DSGH will borrow $150,000 for bills

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

Raymond Schroeder was elected chairman of the board of Deaf Smith County Hospital District Tuesday night after four newly-elected directors were installed.

Schroeder, principal of Hereford Junior High, succeeds Ralph Detten as chairman. County Judge Tom Simons administered oaths of office to Craig Smith, Dr. Stan Fry Jr., John Perrin and Boyd Foster. Smith, the only incumbent, was named vice chairman of the board, and Foster was elected as secretary.

In other business last night, the board approved a short-term operating loan of $150,000; designated the controller as the official Records Management Officer; discussed a contract for emergency room physician services; and heard reports from the administrator, chief of medical staff, and controller.

Administrator Gary Moore reported the new ambulance should be in service by Friday. He also gave brief reports on the Home Health Service and the Quality Assurance committee. Dr. Fry was appointed as the board member to that committee.

During the operations report by Phillis Morrison, controller, it was pointed out that the cash flow was not adequate to take care of all the accounts payables. Morrison said a combination of factors led to the problem, including purchase of equipment, slow Medicare payments, accounts receivables, and the fact that some major supply companies are demanding faster payments.

Morrison recommended the district borrow $150,000 on a six-month term to catch up with the accounts payables, and directors approved the action. Moore pointed out that the district receives low-interest terms with its depository agreement with Hereford State Bank.

The April operations report showed a net profit of $2,941 but the cash-flow statement indicated a shortage of $14,927. The accounts payable total for 30 days or more had accumulated to $132,022. Total revenue for April was $483,050 and operating expenses totalled $480,109.

The hospital admitted 181 patients in April, while the daily census of 34 was the same as a year ago. There were 80 surgical procedures for the month and 492 outpatient visits. There were 68 ambulance runs for the month.

Dr. Tim Revell, chief of the medical staff, reported the more than 25 doctors and medical personnel had completed an Advanced Cardiac Life Support course over the weekend, thus receiving ACLS certification for another year.

The board is negotiating a contract with Southwest Medical Associates to supply an emergency room doctor on weekends, and Dr. Revell asked that a penalty be considered when a doctor is not provided. He reported that local doctors had to "cover" the ER on several occasions. The board instructed Moore to negotiate the issue.

All board members were present for the meeting--Schroeder, Smith, Foster, Dr. Fry, Detten, Perrin and Dr. A.T. Mims.

National Nursing Home Week

Residents, employees and friends of Golden Plains Care Center in Hereford held a balloon launch this week to celebrate National Nursing Home Week. The week is part of the activities of Older Americans Month in May. Mayor Wes Fisher read a proclamation for the week in Hereford at the event, which also featured a reception and special program.

Earth, Beware!

There may be an asteroid out there with our name on it

WASHINGTON (AP) - An engineering society thinks it's time the world arms itself against asteroids that might collide with Earth.

Nuclear warheads, suggests the American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics, may be needed to protect the planet against mountain-sized space boulders that might smash into the Earth at 46,000 miles an hour.

"We have the technology needed to detect and track such an object and possibly to divert it from an impending impact," the AIAA said. "We would be derelict if we did nothing."

In a position paper, the society suggested that searches of the heavens be increased, perhaps by spotting relatively inexpensive telescopes around the globe. It also called for a study of ways to "deflect or destroy, or significantly alter the orbits of, asteroids predicted to impact the Earth."

Vice President Dan Quayle referred to the position paper and a longstanding theory that asteroids could be captured and mined for minerals when he addressed the AIAA's annual meeting earlier this month.

"Those same asteroids which promise material riches can be a threat as well," he said. "In 1965, a small asteroid exploded high over Canada with a force equivalent to an atomic bomb."

Asteroids are rocky bodies that orbit the sun between Mars and Jupiter. The ones that have been observed range in size from 579 miles in diameter down to about 700 feet.

Some have struck Earth in the past. Only last year, an asteroid bigger than an aircraft carrier and traveling at 46,000 mph passed within 400,000 miles of the Earth - a distance less than twice as far as the moon.

"Such an object, if it struck the Earth today, could cause a disaster of unprecedented proportions," the AIAA paper said. "Although the probability of such an occurrence is very small, its consequences - i.e. the casualty rate - could be enormous."

Johan Benson, the institute's administrator for public policy, said, "It has been speculated that a nuclear weapon could be used to destroy or deflect an asteroid if it was discovered a year or so before impact."

Use of a missile would depend on the composition and size of the asteroid, Benson said. "It could destroy it, but if exploded properly, it could simply propel it off into another orbit."

The AIAA suggested that an international agreement would be needed for nuclear interception and said, "This is a particularly good time to consider an international effort led jointly by the U.S. and the Soviet Union."

Another defense measure, Benson said, would be to "soft-land" a propulsion system on the asteroid and slowly push it into an orbit that would miss Earth.

A six-mile-diameter asteroid 65 million years ago is popularly believed to have caused a global catastrophe that destroyed the dinosaurs.

"Earth-orbit crossing asteroids clearly present a danger to the Earth and its inhabitants," said the AIAA. "Perhaps we have been lucky: since 1908 there have been one direct hit, one atmospheric entry and at least two near misses."

Legislature approves plan

AUSTIN (AP) - After lawmakers sent Gov. Bill Clements a school finance reform plan that he's threatened to veto, he met with legislative leaders in what he called a new attempt to forge a compromise on the issue.

"We're all giving our best efforts to come to some kind of a meeting of the minds," Clements said Tuesday, after meeting with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis.

If they reach an agreement, he said, the Legislature still could change its reform plan.

But if compromise eludes them, and Clements carries through on his veto threat, Hobby and Lewis said they would try to muster the two-thirds vote needed to enact the measure anyway.

"I think there will probably be an attempt to override my veto," Clements said. "I think that attempt will fail. Then we'll get down to serious business."

The 31-member Senate approved the school finance reform plan - passed by a legislative conference committee after earlier attempts to compromise with Clements broke down - on a voice vote.

With seven lawmakers absent in the 150-member House, the vote was 91-52, split largely along party lines.

Lewis, D-Fort Worth, said that doesn't necessarily mean an override attempt would fail: "It's not over until it's over."

The reform bill is meant to use $555 million in new funding next school year; without additional revenue, money could be shifted from property-rich to property-poor school districts.

The $13.5 billion-a-year school finance system relies on a combination of state aid, local property taxes and some federal money.

The Democratic-controlled Legislature and Republican governor are in their third special session to try to overhaul the school finance system. The last session ended without a plan after Clements vetoed a half-cent sales tax increase needed to pay for last session's $555 million reform bill.

The Texas Supreme Court in a unanimous opinion last year ruled the school finance system unconstitutional, and told the state to devise a way to make more money available to property-poor school districts.

If lawmakers and Clements don't enact a plan by June 1, court master William Kilgarlin will propose one. He has warned that he can't raise state education revenue, so his plan would have to shift state aid from property-rich to property-poor school districts.

Kilgarlin - a former Supreme Court justice who left that court in 1988 - was sworn in Tuesday as court master by State District Judge Scott McCown.

Also sworn in as associate masters were two school finance experts: Billy Walker of Austin, former deputy superintendent for the Ector County school district; and Jose Cardenas of San Antonio, former superintendent of the Edgewood school district.

"We've been charged by the court to draw a plan that equalizes the money that goes to the districts, and we're serious about it," Kilgarlin said.

"That's got to serve as some kind of notice to the Legislature that if they don't do their job, we're going to step in and do it for them," he said.

Lewis said a court-written plan would be "a raw, blatant example of the 'Robin Hood' approach."

"That's going to be devastating on many, many school districts in the state that are right now struggling just to stay afloat already to meet their obligations," he said.

First flood crest to strike today

LIBERTY (AP) - The first crest of what is expected to be the worst flood in 80 years could inundate 200 square miles of bottom land near the Trinity River today, a river authority spokesman said.

Meanwhile, Texarkana area officials reported the first death from flooding along the Red River in Northeast Texas with the drowning Tuesday of a 25-year-old Mexican national.

Authorities said the man, who had been hired to clean up debris in Bowie County was swept away by floodwaters.

In Southeast Texas, some 7,000 residents of low lying areas have been warned to leave the region below the Lake Livingston Dam because of the impending flood waters, which began sloshing their way southward over the weekend.

"The drainage basin of the Trinity River is 18,000 square miles," said

Grady Manis, Trinity River Authority southern region manager. "Below Lake Livingston Dam, there's about 990 square miles. Maybe 20 percent of that is probably going to be underwater at the height of this."

The TRA began releasing record amounts of water from the Lake Livingston Dam Tuesday when 88,000 cubic feet per second surged through the gates to the lower river basin.

