Jury finds Purser guilty of capital murder

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Curtis Dean Purser, 21, was found guilty Saturday for the capital murder of a 28-year-old church secretary on Nov. 13, 1991.

"The family is pleased with the verdict and we have no further comment until the trial's complete," said 26-year-old Joey Branch, who was married to the victim.

The jury is set to return Monday to begin hearing character witnesses to assess a punishment — either the death penalty or life in prison.

The seven-woman, five-man jury rendered the verdict after about an hour and a half Saturday that followed 10 hours of deliberations on Friday. The jury was sequestered overnight at the Midland Hilton, across the street from the courthouse.

The victim's family and the mother of the defendant, Carol Purser, were present at opposite sides of the courtroom when 238th District Court Judge John Hyde read the jury's finding.

District Attorney Al Schorre said he was pleased with the verdict but expressed some surprise because the jury, upon entering the courtroom, looked at Purs-

Turkish leader dies

ANKARA, Turkey — President Turgut Ozal, whose pro-Western policies helped modernize Turkey and gave the U.S.-led coalition a strategic ally during the Persian Gulf War, died Saturday of heart problems. He was 66. The choice of a successor threatens to touch off a political crisis in a country beset with a Kurdish insurgency and governed by a coalition of parties. Parliament Speaker Husamettin Cindoruk will be acting president until parliament elects a successor. Turkey's close ties with the West are not expected to be affected.

Jury convicts two officers in King case

■ Judge to sentence Koon, Powell on Aug. 4

By Seth Mydans
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — A federal jury on Saturday convicted a police sergeant and the officer who delivered the most blows to Rodney G. King in a beating two years ago and acquitted two other officers in a civil rights case that has focused the nation's attention on police misconduct and urban problems.

Many residents of this tense city greeted the convictions of Sgt. Stacey C. Koon and Officer Laurence M. Powell with cheers, while the police, on full mobilization with riot gear, shrugged their shoulders in relief. Reaction centered more on the convictions of the two than the acquittals of Officer Theodore J. Briseno and former Officer Timothy E. Wind, who played less of a role in the beating.

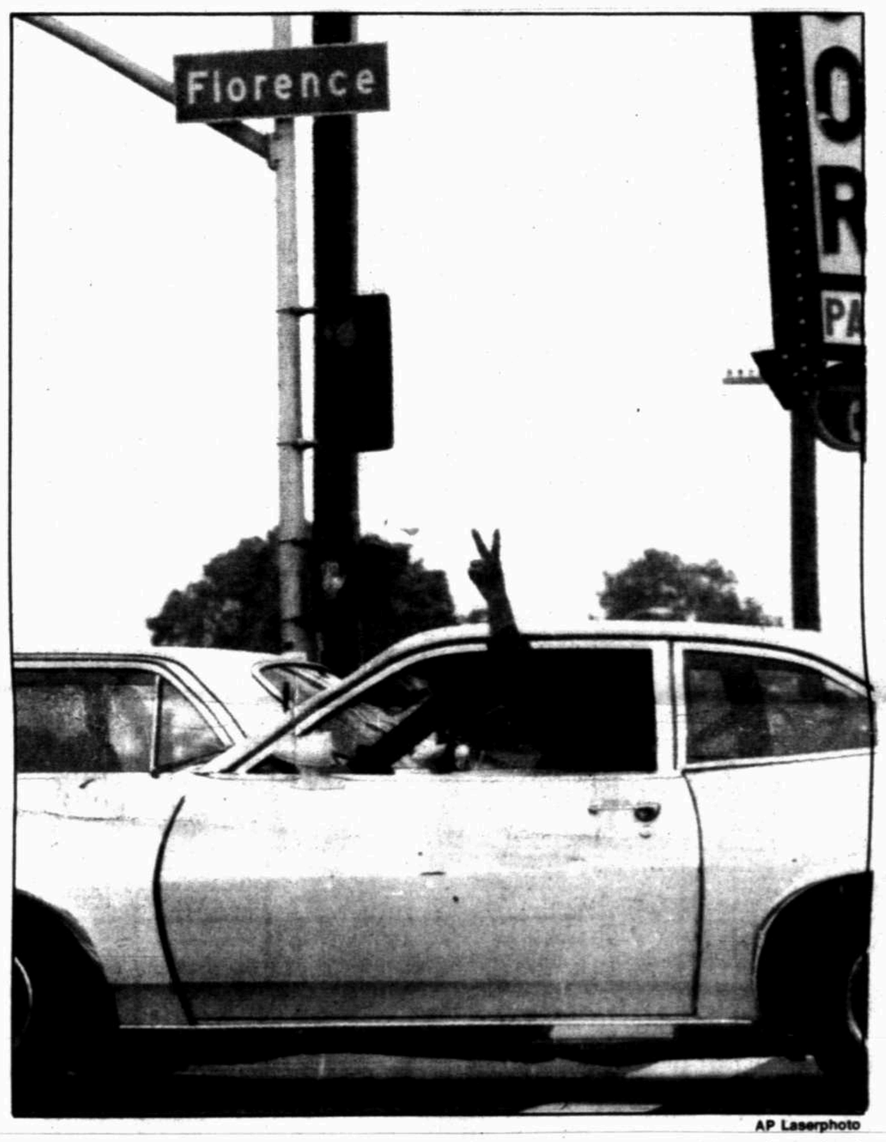

President Clinton said in Pittsburgh that the trial should imbue Americans with "a determination to reaffirm our common humanity and to make a strength of our diversity."

Koon's lawyer, Ira M. Salzman, reacted with anger at those who cheered the verdict, saying: "I cry for them. It's justice, not a circus. Stacey Koon is not some sacrificial animal to be cast aside for peace in Los Angeles."

Though the two officers face possible maximum sentences of 10 years in prison, as well as fines as high as $250,000, complicated federal sentencing requirements imposed by Congress in 1987 suggest that Powell could be imprisoned for 6½ years at the most, and more probably for 1½ to two years, legal analysts said. Any sentence can be further reduced by good behavior in prison.

Koon could face anything from probation to two years in prison, based on a number of variables that include his willingness to take full responsibility

Los Angeles wakes up from two-year-long nightmare

Juror: Videotape was officers' downfall

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The amateur videotape of the Rodney King beating was the key evidence that led federal jurors to convict two policemen, two panelists said Saturday. One said they played it "forwards, backwards, frame by frame."

A male juror, interviewed on KNBC-TV, said the 12 jurors threw out the conflicting testimony of two police experts and instead relied on the infamous videotape.

"I think the tape basically speaks for itself — that's basically what convicted them," the juror said. His face was in a shadow; all the jurors' identities have been kept secret.

LOS ANGELES — After two years of convulsions, racial turmoil and fear, a great cloud of gloom lifted from Los Angeles on Saturday.

The battered city opened like a spring flower Saturday morning just after 7 a.m., when it was announced that two of four white officers had been found guilty of violating Rodney King's civil rights.

Shopkeepers who had boarded up their stores opened for business. Children went to Saturday arts classes. Traffic moved smoothly amid a general feeling that the split verdict had brought at least a measure of justice if not a solution to all of this city' social ills.

"It's like I've got cotton under my feet," Jimmy Simon, a black retired mechanic, said as he flashed a toothy smile on a street in South-Central Los Angeles. "Everybody can go home — nothing will happen now."

It was much the same in Koreatown, another neighborhood that had been heavily damaged in last year's rioting.

Former airport board member will try to unseat Devenport in District 1

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a series on the May 1 election.

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

District 1 challenger Pat Schneider has hit the streets in an aggressive effort to unseat incumbent councilman James Devenport.

Ms. Schneider, who served on the Midland International Airport board for six years, said she is ready to take that city government experience to a higher level.

"I am well aware of the problems that exist and the decisions that should be made in regard to the operation of the airport. Midland International Airport is the vital link to the success of businesses within the Permian Basin," she said.

But Devenport — an independent landman and self-described conservative Republican — said his record, which includes heavily supporting spending restraints, speaks for itself.

"I'm involved, I get out in the district and I know what's going on," he said. "It's much better when you're on the inside doing the work than when you're on the outside looking in."

Devenport, who was instrumental in helping Cardinal Lane residents form a utility district providing city water, said the city must invest in drainage improvements — including the northwest drainage natural basin — and work to attract airline services.

"We were devastated to see American pull out at the airport," he said. "But we'll persevere."

Ms. Schneider, 66, believes her experience as past president and member of the League of Women Voters has helped her keep abreast of issues facing the council.

Rival commanders sign cease-fire for Srebrenica

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Bosnian Serbs and Muslims signed a cease-fire for the embattled eastern town of Srebrenica early today and guaranteed safe evacuation of civilians.

The accord was reached under threat of total Serb invasion and effectively amounts to the surrender of Srebrenica, one of the last Muslim strongholds in eastern Bosnia.

According to a document obtained Saturday night at the United Nations, the truce calls for deploying U.N. protection forces to the town this morning and demilitarizing it within 72 hours of their arrival.

Terms were reached Saturday at a meeting in Sarajevo between the two rival military commanders, Lt. Gen. Ratko Mladic of the Bosnian Serbs and Gen. Sefer Halilovic of the Muslim-led Bosnian government. They signed it today.

Also attending the session at Sarajevo was Cyrus Vance, the U.N. mediator in the Yugoslav crisis.

According to the agreement, the truce went into effect at 1:59 a.m. today (8:59 p.m. Saturday CDT).

On Saturday, Bosnian Serb forces had launched a fierce attack on Srebrenica, killing or wounding dozens of people.

Serbs are driving for control of eastern Bosnia to hook up with adjacent Serbia and other Serb-held areas of Bosnia and Croatia into a "Greater Serbia."

For that reason, Bosnia's Serbs have refused to sign an international peace plan dividing Bosnia into 10 autonomous provinces.

The U.N. Security Council, outraged by the onslaught on Srebrenica, voted late Saturday to tighten sanctions against Serb-led Yugoslavia.

The new sanctions take effect April 26. The resolution passed 13-0, with Russia and China abstaining.

In a compromise adopted this week, the council had delayed a vote on tougher sanctions until April 26, the day after the Russian referendum on President Boris Yeltsin's powers and economic reforms.

Russia holds veto power in the Security Council. It has balked at taking stronger action because the Serbs are fellow Orthodox Slavs. Also, nationalist critics might use such a move in their battle against President Boris Yeltsin.

"This is the proper response coming at the right time," French Ambassador Jean Bernard Merimee told the council before the vote.

"The Belgrade authorites must realize that the international community will not weaken."

As shells continued to rain down on Srebrenica Saturday, Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic promised "a peace initiative which will be hard to refuse," the Belgrade-based Tanjug news agency had said.

Bosnia seceded from Yugoslavia in February 1992. Serbs fighting the secession have seized about 70 percent of the country, and more than 134,000 people have been killed or are missing.

Elsewhere, at least 50 people were killed Saturday in the fourth day of Muslim-Croat clashes in central Bosnia, U.N. officials said.

Srebrenica's nearly 60,000 residents and refugees lived through another day of horror, cowering in cellars as the Serbs closed in on their town. Serb forces shelled the industrial zone and post office where a small U.N. contingent is based.

At least 20 people were killed and 30 wounded as Serb tanks and infantry advanced, Hajrudin Avdic, a city official, said by ham radio to Zagreb. U.N. officials said at least 12 died and 17 were wounded, but acknowledged those figures were incomplete.

Dozens of dead and wounded were lying in the streets, with rescue impossible because of "a hail of grenades," Avdic said.

"Srebrenica is burning. Every seven seconds a shell lands," Bosnia radio later quoted him as saying.

His report could not be independently confirmed.

JAMES DEVENPORT
CITY COUNCIL, DISTRICT 1

Pol. Adv. Pd. for by Committee To Elect James Devenport, 500 W. Wall, Suite 306, Midland, TX 79701, Elsie Hugly, Treasurer

Dear Neighbors,

Serving as your City Councilman these past two years has been a privilege. In that time we've seen many improvements, but there's more work to be done. It's the kind of work I enjoy.

On issues which have faced the City Council, the concerns of Midlanders have been reflected by my votes. I have voted and will continue to vote for spending restraint and a balanced budget, avoiding tax increases, and investing in necessary drainage improvements and other city services.

The need for new and expanded industry still is with us. My goal is to help create the climate for economic growth and creation of employment opportunities.

I know you share my concerns for the future of our city. We have the resources if wisely managed.

As residents of Midland for over 30 years, Judy and I care about the quality of life in Midland, and have long supported community and civic affairs. I am eager to continue my work with the City Administration to make Midland a better place to live, and will commit the time necessary to acomplish that goal.

Sincerely,

James Devenport

Yeltsin takes day off from campaigning

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin stayed off the campaign trail Saturday, but his detractors were out in force eight days before voters decide Russia's political course in a referendum.

The 62-year-old Russian president took his mind off politics and focused on Easter, celebrated by the Russian Orthodox at a midnight Mass Saturday and all day today.

But his two main opponents, parliamentary speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov and Vice President Alexander Rutskoi, weren't resting. Khasbulatov accused the president of humiliating Russia by requesting Western aid, and Rutskoi accused him of trying to reduce Russians to "dependence on fat moneybags."

"I would have lost my self-respect if I had asked those leaders of other countries to support me personally," Khasbulatov said during a visit to the town of Tikhvin, near St. Petersburg

"The leader of the Russian government shouldn't wheedle, beg, plead for help for himself."

The seven richest industrial nations announced Thursday they would give Russia $28.4 billion in aid and the United States would send an additional $1.8 billion.

In Moscow, a crowd of between 2,500 and 4,000 pro-Communist demonstrators ignored an appeal by Russia's legislature to refrain from politicking on the holiday. They held a so-called "Easter Procession of the Workers" to demand Yeltsin's resignation.

The rally's guests of honor were Anatoly Lukyanov and Oleg Shenin, two of the 12 former Kremlin leaders on trial for treason in the August 1991 coup.

Flashing a V-for-victory sign to show confidence he will be aquitted in the trial, Lukyanov launched an anti-Yeltsin diatribe. "The people won't allow dictatorship. Fascism won't go through," he said.

High to be in lower 90s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies and a high in the lower 90s with southwest wind at 15 to 25 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the 50s, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Monday should be sunny with a high in the mid-80s.

After an overnight low of 48, Saturday's high reached 80 compared to the record high for that date of 97 set in 1975. The record low for that date is 37 set in 1980.

STATE

An upper level system moved across Texas on Saturday, triggering showers and thunderstorms across the area. The rest of the state had sunshine and occasional clouds that were expected to linger through the weekend.

Rainfall amounts were insignificant across the affected regions, and sunny skies dominated much of the afternoon and evening.

Temperatures across Texas were seasonal and mild in the rain-cooled and cloud-covered regions. Clouds developed across West Texas, where readings ranged from the 60s in the Panhandles to 80s in the Big Bend.

In South Texas, readings ranged from the 60s along the upper coast to 80s in the west.

Forecasters said North Texas should remain partly cloudy today with a chance of showers and thunderstorms, lows in the lower to mid-50s and highs in the mid-70s to mid-80s.

West Texas should have mostly clear skies today with lows in the 40s and 50s and highs in the mid-80s to mid-90s.

The forecast for South Texas calls for partly skies for the coastal plains and the southeast section and sunny skies elsewhere. Lows will be in the 50s and 60s with highs near 90.

NATION

Rain soaked much of New England, the Great Lakes and the Plains on Saturday, and rain mixed with snow fell in the Midwest. Unseasonably cold temperatures chilled the Appalachians and parts of the Gulf Coast region.

A cold front moving from the Pacific prompted snow advisories for the Oregon Cascades and higher elevations of Nevada and California.

Chilly temperatures extended over the upper Ohio Valley and across the western part of the Tennessee Valley into the central Gulf of Mexico states early Saturday.

Huntsville, Ala., cooled to 33 degrees early Saturday morning, breaking the date's low-temperature record of 34 degrees, set in 1986.

Rain was scattered over New England and the lower Great Lakes region. Rain was mixed with snow over the upper Ohio Valley. Rain and occasional thunderstorms reached over eastern parts of the central and southern Plains into the middle and lower Mississippi Valley.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

TWO: Judge praises panelists

for the beating.

The analysts said that when Judge John G. Davies of federal district court sentences the officers on Aug. 4, he could also take into account that the defendants had been tried once before, in state court, where they were acquitted of assault charges. In the meantime, the two officers remained free on bail; one of their lawyers said they were considering appeals.

Though the basic facts were the same as in the state trial, the prosecution presented a more coherent and forceful case, relying less heavily on the videotape, as they faced the higher legal burden of proving criminal intent. The second prosecution was possible, despite the Constitution's prohibition against double jeopardy, because the state and the federal government are considered separate jurisdictions.

Los Angeles seemed to exhale in relief as the verdicts brought to a close two years of turmoil after the March 3, 1991, beating of King. Acquittals of the four officers on assault charges in a state trial last year touched off the worst urban rioting this century; 52 people died and damage was estimated at more than $1 billion.

As the issue festered and anger grew among minority groups, the videotape of the 81-second beating took on ever-greater symbolism, transcending the legal guilt or innocence of the officers. It came to stand for long-standing issues of racism and police misconduct, for complaints of racial imbalance in the justice system, and finally for the the ills of the nation's cities and the slowness of local and federal governments in trying to resolve them.

In the courtroom at 7 a.m. on Saturday, Davies said the verdicts had been reached at 3:35 p.m. on Friday, the seventh day of deliberations. He implied that he had held them until Saturday morning to meet the requests of city officials who feared possible disturbances late in the day.

Koon, 42, remained impassive as he heard the word "guilty." He twisted his head from side to side as if to loosen his neck and clenched his fingers. A 17-year veteran who has a master's degree in criminology, he has written a book on the case and has insisted from the start that King's arrest, under his supervision, conformed with police procedures.

As the jurors were polled individually, Powell, 30, with his father seated close behind him, opened and shut his lips slightly as each juror affirmed the verdict with the word, "Yes." From the start, he has appeared the most culpable because he is shown delivering most of the more than 50 baton blows. He has spoken of his anguish at being trapped by his actions as a symbol of police brutality.

Briseno, 40, clutched a tiny silver and black crucifix as his not-guilty verdict was read, and as the proceedings continued his eyes flooded with tears and he sniffed quietly. His brother Mike Briseno stood to embrace him. Briseno is shown on the videotape attempting to block a blow by Powell and moments later stomping on the head or neck of King. He insisted that he was trying to control King and stop the beating.

As his not-guilty verdict was read, Wind, 32, looked downward and squeezed the black pen with which he has taken notes throughout the trial. As a rookie on probation in training with Powell, he was dismissed from the force, while the other men were suspended without pay. A Kansas native who came to Los Angeles to join the police force, he said recently he does not know how he will put his life back together. He said his 3-year-old son asks him, "Daddy, why don't the juries like you?"

The jurors in the federal trial, who have been sequestered since Feb. 25, remained anonymous and had no immediate public comment. They entered the courtroom stiffly, dressed more formally than they had throughout the trial, and only the foreman, a bearded real estate professional, looked at the defendants as they entered.

"I think you witnessed the system at its best," the judge told the jurors before they departed. He praised the lawyers for both sides.

The prosecutors were elated, dressed formally in dark suits and barely suppressing their grins.

"I think a year ago the conscience of the community, the conscience of the nation, cried out for justice and this verdict provides justice," said Barry F. Kowalski, a Justice Department civil rights lawyer who has worked on this case since just after the acquittals in the state case last April 29.

His colleague, Steven D. Clymer, an assistant U.S. attorney in Los Angeles, said the verdict sent a message to law enforcement officers that "they can use force that is necessary and reasonable to make an arrest, and no more."

Briseno's lawyer, Harland W. Braun, described that lesson slightly differently, saying: "I think law enforcement has to realize that the public has a schizophrenic attitude. They want law enforcement to do its job, but they don't want to know what it takes to do their job."

He said Briseno was hurt by the convictions of his fellow defendants because "he believes to the depths of his soul that they were innocent." But he said the officer's brother told him: "You can't worry about the others. What happens, happens."

Leaving the courtroom in an elevator, Jim Holmes, the court clerk who had read out the verdicts, dropped his formal manner for a moment to consider the human side of the convictions. "They're all pretty tragic for those involved," he said.

WAKES: City heaves sigh of relief and throughout most of this polyglot region's crazy quilt of suburbs and city.

But there were also pointed reminders that much work remained, that more than equal justice in the courts was at issue.

"There has to be some economic and educational justice," said Connier J. Nero, a black woman who helps the elderly get medical care. "We can't talk about holding hands and being friends when you have a job and I don't."

Since Friday evening 6,500 police officers, backed by National Guard troops, had been at full mobilization in case of a repeat of the devastating disorders that left 52 dead and $1 billion in property damage last year. But they had little to do apart from keeping a wary eye.

"All the information we are getting is that the streets are quiet and peaceful," said Deputy Police Chief Matthew V. Hunt at the police command post at the Los Angeles Memorial Coliseum. "Hopefully, this long nightmare that has gone on for the last two years is finally behind us."

At City Hall, Mayor Tom Bradley, nearing the end of his 20-year tenure, breathed a sigh of relief. "Today a jury representing the diversity of our city found the truth," he said. "Today a measure of simple justice has been delivered to our community."

He added: "Today, Los Angeles has turned the corner."

The verdicts were praised around the city and the nation. Gov. Pete Wilson said, "Justice has been done." In Washington, Attorney General Janet Reno said, "The Jury has spoken and justice has prevailed."

In stark contrast to last year, all was calm at the corner of Florence and Normandie avenues, the South-Central flashpoint for the April riots, apart from the commotion caused by dozens of reporters and photographers. Drivers passed, honked their horns and flashed peace signs at the cameras.

Joseph Thomas, a black stock worker at the Price Club who stopped for gas at a service station at the still-battered intersection, said he was pleased with the verdict. "I don't undersand why everybody is here," he said. "This area has been pretty quiet until today."

And in Koreatown, which suffered the worst of the damage to shops last year, merchants warily began to open for business starting about 9 a.m. when it appeared that all was calm.

"When I heard the verdict, I thought, There's not that much to get excited about," said Charles Yoon, as he opened his small key-copying shack in the minimall at Vermont Avenue and West 8th Street, which was looted and burned last year.

At Cosmos, a Koreatown appliance store that had been cleaned out last year, manager Lawrence Ha opened for business as usual. "The city is so quiet now," he said. "We've already started making deliveries across town, downtown, and in black neighborhoods. There is nobody on the streets."

Probably nowhere was the reaction more emotional than at the First African Methodist Episcopal Church, a predominantly black congregation where a large crowed gathered to watch the verdict on big-screen televisions.

One year ago, just after the acquittal in the state trial, Bradley stood at the pulpit and pleaded for calm as violence broke out around the city.

Saturday, the Rev. Cecil Murray bowed his head in prayer and held hands with the Rev. Jesse Jackson as the clerk read the verdict in federal court.

The words "guilty" for Sgt. Stacey C. Koon and Officer Laurence M. Powell brought an eruption of cheers. When it was over, the group burst into the hymn, "My Faith Looks Up to Thee" with hands reaching up to touch a Bible held aloft.

Later, Murray, a leader in attempts to calm the city's minority areas, expressed joy at the verdict but warned that "justice means jobs."

"We now have a sample of what dinner could be," he said. "We are still very very hungry. But this will hold us for now."

There were still fears of trouble because of the upcoming trial of three young black men in the beating of a truck driver, Reginald Denny, during last year's disorders. But John Mack, president of the local chapter of the Urban League, said he believed that the groundwork for peace had been laid in the community during months of preparations.

"I believe that the verdict in this case is going to help," he said. "We have begun to restore the lost credibility in the criminal justice system, which was just about zero before in the African-American community."

The church hall rang with calls for the local and federal governments to intensify efforts to create jobs and training, and to improve schooling, for Los Angeles' poorer communities.

The reaction among police officers was more equivocal. Hunt watched the verdict with other officers at the Coliseum. "It was a very dramatic moment with very little reaction," he said later. "Justice has spoken."

On the streets, most police officers refused comment for the record. One who did was Sgt. Gene McCloskey, who said, "Our justice system has spoken. I really don't know what to say about that. We've been turned upside down for two years. Maybe we can get on with policing now."

Another white officer, who would not give his name, said the convicted officers "were scapegoats."

At the Los Angeles Police Department's Southeast Division headquarters, officers clustered around television sets. Officer John J. Clark said, "For the people who work in the street, it makes their job a lot tougher to do, because we'll be second guessed every time we do something.

"This is what a majority of the community wanted. This gives the criminal a lot more power in the streets."

At City Hall, the new Chief of Police, Willie L. Williams, urged Angelenos to go about their normal affairs Saturday, saying police would remain on high alert.

"Right now, the city of Los Angeles is very calm, perhaps even more calm than this time last Saturday," he said. "It's very important to point out that the deployment plans put in place last night complemented with full deployment beginning at 6 a.m. this morning will stay in place for the time being. Decisions will be made in the next 24 to 48 hours as events unfold on whether we stay where we are or whether we gradually break down."

Williams added that the emergency 911 number had received fewer calls than normal Saturday.

Former Police Chief Daryl F. Gates, who was forced from his job by controversies over the King beating, spoke on KFI, a radio station on which he has a talk show. "It's amazing to see the jubilation on the part of some people over this verdict and the fact that so many are saying what a great verdict it is and what a great job this jury has done," Gates said. "Those are the same people who trashed the system on the last occasion."

"I think they were under incredible pressure," Gates said of the jury. "Clearly in the back of their minds they had to have the pressure of the rioting, the vilification of the last jury."

Asked about Gates' comments, Bradley — long at odds with the former chief — said, "Daryl Gates is irrelevant to the issues of this city. Any other questions?"

Civil rights groups heaved a collective sigh of relief and voiced satisfaction with the verdict, but cautioned that the case was merely a symptom of basic issues of unequal justice, racial bias and police brutality that must still be addressed.

In a statement, the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund said, "These convictions send a message to all of America: It is unacceptable under the laws of our nation to brutalize any person on the basis of race."

The group called on the nation "to look beyond the drama of this trial, to the criminal justice system produced this horrible event," and to the economic plight of urban minority communities.

Reflecting the collective release of anxiety that the verdict brought on, Paul L. Hoffman, legal director of the American Civil Liberties Union of Southern California, said, "Finally, the entire city is agreed on one thing: 'We're relieved.'"

But he added: "We can't afford to be too satisfied with this. The verdicts are very important, but they're a small part of a much larger police reform process that's still got a long way to go."

VIDEO: Some jurors 'jump for joy,' others cry

rights violations Saturday in the March 3, 1991, beating of King after a police chase.

"I think a few years in jail would do them both good," the juror said in a separate interview with NBC News.

Officer Theodore Briseno and former Officer Timothy Wind were acquitted.

A year ago, a state jury acquitted the officers of most assault charges, and deadly rioting followed. But the federal juror said his panel never talked about possible violence from their verdicts.

Another unidentified juror, one of two blacks on the panel, told KABC-TV the jury also considered King's testimony crucial because it showed him as a human being.

The panel was exhilarated Friday afternoon when the decision was reached, she said. "When we sealed the envelope (with the verdicts) we jumped for joy. We could not believe it. There was a lot of people that cried," she said.

During 40 hours of deliberations over seven days, the jury had "some difficulty" reaching unanimous decisions, and there were some yelling matches and personality conflicts, the juror told KNBC.

He said he found it most difficult to convict Powell.

"I feel that Koon did not do his job. . . . Of both the defendants we found guilty, he was the guiltiest," the man said.

The juror called Powell "a very callous individual" and said he felt "he's the sort of police you don't want on the streets."

But Briseno appeared to be a good police officer, he said. "If I'm ever caught in a situation like that, I hope there's more cops like that at the scene," he said.

As for Wind: "We didn't find him innocent. We just felt he was not guilty of the charges that were brought against him."

The female juror said the panel was happy with their decision, toasting each other at dinner Friday night.

ELECTION: Schneider seeks council seat

(From 1A)

Since August 1991, she has attended council meetings and summarized major decisions for the League of Women Voters monthly newsletter.

She was instrumental in the partial elimination of the VIP sticker parking program at the airport.

But that program, which slashed the number of current and former city officials receiving free parking privileges, is now being abused again, she said.

Devenport, 57, said he has the experience to help lead the city in the right direction.

He said he will fight to maintain a "positive business climate" for the city, to avoid tax increases and to ensure the City Hall is accountable for its actions.

Ms. Schneider promised to represent the concerns of the people.

"I want to bring the government back to the people," she said. "I want to open the line of communication between District 1 residents and City Hall."

Ms. Schneider came to Midland in 1954, before moving to Eagle Pass in 1971. She returned to Midland in 1980.

She is past president of the St. Ann's school board and is past president of the Pan American Round Table (while in Eagle Pass), vice president of the Ballet Midland board and is a member of the Midland Women's Tennis Association and the Children's Service League.

Devenport, a Midland resident since 1958, is the former chairman of the mathematics department for the Midland Independent School District. He received a bachelor of science and master's degree in education from Sul Ross State College. He took post-graduate courses at The University of Texas at Austin and Pennsylvania State University.

PURSER: Punishment phase set for Monday

er. That indicates — in courtroom superstition — an acquittal or finding of a lesser charge, he said.

John Cook, one of three defense attorneys, reserved comment until a punishment is reached.

A few dozen people are on the witness list for the punishment phase, which is expected to last most of next week.

Schorre said that after the jury enters punishment deliberations, he will be free to comment on why a plea bargain was reached with a co-defendant in the case.

Gearld Benjamin Kelly, 22, pleaded to the capital murder on Feb. 10 and was sentenced to life in prison.

Kelly became a suspect the same day the victim, Brenda Branch, was found stabbed 36 times in the office area of the Living Way Foursquare Church.

Kelly, who was on parole for the robbery of a church secretary, was described by Purser's defense attorneys as the lead, or possibly sole, culprit in the crime.

Purser originally was targeted as a possible witness but as the investigation progressed, Purser's involvement grew. On April 15, 1992, he confessed to stabbing the woman twice during the course of an attempted robbery.

The defense — led by Purser's mother's testimony — claimed the confession was coerced.

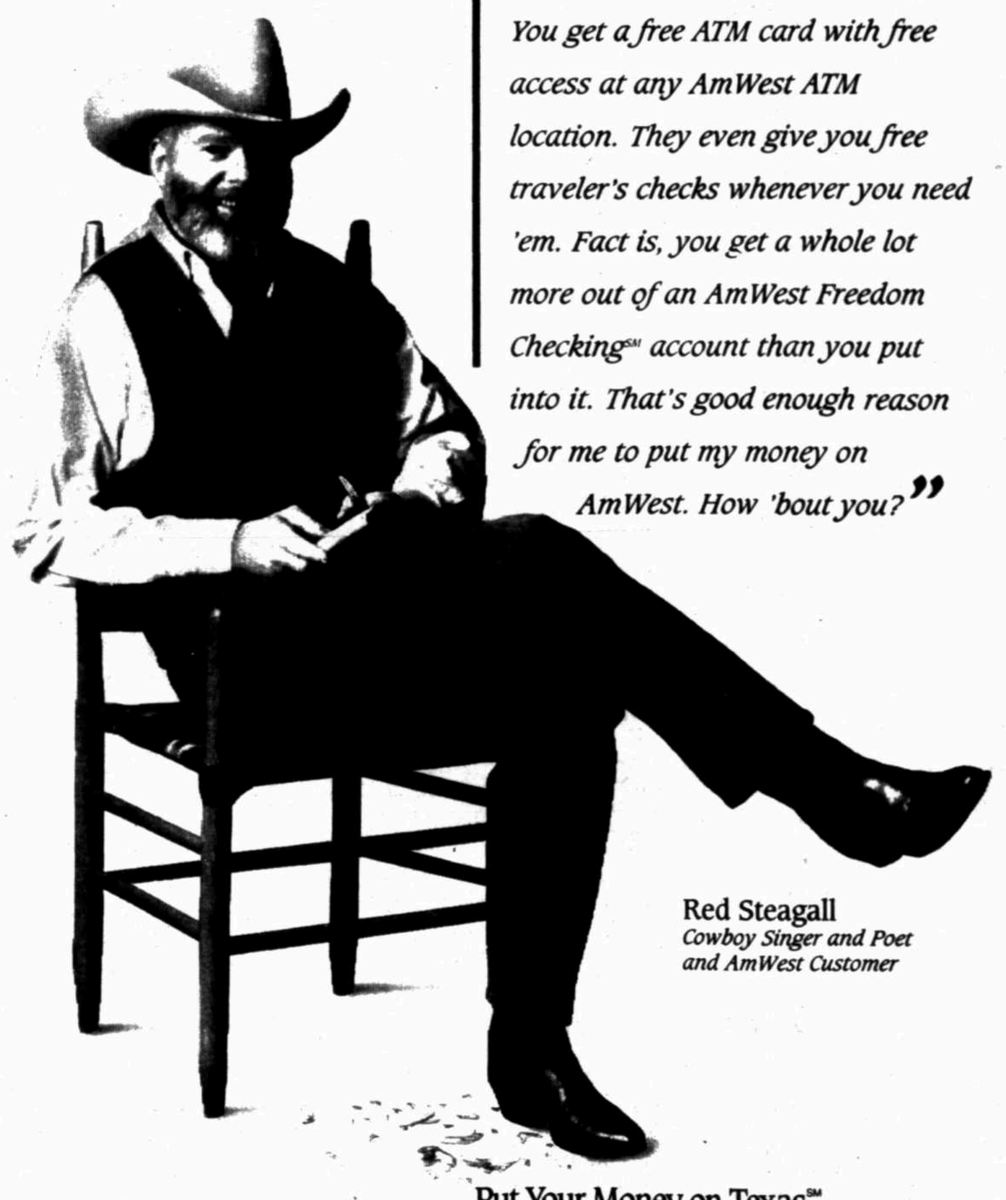

But a hair found on the victim also linked Purser to the crime.

Purser chose not to testify, and Kelly refused to speak before a jury.

DEATHS

Robert Armstrong

Services for Robert Armstrong, 30, of Midland are pending with Bill C. Thomas Funeral Home.

Armstrong died Saturday a local hospital.

William Fulton

Graveside services for William J. "Bill" Fulton, 66, of Midland are set for 4 p.m. Monday at Fairview Cemetery with the Rev. Bob Porterfield officiating. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Fulton died Wednesday at a local hospital.

He was born July 15, 1926, in Midland, where he was raised. After school, he joined the U.S. Navy and served as a pilot during World War II. He returned to the West Texas area after the war. He worked in Midland as a salesman for the Borden Milk Co. He was a member of the American Legion Post 19.

Survivors include three sisters, Edna Seifert of Houston, Mildred Dearen of Safakwa, Okla., and Frances Towery of Midland; and several nieces and nephews.

Mildred Bradshaw

Graveside services for Mildred Bradshaw, 92, are set for 1 p.m. Monday in Resthaven Memorial Park with the Rev. Glenn Pemberton officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. Bradshaw died Saturday in a local hospital.

She was born May 20, 1900, in Bell County. She moved to Upshur County at age 18.

She married Douglas Bradshaw in 1929 in Gregg County. They moved to Midland from Upshur County in 1943.

She was a member of the Church of Christ. She was preceded in death by her husband in November 1990.

Survivors include one son, Don L. Bradshaw of Midland; one daughter, Mrs. Jo Roch of Marathon; five grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Willard Beatty

FORT WORTH — Services for Willard Max Beatty, brother of a Midland man, were held recently in Fort Worth.

He died last Monday. He was 64.

Beatty was born in Scottsbluff, Neb., and had lived in Fort Worth since 1956. He was a retired material and process engineer at General Dynamics.

He was a graduate of Biloxi High School in Biloxi, Miss., and of Midwestern University in Wichita Falls with a bachelor of science of degree in chemistry and minors in math and education.

He was a member of the Society for the Advancement of Material and Process Engineering, American Society for Nondestructive Testing, American Management Society and the Air Force Association.

Survivors include his wife, Orene Beatty of Fort Worth; one son, Mark Beatty of Bedford; one daughter, Meleasa Clements of Azle; three brothers, David Beatty of Oakwood, Ill., James Beatty of Midland, and Thomas Beatty of Pratt City, Mo.; one sister, Sarah Elizabeth Beatty of Gulfport, Miss.; and three grandchildren.

The family requests memorials be directed to the Boy Scouts of America or to Western Hills United Methodist Church.

Marvin Mills

Services for Marvin L. Mills are set for 10 a.m. Tuesday in Ellis Funeral Home Chapel. Graveside services are set for 2 p.m. Wednesday in Blanconia Methodist Cemetery in Blanconia, Texas. Arrangements are under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mills

Mills died Friday at his Midland home.

He was born June 30, 1907, in Pearsall. He moved to Midland in 1952, when he was transferred from Corpus Christi by Arco. He retired in 1971.

He was a member of the First Baptist Church and was a 32nd degree Mason of Lodge 1414 and was a shriner.

He was preceded in death by his wife, Mattie Beatrice Mills, in October 1990, and by a daughter, Ann Box in 1964.

Survivors include one daughter, Susie Melson Fulson of Midland; one brother, Bernard Mills of Corpus Christi; four grandchildren and four great-grandchildren.

Official answers more question about aide

AUSTIN (AP) — State Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison on Saturday disputed claims by a former aide that she had required the employee to perform personal chores on state time.

Mrs. Hutchison said Sharon Ammann offered to do such personal jobs, which included helping Mrs. Hutchison find a house after she had moved to Austin.

"Sharon offered to help me . . . and she did it on weekends," Mrs. Hutchison said. "I said right up front . . . don't do it on state time or if you do encroach on state time, just be sure that you compensate for it. And that was what we did."

Ms. Ammann, daughter of former Gov. John Connally, has said that Mrs. Hutchison required her to perform such personal duties on a regular basis.

"It became an everyday occurrence," Ms. Ammann told the Houston Post in a copyright story. "I met with painters. I met with roofers." She said she also repainted some of the exterior trim on the house after Mrs. Hutchison objected to the color.

Mrs. Hutchison acknowledged that Ms. Ammann had met with painters, but she said it did not happen regularly. She also said she does not know whether Ms. Ammann painted her house.

Ms. Ammann has also accused Mrs. Hutchison of hitting her repeatedly with a binder when she worked at the treasury in mid-1991.

Ms. Ammann has also accused Mrs. Hutchison of hitting her repeatedly with a binder when she worked at the treasury in mid-1991. Mrs. Hutchison denies the claims.

Mrs. Hutchison denies the claims.

Mrs. Hutchison, a Republican, is among 23 people running in the May 1 special election to choose a successor to U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, who is now treasury secretary. The seat is now held by gubernatorial appointee Bob Krueger, a Democrat, who also is on the ballot.

Mrs. Hutchison, who has been shown in various polls to be running second to Krueger, said she does not expect the claims to hurt her chances in the election.

"I am No. 2 in the polls, and I think this race will be between Bob Krueger and Kay Bailey Hutchison," she said. "I am a Washington outsider, he's a Washington insider, and I think that the issues differences are going to be great and Texas will have a choice."

In other campaign developments Saturday, Krueger, on a campaign swing through South Texas, announced that he will file legislation Monday that would create a veterans medical facility in the region.

More than 39,000 veterans live in the Rio Grande Valley, yet the closest medical facility for many vets is in San Antonio, Krueger said.

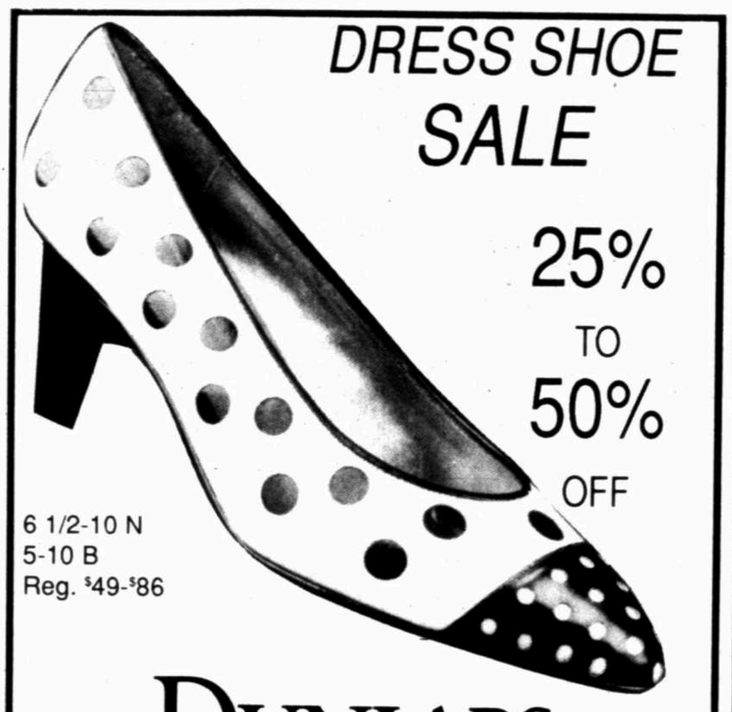

"Our South Texas veterans don't deserve this kind of inconvenience and hardship," he said. "The number of vets in Texas is second only to California, and projections are that we'll get more and more veterans coming to the Valley in the coming years. We need this facility."

In a survey of the Senate candidates by The Dallas Morning News, most said they favor term limitations. A few of the 20 who responded to the newspaper's questionnaire said they would leave office voluntarily even without a law forcing them out.

Among the frontrunners, Krueger and U.S. Rep. Jack Fields, R-Humble, said they would limit themselves to two six-year terms in office.

Mrs. Hutchison suggested two terms for senators and two terms for House members. U.S. Rep. Joe Barton of Ennis, R-Texas, said he's support limitations only if "Northern liberals were forced to live by the same rules."

Survey responses varied on other hot topics, including abortion rights, gays in the military and gun control.

Police arrest pro-apartheid activist in death of ANC leader

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — A pro-apartheid leader was arrested Saturday in the killing of black leader Chris Hani, police said. In a separate incident, a white gunman killed two blacks at a march commemorating Hani.

Clive Derby-Lewis, a former member of Parliament and a leader of the pro-apartheid Conservative Party, was being held as a suspect in Hani's April 10 slaying, Police Brig. Franz Malherbe said.

The party is the main opposition group in the white chamber of Parliament.

Derby-Lewis' arrest followed intensive questioning of a white right-winger suspected of being the gunman in Hani's murder, Law and Order Minister Hernus Kriel said.

Frank le Roux, the Conservatives' chief whip in Parliament, dismissed the idea Derby-Lewis could be involved. But the African National Congress said the arrest could help unravel what it called a "web of conspiracy" aimed at derailing talks on ending apartheid.

Earlier Saturday, police arrested a white man in the killing of two black marchers and the wounding of two others during a march in Vanderbiljpark, 25 miles south of Johannesburg. The attack came after a counter-demonstration by armed white supremacists.

The shooting raised fears that right-wing attacks could increase tension and threaten negotiations between mainstream black and white leaders on ending the apartheid policy of racial segregation and white domination.

The ANC, the main black nationalist organization, said the man arrested in the shootings belonged to the neo-Nazi Afrikaner Resistance Movement. The Sunday Times newspaper of Johannesburg also said he had right-wing links.

Police would not confirm the reports nor identify the man.

Janusz Walus, the man charged earlier with killing Hani, was a member of the Afrikaner Resistance Movement, a white supremacist group that opposes President F.W. de Klerk's dismantling of apartheid.

Thousands of blacks took part in protests in Johannesburg and Pretoria as militant leaders called for mass action to unseat de Klerk's government and protest the slaying of Hani, a popular ANC leader.

