Valuable Player. For them, Jordan winning the award over Shaquille O'Neal was a Most Vicious Putdown.

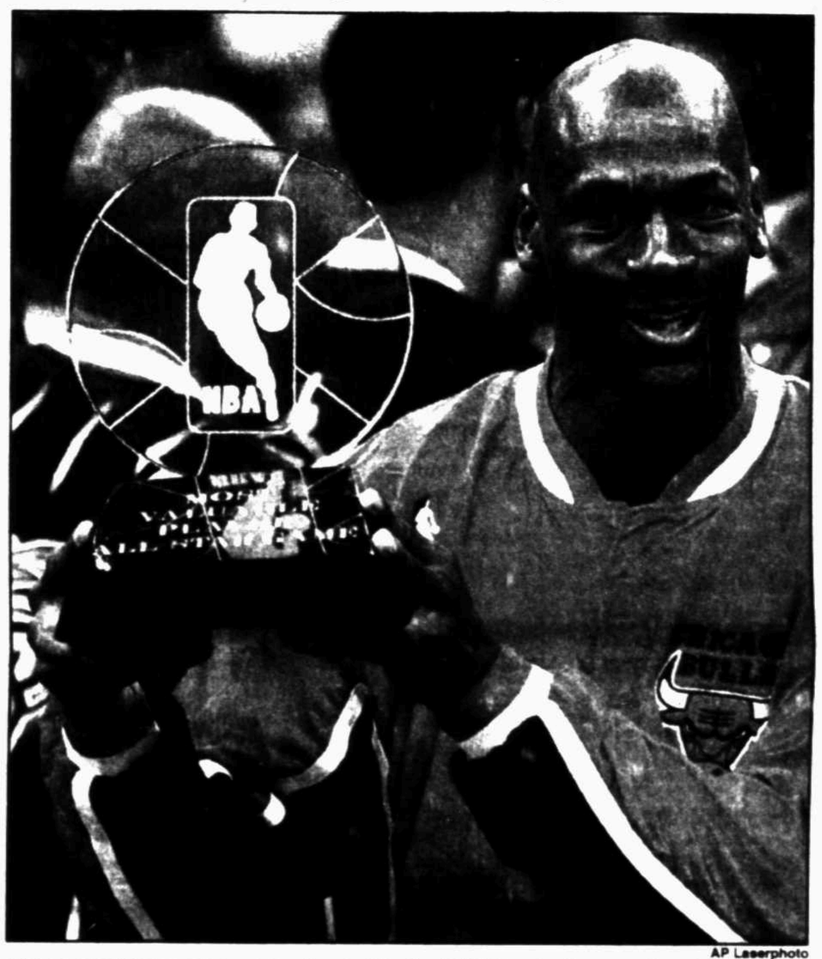

They paid $100 for tickets, $25 for officially licensed T-shirts or caps and endured one of San Antonio's worst traffic jams. They cheered for the dancers, rope-twirlers and mascots who performed during timeouts, and sat through 48 minutes of mostly sloppy basketball. And they weren't leaving without be...g heard.

So when commissioner David Stern walked to the middle of the floor and surprisingly pulled Jordan next to him to award the MVP trophy, the fans let them have it.

"I felt kind of strange standing out there accepting an MVP trophy when the crowd was making their own selection," Jordan said. "He can have the trophy if this is going to make him mad the second half of the season. I might do that, I might."

But instead of giving his trophy to O'Neal, Jordan left it sitting by the microphone after answering questions.

Hawks deal Chaps huge WJCAC blow with 2OT triumph

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

The Howard College men's basketball team needed 50 minutes and two ovetime periods, and in the end, their unrelentless defensive pressure was more than enough to outlast the Midland College men.

The Hawks took a positive step in the Western Junior College Athletic Conference standings with their 67-62 double overtime win over the Chaps at the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum Monday night.

"This was a must win," said Howard coach Tommy Collins. "It was a home game versus a team below us in the standings. It looked in doubt. We had it and they kept taking it back."

Howard, 15-9 for the season, is now tied at 5-3 in conference with New Mexico Junior College which beat Frank Phillips College. Odessa College moved to 4-4 while the Chaps, 15-10 and 3-5, fell to sixth and put themselves in a tough situation to make the Region V playoffs with just four games remaining in loop play.

Lady Hawks bump MC from first place

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Sports Writer

BIG SPRING — Howard College guard Joyce Howard may not have felt like the clutch player but she sure convinced Midland College of her abilities in a tight situation, leading the No. 5 Lady Hawks to a 63-59 Western Junior College Athletic Conference women's basketball win over the ninth-ranked Lady Chaps at Dorothy Garrett Coliseum Monday night.

"I didn't feel like I had to make the plays," Howard said. "But for us to get a basket I felt I had to get the ball in to the posts."

But when Howard, the player, tried to make the pass, she found a wide open lane instead, hitting a clutch layup with 25 seconds remaining to break a 59-59 tie then stole a crucial pass from Midland's Malyssa Thorngren to a wide-open Ndiasse Ndiaye with 13 seconds left, effectively ending the Lady Chaps' final chance to tie up the game or take the lead.

Howard, the player, then hit two clutch free throws with 11 seconds left to give the Lady Hawks a four-point cushion as they held on to win, which puts them alone atop the WJCAC standings with a 24-2 overall mark and a 12-2 conference mark.

Lady Dawgs burned

By Sean Wallace
Sports Writer

Even James Bond's new BMW probably misfires once in a while.

The Midland High Lady Dawgs finally came up with their first lemon of the season Monday night, blowing a 12-point, first-half lead and got buried by Class 2A Ozona 57-42 in a playoff warmup game at Chaparral Center.

"That was a lesson in basketball. Basketball 3303," MHS coach Jim Raughton said. "No, it was a graduate-level class...a 4300."

The only good thing coming from the 17-point loss was that it doesn't really amount to much in the grand scheme of things since it was a practice game. The Lady Dawgs (24-4 overall) get going again for real this weekend in a Class 5A area round game against the winner of tonight's games between El Paso Bel Air and El Paso Coronado. The area game will be either Friday or Saturday depending on tonight's winner.

"This is exactly why you have practice games; to get ready for the playoffs," Raughton said. "Just because we didn't play well doesn't diminish our chances of making it to Austin (for the state tournament)."

Ogonna Merritt scored eight of her game-high 19 points in the fourth quarter but the game was over by then. Ozona built its lead to as many as 19

MHS cagers set eyes on state playoff berth

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Which boat would you like to sail in the District 4-5A basketball waters tonight?

That of the Midland High Bulldogs, or that of the Odessa Permian Panthers?

It will be either Bulldogs or Panthers making a trip to the state playoffs next week as the two fight for the third and final playoff berth from the district.

History sides with the Bulldogs, who are making a run at a fourth consecutive state playoff berth. Jack Stephenson's crew hit the road for a game against San Angelo Central, a team that was once thought to be a major playoff contender.

However, the Bobcats have lost three games in a row by wide margins to fall out of the race at 4-7. MHS and Permian are tied for third place with identical 6-5 records. Permian plays host tonight to three-time district champion Abilene Cooper, a team that has won five in a row and 10 of 11 district outings.

That also says the ball is in

MIKE BUTTS

MHS-Lee soccer rivalry has decided twist

David Leaverton shook off dreams of kicking winning field goals for Tennessee in time to make a second-half appearance at the Bulldog San Angelo soccer game Saturday. Barely out of bed, the Midland High Big Man on Campus tried to stir up some basketball-like heckling to urge the Bulldog kickers on.

Butts

But before he had much success doing so, he made a comment that summed up one half of soccer's paradox: "This isn't as fun as basketball. It's not as noisy."

In some ways soccer is a more gentlemanly sport than its counterparts of football, basketball and baseball. Then again, the world's (not the United States') most popular sport can create havoc not seen on diamonds or in gyms. The first part of that soccer contradiction will make its subtle mark in the game between Midland High and Midland Lee's boys teams today.

Leaverton was right. High school soccer crowds in Midland do tend to be less rambunctious than the basketball crowds. Maybe that's because they've been put in their place.

You'll never...ever see this at a basketball game. But Midland high school soccer referees have stopped games to lecture those in attendance on fan etiquette. "Any more negative comments from over here and I'll clear the stands," a ref warned a Midland High crowd this season.

I wonder if that "Set the ref on FIRE!" cheer you hear at basketball games would qualify as a "negative comment"? You just can't get away with certain things at a soccer game.

On the other hand, I haven't heard of any spectators going after a referee at a basketball game like they did at a soccer game here last year. And we all know of soccer's world renowned hooliganism. That's the paradox.