By early today, Manis said TRA expected to increase the flow to more than 90,000 cfs. The previous record was set in 1973 when 75,000 cfs were released from the dam.

"We'll have the first crest tomorrow," Manis said late Tuesday. "We should be at the mid-90,000s, as far as the discharge. But I think about the 21st (of May) is going to be the worst day."

He said heavy rainfall in the Crockett area will force dam discharges up to 100,000 cfs or better by May 21. But Manis said the heavy flow from about 95,000 cfs to 100,000 cfs is likely to continue for six to eight days.

Already the amount of water released from the dam by 8 a.m. today could have filled the 50-square mile lake if it had been empty on April 17, Manis said.

In Liberty County, officials are preparing for the brunt of the surging waters.

"We've got between 15 to 20 subdivisions surrounded by water, and we'll probably start to see some water in some homes Thursday or Friday in the low-lying areas," said Jim Mitchum, emergency management coordinator.

County Judge Dempsey Henley said predictions of the flood's magnitude have been right on target.

"We've been saying that this was going to be a truly devastating flood, and it looks like it will be," Henley said. "We don't have any historical data (with which) to compare what the damages and losses could be."

At the Rattlesnake Ranch in Houston County, part owner and manager John Merriwether estimates losses in cattle, homes, fences and property will exceed $1 million.

"We lost cattle, but how many cattle, we don't know," said Merriwether, ranch owner of the 3,700-head ranch located about 85 miles north of Houston. "Some of these cattle that got in the water, probably a lot of them are floating now."

Lt. Gen. Henry Hatch of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in Washington flew over the area Tuesday to see if corps projects have been successful during the rising waters.

State officials criticize Texas' private prisons

AUSTIN (AP) - The use of private prisons as a way to alleviate the overcrowded state prison system is in jeopardy, officials said after receiving a report that outlined serious problems in Texas' four for-profit facilities.

"The future of private units very much depends on how these particular problems are addressed and solved," F.L. Stephens of San Angelo, a member of the Texas Board of Criminal Justice, said Tuesday.

Board members strongly criticized the operators of the private prisons, saying they found severe problems in the facilities.

An audit by the state prison system found the private prisons lack major education, work and medical service programs for the inmates.

The audit also showed the companies had not filled many important positions in the prisons and that several instances of excessive force by guards on inmates had been dismissed as the result of inexperience.

Terrell said the operators - Corrections Corporation of America and Wackenhut Corrections Corp. - had yet to live up to promises they made when awarded contracts with the state to build the facilities to hold state prisoners.

Each company operates two 500-bed pre-release centers, where inmates stay for a short period of time before their release. CCA's prisons are in Venus and Cleveland and Wackenhut's facilities are in Kyle and Bridgeport. All the prisons have been in operation for less than one year.

Terrell appointed a subcommittee to oversee correcting the deficiencies outlined in the state prison audit and also asked the state prison staff to update the board on how it would cancel the prison contracts if the problems aren't resolved.

A representative of CCA said they were aware of some of the problems and were taking action, but Wackenhut representatives said they were disappointed state prison officials made the report public without giving them a chance to analyze it first.

The audit found many of the inmates were not enrolled in an education or a work program, or were only working or going to school part-time.

The audit also found that there were "significant delays" in providing medical care and that the private prison officials refused to cooperate with the state in providing information.

Stanwallis charged with fraud

AUSTIN (AP) - A former Texas House member from Amarillo, Charles J. "Chip" Staniswalis, was indicted Tuesday on theft and fraud charges, prosecutors said.

Staniswalis, a Republican, spent four terms in the House from 1981 through 1988.

Officials said Staniswalis indicated he would turn himself in to face the charges.

He did not seek a fifth term and ran for the 13th congressional district seat but was defeated in the Republican Party primary in 1988.

He was charged with three counts of tampering with a government record in the filing of false travel vouchers while a member of the Texas Legislature, prosecutors said.

The fourth count alleged theft of money from the state in an amount between $750 and $20,000, according to the Travis County district attorney's office.

The charges stemmed from activities during 1988, officials said.

All charges are third-degree felonies, punishable by two to 10 years in prison and a fine of up to $5,000.

The Public Integrity Unit of the Travis County District Attorney's office presented evidence to grand jurors after investigating Staniswalis for several months, officials said.

Williams may be wimping out on Richards

DALLAS (AP) - Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams has not appeared with Ann Richards at a series of planned forums and meetings, but campaign officials say he is not ducking his Democratic opponent.

"The events we do, we want to focus on our candidate and our message," Williams campaign spokesman Bill Kenyon told The Dallas Morning News. "We're not doing any joint appearances."

A spokesman for the Richards campaign said it appears Williams is not eager to share the stage with Ms. Richards.

Both campaigns have been in preliminary discussions over public debates before the November general election, but it appeared unlikely the two candidates will meet in the next few months.

In the weeks since Williams and Ms. Richards emerged as their parties' nominees, the two gubernatorial candidates have been sought for public appearances.

Although Ms. Richards' campaign said she is willing to appear with her opponent, Williams' officials have served notice that their candidate only will appear alone.

Other events in which Williams has not accepted joint appearances include a Greater Houston Partnership luncheon next month, the Buckholz cotton festival on June 2, a still-unscheduled Rotary Club of Houston meeting and the Floyd County centennial celebration on May 26.

Bill Hale, Williams' coordinator in Floyd County, said both candidates will appear May 26 at different times with news conferences scheduled for separate locations. "It just works a little better," he said. "More harmony."

Smith chided the GOP nominee for his reluctance to appear on the same stage as Ms. Richards, but Kenyon dismissed the criticism, noting that Ms. Richards has made few public appearances since winning the nomination in a brutal primary fight.

Improve overall health by changing your lifestyle

More than 48 million Americans are seriously overweight. Every year, millions subject themselves to deprivation diets in an effort to slim down.

Medical experts report that a large number of these diets are not effective because they do not change lifestyle habits. In other words, they do not teach healthier eating and exercise habits. One that does, the Rockport Walking Program, is an easy-to-use, customized lifestyle program that helps individuals lose weight and teaches ways to maintain that weight loss and improve overall health.

A scientific study at the Institute for Aerobic Research in Dallas has shown that moderate daily exercise, as simple as a daily walk, can lead to improved overall health and a longer life by reducing the risk of heart disease and cancer. The Rockport Walking Program (RWP) combines this exercise element with an American Heart Association approved low-fat diet.

Funded by The Rockport Company of Marlboro, Mass.-manufacturers of walking, dress and casual shoes-the RWP was developed by Dr. James Rippe at the University of Massachusetts Medical School where it was clinically tested and proven effective. Test subjects who followed both the walking and nutrition plan lost an average of 17 pounds (90 percent in the form of body fat) over a period of 16 weeks and improved their relative cardiovascular fitness level.

The RWP book begins with basic information on the importance of regular exercise and how to detect hidden fats in the foods you eat. To measure their cardiovascular fitness, individuals can take simple walking tests and then begin a 30-day walking program based on their results.

Three withdraw from Colonial NIT

FORT WORTH (AP) - The late withdrawals of Andy Bean, Sandy Lyle and Calvin Peete reduced to 109 the invitational field for the Colonial golf tournament.

The starting line-up for the $1 million event that starts Thursday was slimmed down even further by the presence of Roger Maltbie.

Maltbie will be playing in at the Colonial Country Club, but he's 20 percent smaller than he was at the start of the year, having shed 45 pounds - "20 percent of my body weight," he said - since the Super Bowl in New Orleans.

Maltbie, winner of five titles and more than $1.6 million in a 16-season PGA Tour career, said he has gone from 225 pounds to 180, and is looking at the loss of about five more.

Then, he said, he hopes to "level off. But that might be hard to do. Once it starts losing, the body wants to keep on losing," the 38-year-old said.

Maltbie said he made the decision to shed some poundage immediately after watching his beloved San Francisco 49ers win the Super Bowl.

"I probably put on six or seven pounds just the week I was there, eating all that cajun food. When it was over, I just suddenly decided to quit drinking. Just like that. Everyone I know who successfully quit smoking just suddenly decided to quit," he said.

"That's what happened to me. I just decided I'd quit drinking."

"I told my wife I was going to quit drinking for 10 weeks and she said, 'Oh, yeah. Sure.'"

"Well, I figured if I was going to quit drinking, I might as well go all the way and go on a diet, too," Maltbie said.

So, on his return home to Los Gatos, Calif., he signed up at a weight-loss center, found a diet he could handle and stuck to it.

"I modified it a little, so it could be something I could live with on the road. It hasn't been tough at all," said

Maltbie, who has gained a new wardrobe.