"De Klerk must go!" and "One settler, one bullet!" marchers chanted. There were scattered clashes with police.

Uniformed, armed white right-wingers threatened the marchers in Vanderbiljpark, a right-wing white area. Police tried to keep the groups apart.

The gunman chased the marchers in a pickup truck and opened fire with a pistol, witnesses said. He was dragged from the truck and taken away by police.

The extreme right wing, which opposes any attempt to grant blacks political rights or equality, has rarely lived up to its threats in the past.

Unlike extreme right-wing groups, the Conservatives are generally seen as a lawful political party, supported by hundreds of thousands of whites.

The government and the ANC, meanwhile, reaffirmed their commitment Saturday to a negotiated settlement for some form of power sharing.

Central Johannesburg shut down as about 20,000 people marched. About 5,000 people marched in Pretoria. The turnouts were far below expectations, suggesting the opposition plan for six weeks of strikes and protests may be in trouble.

The plan, announced Friday, is meant to pressure the government to set a date for multiracial elections.

The Johannesburg march went to the main police station, where enraged youths screamed insults and threats at heavily armed police standing behind a steel fence. "We kill you!" protesters yelled.

Minister discusses case, acquittal

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press Writer

SAN ANTONIO — Former Dallas minister Walker Railey says he does not know who tried to kill his wife or who wrote the threatening letters that led to his indictment.

He says he did not surrender his church credentials out of guilt over any criminal offense but because of his scandalous affair with a psychologist.

And, accusing a reporter of making a "false assumption," he says he does not believe he could have spared himself six years of humiliation and grief if he had spoken out in 1987.

"It's like 'Murder, She Wrote,'" he said of the crime that devastated his family, split his church and enraged his city.

"Everybody wants to solve it. Well, I want to solve it, too."

The assailant who attacked his wife "murdered our family," he told The Associated Press in an extraordinary interview just hours after a San Antonio jury acquitted him of attempted murder.

"It was a tragedy of tremendous proportions. Far beyond what people have thought about. It's had an impact on a lot of lives. There have been a lot of people who have suffered."

And he called it an "incredibly complex" story.

"I think there has been a lure about this story that has made people want to solve it, and in their zeal to solve it, I think people at times have tried to make facts fit or not fit something."

After six years of relative silence, Railey told a jury last Monday he did in fact concoct a phony alibi and lie to police about his activities the night of April 21, 1987.

But he said he did so not to cover up a bungled murder attempt but to conceal his extramarital affair with Lucy Papillon, a flashy divorcee and the daughter of a Methodist bishop.

In a Friday night interview at his hotel, and over dinner later, Railey, 45, discussed almost every aspect of a case so emotional and explosive it had to be moved from Dallas for trial.

However, he would not reveal who paid his high-powered, five-member defense team headed by Doug Mulder, once the top prosecutor in the Dallas County district attorney's office.

"And I will not discuss my marriage to Peggy," he said.

Mrs. Railey, 44, was left near death by the strangulation attempt and lies today in a nursing home in what doctors call a "persistent vegetative state."

Why, Railey was asked, did he wait six years before explaining the inconsistencies in the story he told police about his activities the night of the attack?

"I'll be glad to tell you that," he said. "Because there was already one trial taking place in the summer of 1987. It was on the front page of the newspapers and on the 10 o'clock news.

"People were not nearly as interested in the events of the evening as they were in trying the trial they had already started."

He said also that Mulder suggested he wait and tell his story if and when he wound up in a courtroom.

"Which I did," he said.

He said the four-week San Antonio trial was actually his second trial.

"The only difference is this was the only one with a jury selected and had an official vote taken," he explained.

Railey became confrontational only once during the interview and that was when it was suggested that his silence cost him his church, his children and his reputation.

"You are making a false assumption," he said.

Non-cult member exits compound

WACO, Texas (AP) — A man left a religious cult's compound Saturday, becoming the first person to exit the rural fortress in nearly two weeks, federal authorities said.

The man was identified as Louis Anthony Alaniz, 24, who sneaked past federal agents and slipped into the compound March 24, said Jerry Singer, a special agent for the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. Alaniz left the compound about 3:30 p.m. Saturday.

Wearing a T-shirt that read "David Koresh, God," Alaniz was taken immediately to the McLennan County Jail by Texas Department of Public Safety troopers.

Koresh is the leader of the Branch Davidian cult that has remained holed up in a heavily armed complex since a bloody shootout Feb. 28. Alaniz has told FBI agents he stole past authorities into the compound to study Koresh's biblical teachings.

Alaniz is the first person to leave since Jesse Amen — another non-cult member — walked out on April 4th, and the 37th person overall. Amen scooted past authorities into the compound March 26.

Singer said he did not know why Alaniz decided to leave.

Several other sect members who have exited remain jailed, while others have been released to halfway houses.

Earlier Saturday, an FBI spokesman said that the Koresh's top deputy has told federal authorities that no children were killed in the shootout.

While decrying Koresh as a liar and a "sociopath," FBI spokesman Bob Ricks said the cult leader's right-hand man, Steven Schneider, said children were spared in the deadly gunfight with the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

The Nation in brief

■ Columnist leaves hospital in good humor

ATLANTA — Humor columnist Lewis Grizzard left the hospital where he underwent heart surgery and promised to stop drinking and smoking.

"I currently owe a number of people for giving me my life back," Grizzard, 46, said as he left Emory University Hospital for home on Saturday.

The popular Atlanta Journal-Constitution columnist, whose column is syndicated in 450 newspapers nationwide, had heart surgery March 22 in which a mechanical valve was installed. It was his third heart operation.

■ Killer wants better care for women in prison

BLAIR, Neb. — If poor children and pregnant women received better care there would be less crime, says Jean Harris, killer of the "Scarsdale Diet" author.

Lack of prenatal care, poverty and racism produces criminals, said Harris, who was released from prison in New York state in January. She served nearly 12 years for second-degree murder in the March 10, 1980, shooting death of her lover, Dr. Herman Tarnower, who developed the Scarsdale Diet.

"Crime, much of our crime at least, begins in the crib, sometimes in the womb," because of mothers who indulge in drugs, alcohol and promiscuous sex, Harris said at a national conference on prisons Saturday at Dana College, 30 miles north of Omaha.

Harris, 69, said prisons need to provide nurseries and parenting classes for inmates. New York is the only state that provides nurseries, she said.

■ Carter promotes immunizations door-to-door

ATLANTA — Former President Carter was greeted with smiles and handshakes as he kicked off his immunization campaign for children Saturday.

Nearly 10,000 volunteers turned out to help Carter urge residents to take advantage of free vaccinations for youngsters under 6, he said.

Several police cruisers showed up to accompany Carter after a mixed verdict was announced in the Rodney King beating case in Los Angeles. Just before, Carter and volunteers had descended on the city's poor, predominantly black neighborhoods.

The children who participate in the campaign get passes to see Michael Jackson at a concert the Atlanta Project is holding May 5.

Can hate, bias be used against criminal

By Sharon Cohen
Associated Press Writer

It was a vicious attack in a quiet Midwestern town 3½ years ago. The assailants were black, the victim white. It was a crime that might have faded into the files quickly if not for one man's words.

There never was much question about the deed — a gang pummeling of a 14-year-old boy — but what was said that October night in 1989 is at the heart of a dispute that could have ripple effects across the nation.

On Wednesday, the U.S. Supreme Court will hear debate on whether Wisconsin has violated the Constitution — and the right to free speech — with a law that provides longer sentences for bias-motivated crimes.

At a time when racial tensions and gay bashing are front page news, this case symbolizes these troubled times: It has divided civil libertarians, sparked fears about Orwellian notions of punishing thought and stirred debate about crime and punishment — and bias in America.

"This debate concerns one of the most serious problems we face in our country and threatens our future if we don't deal with it," said Bob Purvis, legal director at the National Institute Against Prejudice and Violence. "Like it or not, we have become the most diverse country in the world."

The case centers on Todd Mitchell, then a 19-year-old black, accused of instigating an angry band of about 10 black teens to attack Gregory Reddick in Kenosha, Wis. The group had been drinking and discussing a Ku Klux Klan member's beating of a praying black child in the movie "Mississippi Burning."

Mitchell reportedly asked "Do you all feel hyped up to move on some white people?" and when Reddick walked by, records show he pointed and said, "There goes a white boy: Go get him." The victim was savagely beaten, remained in a coma for four days and may have suffered permanent brain damage.

Mitchell — who didn't physically assault Reddick — was found guilty of aggravated battery. A jury concluded the boy was chosen because of his race, allowing the judge to use the bias law to double the sentence to four years.

Mitchell served more than two years before he was freed when the state Supreme Court ruled the law unconstitutional, saying it punished bigoted thought.

Twenty-nine states have laws making bias-related incidents a crime or enhancing penalties for such acts, Purvis said, and a federal bill proposing stiffer sentences also was introduced in Congress this year.

Some state measures — including those in New York, California and Oregon — have withstood court challenges, he said, while measures in Wisconsin and Ohio have been ruled unconstitutional.

Wednesday's hearing comes 10 months after the U.S. Supreme Court struck down a St. Paul, Minn., ordinance that banned cross burning, swastika displays and other symbols of racial bias and supremacy. Some justices said the law was too sweeping; others said it violated free speech.

Wisconsin vs. Mitchell is a microcosm of the debate taking place in dozens of states.

On one side are defense attorneys, public defenders, academics and others who argue the Wisconsin law is arbitrary, vague and violates the First Amendment that protects free speech.

Critics also say the law is dangerous because it gives the government too much latitude to deem what is socially acceptable — and that episodes such as the McCarthy era demonstrate how that authority can be abused.

White House adopts pressure tactics to break GOP filibuster

Terence Hunt
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — In a muddy yard, far from the marble halls of Congress, Christopher Bond was planting trees at home in Missouri when a newspaper editor showed up with a press release from the White House.

"Have you seen this?" the editor asked.

Bond quickly saw that it zinged him and his colleague, John Danforth, as being among 43 filibustering Republican senators who were "unwilling to put jobs ahead of partisan politics."

"That's great," the senator said, irritated by the attack. "I'd like to reply to it."

The release was part of a White House arsenal of good-cop, bad-cop pressure tactics to break the GOP logjam against President Clinton's $16.3 billion jobs bill. It's a struggle that carries the threat of the first major legislative defeat for Clinton.

A vote on stopping the filibuster is set for Tuesday. Clinton has to peel away just three Republican votes to win if the Democrats stand together. Yet there's no sign of a break in GOP unity despite White House cajoling and Clinton's offer to chop $4 billion from the bill.

Republicans say the president hasn't been able to muster a groundswell of support from the states.

"Most of the people I talk with are saying, 'Hang in there, you're right, we've got to get this deficit under control,'" said Vermont Sen. Jim Jeffords, a moderate Republican avidly courted by the White House.

White House officials acknowledge the outcome is uncertain.

"We never expected this to close before vote day," White House communications director George Stephanopoulos said. "It's got to work through the legislative rhythm."

The news release sent to the Mexico, Mo., Ledger newspaper said that if Bond and Danforth dropped their objections and helped pass the bill, it would put 1,794 Missourians back to work.

Otherwise, it said, "the people of Missouri will continue to suffer from a jobless recovery."

The newspaper ran the story about the White House claims — and the senator's response — under the headline, "Bond Won't Bow to Pressure."

"At some point we have to draw the line on this new spending that just gets passed on to the next generation," the newspaper quoted Bond. "I think now is the time and if the President wants to increase spending in certain areas, then he should be willing to make cuts elsewhere to pay for it."

News releases virtually identical to the one sent to Missouri were faxed by the White House to media in Pennsylvania, New York, Maine, Vermont and Oregon.

The only difference was to change the name of the senators and the number of estimated jobs that each state would get under Clinton's bill.

The goal was to put heat on Republicans to abandon the filibuster. However, the tactic made some Republicans mad, leading them to dig in their heels.

Bond said he told the White House that the strategy would make Republicans more unified.

Khrushchev's son to live in capitalist U.S.

WASHINGTON — Sergei Nikitich Khrushchev, son of the Soviet leader whose 1962 confrontation with President John F. Kennedy over Soviet missiles in Cuba brought the world to the brink of nuclear war, expects to walk into a small immigration office in Providence, R.I., on Monday and become a legal permanent resident of the United States.

Sixteen months after the disintegration of the Communist Party and the country his father, Nikita Khrushchev, helped run from its prewar Stalinist days until his ouster in 1964, the 57-year-old engineer-turned-political-scientist and his wife, Valentina, expect to receive their alien residence cards, or green cards.

Khrushchev and his wife did not seek legal status as resident aliens under any of the Cold War provisions that allowed people fleeing Communist countries to obtain political asylum or refugee status. Instead, they applied on the strength of his academic and personal credentials, which have qualified Khrushchev for visa status as an individual who can make a unique contribution.

His lawyer, Dan Danilov, said Khrushchev's request for resident-alien status was supported by former President Richard M. Nixon, Robert S. McNamara, the secretary of defense in the Kennedy and Johnson administrations, and Strobe Talbott, the current ambassador at large to the former Soviet states.

Although Khrushchev was once a member of the Soviet Communist Party, a fact that disqualified most individuals from green cards in the days of the Cold War, the Immigration and Naturalization Service is expected to grant the request, Danilov said.

Clinton uses hard-line rhetoric to help U.S.-Japan trade deficits

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton used some unusually blunt language for the world of diplomacy to let Japanese Prime Minister Kiichi Miyazawa know the United States expects results in dismantling Japanese barriers to American export sales.

But trade experts say it is far too soon to say whether Clinton's hard-line rhetoric will succeed in doing what presidents since Jimmy Carter have failed to do — reduce America's persistently high trade deficits with Japan.

Both Clinton and Miyazawa proclaimed a "new partnership" between the world's two largest economies that Clinton said would be based on "mutual respect and responsibility."

But beyond the high-minded phrases, Clinton frankly admitted that the more than three hours of talks he and Miyazawa held Friday had not resolved the sharp trade tensions between the two countries.

With Miyazawa standing next to him, Clinton said he remained bothered by Japan's growing trade surpluses and was "deeply concerned about the inadequate market access for American firms, products and investors in Japan."

"The simple fact is that it is harder to sell in Japan's market than in ours," Clinton said.

To try to address the problem, the two leaders agreed on a three-month period of preliminary talks aimed at setting up a framework for future negotiations that will try to boost U.S. sales of manufactured goods and agricultural products in the Japanese market.

But both sides have serious disagreements over just how those future trade negotiations should be conducted.

On the U.S. side, Clinton is insisting on negotiations aimed "at getting results." He cited as a model the Bush administration effort that forced the Japanese to set a 20 percent target for foreign computer chip sales in Japan.

But to the Japanese this smacks of "managed trade" in which the United States is trying to force Japan to carve out specific market shares for American industries by setting sales targets.

"We can make improvements without having anything like targets," said Masamichi Hanabusa, a spokesman for the Japanese foreign ministry, who said private Japanese businesses should not be subjected to arbitrary purchase targets agreed to by U.S. and Japanese negotiators.

Senior U.S. officials conceded that the Japanese adamantly opposed anything that smacked of market-share targets. But they said the U.S. would continue to press this point during the upcoming talks while at the same time looking for other ways to measure progress.

Gary Hufbauer, a trade specialist at the Institute for International Economics, a Washington-based think tank, said that at present the administration is engaged in a two-front war, one with the Japanese over trade barriers and the other inside the administration over the best way to attack those barriers.

Trade hardliners such as U.S. Trade Representative Mickey Kantor and Laura Tyson, head of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, are arguing for a get-tough approach with firm targets in various industries. But others at Treasury and State are cautioning against applying too much pressure for fear that it will make it impossible for Miyazawa's government to deliver in the face of entrenched domestic industries.

Inmates summon TV cameramen to riot-held prison

LUCASVILLE, Ohio (AP) — A TV crew and still photographer were summoned Saturday to a maximum-security prison held for nearly a week by rebellious inmates. Officials said an end to the stalemate was possible but not assured.

Dayton police Sgt. Frank Navarre, a negotiator, said Saturday morning that Southern Ohio Correctional Facility inmates hadn't yet agreed to surrender but had negotiated terms of the news coverage of any such development.

Tessa Unwin of the Department of Rehabilitation and Corrections, said a possible surrender "could take five minutes or all day." On Friday, she had said negotiations with inmates had made "significant progress" in recent days.

Inmates have demanded amnesty for the riot, the replacement of Warden Arthur Tate, religious freedom for Muslim inmates and freer telephone and visitor privileges.

Saturday morning, a television truck and crew and a still photographer entered the prison compound. The prisoners had wanted cameras in an apparent effort to ensure whatever happened would be peaceful, officials said.

The siege at the prison began April 11. Inmates still held five guards captive after releasing one hostage Thursday and a second Friday when they were allowed to give broadcast statements.

Seven inmates and one guard have died in the rebellion, authorities said. But The (Cleveland) Plain Dealer, quoting unidentified legislative and law enforcement sources, reported there were at least 19 more bodies inside the prison. The paper said an inmate involved in the rioting described the scene as "carnage."

Songfest turns nation's attention to rural U.S.

By Steven Rosenfeld
Associated Press Writer

DES MOINES, Iowa — Willie Nelson presents Farm Aid VI on Saturday, a marathon concert that has as much to do with raising awareness about rural America as it does with raising money to help family farmers.

While the farm economy no longer is on its knees, as it was in 1985 when Farm Aid was born, an estimated one in 10 farmers remain overwhelmed by debt and times are getting tougher for many others. Some economists believe the farm recovery peaked in 1989, after just three years.

"Agriculture is just the bottom rung on the economic ladder," Nelson says. "Once the farmers go under, then everyone over them starts."

It is the entertainment that draws the crowd and provides a forum for that message.

Dozens of performers are scheduled to join Nelson, including Johnny Cash, Merle Haggard, Waylon Jennings, Kris Kristofferson, Neil Young, John Mellencamp, Ricky Van Shelton and Dwight Yoakam. Hosts include Roseanne and Tom Arnold, Yakov Smirnoff, Lou Diamond Phillips and Williams & Ree.

The concert begins at noon CDT and runs until 11 p.m. at the 50,000-seat Cyclone Stadium of Iowa State University in the central Iowa community of Ames.

The Nashville Network will televise the concert to cable viewers, joining the program at 3 p.m.

Because the concert coincides with the Drake Relays track meet in nearby Des Moines and the annual spring student celebration at Iowa State, hotel rooms throughout central Iowa have been booked for weeks. But plenty of Farm Aid tickets still are available.

Promoters say they're happy with the response, but headed into the final week of sales, Iowa State said more than a third of the tickets had yet to be sold.

Ticket sales were picking up, however, according to Andy Long at the Iowa State Center. Reserved seats remain for sale at $27.50 each, although the 2,000 choice preferred seats, at $46 each, quickly sold out.

Even before the entertainment begins, concert organizers have found ways to get out their message that family farmers are vital to the stability of rural America.

On the eve of the concert, a House agriculture subcommittee meets in Ames at Nelson's invitation to take testimony on how the U.S. Department of Agriculture can become more responsive to the needs of family farmers.

On concert day, fans are being urged to deposit nonperishable food at the gate for the hunger relief organization Feed the Children.

Even groups that have yet to share in the nearly $11.2 million distributed in the past seven years by Farm Aid applaud the way the concerts help focus attention on rural issues.

"I think the proportion of farmers in a crisis situation is less today than in 1985, but it's still a problem. The more public awareness of this the better," says Don Ralston, administrative director of the Center for Rural Affairs in Walthill, Neb.

In the 1980s, only generous federal payments kept many farmers on the land, and most of those who survived now rely on off-farm employment to make ends meet.

Off-farm income represented more than 85 percent of a farm household's total income in 1991, the government says.

NASA aims for record days between flights

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA landed one shuttle Saturday after a mission extended by weather and got ready to launch another in just one week, the shortest time between manned missions in the history of U.S. space travel.

Discovery and its five astronauts glided through a clear sky to a landing at the Kennedy Space Center shortly after sunrise, ending a nine-day atmospheric research mission.

Rain and clouds had blocked Discovery's planned homecoming Friday, but that allowed the crew to conduct additional research.

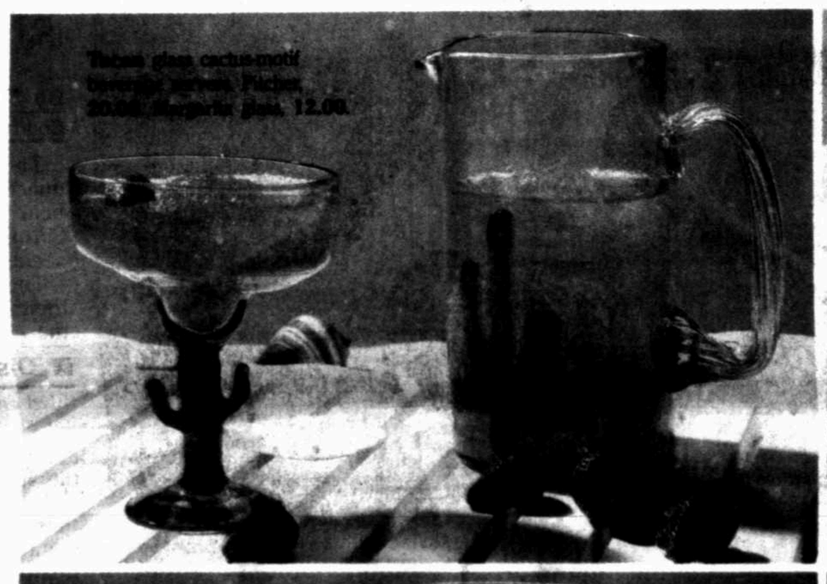

A quick look showed the shuttle to be in good shape. "We couldn't have asked for things to go better," deputy shuttle director Brewster Shaw said.

A few miles from the landing strip, technicians prepared the shuttle Columbia for a much-delayed science flight sponsored by Germany. The nine-day mission is now five years overdue.

Guns for tickets

DENVER (AP) — Police collected about a dozen firearms Saturday in a program that allowed people to exchange guns for Denver Nuggets tickets — no questions asked.

Four churches were drop-off points for the firearms. People who turned in guns received two tickets to see the Denver Nuggets play the Phoenix Suns April 25, along with Nuggets merchandise and food coupons.

Among the guns turned in were a loaded .38-caliber revolver, a rifle and several semiautomatic handguns.

TOMORROW . . .

The Midland Angels close out their first homestand of the 1993 Texas League season against the El Paso Diablos tonight.

Montana, KC reach agreement

Joe Montana

■ Sources close to the San Francisco 49ers say club president Eddie DeBartolo might not let Montana slip away.

By Craig Horst
AP Sports Writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Joe Montana said Saturday he wants the Kansas City Chiefs and the Chiefs want him.

Now what do the San Francisco 49ers do about the man who led them to four Super Bowl victories?

Montana reached agreement Saturday on a three-year contract with the Chiefs, said his agent, Peter Johnson. Monetary terms were not disclosed. The Chiefs and 49ers now probably have the week remaining before the NFL draft to work out a trade for one of the best quarterbacks of all time.

Montana, who has played one half of one game in the past two years after undergoing elbow surgery, has one year remaining on his contract with the 49ers.

There has been speculation all along that Montana's special relationship with 49ers owner Edward DeBartolo will incline DeBartolo to accomodate the wishes of a star quarterback who has taken the team to four Super Bowls.

Sources in Kansas City said Saturday that Montana flew to Youngstown, Ohio, presumably to meet with DeBartolo at his home.

He was given permission to explore options with other teams after 49ers coach George Seifert said Steve Young would be the starting quarterback and that there would be no competition for the job in training camp. Montana said he would not play backup to Young.

Montana picked the Chiefs over the Phoenix Cardinals, who have offered the 49ers a first-round draft choice, the 20th selection overall, as compensation for Montana. The Chiefs reportedly will offer a third-round pick, although club President Carl Peterson seemed to indicate Friday that a player or players could also be involved in a deal.

Carmen Policy, president of the 49ers, stuck on Saturday to the hard-line stance the team had taken after Montana worked out in Phoenix on Thursday and the Cardinals made their offer.

"We think the standard has been set," Policy said. "We would expect market value from Kansas City."

Rebels prey on Eagles

By Bill Price
Staff writer

So maybe the most telling development from Midland Lee's 8-0 baseball victory over Abilene High Saturday at Johnson Field was that the Rebels began to find an identity without Julian Urquidez.

The Rebels (20-4) won their 20th game of the season and confirmed their second-place District 4-5A standing with an 8-2 mark, but for many players it was Urquidez that was on their minds.

Urquidez, a three-year starting pitcher/designated hitter, was lost for the remainder of the season with a stress fracture in his foot last week after leading the district in hitting through the first eight league games.

"We're missing a big bat in the lineup and everybody needed to start swinging. I think everybody has been hitting better lately, though," said Rebel center fielder David Galvan, who did his part by going 3-for-3 with a triple, a double, three RBI and two runs scored from the lead-off position.

Galvan paced a Lee offense that swatted out seven extra-base hits against the Eagles, while senior pitcher Jason Baker (5-1) held AHS to two hits in six shutout innings of work.

"I think we can handle it without Julian, but he sure is nice to have around," said right fielder Brian Henderson, whose 2-for-4 day also included a double.

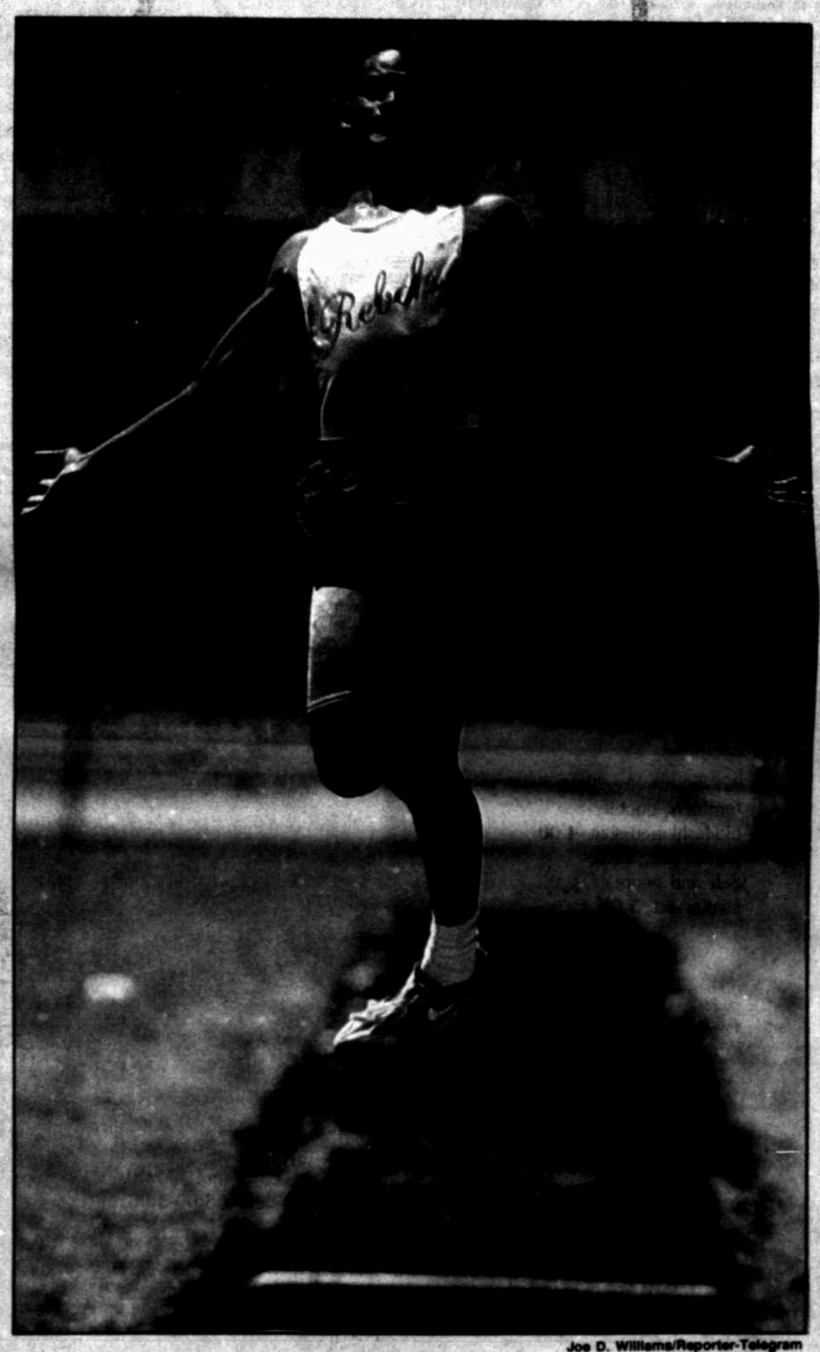

"He's one of the leaders on our team. We wish he was there," added catcher Brian Graham, who reached base three times without an official at-bat by taking a walk and being hit by two pitches.

And while Urquidez and his cast-bound leg were inside the Lee dugout, his absence from the field could be a hole in the pitching rotation come playoff time.

That is, unless, Baker, Kirk Ulrich (6-

The District 4-5A track meet produced its annual pack of wins and near misses at Memorial Stadium Saturday, but three factors never seem to change.

third consecutive year and Midland Lee's Tanisha Mills ends her 4-5A career by beating her own record in the 400.

Permian slugged the 4-5A boys field with 178 points, leaving Lee a distant second with 84 points while qualifying 10 individuals and two relays for the April 30-May 1 Region I meet in Lubbock. Permian also won seven events, including Permian's 40.51 sprint relay victory which was the only district record for the boys.

Abilene High, the defending girls Region I champion outdistanced cross town rival Abilene Cooper 196-132 while qualifying 11 individuals and two relays. AHS won 10 of the 16 events and at one point won titles in five consecutive races to open the night session.

The girls smashed five district marks, including Mills' 54.71 in the 400 meters, smashing her old mark of 55.91 by more than a full second. Mills is the defending Class 5A state 400-meter champion.

But Mills' work wasn't finished there. She also won the shot put in only the third time she has ever competed in the event with a 37-1.

"The win in the shot put is what really surprised me," Mills said. "I thought it would take 39-feet to win,

Midland sends trio to region tennis tourney

By Bill Petitt

Midland High's doubles team of Kevin McIlvain and Allan Neighbors, and Midland Lee's Matt Thompson found the backdoor the gateway to the regional tournament April 30 in Lubbock.

Both lost their respective championship matches Saturday but as a result of the playback rule, both qualified for the regional tournament.

"All you're playing for is first or second in this tournament," said Lee coach Steve Buck. "It's a fresh start for all the players heading into the regionals so we were glad to have Matt qualify."

"We took a gamble playing Matt (Thompson) and David (Stark) as singles. Both were playing well as a doubles team, but with (Bradlee) Holland being hurt we talked it over and took a chance by playing them in singles," he said.

Holland came up a big winner by capturing the boys singles crown for the second consecutive year, defeating Thompson 6-0, 6-3 in the championship. Despite not playing for the past two weeks due to a sprained right knee ligament.

Holland came out quickly and took just 27 minutes to win the first set 6-0. Holland won the first seven games of the match before Thompson was able to mount any kind of a comeback. Thompson broke Holland's serve the second game of the second set to take a 2-1 lead before Holland broke Thompson twice in the set to take a 4-3 lead and never looked back.

"He (Thompson) started chipping at the ball, trying to keep it low in the second set and I had to set up my points more," said Holland, who will attend Texas A&M next fall.

Thompson earned the second spot to regionals by virtue of Cooper's Ryan Hughes win over Lee's David Stark (3-6, 6-4, 7-5) and Thompson's win over Hughes on Friday in the semifinals.

In boys doubles competition, MHS' McIlvain and Neighbors found the hat trick too much to ask for as they were beaten by John Cole and David Robertson of Cooper 6-1, 6-4.

The championship was a rematch of a semifinal match two weeks ago in the Abilene tournament that MHS won in

Mustangs win pair on diamond

Midland Christian's baseball team claimed a 7-6 victory over Tahoka Saturday afternoon at Angels Stadium, avenging a 13-3 loss the Mustangs suffered Tuesday in Tahoka.

MCS used a five-run first inning to leap out front while Mustang pitcher Chad Bayley (5-2) struck out 12. Bayley also tripled in the game while Allan Awtry doubled.

Also, MCS (10-8) downed Westbrook Friday in Westbrook, 30-2. Again the Mustangs were hot early, scoring 12 runs in the first inning. Andy Awtry (2-3) earned the pitching win.

The Mustangs (1-0 in district) return to play in the Texas Association of Private and Parochial Schools Thursday, when they travel to Abilene Christian. MCS then hosts Lubbock Christian in a 33:30 p.m. doubleheader Friday at Angels Stadium.

Soccer athletes play nationally

Five Midlanders have qualified to play soccer for Olympic Develpoment program through the North Texas State Soccer Association.

Devon Butts, Michael Ratanasavetavadh and Kalani Young are competing for roster berths on the '78 North Texas State team that will compete in the U.S. Southern Regionals. Robert Evans is placed for the '77 North Texas team, while J.D. Garcia will play for the U.S. Southern Regional lII team.

Also, Adrian Castresana, who was classified under the Southern Regional team, was recognized as a Regional/National soccer athlete along with 16 other '78 teams players from the four regions across the U.S. Adrian's team will play in Philadelphia on April 23-25 against a Region I '78 team, a Canadian team and a Pennsylvania '77 team.

MISA soccer winners emerge

The 1993 MISD Junior High-/Freshman school soccer program, sponsored by Midland Soccer Association, has been completed.

This year, 313 students (143 girls and 170 boys) competed in a league that also saw two ninth-grade teams from Odessa playing.

In boys play, Goddard seventh grade and Midland Freshman continued their dominance of the top spots in their divisions. The seventh grade Goddard girls were also first. Also, the Alamo eighth grade girls and the San Jacinto eighth grade boys placed first for the first time in three years. It was the first year for freshman girls play, with 42 students participating.

LEE: Permian next on slate

(From 1B)

1), Alex Hale (3-1) and Brian Cordova (1-0) perform like they have to date this season.

Baker, who on Wednesday signed a national letter with the University of Texas, was probably at his sharpest level of the season, striking out eight and walking three before Cordova threw the last inning. With the shutout, Baker's district ERA improved to 1.34 in 15⅓ innings, while Cordova's remains an unblemished 0.00 in 1⅓ innings of 4-5A work.

Baker attributed his success Saturday to a curveball that complemented his high 80s fastball.

"Sometimes I wanted to throw it and Coach (Jesse Benavidez) didn't call it. I felt I had more control of it than even in the Midland High game (his last outing)," said Baker, who used his curve for strike three on at least five K's.

When the Eagles did mount a threat, the Rebels' ability to gun them down on the base paths helped preserve the shutout. In the first, Graham shot down AHS' Ronald Haynes on an attempt to steal second, then Cody Salyers was thrown out 1-4-2 at the plate to end the inning after Jason Love had tried to get in a rundown between first and second to let Salyers score.

In the next inning, left fielder Chris Connally chased down Marcus Lopez' single and hit cut-off man Paul Fuentes, who threw Lopez out when the Eagle designated hitter tried to leg out his hit for a double.

"We work on that kind of thing more than anything in practice," Graham said. "We just use it in the game like we're supposed to. It's just playing heads-up ball."

Lee will get a chance to work on it again Tuesday, when the Rebels visit Odessa Permian and try to avenge one of their previous two district losses.

Grand slam ends Bulldogs' day

Staff report

ABILENE — Abilene Cooper's Judge Roberts swatted a grand slam in the bottom of the sixth inning to end the game here Saturday, as the Cougars defeated the Midland High Bulldogs 11-0 in District 4-5A baseball play.

Roberts' bases-loaded homer came off the first pitch from MHS reliever Tim Beard and capped a six-run inning that gave Cooper the win via the 10-run rule.

Jimmy Frush (7-2) claimed the pitching win while Mike Melzer (1-2) was handed the loss.

MHS returns home for a 4:30 p.m. game Tuesday against Odessa High, which downed San Angelo 3-2 Saturday in San Angelo. The OHS-MHS game will be played at Angels Stadium.

ANGELS: Cohick has good night at plate clude a 10-game homestand. Midland will return home April 29 to begin a five-game series with Wichita.

Singleton's first-inning triple off Angels starter David Holdridge (0-2) followed a lead-off walk by Mike Basse and a single by designated hitter Michael Carter. Carter then scored on a wild pitch.

The Diablos started the third with three singles. Singleton, the second batter in the inning, was caught stealing. After Jeff Cirillo singled in a run, Lewis lifted a pitch over the 335-foot right field fence to give the Diablos a 6-0 lead.

Not all of the Angels early woes were the fault of Holdridge, though. By rights, Lewis should have never gotten to swing at the full-count pitch he took out of the park. Lewis had popped up a foul ball near the stands down the third-base line, but the ball popped out of third baseman Mark Brakebill's glove.

Holdridge, who allowed 10 hits in three innings in his opening loss to San Antonio, then settled in a little. He held the Diablos scoreless until the fifth, when Cirillo tripled and scored on a wild pitch.

TENNIS: AHS wins girls singles, doubles straight sets. However, Cole and Robertson took advantage of a controversial call early in the match to turn the momentum to their favor.

Tied 1-1 in the first set, Cole served a ball that MHS called out and Cole said was in. The match was halted by the referee for several minutes and Cole and Robertson went on to take the next five games for the set.

" It (the call) rattled me," Neighbors said.

"They seemed to gain the momentum while we lost whatever we had up until that point," McIlvain said.

"We just got started too late today (Saturday)," McIlvain said. "I think if we could have been out there longer we would have won. We seemed to be playing better as the match went on, but we just gave up too much too early. They played well, though."

MHS jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the second set but Cole and Robertson broke Neighbors' serve in the third game and eventually tied the set at 3-3, then broke Neighbors for a second time in the set to take a 4-3 lead and eventually the regional berth.

"I think my serving was the difference today," Neighbors said. "I think I only held serve once the whole match. I am normally a consistent server, but not today."

In the girls singles championship, Abilene High's Camille Prather continued to dominate the field with an easy 6-2, 6-3 championship victory over second-seed Ashlee Abrigg of Cooper.

In girls doubles competition, Mandy Peoples and Chelsea Gonzales of AHS beat Cooper's Misty Meyers and Kathryn Scott in straight sets 6-3, 6-2.

The 5A regional tournament will be played April 30-May 1 in Lubbock, with the top two finishers in regional advancing on to the state tournament in Austin.

Here are the results of the District 4-5A Tennis Tournament played at the Lee courts, Saturday (seeding in parenthesis):

Boys Singles

Championship: Bradlee Holland, Central (1), def. Matt Thompson, Lee (2), 6-0, 6-3. Third place: Ryan Hughes, Cooper (4), def. David Stark, Lee, 3-6, 6-4, 7-5.

Girls Singles

Championship: Camille Prather, AHS (1), def. Ashlee Abrigg, Cooper (2), 6-2, 6-3. Third place: Melissa Kelly, AHS (3), def. Diana Woodward, Cooper (4), 7-5, 6-1.

Boys Doubles

Championship: John Cole-David Robertson, Cooper (3), def. Kevin McIlvain-Allan Neighbors, MHS (1), 6-1, 6-4. Third place: Eric Hall-Graham Thurman, Central (4), def. Adam Thurman-Dusty Oglesby, AHS, 6-3, 7-5.

Girls Doubles

Championship: Mandy Peoples-Chelsea Gonzales, AHS (1), def. Misty Meyer-Kathryn Scott, Cooper (2), 6-3, 6-2. Third place: Lindy Roberts-Michele Tessen, AHS, def. Elizabeth Norton-Heather Gibson, Cooper (3), 6-4, 7-6 (7-2).

but Tasha Newman (of Abilene High) didn't have a good day."

Mills also ran the anchor leg on Lee's winning 1600 relay team and Lee's second place sprint relay team. Mills helped the sprint relay team earn a region berth by coming from 10 yards behind in third place to beat Abilene Cooper for second place. Running on the two relay teams means that Mills didn't try to run the 200, which she has done in other meets.

"Last week I was cramping up after the 200 and that wasn't good. There just isn't enough time to recover between events with the 200," Mills said.

Lee senior Scott McLeod, a Region I qualifier last year, remained unbeaten in the shot put this year with a 56-1, but had a challenge from his own teammate, Bernard Oldham, who had a career best 56-0¼ for second place and is region bound.

"I give it all to Bernard today," McLeod said. "I was disappointed in my throw. It's nice to win, but I wish I had thrown better."

Oldham, also a senior, gave McLeod another warning for the region meet in two weeks, saying, "I could have done better. I had a 58 in practice this week and I'm going for 61 or 62. I know that's a lot of improvement, but that's what I'm going for."

Lee senior Michael Nunn won the long jump with a pressure-packed 23-1 on his last jump of the day. Nunn went into his last jump in third place behind Abilene's Bobby Smith and Permian's Gerrod Bergen.

"I felt a lot of pressure on that last jump," Nunn said. "I had to get at least 23-feet and I knew I had to give it all I had. Both Smith and I had 23-1, but I won because I had the next best jump."

Nunn also qualified for the region triple jump with a second place 44-7 behind Abilene's Smith.

Lee's Tony Olivas, another region qualifier last year, is back in the discus, but won with a sub-par 149-8. He has been over 160-feet in several meets.

"I was glad for the first (place), but sad about the throw," Olivas said. "I don't know what is wrong, the wind or the way I'm throwing?"

The other local victory came from Midland High junior Charles Christ in the 800, which is one of the surprise stories of the year in 4-5A track. Christ ran a career best 1:59.66 to win the 800 after a mild challenge by two runners down the stretch, where he wore everyone out. However, Christ's career isn't long. This was only his third race in the 800, but he said last week he was going to win the event at the district meet.

"I felt I had the win halfway through the race," Christ said. "It got a little close, but I had plenty left to finish strong. I love this race now."

Midland High's Elaine Salgado, a sophomore, had a career best 15.20 in the 100 hurdles to place second and earn her first region berth.

"I didn't expect this this year," Salgado said, "but I begin to think I had a chance after winning for the second week in a row last week."

Lee sophomore Roderick Mayfield missed a region berth in the 110 hurdles with a third place, but came back to win a 300 hurdle berth with a second place 38.73, another career best.

Lee junior Marlon Henry, know more for his football toting duties in the fall, pulled a mild surprise in the 200 with second place 21.53 to earn Lee's seventh region berth. Lee had only two last year.

The Abilene High girls set three district records as Tasha Newman won the discus in 134-8 and Tamica Watkins had a 40-4¾ in the triple jump. Abilene's Barbara Pyle had a 44.56 in the 300 hurdles, breaking the old record of Traci Logan, a Lee state qualifier last year. San Angelo's Vanessa Garcia tied the high jump record of 5-6, but was far off the 5-10 she had last weekend in this same high jump pit.

Final results from the boys and girls District 4-5A track meet held at Memorial Stadium Saturday.

Three tied at Hilton Head Island

Associated Press

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. — David Edwards made bogeys on the final three wind-swept holes of the Harbour Town Golf Links on Saturday to fall back into a tie with Paul Azinger and David Frost for the lead in the Heritage Classic.

Edwards, who burst in front with four birdies on the front nine, gave back his lead with four bogeys over the last five holes. He finished with a 70 for a 9-under 204.

Frost, who shared the second-round lead with Edwards and Masters champion Bernhard Langer, also ended with a 70. Azinger had less trouble with the wind and blasted into contention with a 66.

