

Commerce: Economy Outpaces Recession

WASHINGTON (AP)—The recession that was predicted for 1979 never materialized as the economy grew by 2.3 percent during the year, the Commerce Department reported today.

The economy grew at an annual rate of 1.4 percent in the fourth quarter last year.

While a recession was avoided, the increase in the nation's gross national product — the total value of all goods and services produced — was lower in the last three months of 1979 than had been expected. This indicates a recession may actually be coming in 1980.

Another strong performance by consumers, who increased their purchases in the fourth quarter, kept the economy on the plus side in the October-December period.

"Obviously, consumers are carrying a big part of it here," said one analyst.

However, to maintain purchasing power in the face of rising inflation, Americans saved only 3.3 percent of their income in the fourth quarter at an annual rate. It was the lowest savings rate for any three-month period since the Korean War in 1950.

A recession is said to occur when there is negative GNP growth for two consecutive quarters. The average 2.3 percent growth for the year compared with 4.4 percent growth in 1978 and 5.3 percent in 1977.

The only negative quarter in 1979 was the second, when the GNP declined at an annual rate of 2.3 percent. The GNP grew at an annual rate of 1.1 percent in the first quarter and 3.1 percent in the third.

The Commerce Department also reported that inflation, as measured by its broadly based implicit price deflator, was at an annual rate of 8.6 percent in the fourth quarter and was 8.8 percent for the entire year. That compares with inflation of 7.3 percent in 1978.

The GNP price deflator, which measures inflation throughout the economy, is said to provide the best measurement of underlying inflation in the economy.

The consumer price index, by contrast, has been showing an inflation rate of 13 percent at the consumer level.

The total GNP for 1979 was $2,368.5 billion, or nearly $2.5 trillion. After adjusting for the effect of inflation, the GNP was $1,431.1 billion. The percentage figures on changes in the GNP are based on the inflation-adjusted total.

The Commerce Department said consumers increased their purchases of goods and services by 1 percent in the fourth quarter to an annual rate of $935.2 billion. Consumer spending rose 1.6 percent for the year.

Investment spending decreased in the fourth quarter, falling nearly 2 percent to $203 billion at an annual rate, which was a major negative influence on the GNP.

After a drop in GNP in the second quarter, even Treasury

Witch's Trial Delayed Again

PLAINVIEW, Texas (AP)—The absence of a juror has caused an unexpected delay in the Loy Dean Stone murder trial.

After nine days and 64 interviews, attorneys finally had selected a panel of 32 — plus an additional prospective juror as insurance against unforeseen crisis.

But Thursday afternoon court employees notifying potential jurors to appear today discovered one of them was in Oklahoma and would not return until tonight.

State District Judge John T. Boyd, who had planned to add another "emergency" juror or two and then begin opening arguments today, was forced to postpone the start of testimony until Monday.

He said attorneys still would pick some additional panelists today.

Stone and his wife Louise, both high priests in a witches church, are charged in the shooting death of a 15-year-old Dimmitt girl on Halloween 1977.

Roxanne Casas was in a pickup that was hit by two shotgun blasts after it pulled into the Stone's driveway near the Panhandle town of Dimmitt.

Miss Casas was killed and two of the other four teenagers in the truck were injured.

The Stones, both 49, said they never heard the shots and have pleaded innocent to the charge. Boyd granted a motion to separate Mrs. Stone's trial last week.

The slaying raised a furor in the town's Hispanic community that forced the trial to be moved to Plainview, 45 miles away.

If convicted, Stone could serve five to 99 years, or life, in prison.

Although Boyd had told the potential jurors to be available, he did not tell them to remain in town.

"I'm going to give him the benefit of the doubt," the judge said of the missing juror. "I don't think he's trying to run off and hide."

C-C Approves $68,000 Budget for 1980

Installed Officials

New officers for Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce were installed at a dinner Thursday night at K-Bob's Restaurant. Top three officers are Ken Rogers, center, re-elected as president; Joan Coupe, treasurer, and Tom Burdett, vice president. New directors installed were Burdett, Bill Johnson, Bob Gentry and Bill Reinauer.

Retiring from the board were Jonny Cloud, Paul Abalos and Raymond Schlabs. Speedy Nieman remains a member of the board in the immediate past-president position. The officers and directors will be recognize at the annual C of C Banquet Jan. 31 in the Bull Barn.

Board Discusses Industry Policy

Approval of a 1980 budget of $68,070—a decrease of $9,780 over last year—and discussion of chamber policy in regard to local opposition in locating a new industrial plant here were highlights of a Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce directors meeting Thursday at noon.

Ken Rogers, president, reported that the reduction of the budget came primarily as the result of trimming expenses budgeted for committee projects which were not used last year.

At the same time, Rogers praised executive vice president Mike Carr for helping put the chamber back in the "black," pointing out the organization had no debts for the first time in several years.

Rogers also announced that Jerry (Jiffy) Payne had submitted his resignation to the board because of business reasons. The board accepted the resignation. The executive committee will appoint a replacement with board approval, to fill out the term.

Rogers outlined the chamber's efforts in securing a plant site here for Calorific of Texas, Inc., a facility which would recycle cattle manure into methane gas and other by-products. "It was felt at the time," said Rogers, "that such an industry would help the feedyards dispose of manure, would add families and payrolls to the economy, and would add tax dollars to county and school funds."

He announced, however, that after the exact location of the proposed plant had been released, a group of citizens had filed an objection to the Texas Air Control Board and requested that a permit not be issued. Because of this action, Rogers asked the directors for guidance

Local Youngsters Take Stock Honors

Deaf Smith County exhibitors won several honors in the lamb division of the Amarillo Stock Show yesterday, and 4-H and FFA Youngsters continue competition in the barrow and steer divisions today.

Casey Cobb of the Deaf Smith 4-H exhibited the reserve champion finewool cross, a medium weight lamb.

Cobb also had the first place medium weight Suffolk while Phylecia Rowland of the Hereford FFA had the third place lamb in that class.

Local 4-H'er Kari Maddox had the second place light-weight Suffolk.

In the Hampshire competition Brian Urbanczyk of the Hereford FFA had the second place lightweight lamb.

In the finewool class division, Kari Maddox was second with a lightweight lamb while Kirk Sparkman of the Hereford FFA was third.

Competition in the heavy-weight finewool division saw Woody Glass of the Hereford FFA take second.

Lamb show judge was John Kearney, a vocational agriculture teacher from Sterling City.

Deaf Smith County 4-H members will be fielding a large number of steers in that show today as animals go before steer judge Dr. Bob Kropp of Oklahoma State University.

Dr. Kropp will also serve as judge for the lamb and steer divisions of the Hereford Young Farmers Junior Livestock Show here next week.

The grand champion steer was to be selected at 7:15 tonight.

Barrow judging began at Amarillo Thursday night and resumed this morning with Bob Hinds of Kansas State University picking the winners.

The grand champion barrow was expected to be selected sometime this afternoon.

Branding Iron Traveling Mentor Goes West, Likes It

Head basketball coach Bob Decker has been around—that is, he's done the circuit in the Lone Star state, but he has adjusted once more and has settled in "The Town Without a Toothache." And from all apparent indications, he is happy and here to stay for a while as he enters in his third year as Hereford High's varsity basketball head mentor.

After all, what more could a coach ask for than to enjoy the beautiful climate of Hereford, Texas, year-round. And when you jot up the fact that the wind never blows here you've got a very pleasing picture indeed.

"The climate here has been something to get used to I must admit here, but I guess it kind of grows on you after awhile," said Decker. "My family and I have really gotten to like it, but more than the weather, we have thoroughly enjoyed the people and the pace of life here more than in the other places we've lived."

Before hand, Decker had done tours in Farriss as an all-sport coach in Jr. High and head varsity baseball coach. Alvarado where he served a three year stint as the varsity basketball head coach, and Burleson as the varsity basketball and football coach for five years.

"All of those towns I coached at were actually suburbs of the Dallas-Fort Worth metropolitan areas and the people just didn't

Ewurs Earns Probation

By PAUL SIMS
Managing Editor

Eric Eugene Ewurs was found guilty three times of aggravated assault in connection with a shootout last fall with three law-enforcement officers and sentenced to five years probation for each conviction Thursday in 222nd District Court.

The 18-year-old Des Moines, Iowa, man will be formally sentenced Monday by 222nd

District Judge Wesley Gulley. The three probated sentences will run concurrently.

The eight-man four-woman jury deliberated for three hours Thursday afternoon before rejecting attempted capital murder charges against Ewurs, instead deciding on the lesser aggravated assault charges.

Attempted capital murder is a first-degree felony and punishable by up to a life prison sentence, while aggravated assault is a second-degree felony and punishable by no more than 10 years in the penitentiary.

The jury deliberated for 1½ hour Thursday evening before recommending probation on each of the convictions. Ewurs, when the jury's recommendations were read by the district clerk, walked towards the panel in an apparent attempt to shake hands with the members, but Gulley ordered the defendant back to his seat.

Ewurs and two companions—18-year-old Karen Streight Llamas and 15-year-old Ruth Ann Streight—allegedly stole $21 worth of gasoline from a Bovina service station, then were involved in a high-speed chase towards Hereford with a Friona police officer.

According to testimony in the trial Wednesday, Ewurs fired a shotgun blast at highway patrolman Gary Whitfill, then turned his pickup into a field before he was involved in a shootout with Whitfill, the Friona patrolman and a Deaf

Tardy Named President Of Industrial Foundation

Don Tardy, a local realtor, was elected as president of Hereford Industrial Foundation when the organization held its annual membership meeting Thursday afternoon in the C of C board room.

The board also elected Bud Eades and Speedy Nieman as vice presidents, and Jimmy Rowton as treasurer. Mike Carr, chamber executive, was re-elected as secretary. Tardy succeeds Dick Gerles as president of the organization.

Five directors were elected to the board for three-year terms, and two were named to fill unexpired positions. Named to regular terms were Gerles, Jeff Carlile, Stanley Simmons, Bobby Griego, and Joe Reinauer Jr. Troy Waddell, new Southwestern Public Service Co. manager, was named to fill the unexpired term of Jake Webb. Gene Ehler, new Pioneer Natural gas Co. manager, was picked to fill the term of Nicks Farris.

