Hurricane Charley churns up mid-Atlantic

OCEAN CITY, Md. (AP) — Hurricane Charley buffeted the mid-Atlantic states today, churning the ocean with 75 mph winds and forcing the evacuation of thousands of coastal residents after dumping torrential rains on North Carolina's Outer Banks.

The storm was blamed for at least four deaths, authorities said.

By mid-morning, as Charley headed northward over cooler waters, its punch was diminishing, said hurricane forecaster Bob Case. "We expect it to gradually decrease in the next 12 to 24 hours," he said.

The death toll included three people aboard a small plane that crashed into the Chesapeake Bay near Baltimore during a hurricane-spawned storm Sunday.

Authorities said two bodies were recovered from the bay and the third victim was believed dead. And a Manteo, N.C., woman died when her car apparently slipped into a canal on an Outer Banks causeway Sunday, state police said.

The causeway was flooded and reported impassable Sunday evening. Elsewhere on the Outer Banks, a foot of water surged into the Dare County Courthouse in Manteo, flooding was reported in the Stumpy Point community and water was 2 to 3 feet deep on the north end of the Oregon Inlet bridge, authorities said.

Charley caused power outages and flooding of up to 3 feet but little damage on North Carolina's Outer Banks on Sunday. As many as 10,000 tourists and residents fleeing the fragile islands jammed roads to the mainland for a short-lived evacuation.

The hurricane knocked down trees and signs on Virginia's mainland Sunday evening and left about 110,000 people without power, but caused no major damage, authorities said.

The storm also washed out a 250-foot section of Harrison's Pier, a Norfolk landmark.

Hurricane warnings were in effect today from Cape Charles, Va., to Sandy Hook, N.J. Less-severe hurricane watches and gale warnings were in effect from Sandy Hook to Chatham, Mass.

At 8 a.m., Charley's center was near latitude 38.2 north and longitude 74.5 west, about 50 miles south-southwest of Cape May. The storm was moving north-northeast at 10 mph, and was expected to continue moving parallel to the coast.

Charley is relatively small, with gale-force winds extending about 125 miles from the eye on the storm's eastern semi-circle and some 50 miles to the western side, Case said.

The eye is rather broad area of between 25 and 30 miles and is dwindling as the storm moves slowly over cooler waters, Case said. Upper wind patterns of the hurricane no longer favor its growth, he added.

The National Weather Service forecast a storm surge of 3 to 5 feet above normal, which could combine with an unusually high astronomical tide to produce coastal flooding in Delaware and New Jersey.

"If the maximum surge arrives at high tide, then you could have quite a bit of coastal flooding," said Bob Case, a forecaster at the National Hurricane Center in Coral Gables, Fla.

Gusts up to 104 mph closed the 17-mile Chesapeake Bay Bridge-Tunnel, which connects Norfolk with the Eastern Shore.

"With so much wind and rain, visibility is right down to almost zero," said Capt. Clenent Pruitt of the tunnel police. "I doubt you could stand up in it."

Ocean City officials warned mobile home residents to secure their property and evacuate, advised handicapped residents to go to shelters and asked would-be visitors to stay away.

More than 1,200 people voluntarily evacuated to 10 nearby shelters, said Maryland State Police spokesman Chuck Jackson.

About 3,500 people went to shelters in Sussex County, Del., said Wayne Ellingston, the county's emergency operations director.

In Bethany Beach, Del., hundreds of people headed inland as police and firefighters using loudspeakers drove the streets warning people to leave. In Rehoboth Beach, Del., about 500 people had evacuated by 3 a.m.

Overwhelming approval of tax plan anticipated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress faces a spirited battle over landmark tax-overhaul legislation that House and Senate negotiators approved over the weekend, but supporters predict overwhelming approval of the package.

Each chamber will consider the compromise when Congress returns next month from a three-week recess.

The most sweeping revision of the tax code in decades, approved by the bargainers Saturday night, would:

— Cut individual taxes by an average 6.1 percent and take more than 6 million lower-income couples and individuals off the tax rolls.

— Place about three-quarters of taxpayers at the bottom individual rate of 15 percent and reduce the top individual tax rate of 50 percent to 28 percent. Some earnings of the wealthiest taxpayers would be taxed at 33 percent or more.

— Limit or repeal an array of popular deductions.

— Increase the overall tax burden on business by $120.4 billion over five years but reduce the top corporate rate of 46 percent to 34 percent.

Most provisions of the bill would take effect Jan. 1, 1987.

"They said out there it couldn't be done, but we did it," Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., leader of the negotiations and chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, said jubilantly after the conferees completed their work.

"I'm thankful for Danny and am proud of the Congress and happy for the nation," said Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Finance Committee.

The compromise was the product of a five-day marathon of private meetings between Rostenkowski and Packwood.

Shortly after 9 p.m. Saturday, all 22 House and Senate tax writers responsible for working out the hundreds of differences between the versions of the legislation previously passed by each chamber gathered in public for the first time in weeks. Two hours later, it was over with voice-vote approval of the 102-page summary of what Rostenkowski and Packwood had agreed on.

President Reagan, who has been calling for such legislation since 1984, hailed the agreement, calling it "a triumph for the American people and the American system showing that we can rise to great challenges on a bipartisan basis against special interests and for the benefit of the American people."

However, the euphoria was not unanimous.

"I'll oppose it quite strongly," said Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., one of the negotiators and a supporter of the original Senate bill.

Danforth, who had lost some cherished provisions in the bargaining relating to the tax treatment of defense contractors and investments by universities, had pleaded for the conferees to use the three-week recess to carefully study the deal made by Rostenkowski and Packwood.

Having lost in the conference, Danforth said he would carry on the fight in the full Senate.

"I think I have a chance," Danforth said, adding that he thought there would be bipartisan oppostion.

Packwood did not minimize the problems ahead in the Senate. "I think it'll be a spirited battle," he said.

But he also said he expected the bill to pass.

Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., who has pushed tax overhaul for years, also predicted victory. "I think the reaction to the bill will be overwhelming."

Gephardt added that he thought it would take continued White House lobbying to keep the legislation on track toward the president's desk.

The bill would affect every person who pays taxes.

By 1988, when most of the changes would be in effect, about three-quarters of Americans would pay a tax rate of 15 percent. A couple could have taxable income (after deductions and exemptions) of up to $29,750 before moving into the 28-percent bracket. For a single person the rate would rise when taxable income exceeds $17,850.

The plan would produce an average tax cut of $204, ranging from $37 for a person earning under $10,000 to $2,857 for someone above $200,000. A family in the $30,000-to-$40,000 range would average about $226.

On the other hand, the bill would raise taxes for several million couples and individuals, including many at middle- and lower-income levels. It would repeal deductions for state and local sales taxes, consumer interest and for two-earner couples; nonitemizers would lose a special writeoff for charitable gifts. Deductions for medical costs and miscellaneous expenses would be pared. The bill also would sharply restrict the number of workers eligible for fully deductible Individual Retirement Accounts.

Although supporters of the plan appear confident it will gain final approval, Danforth and other legislators have expressed concern about the impact the legislation will have on the economy.

"We're embarking on an exciting and even dangerous road," said Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, one of the conferees who gave his reluctant support to the compromise.

General provisions

Standard deduction: Increased in line with inflation for 1987; up to $3,000 (single), $5,000 (couples), $2,500 (married, filing separately), $4,400 (head of household) in 1988. Extra $750 (single) or $600 (married) for blind and elderly.

Exemptions: For most taxpayers, raised to $1,900 (1987), $1,950 (1988), $2,000 (1989); indexed to inflation from 1990 on. Reduced for high-income taxpayers. Extra exemptions for blind, elderly eliminated

Two-earner couple deduction repealed.

Earned-income credit: Benefit increased to maximum of $800; cut-off threshold raised to $17,000.

Unemployment income made fully taxable.

Pensions, IRAs & retirement

Contributions to IRAs: Present law remains for taxpayers not covered by employer pension plan or who earn under $25,000 (single) or $40,000 (couple); sill eligible for $2,000 (single) or $2,250 (couple) deduction. Deduction declines above those income levels, to zero at $35,000 (single) or $50,000 (couple).

Interest on IRAs still tax-free for everyone until withdrawal.

401(k) plans: Amount employer may deposit tax-free in lieu of pay cut to $7,000 per year.

Capital gains: Favorable rate repealed.

Investment tax credit repealed.

Depreciation rules changed to favor equipment over buildings.

Dividend exclusion repealed.

Minimum tax: Rules to keep high-income investors, corporations from paying little or no tax toughened.

Bankruptcy filings continue to climb

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The state's four U.S. bankruptcy courts continued to file higher numbers of bankruptcy petitions in July, and court officials say the reason is clear — Texas' poor economy.

District bankruptcy clerks in San Antonio, Dallas, Houston and Tyler report that 2,221 bankruptcy cases were filed in the state last month.

In Midland, the total number of cases jumped slightly to 53 — 4 cases over the 49 filed during July, 1985.

However, officials said there has been a drop in filings in Chapter 11 cases, those in which businesses attempt to reorganize under bankruptcy court protection.

A court clerk attributes the decline to a realization among businessmen that it is no longer worthwhile to try to save energy-related firms.

Through the first seven months of this year, 18,466 bankruptcy petitions were filed in Texas.

About 17,180 cases were filed in the state during all of 1985.

"The state of Texas is probably near recession," said Larry Bick of the western district's U.S. Bankruptcy Court in San Antonio.

He said the slump in the state's oil and gas-based economy is the biggest factor behind the increasing number of cases.

Bick said the economy is so bad, there has been a leveling off of Chapter 11 reorganization cases filed in San Antonio.

Instead, more businesses are filing under Chapter 7 of federal bankruptcy laws. In a Chapter 7 case, assets are sold to pay creditors.

The San Antonio court handles cases in the western quarter of the state, including Midland-Odessa. Officials said 513 bankruptcy petitions were filed in the court in July.

Michael W. Youdin of the U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Dallas said 785 bankruptcy cases were filed in Dallas last month. The court handles cases in Texas's northern district.

"We're far ahead of where we were at this time last year," said Jesse E. Clark, bankruptcy clerk of the Houston court, adding that 775 bankruptcies were filed in Houston last month. The court handles cases in southern Texas.

Berry Mitchell, the clerk in the Tyler bankruptcy court, reported 148 new bankruptcy filings last month compared with 71 in July, 1985. The court handles cases in Texas' eastern district.

Mitchell reported 8,500 cases were filed during the first seven months of this year, while 1985 totals reached the 7,100 mark.

Chapter 11 filings in Midland decreased from 8 cases in July 1985 to 6 cases last month.

However, the drop in number has been countered by the larger size of the companies involved, officials said.

Also, in Midland, personal reorganization cases, filed under Chapter 13 of the bankruptcy laws, doubled from 5 in July, 1985 to 10 last month, officials said.

Fort Hood opens hotline to identify soldiers suspected of espionage

KILLEEN (AP) — Soldiers at Fort Hood are being encouraged to use a new Army hotline to report suspicious behavior by their peers or anyone else they suspect of espionage.

The program was announced to soldiers at the training base near here in fliers attached to July paychecks. The fliers included a toll-free "hotline" number for anyone with anything suspicious to report.

"So many people were arrested and prosecuted (for espionage) last year that the news media called 1985 'The Year of The Spy,'" said a follow-up article on the program in the base newspaper, The Sentinel.

The toll-free number was provided, the article said, "so soldiers can contact appropriate people from any place any time with any kind of report."

The newspaper article is attributed to Stephen Hammel, who was identified as a counterintelligence agent of the Army's 902nd Military Intelligence Group at Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio.

Army officials refused to make Hammel available for elaboration. An Army spokesman at Fort Hood said commanders decided to put Hammel off-limits to reporters after he commented on the article and the security measures to a Killeen television station.

"They wanted to hype this program so it came out in the paper," said Capt. Michael Monnett. "But after the interview, the command decided it would be better to keep a low profile on it."

Monnett said the security measures are not the result of any security problems at Fort Hood. Rather, he said, the hotline and tips are part of an army-wide "pilot program" conceived after recent incidents of Americans selling military and intelligence secrets to the Soviet Union.

Similar programs recently have been conducted at Fort Bragg in North Carolina and Fort Lewis in Washington, he said.

"It's a general 'stay well' measure," Monnett said. He said Fort Hood has "the largest concentration of armored forces in the free world. Very few army units are fielded with new equipment and ours are. We've got it all."

The article contends that everyone at Fort Hood, from tank drivers to clerks and cooks, is a potential espionage target. A list of tips is provided on "how spies act."

Among the suggested ways to identify spies are such behaviors as:

— Carrying miniature cameras or small tape recorders.

— Making unexplained short trips out of the country.

Pakistani riot police, protesters clash for sixth day

LAHORE, Pakistan (AP) — Police clashed with anti-government protesters for a sixth day today as the opposition called for mass marches to demand the removal of President Gen. Mohammad Zia ul-Haq. Six more riot deaths were reported.

The Movement for the Restoration of Democracy, an alliance of 11 opposition parties, planned major demonstrations today in Lahore, Karachi, Rawalpindi and elsewhere.

Tens of thousands of people would march in the protests, the group said.

Scattered disturbances continued in the port of Karachi and elsewhere in the south today, as demonstrators set fire to vehicles and blocked roads. Police tried to disperse them with tear gas and baton charges.

Two protesters shot by police in Karachi on Sunday died early today and a third man, who was struck at close range by a police tear gas shell, died overnight, said hospital officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Three opposition supporters were killed in a clash Sunday night with government supporters in Shahdadpur, Sind province, according to local journalists and other eyewitnesses. The incident could not be immediately confirmed with local officials.

Four people were killed in rioting Thursday in Lahore.

"The government is again doing what Zia has done for the last nine years and are shooting and beating people," said coalition spokesman Salman Taseer.

The rioting began after the government arrested more than 500 opposition leaders in pre-dawn raids Wednesday.

Police deployed reinforcements across the country. Army units were called up in parts of Sind province during the weekend and military patrols moved through some of the areas hit worst by rioting.

The protests are seen as an important test of the opposition's strength in what could be the most serious challenge to Zia's rule since he seized power in a 1977 military coup.

Opposition leaders, in hiding following the government crackdown, said they wanted peaceful demonstrations today, but warned that people were angry and trouble was expected in Lahore, where the four people were shot and killed in rioting last week.

Chief opposition leader Benazir Bhutto remained in detention in a jail near Karachi after her arrest Thursday.

Zia, who is out of the country on a pilgrimage to Mecca, Saudi Arabia, and Prime Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo appealed for peace in this Moslem nation over the weekend as other government leaders warned that lawlessness would not be tolerated.

"Lawbreakers will be taken to task," Sind Chief Minister Syed Ghaus Ali Shah told reporters in Karachi.

A ban on political meetings remained in effect in Sind. A similar ban in Lahore and Punjab province expired over the weekend.

Rioting crowds have attacked government buildings, burned banks and other private businesses, set fire to vehicles and blocked streets since the arrest of opposition leaders.

The protests have been larger and more widespread than rioting in 1983, when clashes with the army and police killed dozens of people in Karachi and elsewhere in Sind province.

The government crackdown came after Junejo asked Miss Bhutto's Pakistan Peoples Party to call off a rally in Lahore scheduled for independence day, which was Thursday.

The opposition coalition responded by bringing forward to today its plan for nationwide agitations. The opposition previously had given the government until Sept. 20 to agree to Zia's removal and elections.

Junejo was appointed by Zia to head the civilian government that took over after martial law was lifted Dec. 30.

Zia remains president and army commander. In 1977, he deposed Miss Bhutto's father, Prime Minister Zulfikar Al Bhutto, who was later hanged after being convicted of planning to assassinate a political opponent.

Israeli-Soviet talks break unexpectedly

HELSINKI, Finland (AP) — The first official talks in 19 years between Soviet and Israeli delegates broke off unexpectedly after 90 minutes today, but an Israeli official said both sides agreed on further contacts.

"The talks did not break up in anger," the Israeli told The Associated Press. "The Soviets said they want to send an eight-member team to Tel Aviv in October and that proposal will be presented to the Israeli government.

"For our part, the Israeli delegation presented a demand that the Soviets permit freer Jewish emigration. The Soviets said they will take that back to their government," the official said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The Israeli official said both sides agreed to further contacts after they reporting to their governments. The Soviet Embassy declined immediate comment.

A Soviet source confirmed the talks broke off, but said he had no further information. The meeting originally was scheduled to last two days.

The talks, convened at the Finnish Government Compound under tight security, were the first formal discussions since the Kremlin severed ties with the Jewish state over the 1967 Six-Day War.

Soviet officials rejected an Israeli suggestion made through the Finnish Foreign Ministry that the delegates shake hands in the presence of photographers before the talks began, Israeli officials said.

The three Israeli delegates were under a government order to discuss Soviet Jewry with the two Soviet representatives, but the Kremlin had indicated an unwillingness to do so.

Israel says 400,000 of the Soviet Union's 2.5 million Jews have taken steps to emigrate, but are kept from doing so by the government. Thirty-one Jews were allowed to leave in July, the lowest figure in 11 months.

The Soviets maintain that most of those who want to leave have been allowed to do so.

The Soviets had said they wanted to discuss matters related to Russian Orthodox Church property in Israel and the occupied West Bank, and the status of Soviet citizens living in Israel, about 150 of whom are clergy.

Moscow morning newspapers and Soviet radio today made no mention of the meeting, but Western diplomats and officials close to the talks said the Soviets initiated the session to win a larger role in efforts for an Arab-Israeli peace.

"The Soviets have held church property in Israel for a long time. Why do they want to discuss it now? It appears to be a convenient excuse for sitting down and talking with the Israelis," one diplomat said Sunday, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The United States has been the dominant outside force in efforts to spur talks between Israel and the Arab states, but Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev has called for an international conference on the Middle East conflict.

Israel has said it would agree to some sort coZference in conjunction with direct talks between Israel and the Arabs, but that it will not agree to Soviet participation until Moscow resumes diplomatic ties.

The Soviet Union, one of the first countries to recognize Israel when it was created in 1948, broke ties in 1967 in anger over Israel's refusal to return territory seized from Jordan, Egypt and Syria in the war.

Moscow has said repeatedly it will not resume full ties untill the Israelis withdraw from occupied territories.

Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres, while saying his country was interested in renewing relations with Moscow, also expressed caution.

"I believe there is an opportunity, but no certainty. What is certain is that Russia took a very small step, and one should not exaggerate its importance," he said.

Lightning sparks more forest fires

Associated Press

Thick smoke hampered firefighters battling blazes in Idaho's valleys as hundreds of lightning-sparked range and forest fires burned in six Western states.

"It's a no-win situation," said Lee Poague, a spokesman for the Boise Interagency Fire Center, the national forest fire command center. "The inversion keeps the fire down, but when the wind pushes the smoke away, the fires blow up."

The smoke cut visibility and curtailed helicopter flights and drops of retardant.

Crews, meanwhile, today were still trying to control a 2,000-acre brush fire ignited when a pickup truck left by three bow hunters in Rich County in northern Utah burst into flames, authorities said.

The only major fire burning in Montana was contained Sunday evening after destroying about 2,000 acres of grassland and timber, officials said.

Another round of lightning struck the region over the weekend, causing scores of new fires where nearly 400,000 acres had already been charred in the past week despite the efforts of about 17,000 firefighters.

Weather officials said lightning storms, without rain, are expected through Tuesday.

"It's probably the worst fire season we've had since 1910," said Ray Naddy, spokesman for the federal-state firefighting command center in Salem, Ore., which recorded 1,522 lightning strikes across Oregon late Saturday.

Officials issued a red flag alert in high-risk areas of Idaho, Montana, eastern Washington and eastern Oregon, said Anne Jeffery, spokeswoman for the Boise Interagency Fire Center.

A red flag is usually issued when the weather is hot and dry and windy and there's a good chance of dry lightning, she said Sunday.

As of late Saturday, lightning-sparked fires in those four states and Utah had charred 382,762 acres since last weekend's storms, nearly 180,000 acres in Idaho alone, she said.

In addition, lightning started about 60 fires Saturday in northern California's Lassen and Plumas national forests.

But Matt Shannon of the state Department of Forestry said everything was under control.

"California is not in a state of emergency, but it is critical," he said.

Car explodes in France, kills driver, passengers

TOULON, France (AP) — A car transporting explosives blew up early today in this Mediterranean port city, killing the driver and all three passengers, police reported.

The explosion, at about 1 a.m. near Toulon's central market, wrecked the car and started a fire in a nearby building.

The fire destroyed a store specializing in toys and baby clothes, police said. Witnesses said bits of clothing and shards of metal were scattered through the street, and windows shattered in nearby apartments.

French television and news agency reports, quoting unidentified police sources, said investigators believed the four people killed in the blast were transporting a bomb that went off prematurely. The victims were not immediately identified and police refused to provide any further information.

News reports speculated that the likely target was a nearby office of the group SOS-Racism, which organizes demonstrations to protest discrimination and assaults against immigrants.

Charred leaflets were found at the scene reading in part, "The French are us, but not them," and signed SOS-France, the news reports said, without citing sources.

A group called SOS-France was formed in Toulon earlier this year by extremists who split off from the ultra-right National Front party, which won 35 seats in national legislative elections in March on a platform featuring appeals for tighter controls on immigration.

The telephone number listed for SOS-France in Toulon rang unanswered on Monday.

The National Front issued a statement today saying it "always has condemned terrorism no matter what the source." The statement said "the death penalty has been rendered directly to the occupants of the car," adding the front was "satisfied with this sentence."

Computer makes game of politics

By RITA BEAMISH

WASHINGTON (AP) — In politics, winning is usually everything, but there's a new way to play the political game so it doesn't really matter if you win or lose.

This game is a computer program. When you play it you get an idea of what it's like to stand in the shoes of a member of Congress, making a range of decisions from hiring staff to placating your party leadership.

The computer game was developed for the National Association of Manufacturers by Claremont College's Rose Institute of State and Local Government in Southern California. It is intended as an educational tool for NAM's members — especially companies that are unschooled in Washington ways, said NAM attorney Gary Lipkin.

Of the trade association's 14,000 members, some 9,000 are small businesses with fewer than 100 employees, he said.

"The vast majority of our members do not have any Washington presence and are unsophisticated in the ways of Washington. They do not have any idea what their congressman does," Lipkin said in a recent interview. "Their idea of what their congressman does was derived from their social studies book in sixth grade."

