Show expected to be 'shot in arm' for industry

By MIKE COCHRAN

ODESSA (AP) — Midland oilman Clayton Williams tells of the time he put his wife in charge of decorating his new bank.

"I gave her an unlimited budget," he said, "and damned if she didn't go over it."

In the champagne days of $35 oil, the same could probably be said of the Permian Basin Oil Show, the world's largest inland oil exposition.

"Some years it's been wild and roaring and there's been some really big bucks spent," said Odessa oilman T.L. "Woody" Gregory, president of the 1986 show.

With the industry in a prolonged slump, it was a leaner, meaner show that concluded a four-day run Saturday, but officials maintain it was one of the best and most significant.

"We wanted the show to be a shot in the arm for the industry," said Gregory. "We've really worked hard at it this year. We started early because we knew it was going to be a little difficult."

Gregory said the running joke for months was that with the economy in shambles the only two exhibitors they could count on would be the FDIC and U-Haul.

As it turned out, a record 594 exhibitors purchased every inch of space and more then 100,000 guests preregistered for the show.

"It's nothing short of a miracle to have sold it out," said Gregory, one of 170 board members scattered across Texas and the oil-rich area known as the Permian Basin.

"I think this is going to be a confidence builder for the industry," said Bob Horn of Odessa, who handled publicity for the show. "We're not by any means dead."

With a grin, he added:

"Of couse, we may be licking our wounds a little."

■ 1986 was bright year for oil show, related photos — 1G

Horn said veteran oilmen have been through these downturns before and adjust to them. He added, however, that no one anticipated a slump of quite this magnitude.

Despite massive layoffs, he said, most of the oil companies have tried to keep their key people in place "so that when it does turn around, they'll be ready to go again."

And no one here doubts that it will turn around.

Meanwhile, thousands of oilmen and representatives from oil-related companies took advantage of perfect weather and toured the show grounds this week, inspecting everything from ditch witches to diesel trucks and forklifts to air filters.

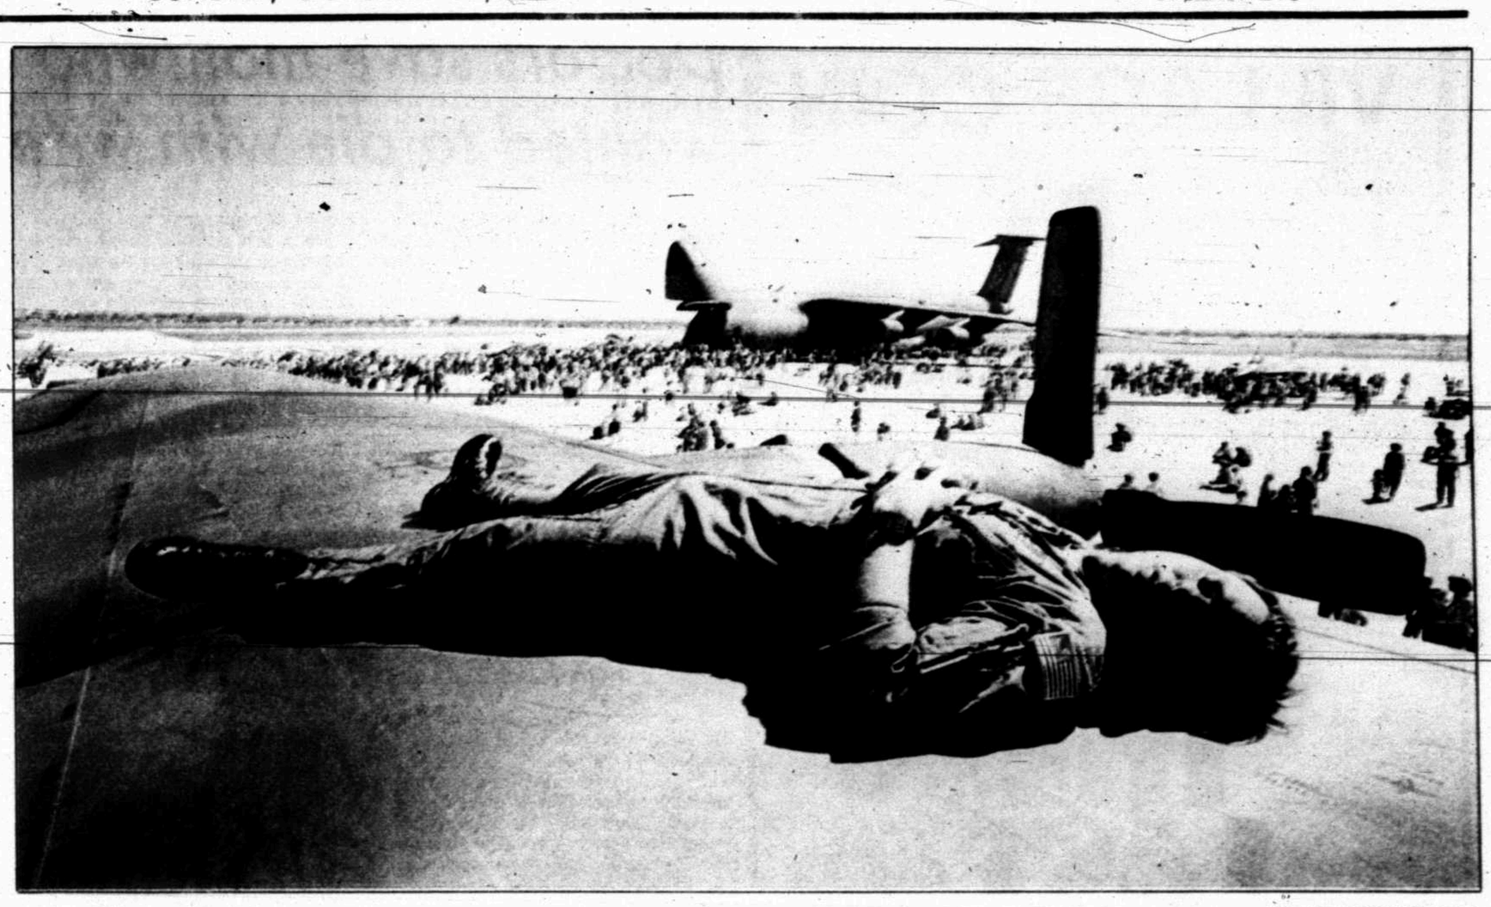

"We've got exhibitors from 28 states," said executive director Jay Alvey, one of only two paid employees of the biennial exposition.

"We were real pleased that in a downturn like this we were able to find that many people still in there trying."

The 1986 show was more than a little reminiscent of the start-up years in the early 1940s.

"During those early years we had to beat the bushes for exhibitors and many of our directors went to Dallas, Houston, Tulsa and elsewhere to get exhibitors to come to Odessa," Alvey said.

Military shows off huge transport planes

Though many probably left with a severe crick in their neck, the air show at Midland Regional Airport Saturday gave those in attendence many thrills and chills.

Sponsored by the West Texas Aerobatic Club, Inc., the show is held every year to commemorate the armed forces, Paul Erdmann, chapter president said.

"That C-5 plane over there takes our acrobatic airplanes to Europe for the world competition. Chapters hold these air shows all across the nation to help foot the bill," Erdmann said.

"It costs $70,000 each way to take the U.S. planes to the world competition," he added.

The C-5A is the free world's largest transport airplane, J.R. Welsh, an Air Force staff sergeant and C-5A flight engineer said.

"The Russians have one that is six feet longer," Welsh said.

There are 63 of the planes in America, each one built at a cost of $167 million, Welsh said.

The C-5A at the air show, which is about 300 feet long and camouflage-colored, had been used in Nicaragua when it was being invaded through the Honduran borders, Welsh said, and brought supplies and helicopters.

The plane can hold 235,000 pounds of cargo — as many as six Cobra helicopters for instance — and has a full gas tank when holding 36,461.54 gallons of fuel stocked up, Welsh said.

A smaller transport plane stood just across the field — the C-130 Hercules. Air Force Sgt. Dave Clark said the plane is used when there are smaller runways and for air drops in addition to transporting supplies.

"The C-130 was the main transport plane used in the Grenada invasion a couple of years ago," Clark said.

A friendly rivalry exists between C-5A and C-130 personnel, Clark said.

Local Crime Stoppers program ranked third most effective

By PATRICK CRIMMINS
Staff Writer

The Midland County Crime Stoppers program, which will be three years old in January, is the third most effective Crime Stoppers program in the world serving a population between 50,000 and 250,000, its coordinator learned this week.

Sgt. David Cobos said he received a call Thursday from Texas Crime Stoppers in Austin. He said Crime Stoppers International determined the ranking of most cases solved.

"We were also fourth in the narcotics recovered for the same population category," Cobos said.

The program is well-known as a telephone number one can call and pass information about unsolved crimes, remain anonymous, and perhaps receive a cash reward but Cobos said it is much more than that.

Cobos, a sheriff's officer who works out of a secluded central Midland office with police Sgt. Milton O'Bryant, just returned from a Crime Stoppers International conference in Canada.

He said Crime Stoppers is a sophisticated investigative tool that is continually updated and refined. He said Crime Stoppers trains its own, for example, with seminars on current criminal law.

He said the cornerstone of all Crime Stoppers programs is the absolute anonymity guaranteed callers — a guarantee that is backed by state law and has stood the challenge of a majority of court cases.

In 1981, the Texas Legislature enacted laws designating Crime Stoppers records confidential and posited criminal penalties for misuse of information given to Crime Stoppers.

Cobos considers the hypothetical case of a man who is the eyewitness to a murder the police have been trying to solve for months; the man calls Crime Stoppers, and passes along the information, but the man refuses to testify, and without his testimony the police cannot make a case.

Cobos, asked which interest is more important, that of the caller, or the public interest that will be served if the murder is solved, said, "The anonymity the program provides is the most important thing. Callers are never pressured, and even if we knew, our office would never reveal the identity of someone who gave us information. Ever.

"Crime Stoppers is run just like a corporation — with a board of directors. And that ad in the newspaper, or that spot on TV, says 'callers do not have to reveal their identities,' that is just like a contract, and we have to honor that contract," Cobos said.

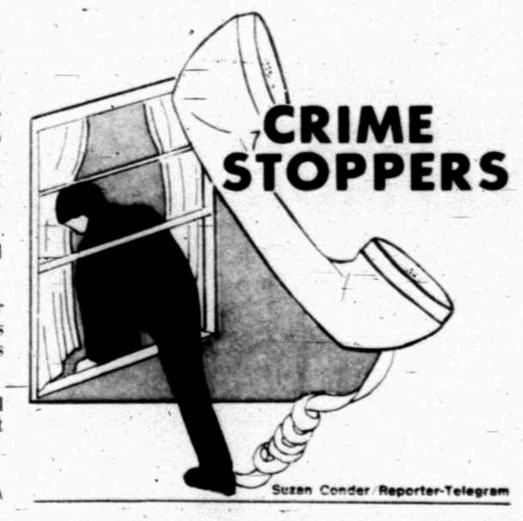

Cobos said Crime Stoppers is more than a program set up to hand out awards — he said many people, in fact, call in and refuse awards.

"A lot of people appreciate the fact that they can call somewhere without 'getting involved.'"

Cobos said that in September, the program helped clear 11 cases, and led to 10 arrests; three other arrest warrants were also issued. Nearly $33,000 in stolen property was recovered, and rewards of $1,700 were paid.

Cobos said for the month investigators cleared several narcotics cases, a burglary, auto theft, and oil field theft case. Three fugitive cases were also cleared, he said.

Midland, Dongying mayors sign pacts

By FRANK TROMBLEY
Staff Writer

The Dongying/Midland Friendship City delegation was scheduled to end a five-day visit and leave Midland just before noon today.

Many toasts extolling the increasing friendship between Midland and Dongying, China, and expressions of hope for peace marked the farewell banquet held Saturday night at the Plaza Club in the ClayDesta Bank building for the seven members of the Chinese delegation and several representatives from the Chinese consulate office in Houston.

As a part of the Dongying-Midland Friendship City agreements, Mayors Tang Shenhai and Carroll Thomas Saturday night signed agreements calling for the exchange of at least two people between the ages of 21 and 29, who will work at the Midland YMCA.

The two people scheduled to come to Midland in 1987, under the agreements, must be able to speak English and be familiar with various sports activities.

The Dongying Friendship City Association will be responsible for air fares to Midland and, once here, the lodging expenses will be borne by the Midland Friendship City Association.

The agreement is a part of the Cultural-Educational Exchange program resulting from Sister City agreements signed between Dongying and Midland.

Agreements also have been signed calling for the exchange of students between Midland and Dongying with two Dongying students to attend the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

The tour of industrial facilities in the Midland-Odessa area ended late Saturday afternoon with a tour of the El Paso Products gas plant south of Midland.

Saturday morning, gas industry representatives met with delegation members at Greentree Country Club to brief them on the capabilities of their respective companies.

The subjects covered ranged from exploration and reservoir engineering to gas compression for purposes of transmission.

Charles Maitland, Perry Gas Processors, showed a slide presentation to demonstrate the scope of his company's activities, which involves the manufacture of equipment to condition and treat raw natural gas as well as remove contaminants such as H2S and Co2.

Bob Sager, Compressor Systems Inc., said his company was formed in 1971 and since that time has built and sold 3,000 compressor units for use in India, Indonesia, South America and "most major oil-producing areas of the world."

Asked the price of such units, Sager said units can range in price from $1 million to as much as $3 million depending on size.

Dongying mayor discusses possibility of trade with Basin

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

The possibility for trade between the Permian Basin and Dongying, Midland's sister city in China exists, but it will take much work, said Tang Shenghai, mayor of Dongying in an interview before his departure.

The leader of an area in which approximately 1.5 million people live and which includes the Shengli oil field, the second largest oil field in China, said the first step would be to determine where the two areas might be of mutual benefit to one another. Secondly, a letter of intent would be drafted, followed by feasibility studies.

Firms in the Permian Basin are anxious to establish trade relations to sell technology and hardware to the Shengli oil field. Tang said areas of mutual cooperation that Dongying would like to explore are: a joint venture for the cultivation of prawns in the coastal region of the province; the construction of a new plastics factory to implement the continuing growth of Dongying and the exportation of Chinese arts and crafts from the city in the Yellow River Delta.

OPEC seems headed for agreement

GENEVA (AP) — OPEC on Saturday appeared headed for an agreement to renew a temporary accord on production controls, bolstering its chances of keeping oil prices steady through year's end.

During 13 days of talks, the cartel has failed to develop permanent quotas to replace the interim deal which expires Oct. 31. OPEC might deal with permanent quotas at its next scheduled meeting in December, officials said.

Saudi Arabia provided a breakthrough Saturday when it announced through its official Saudi Press Agency that would no longer resist a two-month extension of the temporary accord.