Just after Midland High beat San Angelo on Saturday, Lee soccer players Tim Tipton and Salvador Bombara went on the field to congratulate Bulldog midfielder J.D. Garcia. With Lee a game behind the first place Bulldogs in the District 5 standings, you'd think the Rebels would have been happier with an MHS loss.

But that's another thing that makes this imported sport different. With club soccer, many of the players who battle each other on high school squads play on the same club teams. So what will today's Lee-MHS game be? A heated rivalry, or the meeting of a mutual admiration society?

"We all play club together so it's hard to get that rivalry thing going at first," MHS goalkeeper Eric Rogers said. "But it (the desire to win) happens pretty quick. When we're not playing for each other we're rooting for each other."

Tipton said his best friend is MHS midfielder Scott Kamis. The two talked on the phone after Saturday's game.

"He was saying their coach told them that we came to the game to see what their strategy was," Tipton said. "We didn't go out there to get their strategy. We went out there to root for our friends. We want them to win until they come to us."

Tipton said the tackling is not as hard when Lee and MHS play because most of the players don't want to cause injuries. But Bombara makes it clear when Lee and MHS get together, the friendships are left on the sidelines.

"We're friends anywhere but on the soccer field," Bombara said. "We would do anything to beat each other. It's not really a friendly rivalry."

Friendly or not, rough or not, Lee-MHS soccer is the rivalry with a twist. And soccer's the sport with a difference.

Red-hot Texas Tech men climb to No. 12 in poll

LUBBOCK (AP) — Red-hot Texas Tech climbed Monday to No. 12 in The Associated Press men's basketball poll.

A lineup rich with seniors has jolted Texas Tech two games ahead of second-place Texas in the Southwest Conference race.

"We're just gelling. We're playing great," said sophomore guard Cory Carr, who averages 15.7 points per game off the bench.

"It's a satisfying feeling to know we're getting the recognition we were hoping to get and we're doing as good as we were hoping to do," said freshman guard Stanley Bonewitz, whose 25-of-52 3-point shooting leads the SWC.

Tech (20-1, 9-0 SWC) plays Baylor (7-13, 2-6) Wednesday night at the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum, where the Red Raiders have won 27 straight — a record for Texas Tech and the nation's third-longest home winning streak.

Tech beat the Bears 75-69 earlier this season in Waco.

Red Raider coach James Dickey, whose only loss this season came Dec. 27 to Eastern Michigan, seemed more disposed Monday to talk about shooting accuracy rather than Tech's move up the poll from No. 13. Questions about postseason are irrelevant now, he said.

"It's certainly a nice compliment to your program to be ranked high," Dickey said. "But you'd better remember how you got there, and if you want to stay there, you've got to win games."

Tech held off Texas A&M 66-63 on Saturday without the aid of sophomore Tony Battie, a 6-11 center who sprained his left ankle last week. Dickey said junior Gionet Cooper most likely would start while Battie heals.

Dickey said his players need to improve their 46.4 percent field-goal shooting and expect trick defenses by opponents. He said defense and rebounds will be pivotal to beating Baylor.

"We seem to be standing around at times," Dickey said. "We need to be more aggressive and have more movement to work against the different defenses we could possibly see."

But Dickey expressed confidence in a program that never before this season was ranked higher than 16th. He felt all along that this team had the makings of a successful team.

"I expected us to be very successful and I expected this team to be very good," Dickey said, "and I'm thankful that we're in the position that we're in."

WOMEN: Lady Hawks take first place away from Lady Chaps

(From 1C)

"I just think we didn't convert at crucial times and they (Lady Hawks) did," said MC coach Ron Jones, whose team suffered a setback in its bid for a first-ever conference championship. "We did some switching on defense but we simply didn't close off the lane.

"It was simply poor defense on our part," said Jones of the clutch basket by the 5-foot-5 Levelland product.

Midland (22-4, 11-3) lost for the first time since falling 109-100 to Frank Phillips on Jan. 22. The Lady Chaps had won five straight league games during that stretch and held a one-half game first-place lead. They were tied for first place coming into the game.

"We're in first place right now but we have to keep playing hard and hopefully we will come away with a conference championship," said Howard.

The Lady Hawks are coming off a big win over Frank Phillips on Saturday. That win avenged a loss to Frank on Monday of the same week. But despite Howard coming into the game off a big win, Lady Hawks coach Terry Gray knew his team would have to come up with another big performance at home against the Lady Chaps.

"We knew Midland College would be fresh since they didn't haveto play Saturday," said Gray. "I felt Joyce was tired from Saturday and Midland was putting their best defenders on her when she was bringing the ball up.

"The home court advantage is huge," Gray said. "They play well at Chaparral Center and we play well here. There is no doubt the scheduling this year was in our favor."

It was the third time MC and Howard have played this year, all of them being conference games since the WJCAC went to an 18-game league schedule. Howard won the first meeting by two points at Dorothy Garrett before the Lady Chaps responded with a six-point victory in Midland, ending Howard's bid to finish the season undefeated.

After trailing by four points at halftime, the Lady Chaps took over the lead twice (41-39 and 44-42) in the second half with three-point goals by Roslynn Dunn and Shannon Jordan.

But the Lady Chaps could never get their potent running game going as Howard controlled the tempo for most of the 40 minutes with a deliberate offensive attack.

It didn't help that the Lady Chaps hit just four of 28 three-point goals. The success of their inside game in part depends on how well Midland is hitting the long rangers. After post Fatou Cisse' hit a three in the first three minutes of the game, Midland's well went dry until Dunn's trey with 13:47 to play in the game.

"We couldn't make any of our shots in the first half," said Dunn. "They just beat us, that's about all I can say."

Cisse' led all scorers with 23 points but the rest of the Lady Chaps were not as effective as almost all of their roster was held under their season scoring average. Most noticeably were Ndiasse, guards Pam Hicks, Shannon Jordan, Mandi White and Julie Chancellor and forward Stacie Johnson.

Ndiaye, who averaged 16, was held to 10 while three-point specialists Hicks and Jordan, who both average around eight points a game, were held to one and four points respectively. Johnson and White, two more of Midland's better long distance shooters, were held scoreless while Chancellor got just one point.

"It's pretty tough and it is always tough," said Thorngren, who finished with eight points. "If we got a few more shots to go or have a few less bad decisions then it's a different story."

The tough week doesn't end for the Lady Chaps, who host Frank Phillips on Thursday at 6 p.m.

DAWGS: Ozona trips No. 6 Midland High in the fourth quarter (48-29) when Merritt hit back-to-back three-pointers to try and spark the lackluster Midland High offense.

(From 1C)

Amber Tarr led Ozona with 15 points and also grabbed 13 rebounds to lead four players in double figures. Tara Wilkins and Shelly Sullivan both had 14 for Ozona (31-2), while Amber McWilliams added 10.

Midland High looked like the team which had won 24 of its 27 regular-season games at the beginning of the contest, shooting out to a 12-0 lead in the first three minutes of the game.

Ozona called a timeout, regrouped and started an 11-4 run which brought them back within five at the end of the quarter.

"We just called a time out to settle down and start running the offense like we have practiced and we started hitting some shots," Ozona coach Dickie Faught said. "I give the girls a lot of credit. They stayed in there, didn't lose their composure and cut that lead in half by the end of the quarter and that's what got us back into the game."

The Lady Dawgs then struggled offensively for the next two periods in scoring just 13 points. Ozona took the lead in the second and built it in the third as MHS was 1-of-15 from the field in the third period and had just four points.

"Ozona could have had their grandmothers in there and they would have driven to the basket on us," Raughton joked after the game. "We just didn't shoot the ball well and they did. We missed a lot of short jumpers that they were hitting and that was the big difference."

4-5A: Permian, MHS both need victories

(From 1C)

Midland High's court, but the smoke may not be cleared even if MHS defeats San Angelo tonight. If both MHS and Permian win tonight, both would finish league play at 7-5, forcing a one-game district playoff, probably Friday at a site still to be determined.

If the Bulldogs win, and Permian loses, MHS will advance to the state playoffs next week against the second place team from District 3-5A. If Permian wins, and MHS loses, Permian will get that honor. If both Panthers and Bulldogs win, then you have that district playoff meeting, which must be at a neutral site designated by league rules.

"I like our position," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson. "Entering the week, we needed some help. Permian had to lose a game, and that happened. Now we just need to take care of our business and not worry about what other teams do."

MHS guard Jon Stephenson, the son of the head coach at MHS, has seen enough of these district wars to know what's ahead tonight.

"We're where we want to be. By beating Abilene High (Friday), all we need to do now is beat San Angelo and see what happens. We've played all year for this one game."

The prospect of hitting the road also doesn't bother MHS guard James Whitfield.

"Sometimes we play better on the road because we know it's going to be tougher to win and we play harder," Whitfield said. "We'll be ready for that one."