The computer game can give them more understanding as to why a member of Congress, for instance, might vote against something that would seem beneficial to the home district. (Party loyalty may be overriding. Or the lawmaker, by giving the speaker of the House his or her vote, may get in exchange a committee assignment that promised to be better for his district in the long run.)

The multiple-choice game, soon to be sold on floppy discs, simulates the work of a congressman, with players asked to decide how the representative should treat his staff, act on legislation, run for re-election and balance constituent needs with party loyalty.

It is set up for two teams, and presents two hypothetical congressional districts, describing their demography, economic base, cities and other characteristics. As the game starts, two members have just been narrowly elected to represent those districts.

Players answer a series of questions on legislation and decisions such as hiring staff from several pairs: a minority person and a woman; two Ivy League law school graduates; two party workhorses from the district; two campaign workers.

There is no score, but the computer after each choice gives the players feedback from such sources as the local papers, party leaders and constituents.

"The re-election starts to loom about halfway through," Lipkin said. "You have to start thinking about fund raising, whether you are going to run ... whether you chair a conference committee which the speaker has appointed you to or whether you go home and give a speech to the VFW, because you really need their support because the guy you only beat by one (percentage) point is going to run again."

Just in case anyone got the idea this game could be a campaign aid for real-life politicians, the NAM asked the Federal Election Commission for approval of its plan to sell the game at a discount to members of Congress. The commission members, who played the game before making their decision, said that was all right, as long as challengers also got the lower price.

If the game was deemed a campaign tool, such discount sales could be banned under election law prohibiting corporations from making contributions to federal campaigns.

The game isn't inexpensive. For NAM members, it will run $2,210, and for non-members $2,600. Discounts will apply for people who buy more than one disc, and NAM proposes selling it to members of Congress and educational and charitable organizations for $765 or less.

Lipkin says a handful of congressmen already have called to ask about it. He said he didn't know which ones.

"They think it will be interesting. They also want to run it for their constituents," so people can see how complicated the work of a congressman is, Lipkin said.

Gas plant explosion shakes Houston Ship Channel area

PASADENA, Texas (AP) — A gas plant explosion early today rocked the area around the Houston Ship Channel causing a towering fire and injuring at least three workers.

The explosion before 5 a.m. at the Ethyl Corp., west of Pasadena around the Houston Ship Channel, was felt 35 miles away in Mont Belvieu, according to one employee who was enroute to work.

Officials at the plant could not be reached for immediate comment.

The plant's fire department and the Houston Fire Department were called to put out the blaze caused by the explosion, officials said. The fire was out within two hours.

Three employees, whose names were not released, were taken to a local hospital. Two were transferred by Life Flight to Houston's Hermann Hospital, where they were listed in serious condition, a hospital spokeswoman said. She said she did not know the extent of their injuries.

About 65 employees were working at the plant when the explosion occurred. Employees reporting for the day shift were not turned away.

Girl awaiting liver transplant donor dies

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A 2-year-old girl with liver failure whose family's appeal for a donor organ drew presidential support died today before a liver could be found for her, hospital officials said.

Kimberly Izzo, daughter of Alfred and Lois Izzo of Woodbridge, N.J., died of liver failure at 5:30 a.m. at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh, said hospital spokeswoman Mary Ann Ference.

The girl, who was admitted to the hospital Tuesday, did not receive a new liver despite being given a high priority for a new organ of her size and age, said hospital spokeswoman Lynn McMahon.

Parolees outnumber inmates in state prisons

DALLAS (AP) — Prison parolees outnumber inmates locked away in the Texas Department of Corrections for the first time in the state's history, and their number is continuing to grow, officials say.

The Board of Pardons and Paroles, under court order to relieve prison overcrowding, has even begun paroling convicted felons from county jails before they ever get to the TDC, The Dallas Morning News reported today.

The number of inmates on parole, including those in halfway houses and under mandatory supervision, has topped 40,000. The TDC population, meanwhile, is about 38,000.

The practice of paroling inmates from county jails to keep the state prison population down is already drawing criticism from a citizens group, the Dallas-based Associated Texans Against Crime.

"To parole people directly from the county jail without sending them to Huntsville is a mistake," said ATAC president Richard Collins.

"One of the things we want to accomplish is to teach a criminal that incarceration is indeed unpleasant, and we want him to actually go down to Huntsville so he'll see that," Collins said.

But pardons and paroles officials say there isn't much they can do because the state is under a federal court order to reduce the number of inmates behind bars.

"Every parole, to me, is a risk," said board member Ruben Torres. "You cannot eliminate that factor, because people are going to be released whether by parole or by (serving their full sentence). So you have to have good rehabilitation."

In 1985, the parole board released eight of every 10 inmates who were up for parole — a total of 21,506 people either paroled from prison or county jails, sent to halfway houses or released to mandatory supervision.

While the number of inmates released has increased dramatically, state budget cuts have not allowed the parole board staff to keep pace. The board had to cut $4 million from its budget this year, and it has not been allowed to fill 14 vacant parole officer positions.

In some parts of the state, a parole officer may have as many as 100 cases at one time.

South Texas leaders forge battle plan for hard times

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Hundreds of South Texas leaders, gathering in the spirit of regional cooperation, have forged a battle plan to help carry the area through its financial hard times.

The plan — adopted Sunday at the "Future of a Region" conference that drew 500 people here from El Paso to Victoria — calls for a tax increase to aid higher education and a regional economic development task force.

"One of the key points made today relates to the imperativeness and the willingness of this region to support higher revenues if necessary to maintain the base of higher education funding," said San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, who called the group together for the three-day conference.

Gov. Mark White, who addressed the convention on its last day Sunday, applauded that sentiment and assured the crowd he would protect reforms adopted two years ago.

"Texans are going to stick with educational reform and we're not going to tear it down in 1986," he said. "We need to put more money into research to make certain that we're going to be the cutting edge in areas such as agriculture, oil and gas and medicine."

Noting that South Texas does not have "one single university that is up to the level that it ought to be," Cisneros said the "present crisis in state financing is so overwhelming" that South Texas has been losing ground in recent years.

Statistics from the San Antonio Institute for American Studies show that unemployment in South Texas is the highest in the state and per capita income the lowest — under $8,000.

The devaluation of the Mexican peso, a depressed agricultural industry and poor oil prices have contributed to the region's woes.

Representatives adopted the majority of 54 pages of wide-ranging resolutions that included economic development, human needs, water, education, tourism and agriculture.

A proposal to endorse a state lottery to help fund higher education failed, although the delegates adopted resolutions asking for a bigger share of state dollars for higher education in South Texas, urging that no "raids" in educational funding be allowed or other vital economic programs in South Texas be cut.

Cisneros said the resolutions will be voiced in the special session of the Legislature, and will be carried into future ad hoc committees created by the newly formed task force.

"There's no question that we will find a way to articulate the issues," Cisneros said, adding that he was "surprised" at the level of agreement among the delegates during the setting of their goals.

Bexar County Judge Tom Vickers said the conference provides a blueprint for unified action for the region. Cisneros praised the participants for not allowing the state budget crisis to "overwhelm us."

Prison locked down after stabbings

ROSHARON (AP) — Two Texas prison units were locked down while authorities searched for weapons after one inmate was stabbed to death and two others were injured, officials say.

Authorities imposed the lockdowns Sunday as they interviewed inmates about the weekend violence, Texas Department of Corrections spokesman Charles Brown said.

In the 1,720-prisoner Darrington Unit at Rosharon, unknown assailants stabbed two inmates while they were in a shower area Sunday morning, Brown said.

Pedro Garza, 22, who was serving 10 years for possession of heroin in Bexar County, died from the mutiple stab wounds he suffered while showering, Brown said.

Louis Ramirez, 28, serving 14 years for burglary of a building from Bexar County, was treated at an Angleton hospital and later transported to the prison hospital in Galveston, where he remained in guarded condition Sunday, the spokesman said.

Three homemade knives were found in the shower area, Brown said.

Another stabbing was reported Saturday in the Beto I Unit in Tennessee Colony that prompted authorities to lock down one wing of 196 inmates, Brown said.

Man goes on trial for capital murder

VICTORIA (AP) — Lesley Lee Gosch goes on trial this week on charges that he killed the wife of a San Antonio bank president during an extortion attempt.

Jury selection was to begin today in the capital murder trial of Gosch, 30, in the slaying of Rebecca Jo Patton. She was killed in her home in an affluent San Antonio neighborhood as someone tried to extort money from her husband.

Authorities say a caller demanded money of Frank Patton Jr., president of Castle Hills National Bank in San Antonio, on the afternoon of Sept. 18, 1985. Patton summoned police, and six minutes later his wife was found dead. She had been shot several times.

Prosecutors allege that Gosch wanted money to flee the United States because he was scheduled to be sentenced two days later in federal court on charges of manufacturing a silencer and illegally transporting it.

Another defendant — John Laurence Rogers, 31, also charged with capital murder in the case — reached a plea-bargain agreement with authorities last week and agreed to testify for the prosecution, officials said.

One-time porter broke racial barriers in 1940

By JIM CONLEY

EL PASO (AP) — Almost half a century ago, Sam B. Calvert of El Paso was riding the rails out of town as a 35-year-old porter — a paid servant of mostly white patrons.

He still couldn't sit in the front of buses and streetcars or eat in most restaurants.

However, that didn't stop him for seeking a job in a field long reserved for white fathers and their sons.

He succeeded. On Aug. 24, 1940, a date etched in Calvert's mind as clearly as his birth date, he was accepted as the federal government's first black "immigration man" in El Paso.

About 25 years before black equality movements, Calvert, now 81, was given a chance that led to 31 years of work for the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Recently, his pioneering accomplishments were recognized by the El Paso chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

"I've certainly seen a change in the way black people are treated here," Calvert said at the recognition ceremony. "And I think the NAACP had a lot to do with it."

Calvert moved to El Paso with his family in 1912, when he was 7 years old.

He said El Paso never had as many racial problems as other cities, but he remembered, "We had to ride in the back of streetcars, and we couldn't eat in restaurants. But we just kept fighting.

"It was a big surprise to me when the INS hired me. I only completed high school but I guess my past jobs helped me get the job."

Calvert said he won't ever forget his first boss with the INS, a man he calls "a gentleman" who treated him fairly.

"Chief G.J. McBee of the Border Patrol told me I would be traveling and I would be segregated. But I told him I was born in the South and was used to it."

Nevertheless, for the first year or two, said Calvert, "I had trouble. The officers at the bridge (port of entry) hadn't had a black man (to work with) before."

Calvert describes himself as "just a worker" for the first seven or eight years. Then he was promoted to supervisor at the new alien detention facility. Formerly, aliens were held in the county jail.

He has certificates for outstanding service, not to mention one that shows he put in three decades with the federal agency.

Sam B. Calvert, the first black to serve with the Immigration and Naturalization Service in El Paso, shows off his successful fights against racial injustices. Calvert, now 81, worked for the INS for 31 years.

Texas official still fears potential contamination

LUBBOCK (AP) — A High Plains water official says federal studies have failed to convince him the area's water supply can escape contamination if a nuclear waste dump is placed in Deaf Smith County.

A. Wayne Wyatt, manager of the High Plains Underground Water Conservation District headquartered in Lubbock, said he is still waiting for Department of Energy guarantees that radiation leakage won't occur.

The water district serves all or portions of the counties of Armstrong, Bailey, Crosby, Cochran, Castro, Floyd, Deaf Smith, Hockley, Hale, Lamb, Lubbock, Lynn, Potter, Parmer and Randall.

The DOE has announced it will conduct characterization studies at the site, north of Hereford, which is one of three being considered for the nation's first high-level waste repositories.

Wyatt said the water district is making its own soil and water studies at the proposed Deaf Smith County site, south of Vega and north of Hereford.

Wyatt, former assistant director of the groundwater division of the Texas Water Development Board, said the local study will be completed within a week. Copies will be filed within three months with the Texas Water Commission and the Deaf Smith Commissioners Court, he said.

"Even a small radiation accident would have an overwhelming psychological effect as well as an economic effect. Ever since the Chernobyl nuclear accident in Russia, there's been a lot of rethinking. Would you buy beef, fiber, grain or fruit from the Chernobyl area right now if you had another choice?"

— A. Wayne Wyatt, underground water district manager

A Senate committee recommended last week that DOE funding for nuclear waste storage site studies be slashed from $677 million to $380 million, action that might stall work at the Deaf Smith site for a year.

That measure, however, still has to make it through the full Senate, the House and across the president's desk.

Wyatt charged that DOE has been deceiving the people by claiming that a 48-foot shaft that would have to be drilled through salt beds to the storage depth of almost half a mile is through dry salt.

"It's not dry," he said. "There's at least 100 feet of water-bearing salt. To our knowledge, installation of a mine shaft through a 100-foot section of water-saturated material has not been accomplished in the history of man."

A shaft being drilled in Germany through similar strata is already running into troubles, he said.

Wyatt said that below the Ogallala Formation, there is another freshwater formation, the Santa Rosa section, that the shaft would have to totally penetrate.

The Ogallala provides irrigation and drinking water to eight states — New Mexico, Oklahoma, Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Wyoming and Texas, Wyatt said.

The moist salt, he said, could establish dissolution channels where the water could leak through to the storage chambers, exposing the nuclear waste containers to erosion that could lead to widespread contamination of both the Ogallala and Santa Rosa Aquifer.

"Even a small radiation accident would have an overwhelming psychological effect as well as an economic effect," he said. "Ever since the Chernobyl nuclear accident in Russia, there's been a lot of rethinking. Would you buy beef, fiber, grain or fruit from the Chernobyl area right now if you had another choice?"

By Jeane Dixon
Tuesday, August 19, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Your anger could get the better of you if you do not learn how to control it. Exercise greater self-control. A financial situation will show great improvement after Christmas. A rigid attitude could affect your health. Be more flexible and tension disappears. Work conditions are due to improve.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Publisher Malcolm Forbes, New York Mets hurler Ron Darling, Gary Gaetti of Minnesota Twins, "Simon & Simon" star Gerald McRaney, actress Jill St. John, jockey Willie Shoemaker, Atlanta Braves' Terry Harper, fashion designer Coco Chanel, poet Ogden Nash and aviator Orville Wright.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Happiness comes more easily if you learn to ride with the tide. Accept changes with good grace. Refuse a social invitation if a family member has an emergency. Delegate responsibility.

TAURUS (April 20-May 10): A candid talk with a stranger would benefit your career or finances. False pride could be standing in the way of a profitable agreement. Patch up a quarrel.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Exercise tact when you win a battle today or you could make enemies. Your social skills are excellent. New business gains are possible if a meeting is conducted in a unusual setting!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): An excellent day for joint ventures. Domestic harmony could reach a new high by late afternoon. The mail brings welcome news from a parent or child.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An older person may try to shift responsibility on to your capable shoulders. Stand your ground. Phone calls and messages can give new meaning to your day. Better planning results in savings.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A friend or relative enlightens you about a business or financial matter. Adopting a tactful approach to higher-ups will produce positive results. A partner will demand straight answers. Be candid.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Business and financial affairs could start off slowly this morning, but the pace picks up by mid-afternoon. Sign contracts and finalize financial deals. A romantic relationship may be only so-so.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not expect to get your own way. Compromise will help you get the results you seek. A younger person shares expertise. Learning high-tech skills boosts your earnings.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Your co-workers look to you for inspiration. You receive a reward from an unlikely source. Domestic matters may occupy your thoughts. Be patient with someone who sends out distress signals.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The pace is apt to accelerate as the day goes on. Conserve your energy during the morning hours. Extra jobs could come your way. Aim high but do not expect spectacular results.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Do not allow friends to interfere with the way you handle your finances. Loved ones may be able to take over some responsibilities you have shouldered alone for too long.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Close associates mean well, but only you can untangle a financial mess. Romance is important to you now. Do not dip into savings to buy something you can easily do without.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J976 ♡8 ◇KJ763 ♣Q95
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
2 ♠*	Pass	?

* weak
What action do you take?
A.—You have little or no defense and you can be sure that the opponents have a heart fit. From your hand, it is even possible that the opponents could make a slam. Make life difficult for them—jump to four spades to force West to guess at a high level.

Q.2—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠Q8 ♡AJ72 ◇KQ952 ♣K7
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
2 ♠*	Pass	?

* weak
What do you bid now?
A.—On this hand, too, you should jump to four spades—this time with every expectation of making that contract. It is the fact that you might have either of the above holdings that puts West in a predicament when he has a good hand.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K983 ♡AQJ95 ◇K8 ♣93
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—You are interested in a slam, and a grand slam is not unlikely if partner has the right hand. However, you need room to investigate. Since North's jump shift was game-forcing, for the moment you need do no more than agree to the trump suit by bidding three spades.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠Q9 ♡J1073 ◇Q9832 ♣72
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
2 ♠*	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

* forcing
What do you bid now?
A.—You know where you want to play the hand, so get there as fast as possible. Jump to four hearts. That is a specialized bid which shows good trumps while denying first- or second-round control of any side suit.

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠K105 ♡AJ93 ◇KJ10 ♣Q83
Partner opens the bidding with one club. What do you respond?
A.—You have the strength and shape for a two no trump response, but it is unsound policy to bypass a reasonable four-card major. Even though your hand is perfectly balanced, partner's might not be and he could ignore his weakish four-card major if you jump in no trump. Respond one heart.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K9 ♡Q109542 ◇985 ♣64
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 NT	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	?

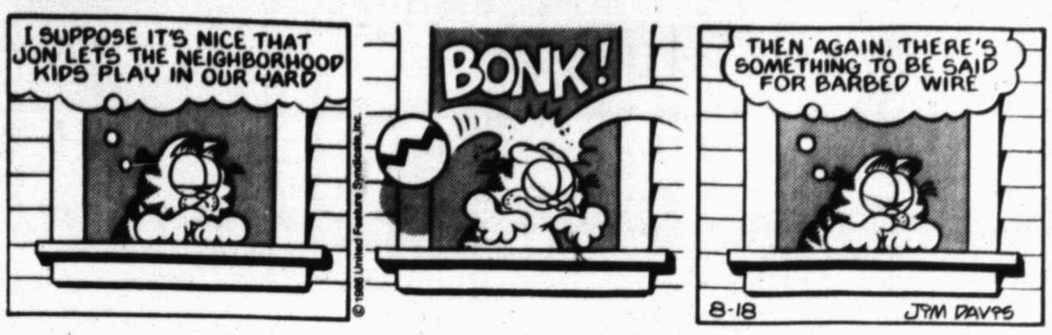

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's raise shows a maximum no trump opening bid with good heart support. Even though you have only 5 points in high cards, we feel your sixth heart is just about enough to warrant your bidding game in the suit.

'Witches of Eastwick' actresses team up to bedevil crew from 'Spenser: For Hire'

BOSTON (AP) — Sleuths tried to throw witches a curve, but Cher connected and splattered grapefruit across a softball diamond.

The ploy was in a game Sunday by the softball team from ABC-TV's "Spenser: For Hire." The cast and crew had challenged their counterparts in "Witches of Eastwick" to a softball match.

"Witches," starring Cher, Susan Sarandon and Michelle Pfeiffer opposite Jack Nicholson, is being filmed in Cohasset. "Spenser," starring Robert Urich as a private detective in Boston, is filmed on location.

Daryl's Devils, named for Nicholson's character in the film, beat "Spenser" 20-4 in six innings. However, the "Spenser" team won in the second game, 25-0.

Reagan

NEW YORK (AP) — First Lady Nancy Reagan says a good smile is a large part of beauty, but that life-long discipline at the dining table also is important.

"Good sensible eating habits are instilled when you are young," she said in September's Harper's Bazaar magazine. "As a doctor's daughter, that was certainly true for me."

She admitted a weakness for cookies, however. "One year my staff had a birthday party for me and only cookies were served," she said.

The other women who credit sensible diet and exercise for their beauty are actresses Cybill Shepherd, Meredith Baxter Birney, Lisa Bonet, Priscilla Presley and Barbara Carrera; CBS anchor Maria Shriver; pop music star Whitney Houston; Diandra Douglas, documentary filmmaker and wife of Michael Douglas, and model Paulina Porizkova.

Mrs. Reagan said it takes more than a figure to be beautiful: "A special smile — wonderful laughter — that's beauty."

WAUSAU, Wis. (AP) — Pro basketball coach Don Nelson says the farm tractor he rode for 250 miles was comfortable enough, but he hopes he won't have to hit the road again to attract attention to farmers' problems.

At the end of his nine-day trip from Milwaukee, the coach of the NBA's Milwaukee Bucks said he had collected $160,000 for Nellie's Farm Fund and that he expected that to reach $200,000 to help farmers with agribusiness counseling and equipment maintenance.

"This tractor right here is more comfortable than my Cadillac," Nelson said Saturday at the end of the trip.

"I hope we won't have to do this again," he said, but "we will stick with this until we solve the problem, and see some action politically."

King

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Billie Jean King says tennis has changed so much that she'd like to turn back the clock 20 years.

The former star said she didn't know if she'd be today's top player, but "I would have been right up there."

Ms. King, who now spends most of her time promoting TeamTennis, an indoor league, said the biggest difference between her and Martina Navratilova and Chris Evert Lloyd is that she had five knee operations while they've had no serious injuries.

"Knowing what we do now about conditioning, weights (and) staying healthy, my injuries might have been prevented," she said Saturday while watching the Virginia Slims of Los Angeles tournament at the Manhattan Country Club.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Director Franco Zeffirelli says he's thinking about leaving Italy for good after a run-in with Italian currency law.

"Perhaps it is time to put down roots somewhere else, but where would I go?" said the film director of "Romeo and Juliet" and the Richard Burton-Elizabeth Taylor "Taming of the Shrew."

Zeffirelli, 63, is appealing his May currency law conviction which stems from his issuing three checks in the United States, totaling $37,000, off an Italian bank without proper approval. He faces a year in prison and a $500,000 fine.

"The English gave me my first chance in theater, the Americans financed most of my films. It's so depressing to belong to a country that does not encourage its own talent," he said here before returning to Italy last week.

Keeshan

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Bob Keeshan, better known as Captain Kangaroo, laments some changes in society since his children's show made its debut in 1955.

There are "many more single-parent households and mothers working outside the home," Keeshan, 59, said Saturday at the Kansas City Zoo. He also said he's concerned about the number of children living in poverty.

CBS dropped Captain Kangaroo two years ago. However, 180 public television stations have signed up for his show on PBS, which begins Sept. 1. The shows will be edited versions of his hour-long programs that ran during the 1982-84 season on CBS.