The move does not assure an agreement, but makes it more likely since Saudi Arabia is the most influential of the 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Oil ministers were scheduled to hold another round of talks Saturday, but it was put off until today, said OPEC spokesman James Audu.

On Friday, the Saudi oil minister, Ahmed Zaki Yamani, told reporters he was not ready to sign another interim deal. He said the cartel must continue to work on a permanent agreement.

In dropping this demand Saturday, the Saudi government attached two conditions to accepting an extension of the temporary accord. It said other member countries must promise to abide by the production limits and OPEC must declare that its aim is to fix oil prices at no less than $18 a barrel.

The statement, carried by the Saudi news agency, did not elaborate on the price issue.

Oil prices currently are hovering in a range of $14 to $16 a barrel, up from summertime lows of less than $10 a barrel.

The Saudis said they had decided to give in to the wishes of the OPEC majority because they saw no hope of reaching an accord now on permanent quotas.

They stressed, however, that no further extensions were possible.

The oil ministers spent the first 11 days of the conference trying to agree on a "scientific formula" for calculating production quotas. On Friday they referred the issue back to their aides, conceding that they were deadlocked.

Saudi Arabia and Kuwait were the only two members to publicly resist extending the interim accord.

Kuwait, however, said it would go along with a two-month extension if its share of OPEC production were increased, starting Nov. 1.

Ali Khalifa al-Sabah, the Kuwaiti oil minister, said Saturday he wanted an increase of 90,000 barrels a day to match the output quota of Libya at 990,000 barrels daily.

Gholamreza Aghazadeh, the oil minister of Iran, told reporters he was pleased that Saudi Arabia had dropped its resistence.

Iran was the architect of the original interim deal, and it formally proposed an extension Friday.

Aghazadeh said Libya had proposed that Ecuador and Gabon be given higher production quotas for the next two months to alleviate acute economic problems.

Qatar also has asked that its quota be increased immediately.

Iraq, which was not included in the original interim accord, would continue to be allowed to produce as much as it wished through the end of the year. It now is producing about 2 million barrels a day, more than any other OPEC member except Saudi Arabia.

Doctors save man who wanted to die with wife

BELLEVUE, Wash. (AP) — Emergency-room doctors saved the life of an 82-year-old man, refusing to heed appeals by family members to take him off a resuscitator after an apparent drug overdose in a suicide pact with his wife.

Carl West was in satisfactory condition Saturday at Overlake Hospital, officials said.

Stephen Dault, West's physician, said Thursday that his patient "clearly wanted to die with dignity" with his, 77-year-old wife, Helen.

Mrs. West was found dead Monday night of asphyxiation and a possible drug overdose. The King County medical examiner's office ruled the death a suicide.

Her husband was discovered in another room of their home, in a coma from an apparent overdose of barbiturates and with his wrists slashed, authorities said.

West was placed on a resuscitator by medics at the scene and transported to Overlake.

Dault and two immediate family members urged that West be disconnected, Dault said, but emergency-room doctors refused after lawyers for the family and the hospital discussed the matter.

State law allows such requests only when patients are terminally ill or have conditions that are not reversible, hospital officials said.

West's son, Niels, said both his father and stepmother had stated in legal documents written in 1979 that they did not want their lives prolonged through artificial means. Dault said the Wests asked him that their wishes be honored.

"I am angry, frustrated and disappointed at not being able to carry out my patient's wishes," said Dault. "From a moral and personal ethics standpoint, I felt they (hospital doctors) were wrong."

West was in relatively good physical condition for a man of his age, said Dault. But Helen West suffered from nerve damage in her ankles and feet and could not walk or stand without great pain.

Although he did not necessarily agree with the suicide agreement, Niels West said that "based on the strength of their relationship and the statements made in their living wills, I felt a duty to honor that. They only had one another."

Pranksters kidnap stony scout

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Pranksters pried a 500-pound Boy Scout away from the Boys Scouts of America headquarters last weekend, but the hardy lad survived the ordeal with only minor injuries, police said.

Investigators believe a group of seven high school students purloined the 6-foot bronze statue from its cement pedestal outside the Boy Scouts' national headquarters in this Dallas suburb.

Later, they thought better of the joke and trying to return the statue, they dropped the stony scout. It suffered several scratches, dents and abrasions from the fall, police said.

Frightened by the accident, the students abandoned their booty and fled, leaving an IBM Corp. employee to discover the statue on the company's property Monday morning.

"You don't think of people bothering something like that (statue) for any reason," said a miffed Wesley Parker, Boy Scout director of administrative services. "People consider it an object of art that they have a great affection for and look at it with great appreciation."

Prince Rainier buys western boots

DALLAS (AP) — Prince Rainier of Monaco dropped by a western store for a few pairs of boots before visiting the rodeo in suburban Mesquite.

Western Warehouse owner David Seim said the prince bought a pair of black ostrich boots, two pairs of roper boots in elephant skin and brown elk, two shirts, a Resistol hat and eight belts.

The prince and his daughter, Princess Stephanie, were here for the weekend benefit for the Princess Grace Foundation-USA, an arts-support organization.

They were joined Friday night by singer Frank Sinatra who brought a plane-load of celebrities, including Gregory Peck, Robert Wagner, Stephanie Powers and Jill St. John, who came for the Saturday night fund-raising benefit.

Speaking through interpreter Wei Zhongwu, Tang said he was impressed with the technology and equipment displayed at the Permian Basin Oil Show, which the delegation visited on opening day, but said the time spent there was too short to make any determination as to what may or may not be used in Shengli.

Asked if an oil show in Dongying — comprised of vendors who wish to sell to China's oil industry — would be useful, he said it would be up to the Petroleum Ministry of China to decide the usefulness of an oil show that gave petroleum engineers and geologists in China an opportunity to view U.S. petroleum technology and hardware. He added that one oil field or region cannot decide on its own about equipment that would be used in other places.

Asked if a sister city representative from Midland, living in Dongying, might be useful in helping to stimulate trade relations, he said he felt such an individual could be useful, but was curious whether the representative would come from governmental or oil industry ranks. He added that one should check with the oil companies to see if such a position would be necessary.

The 47-year old architect and civil engineer, said his overall reaction to Midland and the U.S. was good: "The people are very friendly here, just as in China. He said he was impressed at the advanced technology of America, the fact that it is economically well-developed and has a fine educational system.

Following the gas industry session at Greentree Country Club, the Dongying delegation was taken to the Golden China restaurant for a luncheon hosted by Ken Mayes, president of Kodiak Oilfield Equipment Co. Mayes has been doing business with China for several years, importing Chinese-built pump jack units and sucker rods. According to Mayes, the Chinese products, particularly the pump jacks, are competitivly priced with comparable U.S.-built units.

Mary Bray Neelley, a former Midlander who is president of Neelley China Express Co., and who has been largely responsibile for initiating contacts that led to the sister city relationship of Dongying and Midland, says a number of companies are doing business with China but they don't want to talk about it, that they try to discourage competition.

Wei Zhongwu, deputy director of the Dongying Foreign Affairs Office, responding to a question Saturday, said members of the delegation had learned much during its Midland stay but it will take time to sort everything out when they return home. The group has been particularly impressed, he said, with the friendliness and outgoing attitude of the people they've met during their activities in the Midland-Odessa area.

According to Wei, cultural and educational exchanges between the two cities can be expected to lay a foundation for potential buiness opportunities in the future.

The city planning group with the delegation has seen many things that impressed them that will have to be evaluated when they return home, he said. What they have seen that may be beneficial to Dongying, since it is a developing city, may result in a future visit by various Chinese experts involved in planning expansion of the Chinese city.

Saturday afternoon, following completion of the tour of the El Paso Products gas plant south of the city, six members of the delegation were taken for a brief tour of Midland Mall. Wei Zhongwu, asked what he thought of the mall, expanded his hands and said, "It is big." None of the delegates made any purchases during their brief mall tour.

OIL

It was under Alvey's direction in 1962 that the first big change was made in the show, which once put as much emphasis on revelry as business. Alvey persuaded the board to trim out the frills and parties and entertainment and end the carnival-like atmosphere of the affair.

That's not to say they put an end to hardcore partying, because they didn't. But the show itself is strictly business, and it's been a virtual sell-out ever since the change.

"The oil industry is never on an even keel," Alvey pointed out. "It's either up or down, and I think we have more interest in this show on down years."

But it was Williams of Midland who put the oil business in proper perspective. Speaking of his own experiences, Williams said he's a little like Columbus:

"I didn't know where I was going when I started, when I got there I didn't know where I was and when I got back I didn't know where I'd been. And I did it all on borrowed money."

CRIME

He said those figures represent a typical month. Usually, the program receives about 130 calls a month and assigns 30 new numerical code numbers.

Since the program began in January 1984, 346 felony cases have been cleared with nearly 300 arrests made. More than $300,000 in stolen property has been recovered and nearly $400,000 in narcotics confiscated by authorities. Rewards totaling $38,520 have been paid.

Most of the calls received by Crime Stoppers regard narcotics cases. Almost half of all arrests made as a result of information have been for narcotic offenses. Fugitives are also a popular topic among callers, with 128 arrested since 1984.

"Crime Stoppers is probably the best thing that has happened to Midland County," said Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter. He said at least a third and as much as a half of all cases in his department are solved with the help of Crime Stoppers.

Painter said he had no hesitation about the confidentiality demanded by the program, and said his officers would not try to contact an informant directly.

"If we really wanted to talk to someone, or wanted someone to testify in an important case, now we might get Crime Stoppers to call that person for us, Painter said. "But we know that if you step in, it can ruin the rapport that was built up between the caller and Crime Stoppers. And we are not going to do that. We respect the rapport they have."

"We utilize them all of the time," said Det. Lt. Ron Aaron of the Midland Police Department. "They prove to be very effective, in just about every type of case we have."

According to statistics, Crime Stoppers information has led to prosecution in 80 cases, and convictions in 79 of those cases.

Cobos said the Midland School Board is currently studying a Crime Stoppers program tailored for the two high schools in the city. He said a similar program in Boulder, Colo., recently led to the recovery of $10,000 worth of goods stolen at the schools.

PLANES

The C-5A, whose nose opens up to allow cargo to be loaded, stands for "the stuck up people who work on them," Clark mused. He explained the C-5A is given preferential treatment most often at Air Force bases, but that the rivalry is purely friendly.

Clark, a member of the 773rd Tactical Airlift Squadron at Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene — "You call, we haul" — said the C-130 at the air show had just come back from Puerto Rico.

The plane costs about $7 million each and is about 100 feet long, but Clark said he wasn't sure of the exact number of C-130s in America.

Besides the interesting planes on the ground, there were acrobatic demonstrations in the sky all afternoon and people let out shrieks of excitement as a plane appeared to head straight for the ground and then suddenly lift up and soar back into the sky.

Erdmann said the acrobatic planes can cost anywhere from $60,000-$100,000, though some actually make their own planes for less.

About 13 countries have entries in world aerobatic competitions, from both democratic and communist nations including the U.S., Great Britain, Australia, Russia, Czechoslovakia.

Last year at the World Precision Flying competition, the U.S. came in second place overall just 37 points behind the winner — the Soviet Union, Erdmann said.

"But they were good sports about it," Erdmann said.

Lebanon's Berri seeks deal for Israeli airman

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Lebanon's justice minister, militia chief Nabih Berri, said Saturday he would seek to swap a captured Israeli airman for Lebanese and Palestinians held in Israel.

Berri, head of the Shiite Moslem Amal militia, refused to confirm while on a visit to Damascus, however, that the airman is in the hands of his fighters.

In Tel Aviv, an Israeli army official declined to comment on Berri's statement.

The official, who demanded anonymity, said the aviator is listed as missing in action following Israeli air strikes in Lebanon. He reiterated the army's position that it would do everything possible to find him.

Israeli military sources, also speaking on condition of anonymity, said no Israeli troops were searching for the missing soldier Saturday.

The aviator has been missing since his F-4 Phantom fighter bomber was shot down Thursday over southern Lebanon. Another airman aboard the plane was rescued by Israeli helicopters.

The plane took part in raids on what Israel said were Palestinian guerrilla bases near the port city of Sidon. Four people were killed and 10 wounded.

An Amal official said Friday the airman was captured a few minutes after the plane was shot down. The official, who spoke on condition of not being identified, would not say where the captive was being held. Reports circulated in Sidon that the aviator was moved to Beirut.

Amal fighters displayed gear they said belonged to the captured airman, including a radio set, electronic beeper, parachute and maps.

"In case such reports were true (that Amal was holding the airman), then I plan to negotiate the swap of this Israeli pilot for Lebanese and Palestinian prisoners held in Israeli jails," Berri told reporters after a meeting with Syria's Prime Minister Abdul Raouf Kasm.

Berri, who has been in Damascus for several days, met Kasm to discuss "Syrian plans to supply parts of south Lebanon with electricity," according to an official statement.

Guerrilla strikes may boost Arafat's popularity

By MONA ZIADE

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Two spectacular guerrilla operations last week may give PLO chief Yasser Arafat a much needed boost after recent setbacks that reportedly have forced him once again to seek new bases of operation for fighting Israel.

— Palestinians made a grenade attack on soldiers of an elite Israeli army unit and their relatives after a swearing-in ceremony Wednesday at the Wailing Wall in Jerusalem. One person was killed and 69 people were wounded by the grenade throwers, who escaped in a car.

— A day later, anti-aircraft missiles fired from Palestinian guerrilla bases around the Lebanese port city of Sidon brought down an Israeli F-4 Phantom jet during a bombing raid and an Israeli airman was captured.

Arafat, as leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization, is likely to be a beneficiary of both operations — even though other Palestinian groups opposed to his leadership may have had a hand in carrying them out.

The attacks came at a time when senior PLO officials said Arafat was moving sections of his command from Tunisia to protect his guerrilla army from Israeli strikes. Arafat on Saturday denied a move was under way.

Successful military operations help Arafat attract new funds from Arab states and also strengthen his position in dealing with the factional fighting that has wracked the PLO.

Any boost he gets will come none too soon for the embattled guerrilla chieftain, whose fortunes have sunk to low ebb since he was chased out of Lebanon by Israel in 1982. Arafat was expelled from Syria by President Hafez Assad the following year and fell out with Jordan's King Hussein in recent months.

At the same time, some of his wealthy Arab backers, hurt by falling oil prices, no longer are willing to bankroll the PLO so generously.

The developments threatened to strip Arafat, 57, of both strands of his strategy to win a Palestinian homeland — the gun and the olive branch.

Recent attempts by Arafat's forces to infiltrate a guerrilla squad into northern Israel failed and his men were killed or captured. The failures demoralized his scattered fighters and eroded his prestige with young Palestinians.