San Angelo owns a win over MHS, shooting over 60 percent in a first half victory to win by 20 points. But the Bobcats seem to have fallen on hard times as of late. It will be interesting to see how well the Bobcats play, knowing they are now out of the race on the final night of regular season play.

It will also be interesting to note how well Cooper will play in Odessa. The Cougars beat Permian in the first half by only two points at home. Now Cooper has the league title and first round playoff bye clinched, and if there is time for a letdown, it could come here while Permian is fighting for its very playoff life.

Meanwhile, Midland Lee, 9-3 in district, is idle while waiting to play the third place team from 3-5A in the bi-district round early next week. Lee has clinched the second place playoff berth.

Chaparral Center won't be idle tonight. The Rankin girls will play a playoff warmup game against Loop at 5:30 p.m. and the Rankin boys will meet Garden City for the district championship at 7:30 p.m. at the Chap.

Also, the Big Spring girls will face El Paso Parkland in Alpine and Andrews will face Canutillo in Pecos tonight as the Class 4A girls playoffs begin.

Boxer Morrison tests HIV positive

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Tommy Morrison's up-and-down boxing career reached its low point Monday with the announcement that the powerful heavyweight had tested positive for the virus that causes AIDS.

Morrison's promoter, Tony Holden, confirmed that a test administered in Las Vegas last week came back HIV positive.

"He's taken it like a champ," Holden said. "He knows he's had a promiscuous lifestyle in the past. He's taking it better than his team (of handlers)."

Morrison, 27, did not attend the news conference. He remained in isolation at his home in the northeastern Oklahoma town of Jay, where he was providing blood samples to paramedics so further tests could be run.

He issued a statement asking people to pray for children affected by the disease because "I feel it would be selfish to ask you to say a prayer for me."

"I understand that there are people concerned about me," he said in the statement. "I am fine."

Holden said results of the latest tests are expected within 48 hours. He said Morrison still held out hope that a retest would show the original test false, but that the fighter has already talked about getting involved in AIDS awareness activities.

"If it is true, I don't see us ever fighting again or ever wanting to," Holden said.

MEN: Chaps fall to Hawks in double OT

(From 1C)

23 Midland College turnovers including 18 in the second half and overtimes periods. The Hawks pressure also forced the Chaps to shoot at a 6- for-21 pace in the second half and 2-7 in the post regulation periods.

"Tommy's crew locked us up," said Midland College coach Pat Rafferty. "We didn't handle the presure well and didn't execute.

"We got to the point where nobody wanted the ball. They really wore us downdown and the lids got soft."

Rafferty's team held an eight point lead in the second half, but the Chaps just couldn't hold off the Hawks. Even with Howard's top gun Ronnie DeGrey on the bench due to foul trouble. The defendive intensity wa so great that the Chaps were forced into seven turnovers in eight pocessions at one time, allowing Howard to tie the game 47-47 with under six minutes to play.

"It is hard to put away Howard because its defense will keep them in the game," said Rafferty. "It was a hard matchup for us. When you play 50 minutes, you get tired and you lose a half a step."

The Chaps, howeverm did not quit and fought the Hawks blow for blow down the stretch. Down 55-53 with seconds to go the Chaps even got a steal and came down to get a tie or even the lead. So, when Milton Palacio's jumper went in with two seconds, there was extra excitment because he was knocked around in the act of shooting and a foul seemed to be coming. However, no whistle was blown and the Chaps had to go to overtime.

"I thought we won it in regulation," said Rafferty. "The referees didn't want to step up and make the call. On the road, you want to win the game in regulation."

As Rafferty said, the home team has a big advantage in the extra period and that came true. All the pressure and tiresome legs finally gave way for the Chaps and Howard, despite missing 23-47 from the free throw line, got a very important win.

"At times it looked as thouhg neither team executed that well," said Collins. "It thought we had the game won. We missed foul shots and that put the pressure on us."

Midland College will return Thursday to do battle against Frank Phillips College at 8 p.m.

Pontiac hoping to make racing strides

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Chevrolet's Monte Carlos were an immediate hit last year when they debuted in the season-opening Daytona 500. Pontiac is hoping its new Grand Prixs will have the same kind of impact in Sunday's race.

After the first few days of practice and preliminary events, the jury remains out.

Rick Mast, whose team switched from Ford to Pontiac over the winter and took a major role in winter testing of the redesigned Grand Prix, was the top Pontiac qualifier for Sunday's Daytona 500.

He was eighth in Saturday's opening round of time trials, trailing pole-winner Dale Earnhardt's 189.510 mph in a Chevy by 1.032 mph.

Then, in Sunday's Busch Clash, Mast was the only Pontiac campaigner in the 17-car field and finished a respectable, if undistinguished 12th, in a car not expected to be as good as the one in which he will drive in the 500.

"The car hasn't run since we've been here," Mast explained. "We did some crazy stuff to the chassis (Sunday) to try and get it to respond. ... We had such a weird spring combination underneath this car just trying to get it to run. The car has got plenty of downforce, it's plenty stable. We were just way off on our balance.

"There's a whole lot of potential here," he added. "As bad as we had the car out of balance, trying to get it to run, we still stuck to the race track good. So, I know if we get it right, it will be good."

The old Grand Prix has not been very competitive the past two years, winning only one race and finishing off the pace in the manufacturers' championship each year. The problem was a lack of downforce and balance in the rear. But a reduced windshield angle and more aerodynamic rear angles have improved both of those areas.

On Monday, all the Pontiac entries got their first opportunity to draft with Chevys and Ford Thunderbirds on the 2 1/2-mile Daytona International Speedway oval.

"This morning was the first time we had the 500 car around other cars, and it is doing exactly what I expected," Mast said. "When I get in line in the draft, I can run good. And when I get out of line, I can still hang on.

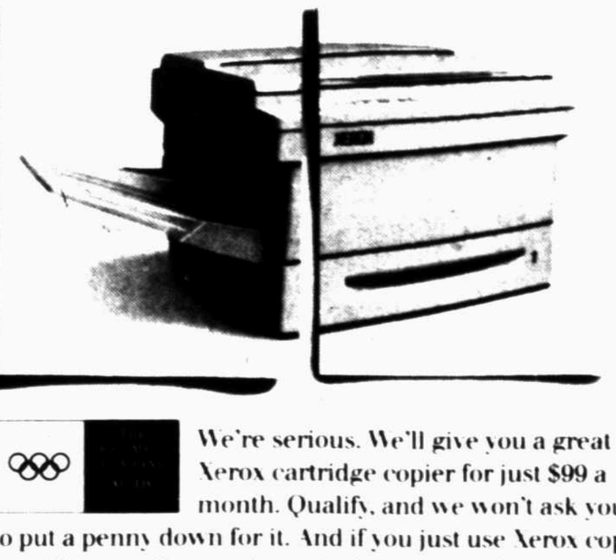

"The first thing you have to have here is a fast race car. I believe I've got one of those. Once you get a fast race car, then you've got to get to handling good. Whoever handles here the best is going to win."

"We're still adjusting," said Bobby Hamilton, driving Richard Petty's Pontiac. "We're getting better and better. We've been running some fast times; as fast as anyone I know. ... I'm happy with the way the car is driving. You can tell the car is planted."

Longtime Pontiac driver Kyle Petty, a former Daytona 500 pole-winner, said, "There's a bit difference. Last year's car just doesn't compare.

Having your furnace cleaned and checked may save your life!

With the recent cold snap, it is a good time to remind Permian Basin residents about the dangers of carbon monoxide poisoning. Carbon monoxide is an extremely dangerous gas that kills approximately 1500 people in this country every year. It is reported that at least another 5000 are hospitalized. This gas is colorless, odorless and tasteless. In other words, you won't know it is there unless you have a carbon monoxide detector in your home.

CO is formed by incomplete combustion of any hydrocarbon fuel. In the home, CO is a byproduct of gas furnaces/heating devices, water heaters, gas stoves, wood stoves, kerosene heaters, fireplaces and barbecue grills. It can also be found when using gasoline powered devices such as automobiles, lawn mowers, chain saws and generators.

Prolonged exposure to even small amounts of CO can cause permanent brain damage or death. The Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) has stated that continuous exposure of up to 35 parts per million (ppm) should not exceed eight hours. Other organizations have set standards that are higher, and some lower. One thing they all agree on is that over time, no amount is safe.

Why is carbon monoxide so dangerous? When CO enters your body, it is absorbed into the bloodstream and begins to deplete your body's oxygen supply. Some of the first symptoms include headaches, dizziness and drowsiness, followed by nausea, vomiting and irregular heartbeat. Many of these symptoms are flu-like, causing sufferers to stay home in bed. If the CO's source is at home, this can be the worst possible thing to do. With levels as low as 400 ppm, CO poisoning can cause death in as little as three hours. Higher concentrations can be life threatening in just one-to-three minutes.