SDI's importance

Members of Congress are playing with fire, though playing with war might be a more precise way of putting it when they resist President Reagan's efforts to push ahead with the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI).

The Democratic-controlled House balked again the other day by approving only $3.1 billion for the non-nuclear anti-missile defense program after the administration had asked for $5.3 billion.

There's no question that Reagan's request amounts to a lot of money, but it shouldn't be forgotten that when national security is at stake, we have to pay for it. Peace does not come cheap.

It also should be remembered that Reagan's "peace shield" is dedicated to defending against nuclear attack and is non-aggressive. The claim of non-aggression is one the Soviets cannot make since it is their nuclear arms buildup that has made SDI so important to America's security and negotiating posture in arms limitation talks.

When the president announced his research program in 1983 he said his hope was to make atomic weapons obsolete and eliminate the possibility of a nuclear war. This is the goal of a peacemaker, not a warmonger. Since then Great Britain and West Germany have seen the wisdom of SDI and agreed to participate. Other allies, such as Israel and Italy, are gearing research efforts in the same direction.

President Reagan has emphasized that one of the best arguments favoring SDI is that the Russians strongly oppose it, and want the plan abandoned. The administration wisely refuses, and won't even call it a "bargaining chip" although in actuality it definitely is that.

The House should take the Soviet attitude into consideration the next time SDI is discussed. Protecting the budget is important, but budgets are meaningless when national security is not protected.

The Strategic Defense Initiative deserves support from all who would explore ways to defend America against a nuclear attack.

Another View: Chernobyl's legacy

The April accident at the Soviet Union's Chernobyl nuclear-power plant killed at least 30 people and injured many more. As often happens with tragedy on that scale, it has pushed the Soviets and others toward something that they should have done before: in this case the creation of a new international system for quick notification of neighboring nations when an accidental release of radiation occurs.

The Soviet government's initial reaction to the reactor fire at Chernobyl was not to sound the warning to other nations in the path of the radioactive cloud, but to deny the seriousness of the accident. Eventually the Kremlin was more forthcoming, but by that time radioactivity had spread over a large portion of Europe.

The incident dramatically illustrated the fact that nuclear safety is not just the business of the nation in which an accident occurs. When an accidental release of radioactivity occurs, other countries have a right to know immediately.

Legal experts from 56 countries have been meeting in Vienna, Austria under the auspices of the International Atomic Energy Agency to discuss the notification issue. Sources involved in the talks report that a consensus has emerged on early notification of nuclear accidents — whether the accidents involve civilian nuclear-power plants, military-production reactors or even nuclearpropulsion units aboard warships and submarines.

Both the United States and the Soviet Union are part of that consensus. However, the great powers are said to oppose extension of the notification requirements to atmospheric release of radioactivity from nuclear-weapons tests.

If remaining obstacles to an agreement can be overcome, the world will have taken a major step toward the sane handling of a major problem. Since Chernobyl, the need for a global pact on nuclear notification has become even more obvious.

The West German state of Saarland complained this week that France had delayed reporting a fire that broke out recently at a giant nuclear plant at Cattenom, six miles from the West German border. The French, who seemingly have an excellent nuclear-safety record, say that it was a minor fire that was extinguished after 15 minutes.

A West German politician may have overstated the case several weeks earlier when he said, "If Cattenom were to have an accident on the scale of Chernobyl, the whole of the Saarland, Alsace, Lorraine and part of the Rhineland would be uninhabitable forever." But German concerns are understandable.

The Union of Concerned Scientists meanwhile has charged that eight of this country's licensed reactors "are extremely susceptible to serious accidents" — an allegation that is denied by the nuclear industry and government regulators.

In Britain, the Chernobyl accident has refocused attention on the Sellafield nuclear-reprocessing plant, only 90 miles from Ireland, which routinely discharges radioactive wastes into the Irish Sea. According to a parliamentary report issued in March, the plant "is the largest recorded source of radioactive discharge in the world."

An international covenant is needed not just to formally oblige the Soviet government to come through with early notification in the event of radiation accidents, but to overcome the cover-up instinct in other countries as well. The progress at the Vienna talks is welcome news.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, Aug. 18, the 230th day of 1986. There are 135 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Aug. 18, 1914, President Woodrow Wilson issued his "Proclamation of Neutrality," which was aimed at keeping the United States out of World War I. Said Wilson: "The United States must be neutral in fact as well as in name."

On this date:

In 1227, the Mongol conqueror Genghis Khan died.

In 1587, Virginia Dare became the first child of English parents to be born on American soil, on what is now Roanoke Island, N.C.

In 1838, the first marine expedition sponsored by the U.S. government set sail from Hampton Roads, Va. The expedition traveled the Pacific Ocean and South Seas, gathering information to help promote U.S. commerce.

In 1846, U.S. forces led by Gen. Stephen W. Kearney captured Santa Fe, N.M. In 1920, Tennessee became the 36th state to ratify the 19th Amendment to the Constitution, which guaranteed the right of all American women to vote.

In 1954, Assistant Secretary of Labor James E. Wilkins became the first black to attend a meeting of the President's Cabinet as he sat in for Labor Secretary James P. Mitchell.

In 1958, the novel "Lolita," by Vladimir Nabokov, was published.

In 1963, James Meredith became the first black to graduate from the University of Mississippi.

Ten years ago: Two U.S. Army officers were killed in Korea's demilitarized zone as a group of North Korean soldiers, wielding axes and metal pikes, attacked a group of American and South Korean soldiers who were trimming trees.

Five years ago: President Reagan, during a California visit, met with top aides in Los Angeles to discuss ways of cutting at least $75 billion more from the federal budget to eliminate the deficit by 1984.

Reagan holding up Bush endorsement

WASHINGTON — President Reagan will not endorse Vice President George Bush as his successor unless and until Bush makes it out of the 1988 Republican Convention as the party's candidate.

Jack Anderson

The president's reasons are both personal and political: Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., one of Reagan's closest friends and a conservative's conservative, has decided to seek the GOP nomination.

Reagan has told his super-loyal vice president, gently but firmly, that he must fend for himself through the caucus and primary season and the convention itself. An unequivocal statement from Reagan that he considers Bush the best man would give the vice president a tremendous advantage.

"More than once," a high-level administration source told us, "the president (told Bush), 'Obviously I'm going to stay neutral until after the convention, and then I'm going to work for whichever candidate comes out.'"

Sources close to both Reagan and Bush say the vice president, out of a sense of propriety, has never asked the president for his endorsement. "I just couldn't imagine Bush asking the president for an endorsement and expecting to get it," said one well-placed source.

It's been Reagan's personal policy not to intervene in party primaries. But White House sources early last year predicted that Reagan would make an exception for Bush, as recognition of the vice president's unflagging loyalty to the president in defense of his most controversial decisions.

Reagan privately told confidants more than a year ago that he would have no difficulty endorsing Bush over the likeliest Republican candidates: Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas, former Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee and Rep. Jack Kemp of New York.

But that was before Laxalt surprised everyone by announcing last August that he would retire from the Senate this year. This aroused immediate speculation that he might try for the White House in 1988.

According to close friends of the senator, he has responded affirmatively and without equivocation more than once when asked if he planned to run.

Even without Reagan's hands-off decision, Laxalt's entry into the nomination race will do serious damage both to Bush and to Kemp, who has been touted as the true keeper of the conservative flame — a Reaganite before Reagan. Laxalt could well rob Kemp of this mantle.

As for Bush, his stock in trade has been his almost slavish devotion to the programs of a president whose favorable rating remains overwhelming. Asked once if he might strike out on a more independent course and actually differ with Reagan, Bush replied: "I'm too far gone for that; I'm too pregnant."

Bush

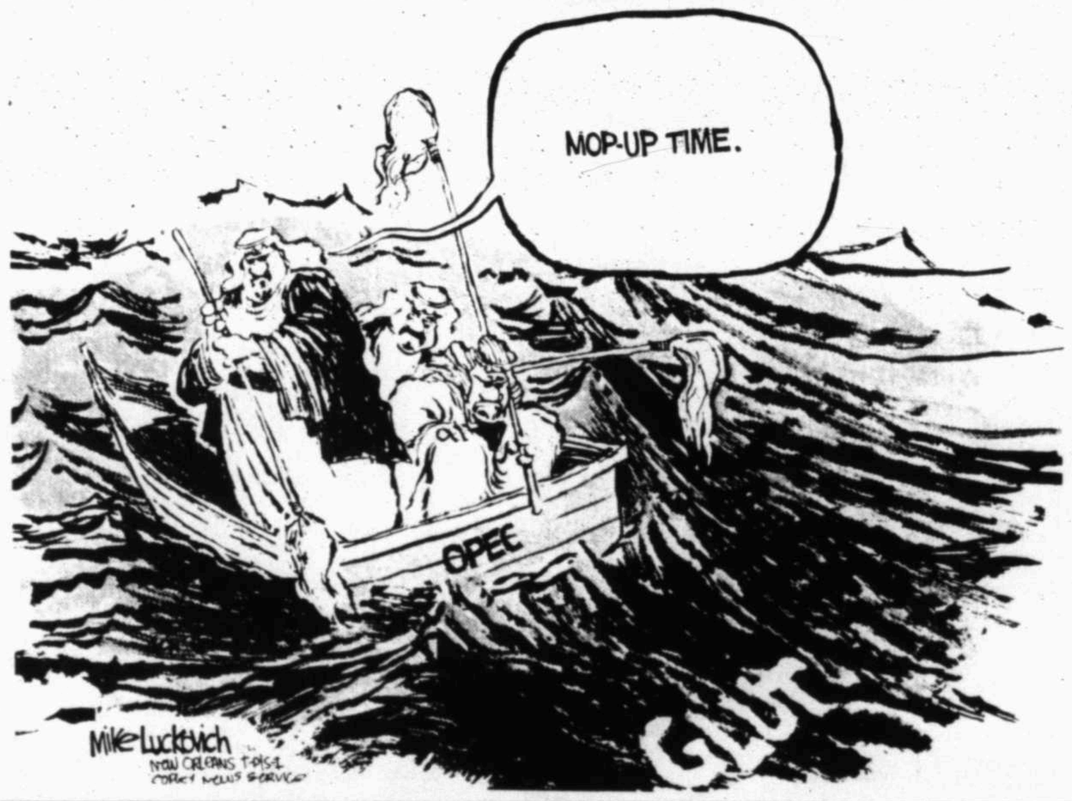

Bush's loyalty has even won him the grudging support of hard-core conservatives who considered him too "moderate." But they were mainly accepting him because he so obviously had the president's support, or seemed to have it.

Now Laxalt's entry into the race, coupled with Reagan's non-intervention policy, has released Bush's reluctant conservative supporters from their misery. Reagan's non-endorsement of Bush will be tantamount to an endorsement of Laxalt in their eyes.

Has Reagan's coyness soured relations with his vice president? Not according to those who are close to them both.

"Knowing Bush as well as I do," one source told us, "I would doubt if the guy would ever break down (over this). You see, Bush is not the type. If anything, Bush tells jokes. He's happy. He's upbeat with the president most of the time. When they get serious, they're serious. I can't see George Bush ever breaking down and crying over it."

Video tape sparks new fears for one hostage

WASHINGTON — Intelligence officials are fearful for the safety of David Jacobsen, one of three Americans still held captive in Lebanon by Shiite extremists tied to Iran's Islamic fundamentalist regime.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The concern, shared by administration policymakers, derives from the video tape of Jacobsen brought home by the Rev. Lawrence Jenco after he was released by the Islamic Jihad. On the tape, Jacobsen criticized President Reagan and asked him to negotiate an exchange of Islamic Jihad terrorists held in Kuwait for the remaining American hostages. But Reagan refuses to negotiate with terrorists.

Intelligence specialists say privately that in singling out Jacobsen for the video tape, his captors were warning the U.S. that his life is in danger. Jacobsen, 55, of Huntington Beach, Calif., was seized in May 1985 while walking to his job as administrative director of the American Hospital in Beirut.

MIDWESTERN GORBY

Soviet ruler Mikhail Gorbachev is being programmed for a festive Ronald Reagan homecoming celebration in the president's home town of Dixon, Ill., if the second Reagan-Gorbachev summit is held in November as expected.

The Dixon leg of Reagan's planned cross-continental tour with Gorbachev is being quietly planned by close Reagan aides as a highlight for both superpower leaders: Reagan gets a rare chance to revisit his old stamping ground and Gorbachev gets a look at old-fashioned Americana.

During the planned one-week Gorbachev tour, the president will travel with the general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party between the White House and the Reagan ranch in Santa Barbara, Calif. The trip will probably begin shortly after the Soviets celebrate their Nov. 7 national holiday.

REAGAN'S DEMOCRAT

Paul H. Nitze, President Reagan's top arms control adviser, has contributed the maximum $1,000 this year to Rep. Timothy E. Wirth, a liberal Democrat who regularly opposes the administration on national security questions and is running for a Colorado seat that could determine control of the Senate.

"I am a Democrat," Nitze told us, "and I see no reason why I should not contribute to him." Nitze, 79, described himself as a "close friend" of Wirth, 47, whom he had known as a student and who belonged to his club at Harvard.

But an administration political strategist called Nitze's contribution "awful" because it bolsters Wirth's claim, in his race against conservative Republican Rep. Ken Kramer, that he really is not anti-Reagan. The American Security Council gives only a 10 percent rating to Wirth, who opposes the administration on SALT II, nuclear testing, anti-satellite missiles, the Strategic Defense Initiative, the MX missile, Nicaragua, Angola and technology transfer to the Soviet Union.

DOLE'S MICHIGAN $$$

Although Senate Majority Leader Robert J. Dole stayed out of the Michigan's first-stage presidential competition, the Aug. 5 primary, he has sent his money there to boost him in the first-in-the-nation delegate selection to be climaxed in January 1988.

Dole has promised that his political action committee, Campaign America, will give $17,500 to William Lucas, the Michigan GOP nominee for governor. What's more, first payments of a promised $100,000 to the state Republican Party from Campaign America already have started.

That is a message intended to impress Michigan precinct delegates, none of whom are pledged to presidential candidates who sponsored them. While the Rev. Pat Robertson, Rep. Jack Kemp and particularly Vice President George Bush poured money into the state in their own behalf, Dole can argue he spent all his funds helping local Republicans.

ARMS CONTROL TRUCE

Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Perle, President Reagan's foremost arms control policy hardliner, told Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger after the recent arms talks in Moscow that he and Paul Nitze, the delegation chief, not only had no quarrels but got along extremely well.

Nitze is closer to detente-minded Secretary of State George Shultz than he is to hard-liner Weinberger. When the president pulled Perle off vacation in the south of France to go to Moscow as part of the Nitze team, dissension was widely predicted.

It failed to materialize. Front-page warnings in The New York Times and other pro-arms control newspapers that the U.S. delegation was too big and unwieldy proved exaggerated. Perle returned to his vacation satisfied that a strong U.S. bargaining position had been maintained during the Moscow talks.

CHARLEY REESE

S. African sanctions will backfire on U.S.

The way the West is attempting to destroy the Republic of South Africa — by imposing economic sanctions — provides as clear an example as you will find of the vices which will eventually destroy the Western democracies.

Charley Reese

It shows, first, the susceptibility of the democracies to demagoguery; second, the failure of the Western press to present a balanced and therefore accurate picture of a complex reality; and third, the inability of a materialistic society to understand a society which does not place the Almighty Dollar above all else.

It appears to have made not the slightest bit of difference that South Africa's current president, P.W. Botha, has officially ended his government's commitment to apartheid and proceeded to back up that commitment with concrete legislation.

A lynch-mob hysteria, instigated as usual by extremists, has swept the public and politicians along so that at the very moment South Africa has produced a statesman willing to end apartheid, he will not be given the opportunity.

Mark well the timing. The West goes for South Africa's throat not when staunch defenders of apartheid are in office but when men committed to ending apartheid are in office.

The media, committed as we are to reporting violence and excitement, have not provided an accurate picture of South Africa. One would never know, for example, that Botha can make speeches to 10,000 black South Africans and receive rousing cheers. One sees only the violence, hears only the voices of the extremists.

There is nothing particularly anti-South African in this. It's the nature of the beast. We cover our own domestic affairs in pretty much the same way.

Because they worship money above all else, people in the West always think they can manipulate others by either threatening economic punishment or by offering bribes. Lyndon Johnson always thought he could bribe the North Vietnamese. So did Richard Nixon, for that matter. He promised them $2 billion for a peace treaty.

Most of what the State Department chooses to call a foreign policy is just a laundry list of bribes. Reading the justification for foreign aid is enough to make you throw up.

Many people of the world, however, do not practice the religion of riches and the worship of wealth. They are motivated by other things. You can't bribe a communist into giving up communism nor can you buy off Arab hostility to Israel. Nor, as people are about to learn, can you bribe the South Africans.

Sanctions won't work. The Afrikaners fought the British Empire to a standstill, forcing it to resort to a scorched earth policy and even rounding up women and children into concentration camps. The British excesses so poisoned British public opinion that the empire lost much of its domestic support.

The only thing sanctions will do is kill reform and several thousands of people. The Afrikaners will just withdraw from the world which doesn't want them and go their own way. They have the power and the spirit to do that. For future reference, you may wish to make a list of the dolts in public office who think economic sanctions will force the Afrikaners to crawl.

It is not South Africa, though, which should concern us, tragic as that little country is. What should concern us is that the same process which is producing exactly the wrong policy toward South Africa is the same process which is producing exactly the wrong policy toward the Soviet Union, China, and the Third World.

God must be a lover of irony. He lets the idol kill the idolaters. The love of money in the West has already bankrupted it and will soon finish it off.

NATION in brief

Reagan to study details of tax reform package

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, beginning a three-week California vacation at his mountaintop ranch, is to receive a detailed study of the new tax reform plan by mid-week, aides say.

"We think it meets the president's criteria," White House spokesman Albert R. Brashear said Sunday of the tax overhaul legislation that was completed late Saturday by House and Senate negotiators.

Brashear said the Treasury Department's analysis of the sweeping reform package would be sent to Reagan's ranch for his review.

Reagan and his wife Nancy were to remain at the secluded 688-acre spread high in the rugged Santa Ynez Mountains until they travel next week to Los Angeles for three days of private social functions and dinners with friends.

The president had hailed the plan Saturday night in a statement issued hours after he arrived at the ranch.

Reagan said the package "satisfies my requirements for meaningful tax reform." Tax revision had become the primary legislative goal of his second term and Reagan had crisscrossed the country last summer on its behalf when few predicted a chance for its approval.

'Superfund' continued

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress is giving the stalled "Superfund" program emergency money to keep toxic cleanups going through September, but advocates of a stronger cleanup effort are fretting about the future.

By voice votes, the House and Senate on Friday sent President Reagan a stopgap bill that would pump $48 million into Superfund to avoid disruptions at the Environmental Protection Agency next month.

"This is the minimum amount needed to carry Superfund through September," said Rep. Edward Boland, D-Mass., House floor manager of the administration-supported bill.

The action came just before Congress began a three-week recess with legislation to renew and expand Superfund for five years being held up by the bigger debate over income tax overhaul.

EPA Administrator Lee Thomas had said that without a cash transfusion, disruptions would occur in early September to a toxic cleanup battle already running at half speed.

Fights interrupt concert

Elaine Rogue holds an ice-pack to an injured eye.

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — A wave of fights and stabbings erupted during a "rap" music concert, injuring at least 17 people and prompting police to storm the arena and shut down the show.

Sunday's was the third since last month where violence erupted at a concert involving the rap group Run DMC.

"Anywhere you stand, people just come up and start fighting," Janie Flores, 17, of Long Beach said Sunday night at the Long Beach Arena.

Some arrests were made, but the number was unavailable, police Sgt. Michael Monte said.

The violence began early in the concert at the 14,000-seat arena, where Run DMC was joined by Whodini and LL Kool J., said police and concertgoers.

Crowd beats gunman

VAL VERDE, Calif. (AP) — Angry onlookers beat a man to death with fence posts after he killed a teenager with a shotgun blast to the face and fired at a crowd, wounding three people, authorities said.

Gerardo Valle, 17, of Val Verde, was shot and killed early Sunday as he attempted to break up a fight between two youths outside a party, said Los Angeles County sheriff's Deputy Chris Robbins.

David Mota, 20, of Pacoima, grabbed a 12-gauge shotgun from his car when he saw Valle intervene, and shot once, blasting Valle in the face, Robbins said.

He then turned and fired two to three shots at the crowd of 30 to 60 people, Robbins said.

"The remaining portion of the crowd charged Mota, jumped him and started beating him with a fence post," Robbins said. "They beat him to death in the street."

Mota died of massive head injuries, said Sgt. Irene McReynolds.

Police seek pickpocket

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Police are searching for a woman pickpocket who distracts elderly men with a friendly hug and then steals their valuables.

"Normally she comes up and says she knew them from the doctor's office...and she touches them," Detective Jim Bryan said Friday.

"By the time (the victims) say, 'I don't know you' or 'I don't remember you,' their wristwatches or wallets are gone."

Detectives believe the woman, about 40 years old, is responsible for at least a dozen thefts in the past four months. Most of the victims were in their 70s and 80s and grabbed in the groin while they were robbed, Detective Pete Waack said.

Some of the incidents involved two women, with one driving the getaway car, Bryan said.

'Family dispute' goes public during Peace March

By WILLIAM C. HIDLAY

CHICAGO (AP) — Their political arguments began over the dinner table. But in a 1960s role reversal, the long-haired father advocated nuclear disarmament while his clean-cut son defended the Reagan administration's weapons buildup.

On Sunday, their family dispute went public: The father led a Chicago rally of the Great Peace March for Global Nuclear Disarmament while his son helped organize a counter-protest.

"This is the first time we've had an open, public confrontation, but I'm sure it won't be the last," said Joe Wiegand, a 21-year-old college senior who calls himself part of the "Reagan generation."

Wiegand's 44-year-old father, an entertainer and writer who uses the stage name Jim Wiggins, served as master of ceremonies for the peace marchers' "Survival Sunday" rally at Lincoln Park.

The 650 peace activists stopped in Chicago on a march from Los Angeles to Washington. The group left today for Hammond, Ind., and hopes to reach the nation's capital Nov. 15.

On Sunday, they were met by a counter-demonstration that Wiggins' son helped organize. As the anti-nuclear activists released black balloons to illustrate the radioactive cloud that would cover Chicago in a nuclear attack, 30 counter-protesters marched toward them, chanting, "Hey, Hey, what do you say? Peace through strength in the U.S.A."