In other business, the foundation board reviewed the financial report for the year, heard a progress report from Dick Haxel of the Sue Ann Corporation, authorized the executive committee to expand funds for an industrial trip, and discussed possibilities for new industrial sites in Hereford.

Awards, Humorist Mark Beet Fete

A featured humorist and awards presentations will highlight the annual growers banquet of the Texas-New Mexico Sugar Beet Growers Association Saturday at 7 p.m. at the Bull Barn.

The association's top beet producers from the 1979 crop year will be recognized in a special ceremony which singles out the top three tonnage and sugar content producers in the local growing area.

The winners will receive cash awards provided by area merchants.

In an additional presentation ceremony The Hereford Brand will announce the winner of its third annual "Man of the Year in Agriculture" award for Deaf Smith County.

The award recognizes achievement on the part of a local agriculturalist in farming and ranching, support and aid to the area's agribusiness industry and participation in community affairs.

Speaker for tomorrow night's banquet will be Pat Leimbach of Vermilion, Ohio.

Mrs. Leimbach is the author of two books on rural life, "A Thread of Blue Denim" and "All My Meadows" and also writes the column "Country Wife" which appears in several publications across the nation.

West Texas Workers To Join In Strike

HOUSTON (AP) - Oil field workers in West Texas and Eastern New Mexico rejected a "Me Too" agreement and are expected Sunday to join the 60,000 striking members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Union.

Earl F. Morris, division production manager for Amoco Production Co., said Thursday the firm had been advised by about 750 hourly workers who operate wells and handle maintenance that they will strike at 12:01 a.m. Sunday.

"We must proceed with plans to continue to operate our wells and facilities without these workers," Morris said as he expressed regret over the employees' decision.

The workers have rejected a "Me Too" clause offered by the company which would have allowed them to continue work and receive any wage settlement eventually reached by the OCAW at other Amoco facilities.

"In their absence," Morris said, "our operations will be conducted in a safe and orderly manner by supervisory and certain non-represented personnel."

The walkout, which began Jan. 8, has resulted in several incidents of violence and vandalism, one mass arrest and a court injunction.

Shah Says U.S. Oil

Responsible For Ousting

NEW YORK (AP) - The deposed Shah of Iran says he has not renounced his claim to Iran's Peacock Throne and that the greed of U.S. oil companies brought about his downfall one year ago.

"Abdicating in the vocabulary of a king does not exist unless it's very, very special circumstances," Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi said Thursday in a televised interview with British journalist Davis Frost.

"Does a king have to agree...to abdicate?" Frost asked.

"Yes...Unless he is decapitated," replied the 60-year-old shah, who is under a death sentence from a revolutionary court in Iran.

The hour-long interview on the ABC newsmagazine "20-20" was the shah's most extensive public statement since he left Iran for exile one year ago Wednesday.

He charged his regime had been sacrificed by profit-hungry American oil companies and rejected as "preposterous" claims by the regime of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini that he was responsible for the massacre of tens of thousands of Iranians during his reign.

Hijacker Surrenders

Before Going To Iran

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) - A devout teen-ager desperate to find Lebanon's lost Shiite Moslem leader hijacked a Lebanese jetliner today and ordered it to head for Iran, but he surrendered a short time later when the plane landed here, authorities reported.

The youth had threatened to blow up the Middle East Airlines Boeing 707 with a hand grenade if it did not take him to Tehran.

The plane, carrying 72 passengers and a crew of nine, was commandeered over the Mediterranean some 25 minutes after it took off from Beirut airport on a flight to Larnaca, Cyprus, in mid-afternoon, Lebanese authorities said.

They said the hijacker, identified as Fuad Hamadeh, a Shiite Moslem from the southern Lebanese village of Khrbet Silm, told the captain and passengers he had taken command of plane in a new attempt to determine the fate of Imam Musa Sadr, the spiritual leader of Lebanese Shiites who disappeared mysteriously more than a year ago on a trip to Libya.

Kennedy, Mondale

Campaign in Iowa

SIoux CITY, Iowa (AP) - With just four campaign days remaining until the Iowa precinct caucuses, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy and Vice President Walter F. Mondale are making their final personal bids for support.

Kennedy scheduled quick stops today in Sioux City, Des Moines, Cedar Rapids and Davenport to round up backers in his effort to grab the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination from President Carter.

Mondale, campaigning on Carter's behalf, returned Thursday night to Ledyard, the small northern Iowa town where he broke his nose years ago in a high school basketball game. His schedule today included stops in Algona and Mason City.

Among the Republican presidential hopefuls, John B. Connally, Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr., George Bush and Rep. Philip Crane, all scheduled appearances.

Meanwhile in Los Angeles on Thursday, California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. said his appeal to his supporters to back uncommitted slates in the caucuses did not mean he was writing off Iowa.

"He (Carter) undermined my effort to communicate with the people of Iowa through the mechanism of a debate," said Brown. "I am now trying to recoup that by linking up with uncommitted delegates."

Branding

seem to be as friendly as they are here," said Decker. "Hereford as a community, gets a lot more involved with school activities than up in the metropolitan areas and this town takes a lot more interest in the kids as far as doing things for them."

However, it wasn't only the nice people and relaxed atmosphere that initially drew Decker's interests toward Hereford—it was the straight basketball job offered.

"I really liked the idea of coaching just straight basketball rather than having to coach another sport too-like I was doing in my previous jobs, and then I saw that Hereford needed just a varsity basketball coach so I tried it and luckily got it," he said. "The reason I didn't like coaching all the other sports rather than being designated as a one sport coach was that I didn't have time to socialize and prepare myself for just one sport and in order to be successful in larger schools that's what you have to do."

As far as any problems that plague the coach in his coaching duties here he said, "We have a hard time competing with other schools in our district simply because we don't have the numbers in our program that they do." "Take for example Monterey and Lubbock Coronado; their football and basketball programs don't have to share the players for both sports most of the time because they have enough numbers in both sports to suffice."

"If we had more player input into both sports like they do, then we would have more room to specialize," he said. "It takes longer to get our kids to the point where they should be at—whereas those other teams are at that point way before we get there."

But Decker added that he thinks his team this year has met its preparation deadline right on schedule.

"We go into the preseason non-district games expecting not to win simply because it takes us that long to prepare ourselves, but since the Christmas layoff we've gone 4-3 in our games which is very beneficial going into district play," Decker said.

"And I attribute the fact that we're doing so well so early in the season to the kid's attitudes about what they need to do and how they respond to what we as coaches tell them," he said.

All things considered, coach Decker couldn't be more pleased with his program and his head mentor spot, because he has the support needed to be successful.

"As compared with the other coaching staffs I've been involved with in the past, this staff is by far the best because of the way the football and basketball coaches get along and cooperate with each other and the interest directed towards the basketball program by all the coaches has made my job a lot easier to adjust to," said Decker. "And that is largely responsible for any success that is received."

Chamber

on "whether the chamber should actively pursue the development of the plant, or assume a hands-off policy."

After much discussion on the benefits of such a plant in the county, as well as the objections raised by 33 local citizens who signed the petition to the air control board, directors agreed that the only action the chamber should take at this time would be to seek a decision as soon as possible on whether the permit for construction is to be granted or denied.

"If the permit is granted," said one director, "then I believe we should support the company in its development of the plant. If the permit is denied, we should abide with that decision and pursue another course."

Another director said he still felt "the plant will fit into our industrial picture and will be an asset to the county. Perhaps I would feel different if I were a landowner in that area, but they'll have their way and we can go from there." He added that board members should "let these citizens know we are interested in their feelings, and that much consideration went into the site selection."

Rogers said real estate people and bankers were called to a meeting in the early planning stages and told of the company's requirements for a plant site. The company later signed an option for the land in August of 1979, then renewed the option on Jan. 1.

The proposed site is approximately 5½ miles west of Hereford, being situated one mile north of FM-1058 and one mile east of FM-1057.

The citizens applying for a public hearing, and asking that the permit be denied, listed 15 reasons they opposed construction of the plant. These included: That most, if not all, those living close to the proposed site are opposed; that sulphur dioxide will be emitted into the air; that the location is not centrally located to feedyards in the county; that the location is one-half mile from one residence and about one and one-half mile from a number of other residences.

Also, that the petitioners believe that one million pounds of manure will be needed daily in the operation; that trucks hauling the manure to the location will tend to increase noise, traffic and dust in the area; that the manure stockpiled at the location will cause an odor problem and tend to create air pollution and fly problems in the area; that a subdivision exists about one mile from the proposed facility and it will tend to decrease property values in the area; and that the emissions will contaminate air quality in the area and may tend to adversely affect human health or welfare and animal life and vegetation or property.

Trial

Smith County sheriff's deputy.

Ewurs testified Thursday that he did not fire the shotgun at Whitfill, claiming that someone else inside the pickup pointed the gun out the driver's side window and shot it.

He also testified during examination by defense lawyer Rex Easterwood that he fired the shotgun above the deputy's patrol car in the field in an attempt to scare the three officers and allow Ewurs and the girls to escape.

During cross-examination by Assistant District Attorney Jerry Smith, Ewurs admitted that the pickup he was driving had been stolen in Arizona.

In closing arguments Thursday, five Texas Department of Public Safety troopers, two Hereford police officers, four sheriff's deputies and a game warden watched from the first two rows in the courtroom.

Several of the officers expressed disappointment when the jury returned with the aggravated-assault verdicts.

Easterwood, during final arguments, told the jury to discount the testimony of the two Des Moines sisters. He said the fact that Mrs. Llamas had been granted immunity from prosecution in return for her testimony "affected her testimony."

He also said that Miss Streight "was protecting herself."

Miss Streight, because of juvenile laws in Texas, was not granted immunity from prosecution, but cannot be charged, because of her age, according to Smith.