The three were a stroke in front of John Cook, who had a 69.

■ PGA Heritage

Steve Pate, Jodie Mudd, Lanny Wadkins and Mark McCumber were next at 206. Pate had a 68, Mudd a 69 and Wadkins and McCumber had 70s.

Langer, trying to follow a Masters victory with a Heritage win for the second time, opened with a double bogey and slid to a 74, leaving him at 208 and four shots behind.

A three-time winner on the PGA Tour, Edwards was absent from the leader board — and the media interview room — while shooting a 5-under 66 on Friday. Before the third round, the tour issued an official apology to Edwards, who then bounced back and played some of the best golf seen on the seaside course.

The course struck back in a big way, though.

"That's just golf. I could give it all back on the first three holes tomorrow, too," Edwards said. "You can't worry about that. I would've liked to finish better, but it's not going to make any difference."

Edwards made birdies on the first two holes to get to 10 under and burst free from what had been a six-way tie for lead with Langer, Frost, Azinger, Cook and Pate.

Edwards added birdies on Nos. 5 and 9 to finish with a 32 and a four-shot lead at the turn. He still seemed in control after his first bogey on the 14th hole, getting back to 12-under with a birdie on No. 15.

However, Edwards said he made misjudged the wind on the final three holes.

King a win shy of LPGA Hall

Associated Press

STOCKBRIDGE, Ga. — LPGA champion Betsy King is in position to claim her 29th career victory, which would leave her only one shy of qualifying for the LPGA Hall of Fame.

"It was a little bit of a struggle today," King said after gaining a share of the lead with Trish Johnson of Wales with a birdie on the final hole.

"It's tiring when you struggle for pars," said King, who had carried a two-shot lead into Saturday's round of 1-over-par 73.

Johnson, bidding for a second consecutive victory after winning the Las Vegas LPGA two weeks ago, had a 68 earlier in the day, leaving the two with 4-under-par 212 totals for 54 holes.

"I shoot over par tomorrow, I know I won't win the tournament," King said.

"Last week I came from nowhere to win," Johnson said. "The idea is not to think about it. If it's good enough to win, great."

Johnson had only one bogey in the swirling winds that have whipped over the 6,209-yard Eagle's Landing Country Club course for three days.

King and Johnson shared a one-shot lead over Kelly Robbins and Sherri Steinhauer. Robbins, the tour's longest hitter in her second pro season, turned in the best round of the tournament, a 6-under-par 66. Steinhauer birdied the final hole for a 72.

King bogeyed the first hole when she three-putted from 70 feet, missing an 8-foot par putt.

She landed in hazards twice on the par-5 third, two-putting from 70 feet for her bogey.

King's only front-side birdie came when she holed a 20-footer on the fifth. She lost that shot when she missed a 3-foot par putt on No. 10.

Her final hole birdie came on a tap-in after almost making a chip shot for eagle.

"I felt like my timing was off a little bit," King said. "I felt I got away with a little bit."

Johnson had little trouble with the swirling winds.

"It was good," Johnson said.

Brown throws second shutout

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Kevin Brown wishes he could pitch against the New York Yankees more often.

Brown, a 21-game winner last season, pitched a six-hitter as the Texas Rangers beat the Yankees 9-0 Saturday.

■ AL Roundup

He was sidelined on March 17 with a rib stress fracuture, and did not pitch again until April 11. Brown is 9-1 lifetime against the Yankees, and 7-0 in his last eight starts against New York. His only career loss to the Yankees came on June 16, 1989.

The right-hander, now 2-0, walked two and struck out three in matching his shutout total for all of last season.

"I enjoy the results I get pitching here," Brown said. "It's not really something I think about, though."

Doug Dascenzo and Ivan Rodriguez each drove in three runs for the Rangers.

"It was a lot of Brown today," said Yankees manager Buck Showalter, who could offer no explanation either for Brown's dominance of his team.

"Sometimes, there's just clubs that are like that," Rangers manager Kevin Kennedy said. "There's no real explanation for it. I couldn't put my finger on it."

Despite a 21-11 record last year, Brown still felt he had something to prove this season.

"People think last year was a freak incident, that's their prerogative," Brown said. "I'd rather win 15 games and win the pennant than 20 games and lose. But I'm going out there every day to try to win."

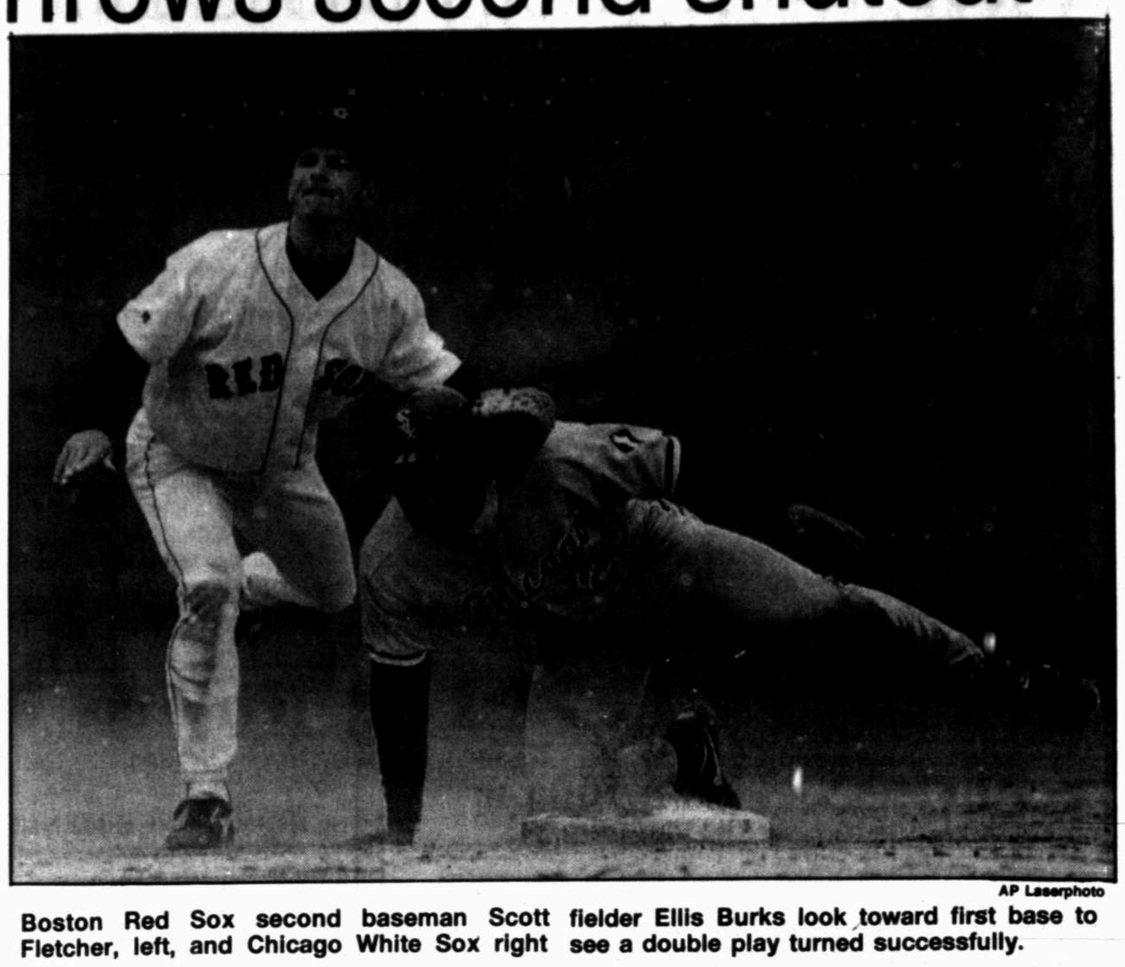

Dascenzo singled in a run in the fifth and two more with a bases-loaded single in a four-run sixth off starter Jim Abbott (1-2). Abbott gave up six runs and eight hits in 5 2-3 innings.

New York threatened in the fourth when Don Mattingly singled and went to third on Dion James' two-out single with James taking second on a throwing error charged to right fielder Butch Davis. But Brown got Matt Nokes to fly out.

Dean Palmer's RBI single gave the Rangers a 1-0 lead in the second and Dascenzo's RBI single made it 2-0 in the fifth.

Rodriguez delivered a bases-loaded single for two runs in the sixth and, after Benji Gil's infield hit reloaded the bases, Dascenzo singled in two more to chase Abbott.

Jose Canseco added a two-run single in the eighth and Rodriguez had an RBI grounder in the ninth.

Tigers 20, Mariners 3

DETROIT — For the second time in four days, the Detroit Tigers erupted for 20 runs, this time routing the Seattle Mariners on three-run homers by Mickey Tettleton and Rob Deer.

The Tigers, who led the majors in scoring last season, trounced Oakland 20-4 on Tuesday. It was the seventh time Detroit has scored at least 20 runs in a game, and marked the first time the Tigers have done it twice in a season.

Travis Fryman scored five times and had four of Detroit's 20 hits, Chad Kreuter also had four hits and drove in three runs and Gary Thurman drove in four. The Tigers again came within one run of tying their single-game high.

Kreuter was hit in the head by a pitch from Tim Leary in the eighth inning and walked to first base with his lower lip bleeding. Players from both benches started onto the field but were coaxed back into the dugout, and then Thurman capped the rout with a bases-loaded triple with two outs.

The Tigers improved to 4-0 at home this season. Their big bursts have come without any big hits from Cecil Fielder, either.

Fielder, who has led the majors in RBIs for three straight seasons, did not drive in any runs in the 20-4 win over Oakland, and managed only a bloop, two-run single against Seattle.

Bill Krueger (1-1), who had put 21 runners on base in his first nine innings, gave up four hits and two runs in seven innings and won easily.

Twins 8, Royals 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Jim Deshaies, Minnesota's bargain-basement pitching pickup, improved to 3-0 while Kansas City's big-bucks pitcher, David Cone, fell to 0-3 with the Twins' victory over the Royals.

Brian Harper got his first extra-base hit of the season, a three-run double in the first, and Kent Hrbek homered for the second straight day as Minnesota beat Kansas City for the fourth time in five games.

On Dec. 8, Deshaies and Cone both signed free-agent contracts. The similarity ends there.

Deshaies, a left-handed finesse pitcher who won 16 games the previous three seasons, signed a two-year, $1.4 million contract with the Twins. Cone, a right-hander who won 79 games from 1988-92 and has more strikeouts in the 1990s than any other pitcher, has a three-year, $18 million deal.

Kansas City, which acquired Cone, Greg Gagne, Jose Lind and Felix Jose in hopes of avoiding a start like last year's 1-16, fell to 2-9.

The Royals have scored two runs or fewer six times. They were held to six hits and one run in 6 2-3 innings by Deshaies, who walked one and struck out four in lowering his ERA to 1.74.

Red Sox 5, White Sox 1

BOSTON — Joe Hesketh pitched three-hit ball for eight innings, repeatedly working out of early jams caused by his wildness, to lead the Boston Red Sox over the Chicago White Sox.

Mike Greenwell and Andre Dawson each had a pair of RBIs for Boston, which remained in first place in the AL East and improved to 8-3 for the first time since 1978.

Hesketh (2-0) walked six in the first four innings, but survived due to a pair of double plays and timely strikeouts. He twice got Frank Thomas on a called third strike with a man on base and two outs.

Hesketh, who struggled during spring training and has been the subject of recent trade rumors, retired eight straight batters beginning with one out in the fifth inning.

The White Sox, who left a man on base in each of the first five innings, managed only a third-inning double by Lance Johnson and a pair of singles by Joey Cora off Hesketh.

Chicago scored in the ninth off Jeff Russell on Ron Karkovice's RBI single. The run was charged to Tony Fossas.

Brewers 6, Athletics 3

MILWAUKEE — The Oakland Athletics fell below .500 for the first time in more than five seasons, losing to the Milwaukee Brewers when B.J. Surhoff hit a three-run double in the first inning and Dave Nilsson and Kevin Reimer homered.

Kevin Seitzer homered twice for the A's (4-5).

Self-taught pro leads Seniors Championship

Associated Press

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. — A blue collar club pro with a short, punchy, self-taught swing lifted himself ahead of golf's elite and took the third round lead Saturday in the PGA Seniors Championship.

Tom Wargo, whose strength comes from a background that includes stints as a steelworker and dairy farmer, shot a 67 and completed three trips over the PGA National Golf Club in 205, 11 under par.

In addition to a three-stroke advantage, the 50-year-old Wargo will take a casual, come-what-may attitude into Sunday's final round of the oldest event on the Senior Tour.

Asked if a club pro can win against some of the most glamorous names in golf, Wargo replied:

"I don't think of myself as a club pro, or a touring pro. I'm just a player, trying to win a golf tournament the best way I can."

"In this kind of weather, wouldn't a heat pump be the last thing I need?"

A name like "heat pump" might be a little confusing, but here in Texas it makes a lot of sense.

In summer, the heat pump pumps heat out of your house and replaces it with cool air.

In winter, it uses the solar heat trapped in the earth's atmosphere to keep your house warm and comfortable, even on the coldest days.

Which means you save on energy, natural resources and your monthly bill.

Any more questions? Your heat pump dealer has the answers.

Rockamundo breathless at Hot Springs

Associated Press

HOT SPRINGS, Ark. — Just when you think you've heard them all at the racetrack, along comes Rockamundo, a 3-year-old who holds his breath.

At least, that's what jockey Mark Guidry told trainer O.J. Glass after the Remington Park Derby. When Calvin Borel climbed aboard Tuesday for a five-furlong workout, Glass shared the information, and they decided a slap on the belly would solve that problem.

The workout was brilliant and on Saturday, Rockamundo, a 108-1 shot with Borel aboard, slipped through along the rail and won the $500,000 Arkansas Derby.

That result also served to let the air out of Loblolly Stable. An hour earlier, Loblolly's Marked Tree was third in the Wood Memorial at Aqueduct. Dalhart, part of the heavily favored Loblolly entry in the Arkansas Derby, never got to the lead and finished ninth, beating only one horse.

John Ed Anthony, Loblolly's president, said that Prairie Bayou would be the stable's only horse in the May 1 Kentucky Derby.

"I think the fact that he lost his composure before the race was a factor in the way he ran," Anthony said. "However, I think Dalhart's chance of going to the Kentucky Derby went out the window."

Glass said Rockamundo, a son of Key to the Mint, would ship to Keeneland on Monday. "I think I like the Kentucky Derby," he said.

He also said that if Rockamundo runs on May 1, Borel will be the rider. "How could you take him off?" he asked.

Gary West, who owns a telemarketing firm in Omaha, Neb., said he paid $30,000 for Rockamundo at a fall yearling sale. Rockamundo won only once in seven starts last year but Glass said that was deceiving.

When it came time to nominate for the Triple Crown, West forked over $600. He figured the colt was worth a flyer.

Rockamundo finished 1½ lengths in front of Kissin Kris, another longshot who was a nose better than Foxtrail in a four-horse photo. Foxtrail finished a head in front of Mi Cielo and it was another head to Allen Paulson's lightly raced Diazo.

Aaron Gryder, the rider on Mi Cielo, filed a foul claim against Jose Santos on Kissin Kris, but it was disallowed.

■ Racing Roundup

Rockamundo returned $218, $66.80 and $18.80 after completing 1⅛ miles in 1:48. Kissin Kris, fourth in the Florida Derby in his last start, paid $17 and $10.20. Foxtrail returned $5.20.

"I told the jock before the race, 'Don't pay any attention to the tote board, this horse can win,'" Glass said.

WOOD MEMORIAL

NEW YORK — Storm Tower opened the door for an appearance in the Kentucky Derby by winning the Wood Memorial on Saturday, but trainer Ben Perkins Jr. wasn't sure he'd let the colt through.

Storm Tower, winning for the fifth time in six career starts, took the lead shortly after the start and held it as he won by two lengths over Tossofthecoin, with Marked Tree three-quarters of a length back and a half-length in front of Duc D'sligovil.

The winner, ridden by Rick Wilson, carried Derby weight of 126 pounds over 1⅛ miles on a fast track in 1:49 3-5.

After Storm Tower finished second in the 1⅛-mile Florida Derby on a sloppy track March 20 at Gulfstream Park, Perkins said he would skip the Derby with the son of Irish Tower and point him to the Preakness.

Following his victory Saturday, Perkins said, "We'll make a decision in a couple of days, and I'm sure we'll make the right decision. Obviously, we'll have to consider the Derby."

Ray Bell, trainer of Tossofthecoin, iundicated that his colt would skip the Derby on May 1. "He'll be a nice colt in the fall. There's no need to rush him," Bell said. "Maybe we'll look at the Belmont down the line."

Storm Tower is owned by Charles Hesse III and Anthony Tonetta. Hesse paid $245,000 for the colt at a 2-year-old in-training sale last spring at Calder.

ASHLAND STAKES

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Lunar Spook made it look easy for Shane Sellers in the Ashland Stakes.

Ridden by Sellers for the first time, the filly overtook favored Roamin Rachel at the top of the stretch and pulled away to a 2½-length victory in the $277,375 Grade I race at Keeneland on Saturday.

"I had a perfect trip," Sellers said. "I never rode her before, so I didn't know what to expect of her no part of the race. It's tough when you never rode one before."

Marlins have way with Astros

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Benito Santiago had a homer and a two-run double in Florida's seven-run seventh inning, and Jack Armstrong pitched a strong game, leading the Marlins 9-4 over the Houston Astros Saturday night.

The inning not only was the most productive ever for the expansion team, but surpassed its run total for any previous game. Florida scored six runs on two occasions.

Armstrong (1-2) didn't allow a hit over the first four innings until Eric Anthony singled to start the fifth. The Astros scored twice in the inning — on Andujar Cedeno's RBI grounder and Eddie Taubensee's double.

Armstrong allowed three hits, struck out eight and walked two in eight innings. Anthony hit a two-run homer in the ninth after Jeff Bagwell singled to start the inning against Trevor Hoffman.

Santiago, who hit the Marlins' first homer ever, on April 12, sent Brian Williams' first pitch of the seventh over the left field fence to break a 2-2 tie.

Three more runs scored on Armstrong's single, Williams' wild pitch and a grounder by Junior Felix.

■ NL Roundup

Mets 4, Reds 1

CINCINNATI — The Cincinnati Reds' season-opening slump became their worst in 38 years as Frank Tanana pitched six strong innings in his National League debut to lead the New York Mets.

The Reds, who have the highest payroll in the league, lost their fifth in a row and fell to 2-9, the worst record in the league. The Reds haven't started this poorly since 1955, when they opened 2-11.

Tanana (1-0) became the latest pitcher to keep the weak-hitting Reds in check. The left-hander allowed just one run on six hits over six innings, striking out one.

The Mets scored twice the sixth against John Smiley (0-2), who became the victim of a bad hop and a soft single. Vince Coleman singled home Charlie O'Brien, who scored because catcher Joe Oliver bobbled the one-hop throw home, and Eddie Murray dropped a single over the infield for a 2-1 lead.

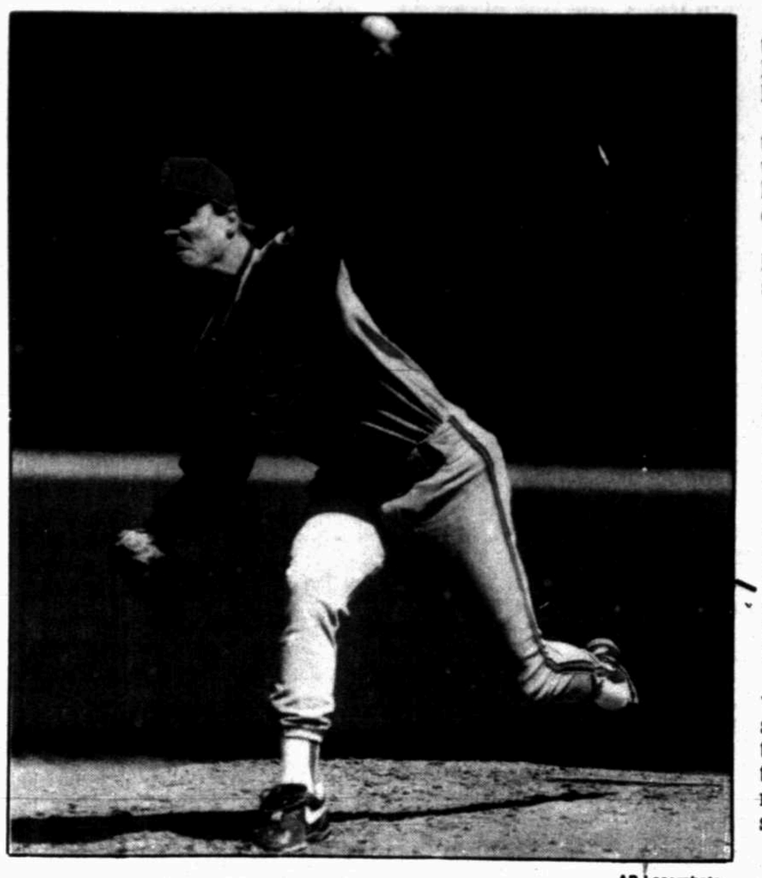

The Mets put it away with two in the ninth off Rob Dibble, who gave up two walks and a two-run single to O'Brien.

Rockies 9, Expos 1

MONTREAL — Andres Galarraga again pounded his former team, driving in three runs with a pair of doubles and leading the Colorado Rockies past the Montreal Expos.

In five games against the Expos this season, Galarraga has 11 RBIs and is batting .571 (12-for-22). He leads the majors with 14 RBIs.

Galarraga hit a two-run double in the first inning against Dennis Martinez (0-3) and an RBI double off the right-field fence in the third.

New York Mets pitcher Frank Tanana throws against the Cincinnati Reds.

Charlie Hayes homered and drove in three runs and Dante Bichette added a solo shot for the Rockies.

Bruce Ruffin (1-1) gave up only an unearned run in 6 1-3 innings. He allowed eight hits, struck out four and walked two.

Martinez started two days after being ejected 12 pitches into a game against Houston. For the second time in a week, the Rockies hit him hard.

On April 17, Colorado tagged him for five earned runs in six innings in Denver. This time, Martinez allowed five more earned runs on eight hits in five innings. He has a 6.00 ERA this season.

Eric Young led off the game with a single and Alex Cole drew a walk. One out later, Galarraga doubled home the runners.

Blue Jays 8, Indians 1

CLEVELAND — John Olerud hit a three-run homer in the first inning and hot-swinging Joe Carter also homered as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Cleveland Indians.

Carter's home run off Tom Kramer in the eighth was his fourth in the last seven games. He has hit safely in eight of nine games and is batting .387.

Winner Pat Hentgen (1-1) pitched five scoreless innings in his fourth major-league start. The right-hander limited Cleveland to three hits, striking out three and walking two.

The Indians entered the game leading the majors with a .338 team average, 69 runs, 127 hits and 17 home runs.

Indians' starter Mark Clark (1-1) yielded three runs and six hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Clark nearly got out of the first inning unscathed. With one out and runners at first and second, Carter hit a potential double-play grounder to third. But Paul Molitor's hard slide at second prevented Carlos Baerga from making the relay to first, keeping the inning alive.

Olerud hit the next pitch for his first home run of the season. He has eight RBIs in his last five games.

Cubs 6, Phillies 3

CHICAGO — Dwight Smith and Sammy Sosa each hit solo home runs to help power the Chicago Cubs past Philadelphia, sending the Phillies to their second straight loss after winning eight of nine games to start the season.

It was the third straight win for the Cubs, who have handed the Phillies (8-3) all three of their losses.

Smith, making his first start of the season, led off the first inning with his first homer off Curt Schilling (2-1) and Sosa led off the second with his second.

Jose Vizcaino and Rey Sanchez hit two-run singles in a four-run sixth inning.

Braves 2, Giants 0

SAN FRANCISCO — Terry Pendleton's two-run homer off reliever Mike Jackson with two outs in the top of the ninth inning gave the run-starved Atlanta Braves a victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Atlanta, winning for only the second time in six games, has scored only three runs in its last 40 innings. The homer made a winner of Steve Avery (1-1), who opposed Trevor Wilson in a battle of left-handers.

Left-hander Mike Stanton worked a perfect ninth for his fifth save, teaming with Avery on a three-hitter in a game delayed at the start for 2 hours, 17 minutes by rain. The Giants lost for only the second time in eight games.

Padres 2, Cardinals 1

SAN DIEGO — Greg Harris pitched well after two dismal outings, and Fred McGriff's home run proved decisive as the San Diego Padres beat the St. Louis Cardinals.

Harris (1-2), who lasted just 4 1-3 innings in each of his previous starts, allowed six hits in 7 1-3 innings. The victory was his third straight over the Cardinals.

In that span, Harris, who struck out two and walked two, has limited St. Louis to two runs and 11 hits in 20 1-3 innings. Gene Harris, the third San Diego pitcher, worked the ninth for his second save.

Dodgers 6, Pirates 3

LOS ANGELES — Rookie Mike Piazza hit a three-run homer in a five-run first inning, and Ramon Martinez pitched a strong game as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Darryl Strawberry homered for the second straight game, and the Dodgers banged out 11 hits after getting 15 in a 7-4 victory Friday night over the Pirates.

Martinez (2-1), who dropped his previous five decisions to the Pirates, gave up only one hit after the Pirates took a 2-0 lead in the first.

Martinez retired 17 straight before walking Andy Van Slyke to start the ninth. The right-hander allowed four hits.

■ NBA Roundup

DALLAS — Lionel Simmons hit a leaning one-hand shot from 14 feet with 2.7 seconds left to play Saturday night, giving the Sacramento Kings a 108-107 overtime victory over the Dallas Mavericks.

Dallas' Derek Harper had sent the game into overtime tied at 100 when he hit an off-balance, desperation 3-point shot from the top of the circle with 2.5 seconds to play in regulation. He missed a long jumper at the buzzer in overtime.

The Mavs, seeking their 10th victory of the season, are still tied with the 1972-73 Philadelphia 76ers, who set an NBA record for futitily in a season by winning only nine games.

Simmons finished with 20 points for the Kings, while Spud Webb led the winners with 24 points, nine rebounds, and nine assists. Rod Higgins added 21 points for Sacramento and Wayne Tisdale had 20.

Harper scored 23 points for Dallas, Jim Jackson added 21 and rookie Sean Rooks had 19 points and 11 rebounds.

The Mavs, who have four games left, are guaranteed to have the worst season in club history. The expansion Mavs in 1980-81 won 15 games.

The Kings played without two of their top three scorers. Guard Mitch Richmond, averaging 21 points per game, is out for the year with a fractured right thumb, and rookie Walt Williams, averaging 17 points, has a foot injury.

Dallas played without Doug Smith, out for the rest of the season with an eye injury.

Celtics 103, Heat 100

MIAMI — Xavier McDaniel's tip-in with 30.8 seconds left put the Boston Celtics ahead to stay, and they pushed Miami to the brink of elimination from the playoff race with a 103-100 victory Saturday.

Steve Smith, Glen Rice, Harold Miner and Rony Seikaly each missed a shot in the final 20 seconds trying to tie the game or put Miami ahead.

McDaniel's basket gave Boston a 101-100 lead. He added two free throws with 12.7 seconds left.

The Heat's third consecutive loss all but ended their playoff chances. They will be mathematically eliminated if Indiana wins Sunday at Milwaukee.

Nets 104, Bullets 103

LANDOVER, Md. — Derrick Coleman's basket with 3.2 seconds left capped New Jersey's comeback from a 23-point deficit in the last 8½ minutes Saturday night, giving the Nets a victory over Washington and snapping a seven-game losing streak.

The victory moved the Nets within reach of a playoff spot, depending on the outcome of Saturday night's Detroit-New York game. A Pistons loss would clinch the playoff berth for New Jersey.

Trailing 95-72 with 8:29 remaining, the Nets went on a 23-7 run, pulling even at 102-102 on two free throws by Coleman with 15.1 seconds remaining.

Rockets 86, SuperSonics 81

SEATTLE — Hakeem Olajuwon scored 21 points and Vernon Maxwell added 19 as the Houston Rockets played solid defense to earn their ninth straight victory, over the Seattle SuperSonics for their franchise-record 53rd win.

Olajuwon also pulled down 11 rebounds and blocked eight shots.

The Rockets (53-25) beat the Sonics for the first time in four games this season and took over second place in the Western Conference from Seattle (52-26). It was Houston's fourth road triumph in a row.

Jazz 110, Suns 101

SALT LAKE CITY — Karl Malone had 28 points, including two foul shots with 1:16 left, to give Utah a victory over shorthanded Phoenix.

Malone's free throws gave the Jazz a 100-95 lead, and after Tom Chambers hit one of two foul shots for the Suns, Tyrone Corbin sealed the win with an 18-foot jumper that put Utah in front 102-97 with 28.9 seconds remaining.

That nullified a Suns rally that saw Phoenix came back from a 98-90 deficit with 4:20 to play.

Charlotte 110, Atlanta 107

ATLANTA — Larry Johnson broke a tie with a driving layup with 32 seconds left, and Muggsy Bogues made four free throws in the last 13 seconds as the Charlotte Hornets beat the Atlanta Hawks.

The Hawks' Dominique Wilkins scored 41 points — the eighth time he's been over 40 this season — but he missed four free throws in the fourth quarter and also blew a driving layup which would have tied the game with 18 seconds left.

Knicks 95, Pistons 85

NEW YORK — Charles Smith and John Starks led New York on a 22-8 third-quarter run after Patrick Ewing left the game in foul trouble, and the Knicks went on to beat Detroit.

With their 18th consecutive victory at home, the Knicks took a half-game lead over Chicago in the race for first place in the Eastern Conference.

The ninth-place Pistons fell 1½ games behind Indiana in the battle for the conference's final playoff berth.

Lemieux has Pens inspired

■ NHL Playoff Preview

Mario Lemieux's tired. That means he's ready for the Stanley Cup playoffs — and so are the big, bad Pittsburgh Penguins.

"Everyone is excited because he's at the top of his game," said teammate Larry Murphy of Lemieux as the Penguins open defense of their Stanley Cup title in one of six opening-round games on Sunday.

When the New Jersey Devils face the two-time champions in Pittsburgh, they will be dealing with the hottest player and hottest team in the league.

Lemieux won the NHL scoring title with a tremendous homestretch after coming back from treatment for Hodgkin's disease, a form of cancer.

It was the big man's presence that inspired the Penguins' NHL record 17-game winning streak that ended with a 6-6 tie at New Jersey on Wednesday night. Lemieux has admittedly been tired, but, he said, "sometimes the more tired I feel, the better I play."

Lemieux is the key to a Penguins' "three-peat," and his teammates know it.

"What Mario is doing now is just scary," left wing Kevin Stevens said. "You know how a game looks when you sit high above and watch it? Mario seems like he's watching the game above everyone else."

The Penguins-Devils game will be shown by ABC-TV (1 p.m., EDT), marking the first time since 1980 that an NHL game other than an all-star game has been shown on national television in America.

To get on national TV, the NHL has created a crowded schedule of Stanley Cup playoff openers.

Usually, the Wales Conference would have four games on Sunday and the Campbell Conference four Monday.

But the Chicago-St. Louis Norris Division game (1 p.m., EDT) and the Los Angeles Kings-Calgary Flames Smythe game (3 p.m., EDT) will shift to Sunday for ABC's regional coverage. ESPN, the all-sports network partly owned by ABC, is buying the air time.

Other games on Sunday will feature the New York Islanders at the Washington Capitals in the Patrick and Buffalo at Boston and Montreal at Quebec in the Adams.

The Detroit-Toronto Norris Division game and the Vancouver-Winnipeg Smythe game will be played on Monday.

The Penguins haven't lost since March 5 and outscored the opposition 106-56 in their final 18 games. Their 17-game winning streak surpassed the 16-game streak of the 1981-82 New York Islanders.

"They look great, just great," Rangers general manager Neil Smith said after Pittsburgh beat New York twice last weekend. "They're cocky and they're riding a wave. They look as good as they want to be."

The Pittsburgh Penguins are primed for prime-time.

"Wait and see if anyone can beat us in the playoffs," said Stevens.

The sizzling Penguins roll into the playoffs with an unbeaten streak and an attitude.

"It would take a very good hockey team to beat us," Stevens said. "We just want to show people we are the best."

The Penguins are a team trying to become the NHL's next dynasty, and they seem to be on their way with such offensive stars as Lemieux, Rick Tocchet, Jaromir Jagr, Ron Francis and Stevens, and a money goaltender in Tom Barrasso.

Of course the Penguins, who won the President's Trophy with the best record in the league this season (56-21-7), still have a way to go to reach dynastic proportions.

The Montreal Canadiens once won five straight Cups from 1956-60, and then four in a row from 1976-79. The Islanders won four straight from 1980-83. The Edmonton Oilers won four Cups in five years from 1984-88 and five in seven.

The Penguins won the Cup last season with an 11-game winning streak at the end, wrapping it up with a four-game sweep of the Chicago Blackhawks.

"This is definitely the best team I've played on in my career," said Lemieux.

Orchestrating the show is coach Scotty Bowman, the winningest coach in NHL history. Last season, Bowman replaced cancer-stricken Bob Johnson and led the Penguins to the Cup, his sixth as a coach.

The Penguins are just about everyone's choice to come out of the Wales Conference and meet the winner of the Campbell for the Stanley Cup championship.

Meeting Darryl Sutter's defensive-oriented Blackhawks in the finals would not surprise anyone. But the Penguins might first have to deal with Brian Sutter's team in Boston first. Right now, the Bruins are playing the best hockey in the league other than the Penguins with a 16-2 record in their final 18 games.

Dallas Stars' Blueprint

The blueprint for the first season of Dallas' National Hockey League team:

THE CORE

Mike Modano (22): Center; the team's leading scorer and the cornerstone of marketing the team in Dallas. Mark Tinordi (25): One of the toughest defensemen in the league, must bounce back from injury. Jon Casey (31): Goaltender; still the key to real success. Russ Courtnall (27): Right wing; fast and smooth, he'll sell tickets in Dallas. Ulf Dahlen (26): Left wing; a solid defensive forward who can also score. Dave Gagner (29): Center; as tough as they come for 5-10, 180 pounds.

THE ROLE PLAYERS

Neal Broten (33): Center, no longer an asset as local hero, but still a valuable specialty teams player. Shane Churla (27): Right wing leads the team in penalty minutes and gives it a rough edge. Jim Johnson (30): A solid defenseman who provides experience and depth. Craig Ludwig (32): Defenseman; probably even tougher than Johnson.

THE YOUTH MOVEMENT

Derian Hatcher (20): Called by many the best young defenseman in the league. Mike Craig (21): A rough right wing who gives the North Stars some muscle up front. Richard Matvichuk (20): Defenseman; still growing, but now he has a year under his belt. Enrico Ciccone (23): Defenseman; if Tinordi returns, Ciccone may go back to Kalamazoo. Trent Klatt (21): Right wing; team's rookie of the year, but like Ciccone there may not be room next year.

ON THE BUBBLE

Replacement fighter wins

WASHINGTON, England (AP) — Steve Robinson, brought in as a last-minute substitute after champion Ruben Palacio tested positive for the AIDS virus, won the vacant World Boxing Organization featherweight title Saturday night with a split decision over John Davison.

The 24-year-old Welsh fighter became champion only one day after the WBO named him as a stand-in for Palacio, who was stripped of the crown after becoming the first holder of a world title to test positive for HIV.

"It's amazing, isn't it?" said Robinson, who was not rated in the top 10 by the WBO but used an effective display of counter-punching to outlast the 34-year-old home favorite in 12 rounds.

Robinson dedicated his victory to Palacio and said he would try to raise money for the Colombian fighter and his family.

Koreans, South Africans welcomed back to Boston

By Bert Rosenthal
AP Track Writer

BOSTON — Here come the South Africans. And here come the Koreans — again.

The Boston Marathon, a melting pot for distance runners, is welcoming the formerely exiled South Africans for the first time in the race's 97-year history and bringing back the Koreans for the first time in 43 years Monday.

"I've always wanted to run Boston," said David Tsebe, a 26-year-old South African who ran the fastest time in the world last year, 2 hours, 8 minutes, 7 seconds, in winning the Berlin Marathon.

"It's the big marathon.

"I first saw it on the news on television in 1991, and watched Hussein (Ibrahim Hussein of Kenya) win. Since then, I've wanted to run it."

Tsebe and all South Africans were barred from the Boston Marathon and all other international competition for more than 20 years because of the country's policy of apartheid.

Last year, the barrier was lifted, and the South Africans — finally given their chance to compete with the world's best — have proven they belong.

In addition to Tsebe winning at Berlin and finishing third in the Honolulu Marathon, a race he used as a prep for Boston, Joseph Skosana won the Taipei Marathon, Michael Scout won the Hokkaido Marathon, Lawrence Peu finished second in the Fukuoka Marathon in his marathon debut and Willie Mtolo won the New York City Marathon.

Scout, Peu and Xolile Yawa, a first-time marathoner but winner of several 10,000-meter races in South Africa, will join Tsebe in Monday's strong international field.

Mark Plaatjes, a native of South Africa and now a U.S. citizen living in Boulder, Colo., also is entered. He won the 1992 Los Angeles Marathon.

Peu said the South Africns have gotten motivation for the race by realizing they will be facing the world's best marathoners instead of just racing among themselves.

"We have been isolated for so long," he said.

"He wants to prove to the world he is the best and get the financial reward," said Jacques Malan, Peu's coach.

Marathon Facts

BOSTON (AP) — Facts & figures for Monday's 97th Boston Marathon:
Starting time— 11 a.m. CDT
1992 men's winner— Ibrahim Hussein, Kenya.
1992 women's winner— Olga Markova, Russia.
Men's course record-holder— Rob de Castella, Australia, 2 hours, 7 minutes, 51 seconds, 1986.
Women's course record-holder— Joan Benoit Samuelson, United States, 2:22.43, 1983.
Men's world record-holder— Belayneh Densimo, Ethiopia, 2:06:50, 1988.
Women's world record-holder— Ingrid Kristiansen, Norway, 2:21:06, 1985.
Prize money— Open division, $374,000, with $65,000 each to the first men's and women's finishers, and scaled down to $1,500 for each 15th-place finisher. Masters division, $35,500, with $9,000 each to the first men's and women's finishers, and scaled down to $1,000 for each fifth-place finisher. Wheelchair division, $30,500, with $9,000 each to the first men's and women's finishers, and scaled down to $2,250 for each third-place finishers. Total prize money, $440,000.
Number of starters— Approximately 8,800.
Television— no national telecast, only local.

Tsebe already has cashed in, off his Berlin victory.

"His earnings for running international marathons has shot up considerably," said Tony Longhurst, Tsebe's agent and manager.

With his Berlin earnings, Tsebe a black man — like the other South Africans in Monday's race — purchased a house in a white area.

"Before that, he was living in a hostel, sharing a room with one of his brothers," Longhurst said.

The marathon will give the South Africans another opportunity "to show their expression of freedom," Longhurst said.

"It will be another chance to show the world how good they are," he said. "They don't see this as just for the black people or just for the white people. They see it as a chance for the whole country — a chance to unite the entire country."

Korea, meanwhile, will be represented by one elite athlete — Kim Jae-Yong, 26, the 10th-place finisher at last year's Olympics. With a career-best of 2:09:30 in winning the 1992 Seoul Marathon, he is among Monday's favorites.

He is the first Korean in the race since 1950, when Kee Yong Ham led a Korean sweep of the first three places. Three years earlier, Yon Bok Suh won the Boston Marathon in 2:25:39, the only time the world record has been broken in the race's storied history.

Last year, another Korean, Hwang Young-Cho, won the Olympic marathon, the first time a Korean had won the gold medal since 1936, when Kee-Chung Sohn finished first. However, since Korea was under colonial occupation of Japan, Kee-Chung was required to compete for Japan and stand for the national anthem of another country.

The Korean tradition has not been lost on Kim.

"They were all my heroes when I was growing up," he said through a translator.

While the South Africans and Korean are considered among the top contenders, the favorite is the formidable Hussein.

The 34-year-old Kenyan, the two-time defending champion and three-time Boston winner, will be trying to join a select group of four-time champions. Only Clarence DeMar, a seven-time winner, and Gerard Cote of Canada and Bill Rodgers, each with four victories, have won the race as many as four times.

Other leading entries in the field of approximately 8,000 include Juma Ikangaa of Tanzania, a three-time runner-up and the 1989 New York City Marathon winner; Stephan Freigang, the 1992 Olympic bronze medalist from Germany; Hiromi Tanaguchi, the 1991 world champion from Japan; Steve Jones of Wales, the former world record-holder; Abebe Mekonnen of Ethiopia, the 1989 Boston winner; Steve Spence of Chambersburg, Pa., the top-ranked U.S. marathoner the past three years, and Joaquim Pinheiro of Portugal and Andres Espinosa of Mexico, the 2-3 finishers last year.

The women's field also has excellent quality.

It includes defending champion Olga Markova of Russia, Olympic gold medalist Valentina Egorova of Russia, 1984 Olympic winner and two-time Boston champion Joan Benoit Samuelson of aFreeport, Maine, 1991 world champion and Boston winner Wanda Panfil of Poland, 1985 Boston champion Lisa Weidenbach of Gig Harbor, Wash., and Kim Jones of Spokane, Wash., the top-ranked marathoner in the U.S. in 1986, 1989 and 1991.

A total of $440,000 in prize money is being offered, with $65,000 to the men's and women's first-place finishers.

Earnhardt burns up North Wilksboro

Associated Press

■ First Union 400

NORTH WILKESBORO, N.C. — Winston Cup points leader Dale Earnhardt rebounded from a poor run a day earlier to break the North Wilkesboro Speedway qualifying record Saturday.

Earnhardt, who had the 24th best time in the first day of qualifying for the First Union 400 NASCAR race, turned in a speed of 117.616 mph — more than 2 mph better than his Friday runs.

The Chevrolet driver broke the mark of 117.524 on the five-eighths mile track set by Rusty Wallace in the spring of 1989.

But since positions 1-20 were decided by the best speeds Friday, Earnhardt will start Sunday's race from the 21st spot.

"A day late and a dollar short," said Earnhardt, who got his car working in 50-degree temperatures. "It sure makes up for the way we ran yesterday."

Brett Bodine, driving a Ford, won the pole for the $640,000 event with a speed of 117.017.

Bodine and Earnhardt were the only drivers in the 34-car field to crack the 117 mph barrier.

Earnhardt holds a 47-point lead over Wallace in the race for the $3 million driving championship after six events.

"This has been a pretty good track for us through the years so maybe it will be again on Sunday," said Earnhardt, a five-time Winston Cup champion.

But not many drivers have had as much recent success at this short track than Bodine.

Sour stomach doesn't slow Shannon

Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, England — Shannon Miller's upset stomach Saturday didn't stop the American gymnast from adding the uneven bars title to the all-round gold she won at the World Championships.

It may even have helped.

Miller's coach, Steve Nunno, pulled the 16-year-old out of the vault final, so she could rest and concentrate on the uneven bars, one of her strongest events.

A puzzled buzz went around the National Exhibition Center when Miller did not appear for the vault final, won by Yelena Piskoun of Belarus with a score of 9.762.

But the 4-foot-9 Miller appeared for the uneven bars final to throw everything into her one routine of the day. She scored a 9.887, the best of either men's or women's competition with one day of the six-day championships to go.