Because gas furnaces are the number one cause of CO poisoning in the home, the Comfort Team at Aire Serv recommends everyone with gas furnaces have them serviced and cleaned once a year. This allows your Comfort Technician to inspect your system and check for potential problems that can enable this silent killer to do its damage. Aire Serv also recommends the installation of a quality carbon monoxide detector/alarm for anyone with gas appliances and/or attached garages.

There are many inexpensive brands on the market, but Aire Serv recommends that you look for quality rather than just price. Some of the more inexpensive brands react to products such as hair spray, perfumes, paint and other things commonly found around the home. This type of sensitivity can cause false alarms, which could lead the home owner to ignore a real warning.

When choosing a CO detector/alarm, think about the value of your family and purchase one that is reliable. Always follow the manufacturer's instructions for service and installation of this potential life saver. Aire Serv is selfish on this point; they want to make sure their friends in the community stick around as long as possible.

Aire Serv is locally owned and operated by Lee Thompson. The company sells Carrier and other units and offers complete service on all brands. The phone number is 570-7405.

Let a Comfort Technician from Aire Serv check your furnace for carbon monoxide emissions. CO is a dangerous gas that can only be detected by special equipment.

No. 4 Villanova rattles LaSalle

Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Kerry Kittles scored 25 points Monday night and No. 4 Villanova routed city rival La Salle 90-50, the worst loss ever sustained by the Explorers.

Jason Lawson and Eric Eberz each had 11 points for the Wildcats, winners of eight straight. Romaine Haywood had 14 for La Salle, which has lost eight of nine.

The worst previous loss by the Explorers was a 113-77 defeat against Notre Dame in 1977.

After neither team scored in the game's first two and a half minutes, the Wildcats (21-3) toyed with the Explorers (5-18), leading by 30 points at the half.

Brian Flickinger's 3-pointer got La Salle on the board and cut Villanova's lead to 5-3 five minutes into the game. That was as close as La Salle would get.

The overmatched Explorers tried to play a slow-down game early, but they missed their first six shots, and had four turnovers, including two shot clock violations, in the game's first five minutes.

Ahead 8-5, the Wildcats ran off a 9-0 run, capped by a Lawson layup. It was the first of three big runs that rendered the second half meaningless.

Villanova went on a 14-0 run, with Kittles hitting back-to-back treys, to assume a 36-11 lead with 3:25 left in the half.

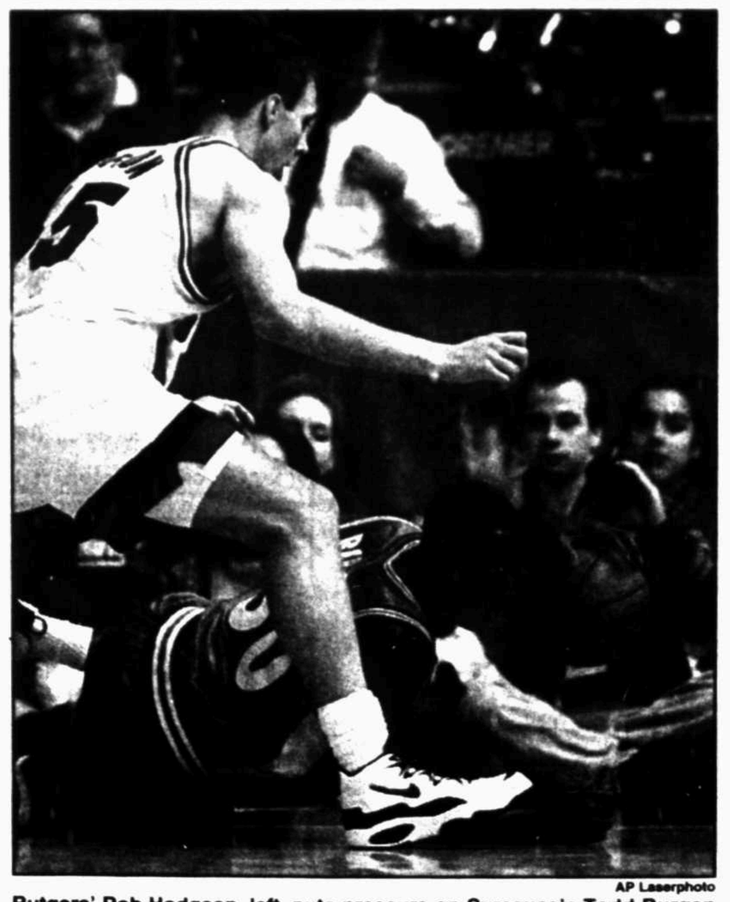

The Wildcats finished the half with an 8-0 run. Two free throws by Chuck Kornegay closed the half and gave Villanova its biggest lead of the half at 46-16.

Villanova compounded La Salle's ineptitude with 52 percent shooting from the floor in the first half, including 6 of 7 from 3-point range. La Salle shot 23 percent, and the Wildcats got 13 points off 11 La Salle turnovers.

Villanova also controlled the boards, outrebounding La Salle 23-15 and blocking six shots to the Explorers' none.

The Wildcats steadily built their lead in the second half. Villanova's biggest lead, following a 3-point play by Lawson, was 68-25.

The 16-point first half tied the Explorers' record for fewest points in a half, set Jan 5, 1993

No. 16 Syracuse 63, Rutgers 54

PISCATAWAY, N.J. — John Wallace scored 18 points and grabbed 12 rebounds in No. 16 Syracuse's uninspired 63-54 victory over Rutgers.

The Orangemen (19-6, 9-5 Big East) certainly didn't look like the team that beat then-No. 8 Georgetown by 21 points two days earlier. The game was one of those were neither shot well, both turned the ball with little pressure and the better team prevailed because of a run everyone knew was coming.

Rutgers (6-15, 3-10) was somehow within 39-36 with 9:53 to play, but as it has so many times in its first season in the Big East, it allowed the big run to come.

Syracuse scored the game's next 11 points to take a 50-36 lead with 5:03 left. The Scarlet Knights missed six shots from the field and the front end of a 1-and-1 in the span and the closest they got the rest of the way was 55-48 with 1:41 left on a four-point play by Billy Gilligan.

Syracuse finished the game shooting 39 percent (20-for-51), which looked pretty good next to Rutgers' 25 percent (19-for-75). Syracuse was 4-for-16 from 3-point range, while Rutgers was 6-for-26. Wallace was 8-for-11 from the field, the only starter from either team to shoot better than 50 percent.

The victory was the sixth in seven games for Syracuse, which moved within one-half game of No. 14 Georgetown for first place in the Big East 7.

The Scarlet Knights, who lost 81-80 at the Carrier Dome earlier in the season, lost for the seventh time in eight games.

JORDAN: Trials, tribulations of the great

(From 1C)

O'Neal, the fan favorite who attended high school in San Antonio, outscored Jordan 25-20, outrebounded him 11-4, had just as many assists (1) and even outdunked him with a rim-rattler in the final minute of the East's 129-118 victory.

And since Jordan elected to sit in the last seat on the bench for the final 16 minutes, it seemed O'Neal was going to get one of the league's high-profile awards.

"I was very shocked when I won, and the fans, they'll have their opinion," Jordan said. "It easily could have been Shaq for the way he finished the game. He could have easily have been chosen MVP, and obviously would have deserved it. I don't vote. I couldn't do anything about it."

O'Neal took the snub hard. He was dressed and out of the locker room before anyone else. As he walked out of the Alamodome wearing a black overcoat and derby, his trademark smile was gone and his usual affable manner was absent.

To O'Neal, who had endured double- and triple-teaming in past All-Star games when no one else got the same defensive attention, it was another chapter in what he sees as a conspiracy to keep him down.

"These are the trials and tribulations of a great player," O'Neal said. "I've gotten the short end of the stick before. I hope all great players don't have to go through something like this."

Many of the other All-Stars said O'Neal was robbed. The MVP was voted on by only seven journalists, and all ballots were turned in before the game ended so the award could be presented on television.

But in the final 2 1/2 minutes — after the ballots were in — O'Neal scored on a short one-hander and charged down the lane for the best dunk of the night.

"I thought Shaq deserved the MVP," Charles Barkley said. "Michael didn't play any in the fourth quarter, Shaq played down the stretch and got a lot of points, but they took the voting before the game ended.

"Let's not leave this NBA weekend on a negative note. Everybody can disagree with it, I disagree on it, but let's not let it ruin the weekend."

David Robinson and Gary Payton had 18 points each for the West and Anfernee Hardaway had 18 for the East. The teams combined for 46 turnovers, 26 by the West.