The counter-protesters said they represented a coalition including the College Republicans and the Ethnic American Council, representing immigrants from East European countries under Soviet domination.

At the counter-rally, Wiegand held a U.S. flag and called his father's advocacy of nuclear disarmament dangerous.

"We have a family conflict here, a classic confrontation between father and son," said the elder Wiggins, grinning. "You have my son, the young conservative Republican, and me the old hippie father."

In the 1960s, Wiggins said he and his father clashed over their views. While Wiggins protested the Vietnam War, his father was a "dyed-in-the-wool Republican."

On Sunday, Wiggins still voiced liberal views and wore the symbols of the 60s: an earring, red bandanna headband, blue jeans and shoulder-length hair, though gray with age.

His son, a senior at the University of the South in Sewanee, Tenn., wore a blue, pinstripe suit, maroon tie and closely cropped brown hair.

Father and son met briefly before their opposing rallies began and traded political barbs.

"The peace march is an emotional, well-intentioned effort," said young Wiegand, who is working in Washington this summer as an intern for U.S. Rep. Phil Crane, a conservative Illinois Republican. "But it doesn't take into account the ideological and historical conflict between the United States and the Soviet Union. We advocate a position of maintaining peace through strength."

"Joseph," his father interrupted, "you've got to start somewhere. There are 4,000 pounds of explosives for every man, woman and child on this earth. That's 4,000 pounds too many."

"Dad," Wiegand retorted, pointing to a protest banner, "if you unfurled that peace banner on Red Square in Moscow, you'd be arrested."

Wiggins, a writer for comedians George Carlin and David Letterman, lives in the Chicago suburb of Palatine and helped coordinate the peace marchers' Chicago stay and rally. He said his son called five days ago from Washington to inquire about the march.

"He pulled a typical conservative Republican trick," Wiggins said. "He said, 'Dad, I want to get involved. Give me the dates and times and places.' Then he called me two days later and told me he was forming the opposition."

Reporting domestic violence may prevent its recurrence

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reporting domestic violence to police is an effective means of preventing its recurrence, according to federal figures that also show most law enforcement officials classify such assaults as misdemeanors.

About 41 percent of the married women who were attacked by their husbands or ex-husbands but did not call the police were assaulted again within an average of six months. Yet only 15 percent of the women who alerted police were assaulted again, according to figures released Sunday by the Bureau of Justice Statistics.

The report said a National Crime Survey found that about two-thirds of the incidents would be classified in most states as "simple assault," which is a misdemeanor, according to the report. One-third would fall into the category of "rape," "robbery" or "aggravated assault," which are felonies.

However, the injuries suffered by more than half the women whose assaults would be classified as misdemeanors were as serious or more serious than injuries suffered in 90 percent of all the violent crimes that would be classified as felonies, the report said.

"The tendency to classify these crimes as misdemeanors rather than felonies may give the impression that domestic violence against women is less serious than it actually is," the report said.

The extent of the victim's injury is not a critical factor when police decide how to classify a crime. More important is whether a weapon is present, the report said.

The report also found that nearly half of the incidents of domestic violence disclosed in the survey were not reported to the police.

An estimated 70 percent of the domestic violence reported in the survey was committed by a woman's husband, ex-husband, boyfriend or ex-boyfriend.

About 49 percent of the women who did not report attacks to police said they considered the crime a personal matter, while 12 percent said they feared retaliation.

WARNING
(A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)

In North Texas, sunny and hot afternoons and fair at night through Tuesday. A slight chance of thunderstorms tonight and in southern parts of North Texas on Tuesday. Lows tonight in the 70s, highs Tuesday from 92 east to 102 northwest.

In West Texas, mostly sunny and warm through Tuesday. Isolated to widely scattered late afternoon and evening thunderstorms mainly west of the mountains. Highs in the 90s except around 106 in the Big Bend. Lows in the 60s and 70s.

In South Texas, isolated evening thundershowers tonight west. Partly cloudy and continued hot on Tuesday with widely scattered thundershowers north. Lows tonight in the 70s, highs Tuesday in the upper 90s and low 100s.

Fair skies expected for Basin

From Staff and Wire Reports

The stormy weather experienced this past weekend is gone for awhile, according to reports from the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight's skies will be fair with a low temperature in the upper 60s.

Winds will be from the east and southeast today at about 5-15 mph.

Look for more fair weather Tuesday and expect a high temperature in the upper 90s.

The record temperature for this day occurred in 1969 when Midlanders were sizzled with a high of 106. The record low was 56 degrees in 1967.

STATE

A weak pressure field was in place over Texas today, but no significant inclement weather was reported.

Skies were generally clear except for partly cloudy skies in Northeast and Southwest Texas, the lower coastal plain and parts of the Panhandle.

Winds were light and variable throughout the state.

Temperatures ranged from the 60s to the 80s statewide. Overnight readings ranged from 65 at Marfa and Amarillo to 84 at Del Rio and Dallas.

The National Weather Service said the weather should continue mostly sunny and warm with widely scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms in far West Texas and North Texas.

NATION

Coastal flood warnings were issued for the Delaware Bay and Atlantic coastal areas of Maryland and New Jersey, while flood watches were posted for much of New Jersey, the New York City metropolitan area, Long Island and extreme eastern Pennsylvania.

Rain and thunderstorms associated with Charley extended along the mid-Atlantic Coast, across southwest Virginia and the western Carolinas.

Heavy rain spread across southern New England and scattered showers reached into northern New England.

Thunderstorms were scattered across southern Florida, northern Louisiana, southwest Colorado and Arizona, while rainshowers dotted the eastern Dakotas.

Green wins Int

CASTLE ROCK, Colo. (AP) — Ken Green birdied two of the last three holes Sunday to win the new and controversial International tournament and its $180,000 first prize. Green had 12 points under the modified Stableford scoring system, which added the touch of controversy to this first-year event. Green'sd medal score was 66. But that doesn't count.

Only the points acquired under this unorthodox scoring system had any bearing. Points were awarded on the basis of the score on each hole: 10 for double eagle, five for eagle, two for birdie, nothing for par, minus one for bogey and minus three for double bogey or worse.

Andretti Survives

LONG POND, Pa. — Mario Andretti, surviving another Indycar race of attrition, won the Domino's Pizza Pocono 500 at Pocono International, — his first ever at the track just 30 miles from his Nazareth, Pa., home. The 47th career triumph and second of the season, also moved Andretti into the CART-PPG point lead, past his 23-year-old son Michael, who wound up 11th Sunday. Mario has 96 points, Michael 91.

Bradley wins

BUFORD, Ga. — Pat Bradley called it a career shot — a 206-yard approach for a tap-in eagle on No. 16 Sunday — that gave her the LPGA's single season earnings record and her fifth title in 1986. Starting the final round eight shots behind, Bradley fired a sizzling 9-under-par 63 to win the Nestle World Championship by two shots.

Bradley lifted her season earnings to $482,496 with the $78,000 first prize — biggest in LPGA history — with her 9-under-par 279 total for 72 holes.

Becker triumphs

TORONTO — Boris Becker proved there's more to his game than a big serve as he defeated Stefan Edberg 6-4, 3-6, 6-3 to win the Player's International in humid conditions under sunny skies which pushed the courtside temperature to 115 degrees.

Ellioft Sparkles

BROOKLYN, Mich. — Bill Elliott won the $450,000 Champion Spark Plug 400 and set a NASCAR record with his fourth consecutive victory on the two-mile oval at Michigan International Speedway, averaging 135.46 mph. Tim Richmond finished 1.34 seconds behind Elliott with Darrell Waltrip third and Geoff Bodine fourth...

Nartina again

MANHATTAN BEACH, Calif. — Martina Navratilova solidified her No. 1 ranking going into the U.S. Open with a 7-6 (7-5) 6-3 victory over Chris Evert Lloyd in the Virginia Slims finals, her 37th win in 70 matches against Lloyd.

Connors loses

STOWE, Vt. — Eliot Teltscher beat top-seeded Jimmy Connors 6-1, 6-2 in a semifinal match, then came from behind to beat Andres Gomez 6-7 (8-6), 6-4, 6-2 to win the 1986 Head Classic...

Angels defy tradition; win in 11

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

When the Midland Angels find themselves locked in a close battle this year, history says they're going to lose.

However, as Michael J. Fox said in the movie Back to the Future: "History is gonna change."

It did Sunday night as the Angels notched their second straight one-run Texas League victory over the Beaumont Golden Gators, using a bases loaded walk by James Randall in the bottom of the 10th for a 7-6 score. Saturday, the Angels won 6-5.

"Two close games," said Midland manager Joe Maddon. "We've had a hard time in close games this year but we're starting to do things right, not caving in."

"We've lost so many games like this, it's definitely a good feeling," added Randall, who also collected home run 22 for the year to give the Angels a 6-5 lead in the fifth.

ON THE game winning RBI walk, Maddon said, "I told him to take on 2-0 and 3-0 but he was on his own at 3-1."

"I wasn't taking then (3-1) because I didn't want to go to 3-2 and have him (relief pitcher Bill Blount) get a good pitch on me and then not get a good hack," said Randall. "At 3-1, I was definitely looking to hit."

But, the pitch just wasn't there.

"It was a close pitch but it was up and in," said Randall. "The pitcher gave me trouble early this year but couldn't get it over tonight. He didn't have any pop on the ball either."

The winning rally was aided by a good bounce for John Hotchkiss. With one out, the Angel third baseman crushed a pitch back to the mound where it hit reliever Joe Lynch, the eventual loser, hard and bounced through the gap between second and first base.

Jeff Schaefer followed by laying a bunt bunt down the third base line where Scott Parsons fielded it but no one covered first and two runners were on. One out later, Pete Coachman lined a shot up the middle to load the bases to set up Randall.

BEAUMONT OPENED a 2-0 lead through the top of the second only to give back one in the bottom of the inning when Dante Bichette broke the ice with a home run over the left field fence, his 12th of the year.

Midland starter Sherman Corbett gave up three more runs in the third on a double by Jerald Clark, an RBI single by Parsons and a two-run homer by Frank Castro, his 10th.

Again the Angels answered the challenge in the bottom of the inning, this time using a two-run homer by Pete Coachman, his third, for a 5-3 Beaumont lead.

After Dave Montanari added a run in the fourth on Schaefer's single, the Angels took the lead with Randall's homer in the fifth.

Corbett, who settled down for the next 3⅔ innings after the rough start, gave up the Gators' final run in the sixth after Schaefer threw wildly to first on Mark Gillaspie's grounder. Gillaspie scored on Bob Grandstaff's double.

Angel relief ace Terry Clark came on in the seventh when Corbett gave up his 13th hit of the game and never let a Gator beyond second the rest of the way.

Even though he gave up five earned runs, Corbett kept the Angels in the game, and more important, out of the bull pen until the seventh.

"A lot of credit goes to Sherman," said Maddon. "He didn't panic. Overall, I think he's pitched well but has had a lot of bad luck. The ball seems to keep finding the holes."

$7,000 bleeper bloops and costs Cowboys TD

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A $7,000 beeper, one of the keys to a heralded NFL instant-replay system put into use this season, didn't work like it was supposed to and led to a crucial touchdown in the Los Angeles Raiders 24-19 exhibition victory over the Dallas Cowboys, officials said.

Saturday night's mishap in the nationally televised game plagued what was to be a showcase for the new system that was designed to end bad calls on controversial plays.

Raiders receiver Dokie Williams caught a pass from quarterback Jim Plunkett over Dallas defensive back Everson Walls, but Walls was able to knock the ball loose as Williams went out of bounds.

Side judge Nathan Jones, who didn't have a clear view of the play, ruled the catch complete.

An NFL official watching the instant replay equipment in the press box saw the mistake and tried to signal the officiating crew and overrule them on the play, a league official said.

But he was unable to reach the umpire, the only official on the field with a beeper. The catch stood and the Raiders scored three plays later when Plunkett hit Steve Strachan with a 14-yard touchdown pass.

An NFL announcement in the press box called it a "malfunction of the beeper system." NFL spokesman Don Weiss later said the umpire simply failed to hear the beeper.

"Other times he thought he was hearing it, but he really wasn't," Weiss said. "There were obviously some kinks in the system tonight, but that's what the pre-season is for."

de Witt may cancel bout

EDMONTON, Alberta (AP) — Injured Canadian heavyweight champion Willie de Wit's scheduled fight Saturday in Grande Prairie, Alberta, against American Andrew Stokes may be cancelled.

During training camp last in week in California, de Wit, a native of Grande Prairie, injured his left elbow. He aggravated the injury on Friday and was to have the elbow examined on the weekend in Calgary.

The results of the tests will determine whether the fight will go ahead, said Rod Proudfoot of Willie de Wit Enterprises.

"I'm not sure how it happened, and I don't know the extent of it," Proudfoot said in an interview. "But on Friday he tweaked it again and now it's very tender and swollen."

He said about 6,000 seats — about 75 percent of capacity — have been sold for the long-awaited homecoming fight, and "if we cancel the fight we will have to swallow some money.

"I hope we don't have to cancel," he said. "But that's not the question. Willie's health is."

Proudfoot said a proposed fight against former heavyweight champion Larry Holmes was on hold because Jackie McCoy, de Wit's manager, wants his boxer to get more experience.

"We're realistic enough to see that it probably won't come off, but we're also optimistic enough to see that it has a chance," Proudfoot said.

Tough Run

Whitt whips Rangers in 11

Texas Rangers

TORONTO (AP) — Ernie Whitt knew he'd hit the ball out of the park, it was only a question of whether it would stay fair or hook foul.

The Toronto catcher's 11th-inning homer stayed fair and struck the right-field foul pole to give the Blue Jays an 8-7 victory Sunday and a three-game sweep of their series against the Texas Rangers.

The game was less than an hour away from being suspended due to a concert by comedian Bill Cosby, scheduled at Exhibition Stadium later Sunday night, and Whitt feared that his charity golf tournament Monday might be wiped out by the game having to be completed.

"I wanted to play golf tomorrow, not baseball," said Whitt, who entered the game in the seventh inning. "The tournament was on my mind."

Whitt's leadoff blow was his 11th homer of the season and came on a 1-1 pitch from reliever Jeff Russell, 4-2.

"He hung me a slider and I was just fortunate enough to get it up," said Whitt, who stood in the batter's box to track the flight of the ball. "I knew I'd hit it hard enough, I was just hoping it would stay fair."

The homer made a winner of Mark Eichhorn, 10-4, who pitched four scoreless innings of three-hit relief.

Oddibe McDowell's second homer of the game and 16th of the season had put the Rangers ahead 7-6 in the seventh, but Jesse Barfield responded with a run-producing double in the bottom of the inning.

Texas was ahead 6-2 when starter Mike Mason gave way to Dale Mohorcic with runners at first and second and no outs in the sixth. Barfield greeted Mohorcic with a double that scored Cliff Johnson, and George Bell scored when shortstop Curtis Wilkerson tried to get Barfield at third on a grounder.

Willie Upshaw's groundout scored Barfield to pull Toronto to within a run and Tony Fernandez's two-out, game-tying single scored Garth Iorg, who had reached on an infield single and moved to second on a fielder's choice.

The Rangers, outscored 19-2 in losing the first two games of the series, hammered Toronto starter Jim Clancy for five runs on as many hits in the first 1 1-3 innings.

Toronto reliever John Cerutti retired the first 10 batters he faced before Larry Parrish hit his 18th homer leading off the sixth.

Mason had allowed one hit through three innings before the Jays collected two runs on three hits and a walk in the fourth. Bell's weak roller through the right side scored Lloyd Moseby, who led off with a double. Johnson followed Moseby with a walk, took third on Bell's hit and scored on Damaso Garcia's infield single to cut the lead to 5-2.

Consecutive two-out walks, a two-run double by Parrish and a run-scoring single by Ruben Sierra staked the Rangers to a 3-0 lead in the first.

Clancy retired the first two batters in the second, but McDowell hit his 15th homer. Gary Ward singled, stole second and took third on shortstop Fernandez's fielding error. Pete O'Brien's single made it 5-0.

USC, Texas picked 1-2 for Coaches' Hot Seat poll

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

In the what-have-you-done-for-me-lately world of major college football there have been few bigger winners than Texas and Southern California.

Texas ranks third among Division I-A teams with 640 victories (Michigan has 665, Notre Dame 646) and Southern Cal is ninth with 571.

In winning percentage, Texas is fourth at .727, USC sixth at .710.

And, according to informed sources, they rank 1-2 (pick your own order) in the category of coaches who had better put some big numbers in the win column this season.

In this, his 10th season at Texas, Fred Akers has a chance to become the sixth winningest coach in the history of the Southwest Conference. If the Longhorns win seven games, Akers would trail only legends such as Darrell Royal, who won 167 games in 20 seasons at Texas; Frank Broyles, who won 144 games in 19 years at Arkansas; and Jess Neely, who won 144 in 27 years at Rice; Matty Bell, who won 123 games in 23 years at Texas Christian, Texas A&M and Southern Methodist; and D.X. Bible, who won 135 games in 21 years at Texas and Texas A&M.

Akers' nine-year record at Texas is 81-25-2, a winning percentage of .759, second best in SWC history to Royal's .774 mark. His record in SWC play is 56-15-1 (again second to Royal, .785 to .797), including championships in 1977 and 1983 and four second-place finishes; the Longhorns have gone to a bowl each season and have been in The Associated Press final Top Ten four times.

Although Ted Tollner's overall record at Southern Cal is just 19-15-1, he is one of only three coaches in USC history (Jeff Cravath and John Robinson are the others) who have taken the Trojans to bowl games in two of their first three seasons.

In 1984, Southern Cal won the Pac-10 championship, defeated Ohio State in the Rose Bowl and finished 10th nationally.

The rumor mill says Akers would be advised to win the SWC title this fall and Tollner had better win at least eight games and get a major bowl bid. Other coaches on the spot are said to be Jim Criner, 11-20-2 in three years at Iowa State, which is under strong scrutiny by the NCAA, and Joe Lee Dunn, 13-22 in three years at New Mexico and who must open the season with road games against Tennessee, Brigham Young and Texas Tech.

The problem is that at every big-time school there is a faction to whom, as one coach put it, "too much ain't ever enough." Last year, the wolves got coaches such as Notre Dame's Gerry Faust, Pitt's Foge Fazio, Mississippi State's Emory Bellard, Texas Tech's Jerry Moore, Kansas State's Jim Dickey, Vanderbilt's George MacIntyre, Wyoming's Al Kincaid, San Diego State's Doug Scovil and Memphis State's Rey Dempsey, among others.

Texas supporters not only were spoiled by years of success under Royal, but it didn't help when he pushed Mike Campbell, his No. 1 assistant, to be his successor. Since Royal also was Texas's athletic director, it was a slap to him when the school chose Akers, who had been on Royal's staff from 1966-74 before spending two years as head coach at Wyoming.

Nor did it help when Akers' 1977 and 1983 teams went 11-0 during the regular season only to blow national championships by losing their bowl games (Akers' bowl record at Texas is 2-7). The 1977 team, ranked No. 1, was wiped out by Notre Dame in the Cotton Bowl 38-10 and the 1983 club, ranked No. 2, lost to Georgia 10-9, also in the Cotton Bowl. Top-ranked Nebraska lost in the Orange Bowl that night.

"That was the pivotal game," says a source close to the Texas scene, noting that Texas was ahead late in the game when a fumbled punt set up Georgia's winning touchdown.

Akers' critics were out in force when Texas wound up 1984 by losing to Baylor 24-10, Texas A&M 37-12 and Iowa 55-17 in the Freedom Bowl after a 7-1-1 start. Last year, the Longhorns were 7-2 when a rumor surfaced that Akers might not be able to survive a loss to Baylor.

Texas beat Baylor 17-10, but lost to Texas A&M 42-10, the second consecutive blowout by the Aggies, then lost to Air Force 24-16 in the Bluebonnet Bowl. During the game — ironically, just as Texas scored — a plane hired by a UT alumnus flew over the stadium pulling a banner with the message, "Fire Fred."

Although Akers is a hard worker, he does not have Royal's charisma or his predecessor's two national championships. He does not utter Royalisms like "We're gonna dance with who brung us" and he doesn't pal around with Willie Nelson. For the most part, he is in the public eye only on football Saturdays.

Tollner was being written off by some when the Trojans were 4-5 last November, including a 37-3 trouncing by Notre Dame (Tollner's other meetings with the Irish produced 27-6 and 19-7 setbacks). But USC beat UCLA and Oregon to earn a bid to the Holiday Bowl, losing to Alabama, 24-3.

Earlier this summer, the Los Angeles Times detailed a strained relationship between athletic director Mike McGee and Tollner, who was already the coach when McGee became A.D. in 1984.

McGee denied any antipathy but Darren Moon, a graduate assistant coach last season, was quoted as saying that "if McGee and Tollner were passing in the hallway, I doubt they would acknowledge each other's presence."

Moon said that after the Trojans upset UCLA 17-13, "Everybody was laughing, saying that the only person who was unhappy that we beat UCLA was McGee."

Tollner, too, is optimistic.

"The Pac-10 will be a strong league, but I believe we have an excellent chance to be in contention for the title," he said.

Vacation in West Texas

It was at the Texas Tech golf tournament in June. Jack Swallow wanted to know if anything exotic was planned for vacation this year, undoubtedly remembering last year's elaborate plans for a trip to Greenland.

Temptation was there, but last year was the year Americans went overseas in droves. This year everybody was staying home and seeing the states. The demand was such that the national parks were overbooked and underbudgeted. The outlook was so dour, park officials were pleading for volunteer help to assist with mundane chores so that they could survive.

Texans were entreated not only to savor the wonders of America, but do it right here in the Lone Star State...Palo Duro; Big Bend; the Piney Woods; Six Flags; the Astrodome and the resurgent Astros; Arlington Stadium, the modern ball park with the old timey atmosphere and the surprise team of the year....

SHUCKS, why travel at all? A vacation in the Permian Basin. I had enough golf events lined up to keep me busy for a week. Who needed the U.S. or even the rest of Texas and its suffocating humidity?

For beginners, there was the Jimmy Allison Memorial over at Mission. Then there was a media tournament in Big Spring, all I had to do was round up a team; and finally another benefit scramble at Mission to cap it off. In between there was the Camera Club meeting and on Thursday the Flatlanders met.

There was enough yard work (when isn't there?) to round out the week. The Mrs. insisted we'd eat out every night. Even so, the family budget would be all smiles....why hadn't we thought of this before?