"She wasn't feeling well. She had a sour stomach," Nunno said. "I felt that it was probably most important that rather than risk an injury on the vault we would save the energy she had and go for gold on the bars."

Miller, who won two silver and three bronze medals at the Barcelona Olympics, had just one thing on her mind.

"I certainly was hoping to win gold," Miller said. "It's the best routine I have done since I have been here. My coach made the decision to pull me out of the vault. It would have been harder to medal in that anyway."

Dominique Dawes won the silver with 9.800 to make it a first ever 1-2 finish for the United States in a world championship event.

"I was very excited when I won the silver medal since I made a small mistake on the routine," said Dawes, 16, of Silver Spring Md.

"My experience in the worlds has been very exciting and has helped my ranking."

Miller was not the only one to feel shaky.

Vitali Scherbo, who won six gold medals at last year's Olympics and captured the men's all-round title here, finished last on the pommel horse after two mistakes landed him back on the floor.

First, he broke the rules by touching the apparatus with his feet and had to stop. Then, he lost balance and slipped back onto the floor for an 8.125, easily the worst score of the eight finalists.

By contrast, North Korean Pae Gil Su seemed totally in control on the pommel and never wavered on the way to a score of 9.750 for the gold medal.

Germany's Andreas Wecker, who won bronze in the all-round final on Thursday, finished second in the pommel and won two silvers in one day. He also placed second on the rings, which was won by Yuri Chechi for Italy's first ever gold in the world championships.

Scherbo, from Belarus, placed second equal in the floor exercises behind Gregori Misiutin of Ukraine, who scored a 9.400 to win gold. Scherbo tied with Britain's Neil Thomas with 9.350 for the silver.

sions with the 49ers, declined comment Saturday, saying only he was pleased with the arrangement reached with Montana and looked forward to completing a deal with the 49ers.

But Poloicy held out the option that Montana could return to San Francisco.

"I think there's going to be some options presented and certain matters clarified ... There is a distinct possibility that Joe will remain in San Francisco," Policy said. "I won't speculate whether it's a possibility or a probability."

The Cardinals may not be entirely out of the picture either. Team officials indicated Saturday they were still interested and their offer of a first-round choice presumably was still on the table.

Montana and DeBartolo were scheduled to meet next week, probably Tuesday.

Johnson said Montana was confident the Chiefs and 49ers would come to an agreement. Johnson said "we have finalized a contract" with the Kansas City Chiefs and that now it "is incumbent on the Chiefs and 49ers" to reach agreement.

Kansas City and Phoenix had taken divergent strategies towards landing Montana, a two-time league MVP and three times MVP in the Super Bowl.

Phoenix negotiated with the 49ers, hoping to sign Montana after reaching a trade agreement. Kansas City went after Montana, hoping to sign him and then work out compensation with the 49ers.

Offering a first-round pick is less painful for Phoenix because the Cardinals have two.

Montana paid two visits to the Chiefs, working out for the team earlier this month. Peterson said club doctors have pronounced him fit.

Kansas City slumped in the second half of a season last year in which the organization felt it had legitimate Super Bowl hopes, losing in the first round of the playoffs to San Diego after finishing second to the Chargers in the AFC West.

The Chiefs last year signed Dave Krieg in Plan B, hoping he would give them a downfield passing attack.

Krieg operated efficiently, never missing a down while enduring 48 sacks. But the running game that Coach Marty Schottenheimer dearly loves and the offensive line were disappointments.

This year, Kansas City hired Paul Hackett, a close friend of Montana's, to be offensive coordinator and is to install a San Francisco-style offense.

If he arrives in Kansas City, Montana would play behind an offensive line that has lots of question marks. Tackle Derrick Graham is coming off serious knee surgery and guard Dave Lutz was lost to Green Bay in free agency.

Voters are to face three propositions

On the May 1st election ballot, voters are asked to decide on three proposed amendments to the Texas Constitution. All the amendments concern schools and address the future of education in the state, along with another consideration — the cost of government. Voters must carefully weigh the proposed benefits against the anticipated costs.

Proposition 1

Although there has been widespread opposition to the "Robin Hood" approach of redistributing education money from "wealthy" to "poor" school districts throughout the state, that is essentially what this plan would do.

Effectively, it would override the Texas Constitution's prohibition on a statewide property tax to impose a $1 tax that would create a "pool" of tax money from which funds would be redistributed to local school districts. To make matters worse, the county education district (CED) system that Senate Bill 351 had utilized to redistribute wealth was ruled unconstitutional last year because it effectively imposed a statewide property tax. There were good reasons for the authors of the Texas Constitution to include a prohibition against a state property tax; it should not be overriden.

Supporters of this constitutional amendment say that if it isn't approved by voters, local school districts throughout Texas could start to close after June 1 because of a lack of funds. That's a scare tactic. State Rep. Tom Craddick (R-Midland) has noted in the past, as have others, that the Legislature is considering several other alternatives to "Robin Hood" and have ample time to pass legislation before the June 1 deadline set by Judge Scott McCown.

The amendment now being proposed is unacceptable because:

— It violates the Texas Constitution by imposing a statewide property tax.

— It violates the long-standing practice of allowing local taxpayers to make monetary decisions for their local schools. With this change, local taxpayers would lose their constitutional right to authorize a taxing entity to impose taxes.

— Critics note that it entails a property tax increase of $2.4 to $2.7 billion. Information provided by Craddick's office notes that spending on public education rose from $5.7 billion to $17.2 billion since 1979, but it has not improved student SAT test scores.

— It would not help Texas avoid the need for a state income tax at a later time.

— It would not improve student performance. The amendment would only provide for redistribution of wealth and higher taxes. The amendment has the effect of raising the current ceiling on school taxes for maintenance and operations from $1.50 to $2.50 in most school districts, and allows the legislature to raise the current unconstitutional tax from 82 cents to $1.

What's more, this "Robin Hood" plan is NOT the only approach being considered. There are other better alternatives that can be enacted by legislators to take care of the school financing problem.

— Sen. John Leedom (R-Dallas) has proposed that legislators prioritize education by using the first tax money coming into the General Fund for the schools, much as funding for highways is handled. That seems like a realistic approach to giving the schools the money they need without a huge tax increase.

— State Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison has identified millions of dollars in savings that the Legislature could use to finance the schools if it will.

— Other approaches such as a voucher program, which was only four votes shy of being approved in the last session, and capping the amount of money that a school district can spend on administration offer possible solutions to the school financing fight.

Texans should not grab a straw offered them that could only lead to more taxation with no real improvement in student performance. Voters should say "no" to Proposition 1.

This proposed amendment, although confusing due to the way it is worded on the ballot, would in effect give local school districts the right to not comply with new educational mandates imposed, but not paid for, by the state.

If approved, local districts could avoid many educational reforms passed by the Legislature, but not funded. For example, the state-imposed class size limit requires school districts to hire a teacher and find classroom space anytime more than 22 students enroll in an early elementary (kindergarten through fourth grade) class. The intention of such mandates may be good in some situations, but in today's economy they can financially burden local school districts. The Legislature is effectively telling local districts, "You've got to do this — AND you've got to pay for it, too." That isn't right!

Voters should approve this amendment so local school districts can avoid such mandates.

Proposition 3

Under this proposition, once approved, a property poor school district could obtain funds guaranteed under the Permanent School Fund to build new school facilities. The amount guaranteed under the program would be $750 million.

In effect this would permit property poor school districts to build facilities, underwritten by the state, that could be forgiven if the district defaulted on repayment.

If the amendment is approved, it would alter the current practice of having individual districts be responsible for construction of their facilities and put the cost of those facilities instead on the backs of the state's taxpayers.

This would not be a good practice and voters should vote against this proposition.

Clinton works to create Iran policy

WASHINGTON — For the moment, President Bill Clinton has provided public and private indications that at least one element of his evolving foreign policy — the U.S. relationship with Iran — is distinctly different from the 12 years of Reagan-Bush flops.

Anderson

The Clinton administration view is that the Republican administrations strained to find particles of progress from Iran, and then placated that country through secret weapons sales, secret diplomacy and unrequited wishful thinking.

In the last two years of the Bush administration, the former Texas oilman allowed huge purchases of Iranian oil by the United States, which has directly contributed to an alarming $10 billion arms buildup in Iran.

Clinton is operating without a compass when it comes to Iran, since there is very little precedent from which to draw. The last three U.S. presidents have watched their administrations self-destruct in that part of the world. American foreign policy has been mortgaged on the emergence of the still-elusive moderates in the Iranian regime.

This tortured history explains why Clinton is being guided by some advisers who believe he should reach out to the opposition to the current Iranian regime headed by Hashemi Rafsanjani. A key test down the road will be whether Clinton ultimately plays his trump card by ending American purchases of Iranian oil, and seeking United Nation sanctions for Iran's human-rights abuses, arms buildup and support of international terrorism.

As status quo as Clinton's foreign policy appears to be in Haiti and Bosnia, there are indications that a new trail is being blazed regarding Iran, at least rhetorically. During a recent Senate hearing, Secretary of State Warren Christopher branded Iran as an "international outlaw" for its support of terrorism and feverish acquisition of weapons of mass destruction.

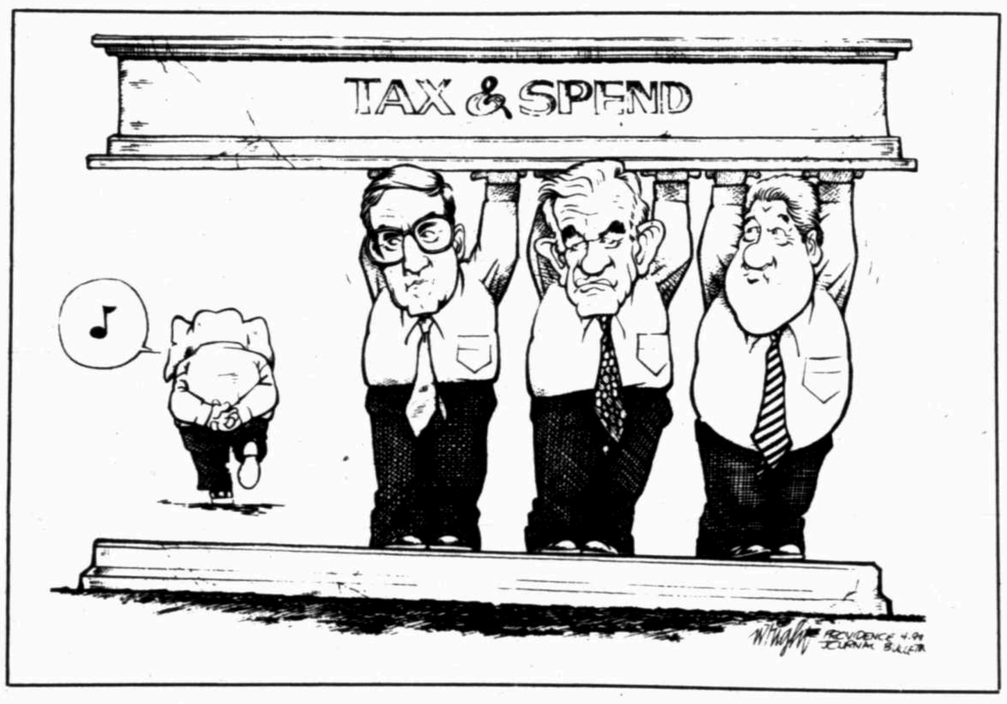

For Christopher, it's partly personal. He had to deal with Iranian hard-liners as the chief American negotiator in winning the release of Americans held hostage during the Carter administration. More important for a veteran such as Christopher, the animus is fueled by America's closest Arab ally, President Hosni Mubarak of Egypt. Mubarak has informed the United States that he believes Iran is the chief foreign power funding and goading fundamentalists in Egypt into overthrowing his (Mubarek's) government.

Clinton is still sounding conciliatory in public. In a interview on CBS recently, he said he "wished Iran would come into the family of nations." Privately, Clinton's core fears about Iran found expression in a private communication he sent last December to Massoud Rafavi, leader of the most important and largest Iranian opposition group, the People's Mojahedin. Rafavi has been building a large Iranian military force capable of overthrowing Rafsanjani, and is headquartered now in Iraq, on the Iranian border.

"U.S. foreign policy cannot be divorced from the moral principles most Americans share," Clinton began the private letter to the rebel leader. "We cannot disregard how other governments treat their own people. Democracies are more reliable trading partners than dictatorships. They are more likely to protect the environment and to abide by international law."

Then came the critical sentence in the Clinton letter: "We should regard increased funding for democratic assistance as a legitimate part of our national security budget." Clinton the politician left it vague whether this meant he would support covert funding now or assist in the reconstruction of Iran if the government were headed by the Mojahedin and if they were democratic.

RUSSELL BAKER

Unheavenly dirt wipes out Godliness

Every day brings a new "study," sometimes called a "survey," meant to prove that "the situation" is worse than ever. Here's one, for instance, from Sunday's New York Times, about a decline in the nation's housecleaning habits.

Baker

A surveyor in College Park, Md., has found that in 1985 women spent 90 minutes fewer per week cleaning house than women did in 1965. Men during that period increased their housecleaning time by only 60 minutes per week. In short, over a 20-year span, the American household suffered a 30-minute-per-week loss of dusting, mopping and scrubbing.

Filthy, depressing news? You bet, and it gets worse. In a more recent telephone survey, 43 percent of the women who didn't hang up said they were doing less housecleaning than they did five years ago and only 21 percent said their husbands were doing more.

Mary Ellen Pinkham, author of a syndicated household-advice column, told The Times: "The American home is getting dirtier. People have better things to do with their time than clean."

One would like to know what these "better things" are and whether they include hanging on the telephone telling strangers you no longer bother to scrape the fuzz out from under the refrigerator.

People brought up in the school that taught cleanliness was next to Godliness are likely to become testy when told there are "better things to do than clean." Yes, to be sure, income-producing work would be a little better; in the cleanliness-next-to-Godliness school, work was the path to Heaven.

The power of the cleanliness-next-to-Godliness philosophy makes people do strange things about housecleaning. Everybody, for instance, is familiar with the phenomenon of cleaning up for the cleaning woman.

In New York we did not have a cleaning woman. We had a cleaning man. It made no difference. Mornings of the day he was due to work we rose early and worked ourselves to a frazzle to get the apartment cleaned up for the cleaning man.

We couldn't bear for the cleaning man to have a low opinion of us, to think we really needed somebody to clean for us, didn't want him to think we were so remote from Godliness that we were unworthy to have him work for us.

In my childhood the connection between cleanliness and Godliness was such that sundry aunts of mine simply sealed off the greater portions of their houses once they had been cleaned.

Parlors, dining rooms, stairways to upstairs bedrooms were all forbidden turf for children, and even to most adults on all but the most sober dress-up, Sunday-best occasions.

If some natural necessity forced a visiting child to ask permission to enter this closed territory and mount the stairs to the overhead plumbing, he had to take off his shoes before leaving the kitchen and wash his hands in the kitchen sink.

In the U.S. Navy one encountered men — grown men, if ensigns can be so classified — who were half mad about cleanliness. The Navy might exist to carry out awful and even death-delivering missions, but it was also committed to Godliness and proved its devotion by dispatching ensigns to sniff out undusted spaces and make life miserable for the heathens who had failed to dust them.

How many of us, not blessed with an Annapolis education, are aware that a white glove is the perfect instrument for detecting the slightest hint of dust on the top of a door frame?

Such evidence was conclusive proof that this room was inhabited by people too remote from Godliness to be allowed to leave the premises for a weekend on the town.

GEORGE WILL

Professional reformers produce activism

WASHINGTON — In just three months the Clinton administration has defined itself as boring and annoying, an interesting combination of traits.

Will

The administration is on the cutting edge of 30 years ago, the decade formative for the president and many of his people, the 1960s, when they were young and modern. And it is confirming Oscar Wilde's warning: "Nothing is so dangerous as being too modern. One is apt to grow old-fashioned quite suddenly." Furthermore, by proposing the hugest tax increase in American history as a prelude to Mrs. Clinton's health care taxes, and by revving up the government's already humming regulatory engine, the administration is construing last November's vote as a mandate to increase the public's intimacy with government.

Even Washington's new excitement has a recycled, here-we-go-again flavor to it. The Washington Post offers yet another breathless article of the "There's pepperoni in the West Wing!" genre style of journalism, detailing the breakneck pace of life at the White House — late hours fueled by delivered pizzas. The Post reports: "Ira Magaziner, who is busy creating a new national health care system. . . ."

He must be busy if he is "creating" a new one-seventh of the American economy. Of course neither he nor anyone else is doing any such thing. Rather, he and others are planning a further infusion of political supervision into that one-seventh. Such language (". . . busy creating a new national health care system . . .") is part cause and part effect of the parochialism of this city, where people really think government officials work such wonders.

In 1967, when Clinton and much of his administration were in college, Pat Moynihan was dispelling the myth of Washington wonders, describing a persisting pattern:

"The bright idea, the new agency, the White House swearing-in of the first agency head, the shaky beginning, the departure 18 months later of the first head, replacement by his deputy, the general slipping out of sight, a Budget Bureau reorganization, a name change, a new head, this time from the civil service, and slowly obscurity covers all. Who among us today could state with certainty exactly what did become of the Area Redevelopment Administration, that early, shining creation of the New Frontier?"

The shining creations of governmental activism of the 1960s, unlike those of the 1930s, had few glittering consequences because they were not produced by the sort of broad, powerful political forces that produced, say, Social Security and unemployment insurance. What, then, produced much of the activism of the 1960s? The same force that is producing the activism of the 1990s — a class of professional reformers.

Bred to life in the public sector, the private sector is as foreign to many of them as Mongolia. Their careers do not just depend on the extension of state power, their careers are that extension. They believe that they, being experts, know best. And the fact that there is not much public demand for most of the activism that the experts want is itself proof of the need for the activism. And it is proof of the expertise of the experts who discern the need. They think people need to become wards of government experts precisely because people do not understand what the experts understand.

Hence Clinton's busy beavers are unsleeping. They think there is much "neglect" (how does a neglectful government spend $1.5 trillion a year?) to be rectified. So intense is the administration's determination to regulate America to perfection, that the federal government, according to the Wall Street Journal, will monitor whether cable television companies are answering customers' telephone calls within 30 seconds.

The Journal notes that long ago and far away, during the campaign, when "reinventing government" was Clinton's mantra, there was much talk about market-based alternatives to bureaucratic regulation. But so far, the Journal reports, "the administration has generally stuck with conventional regulatory tools: detailed rules and more inspectors."

Brown is successful community leader

A successful leader is not measured by the number he leads but the number he serves. Dale Brown fits this definition of a successful leader.

Dale Brown has served in a number of capacities, from being an elder at Golf Course Road Church of Christ, to being a trustee for Abilene Christian University and most recently, Dale and his family were chosen as Honorary Family for the 1993 Families Matter Walk-a-thon. This is the annual fund drive for the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children.

With Candidate Brown's professional background and the above mentioned community involvement, he will serve the City of Midland to the best of his abilities. Please join me in voting for Dale Brown, City Council at-large.

Brown is dependable person with integrity

I would like to take this opportunity to visit with you regarding our friend Dale Brown, who, as you know, is running for City Council, at large.

I have had the privilege of Dale's friendship for several years. I have worked with him in business and also in his work at Golf Course RoadChurch of Christ where he is an elder. He is an honest, dependable person of the highest integrity and I feel he will always have the best interest of the community in mind.

Please consider Dale Brown for your city councilman.

Conservatives should consider Joe Barton

I would like to encourage Midlanders to support Joe Barton in the upcoming senatorial election. He is a conservative congressman with a lifetime conservative rating of 95 percent. He has been endorsed by such noted conservatives as Tom Landry and such organizations as American Conservative Union, National Federation of Independent Business, American Family Association, Texas Christian Coalition, Texas Eagle Forum and others. He has consistently voted for a Balanced Budget Amendment and against raising taxes. He has consistently voted against federally funded pornography through National Endowment for the Arts and against federally funded abortions.

I am aware that Kay Bailey Hutchison is being endorsed by the Reporter-Telegram, but I am not sure that everyone understands where she stands on some of the conservative issues, specifically abortion. In January of 1993, Ms. Hutchison sought and received the endorsement of the WISH List, an organization of pro-abortion Republican women. To be endorsed, one must be a Republican, a woman, and pro-abortion. On their questionnaire, when asked in writing, "Are you pro-choice?" she checked the "Yes" box. For those who feel strongly about this issue, I feel that this information could be important in determining their vote.

I also think that it is important to realize that should Ms. Hutchison win, her position as treasurer of the State of Texas would be open for a liberal appointment by Gov. Richards, perhaps someone who would promote a state income tax rather than oppose it strongly as Ms. Hutchison has done.

I urge conservatives to carefully consider voting for Joe Barton for U.S. Senator.

Brown has proven he's qualified, good leader

I believe that Dale Brown will make a very good city councilman. I think that Brown has the qualifications that we need in the leaders of government. I have known Brown for approximately 20 years and have found him to be of the highest moral standards, sound judgment, and sincere interest for the betterment of all concerned parties.

Brown has proven himself to be a successful business person. He has raised his family here in Midland and has proven to be a good leader, father, and husband.

Brown does take time to listen to each side of an issue then proceeds to make his decision after weighing all the facts. He would never berate an opponent or stoop to sleazy campaigning. He is a very positive person with a good outlook for the future of not only Midland but of our state and nation as well.

I urge each of you to consider Dale Brown as you cast your vote for councilman-at-large positions in the upcoming election.

Money is not answer to education problem

On May 1, Texas voters will be faced with three constitutional amendments on the ballot. All three are related to education and all of them have the potential to affect our taxes.

Amendment No. 1 is the so-called Robin-Hood plan to make constitutional the redistribution of taxes from one county to another. The plan allows the Legislature, not your school district, to raise the tax rate 22 percent from $0.82 to $1. When fully implemented this has the potential to add $2.4 billion to our property taxes statewide.

Why are the governor, lieutenant governor, several school employee unions and other related organizations supporting this huge tax and power grab? Unfortunately, I think none of their reasons for support have anything to do with what should be everyone's concern and that is the education of our children. Nothing in this plan addresses any of the easily identified problems in Texas education, such as record low SAT scores, embarrassing failure rates for minimum standards tests, high dropout rates and violence in our schools.

Money is not the answer but it is the solution the establishment and the bureaucrats always support. It gives them more power and sweeps the problems under the rug for as long as taxpayers believe they have done something to cure the ills of public education.

The truth is that scores have declined while property taxes have increased statewide by 85 percent in the last eight years. It is an insult to our intelligence for the governor and her crew to believe we will fall for this thinly disguised plan to make property taxes so onerous that an income tax will sound good by comparison. With an easy to increase income tax, the politicians will have a bottomless source of revenue to squander.

Texas government does not need more tax revenues. In fact, state spending has increased by over 25 percent since Gov. Richards was elected. For the next two years budget, the state has available $10 billion in new revenue. The finance bill passed by the Texas Senate spends all of the $10 billion, making a 40 percent increase in spending in four years.

You should know, if Robin Hood passes, they will raise and redistribute $400 million of additional tax revenue over the next two years. That is only 4 percent of the $10 billion of new revenue that was available before the Legislature spent it. Do you really believe we have a crisis due to shortage of tax revenues or do you believe we have a governor and Legislature that are spending out of control?

Don't believe the scare tactic that schools will close if Amendment 1 fails. The Legislature will have at least 30 days before the court's June 1 deadline to come up with a realistic solution from the many alternatives already on the table. They have passed much more difficult legislation in less time than that. Send them a message that you have had enough. Vote NO on Amendment No. 1.

Amendment No. 2 prohibits the state from mandating school expenditures without providing funding. It should be supported.

Amendment No. 3 provides for $750 million of bonds to be issued for capital projects in "poorer" districts. It sounds good but it has a serious flaw in that it does not require repayment of more than 50 percent of any project's cost. It is a giveaway program and should be defeated.

Brown is dedicated to community fairness

The people of Midland have the opportunity to make a positive change in our city government in May. An outstanding man has stepped forward to represent all of Midland as a councilman-at-large.

Dale Brown is a man of integrity. His wisdom and skill have made him a successful businessman and leader in our community. Dale Brown wants to make Midland a better place for us all. His dedication to fairness and ability to take a stand is what our community wants and needs in city hall.

As you prepare to vote on May 1, I urge you to vote for Dale Brown. Your vote for Dale Brown is a vote for a better Midland.

Brown is candidate to support, be proud of

It is so refreshing to finally be able to feel good about a candidate who is running for public office and feel proud about giving him your support.

The candidate I am referring to is Dale Brown, who is running for an at-large position on Midland City Council. I have been privileged to have Dale as a friend for almost 10 years now. In that time, I have worked closely with him in various church ministries and some business dealings as well, which has allowed me to witness first hand his great leadership abilities. These abilities include being able to recognize strengths and weaknesses in others, as well as in himself, and the ability to work one on one and as a team member. His priorities are in line and he knows what's important.

These qualities and so much more are what makes Dale such a successful family man and business man, and why I am encouraging all Midlanders to elect Dale Brown to our City Council.

Cuevas, Morrow are worthy of city's trust

It has been a long time since I have voted FOR someone instead of against someone in a political election, but this year I am very happy and pleased to vote FOR Bill Morrow and Jose Cuevas. These two gentlemen have shown themselves to be worthy of the trust of the citizens of Midland. In all their dealings on the City Council they have been informed and fair; they have exhibited great integrity and have given the council balance.

Absentee voting began April 12 from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., at the Elections Office at 709 W. Washington (where we get our car tags), and continues through April 27 (April 26 and 27 from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.). Election day is Saturday, May 1. Please exercise your right to vote and vote for the two councilmen who will work for all Midlanders Jose Cuevas and Bill Morrow.

Midland is fortunate Morrow is candidate

I have known Bill Morrow for a number of years. I feel that the City of Midland is fortunate to have a person with the intelligence, integrity and interest that Morrow has willing to serve on our City Council or any other office.

Please vote for Bill Morrow for councilman at-large.

There's more than one side to weapon story

I am the father of the 16-year-old male student who was arrested on March 29 for having a loaded .357 revolver on campus at Coleman High School. He is currently in custody at Culver Youth Center on felony charges. He is being processed for expulsion from Midland Independent School District (MISD). He will go through the judicial process and will be found guilty of the charges. He did not deny the charges, he did have the loaded weapon.

From what I understand, this is the eighth incident involving guns this year — the second such incident in two weeks. As the parent of this boy, I share that this is a devastating experience upon me and my wife. At this moment, I am consoled by the fact that no one was hurt. As I read the accounts in the local newspaper it did not seem real that I was reading about my pride and joy, my son. I am currently doing some soul searching and I am wondering all the "whys?" The one thing that is for certain is that my son has done something that is considered to be terrible. He has committed a crime and he will pay for it. My personal attitude is that anyone who brings a gun to school is indeed a coward, and I don't believe I have changed my opinion now because of what my son has chosen to do. I try not to offer excuses for my son even though I so desperately want to reach out and protect him. Maybe that is because I love my son and will be there for him as he must accept the consequences of his behavior.

According to the statements in the newspaper made by "school officials" my son stated to them he had the gun for "protection." Kind of makes you wonder why a 16-year-old boy would take a gun to school for protection, doesn't it? Several months ago, my son was involved in a fight with a young adult. During this physical altercation my son was stabbed three times in the stomach. This was serious. This incident was processed by the local Midland Police Department as aggravated assault, a felony crime. We encouraged my son to identify and sign a complaint against the perpetrator.

After several visits with the Midland detectives, my son made a photo I.D. of a suspect and was willing to go to court and testify against this individual. As far as I was concerned, I was impressed that this boy of mine was willing to work within the system and go through the full legal process, disregarding peer pressure and subsequent name calling.

However, what seemed to be the right thing to do has turned into a parent's nightmare. The person that stabbed my son is still out on the streets and has caused mental anguish for my son and his friends. My son confided in me several times and asked why the Midland Police Department had not arrested the "suspect." I keep assuring him that the detective in charge was doing all he could to apprehend the individual. The stabbing took place during the latter part of January and here it is the beginning of April 1993.

Dismayed, I called upon the Midland detective and he told me that we needed to call him whenever we saw the "suspect." I spoke to an investigator in the district attorney's office and was told that "I know how you are feeling and I'll try to do something about the situation." It seemed all I have been getting was a bunch of rhetoric but yet no action.

My 16-year-old boy explained to me that he had done his part and it seemed to him that he was just another minority individual from the south side who was stabbed by another minority individual from the south side and that it was not important to the police or to anyone else. This was certainly not the message I conveyed to my son. I guess he did his own figuring out of the situation. I can not change my adolescent son's perception on how he feels about what has happened to him. It may be that the three stab wounds to the stomach has made him a little paranoid and perhaps a little fearful for his life. The school is not to blame here; as a matter of fact, I commend the staff of Viola Coleman for interceding in this matter as quickly as they were aware of the "crime."

Currently, I am disappointed with the Midland Police Department detective who "handled" my son's stabbing. I feel he left my son out in the cold to fend for himself. I don't for one moment minimize my son's "criminal behavior" but I suggest that there are some ethical issues that some other folks need to check out for themselves.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

Because we cannot research and verify all information in letters, by publishing them we neither imply nor guarantee the accuracy of information stated by writers.

Letters should be sent to: The Editor, Midland Reporter-Telegram, P.O. Box 1650, Midland 79702.

WHOM TO WRITE

Following is a list of the names and addresses of various state and federal officials Midlanders may wish to contact from time-to-time:

PRESIDENT: Bill Clinton (D), The President, The White House, 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., Washington, D.C. 20500 or call (202)456-1414.

GOVERNOR: Ann Richards (D), State Capitol Building, Austin, Texas 78701 or call (512)463-2000.

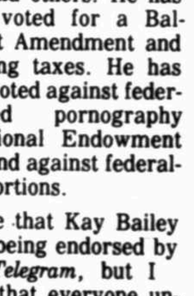

REPRESENTATIVE: Henry Bonilla (R), District 23, 1529 Longworth, Washington, D.C., 20515 or call (202)225-4511.

NEW YORK — We are in a state of undeclared war with Serbia but we are not trying realistically to win it.

In the first North Atlantic Treaty Organization combat mission since the Atlantic alliance was formed in 1949, U.S., French and Dutch fighter planes started last Monday to enforce the "no-fly zone" over Bosnia. At the same time, the Serbs unleashed a vicious attack, massacring men, women and children in violation of the cease-fire that the Serbian government suddenly renounced.

Hearst

With U.N. Security Council approval, the NATO fighter aircraft began patrolling the skies over Bosnia at 2 p.m. April 12. Within minutes, Serbia launched intensive artillery attacks on the Bosnian capital of Sarajevo. At 2:15 p.m. a 65-minute artillery attack began against the besieged Muslim enclave of nearby Srebrenica, where the U.N. military commander, Lt. Gen. Philippe Morillon, had been trying to protect 60,000 civilians from being slaughtered by Serbian forces. The brave French general was barred from Srebrenica moments before the attack. The barrage blasted civilian targets in the center of the town, killing at least 56 people, including 15 children, and wounding more than 90 others. As I write this on Friday, resistance in the town was collapsing.

What did the NATO forces do about it? Nothing. Why? Because the NATO fighter pilots' hands were tied behind their backs by political considerations that amounted, in effect, to the same type of appeasement of Adolf Hitler by British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain that precipitated World War II.

The 50 or 60 NATO aircraft pilots patrolling the "no fly zone" cannot fire on ground installations even if they are attacked from them by missiles or anti-aircraft fire. If any unauthorized military or civilian aircraft enters the forbidden zone, the NATO pilots can only waggle their wings or contact the intruder on international radio frequencies to encourage it to leave. If the intruder ignores the request, the NATO planes may fire warning shots. If that, too, is ignored, the NATO pilots are permitted to fire directly at the plane. But civilian planes that violate the ban will not be shot down.

These incredible restrictions have encouraged the Serbian huns to continue the massacre of Bosnian men, women and children. The Serbs have ignored U.S. and U.N. warnings that "very, very tough sanctions" would be imposed against Serbia if it does not move to a new peace agreement soon. British ex-prime minister and now Lady Margaret Thatcher, addressing the House of Lords Wednesday, accused Europe of being "an accomplice to massacre by spurning all forms of military intervention." She said it was shameful that the European Community has not done more to stop the atrocities.

New York Times columnist Anthony Lewis wrote that President Clinton has "a profound stake in the horror of Bosnia." He added: "Belief in American power has for many years been the most effective deterrent to international aggression. It is more crucial than ever in an increasingly chaotic world, a world with only one superpower.

Closed campus won't solve any problems

Whoever thought up the idea of having closed campus during lunch at the high schools must have shunned away the side effects in this plan.

Just where do you think the people are going to eat? Don't even try to suggest the cafeteria. Do you think that the connotation that the society of today takes to the cafeteria is a great place to eat where the cool coterie hangs out. The student's idea of the cafeteria is a place where you can't look at the food much less eat it. The good for ya' fruit drink tastes like bogwater, and the only people that go their are people with three-digit numbers.

What's that you say, what about the youth center? Ha. Five booths and a guy that plays loud music. That place will be jammed pack with standing room only. It will become a hostile environment and a playground for pickpockets everywhere. What about the security officers? Sure all two of them can walk around and cohort with the workers at the youth center. They don't even carry guns!

Oh, but the children will be late to class if you have open campus! Wa-wa-wa. If you think for one second that they'll get to class any sooner with closed campus remember this: The lines! Yeah youkind of forgot about those along with the loss of business that the nearby food merchants will suffer. What happened to "Buy The Basin!" Try strolling into your nearest Taco Bell and imagining if there were no kids there. It kind of reminds you of all of the people that bet money on the Mavericks.

I do hope you give this issue more thought and I hope my letter has given you more insight into the matter that you obviously overlooked.

What if school board was cooped up all day?

Mrs. Fuhrmann's 2nd grade class has been talking about the school board's idea of the 45-minute extension and the elimination of recess.

We have concluded that all the class is not in favor of the idea, for some of these reasons: Kids need exercise; kids need fresh air. It is good for kids to get to play and some kids need more playtime and they are thinking about taking it away. I think it is best for some kids to get more schooling because they just don't learn as quickly, but on the other hand some kids do. Here are some reasons why: Some kids have activities right after school. It would be even worse to be cooped up in a building with no recess! Imagine the school board members were a group of very intelligent kids. How would they like it?

ECISD favors all 3 propositions

■ Teachers, administrators disagree on Proposition 2.

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

Ector County school board trustees are in favor of voting "yes" on all three propositions related to school funding in the May 1 election.

The propositions are intended to help equalize funding for public schools, require the state to fund future state mandates, and to issue bonds to help school districts construct new facilities.

The Ector County Independent School District Board of Trustees agreed at a recent meeting that passage of Proposition 1, the Equalization Amendment, "will help equalize school district funding and bring Texas one step closer toward finally solving the school finance equity crisis."

The proposition will allow the state to shift a limited amount of funds from property wealthy school districts and redistribute them to property poor school districts in a form of recapture.

Midland ISD Board Trustees were divided on the issue. They voted 4-3 to delete Propositions 1 and 3 from a resolution calling for support of the amendments.

"Regardless of whether Amendment 1 passes, the Legislature must still pass a school finance bill that will distribute state dollars to school districts," according to a news release from TEPSA (Texas Elementary Principals and Supervisors Association). The organization said, "The biggest obstacle to writing a finance plan is limited state dollars. On April 5, the House approved an

MC student overcomes his dyslexia

By Myra Lee Salcedo

Jerry Gomez saw his hopes of playing football and succeeding in high school dashed in his sophomore year. His grades, and the "no-pass, no play" rule resulted in his being dropped from the Lee High School varsity football team.

Jerry Gomez

"I knew something was wrong. I didn't know what. Teachers said I was lazy, slow and I just wouldn't try," the 22-year-old said.

The student found himself stuck at the back of the classroom. He was angry and tried to apply himself, but soon found he was falling behind his classmates.

And spelling always tripped him up.

"I would be trying to take notes and get stuck trying to spell a word. By the time I figured it out, I would be at least three sentences behind. It was just a terrible struggle," Gomez said, shaking his head at the memory.

Nonetheless, in the absence of a state-mandated exit-level exam, Gomez graduated from LHS in 1990 — two years behind his twin sister.

His twin began leaving him behind academically in the first grade.

"I repeated the first grade and she went on," Gomez said. "My parents knew something was wrong. But they expected the teachers to know what it was."

From the first grade on, the student found himself being punished for bad grades. But the humiliation didn't really set in until his sophomore year, when

Church to hold service to dedicate additions

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

After a decade of hard work, First United Methodist Church is holding a 10:15 a.m. Dedication Service April 25 for its $4.8 million addition. The service includes a "Debt-Free Celebration."

'It's a great feeling to have it built and to have it paid for," said Ted Johnson, chairman of the building committee. "It's something we've needed in that church for a number of years, and it's taken a lot of long hard work for the congregation and the committees to get to this point."

The project began more than a decade ago with a group established to study the church's needs.

"We must have spent at least two years on a study of our needs," said Johnson, who has been a member of First UMC since the 1960s.

"This committee reported back to the administrative board, who runs the church. The board appointed a building committee and charged them to build these facilities. This building committee had the plans drawn, and they presented those back to the administrative board and were accepted. Then we were charged to build it."

The construction, completed in three phases, includes an underground thermal unit; an elevator; a music department including offices, rehearsal halls, robe storage and library; lower level renovation; fellowship hall; kitchen and serving area; 25 additional classrooms for children, youth and adults; an activities center featuring, among others, a regulation basketball, volleyball, badminton and roller skating; an exercise room; a locker room; and a new children's playground, the Joan Weir Memorial Playground.

Johnson recalled the first banquet held in the new fellowship hall, which was built during the second phase of construction.

"We fill it up. Our first banquet, we didn't have enough room. Everybody thought we were building it too big."

Johnson is particularly proud of the thermal storage unit.

"To my knowledge, we are the only people in Midland who have a thermal storage, and that's way ahead on cool-

Exchange teachers to return to Germany

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

GREENWOOD — While most Greenwood students only have to go a few miles to reach home and summer vacation, two of their teachers will be flying thousands of miles in June to be with family and friends.

Uwe and Anke Borstelmann, who have lived and taught Texas for two years, will be returning to their home of Kiel, a German town near the border with Denmark.

"We definitely miss a lot about home," Mrs. Borstelmann said. "Especially our family. We haven't seen them in so long."

The Borstelmanns came to the United States as a part of a teacher exchange program between Texas and the German state of Berlin called STEP. The program allows participating Texas school districts to send teachers to Germany for three weeks during the summer and then the same number of German teachers came to Texas for one to three years of teaching.

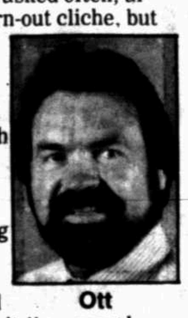

"The only problem is that most American teachers don't speak German, so they only go for the three weeks in the summer," Borstelmann said.

The couple applied for the program in January 1990. The application process included

GARY OTT

Is it size of the pond that makes the man?

Ott

It is one of those questions that is asked often, almost to the point of becoming a worn-out cliche, but nonetheless there it was rearing its familiar head again the other night.

A group of us were sitting around a large table talking, though some less-charitable souls might label it "pontificating" — about whether it is best to be a big fish in a little pond or a little fish in a big pond.

"If you don't at least try to be a success in a big market, then you'll never know if you could have made it," reasoned one proponent of the "big pond" theory. "I'd hate to look back on my life and say, 'Gee, I wonder if I could have done more.' "

"That's nonsense," a "little pond" supporter said. "If you're happy where you are, why should you feel guilty for staying put? You're operating under the rather arrogant assumption that 'bigger is better.' That's not necessarily the case. Some people are quite content living a modest life in a small town environment. If that's the case, so be it. Who are you to say they are a failure?"

"I'm not saying they are a failure," Mr. Big Pond snapped. "I'm just suggesting that there is an inherent desire in all of us to prove — to ourselves as well as to others — that we are good enough to be considered the best in our chosen field. And right or wrong, that usually involves proving yourself at the highest level, which means in a big city, or, as you put it, in a big pond."

"But you're assuming too much. If a person is a happy then he IS a success. The size of the city — or pond — has nothing to do with it."

"You're wrong. That person might think he's happy, and indeed he might very well be at the time, but the day will come when he will question his decision to remain in that environment. At some point, he's going to wonder what could have been. It's human nature. If for no other reason, we need to satisfy our ego. We want to be perceived by our peers as being the best, and, again, that means moving up to the big leagues. That's just the way it is in the real world."

I was enjoying the debate, because frankly it is one of those issues that leaves me totally baffled. I agree with both sides.

Happiness should be the ultimate goal for everyone, and there is absolutely no reason why a person should regret his decision to remain in a place that has made him happy. Indeed, very few of us will ever achieve true happiness, so it seems rather absurd to criticize someone who has found it and then had enough sense to recognize his good fortune.

Still, I understand the "ego" argument, too. There is a need in all of us to prove ourselves. And we appropriations bill that increased state funding for public schools by $631 million."

FAVOR: Teachers, board disagree on Proposition 2

Unfortunately, TESPA notes that more than $1 billion new state monies will be needed to offset the projected 70,000 new students expected to enroll in Texas public schools in the next two years.

MISD and ECISD trustees voted unanimously in favor of Proposition 2, which would prohibit the state from enacting future state mandates without providing funding for them.

"Proposition 2 brings the state a step closer toward adequately funding Texas' public education system by ensuring that the state help pay for the programs it requires," said Jim Nelson, president of the ECISD board. "Adequate state funding is necessary if we are ever going to ease the tax burden that's been passed on to local school districts and their property taxpayers."

Nelson noted that Proposition 2 affects only mandates enacted after Dec. 31, 1993. "Current state mandates, such as the 22:1 class size ratio for certain elementary grades and the teacher salary schedule, aren't affected by this proposition," Nelson said.

Texas Association of School Boards President Charles Lowry, said, "For years, school boards across Texas have been forced to increase property taxes in a scramble to find money to pay for new and continuing state-mandated programs. Proposition 2 will help ensure that the Legislature stops passing the buck to local taxpayers and starts passing the bucks along with the programs they require. If the mandate is worth doing, it's worth paying for."

Members of state teacher organizations, and teachers who are members of Midland chapters of those organizations disagree.

They are urging their members and fellow educators to vote "yes" on Propositions 1 and 3, and "no, on 2.

Passing Proposition 2 "will make it almost impossible for the state to set standards for school districts, and it will place issues like salary, due process, sick leave, planning and preparation time in the hands of local school boards," according to a news release from the Texas State Teachers Association.

'Unless we want to come up with a state income tax, recapture is the best thing legislators have come up with.'

—Horace Griffin
LHS teacher

Steve Buck, a Lee High School teacher and coach, and president of Midland Federation of Teachers, said, "We have to have mandates to get things done. We would never have had House Bill 72 reforms if school boards and administrators were doing their jobs. As a result of mandates we have smaller class sizes, better reading programs, and exit-level exams. If we are going to expect excellence, we are going to have to pay for it."

The ECISD board is also urging support for Proposition 3, which would allow the state to issue up to $750 million in state general obligation or revenue bonds to help finance school facilities.

The resolution states passage of the proposition would provide "needed relief to growing school districts and address the court's concerns that the state provide for school facilities needs."

"Unless we want to come up with a state income tax, recapture is the best thing legislators have come up with," said LHS teacher Horace Griffin, a member of TSTA and Texas Classroom Teachers Association.