"You can only take in pants so much. I'd reached the point my back pockets were overlapping," he said.

"Everything changed. Pants, shirts. Everything. My ring size is different now," said Maltbie.

His game changed, too. While he was undergoing the weight loss, he experimented with a switch-hitting putting style. He'd put right-handed on putts breaking right to left, and left-handed on putts breaking left to right.

"I wasn't playing any good before the diet, so I don't know how much it may have changed because of the weight loss," said Maltbie, who ranks a distant 142nd on the year's money-winning list.

"I think I've probably lost a little strength. My weekend scoring average has gone up, indicating I may be tiring a little. But it's nothing dramatic."

"I think most of it is that everything is different. You have to get things in your head, you have to adjust your thinking."

"Right now, I'm thinking I'm thin. I'm not going to play good until I can stop thinking that and start thinking 'this is me. This is the way I am now.'"

"It's coming along." Maltbie will take his new look against a field that includes defending champion Ian Baker-Finch, two-time U.S. Open winner Curtis Strange, British Open title-holder Mark Calcavecchia and PGA champ Payne Stewart, who has won twice and finished second once in his last four starts.

Other major figures include Tom Kite, Ben Crenshaw, Bruce Lietzke, former Colonial winner Peter Jacobsen, Tom Watson and rookie Robert Gamez.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by CBS.

Hayes recalls boyhood at HOF ceremony

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) - As he awaited induction into the Basketball Hall of Fame, Elvin Hayes' thoughts turned to Rayville, La., and a little boy who had "walked behind the house and prayed that someday he would become one of the best basketball players in the world."

"It's a long road," said Hayes, who grew up to be an All-America forward at Houston and the third-leading scorer in the history of the NBA, "... to see a kid's dream and then be able to touch that dream and have it become reality."

Also enshrined Tuesday in this city where basketball began nearly a century ago were Earl Monroe, Dave Bing and the late Neil Johnston, the Philadelphia Warriors' hook-shot (please see HAYES, Page 5)

UIL allows Tivy to remain in playoffs

AUSTIN (AP) - Kerrville Tivy High School will remain in the state baseball playoffs, but without its starting third baseman.

The University Interscholastic League suspended Marty Johnson Tuesday for the remainder of the season after he shoved an umpire during a game with New Braunfels April 20.

The UIL state executive committee also issued a reprimand to senior second baseman Eric Harris who cursed at the same umpire after being ejected from that game.

Because of the conduct of coaches, players and fans from Kerrville, umpire Dennis Meyers awarded the game - tied 10-10 - to New Braunfels in a forfeit.

Meyers also alleged that Kerrville Athletic Director Donnie Laurence incited players and fans to more protests and approached him three times after the game had been called and offered him a deal not to report the incident to the UIL.

"I've been made in this thing to look like a pretty bad guy," said Laurence. "I am concerned about people telling lies. I'll be willing to take a lie detector test any day of the week."

Laurence, who has a son playing on the team and has been before the state executive committee three times in the past year, was reprimanded. The high school was reprimanded and placed on probation for a year.

Kerrville Tivy, 18-7 and the District 28AAAAA runnerup, played Austin Anderson last night in the second round of the playoffs.

The Kerrville incident is the latest among many complaints the past year by game officials that they are being abused by coaches, players and fans.

During one two-week period this spring, the UIL dealt with 16 similar cases.

Reds off to best start in looong time

By The Associated Press

Making history isn't the easiest thing to do for the Cincinnati Reds. After all, this is a club that started out as the Red Stockings in 1869 and made their share of news throughout the next 100 years or so.

On Tuesday night at Riverfront Stadium, the Reds added another chapter.

Cincinnati beat Pittsburgh 5-4 in 11 innings for its best start of the century. The Reds' 23-7 record is the best in the National League and the best 30-game start in modern club history. The 1970 Big Red Machine with Johnny Bench, Joe Morgan and Pete Rose opened 22-8.

"We're off to such a good start. We're just kind of feeding off of the start," said Todd Benzinger, who delivered a bases-loaded single to win the game.

"Tonight, it was hustle," Manager Lou Piniella said. "It was (Billy) Hatcher hustling. It was (Chris) Sabo hustling. Speed on the bases helps. It might have rattled the left-hander a little bit."

Elsewhere in the NL, it was Chicago 12, Atlanta 2; St. Louis 4, Houston 0; Philadelphia 2, San Diego 1; San Francisco 6, New York 5; and Los Angeles 3, Montreal 2.

Sabo started the Reds' game-winning rally with a one-out single off Bob Patterson (2-1) and continued to second when right fielder R.J. Reynolds bobbled the ball for an error. Hatcher was intentionally walked, and after Patterson balked to advance the runners, Barry Larkin was intentionally walked to load the bases for Benzinger.

"With the bases loaded and less than two out, you've got to bring the guy in," Benzinger said. "That's just doing your job."

The Pirates have the second-best record in the NL at 22-11.

Tim Lincecum (3-0) pitched the top of the 11th for the victory.

Cubs 12, Braves 2

Andre Dawson hit a pair of two-run homers and Jeff Pico, just up from the minors, allowed one hit in six shutout innings as visiting Chicago routed Atlanta.

Pico (1-0) allowed no hits through five innings before Oddibe McDowell opened the sixth with a ground single to right field just out of second baseman Ryne Sandberg's reach.

Dawson, who leads the NL with 11 homers, had the 31st multi-homer game of his career. He also hit two homers against the Braves last Tuesday in Chicago.

Cardinals 4, Astros 0

Joe Magrane pitched a four-hitter to break a personal eight-game losing streak as St. Louis beat Houston at Busch Stadium, sending the Astros to their fifth consecutive defeat.

Magrane (1-6) outpitched Mike Scott (1-4) for his first win in 14 starts since last Aug. 29. The St. Louis left-hander began the game with a 6.45 earned run average, having allowed 27 runs in 37 2-3 innings.

Willie McGee had three singles, scored twice and drove in a run for the Cardinals, who won for only the fourth time in 11 games.

Giants 6, Mets 5

Gary Carter beat his former New York teammates with a tie-breaking RBI double in the eighth inning to lift San Francisco over the Mets. The Giants have won seven of their last eight games against New York at Candlestick Park.

Reliever Bob Ojeda (0-2) had allowed only one hit in four innings before walking Kevin Mitchell to lead off the eighth. Kevin Bass' grounder back to Ojeda forced Mitchell and Bass went to second when Matt Williams grounded out to the pitcher for the second out.

Carter, who played five seasons with the Mets before being released after the 1989 season, then pinch hit for Terry Kennedy and sliced an opposite-field double to right field to score Bass. Kennedy hit a grand slam in the fourth to give the Giants a 5-4 lead.

Dodgers 3, Expos 2

Ramon Martinez allowed one run in seven innings and struck out 10 as Los Angeles edged Montreal at Dodger Stadium.

Martinez (3-2) pitched one-hit ball through the first five innings before allowing a leadoff double by Delino DeShields in the sixth and Dave Martinez's run-scoring single.

The Expos had a run in and runners on first and third with one out in the eighth when reliever Tim Crews got Tim Wallach to hit into a double play.

Kal Daniels hit a homer, Hubie Brooks had a RBI triple and Mike Scioscia added a sacrifice fly for the Dodgers' runs.

Phillies 2, Padres 1

Ricky Jordan and Carmelo Martinez hit consecutive home runs in the fifth inning to carry visiting Philadelphia past San Diego.

Terry Mulholland (2-1) pitched six shutout innings, allowing five hits before being relieved by Jeff Parrett to start the seventh. Parrett pitched one inning and Roger McDowell finished for his eighth save.

Oakland suffers fourth loss in a row, 5-4, to Cleveland

By BEN WALKER

AP Baseball Writer

The Oakland Athletics lost again, this time to one of the best teams in baseball.

The Athletics beat themselves Tuesday night when left fielder Rickey Henderson dropped a fly ball, center fielder Dave Henderson let one go over his head and right fielder Jose Canseco fumbled a grounder as the Cleveland Indians rallied to win 5-4.

Oakland dropped its fourth straight game, matching its longest losing streak of last season.

Dave Henderson's mistake helped the Indians score in the sixth inning and pull within 4-1. Canseco's miscue came during a four-run seventh, an outburst capped when Rickey Henderson muffed Candy Maldonado's routine fly with two outs, enabling two runs to score.

"The ball hit me in the glove and I just missed it," Rickey said. "It was a pop fly. It wasn't a difficult play."

Ceciliano Guante (1-2) got the victory and Doug Jones earned his 13th save in 13 tries.