Before leaving for the Allison tournament on opening day of vacation, in the process of tidying up the backyard, one of the clothes line poles fell down. Well, not exactly. I exerted some pressure and it broke off. Seems the thing had rusted through at ground level.

As a public service warning, you can forget the wedding anniversary; fail to call home that you'll be late for supper because of work; wander in after midnight after a night out with the guys playing poker. All may be considered cardinal sins, but you'll live to tell about it. Whatever you do in this life, don't fool around with the Mrs.' clothes line pole, especially with clothes on it. I fled for the safety for Mission before bodily harm was inflicted by an enraged wife.

I WAS so shook up I couldn't hit a green and partner Gary Ott couldn't make a putt. Gary isn't married so I think it was when I broke out the six pack that his touch on the greens deteriorated. At least that's what I surmised from his reaction, "Cool Ade?"

The tournament was so long, I missed the Camera Club meeting that night and, even so, I didn't dare go home, so the evening was spent watching the Braves game on TV in the newsroom and processing box scores for the morning deskman, hopeful I could slip unnoticed and unabused into the den for a night on the couch.

The yard work played second fiddle to repairing the clothesline pole. A box was built around what remained of the short pole and cemented in the ground and then more cement poured around the box. It won't work. The pole still tilts, but at least it resulted in a temporary reprieve until the job can be done properly.

THURSDAY, the MRT held its NFL draft for the coming season at 5:30 p.m. Players were picked and winners of the six weekly games in three divisions would be determined by the number of points scored by the drafted players. In trying to round up a foursome for the media golf in Big Spring Saturday, it was discovered everyone had to work. Scratch one golf tournament. Then scratch the Mission tournament the following Monday for lack of participants.

Oh well, at least I had the first pick in the draft and grabbed Dan Marino, 30 TD passes last year, then had to wait 24 picks before getting a receiver to go with him. You can imagine what was left. On top of that, the draft took so long, I missed the Flatlanders' Ski Club meeting and may have missed out on news on an important trip.

The yard work? The Mrs. had the yard sprayed for fleas and tics, so the grounds were declared off limits for three days. With the Saturday golf in Big Spring cancelled, Friday was deemed a good day for a consolation round, only a fivesome was preparing to tee off on my favorite nine, so I went home and sulked. By now Murphy's Law hounded my every action.

Perry, Hasek make splash in Austin meet

From Staff Reports

AUSTIN— Sam Perry and Michaela Hasek made a splash for the City of Midland Swim Team at the National Junior Olympic Swim championships at the University of Texas Swim Center.

Perry competed in the 200-meter backstroke, swimming a 2:11.44 to place eighth against 55 of the best 18-and-under swimmers in the western United States. Perry became the first male swimmer from Midland in 10 years to qualify for the finals.

Perry swam the 100 meter back in 1:01.92, well under his personal best of 1:03.19. He failed to qualify for the finals, but moved from 46th place to a final finished of 26th place.

Hasek turned in her personal best in the 200-meter backstroke, but her time failed to qualify. She moved up in the standings, falling 3/10s of a second out of a scoring spot.

Later she qualified for the finals in the 100-meter backstroke with a personal best of 1:07.95. IN the finals she finished fifth overall with another personal best of 1:07.22, which qualified her for the U.S. National championships. Hasek is the first West Texas girl to achieve that plateau in 12 years.

Tyson notches 26th straight

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — While Mike Tyson keeps winning, his manager keeps planning.

The manager of the undefeated Tyson, who claimed his 26th victim Sunday night, must decide between a matchup of the 20-year-old heavyweight against former International Boxing Federation champion Larry Holmes or the HBO boxing tournament.

Jose Ribalta lasted nearly the full 10 rounds — something only two of Tyson's opponents have been able to do — before referee Rudy Battle stopped the fight Sunday at 1:37 of the final round.

The victory could put Tyson in a position to take on either Holmes, who had won 48 straight fights before losing to Michael Spinks and then losing an April 19 rematch, or World Boxing Council champion Trevor Berbick.

Bill Cayton, Tyson's manager, said he's not sure he wants a Tyson-Holmes matchup.

Red Sox up lead to five

Angels widen lead in over Rangers

Associated Press

The importance of a victory Sunday that moved the Boston five games in front in the American League East wasn't lost on Marty Barrett, who ignited a three-run fifth inning with a single and doubled home the tie-breaker in a three-run sixth as the Red Sox beat the Detroit Tigers 7-5.

With their fourth victory in the last five starts, the Red Sox extended their American League East lead over the Yankees to five games. Detroit fell seven games back and Baltimore 7½.

Barrett, Bill Buckner, who had a three-run double in the fifth, and Don Baylor, who had a two-run double in the sixth, all got hits following intentional walks. Five of Boston's nine hits were doubles.

Darrell Evans hit two home runs, his 20th and 21st, and Chet Lemon added his sixth for Detroit, which was held to one run after Calvin Schiraldi came on for Boston starter Bruce Hurst in the sixth. The victory was Schiraldi's first AL decision.

Royals 5, Yankees 0

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Mark Gubicza pitched a six-hit shutout and struck out a career high 10 batters, and Willie Wilson hit a two-run homer while George Brett and Frank White added solo shots.

Gubicza, 7-5, did not walk a batter. He retired 10 straight after Wayne Tolleson and Don Mattingly singled to open the fourth inning. Gubicza completed his second game of the season and got his second shutout.

American League

Indians 11, Orioles 6

CLEVELAND — Cory Snyder, who hit two home runs, keyed a six-run sixth with a three-run shot, and both Pat Tabler and Tony Bernazard had three of Cleveland's 13 hits.

Snyder, who was recalled from the minors June 13, has hit 16 home runs and driven in 40 runs in his 58 games with Cleveland. Tabler went 3-for-3, giving him 35 hits in his last 82 at-bats, a .427 average that lifted his overall mark to .302.

White Sox 7, Brewers 4

CHICAGO — Steve Carlton allowed three hits in 7 1-3 innings for his first American League victory, and Ron Hassey, Daryl Boston and Ozzie Guillen had three hits apiece to lead a 16-hit Chicago attack.

Carlton, 42, posted his first victory since July 26. The four-time Cy Young Award winner also passed the 5,000-inning milestone when he got Ben Oglivie on a grounder to short in the sixth inning — part of a stretch in which he retired 11 in a row.

Angels 7, A's 3

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Don Sutton, joining Atlanta's Doyle Alexander as the only active pitchers to defeat each of the 26 major league teams, spaced six hits over six innings as California increased its margin over second-place Texas in the West to 4½ games, their largest of the season.

Gary Pettis led the California attack with three hits, two walks, three runs scored and one RBI.

Mariners 11, Twins 1

SEATTLE — Alvin Davis homered for third consecutive game, Ken Phelps hit a three-run homer and Scott Bradley homered and drove in three runs to support Mike Morgan's six-hitter.

Morgan, 9-12, struck out seven to tie his career high and walked three as Seattle took three of four games against Minnesota. It was Morgan's sixth complete game.

Kirby Puckett hit his 24th homer in the sixth for Minnesota's only run. Mike Smithson, 9-11, who gave up six hits, took the loss.

Phelps' 18th homer of the season broke open a 3-1 game in the seventh and chased Smithson. Harold Reynolds walked and Davis was walked intentionally two outs later before Phelps hit a 420-foot drive to dead center.

...meeting the challenge

Jill Heith of Midland was very pleased with the results she received from her classified ad. On one of Midland's windier days the tent her son received for his 7th birthday blew out of their backyard. Jill called the Reporter-Telegram classified dept. and placed an ad describing the lost tent. The very next day she received a call from a gracious lady who had found the tent and taken the time to disassemble it and found her ad in the Lost and Found.

Garber nails it down for Braves

ATLANTA (AP) — Braves Manager Chuck Tanner doesn't like to take chances, so he didn't hesitate to bring in Gene Garber with one out in the ninth inning of Atlanta's 4-3 victory over the Houston Astros on Sunday.

Tanner made the move even though left-handed Craig Reynolds was about to pinch-hit against Braves left-handed reliever Ed Olwine.

"I've never used a hunch in my life," Tanner said. "I do what I think is right. Garber is one of the best relievers in the National League and I just went with him."

Garber retired Reynolds and Davey Lopes on groundouts to earn his 18th save.

Bob Horner drove in Rafael Ramirez with the winning run on a sacrifice fly in the seventh inning as the Braves salvaged the third game of the series against Houston, but he wasn't completely happy.

"It was good to win today, but we had to win two of three," Horner said. It'll get tougher and tougher from here on out".

The Braves, in fifth place in the National League West, trail first-place Houston by 11 1-2 games.

Ramirez had three hits in the game and scored twice. He singled leading off the seventh, stole second and went to third on Houston catcher Alan Ashby's throwing error. An out later, Horner's fly brought Ramirez home.

Cliff Speck, 2-0, who relieved starter Zane Smith at the start of the sixth inning, earned the win with 1 2-3 hitless innings.

Glenn Davis gave Houston a 2-0 lead in the third inning with his 25th home run.

The Braves tied the score at 2-2 in the fourth on RBI singles by Ken Griffey and Bruce Benedict. Ramirez doubled and scored on Griffey's single.

The Astros broke a 2-2 tie in the sixth when Ashby singled and eventually scored on Bill Doran's sacrifice fly. Pinch-hitter Ted Simmons' groundout scored Griffey in the sixth, tying the score again.

Ryan, making his second start since returning from his second stint on the disabled list this season, went the first five innings for Houston, allowing two runs on four hits and three walks while striking out five.

ANGELS

THE HOMERS by Bichette and Coachman in the second and third helped spark the Angels and kept things from getting out of hand.

"We were looking for something to happen," said Coachman, who has hit all three of his homers at Angel Stadium. "The guy (Candy Sierra) gave me a slider up and I was looking for that pitch. He helped me get it up because he let me get enough on it to hit it out."

Randall said it was also a slider that he knocked out.

"He was throwin' me a lot of them all night," said Randall. "He got it out over the plate and I got the head on it."

The victory for Midland was sweet after hopes at the start of the second half were dashed by rough times on the road.

"We've been having a tough time," said Coachman. "When we get the pitching we don't have hitting or we have the hitting and don't have pitching or we have pitching and hitting and have a problem with D.

"If we get it all together, we could win the rest of our ball games, or a good percentage of them."

There wouldn't be any Midland fans complaining about a 14-0 finish.

ANGEL NOTES — Coachman, 3-for-6, Randall, 2-for-4 and Schaefer, 2-for-5, were the only Angels with multiple hits in a 12-hit attack. Randall also added a stolen base and a pair of walks...While the Angels were able to steal one base, the Gators, or rather Joey Cora, was cut down by catcher David Heath both times he tried to steal...Gators Clark and Castro almost single-handedly did in the Angels, leading the team's 16-hit night with 4-for-5 efforts...

Padres win; Mets divide

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Bruce Bochy hit a two-run double in San Diego's four-run fifth inning and Tony Gwynn scored three times as the San Diego Padres defeated the Cincinnati Reds 9-5.

Bochy and Gwynn each singled in a run in the sixth as San Diego scored three more times.

San Diego starter LaMarr Hoyt, 7-9, didn't allow a hit until the fourth inning and entered the sixth leading 8-1, but was chased by three home runs — back-to-back homers by Buddy Bell and Barry Larkin, then one by Ron Oester an out later.

Phillies 5, Pirates 1

PHILADELPHIA — Gary Redus' leadoff homer started a four-run first inning and the Philadelphia Phillies won a five-inning, rain-shortened game.

Cubs 2, Expos 1

MONTREAL — Terry Francona's sacrifice fly in the ninth inning scored Manny Trillo and gave Chicago a victory over Montreal.

Trillo, who hit a sacrifice fly in the fourth for Chicago's first run, doubled leading off the ninth against Jeff Reardon, 6-8, and was sacrificed to third by Chris Speier.

Cardinals 2, Mets 1
Mets 9, Cardinals 2

NEW YORK — Emergency starter Randy Niemann pitched six strong innings and Danny Heep, Tim Teufel and Len Dykstra homered, leading the Mets to victory over the Cardinals and a split of a doubleheader.

The Mets broke a four-game losing streak, their longest of the season. The fourth loss came in the opener, when John Tudor scattered seven hits in seven-plus innings and Tommy Herr scored two runs in a 1 St. Louis victory.

New York won the first and last games of the six-game series, which included two doubleheaders made necessary because of early-season rainouts.

Dodgers 2, Giants 0

SAN FRANCISCO — Rick Honeycutt bested Vida Blue, giving up two hits in eight innings, and Alex Trevino homered to lead the Los Angeles Dodgers.

Honeycutt, 9-7, combined with Tom Niedenfuer on a four-hitter before a crowd of 49,496, the biggest at Candlestick Park this season. Niedenfuer started the ninth and got his 10th save.

The Dodgers did not score again until the eighth, when Bill Madlock doubled and Mariano Duncan and Reggie Williams singled. Blue, 9-7, left after Williams' single, the 12th hit for Los Angeles.

Long inches closer to contract agreement

Associated Press

Quarterback Chuck Long inched a bit closer to signing NFL contract Sunday.

Jack Mills, Long's agent, is scheduled to meet with Detroit Lions GM Russ Thomas this morning. Long, the Iowa quarterback, is one of the NFL's two remaining unsigned first-round draft picks...Long and the Lions are just $100,000 apart on a four-year contract, not counting performance incentives, Mills said. The Lions have offered $1.65 million, a proposal Thomas says would make Long the fourth-highest paid player in the draft in terms of base contract.

The only other unsigned first-round pick is Houston's Jim Everett, also a quarterback. Everett, who played at Purdue, was the third player taken in the draft, Long the 14th.

Sunday's other training camp news:

Dolphins

Miami cut 12 players, including former Rams WR George Farmer and draft picks — eighth selection John Stuart, offensive tackle from Texas, and ninth-round pick Reyna Thompson, safety from Baylor. That reduced their roster to 75 players, 15 short of 60 they must be down to by Tuesday.

49ers

San Francisco cut veteran Booker Reese, who had been playing first-team defensive left end until he hurt his ankle on Aug. 1, along with seven other players.

This Day In Baseball

1960 — Lew Burdette of the Milwaukee Braves threw a no-hitter against the Phillies in Philadelphia for 1-0 triumph.

1965 — Henry Aaron of the Braves hit a Curt Simmons pitch on top of the pavillion roof at Sportman's Park, St. Louis, for an apparent home run. However, umpire Chris Pelekoudas called him out for being out of the batter's box when he connected. Nevertheless, the Braves won the game 6-2.

1982 — The Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Chicago Cubs 2-1 in a 21-inning game. The game was the second longest in Cub history and took two days to complete.

NBA teams hire private eyes

WASHINGTON (AP) — National Basketball Association officials say several teams have hired private detectives in the past to investigate the private lives — and possible drug use — of players, according to a published report.

Russell Granik, NBA executive vice president, said at least two teams — the Denver Nuggets and the Golden State Warriors — have hired private investigators to tail veteran players and several others have hired detectives to investigate potential draft choices, according Sunday's editions of the Washington Post.

Granik said use of detectives is "rare," but general managers with several NBA teams said it will increase following the June 19 cocaine intoxication death of Len Bias two days after he was drafted by the Boston Celtics.

"Because of Bias' death, I think you'll see clubs doing more checking on players, and character is going to be more important," said Dallas Mavericks General Manager Norm Sonju.

Midland pilot David Fields finds that his classic DC-3 is running smoothly and primed to roar in a take-off stance.

The Douglas DC-3, preparing to take off at Midland Regional Airport, runs its engines.

Of all flying machines, the Douglas DC-3 probably is the most venerable, dependable, reliable, and respected.

The twin-engine transport aircraft, which made its debut in 1936 as an airliner, today is flying all over the world and, more specifically, in Midland.

"It was built in a time when product life was not a factor," said David Fields, a 34-year-old American Airlines pilot who bought a 1943 production model of the famed aircraft. "Things were built to last forever. It was overbuilt."

Fields, who has been flying since 1968, flies the tri-jet Boeing 727 for American Airlines. Like the propeller-driven DC-3, the 727 is "just a workhorse," noted Fields. "It will carry a good number of passengers for a profit, and it will carry a fair amount of freight."

"I've always admired the airplane (the DC-3) for its history, looks, dependability and nostalgia," said Fields. "It was built when product life was not a factor — when things were built to last for decades. It was built much stronger than needed."

The DC-3 is "easy to maintain," Fields said. "Its reliability is outstanding."

Since 1936, approximately 13,300 DC-3s and its military counterpart, the C-47 and C-53, were built. Douglas Aircraft Co. built 803 DC-3s as airliners and 10,000 for military use as cargo transports, paratrooper carriers, air ambulances, glider tugs, and passenger aircraft. Russia and Japan built about 2,500 DC-3s under license from Douglas. Since World War II, the DC-3 has played various roles — freight carrier during the Berlin Airlift, a gunship in the Vietnam War, a crop duster, air-rescue ship, weather-research aircraft, sight-seeing aircraft, corporate aircraft, freight carrier and airliner.

Today, Fields estimated that about 2,000 DC-3s are flying world-wide. The aircraft is known universally as The "Gooney Bird." The British Royal Air Force called it the "Dakota." The U.S. Navy tabbed it the R-4D, the U.S. Army called it the C-47 Skytrain and the C-53 Skytrooper, and airline pilots called it "The Three."

The DC-3 evolved from the 1933 DC-1 prototype and the 1934 DC-2 after C.R. Smith, then president of American Airlines, asked Douglas to build a larger version of the DC-2 for use as a 14-berth sleeper for transcontinental flights. Douglas complied. However, the DST (Douglas Sleeper Transport) was not a financial success and was turned into the DC-3 as a 21-passenger aircraft.

The DC-3's success was due to its profitability, speed, reliability and popularity. It was the world's first aircraft to make money by hauling passengers only. Prior to the DC-3, airlines made money from government mail contracts. The DC-3, which has a maximum speed of 230 mph, cruises about 180 mph, burns about 100 gallons of fuel per hour, has a 95-foot wingspan and a 64.5-foot fuselage. In the 1930s, the DC-3 was viewed as much safer than earlier transports, including the twin-engine Boeing 247.

"Pilots liked its stability, ease of handling, and single-engine performance," the Smithsonian Institution said of the DC-3. A DC-3 is suspended in the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C. "The airlines liked it because it was reliable and inexpensive to operate...The DC-3 has proved itself the most popular transport airplane ever built."

Fields' DC-3 is powered by two Pratt & Whitney 1,350-horsepower radial engines which turn three-bladed propellers and has relatively low airtime — 11,600 hours. The aircraft burns about 100 gallons of fuel per hour and crises at 190 mph. On economy cruise, the aircraft may burn less than 70 gallons per hour.

For its day, the DC-3 was advanced in its engineering. And much of its phenomenal strength comes from its multi-cellular stressed-wing construction, which was devised by Jack Northrop. Fields noted that each wing of the DC-3 is bolted onto the fuselage by 244 bolts. "You're not going to tear a wing off of it," Fields said. "They are just stout. That's all there is to it."

Texan hopes to rake in profits from hay baler

By KAREN SVENDSEN WERNER

PURDON, Texas (AP) — About two years ago, hay baler George Buck of Purdon was driving his tractor across a field when he decided there must be an easier way to rake and bale hay.

Buck was tired of disassembling the rake to go through gates, greasing rake parts every day, working around terraces and making three trips across a row to produce a bale of hay.

Buck got off the tractor, spent two days in his workshop and emerged an entrepreneur with an invention he calls the Buck Rake.

He convinced Gary Summerall, the son of his hunting buddy, to buy interest in a rake-making business and both are waiting for final approval on a patent for the product.

Buck claims the Buck Rake cuts one-third of the hay baling expense — labor, fuel and tractor wear — by eliminating a tractor run across the field.

The two arms of the Buck Rake join and hook onto the front mount of a tractor. The sets of rake wheels are raised and lowered by hydraulic cylinders.

The rake wheels are not operated by a motor, but whirl around by themselves as they are pushed across the ground by the tractor. The rake wheels collect hay into a row under the tractor. The row is gathered into a baler pulled behind the tractor.

"It will rake on any kind of rough ground," Buck said. "You can fold it up and never get off the tractor to drive through the gate on it...I haven't greased mine in two years...I've never spent a dime on it to repair it."

Buck and Summerall formed B&S Implement Co. in November of 1985 to market the rake. The officers are president Buck; vice president Summerall; and his wife and treasurer Marty Summerall.

The list price on the rake is $3,250.

The rakes currently are being sold through Little John Implement Co. of Hubbard, Vitters Tractor Inc. in Corsicana, and by Buck and Summerall themselves.

George Buck of Purdon, located about 15 miles southwest of Corsicana, stands next to his hay rake invention, which he claims will cut baling expenses by a third.

Buck, who retired from a Corsicana automotive shop in 1978 to become a part-time hay baler, said he builds "stuff" in his shop all the time.

"If I need it, I just go out and build it," he said.

The Buck Rake is made with steel from Dais Iron Works Inc. of Hewitt, bolts and a Canadian hydraulic cylinder sold by H&W Supply in Corsicana and rake wheels imported from Italy, Summerall said.

Buck has built 30 rakes already but eventually plans to contract with Moore Metal Industries of Corsicana to build the product once the demand increases, Summerall said.

"I've got the feeling we're going to make a lot of money," Summerall said. "After we pay off all the notes, we have a pact to donate one-third of the profits to charity."

Summerall, a director at Corsicana National Bank, is also general manager of Summerall-Beauchamp Wholesale Drug Inc., a business that was started by his father.

He said he had been looking for a business that he could start when he met Buck two years ago.

"He's just an old country boy, but he can build anything," Summerall said.

Tape's release leads to arrest of suspect

HOUSTON (AP) — Police are crediting the release of a taped telephone conversation for the arrest of a man in connection with the savage beating of a store clerk.

A friend of 22-year-old Alan Wayne Hamilton of Houston identified him as the suspect and told authorities where to find him after hearing media reports of the taped conversation, police said.

Hamilton was arrested Sunday near a bus station and jailed in lieu of $50,000 bond, homicide Sgt. S.P. Wilson said. He was charged with aggravated robbery and attempted capital murder in the Aug. 7 beating of Kathleen Ellen Spencer.

Ms. Spencer, 46, suffered severe head injuries when she was attacked with a tool during an apparent robbery in a sportswear store where she worked alone, police said.

She remained hospitalized in fair condition and has not been able to talk to investigators, police said.