LEARN: Dyslexic student is bound for dental school

he lost his position on the football team and all his dreams for success in high school came screeching to a halt.

"If it weren't for my church family, I would have dropped out of school, but they encouraged me to stay in school," said Gomez, who now serves as a youth sponsor for Holy Trinity Episcopal Church.

Later, Gomez attempted a college course or two before giving up altogether on getting an education.

Then one day when Gomez was watching a Cosby Show rerun, a light went on.

"The show was about the son, Theo, starting college. He always scraped by in school. Then in college, he got into real trouble," Gomez said. "He got tested for dsylexia. They found the problem, cured it and it was over. It made it out to be so easy to fix."

Gomez decided he probably had dyslexia. The affliction is unrelated to basic intellectual capacity, but causes peculiarities in the brain's organizational pattern for handling words or letters. Translating symbols into letters is often a problem for students with these tendencies.

Teachers recognize dyslexia as a learning disability. Many students diagnosed with dyslexia have learned to read with the Alphabetics Phonics program. The program is now being taught in Midland public schools.

Gomez found out about a former Midland public school teacher, Margie Lee, who taught the Texas Scottish Rite Hospital Literacy Program, an adult version of the Alphabetic Phonics program that was developed to teach dyslexics reading skills.

Ms. Lee, a certified private academic language therapist, said Gomez immediately applied himself, coming in for instruction five days a week.

As a result, he finished the yearlong program in nine months, and left reading on a college level.

"When Jerry started the program, no one knew he could not read. He got to where he was so excited about learning, that he began telling other people," Ms. Lee said.

Now Gomez is enrolled in microbiology, biology and chemistry courses at Midland College. He is bound for pre-dental school at the University of Texas at San Antonio.

He has passed three of four TASP (Texas Academic Skills Program) entrance exams and needs to retake the writing test.

"To come from where he was, to overcome this without getting into trouble, really is exceptional," Ms. Lee said. "So many of our kids who get into that kind of hot water drop out of school and get into trouble. Even in adversity Jerry remained a good kid. He really touched my heart."

Gomez said his teachers at Midland College have gone beyond the call of duty to help him succeed. "My biology and microbiology teacher, Deborah Cardenas, writes notes on the board, and let's me take extra time on my tests," he said.

"It's a little more extra work, but I try to accommodate as many students as I can by giving them outlines, and something they can follow," Ms. Cardenas said.

She said Gomez takes advantage of the option to take supervised exams outside of the classroom.

"Some students just need that more relaxed atmosphere," she said.

"There was a time, when sounding out words with Margie Lee, that I couldn't even get the first letter," Gomez said.

Now the student is a member of the Jaycees, a youth sponsor and successful college student.

"I told Jerry: 'Don't ever let anybody tell you that you are not smart and that you can't learn. You can learn,'" Ms. Lee said.

"It's great. I'm learning," Gomez said, "But I never got that chance to sit in the front of the class or play football in high school."

Jury worked, cried and prayed together

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Jurors charged with deciding the fate of a former Dallas minister accused of trying to strangle his wife knew their job would be tough.

But the weight of their task was fully felt once the verdict on Walker Railey was in.

"We were outside the courtroom, waiting for the reading of the verdict, and the last thing we did was hold hands and pray," jury foreman Kent Meredith said. "There were some tears, some of the first real tears of the trial."

That moment, he said, put the finishing touch on a process that saw a divided jury slowly come together to reach a unanimously acquit Railey Friday.

But Meredith was quick to point out that the acquittal should not be viewed as complete exoneration for the once-powerf ul minister of Dallas' First United Methodist Church.

"I felt he did it. I still feel he did it. But it was not beyond a reasonable doubt," Meredith said late Friday. "That's what the law requires and the state didn't prove it.

"I don't think anybody on that jury would vote him man of the year."

Railey was on trial for trying to kill his wife six year ago. That attack left Peggy Railey comatose and confined to a Tyler nursing home.

Her family has won a multimillion-dollar judgment against Railey in a civil lawsuit that concluded he was responsible for the attack. Separation papers also were filed this week on her behalf.

Railey, who had been in line to become a bishop, wasn't indicted on criminal charges until last year because police said they lacked evidence. But new techniques in analyzing mobile telephone calls helped investigators develop a case against him.

The seven women and five men told state District Judge Pat McDowell that they did not want to discuss the case with lawyers from either side. Only Meredith was willing to talk about their deliberations.

Jurors voted as soon as they had selected a foreman and that count was split 5-5 for guilty and not guilty, with two undecided.

On the second day, those two jurors voted not guilty, making the tally 7-5 for acquittal. Until Friday morning, the result remained the same through several votes, he said.

LEAVE: German exchange teachers to return home

(From 1C)

interviews and a videotape of each prospective exchange teacher to be sent to the Texas school districts.

"The districts use those tapes to chose the German teachers they want," Mrs. Borstelmann said. "That is the final step."

The Borstelmanns made it clear to program officials that they wanted to go to Texas together.

"We were a package deal," Borstelmann said. "We either both came or neither one of us came."

"It's really easier, having your spouse with you," Mrs. Borstelmann added. "Especially here, where the towns are so spread out and such. It's easier to have that support, so far away from home."

So, in August 1990, the Borstelmanns came to the Greenwood Independent School District to teach for two years. The two teachers who went to Germany from Greenwood, Diana Carmona and Susan Grimes, became the couple's mentors.

"The first year, they helped us find an apartment and a car and get around," Borstelmann said. "Not so much this year, but they helped a lot last year."

While the Borstelmanns both had taught school in Germany, she for six years in the elementary schools and he for two years at a college prep school, they had to adjust to a lot of differences.

"The attitudes are so different," said Borstelmann, who teaches senior English and German at Greenwood High School. "You are teaching students in Germany that are there to learn — that they know it is a privilege for them to be there and have the chance to be educated. Here, you are teaching a whole range of students, from those who don't want to be here to those that do."

Mrs. Borstelmann, who teaches fourth grade at Greenwood Elementary School, said it was hard for her to adjust to the strict disciplinary air of American schools.

"In Germany, there is no such thing as making students stand in line to walk from class to class or having to be quiet in the gym before school," she said. "It is very strict here compared to Germany. There, there are breaks every 45 minutes and students may leave the campus as they please. It was difficult for me to make my students walk in lines."

"Sometimes, I don't," she added, laughing. "I think they like me because of it."

Although dealing with American attitudes towards education took some time, the couple said they wouldn't trade the experience.

"To come and expose these students to a teacher with a different culture and background is rewarding for the teacher and the students," Borstelmann said. "It brings in new ideas, which is good."

Mrs. Borstelmann said, although she is ready to go home, she will miss her students.

"My classes have been very good," she said. "At first, they thought I was a bit exotic, I think, asking a lot of questions. But, they were very good students. It was a good experience."

OTT: Does size of the pond make the man?

do tend to associate big with good.

Here's an example. I recently attended a newspaper convention where a contest was held and awards were handed out for journalism excellence. The contest was divided into several categories, based on the size of the newspapers. Guess which ones got the most attention? That's right. The big boys. It was just assumed that a piece of work produced by, say, the Dallas Morning News would be far superior to anything written by a reporter from a tiny farming community in East Texas.

Is that fair? Of course not. But I'm afraid we all fall into that trap. Subconsciously, at least, we believe someone employed by a metropolitan newspaper is automatically more talented than one from a small town.

I mentioned all of this to the group.

"So what's your point?" the big pond supporter said.

"Yeah, whose side are you on?" his opponent countered.

I shrugged. "I can see both sides," I said.

"Quit waffling," they said in unison. "It's really very simple: Would you rather be a big fish in a little pond or a little fish in a big pond. Those are your choices. Which is it going to be?"

I pondered the question briefly, stroked my beard ever so slightly and finally said, "Neither."

They rolled their eyes. "Don't be difficult."

"I'm not," I said. "I want to be a BIG fish in a BIG pond."

I think they are still giggling.

ing. We chill down 60,000 gallons of water.

"If we were to have any problems of heat, we have enough chilled water to carry us for several days. We could go ahead and run the air conditioner with that 60,000 gallons."

The system is energy-efficient, with the chillers, which cost the most to run, functioning at night when the cost of electricity is less, Johnson said.

"We can run our air-conditioners (in the daytime), but we don't run the chillers. We worked with Texas Electric and an engineering firm out of Lubbock to come up with this. It's becoming a big thing around the country. Howard College in Big Spring was the first I had heard of, and I assume we are the first in Midland."

The consecration of the facilities was held in 1991 when the building phase, which began in 1987, was complete.

The debt was paid off in 1992, Johnson said.

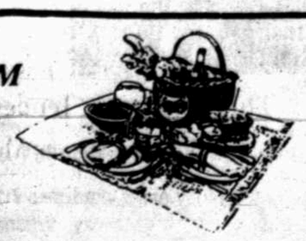

The April 25 Dedication Service, presided over by Bishop Alfred Morris, is being held earlier than the usual Sunday worship time.

Other changes in the April 25 schedule include the elimination of an early service at 8:30 a.m., Sunday School 20 minutes early at 9 a.m. and an 11:30 a.m. reception following the service. Those arriving for the 8:30 a.m. service will find coffee in the fellowship hall.

The building committee's job is done and Johnson feels good about the decisions the church leaders, committees and members made in building the facilities.

"Speaking for myself, I'm just very pleased," Johnson said. "We have a first class facility. We didn't do anything second class. Everything is first class in the new facility from the choir room on."

Midland groups participate in contest

Staff report

Two Midland groups were among the entries in the annual "Make A Difference Day" contest, a national program geared at community service and encouraging citizens to work together to improve their communities.

Nationwide, 197,000 people in 47 states participated in thousands of projects. The national winners are showcased in USA Weekend, a publication included in today's edition of the Reporter-Telegram.

The two Midland entries were:

(1) More than 600 students at Santa Rita Elementary School, who participated in the "Just Say No" Week. It is an educational week with a goal of urging students to stay off drugs of all kinds.

According to the entry letter to the contest judges: "Santa Rita students felt that there was a lack of societal support for saying 'no,' because it is hard to say 'no' when cigarette vending machines exist.

"Therefore, the students wrote letters to the mayor asking that cigarette vending machines be controlled and perhaps even prohibited within the city limits. The letters were attached to a long piece of newsprint supplied by the Reporter-Telegram, the local newspaper.

"The younger students made hand prints on the newsprint and asked the mayor to 'Please help us keep our hands clean and drug free.' The older students wrote individual letters.

"The 'letter' was presented to Mayor Faircloth at 10 a.m. on Saturday, Nov. 14, 1992, in front of the school. Two television stations were present, the principal and assistant principal, plus roughly 10 students and five parents.

"Mayor Faircloth has shared the letter with the city council, and has discovered that Dallas is considering just such an ordinance. Midland will watch closely and hopefully will have an environment where children aren't too tempted to try drugs.

"The project was beneficial in that it taught the students to use the system for change, to become involved and to 'Make a Difference.' It was stressed that 'if everybody thinks somebody else is going to correct the problems, then nobody will do it.'"

(2) Through funding provided by Texaco Inc. and the Texaco Foundation, 267 volunteers joined together and planted 200 trees along a one-mile stretch of otherwise desolate road. Some $25,000 was granted to buy the trees.

According to the letter to the judges: "This funding was administered through Global Re-Leaf. Other organizations involved in the planning and execution of the program were: Keep Midland Beautiful, the city of Midland, Texas Forest Service and Alldredge Gardens.

"Volunteers from the follow-

Trinity School, Midland 4-H Club, United Methodist Youth, Holy Trinity Episcopal Youth, Indian Princesses, Penwell Energy, Big Tootsie, Altrusa Club, Boys and Girls Club, Teen Court, St. Ann's Youth Group, Midland Softball Association, Midland Angels, First City Bank, Texaco, Big Brothers-/Big Sisters and the Texas national Guard.

"The project began at 8 a.m. on Saturday and by 11:30 a.m. all trees were planted and the areas cleaned of litter. The mayor of Midland, J.D. Faircloth, presented Bill Johnson of Texaco with a 'Proclamation of Commendation' for Texaco's service to the community and its generous contribution of funding for trees. All participants were given T-shirts which has 'Texaco Urban Tree Initiative' on the front and 'I Made a Difference! November 14, 1992' on the back.

"Planting trees helps restore the natural beauty of the countryside an is an affirmation of belief and hope for the future."

MC students win 38 awards at convention

Staff report

Midland College students won 38 awards at the Texas Intercollegiate Press Association convention in Corpus Christi April 3.

Included were a second place in Best Overall for the MC literary magazine Tableau, a third place in Overall Excellence for its newsfeature magazine Chaparral, and an honorable mention in Overall Excellence for its newspaper El Paisano.

The awards were for material published during 1992.

Editors for the winning publications were Jacqui Stewart and Royce Jones, both of Odessa, for El Paisano, Tammie Thompson, Midland, for Chaparral, and Michele Johnson, Midland, for Tableau.

Three current MC journalism students won third place awards in the convention's live competition. Kari Dahlberg, Oslo, Norway, and Kes Gilhome, London, England, took third in the two-person photo essay competition, and Stephen Madero, Odessa, the El Paisano opinion page editor, won third place in cartooning and third place in newspaper page design.

El Paisano editor Stewart received one of three annual TIPA scholarships, which are awarded for service to the college, academic achievement, and journalism accomplishments. She plans to attend Southwest Texas State University next fall.

Winners from MC in the Division 3 newspaper competition were: Scott Kennedy, Toronto, Canada, first place awards in news photo, picture story, and picture page design; Leslie Bannister, Kermit, first in sports news story and third place in sports column; Anna Subia, Midland, and Cynthia Villa, Andrews, won first place for headline writing; and Madero won third place in opinion page design.

In the magazine competition, Deborah Ward, Midland, won first place awards for news feature story and for action photo and an honorable mention for color feature photo. Shawna Loyd and Jan Foust, both of Midland, won first place for magazine picture story. Loyd also won an honorable mention for feature photo and Foust took a third place with Thompson for general magazine cover design.

Thompson won a third place for story package. Beth Davidson, Midland, took second place for action photo and third place for literary magazine illustration.

Former Tableau editor Karen Roth, now a student at the University of Texas-San Antonio, won second place for short story and third place for poetry.

Other first place winners in magazine competition were Scott Kennedy, feature photo; Micky Ray, Midland, now a student at Texas Tech, for computer-generated infographic; Judy Bruner, Midland, for short story; and Bruce Pullig, Midland, for short story.

Second place winners were Melanie Maxcey, Midland, for feature story; Gabe Lewis, Midland, for illustration; and Johnson and Thomas Salisbury for literary magazine cover design.

Mike Gray, Colorado, won an honorable mention for news feature story and the Chaparral took second place for a general magazine single issue.

Three former El Paisano editors were recognized at the convention. Bill Riggs, Kermit, a student at Southwest Texas State University, won first place in live action photography; Cheryl Wilkerson, Odessa, now editor of the North Texas Daily at the University of North Texas, won second place in live headline writing; and Debi Spencer, Midland, a student at Southwest Texas State University, was recognized as a staff member for TIPA.

MC journalism advisor Bob Templeton, publications coordinator Elise Coombes and 11 students attended the annual convention. TIPA is a statewide journalism association for both junior and senior college students.

MC students attending the convention were: Stewart, Madero, Gilhome, Dahlberg, Bridget Woolverton, Roscoe; Angela Rice, Greenwood; Librado Galindo, Kermit; and Nancy Calhoun, Dwayne King, and Becki Murphy, all of Midland.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Chaparral golfers to host Texas Junior College Championships

By H.A. Tuck

Those astounding Chaparral golfers take the spotlight Monday and Tuesday while hosting the annual Texas Junior College Championships on the Greentree Country Club course. The MC squad has won nine of the 11 tournaments it has entered, has had the medalist or co-medalist in eight of the events, and has had players either second or tied for second in the other three.

Tuck

And one of the Chaps is the 1992 British Amateur Champion, sophomore Stephen Dundas, who played in the U.S. Masters earlier this month and is scheduled to play in the British Open later this year. Plus . . . the Chaps are the defending national junior college champions.

But the Chaps know they must take care of business as many of the other teams in the field are capable of winning.

This also counts as the fourth of five Western Junior College Athletic Conference events, the three earlier ones having been won by the Chaps.

There's no charge, so go out and watch the Chaps in action. You'll see some well-conditioned athletes since all the competitors must walk and carry their own bags, playing 36 holes on Monday and 18 on Tuesday.

Coming on the heels of the golf tournament is the 18th annual Chaparral Sports Banquet. This year's event is a barbecue in Chaparral Center on Thursday at 7 p.m. Tickets are $7.50 and may be ordered through Tuesday by calling 685-4582.

Being honored are the basketball and golf teams, along with the cheerleaders and the Chaparral Booster Club. Oh yes, the dress is informal.

Tuesday at 7:30 a.m. is the monthly breakfast meeting for small and minority-owned businesses. Just show up at the Chaparral Hall in the Student Center with $5 and an appetite. You can meet other business owners, exchange business cards, and even stay for a two-hour seminar from 8:30-10:30 a.m. This month's seminar topic is on the "Texas Market Place," a new program being implemented by the Texas Department of Commerce to help small businesses advertise their products and services throughout Texas.

A regular monthly meeting of the Midland College Board of Trustees takes place at 4 p.m. Tuesday in the Board Room, which is located in the Administration Building.

Also taking place on Tuesday is an orientation session for persons wishing to apply for the Associate Degree Nursing program, a two-year program that prepares those who successfully complete to sit for the state board exams to become Registered Nurses.

The orientation is slated from 6:30-8 p.m. in the Health Sciences Building lecture hall. It's being directed by the ADN faculty, who will explain the admission requirements and criteria used. All persons interested in making application for the ADN program, for its September or January classes or one in the future, are invited to attend without obligation.

One of the most popular Latin-American musical talents is coming to Chaparral Center on Saturday. It's the first show in the building for Selena y Los Dinos. All seats are reserved and priced at $15 each. They may be purchased at the Chap Center box office, Midland Sound or Endless Horizons in Odessa.

Once again the Midland College Community Band Ensemble is presenting its spring concert at the Woods Lynch American Legion Hall, 501 Airpark Road. From 8-10 p.m. Thursday, you can attend without charge for listening and dancing as the 22-member group performs such standards as Jersey Bounce, Mood Indigo, Pennsylvania 6-5000, Night Train, Hard Hearted Hannah, Caravan, Malaguena, Basin Street Blues, and Fascinatin' Rhythm.

Dr. Don Grant is the group's conductor as it performs in three sets, consisting of nine, nine, and 16 numbers.

Tickets are on sale now for the annual Scholarship Fund/Recognition Banquet of the Midland College Latin-American Student Society (MCLASS), which is being held on Monday, April 26, in the Chaparral Hall. Tickets are $8 each for the 6:30 p.m. event, which features Dr. David Alvirez, University of Texas-San Antonio, as the speaker. For more information or ticket reservations, call Irma Lopez at 685-4640 or Tommy Ramos at 685-4701.

About the time everyone gets uptight as the semester end nears, here comes the 6th annual Bicycle-Tricycle Parade from the MC Child Development Center. This year it's on Wednesday at 10:45 a.m., followed by the children-parent lunch that includes a hot dog cookout and that perennial favorite of "West Texas Dirt Cake."

This event brings out more cameras and camcorders per capita than even the Rose Parade.

A special course on "Coiled Tubing Utilization and Design" is planned at MC beginning May 11. The course is to meet from 6-9 p.m. on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday through May 27.

Larry Adams, a petroleum engineer with Chevron USA in Midland, recently established a world-record depth of 20,500 feet for a permanent installation of 1.25-inch coiled tubing. The use of coiled tubing is allowing old wells to become more productive by reducing "liquid loading" and by increasing pressure.

Cost of the course is $75. At the final session, there will be exhibits by manufacturers and distributors of coiled tubing.

Persons interested in registering should contact the Continuing Education Office, Administration Building, or call 685-4518.

Jerry Franks, instructor in philosophy and government, is speaking at 11 a.m. today at the Unitarian-Universalist Church of Midland on "No Man Shall Be Compelled: Thomas Jefferson and Religious Liberty." His talk is in observance of the 250th anniversary of Jefferson's birth on April 13, 1743.

A couple of other upcoming events need mentioning. One is the Chaparral Cheerleader tryouts on Wednesday, April 28, from 4-6 p.m. in the Physical Education Building. Call sponsor/coach Tommy Ramos if you are interesting in applying for a spot on the 1993-94 squad. His number is 685-4701.

And the Sand Slam '93 is a Sand Volleyball Tournament on Thursday and Friday, April 29-30. Entry fee is $15 per three-person team. Call Tommy Ramos for more information or registration.

Not a single Continuing Education class starts this week, except for the two weekly Defensive Driving Classes.

John Cappadonna is teaching a Hunter Education course on Monday and Wednesday, starting April 26 for two weeks. Cost is $7 and the class meets from 6-9 p.m.

Another Nurse Aide Training class in cooperation with the American Red Cross begins May 3. It meets Monday through Thursday from 8 a.m.-1:30 p.m. through May 27. Cost is $271.

A Real Estate class is meeting on May 8 and 9, Saturday and Sunday, from 8:30 a.m.-5 p.m. Cost is $99.

Final class of the semester can get you ready for a summer of fun with Swing Dance II, taught by Barbara Elliott. The class meets on Monday and Wednesday from 7:30-9 p.m. for three weeks. Cost is $28.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director at Midland College.

WEST TEXAS IN BRIEF

■ Lee High School Chorale receives 2 awards

Lee High School Chorale students hit all the right notes as the only chorale in the region to receive two sweepstakes awards.

"Wonderful sound, choir . . . Wonderful musicianship. What a program," said Marcus Bradford of Amarillo, a judge at the Region VI University Interscholastic League Concert and Sight-reading competition.

The recent regional competition was held at Bonham Junior High School in Odessa.

The LHS Varsity Men's Choir, and the Varsity Women's Choir were both awarded the sweepstakes prize. Both choirs included freshman students.

To receive the sweepstakes award the students received a Division I rating in both concert and sight-reading.

The LHS Varsity Mixed Choir also earned a Division I superior rating in concert and a Division II, excellent rating in sight-reading.

Other choirs in the region participating in the event were from Kermit, Fort Stockton, Big Spring, Andrews, Monahans and Odessa.

LHS choir director is Paula Edwards.

The LHS choirs are currently preparing to perform in the Bluebonnet Classic Festival April 30 in San Antonio.

■ Association to host Children's Art Display

The West Texas Association for the Education of Young Children will host a Children's Art Display to celebrate the Week of the Young Child at Midland Park Mall and Winwood Mall Wednesday through Saturday.

Week of the Young Child is when Early Childhood Professionals unite and advocate children's rights. A statewide effort is being made to focus attention on the concerns, issues and needs of young children, including quality child care.

The public is urged to view the displays and "enjoy the talents of the children of the Permian Basin."

For additional information, call Liz Thompson at 580-6717.

Meanwhile, Midland mayor J.D. Faircloth has signed a proclamation declaring this week "The Week of the Young Child."

The proclamation reads in part:

"Whereas, by calling attention to the need for high quality early childhood services for all children and families within our City of Midland, these groups hope to improve the quality and availability of such services;

"Now, therefore, I, J.D. Faircloth, mayor of the City of Midland, do hereby proclaim the week of April 18 through April 24, as The Week of the Young Child."

■ MC to host landscaping demonstration

A Home Landscape Management Seminar and Demonstration will be held at 6 p.m. Thursday at the Student Union Building on the campus of Midland College.

Participants will learn how to have a good-looking lawn with a minimum of work, water and fertilizer, by using "Don't Bag It" lawn management methods. Those attending will also learn how to reduce weeding, save water and increase plant performances by mulches gathered from the yard. In addition, they will learn the latest pest management alternatives and how to make their own backyard compost.

Those interested should call the County Extension Service at 687-1351, or Keep Midland Beautiful at 688-4190.

Meanwhile, for those people wanting to know more about landscaping are invited to attend the three-day Home Landscape School Tuesday-Thursday at Midland College. The school begins at 7 p.m. all three nights.

Participants will "learn the A to Z's of home landscaping, the best landscape plants for the Permian Basin, and how to plant, establish and maintain an outstanding landscape," organizers said.

Debbie Benge, extension horticulturalist for Ector and Midland counties, and Steve George, extension landscape specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, will be teaching.

Those interested can pre-register by going by the Midland or Ector County Extension offices. Cost of the school is $20 per household, which covers the costs of a landscape kit, book and other material.

For additional information, call 687-1351 or 335-3071.

Officials pull racial computer game from Arlington schools

By Jessamy Brown
N.Y. Times News Service

ARLINGTON — A computer game depicting black slaves who try to escape from white owners has been ordered removed from computers in Arlington elementary schools after parents complained that the game is racially offensive.

The program was recalled by the manufacturer in mid-January after parents at several school districts nationwide demanded that the game be discontinued.

Arlington school officials said computer lab managers were immediately told to remove the software from computers. However, parents said children at some schools continued to have access to the game as recently as last week. A reminder was sent on April 8 after parents complained, and a third notice was sent on Monday.

Titled "Freedom!" and produced by the Minnesota Educational Computing Corp., the game is set in the 1830s in Delaware, Maryland and Virginia.

Players, as enslaved blacks, attempt to escape and reach freedom in the North. Along the way, the slaves try to elude the white patrollers and dogs, which are chasing them.

If caught, the player is told: "You have been recaptured, whipped and returned to your master."

Parents of two elementary pupils who were upset by the simulation game say the format and the images portrayed on the program are racially offensive and damaging to the self-esteem of black children.

In the game, black characters are shown picking cotton in a field. One character named "Aunt Nancy, the Big House cook," wears a head scarf. White characters refer to the slaves as "boy" and "gal."

School officials said the game was not viewed at the district level before it was copied and distributed to elementary school computer laboratory managers in November.

"That's not normally our policy," said Ron Crowther, director of instructional computing. "We made a mistake on this one, and we are doing our best to correct it."

A committee of teachers and other staff members usually previews new computer programs before they are distributed. The committee has not been in place this school year because of staff cuts and changes in staff duties, Crowther said.

"I'm outraged," said Janette Dorsey, mother of a 12-year-old who used the program at Sherrod Elementary in Arlington. "It's a virus. It's a virus that can corrupt the minds of young black students. It's a subliminal message that can break down the self-esteem of black Americans."

The game, written for the Apple II and Apple II GS, was developed for children in grades five through nine, according to the company. Its manual indicates that the game was meant to be used as a curriculum aid to a history unit on the Underground Railroad, a 19th-century network that helped slaves escape.

Arlington Superintendent Lynn Hale said the game was not used in history classes in Arlington. Nancy Bower, Arlington's director of elementary instruction, said the program was one of several educational games available to children in computer labs at some schools.

"Through playing games, that is a way to teach skills," Bower said. "It's not just a game for game's sake — the only kind of games we have are tied to education."

Bower said the district acknowledges that the software should have been screened before being distributed to schools. "It did get past us, and we certainly intend to be more careful in the future," she said.

Adoptive mother to donate kidney to baby with fetal alcohol syndrome

By Jane McBride
Associated Press Writer

BEAUMONT — As newborn Gentry Lovett struggled to gasp her first breath of life, alcohol surged through the veins of her tiny, underdeveloped body. With a blood-alcohol level of .25, Gentry's birth mother was legally drunk. At .16, so was Gentry.

Since that day 2½ years ago, the precious little girl with the loving nature has fought the ravaging effects of the alcohol forced into her system as she developed in her mother's womb.

Now, she faces another battle — she must undergo a transplant that doctors say is her only hope for survival.

Gentry is one of life's innocent victims, born eight weeks premature with fetal alcohol syndrome. For two months, she remained in a Galveston hospital's intensive care unit, clinging to life by the thinnest of threads. When she stabilized, the loving hands that unhooked her from her heart monitor belonged to her adoptive mother, Donna Gayle Lovett.

Now, Gentry's second chance at life is once again partly in her adoptive mother's hands. This week (April 20) in Galveston, Donna Gayle is scheduled to donate one of her kidneys to her daughter to replace Gentry's alcohol-damaged ones.

Donna Gayle, known as D.G. to friends and family, and Ray Lovett had been longing for a child when D.G. got a telephone call that gave her four days to prepare for motherhood.

"We got the phone call the Monday before Thanksgiving, saying there was a baby with some bad physical problems who needed to be adopted. I got in touch with my husband and asked him over the phone, 'What do we do?' He said, 'Let's pursue it,' and we did."

Later that evening, D.G. and Ray had their first look at their tiny daughter. They took Gentry home Thanksgiving Day. The doctors told D.G. that as a fetal alcohol syndrome baby, Gentry would face a variety of problems, including probable mental retardation. D.G. and Ray were required to undergo counseling to make sure they were prepared to take care of Gentry.

D.G. enrolled Gentry in the First Steps infant stimulation program at Beaumont State Center, where Gentry's therapist, Dawn Chambers, worked on helping Gentry develop her speech-language, motor, social and thinking skills.

Thankfully, D.G. says, Gentry's first few tests showed she was developing right on target mentally. Her physical development, however, lagged.

"He sat us down and told us she was going to need a kidney transplant, that her kidneys were dysplastic — very small and wouldn't grow — and that we had to start dialysis right away," D.G. says.

Doctors put a permanent, indwelling catheter in Gentry's abdomen. For 12 hours a day, as she sleeps, Gentry lies connected to a machine that forces fluids into her peritoneal cavity. The fluid absorbs toxins that her kidneys would normally filter out and removes them from her body. It takes 12 cycles, one each hour, to help keep her alive.

Students at Pearl Hall Elementary School look over the school's half-acre Joann Hoskins Ecology Center recently in South Houston.

Students enjoy living classroom

By John Newsom
Associated Press Writer

SOUTH HOUSTON — One of the classrooms at Pearl Hall Elementary School is alive.

Wedged between the gymnasium and the first-grade wing, the school's half-acre Joann Hoskins Ecology Center is a miniature Armand Bayou Nature Center complete with several habitats native to Texas.

From the front gate alongside the school, the first section is a narrow mulch-covered path, slightly crowned, that extends past a bird feeder and a butterfly garden.

After 50 feet, the path leads to a multitude of natural settings — prairie, forest and marsh.

There are hardwood trees and pines and a six-inch-deep pond coated with algae and lily pads and lined with cattails. Smooth stumps and logs on their side form an outdoor classroom. A wooden deck stretches slightly into the pond, affording a closer view. A vegetable garden, transplanted from alongside the gymnasium from where it was planted four years ago, lies quietly in the sun against the far fence. A mulch path winds around the whole area.

All told, there are more than 75 different species on the previously unused plot. The only reminders that this is actually a school are the metal siding, brick and chain link that surround it.

"You see an opportunity to show the children the proper stewardship of the environment and to see the habitats as they really are," said Ron Jones, the driving force behind the center.

Jones works for the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service. His son is a fourth-grader at Pearl Hall Elementary. But when Pearl Hall Principal Doyle Little and Assistant Principal Judy Brigham approached him last spring with the idea of doing something with the space, he jumped at the chance, working with an architect friend to plan it and others to build it.

The idea, Jones said, was to create several ecosystems native to Texas, especially this area. Pasadena was once mostly coastal prairie, and Buffalo Bayou, before it became the Houston Ship Channel.

Work on the project, which is to be dedicated on Saturday, began in earnest in August, shortly before students arrived for school. Pasadena school district personnel put up the fence. South Houston city workers dug the pond. Teachers and their spouses, working on weekends, spread mulch, laid gravel and planted oak, maple, magnolia and pine trees. The $11,000 to buy plants and trees came mainly from two grants and money raised by the school's paper recycling program.

By March, this former grass-filled yard with two trees — never used for play because it is too close to classrooms — became an ecology center.

Jazz Ensemble to present big band music

An evening of big band music from the era of swing is being presented by the Midland College Community Jazz Ensemble on Thursday, April 22.

In order to accommodate more listeners, as well as those who enjoy dancing to the big band sounds, the group's spring program is being presented at the Wood Lynch American Legion Post at 501 Airpark Road.

The public is invited to attend without charge.

Don Grant is conductor of the 22-member group comprised primarily of local residents who simply enjoy playing jazz compositions.

They range from geologists and legal secretaries to radio announcers and music majors.

"We moved to this locale a couple of years ago and the response has been wonderful," Grant noted. "Many in the audience grew up dancing to these tunes and enjoy continuing that. Our musicians also enjoy the response of the audience in this type of setting."

Grant said the program begins at 8 p.m. and ends approximately two hours and 34 tunes later.

Among the compositions on the program this year are: Opus One, Jersey Bounce, American Patrol, Mood Indigo, A String of Pearls, In the Mood, Cry Me A River, Pennsylvania 6-5000, Sweets, theme from New York, New York, Puttin' on the Ritz, Night Train, Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy, Take the "A" Train, The Swingin' Shepherd Blues, All the Things You Are, The Way We Were, Hard Hearted Hannah, Caravan, Oye Como Va, Mercy, Mercy, Mercy, Leap Frog, Undecided, Malaguena, It Had to be You, Basin Street Blues, Makin' Whoopee!, Mack the Knife, I Can't Stop Loving You, Meditation, Blues in the Night, Fascinating Rhythm, and Blues in the Skies.

Networking breakfast set

The networking breakfast for minority, woman-owned and small businesses is Tuesday, April 20, 7:30 a.m., in the Midland College Student Center. Small businesses are invited to meet with purchasing representatives from major companies and other small businesses. Breakfast is $5. Pre-registration is advised - 684-4100.

Following the breakfast is the workshop "Texas Market Place." This new program, run by the Texas Department of Commerce, helps small businesses advertise their products and services throughout Texas. It is also used by agencies to locate minority-owned businesses. Cost of the workshop is $5.

EXPO 93 exhibitor booths selling out

EXPO 93, the Chamber's Business to Business Trade Show, will be held Wednesday, May 12, at Midland Center.

More than sixty Midland businesses - large and small - will exhibit their goods and services. The trade show runs from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., with a special after hours mixer from 5-7 p.m. Both events are free to the public.

There is still time for last-minute booth registration this week. Business owners can call the Chamber, 683-3381, or stop by 109 N. Main for a booth registration form. Booths are $200 for Chamber members and $300 for non-members.

Each exhibitor will be featured in an advertisement to appear in the Expo 93 program, which is printed by the Reporter-Telegram and inserted in the Sunday, May 9, paper delivered to 30,000 subscribers and newsstand readers.

Aggies to Muster at CAF museum

Staff report

Former Texas A&M students from throughout the Permian Basin will gather at the Confederate Air Force Museum on Wednesday for the annual Texas Aggie Muster, local Muster Chair Donny McClure announced.

Aggie families and guests will have exclusive access to the museum displays and facility beginning at 4 p.m. At 6:30 p.m. the evening meal will be served with the Muster ceremony to follow. Guest speaker will be Bill Youngkin and "satellite coverage of Muster at Aggieland will be shown," McClure said, adding that "Muster is open to all former students and their families, parents of students and friends of Texas A&M."

The Muster tradition is more than 100 years old. Some 400 Musters will be held around the world this year, "wherever Texas A&M former students live or work," McClure said.

During wars, Aggies mustered in foxholes, on the battlefield, aboard ships, in airplanes and in field hospitals. Fifteen days before Japanese forces overran trapped American positions on Corregidor Island in World War II, Aggies mustered in caves for a final remembrance between comrades.

Every Muster ceremony is the same, McClure noted. "Texas Aggies pay their respects to all those who are absent because of death since the last Muster." At the ceremony, when the names of the honored dead are called from the Muster Roll, a friend of the deceased Aggie answers 'here.'

"This dedication and loyalty makes Muster the most sacred of all Aggie traditions," McClure said.

HOMES & CLASSIFIED

Trace Of History

The majestic structure of this custom built home lends a historic value to one of the most prestigious neighborhoods in Midland.

Built for the original owners by Ray Stringer Construction, the antique brick on the exterior is a special part of history coming from the Old Scharbauer Hotel downtown. Pride of ownership and a unique preservation in the original construction is apparent from the circular brick driveway.

A privacy fence encloses a lovely Mexican tile courtyard for added safety. Surrounded by beautiful trees, shrubs and perennials, the courtyard provides an entrancing walkway to the front entry.

An elegant tiled foyer opens into a combined sunken living and dining room setting. The expansive living room draws an abundance of light through the liberal use of windows and a skylight, complete with an electric opener. An oversized fireplace is surrounded by marble and built-in shelves, filling the living room with elegance and comfort.

Adjoining the living room, a spacious formal dining room is ideal for large family dinners. A door that leads directly to the kitchen is convenient for serving meals.

The dine-in kitchen is a gourmet delight with fresh paint, gleeming tile, Kitchen-Aid appliances and a long, custom designed serving counter. The morning sunrise can be seen from the sample breakfast area that overlooks the tiled veranda. Early morning meals amidst the lush landscaping are a pleasant experience.

From the kitchen, a second entry to the master bedroom adjoins a utility room that leads to an indoor garden atrium. A profusion of green plants is seen from the dozy sitting area that extends from the extensive master bedroom.

An attached master bath reveals a luxurious marbled vanity, jacuzzi tub and an oversized walk-in closet.

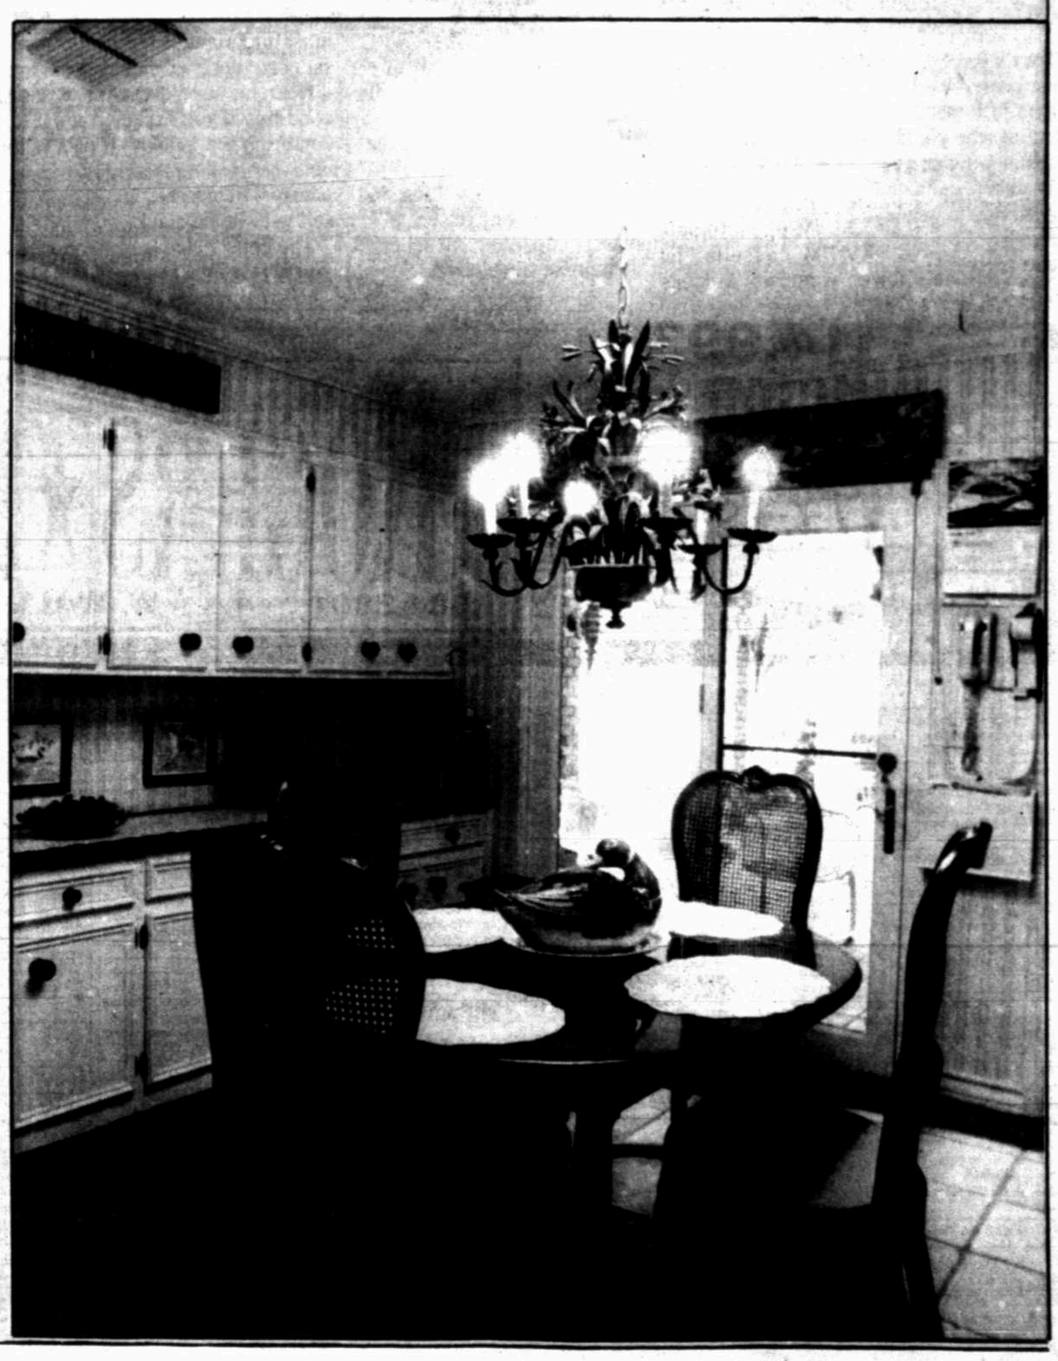

The many extra rooms are versatile and can be used to suit any lifestyle, while the abundance of skylights used throughout, add natural light to this distinguished floorplan. A hidden upstairs retreat reveals a perfect playroom or guest bedroom complete with a private bath.

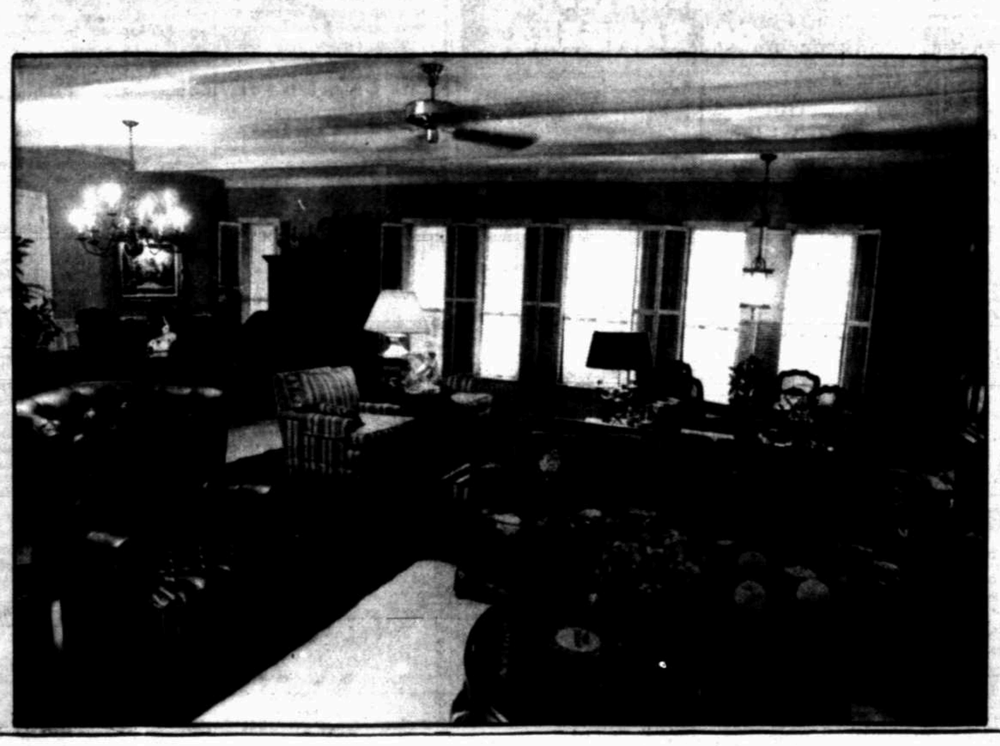

Downstairs, two additional rooms share a hallway bath. While the front room, overlooking the courtyard, has been converted into a large study/office the other room makes an ideal guest bedroom.