In other games, Chicago beat Baltimore 3-2, Detroit defeated Texas 3-2, California topped Milwaukee 8-3, New York beat Minnesota 7-3 and Seattle defeated Toronto 4-3 in 10 innings. The Boston at Kansas City game was rained out.

Tigers 3, Rangers 2

In Texas, Cecil Fielder hit his major league-leading 14th homer, a two-run shot in the seventh inning that broke a 1-1 tie.

Fielder also leads the majors with 34 RBIs. He has 12 homers and 29 RBIs in his last 21 games.

Dan Petry (4-1) won his third consecutive start. Mike Henneman got his eighth save, striking out pinch-hitter Pete Incaviglia with runners on first and third to end the game.

Kevin Brown (5-2) took the loss. Ruben Sierra was among the Rangers missing, having hurt his ankle at a fall in a shopping mall Monday. He had played in 325 straight games, a team record.

Angels 8, Brewers 3

In the fog at Milwaukee, Jack Howell homered and tripled to lead Mark Langston and California.

Howell hit a two-run homer in the fifth for a 3-1 lead. In the seventh, his fly ball was lost in the fog by right fielder Rob Deer for a triple, and Luis Polonia hit a sacrifice fly.

Langston (3-3) stopped a two-game losing streak. He gave up three runs in seven innings and struck out seven. Chris Bosio (3-2) was the loser.

White Sox 3, Orioles 2

In Chicago, Carlton Fisk hit his first homer of the season, a two-run shot with two outs in the eighth inning that gave the White Sox their fourth straight victory.

Fisk connected against Pete Harnisch (3-1) after a two-out, pinch-triple by Dan Pasqua. Fisk had gone 89 at-bats without a home run, his longest drought ever at the start of a season. As a rookie in 1972, he went 71 at-bats without a home run.

Barry Jones (5-0) got one out for the victory. Bobby Thigpen earned his ninth save of the season and 100th of his career.

Yankees 7, Twins 3

In New York, Don Mattingly hit his 100th Yankee Stadium homer and drove in four runs. His three-run shot in the first inning made him the 11th player to hit 100 home runs at the Bronx ballpark.

Chuck Cary, who had been on the disabled list since April 15 with an inflamed left elbow, won in his 1990 debut. He gave up one run on four hits in seven innings and struck out eight. Roy Smith (1-3) was the loser.

Kirby Puckett hit a two-run homer in the Minnesota eighth. He singled in the first inning for his seventh straight hit, but grounded out in his next at-bat, ending a string of 10 consecutive times reaching base.

Mariners 4, Blue Jays 3

In Toronto, Harold Reynolds singled home the go-ahead run in the 10th inning as Seattle stopped the Blue Jays' three-game winning streak.

Mike Brumley tripled with one out against Jim Aker (0-1) and Reynolds followed with a single through the drawn-in infield.

Keith Comstock (1-1) went one inning for the victory and Mike Schooler got his 10th save.

HAYES

artist who led the NBA in scoring three consecutive seasons in the 1950s.

Hayes, who was a late grower, said he got into basketball thanks to a mischievous eighth-grade classmate who pinched a girl. Hayes was blamed and sent to the principal's office. But en route to the office, another teacher offered to take him to the gym instead and teach him basketball.

"So I ended up on the floor of that gym in Rayville, La., with two left-footed sneakers taped onto my feet, not knowing the first thing about basketball," he said.

Hayes said that it's only in the last month that he has taken the time to reflect on his 16-year pro career.

"I really don't believe I did those things... that I could have scored all those points and got those rebounds," he said. "My greatest fear every year I played was that I would be cut and wouldn't make the team."

Maxwells add sweet slice to Panhandle salad bowl

Apple orchard south of Hereford is unique, new project for High Plains agriculture

By ORVILLE HOWARD
Special Feature Writer

Dale Maxwell has added a new slice of sweetness to the Panhandle Salad Bowl—delicious apples which may also sweeten the cash flow of Hereford's Golden Triangle.

Located about 10 minutes south of Hereford on U.S. 385, Maxwell's apple orchard is nothing less than a pioneering project for High Plains agriculture. It is believed that this Maxwell move is the first commercial apple orchard ever planted north of the Panhandle Caprock.

For a number of years, a commercial apple orchard was maintained in the break-country south of Alanreed, some 125 miles east of Hereford, but none has been found in the record books of the High Plains.

Backyard orchards of the Panhandle area have produced bountiful apple crops since the first plow broke sod here a hundred years ago, but when it came to commercial acreage, experts in the business decried the very thought—"Too much wind, too much dry, too much hot, too much cold" or, as they put it, almost too much of everything except positive optimism.

But Maxwell caught the drift of commercial apple production from a food executive a few years ago, and literally dug in on a 160-acre irrigated farm south of Hereford. It took 3,000 trees and six years' of dedicated work to prove that what seems right in theory is not always right in the field.

"We harvested about 2,000 bushels of apples last year, all of which were sold on the fresh-fruit market," said Maxwell. "But this season, we'll be turning all of the culls into apple cider as a secondary product from the orchards."

Maxwell and his wife, Elsie, maintain a seasonal roadside market in front of their farm home which is also headquarters for a truck gardening operation. From this farm point, they marketed their 1989 production direct from the orchards, with some vegetable sales going to the retail food stores across Texas.

In addition to the 25-acre orchard, the Maxwells have several rows of peach trees, along with a few exotic plum and cherry trees. At the present time, expansion plans have already been plotted for a 4,000-tree orchard which would greatly expand current plantings.

"We've produced some of the finest tasting apples I have eaten," said Maxwell, as he recalled the 1989 harvest. "There's not an apple in Texas that's better in taste and quality than those we're producing here on the High Plains. As a matter of fact, I'll compare my apples with those grown in Washington State or Oregon."

Maxwell pointed out that some of the plus-factors in Panhandle apple production is the clean air, clean water, rich soil and sunny climate.

"A lot of folks don't realize that we're in the same temperate zone as Missouri, Washington and Oregon," said Maxwell. "Some of the experts scream about our wind, but up in Washington, they have to turn on giant fans to blow out the cold when late freezes come along—here, we have our own natural fans when the late spring cold comes."

Maxwell is the first to admit that sometimes it's a critical situation when a Siberian Express swoops down from the north at budding time, but, as he put it—"There's a certain amount of risk that comes with the territory." He pointed out, however, that improved varieties of trees are making a good stand against such adversities as late cold, insects and various diseases.

Though the apple and peach orchards caught the eye of the community during the colorful 1989 harvest, Maxwell believes that his new apple cider press operation will provide an even greater public interest to the Golden Triangle of Deaf Smith, Castro and Pomer counties—and perhaps the entire Panhandle Region.

"We're planning to conduct weekend tours later this fall when we start making apple cider," said Maxwell. "Of course, most of the tours will be directed for the youngsters—the classrooms who are looking for something new as a field project."

Commercial apple cider runs will also be another pioneering move in Panhandle agriculture when the Maxwells sit up shop for late summer and fall press runs. Their cider processing equipment, recently acquired from an up-state firm, is still in storage in a spanking new processing plant built by the Maxwells—everything new from the concrete slab to the steel roof.

Maxwell showed how the automated processing system will funnel freshly-rinsed apples from the wash hopper direct to the slicer which actually turns the apples into a processed form similar to apple sauce. The processed fruit is then emptied into perforated press containers which move under a hydraulically-powered press for the final squeeze. Each container of processed apples will produce about 20 gallons of cider.

The Maxwell apple operation also includes a bottling unit where most of the cider will be funneled into gallon and half-gallon plastic containers for marketing.

"Right now, we're trying to locate the half-gallon size plastic containers because that size seems to be getting more popular each year with the consuming public," said Maxwell. "We bottled some small runs in gallon jugs last summer with a small press that we used as a starter."

The leading varieties of the Maxwell apple orchard are the Delicious and Roman Beauty, a rather tart apple which is fast becoming one of the more popular kinds of the apple-eaters.

"You just can't believe the difference it makes in the taste when the apples are allowed to ripen on the trees," said Maxwell. "As you perhaps already know, all apples found on the supermarket counters are picked green and allowed to ripen in storage. Thus, whatever taste is in the apple at picking time is about what you get when you eat it."

Maxwell pointed out that in their tree-ripened apples, the sun, the tree and the atmosphere keeps pumping goodness into the apple right up to the very minute it is picked. Apples, something of a hanging cousin to the sugar beets, receives its sugar (sweetness) through the photosynthesis process by action of light on the chlorophyll in green plant cells...tree leaves in the case of apples. It takes 60 to 70 leaves to produce an average apple.