GIRLS: Soccer cousins miss opportunity er doesn't mind not playing against one of the district top midfielders and leading scorers.

"I like the idea of not playing against her," said Richardson. "She is an awesome player. I told her even though you're not in the game, you better root for me."

Now there is that Lee-MHS factor and that is what makes this truly interesting. As key cogs and all-district players, the last thing their respective coaches would want is for them to exchange information. So does information sometimes slip out? Yes, but the fact that it is balances out and that the teams know each other well doesn't worry the coaches.

"I always feed Christi false information," jokes Lee coach Van Gravitt. "It doesn't worry me. We don't have any secrets."

For coaches and players, when it comes down to it, scoring a goal does take priority, especially in the most heated of situations like when the two faced off in a shootout during MHS 1-0 win. Facing each other is something the two would rather do without.

"When I was shooting, I was going up against the best in district," said Johnson. "I knew I was going to have to be lucky because she knows how I shoot."

"On the shootout, I was excited, but I knew she missed," said Richardson. "(After the game) All the Lee people were telling me to leave her alone, but we have always supported each other and helped each other."

Of course, the game is between two of the district's top three teams in District 5. Midland High (10-3 for the season and 5-1 for district) is one game behind two-time district champion Abilene Cooper (6-0) while Lee (9-4 and 4-2) is in sole possession of third. The last game between the teams (a 1-0 MHS victory) was won on the last shot of the shootout. This time should bring the same type of excitement.

"This is a big game," said Gravitt. "We feel like we are playing better now and I saw them on Saturday (a 3-0 MHS win at San Angelo Central) and they are improved also."

The game will also have an impact on the district playoff race, both on the team's chances for a title and positioning for the other spots.

"Cooper, Lee and ourselves are the best three and that makes this an important game," said MHS coach Scott Hodkinson. "If we win, it puts some distance between us. We can't count on anyone else beating Cooper, but there is no way our girls will look past this one."

"We need to win this one to have a shot of winning district and winning would also put us in excellent shape for a playoff spot," said Gravitt.

One last note, despite the bumps and bruises the teams have suffered over the season, both teams will not have any players missing due to injury.

BOYS: Top district teams head to head

Lee in six straight games.

Lee and MHS have both improved since the first time the teams met. Lee's younger players, especially sophomore forward Troy Henry, have gained from varsity experience. And MHS has added forward Robert Evans, sweeper Jeremy Jones and defender Ryan Reese.

"I know they have Robert Evans back and that's going to be an asset for them," Lee defender Tim Tipton said. "But as the season goes along all teams are going to get better."

The Rebels have scored 17 goals in their six wins, including a non-district game, since MHS shut them out.

"I think they're going to come right at us after the last game," MHS assistant coach Chad Peterson said. "I think they and the rest of the district feel our weakness is in our back line. Everybody has bad days, but so far our bad days on defense have coincided with our good days on offense."

Lee coach John McCulloch wants his players to approach Midland High like the rest of the district games.

"We're going to go in there as relaxed as possible and hopefully we can capitalize on our chances and keep from making mistakes on defense," McCulloch said. "We're just going to try not to fill them full of hype."

Bombara is at least attempting to take his coaches advice.

"I'm trying not to think about it until the day of the game," he said. "I don't want to psyche myself up until game day and then I can start mentally preparing for it."

The Rebel defender thinks the game will be decided in the midfield, where Bulldog center midfielders J.D. Garcia and Marcello Lopes face Lee center midfielders Kyle King and Adrian Castresana.

"I think if we dominate the midfield we'll win the game," Bombara said. "I think whoever does that will win because I don't think the defenses will make mistakes."

The Bulldogs have started district play 9-0 and 10-0 the last two seasons. Despite losing 12 seniors from last year's team, they may have as good a chance as any of the past three years to go undefeated in district.

"They're a good, strong team all around," Tipton said. "But they're not unbeatable. We just have to find that (weak) spot and capitalize on it."

Prices rebound

NEW YORK — The stalled energy futures market rose slightly in low volume Monday as traders awaited the results of United Nations negotiations with Iraq over the sale of limited supplies of oil by that country.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in March closed 19 cents a barrel higher at 17.97 on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Local crude purchasers raised their posted price 25 cents to $16.50.

Natural gas for March was 9.5 cents lower at $2.456 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Traders are "sitting around waiting for headlines about the UN-Iraq talks," said Tom Knight, an analyst with Fina Oil and Chemical Co. in New Jersey.

Nonetheless, forecasts for cold weather on the east coast this week were providing some support for the energy market, Knight said.

Memory chip prices

NEW YORK — Personal computer owners are finally starting to benefit from a sharp drop in memory chip prices that began last fall.

The drop is the first in three years, a time in which other important PC components like microprocessors, hard drives and modems have adhered to the steady march downward that characterizes the industry.

Reductions of 25 percent to 40 percent started to show up in catalogs. The January catalog of Insight Direct Inc. even said, "Memory prices are dropping daily, call now for the latest." At another catalog firm, PC Connection Inc., a 4 MB memory module had slipped from $219.95 in December to $149.95 last week.

Dollar rallies

NEW YORK — The dollar rallied on gains in U.S. stock and bond markets Monday, but the advance wasn't enough to overcome earlier losses amid a broad strengthening of the German mark.

Despite its late afternoon rise during the U.S. session, the dollar concluded the day lower against the mark and the Japanese yen. The mark benefited from a general weakening of other European currencies.

The dollar was trading at 1.4764 marks, down from 1.4872 on Friday. It finished at 106.80 yen, compared with 107.05 on Friday.

The dollar rallied back from as low as 1.4717 marks and 106.05 yen.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Friday: 1.2040 Swiss francs, down from 1.2070; 5.0720 French francs, down from 5.0740; 1,572 Italian lire, up from 1,569; and 1.3710 Canadian dollars, down from 1.3715.

The British pound fell to $1.5290 from $1.5305 on Friday.

T-Bill rates

WASHINGTON — Interest rates on short-term Treasury securities fell in Monday's auction to the lowest levels in more than a year.

The Treasury Department sold $13.8 billion in three-month bills at an average discount rate of 4.80 percent, down from 4.88 percent last week. Another $13.8 billion was sold in six-month bills at an average discount rate of 4.71 percent, down from 4.79 percent.

The three-month bill rate was the lowest since they sold for 4.79 percent on Sept. 26, 1994. The six-month bill rate was the lowest since they averaged 4.60 percent on June 27, 1994.

Upbeat investors send Dow to 5,600

■ Record inflow of cash credited with sending market up 500 points already this year.

By Bruce Meyerson
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average bolted to its sixth straight record Monday as investor enthusiasm, underscored by record flows of new cash into mutual funds, pushed the market's rally into a fourth week.

Most broad-market indexes rose, padding last week's records, but investors again showed a greater preference for bellwether issues as the safest way to ride the market higher.

The Dow industrial average gained 58.53 to 5,600.15, its first close above 5,600 and its 13th record in 16 sessions. The well-known barometer of blue-chip companies, which already has risen almost 500 points this year, was up nearly 75 points at one point Monday.

Advancing issues outnumbered decliners by about 8 to 7 on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume totaled 397.84 million shares, down from Friday's busy pace.

The NYSE composite index rose 2.26 to 351.70; the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 5.08 to 661.45; and the Nasdaq composite index gained 0.78 to 1095.38 — all new marks — but the American Stock Exchange's market value index fell 1.55 to 562.46.

Traders and analysts have said the market owes much of its strength to record flows of cash into stock mutual funds. According to the Investment Company Institute, a mutual fund trade group, investors put a record $24.5 billion more into stock funds in January than they removed.

The difficulty of trying to stay in the game but predict when the market's momentum will ebb has forced investors and money managers to make ever more aggressive plays, said Joe Battipaglia, market strategist at Gruntal & Co.

"Everyone's aware of the underlying positives (in the economy): low inflation, falling interest rates, decent confidence," said Battipaglia. "Investors have concluded that they need to be in financial assets. Stocks are returning more than bonds, so money is being applied to stocks almost willy-nilly."

But if money managers start to lock in profits, he cautioned, "A lot of air could come out of these valuations quickly."

William Dodge, market strategist at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., said the market's rise is "'more methodical than maniacal, but we're probably approaching a limit."

Blaring headlines in The Wall Street Journal and USA Today about the Dow industrials, which crossed the 5,500 mark just two sessions earlier, ensured some early enthusiasm, said Larry Wachtel, market analyst at Prudential Securities.

"When we arrived today, we saw all these euphoric headlines: Dow 6,000, Dow 10,000," said Wachtel.

There was little specific corporate news to move stocks.