In the rear of the house is a second living area with a bath, music or photo room, basement (or fallout shelter) that could easily be converted into another bedroom. With a back entry, this second living area could be used as an office with a door to the paved alley.

The distinctive features of this prestigious home combine the past and the present with many extras such as the sprinkler system, insulated windows and doors, and paved rear entry.

Louise Culver of The Carriage Co., Realtors, is listing this home for $197,500. For more information call 684-5881 or 682-9835.

Home Buyer's And Interest Rates

"Both first time and repeat buyers in 1992 were less affluent than their counterparts in the two preceding years," says Ruth Young, according to the "Who's Buying Homes in America" survey conducted in 18 representative metropolitan housing markets. The survey includes samples of all types of home sales throughout the year including cash and contract sales.

"No matter what the politicians say, this survey says we had more income 2 years ago than we do now," says Ruth Young. Median household income for first-time buyers declined to $51,200 in 1992, compared to $54,800 the previous year. Median household income for repeat buyers fell to $66,200 in 1992 from $68,900 the year before.

Americans are also moving less and marrying less.

Lower average monthly payments were linked to lower interest rates in 1992, according to the survey. Lower rates, among other things, attracted a relatively large number of first-time buyers who would have been priced out of the market in a more "normal" year.

In the 1992 housing market, buyers earning $50,000 or less gained market share at the expense of those earning more than that amount the report noted. Even households with relatively modest incomes, $30,000 or less annually, accounted for 8.8 percent of all home sales last year.

John Pfister, Chicago Title and Trust's vice president and market research manager, said in a news release, "It appears that buyers in 1992 were less concerned about the possibility of rising interest rates anytime soon. The relatively lower cost of adjustable-rate financing probably influenced some borrowers as well."

First-time buyers in 1992 accounted for 47.7 percent of all home sales; this was the highest percentage of any year since the company began its annual surveys in 1976.

Married couples comprised 69.2 percent of the housing market in 1992, compared with 76.1 percent of the previous year. The percentage of never-married singles entering the housing market for the first time last year was primarily responsible for this change.

More than four of every 10 buyers -- 42.2 percent -- made a down payment of 10 percent or less in 1992, compared with 39 percent who made a low down payment in 1991. Low down payments helped stretch homebuying dollars even further last year, the survey noted.

During 1992, the median home price for all buyers increased to $141,000 from $134,300 in 1991. Yet, the average price remained stable at about $170,800. The average price did not gain because buyers at the highest end of the pricing spectrum were less active last year, the survey said.

Housing markets appear to be stronger in the Midwest and South and in the so-called oil patch states of Texas, Oklahoma and Colorado. Higher-priced housing markets on the East and West Coasts have been hardest hit in the current economic downturn.

The greatest increase in total home sales occurred in the Midwest and South. These regions also paced the nation with the highest percentage increase in first time buyers in the market.

REAL ESTATE Q&A

Q We're getting ready to buy our first home. How can we find out what our credit file looks like?

A This is a good thing to do before applying for a mortgage. You may not even be aware that you have a credit file, but most people do, especially in these days of credit cards.

Most credit bureaus will charge you for a copy of your report. By obtaining a copy of your file, you can offer explanations for any past problems, making sure the file is complete. You have a legal right to make corrections to erroneous data on the report; there is a federal law covering this subject. Many times there are oversights or minor problems which need explanation. Even minor problems, if ignored, can cause a problem with lenders. The small investment in checking out your own report can be a wise one. When considering a property transaction, consult a real estate agent who is a REALTOR®.

Langston Realtors Talk About...

Opening Of Builders' Showcase

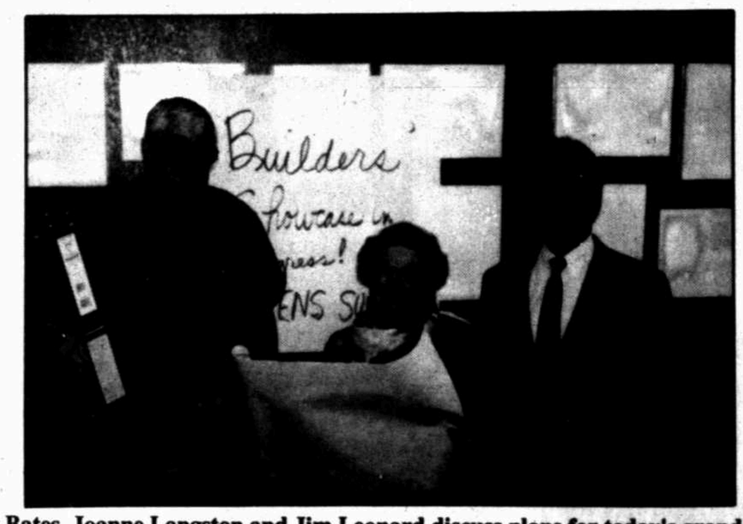

A Builders' Showcase, featuring some of the city's most respected builders, formally opens today between 1 and 5:30 at the Langston Realtors North office, Loop 250 and Garfield in the Colonnade. Other opening events include a Parade of Homes by the Showcase Builders, mortgage information and prequalification by local mortgage lenders and free popcorn and drinks for all. A private preview "Meet the Builders" party was held Saturday evening.

"The Builders' Showcase is a one stop "shopping" center for anyone considering buying a new home or custom building," according to Joanne Langston, President, Langston Realtors. Extensive information on our featured builders, subdivisions, new construction currently on the market, lot availability and financing a new home will be available," she added.

A company prepared publication, "So You Want To Build," will also be available at the Showcase opening. "The publication should be an elementary source of information for anyone who is considering custom building or purchasing a new home. We tried to include the answers to most of the questions we've experienced in the past, plus talk about the many components of construction," Langston said.

The special Showcase Builders' Parade of Homes is also scheduled between 1:00 and 5:30. A map and information on the open houses may be picked up at the Langston Realtors North office after 1:00 p.m. today.

Gilbert Bates, Joanne Langston and Jim Leonard discuss plans for today's grand opening of Langston Realtors Builders' Showcase. Bates and Leonard are among the 14 builders that are featured in the Showcase.

Information on Saddle Club Ranch Estates (Pecan Acres), Briarwood Section III, Mockingbird Heights, Greentree North, Grassland Estates, Polo Park, and other areas of new construction will also be available.

Langston Realtors associates who served in the committee developing the Showcase include Fran Henderson, Patti Wallace, Debbie Trantham, Sharon Crouch, Jerry Holt, Roberta Aldridge, and Cynthia Brown. All agents at Langston have recently received extra training and education on working with builders, selling new construction, the process of custom building and serving the needs of the new home buyer. All associates will be participating in opening activities today.

Builders' Showcase information will also be installed at the Langston Wall office within the next few weeks.

All About Real Estate

by Vicky Garrett
Chaparral Realtors

Dear Vicky: We are ready to make a move and have a home to sell. We are concerned that if we list our home it may sell before we find another. On the other hand, if we find a home we like and our home doesn't sell quickly, we won't be in a position to buy another. What advice can you offer?

Vicky's Reply: Coordinating the purchase of a new home and the sale of your present home can be a challenge. First, it is important to choose a real estate firm that can help you coordinate both the sale and purchase -- a Realtor who you feel will give an honest and knowledgeable opinion of the fair market value of your home.

Statistics indicate the longer a home is for sale, the less it will sell for. So, my advice to you is to be realistic when deciding upon a listing price. Pricing your home correctly in the beginning is most important. All sellers hope to receive the highest price possible for their home while buyers want to feel as though they have negotiated a "good deal." If you want to start with a price above what your Realtor suggests, do so for a short period of time --no more than a month. Then examine the feedback your Realtor gives you from prospective buyers and Realtors who have looked at your home. If you have had many showings but no offers, there are several factors you should consider. Is the location a problem? Is the home in tip-top shape or has the price been adjusted accordingly? Is your Realtor maximizing the exposure of your home through advertising and promotion? And most important, is it priced competitively with other homes currently for sale and those which have sold in the past six months?

Next, be sure your home is staged properly -- that is, it must be in perfect condition if you expect to sell it for top dollar. Well-priced homes in good condition sell quickly. If your home needs a coat of paint or new carpet, consider making this improvement to make it more marketable and competitive. Remember, it is the prospective buyer's first impression that may sell your home quickly.

The bottom line is that you will probably have to sell your home before you will be in a good position to purchase another.

KENT OIL, INC. — KENT KWIK CONVENIENCE STORES

WHY KENT OIL COMPANY?

Kent Oil (operating Kent Kwik convenience stores) is a West Texas-based company, thirty five years old and still growing. We offer many benefits to our employees. These benefits include:

- Company-assisted medical, dental and life insurance
- Paid vacations
- Sick pay program
- Tuition reimbursement program
- Special incentive programs for all employees
- Profit-sharing and retirement plan
- Intensive new hire training
- Structured continual management training
- Flexible scheduling
- Full and part time hours available
- Work close to home
- Affiliation with Odessa 66 credit union

We attempt whenever possible to promote from within. Most of our current store managers, middle and upper management started with the company at the entry level. It is possible to move up quickly based on your experience and level of education.

Working in a convenience store is both exciting and challenging. You have to be outgoing and enjoy serving the public, while at the same time be a self-starter, as you receive very little on the job supervision.

If you are considering a career in the retail industry, give Kent Oil your consideration. Please apply at the Kent Oil office Monday-Friday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. 3314 N. Loop 250 in Midland. Pre-employment drug test required.

THIS IS RIDICULOUS!!

Week after week I run ads for different departments in my organization and get limited response. There's NO GIMMICKS - NO SURPRISES - NO HIDDEN FACTORS.
My company is the largest in the nation in it's field and in Texas since 1974. We have all the benefits that any large corporation could offer . . . In other words, it's not only great income, but you get all the goodies too. Vacation - trips - awards - insurance - retirement - guaranteed income - every week.
Sounds good so far doesn't it?
That's why I can't understand why you would not at least pick up the phone and investigate. Come see what we have to offer,
This week I am hiring for sales. No experience necessary. We provide paid training.

Serving 54 counties in West Texas and New Mexico

BRIEFING

Drilling slows

Stacked drilling rigs are still a common sight in the Basin. Drilling activity in the U.S. slowed some for the week ended April 8, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

The company reported that the Permian Basin rig count slipped one to 101 for the week, which was shorted by the Good Friday holiday. A year ago, the count was 92.

Nationally, the rig count ended a three-week gain, slumping 12 to 615. A year earlier the count was 648.

API golf tournament

The 1993 "Sour Crude" Scholarship Fund Golf Tournament held by the Permian Basin chapter, American Petroleum Institute, is scheduled for April 23-24 at Ratliff Ranch Golf Links.

The tournament is a two-man scramble and will have a shotgun start at 7:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. each day. Slots remain open for entries.

Cost is $200 per team, which includes green fee, cart, API memorabilia, food and drinks and the awards presentation.

Registration can be made by calling Nancy Wilson at 563-5309.

Prices steady

Casing, tubing and rods ready to go to work. Energy prices held steady this week.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas Intermediate hovered around the $20.40 mark much of the week while the posted price held at $19 per barrel.

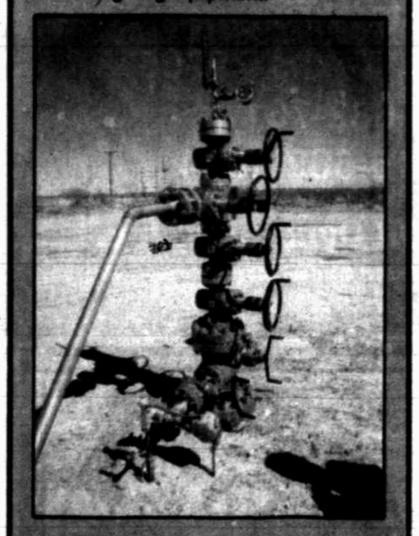

Natural gas futures continued to show uncharacteristic strength, supported by perceptions of tight supplies. May contracts for natural gas were at five-month highs of $2.36

Nitrogen wells

ANDREWS — Orbitron Oil & Gas, an independent gas producer and processor with operations centered in Andrews County has sold its first gas deliveries from its nitrogen rejection facility to Westar Transmission Co. Orbitron is producing the gas from the nitrogen saturated Yates formation in Andrews County.

Expansion

ODESSA — Thompson Specialties has expanded, to cover Abilene, Amarillo and Borger areas. Other important changes in the Odessa based Fire and Safety Co. include the addition of a new mobil shop truck that can do maintenance of all safety equipment on location in the field as well as the same services for fire fighting equipment.

ENHANCED OIL RECOVERY

Mabee is EOR model project

■ Texaco incorporates state-of-the-art technology into CO_2 project

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

At some point in the future another enhanced oil recovery (EOR) project will probably become the industry's, state-of-the-art model for CO_2 projects, but for the time being the honor probably belongs to Texaco's Mabee Field in the Permian Basin.

When it was decided to put the gas to the Mabee field, which was discovered in 1943 and went under waterflood in 1965, teams of Texaco engineers spent hours studying the strong points and weak points of other CO_2 projects in the Basin and poured over catalogs of technology that could be applied to the 13,000-acre, San Andres unit.

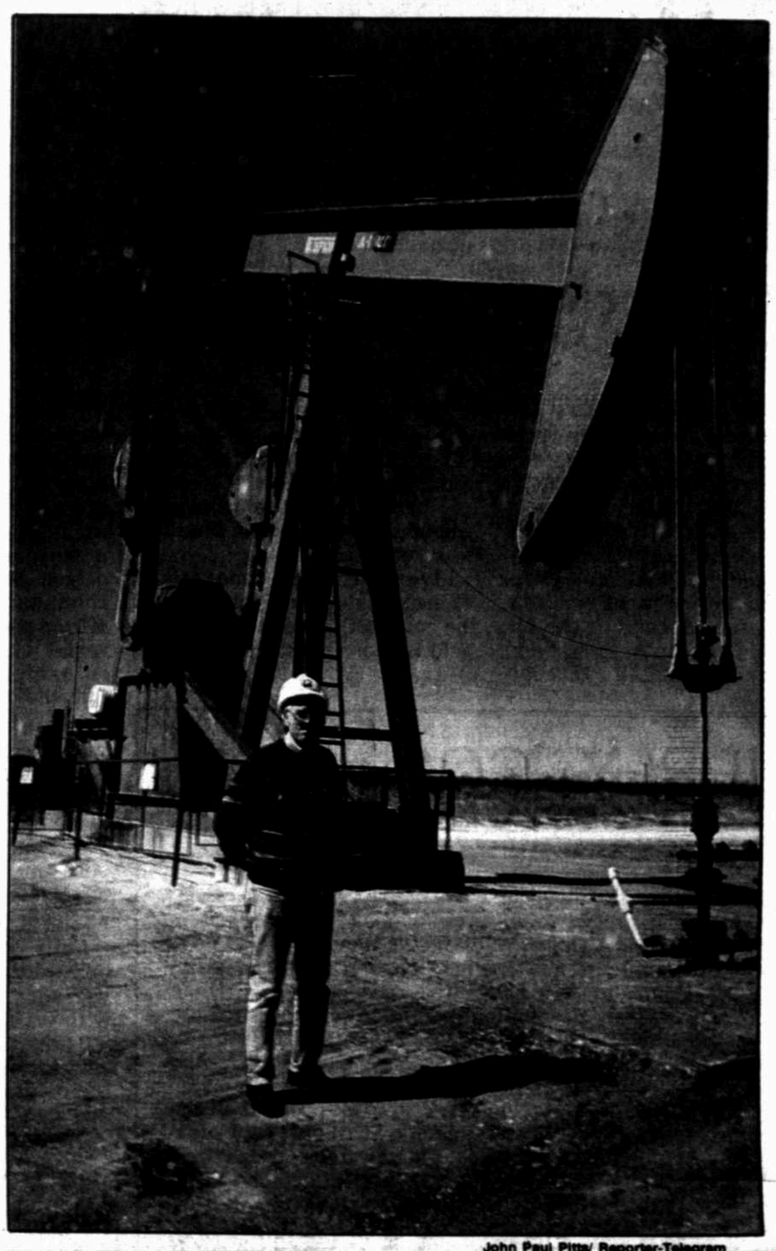

The result is a massive mating of high-tech computer technology and standard oilfield plumbing that has built upon the success of others to come up with a lean, clean oil-producing machine that is second to none.

"While there may be hesitancy to share exploration information with other companies," said Bill Johnson, vice president of Texaco's Midland Producing Division, "There is no reluctance to share information when it comes to enhanced oil recovery. What other oil companies have done yesterday is helping Texaco

The Mabee CO_2 Project at a glance

- Discovered in 1943, the San Andres field, covers 13,000 acres, with production at 4,800 feet.
- Waterflood begins 1965, hits peak production of 11,500 bopd in 1980.
- Cumulative production to 12/31/92 was 95 mmbo.
- Injection begins January 1992; first response achieved February 1992
- Phase 1 wells include: 56 injection wells, 37 producing wells
- Current production 6100 bopd; Incremental oil expected 1,400 bopd
- Current injection rates: 100,900 bwpd, 48 mmcf CO_2
- Recycling plant start-up, January 1993, now processing 7 mmcfd of gas with an installed capacity.
- Anticipated additional recovery: Secondary 18 mmbo, tertiary 30 mmbo.

Basin CO2 supply adequate

■ A ready CO_2 supply and infrastructure make Permian Basin tertiary capital of domestic oil industry.

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

Carbon dioxide (CO_2), the gas that puts the fizz and that good burning feeling in soda pop, is also putting new hope in the Permian Basin oilpatch.

The gas is now being pumped into about 40 reservoirs in the Basin to push more oil out and could be pumped into over 50 fields by the end of the decade.

While only slight steady increases are seen in tertiary activity at current prices, those in charge of major tertiary projects estimate that prices nearing $30 could significantly increase activity and that prices in excess of $30 could trigger a tertiary boom in the Basin.

If demand for CO_2 does increase rapidly in the remainder of the decade, will there be enough of the gas to go around to all the projects. The consensus is affirmative.

Given the fact that CO_2 can be recovered and reused and the fact that largest reserves in the U.S. are already connected to the Permian Basin, officials of Amoco, Shell, Texaco, Arco, Conoco and others predict that supply will outrun demand for years to come.

For example, Amoco, which has some of the largest tertiary projects in the Basin, has delivered enough CO_2 from its Bravo Dome Field in northeastern New Mexico to fill 10,000 Astrodomes, yet has more than 100 wells in the million-acre field shut-in awaiting increased demand in the Permian Basin.

Cement battles corrosion

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

Corrosion extracts a major toll in any enhanced recovery project, and any number of coatings have been developed to counter it.

But one corrosion-resistant pipe coating has been around for almost as long as oilpatch corrosion and is still making a strong contribution: cement.

Jack Armstrong, president of Permian Enterprises, which cement-lines pipe, said economics and the natural properties of cement continue to make it a viable coating for steel pipe.

In a paper written by Armstrong and Bill Jackson, it was pointed out that cement lining for protection of steel pipe from corrosion was introduced in the U.S. over 100 years ago and been widely accepted in the oil patch for over 50 years.

More insight on Clinton's energy policy

Pitts

Harping on the evolving Clinton energy policy may seem a boring topic to some, but at this time in the life of the oil business, trying to understand the strange, Carter-style thinking of this new bunch in Washington may be the most important thing any journalist covering energy can do.

The decisions made about oil and gas over the next few months have the power to affect the destiny of this industry and the economy of oil producing regions everywhere.

At one time, we had friends in Washington, and were privileged to have direct line numbers, even home phone numbers, of some of the nation's leading energy officials. We could pick up the phone and get insight and comment from the highest sources, and a couple of times came close to getting direct comment from the President.

But that changed last November. Now a large army of pro-oil people find ourselves on the outside looking in — searching for any scrap of information or any scent of rumor that will give us a clue as to what Clinton and his cronies plan to do to the oil industry.

I use the word "to" with fair certainty, because it is already pretty much a foregone conclusion that the word "for" will not apply to the oil industry when it comes to Clinton and the oil industry — as will be confirmed later in this column.

That's why a letter from a top policy aide of DOE Secretary Hazel O'Leary, received this week by a local independent, has become occasion for another column. The letter presented in black and white terms some concepts that have previously been up only for speculation.

The Midland independent, who does not want to be identified, provided me a copy of the letter he received from Guy Caruso, director of the office of oil and natural gas policy and director of the office of domestic and international policy under O'Leary.

The response to a letter the independent had written O'Leary about the loss of 470,000 jobs in the energy industry, the devastating effect the Btu tax would have on the oil and gas industry and the fact that Clinton had campaigned that he would help the domestic oil and gas industry.

In paragraph two of the letter, Caruso responds to the Btu tax: "We have read your letter with interest and have considered the points you raised. Most analysts expect that the Btu taxes will cause end-user prices to rise modestly, indicating that producers and consumers will split the burden of paying the tax. The anticipated reductions in U.S. oil consumption under the Btu tax are expected to come principally from imports."

The italics we added to underscore an important point the administration had not been exactly clear on in previous meetings with energy officials — the producer will have to share in paying the tax.

This could have a dramatic impact on the industry, because it directly affects the price of the product. The jects fall into the hands of independents and the need to tighten budgets on CO_2 projects comes into play, cement-coated pipe could play a larger role.

"The problem with nearly every EOR project is the high cost of corrosion," Armstrong said. "The use of cement linings and external coatings and other linings are a method of eliminating or mitigating corrosion of the steel pipe used everywhere."

In fact, he said, the use of cement linings can decide whether or not an EOR project is economically viable. "If the producer has to spend a lot of money replacing steel, it might not be economically feasible," he explained.

He added that, anywhere corrosion takes place, some technique has to be used to prevent it, and pipe coatings are one of the basic methods of reducing corrosion.

While acknowledging that his competitors might feel otherwise, Armstrong said that "my position is that cement lining is the most efficient and economical means to preventing corrosion, because it costs less than any other process and has a very long life expectancy."

His company has been in the cement lining business since 1948 and has been externally coating pipe for the last eight years. He estimated that two-thirds of the company's work is done in the Basin, and he said the company has always been primarily involved in secondary and now tertiary recovery projects.

Armstrong and Jackson say modern cement linings can provide a life expectancy of 15 to 20 years for injection tubing and 20 to 30 years for line pipe. And Armstrong pointed out, can result in increased production from the well.

Cement lining, according to the paper, has several qualities that distinguish it from other linings and coatings.

One characteristic is cement's permeability, which allows corrosive water to migrate through the lining to wet the internal pipe surface. This allows the water to absorb calcium hydroxide, raising the pH to 11 or more, thus passivating the steel surface and inhibiting corrosion.

In addition, cement has an ability to self-repair through a process known as autogenous healing. Keeping the tubing wet for two to three weeks will heal the hairline cracks formed during installation of the pipe by forming new cementitious material that fills the cracks.

Third, the bonding of cement linings in steel pipe is effective and the result of spinning the cement into the pipe at high speeds. The tremendous hoop strength produced in the lining through the centrifugal forces developed drives the cement slurry into non-uniformities in the steel surface, forming a mechanical bond between the lining and the pipe.

And finally, another characteristic of cement lining is the smooth, low-friction surface, the result of high speed of rotation in the lining process and the extremely fine materials used in the slurry.

EOR: Texaco operates model project

today and what we are doing today will help someone else tomorrow."

To be sure, Texaco engineers have done their fair share to advance the EOR-CO_2 technology base through invention — especially in the area of automation. Every process in the entire field is automated and monitored continually through computer control centers at the Mabee Field office and recycling plant. But if Houston wants to plug into the loop at any point they merely have to plug in, using a complicated access code.

Invention and innovation, Johnson said, was integral to the project, and the Mabee field is more versatile because of it.

All of the automation design was done, not by highly paid consultants, but by Texaco engineers. Also, hardware for the most part was not custom-made, but off-the-shelf products modified to fit Texaco needs. Software, too, was a combination of invention and off-the-shelf products. The end result, claims the oil company, is a highly versatile system that the company understands.

"To have done it any other way, would have meant paying a consultant hundreds of thousands of dollars to learn our system better than we know it. We would have have had to spec out every little detail of our system," said one Texaco engineer.

Fully automated, the Mabee CO_2 Unit's electronic-computer wizardry dazzles outsiders with its versatility.

The entire gas $27 million gas recycling plant, which is capable of processing 45 Mmcfd of gas can be trouble-shot in 20 minutes and requires the attention of only two people. The computer control room at the recycling plant monitors 1,500 points in the system, from hot compressor bearings to leaky valves and will sound alarms or shut the system down in an emergency. It will even call the operator at home.

From the control room in the Mabee field all injection well, producing well and satellite batteries are monitored, eliminating the need for pumpers to continually drive from well to well looking for problems. Now pumpers are able to go straight to the problem without delay.

To date $73 million has been spent on the Mabee CO_2 project, but the cost could have been higher except for the use of the "just in time" management concept, which brought each component into place at the exact time it was supposed to go into place and resulted in savings from elements being added too early or too late.

SUPPLY: CO2 plentiful

(From 1E)

With more than 12 trillion cubic feet of CO_2 reserves in place, Bravo Dome, 200 miles to the north of the Permian Basin is one of the largest CO_2 reserves in the world.

The McElmo Dome Field, which covers 200,000 acres in Southwest Colorado, has estimated reserves of 10 trillon cubic feet with peak production estiamted at 1 billion cubic feet per day.

The Permian Basin, with its immense CO_2 projects and potential is recognized as the tertiary capital of the oil indusry. Currently 70-75 percent of all the CO_2 projects in the nation are underway in West Texas and Southeast New Mexico and eventuallyb nearly every field now under waterflood will be a candidate for tertiary, said Dave McElhaney, who formerly managed Amoco's Bravo Dome. He notes that independents will find a profitable CO_2 niche in those areas where there has been good waterflood performance.

That being the case, it is comforting to know that the three major sources for CO_2 are all connected to the Permian Basin. They are the McElmo Dome in Southwest Colorado and Sheep Mountain near Walsenberg, Colorado. In the initial stages, the Val Verde Basin has also been a source for SACROC (Snyder Area Canyon Reef Operating Committee) in Scurry County, which was the Basin's first CO_2 project.

The prime delivery point for CO_2 in the Permian Basin is Denver City, where the 500 mile Cortez pipeline ends, and the major distribution pipeline is Enron's Cenral Basin Pipeline, which runs from Denver City to Reeves County.

If supply and infrastructure are key ingredients to kicking off a CO_2 future, the Permian Basin is well-covered on both accounts.

PITTS: Administration saddles oil industry natural gas industry is only now beginning to recover with $2 prices. To saddle the producer with a 26-cent tax would take the industry back 10 years.

Oil producers have borrowed heavily to acquire and develop properties based on a certain price for oil. To reduce the price by even 50 cents a barrel could seriously affect the ability of oil companies to repay debt and continue development of properties.

Caruso, the policy expert, is also wrong in his assumption that the tax will result in the use of fewer hydrocarbons and that these reductions will probably come from imports. In all likelihood, they will come from declining U.S. production. The Btu tax will impact producer margins, resulting in less remedial work, the plugging of more marginal wells and declining production. Thinner margins will also affect the industry's ability to replace reserves.

In paragraph two, Caruso continues: Although the energy policy focus has currently moved away from providing incentives to domestic oil and gas producers, we shall keep your observations in mind when these options are reexamined . . ."

As we said earlier, you can't get much plainer than this. Clinton has no plans to provide incentives to the domestic oil and gas industry.

Wichita-Albany opened in Andrews

Staff report

Wichita Albany production has been opened in the Three Bar field of Andrews County, surrounded by production from that field's other three zones, 18.6 miles southwest of Andrews.

MW PETROLEUM CORP. completed the No. 7 University "BB" to flow 301 barrels of 38 gravity crude, 126 Mcfd and nine barrels of water on a 20/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 240 psi. The well flowed from perforations 7,734 to 7,842 ft., which had been acidized with 5,000 gallons of HCL acid.

Permitted as a 10,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 10,094 ft. and plugged back to 8,007 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set.

Formation tops, on kelly bushing elevation of 3,371 ft., include the Rustler at 1,592 ft., Yates at 2,852, San Andres at 4,342, Wichita Albany at 6,877, Devonian at 7,989, and Ellenburger at 9,876 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from north and east lines of Section 17, Block 11, ULS survey.

The Three Bar field produces from the Devonian at 8,385 ft., San Andres at 4,384, and Wichita at 7,192 ft.

Delaware strike flows 284 barrels

KAISER FRANCIS OIL CO. has recorded a Delaware discovery in Eddy County, 17 miles east of Loving.

On a 17-hour potential test, the No. 4 Pure Gold "B" Federal flowed 284 barrels of 46 gravity crude, 240 Mcfd and 71 barrels of water on a 32/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 200 psi. The well flowed from perforations 7,734 to 7,896 ft., which had been acidized with 7,400 gallons of 7.5 percent acid and fractured with 24,450 gallons of gel.

Drilled to 8,100 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 8,062 ft.

The well topped the Delaware at 4,130 ft., Brushy Canyon at 6,874 and Bone Spring at 7,920 ft. on ground elevation of 3,344 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and east lines of Section 20, T23s, R31e.

The operator has requested a field designation of West Sand Dunes (Delaware) for the discovery.

Eddy gains second Delaware discovery

A second Delaware discovery has been completed in Eddy County.

SOUTHWEST ROYALTIES INC. finaled the No. 1 North Brushy Draw "35" Federal to pump 136 barrels of crude, 15 Mcfd and 239 barrels of water from perforations 5,583 to 5,656 ft. No treatment was reported.

Drilled to 5,821 ft., the well was plugged back to 5,758 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 5,820 ft.

Location is 1,980 ft. from north and east lines of Section 35, T25s, R29e.

Southwest Royalties has requested a field designation of Getty (Delaware) for the find.

Swastika discovery tested in Concho

Concho County has yielded a Swastika oil discovery, 1-3/4 miles southeast of the Halloran (Goen) field, eight miles southwest of Eden.

VERDAD OIL & GAS CORP. completed the No. 1 Nichols to pump 57 barrels of 36 gravity crude, 10 Mcfd and 171 barrels of water from perforations 2,355 to 2,363 ft. The interval was acidized with 500 gallons of 7.5 percent acid.

Drilled to 3,850 ft., the well was plugged back to 3,370 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 3,849 ft.

The well topped the Swastika at 2,353 ft., Camar at 3,430 and Goen at 3,717 ft. on ground elevation of 2,193 ft.

Location is 2,150 ft. from north and 1,250 ft. from east lines of Section 74, Block B, H&TC survey, Abst. 1902.

Austral Oil tests 10-barrel strike

A modest Fry discovery has been reported in Concho County, 5/8-mile southeast of the Edwin (Pennsylvanian Sand) field, seven miles north of Millersview.

AUSTRAL OIL CO. INC. potentialed the No. 1 Tickle to pump 10 barrels of 41 gravity crude from perforations 2,732 to 2,738 ft. The interval was acidized with 1,000 gallons of 7.5 percent HCL acid.

Drlled to 3,418 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 3,410 ft.

On ground elevation of 1,577 ft., formation tops include the Tannehill at 1,123 ft., Harkey at 2,518, Fry at 2,711 and Ellenburger at 3,231 ft.

Location is 2,237 ft. from south and 4,691 ft. from east lines of Elizabeth Aurand survey 1861, Abst. 11.

Abo gas discovery flows 605 Mcfd

Chaves County has gained an Abo gas discovery, 18 miles northwest of Roswell.

YATES PETROLEUM CORP. finaled the No. 3 Blackwater Unit to flow 605 Mcf on a 3/8 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 165 psi. The well flowed from perforations 3,359 to 3,412 ft., which had been acidized with 1,500 gallons of 7.5 percent acid and fractured with 40,000 gallons of gel and 75,000 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Drilled to 3,560 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 3,503 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from east and 1,980 ft. from south lines of Section 7, T9s, R22e.

Irion plugback reopens field

The Sherwood (Wolfcamp) field of Irion County has been reopened, 4.5 miles northeast of the original opener, six miles northeast of Mertzon.

VERDAD OIL & GAS CORP. plugged back the No. 1 Trigg, a former producer in the Zan Zan (Middle Canyon) field, testing it to flow 132 barrels of 39 gravity crude, 50 Mcfd and two barrels of water on an 8/64 inch choke. The well flowed from perforations 4,299 to 4,301 ft., which had been acidized with 100 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid.

Originally drilled to 6,200 ft., the well was plugged back to 4,318 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 6,184 ft.

The well topped the Wolfcamp at 4,298 ft. and Canyon at 5,751 ft. on kelly bushing elevation of 2,222 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from south and east lines of Andreas Ammann survey 739, Abst. 739.

The well was completed in October 1992 in the Zan Zan (Middle Canyon) field to flow 203 barrels of 42 gravity crude and 209 Mcfd on a 16/64 inch choke from perforations 5,906 to 5,919 ft.

Cow Killer field gains fourth well

The Cow Killer (Goen) field of Concho County has gained its fourth producer and southwest extension, nine miles southwest of Eden.

VERDAD OIL & GAS CORP. tested the No. 1 Scott for a calculated absolute open flow of 2.23 Mmcfd from perforations 3,539 to 3,544 ft., which had been acidized with 500 gallons of 15 percent HCL acid.

Permitted as a 3,800 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 3,640 ft. and plugged back to 3,611 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 3,638 ft.

The well topped the Camar at 3,288 ft. and Goen at 3,512 ft. on kelly bushing elevation of 2,221 ft.

Location is 500 ft. from north and 424 ft. from west lines of Sectin 2125, C. Metzing survey, Abst. 640.

Harken relieves Basses from Bahrain deal

N.Y. Times News Service

GRAND PRAIRIE, Texas — When it comes to drilling expensive, high-risk oil wells in the Middle East, the billionaire Bass family of Fort Worth, Texas, has concluded that the third time won't be the charm.

After providing at least $17 million for the drilling of two dry holes by Harken Energy Corp. in the Persian Gulf emirate of Bahrain, the Basses have decided against ponying up additional millions for a third well.

Under a new agreement, Bass Enterprises Production Co. of Fort Worth, the oil and gas operation of the Basses, will be relieved of its prior contractual obligation to pay for the drilling of a third Harken exploratory well in Bahrain.

Harken, a small oil and gas firm headquartered in Grand Prairie, said that Bass Enterprises has agreed to pay Harken $2 million "plus additional considerations" to be relieved of the obligation.

Harken declined to specify the value of the "additional considerations."

The hardest-working contractor in the nation is the pace-setting contractor in the Permian Basin:
Grace Drilling Company.
We've drilled thousands of wells from Alaska to Florida - put our experience to work for you today.
Working hard is how we acquired some of the best rigs in the oilpatch- and the talent to run them right. And we'll be around next year, working for you, because we're backed by the strength of Grace energy Corporation. So when you're ready to go work with the best crews in the business, give us a call - we'll be there.
Grace sets the pace in the Permian Basin.

Flowlines move out in all directions from a test header and production test satellite in the fully automated Mabee field.

Texaco plant operator Duane Overman is able to check all compressor functions of the recycling facility at this control panel.

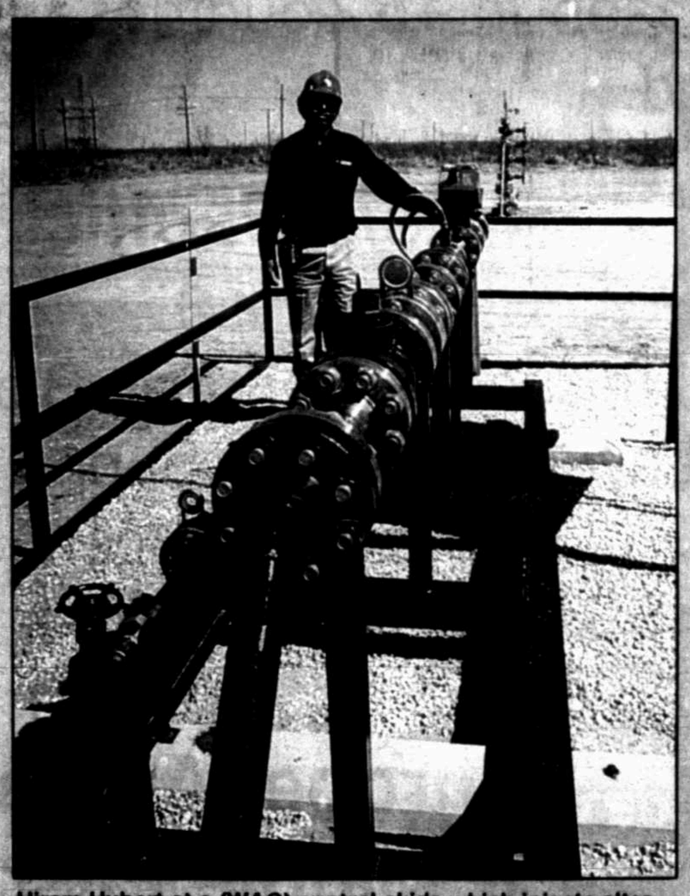

State of the art

Automation at a production facility or enhanced oil recovery project is nothing new, but the extent to which Texaco has carried it in the Mabee field makes that project a state-of-the-art facility.

All processes in the field are fully automated. And this has reduced to only 40 the number of personnel needed to maintain the 13,000 acre production area with its hundreds of wells and myrid of production batteries, injection headers, and production headers and the 45 mmcfd recycling plant.

The first phase of the project and the recycling facility are expected to increase production to 7,400 bopd by the end of the year.

Texaco says tax credits and lower costs permitted the building of the EOR project, even though oil prices are not yet considered high enough to support the expensive enhanced oil recovery projects.

Hiram Hubert at a (WAG) control skids which injects alternating water and gas into the reservoir.

From this computer at the Mabee field office, Greg Hicks is able to check each well in the field individually.

Craig Goodyear monitors automation at this satellite test facility.

Sandy Fazio, stands beneath the main pipe rack at the CO_2 recycling facility. The automated plant can recycle 45 mmcfd of gas.

MEETINGS

SIPES to discuss microbial treatments

Brown

Fred Brown will be the guest speaker at Wednesday's meeting of the Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists. The meeting will be at the Midland Country Club beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Brown will speak on the technology and economics of the microbial treatment of producing wells. Such treatments are designed to increase the productive rates and the recoverable reserves of oil and gas wells.

His presentation will focus on current migration microbial enhanced oil recovery projects in major Permian Basin reservoirs. He will also discuss EOR tax credits for such projects. MMEOR projects have been conducted in the U.S., Mexico and Indonesia.

Brown is founder and president of National Parakleen Co. He has 26 ears oil and gas experience and has authored or co-authored SPE papers on microbial treatments.

Multilayer fracturing topic of SPE group

The Production Operations Study Group of the Society of Petroleum Engineers will meet Thursday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker will be Jack Elbel with Dowell Schlumberger, who will speak on "Multilayer Fracturing."

When two or more fractures are created during multilayer fracturing, proppant penetration in some layers may be inadequate. Elbel will show how the rate in each layer is governed by its fracture height, rock modulus, fluid loss, stress contract and perforation friction. Methods of identifying when multifractures are created and models that simulate each layer geometry will be presented. The models are used to determine if limited-entry is adequate or if isolated fracturing stages are required to achieve the desired penetration into each layer.

Cost is $8 per person.

PASPB holds 'Bankers and Bosses' night

The Petroleum Accountants Society of the Permian Basin will hold its annual "Bankers and Bosses" night Tuesday at the Petroleum Club. The meeting will begin with social hour at 6 p.m., followed by dinner at 6:45 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Wes Kruger, senior tax manager in the Midland office of KPMG Peat Marwick. He will speak on "President Clinton's Energy Tax Proposal."

SEPM hosts local consulting geologist

The Permian Basin section of the Society of Economic and Paleontologists and Mineralogists will meet Tuesday at the Midland Center beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Guest speaker Al Reid will present a paper entitled "Changes in Latitude Bring About Changes in Attitude Concerning Carbonate Sedimentation: Paleogeography Never Remains the Same." He co-authored the paper with D.A. Walker, J. Golonka and S.T. Reid.

Placing Pennsylvanian and Permian regional paleogeographic and facies maps into their Late Paleozoic latitude and plate orientation helps explain and predict basin sedimentation patterns. Understanding that west Texas was very near the equator during the Late Paleozoic means the climate was conducive to carbonate deposition, and that sedimentation would have been influenced by tropical prevailing winds. These trade winds buffeted Pennsylvanian and Permian beaches as still occurs in the tropics.

Paleogeographic reconstructions show a close correlation between the predicted northeast prevailing winds and resulting ocean currents, and the distribution of carbonate sand bodies and karst towers around the Pennsylvanian Horseshoe Atoll, and the distribution of carbonate facies in the Upper Permian San Andres and Grayburg formations on the Central Basin Platform.

The concepts are the outgrowth of modern carbonate studies in Belize. From these models, one can explain why carbonate facies occur where they are found, and opens the door to predicting where good reservoir facies have yet to be discovered.

Cost is $7 per person and reservations can be made by calling 683-1573.

WTGS to sponsor evening meeting

An evening meeting of the West Texas Geological Society has been scheduled for Thursday at the Plaza Club. The meeting will begin with social hour at 6:30 p.m., followed by dinner at 7:30 p.m.

Guest speaker Jorge J. Faz will speak on "Petroleum Geology of Shiwandashan Basin, People's Republic of China." The Shiwandashan basic is located onshore Guangxi Zhuangzu Zizhiqu province, fifty kilometers from the southern coast of the Southeast 10-Province region in China.

This study was conducted as part of an evaluation of the hydrocarbon potential of several onshore China basins. Purchased data packages wee supplemented by reconnaissance level field work aimed at identifying source and reservoir rock quality, thermal maturity, regional plays and trap timing. The geochemical data suggest a potential gas-prone play for the Triassic submarine fans and potential oil-prone play for the Triassic shelf and shelf edge reefs.

Cost is $12.50 per person and reservations should be made by 5 p.m. Tuesday by calling 683-1573.

Clean-up perforations, remove scales, paraffins and debris with the PerfClean Tool's® powerful shock waves.
Restore the permeability and porosity of your wells by economically treating with the PerfClean Tool. It is a safe and efficient way of cleaning new perforations prior to other stimulation treatments, as well as formation testing, and removal of scales, paraffins and other debris. This lightweight tool has no moving parts and is easily transported to remote or offshore locations.
With the PerfClean® Tool...
• Remove scale from the perforation tunnel and/or wellbore pipe
• Remove skin damage caused by perforating operations and wellbore damage prior to formation testing and/or stimulation
• Lower treating pressures required for stimulation treatments
• Enhance matrix acidizing operations
• Increase effectiveness of chemical treatments
• Increase effectiveness of horizontal well stimulation treatments
Case History 12 '92
Gaines County, Texas: Wolfcamp Formation
Operator called to run the PerfClean tool on a well that had a history of scale and paraffin problems. Production was at 6 bbls of oil, 20 bbls of water/day prior to the PerfClean treatment. The treatment was performed by moving the PerfClean tool through the perforated interval while pumping 190 bbls of an acid/solvent blend at approx. 2.8 bbls/min. Immediately after completing the treatment the operator put the well back on pump.
Following the recovery of the treatment fluid the well produced 60 bbls of oil, 62 bbls of water/day. Forty-five days after the treatment the well stabilized at 100 BBLS OF OIL, 60 bbls of water/day. The operator stated that this single treatment substantially increased the overall production of the lease.