Though apples will continue to "manufacture" taste quality even after it is picked, it is a different story with peaches or any type of store fruit...taste will not improve with ripening in storage—green picked peaches will always have a green-picked taste.

Maxwell has shied away from apricots which seems to have a fickle trait of blossoming out on the first warm day of spring. But all of the Maxwell apple and peach trees are improved varieties grafted on sturdy root stock which has a lot of smart in knowing the difference between a sunny afternoon in February and the true rays of spring.

The Maxwells move into fruit production came about as result of a casual conversation with a carrot buyer for the Gerber baby-food company.

"I had been a row-crop farmer about all of my life—cotton, corn, maize and wheat—then economic conditions in this type of farming got very drastic in the early 1980s and we wound up having a farm sale in 1984," said Maxwell, as he recalled the tough times of the 1980s in U.S. agriculture. "At that time I was seriously considering going into the construction business."

But after checking out working conditions in some of the larger cities, such as Austin, Maxwell took a second look at his Castro County farm. Back in the 1960s and 1970s, Maxwell had grown extensive carrot production especially for the Gerber baby food firm, a company that uses the highest quality products available. And during a summer visit, one of the Gerber company fieldmen made a remark to Maxwell that the Hereford-Dimmitt area should be a great place to grow apples. The thought stuck.

"We had four or five apple trees in our yard for many years and they always had apples even though we didn't really take care of them," said Maxwell. "Then when I came back from Austin looking for something different to do, I kept thinking about those apple trees."

Maxwell headed back to the Gerber tables at Fort Smith, Ark., for production talks on apples instead of carrots. At one point in time, the Maxwells were the largest carrot producers for the Campbell Soup Co., in addition to the Gerber production. In one season, Maxwell shipped 3,000 tons of carrots from his Panhandle fields.

Gerber executives gave Maxwell the greenlight on his apple concept—"You grow them and we'll buy them."

Maxwell returned to his Panhandle farm and began a crash-course on apple production—but he ran head-on into the proverbial brick wall. All of the apple research and seminars conducted by the various universities and fruit companies was geared to about every place in America but the Texas Panhandle. Nearly every expert in the professional world of horticulture painted a bleak picture for Maxwell's proposed Panhandle apple orchard. His next move was direct to the commercial nurseries and it was here—at an old seedstock nursery in Missouri—that he heard his first positive notes.

After much looking and listening, the Maxwells planted their first apple trees in April 1985, the same trees which in 1989 produced around 2,000 bushels of the finest apples on Earth.

"We brought those trees into the farm in the bare-root form and cut every one back to 30 inches high—nothing but 30-inch apples whips sticking up from the ground," Maxwell recalled as he reflected on that first move into the orchard business five years ago. "Those trees, however, were the end result of many years in research by the Missouri nursery, developed especially for our particular climate zone."

The particular Panhandle temperate zone is something of a U-shaped climatic condition that swings southward from a point out south-east of the Great lakes, moves across the Panhandle region then sort of zigzags alongside the Rockies back northward across Oregon and Washington.

The Maxwell orchard was aligned in rows spaced 24 feet apart, with the trees spaced 14 feet within the rows...about 120 trees to the acre. In the beginning, Maxwell had planned to go to the drip irrigation system, but the maintenance cost—factor forced him to the ditch water system. Irrigation ditches on either side of the tree rows follow the drip-line of the trees—as a tree canopy grows outward, so goes the irrigation ditches.

"The texture of our soils around here lends itself real well to the ditch irrigation system," said Maxwell. "The drip-system alone would cost $20,000 just for our present orchard acreage."

Out of a planting of 2,000 trees, the Maxwells only lost about a half dozen. And occasionally, for no particular reason, a tree will sort of shut-off and die...just fail to wake up in the spring.

Seedlings are planted in 12-inch holes dug with a post-hole sugar, with the planting holes aligned in existing furrows to distribute water during the first couple of years. by the third year irrigation ditches are following the drip-line of the trees.

Proper pruning of an apple tree is perhaps the most critical part of commercial production. Maxwell noted that one of the main scaffold limbs must point into the wind, pruned to that effect, so as to create a positive balance in lieu of nature's little tricks of prevailing winds. Theoretically, as Maxwell put it, one should end up with five scaffold limbs spaced around the tree trunk.

Maxwell showed where hand-made spreaders are used to hold the growing limbs at a proper distance from the central leader, thus allowing more sunlight to reach the inter-production areas of the trees. This type of orchard maintenance gives the Maxwell trees a uniform appearance similar to that of Christmas trees.

Though some orchards use the dwarf and trellis system in apple production, the Maxwells have semi-dwarf varieties which can be harvested with a minimum of hand labor. Maxwell said the dwarf varieties are not as hardy as the larger kind, thus moving to the semi-dwarf varieties. The Maxwell orchard is expected to reach full production at around nine years of age, with the longevity being anywhere from 40 to 60 years.

Mrs. Maxwell works hand-in-hand with her husband in every phase of the orchard business. She takes a leading role in their summer/fall truck garden, and during winter pruning time, she's found among the rows of sleeping apple trees. The Maxwells noted that with proper pruning one builds a strong framework for the tree. Otherwise, its foliage would perhaps be too thick or too scraggly.

While the trees were in their growing stage, the Maxwells turned a portion of their farm into a helpfully truck garden—pick your own system that allowed customers go direct to the fields for their fresh produce...everything but the green beans. Maxwell has a mechanized green-bean picker that can pluck about 70 bushels per hour direct from the row with just one person running the picker.

They also grow several varieties of peppers, five varieties of tomatoes, watermelons and cantaloupe.

The Maxwells picked their first apples when the first commercial grove was 4 years old, but even then, they hand-picked blossoms to allow only a limited crop. Then, on the fifth year, 1989, they let the blossoms burst forth in full apple production, turning out more than 2,000 bushels. The 1989 price averaged about $14 per bushel at the roadside stand, as compared to $16 in 1988.

Though Gerber officials actually gave the incentive for Maxwell to move into the apple industry, by the time Maxwell's first crop came off, the Arkansas-based company was reaping the benefits of a glutted market in Oregon and Washington. Maxwell refused to sell his apples by the ton on a down cannery market and elected to go the roadside market stand route...which paid off in handsome dividends.

The Maxwells now have 38 rows of orchard that contain 3,000 fruit trees, with average cost of just the trees being around $500 per row. This cost does not include any labor or maintenance costs during the past five seasons. In an effort to maintain spring weed growth, Maxwell plants wheat between the rows and just before the wheat ripens, he shreds the green foliage for soil mulching.

The Maxwell clan originated back in Kentucky but Dale Maxwell's grandfather, Sterling Price Maxwell, who was born in Ash Grove, Mo., was a great-grandson of the renowned frontiersman, Daniel Boone. Nathan Boone, the youngest son of Daniel Boone and direct tie to the Maxwells, is buried at the small Missouri town of Ash Grove.

When smoke of the Civil War began to clear, the Maxwells pulled stakes and migrated to Bowie, Tx., where Maxwell's great-grandfather Sam Maxwell died. The family then moved northward across the Red River into Oklahoma Territory where she raised her family near Velma in what is now south-central Oklahoma.

Maxwell's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Troy Maxwell, moved to the present farm site in 1928, a historical point in that it was the bunkhouse site of the Old YO Ranch. The main YO headquarters was located just a short distance from the Maxwell farm site. The original wooden windmill tower of the YO still stands today in Maxwell front yard as a mute reminder of the vast ranching operations that once dominated the entire Texas Panhandle. Maxwell has a brother, Don, who lives at Sinton, Tx.

After graduating from Dimmitt High School in 1950, Dale enrolled at Texas Tech University where he earned a degree in agricultural engineering in 1954. Following a stint with the U.S. Armed Forces, Dale taught on the Texas Tech faculty for a couple of years, then returned to the Maxwell farm between Hereford and Dimmitt in 1958 where he has remained for the past 32 years. His father is deceased and his mother is retired in Dimmitt. Dale and Elsie each reared a family of their own before entering into their marriage 11 years ago.

Maxwell has his own unique philosophy on life, frequently nothing that one gets back what he puts in:

"Our apple trees are about the same way—if we take care of the trees, they'll take care of us."

Minding Your Own Business

People pick best books to help their operations

"The man who does not read good books has no advantage over the one who cannot read them." —Mark Twain

Every year, scores of books are written about business. While many of these books offer useful information and hours of good reading, others simply are not worth the money and time invested.

We asked local business people to recommend the books that they feel have been most beneficial in helping them start and build their businesses. We now present the "best of the best."