Arafat's supporters gradually have built up a base at the Ein Hilweh refugee camp near Sidon, infiltrating commanders and weapons by sea. But, instead of fighting Israel, they have found themselves fighting for survival against a welter of Lebanese militias, many of them Syrian-backed.

Most of the PLO's 12,000 to 15,000 guerrilla fighters remain loyal to Arafat even though the force is split into three major camps, with two groups demanding his ouster.

And, in the eyes of most of the 4 million to 5 million Palestinians, he remains "Al-Khitiar," the wise old man, who has won recognition from 115 countries and observer status at the United Nations for the Palestinian national cause.

Some countries still want to keep Arafat at arm's length, however. Tunisia, where he set up headquarters after losing his power base in Lebanon, has made clear it wants the PLO out.

Israeli warplanes bombed the Tunis headquarters a year ago, killing more than 60 people, including Tunisians, to avenge the slaying of three Israelis in Cyprus by Palestinian gunmen.

After the raid, Arafat began planning how to make the PLO's leadership and key departments less vulnerable to a single Israeli strike.

Senior PLO officials, interviewed last week in Nicosia and by telephone in Tunis, said the PLO has begun moving out of Tunis. By the end of October, only the political department, the PLO's foreign ministry, will remain in Tunis, they said, speaking on condition of anonymity.

They said the PLO's Revolutionary Courts will move to Khartoum, capital of Sudan; the Palestine National Fund, the organization's finance ministry, will go to North Yemen's capital of Sanaa and the military command will set up base in Baghdad, Iraq.

Arafat will shuttle among his command posts, said one PLO official.

Quake, war have produced 'enough martyrs,' monsignor says

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Bone-tired rescuers headed for home Saturday, shopkeepers opened their stores once again and families tried to reorganize their lives after El Salvador's devastating earthquake.

But it will take years for this small Central American nation to recover from the Oct. 10 quake, which killed approximately 1,000 people.

Already battered by a guerrilla war, fierce political battles and an economic crisis, the U.S.-supported Christian Democratic government must set out to reconstruct housing, businesses and schools. Most of the damage and casualties were confined to San Salvador, the capital city of 800,000.

"This is much worse than the war," President Jose Napoleon Duarte said last week, adding that the quake caused greater damage in six seconds than seven years of war with leftist rebels.

At an ecumenical prayer service Saturday afternoon, clerics from the Roman Catholic, Baptist, Episcopal and Lutheran churches jointly called for an end to the civil war.

About 2,000 people attended the service at the base of the Monument to Divine Savior of the World. The top of the stone obelisk broke off during the quake, which some Catholics said was an omen to the country.

"You who look out over this city which bears your name without meaning to punish us, you are trying to tell us something," said Catholic Monsignor Ricardo Urioste. He said the earthquake and war had produced "enough martyrs."

The quake toll, still incomplete, stood at more than 8,000 injured and up to 300,000 homeless. Damage could reach $2 billion, Duarte said.

The sudden, sharp tremor hit shortly before midday on Friday, Oct. 10, trapping an untold number in buildings and earth slides. The quake collapsed ragtag housing in the shantytowns surrounding the capital. Downtown buildings crumbled or sank.

At least 150 people were pulled out alive from the collapsed, five-story Ruben Dario office building, which became a symbol of the catastrophe. Foreign rescue teams worked there together, digging with shovels and by hand.

"Too much time has passed now for there to be more (survivors)," said Italian rescuer Carlos Quarenghi, whose team was leaving Saturday. About 100 bodies were believed still buried in the rubble.

Duarte said the country needed to rebuild houses that suffered irreparable damage, get the economy and basic services moving and repair government buildings. "But the people are first," he said.

Some speculated that the economic sabotage staged routinely by the guerrillas gave the government practice in repair work, enabling it to restore most electric, water and telephone service within days of the quake.

"It's amazing to me how quickly the government got things together," said U.S. Embassy press aide Pendleton Agnew. "I think it's in response to the war."

The rebels regularly down power lines, electric poles and bridges, costing $2 billion.

In recent years about 500,000 of the country's 5.2 million people have fled from war zones in the north and east, many heading for the capital of San Salvador. Hundreds of houses built by the refugees along the outskirts and river beds were crumbled by the quake.

"We still have food for the displaced," said Roberto Viera, the deputy communications minister, in an interview. "But with the earthquake, the food that we have in the warehouses won't last more than 15 days."

Cuba releases last prisoner taken in Bay of Pigs invasion

MIAMI (AP) — The last of the 1,200 men imprisoned in Cuba for the abortive Bay of Pigs invasion a quarter-century ago arrived in Miami on Saturday, saying he would "continue to be a soldier of freedom."

Ramon Conte Hernandez, 56, hugged his wife, Hilda, and other family members who greeted him at Miami International Airport on a flight from Havana. He was accompanied on the flight from Cuba by his 82-year-old mother, Maria Hernadez Ojeda.

"I'm very grateful to be in the land of freedom," Conte said through an interpreter. "I thank the Americans for all they've done, and I'll continue to be a soldier of freedom here and everywhere."

Conte, who fled Castro's revolution in 1959, was one of 1,200 Cuban exiles captured in the CIA-backed invasion of April 17, 1961.

All but nine of the exiles were freed and returned to the United States in exchange for $53 million in food and medical supplies 20 months later. Seven of the nine eventually were released and one died in prison. Cuban President Fidel Castro never explained why he kept Conte in prison for so long or why he was being released now.

Conte, who had escaped custody in 1969 but was recaptured two years later, said he was released Friday afternoon and spent Friday night in a Havana hotel.

At a news conference, Conte said he received "exceedingly better treatment" in the last few weeks before his release. "In this final period, my treatment changed totally," he said, without elaborating.

Despite his lengthy imprisonment, Conte said he was prepared to continue fighting Communism.

"The cause is not dead," he said. "Just because I was taken out of prison doesn't mean the cause is over. Cuba is still not free...I've been fighting Communism since I was 16 years old. None of that has changed."

Another member of Brigade 2506, Raul Masvidal, called Conte's release "the last page of a chapter. It's a sad chapter. But we brigade members hope the book has a happy ending...the eventual return of democracy in Cuba."

Also on hand to greet Conte was fellow brigade member Ricardo Montero Duque.

CIA secretly backed Castro before revolution, book claims

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Central Intelligence Agency, which allegedly sponsored numerous assassination attempts against Cuban President Fidel Castro, secretly provided financial support to Castro's movement prior to his triumph in 1959, according to a new book.

Tad Szulc, author of "Fidel, A Critical Portrait," said the CIA's apparent goal in providing the movement with "no less than $50,000" was to purchase goodwill for the United States among the rebels in the event they triumphed.

The irony of the CIA's reported role in support of the rebellion is that the CIA sponsored an exile invasion of Cuba in 1961 and later sought on eight occasions to assassinate Castro, according to a 1975 Senate Intelligence Committee report.

Whatever the figure, Szulc said the CIA had a far more benign view of Castro's 26th of July movement as it was gathering strength in the fall of 1957.

"Uncle Sam was engaged in a number of actions in Cuba that were both contradictory and mysterious," Szulc wrote.

Cantankerous, 'productive' 99th Congress finally adjourns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cantankerous to the end, the 99th Congress belatedly adjourned Saturday, one day after a headlong rush to complete a staggering load of major legislation and barely two weeks before the Nov. 4 elections.

The gavel came down for the year in the Senate at 9:14 p.m. EDT. The House followed suit at 9:33 p.m.

"Productive. One word," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., when asked to sum up the work of Congress.

"This Congress, in all probability, will be remembered for tax reform, balancing our defense needs against the demands for fiscal restraint, and for its inability to find a successful formula to solve the continuing problem of our national deficit," said Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia.

"Time and effort and some frustration" have produced "several milestones that many of the members and many congressional observers never thought possible," House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., had said in a farewell statement.

Shortly before adjournment, Dole and Byrd made the customary call to President Reagan informing him that Congress had completed its business for the year.

"We've just about wrapped up this session of Congress...We think we've had a pretty good year," Dole told the president.

Reagan replied, "Well I do too, Bob — both Bobs."

Byrd also lightheartedly reminded Reagan that control of the Senate is at stake in the upcoming congressional elections saying, "Mr. President, if we're in the majority, remember, now, I'll be sitting next to you when I come down to see you" at the White House.

House leaders made a similar call Friday night.

The second session of the 99th Congress, which convened last Jan. 21, ended more than two weeks past its original adjournment target of Oct. 3. The 100th Congress is to convene Jan. 6, 1987.

The House and Senate completed their major work Friday night — including some measures that had been bottled up for years — but a handful of legislators were on hand in each chamber Saturday to watch over last-minute items, mostly pet projects for which their sponsors wanted to make one last pitch.

Scores of bills for everything from commemorating the 100th anniversary of Sears, Roebuck & Co. to "National Bowling Week" occupied the attention of the lawmakers who were weary, but nonetheless interested in pushing through just one more bil.

"The final day dragged on and on as senators and House members refusing to give up on several bills stalled adjournment well into the evening.

Noting the slow pace, Dole commented, "If anybody told me at 11 in the morning that we'd be here at 9 o'clock at night, I'd have told them they ought to be examined; now I think we ought to be examined."

Attendance in both chambers dwindled. House leaders left town and Rep. Steny H. Hoyer, D-Md., who does not hold a leadership post but does live in the nearby Maryland suburbs, was left presiding over the House.

During one sprint of more substantive action, the Senate approved dozens of measures, with virtually no debate and no roll call votes, in about 50 minutes.

Included among the final measures was a $7.7 billion authorization for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. The bill, later passed by the House as the last piece of legislation enacted by the 99th Congress, provides for the replacement of the destroyed space shuttle Challenger.

The Senate also passed legislation reimbursing Hamilton Jordan, former President Jimmy Carter's chief of staff, for legal costs incurred in defending himself during a special prosecutor's investigation of allegations he used cocaine at a New York nightclub. The special prosecutor found there was no reason to prosecute. However, the House failed to act on the measure and it died.

Federal judge orders LaRouche money seized

WASHINGTON (AP) — An elderly widow who says she was defrauded of more than $60,000 by followers of Lyndon LaRouche won a federal court order seizing the money of two groups tied to the political extremist, including the campaign for a controversial AIDS measure on the California ballot.

An order signed by U.S. District Judge Thelton E. Henderson in San Francisco directed the attachment of up to $63,958 in the bank accounts of the Prevent AIDS Now Initiative Committee, or "PANIC," and Caucus Distributors Inc. Both are part of LaRouche's network of organizations.

The move has the effect of freezing money in a Los Angeles bank account held by PANIC.

The committee is the primary force behind Proposition 64, a ballot initiative that if approved by California voters Nov. 4 would allow wide testing and quarantining of victims of AIDS, acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

A suit filed in U.S. District Court in San Francisco under seal on Oct. 10 charged that LaRouche's followers used "relentless pressure, psychological harassment and deceit" to persuade Margaret M.P. Beynen, 83, to turn over much of her life's savings as loans to LaRouche's organizations. The loans have not been repaid and are in default.

The suit charges LaRouche, several of his organizations and associates with racketeering, fraud, breach of contract and intentional infliction of emotional distress.

The judge's order allowing attachment of assets was an unusual move, imposed the day the suit was filed without a judgment and without notice to LaRouche's groups.

It was issued and kept secret after Mrs. Beynen's lawyers argued that LaRouche followers would move their money and conceal it if they had advance notice.

Henderson lifted the seal late Friday.

At LaRouche's Leesburg, Va., headquarters, spokeswoman Nereida Thompson had no comment Saturday.

Mrs. Beynen's lawyers won the order against PANIC by alleging that money taken from her and other victims had been transferred to PANIC to finance its campaign for the AIDS ballot issue. Public campaign records show Caucus Distributors has contributed more than $200,000 to PANIC.

The lawyers, Daniel H. Bookin and George A. Riley of San Francisco, located a Los Angeles bank account held by PANIC and had its assets seized. They said they had not yet learned how much money was in the account but understood it was less than that owed Mrs. Beynen.

LaRouche is a frequent fringe candidate for president who espouses bizarre theories of world conspiracies that defy traditional political labels. He also directs a multimillion-dollar network of interlocking corporations, organizations and committees that seek to advance his political and economic causes.

Ten LaRouche followers and five of his related organizations, including Caucus, were indicted Oct. 6 by a federal grand jury in Boston.

ROOFING PROBLEMS

Unlike human skin, the roof skin of a house is not particularly flexible. As the foundation and framing settle and split, seams in the roof can be lifted or pulled apart. Roofing also is incapable of sealing itself. When seams open or areas start to deteriorate, the problems worsen at an ever increasing rate as weather widens breaks in the protective skin. In addition, a majority of new homes are not built with steeply-sloped roofs that shed water quickly. Most are walkable, that is, sloped gently enough so that workmen can lay the shingles without the aid of scaffolding equipment. Conditions being equal, as the slope or pitch of the roof decreases, the potential for problems increase.

If you're a veteran, and you're planning home improvements, you should know that we are an approved contractor for the Texas Veterans Home Improvement program. NATION IN BRIEF

Vets end fast protesting U.S. assistance to Contras

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of four military veterans who fasted to protest U.S. aid to Nicaraguan rebels said Saturday they ended their demonstration convinced that opposition to Reagan administration policy is growing.

"A grassroots movement is in the beginning of development and we want to be part of that now," said Brian Willson, who ended a 32-day "water-only" fast Friday at midnight.

Willson was one of four veterans, including a Medal of Honor winner from the Vietnam War, who fasted on the steps of the Capitol to protest the government's support for Contra rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government.

The four men ended their fast in response to what they said was a strong reaction from the American people to their demonstration.

"We would not have come off this fast if we had not seen what we consider a response that went way beyond what we envisioned," said Willson. "Too many people were writing us and calling us and saying they seriously consider being a participant."

Cross burning protested

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (AP) — About 50 people demonstrated Saturday to protest plans by white supremacists to burn a cross at a farm to signal establishment of what they call a white republic in the Northwest.

"We believe they're just coming from the wrong perspective," said Dan Brawley, one of about a dozen protesters carrying placards with slogans such as "Don't burn crosses, build bridges."

"They're reading the Bible the way they want to read it, not for what it really says."

John Miller, a pastor of the Church of Jesus Christ Christian-Aryan Nations, scheduled a cross-lighting at his ranch, about 15 miles from Twin falls, for 8 p.m. MDT Saturday, to mark the establishment of the Northwest Mountain Republic Aryan Nations.

Miller, who said he wanted to "call kindred klansmen together," has been distributing notices for his rally for weeks in the Magic Valley, hoping to draw what he estimates to be 150 local white supremacists and separatists.

The "republic" would united Aryan Nations followers in Idaho, Montana, Washington, Wyoming and Oregon, he said.