Woman's Wednesday Club

90 Years

Text by Linda Anderson

Design by Elizabeth Edwin

Men may have been the pioneers who established new homes and fortunes in the West, but women were the pioneers who civilized it.

Midland was officially founded in 1885, and has grown from a tiny village to a city of almost 100,000 people in the past 108 years. For 90 of those years, the Woman's Wednesday Club has been a part of the community, promoting cultural growth. This month, the members celebrated the club's 90th anniversary, making it possibly the oldest women's club still in exsistance.

According to information from the club's archives, the Woman's Wednesday Club was founded in 1903 — Midland's population was less than 1,000 then — when the Stitch and Chatter Club members decided to do something more with their time just stitch and chatter. "As of 1903, they decided to go into more cultural activities," said Lola Adams, past president of the club and a member since 1958. The group changed their name to the Woman's Wednesday Club and Mrs. O.B. Holt Sr. was the first president, accroding to Mrs. Adams.

Club members chose as their purpose "to study literature, music, opera, art and discuss topics of current interest." Membership was limited to 25 women. They decided to choose a theme for each year, and to meet every other Wednesday (however, now the group meets only once a month and most years are no longer themed but are rather speakers' choice). Each member was assigned a topic for a program, and each was responsible for her own program. She might bring in an outside speaker or be the speaker herself, but the responsibility was hers.

"If she didn't do it (the program), she would be fined $1," Mrs. Adams said.

Dorothy St. Clair, another past president of the club and a member since 1961, said that some of the club's older members estimated that $1 in 1903 would be worth as much as $20 today.

Members also were charged $1 for an unexcused absence. Tardiness cost them 10 cents.

The assignments for a given year were based on the theme for that year, but Mrs. St. Clair said, "Even when we had a theme, whoever gave the program could work the theme around to their hobby or interest or collection. ... It was fascinating to watch."

But the Woman's Wednesday Club has always done much more than just enrich members' lives. Enrichment of the community also has been a goal.

According to club history, in the earliest days of the Woman's Wednesday Club, members worked to improve quality of shows performed in local theaters, provided playground equipment for the school and established scholarships. These efforts were financed through such fund-raising activities as teas and luncheons.

In 1904, the Woman's Wednesday Club became part of the Library Association and helped establish a library for Midland. Members donated their time, money and even books to help Midland's library grow.

In 1914, the club helped establish the Memorial Shelf at the library.

Woman's Wednesday Club suspended regular activities during World War I and instead volunteered their time and effort to the Red Cross. But the library was still near and dear to their hearts, so dues, fines for tardiness and unexcused absences were still collected, and put in the library fund, Mrs. Adams said.

In 1929, about 25 years after they first began establishing a library for Midland, members presented the library to Midland County, which still operates it today.

Woman's Wednesday Club joined the City Federation of Women's Clubs in 1930, and in 1949, the federation changed its name to Midland Woman's Club. Shareholding clubs, including Woman's Wednesday Club, helped raise money for the Woman's Club building in Hogan Park, which was completed in 1954.

Members of Woman's Wednesday Club have been active in many community activities throughout the last 90 years. "Anything that pertains to Midland — we're always very active in," Mrs. Adams said. "We even cleaned the cemetery once."

CLUB: Women observe club's 90-year history with the history of Midland. A list of past presidents reads like a Who's Who of Midland's past. "There were a lot of prominent people who were not members of Woman's Wednesday Club," Mrs. Adams said, "but a lot who were."

Membership has changed over the club's 90-year history, and Mrs. Adams and Mrs. St. Clair shared some of their memories of times and people. "I have a lot of memories of Mrs. Andrew Fasken," Mrs. Adams said. "She was a dear person who brought me into the club. She was the one who had the inspiration for Trinity Towers."

One of Mrs. Adams' favorite memories involves a program she gave on cowboy songs. She read a narrative and was accompanied by a man who played guitar while singing the songs. "Mrs. Fasken loved it so much she wanted to do a recording (of the program). She got Art Cole to do the narrative and made a recording of it."

Mrs. St. Clair remembered another club member. "Eunice Whitehouse (an early environmentalist and wife of Midland's only doctor at that time) always gave a report on whooping cranes," she said. Recently, and in her honor, "I gave a report on whooping cranes in memory of Eunice Whitehouse.

"One of the fun programs I did was I went to the library and got out old women's magazines and looked up what they used to suggest for Thanksgiving dinner."

Other programs also have been memorable to the members. "Frances Kerr had some men come in and talk about water conservation," Mrs. Adams said. Now, "every time I turn on my faucet I think about those men and their talk about how much water we waste.

"I learned about capital punishment," she said. "I did research and learned we are the most lenient people in the world on capital punishment."

Research often leads members to interesting information. "I enjoyed doing one (program) on the history of the American flag," Mrs. St. Clair said. Many members of Woman's Wednesday Club also are members of the Daughters of the American Revolution, "and they learned a lot about the flag from my research. They were so impressed they asked me to go to Trinity Towers and do it there.

"It's fun to have to go back and do research," she added. "I get so impressed with our library."

While community activities and history are part of the work of the club, the relationships among the members is the real heart of the organization. "It has been a very caring club," Mrs. Adams said. "All the members share their joys and sorrows."

That kind of friendship is important to the members. "Some of the ladies are up in their 90s," Mrs. St. Clair said. "They could hardly go out, but they would make an effort to get out every other Wednesday" to meetings of the club.

"It's just the fellowship," Mrs. Adams said. "The caring and all. You just have feeling for the people. You want to go and be with them."

Besides, she added, "We've had lots of fun."

DEAR ABBY

Frustrated wife wants to air dirty linen

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Please tell me what to do about this problem. I've got a husband who never takes a bath. He sleeps in his underwear, then wears it the next day and sleeps in it again. I can't even get him to put it in the laundry!

Van Buren

Also, he refuses to sleep alone. He's in his 80s. Should I get rid of him? — DISTURBED IN ST. LOUIS

DEAR DISTURBED: That depends on how you plan to "get rid" of him. Some older people avoid bathing because they're afraid of falling. Others suffer a diminished sense of smell. Your husband should see his physician for a thorough checkup.

In the meantime, under the circumstances, you have the right to refuse to sleep with him until he bathes and changes his underwear.

DEAR ABBY: I accidentally sold something that belonged to my husband at our garage sale. It was a set of four copper pots — in pretty bad shape.

I called the person who bought them and explained that I had made a mistake. I asked if she would mind if I gave her check back in return for the pots. Without a moment's hesitation, she refused. I even offered her twice as much as she had paid for them. She still said no.

Abby, do you think I was being unreasonable to expect her to return the pots? They were not valuable — except to my husband. — LUCIA F. IN TEXAS

DEAR LUCIA: You were not being unreasonable to expect her to return the pots — especially at twice the amount she had paid for them — but she was under no obligation to sell them back to you at any price.

I know how you must have felt having sold something that belonged to your husband. When my husband was in the service during World War II, I gave his golf clubs away because he hadn't used them in a while. Big mistake.

DEAR ABBY: Mrs. Dow should not be upset about her last name. My last name is KWASNIEWSKI.

I'm 17 years old, and when I get new teachers, substitutes, see doctors, or meet new people, I always hear a new version of the way they spell or pronounce it.

I take it all with humor and correct them. My friends who have given up on pronouncing it call me whatever they think is easier. ("Kwazzy" seems to be a favorite; it's easier than Kwasniewski.)

I'm proud of my unique Polish name. — KIM KWASNIEWSKI IN GARLAND, TEXAS

DEAR KIM: Meet another reader who has trouble with his name:

DEAR ABBY: In today's San Gabriel Valley Daily Tribune (Covina, Calif.), I got a real kick out of the "name game."

People just don't listen today. My last name is BLACK. What could be more simple? Yet I am called BLICK, BLOKE, BLAKE, BRICK. On the telephone, I make it easy for them and say, "My name is Gerald BLACK." Then I spell it, "B-L-A-C-K ... you know — the opposite of WHITE." Then they get it. — GERALD A. BLACK, POMONA, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Every time people insist they're right, I recall a story I read somewhere about a husband who insisted his wife was becoming hard of hearing, and planned to prove it.

While working in the back yard one day, he stood a distance behind her and said, "Martha, can you hear me?" No response. Moving closer, he repeated, "Martha, can you hear me?" Still no response. He moved closer still and said, "Now can you hear me?"

She replied, "For the third time, YES!" — JOE L., THE EMPIRE STATE

Here's an excellent guide to becoming a better conversationalist and a more attractive person. To order "How to Be Popular," send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada), to: Dear Abby Popularity Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054. (Postage is included.)

Fashion show

Julian Gold will present "Paris in the Spring" fashion show at the meeting of Midland Country Club Ladies Association planned for Friday. Social hour will be 11:30 a.m. with lunch and fashion show to follow. For reservations call 682-4378. Cancellations should be made by noon Thursday.

Ladies association to meet

Green Tree Country Club Ladies Association will meet April 27. Social time will be 11:30 a.m. with luncheon to follow at noon. Guests are welcome with reservations. For reservations call 699-8413 by Friday.

Billie Scott will present a program on "Early Day Texas Women."

Mrs. Scott, a native of Lamesa, attended Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene. She and husband, Willie L. Scott, have two children and two grandchildren.

During the time her husband served as Adjutant General of Texas under Gov. Bill Clements, Mrs. Scott conducted tours of Camp Mabry. With the help of employees of Camp Mabry, she wrote and produced "A Tribute," a production honoring pioneer women.

She is a member of Austin Womans Club, The Settlement Club, P.E.O. and her church. In 1981 Mrs. Scott was presented the Unsung Heroine Award at the National VFW Convention in Philadelphia. She served as a member of the board of trustees for Hardin-Simmons University. In February the Heritage Society of Austin honored Gen. and Mrs. Scott for the work they did while living at Camp Mabry.

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Trees bring more than beauty to landscape

By Deborah A. Benge

Imagine the city of Midland without any trees — or any town without trees, for that matter. It would be a sterile landscape of harsh concrete, brick, steel and asphalt. Is this a place you would want to live? Of course not — how depressing. Trees make communities livable.

Benge

Trees help solve many problems, especially problems in urban areas. Trees create a livable environment, add beauty and are beneficial to our mental health. Trees provide us with colors, flowers, beautiful shapes, forms and textures. Trees screen harsh, stark scenery and soften the hard lines of architecture and masonry.

Often overlooked is the tremendous impact trees have on our moods and emotions, providing psychological benefits impossible to measure. Trees create feelings of relaxation and well being. They provide privacy, a sense of solitude and security. Studies have shown that post-operative hospital stays are shortened when patients are placed in rooms with a view of trees and open spaces.

Trees help reduce air pollution because they need carbon dioxide, water, sunlight and nutrients to make their own food. In this food-making process, plants release oxygen for us to breathe. Trees help settle out, trap and hold particulate pollutants (dust, ash, pollen and smoke) that can damage human lungs. They absorb CO2 and other dangerous gases and they produce enough oxygen in each acre for 18 people every day.

Trees save energy when strategically placed in the landscape to help with cooling in the summer and heating in the winter months. Up to 30 percent of cooling costs can be saved when deciduous (drops leaves in fall) shade trees are used properly around the home. By using deciduous trees rather than evergreen, you can get the warming effect of the sun's rays during the winter months to help with heating costs especially when planted on the east, south and west sides of buildings. Trees planted to shade hard surfaces, like drives, sidewalks and patios, will minimize the heat load, making your outdoor and indoor living areas just that much more comfortable.

I could go on listing how trees block the wind, protect your property, increase property values, increase economic stability, reduce noise pollution, increase wildlife and much more, but time and space won't allow that. I will tell you that April 23 is Texas Arbor Day and April 30 is National Arbor Day, and that everyone and every group should recognize it. Check with the extension office for a copy of the top landscape trees for the Permian Basin.

Find out more about trees, the best species for the Permian Basin, how to establish and maintain trees and much more by attending the Home Landscape School 7 p.m. April 20-22 at the Student Union Building in Chaparral Hall, Midland College. Included will be information on outstanding plants for Midland/Odessa; planting, establishing and maintaining landscapes; landscape design principles; and designing front and back yards.

Registration fee is $20 per household, and includes landscape kit, landscape book and several other publications. Pre-register by 5 p.m. Tuesday at Midland County Extension office, 2545 E. Business Loop 20 (next to Midland County Exhibit Building). Checks or money orders can be made payable to Permian Basin Master Gardeners.

What's in a name? Maybe personal identity

By Joan Steinau Lester
N.Y. Times News Service

EMERYVILLE, Calif. — The flap over Hillary Rodham Clinton's name has got me to thinking of my own. I got my second name from my dad, who got it from his dad, who got it from his dad, in a row of Steinaus stretching back to Abraham Steinau in Steinau, Germany.

Jews they were, until they got to my granddad, who married an anti-Semitic gentile. She raised her son a Lutheran, as was I raised. But at least our immediate family kept the name, awkward as it often seemed.

As soon as he left home, my dad's brother changed his last name to an Anglo-sounding one, Pembroke. He even gave himself a II at the end of the name.

And with the name came a background. He was from wealthy Southern roots. Not the locked-out-of-the-rooming-house family, with a Jewish bookie father, Jacob, that my father remembers from his Kentucky youth.

Losing Jewish names is not uncommon. The father of a friend changed the family name from Greenberg to Greene when my friend was very young, a change resisted only by the daughter, then 16. My friend, after 30 years, is now considering making the move back to Greenberg.

As adults, a number of my friends renamed themselves: Emma Missouri, Heru Nefare Amen, Aquila Ayana. They have used the name change to claim a heritage made invisible by the "forgetting" of our radical her-/history or the wholesale erasure of names in slavery times.

My last name — my Anglo one — I got from my first ex-husband, who got it from his daddy, who got it from his daddy, who got it from a slave owner. I decided to keep the name even after the man, because of the children. So we would all have the same last name. And I'd gotten used to the name myself.

Then I married another man who didn't like my having the first man's name, but I kept it anyway.

Well, I tried to keep it for my own use. But the Motor Vehicle Department in New York wouldn't let me get a driver's license in that name because I was married to another man, and a married woman in New York in 1971 had to use her current husband's last name.

So I was going by several names then, with the driver's license in one name and the checking account in another. It made cashing checks difficult but was always an opportunity for education.

Many people's names have been changed by others. Some were shortened and Anglicized by officials with papers at Ellis or Angel islands, or by an employer impatient with foreign-sounding names.

A few years ago, Janie Wong worked in my office. One day I asked her about her experiences in London, where she had lived and worked as a nurse and secretary for 10 years after emigrating from Malaysia.

In the telling of her adventures as a woman leaving her native land at 20, she included, "My employer in London couldn't remember Mei-Ying, so she said, 'We'll call you Janie.' We all got used to it, and that's how I became Janie. Even my husband, Kok-wah, calls me Janie."

I was appalled. "That's like a slave name. Don't you want your own name back?" At first she demurred, laughing and saying, "Oh no, we are all used to it now."

Then it turned out she would prefer a change. In fact, when she said her real name she lit up in a way I had never seen. As we all made the switch at the office, Janie quickly faded away as Mei-Ying came forward.

And quite a different person she was: not the shy, self-effacing Janie we had come to know but a dynamic and powerful woman who took leadership at work and shortly thereafter became the first female board member of her church.

Mei-Ying, I salute the woman you reclaimed.

Mazeltov!

Let us all reclaim our power to name. As we create our language, we create ourselves. Let us create ourselves in the most beautiful images we can imagine.

Many people's names have been changed by others. Some were shortened and Anglicized by officials with papers at Ellis or Angel islands, or by an employer impatient with foreign-sounding names.

AT WIT'S END

Mellow moms take it all in stride

EDITORS NOTE: Erma Bombeck is taking a week of vacation. This column originally ran June 26, 1990.

By Erma Bombeck

Often when I'm interviewed, I'm asked what kind of a mother I am. That's a lot like asking me to make up my own test and grade it myself.

Bombeck

Who knows? I showed up for it. I worked a lot of overtime. Had a lot of help from Drs. Spock, Denton and Ruth. Not one of my kids is working on a "Mommie" book. (Only one has an agent.)

I suspect that if you talked with each of the three you would get a different answer, because I was three different people. No one got the same mother.

Child No. 1 got the Antiseptic Queen, a thin, nervous woman endowed with patience and dedicated to staying at home boiling things all day long, as if she were living through a typhoid epidemic.

She boiled pacifiers, toys and diapers, recorded the baby's BMs, and took pictures every four days for the baby album. She hand-smocked little dresses, served homemade baby food in a warmer dish with little ducks floating around the rim, and actually needlepointed a 4-by-6 rug of a sailboat for the nursery.

Child No. 2 got Super Sufferer, who had stretch marks on her face from overeating and dragged around in her husband's shirts. She couldn't get a meal together until 7 and fell asleep during a root canal.

With regularity, she flunked the wife/mother quizzes in magazines. She told her children the tooth fairy resorted to checks because the IRS needed proof of the deductions. Apathy reigned.

The baby food included a hot dog on a paper plate. The musical potty seat played "The Impossible Dream," and she once rescued the pacifier from the coffee grounds and rinsed it with the garden hose before sticking it in baby's mouth.

Child No. 3 got Mother Mellow, who didn't much care what he did just so long as he had clean hands and his own door key. Birth and graduation pictures were on the same film. The sailboat rug faded when it was washed and was now used for a dog bed.

She was a woman with no nervous system, even when the baby bit into a tube of paint tint and urinated blue for a week.

This mother actually revealed a sense of humor and admitted to mistakes from time to time. She ironed on demand and just the parts that showed. The only items in the baby book were a footprint and congratulations from the insurance agent.

Small wonder kiss-and-tell books are written by the firstborn.

A leg up

For a wedding, every detail is important, so don't forget the hose. What looks like encrusted pearls at the ankle of these wedding hose are really tiny dots of pearlized paint from Tulip, adding that perfect "something special" for when the bride's garter is removed.

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Policies for publication of announcements in the Lifestyle section of the Reporter-Telegram are:

Information for Sunday pages must be in our office by 5 p.m. the preceding Monday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

We cannot mail forms to persons in Midland. Pictures must be picked up in the Lifestyle office within one month after publication. To have a photo returned by mail, include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. Unclaimed photos are discarded after one month.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required. A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements. Portraits of the bride only or of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements. A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements.

Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted. The MRT reserves the right to deny publication of any photo due to quality or content.

Bridal attire offers more variety

By Barbara Mayer
Associated Press

Brides of today: Pay your money and take your choice. Both high fashion and traditional wedding dresses abound in today's market.

"There's more freedom in bridal attire because there is more variety in brides' ages, interests and attitudes," says Rachel Leonard, fashion editor of Bride's magazine.

The good news for those who don't like the high cost of getting married stylishly is that prices have come down over the last year or so. Expect to find a wide selection of dresses at $700 or less.

"Manufacturers have accommodated to the economy and scaled down prices," says Leonard. "Under a thousand dollars is where the action is; in the past, it was closer to $1,200."

Prices are lower at the designer houses, too.

"A common price point in New York used to be around $4,000," says Vera Wang, an upscale New York bridal retailer and dress designer. "This year, our average dress costs $2,800."

Lower prices are achieved by using less expensive fabrics, less ornament and simpler silhouettes. That means the looks are understated and classically elegant.

Figure-revealing dresses are a trend in New York, especially if the bride has a good figure, says Wang. She finds that some summer brides are opting for sleeveless or even strapless dresses. But this is counter to the national trend for a more covered-up look. If a dress is strapless, it usually comes with a bolero jacket which can be worn for the ceremony, says Leonard.

Especially for spring and summer brides, Leonard singles out a simple princess or A-line silhouette in organza or any crisp sheer fabric. Lace trim bordering neckline, sleeves or skirt or a few scattered lace flowers on bodice or skirt are typical embellishments. The style is flattering to all figure types, including women with wide hips, because the skirt is full without being gathered.

Though they call for a good figure, dresses with a long and lean silhouette are fashionable. Following the general trend, this type of dress hugs the figure or is columnar in front, but is full in the back and has a train. A variant is a dress fitted to the knees and then flaring out.

A third style of dress has the back interest of a bustle or soft bow or a sculptural, cascading train. Often made up in damask or another jacquard fabric with texture, this type of dress is highly suited to formal weddings and is complimentary to tall, slender women.

Does the emphasis on fashion mean the end of all those frilly dresses with lots of embroidery, ruffles and beading? Not by any means.

"There will always be a customer for this type of look," says Leonard.

Wedding dresses can be both comfortable and appropriate. Some come with jackets and removable trains or overskirts. For the ceremony, the bride wears the jacket and a long train. For the reception, she takes both off these and has a more maneuverable dress for dancing.

Regardless of what style a bride selects, the cut of the dress and its fit are the most important aspects of making the bride look wonderful.

"There are big differences in how well dresses are fitted and altered from store to store," says Leonard. "Word of mouth is the best way to make sure that you have chosen a shop with good fitters."

'There are big differences in how well dresses are fitted and altered from store to store. Word of mouth is the best way to make sure that you have chosen a shop with good fitters.'

— Rachel Leonard fashion editor, Bride's magazine

It's hardly news that what the bride wears sets the tone for what the rest of the wedding party wears. Nonetheless, bridesmaids are rebelling. If they're going to spend from $125 to $250 for a dress, they want it to be flattering and be able to wear it again.

"The whole industry is going in the direction of more flattering and sophisticated bridesmaids' dresses that can be worn on other occasions," says designer Achariya Watters of Watters & Watters, Inc., in Dallas.

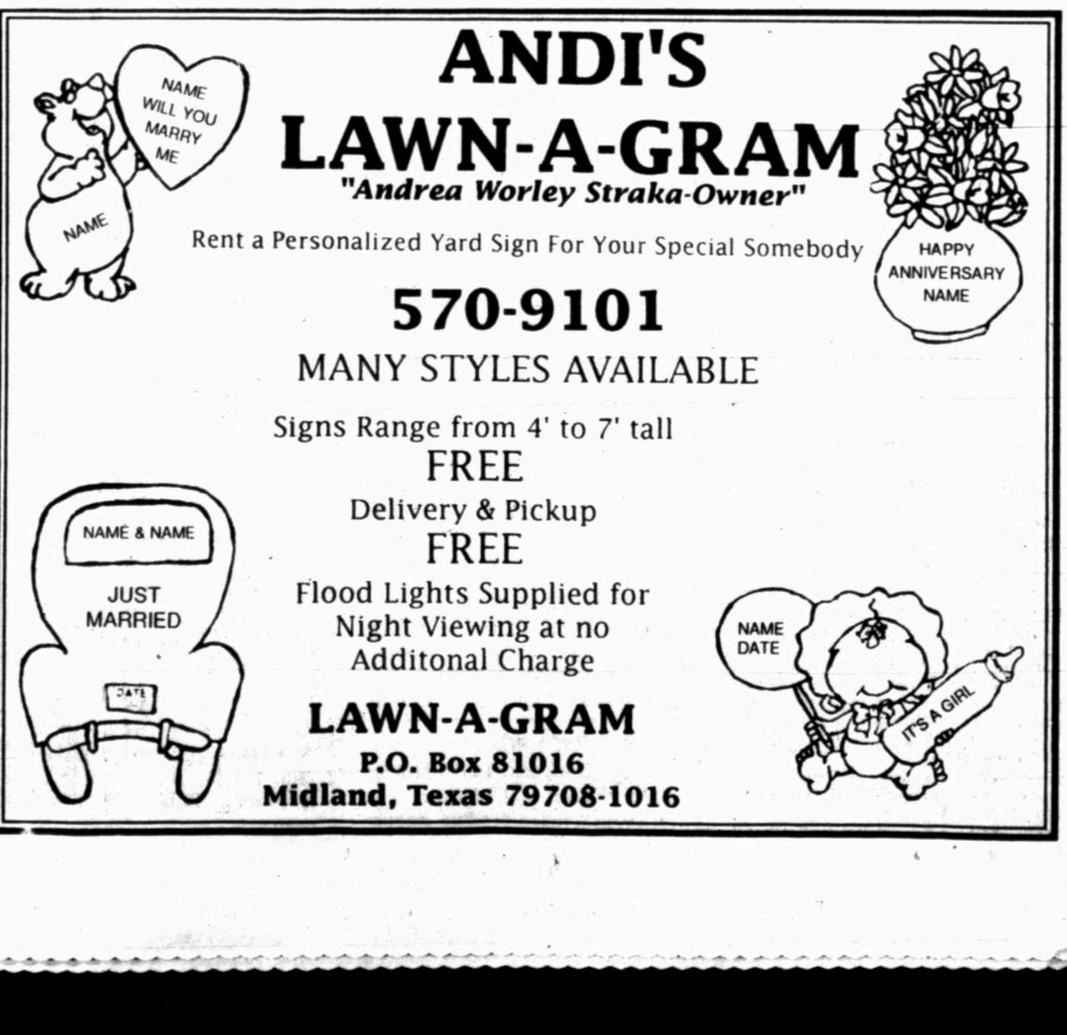

Her designs of this type won her the Dallas Fashion Award for American Style given by the Dallas Apparel Mart in October, 1992.

Some of her more popular numbers have been two-piece cotton faille dresses with long jackets, short dresses in iridescent organza or satin, and dresses with portrait necklines and asymmetric closings. A new outfit for 1993 by Watters features a gold organza circular skirt with a chantilly lace blouse and a narrow belt.

Wang says street-length black lace cocktail dresses were great sellers for fall and winter weddings this year. A strapless velvet column dress with a little bolero was another hot item.

Mothers of bride and groom usually prefer simple, straight dresses — to the floor for an evening wedding, street length for a daytime wedding.

As always, what the men wear is based on the bride's attire, the time of year, the time of day and the degree of formality of the wedding. Choices range from a plain dark blue suit or a tuxedo to a cutaway or morning suit for formal occasions.

ANNIVERSARIES

Couple celebrates golden anniversary

Frank and Marie Turney of Midland celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a family dinner.

Turney and the former Marie Shults were married April 7, 1943, in Lamesa. They have two children — Duane Turney of Chadsworth, Calif., and Dolores Ezell of Midland — as well as four grandchildren and a fifth grandchild scheduled to arrive in August, and one great-grandchild with the second great-grandchild due this month.

Turney served in the U.S. Air Force and was discharged in 1944. The couple has lived in Midland for about 40 years. Turney worked for Porter Supply Co. in Midland from the early '50s until his retirement in 1985 after 30 years. Mrs. Turney worked for Midland Independent School District and retired in 1988.

Frank and Marie Turney

The couple are members of Belview Baptist Church in Midland.

Harrisons observe 40th anniversary

Midland residents Hulan and Virginia Harrison were honored with a family celebration and luncheon hosted by their children and grandchildren honoring their 40th wedding anniversary.

Harrison and the former Virginia Sharp were married April 18, 1953. They have four children: Kathy Jones, Patti Higgins and Jay Harrison, all of Midland, and Leland Harrison of Portales, N.M., as well as three grandchildren.

The couple has lived in Jal, N.M., El Paso and Midland. Harrison is retired from El Paso Natural Gas Co.

Traditional African weddings a trend

EDITOR'S NOTE: The writer spent seven months planning her own traditional African wedding.

By Lynnette Khalfani

LOS ANGELES (AP) — African-American brides are abandoning something old, new, borrowed and blue for splashes of color, lavish detail, rich fabric and ornate embroidery.

Clothing is just part of a trend toward traditional African weddings among black couples who want to celebrate their racial pride and return to their heritage.

"We both studied black history in college and that was the deciding factor," said Maisah Hill, a bride-to-be from Los Angeles. "We wanted to have a traditional African wedding to incorporate the things we learned about our heritage and our roots."

"Although no one is keeping numbers, African weddings are definitely growing in popularity," said Russell Adams, chairman of the African American Studies Department at Howard University. "For some, it's regarded as chic and fashionable. For others, it's the culturally politically correct thing to do," Adams said.

Other ethnic groups in America have long reflected their heritage in their ceremonies. But there are several reasons why Western-style weddings remain the norm, said Dr. Erylene Piper-Mandy of the University of California, Riverside.

"There are numerous books out there — by Emily Post, Judith Martin and others — that will tell you about wedding etiquette; what you should do, what you should wear, and who sits where," said Piper-Mandy, who specializes in cultural anthropology and African-American studies.

"But for those couples who have traditional African weddings as an extension of what they believe, they will take the time to research and find alternative sources of information about their own customs."

Piper-Mandy said African-Americans, unlike other ethnic groups, haven't had as many traditional wedding ceremonies in the past because few people were aware of the customs.

"The single most important reason why African-Americans have not followed their own traditional practice is because during slavery African-Americans were highly discouraged and even forbidden to practice African rituals," she said.

The cost of a traditional African ceremony can be significantly less than a western wedding. The primary savings is on the Victorian-style wedding gown, which can range from several hundred dollars to a few thousand dollars.

Instead of a white satin gown, flowing train and matching veil, an African-American bride might choose a four-piece gold brocade dress, draped around her body and accented with a flared head wrap. The gown can be bought or made for less than $300.

But as with any style of wedding, the costs can increase sharply depending on the number of guests and how elaborate the celebration. And an African wedding usually takes extensive — if not expensive — preparation.

Ancient customs varied, depending on tribal affiliation, religion and geography. Some customs were almost universal, however.

African ceremonies stressed that two families were being joined, not just two individuals. Other common customs: formally requesting permission from family elders and other relatives; pouring libations or paying respects to ancestors who have passed away; a bride price paid to her parents by the groom, and lengthy celebrations and feasting after the ceremony.

Many rituals involved tasting honey and kola nut to symbolize the sweet and bitter times; involving both families in the wedding processional and having a drum beat and elaborately dressed dancers mark the couple's arrival or departure.

Planning a traditional African wedding is similar to a western ceremony in that the couple still may have attendants, receive gifts and even use a bridal registry service.

Most African-Americans can't trace their family tree far back enough to determine the specific tribe or ethnicity of their African forefathers, said Pat Onuorah, Nigerian-born woman who sells authentic African attire.

Therefore, couples usually incorporate customs from various parts of the African continent, Onuorah said. The choice of what traditions to include is up to the couple and reflects their personal styles, she said.

"The important thing is not whether a particular practice comes from Nigeria or Senegal, from Zimbabwe or Egypt, but this it comes from Africa," she said.

"That shows that we recognize and appreciate our heritage."

HOMES: Levels separate boys, girls in Stewart home

(From 6G)

Off the family room is the bedroom of Stewart's son. An adjoining bathroom also serves as the bathroom for the swimming pool area, Stewart said.

Upstairs is for girls only. The three Stewart daughters each have their own rooms, and each bedroom has its own adjoining bath. "It's the only to avoid fights before they start," said Stewart.

Besides the bedrooms, the upstairs area also includes a game room, study hall — literally a hall which has been furnished with desks, telephone, computer and other study aids — and a deck.

The large and gracious home seems to have been made specifically for the Stewart family to enjoy.

PARADE OF HOMES

Gracious Living

Text by Linda Anderson | Design by Elizabeth Edwin | Photos by Brian Adamcik

Parade of Homes, sponsored by the Midland Junior Woman's Club, will be April 25. Tickets — which are $10 — are available from any MJWC member or by calling 694-3212 or 683-9791. No children under age 12 are admitted and no tickets are sold at the door. Proceeds from the event will benefit Special Olympics, DARE, ADAPT and MADD.

The home of Larry Stewart, 6814 Island Circle in Green Tree North, combines luxury, elegance and all the room necessary for a family with four growing children.

The home, which has 6,200 square feet, five bedrooms and five-and-a-half baths in two stories, sits on a spacious lot for plenty of yard space — and room for a swimming pool/patio area in the back.

The house, which Stewart said was finished in January 1991, became the family's home fairly recently. "I bought it last summer," Stewart said.

The front door opens almost directly onto a spacious living room with its elegant fireplace and huge window area that opens directly onto the patio/pool.

To the right of the front door is the formal dining room, which Stewart describes as "mixed period." Furnishing styles include Hepplewhite and Queen Anne, and a painting by local artist Roxanne Spradling was done specificially for this room.

To the left of the front door is a room sometimes referred to as "Dad's Study." Its hardwood floor, warm wainscotting and mahogany desk give the room a distinctly masculine feel.

The master suite is done in jewel tones and comfortable, elegant furnishings. A door in the room opens directly out to the back porch. The private master bath has a skylight over the tub, and speakers from Stewart's stereo have been placed in the room so he can have music all over the house.

The huge kitchen with its adjoining breakfast-/dining area is perfect for family life. Over to the left and one step down is the family room, with plaid upholstered pieces and a collection of Cobalt glass. A collection of Western art completes the room.

Please see HOMES/5G

The living room of the Stewart home is comfortably yet elegantly furnished. The vast window area opens directly onto the outdoor swimming pool/patio area.

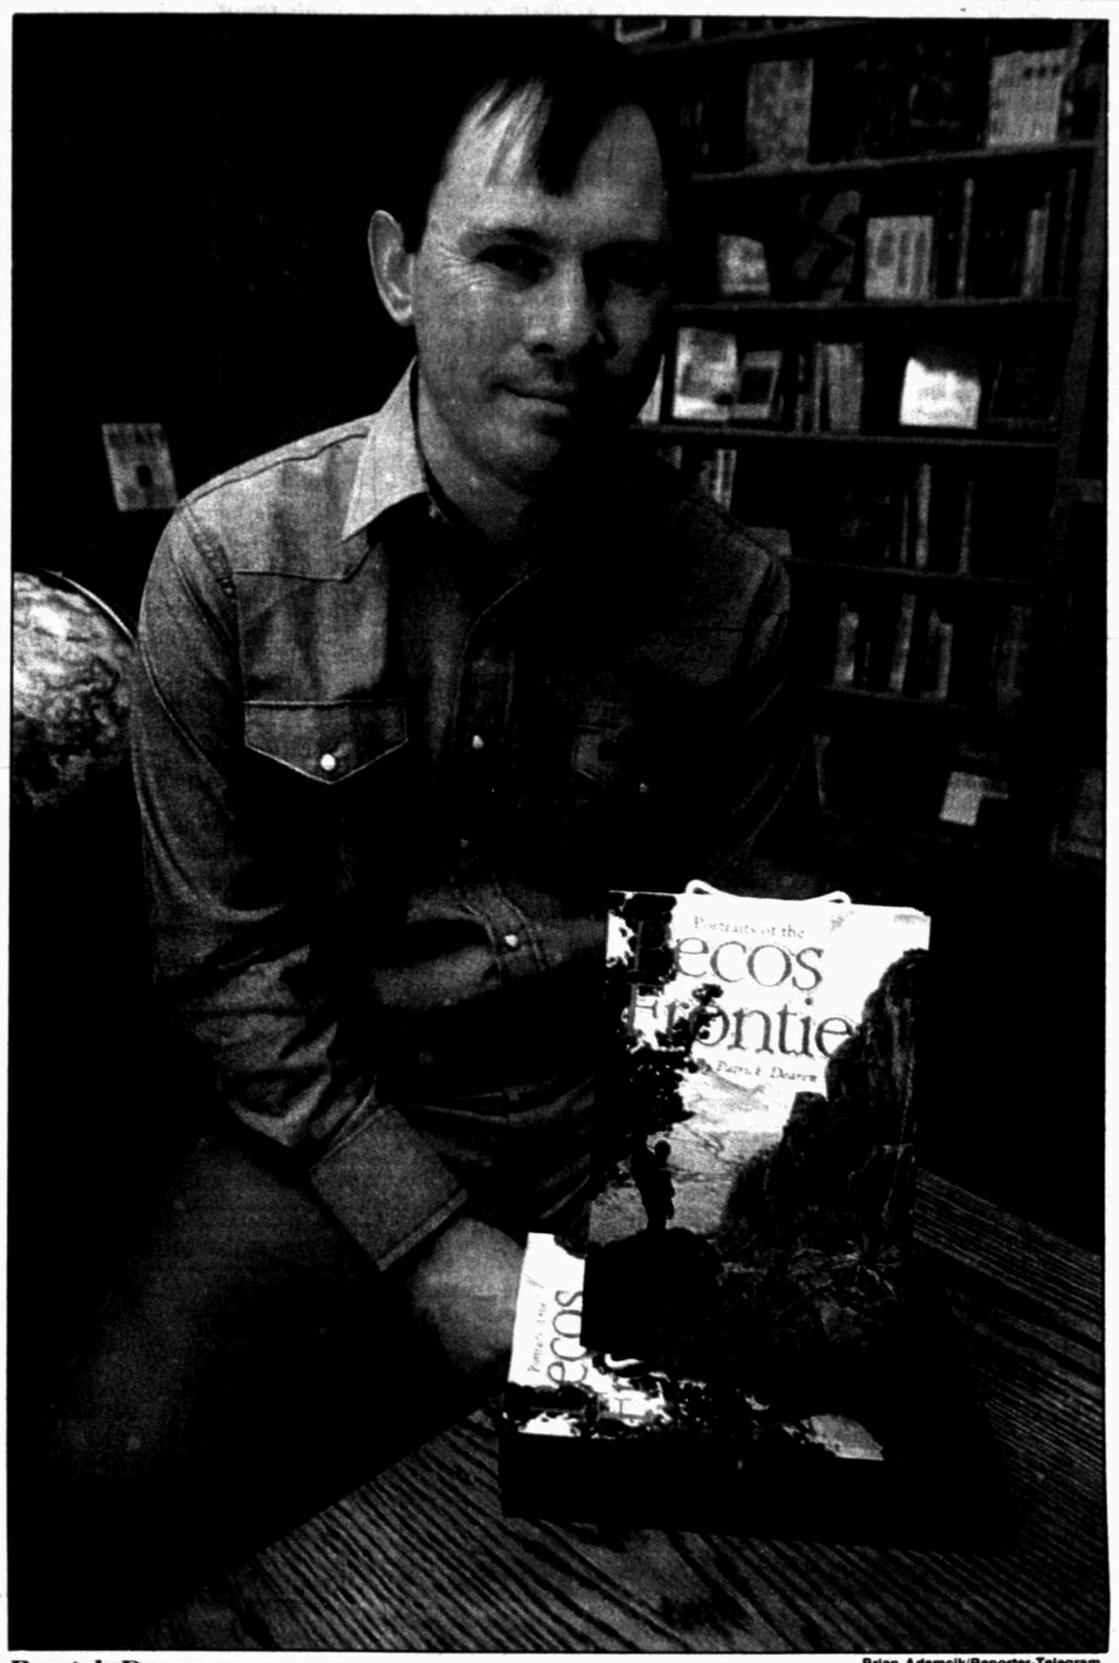

The study is furnished in a very masculine style, with plush chairs, wainscotting and an elegant mahogany desk.

West Texas legends

Patrick Dearen

Brian Adamcik/Reporter-Telegram

Author tries to preserve Texas tales

Author Patrick Dearen traces his interest in writing to age 14. At the time, he was a student at Sterling City High School.

"An English teacher, Bob Bass, suggested I try writing, and he did not know what a monster he had created," said the 41-year-old Midlander.

Dearen, who has published three books, recently had a fourth, "Portraits of the Pecos Frontier," published by Texas Tech University Press. Area signing parties are planned for 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday at Pages and Prints, 6 to 7 p.m. April 30 at Walden's in Odessa and 2 to 4 p.m. May 8 at Walden's in Midland.

Also, the author will be the guest speaker at a Brown Bag Lunch April 28 at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum and Library Hall of Fame.

A member of the Western Writers of America, Dearen began writing "Portraits" in 1985. He also began seeking a publisher for it that same year. It wasn't until August of 1991 that he found one.

"Through that time I was constantly submitting the manuscript in one form or another to various publishers through the Southwest," Dearen said.

"Even Texas Tech University Press, which eventually picked it up, held the manuscript for 16 months before making a final decision. So, it's a very long involved process and you need lots of perseverance. Period."

The difficulties he's faced finding publishers for his work has not kept Dearen from writing.

"I write to gain a sense of perpetuity because a writer has the capability of sharing a part of himself with someone else long after he's gone. I like that idea — that someone I will never meet, never know and that perhaps will be around long after I am gone, will still be able to gain insight into me."

His first novel, which took three years to complete and was started the day his teacher suggested he be a writer, is still gathering

Dream, live your dreams

Ricky Lynn Gregg brings his style of rockin' country music to Cactus Moon Friday. Tickets are $5 at the door. His Midland performance is sponsored by Wemus Entertainment and KNFM.

Stories by Georgia Todd Temple

Musician gives country a rock edge

Entertainer Ricky Lynn Gregg knew how to sing harmony by the time he was 5 years old.

"Mother would sing the harmony," Gregg said, recalling when he would sit next to his mother in church. "All I did was mimic what my mother was singing. I understood the harmony before I understood the melody."

A year later, he was singing harmony standing on a chair, by the pulpit and in front of the congregation in the "small, small" Southern Baptist Church in East Texas where his father, Melvin Gregg, was choir director. The youngest of five sons, Gregg, when he was 6, watched two of his older brothers form and perform in bands. One brother had a country rock band and the other one had a folk music band.

"So, at a very young, young age, I had plenty of opportunities to see how the entertainment business operated at a very country boy level," Gregg said.

Gregg, who plays Cactus Moon Friday, was performing with his brothers' bands by the time he was 11.

"By the time I was 14 years old, I knew everything it took to about putting a band together and what it took to get jobs — you had to go out there and hustle," Gregg said. "Basically, I've done this my whole entire life."

Writing songs and performing music took up so much of his time, he said he was lucky to finish high school.

"Simply because my focus was totally on music and being around people who are involved in music. I played all through high school. By the time I was a senior I was playing four nights a week."

He had started performing so early in life that by the time he was in high school, his skills "were highly developed" and he spent much of his time being included in activities, such as jam sessions, which featured professional musicians. These opportunities enhanced another characteristic Gregg had. Daydreaming.

"I always dreamed of having a record label and touring the world — Germany and Europe and the United States. And I wanted people to love my music. That was my dream."

Now, more than a decade later, Gregg's dream re-

WRITE: Author preserves true, tall tales dust, he said, "Alongside several others. But, it was excellent training ground, and I went to The University of Texas with the idea of becoming a writer.

"While I majored in journalism, I was writing novels throughout my college years," Dearen said, adding that he completed two novels and dozens of short stories while in college, none of which were published.

When he graduated from UT, he had to find gainful employment so he went to work for The San Angelo Standard Times, the first of two newspapers for which he was to be a staff writer. The second one was The Reporter-Telegram.

"While I was writing non-fiction during working hours, I was pursuing longer writing forms at home. But, I never sold a single word of fiction or anything in a longer form until I had written for 13½ years."

His first contract came in 1979. Zebra Press of New York published a science fiction novel called "The Shakwa," which was co-authored under the pseudonym Jene March.

"I immediately began a second science fiction novel. And, I guess the marketing process on it spoiled me because the first house I submitted it to gave me a contract."