How to Swim With Sharks by Harvey Mackey is one of the newest books on our list and was the most often mentioned. Mackey's entrepreneurial experience laces the book with common sense application of sound operational principles. Check out the "Mackey 66" customer profile on Page 28, and ask yourself how much you really know about your customers.

In Search of Excellence by Thomas Peters and Robert Waterman was high on the most-read list. It is subtitled "Lessons from America's Best-Run Companies" and examines in substantial detail the eight common characteristics found in well-managed companies. Although the book has been criticized because some of the companies that were touted as being excellent have stumbled in recent years, the principles are still valid.

How to Win Friends and Influence People by Dale Carnegie is an all-time favorite. This book was copyrighted in 1936 and contains a wealth of good information on communications, attitude, motivation and people management.

Growing a Business by Paul Hawken is another common-sense book written by a hands-on businessman. While many of his ideas are not "mainstream," the book is well-written, well-documented and easy reading. It is suitable for both the existing business and the start-up.

The Power of Ethical Management by Kenneth Blanchard and Norman Vincent Peale takes a look at one of today's hottest topics: ethics in business. These two best-selling authors combine to create a brilliant little book which reminds us that there is not a right way to do a wrong thing.

Everyone needs some outside motivation once in a while. Two often mentioned books are Denis Waitley's Seeds of Greatness and Zig Ziglar's See You at the Top. Neither book is new, but both are widely read today and are good common-sense guides to self-improvement. For the entrepreneur, constant improvement is the only way to stay in business.

The final three books on our "Top Ten" list are aimed at the start-up entrepreneur. Good information can help get a business off to a fast start. One of the best is The Entrepreneur and Small Business Financial Problem Solver by William A. Cohen. It covers legal aspects, financing, risk management, recordkeeping, writing a business plan, and contains more than 50 pages of resources.

Another strong contender is The Do-It-Yourself Business Book by Gistav Berle. This book is hot off the press and contains hundreds of tips, methods and checklists for getting into the growth cycle quickly and avoiding common mistakes.

The final selection on the list is The Business of Business by David Horowitz and Dana Shilling. It offers insight on how 100 businesses really work and gives information on a number of establishments in the U.S., their average net sales, profits, trends, etc.

Many of the readers we polled in the survey expressed a desire to read more but complained that there is not enough time. One solution might be to buy the book on tape. You can listen while you drive, exercise or relax.

Many successful businessmen and women have learned that education is a never-ending process. Absorbing good information will help you keep your competitive edge. To paraphrase Mark Twain, those who don't read good books may lose their advantage to those who do.

Charles Bell and B.J. Gilliland of Hereford have qualified for 1990 membership in the Texas Leaders Round Table, an honor organization recognizing outstanding achievement in the life and health insurance and related financial services industry.

The two Hereford agents are members of the Amarillo Association of Life Underwriters. Membership in TLRT is a career milestone for life underwriters who must meet strict professional and ethical requirements as well as achieve successful sales records and render continuous service to clients and their beneficiaries.

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Men and women should share family responsibilities equally or face family breakdowns, actress Mario Thomas says.

"I think that unless men start being equal partners in marriage, we're going to have problems with families. Women can't raise families all by themselves, anymore than men can run the world all by themselves," she said.

"It's unbalanced. It's like a seesaw sticking up in the air. It has to have the humanity of both partners," the wife of talk show host Phil Donahue said at a news conference.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sylvester Stallone, who subdued boxers and guerrillas in his "Rocky" and "Rambo" roles, got the scare of his life when he was mobbed by fans in Italy, his spokesman says.

"He appreciates the respect and love they give to him, but they should be more careful," Paul Bloch said in a telephone interview Monday from Milan. "A lot of people could have been injured."

Bloch said the incident happened as Stallone was leaving a Milan theater, where he had just received a TV network's award as "the world's most popular actor."

Brandon & Clark observes 20th year in business in Hereford

Brandon & Clark, Inc., located at 515 E. First St., is celebrating its 20th anniversary in Hereford, opening here in February, 1970, to serve the electrical needs of this area.

Dough Crouch, who has been the branch manager since the beginning, says, "The last two years of business have been the best. The future looks great. We just keep growing and heading in the northern direction."

Founded in Lubbock, Brandon & Clark is also celebrating its 40th anniversary in business as a whole. The company opened its doors in April of 1950 to supply a service to the users of electrical equipment.

Brandon & Clark employs 20 people here and has also opened a plant in Odessa. Besides providing an industrial wiring and electrical repair service to this area, Brandon & Clark also sells a wide variety of electrical products over the counter.

"Our counter business has really expanded," Crouch said. "We sell power tools, fuses, wiring materials and electrical repair parts."

The plant was completely remodeled last year. A new 7,000-square foot metal structure was erected over the old wooden one. The original structure was then dismantled by removing the interior walls. Customers can now review new products and rebuilt motor inventory in one easy tour of the product warehouse.

Walt Clark, president of Brandon & Clark, said, "We're extremely pleased with our decision to branch out in Hereford. It's been a pleasure doing business with the friendly people of this area."

Overtime pay issue posed

Dear Commissioner Nabers, I have five employees and am considering giving them the option of a more flexible work schedule which would enable them to leave by 11 or 12 o'clock on Fridays. My question is this: Would I have to pay overtime for more than 8 hours worked each day, or do I just have to pay overtime for more than 40 hours in a week?

N.M., Freeport,

Dear N.M., According to the Wage and Hour Division of the U.S. Department of Labor, you do not have to pay overtime based on the hours an employee works in a day. You have to pay overtime for all hours in excess of 40 a week.

Dear Commissioner Nabers, I will be retiring from military service in 8 months. If I don't find a job right away, can I collect unemployment? If I can, will retirement pay be counted against me as to the amount I can collect?

B.T.,
Houston, Tx.

Dear B.T., The answer to your first question is "no." If your retirement is voluntary then you cannot draw unemployment benefits. The Texas Unemployment Compensation Act provides a disqualification from the receipt of benefits for a claimant who voluntarily left his last work without good work connected cause. Voluntary retirement does not constitute good work connected cause.

Should you find another job and then be laid off, you could qualify for benefits. If, however, the claim is filed within 15 months of your retirement from the military, your benefit amount will be reduced by the amount of your military retirement pay.

Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers represents all Texas employers. If you have any questions you want answered, please write Commissioner Nabers at: TEXAS BUSINESS TODAY, 614 TEC Building, 15th and Congress, Austin, Tx., 78778.

Property Tax Protest and Appeal Procedures

The law gives property owners the right to protest actions concerning their property tax appraisals. You may follow these procedures if you have a concern about:

- *the value placed on your property;
 - *exemptions that may apply to you;
 - *cancellation of agricultural appraisal;
 - *whether your property is taxable;
 - *which local governments should taxing your property;
- or
- *you think the appraisal district has done something else that adversely affected you.

Informal Review: Contact an Appraiser at the Deaf Smith County Appraisal District, 402 W. 4th St., Hereford, TX. 364-0625.

Review by the Appraisal Review Board: If you can't resolve your problem informally with the appraisal district staff, you may have your case heard by the appraisal review board.

The appraisal review board (ARB) is an independent board of citizens that reviews problems with appraisals and other concerns listed above. They have the power to order the appraisal district to make the necessary changes to solve problems. If you file a written request for an ARB hearing (called a notice of protest) before the deadline, the ARB will set your case for a hearing. You'll receive written notification of the time, date, and place of the hearing. The hearing will be informal. You and the appraisal district representative will be asked to present evidence about your case. The ARB will make its decision based on the evidence presented. You can get a copy of a protest form from the appraisal district office at 402 W. 4th St.

Note: You shouldn't try to contact ARB members outside of the hearing. The law requires you to sign an affidavit saying that you haven't done so before the ARB hears your case.

Review by the District Court: After it decides your case, the ARB must send you a copy of its order by certified mail. If you're not satisfied with the decision you have the right to appeal to district court. If you choose to go to court, you must start the process by filing a petition within 45 days of the date you receive the ARB's order. If the appraisal district has appraised your property at $1,000,000 or more, you must file a notice of appeal with the chief appraiser within 15 days of the date you receive the ARB's order.

More information: You can get more information by contacting your appraisal district at: 402 W. 4th St., 364-0625

You can also get a pamphlet describing how to prepare a protest from the appraisal district or from the State Property Tax Board, 4301 Westbank Drive, Building B, Suite 100, Austin, Texas 78746.

Deadline for filing protests with the ARB

(the deadline is postponed to the next business day if it falls on a weekend or holiday)

Usual deadline: On or before May 31 (or 30 days after a notice of appraisal value was mailed to you, whichever is later).