AT&T, a Dow industrial component, rose 1 to 67 1/2 in active NYSE trading after reports that it is talking with MCI about joining forces to create local telephone networks in major U.S. markets. MCI, which confirmed the reports of preliminary negotiations, rose 1 5/8 to 30 1/2 on the Nasdaq.

Overseas, Frankfurt's DAX index rose 0.7 percent and London's FT-SE 100 gained 0.3 percent. Japanese financial markets were closed Monday in observance of Foundation Day.

AT&T, MCI discuss joint local service

NEW YORK (AP) — In the world of business, your enemy's enemy can often be your friend.

So it is with MCI Communications Corp. and AT&T Corp., which are discussing joining forces to build local telephone networks to compete against regional telephone companies.

The negotiations between the bitter rivals were first reported Monday in The Wall Street Journal and were confirmed by MCI spokesman Robert Stewart, who told The Associated Press that the story is "essentially correct."

Stewart would not elaborate. Jim Byrnes, a spokesman for AT&T Corp. in Basking Ridge, N.J., had no comment.

President Clinton's signing of the telecommunications bill last week set the stage for AT&T, MCI and other long-distance services to enter the local telephone business. The local phone companies, dominated by the Baby Bells formed in the 1984 breakup of AT&T, will be trying to break into the long-distance business.

"I think that the new telecom law is going to initially make some very strange bedfellows," said Scott Wright, a telecommunications analyst with Argus Research.

Executives at AT&T and MCI, speaking on condition of anonymity, told the Journal that the companies expect to reach an agreement to share in the cost of building local phone networks in some U.S. markets or to swap the use of facilities they already own to bypass the networks of Bell companies and other local carriers.

George Dellinger, an analyst with HSBC Washington, said that together, AT&T and MCI have about 80 percent of the long-distance market but less than 1 percent of the local market.

"I really think the battle is not between AT&T and MCI. It is AT&T and MCI against the 300 or so smaller long-distance competitors who will be joined by the seven Bell companies," Dellinger said.

It would not be the first association between AT&T and MCI. Both are participants in the trans-oceanic cable networks, which are owned by many communications partners in the United States and elsewhere. In addition, MCI recently signed an agreement with AT&T Wireless Service to resell capacity from AT&T's vast wireless system.

A new network such as the one envisioned in the AT&T-MCI talks could cost as much as $5 billion just to get started and as much as $20 billion to become competitive.

The alliance, however, could end up costing each company less than building local networks alone. The benefit could be a system of transmission lines and switching centers that might start to compete with the Bells.

Expert says Iraqi exports will cut prices $2

BBy N.Y. Times News Service

Houston — Oil prices will fall as much as $2 a barrel if the United Nations allows Iraq to resume selling crude oil on world markets, said an official of an energy industry research group.

Oil prices fell $1 a barrel when the U.N. agreed to talks with Iraq over the issue in January. They'll fall another $1 a barrel at word the talks are progressing toward allowing Iraq to resume exports and another $1 when the exports actually begin, said Joseph Stanislaw, managing director of Cambridge Energy Research Associates.

The U.N. banned Iraq from exporting oil following its 1990 invasion of Kuwait. Iraq wants to sell $2 billion, or about 700,000 barrels a day, of crude oil every six months to pay for food and medicine.

A spokeswoman for Madeleine Albright, the U.S. ambassador to the U.N., said there had been no "significant developments" in the talks, which resumed Monday.

"Iraq is very much on everyone's lips right now given the resumed negotiations with the U.N.," Stanislaw said.

Stanislaw's comments referred to average prices over a period of time, and he said prices may fall further at some points. He also expects about half the decline to be recovered as the market adjusts to the addition of Iraqi oil.

Sufficient production capacity worldwide, even with strong demand, will spur the oil price decline, Stanislaw said. Iraq's return to the market would only boost supply.

Price recovery largely will depend on the actions of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries and Saudi Arabia, he said.

The OPEC nations have been producing above their self-imposed ceiling of 24.52 million barrels a day. Figures available for 10 of the 12 nations show they produced 2 percent more than their quotas in January. Saudi Arabia is the only OPEC nation not producing at full capacity or above its set quota, Stanislaw said.

"There would be room for Iraq's oil if the OPEC countries would cut back to their quotas," he said.

Stanislaw's comments came during a news conference to release the 1996 edition of World Oil Trends, an annual study by Cambridge Energy Research, Arthur Andersen LLP and Andersen Consulting. The study assesses changes in the international energy industry.

The study showed that world oil consumption rose 1.6 percent in 1995 to 69.9 million barrels a day, or bbl/d, the largest annual increase since 1988. Demand rose the most, 4.4 percent, in the Asia-Pacific region and declined by 0.3 percent in North America. Demand also fell in the former Soviet Union by 4 percent, the seventh straight annual decline.

OPEC crude production rose 1.1 percent in 1995 to 25.2 million bbl/d, while production from non-OPEC nations increased 2.1 percent to 35.9 million bbl/d. Total world production rose 1 million bbl/d, or 1.7 percent, to 61.2 million bbl/d in 1995. Total world supply, including natural gas liquids, refinery processing gains and non-oil components used for oil product blending, rose 1.4 million bbl/d, or 2 percent, to 70.2 million bbl/d.

The study also found that some major assumptions that have guided oil industry analysis and decision making for the past 10 years were unfounded in 1995.

The assumptions are that a low oil price environment leads to stagnant or falling non-OPEC production, that rising demand will lead to higher OPEC production and higher prices, and that price differentials for various grades of crude oil would widen.

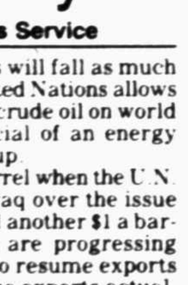

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

December 31 interest payments count as 1996 income

By Bill Doyle

Q: Here's another good reason for not leaving securities in "street name" with a broker.

My wife and I have a goodly amount of U.S. Treasury notes in our street-name account. Interest is scheduled to be paid on those notes every June 30 and Dec. 31 until the notes mature.

Doyle

That suits me just fine. We will have a truly large amount of additional income from other sources this year. Naturally, I expected to have the Dec. 31, 1995, interest payment credited to our brokerage account in 1995 and included in our taxable income for that year.

Instead, the brokerage firm credited that interest to our account on Jan. 2.

We will be in a higher federal income tax bracket this year. As a result, we will will pay more tax on that interest than would have been the case if the interest had been credited to our account in 1995.

Is there any way to avoid this Catch 22?

A: No. But don't blame the brokerage. It's following the rules laid down by the U.S. Treasury Department.

Interest payments came due on 13 different Treasury note issues on Dec. 31, all of which were credited to investors' accounts on Jan 2.

Regulations state that, when a scheduled payment date of interest or principal on Treasury securities is not a business day for Federal Reserve Banks, payment is made the next business banking day.

Dec. 31 was a Sunday, which was followed by New Year's Day. That delayed the posting of interest until Jan. 2.

Because that interest payment was credited to your account in January, it will be counted as 1996 income. The brokerage firm, no doubt, has sent you and the Internal Revenue Service a Form 1099 listing the interest and dividend payments credited to your account in 1995. That Jan. 2 interest payment will show up on the 1996 Form 1099 you will receive in January 1997.

Even though it makes you unhappy, you are correct about being required to report the Jan. 2 Treasury note interest payment as taxable income for 1996, a year in which you expect to be in a higher income tax bracket.

I'd say it's time for you to say a few prayers that the tax legislation wending its way through Congress results in drastically reduced brackets — perhaps even a flat tax with just one bracket.

Q: Do all U.S. Treasury notes and bonds pay interest on the 31st day of the month?

A: Not by a long shot. Two-year and five-year Treasury notes pay interest on the last day of the month in which they were issued and the last day of the month six months later. That can result in Treasury note interest payments on the 30th or 31st of a particular month, or even the 28th if the month happens to be February.

The semiannual interest payments on three-year and 10-year Treasury notes are made on the 15th day of the month. So are interest payments on all issues of Treasury bonds.

Q: Does the rule about Jan. 2 crediting of Dec. 31 Treasury note interest apply to notes held through a bank, as well as notes held in a street-name account at a brokerage firm?

A: Yes. It applies, no matter how you hold those Treasury notes.

If you have the notes at a bank or brokerage, the interest was credited to your account there on Jan. 2.