Rights panel's budget cut

WASHINGTON (LAT) — Congress has sliced the budget of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights by more than a third and restricted use of the remaining money, in response to charges of mismanagement at the troubled agency.

As part of the fiscal 1987 omnibus spending bill, the House agreed to a Senate plan to cut the commission's budget from $12 million to $7.5 million and to halve the number of working days that Chairman Clarence M. Pendleton Jr. can charge to the government.

Details were released Friday after the House, which had voted to eliminate the commission's funding, agreed to the compromise.

The eight-member panel has been in a state of perpetual conflict since 1983, when President Reagan and Congress revamped it with a conservative majority that has repeatedly been accused by its liberal faction of being a mouthpiece for the administration.

A move to abolish the commission gathered force last spring when the General Accounting Office accused it of widespread mismanagement, including the hiring of a large number of political appointees, consultants and temporary employees instead of career federal workers.

The GAO also found that Pendleton, an outspoken black conservative who lives in San Diego, has turned his part-time chairman's post into a nearly full-time job, charging the commission $67,344 for 240 days of work last year. Pendleton has dismissed the GAO probe as politically motivated.

Confederate POW reburied

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Men wearing Confederate gray discharged volleys of musket fire and a high school band played a funeral march Saturday while the remains of a Union prisoner of war were disinterred, the first step in the soldier's homeward journey to his native Tennessee.

The whereabouts of Cyrus G. Clark, who died in 1863, were unknown to his family until 1972, when the wife of a great-great-grandson traced Clark's grave to Cave Hill Cemetery near Louisville.

New NAACP headquarters dedicated

BALTIMORE (AP) — Officials of the nation's largest black organization gathered here Saturday to dedicate the new headquarters of the NAACP, which its director says is struggling to implement civil rights laws already passed.

"We're not going to get any more sweeping court judgments," said Dr. Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. "The battle is now implementation."

Hooks joined about 20 members of the NAACP's national board to dedicate the office building and grounds of the new headquarters of the 400,000-member organization, which was founded in 1909 in New York.

"While we do have a comfortable home now, we are not yet free," said C. DeLores Tucker, national board member. "We are gathered here to dedicate this building to the proposition that freedom is not free without constant vigilance."

More than 500 people showed up on the brisk autumn day. Speakers included Maryland Gov. Harry Hughes and Baltimore City Council President Clarence "Du" Burns.

Flags from all 50 states were presented by a representative of each state, and officials then cut a ribbon at the entrance of the five-story renovated building on the city's northwest side.

The NAACP moved to Baltimore from Brooklyn, N.Y., last year because of high rent and the need for more space, officials said.

It bought the 55,000-square-foot building and moved half of its 300-member staff for $4.3 million, only $600,000 of which is still owed, said spokesman Jerry Guess. The NAACP, with an annual budget of about $10 million, will be saving between $300,000 and $500,000 a year by moving from Brooklyn, Guess said.

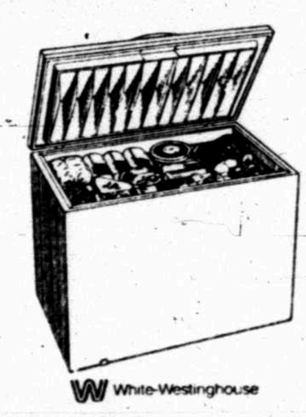

Before the ceremony, Hooks said in an interview that criticism that the civil rights movement has achieved everything it can is "simplistic and it's a lie."

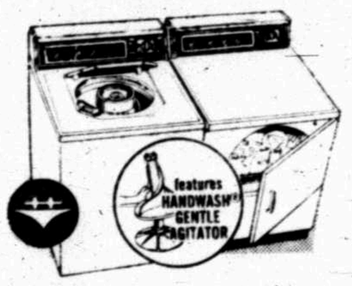

Hooks said the group responds to 12,000 complaints of racial discrimination a year and has helped file more than 40,000 complaints with the federal Equal Opportunity Employment Commission. He noted that the number of black faculty members at major universities is lower than it was in 1976.

WORLD in brief

Ortega: Contra aid means Hasenfus will go to prison

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Nicaraguan leader Daniel Ortega called President Reagan "the godfather" Saturday and said Reagan had in effect sentenced American Eugene Hasenfus to prison by approving $100 million in U.S. aid for the Contra rebels.

"Upon signing that law today, President Reagan is signing the death sentence not only of Nicaraguans but also of American citizens, like Misters Cooper and Sawyer, and also signing the prison sentence...for Hasenfus," the Nicaraguan president said in a nationally broadcast speech.

Hasenfus was captured Oct. 6 after a rebel supply plane was shot down over southern Nicaragua. William J. Cooper, identified as the plane's pilot, and Wallace Blaine Sawyer Jr. of Magnolia, Ark., died in the crash.

Earlier, the Nicaraguan government turned down a U.S. request to postpone Hasenfus' trial for two weeks.

But Ortega insisted Hasenfus would receive a fair trial despite the approval of U.S. aid for the rebels. The funding was contained in the omnibus spending bill approved earlier by Congress and signed Saturday by Reagan.

Hasenfus, 45, of Marinette, Wis., will be tried before a "People's Anti-Somocista Tribunal," created in 1983 to prosecute those accused of counter-revolutionary activity.

INS action upsets Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — The newspaper El Tiempo said Saturday that U.S. immigration officials "disfigured" the image of the United States as a democratic nation by canceling the visa of Colombian journalist Patricia Lara and deporting her.

Her deportation was not explained and Ms. Lara has said she is suing the U.S. government. U.S. immigration officials have said only that her name appeared on a list of people that can be kept out of the country because of suspected subversive or terrorist activity.

Ms. Lara, who gave a news conference here after her return Friday night, said she has "never been a member of the Communist Party or belonged to any subversive group." She said she was a member of the governing Liberal Party.

The 35-year-old reporter for El Tiempo had traveled to New York at the invitation of the Columbia School of Journalism to attend the presentation of the Maria Moors Cabot prizes, presented annually to journalists specializing in Latin America. Ms. Lara, a 1980 graduate of Columbia University, was not a prizewinner.

El Tiempo said in an editorial on Saturday that a trip Ms. Lara made to Cuba may have landed her on the suspected subversives list.

Haitians vote for assembly

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Haitians take the first step today toward devising a permanent replacement to the regime of ousted President-for-life Jean-Claude Duvalier, when they vote for a 41-member constitutional assembly.

The assembly will submit a draft constitution to the public for approval early next year. Some public leaders are hoping it will undo the concentration of power in the presidency built up under the 29-year Duvalier dynasty.

The constitution under which Duvalier's father, Francois "Papa Doc" Duvalier, took office in 1957 shared power between the presidency and Legislature. But under five amended constitutions, the Senate was dissolved and political parties were banned.

Critics of the government were beaten, jailed, exiled or killed. Before he died in 1971, the elder Duvalier claimed the right to name his son as his successor.

Lt. Gen. Henri Namphy, head of the military-civilian council that took over when the younger Duvalier fled to exile in France in February, announced elections for a constitutional assembly two weeks ago.

Iraq appeals to U.N.

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq has appealed to the United Nations to intervene with Iran to stop it from firing long-range missiles at the Iraqi capital, state-run radio reported Saturday.

The appeal was contained in a letter sent Friday to U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar by Foreign Minister Tariq Aziz, the radio said. It quoted the letter as saying Iraq hopes the United Nations "takes up its responsibilities toward ending the repeated Iranian aggression."

The letter was sent a day after an Iranian missile struck a residential neighborhood of Baghdad, killing six people and injuring 64.

It was the third Iranian attack on Baghdad since Aug. 12. Iran said it was in retaliation for Iraq's recent air raids on Iranian economic and oil installations.

Enrile considers resigning

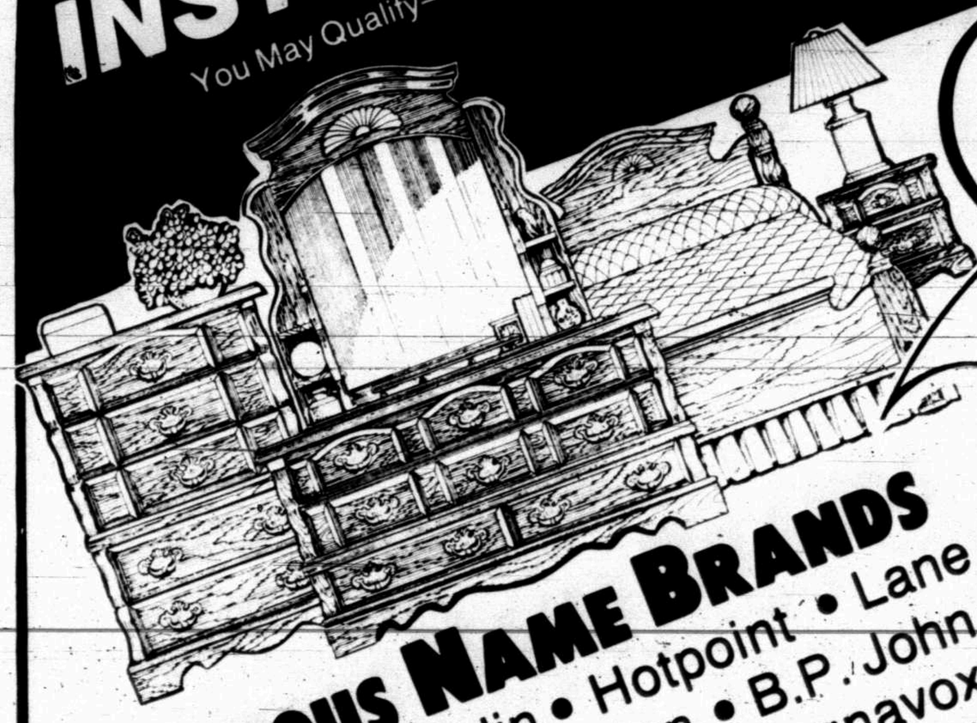

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile, criticized for questioning President Corazon Aquino's handling of the Communist insurgency, said Saturday he would consider resigning if it is in the country's best interest.

"My colleagues in the Cabinet have been asking for my resignation," Enrile told military officers in Zamboanga. "I would like to assure you...I will make a decision in due course, and that decision will be predicated not on my own personal interest but what I consider the interest of the people in this country."

Candidates accuse each other of being soft on crime

DALLAS (AP) — Gov. Mark White and Republican challenger Bill Clements have released their latest TV campaign ads, with each accusing the other of being soft on crime.

In the new Clements ad, Susan Key of Dallas says, "I was attacked and beaten by a man that was on parole for only 33 days.

"His vicious criminal behavior was a matter of public record, but he was released as a part of Mark White's early-release program," she says.

"I wrote Mark White and I wrote the Parole Board and I asked them why they had let him out. And they never even answered my letter."

White's New York campaign consultant, Harris Diamond, said, "I'm outraged and shocked because Bill Clements vetoed a prison that might have kept that man and many other criminals in prison."

Diamond previewed a new White ad in which three sheriffs condemn Clements for vetoing state prison funds.

After the sheriffs speak an announcer says, "Nineteen men paroled by Bill Clements have committed murder while on parole."

Perhaps in a rush to one-up each other, certain foulups have occurred on both sides, the Dallas Morning News reported Saturday.

This week the White campaign pulled an ad severely critical of Clements because two figures involved in it were discovered to be less than supportive of White.

And in order to avoid pulling an ad, the Clements campaign had to pay a free-lance photographer whose photo had been aired without permission.

White and Clements are both airing other ads disputing each others stands on certain issues.

Fire at GOP fund-raising barbecue destroys two cars

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — A fire destroyed two cars and damaged six others during a barbecue for Republicans Bill Clements and Roy Barrera Jr.

Smoke trailed for miles from El Indio Danceland Friday where Amigos De Clements Y Barrera held their fund-raising barbecue.

Fire officials believe the fire, which started under a Chevrolet Chevette and then spread, was ignited by a hot tail pipe, a catalytic converter or a discarded cigarette.

Fire officials said three units responded to the grass fire, which broke out shortly after 6 p.m. The blaze was extinguished within minutes.

One vehicle owner said he believed the fire may have been politically motivated since he had a Jim Mattox sticker on his rear bumper.

"I don't believe any one would do it intentionally," Assistant Fire Chief J.R. Guzman said. "I would hate to think that somebody would get down that low to start it."

He added, "It could happen, but I would rather believe it was the catalytic converter or the cigarette."

Once the fire erupted underneath the Chevette, two parking attendants attempted to put it out with their shirts, said District Fire Chief Max Vera.

Mattox will seek order to close home

FORT WORTH (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox says he'll return to court for another order against the Rev. W.N. Otwell, this time to close the facility that has been the source of a grueling feud between Mattox and the fugitive pastor.

After a raid on the Forest Hill children's home run by the Otwell's Community Baptist Church failed Friday, Mattox promised he would seek a court order to close the unlicensed home.

"I anticipate that on Wednesday a district judge in Travis County will order the closure of the facility," Mattox said.

Mattox said officials from the Department of Human Services, Texas Youth Commission, the Department of Public Safety and local law enforcement agencies staged a predawn raid on the school.

But officials, who were armed with a judge's order to take custody of any children, found none under age 18.

In a Friday telephone interview with a Dallas radio station, Otwell said children were removed from the home after the church was tipped to the raid at about 10 p.m.

Mattox said he believes a law enforcement officer tipped Otwell's supporters about the early morning raid.

Mattox previously took Otwell to court for operating the church-run home without a license. Otwell maintains the licensing order is a violation of the constitutional separation of church and state, but the courts ruled against him.

A state district judge ordered fines of $100 per day for Otwell and eight others running the home. On Aug. 5, sale of the Community Baptist Church property was ordered to cover unpaid fines. Otwell since has been found to be in contempt of court and fled the state.

Otwell says Mattox's attempt to close the home will bring more religious leaders to his defense.

But Mattox says he's running out of patience and said the expected court order would hold in contempt of court anyone who attempted to keep the home open. Jail terms also are a possibility, Mattox said.

Officers seize horses at riding stable

AMARILLO (AP) — Law enforcement officials in Randall County hauled away 15 horses allegedly neglected and mistreated by the owner of a riding stable in Palo Duro Canyon.

Jim Sorenson, owner of Rimrock Canyon Riding Stables, was taken into custody by deputies shortly before authorities began rounding up the animals.

Sorenson was arraigned Friday on five counts of cruelty to animals and released on $5,000 bond.

Some of the horses were so malnourished and sick they will have to be destroyed, Humane Society officials said.

"I don't think I have ever seen horses in worse shape," said Danny Alexander, cruelty investigator for the Humane Society.

"Some of these horses, if put out for the winter, would not survive. They would die."