The informant was apparently the man who called police the same day of the attack to seek help for the boyfriend of his sister, who feared her boyfriend had been involved in an assault.

During the first 30-minute conversation, the caller said his sister dated the suspect. The sister then talked to police on a conference call

Clements backs down from vow to veto tax hike

DALLAS (AP) — In a weekend interview, former Gov. Bill Clements said he no longer can honor a pledge he has frequently made to veto any tax increase voted by the Texas Legislature, the Dallas Morning News reported today.

Clements said any such promise now would be "nonsense" because of the state's escalating budget deficit.

"We have a changing target," Clements said. "I don't think anybody, including myself, at this point really understands what the problem is, or the magnitude of the problem."

As recently as last month, during President Reagan's campaign appearance on Clements' behalf in Dallas, Clements said, "I will not, under any circumstances, agree to any new taxes. I just won't."

A growing number of Clements supporters, including some within his inner circle of advisers, had been urging him to soften his "no tax" promise.

Former Gov. John Connally, a Clements supporter, appeared with Gov. Mark White last week to say Clements was wrong on the tax issue.

In this summer's special legislative session, White is urging a temporary, one-year increase in the state sales tax from 4.125 cents to 5.25 cents on the dollar.

Clements said in the interview Saturday night, which occurred after his address to the Austin Young Republicans, that he still opposes any new taxes, but he said he no longer can stick by his pledge to veto "any and all tax or fee increases" if he is elected again to the job he held from 1979 to 1983.

Clements cited deficit projections by State Comptroller Bob Bullock that have ranged from $1.3 billion in February to $3.5 billion on Aug. 6, when the Legislature convened in special session to deal with the fiscal crisis.

"I'd have to — you know — consider what was involved in it and what kind of situation existed at that time and all those other wonderful caveats," Clements said.

The Republican nominee, who will face White in November in a rematch of their 1982 race, had campaigned — as he had in previous years — on a platform of no new taxes.

On Feb. 3, during an Austin news conference just after he had filed the papers necessary to put his name on the May 3 GOP primary, Clements was adamant in his veto promise.

"I have the know-how and the commitment to tell Texas that I will veto any and all tax or fee increases. Bill Clements stands absolutely firm on this issue," he said then.

"No state personal income tax. No state corporate income tax. No tax increase of any kind. No fee increase of any kind. I stood solidly by this pledge during my first term and will do so again in my second term," Clements had vowed.

The News said Clements said at first on Saturday that he could not recall ever making such a pledge.

"I don't believe I ever did say that," he said.

Later, however, he added that, had he made such a pledge, it had "related at that time to the then-existing circumstances."

Now, Clements said, "we have a changing panorama all the time."

"I'm against taxes, totally against taxes. But when you start talking about what I'm going to do four or five or six years from now, that's nonsense."

On Sunday, the News said, two of Clements' aides sought to temper his remarks, portraying them only as a "modification" of his no-tax stand.

Press secretary Reggis Bashur said Clements "does not want any tax increase. He certainly does not want one during the special session. And he does not want one next year.

"But it must be made clear that conditions in this state have dramatically changed during the last six months," Bashur added.

ECISD officials will spend 12,000 hours evaluating teachers

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

ODESSA — State-mandated teacher appraisal requirements for career ladder purposes will mean Ector County school administrators will spend as much as 12,000 hours each year evaluating the district's teachers.

The results of these appraisals, which will be done twice each year, will determine whether teachers advance on the career ladder and receive pay increases.

Under the Texas Education Code, no fewer than two appraisers will be required to evaluate teachers. The code stipulates that one appraiser must be a teacher's supervisor and the other, if a teacher, must not teach in the same school.

Dr. Wayne Milligan, Ector County Independent School District director of planning and evaluation, presented school trustees a copy of the district's appraisal manual during a two-day annual workshop at the Holiday Inn Centre.

Milligan told trustees that, for the first time, teachers will be "appraised by uniformly trained, certified appraisers using a common evaluation" under the new system. As a part of the process, teachers will be required to evaluate their own performance on a scale of one to five, with five being the highest.

Appraisers will evaluate each teacher using the same scale and, according to Milligan, will be required to document a very high rating (5 — clearly outstanding) or a very low rating (1 — unsatisfactory).

The state education code states that teaching duties shall be appraised only on the basis of classroom teaching performance and not on performance in connection with extracurricular activities.

Performance criteria on which evaluations will be based include: instructional strategies; how well students are encouraged to participate actively and successfully; classroom management and organization, how student behavior is managed; and whether subject matter is presented accurately and clearly, using acceptable communications skills.

Orientation sessions for ECISD teachers are scheduled for Aug. 25, 26 and 27. Appraisal Period I will run from Sept. 16, 1986 through Jan. 16, 1987. Appraisal Period II will be from Jan. 19, 1987 through May 30, 1987.

The new state-mandated appraisal requires an appraiser "conduct a post-observation conference with the teacher is the performance is judged less than satisfactory" in one or more areas. Teachers will be allowed to present grievances regarding their appraisals.

For any teacher judged "less than satisfactory," the teacher must request that a professional growth plan be developed or modified. The state code stipulates that fulfillment of the provisions of the growth plan "does not, in and of itself, serve as a guarantee of career ladder advancement."

Under the state code, the results of the first appraisal period in the 1986-87 school year will not be used for teacher career ladder purposes.

String of residential burglaries lead off Midland police reports

From Staff Reports

The Midland Police Department today reported a string of residential burglaries, most that apparently occurred over the weekend.

Pam Jefferson, 4506 Cimarron, told police her residence was burglarized, apparently sometime between Friday and Sunday. Among the items reportedly stolen were two 19-inch color television sets valued at $650, a videocassette recorder valued at $350, an AM-FM stereo, with cassette, amplifier, turntable and two speakers valued at $800, a microwave oven valued at $300 and a wristwatch valued at $200.

Firearms valued at several thousand dollars were reported stolen from a residence in the 2600 block of Racquet Club Drive. Robin Oden told police two .22 caliber pump rifles valued at $5,000, three .243 caliber rifles valued at $2,500, a .357 caliber revolver valued at $250, and assorted jewelry valued at $500 were stolen from the residence.

Reports said the residence had been vacant the past two weeks, and was reportedly ransacked.

Police Roundup

Two television sets valued at $563, a pair of gold and silver-plated cuff links valued at $400, and a jewelry box valued at seven dollars were reported stolen from a residence in the 4300 block of Neely Ave. George Gonzales, who reported the burglary, told police the items were apparently stolen Saturday, sometime between 3 p.m. and 11 p.m.

Police have a suspect in the burglary of a .25 caliber automatic pistol valued at $75 from a residence Saturday. The victim, Carlton Proctor, told police the pistol was taken from a residence at 3417 N. Midland Dr. The suspect is described as a white male, about 19 years old, five feet, 11 inches tall with a slim build and a mustache. One of two suspect vehicles is described as a 1983 Lincoln Continental.

Almost $3,000 cash, two diamond rings valued at $300, a watch valued at $150 and a gold ring valued at $150 were reported stolen from a residence. George Magallenes, 602 E. Estes Ave., told police the items were apparently taken sometime between 8 p.m. Friday and 9 a.m. Saturday.

Police also reported the burglary of an automobile, which apparently occurred sometime between midnight and 8:30. a.m. Sunday. The victim, Keith Morrison, 4427 Leddy, told police an AM-FM stereo valued at $349, a tool box with tools valued at $350, two speakers valued at $200, two "T-tops" valued at $200, and an equalizer valued at $140 were stolen from the vehicle.

A pickup truck valued at $3,000 was reported stolen while it was parked at a residence in the 900 block of N. Edwards Drive. Rogelio Magallanes told police the truck was apparently stolen Saturday, sometime between 5 p.m. and 7 p.m.

In other reports, two 13-inch color television sets valued at $350 were reported stolen from a residence at the Windtree Apts., 3600 N. Loop 250. The complainant, Patrick Crimmins, told police the items were apparently taken sometime between 9:30 p.m. Friday and midnight. Reports said entry was gained through a sliding glass door.

Hawkins' students to undergo drug tests

HAWKINS (AP) — Students in extra-curricular activities from football to student council must undergo drug tests that will determine whether they can continue participating, school officials say.

Student athletes were tested last week, and Superintendent Coleman Stanfield said band members, student council members, cheerleaders and others also must take the tests.

Those who flunk what Stanfield says is the first mandatory student drug-testing program in the state will be banned from extra-curricular activities for three months.

"We want to deal with the problem, whereas other school districts may not," Stanfield said. "We don't want to turn our backs and say we don't have drugs, we don't have alcohol."

About 325 students in grades six through 12 will be tested for 19 drugs, including amphetamines, cocaine, marijuana, barbiturates, morphine, methadone and codeine, officials said.

The students will not be tested for alcohol.

Although drug users can't be barred from school, those participating in extra-curricular activities can be since such activities are deemed "a privilege earned," Stanfield said.

"We're a small school, in a small community that we're concerned about," he said. "We want to provide not only an education, but any other service the people of the district need."

Though originally rated for 21 passengers, the DC-3 often has carried far more than its intended payload. In 1942, following the Tokyo Raid led by flier Jimmy Doolittle, 75 people, including Doolittle, were flown out of China in a DC-3. And in Vietnam, 99 people were packed in a DC-3 in flying out of that country.

Fields is the third civilian owner of the DC-3, which bears the registration number N79017 and is nicknamed "MiMi." The aircraft flew for the military from 1943 to 1955. For the next 20 years, "MiMi" was owned by American Liberty Oil Co. of Dallas, and for the ensuing 10 years, the aircraft was flown by a Pennsylvania coal company.

"The quality that went into that airplane is indicative of an old-fashioned approach. It's an amazing airplane," Fields said. "Mechanically, it's in great shape. Cosmetically, it's good, too. I just wanted to own one for awhile."

Fields' penchant for classic aircraft is evidenced in his 1941 Stearman PT-17 biplane of the World War II era and in his 1943 five-place, high-wing Howard monoplane.

"If I had to go through a brick wall in any airplane," he said, "It would be the Howard. It's unbelievably stout (as is the DC-3). It's just like a bulldozer with wings."

Fields learned to fly in 1968 in the two-place Piper Cub, a "tail-dragger" which was born in the 1930s and was widely used in civilian pilot training.

"That's what the DC-3 is (a large Piper Cub)," said Fields. "It handles the same way. It's gentle and forgiving. It can bite you if you don't pay attention to it, but if you stay on top of it, it's a very safe airplane."

Salvation Army style show set

From Staff Reports

A Salvation Army Awareness Night is slated for 7-9 p.m.Thursday at Green Tree Country Club.

A style show featuring some of Midland's most prominent citizens will be held during the dinner.

Those modeling will include city and school officials, a judge, an American Airlines representative, bank presidents, and radio, television and newspaper personalities.

A trip for two from American Airlines to anywhere in the United States, Canada or Mexico and $300 in cash will be given away as a door prize.

Guests must bring an item for the Salvation Army's Thrift Store to be eligible for the drawing and must be present to win.

Tickets for the event are $15 per person and can be bought by calling the Salvation Army Headquarters at 683-3614.

Announcers for the awareness night will be Joan Baskin, J. Gordon Lunn and Sue Snelson, who is also chairman of the event.

Prosecutor probing thefts of drugs from crime lab

FORT WORTH (AP) — Someone has been stealing drugs from samples in the Fort Worth police crime laboratory over the past 18 months, a prosecutor says.

Tarrant County Assistant District Attorney Steve Chaney says the thefts, which involved the replacement of the actual drugs with a filler, have been under investigation for two months.

Chaney said Saturday that police first believed the theft was merely "a one-shot deal with evidence that was not used in trial."

"All I know is (the investigation found) there are additional problems now," Chaney said.

The drugs could have been collected from preliminary purchases from suspects or found abandoned, Chaney said. Among the drugs, worth thousands of dollars on the street, were several pounds of cocaine, lawmen told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Evidence seized in drug cases is signed out of the property room for purity analysis in the police laboratory, according to Capt. Jerry Blaisdell, head of the police Special Operations Division.

Eight people, all civilians, work in the drug lab.

Blaisdell said each package of evidence taken to the police lab is resealed and initialed by the last person who handled it before its return.

Police Chief Thomas Windham, who initially disclosed the investigation two months ago, had little comment Saturday.

"At this time, it's premature for us or anyone to say anything," he said.

Odessan killed in cycle mishap

From Staff Reports

An Odessa man was killed early Sunday after his motorcycle apparently struck a metal gate which marked the dead end of a rural road in Midland County, according to the Department of Public Safety.

Larry Dale Langston, 28, of 3800 N. Jackson in Odessa was pronounced dead at 9:41 a.m. Sunday by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine. Reports said Langston was driving a motorcycle westbound on County Road 140, about a mile west of County Road 1210, when his motorcycle struck the gate at approximately 3:30 a.m. Sunday. The accident was not discovered until 9 a.m., reports said.

American nannies sought for child care

Copley News Service

Sixteen months ago, the couple's daughter, Brett, was born.

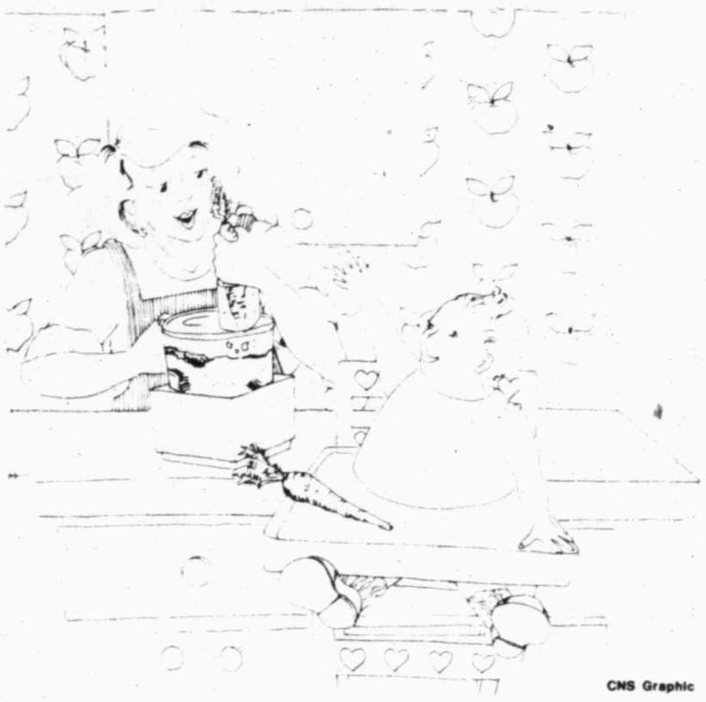

With Brett's birth came a problem: What arrangements could be made to care for the baby while father and mother were busy with their careers?

Their answer, and the answer of a growing number of parents in similar situations: Hire a nanny.

"It was the logical solution," said Abarbanel, of Del Mar, Calif. "Neither Beth nor I has family in this area, so we couldn't call on relatives for help. Instead, we turned to a nanny, someone trained to care for children, someone professionally committed."

The couple contacted Naturally Nannies, a nanny placement agency. There they found Shiela Noble, 25, a high school graduate who has taken care of children since she was 11, and who hopes someday to have her own in-home child day-care center.

Noble, recently married to a computer analyst, is a live-out nanny who cares for Brett from morning to evening. She and the child spend their days reading children's books, and on outings to Sea World, the zoo and the park. Once a week, they're off to a toddler's gym class.

CNS Graphic

WHEN BRETT isn't busy doing all that, she's eating, napping or baby talking.

"We chatter a lot," Noble said, "even if what she says I don't understand."

But what is clear enough is that such nanny arrangements are becoming increasingly common because of the rise of two-career and one-parent families.

To meet the demand, private training schools, college nanny curriculums, and nanny placement services are proliferating across the nation.

The year-old American Council of Nanny Schools in University Center, Mich., which has 17 private and public nanny schools in its membership, with 24 others asking to join, predicts continued growth.

The nanny school council's director, Joy Shelton, who also heads home and family living programs at Delta College in Michigan, says the council has two aims: to develop uniform training and testing standards for nanny schools, and to educate the public about the new American profession of nanny.

"The nanny is a professional who delivers quality child care for working parents who need help," Shelton said. "The nanny should have skills in child development, emergency health care, games and child activities, and should also be competent to help guide the child's social, emotional and physical growth."

There is no count of the numbers of nannies working in the United States, but the experience of training schools is that demand is outstripping supply.

"We have a list of 400 parents currently applying for nannies on this campus alone," Shelton said.

NANNIES FIND their best employment opportunities with families in three categories in the following percentages:

- Twenty-five percent are wealthy families who once imported nannies from Europe.
- Fifty percent are two-income families making $80,000 a year or more.
- Twenty-five percent are well-paid single parents.

Most nannies who provide such services are live-ins. Twenty-five percent are live-outs.

The school council is now establishing a national nanny register and competency test for in-home providers, hoping to recruit more students into this new career program.

"Of course, many people who have not had formal training are loving and have a gift of interrelating with children, but it's difficult to find them with a newspaper ad," Shelton said. "In any case, parents should not just be looking for warm bodies to come into the home to feed the child. The nanny has a heavy responsibility, and she should know how to care for our greatest national resource — children."

Janice Campbell, who operates Naturally Nannies, is a former nurse who places nannies in the San Diego area at salaries ranging from $160 to $250 a week for live-ins, and at $4.50 an hour for live-outs.

Other benefits are usually offered by nanny employers, including Social Security payments, medical care, room and board, paid vacations and holidays, and sometimes use of the family car.

IN THE PAST several years, the nanny profession has been "booming," said Campbell. "There is demand," she said, "for live-ins and live-outs, full-time and part-time. The problem is in finding nannies who are qualified."

Nannies include college women planning a career in child care who want to develop child-care skills on a personal level, and grandmotherly women who have raised their own sons and daughters and love children enough to want to work with more.

To upgrade their skills and salaries, many of these nannies are plunking out dollars for specialized training courses.

Beverly Benjamin, professor of child development at Chaffey College, Alto Loma, Calif., also operates the American Nanny College, a private post-secondary vocational and training school.

Students enrolled in the school's eight-week course pay $2,395 for training and dormitory facilities. Courses include social and emotional development of infants, cognitive development, family dynamics, nutrition, health care, cooking for children, stress management and care of the hospitalized child.

In addition, students receive practical experience with children left in their care by parents at an adult recreational center.

But a shortage of nannies persists, partly because of psychological factors, Benjamin said. "If we can get over the American aversion to be considered a domestic employee, it's a wonderful life. Nannies are pampered and cherished."

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Argie Caporal says she hears the cry of beleaguered mothers and fathers ringing out across the red Oklahoma soil, from Oklahoma City to El Reno, from Lawton to Tulsa.

"Nannies," she hears parents say, "we need nannies."

Since April, Demarge Professional Nanny Child Care School is there to answer that call — training Oklahoma women to be thoroughly modern nannies.

"I've had so many professional couples say, 'Thank you. This is needed. This is long overdue,'" Mrs. Caporal said.

She and her daughter, Dee Hoshall, started the school in response to that demand and in response to Mrs. Hoshall's own problems in finding a suitable nanny for her child.

The nanny academy seems to be the only one of its kind in the state, said Prins Anderson, state children's services director.

The school has trained and placed the six members of its first class, Mrs. Caporal said, and expects to have jobs lined up for members of this summer's class before they graduate.

The potential employers of those student nannies are professional couples, single mothers and fathers, and mothers with "social obligations," Mrs. Hoshall said.

"There are some who say, 'I want one of those English nannies,' or, 'I want one of those little French numbers,'" Mrs. Caporal said. "We have to educate some of the parents."

What the DeMarge school provides, Mrs. Caporal said, is not baby sitters, and not high-toned, English-style nannies. Parents get a modern, professionally trained, American nanny. A black uniform is optional.

"She is loving, she is kind, and yet she watches the children's development," Mrs. Caporal said. "She is a committed part of the family."

The result, Mrs. Hoshall said, is a child who has been spared from the environmental jolts of day-care centers and frequently changing baby sitters; a child who is "more psychologically stable."

Mary Poppins may have had to learn her trade on the park bench, but the school's students learn through a $995, 10-week course with a curriculum that includes child development, child behavior, home management, sanitation and creative play.

The classes are designed and taught with the assistance of instructors at state universities, Mrs. Caporal said.

After graduation, alumnae will be able to keep up on the latest news of the business through support groups, seminars and newsletters, she said.

That training makes the difference between baby sitters and nannies, said Cynthia Redman, a 26-year-old who thinks she might stay to see the adulthood of the 4-year-old and 7-month-old girls Mrs. Caporal placed her with in June.

"People say, 'Oh, you're a glorified baby sitter.' We're not. We're trained in life-saving — we aren't just some baby sitter who came in off the street for a couple of hours while Mom and Dad are at lunch. We take full responsibility."

Ms. Redman entered the school after having earned a college degree in commercial design. She took up being a nanny because of the certainty of the employment market and because of her love of children, she said.

"It's such a comfort having a job like this," she said. "I can see more and more young ladies making it their career."

Parents control children's toys

Hearst News Service

Parents have the power to control what their children play with, says Dr. Richard Gode, a Seattle psychiatrist who treats children and adolescents. All they have to do is exercise that control.

If a parent is offended by a toy, don't buy it, says Gode. If the child throws tantrums in toy stores when he or she doesn't get what he or she wants, don't take the child to the store. If a child is given an offensive toy as a gift, there is nothing to say the child must keep it.

"I realize that all of this creates a negative reaction on the part of the child," says Gode, a father of four. "But the child is not the boss at the age we're talking about."

Toys in and of themselves are not damaging, says Gode. But how they are used can be.

But today's parents get caught between work and home.

"Working parents who don't spend as many hours with their kids as they would like get rid of some of their own guilt by giving in as kids put pressure on them," Gode says. "But giving in doesn't necessarily solve the problem."

Stories popular

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite living in the age of television, many parents prefer to lull their children to sleep in the old fashioned way by reading or telling a story at bedtime, a recent national survey indicates.

The study, conducted by Springs Industries Performance Products, which produces indoor bed tents, shows that 52 percent of parents polled frequently read or tell stories to their children to help them go to sleep.

Other popular bedtime routines, according to the survey, include a kiss or goodnight hug, with 92 percent of those parents polled saying they almost always tuck their children into bed, and 65 percent almost always say prayers with their children at bedtime.