"I think the boy's action were stupid. I don't think they were rational at the time," Easter-wood said. "I'm not condoning violence. I don't like violence. But, I don't like excessive force, either. And, everybody was shooting at the boy from all over." Easterwood said.

"I don't think he had the intent to harm these police officers," he added.

Smith told the jury that Easterwood was suggesting "there was no crime, but he (Ewurs) is the victim."

Sue Ann factory, gave a glowing report on the company's business here and in other areas. He said the local payroll topped $1 million the past year, and that average plant employment was about 145. He said the company may reach a peak of 180 employees this year.

The Sue Ann Corporation, overall, grossed more than $30 million in 1978 and the total was above that in 1979, said Haxel. He added that the company projects sales of some $52 million this year. He pointed out that the Hereford plant has one of the best production records in the organization.

Bobby Veigel, chairman of the C of C ag committee, appeared at the meeting and suggested that Hereford had the potential to be one of the top alcohol-producing places in the entire United States. By using cattle manure to power the plant and shipping in grain from the midwest, Hereford would be a "natural" site for a big plant, said Veigel.

He pointed out that the federal government is providing stimulus to accelerate domestic production of alcohol fuels from sources other than petroleum. President Carter has set a target for domestic production of 500 million gallons of ethanol during 1981. Veigel said his figures were not substantiated, but he and others believe Hereford has the capability to produce some 300 million gallons here.

Chamber president Ken Rogers reported some research was already underway on the possibility of securing gasohol production here, and that a steering committee might be initiated to move faster into the study.

Rogers also reported on the plans being made to locate a plant here to produce methane gas and other by-products from feedlot waste. A proposed site has been announced west of town, and Calorific of Texas has made financial arrangements to construct a plant. Estimated cost of the facility is about $6 million.

Holdover directors in the foundation include Ken Rogers, Jim Rowton, Emory Brownlow, Don Tardy, Tom Burdett, Don Lane, O.G. Nieman, Bud Eades, and Gene Ehler and Troy Waddell.

Economy

Secretary G. William Miller got on the bandwagon by proclaiming that the nation was in a recession.

But then consumers took over. Even though inflation and taxes were reducing the buying power of their income, they managed to maintain their purchasing power by saving less.

"Growth in the second half of 1979 came largely from the consumer sector," said Courtenay Slater, the Commerce Department's chief economist, in a statement Jan. 8.

"Since real disposable personal income has not been rising, this growth could be sustained only through a reduction in personal savings. The savings rate reached an extraordinarily low level by the fourth quarter," she added.

The 1979 savings rate of 4.5 percent compared with 4.9 percent in 1978 and was the lowest since 1949, when it was 3.6 percent.

The savings rate fell to 3.3 percent in November, the lowest since the Commerce Department began keeping monthly records in 1959. It may have declined even further in December, the figures released Thursday indicated.

The department's 1979 income report said total personal income increased 12 percent last year and was at an annual rate in December of $2,022.5 billion, or slightly more than $2 trillion.

While the 12 percent increase nearly matched the expected rate of inflation for the year, it was partially eroded by a 15.8 percent increase in taxes.

After-tax disposable income, on a per capita basis, was at an annual rate of $7,653 in December, up 8.7 percent from a year earlier, which trailed the rate of inflation.

In a separate report Thursday, the Commerce Department said new housing starts declined 14 percent last year to 1,742,500, compared with 2,020,300 in 1978.

Pakistan Nixes Offer

By The Associated Press

Pakistan's president derided the reported U.S. offer of $400 million in aid as "peanuts." Meanwhile, American reporters were leaving Afghanistan today, and regulars were reported replacing reservists in the Soviet occupation army.

"That is peanuts," President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq told American reporters in Rawalpindi Thursday when asked his opinion of President Carter's reported offer of $200 million in military equipment and $200 million in economic aid over the next two years to offset the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

"If this is true — I have not heard it officially — this is terribly disappointing," Zia

continued. "Pakistan will not buy its security with $400 million. (That sum) will buy far greater animosity from the Soviet Union, which is now more influential in this region than the United States."

He refused to say how much aid would satisfy him. But he said he needs warplanes, anti-aircraft missiles, anti-tank weapons and communications systems to strengthen defenses along Pakistan's 1,200-mile western border with Afghanistan.

Zia also urged upgrading the 1959 U.S.-Pakistan agreement which calls for consultations in case of attack from a communist-ruled country.

In Washington, Pentagon sources said Thursday the Soviet command is starting to send regular army soldiers into Afghanistan to replace reservists who made up a significant part of the intervention force.

They said the regulars were being brought in from European Russia and elsewhere to replace the reservists, who were on 90-day duty and came from Central Asian republics near Afghanistan.

The Pentagon now estimates the Soviet occupation force at 72,000 men, but other estimates run as high as 100,000. The Pentagon sources said the regulars were being brought in to offset desertions from the Afghan army in the northeast part of the country, where Afghan regulars were reported defecting to the Moslem guerrillas in significant numbers.

They said the Afghan army is down to about half its former estimated strength of 100,000 men. They also said the rebels had captured large amounts of arms, ammunition and military equipment, but there was no evidence they had received arms from outside Afghanistan.

Gold Tops $800/Ounce

LONDON (AP) — Gold opened in Europe above $800 an ounce for the first time in history today after spectacular new rises in New York and Hong Kong.

Trading opened in Zurich at $810 an ounce, and the price quickly moved up to $820.50, a $90 advance on Thursday's closing price.

The opening price in London was $815, and by midmorning the price had risen to $825, a record for Europe and $65 above Thursday's high.

In Hong Kong, meanwhile, the price soared to a world record of $832.97 an ounce, then settled back to close at $810.85.

Only two days ago, the price of gold hit $700 for the first time after breaking through $600 on Jan. 3. The metal has more than doubled in value since the siege of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran began on Nov. 4, when gold was worth $381 an ounce.

The Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan at the end of December added to the upward pressure.

One dealer in New York described trading there Thursday as "absolutely nuts." The price rose $100 an ounce, from $715 to $815, before closing at a record $802. Some dealers attributed the jump to rumors of a Soviet invasion of Iran.

The effect of the New York price was immediately apparent when trading opened today in Hong Kong, the Far East's chief gold market. The opening price was $798.62 an ounce, up $70.20 from Thursday's close. The price rose steadily until the last hour of trading, when profit-taking set in.

"They've gone crazy," said one Hong Kong dealer. "If this goes on, gold will reach the $1,000 mark in no time."

The Hong Kong Gold and Silver Exchange announced that beginning Monday it would close half an hour early, apparently to try to put a brake on gold speculation.

Silver prices also continued to rise, opening in London at a record $49.50 a Troy ounce, up $3.50 from the price late Thursday. The previous record was $48, set on Wednesday.

The U.S. dollar continued to hold firm, with only slight gains and losses, despite the gold boom. In past years, a rush into precious metals usually meant a lack of confidence in the dollar, the world's benchmark currency for international trade. But this time the panic is caused not by the state of the American economy but by the crises over Afghanistan and Iran and their effect on Soviet-American detente and international political stability.

Morning dollar rates in Europe were:

Frankfurt — 1.7338 marks, up from 1.7235 at the close of trading Thursday.

Zurich — 1.5936 Swiss francs, down from 1.5952.

Paris — 4.0375 French francs, down from 4.038.

Amsterdam — 1.9015 guilders, up from 1.901.

Milan — 805.05 Italian lire, up from 804.65.

In London, the pound sterling sold at $2.28, up slightly from $2.2745.

The dollar closed in Tokyo at 239.45 yen, up from 238.675.

POTATO PANCAKES

They're made with cooked potatoes.

4 medium potatoes
1 very small onion, finely grated (1/4 cup pulp and juice)

2 large eggs
1 tablespoon flour
1/4 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup vegetable oil

Steam potatoes in their jackets just until barely tender; chill overnight; remove skins and coarsely grate — preferably in a food processor. Toss potatoes with onion. Beat eggs until thick and pale in color; add flour, baking powder and salt; beat to blend; fold in potato mixture. In a large skillet heat half of oil; drop heaping tablespoons of potato mixture, well apart, into oil. Spread thin, distributing evenly. Fry, turning to brown on both sides. Add remaining oil as needed for remaining batches. Makes about 16.

Time Management

by Corda Glover

Some people operate well doing what comes naturally and the things they do automatically coincide with when it should be done. I, however, have never been so lucky as to get up before the alarm rings, therefore eliminating my need for a "30 minute snooze alarm", or to be at the filling station when I run out of gas.

I have followed all sorts of advice to help me overcome my discomboberated life and get things done like, "Oh! Forget it, life shouldn't be tied to time clocks, goals and self-improvement." That went fairly well until the day I realized I was at the airport 10 minutes early and I child short.

"Planning ahead" was also a thrill and challenge to me. I planned a 4H dress Review so that I could be home in bed with the mumps, and got my neighbor, and at one-time-good friend, out of bed in the middle of the night because I needed to borrow some baking powder for the cake I was baking for her surprise party in the morning.

Experts advise you to make a list of things to be done and mark the items on your list with little clues like: TC-time critical, numbers to indicate priorities, and P. for putting (things that need to be done and can be done during waiting periods or slow times of the day). Here is an example of yesterday's list.

1 TC-Mail Christmas packages to cousins in California
7 P.-Do mending
6 Get gas in car
2 P. TC-proofread Junior's essay

3 Pay bills
4 no household records
5 buy groceries

I paid the bills and set the records straight with time to spare. I got the mending done "As the World Turned", but was 59 minutes late to pick up the kids because I read too long while waiting for the stop light to change and had to wait for another green light, but most unfortunately ran out of gas on my way to the grocery store.

You can plainly see my only mistake was confusing the priorities with the time criticals. A little more practice at this and I should have everything in order to produce a crisis free life, doing what should come naturally.

Ann Landers

Useful Poem

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I ran across something I would like to share with all the wonderful people who read your column. This piece was reprinted in "The Ohio Mason" and signed, "Author Unknown."

There is so much common sense here it could save a lot of grief if enough people would only take it to heart.