After months of trying to persuade Sorenson to comply with the law, officials said they were forced to act.

"We've had many complaints from people that came down to rent horses and were afraid to ride them down the hill," Alexander said.

"We do everything we can and this is the very absolute last straw before we come in here and do something like this."

Workers from the Humane Society, sheriff's office and district attorney's office removed the horses from the property.

Many horses had ribs showing through knotted and dirty hide and some had oozing sores on their backs and flanks.

A local veterinarian agreed to shelter and treat the animals that could be saved, Alexander said.

Alexander said every time he threatened to remove the animals Sorenson would bring the horses back to health.

Sorenson's neighbor, Ken Howard, co-owner of Palo Duro Campground and R.V. Park, said he has fought for four years to have something done about the horses.

Engineers, geologists offered retraining

HOUSTON (AP) — Laid-off engineers and geologists are being invited to try their hand at teaching math and science under a new program being pushed by Chevron Corp. and the University of Houston.

Education officials are hoping the program not only will provide new jobs but will help meet a critical shortage of math and science instructors.

The program will be open to about 3,500 current and former Chevron workers in the Houston area, university spokeswoman Michelle Raymond said.

A special 18-month course in teaching methods and laboratory procedures, plus a stint of student teaching, will lead to a state teaching certificate, she said.

Because most of the employees are engineers, geologists and computer scientists, they already have the required bachelor of science degree, Ms. Raymond said.

"They're perfect to teach," she said.

Her office has been flooded with calls from people wanting to know more about the program, she said Friday.

"I think you will find most of the school districts will have an interest in it," said Linda West, executive director of staff personnel for the Katy Independent School District. "We all are competing for the same people."

Since the beginning of the year, Katy has had some difficulty in finding qualified math and science applicants, she said.

Oil company veterans making mid-life career changes will bring maturity and relevance to the classroom, Ms. West said.

The U.S. Department of Education predicts 200,000 new math and science teachers will be needed in the United States by 1990.

Some studies have shown 80 percent of math and science teachers leave the profession with 10 years for better-paying jobs in industry, Ms. Raymond said.

Planning for the program began last spring after Chevron officials talked with members of a national science teachers' association, said Culton Ingram, the company's public affairs manager in Houston.

TORNADO or THUNDERSTORM

WATCH
(Conditions are right for a tornado or severe thunderstorm to form.)

WARNING
(A tornado or severe thunderstorm already is in existence.)

In North Texas, partly cloudy through Monday with widely scattered thunderstorms over the west on Monday. Highs generally ranging from the upper 70s to the lower 80s today and in the 80s on Monday. Lows continuing in the 50s.

In West Texas, widely scattered showers and thunderstorms north and far west Sunday and over much of area through Monday. Highs today 66 Panhandle to 82 Big Bend. Lows Monday night 42 mountains to 46 Panhandle to 59 Concho Valley. Highs Monday 61 Panhandle to 78 Big Bend.

In South Texas, partly cloudy to cloudy through Monday. A slight chance of showers and thundershowers through Monday. Highs today in the 80s. Lows tonight in the 50s east to the 70s extreme south and in the 60s elsewhere. Highs Monday in the 80s except near 90 southwest.

Chance of rain in forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

The chance for thunderstorms will increase tonight from 20 percent to 30 percent, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Today will be partly cloudy with isolated thunderstorms. The high will be near 70 with a less than 20 percent chance of thunderstorms. Winds will be south to southeast at 5 to 15 mph with a low in the lower 50s.

Today will be partly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms. Winds will be southeast at 5 to 15 mph and a high in the upper 60s.

Saturday's high of 75 degrees was 15 degrees cooler than the record high of 90 degrees set in 1936.

The overnight low of 48 degrees was 13 degrees warmer than the record low of 35 degrees set in 1966.

STATE

A high-pressure cell that was settled across the northeastern United States continued to produce clear skies over most of Texas Saturday.

Some clouds formed over South and Southeast Texas because of Gulf moisture that wind currents carried over heated land surfaces, according to the National Weather Service.

A south to southeast wind flowed across the state at 5 to 15 mph.

The forecast for North Texas calls for partly cloudy skies through Monday with widely scattered thunderstorms. Highs should be in the 70s and 80s, with lows in the 50s.

South Texas should be partly cloudy to cloudy through Monday with highs Sunday in the 70s and 80s and lows mostly in the 50s and 60s.

West Texas should see widely scattered showers through Monday with highs ranging from the 60s in the Panhandle to the 80s in the Big Bend. Lows should be in the 60s and 70s.

NATION

Warnings of high wind were issued Saturday for parts of southern California, and rain was scattered over the mountain states, but skies were generally clear over much of the nation.

Cold air retained its grip over the northeastern quarter of the nation and frost and freeze warnings were posted over southern Lower Michigan, northern Ohio, northwestern West Virginia, and the mountains of North Carolina.

Advisories issued for parts of southern California warned of wind of 30 to 45 mph with stronger gusts, causing blowing dust and drifting sand over the Owens Valley, the Tehachapi Mountains and the southern deserts.

Lisa Nett, left, Marilyn Thomas, center, and Jama Benters discuss a new program in Midland aimed at promoting self-sufficiency among single parents.

Single parents on road to self-sufficiency

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Single parents Jama Benters, Lisa Nett and Marilyn Thomas know from experience just how long the road to financial independence can be.

With the cost of rent, transportation, day care, food and clothing soaring, these Midland women say it's getting harder and harder to make ends meet.

Many single parents — especially women — are unable to find jobs because they lack skills and have minimal resources to acquire those skills, said Jerri Westmoreland, Midland County Housing director and a member of a task force to promote self-sufficiency.

"Many times, someone will find a way to get the training, but they need other assistance," she said.

Until recently, Ms. Westmoreland said there were very few services available locally to break the poverty cycle among low income, single parents living in the oil patch.

Now, single parents are moving forward with the help of a federally funded project which enables them to obtain higher-paying jobs and become independent of long-term government programs.

"I see Project Self-Sufficiency as a way for single parents to move from dependence to independence and make a contribution to life," said the Rev. Nina Douglas, pastor of Permian Church of Religious Science.

Project Self-Sufficiency — a derivative of the President's Quality of Life Initiatives — has been implemented in a 140 cities across the nation since it's formation in 1985.

"The interesting or new idea or approach to the program is that it allows a community to set up a task force to design and create their own resources," Ms. Westmoreland said.

"What comes out of this is a comprehensive program for low income single parents to become totally self-sufficient in the community."

City Council impressed with chief candidates

By RAMONA NYE
Staff Writer

After a day-long grilling session, several Midland City Council members and the mayor said Saturday they were impressed with the four final police chief candidates selected by a Washington state firm.

"I was favorably impressed by all of them. Some of them have different strengths than others, but they were all very impressive men with impressive records," said Mayor Carroll Thomas.

Despite the positive impressions made with city officials, a new police chief will not be selected until more background information is collected by City Manager James Brown.

Thomas said he hopes a chief will be selected before the next City Council meeting on Oct. 28.

"We're making up our minds and doing some more investigating," Brown said.

Only one Texan was among the four finalists, who include:

— James McLaughlin Jr., 42, director of Longview police services.

— Kenneth Harrison, 44, a Miami police colonel.

— Talmadge Lassiter, 51, a Durham, N.C., police chief.

— Richard Czech, 53, a commander of the Tucson Police Department operation support bureau.

Having a Midlander as a finalist would have been nice, but not necessary, Thomas said.

"It would have been awful nice to have somebody already here that was as well qualified as these men were, but that didn't turn out to be the case," he said.

Four Midlanders applied for the top law enforcement position, including interim Police Chief Maj. Sid Corley, Capt. Clayton McKinney of the sheriff's office, Bob Peetz, Midland College criminal justice coordinator and Patrick Fuller, a district attorney investigator.

Councilor Gordon Marcum said he was disappointed no Midlanders were among the finalists.

"I was, I guess, for no other reason than I hoped we had in our system brought up some people to have the administrative backgrounds that are necessary to work your way up to chief of police.

"We have just moved into a new phase of police work in Midland. We've had no type of organization in the police department that would allow the organization to produce the type of person we need now in our history.

"Hopefully we will have created an organization and atmosphere that will educate and train a true administrator to work his way up so we can promote within," Marcum said.

Ms. Heck said, "I was sort of disappointed there were no local people, although the candidates are so strong. I don't think the local people really had the comparable background.

"No matter which of the four it is, he's going to be great," she said.

Kidney transplant center available to West Texas

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

LUBBOCK — West Texas can now think of more than swimming pools and bean dishes when they hear the word "kidney."

An unintentional yet well-kept secret, Lubbock's Southwest Kidney Institute (SKI), in January brought world-class technology and personnel to an area previously barren in terms of kidney transplant and organ retrieval capabilities.

The seeds of the institute were planted when Texas Tech's Health Sciences Center hired a new department chairman and virtually ended up with an entire renal (kidney) disease research department.

Dr. Neil A. Kurtzman, who most recently was chief of nephrology (kidney disease) for 12 years at the University of Illinois College of Medicine in Chicago, brought his entire research laboratory and over $1 million in National Institute of Health grants to Lubbock when he accepted his new post at Texas Tech as an Arnett Professor of Medicine and chairman of the school's internal medicine department.

"We had the need and we had the people," Kurtzman, director of the institute as well, said in reference to why he launched development of SKI.

The institute, added at a cost of more than $2 million, is a joint project between Lubbock General Hospital and Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, and opened Jan. 1, 1986. Twenty-one transplants have been performed through this month and all have been successful.

Though there are a large number of "artificial kidney" or dialysis centers in West Texas, none of those nine centers have facilities that go beyond the dialysis stage and into transplant surgeries, Dr. Neal Glass, the institute's transplant surgeon, said.

Previously, West Texas doctors sent a kidney transplant patient to Dallas, Galveston or Albuquerque, Kurtzman said, and still may do the same, though Lubbock's institute ranks equally.

"Old habits die hard and we are the new kid on the block," Kurtzman said, adding it was not uncommon for doctors to subscribe to a "good-old boy" network of their own.

"He may have a friend from medical school in Galveston and he'll figure why not send the business there...I have no problems with that," Kurtzman said.

Glass said 780 of the some 2 million West Texans are receiving dialysis treatment for failed kidneys today. Out of that figure, approximately 50 percent could possibly qualify for transplant surgery, Glass added.

While the kidney transplant is the only transplant surgery to be covered under Medicare, the operation costs upwards of $15,000 to those who can pay, Neal said. That money is currently fortifying other communities and not West Texas, he said.

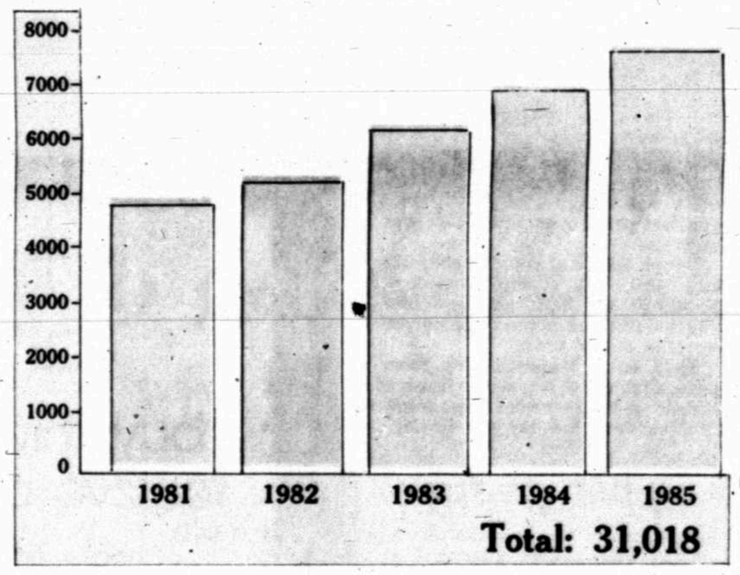

Glass said the expenses for having West Texans travel far away for treatment could also be greatly reduced — making the operation less expensive and available to more — if doctors would send patients to the institute in Lubbock.

Glass, who before becoming a professor of surgery at Texas Tech, was a professor of surgery for 12 years at the University of Wisconsin at Madison School of Medicine, said the cost of the kidney transplant, if Medicare doesn't foot the bill, includes a $10-$14,000 fee for acquisition of the organ (depending on whether it is from a cadaver or a living person) and an approximate $2,000 fee for the surgery.

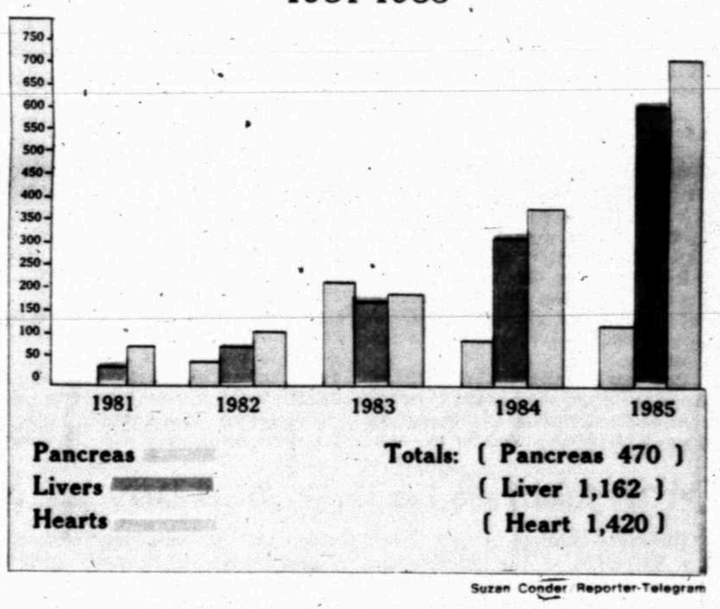

"In 1972, the federal government deemed a kidney transplant a disastrous expense that no one should have to pay for. In the future, I see other transplants being covered by Medicare as a result of political pressures," Glass said.

Finding donor organs can often be problem

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

LUBBOCK — A patient reclines in a hospital bed while monster-sized tubes carry his blood in and out, in and out, in and out...purifying his blood because his kidneys won't do it for him.

The ultimate answer is a kidney transplant; however, locating a kidney donor is often the ultimate problem.

The Southwest Kidney Institute formed its own center so there would be kidneys to transplant.

The Center for Orgran Retrieval and Transplantation (CORT) is located at Lubbock General Hospital and was created specifically to provide access to all organs — kidneys, hearts, livers, pancreases or corneas — for residents of West Texas and eastern New Mexico.

Bruce Grifface, 27, had a kidney transplant at SKI August 15. His kidneys had failed because of diabetes, a condition he's had since the age of 11 and which also caused him to temporarily lose his eyesight.