The book's title was "Starflight to Faroul," which rhymes with fool. It was published by Tower Books in New York in 1980. Tower also picked up "The Illegal Man," a novel Dearen had written a few years before about an illegal alien who crossed the Rio Grande from Mexico to work on a ranch in West Texas. This book was released in 1981.

"Then I went through a long drought, and during that time I became interested in the lore and legend of West Texas, and I spent five years researching and writing my book 'Castle Gap and the Pecos Frontier,' which was released in 1988 by TCU Press."

In "Castle Gap," Dearen explored many of the legends of the Pecos River country such as Castle Gap's lost treasures; Horsehead Crossing, which is the "most infamous ford" in the Old West; the lost Sublett Mine of the Guadalupe Mountains; the lost wagon train of the Monahans Sand Hills; Juan Cordona Salt Lake in Crane County; and "the alleged spook" of the old Sutler's Store at Fort Stockton.

The author considers "Portraits" a companion volume to "Castle Gap" because it explores many of the same themes.

"Portraits" grew out of Dearen's "long time feeling of oneness with West Texas, not only the land, but its legends and history and especially its people.

"What I've tried to do is preserve some of the true tales and tall ones that otherwise will be lost," said Dearen, whose favorite author when he was young was Edgar Rice Burroughs. "Every time I pick up a newspaper and see where another old-timer has passed on, I think about the priceless stories they took with them. That's one thing that gives me the drive to keep working. I'm afraid if I don't save their stories nobody is going to."

Dearen prefers the George Plimpton type of research.

"The kind where I live through it myself. What it does is give me a feel for the story I couldn't possibly have otherwise.

"If I'm going to write about the Lost Chisos Mine, which I did as part of 'Portraits,' then it's not enough for me just to study historical records and talk to old-timers, I've also got to go looking for the lost mine myself by back-packing high up into the Big Bend Mountains.

"For a section on phantoms and ghost lights, I stayed the night in a supposedly haunted house and went out and sighted in the ghost fires of the Big Bend with my telescope.

"And for a history section, I actually walked in the footprints of dinosaurs near McCamey and went to a roundup and smelled the burnt flesh and singed hair."

Of all the characters Dearen wrote about in "Portraits," he identified the most with ranchhand Charlie Walls.

"Most people considered him born out of time. They say he had the idea he'd of liked to have been a cowboy 100 years ago.

"Well, one day in 1976, he stole a horse from a remote line camp in Coke County and rode off into the rugged canyons in a tragic search for the lost Old West. In a four-day manhunt, he alluded a horse back posse and helicopter just like Kirk Douglas in 'Lonely Are the Brave' only to be killed by a freight train in California a week later.

"Walls obviously loved the land and longed for a simpler era when there was wilderness in all directions, and that's just how I am. That's one reason I felt so compelled to hike those same canyons and tell his story."

Dearen traces his interest in this area's Old West back to his roots.

"My ancestors came out here and helped pioneer Sterling County in the 1870s and 1880s so maybe its only natural that I have this interest in the history and legends of the area."

Money has not been a motivating factor for Dearen, who also spent five years working with the mentally retarded.

"If I wrote for money, I wouldn't have written a single word because very few writers make a living purely from their writing. My first novel — by late 1970 dollars — I figured out time spent and the income I gleaned from it, and I made 54 cents an hour."

Writing has a common ground with the other two professions in which the author thought he wanted to be involved.

"There are only three things I ever wanted to be and none of them are financially lucrative. In the second grade, I wanted to be an archaeologist. By the time of my early teen years — before 14 — I wanted to be an astronomer. Those two fields aren't that different, at least subject wise, from what I'm working in right now — science fiction and history."

Dearen, who plays ragtime piano, enjoys handball, back-packing and wilderness canoeing, feels compelled to write.

"Writing has always been a struggle, not only the actual putting of words on paper, but going through the entire process of finding a publisher.

"And I've stuck with it over the years. From the time I was 14 years old, it was very important to me. And when that last grain of sand is falling through that hour glass, I don't want to sit there and ask myself what could I have done with my writing if I had stuck with it.

"This way I'll never have any second thoughts about it. I'll know. If I haven't really achieved what I wanted to achieve, it won't be because I haven't tried."

Pianist to perform in Midland Friday

Staff report

"If it comes from the heart, it reaches the heart," said Polish-American pianist Wladinir Jan Kochanski, who is to perform at First Presbyterian Church at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Kochanski

Kochanski, a classical entertainer, treats his audiences to insightful and humorous narration in addition to the music of the masters.

"Classical music is in a crisis," Kochanski said. "There is so much about it that people don't understand because the pianist is not communicating the music. It's important to me that the audience understand and appreciate it."

Kochanski is from McCook, a tiny Polish community near the Texas-Mexican border. His Polish-born parents never had a radio or phonograph in the house and he was never exposed to music. Yet, while quite young, he told his parents he wanted to play the piano.

"They were amazed," Kochanski said. "Even though I didn't even know what a piano was at that age, I knew I wanted to play. It was very strange."

Not too long after that, he was with his mother when she went into a dress shop. While there, he heard a piano being played upstairs.

"I wandered off to find where the music came from, which is where my mother found me later. The woman who was playing the piano that day ended up as my first piano teacher."

He was 5 at the time. He won his first piano competition when he was 10. At 16, he entered New York's Juilliard School of Music, where he studied for six years.

"I knew my chosen profession would not make me rich," Kochanski said. "My brother chose a more practical career. He's an engineer. But, I have always been single-minded about my music. I have no regrets."

Kochanski has been a guest on major radio and television shows including the Voice of America, Good Morning America, Hour Magazine and the 700 Club.

The concert is sponsored by the Pennington Foundation for the Arts.

Admission is $10 adults, $6 children under 12 and $30 for a family of up to six. Teachers bringing a group of 10 or more students can receive $1 off each ticket. Tickets purchased at the door will cost an additional dollar.

For more information or tickets contact Kim Gilland, 697-3456; Debbie Adams, Odessa, 550-5129.

■ MC presents ensemble

The Midland College Community Jazz Ensemble will present "The Big Band Sounds of The Swing Era" on Thursday, April 22, 1993 from 8:00-10:00 p.m. at the American Legion Woods Lynch, Post 19, 501 Airpark Road.

The public is invited.

■ Concert scheduled

FORT WORTH — Casa Manana presents the fiery sounds of "The Pointer Sisters" in concert, April 30, 1993 at 8:00 p.m. at Will Rogers Auditorium. Tickets are $14 to $30 and are available by calling (817) 332-CASA or any Rainbow-Ticket-Master outlet.

Combining the best of soul, urban R&B and pop, The Pointer Sisters — Anita, June and Ruth — have displayed a versatile repertoire since their first number one record, "How Long (Betcha' Got a Chick on the Side)" in 1975. Much of their early work, including 1973's revival of Allen Toussaint's "Yes We Can Can," had a decidedly nostalgic edge to it, but later songs leaned more to contemporary sounds.

The sisters, including Bonnie, sang in church for their ministers parents while still youngsters. It was humble beginnings for talent that would eventually lead them to worldwide fame.

■ Program planned

West Texas Jazz Society presents "Celebration Of The Arts" with Jazz on a Sunday Afternoon featuring Larry Spencer and The Societies Jazz Combo at Bayou Wadley, Plaza Shopping Center - Garfield and Wadley on April 25, 1993 at 4:00 p.m..

■ Spring concert planned

The Odessa College Choir, Vocal Ensemble and Community Choir will be presenting a spring concert at 8:00 p.m. Monday, April 19 in the the Jack Rogers Fine Arts Auditorium on the OC campus.

The Odessa College Choir will be performing works by Sven Lekberg, William Byrd, Norman Luboff and Ariel Ramirezf, featured soloist will be Shawn Bell and Allen Hightower, choral directors at Permian High School.

The Vocal Ensemble will be singing vocal jazz selections "Birdland" and "Java Jive" and also will feature a medley of songs from the 50s.

The College and Community Choirs will join together to present Randall J. Thompson's "The Peacable Kingdom," which is based on the book of Isaiah and depicts the vision of the prophet of the same name. The concert will close with the spiritual "Joshua Fit The Battle of Jerico" arranged by Harry Geller.

Randy Talley is the choral director and Dr. Charlotte Whitaker is the accompanist for the choirs.

Admission is $2 for adults, $1 for children and students are free with OC I.D.

For more information, call Talley at 335-6631.

■ Concert to have guest

Frank Kowalsky is the guest artist with the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale for the final classical concert of the season Tuesday, April 20, at Lee High School and Thursday, April 22, at Odessa's Bonham Junior High.

Kowalsky

Concert time is 8 p.m. Both are sponsored by Chevron U.S.A. and Mary Frances "Chan" Driscoll.

Kowalsky lives in Tallahassee, Fla., where he is the professor of clarinet at Florida State University School of Music. He has been a member of the United States Marine Corps Band and is serving as principal clarinetist with the Naples Philharmonic, the Tallahassee Symphony Orchestra and the Northwood Orchestra. The Northwood Orchestra is a 50-piece professional orchestra composed of first chair and principal musicians from throughout the United States and Canada.

Kowalsky will perform Mozart's Concerto for Clarinet in A Major. Despite rapidly declining health, Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart composed the Clarinet Concerto in A Major for Anton Stadler on Sept. 28, 1791. During this period, he completed "La Clemenza de Tito" and the German comic opera "The Magic Flute." Woodwind students are encouraged to come. Music students from all area schools are admitted free to all classical concerts.

■ More entertainment/3H

Tickets are $20 for preferred seating and $12 for general admission. For more information call the symphony office, 563-0921.

■ Society plans benefit

The 10th annual Round-Up benefiting the American Cancer Society is set for 7 p.m. May 15 at the Confederate Air Force hanger, Midland International Airport.

Lorrie Morgan and Jerry Jeff Walker will be performing for the event

The theme of Round-Up '93 is "In Search of the American Outback," a journey through time and space through unchartered territories in the American West. Guests will arrive at the "End of the Line," the last stop of civilization.

At the last stop is the Bank, where guests receive their life's savings — a money bag filled with Outback currency — and a map guide leading them to the treasure of the American Outback. The main area of the party is divided into territories. The search for the treasure leads guests through the territories and unique games of chance. Gaming events will include a casino managed by an entertainment company from Dallas.

The meal for the event will be catered by the Perini Brothers of Buffalo Gap.

General admission for the event is $125 per couple and reserved seating in a preferred area is $275 per couple. Sponsor tables start at $1,600. For more information call the American Cancer Society, 683-6374.

■ Club to have show

The Green Thumb Garden Club will be presenting "Setting Pretty," a table-setting show, in the Thomas Gallery at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., Friday through April 25.

Each of the 30 members will decorate a theme table with place settings, centerpieces and accessories. There will be holiday, special occasion, tea and casual settings as well as children's tables and trays. The public will be asked to vote for its favorite table.

This is the first time in more than 30 years that a garden club has done this type of show in Midland, said a release from the garden club.

The Green Thumb Garden Club was formed in 1941 and held biennial flower shows in members' homes until 1991, when the show "Floral Portrait of a Painting" was held at the museum in conjunction with an exhibit of paintings by early Taos artists.

The show is one of the many festivities being held at the museum this spring to celebrate the museum's 25th year in the Turner Mansion.

DREAM: Performer grew up with music

(From 1H)

mains the same. On the back of his first Liberty album cover he tells fans: "To all those in the world young and old, dream your dreams, then live your dreams, for I did."

"And I still believe in that," Gregg said. "My life up until this point, April 1993, has transformed just like I dreamed it. And that's not to say that it wasn't a nightmare quite a few times in the process because it has been."

Those nightmare times Gregg refers to are, he said, the same ones that happen to all performers — transportation, personnel, personal and equipment problems as well as the promises others make and don't keep.

"It's been well stated through other well-known entertainers — the music business is a roller-coaster ride," Gregg said. "No matter how bad the music business can be and how good it can be, the glue that keeps the good times and the bad times held together without just completely falling apart is the music.

"Once you sing songs for a living and once you perform in front of people and see the joy on their faces, you're hooked in forever. It's a fever that you get that you never get ride of."

The only "day job" Gregg had was when he was 17. Since that time, he has managed to earn enough money performing to not have to work at anything else. During his career, he has performed with a group named Savvy, ultimately penning all the material for the band's "Made in Texas," which won "Best Regional Album" at the Dallas/Fort Worth Buddy Awards. By 1983, he'd been nominated by the Texas Music Association for entertainer of the Year, Male Vocalist of the Year and Musician of the Year. Two of his songs, "Run and Hide" and "I'll Come Alive," were nominated for Song of the Year.

He formed his own band, The Ricky Lynn Project, in 1983 and toured nationwide, fronting for such bands as Huey Lewis, the Allman Brothers and Heart. By 1986, his musical reputation was such that Head East approached him to take over as lead singer and guitarist.

Then, 1989 proved a turning point for Gregg. He wrote five of the 10 songs on Head East's acclaimed 1989 album, "Choice of Weapons." He also made a trip to Nashville.

"I loved the earthiness and grit of country music," Gregg said. "And rock music seemed to be splintering, getting more and more metal, and losing something in the process. My kind of rock was always classic rock, which isn't far from its country roots, and certainly isn't a stretch from what's happening now in contemporary country."

His band disagreed.

"They tried, they really did," Gregg said. "These guys are friends, and they wanted it to work. The drummer and the keyboard player really tried to get into what I was doing, but it didn't happen."

Gregg then put together a five-piece band, Cherokee Thunder, named in honor of his Native American ancestry. His great grandmother was full-blooded Cherokee.

"I didn't just go into a costume shop one day and decide that this is what I want to wear, and I didn't go see 'Dances with Wolves' and decide to be an Indian. This image that I have now is an image that I've felt very comfortable with 15 years ago. It's different, but I didn't intent for it to be different. It's what makes Ricky Lynn Gregg the individual that I am. I'm very proud of my heritage."

His father, now 75, while continuing to sing and play the harp and guitar, still farms and traps and makes his living off the land around Longview.

None of his brothers have a career in music, yet two of them are involved in Gregg's music career. Larry Gregg is his tour manager and Gene Gregg is his financial manager.

After signing a multi-album contract with Liberty Records, Gregg has released his debut single, "If I Had a Cheating Heart," which is supposed to be in stores this week. He is still writing the material for his first Liberty album.

"My sound is a little different," Gregg said. "It's no doubt country — good country melodies and those wonderful heartland lyrics that make a lot of sense. But my sound is a little edgier — country with a rock attitude. I believe that I have combined the energy of rock and the tenderness of country for a very unique sound.

"I realize that it's not for everyone. There's a lot of traditional country listeners out there that may object to my sound. I'm not trying to demolish traditional country music. I love traditional country music.

"All Ricky Lynn Gregg is doing is broadening the horizons of country music. I'm bridging the gap between people that may not have listened to country and the true country music lovers who are looking for a little bit more."

Gregg finds society to be turning away from drugs and toward healthier pursuits. These changes mean, Gregg said, "They need a kick from their music. I think people are looking for more natural things to create enthusiasm within themselves. I think my music is very powerful. It's energetic."

Even before securing a recording contract, Gregg considered his life and career successful.

"I think that I've been successful for a number of years without a record deal," he said. "I don't put success in terms of money. I put it in terms of happiness, and I've been happy for so long doing what I do.

"I've been able to make my car payments and keep myself fed. To a lot of people that may seem not very successful, but for Ricky Lynn Gregg it's been part of my life. It's what I call successful — happiness through music and entertaining. I like to make people happy through my music."

Performer's music is family affair

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

Selena Quintanilla bumped into the microphone stand while she was singing, confirming what she already suspected. It was going to be one of those nights.

"I tripped over it," said the 21-year-old singer. "I was so embarrassed and almost knocked it over."

Miss Quinanilla laughed as she recalled the evening, which was still fresh in her memory because it happened this month.

Right before she stepped on stage, her father had noticed the label on her shirt was sticking out. He told her. She kept trying to stick the label back inside her shirt as she was singing, which was part of the reason she bumped into the microphone stand.

Then she realized she was attempting the impossible. She had put her shirt on wrong side out. Her band responded with the appropriate amount of sympathy.

"They all started laughing at me on stage," she said.

Selena Quintanilla performs at Midland's Chaparral Center Friday. Showtime is 8 p.m. Tickets are $12 general admission and $15 reserved. The opening act is Carlos Miranda Y Grupo Meval.

Despite her young age, Miss Quintanilla is not a newcomer to the performing stage. Since 1987, she has received the Tejano Music Awards for Singer of the Year and Performer of the Year every year.

And, her story is not one of achieving overnight success.

"We've been doing this for such a long time, I think I lost out on some of my teenage years," Miss Quintanilla said. "I think I had to grow up a little bit faster than some of the other kids."

She began singing when she was 6½.

I recorded my first record when I was 8 years old. I started traveling professionally with the band at the age of 9, and it's taken us this long to get where we are. It's not an overnight success story. It's the complete opposite."

This year, Selena y Los Ninos also received the award for Album of the Year.

"It was a major surprise," she said of the award. "We weren't expecting it at all. It was really a good feeling."

Miss Quintanilla's musical career is a family affair.

Most of the songs recorded and performed by her are written by her brother, Abraham Quintanilla III, a staff writer for EMI Records, who also arranges and produces her music. Her latest recording on Capitol/EMI Latin, "Entre a Mi Mundo," went Gold just on pre-sale. Her latest album, which is being released this month, is "Selena en Vivo."

Sister, Suzette Michelle Quintanilla, is the drummer in her band and in charge of all equipment, while her father, Abraham Quintanilla II, a former member of the original Los Dinos, is her manager.

"It's a coincidence we all turned out with musical talents," Miss Quintanilla said. "We could have had separate careers. Since we all had the same one, why not put it together and bring in money for the family?"

It hasn't been easy. Miss Quintanilla worked hard to achieve a career and an education.

"When I was going to school, my dad would try to book us on weekends, and it was every weekend.

"It was very hard. I had problems when I was in junior high with some of the teachers. When I moved to Corpus — I went up to the eighth grade in public school — the teachers here really worked with me, and they were for it. If they knew I was going to be gone, they would give me my work."

Selena Quintanilla performs at Midland's Chaparral Center Friday.

The solution the Quintanilla family found was homeschooling.

"I got out of public school, and I went ahead and got homeschooling through the American School out of Chicago. I graduated through that."

Despite all the difficulties, Miss Quintanilla still loves to perform.

"It's a great feeling. It's pretend when you are up there. You are not the same person. You can do whatever you want and just feel free about it. You don't have to worry about anything. You feel like you're away from the real world."

Miss Quintanilla and her family share the same dreams of producing an English album, an international album and becoming more of a household name in all of Mexico as well as other Spanish speaking countries. They also have a common goal.

"I'm speaking for everybody — the whole family put a lot of years into it. The goal is to become international artists not so much to become rich and famous, but to have everybody accept our music and get to know what Tex Mex music is all about. That's our goal."

Texas dentist puts his drill to 'Donahue'

By Steven Cole Smith
N.Y. Times News Service

Hell hath no fury like a dentist with a typewriter.

Such is the lesson talk show host Phil Donahue has been taught by Dr. Richard Neill, the mild-mannered Fort Worth dentist who, upset over what he perceived to be an unnecessary amount of sexual content on "Donahue," lobbied Dallas TV station WFAA/Channel 8 and asked that they move "Donahue" from 9 a.m. weekdays, when Neill believed the show was available to too many children, to after 11 p.m.

Channel 8 refused — on several grounds, the least emotional of which is that supposedly they are bound by contract until late 1994 to air the show at 9 a.m., and that "Donahue" kills the competition in the ratings — so Neill took his case to a higher court: The show's advertisers. When I first wrote about Neill last December, he had received replies from 121 sponsors who said they have canceled, or will. That number is now up to 142.

And while Multimedia, the distributor of "Donahue," insists there are plenty more advertisers where those came from, clearly, Neill has Phil Donahue's attention.

These assorted chickens come home to roost at 9 a.m. Wednesday, when "Donahue" airs live from the Fort Worth/Tarrant County Convention Center, the first of four shows he's doing in Fort Worth.

Country Fair, Concert marks 10th year with all-star line-up

By Shirley Jinkins
N.Y. Times News Service

Ten-year anniversaries are usually cause for celebration, but few of us can afford to host a four-day party for 160,000 guests.

That's what KSCS/96.3 FM plans to do this weekend to mark its 10th KSCS Country Fair and Concerts out at Texas Stadium in Irving, Texas.

Pam Tillis is certainly up for it. She'll be on the big Saturday night concert bill with veteran Country Fair participant Steve Wariner.

The Country Fair isn't in danger of falling into any ruts. Here's the roster of talent:

— Thursday, 9 p.m.: Kickoff party for the Country Fair, with Radney Foster.

— Friday: 7:30 p.m., Radney Foster; 8:15 p.m., Hal Ketchum; and 9:20 p.m., Mark Chesnutt.

— Saturday: First show, 12:30 p.m. Marty Stuart; 1:45 p.m. Ricky Van Shelton.

— Second show: 8 p.m., Pam Tillis; 9:10 p.m, Steve Wariner.

— Sunday: 1:30 p.m., Gary Morris; 2:35 p.m., Mary-Chapin Carpenter; 4 p.m., Sawyer Brown.

The Telephone Companies Are Talking Out Of Both Ends Of Their Receivers.

The Texas Telephone Companies Are Asking The Texas Legislature To Deregulate Their Industry.

A Presentation Of Their Claims And The Real Facts:

Telephone Claim: "We are not making enough money to really invest anything back into the Texas telephone infrastructure."

FACT: They made record profits last year. They say they can't afford to invest in Texas, yet they invested in Mexico's telephone system, bought an overseas cable company and are one of the brand-new owners of the San Antonio Spurs basketball team.

Telephone Claim: "We want deregulation so we can be competitive. It really has nothing to do with the rates we will charge customers."

FACT: The telephone companies under their proposal will be able to increase consumer rates as much as 10 percent a year (25 percent in some cases). Their bill is all about money – more for them, less for the consumer.

It Is Time To Hang-Up On The Telephone Companies.

Call your legislator and say NO to telephone deregulation

There's little ordinary about Alan Jackson

By Jim Patterson
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The most dressed-down person at an Alan Jackson concert has to be Alan Jackson.

The men in the audience are more dressed up than the star, determined to stand out in their Garth Brooks uniforms.

The women spilt between cowpoke dress, and more rock 'n' roll inspired clothing.

Jackson, a good-looking 34-year-old native of Newnan, Ga., can barely get a word — much less a song — through the sea of adoration.

"I am constantly trying to remember that I am just a guy that sings," Jackson said during an interview.

"I'm just a regular guy and I always have been."

This regular guy has three platinum albums, including the current "A Lot About Livin' (And a Little 'bout Love)," and 10 No. 1 country singles.

His jeans may be casual, but there's little ordinary about his state-of-the-art, video and lighting enhanced performances.

He attributes his flashy stage show to a need to compete with more dramatic performers, like Brooks.

"I need elaborate stage lighting because some acts are more entertainer types. I don't get up there and dance around a lot."

As a young man, cars far outshone music as a love. The closest thing the former forklift driver, construction worker, and mailroom employee at The Nashville Network ever had to a career was being a car salesman.

"I never really listened to a lot of music," Jackson said. "I enjoyed it but never bought new records or went to concerts."

That unassuming perspective may be what separates Jackson's traditional, but sleek, honky-tonk from the pack of hats he competes against.

"I'm not real intellectual and I don't read much. I never had that big a vocabulary so a lot of my stuff is real limited and it's the way I'd say it if I was just talking to somebody."

Jackson has a knack for writing personal songs that connect.

"Working Class Hero" was written after his father retired from a Ford plant and hails blue collar workers as heroes.

Jackson has never heard John Lennon's bitter class-system denouncement of the same title, and doesn't seem to be in any hurry to do so.

"I never did really know much about the Beatles. I was thinking of him (his father) and so many people like him," Jackson said.

"All they do is punch a clock all their life. At that time I was getting all this recognition for my songwriting and singing and record sales and all.

"The working people are really the backbone of the country to me. I wouldn't be sitting here if it weren't for people like that."

Jackson likes to think he's still part of that backbone.

"It's hard work, even though it's routine. You still have to always work at it," he said.

"I think that's why I got bored with other careers — I'd be interested and then I'd get to a certain point and you've done all you can do with it."

"I think this job will always be a challenge."

As a country music fan and vacationer, you've done Music City, you've done Dollywood, you've done Branson, Mo. If the boss will let you off May 14-23, head to New York City and hear more hot acts anyplace outside of Nashville's Fan Fair.

The "Country Takes Manhattan" festival will feature performances by stars like Dolly Parton, Lucinda Williams, Billy Ray Cyrus, Rodney Crowell, Mary-Chapin Carpenter, Clint Black, Wynonna Judd, Travis Tritt, Willie Nelson and more.

Sponsored by Frito-Lay, the festival will be expensive, with tickets for each event in the $25 and up range. Concerts will be held at Carnegie Hall, Radio City Music Hall, the Beacon Theater and Central Park.

Gay activist writes 'Queer in America'

By Dana Kennedy
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — It's doubtful anyone in this East Village cafe would recognize the slight, smiling man in the green leather jacket as the angry gay militant who introduced "outing" to the world.

Michelangelo Signorile, 32, began the controversial practice of naming closeted homosexuals in his column in the now-defunct magazine, Outweek. His in-your-face commentary mirrored the rise of gay activism in the late 1980s with groups such as ACT-UP that stemmed from the AIDS crisis.

So angry was Signorile that he exposed revered public figures, movie stars and some gossip columnists. His rage at people who decried homosexuality — and at closeted gays — spewed forth in furious, all-capitalized sentences.

Now Signorile has written his first book, "Queer in America — Sex, the Media and the Closets of Power," which veteran AIDS activist Larry Kramer calls "one of the most important books of the 20th century." It will be published next month.

"Outing is a very controversial subject within the gay community," says Howie Katz of the New York City Gay and Lesbian Anti Violence Project.

"Some people believe no one should be outed because it's a privacy issue. But there are others who believe that closeted people in positions of power . . . are hurting the gay community by hiding who they are and should be outed."

Signorile says his book was scrutinized more thoroughly than any other book by Random House lawyers except for Julia Phillips' 1991 best-selling expose of Hollywood, "You'll Never Eat Lunch in This Town Again."

It is provocative, with detailed chapters on the closeted gay underworld in Hollywood, Washington and New York, and the story of a gay man who was sexually harassed by his boss, an unnamed powerful legislator who is married with children and never has acknowledged his homosexuality.

Though familiar names from the New York-Washington-Hollywood axis pop up, Signorile points out that no one is "freshly outed" in the book.

'I regret being so mean and on the attack. I would often feel bad after writing a column. But at the same time I know that if I hadn't done it, there wouldn't have been as much attention focused on the issue.'

—Michelangelo Signorile
columnist

In fact, the most affecting chapters in the book are about Signorile's difficult childhood and the story of Sheila Kuehl, who played "Zelda Gilroy" on the 1950s TV series, "Dobie Gillis."

Kuehl's once-successful acting career disintegrated when rumors about her lesbianism reached studio executives. She's now an openly gay attorney in Los Angeles.

But pre-hype about "Queer in America," including New York tabloid gossip items about in-house discord about the book among editors at Random House, pegged it a revolutionary tome.

Sipping coffee at Cafe Orlin on St. Marks Place, just a few blocks from his apartment, Signorile seems strangely soft-spoken and amiable — for a revolutionary.

He admits that people expect a fearsome terrorist when they meet him. But after a few minutes, he's just Mike Signorile, who grew up a closeted, miserable kid in a working-class, Italian-Catholic family in Brooklyn.

"In a way I was naive about outing when I started," said Signorile. "There'd been this unwritten rule that you never discuss another person's homosexuality publicly. . . . I broke the rule because it just felt like the time was right. I thought, this unwritten rule is dumb. The world is changing and things are dire for us."

Signorile's decision to out closeted gays came at a tumultuous time in his personal life. He had just come out to his parents, who initially were upset. His friends were dying of AIDS. He was caring for a sick lover.

"I looked back over my past and it all became very clear to me. I felt a despair and anger that led me to rock bottom and that's what it took for me to see what kind of a toll a life in the closet can take. All that anger came out in my columns."

But Signorile says his book is about "the closet," not outing.

"To me, the issue is the closet," he says. "Outing is terribly contentious. With outing we kind of presented the solution without addressing the problem first. The closet is the problem."

Signorile's youth was painful and puzzling, a combination he says is often typical for gays. He realized he was homosexual when he was 12 but had no one to talk to about it and no knowledge of gay culture.

"My personality development was stunted and deformed," writes Signorile in the chapter titled, "A Queer's Own Story."

"I had been a bubbly, smart kid when I entered school, but now I was defensive and belligerent. Whereas I might have developed into one of those kids who was funny, irrepressible and well-liked, instead I was a 'faggot,' laughed at and ostracized. All my time and energy were consumed with trying to prove I wasn't this horrible thing, this sissy-faggot-queer."

One day in sixth grade, after Signorile had been spit on and called "Queer!" by a group of kids, he tore out of the building in a panic and disappeared for two hours.

A kind teacher took him aside and told him that nothing would change for awhile, that his life might continue to be "horrible," but if he persevered and stayed strong, "one day, everything will be fine."

Signorile says he realizes now the teacher was probably gay himself but couldn't tell him out of fear.

"There are two ways people deal with the closet," he says. "There are those who block it out until they're adults and those who deal with it when they're young. I used to envy people who didn't go through what I did but then they would tell me they wish they'd faced it earlier. But either way, it's horrible."

Signorile says he has a few regrets about his early, angry outings but still believes that all gays should come out of the closet.

"I regret being so mean and on the attack," he says. "I would often feel bad after writing a column. But at the same time I know that if I hadn't done it, there wouldn't have been as much attention focused on the issue."

But Signorile clearly believes that in the case of outing, the ends justified the means. For him, the closet is the ultimate horror.

"It's living a lie," he says. "It's constantly being aware that you harbor this dirty secret."

Signorile now writes a column for the national gay magazine, The Advocate. But his columns have a less strident tone.

And the prediction made by his grade-school teacher that "one day, everything will be fine" may have come partly true. When Signorile came out to his parents, they were so traumatized that he stopped talking to them for awhile.

That changed one day when Signorile went to see them and spent "hours" at the kitchen table "letting them throw a million questions at me."

His book is dedicated to "Martha and Frank Signorile, the most loving, understanding and supportive parents in America."

"Queer in America — Sex, the Media and the Closets of Power" is published by Random House.

HOROSCOPE

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: The struggles of the past are about to bear glorious fruit. Your unrelenting zeal will pay off handsomely by June. A close relationship is a major stabilizing force in your life. Do not give up on an important goal. VIPs are in your corner. Next fall, the extent of your travels will depend on available cash. December brings a family reconciliation and blissful romance. A wedding that takes place early in 1994 will be doubly blessed.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor James Woods, football player Wilbur Marshall, actress Hayley Mills, conductor Leopold Stokowski.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can imprint your style today. A buyer or seller agrees to your terms. Your philosophy may not always mesh with your partner's. Act mature; set aside petty differences.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A great day to mix and mingle, even with comparative strangers. You and a newcomer immediately click — a lasting relationship is possible. An illuminating breakthrough improves family life.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Things will go well for you today; get an early start. When talking over matters of mutual interest, look for solutions that serve the common good. Words of wisdom hit home.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Ideas abound! Separate the wheat from the chaff. Two heads are better than one when deciding on a plan of action. Include someone who lives alone at your family dinner this evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your keen financial instincts let you spot good values, cut corners and show a profit. A generous display of hospitality wins great appreciation. Accept a spontaneous invitation.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Meditation brings new peace of mind. An acquaintance is fascinated by your views. Say what you mean! Travel, research and long-distance conversations lead to fresh insight.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A great day to get some fresh air and exercise. Encourage younger family members to pull their weight around the house. Artistic projects hold special appeal.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Family members make fewer demands on you. Use any spare time to catch up on your correspondence. A romance will blossom with more TLC. Keep any promises you make to the small fry.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): When domestic harmony is ruptured, the chances of it being restored depend upon you. Diplomacy and kindness will accomplish what ultimatums cannot.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You are bubbling over with good things to tell your family and friends. Vary your routine; getting into a rut is not good for you. Go out and socialize tonight.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Stay on your toes. You may have to make a big decision without much warning. Avoid being overbearing in your personal relationships. Share ideas with your children.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Frustration could lead to an impulsive decision. Avoid going to extremes! Your sacrifices for a child or parent will pay big dividends. Avoid calling attention to a friend's problems.

Opening lead: Queen of ♠

"Quite remarkable," enthused the kibitzer "To make his contract declarer had to surrender a trick in a suit where there were no losers and avoid losing a trick in a suit where there were two!" This was the hand that occasioned the ebullience.

Two-suited hands are not handled well by a takeout double, so West elected to cue-bid four clubs. While the hand was somewhat light in terms of high cards, there was no disputing its trick-taking ability. North's raise to five clubs was sound at any vulnerability and West judged well not to compete further—East would not have passed with any reasonable holding in the majors.

After the normal lead of the queen of spades, declarer could count 10 tricks—two spades, a diamond and seven clubs. Since the ace of hearts was certainly with West, the only hope for an 11th trick lay in setting up a long diamond. The problem was to keep East off play while accomplishing that, since the moment East gained the lead a heart shift would be declarer's demise.

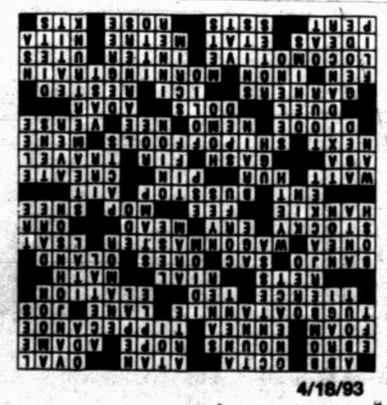

At first glance that might seem an impossible assignment, but declarer found an elegant solution. The key was in allowing West's queen of spades to win the first trick!

West shifted to a diamond, but declarer was equal to the task. Dummy's ace of diamonds won the trick and declarer discarded two diamonds from hand on the ace and king of spades. A diamond was ruffed high, the queen of clubs was overtaken with the king and another diamond was ruffed high. The ten of clubs to the jack was followed by another diamond ruff, setting up a long card. The three of clubs to the six drew the last enemy fang while providing the entry to dummy to discard a heart on the established diamond. Making five-odd!

Members of Palomino Road grew up in musical families

Palomino Road is to perform May 1 during the Arts Assembly of Midland's Celebration of the Arts street dance. The dance, sponsored by KNFM, NewsWest 9 and Permian Distributing-Coors Light, begins at 8 p.m. and ends at midnight. Admission is $5 in advance and $7 at the door. Advance tickets may be purchased at Luskey's.

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

A characteristic common to all four members of Palomino Road is growing up in families of professional musicians.

"My father was a musician and his grandfather was, and I have about three or four generations of them in my family," said drummer Chip Lewis, whose father is a jazz musician in Kansas City. "It just enhanced my love for music. Since I was 4 years old, that's all I ever wanted to do."

For J.T. Corenflos, music is "all I've ever known. I started working in night clubs when I was 10 and 11 years old. My dad (Jerry) was a guitar player and singer, and he would take me to his gig some times when I was a kid, and I would sit in with the band and play guitar.

"Usually he would take me to the places — some of the private clubs and things, the animal circuit — where they will let kids in."

Bass player Randy Frazier also grew up playing in his father's band.

"Always my father's band was rehearsing at the house," said Frazier, who has penned a number of gospel and contemporary Christian compositions. "My mother played piano and my sister and brother played instruments. Gosh, my grandparents played. Everybody was some sort of musician in my family."

Lead singer and writer Ronnie Guilbeau's story is much the same, except what most attracted Guilbeau — whose father, Gib Guilbeau was a member of the old group Flying Burrito Brothers — to a career in music was writing songs.

"I used to write songs and sing them," Guilbeau said, recalling his youth. "I had one of those little tape recorders. I really think that the reason I learned how to play guitar was so that I could play the songs that I wrote.

"I think that's the only reason I became a singer or performer. I think it all kind of started from being a songwriter. That's why I moved to Nashville, too."

When Palomino Road comes to Midland May 1 to perform at the Arts Assembly of Midland's Celebration of the Arts street dance, seven of the songs performed by the band from its self-titled first album were penned by Guilbeau.

Guilbeau said he writes songs "to make people feel emotion. I don't think there's any other reason for any other art. You want to express emotion, but most of all, you want people to feel emotion."

Guilbeau, who has played in bands most of his life, has developed a love for performing along with a reputation as a singer.

"It's kind of like a high, and it's just like an addiction," said Guilbeau, who is single. "I think it's just fun."

He did not intend to become a singer.

"I just kind of fell into it," he said. "As I made my demos, people would comment about my singing. I always thought I was a harmony singer. I never intended on being a lead singer.

"I don't really know what the turning point was. I think it was just so much fun, that's why I did it. You don't need a whole lot of support from people to get you to do something that's that much fun."

Early in 1992, when these four musicians had the opportunity to play for Jimmy Bowen, president of Liberty Records, they were all working with other bands, writing for other artists and playing on other people's sessions. They had only briefly been working in the studio as a unit and had no stage experience as a group.

Frazier, who had spent two years working at Dollywood, was on the road playing bass for Sammy Kershaw.

Corenflos, who had spent 18 months at the Opry and seven to eight years playing guitar for Joe Stampley, was doing studio work in Nashville.

Before coming to Nashville in 1990, Lewis did sessions and jingle work in Kansas City studios and played in regional bands.

Guilbeau, who grew up in California, moved to Nashville in the mid-'80s and submerged himself in that city's studio community, penning Poco's come-back hit, "Call It Love," in 1989.

"Ronnie and J.T. were doing demos here in Nashville, and it developed into some pretty good material," said Lewis, who, like Guilbeau, is single. "One of the producers said, 'Why don't you put a band together?'

"Ronnie called Randy and J.T. called me to put this band together. We wanted to have a real strong vocal sound. We needed everybody to sing."

"It was great, even in the very beginning," Corenflos said. "We had a sound going in a basic direction and a focus. We had all been around the block enough times to know what was going on. We all had 15 years behind us of learning the ropes. I think that's why this happened so fast. By the time we got to this, we knew what to do."

It wasn't an easy road to travel for any of the members, but perhaps Frazier best describes the all-too-often lifestyle of a professional musician.

"You're either making no money or you're making good money, and there's a lot of years in between there where you're making no money — just making enough to pay bills and get on," he said.

Frazier, who is married and a father, is the only one of his siblings who is a professional musician.

"The rest of them got to the age where they were having kids and married, and they started looking for more stable work. There's been a lot of times when my family had to help me out.

"I'm kind of thankful none of them stayed in the music business," Frazier said. "They wouldn't have had the money to help me out."

He stayed because, he said, "I wanted it more. There were times I tried to do other jobs really, and I just missed it so bad I was miserable.

"I've got a good friend (who is) a police officer. He once said, if police officers only got minimum wage, he'd have to build his life around a minimum wage job because that's what he lived for. And it's the same with a musician.

"If that's your life, then that's your life. You have to take the bad with the good and the good with the bad."

And Frazier had done that. He had to cut his and his family's living expenses to be able to remain a full-time musician.

"When you get older and need more income, you need a second job and that takes all your energy, and there's no time for music. Really, I just couldn't live like that. I just thought, 'Well, I just had to bring my lifestyle down. Take the bus and sell the car.'"

After working so hard as musicians and putting so much of themselves into their first album, none of the members of Palomino Road could be objective about their first album, which was released in February.

"It's a chance to do something that most don't get to do," Guilbeau said. "It makes you pull all the resources together and do the best you can."

Band to perform at Celebration of the Arts

Celebration of the Arts is set for April 29-May 2.

The event, sponsored by the Arts Assembly of Midland, includes live performances, activities for children, a street dance featuring country and western band Palomino Road and a parade.

The two-day festival attracts 15,000 to Midland Center and Centennial Plaza in downtown Midland.

The event begins with a free family concert at 6:30 p.m. April 29 at Midland College's Beal Plaza. Performing will be the Cajun Born Band from Louisiana. The band performs cajun music. Sponsors are Power 106, Bayou Wadley, Tom Brown, Inc., and Dr. Charles Younger.

The Preview Party will be from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. April 30 at Midland Center. The 1993 Distinguished Artist, Wayne Baize, will be honored.

Khenany, a group of musicians from Sonora, Mexico, will perform as will Cornplanter, a composer and classical pianist.

The food for the Preview Party will be catered by Santa Fe Grill. Guest will have the opportunity to view and purchase art from more than 65 artists. Cost of the preview party, which is sponsored by Joanie and Bobby Holt, Kay and Charles Bird, Lynn D. Durham, Mary and Henri De Compiegne Jr., Elizabeth Locker, Carolyn J. Roden and Beverly Pevehouse, is $35.

Performer travels long road back to TV

By Ray Richmond
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — As she stood on Stage 25 at the Paramount Studios lot preparing to perform in the special 90-minute series finale of "Cheers," Shelley Long could well relate to what those around her were feeling

"They're all going through the same stuff I went through six years ago," said Long. "I wish I could assure them that the anticipation of the withdrawal is worse than the withdrawal itself - it really is."

What Long refers to, of course, is her own voluntary departure from "Cheers" six years ago. She has since stayed busy carving out a modest feature film and TV-movie career and spending time with her husband and 8- year-old daughter Juliana.

But this week Long completes a circle that begins and ends with television.

The same week she returns to film "Cheers" and help send the legendary NBC comedy series into the prime-time sunset, Long is also launching a new series of her own - a CBS midseason sitcom called "Good Advice."

"Good Advice," which premiered April 2, stars Long as a marriage counselor and Treat Williams as the divorce lawyer with whom she regularly clashes. It has a six-episode order.

Sunrise, sunset. One series expires, another is born.

For Long, merely returning to series television symbolizes a rebirth in itself.

"I knew I'd always come back to do another series because I love TV and I love the format," said Long, 43. "There is something about television that fits well for me."

It sounds like a far different tune than Long was singing in 1987 when she left her "Cheers" role of intellectual waitress Diane Chambers to try her hand at film.

A lot was written back then about how Long was tired of the series grind, about how she was fed up with her fellow "Cheers" cast members and about the fact that she was a tyrant on the set and wouldn't be missed, anyway.

Yet, Long insists today that she "didn't part on terrible terms" and, in fact, always left the door open to return on a spot basis whenever the producers desired.

"That call never came," Long said. "That's why I was surprised when they wanted me back for this last one."

During a telephone interview following a long day of rehearsals for the filming of the "Cheers" grand finale, Long was upbeat and analytical, sporting the same cerebral sense of introspection that Diane Chambers might exude.

The six years don't appear to have left much of an age mark on Long. At the production run-through, her lithe frame seemed particularly fit. Her hair is as blond as ever.

It was clear in her attitude that Long didn't require much prodding to return to "Cheers" at closing time. At the same time, however, there was trepidation. She seemed to understand she was no longer the star but a stranger in a familiar land.

Even so, she believes that any perceived animosity that existed between Long and the cast and crew was blown out of proportion in the press.

"Yes, there was a lot of fear and anxiety going on about how the show would function once I had left," Long said, "and from that fear and anxiety came a certain edge that the press picked up on and ran with.

"Fortunately, we're past all of that. Since I've been back, I've felt a lot of positive feelings. I mean, there's a lot of tension there, too, because of the adjustments everyone is having to make in their minds right now. This is a very challenging time for all of them."