Thank you for your consideration. —Lufkin, Tex., Ann Fan

DEAR ANN: I appreciate your sending the essay on. I agree, it is loaded with common sense. Now let's hope my readers will learn from it.

THE ENEMY

I am more powerful than the combined armies of the world. I have destroyed more men than all the wars of all nations. I massacre thousands of people every year. I am more deadly than bullets, and I have wrecked more homes than a cabal of the world's most sensuous women.

In the United States alone, I steal over $500 million each year. I spare no one, and I find victims among the rich and poor alike, the young and old, the strong and weak. Widows know me to their everlasting sorrow. I loom up in such proportions that I cast my shadow over every field of labor.

I lurk in unseen places and do most of my work silently. You are warned against me, yet you heed me not. I am relentless, merciless and cruel. I am everywhere—in the home, on the streets, in the factory, at railroad crossings, on land, in the air and on the sea.

I bring sickness, degradation and death, yet few seek me out to destroy me. I crush, I maim, I will give you nothing and I may rob you of everything you have.

I am your worst enemy—I am CARELESSNESS.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My parents fought like cats and dogs, and finally they got a divorce last year. My father has a girlfriend who is only three years older than I am. It's really embarrassing. He spends all his spare time with her, so I don't get to see him much. He has visiting privileges but never uses them.

Mom works a double shift and comes home dead tired. She gets extra pay for working weekends, and we really need the money. So I never get to see her to talk about things that matter to me.

I have gone to my guidance counselor at school so much this year I hate to take any more of her time. Please tell me what to do. I really need someone older who will listen to me and give me some guidance.—all Alone

DEAR ALONE: Show your mother this letter and tell her you wrote it. I'll bet she will make some time for you. Go back to the school counselor, if you need to. That's what she's there for. And don't forget about me, Toots. I'm here for you, too.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just broke my third engagement. I think I must be a mental case. All three men were respectable, had good positions and cared

Poll Reveals

Most Americans Feel Farmers Having Tough Times

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most Americans say they "understand the fundamental issues" in modern agriculture and support a number of federal programs to help farmers, including a bigger push in conservation of soil and water.

For example, a $323,000 survey, which was released Thursday by the Agriculture Department, showed that 70 percent of those questioned "agree that most years farmers have a difficult time making enough money to stay in business."

Also, it said, 67 percent "supports new federal controls on farmland ownership to increase the number of small farms while just 19 percent feel we should be moving toward a country which has a relatively small number of large farms."

The survey was conducted by Louis Harris and Associates Inc., and involved 7,010 adults "representing a cross-section of the nation's population." The survey, described by the Harris firm as "substantially larger" than sampling usually undertaken, was conducted between Oct. 19 and Nov. 21 of last year. Assistant Secretary M. Rupert Cutler, who announced the survey results, said the study was made primarily "to assess the public's opinions, attitudes and understanding" related to conservation of the nation's soil and water resources.

The survey was mandated by Congress in the Soil and Water Resources Conservation Act of 1977 as part of its call for public participation in drawing up public policy.

According to the Harris report's summary — although public support for small farmers was overwhelming — 51 percent of Americans also recognize that "most food is grown on large farms."

A plurality of 48 percent favor continuation of "the production-based subsidy system" of the government, in which the largest farmers get the biggest benefits. That compared with 37 percent who "favor a needs-based" system of federal farm subsidies.

Further, some 48 percent "believe that all farmers, large and small, should get financial help for soil erosion problems." "The public sees conservation as an area of joint public and private responsibility," the Harris report said. "Neither the owners' property rights nor the government's claim of public interest is regarded as exclusively paramount."

Rather, it said, the public "would prefer conservation strategies that involve a partnership" between farmers and the government, based upon a mutual interest.

"Most telling," it said, "the public believes (77 percent) that we have yet to reach the point where we should be more concerned about holding down the costs involved in undertaking soil and water conservation programs than we should with completing the work that remains to be done."

"Indeed, some 39 percent take the position that protecting our water and soil is so important the requirements and standards cannot be too high, and that continuing improvements must be made regardless of cost."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says China has bought an additional 100,000 metric tons of U.S. wheat for delivery through May 31, 1981, the end of the next wheat marketing year.

That boosted to 400,000 metric tons the amount of wheat China now has bought for 1980-81.

For the current marketing year, China has bought more than 1.26 million metric tons of wheat for delivery by this May 31, officials said Thursday.

In addition, China has ordered for 1979-80 about 944,200 metric tons of corn, 475,600 of soybeans, and about 2.1 million bales of cotton. Also, China has ordered from "optional origin" about 20,000 metric tons of soybean oil, meaning it could come from some other source than the United States.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat or soybeans.

Department officials have said China has expressed the intention of importing 10 million to 12 million metric tons of wheat a year and that about half of it is expected to come from the United States.

WASHINGTON (AP) — December milk production totaled an estimated 10 billion pounds, a 2 percent increase from the final month of 1978, says the Agriculture Department.

That pushed milk output for the entire year to more than 123.5 billion pounds, up about 1 percent from 121.9 billion produced in 1978, the department said Thursday.

Milk cow numbers averaged fewer than 10.8 million, down about 81,000 head from the previous year, the report said.

But milk output per cow averaged 11,474 pounds last year, compared to 11,240 pounds in 1978.

Charges Filed on Car Theft Ring

LUBBOCK, Texas (AP) — Authorities here are investigating a car theft ring believed operating a "salvage switch" scheme in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and California.

Theft charges in the case were filed against three persons Wednesday, but as of today, only one person has been arrested. Eleven stolen cars have been recovered in Lubbock.

"The thing is really snowballing," Lubbock County Criminal District Attorney John Montford said today. "The investigation is continuing. We have information on six to seven other persons."

"It is definitely an organized theft ring and we're going to seek organized crime indictments against them."

The charges named a young Del City, Okla., man and his wife and a 42-year-old Los Angeles man. The Del City man was arrested in Oklahoma City Wednesday, and Montford said he has begun action to have him extradited to Texas.

Montford said the month-long investigation into the scheme was spearheaded by the Texas Department of Public Safety with help from agents from his office, local police, and the FBI.

The defendants are accused of buying junk or wrecked cars from a salvage dealer to obtain the title and then stealing a car of the same make and model.

Montford said they would then switch the plate with the vehicle identification number stamped on it to the stolen vehicle and, using the title of the junk car, sell the stolen autos to wholesalers.

Four Lubbock dealers' unknowingly bought at least 11 stolen cars, Montford said. Nine had been sold to individuals or other dealers by the time the scheme was discovered, but he said all nine were recovered and were being stored in a local wrecking yard.

Officials said the 11 cars confiscated in Texas and a 12th one recovered in California netted the thieves about $75,000.

Lubbock dealers who bought the stolen cars tipped police to the scheme when they noticed suspicious-looking vehicle identification number plates, officials said.

The scheme was believed operating since fall.

Clements Considering Suit Over White's Opinion on State Offices

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said today he is considering filing suit over Attorney General Mark White's opinion clearing the way for spending up to $117 million on a new state office building.

Clements said in a statement White's opinion that Clements could not block the expenditure "dangerously erodes the governor's veto power and virtually strips away a constitutional 'last line' of protection for taxpayers against irresponsible fiscal practices."

At a news conference, Clements said the money for a

Texas Department of Human Resources building had been "hidden to keep me from being able to veto it."

"We're considering the possibility of taking this into court... probably right on to the Supreme Court," said Clements.

The governor reiterated to the proposed building as a "welfare Taj Mahal."

"The attorney general was presented an opportunity to strike a blow for some fiscal discipline," said Clements' statement. "Instead, he gave his backing to the Legislature's latest scheme. He has authorized the Department of Human Resources to spend not only the estimated cost of $40 million for the building, but $117 million 'for any purpose' without the governor's constitutionally vested approval."

Injunction Now Easing OCAW Picket Tensions

HOUSTON (AP) — An injunction that prohibits harassment and property damage has apparently eased tension along picket lines set up by striking oil workers, according to several refinery spokesmen.

Members of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers union entered into the injunction after two oil firms and a construction company filed suit against the union.

The suit alleges that union members were blocking plant entrances, verbally abusing people, scattering nails along the roads to the plants and throwing rocks onto plant parking lots.

The union denied the allegations.

Oil company officials said production in the refineries was continuing at normal levels, but Roy Barnes, secretary-treasurer of the Houston local, disagreed.

Foreman Arrested

TOMBALL, Texas (AP) — Former heavyweight boxing champion George Foreman was arrested Thursday night after he reportedly refused to leave a school where a revival was being held, police said.

Patrolman D.R. Tinsley said Foreman and two other men were taken into custody about 8 p.m. Thursday when Tomball school officials filed criminal trespass charges against them.

"They were asked to leave by the school people," Tinsley said, "and then we were called. Foreman was one of the three that wouldn't leave."

Foreman was apparently taking part in a religious revival when the incident occurred.

"We do know that production has been reduced," Barnes said. "I think the strike will continue to reduce the amount of production because the people in the plant are not qualified operators."

Supervisory personnel took over plant operations last week after about 60,000 OCAW members walked off their jobs. The union members want fully paid health care plans, more vacation time and a pay increase.

Clements said White's opinion "circumvents the checks and balances system. I don't recall when Texans gave the Legislature and the bureaucracy an open checking account."

Brown Escalates Demand For Equal Time on NBC

By PEGGY ANDERSEN
Associated Press Writer

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., apparently lagging in the battle for Democratic caucus support in Iowa, is escalating his demand that NBC give him and President Carter equal television exposure just before Monday's clash in the farm belt.

The Iowa caucuses scheduled by both parties are considered the first real test in the 1980 presidential campaign.

NBC announced last week that the president would appear Sunday on "Meet the Press." Network officials refused to invite Brown or Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., to join Carter, saying both already had appeared on the program.

Brown's campaign committee filed a complaint Wednesday with the Federal Communications Commission challenging "NBC's right to give any candidate... a full half-hour of free nationwide television exposure only one day prior to an important election without offering an equal opportunity to other legally qualified candidates."