Steve Curless, 36, suffered from kidney failure induced by glomerulonephritis and had a transplant two weeks ago at SKI.

Function of kidney explained

By JANE MARLER DEES
Staff Writer

LUBBOCK — A kidney is one of the two urinary organs in the back of the abdomen on each side of the spine "shaped like a swimming pool," Dr. Neil Kurtzman said.

The kidneys produce and eliminate urine through a complex system composed of more than two million tiny filters — nephrons. The nephrons filter blood by removing soluble wastes such as urea and salts.

The purified fluid is sent back into the blood by the kidney, thus helping to maintain the balance of water in the human body.

KIDNEY

He added though, he didn't see blanket coverage for a heart or liver transplant as there is now for kidney transplants.

"There is a less than 5 percent mortality rate for kidney transplant victims. In fact, patients most always pass away from another medical problem not having to do with the kidney transplant at all," Glass said.

Glass, who's performed over 400 transplants in his career, said SKI will perform probably 10 more kidney transplants at the institute before the year is out.

Compared with his past employer, the University of Wisconsin which is the second largest transplant center in the world and performs 200 a year, 30 or so transplants in the institute's first year is not a bad showing, he said.

Kurtzman said renal disease is the fifth leading killer disease in America and the No. 1 cause for kidney failure is glomerulonephritis, in the past called Bright's Disease, which is a swelling of the cluster of blood vessels or nerve fibers in the kidney.

"It's a toss up to the second and third spots," Kurtzman said.

"High blood pressure, which destroys the filtering apparatus and blood vessels in the kidney is probably the No. 2 cause and is No. 1 among the black community.

"Diabetes does the same thing to the kidney as high blood pressure and is a common cause of kidney failure as well," Kurtzman said.

Kurtzman said in the future he hopes to recruit more doctors to SKI, expand training facilities at the institute and increase services to the West Texas area.

As far as keeping kidneys in good condition, Kurtzman said the key factor is keeping blood pressure in check.

"Drinking eight glasses of water a day is more or less a myth. There is no reason to do that unless you're really thirsty."

ORGANS

Both were more than ready to receive tranplants at the center when faced with the alternative of living a life on dialysis.

"I felt bad for so long, I had forgotten what it was like to feel good after I got the kidney transplant," Curless said.

"You can't imagine how bad it feels to come off dialysis. There just aren't words to describe it. Your whole system just feels so messed up," Grifface said.

Side effects from the dialysis machine both men complained of included a total feeling of lethargy and lack of any energy, not being able to stand up for long, loss of appetite because things tasted bad and a feeling of being "brain dead," or not being able to think functionally.

Both men received kidneys from their sisters and said they were more worried about the operations for their sisters than they were for the operations for themselves.

When a person isn't lucky enough to have a relative able to donate a kidney, he must wait for a donor — either living or dead — to be located. This is where the CORT program comes into play.

Armand Mackety is the organ procurement coordinator of CORT and is the first contact from hospitals referring potential donors, acts as liaison between the hospital and the donor and is in charge of the institute's Kidney Preservation Laboratory.

The lab houses an $11,000 Waters Kidney Preservation System which acts as a portable high-tech refrigerator to keep the kidney from deteriorating until it is transplanted into the patient. The system can be taken out of the lab if travel is involved in retrieving the kidney, Mackety said.

"The cassette where the kidney sits is kept cold to slow down the molecular activity of the kidney," he said.

Mackety said there is a law in 27 states which requires a hospital to inform families of deceased persons of the opportunity to donate their relative's organs and that soon the law will be in Texas.

"A majority of the time, a person will say he would have liked to donate his deceased relative's organs if only someone had asked him. It's a time of tragedy and their minds are elsewhere," Mackety said.

"Donating a relative's organs is perhaps the only available positive reaction to the grieving process," he added.

Mackety said CORT has access to two nationwide computer networks dealing with organ retrieval.

"For instance, if Midland Memorial Hospital called me with a potential donor, I would ask the potential donor's blood group, age, size and which organs were available for donation.

"I would enter it into the computer and find a match. I never know where the organ is going until it's been transplanted to protect against any bias on my part.

Mackety said in the U.S., there are 22,000 to 30,000 potential donors any given year, but that only 7-10 percent end up being transplanted.

"There are 11,000-13,000 people waiting for a kidney transplant at any time as well," he added.

"There is a drastic need for hearts in the U.S. as well as livers," Mackety said.

The transplant once done though, gives the patient a new lease on life. As Curless said, "It was the biggest Christmas I ever had."

"I will say I like to have the organs go to Texans, especially those in West Texas...New York will look after the people in New York," Mackety said.

Homecoming will long be remembered

EDITOR'S NOTE: This column, which will appear weekly, will be written by students at Midland High and Lee High Youth Centers on a rotating basis. It will feature items of interest to students and their parents

By KELLY DODSON

This column is something new to me, but not new to Midland and Lee students. Nor is it new to the readers of the Midland Reporter-Telegram. This column has appeared weekly from the 1940s through the '70s, and here we are again hoping to rejuvenate the column and make it better than ever.

The column will appear weekly, written by students from Midland and Lee high schools.

As you all know, Homecoming '86 will long be remembered. Despite the heavy rains last Friday night homecoming festivities were certainly not a wash out. Under the direction of Decorations Chairman Michelle Terry, and with the help of Maria Galindo, Faye Daugherty, Kristen Kidwell, Sam Perry, Amy Furgeson, Jeff Roberts, Lisa Rocha, Susan Danley and Shane Stewart, the Midland Youth Center gave the effect of a clear and starry night. Glittering stars, half moons and hearts were hung from the ceiling and the dance floor was framed in black, silver and white streamers.

Due to the rains, the Homecoming Court was presented at the dance. Seniors nominated to court were Kristen Kidwell, Paige Prado and Misty Anaya. Juniors nominated were Jennie Fort and Michelle Slemmons. Each girl was escorted to the dance floor by her father. Principal Jimmy Kelly crowned Miss Prado as the Homecoming Queen.

Although the Bulldogs didn't pull off a victory in the football game, we're still proud of our team. We have got to keep our heads high and get back that great attitude we had early in the season. The players continue to give it all they've got!

And, let's not forget to pay tribute to our Girl's Varsity Volleyball team. Special recognition this week go to two stars — Amy Commings and Melinda Carrasco. Thanks girls and let's show 'em Dogs are best!

PROGRAM

Project Self-Sufficiency currently is lending a helping hand to 30 Permian Basin families, allocating money for rent, transportation, day care, tuition and counseling.

The 30 families were selected based on their motivation and the availabiltity of funds, Ms. Westmoreland said.

Ms. Benters, the divorced mother of a 7-year-old boy, hadn't worked in four years and spent 2½ years on a kidney dialysis machine. She relied heavily on disability payments and parental assistance to support her family.

Since joining the project in August, she has moved out on her own and enrolled at Odessa College, where she is studying to become a surgical technician.

Project Self-Sufficiency "has given me a chance," she said.

"It's given me a sense of independence — of getting out on my own."

Ms. Nett, the divorced mother of a 1½-year-old son, was in the same predicament.

"I started college in January, but I realized with paying the rent and bills I couldn't make it," she said.

Moving in with her mother didn't help matters much, she said.

"Whenever you live at home, you're still the daughter. It's hard to raise a child of your own when you're still considered a child," she added.

Participating in Project Self-Sufficiency has enabled Ms. Nett to find the sense of independence she had been searching for.

"It gives you a lot of confidence knowing you really can make it."

For Ms. Thomas, a divorced mother of four children, the program has provided her family with a home they never had.

"It helped me most to find a place for my kids to grow up in," she said.

"I used to worry how I was going to do this or how I was going to do that. Now I just worry whether I'm going to pass a test. It's taken a burden off my shoulders."

Vernon Martin, a member of Project Self-Sufficiency's Board of Directors, said the program is unique because it adapts to the free enterprise philosophy, common among Permian Basin residents.

"Midlanders and Odessans are more willing to help people who help themselves," Martin said.

"A lot of people have thrown up there hands and said the oil industry is dead, we're all dead."

"But there are other ways to make a living. The oil industry has been diversifying for a long time.

"These people, in a sense, are doing the same thing," he said.

FUNCTION

The pituitary gland is responsible for releasing the antidiuretic homone (ADH) which ultimately controls the amount of water released in the urine.

Daily, more than 2,500 pints of blood go through this process. In fact, all of the blood in the human body passes through the kidneys about 20 times a day.

When the process goes awry, the patient often will need to have it done artificially for a time until a donor can be located for a transplant or if other medical problems warrant against a transplant at all.

Betty Stotts, transplant head nurse at Southwest Kidney Institute — located on the fourth floor at Lubbock General Hospital — said the hemodialysis machine or artificial kidney, removes the impurities from the blood via tubes or needles which have been inserted into a large vein and a large artery.

"Most patients are dialyzed for four hours, three times a week. They usually sit there and watch the television while they're undergoing the treatment," Ms. Stotts said.

"Of the two tubes inserted, one is removing the toxins in the blood and one is returning the purified blood to the body," she said.

A common after-effect is lethargy because of the small amount of blood lost each dialysis session, Ms. Stotts said.

"In addition, healthy people have the poisons in their blood removed every time they urinate and a patient with kidney failure has a build up of these toxins. However, the person with kidney failure must wait and have the poisons removed artificially," she said.

Patients may also feel lethargic because of a lack of red blood cells in the body, Kurtzman said.

"Healthy kidneys produce a hormone that tells the bone marrow to produce red blood cells," he said.

When they're failing, that hormone isn't being produced and the patient can get anemia, Ms. Stotts added.

The hemodialysis sessions are not pleasant, according to transplant victims, and it is for this reason patients are more excited than scared when awaiting a transplant.

"They're afraid their body will reject the new kidney, but they're more excited about the new life a transplant will give them," Ms. Stotts said.

Man shows appreciation by flying for Lions Eye Bank

AUSTIN (AP) — A Georgetown man whose eyesight was restored by a cornea transplant is showing his appreciation by piloting a helicopter.

Lesesne's 1981 cornea transplant was so successful that the once legally blind man decided to use his improved eyes to pursue his dream to fly. He now has a solo pilot's license.

"I've wanted to fly since I was 9 or 10 years old," he said Friday as he posed for the poster photo.

But when he was 18, Lesesne began to notice a progressive blur in his vision. Dan Pittsford, executive director of the Lions Eye Bank of Austin, said Lesesne had developed keratoconus, a hereditary disease that causes the cornea, the transparent covering of the eye, to lose its refractive power.

Local rental business reports theft of truck tires

From Staff Reports

A Midland business reported the theft of $1,000 worth of tires overnight, the sheriff's office reports.

Red Snapper Rentals, 2700 W. Francis, reported the theft of two radial tires and rims sometime between 8:30 p.m. Friday and 10:15 a.m. Saturday.

Business officials told sheriff's officers tne tires were taken from the rear of a truck after the thieves cut open a fence and entered the yard where the truck was parked.

In other law enforcement reports, a Mississippi man lost $522 worth of items after his truck was burglarized at the Warfield Truck Terminal on Interstate 20.

William Wolfe of Forest, Miss., told sheriff officers a $300 radar detector, a $60 citizens band radio, a $150 black-and-white television and a $12 curling iron, were taken from his truck while he took a shower around 2:45 p.m. Saturday at the terminal.

The sheriff's report said Wolfe's truck was broken into after a window was pried open and a door was unlocked.

Joseph Klein, of county roads 120 and 1090, told sheriff's officers, about $200 worth of items were burglarized from his home while he was working out of town.

Klein said a walnut dining room table, a table saw, a concrete finisher and two pole lights were taken sometime between Monday and Friday.

Man testifies he punished boy by giving him pepper

HOUSTON (AP) — A jury heard the statement of a 26-year-old man who said he often used pepper to discipline his girlfriend's young son — but that the boy took the condiment himself the night he choked to death.

Raymond Edward Coffey's statement was read Friday in the court of State District Judge Michael McSpadden, the same day Patty Ann Kalmbach refused to testify against her live-in boyfriend.

McSpadden held her in contempt of court after the 21-year-old refused to identify a photo of her dead son, Christopher Kalmbach, 2.

She is charged with murder by omission, but the judge had ruled her testimony could not be used against her in her upcoming trial.

Emergency room personnel at Parkway General Hospital testified at the first day of the trial that the child was not breathing when Coffey brought him to the hospital May 7.

A doctor who treated the child said he was unable to suction the large amount of pepper from the boy's throat.

Each candidate was interviewed Friday for an hour and 15 minutes and the council consulted throughout the rest of the day with Bruce Jensen, director of the Jensen-Oldani selection firm, and with pyschologist David Wasson, hired to screen candidates.

"I was impressed with all four of them. I just thought they were all qualified. I think anyone of the four would do a good job," said Councilor Robert Rendall.

"Candidates differed on when they could report for the job, with one saying he could come as early as two weeks after a decision is made to one saying he could not come to Midland until after Jan. 1, Thomas said.

Marcum said he was impressed with their intelligence, their national awards and the way they conducted themselves during the interviews.

"All were extremely intelligent men. All had been patrolmen or a detective and worked their way through larger departments," he said.

Councilors Oralia Corrales, David Godfrey and Kelly Fish were unavailable for comment Saturday.

Midland has been without a police chief for almost four months after the July 1 resignation of long-time Police Chief Wayne Gideon.

Gideon resigned when a study critical of the police department was released.

Midland man sentenced to 60 years for murder

From Staff Reports

A Midland man was sentenced to 60 years in the Texas Department of Corrections for the 1985 shooting death of a security guard.

Ruben Bujanda, 35, was found guilty Thursday of murdering 26-year-old James Belis of Odessa on June 16, 1985.

Bujanda was sentenced Friday by a seven-woman, five-man jury in the 238th District Court.

Belis, who was working at a racetrack in southeast Midland County, was shot twice in the head after an apparant dispute about a horserace.

District Attorney Al Schorre said Bujanda will have to serve at least 20 years in prison before he becomes eligible for parole because he used a deadly weapon.

He was facing life imprisonment for the crime.

Local BPW chapter to mark federation's anniversary

From Staff Reports

This week will commemorate the 58th anniversary of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women and has been proclaimed National Business Women's Week.

Midland's Uptown Chapter of Business and Professional Women will commerate its 10-year affiliation by celebrating "A Decade of Women Working for Women" by hosting several community events:

— Tuesday, 7:30-8:30 a.m., coffee and continental breakfast at Texas American Bank parlor: The function is designed to honor various business women throughout the community. Midland's "Business Women of the Year" will be named and honored. During the preceeding week, various businesses throughout the city were contacted and requested to select an outstanding woman from their organization based on tenure, achievement and contribution.