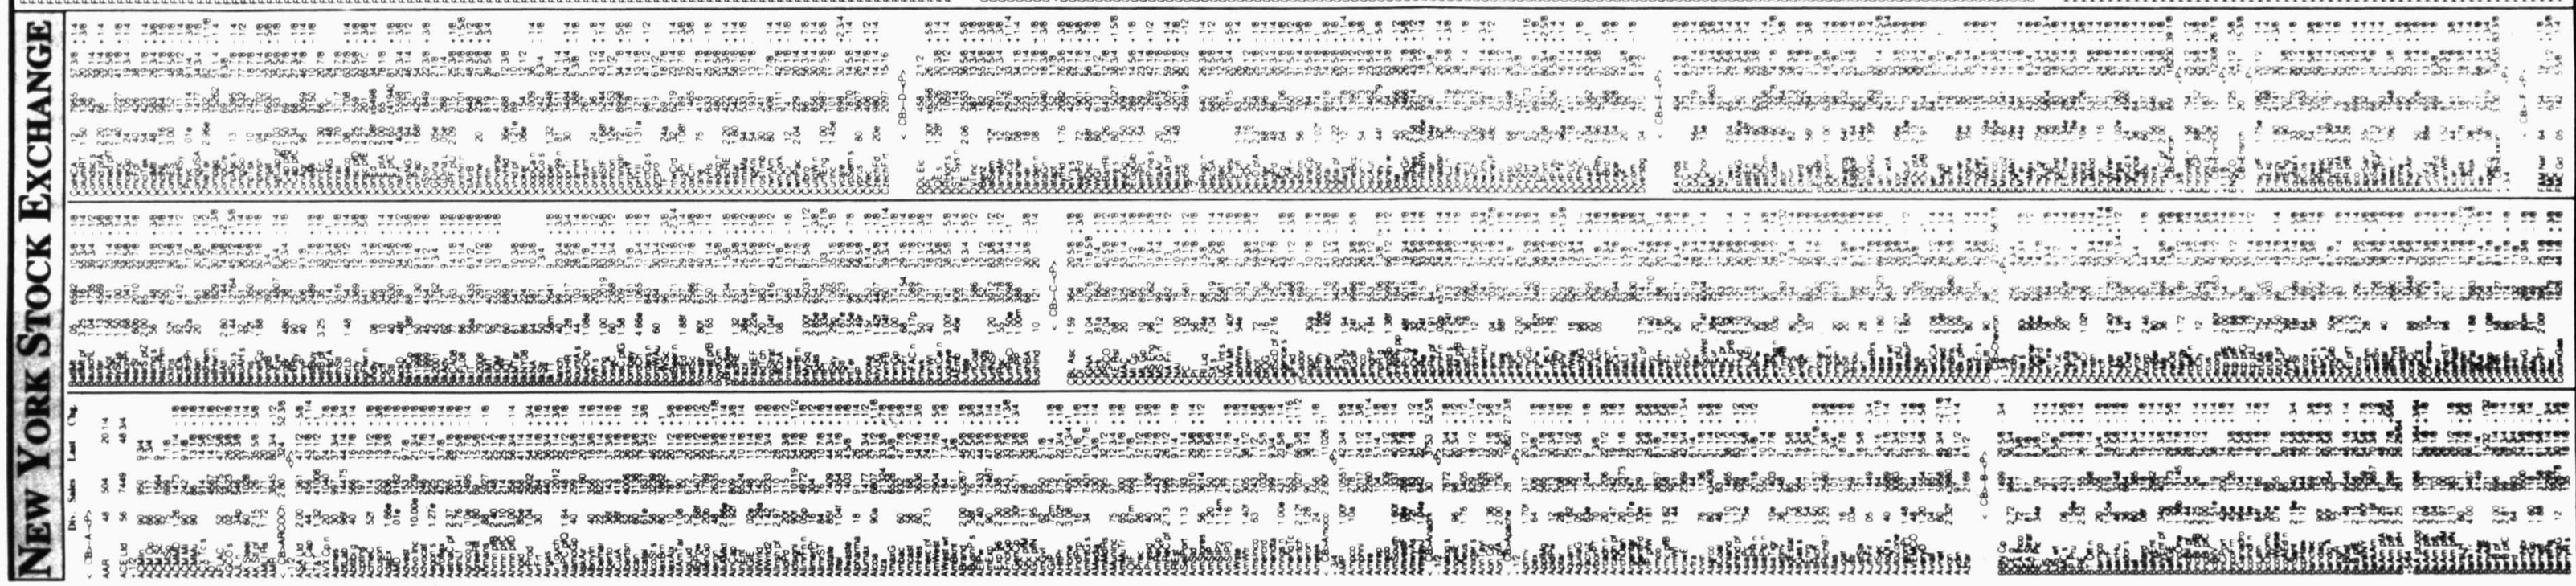

If you have your personal Treasury Direct account in which you hold Treasury securities through a Federal Reserve Bank or branch, the interest was credited to the account you designated at your local bank, also on Jan. 2.

Recreation endangers park's plant life

By Carol Kaesuk Yoon
N.Y. Times Service

More than 100 years ago, a scenic area of woods, wildflowers and rocky granite outcrops was set aside as the Middlesex Fells, a conservation area just north of Boston. But researchers now say that despite a ban on development since 1894, more than 150 of the park's plant species have disappeared.

The finding that so many species could be lost from a reserve is an unnerving one for conservation biologists. But researchers say that equally jarring is the suggestion by the authors, in their paper in the February issue of the journal Conservation Biology, that a major cause is the increasing recreational activity of the nature lovers for whom the reserve was created.

"It's sobering to think that even fair-sized protected areas are going to do such a poor job at protecting species," said Dr. Eric Menges, a plant ecologist at the Archbold Biological Station in Lake Placid, Fla. "The numbers lost are a little bit startling. It suggests that even some of the more passive recreations, like hiking, that most people think are compatible with conservation may not be."

Many researchers say that such species loss in conservation areas is probably widespread and that the problem is likely to grow.

"The biggest spreading land use in this country is suburbia and a lot of areas that have been set aside and are valued by people are now chockablock up next to somebody's suburb or shopping mall," said Dr. Steward T.A. Pickett, a plant ecologist at the Institute of Ecosystem Studies in Millbrook, N.Y. "The natural areas in a lot of cities are going to suffer the same sorts of impacts that this one in Boston has."

The researchers who carried out the study, Brian Drayton, a plant ecologist, and Dr. Richard Primack, a conservation biologist, both at Boston University, were able to take advantage of a plant survey done at the time of the establishment of the Middlesex Fells. They have great oonfidence in the original survey, done as it was by some of the leading botanists of the day. The 1894 survey team included Dr. Merritt Lyndon Fernald, editor of Gray's Manual of Botany, which is still considered the standard text for the identification of plants in the Northeast, and Dr. Liberty Hyde Bailey, a similarly renowned authority on cultivated plants.

The Boston University researchers carried out their census from 1990 to 1993 over 1,000 acres of the the Fells. The park, which is about 10 miles north of Boston, was named for the fells or high rocky hills running through it. What they discovered was that 155 of the 422 original plant species were no longer to be found. Among the missing were seven orchid species, including fringed orchids and Hooker's orchid, the wood lily and the cardinal flower, as well as trees like the black ash.

Researchers noted that none of the species lost were listed as endangered or threatened. More important than the particulars of the lost species, they say, is the recognition that so many could disappear from an area like the Fells.

"It's very dramatic," Primack said. "People think of this as being a really excellent conservation area."

Drayton explained that such declines could easily go unnoticed, since disappearances average only one species per year. "With trees and perennial plants, it often takes them a long time to die," Drayton said. "A plant could persist for my whole lifetime and the lifetime of my children and still be on the way to extinction. It's happening so slowly we don't see it, but it's happening for so many different species that the net effect is that it's happening fast."

Among the hardest hit plants were those that favor life in moist forests. Primack explained that these plants have suffered in part because of the increasing numbers of trails. As the woods are opened up and exposed, the often slow-growing plants are subjected to drying from increased air movement.

The researchers who carried out the study, Brian Drayton, a plant ecologist, and Dr. Richard Primack, a conservation biologist, both at Boston University, were able to take advantage of a plant survey done at the time of the establishment of the Middlesex Fells. They have great confidence in the original survey, done as it was by some of the leading botanists of the day. The 1894 survey team included Dr. Merritt Lyndon Fernald, editor of Gray's Manual of Botany, which is still considered the standard text for the identification of plants in the Northeast, and Dr. Liberty Hyde Bailey, a similarly renowned authority on cultivated plants.

The Boston University researchers carried out their census from 1990 to 1993 over 1,000 acres of the the Fells. The park, which is about 10 miles north of Boston, was named for the fells or high rocky hills running through it. What they discovered was that 155 of the 422 original plant species were no longer to be found. Among the missing were seven orchid species, including fringed orchids and Hooker's orchid, the wood lily and the cardinal flower, as well as trees like the black ash.

Researchers noted that none of the species lost were listed as endangered or threatened. More important than the particulars of the lost species, they say, is the recognition that so many could disappear from an area like the Fells.