NBC spokesman Curt Block said "Meet the Press" is a

"bona fide, regularly scheduled news program and that does not fall under the terms of the law."

The Federal Communications Act's so-called "equal opportunities" section requires broadcasters to provide equal time to all candidates for a particular office if air time is obtained by one candidate.

The law exempts appearances on "bona fide" newscasts or news interviews, but notes those exemptions do not relieve broadcasters of their "obligation to operate in the public interest and to afford reasonable opportunity for the discussion of conflicting views on issues of public importance."

Kennedy also will be appearing on national television Sunday. ABC announced Wednesday it had booked the senator for "Issues and Answers." Arrangement with Kennedy were made Tuesday, network officials said, after plans for an hour-long session with the nine Republican presidential candidates fell through.

Brown campaign officials were not immediately available for comment on whether the governor would seek to join Kennedy on the ABC program.

Rams Are Looking for New Twists

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If you've gotten as far as the Super Bowl, common sense dictates that you've got what it takes to win it, too.

At least that's Chuck Noll's philosophy. "You win with what's gotten you here," Pittsburgh's coach has said in the past — namely when the Steelers were winning their three Super Bowl titles.

But Los Angeles Coach Ray Malavasi thinks it's always a good idea to have a few new things up your sleeve.

In Malavasi's case, he may well be right, considering he's sending his underdog Rams against Noll's Steelers.

"Personally, we try to rely on things we've been doing since training camp," Noll said Thursday. "I think the most important part of our preparation is training camp. Everything we'll do on Sunday we've done in training camp and have refined and improved during the season."

"To put in something cold can make things very confusing, make it difficult to execute your offense."

Malavasi isn't exactly planning on scrapping the offense that put the Rams in their first Super Bowl, but he does say he's got a few surprises in store for the Steelers.

"You want to have a few new things for a game like this," Malavasi said. "We're going to experiment a little bit during the game. If something works for us, we'll stay with it. If it doesn't work, we won't use it again."

"Every ball game we put some new things in... If we think we can gain by trying something new, we're going to do it."

Like what, he was asked. "Well, we've got the single wing," he began, tongue in cheek. "We've got the Wishbone; we'll use Nolan Cromwell in that."

It was clear he wasn't about to divulge his game plan. In fact, when someone asked — not entirely seriously — how he planned to beat the Steelers, he replied: "That's privileged information," and he wasn't smiling when he said it.

Putting in new plays at this stage of the season, Steelers' wide receiver Lynn Swann said,

"is away from the norm. Every team that's won the Super Bowl has done so by doing the things it did so successfully during the regular season because it had the confidence that those things would work when the championship was on the line."

"Putting in new plays now, to try and win this ballgame, might hurt the players' confidence in what they were doing," Swann added.

He said the Steelers have "prepared — for everything we've seen so far" on films of the Rams' games. That would seem to give Los Angeles hope that something totally new — such as a new kind of offensive formation or the seven defense backs they used to upset the Dallas Cowboys — might catch the Pittsburgh defense off guard.

"Each week we try to put in something as a different look for the defense, something that they haven't worked on," said Vince Ferragamo, the Rams' fledgling quarterback. "So we're going to put something in, put a few new plays in."

Jack Lambert, the Steelers' fearsome middle linebacker, just shrugged when he was asked about the Rams' potential surprises.

"Doesn't matter what they do," he said. "I think we've got the defense to handle it."

Ferragamo would like to have the time to survey the field and pick out his pass targets the way he did against Tampa Bay in the National Conference championship game, when he had as much as 10 or 11 seconds on several occasions.

"My linemen have been telling me all week they're going to give me the time and I've got great confidence in those people. They're some of the best people in pro football," Ferragamo said.

"I'm excited. I'm sure I'll be a little nervous going into the game, but that's natural. I've been nervous going into the last four or five games."

And when he was reminded of the comment by Pittsburgh quarterback Terry Bradshaw, that Ferragamo would be rattled when he became aware of the enormity of the game, the Rams' quarterback replied:

"I'm well aware of that. I was well aware of the fact that we had to beat Dallas to get into the Super Bowl. That was also a big game, one of the bigger games of my career. But I think the biggest game of all was my first start in the NFL. For me every game's been a big game and I don't see how this can be any bigger than the previous games we've played in."

Gervin Blows Free Shots To Give Cleveland Win

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Like many others around the National Basketball Association, Cleveland Coach Stan Albeck stands in awe of San Antonio's George Gervin.

"Gervin can score anytime he wants to," Albeck said of the NBA's scoring leader. "He's not human. He doesn't even sweat."

But while Gervin, nicknamed the "Ice Man," poured in a game-high 42 points against Albeck's Cavaliers Thursday night, he missed three crucial free throws in the closing minutes to let Cleveland hold onto a 116-112 victory.

Cavaliers' center Dave Robisch fired in 36 points to pace the triumph, Cleveland's second after suffering through a seven-game losing string. The 36 points represented an NBA high for the 30-year-old Kansas graduate, who said he once scored 37 for Denver in the old American Basketball Association.

"Robo has played extremely well against (former)

ABA teams," said Albeck. "Maybe he gets inspired a little more."

San Antonio was originally the Dallas entry in the ABA.

Robisch said the relative inexperience of the Spurs' pivot-men — three-year veteran Paul Griffin and rookie Sylvester Norris — may also have worked in his favor. San Antonio earlier Thursday had traded veteran center Billy Paultz to Houston for John Shumate.

"That helped me somewhat, surely," Robisch said. "Billy's been a good player for a lot of years. The trade surprised me."

San Antonio Coach Doug Moe pinned the defeat on missed opportunities.

"Ice (Gervin) misses three free throws in a row, and (Larry) Kenon misses a wide-open jumper. When you're going bad, things mushroom," he said.

San Antonio, 24-24 and the loser of its last seven road games, jumped to an early 7-2 lead. But Cleveland bounced back behind 15 first-half points from Robisch and 10 each from Mike Mitchell and Randy Smith.

The Cavs pushed out to an 11-point edge twice in the third period, the last time at 71-60 with 7:04 to play in the quarter. San Antonio, however, fought back behind 14 third-quarter points from Kenon and 10 from Gervin to lead 88-84 entering the fourth quarter.

Cleveland took the lead for good with 5:33 remaining on a basket by Willie Smith.

The Spurs kept within striking distance, but a three-point attempt by Gervin with 12 seconds left went awry. Fouts Walker then heaved a full-court pass that Bill Willoughby converted with a dunk. After Gervin hit a three-pointer with four seconds to go to pull the Spurs within two points at 114-112, Mitchell scored as time ran out to clinch the victory for Cleveland, now 21-27.

James Silas added 23 points and Kenon finished with 18 for San Antonio. Randy Smith had 21 and Mitchell chipped in 20 for the Cavaliers.

DON WARREN WASHINGTON (AP) — Tight end Don Warren of the Washington Redskins played outstanding football for a rookie in 1979. Redskin Coach Jack Pardee said Warren developed faster than most rookie tight ends, displaying both blocking skills and pass-catching ability.

Warren was somewhat unnoticed by Redskin fans, however. He says that frequently last fall at Washington social gatherings, people would ask him what he did for a living. When he replied that he played for the Redskins, the answer was, "You must be kidding."

TOM JONES SHINES HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Tom Jones of Tulsa, Okla., was the pacesetter among 27 players who successfully completed the PGA Tour Fall Qualifying School at the Waterwood National Country Club.

Jones had a 72-hole score of 288 to top a field of 120 pro aspirants. He was the only man to post two sub-par rounds in the four days of competition, scoring 70s on the first and third rounds.

Chili Dogs Could Do in L.A.'s Tyler

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If the Pittsburgh Steelers want to throttle the Los Angeles Rams' ground attack in Sunday's Super Bowl, here's a tip offered free of charge and no strings attached.

Have somebody set up a chili parlor across the street from the Rose Bowl.

There's no better way — and that includes the combination of Mean Joe Greene, Jack Lambert and L.C. Greenwood — of checking the Rams' ace running back, Wendell Tyler.

The slick homegrown tailback not only has quick feet and phantom moves but also is equipped with an insatiable appetite for bizarre dishes.

He's a sucker for chili dogs. Also he licks his chops with anticipation when he thinks of sugar sandwiches and air pudding.

That's why his teammates call him "Chili Dog" Tyler. It's also the reason, if he's not careful, the best yards-per-carry man in the whole National Football League might eat himself into another profession — a hot dog vendor, for example.

On Sept. 30, the Rams played the St. Louis Cardinals at the Coliseum. Tyler decided he was going to spend the day on the bench — as he had most of the year — so, before the game, he slipped over to a short order parlor across the street and quickly devoured two chili dogs.

The game was only minutes old when the Rams suddenly found themselves short of tailbacks.

"Tyler, into the game," barked the coach.

On the first play, our hero took a good shot in the midsection, and went down groaning. He was escorted to the bench where he promptly yielded up everything in his stomach.

He was virtually hors de combat the rest of the day.

The next week, in New Orleans, Tyler repeated the act with the same agonizing consequences.

"It wasn't that I didn't learn," Tyler sheepishly related this week. "The second time I ate only one. I didn't think one would matter."

Tyler admitted, under gentle probing, that he had unusual gastronomic tastes.

"Did you ever eat sugar sandwiches?" he said. "I love 'em."

A second year man out of UCLA, Tyler had an inauspicious start with the Rams, sidelined with a knee injury after two weeks of the 1978 season and getting only spasmodic play behind Lawrence McCutcheon at the start of this year.

When McCutcheon was hurt, Tyler became the Rams' chief running threat. He finished the season with 1,109 yards and a 5.1 yards per carry average. The average was better than that of Houston's Earl Campbell, the league's MVP.

Tyler predicted that the Most Valuable Player of Sunday's Super Bowl would run for 152 yards and two touchdowns.

"Who is that likely to be?" someone asked.

"Me," Tyler replied. It was a stupid question.

Flyer's Win Streak Ends

By The Associated Press The Philadelphia Flyers' record 35-game unbeaten streak ended recently but now they're going after another National Hockey League mark.