— Wednesday, noon-1 p.m., fashion show and brown bag event with catered food at Centennial Plaza (Midland Center if rained out): "Yesterday's Wardrobe with Tomorrow's Style" will be the theme of this luncheon. The fashion/style show, geared specifically for today's working woman in the current economy and will be presented by Peck & Peck. For additional information, call 687-1061.

— Thursday, 4:30-6 p.m., reception at the Atrium Centre, 110 W. Louisiana: This after-work social invitation is extended to all working women in order that they may meet and "network" with other business and professional women. A complete information library of the National Business and Professional Women will be available.

Membership information and applications will be available at all events.

Suspect your child may have a drug problem?

Don't wait for it to get worse... call PDAP.

If you've got a nagging feeling that something is not quite right with your child, or you're not getting straight answers about your child's friends and activities, you may wonder if drugs are involved.

As a parent, it's not easy to face the scary feeling that comes with suspicion of your own child. The overwhelming temptation is to ignore the obvious clues.

If your child has changed his or her usual group of friends, is less communicative, is making poor grades, and is staying out past curfew . . . you may have a drug problem.

If your child sneaks out of the house after bedtime, disappears for days at a time, has trouble getting up and going to school, and treats you like "the enemy" . . . you have a drug problem.

Adolescent drug and alcohol abuse is one of the most disturbing and prevalent problems in our community. A large majority of Midland's high school students have experimented with alcohol or other mind altering chemicals. Many junior high students, and even elementary children, have experimented. For most, it is just that — experimentation. For a few, it is a serious problem.

Adolescent drug abuse stems from many causes: peer pressure, boredom, a desire to fit in, a feeling of low self esteem. Some will even have a genetic tendency toward chemical dependency. There is no known, guaranteed prevention for drug abuse, and no easily identified cause. Chemical dependent individuals come from single parent families, happily married families, — even from families which totally abstain from the use of alcohol.

Concerning adolescent drinking, we believe that use is abuse. Adolescents drink alcohol for the effect of getting drunk, not as a friendly social custom or as a beverage with meals.

No matter what problem you're facing, chemical dependency is a family disease, and the entire family needs help.

The Palmer Drug Abuse Program (PDAP) is an organization of young people and parents who offer each other support through their various age level groups to overcome the pain and distress caused by destructive behavior patterns. PDAP is staffed by counselors trained in the cause and treatment of chemical dependency and adolescent problems.

Even the "nicest" families can have a drug problem. It's good to know that help is available. Many families in Midland have endured the distressing problems of drug abuse, and through PDAP, found a way of coping that restored sanity to their lives.

The goal of PDAP is to offer the child a program which gives structure to his or her life by developing certain valuable skills. These include learning how to set short and long term goals and finding wholesome ways of achieving them, without drugs or alcohol.

PDAP is funded primarily by The United Way of Midland, as well as by individuals, companies, foundations, and churches in the area. There are no fees for counseling or other services. The PDAP program is non-sectarian and is based on proven principals of honesty and self esteem. PDAP is just one example of how your gift to The United Way makes a difference in the lives of hundreds of Midland families.

If you suspect a problem, don't wait for it to get worse. Call a PDAP counselor for help today:

Important choices

Two county commissioners will be elected by Midland County voters when they go to the polls Nov. 4. In the race for the Precinct 2 seat, now held by Wally Craig, Democrat Don Boydstun is running against Republican nominee Guy McCrary. The Precinct 4 position pits longtime incumbent Commissioner Win Brown against independent Scot Smith, who is running as a declared write-in candidate.

After interviews with all the candidates, the Reporter-Telegram recommends voters cast their ballots for McCrary and Brown.

A local advertising and public relations executive, McCrary has exhibited in his past activities the leadership qualities needed on the Commissioners' Court. While serving as founder and president of Midland Centennial Plaza Association, his work was crucial in bringing Centennial Plaza to fruition. He also has been active in a wide range of civic and community organizations, including the Midland Association for Retarded Citizens, Leadership Midland, the United Way of Midland and Objectives for Midland — The Eighties, to only name a few. But that involvement shows his commitment to the city, county and the people living here.

Whether it be helping resolve the long-standing county jail dilemma plaguing the court or helping to direct the commission's decisions during these difficult economic times, McCrary appears capable of grasping the essence of each tough issue and helping render a decision that is in the best interest of all the county's residents.

On the basics such as how to reduce governmental expenses to keep tax costs at a minimum while still providing for the needs of Midland County's city and rural residents, McCrary understandably wants to look at the county's situation from the perspective of an elected official before committing, but we believe he will be conservative in fiscal matters and strive to see that the needs of all county residents are met equitably. We believe he would be effective for the residents of Precinct 2 and committed to the best interests of all the county's residents.

Brown, a Republican who will be seeking election to his fifth term, is truly a valuable member of the court. Always outspoken on issues the court must address, Brown makes his position known and adheres to it, although he is not above adjusting his position as circumstances change. In addition to his diligent work for Midland County residents, Brown currently is serving as president of the West Texas County Judges and Commissioners' Association, as a member and former chairman of the board of regents of North Texas State University/Texas College of Osteopathic Medine and as a trustee of the Association of Higher Education, Committee of Governing Boards of Texas Colleges and Universities.

In his years on the court, Brown has displayed the leadership qualities necessary to take Midland County into the 1990s. We believe he should be re-elected.

County Treasurer

This race pits longtime County Treasurer Dee Thompson against political newcomer Thomas E. Miller.

Both Ms. Thompson and Miller could offer particular qualities that would be of benefit to county residents, but the incumbent clearly is the choice. A Midlander since 1944, she has held her office since 1958 and has performed her duties quietly and effectively.

The position of county treasurer is crucial since that official is the only one who receives or disburses county funds. The office is responsible for handling county payroll, mailing out payment checks and handling all county workman's compensation and unemployment claims.

Although her opponent has run his campaign on the need to update practices in the office, Ms. Thompson contends nothing more can be done on computerization unless the entire county is put on a single computer system. We believe she should be re-elected because her wealth of experience in the office is invaluable.

Justice of the Peace

This election is being held to fill the unexpired term of former Peace Justice Charlie Sprayberry in Precinct 1, Place 1. The two candidates are Aquilla Watson, a Democrat, and Keith Jobe, a Republican.

While Ms. Watson, who has been active in county Democratic Party affairs over the past decade, is to be commended for her interest in serving, we recommend voters cast their ballots for Jobe on the basis of qualifications. A native Midlander, he currently is an investigator for the Midland County Sheriff's Department who also gained valuable law enforcement experience while serving in the U.S. Marine Corps for 10 years.

Jobe received an associate degree from Odessa College where he studied criminal justice and also holds a bachelor's degree from National University in San Diego, Calif. He displays a high degree of community involvement, serving as a member of the "M" Squad, on various boards of community organizations, and is an alumni of Leadership Midland. We believe his background makes him the logical choice for this position.

Vote 'yes' on all four amendment changes

Four constitutional amendments will be offered to voters on the Nov. 4 election ballot. After careful study of each, the Reporter-Telegram recommends that Midland County voters approve all four proposed amendments.

The only amendment that has been creating interest throughout the state is Amendment No. 4 which authorizes a change in the constitution to permit banks to operate up to three branches in the same city or county where they are located.

Backers of this amendment say it will mean greater convenience for the banking public and will permit state banks a means of competing more effectively with larger banks that may be operated from far away. That could occur when full interstate banking is permitted in Texas — and local bankers say that day is coming.

Opponents of this change indicate that it could prove more costly for bank customers in the long run and that branch banking will drive smaller, independent bankers out of business.

We believe the change is justified since it would permit greater convenience for banking customers and since important safeguards are included in the legislation. For example, a holding company could convert a member bank to a branch, but would sustain severe financial penalties if it chose to close the branch once opened. That would restrict banks from branching simply to run off competition.

This change is needed to bring Texas into line with modern banking practices. It should be approved.

Amendment No. 2 proposes a change in the constitutional requirement for a "one-subject rule" on a bill. The "one-subject rule" dates from the days in early Texas when it was difficult for individuals to find what a bill actually proposed. In recent times with the development of copiers, however, the requirement regarding a bill's caption hasn't been as crucial. It should be noted that this change would not affect the one-subject rule, but merely change it from a constitutional rule to a constitutionally-required rule.

The constitutional requirement also expresses a mandate for legislative revision of the Texas Statutes every 10 years. Almost since day one that has been an impossibility. The change would modernize the requirement by removing the need for bulk revisions and allowing a continuing statutory revision program on a topical basis, rather than a bulk one.

Amendment No. 3 would allow political subdivisions to obtain their insurance from mutual insurance companies, which they cannot do as the law is presently written. The prohibition dates back to early-day state financial losses and does not consider modern needs.

This change would allow political subdivisions to choose their insurance supplier from an expanded marketplace and that seems reasonable. Voters said "no" to an identical amendment proposal on Nov. 6, 1984.

Amendment No. 1 pertains to a requirement that the Comptroller of Public Accounts apportion the values among counties for taxation purposes on railroad "rolling stock" such as engines and boxcars. Since the abolition of state property taxes, the state is no longer affected by ad valorem taxes on railroads and having the comptroller apportion the values when all other state-level property tax matters are handled by the State Property Tax Board is a holdover from the past.

This change is reasonable and logical. It should be approved.

New embassy plans no secret in Beirut

WASHINGTON — "National security" is routinely invoked by government officials to justify covering up embarrassing evidence of incompetence or corruption. With shrieks of pious outrage, officials denounce reporters who supposedly endanger the nation's very existence by revealing the tawdry truth.

Jack Anderson

If only our government officials were half so vigilant in the protection of information that genuinely affects national security and could cost American lives if it falls into the wrong hands. This is the story of one such failure to guard sensitive security information, a tale of mindless stupidity and bureaucratic obstinacy that is almost beyond belief. Call it "Blueprint for Terror."

Ever since the American embassy in Beirut was destroyed by a suicide bomber in April 1983, the State Department's Foreign Buildings Office has been planning construction of a replacement embassy. The preliminary work has progressed, with the glacial momentum typical of government building projects, to the point where bids for the actual construction have been received. The building will cost about $7.4 million, plus an additional $1.6 million to furnish.

But General Accounting Office auditors recently made a hair-raising discovery: Blueprints of the new embassy have been handed out in both Washington and Beirut like so many supermarket flyers. Copies have been bought legally for $225 to $250; there's no telling how many bootleg photocopies may have wound up in the possession of terrorists who would welcome the chance to blow an American embassy to smithereens.

The unreleased GAO report, prepared for Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., and obtained by our associate Lucette Lagnado, traces the chronology of carelessness:

— Elementary regard for the security of a building that will house hundreds of people in a chaotic situation of war and terrorism would seem to indicate the need for an experienced, security-conscious architect. Yet in March 1985, the Foreign Buildings Office awarded the design contract to an architectural firm that had no security clearance — even though its blueprints were to include such top-secret installations as the embassy communications center.

— In May 1986, the architect completed the blueprints and gave the State Department a master set and five copies, which were distributed within the Foreign Buildings Office.

— In the spring of this year, State Department security personnel began screening foreign contractors who might bid on the embassy construction project. The security program "involved checks for anti-American affiliations and other security considerations," according to the GAO report.

— On May 9, the Beirut project was announced in Commerce Business Daily. Fifteen copies of the blueprints were produced by a government printing contractor in Washington. These were distributed to 10 interested American construction companies, which paid $225 for each set of blueprints.

— Then, the GAO reports, 16 additional sets of blueprints were printed — in Beirut by a Lebanese printing company, using the master blueprints provided by the Foreign Buildings Office. "Eleven copies were distributed to Lebanese contractors, each paying $250 for a copy," the GAO report states, adding pointedly: "Firms were not screened prior to distribution of copies of blueprints."

There the matter stands. Foggy Bottom's building bureaucrats stubbornly insist on business as usual, the auditors charge, continuing "to evaluate bids in order to select a construction firm." Yet any terrorist group with an ounce of enterprise probably already has a copy of the new embassy's detailed blueprints, showing the exact location of the most vital areas, the strength and design of protective shields and the easiest points of access.

GEORGE F. WILL

Kean's voice needs to be heard in 'chorus'

NEW YORK — Soon clouds of candidates will be mixing castigation of rivals with supplication of the distracted citizens of Iowa, warning that floodgates of ruin are about to burst, washing society from its foundations, unless voters elevate to glory the one suitable savior. A voice that probably will be missing from the candidates' chorus is the one with the improbable New England accent of New Jersey's governor, Tom Kean. It should not be missing.

George F. Will

Before 1981, Democrats held the governorship for 24 of 28 years. In 1981, Kean won his first term by 1,700 votes out of three million cast. In 1985, he won with 70 percent, the largest margin in New Jersey's history. Although Democrats have a 2 to 1 registration advantage, he won every county, and all but three small towns among the state's 567 cities and towns. He won 68 percent of the votes of union members. He won 60 percent of the black vote. Newark's mayor said Kean goes to neighborhoods where people seldom see a white person and never see a Republican.

Any governor of New Jersey is an American Caesar — the most unfettered executive in his domain. New Jersey has no elected attorney general, no lieutenant governor of any sort. The governor appoints almost everyone. He has not only a line-item veto but, as a gift from the state's hyperactive Supreme Court, he even has power to revise language in spending bills.

Kean, 51, has a name (pronounced cane, not keen), an accent, a slightly mushy diction and a gap between his front teeth, all of which campaign consultants have itched to change. His indifference to such reforms is the confidence of a personality often called "patrician." For New Jersey, confidence is only an aspiration.

The chip on New Jersey's shoulder has been there since the 18th century, when it was called "a valley of humility between two mountains of conceit." The mountains were Philadelphia and New York. Today too many people know New Jersey only as a ribbon of turnpike running through refineries, urban decay and air as thick as chowder. New Jersey does not relish its role as the Rodney Dangerfield of states, as Gary Hart can attest.

Late in the 1984 primary season Hart committed a joke, saying how fortunate his wife was to be campaigning in California while he was relegated to New Jersey's toxic-waste landscape. Kean says polls showed that 60 percent of those who voted in New Jersey's primary (Mondale 45 percent, Hart 30 percent) had the joke in mind when they entered the voting booth.

Given the state's tetchiness about its lowly status, it is perhaps understandable that it adores a supremely confident governor who is as New Jersey as (now stop that: do not say acid rain) Bruce Springsteen. Bruce, that is, in Brooks Brothers clothes.

RUSSELL BAKER

'Movie butcher' has thankless chopping job

My name's Smithers. People in the business call me Smithereens. "Get Smithereens," is the cry you'll hear ringing through every TV station in America when they've got a three-hour movie, plus 45 commercials to fit into two hours of TV time.

Russell Baker

"Smithers," they say, "is your man when you're chopping Capra, Ford and Hitchcock to smithereens."