Late protests (If you miss the usual deadline for good cause. Good cause is some reason beyond your control, like a medical emergency. The ARB decides whether you have good cause.) Before the day the appraisal review board approves records for the year. Contact the appraisal district for more information.

Special deadlines: Change of use (if the appraisal district has informed you that you are losing agricultural appraisal because you changed the use of your land) Before the 30th day after the notice of the determination was mailed to you.

ARB changes (if the ARB has informed you of a change that increases your tax liability and the change didn't result from a protest you filed) Before the 10th day after the notice of the determination was mailed to you.

If you believe the appraisal district or ARB should have sent you a notice and did not, you may file a protest until the day before taxes become delinquent (usually February 1). The ARB decides whether it will hear your case based on evidence about whether a required notice was mailed to you.

How to make perfect steak

The perfect steak, whether rare or well-done, starts long before it hits the grill. But getting that T-bone to the table isn't always all that easy.
The next time you're driving down a country road, watching cows lazily grazing lush green pastures, remember that while it may look pastoral, there can be serious nutritional deficiencies—even in that tall, lush grass.

A big problem for many beef producers is selenium—or the lack of it. Selenium is a key dietary element that is scarce in many regions of the country.

Selenium deficient areas in the United States include the Pacific Northwest, the Northeast, East Coast, the Southeast and most of the Great Lakes area. There are also rising concerns of selenium deficiency in other geographic areas.

Cattle given feed grown in selenium-rich soil get enough of the element in their everyday diet. But cattle that don't get enough selenium in their diet are subject to poorer weight gains, reproductive problems, muscle degeneration, lowered immunity and generally poor health. These animals are just poor doers, so selenium must be supplemented.

Getting the proper amount of selenium into the cattle can be a headache. Simply adding it to the feed offers no guarantee that all the animals are getting their share and monthly injections may be impractical.

A new product allows producers to easily administer a long-lasting dose of selenium to their cattle.

The new selenium delivery system, Dura Se-120, is shaped like a bolus (a large pill). It can be administered orally by a balling gun into the cow's rumen or reticulum, the two large fore-stomachs. Water is gradually absorbed into one end of the bolus, which expands and pushes a selenium formulation out a small hole in the other end.

Dura Se-120 reaches a steady state in two to three weeks and releases the correct amount of selenium into the cow's system every day through 120 days. This provides consistent daily supplementation to help avoid serious selenium-deficiency related health problems.

So next time you bite into that delicious, juicy steak, remember that there's a lot more involved in getting it to you than putting it in the meat case at your grocery store.

Hints from Heloise

Q. My dryer got too hot and my polyester clothes now have set-in wrinkles. How can I get them out? — Mrs. Tom Keyes, Lebanon, Ind.

A. Dampen the garments, put them in a plastic bag and place them in the freezer for a few hours, then press with a steam iron while they're still frozen, using a pressing cloth to avoid giving them a shiny look.

This usually works and is sure worth a try! — Heloise

DRYING RACK

Dear Heloise: When my electric box fan wore out, I saved the plastic grate from the front. I use it as a drying rack for sweaters and other garments that need to dry flat. — Charlene Joy

National piano playing auditions slated

The National Piano Auditions are scheduled for May 16-18 at the First Christian Church in Hereford.

Teachers representing the 68 students will be Cappy Cory and Evelyn Hacker of Hereford, Shirley Peagram of Nazareth, and Johnie Walters of Friona.

Patsy Herrington of Quitaque will judge the auditions on May 16-17. She is a certified piano music teacher at Valley School located midway between Turkey and Quitaque in the Texas Panhandle. Recently, she was honored the high distinction of a permanent position in the Hall of Fame of Piano Teachers, one of the highest awards a Guild teacher may obtain. A member of Who's Who, she has been on the National Honor Roll of Guild Teachers for the past 18 years.

She has done extensive studies with such prestigious artists as Dale Peters, Margaret Grubb of North Texas University, and Mark Pair, Earl Miller of Wayland Baptist University.

Louis XVI ascended the throne of France in 1774.

She has been a private piano-organ teacher for 21 years, and teaches an average of thirty-five students. Each year she enters large groups in Piano Guild Auditions.

Herrington's students won first place, the coveted sweepstakes trophy, in Solo-Ensemble U.I.L. competition statewide in Austin in 1979. Four of her students have been Paderewski Gold Medal winners, one of the Piano Guild's highest achievements.

Herrington became interested in music at an early age, when her mother took her on the train each week a distance of 60 miles for accordion and piano lessons. A mother of four, including twins, Herrington was recently honored for 25 years of outstanding service as organist for First Baptist Church in Quitaque. She can list accomplishments in an unprecedented range of areas such as teacher, performer, adjudicator, as well as an outstanding musician who has produced large numbers of talented piano students during her years of teaching.

The National Piano Auditions were founded in 1926 by Irl Allison Sr., who served as president of the National Guild from 1929 to 1962. Auditions are held in all states including Hawaii and Alaska. International headquarters are in Austin.

A student must be a pupil of a member of the National Guild of Piano Teachers so that he or she may have Guild guidance throughout the year in his study and preparation.

A student must accomplish for entry in the non-competitive annual piano playing auditions a minimum of one or a maximum of 20 memorized pieces or musicianship phases. Each successful candidate receives a membership certificate, a pin, analysis chart and report card signed by the judge.

When a student has entered a 10-piece program for 10 years, they are eligible for the Paderewski Medal and the Guild High School diploma.

Jeanette Grotegut and Stefan Hacker have been previous Hereford winners.

Her new book will tell you: The latest protocol for live-in relationships.

What to do when the problems that surface in second and third marriages get too hot to handle.

How to deal with adult children who want to move back home just when you are beginning to love being alone.

The best ways for women to ask men for dates; something that our mothers never taught us.

The new etiquette for women and men traveling together on business.

How to handle divorce -- from breaking the news to your friends and family to starting a new life while his or her children create all sorts of unexpected complications.

What to do when your teen-ager is involved with drugs.

How to raise the issue of safe sex with that new someone in your life.

The '90s code of behavior at work that can make or break a career.

What to do when your ex-husband and his new wife remain in your social orbit.

How to make things right when you've done something wrong, plus hundreds of situations that did not exist before women liberated themselves.

How to execute the traditional rites and passages of life that have changed dramatically in the last 20 years -- weddings, stepfamily etiquette, religious ceremonies, births, funerals, entertaining and gift-giving.

How to handle thorny issues -- blended families, aged parents who live with adult children, interfaith marriages and much more.

The name of the book: Letitia Baldridge's Complete Guide to the New Manners for the '90s. Publisher: R.A. Rawson. It's in your bookstore and a bargain at $24.95. (In Canada, $34.95.)

Underwear shedding its image as intimate apparel

Fashionable women aren't content these days with lingerie that is intimate apparel only. After all, if they're going to pay an arm and a leg for something to cover the torso, it shouldn't remain under wraps.

"Women have started thinking of lingerie as fashion," says Ellen Appel, spokesman for Frederick's of Hollywood.

Appel credits the movies "Dangerous Liaisons" with increased sales in push-up bras and "Working Girl" and "Bull Durham" with stepped-up sales of garter belts. Madonna's come-hither rock 'n' roll bras, bustiers and corsets also are factors.

Though young trendies latched onto the look early, the mainstream didn't take it seriously until European fashion designers responded. Now, American lingerie manufacturers are translating the look into things that are pretty, practical and fairly affordable.

Mickey Levenson, chairman of the Intimate Apparel Council, a trade group of manufacturers, says not only are they creating underwear for "double duty," but that "lingerie has never been more in tune with fashion trends than at the present."

The council also reports that lingerie sales have soared within the past several months and are expected to continue. Push-up bra sales, for example, were up 40 percent over the same period last year, garter belts increased 30 percent and bustiers 22 percent.

There's a lot of lace, opulent fabrics and youthful prints - the best in stretch fabrics for comfort and fit. There are camisoles that can be worn as undergarments or under a jacket - either that of an evening suit or a blazer paired with jeans.

Jewel-tone colors, including metallic and antique gold, are popular, says Virginia Stiles, editor of Intimate Fashion News, a trade publication. Likewise, transparent materials such as chiffon and georgette are important, and Lycra stretch lace is showing up on everything from camisoles and teddies to leggings and body stockings. The leggings and body stockings can be paired with long jackets or flowing chiffon skirts.

For sleep or leisure, Olga offers a cotton-voile collection of lingerie in blue or pink wild-rose print. A tunic pajama shirt (about $48) can be worn as a top to a garden party, and a halter (about $17) can be teamed with shorts.

There is also a nylon and spandex bodysuit with nylon lace by Olga (about $32), which can be worn under a chiffon top or move from under cover to an evening out with a jacket.