The Flyers trimmed the Chicago Black Hawks 5-1 Thursday night, stretching their home undefeated string to 24 games, 10 short of the record (28-0-6) set by the Montreal Canadiens from Nov. 1, 1976-April 3, 1977.

"The Flyers are better than I ever remember them," said Chicago center Tom Lysiak. "They never let us out of our own end."

Elsewhere, the Boston Bruins trounced the Edmonton Oilers 7-1, the New York Islanders outlasted the Toronto Maple Leafs 9-6, the Atlanta Flames defeated the Colorado Rockies 4-1 and the Hartford Whalers whipped the Pittsburgh Penguins 7-1.

Paul Holmgren scored two goals for the Flyers, who have lost only once in the friendly confines of the Spectrum since March 11, 1979, although the Black Hawks had won two of their last three games in Philadelphia.

Holmgren opened the scoring at 12:30 of the first period, blasting a slap shot from the right faceoff circle past goalie Mike Veisor. Bob Dailey made it 2-0 just 2:06 later, scoring Philadelphia's 11th short-handed goal of the season, a league high, with Holmgren in the penalty box.

"We were well aware of their record against us," said Flyers Coach Pat Quinn. "We didn't want to let them get ahead. I think the key to the game is that we were able to trap their forechecking game."

Grant Mulvey scored for Chicago early in the second period but Holmgren netted his second goal a few minutes later. Dennis Ververgaert and Reggie Leach, with his 30th goal, finished the scoring, while goalie Pete Peeters extended his undefeated string this season to 21 games.

But he was the first to stand when Houston Mayor Jim

Mauri Montgomery: A Cloning Yes, But Still Boring

It never ceases to amaze me what modern technology can accomplish.

Another successful cloning has come forth in our midst and as heralded as it has been in the past—this new clone, in its own right, deserves to be considered a special event.

There's no longer any need to contemplate the moral implications of this man made dilemma because it has made its mark on our lives since its beginnings 14 years ago and any attempt to avoid its thrust into your home and millions of others like yours will only become futile.

It has been branded as perhaps the most wretched by some critics and by others as the most prolific even of the year, but whether you merely have a passing interest of an indescribable yearning to witness the event—it is here to stay for a day.

You guessed it. IT'S BIG—IT'S BOLD—IT'S THE SUPER BOWL!

And for those of you who haven't yet been inundated with pre-game battle buildup, then for you, the contest is scheduled to take place Sunday 3:00 WST-5:00 p.m. our time. BE THERE!

But there is one vast discernable difference between this Super Bowl and bowl games of the past and that is that this game has been lauded by many as having the makings of a complete bore-off.

I'm afraid I must agree.

The Rams, brandishing a quite mediocre 9-7 record, can truly be billed as the NO-Name Team because who are the Los Angeles Rams anyway? Who has even heard of them this entire season until they appeared miraculously as the NFC West Champions and now as a lightweight contender for the game of the year honors?

Some say that an inch is as good as a mile. The Rams have certainly inched their way into the Super Bowl so I'll go along with that, but it would have been much more adequately coined had they simply called it a fluke.

Los Angeles had tried to play with the big boys seven earlier consecutive times as they won their division, yet never managed to get further than the playoffs and have never even smelled the aura of playing in the big bowl.

Well, they finally managed to grasp a bowl spot, but it will be another seven years before they can win it.

The Rams do have some key advantages going into this contest however—that is if you look hard enough for them.

Even though Los Angeles is making its first debut in the Super Bowl and comes into the contest boasting a less than spectacular season late, they somehow managed to get the home turf rights—a feat in itself. They also, because the game is being played right in their back yard, are being permitted to work out on their own practice field rather than a new and unfamiliar one. Both are firsts for any Super Bowl team.

Then there's the fact that the Rams will be able to play on natural grass which they are more accustomed to and which Pittsburgh isn't.

And if you look real hard, you'll find that three Los Angeles assistant coaches—defensive coordinator Bud Carson, receivers coach Lionel Taylor and offensive line coach Dan Radakovich—all went to join the Ram foundation from the Pittsburgh squad.

But, those obvious advantages didn't sway T.V.'s Computer Predictions Forecast. It will hold the Steelers as an 11 point favorite and forbid me to ever go against the computer. There's no way possible to call it any other way.

The Steelers, who are participating in the big game for the fourth time in six years will once again take all the cookies and an upset is only a rumor that will turn into an out-and-out act of falsified information after the two teams settle their differences Sunday.

If you bet on this game, and you bet against the Steelers, then take the advice of an old gambling adage. It goes, "Bet what you can afford to lose."

White Wins Award

HOUSTON (AP) — Southern California romped to a Rose Bowl victory over Ohio State behind the running of Heisman Trophy winner Charles White and now it can be told—a Lombardi Award winner led him.

Trojan offensive guard Brad Budde, who threw key blocks for White last season, earned his own personal reward Thursday night as the winner of the 10th annual Vince Lombardi Award as the nation's outstanding collegiate lineman of 1979.

And in a classic case of role reversal, Budde gave the praise to his running back. Running backs normally laud their offensive linemen for giving them running room.

"It may have looked like a good block cleared the way for Charles, but that wasn't the case," the 6-5, 253-pound senior said. "A lot of times it was all Charles White. I wouldn't be here tonight if it weren't for Charles White."

Budde, the first four-year starter in the history of Southern Cal, was the last to arrive for Thursday night's $125 per plate ceremony in honor of the former Green Bay and Washington coach who died of cancer in 1970.

But he was the first to stand when Houston Mayor Jim

McConn announced the winner. "I never knew the man (Lombardi) but I had great respect for him," Budde said. "The real award goes to the people who are here tonight. They know where it's at."

Dinner officials said 830 tickets were sold for the dinner and final proceeds, which go to the American Cancer Society, would push the total 10-year contribution from the dinner over $500,000.

Budde, son of former Kansas City all-pro guard Ed Budde, won the honor over three other finalists, North Carolina State's Jim Ritcher, earlier named winner of the Outland Trophy; Pittsburgh defensive end Hugh Green and University of Texas defensive tackle Steve McMichael.

Budde was introduced by USC offensive line coach Hudson Houch, who predicted a bright future for his prize pupil in the pros.

"He wasn't so talented that he could just walk in and take a starting job at USC," Houch said. "We have some very talented athletes at USC. But from the start, I think he walked in and said it would be nice to have that starting job and he worked for it."

"His attributes of hard work, dedication—those are the values that carried him through. Brad never missed a workout and he never missed a game. I'm glad we didn't have a rule that said freshmen couldn't play. I think he'll take the same approach when he gets into the pros."

Budde was only the fourth Lombardi winner who had not earlier won the Outland Trophy as the nation's outstanding interior lineman. He was only the second offensive lineman to earn the Lombardi award. The other was Ohio State's John Hicks in 1974.

Last year's winner was Penn State's Bruce Clark.

Basketball Roundup

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

For some time, the Big Ten Conference was hardly a league of gentlemen, known more for rough and ready big guys than anything else. Guards went about their business largely unnoticed.

Recently, however, the image changed drastically with such light-fingered backcourt players last year as Magic Johnson at Michigan State, Kelvin Ransey at Ohio State, Ronnie Lester at Iowa...and this year's star-spangled addition of Isiah Thomas at Indiana.

"Thomas," says Iowa Coach Lute Olson, "has unbelievable leadership about him. He's a born leader."

Olson made his superlative assessment after getting to see the Hoosiers' brilliant freshman first-hand Thursday night, during an 81-69 loss to Indiana.

Thomas, handling himself like a pro, dished out 13 assists, scored 14 points and collected four steals in his best all-around game since joining Bobby Knight's team.

"He is becoming more deeply involved in more things," said Knight. "He has a great physical quality about him...and that's his eyes. He has tremendous vision and looks a lot, as all great passers do. He bangs onto the ball until the last possible second, forcing the man to guard him to make a move."

The game between the 13th-ranked Hawkeyes and 19th-ranked Hoosiers was one of a handful of important Big Ten games Thursday night. In others, second-ranked Ohio State defeated Minnesota 75-70 in overtime and Purdue turned back Northwestern 68-63.

Elsewhere, No. 4 Oregon State beat Washington State 65-63; No. 6 Kentucky whipped Florida 76-63 and No. 20 Tennessee turned back Mississippi 70-61.

Along with Thomas, Indiana got strong performances from Ray Tolbert and Butch Carter. Tolbert scored 18 points and Carter, 17. The Hoosiers had a 38-29 halftime lead and the Hawkeyes never came closer than nine points in the second half. Lester did not play for Iowa because of an injury.

Ransey and Herb Williams scored all 11 of Ohio State's points in overtime to key the Buckeye victory. Williams scored 26 points overall and Ransey, scoring in double figures for the 76th straight game, had 13.

"I didn't like being behind," said Williams, whose Buckeyes overcame a 12-point deficit in the second half. "It gives you butterflies. We must start getting a lead early and putting both halves together."

Drake Morris scored a career-high 29 points and Joe Barry Carroll claimed Purdue's career rebounding record as the Boilermakers defeated Northwestern.

Carroll, who had his 55th straight game in double figures, scored 19 points and pulled down 13 rebounds. His last rebound gave him a career mark of 959 — one more than Terry Dischinger's old record.

Oregon State beat Washington State. The Beavers blew most of an 18-point lead before recovering in time to win their 16th game in 17 this year.

"I have nothing good to say," said an obviously displeased Oregon State Coach Ralph Miller. "I don't think we got what we deserved. We played a walking defense and didn't play with any intensity."

Fred Cowan scored 16 points to lead Kentucky over Florida, getting the Wildcats back on the right track in the Southeastern Conference. Joe Hall's highly-touted team had lost two conference games already.

"I thought we played awfully well," said Hall after the game on Florida's tough home court called "Alligator Alley." "In the early part of the second half, I felt we played better than we have in a long time."

Kentucky opened a 17-point lead late in the first half, and smashed out a hefty 60-39 advantage with 11 minutes to go.