DEAR ABBY

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 65-year-old woman living in the home of a dear old gentleman as a combination housekeeper and nurse. One of the women from the church comes over once a week to pray for the mister. It has come back to me that this church woman has been telling the other ladies of the church that I keep a dirty house.

Abby, I am frequently up all night caring for the mister, and I'm so pooped the next day that I can't get all the housework finished, but what right has this lady got to speak so lowly about a few unwashed dishes? I am here 24 hours a day, seven days a week!

Some people can be so unkind. Now her gossip about my "dirty" housekeeping has spread like wildfire in the church circle.

Should I go to the priest? I may be a bit messy, but I am not dirty. — UPSET IN WISCONSIN

DEAR UPSET: Go straight to the source. Tell the "lady" that you are deeply wounded to learn that she's been telling the ladies at church that you are a dirty housekeeper. Explain that you are often up all night, but do your best to keep the house in order. It may not silence her vicious tongue, but you'll feel better. And it seems to me that this gossipy woman who comes to "pray" is in need of some prayers herself.

DEAR ABBY: I wonder how Glenn Scott of Haughton, La., was able to accumulate 204 pairs of socks in the U.S. Army (I presume that he kept one pair to wear after sending 203 pairs to his fiancee to wash). Have they stopped holding inspections in the Army?

I believe that Glenn and his fiancee are pulling your leg (and your foot). Do you know how much space 203 pairs of socks can take up? What G.I. has that many footlockers "in the field," as Scott says he is? On the other hand (foot?), maybe he is a supply sergeant who indulges in a bit of moonlight requisitioning.

DEAR HOSE COUNTER: I have not (thus far) heard "boo" from the Pentagon, but I can assure you that there was no attempt made to pull my leg.

DEAR ABBY: I have not paid anything back toward my student government loan. I heard President Reagan talk recently about "getting" me for it, and I am afraid.

After graduating from college, I was unable to find a job in my field, so I worked for years at low-paying jobs and couldn't afford to pay back the loan.

Now I am in a position to begin payments, but I'm afraid to come forward because they might expect full restitution. I am fully aware that I will have to pay penalties, and that is justifiable, but I can't pay it back all at once. How should I handle this? — STILL HIDING

DEAR HIDING: Come out, come out, wherever you are. Start repaying your student loan in regular installments; small as the amount may be, it will show good faith. Something is better than nothing.

DEAR ABBY: A lady wrote to say that her family chilled her because she accidentally called her brother's third wife by his second wife's name.

A slip of the tongue does occur. I know. Mine was much more serious. I was married for 10 years the first time. We were divorced, then I married for the second time. On our wedding night, after we had made love, my husband kissed me tenderly. Then I called him by my first husband's name!

For the next eight hours all I got was the cold shoulder. The next morning he told me that all was forgiven. — IT HAPPENED IN MARYLAND

Gold tumbles

LONDON (AP) — Gold prices tumbled by as much as $8 an ounce in early European trading today, while the U.S. dollar had a mixed performance against other major currencies.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $381 a troy ounce, down $1.50 from late Friday's $382.50, but took a rapid dive in later hectic trading.

At midmorning, the city's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommended price of $377.25 — and dealers predicted the precious metal would hit $375 later.

—6.7020 French francs, up from 6.7000

—1.3922 Canadian dollars, up from 1.3890.

Tax bill conferees forge compromise bill

Energy industry could pay additional $3 to $5 billion

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON–White House operatives, led by President Reagan, today promised to mount a no-holds-barred campaign to persuade Congress to okay a compromise tax reform bill when members return from a three-week recess.

Energy lobbyists and their powerful allies on the House-Senate tax conference committee, including Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, saved the oil depletion allowance used by most small oil companies to permit fast write-offs for certain drilling costs.

Major integrated companies, however, would have to write off 30 percent of those drilling costs over five years rather than one. Conferees protected the immediate write-off of intangible drilling costs by independent producers.

While members of Congress are in their home districts, the so-called "special interests" will have an opportunity to make their cases for exemptions or special treatment.

Most of the influential congressmen interviewed after House-Senate tax bill conferees rubber-stamped a compromise engineered by their chairmen, said they believe it will be approved by both houses of Congress.

The new legislation, if approved, will be phased in over five years.

Specific changes in the oil and gas industry's taxes are intended to raise $850 million over the next six years, according to published congressional estimates.

The oil industry anticipates paying $3 billion to $5 billion more overall, however, because of the loss of the investment tax credit, changes in depreciation schedules and other general business tax changes, according to H.B. (Bud) Scoggins, general counsel for the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

Scoggin said lawmakers are "kidding themselves" if they expect to get more tax revenues from the oil industry "when it's an economic basket case."

If both houses of Congress approve the legislation, most of the 100 million taxpayers in the U.S. would find their taxes lowered by only $2.50 to $8 a week, on average, on their 1988 returns, the first returns in which the new system would be in full effect, according to to congressional estimates.

In the 1987 tax year, 17.5 million Americans would be hit with increased taxes, including about half of those with incomes of more than $75,000. That year is a bridge year, in which the tax system would have five rates contrasted to the current 15 rates. When the system has been fully phased in, individuals will be in one of only two brackets–15 percent or 28 percent.

The bill proposes big changes in corporate taxes, including a $120 billion overall rise in six years, which could change the economic landscape.

Tax saving for individuals could be wiped out if utilities, real estate developers and others facing big tax increases pass through these costs to consumers in the form of higher utility bills, higher rents and higher prices.

The legislation aims to eliminate most tax shelters, close loopholes, slash tax rates and erase 6 million low-income Americans from the tax rolls.

The goal of the legislation is to make taxation "simpler and fairer," according to President Reagan who last year made tax reform his No. 1 priority for his second term.

Tax reform would force Americans to make financial decisions on some basis other than a calculated tax saving.

In the proposed bill, individual taxes would be lowered an average of 6.1 percent, with the largest percentage of cuts going to those earning under $20,000 a year.

SIPES meet planned for Wednesday

John H. Gray will be the featured speaker at the next meeting of the Midland Chapter of Society of Independent Professional Earth Scientists (SIPES) on Wednesday, Aug. 20. Gray's presentation is titled "Exploration Opportunities for SIPES Members in the Foreign Area".

The meeting will be held at the Midland Country Club, beginning at 11:30 a.m. and the luncheon is free to SIPES members and $10 for invited guests.

Gray, a native Texan, graduated from the University of Texas at El Paso. He worked for Lion Oil Co. for several years, including two years in Midland, and was chief geologist for Munoco Co. for more than fifteen years. He has been a consulting geologist since 1970, and currently lives in El Dorado, Ark., where he is the head of Juan Grande International Oil Co.

Gray is a member of several professional societies and was a director of SIPES from 1977 to 1980.

Conference on price decline set for Dallas

DALLAS — As the effects of plummeting oil prices reverberate around the world, international representatives from petroleum and related financial sectors will gather in Dallas Sept. 3-5 to discuss common concerns related to the current crisis.

The "Conference on the Impact of Price Declines on Oil Exploration, Development and Financing" will examine new strategies in exploration, production and marketing aimed at developing effective responses to current energy trends. The conference is co-sponsored by the Institute for the Study of Earth and Man (ISEM) and the Foundation of the Southwestern Graduate School of Banking, both at Southern Methodist University. It will be held at the Fairmont Hotel.

Alirio A. Parra, managing director of Petroleos de Venezuela, based in London, will deliver the keynote address on "OPEC and Current Lower Oil Prices" at a noon luncheon on Sept. 4.

Presently Venezuelan representative to OPEC, Parra is past president of the Board of OPEC Governors. An economist by profession, he has served as petroleum adviser to the World Bank and the InterAmerican Development Bank and as director of petroleum economy for the Venezuelan Ministry of Energy, Mines and Hydrocarbons. He has 30 years of high level petroleum experience in more than 20 countries.

"In the conference we hope to stimulate a dialogue between 'upstream' (exploration/production) and 'downstream' (marketing) sectors of the petroleum industry," says ISEM president James E. Brooks.

"The conference will examine implications of reduced cash flow and external funding for exploration, development, production and research. It will explore the impact of lower oil prices on both domestic and international policies and practices, as well as investment strategies and total asset management throughout the petroleum industry."

Conference speakers will include: Mohammed Ayob, general manager, Exploration and Production Division, Petronas, Malaysia; Guy Caruso, director of emergency operations, U.S. Department of Energy; James D. Crandall, investment broker, Saloman Brothers, New York; Jean-Loup Dherse, vice president for energy, World Bank, Washington, D.C.; Herman Franssen, economic adviser to the Sultanate of Oman; and Peter Gaffney, economic consultant, London. Dennis J. O'Brien, chief economist of Caltex Petroleum Corp., Dallas, is program chairman.

The conference will bring together senior executives from energy, banking and related fields with explorationists, investors, lenders, legal staffs, financial managers and accountants, consulting geologists, petroleum and mechanical engineers, producers, refiners and marketers.

Subjects of conference sessions include:

- Petroleum economics and explorations decline
- Impact on oil prices of surplus capacities
- Light and heavy crudes (differentials and availability
- Oil industry investment
- Frontiers of exploration
- The natural gas industry
- Tax and exploration
- World oil markets
- View of lower prices from a non-OPEC, a U.S. industry and the explorationists' standpoint

Ortloff Corp. finals sale of Pro-Quip stock

From Staff Reports

The Ortloff Corp., a subsidary of Elcor Corp., has completed the sale of the stock of Pro-Quip Corp. to TPQ Investments Corp., which is owned by the management of Pro-Quip, according to Roy E. Campbell, president Elcor.

Pro-Quip will continue to engineer, fabricate and construct modularized process systems for applications in the chemical, petrochemical, refinery and natural gas processing.

"Pro-Quip has a well-established reputation as a leader in its field, and we expect it to continue this reputation under its competent management team," said Campbell, who added that Ortloff Engineers Ltd., another Ortloff subsidiary, will continue to provide consulting and license Ortloff's patented technologies to the natural gas processing and sulfur industries.

FHA guidelines should cut loan risks

Los Angeles Times —
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — New lending guidelines issued by the Federal Housing Administration this week should reduce the number of high-risk loans insured by the federal government but could force some lower-income buyers out of the housing market, housing-industry officials say.

The guidelines, which were effective Saturday for all future sales contracts, are part of a crackdown on FHA fraud and abuse that Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr. announced in April.

"I am taking these steps to strengthen our commitment to effective quality control," Pierce said in announcing the guidelines. "The changes in reporting, eligibility and appraisals will curb the abuses we found and improve our underwriting process."

Pierce said that while FHA does not know the full extent of the abuse, a HUD task force that studied 1.7 million loans insured by the agency since 1980 found that FHA fraud had cost the federal government "hundreds of thousands of dollars."

Among the problems uncovered by the task force was a string of fraud schemes involving assumptions of FHA loans.

As a result, several schemes involved "straw buyers," people who could qualify for an FHA loan purchasing a property and then flipping it within several days or weeks to a purchaser who could not qualify under FHA's credit guidelines.

To stop that type of scheme, FHA now will require anyone assuming an FHA loan to go through a credit check if the loan is less than two years old or if the loan has been assumed within the past two years.

The task force also uncovered several cases in which individuals or companies continued to obtain FHA mortgages even though they had defaulted on an FHA loan. Under the new guidelines, FHA no longer will approve loans for any borrower who has defaulted on a loan within the past three years. FHA also will require applicants for new loans to list their Social Security number, so the agency can check them against a list of problem borrowers.

Apart from the changes addressing fraud problems, HUD also announced several new guidelines that will make it more difficult for some people to qualify for an FHA loan.

FHA will require that any contributions made by the seller — including discounts, low starting interest rates or closing costs — be limited to 5 percent of the purchase price. In addition, FHA will require borrowers to qualify for a loan at the interest rate on the note.

Stock dividends not included on form 1099-Div. or subject to tax

By BILL DOYLE

Q. A company in which I own stock pays regular quarterly cash dividends, which I receive by check every March, June, September and December. In a number of years it also paid stock dividends and sent me certificates for additional shares.

I do not remember if the company included the stock dividends on the Forms 1099-Div. it sent to me and the Internal Revenue Service for those years.

Would the company have done so? I ask because, if it did, I would have paid income tax on the stock dividends and the value of those shares would increase my "basis" — cost of the stock for tax purposes.

Doyle

A. The stock dividends were not included on your Forms 1099-Div. They never are, for the simple reason that stock dividends are not subject to income tax. A Form 1099-Div. lists only cash dividends, which are taxable whether taken by check or reinvested to buy more shares.

Stock dividends, like stock splits, do not change your total basis. However, they do change your basis per share. This is best explained by an example.

Let's say you originally bought 100 shares of that stock at a total cost, including brokerage commission, of $2,080. That's your total basis. Your basis per share was $20.80.

Now, let's say that, as a result of those stock dividends you currently own 160 shares. Your total basis on the 160 shares remains at $2,080. Your per share basis is $13 — $2,080 divided by 160.

If you sell all 160 shares, the difference between your $2,080 total basis and the proceeds from the sale — selling price, minus brokerage commission — will be your profit or loss. If you sell, say, 20 shares, your profit or loss will be the difference between the $260 basis of those shares and the proceeds from the sale.

In this example, the total basis of the 140 shares you would own after selling 20 shares would be $1,820. Your per share basis would remain at $13 — until there's another stock dividend or a stock split. Then, you would have to recalculate your per share basis.

Q. Many investment and savings decisions depend on one's federal income tax bracket. But I am confused about what bracket my wife and I are in. We file joint income tax returns and, because we have dividend and interest income from which no income tax is withheld, we are required to make estimated quarterly payments.

Using Schedule Y of the estimated tax form booklet, I find that with taxable income of $33,000 our 1986 income tax bill is $5,169.70, plus 28 percent of the amount over $32,270. As a result, we will pay $5,374.10 to the Internal Revenue Service for 1986.

Arithmetic shows me that the $5,374.10 tax is 16.3 percent of our $33,000 taxable income. But our tax preparer says we are in the 28 percent tax bracket. I'm confused. What is our true tax bracket?

A. 28 percent is your "marginal tax rate." In everyday usage, that's referred to as your tax bracket. Under the present Internal Revenue Code, there are 14 such rates for most people — 15 for single taxpayers.

Your marginal tax rate tells you the percentage tax you pay on your top dollar of income — from $32,270 to $37,980, in your case. That's why it's handy to know that rate before making investment decisions.

One blessing of the new tax bill will be to clear up some complications by reducing the number of rates to two, three or four — depending on the "reform" bill's final form.

Q. You have mentioned, a number of times, that only 40 percent of a long-term capital gain is subject to federal income tax under present tax law. Reading Schedule D of Form 1040, it seems to me that 50 percent is taxable. Can you explain this?

A. You're reading the form incorrectly.

Look at Line 22, which tells you to enter 60 percent of your long-term capital gain, and Line 23, which tells you to subtract that 60 percent. That leaves 40 percent subject to tax.

This "preferential treatment" of the profit from the sale of stocks and other capital assets owned for more than six months is expected to be eliminated by the new federal tax law.

Q. Is "punt" the correct word for Irish currency, or is it a slang word?

A. Punt is the official name of Republic of Ireland currency and has been since 1979, when the "link" with the English pound was severed. In the Irish language, punt is the word for pound. So, I guess you could say that pound is a slang word in Ireland.

By JOHN CUNNIFF

NEW YORK (AP) — The wonder of it is that the federal budget deficit hasn't been turned into a surplus when you consider how many billions of dollars have been "cut" or "saved" in Washington over the past few years.

But the deficit persists, miraculously, mysteriously, like a snowball that remains hard as a rock in a thousand degree oven. It persists also in spite of rising revenue from a long economic expansion, and that too is mystifying.

In fact, this expansion is the first one in modern times that hasn't dented the federal budget deficit. After 14 straight quarters of growth, that deficit is about where it was in January 1983, i.e., around $200 billion a year.

But if the budget deficit hasn't changed, what in the world has happened to all those "savings" and "cuts?" A few dollars here and there are bound to disappear, but how can you explain the absence of billions of dollars?

"Budgetary ledgerdemain," says the Tax Foundation, which tries to keep tab of taxpayer dollars. It suggests that political artistry is at its best in money matters. The cuts and savings, it says, were claimed but never made.

"It could be that taking credit for savings has become a sort of substitute for making them," it states. Words substitute for numbers, and the words are delivered with great emotion. Later, the cold figures are added up.

In 1981, foundation files show, the White House claimed more than $130 billion had been trimmed from future outlays. And in the following year, Congressional scorekeepers found that the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act would provide $100 billion in deficit reductions over a three-year period.

The Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 followed, promising another $60 billion in savings over the next three years. And this year, the Consolidated Omnnibus Budget Reconciliation Act is aimed at adding to those enormous "savings."

That's not all. The foundation observes that Congress and the White House also have "saved" untold billions in lower appropriations, in a smaller-than-planned defense buildup, and in assorted asset sales and bookkeeping ploys.

Through it all, the relentless deficit remains unphased, cooly defying the fiery oratory and earnest assurances.

The big problem, according to the foundation, is that the budget savings are computed in terms of a hypothetical baseline.

These projections inevitably are higher than the real expenditures that preceded them in earlier years. They are what would have been spent had not the "cuts" been imposed. Thus, expenditures rise amid shouts of cuts.

The foundation explains that the picture is also distorted by faulty cost estimates. The 1985 farm bill, for example, was supposed to have cut federal costs. But it will be tens of billions of dollars more expensive than foreseen.

Adding to the problem is faulty reasoning. When a medicare freeze that is scheduled to expire is extended, new savings are claimed. And when the freeze is renewed, the savings are claimed a second time.

In frustration, the foundation's analysts conclude that "so many tricks and misestimates have been devised that nobody can calculate authoritatively what has been accomplished by way of genuine deficit reduction."

Investors in current gold rush face hurdles with fundings in South African operations

By BILL MENEZES

NEW YORK (AP) — A surge in prices has put precious metals in the investment spotlight, but investors wishing to cash in on the gold rush via mutual funds face a variety of hurdles, especially with funds investing in South African operations.

Platinum soared to a five-year high in trading last week and gold followed the rise, hitting a two-year peak before retreating a bit.

The surge was sparked by growing speculation that South Africa, producer of 80 percent of the world's platinum and half of its gold, would cut off precious metals exports if slapped with economic sanctions by other nations as punishment for its apartheid policy of racial separation.

As bullion soared and fell, so did investments backed by the commodities, including shares in funds specializing in the metals and the companies that mine them.

There are 22 open-ended, gold-oriented mutual funds, with total assets of about $1.6 billion. Most of them have South African investments, while a handful specialize in North American mines or have a focus that avoids South African investments.

While many investors regard the funds as the most convenient way to put money into the gold, silver and platinum markets, share prices are being buffeted by a variety of non-economic factors, especially the shares of funds investing in South African mines.

Jeffrey Nichols, of American Precious Metals Advisors in New York, said the non-economic risks of funds with South African holdings stemmed partly from politically motivated selloffs and investor misunderstandings of the consequences of any punitive economic sanctions levied by the United States or other nations.

"The risk to investors in these gold funds that invest in South Africa, or in South African shares directly, I think, has less to do with underlying mine situations and fundamentals and more to do with the willingness of non-South Africans, be they individuals or fund managers themselves, to continue holding South African shares," he said.

Nichols, who recently concluded a two-week visit to South Africa, said one of the main risks to South African fund shareholders was a misunderstanding of potential economic sanctions. When the United States embargoed imports of Krugerrands to protest apartheid, for example, many Americans sold their coins in the mistaken belief that the sanctions also prohibited simple ownership.

Nichols said he knew of no sanction proposals that would prohibit ownership of shares in South African funds, "but I can envision the same kind of scare."

Nichols also said there was a potential for large institutional share holders, such as big mutual fund managers, to sell their South African holdings in order to rid themselves of any association with the economic and political risk of dealing with that nation.

"I think there's some concern that if investors with other funds are aggravated by the company's involvement simply as a holder of some South African shares, they (the company) might simply get rid of the shares rather than lose business," he said.

Also depressing the funds has been the depreciation of South Africa's currency, the rand, which reduces their dollar-denominated values.

All those factors aside, the key factor for precious metals funds is the price of the metals themselves and a fund's performance. Gold prices in recent months have not displayed the same strength as in the early 1980s, when gold peaked in the $800 an ounce range, but have climbed from the near-term bottom of $282 an ounce in February 1985.

The total returns of the 10 precious metals funds tracked by the No-Load Fund Investor newsletter ranged from a low of negative 23.5 percent to a high of negative 1.3 percent in the 12 months ended July.

Son's disappearance spurs mother's activism

By CAM ROSSIE

de Piedra

MONTERREY, Mexico (AP) — In the 11 years since her son was detained by police and never heard from again, Rosario Ibarra de Piedra has become Mexico's most prominent human rights crusader, and a thorn in the government's side.

Ms. Ibarra, 59, has been nominated for the 1986 Nobel Peace Prize, a nomination she says will help pressure the Mexican government on the issue of "desaparecidos," or missing people.

Her son, Jesus, was a 19-year-old medical student in this northern industrial city and a member of an armed student communist league when, according to Monterrey newspapers, he was detained by Nuevo Leon state judicial police in April 1975.

He has not been seen since by family or friends. Ms. Ibarra believes her son and hundreds of other desaparecidos are held in clandestine jails somewhere in Mexico.

The National Front Against Repression, an organization founded by Ms. Ibarra, says there are more than 100 known political prisoners in Mexico and 479 people whose disappearances are based on politics.

The government denies holding political prisoners, saying all its prisoners were convicted of common crimes, and denies involvement in disappearances. It says those who are missing have changed their names, gone underground or left the country.

In its 1985 report, the human rights organization Amnesty International said Mexican authorities do violate human rights, especially in rural areas. The London-based group said it remains concerned "about recurring instances of arrest without warrant and secret detention of political suspects."

The U.S. State Department, in its annual human rights report, acknowledges the allegations about missing people in Mexico and says Mexican government efforts to investigate 11 recent cases proved fruitless.

In an interview in her Monterrey home, Ms. Ibarra said she learned through an April 30, 1975, story in the daily Monterrey newspaper El Norte that her son had been detained by police for his involvement in the opposition group.

Police came to the family home and told her Jesus was a leftist guerrilla and was in custody, she said. "I said, 'Well, take him before a judge and you can accuse him.' But they never gave him a chance."

Before 1975, she said, her life was concerned with housework, her children and her husband, a physician.

But, she said, "There was a lot of social confusion then. I participated in meetings and demonstrations against things that seemed unjust."