"It's very dramatic," Primack said. "People think of this as being a really excellent conservation area."

Drayton explained that such declines could easily go unnoticed, since disappearances average only one species per year. "With trees and perennial plants, it often takes them a long time to die," Drayton said. "A plant could persist for my whole lifetime and the lifetime of my children and still be on the way to extinction. It's happening so slowly we don't see it, but it's happening for so many different species that the net effect is that it's happening fast."

Among the hardest hit plants were those that favor life in moist forests. Primack explained that these plants have suffered in part because of the increasing numbers of trails. As the woods are opened up and exposed, the often slow-growing plants are subjected to drying from increased air movement.

Federal studies show performing arts patrons are largely older Americans

By Judith Miller
N.Y. Times Service

Hit by soaring costs and cutbacks in financial support of all kinds many cultural institutions in New York City and around the country face another and in some respects more insidious threat to their health the aging of the audiences they most depend upon to attend and bankroll arts performances

The graying of America has been acknowledged for years but new federal studies have just begun to focus on the adverse effects that this demographic fact of life is likely to have on audiences for the arts particularly the high culture performing arts

Although the new research does not examine the problems of specific cultural institutions in specific cities the studies have clear implications for New York They show a decline in the percentage of people interested in attending most of the fare of concert halls theaters and musical stages a disproportionate number of which are in the city

For reasons that social scientists are trying to sort out only art museums jazz and to a lesser extent ballet are attracting roughly as high a percentage of people among the younger generations as among the older ones These categories leave aside of course the thriving popular culture rock music movies and television

The new reports as well as interviews with sociologists demographers and patrons and officials of New York arts institutions indicate that the aging of the population is likely to affect both goers — the consumers of culture who face ever higher ticket prices and growing demands on their time and resources — and givers the legions of institutional donors and individuals whose contributions offset the annual deficits run by most cultural organizations

Demographic forecasts are not infallible But people in the arts who understand these numbers are preparing for the worst even as in many cases they enjoy brisk business today

Broadway theater for example has just had its best year of ticket sales in a decade But Judith Arron the executive director of Carnegie Hall which is also reporting growing ticket sales and packed performances says that her institution has moved aggressively in recent years to diversify and broaden its audience "Of course we are anxious about this," Ms Arron said "We must all be anxious"

Unless the demographic trends can be reversed many of the institutions that have made New York the cultural center of the world and a great source of wealth for the city "are in trouble," concludes a study commissioned by the President's Committee on the Arts and Humanities that is to be made public Monday

Two other studies commissioned by the National Endowment for the Arts and now being summarized for publication in about six weeks quantify these trends in great detail

They conclude that despite higher incomes and better levels of education younger Americans are unlikely ever to attend live performances of what one of the authors calls highbrow culture — especially classical music opera and musicals and dramatic theater — in the same proportions or with the same intensity as the generations before them

In one of report Richard Peterson and Darrell Sherkat of Vanderbilt University show that attendance at and enthusiasm for most of the performing arts diminish with each generation or cohort and that younger cohorts show no signs of becoming avid goers as they age

This is a sea change said Peterson a sociologist who has been studying audiences for years

We re talking about a massive shift in taste and tradition from a generation of war baby cultural highbrows to future generations of cultural omnivores younger Americans who think Patsy Cline reggae B B King and hip-hop are as important as the New York Philharmonic If I were a New York-based snob cultural institution I would be very worried

And they are

What the Vanderbilt team s statistics make clear is that the relatively old audiences supporting much of the performing arts did not mysteriously catch the culture virus when they reached a certain age To a great extent say Peterson and Sherkat they supported the same art forms when they were younger

The Depression and World War II babies have always been and remain enthusiastic about the arts Peterson said Until they re deaf and their teeth fall out they go But younger generations show far less interest than their parents did when they were young indeed the prospect is that in each succeeding generation a smaller and smaller percentage of the group will attend most of the performing arts

Declining interest is accompanied by a second clear trend an unusual drop in the rate of individual giving to cultural institutions despite a stronger economy in recent years

The average size of donations by households to the arts "fell dramatically" between 1987 and 1993 far more rapidly than gifts to other philanthropic causes according to Nina Kressner Cobb a New York-based historian who wrote the President s Committee report on arts-related philanthropy

This sector of philanthropy is critical she says since giving by individuals accounts for 77 percent of all arts contributions Whereas average household donations to all philanthropic causes dropped by 11 percent from 1987 to 1993 the size of giving to the arts per household fell by 47 percent from $260 in 1987 to $139 in 1993

Citing a separate study by Treasury Department economists Ms Cobb also concludes that while America produced a record number of new millionaires — 64,500 households reported pretax income of more than $1 million in 1990 as against $18,700 in 1979 — the newly wealthy are far less philanthropic than their predecessors

"All the data suggest the newer millionaires are giving much less" Ms Cobb said in an interview The rise of more miserly millionaires she said "reflects a decline in the notion of stewardship of civic culture itself"

"It is unlikely that we would get a Rockefeller family with all its generosity today she added These are truly discouraging numbers

The combination of a graying audience and less generous patrons could be especially hard on New York because so many of the leading cultural institutions are based here And the problem is compounded by yet another demographic trend the city is losing its white well-educated middle-class population the core audience for the traditional performing arts

The city s population grew overall between 1980 and 1990 but it had a net loss of more than half a million white residents in that period The New York Department of City Planning expects that the city will lose 556 000 more white residents by the year 2000 an 18 percent decrease even as the population as a whole increases by 361 000 people to 7 485 000

Our theater audiences are increasingly in Florida and our creators are increasingly in Los Angeles said Doe Scanlon the former creative director of Playwrights Horizons who tried for four years to attract a younger more ethnically diverse audience to his 141-seat nonprofit theater

Judith Balfe a sociologist at the City University of New York-College of Staten Island wrote one of the two studies for the National Endowment for the Arts focusing on baby-boomer participation in the arts She said her findings forecast a crisis for most of high culture

It was once a hidden crisis but now it can no longer be denied Ms Balfe said The study by her and Rolf Meyersohn a CUNY colleague highlights the declining appetite for the highbrow performance arts among both younger and older baby boomers the almost 80 million Americans born between 1946 and 1965

Tribes fight to protect casinos

SANTA FE, N.M. — Faced with an order last month from the United States attorney to shut down their casinos, the leaders of some New Mexico Indian tribes responded as adamantly as reigning sovereigns of foreign powers.

Unless they are allowed to continue running their lucrative gambling halls, they threatened, New Mexicans might wake up one morning to a nightmarish gridlock: highways crossing Indian land would be closed, including New Mexico's two interstates.

The threat was apparently effective. Late last month a federal District judge approved an extraordinary deal between the Indians and the federal government: Prosecutors agreed to let the casinos stay open until a lawsuit challenging the federal order has been settled.

For their part, the tribes agreed to keep the highways open and to abide by whatever the federal courts decide.

It almost seemed as though the tribes were being dealt with on an ambassadorial level. But for all their success in staring down the federal government, the tribes have been wielding power that is largely illusory.

Any special status the tribes enjoy is granted by the will and the whim of Congress in its Constitutional power "to regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several states, and with the Indian tribes." Congress can undercut tribal autonomy anytime it wishes. And it does.

Over the years, Congress's political mood swings have left behind a bewildering legal netherworld: Indians can vote in both federal and state elections but don't have to pay state income taxes.

Tribal courts can try misdemeanors committed on the reservation by Indians (non-Indians are tried in their own courts). But major crimes are tried by federal judges (or, in a few places, state courts).

Like other American citizens, Indians have Constitutional rights — as long as they are dealing with the federal and state governments. But on the reservation, they are covered instead by the Indian Civil Rights Act of 1968, a kind of truncated version of the Bill of Rights that allows for theocratic governments.

The United States Supreme Court has ruled that tribes may exclude and expel visitors. Whether this would permit blocking New Mexico highways is far less certain, since the tribes have signed right-of-way agreements. But lawyers are in a quandary over just who — federal or state officials — would enforce the agreements.

In 1830, without even a fig leaf of euphemism, Congress passed the Indian Removal Act, opening up farmland by herding as many Indians as possible west of the Mississippi. In those days the Office (now the Bureau) of Indian Affairs was part of the War Department. When the agency was moved to the Department of the Interior, in 1848, many tribes felt insulted. They were no longer being treated as nations but as natural resources to be managed on federal preserves.

The next blow came in 1871, when the government stopped signing treaties with the tribes, regulating them instead with statutes, which do not require tribal consent.

Under the General Allotment Act of 1887, many reservations were dissolved. Indian lands dwindled from 138 million acres to 48 million acres by 1934, when the