Reggie Johnson led a 15-0 surge midway through the second half to trigger Tennessee past Mississippi State. Johnson finished with 16 points, eight of them coming in a five-minute burst that propelled the Vols into a 12-point lead with 5:18 left in the game.

"It was an important win for us," said Tennessee Coach Don DeVoe, whose team hasn't lost a regular season SEC game since last season when Mississippi State took a double-overtime victory over the Vols.

"We had poise and shot selection in the second half when we needed it the most."

Phoenix Trims Atlanta by 101-99 Margin

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — Going into the final period of Thursday night's National Basketball Association game

Sullivan Leading Phoenix Open

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — There was a little more pressure on Mike Sullivan when he started on the PGA tour this season.

"A three-year agreement with my (financial) sponsors ended at the first of the year," Sullivan said. "So I was just a little apprehensive. But, so far, it hasn't been a struggle."

He won the biggest check of his four-year career on Monday — $24,200 for a tie for second in the rain-delayed Bob Hope Desert Classic — and now holds the first-round lead in the $300,000 Phoenix Open.

"I got some putts to go in last week, played pretty good, and it just seemed to carry over to today," Sullivan said after firing a no-bogey, 6-under-par 65 Thursday.

"But it's just the first round," quickly added Sullivan, who has yet to take a PGA tour title. "I'm happy to be leading, happy to have a 65, but there's a lot of work to do yet."

He held a 1-shot lead over former champion Jerry Pate, J.C. Snead and Andy Bean, who were tied at 66. The group at 67 included Hubert Green, Bruce Lietzke and Dan Pohl.

Tied at 68 were Canadian vet-against Atlanta, Phoenix's Walter Davis and Paul Westphal were the leading scorers.

The Atlanta Hawks tightened

up their defense, and held each to just a single basket from the field in the final quarter. But the two baskets, coupled with a pair of free throws by Westphal, cost the Central Division-leading Hawks a 101-99 decision.

Davis' lone bucket of the period came at the buzzer as he connected on an eight-foot jump shot from the right side to break a 99-99 tie and give the Suns their fourth straight victory.

In other NBA games Thursday night, Cleveland beat San Antonio 116-112 and Detroit downed Washington 110-107.

Davis got the final shot after the Suns, following a timeout, inbound the ball with three seconds left.

"With three seconds you've got something," said Suns Coach John MacLeod. "It's not like you're down to one second and no time at all."

"I couldn't believe that it went in," said Davis, who wound up with 19 points.

He said he felt Atlanta would try and force the game into overtime, "and I figured that they wouldn't want to foul me." Asked if he was nervous, Davis replied, "I don't get nervous. It's just another jump shot."

The Suns had tied the Hawks on five straight points by Westphal.

Atlanta, now 28-20, had bounced back from a 13-point deficit late in the third period to take a 99-94 lead with 59 seconds to go.

But with 52 seconds remaining, Westphal came up with a 25-foot bucket from the top of the circle for 3 points.

After the Hawks committed a 24-second violation, Westphal was fouled by Atlanta's Ron Lee.

Westphal, who had three shots to make two, missed the first free throw but converted the next two to tie the game, 99-99. Atlanta immediately called timeout with 15 seconds left.

"The turning point was definitely Paul's three-pointer," said MacLeod. "He played a heck of a game."

Besides the scoring effort of Westphal and Davis, the Suns also got double-digit scoring from Alvan Adams (17), Len "Truck" Robinson (13) and backup center Jeff Cook (11).

Atlanta was led by Dan Rounfield, who scored eight of his 17 points in the fourth period. Armond Hill had 15 and reserve guard Charlie Criss wound up with 13, including eight in the final period.

Cavaliers 116, Spurs 112 Dave Kobisch scored a career-high 36 points, including 21 in the second half, as Cleveland withstood a 42-point performance by NBA scoring leader

George Gervin. The Cavaliers built a pair of 11-point leads early in the third quarter but the Spurs rallied to take an 88-84 lead going into the final period. A basket by Willie Smith put Cleveland on top to stay 103-102 with 5:33 left. Robisch, who scored 11 points in the third quarter, added 10 more in the final period.

Pistons 110, Bullets 107

John Long scored 12 of his 24 points, including the game-winner, in the final period as lowly Detroit extended its modest winning streak to two games. Prior to beating Chicago on Sunday, the Pistons had dropped seven in a row and 15 of their previous 16 games.

Long's tip-in with 20 seconds remaining put the Pistons on top 108-107 after Washington had rallied from a 10-point third-period deficit and gone in front 107-106 on two free throws by Greg Ballard with 38 seconds left. After Long's basket, Bob McAdoo added two free throws with four seconds left. McAdoo topped the Pistons with 29 points while Ballard had 24 for Washington.

Western Economies Vulnerable

American Economic Machine Hobbled by Distant Empires

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Great American Economic Machine, once fabled and envied
the world over, is now imperiled
by the economic and political upheavals emanating from distant desert empires.

Recent turmoil in Iran, Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and a troubling incident in Mecca, Saudi Arabia, underscore the vulnerability of U.S. and Western economies.

"Our nation is running considerable risk by relying for a large part of its energy resources on fragile and uncertain supply lines," said a somber G.

William Miller, the secretary of the Treasury, during his recent tour of Gulf oil nations.

The instability along the Persian Gulf and the Arabian Sea poses a serious and longterm threat; escalating crises in the region raise the possibility of sharp reductions in oil supplies
and present a strategic opportunity for the Soviet Union to control Western access to eastern oil.

Events in Iran and Afghanistan and, to a lesser extent, in Saudi Arabia have raised serious doubts about the security of Middle Eastern oil fields.

The economic future of 222-million Americans is tied to events in the Persian Gulf.
Aside from oil, there is little the United States would need from the nations of Saudi Arabia, Iran, Iraq, Kuwait or the United Arab Emirates. Because it is their only resource, these countries guard it jealously.

It doesn't matter so much whether it's the United States or some other country, such as Japan, which buys the oil of a specific country. The important thing is that there be sufficient oil available to meet total world demand and at a price that won't bankrupt those who must have it.

Saudi Arabia is the most important of the Persian Gulf nations for the United States because it has the most oil, proven reserves of 165-billion barrels and probably more.

Saudi Arabia is the world's largest oil exporter at 9.5 million barrels a day. Of this, the United States buys 1.2 million barrels, or 20 percent of its daily imports.

Oil trade created a severe economic shock for the industrial world in 1973 when OPEC raised prices by 300 percent. At virtually the same time, Arab producers clamped an embargo
on exports to the United States because of U.S. support for Israel in its 1973 war with Egypt.

The one-two "price and supply" punch pushed the U.S.
economy into its worst economic downturn since the Depression, and the economy still hasn't fully recovered. A recession is thought imminent.

On the supply side, the turmoil in Iran last year provided clear evidence of how instability
in the region can threaten U.S. supplies.

The loss of 2 million barrels a day of Iranian production prompted long gas lines in some parts of the United States. And only after Saudi Arabia agreed to step up production did the shortage abate.

But now the Saudis are near what is believed to be their maximum sustainable output,
and there is no one else that the United States could count on to pick up the slack if there is another major cutback in production somewhere else.

The recent attack in Mecca by several hundred armed dissidents on the Moslem world's major shrine showed that the Saudis also face internal problems. American officials shudder at the implications for the American economy if Iranian-type turmoil should strike Saudi Arabia.

While the industrial world made some progress in 1979 in reducing oil consumption, new competition for oil is expected
later in this decade from the Soviet Union. Though Russia is now self-sufficient, intelligence reports say it could need to import oil for its European satellites as early as 1985.

Against this background, the Soviet move into Afghanistan, bordering Iran, raises suspicions about Russia's longer-term intentions.

While the rest of the world
adapts to high oil prices and uncertain supplies, the wealth accumulates in the Persian Gulf nations.

Earnings exceeded expenditures for all OPEC countries last year by an estimated $45 billion, with most of the surplus concentrated in the Persian Gulf nations, especially in Kuwait and Saudi Arabia.
The surplus is expected to increase to $69 billion in 1981.

U.S. officials say candidly
that a major problem for the 1980s will be to find sound investments for oil surpluses, because without a secure place to put their money, OPEC nations
may be reluctant to produce oil
for earnings they don't need.
Both the Saudis and Kuwaitis already have made known their desire to cut production, and in the meantime, oil-rich nations are thought to be buying gold
and sending its price to the roof.

'Thy Kingdom Come' Unity Week Theme

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

New ecumenical notes were in the air as Christians of varied denominations on Friday begin their annual week of prayer for unity.

"Thy kingdom come," goes
the theme for the observance, chosen by representatives of Roman Catholicism, Protestantism and Eastern Orthodoxy, and taken from the Lord's prayer in Matthew 6:10.

A litany for special joint services planned in many communities adds a repeated refrain from Christ's plea in John 17:21, that followers "all may be one" so the world will believe.

The Rev. John F. Hotchkiss of Washington, director of the Catholic bishops' ecumenical committee, says the spread of joint worship is "more significant than any other advances"
being made toward unity.

"It is an open and unfolding field," he says, noting that mixed Protestant-Catholic services used to be "carefully sanitized" to avoid contrasts in styles, but now openly bring out the differences.

While official inter-church
dialogues continue to enlarge possibilities for a "unified Christian family," he says, it is "through advances in common worship that family begins actually to exist."

Besides the special services,
however, there were these developments toward unity on the upper echelons:

Pope John Paul II was court-
ing Eastern Orthodoxy, as manifested by his recent meeting in Istanbul, Turkey with Eastern Orthodox Patriarch Dimitrios.
They authorized the start of new theological discussions aimed at healing the break between them

nine centuries ago.

"We affirm anew our firm will to do all that is possible to hasten the day when full communion between the Catholic church and the Orthodox church will be reestablished," they said.

Meanwhile, top-ranking Roman Catholics were joining with Lutherans in plans to observe the 450th anniversary in June of Lutheranism's historic Augsburg Confession.

The 1530 declaration of faith,
the founding document of Lutheranism, marked its break from Rome. But some Catholic leaders now say that in its basic intent, it can be seen as acceptable to Catholicism.