After Jesus disappeared, Ms. Ibarra said she followed the legal routes available to try to locate him.

"I went to all the city and state police offices. They said they didn't know anything. The governor told me not to bother him," she said. She also met with then-President Luis Echeverria in Mexico City, again without result.

All of plane's passengers killed in attack

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — The military governor of Upper Nile Province reported today that all 60 people aboard the Sudan Airways airliner shot down by rebels died in the crash.

Manang told the official Sudan News Agency most of the victims of Saturday's attack were women and children.

He said the Fokker Friendship was hit by a Soviet-made SAM-7 surface-to-air missile as it took off from the provincial capital of Malakal for Khartoum. He said the plane crashed four miles from the airport.

Manang's statement was the first confirmation that all 57 passengers and three crew members on the twin-propeller airliner had been killed.

He did not specify whether all victims were Sudanese. But a Western diplomat who saw the passenger list said it appeared no foreigners were aboard. The diplomat refused to be identified by name or nationality.

In Washington, the State Department said American authorities believe no U.S. citizens were on the plane, but that they were awaiting a passenger manifest.

The government on Sunday suspended flights to rebel-controlled areas in the south and declared three days of mourning.

AP Lasergraphic

The official news agency quoted witnesses as saying the missile struck an engine of the aircraft, which burst into flames.

The attack followed warnings from the insurgent Sudan Peoples' Liberation Army that it would fire on any plane flying over areas it controlled.

In Geneva, Switzerland, the International Red Cross announced it had canceled flights of emergency food supplies to southern Sudan.

Spokesman Serge Caccia had said the flights, begun last Thursday, would be grounded permanently if the Red Cross confirms the rebels plan to attack relief flights.

But in the Kenyan capital of Nairobi, a spokesman for the International Committee for the Red Cross said: "ICRC officials in Nairobi are trying very hard to start the flights again. We are negotiating with the relevant authorities in Nairobi."

He apparently referred to Sudanese diplomatic officials and to rebel representatives in the Kenyan capital.

Rebel leader Garang is a U.S.-educated former colonel in the Sudanese army. He claimed recently that his forces control about 90 percent of the south.

The Malakal area, about 450 miles south of the capital of Khartoum, is largely controlled by the rebel Sudan Peoples' Liberation Army.

The rebels' SPLA Radio, monitored Sunday in Nairobi, Kenya, made no mention of the attack, which came one day after the radio said the rebels would "shoot down any aircraft flying over SPLA-controlled airspace."

In London, the British Broadcasting Corp. said a later rebel broadcast specified the SPLA would attack planes carrying relief supplies to the south, where an estimated 2 million people face starvation because of food shortages brought on by the 3-year-old rebellion.

The rebels have claimed that the government uses the relief flights to ferry military supplies. SPLA spokesman Dho Achiel in Nairobi said the warning to civilian aircraft was intended to keep foreigners from getting caught up in the fighting.

At Khartoum's international airport, airline employees announced a three-day strike to protest what they termed the lack of safety for planes and delay in reporting the crash. The employees' union said crews would not fly to unsafe areas.

Late Sunday, Prime Minister Sadiq al-Mahdi ordered the suspension of air traffic to and from the embattled south until further notice. The government also announced three days of mourning for victims of the missile attack.

The SPLA, backed by Ethiopia, has been fighting in southern Sudan since 1983 for regional autonomy.

Ethnic, religious rivalries behind Sudan rebellion

By ROBERT H. REID

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — Age-old rivalries between Sudan's myriad ethnic and religious groups lie at the heart of the rebellion that authorities blame for the weekend downing of a passenger plane carrying 60 people.

The government claims insurgents of the Sudan Peoples' Liberation Army shot down the Sudan Airways Fokker Friendship with a SAM-7 missile shortly after it took off Saturday from Malakal, 450 miles south of Khartoum.

If true, it would be the first civilian passenger airliner downed by the SPLA. Since 1983 southern rebels have battled government forces for autonomy, socialism and economic and political reforms.

Western and African sources say the SPLA, whose forces are believed to number 15,000 to 20,000, receives weapons, logistical and other support from Marxist-ruled Ethiopia, which long has been angry with Sudan for permitting Ethiopian rebel groups to maintain offices in the capital of Khartoum.

The rebellion is basically a continuation of a bloody 17-year conflict that plagued Sudan in its early years of independence. The turmoil in a country whose 20 million people represent 19 major ethnic groups and speak 115 different languages illustrates the problem of nation-building on a continent racked by tribalism, poverty and ethnic rivalries.

Many southerners, most of whom are animists and Christians, fear domination by the Moslems, who make up 70 percent of the population. Many northerners consider darker-skinned southerners inferior, commonly calling them "abeed," or slaves.

British colonial administrators, as well as Western Christian missionaries, promoted separatist sentiments in hopes of linking south Sudan with other British African territories in a great East African federation under London's control.

Under a policy launched by the British in 1924, Moslem and Arabic-speaking Sudanese were evicted from the south and southerners were discouraged from seeking jobs in the north.

Southerners with Moslem or Arabic names were encouraged to use English, Christian or African equivalents. English, rather than Arabic, became the language most widely used for trade and legal affairs in the south.

The policy had some success. Just months before Sudan gained full independence on Jan. 1, 1956, southern public opinion was divided over whether the region should be independent or united with the Moslem, Arab north.

Reagan praises Mexican officials for 'courage' in planned programs

MEXICO CITY (AP) — President Reagan said in an interview published Sunday that Mexican officials have shown "extraordinary courage" in proposing programs to overcome the nation's tough economic problems.

Reagan, in an interview with the Mexico City newspaper Excelsior, also said Mexico's recent accord with the International Monetary Fund "is an equitable agreement that will permit Mexico to grow and satisfy its financial obligations."

The interview was published just days after President Miguel de la Madrid visited Washington, D.C., to meet with Reagan and other top U.S. officials. The interview was published in Spanish.

Reagan said his discussions with de la Madrid provided an opportunity for "a friendly, frank and open dialogue among friends."

"Mexico and the United States are above all good neighbors. What affects Mexico in fact affects the United States and vice versa," he was quoted as saying.

Reagan was asked about tensions in recent years between the two countries, particularly the stiff criticism handed out by some members of Congress about alleged corruption in the Mexican government and lack of democratic elections.

He replied that one of his main foreign policy objectives has been maintaining a close relationship with Mexico and said:

"It is important to distinguish very carefully between the policy of the government of the United States and the private viewpoints of individuals be they political figures or ordinary citizens."

Reagan also said, "I believe that the relations between our two countries are excellent and are typical of the relations between old friends: we have our differences, but none of them can surpass our fundamental ties and common concerns."

He praised de la Madrid and his Cabinet members for taking steps to bolster the sagging economy.

De la Madrid's administration, he was quoted as saying, has "demonstrated extraordinary courage and the required political will to propose programs and policies to overcome the economic difficulties and restore economic growth."

TORONTO (AP) — The Sri Lankan refugees smuggled across the Atlantic in a small freighter's hold said they had little food or clean water and slept on decks awash with human waste during their two-week trip.

In weekend interviews, spokesmen for the 155 Tamils also said the ship's captain taunted refugees who complained of thirst during their voyage from West Germany and threatened to shoot anyone caught in his cabin after a can of Coca-Cola was stolen.

"We were fed t ied soup, liquidy rice, moldy bread and dirty water from two barrels," refugee Sivagnanam Sivapooranan said in Toronto. "We slept crowded together in lifeboats and on the floor."

"Many people went to the washroom in plastic buckets but I didn't go at all," Godwin Ranjith, 21, said at a Saturday night news conference in Montreal. The smell was so bad some people deliberately ate nothing to control their body functions, he said.

The Sunday Star in Toronto quoted two refugees, Raja Rajaratnam, a 35-year-old construction supervisor, and Siva Sivakumar, a 22-year-old student, as saying the Tamils were allowed on deck only twice a day to draw sea water for washing.

"If I had known what it was going to be like, I never would have gone," the Star quoted Sivakumar as saying. "Even an animal should not be brought like this."

The refugees said they offered the captain $50 for a soda to help a severely seasick man, but that the captain refused.

Ranjith said he was told by the captain, "You can go jump in the water if you want water."

A fishing vessel found the refugees drifting in two lifeboats off Newfoundland last Monday. West German officials said they were Tamils who had fled the ethnic strife in their South Asian island homeland, but feared West Germany would send them back.

The Tamils initially insisted they sailed from India, but their chief spokesman, Nalliah Wijayanathan, 46, told the Montreal news conference that they lied under instructions from the ship's captain, whom the refugees did not name.

Communist border guards vault over wall to freedom

BERLIN (AP) — Two Communist East German border guards escaped over the Berlin Wall, scaling the barrier and then tossing their guns back into the East, West Berlin police said today.

The escape Sunday evening was the first reported over the Wall since the ceremonies on Wednesday commemorating the 25th anniversary of the gray concrete barrier that splits the city.

The two guards made their escape at a sparsely guarded area of the Wall, between Gross-Ziethen, an East Berlin suburb, and West Berlin's Neukoelln district, a West Berlin police spokesman, Axel Pettner said.

They told police that no one saw them as one guard boosted the other up on his shoulders to reach the top of the wall. The soldier on top then pulled the other up behind him, Pettner said.

They threw their weapons back over the wall and walked into a nearby West Berlin restaurant to announce the escape, Pettner said.

Museum gets last visitors

Ministry of Culture officials said the collection, which includes 300 works by Cezanne, Renoir, Manet and other French impressionists, had become too large for the museum.

The paintings and about 400 impressionist works in the Louvre Museum's collection will be displayed in the new Orsay Museum across the Seine, which is scheduled to open in December.

The two-story Jeu de Paume, built in 1860 in the Tuileries on the Seine's Right Bank, will reopen in 1988 as a hall for temporary exhibits.

New sanctions imposed

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (AP) — Prime Minister David Lange today said new sanctions would be imposed on South Africa in line with a Commonwealth call earlier this month for measures to protest the apartheid racial policy.

Lange, at a news conference, said the sanctions affect agriculture, tourism and travel, and would be implemented by Dec. 1.

"This will mean as far as New Zealand is concerned a negotiated end to the general sales agency by Air New Zealand for South African Airways, and a host of agricultural products won't come here," Lange said. He gave no additional details.

Six Commonwealth nations meeting in London approved harsh sanctions against South Africa as a means of forcing an end to the apartheid racial segregation system.

Nuclear power denounced

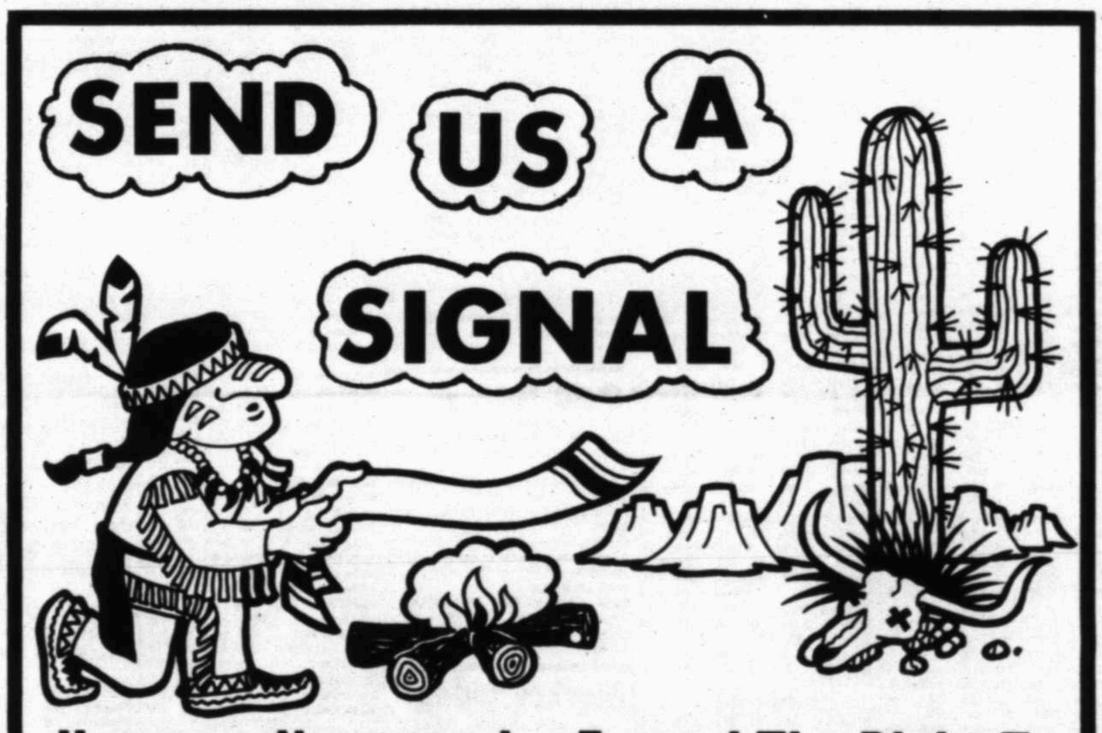

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Prime Minister Ingvar Carlsson said the Chernobyl accident shows that atomic power is a danger and must be stopped.

"Nuclear power is one of the greatest threats to our environment," Carlsson said Sunday, speaking to 2,000 people gathered for a labor rally in Skansen, an open-air museum in Stockholm.

He said that the April 26 accident at the Chernobyl power station in the Soviet Ukraine "forced us to drastic measures that seem strange and frightening", and added that the Chernobyl incident "made it very clear to us what kind of catastrophic consequences a nuclear accident could lead to."

Twenty-eight people died in the accident and its aftermath, according to the latest official Soviet count.

The graves of three additional people, however, have been found since then in a section of a cemetery reserved for Chernobyl victims outside Moscow, indicating the unofficial death toll is 31.

Private contractors compete for firefighters' business

By MARK WARBIS

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Thousands of government employees are spending hundreds of millions of dollars this summer to stop flames turning miles of Western forest and range to smoke and ash.

And private contractors are vying for a piece of the action.

"Some people say we're like the guy with a super-rich mother-in-law who asks how her health is every morning," said John Keener, president of a large private supplier of food and sanitation services for fire crews.

Depending on the severity of the fire season, Keener's Seattle-based OK's Co., its Cascade Showers division and subsidiary Cascade Services Co., earn $100,000 to $2 million from federal contracts each summer.

Providing meals, showers and portable toilets for crews is their only business, joining 22 other caterers and sanitation contractors that earned almost $11 million supporting firefighters last year.

Putting down wildfires that are often in some of the nation's roughest terrain cost federal agencies $600 million during last year's particularly bad fire summer. About 40 percent went to private businesses. Last year, 83,000 fires burned more than 3 million acres of forest and rangeland.

No figure is available yet for fire-suppression costs in 1986. But an estimated 80,000 blazes this season have blackened nearly 2.5 million acres, more than 100,000 acres above the amount for the same time last year.

To meet the challenge, the Boise Interagency Fire Center, which provides logistical support to the U.S. Forest Service, Bureau of Land Management, Bureau of Indian Affairs and National Park Service, and seven regional agency headquarters keep crews stocked with seemingly endless supplies.

From air tankers and helicopters to flashlight batteries, sleeping bags and coffee urns, the call goes out each year for bids on tons of supplies that are dispatched to hot spots nationwide. Millions of dollars more are spent locally when fire bosses determine equipment needs at the scene.

Ruth Ann Smith, a BLM supervisory contracting specialist at the Boise center, said the government pays about $40 million to private businesses each year for "nuts and bolts" supplies, not including aircraft, food or sanitation services.

"We deal with the kind of things that the firefighters are using personally in a camp situation," she said. "We're getting down to the grunt level."

Some of that equipment has been supplied in recent years by a Boise smokejumper-turned-canvas-fabricator.

Supplying made-to-order equipment such as pocketed "cruiser vests," tool-carrying cases for pumps and chainsaws and wind socks, Smith is typical of small business operators who enjoy a steady, if modest, income from contracting for the fire effort.

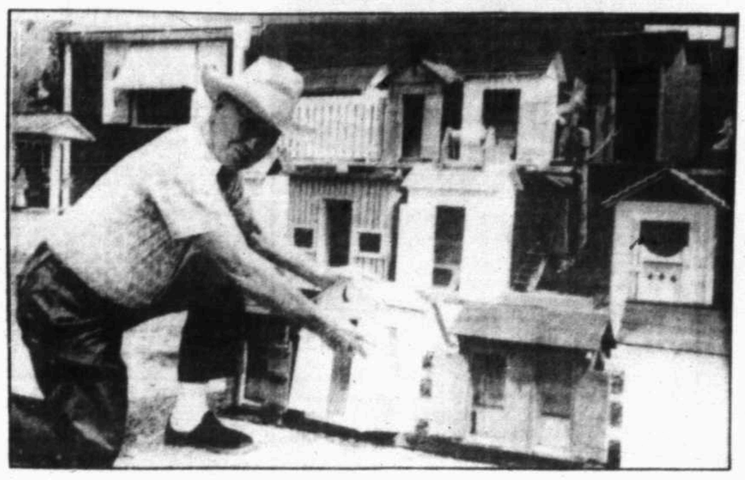

"I'd miss it if it didn't show up," he said. "If they don't have a fire season around here, Alaska does or California or Florida; there's always a fire season somewhere, so the demand stays pretty steady."

There's more money in providing aircraft to conduct reconnaissance, make retardant and water drops, and to ferry men and equipment to wherever fire strikes.

Bill Baden, Forest Service director at Boise center, said contracts for private helicopters, transport and cargo aircraft cost the government almost $11 million last year. An estimated $15 million more was spent on air tankers, specially fitted for use in firefighting.

Fire seasons range in severity from the massive destruction of the past two years to a recent low of less than 420,000 acres nationwide in 1978.

AP Laserphoto

George Borum indicates the finer points of his scale-model outhouse collection.

CENTRALIA, Ill. (AP) — Bitter cold mornings racing across the yard to heed nature's call are fond memories to George Borum, enough so that he pays tribute a vanishing bit of Americana: the outdoor privy.

The history buff from Southern Illinois, until recently, owned what may be the largest collection of scale-model outhouses — hundreds of replicas he built himself.

Borum, whose illustrated, paperback book on early-American plumbing, "The Little House Out Back," is in its third printing, sold most of the collection to the Daniel Boone Village at Hillsboro, N.C.

"I didn't have room for them," he explained while packing them away in 50 huge boxes for shipment last week. "I don't mind parting with them; I'd rather be making new ones. I'll have a couple hundred (more) built before you know it."

Pointing to two rows of pint-sized privies beside his house, he said the construction process already has begun.

Among them was a "one-holer" with a solar panel on the side, another painted to like bricks and a third capable of handling five visitors at a time.

"I've got a photograph of one like this, the real thing," Borum said. "It was in a country schoolyard, and the kids would line up to use it."

He also builds some just for laughs, like one model using a sliding seat with holes of various sizes — "from a tiny, baby-sized one to a big one for politicians" — and a split-level version straddling a fence.

"It's for neighbors who don't like each other," Borum said. "See how it's built? You can figure out where things fall when it gets used."

He added that people even find something to chuckle about in the detailed models of the real thing, which is part of his reason for building them.

"Everybody's got a story to tell you about the outhouse," he said. "And then they start laughing. That's America. That's American history."

Borum, 73, is a sign painter by trade, a former auctioneer and a pen-and-ink artist. He also builds model of covered bridges, barns, towns and steamboats, and once operated a steamboat museum in the village of Grafton where the Illinois River joins the Mississippi.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY EMPLOYER

AUTOMOTIVE REPORT

THE 1986 COLT VISTA, imported for Plymouth from Mitsubishi Motors Corp. of Japan, is available in two- or four-wheel drive. This unique small family wagon combines flexible seven passenger seating with great fuel economy, ease of handling, and excellent visibility. The standard drive train is a 2.0 liter engine and five-speed manual transaxle. The four-wheel-drive model shifts from two-wheel to four-wheel drive at the touch of a button incorporated into the knob on the gear shift lever.

COLT VISTA: New Definition of Mini Van

By Tom Cooper

The versatile, streamlined Colt Vista station wagon is available in 1986 in front-wheel drive and four-wheel drive models.

Imported from Mitsubishi Motors Corporation of Japan, the Colt Vista features seating for seven passengers, and provides 63.9 cubic feet of cargo space when the center and rear seats are folded down.

Both versions of the Colt Vista have a five-speed, fully synchronized manual overdrive transaxle, but with higher gear ratios for the Vista 4x4 package. A load sensing proportioning valve that equalizes front and rear brake pressure under varying load conditions is standard to both models, as are variable damping rear shock absorbers.

New interior features include thoughtful touches like cup holders integrated into the dash panel, and new upholstery and trim colors. The flexible 2+3+2 seating system quickly adapts the Vista to a variety of roles. The center and rear seats can be folded down with either seat backs or padded surfaces upward, permitting seat-by-seat adjustment of cargo space from 13.8 cubic feet to 63.9 cubic feet. With soft surfaces upward, the second and third seats form a double bed.

Other features included are storage pockets, remotely controlled fuel filler door, intermittant wipers, multi-outlet ventillation system, and rear seat heater ducts. A high-mounted center stop lamp is mounted on the liftgate on both models.

The Colt Vista four-wheel drive package includes a modified suspension system, with independent McPherson front struts, rear torsion bars and front and rear stabilizer bars. The package also has large 14-inch dish-shaped steel road wheels, with five ventillation ports and bright chrome center caps. Ventilated front disc brakes, nine-inch rear drum brakes, and all season P185/70 R 14 steel belted radial tires are standard. Power steering is standard on the 4x4 version, and optional on the two-wheel drive base model.

The standard powerplant on both models is a 2.0 liter Mitsubishi Clean Air Jet engine, which produces 88 hp at 5000 rpm and 108 ft-lb torque at 3500 rpm. Both 1986 Vista models have a wide range of luxury options, including power windows, power door locks, roof luggage rack, AM/-FM/MX stereo or AM/FM/MX stereo cassette radios. The Colt Vista has a 103.5 inch wheelbase. It is 174.6 inches long, 64.6 inches wide, and 59.4 inches high.

The Colt Vista is a unique Vehicle with many of the best features of a van, some of which you would only expect to find on an expensive conversion package. But it also has some of the best features of a small vehicle such as good fuel economy and a lower sticker price. It is a vehicle that is extremely versatile and will fit the needs of many people who need a station wagon or a van.

This feature appears each Monday as a reader service of the Midland Reporter-Telegram.