Bodysuits will remain strong, given the fall '90 New York collections of several designers, including Norma Kamali, who recently unleashed a cavalcade of models onto the runway in black, crushed-velvet catsuits with provocative cutouts.

For those who aren't clamoring for the glamorous, there's a strong fashion statement to be made with the men's-wear look. Teens started pairing men's boxers and tees for bed. Now lingerie makers are sanctioning the look with their own labels and interpretations.

A best-seller at Victoria's Secret is a $34 tank top and boxer set, according to spokesman Laura Holbrook. It comes in polyester satin, printed with dense, brightly colored florals. Victoria's Secret also offers a short-sleeve shirt with boxers in 100 percent cotton knit at $34, in jewel tones of turquoise, hot pink or emerald green.

Olga has men's wear-inspired sleepwear, in polyester satin with feminine touches such as delicate lace trim. The pajama set with vest, about $64, includes pants with a boxer-type elastic waist. There also is a shorts set, about $52, with a fake fly front.

Christian Dior has man-tailored loungewear in a sophisticated smoking jacket of rayon paisley print in jewel tones of red, green, black and gold. The shawl-collar wrap jacket is accented with a tasseled sash. Hunter green velvet trousers complete the look at $300. This cosmopolitan loungewear can easily show up at dinner parties where a polished, tailored appearance is in order.

For those who prefer to keep their underwear in, stockings are a popular lingerie choice, certainly more conservative than an eye-catching bejeweled bustier.

Frederick's of Hollywood, which has stores nationwide, reports strong sales in thigh-high hosiery ever since an initial jump about two years ago.

"Stockings are sexier than pantyhose," says Appel, "and the typical American woman now wants sexier lingerie. They represent a return to the old trappings of femininity. But nobody except the wearer need know that she's wearing them."

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia (AP) - Martina Navratilova returned to her native land to see the changes firsthand since the country shed Communist rule last year, but she doesn't plan to stay.

"I still can't believe all the things I heard about the revolution are true," the tennis star said. "I just had to come here and see it for myself."

Navratilova defected in 1975 and later became a naturalized American. Last year, in 10 dramatic, peaceful days the country's former rulers were ousted.

On Monday the 34-year-old athlete returned to her native town of Revnice, some 20 miles west of Prague, for her second visit home. Her first visit was in 1986, when the U.S. team defeated Czechoslovakia in the Federation Cup.

"When I was leaving Prague then, I felt sorry for everyone who had to stay, because they simply did not have the right to travel," she said. "I was depressed."

"Now it's another story. Everybody has the same rights and I don't have to be depressed."

Suns knock LA out of NBA playoffs

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The Los Angeles Lakers had plenty of Magic against Phoenix, although it was not enough to continue 20 years of playoff success over the Suns.

The Lakers' streak of eight consecutive years in the Western Conference finals was broken Tuesday night as the Suns rallied from a 35-20 first-quarter deficit to defeat Los Angeles 106-103.

Going into the playoffs, the Suns had lost six consecutive postseason series against the Lakers - dating back to 1970 - and hadn't won at the Forum for 21 games, stretching back to 1984. And Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons had a personal 37-game losing streak on the Lakers' floor going back 16 years.

But the Suns beat the Lakers two out of three at the Forum and twice in Phoenix to give Los Angeles its earliest exit from the playoffs since 1981.

"It's a great win for the Phoenix franchise," Fitzsimmons said. "We'd never beaten Los Angeles in a playoff series."

Kevin Johnson had 37 points, 14 in the final quarter, for the Suns. Magic Johnson had 43 points to match his career playoff high, set in Sunday's Game 4, but he did not get enough support from his teammates.

Elsewhere in the playoffs, Detroit advanced to the Eastern Conference finals for the fourth consecutive year with a 95-84 victory over New York and Portland defeated San Antonio 138-132 in double overtime for a 3-2 lead in the Western Conference semifinals.

Chicago, leading 3-1, plays host to Philadelphia in tonight's only game. The sixth game in the Spurs-Trail Blazers series will be Thursday night at San Antonio.

Lakers coach Pat Riley, named the NBA's Coach of the Year on Monday, the first time for him despite his phenomenal success in the 1980s, said his team did not play as well as it did late in the regular season, when it finished with a league-best 63-19 record.

"As a team, we played out of character throughout the playoffs," Riley said. "Maybe we put too much energy in getting the best record."

Kevin Johnson and Jeff Hornacek, who finished with 22 points, had four each in the final two minutes of the game. A drive by Johnson cut the Lakers' lead to 97-96 with just over two minutes left, then Hornacek made a pair of free throws to put Phoenix ahead for good with 1:30 left.

Byron Scott's 3-pointer with 2.9 seconds left got the Lakers within one, but Kevin Johnson hit two more free throws with 2.4 seconds to go to make it 106-103.

Michael Cooper threw an inbound pass out of bounds to end the Lakers' final hope.

Pistons 95, Knicks 84

Detroit advanced to the Eastern Conference final for the fourth consecutive year, wearing down New York despite an early 14-point deficit.

Patrick Ewing, one of the stars of the NBA playoffs with two 40-point performances, was held to 1-for-10 shooting in the second half and the Pistons bench, with Mark Aguirre scoring 25 points, outscored New York's reserves 44-17.

"That's one of our strengths, wearing people down," Detroit's Bill Laimbeer said. "We come at them in waves."

Ewing, playing all but 1:59 of the game, led the Knicks with 22 points, but he missed his last eight shots. Gerald Wilkins scored 18 points for New York.

The Knicks, who led 23-9 early, were ahead 28-20 after one period. Then Aguirre, who watched the entire first quarter from the bench, took charge.

Aguirre hit eight of 10 shots for 17 second-quarter points and gave the Pistons a 51-49 lead with a short jumper at the halftime buzzer.

Trail Blazers 138, Spurs 132

Portland, again playing without centers Kevin Duckworth and Wayne Cooper because of injuries, won its third home game of the series after losing two at San Antonio.

Terry Porter scored a career playoff-high 38 points for the Trail Blazers, who led 91-69 in the third quarter before the Spurs rallied.

Portland clinched the victory by hitting six of eight free throws in the final 1 1/2 minutes of the second overtime. Jerome Kersey clinched the win by making two free throws with 11.1 seconds left.

Clyde Drexler had 35 points, also a career playoff high, for Portland, and Kersey scored 23 points.

Terry Cummings scored 32 points, but missed a crucial free throw and was called for an over-and-back violation in the final 50 seconds.

David Robinson had 27 points and 15 rebounds for the Spurs, who forced the first overtime on David Wingate's 3-pointer with 1.5 seconds to go in regulation. The 119-119 tie was the first time San Antonio was even since the game began.

Bulls relaxed for Game 5

By JIM LITKE

DEERFIELD, Ill. (AP) - Time after time, the glamorous one rolled with precision through every line on the cue card except the last one. Try as he might, Michael Jordan could not make himself say "Wobba, Wobba, Wobba" without cracking up.

In a gym half a continent away the same afternoon, the human quote machine was set on "stoic." Few people could make a line like "Wobba, Wobba, Wobba" work in front of a camera; though Charles Barkley surely is one of them, he was not in a light-hearted mood Tuesday. On top of that, no one asked.

That, in brief, is the state of the NBA's remaining Eastern Conference semifinal match. Jordan is at ease, rested and mischievous and giggling with energy. Barkley is beat up, tired and serious and staying off collapse. Which explains why a story line that looked so promising going in - surging Chicago versus resurgent Philly, unstoppable force Jordan versus immovable object Barkley - but has been so predictable playing out.

With Barkley, as with Jordan, all seemed possible - once upon a time. But the burden of carrying a team on his back through the long season and into the playoffs has ground down Barkley, as it did Jordan in years past. And after Game 5 ends in Chicago Stadium tonight, there will be nothing left to do but measure the nub.

"I know what he's going through," Jordan said Tuesday after the Bulls worked out. "Physically as well as mentally, it keeps getting tougher to find the motivation to keep your teammates going."

"It's very frustrating to know that you want to give 110 percent, and for the one game in 10 that you can't do it, to have none of your teammates step forward and help out."

Think back to Jordan's brilliant 63-point performance in a playoff loss to the Boston Celtics in 1985, or his valiant efforts only last season against the eventual-NBA champion Detroit Pistons. Heroism in a futile cause is noble, but losing is still losing. The sting is still fresh enough that Jordan can recall going to the whip when the race is on the line only to find out that he was hitting himself.

"It makes for a frustrating summer," Jordan said. "It makes you want to talk to the people in the front office about getting some help."