It registers "evident hope that unity be maintained among us," notes Catholic Bishop Ernest Uterkoefler of Charleston, N.C., adding that abuses to which it objected have been corrected.

At the same time, a major drive toward inter-Protestant unity took on new vigor, with the Consultation on Church Union setting a special session
Jan. 22-24 in Cincinnati to act on a proposal for a unified ministry.

Ten Protestant denominations, totaling more than 20 million members, are involved in the consultation, now in its 20th year, but are facing a landmark decision in the process.

If representatives approve the document for establishing a common ministry — a stumbling block in the past — the plan would go to the denominations for their action.

Total Income Up American Savings Fall to 30 Year Low

WASHINGTON (AP) — The
total income of Americans increased 12 percent last year,
nearly keeping pace with inflation, but savings fell to a 30-year low, the government said today.

As consumer prices have been increasing at an average of 1 percent a month in recent months, the December income gain showed that total income is nearly keeping pace with inflation. However, after deducting tax increases, the gain in income trailed price increases.

The Commerce Department said the after-tax per capita income of Americans at the end of 1979 was $7,653, a gain of $614
or 8.7 percent from a year earlier.

Total personal income increased 1.1 percent in December to $2,022 trillion. Income had hit the $2 trillion mark for the first time in November,
when the monthly increase also was 1.1 percent.

Total tax payments increased 15.8 percent during the year,
with the average tax payment $1,357.

Savings during 1979 averaged 4.5 percent of income, the lowest since 1949, when the average was 3.6 percent. The savings rate in November of 3.3 percent was the lowest since the Commerce Department began

keeping monthly savings figures in 1959.

Savings equaled 4.9 percent of income in 1978. The decline in savings reflects a effort by Americans to maintain their living standards in a period of high inflation.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Calories used at rest

DEAR DR. LAMB — I lost 15 to 20 pounds simply by pushing myself away from the table. I cut out breakfast and had an occasional salad for lunch and a small dinner consisting of solid yogurt or cottage cheese. Of course, I did this at school while I was away from home and I had good results.

Since I've been home I've started to gain weight. I still have one meal with low-calorie fruits for the day. My dinners have been changed
and include chicken salad in larger quantities. I'm fairly active and run three to five miles every day which should burn up those nasty calories.
I'm discouraged and unhappy
whenever the scales point upwards. What can I do to avoid this? Could it be the result of a metabolism problem?

DEAR READER — It's
unlikely that it's a metabolism problem other than getting more calories than your body is using, which is pretty normal metabolism. You've already proved that you can lose weight if you restrict your calories.

I'm not sure that I like the kind of diet that you've described for yourself and for that reason I'm sending you
The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet. It will provide a balanced diet approach that you can use as a basis to control your weight.
Other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York,
NY 10019.

You're very wise to maintain a good exercise program
as it is very helpful in aiding people to lose unwanted fat or to keep from getting fat.

A lot of people who are moderately overweight think they have a metabolic problem. This is so prevalent that I've come around to advising patients and doctors to have an old-fashioned basal metabolism (B.M.R.) test done. This is not to find out whether you have a normal thyroid or not,
you can find that out with a simple blood test, but rather to establish how many calories a person's body needs on a daily basis.

All that needs to be done is to take the old B.M.R. test and find out how much oxygen
your body uses at rest for an hour. If the amount of oxygen used is multiplied by 4,825, that will tell you how many calories your own body uses every hour at rest. This can then be multiplied by 24 to find out how many calories
your body should use in a day's time if you rested in bed
all day.

Clearly, the diet will not need to be restricted below that number of calories for a person to lose weight. Any physical activity over and above the resting requirements will result in using body fat stores. This will eliminate all these arguments about whether a person has small bones, small muscles,
large bones or is a metabolic freak who is so unusual that he will gain weight on 200 calories a day. Why not be objective about it and have such a simple test done?

How many calories your body uses at rest is related to how much of your body is fat

and how much is muscle and other tissue. Fat tissue doesn't use many calories.

If you have trouble explaining this to your doctor, take my column along with you when you tell him why you want a basal metabolism test done.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I had some rectal bleeding and went in for an examination
and the doctor did a proto-scope, barium enemas and all the usual things. He said I had internal hemorrhoids, muscle spasms in the colon and a few moderate diverticula. The doctor had his nurse tell me that the situation was normal
for me and to continue as I am. I am 47 years old, don't drink, smoke or take in caffeine or other drugs. I am trim and in general good health.

What I want to know
besides the cause and the meaning of these findings is what I could possibly do to lessen or remove them. Irritation can cause cancer, can't it? Is it a matter of trying to live as calm a life as possible
or exercising or perhaps eating or avoiding eating certain things?

DEAR READER — First,
let me say you did the right thing by having an examination. Anyone who has unexplained rectal bleeding must have an examination because it is sometimes the first sign of cancer. You can't just guess that it's due to hemorrhoids.

Not only that, some hemor-roids pop out from the pressure caused by a tumor further up in the rectum above
the hemorrhoid area.

I'm glad your doctor didn't find anything that was really serious or life threatening and you'll be happy to know that irritations of the sort that you're referring to do not cause cancer.

Obviously, I can't cover all your problems in this one column but I can send you three different Health Letters that will give you a lot of information on them: Number 13-12, Hemorrhoids: New Treatments For An Old Affliction; Number 5-6, Div-
erticulosis; and Number 2-1, Irritable Or Spastic Colon And Constipation. Other readers who want any one of these issue can send 75 cents for each with a long, stamped,
self-addressed envelope for it.
Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O.
Box 1551, Radio City Station,
New York, NY 10019.

The best thing you can do is to develop good bowel habits.
That will help relieve the colon spasms which some people think are the cause of the diverticula, those little pocket-ets that develop on the side of the colon. Your bowel training will be discussed in the issue on spastic colon that I'm sending you.

The bowel training program should include adding an adequate amount of bulk to your diet, particularly cereal fiber as found in whole wheat cereals. This may cause an increase in gas formation during the first three weeks but if you stick with it and get through that phase, adding an appreciable amount of bran to your diet will help to improve your colon function and relieve the spasms.

Bran absorbs water and will soften your undigested food material so that it's less inclined to irritate your hemorrhoids.

Now if you just have internal hemorrhoids but no external components, you'll find out that many of these can be treated with injections. If they continue to cause you any problems, you might see a physician about possible treatment. Not all hemor-roids require surgical excision. But, of course, it depends on whether they're just internal or also involve an extension to external areas.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Restore permanent press

DEAR POLLY — Can you tell me how to restore the permanent press in wash and wear slacks? — E.J.W.
DEAR E.J.W. — The only thing I know is to wring a cloth out of white vinegar and use as a pressing cloth when doing the creases. It is easy to do when they require more touching up. — POLLY
DEAR POLLY — I like to crochet, knit and do hand work instead of wasting time. Today while waiting in the doctor's office I found a way to protect the little "stork" embroidery scissors I use for snipping threads. I simply but carefully stick the end of these scissors into a small porous cork. — EVELYN DEAR EVELYN — I have a tiny needlepoint case that my stork scissors fit in. It is quite pretty and the same idea could be done with crewel embroidery or even very firm knitting or crochet. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — To keep bed pillows smelling clean and fresh, especially in a guest room or when seldom used, put a fabric softener sheet that has a nice fragrance between the pillow and pillow protector. I have received many compliments on the nice smell. — MRS. F.S.

DEAR POLLY — I once read that if one is bothered with ants, sprigs of mint should be laid on the counter near the sink or wherever the ants are seen. I had the ants but no mint so I laid some branches of catnip around. The ants disappeared and have not come back. The dried catnip is still on the counter. Since then a friend has given me a peppermint plant that I will keep in the house so I will have some mint this winter. —
SIBYL

DEAR POLLY — If you compost your leaves you can save a lot of time and trips to the compost pile with the help of a long sheet of heavy plastic. Place the plastic next to an elongated pile of leaves. Use the rake to push the leaves on the sheet. Pick up one end and pull a large amount to the compost area very easily. — JOYCE

DEAR POLLY — Most eyeglasses steam up during the cold weather, especially when one is shopping and going from store to store. To eliminate I rub mine with shaving cream and never have any trouble. — KATE

DEAR POLLY — Do not throw away those lightweight dress boxes. Cut them into pieces that are the right size for your grocery shopping list and find it so much easier to mark things off as you put them in your cart. This certainly is better than trying to mark on paper at the store. I always keep a few extra in my purse. — J.B.

DEAR POLLY — When I make a pie I usually end up with too much dough. I flatten it out, rub with butter, sprinkle with brown sugar and cinnamon and roll up like a jelly roll. This is put in another pan and baked while the pie bakes. The family thinks it a real treat.

As a fast way to organize and find coupons when I shop I put them in old envelopes and label each one with a word such as cereals, snacks, household cleaners etc. This certainly saves time for anyone who uses a lot of coupons. — BRENDA

DEAR POLLY — To clean the inside of shoes and house slippers as well as kill any perspiration odor I go over them (inside only) with a cotton ball I have soaked in rubbing alcohol. Some leather has an odor that transfers itself to the feet.
— MARY

DEAR POLLY — My pie shells used to be a disaster — they came out of the oven in terrible shape. Just by chance I discovered the cure. I had made the dough and had to do something else before rolling it out. I left it on the kitchen counter, slightly flattened and in plastic, and there it stayed for an hour and a half. The shell came out perfect. I have repeated this procedure about 15 times before writing and it works
every time. — MRS. S.S.

GOD IS AN INEXHAUSTIBLE SOURCE OF POWER

We have been constantly hearing about the "energy crisis", which has resulted in the desperate search for new sources of power, both natural and artificial. Whatever the source, the goal is the continuation of our good life and the further achievements of progress in every aspect of it. Human beings also need a continuing supply of power in order to accomplish their own personal goals, whatever they may be. God is a never-ending source of the power you need, so go to your Church and learn about this unlimited resource that is always available to you.

A mighty fortress is our God,
A bulwark never failing...