It's thankless work. Take last week. I'd done this ax job on "2001: A Space Odyssey" for Channel 20 in Washington. Not an easy film to cut. Too many stretches of endless tedium. People ignorant of the business say, "Hack those parts, nobody will miss them"; but that's economic murder on your sponsors.

Anyhow, the day after they run the flick, who comes to my office looking surly? Agents of the following enterprises:

Aaron Furniture, Trane XL Heaters, Long John Silver's Shrimp, Banner Toilet Paper, the Chesapeake Bay Seafood House, Van de Kamp's Fish Fillets, the Washington Redskins Saturday Night Show on Channel 20, Mattress Discounters, Ryder Truck Rental, Precision Tune Tune-up, Circuit City, Lincoln-Mercury automobiles and Shoppers Food Warehouse.

They'd sat up all night waiting to see their favorite scenes in "2001" and felt cheated when they didn't appear.

My two best cuts were: 1) the scene where the astronaut dismantles the berserk computer HAL, and 2) where the astronaut gets to Jupiter, and Jupiter turns out to be an antique French boudoir and the astronaut is 185 years old.

Fantastic scenes. Full of mystery and wonder. So naturally I cut them out. When the astronaut starts to disconnect HAL, I cut and hit the audience with commercials for Aaron Furniture, Trane XL Heaters, Long John Silver's Shrimp, Banner Toilet Paper, the Chesapeake Bay Seafood House, Van de Kamp's Fish Fillets, the Redskins Saturday Night Show and Mattress Discounters.

The Mattress Discounters man didn't like that. "By substituting our commercials when everybody was dying to see the power-mad computer destroyed, you made the audience hate us," says he.

I pointed out that when people are absorbed in a movie and it's interrupted with eight commercials back-to-back, they're going to be furious, no matter what. By cutting just as the great scene began, though, you could make the poor chumps sit through all eight commercials in hope that if the movie ever returned, it would resume with the great disconnecting scene.

The man from Precision Tune Tune-up said that was all very well for Aaron Furniture, Trane XL Heaters, Long John Silver's Shrimp, Banner Toilet Paper, the Chesapeake Bay Seafood House, Van de Kamp's Fish Fillets, the Redskins Saturday Night Show and Mattress Discounters.

But by failing to resume with the great disconnecting scene and, instead, throwing it away, I had left viewers disappointed, embittered and cynical, he said.

As a result, said he, later, when the start of the great scene with the antique man was interrupted for Ryder Truck Rental, Precision Tune Tune-up, Circuit City, Lincoln-Mercury automobiles and Shoppers Food Warehouse, viewers would say, "Fool me twice, shame on me," conclude that once again a great scene was about to be trashed just like the earlier one, and say, "Let's get revenge by ignoring the ads for Ryder Truck Rental, Precision Tune Tune-up, Circuit City, Lincoln-Mercury and Shoppers Food Warehouse."

This man lacked the understanding of human ego needed to make a great movie butcher. I explained:

Sure the audience was disappointed, embittered and cynical after being cheated out of the first big scene. Having been fooled once, they knew I'd cheat them again by cutting the other great scene.

To prove to themselves that they were clever enough to figure out my diabolic strategy, they would sit through all five commercials just to make sure I really had trashed the antique-man scene.

What's more, I noted, wanting vengeance, they would take pen and paper and write down the names of every advertiser whose dreary commercial had replaced the moment of high cinematic art, telling themselves that someday, they would write outraged letters to all five sponsors.

Cursing and gnashing teeth, they would write: "Ryder Truck Rental, Precision Tune Tune-up, Circuit City, Lincoln-Mercury, Shoppers Food Warehouse." What more could an advertiser wish than to have his name so firmly embedded in the skulls of his market?

So don't bother me again for explanations. I am a busy man. They're making movies faster than I can destroy them.

BILL MODISETT

Political circles abuzz over electronic infestation

Modisett — an "electronic"

Don't you just love politics? There you were all settled back in your easy chair thinking that this November's gubernatorial election was going to be a real yawner, when out of the blue pops...a bug! That's right, a bug bug; that is.

Now this is no ordinary bug like ones you might find lounging around garbage dumps or buzzing lights late at night. This little sucker is a pedigreed political bug of a sort rarely, if ever, found in Texas. This one was cornered in the office of Karl Rove, former Gov. Bill Clements' chief political consultant. And all those who have studied this type of bug immediately began speculating on how it got to the Lone Star State and, specifically, how and why it nested in Rove's office.

Interesting, but I don't believe there's enough evidence available at this point to say how the bug migrated to Rove's office or what it hoped to accomplish there or for whom.

The important aspect of the bug's discovery at this point is to determine and let the voting public know as early as possible the full implications of the infestation. Otherwise, there's no telling what voters will be thinking when they go to the polls in less than three weeks to determine the state's top officeholder for the crucial four-year period just ahead.

That information may be hard to come by, since the private detective who reported finding the bug, Gary L. Morphew of Fort Worth, has declined to take a polygraph test. Hmm, bugs do hide in the strangest places — under rocks and cabinets, inside old pickle bottles, behind pictures hanging on walls.

Why should anyone be surprised that this type of scurrilous campaign activity would take place in Texas? Politics is power and power is addictive. What's more, Texas politics now is big-time business. All the indications have been around that the state's political "climate" is changing — the Reagan Revolution helped make affiliation with the Republican Party "respectable," burgeoning population influx in the 1970s and early '80s pushed Texas right up there beside California and New York in political importance, economic pressures that mounted as oil prices dropped have changed the outlook of Texans on the kind of leadership the state needs. Those changes in the political "climate" may have rendered the state suitable for the "bug's" survival.

In the future, state political races will likely become more demanding on the candidates, more costly, longer and more prone to big-time political corruption. That isn't to say that either the Clements campaign or the White campaign is involved in the current situation in any way other than as innocent bystanders. But even innocent bystanders can be hurt when the forces that mold political outcomes start to play with "dirty politics."

I don't know who to point an accusing finger toward in this situation. Apparently neither does anyone else. But time is running out and the people of Texas need answers. Otherwise, come election day everyone in Texas could be a victim of this little "bug."

Why pass over proven conservative Smith?

I was very disappointed that you would endorse Pete Snelson over a proven conservative such as Lamar Smith, who has supported President Ronald Reagan in his efforts to cut spending, cut taxing, reduce inflationary pressures, and build up our national defense and respect around the world.

In contrast, his opponent, Pete Snelson, has always supported "a straight Democratic line and presidential ticket, i.e. George McGovern, Hubert Humphrey, Jimmy Carter, and good ol' Fritz Mondale."

Now, who is the conservative who will have a chance to change the leftist tilt in the Democratic-controlled House of Representatives? Surely you don't believe that it will be someone who is a mere puppet for ultra-liberal Congressman Jim Wright. The only conservative in our congressional race is Lamar Smith, who strongly supports President Reagan and Senator Phil Gramm. Why not send a strong message to Washington — just pull the Republican lever on Nov. 4.

Snelson backs more taxes; Smith doesn't

There exists a major difference between the 21st U.S. Congressional District candidates.

Pete Snelson is a proven liberal who supports increased taxation. These undesirable "accomplishments" are Snelson's liberal record of past years. On the other hand, Lamar Smith is a proven conservative who supports a decrease in taxes. Smith's record supports his position as a true conservative.

Our 21st U.S. Congressional District does not need additional taxes. Therefore, Lamar Smith's "no more tax" stance seems much more appropriate.

There is a difference!

Snelson will work for Midland, oil industry

The oil and gas industry has been under attack since 1973. Domestic oil was put under price controls, a huge so-called windfall profits tax instigated, and now a tax of eight and one-half cents per barrel on domestic oil imposed for the Superfund. The present administration was elected on the basis of (1) balancing the budget and (2) reducing the national debt. We now have the biggest annual deficit in history. The national debt has increased beyond human comprehension. The trade deficit has set an all-time record (half is oil imports and growing). This administration has taken our country from the world's largest creditor to its largest debtor.

In excess of 500,000 people in the industry have been laid off. The oil services industry is virtually nonexistent. The unemployed are basically non-union and from the oil producing states of Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana. If this catastrophe occurred in any other industry, the cries for help would be endless.

If prosperity does exist, it is presently confined to the Northeast and California. In between, agriculture, mining, steel, timber and oil and gas are all in deep trouble. This is not prosperity. How depressed must our area and industry get before we learn better?

We need a man in Congress who will remain in Congress and who will work for Midland and the oil industry. We do not need a Congressman from San Antonio. Pete Snelson in Washington with his legislative and oil and gas experience will be much more effective than his San Antonio opponent. I am going to vote for Pete and urge every Midlander to think carefully and do likewise.

Will Clements' blackmail win over Texas voters?

I was appalled to read the speech Bill Clements gave at the dinner honoring Bob Monaghan. He stated that President Reagan would be more likely to order an oil import fee if Texans would elect Clements to the governor's office.

I know Bill Clements is this narrow-minded and prejudiced, but I think President Reagan would resent Clements for trying to show him as such.

Clements doesn't have much to offer the voters of Texas, but if he thinks he can use blackmail to get their votes, he may have underestimated them.

Texas teachers don't need White any more

Remember all the problems we've had with public education for the last four years?

1) No pass, no play!

2) TECAT competency testing for teachers.

3) Proposed drug testing for teachers.

4) Discipline problems!

5) Paper work problems!

6) Taking away local control and giving it to the state!

7) Higher school taxes!

8) Mark White's appointed Select Commission on Public Education that excluded any and all educators!

The cause of all these problems is House Bill #72 and the cause of House Bill #72 is Mark White.

Texas teachers don't need any more problems like Mark White. As a Texas teacher, I am voting for Bill Clements on Nov. 4.

Snelson deserves vote for outstanding record

For me, it is Pete Snelson. I am voting for the man!

Pete's distinguished record is a mile long. He has a fine family with a wife and children who have been able to accomplish things of note. He is a church man, a successful local businessman, he has an outstanding record of military service to his country and he has successfully served West Texas and the state of Texas for many years in the state Legislature proving his ability to get things done in a conservative dependable manner.

I have a great interest in, and concern for, our community, having lived and worked here since 1955, and having worked on many community projects. We need to elect Pete Snelson! We need him to represent West Texas in matters pertaining to our economy, education and national security. He is qualified!

Texas voters face four November amendments

Since 1879 the Texas Constitution has had 437 proposed amendments brought before the voters, of those 283 have been adopted. On Nov. 4, four additional amendments will appear. Although the League of Women Voters has decided to take no position on any of these, I would like the voters to become acquainted with these and perhaps to seek out further information for themselves.

I have listed the amendments in ballot wording and have a brief description following each.

Amendment One: "The constitutional amendment to allow the Legislature to provide by general law for the apportionment of the value of railroad rolling stock among counties for purposes of property taxation."

The amendment would remove the requirement that the comptroller of public accounts apportion the taxable value of railroad rolling stock (engines, boxcars, etc.) among the counties where it is taxed and provide that this responsibility be delegated by general law.

Amendment Two: "the constitutional amendment requiring each house to include in its rules of procedures a rule that each bill contain a title expressing the bill's subject, and providing for the continuing revision of state laws."

The amendment converts the constitutional requirement that the subject of a bill be expressed in the title of the bill from a constitutional rule to a constitutionally required rule of procedure. The amendment provides that the Legislature is solely responsible for enforcing the rule and prohibits the invalidation of past and future enactments on the basis of a defective title.

Amendment Three: "The constitutional amendment allowing political subdivisions the opportunity to engage in and transact business with authorized mutual insurance companies in the same manner as with other insurance companies."

The amendment would authorize political subdivisions to purchase life, health, and accident insurance from mutual insurance companies if under the contract the subdivision is not liable for assessments.

Amendment Four: "The constitutional amendment to provide that a bank may offer full service banking at more that one location within the city or county where its principal facility is located; subject to limitations and restrictions provided by the law."

The amendment would authorize a state bank or national bank located in the state to operate a branch facility at the location in the state of any failed bank that the state or national bank acquires and at other locations within the city or county where the national bank is located, subject to limitations the legislature imposes.

The League of Women Voters is a non-partisan organization that promotes political responsibility through informed and active participation of citizens in government.

I urge all Midland citizens to make their mark on politics by voting on Nov. 4.

Reagan takes courageous stand at Icelandic meeting

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.

Editor-in-Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

Hearst

NEW YORK — We may be on the threshold of the most hopeful era in history for the betterment of mankind as a result of the courageously strong stand taken by President Reagan at the Icelandic meeting with Soviet leader Gorbachev last weekend.

Disdaining the short-term glory that would have been his had he abandoned development of a defense system against nuclear missiles in return for deep cuts in nuclear weapons, the president stood firm for your sake and for the security of future generations in a world freed from the fear of nuclear annihilation.

The trap set for him by the cunning Soviet ruler must have been very tempting. Without any advance warning that the price would be complete blocking of development and deployment of the president's strategic defense system, Gorbachev agreed to the most far-reaching concessions ever made by the Soviets in arms talks. These included a 50 percent reduction in nuclear missile warheads and launchers in five years; acceptance of President Reagan's proposal for abolition of all strategic nuclear missiles in 10 years; quick elimination of all medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe; and a willingness to forego insistence on immediate cessation of nuclear tests.

It was this astonishing movement on Gorbachev's part that led officials on both sides to appear optimistic at the end of Saturday's negotiations. This euphoria quickly evaporated Sunday when Gorbachev, having agreed to what was later described by U.S. officials as "enormous" and potentially "historic" progress, stated his price, namely — no development of an American anti-missile defense system outside the research laboratory. He also demanded veto power over future deployment of such a system in the event it was mutually agreed, 10 years hence, to proceed with development.

In his address to the nation Monday night, President Reagan said the Soviet leader was, in effect, "killing" the strategic defense initiative. Explaining that SDI "is America's insurance policy that the Soviet Union would keep the commitments made at Reykjavik," the president said he told Gorbachev: "There is no way I could tell our people their government would not protect them against nuclear destruction."

That magnificent display of decisive statesmanship may prove to be the finest hour of Reagan's presidency. That the overwhelming majority of the American people think so was clearly evident in the first public opinion polls following the president's speech. Polls taken Monday and Tuesday showed 80 percent of those polled did not consider failure to conclude an agreement in Iceland a major setback to arms negotiations with the Soviets. On the president's handling of his job, 73 percent approved to only 16 percent who strongly disapproved. That is a great tribute to the good sense of our people.

Since the Soviets must have realized it was highly improbable the president would give up SDI, one can only assume Gorbachev deliberately set up the Icelandic meeting for political and propaganda purposes: First, to try to help Democrats gain control of the Senate in the November elections in the belief a Democratically-controlled Congress would block adequate funding for SDI; secondly, to revive anti-American demonstrations in Europe in the hope of weakening America's ties with its NATO allies. My hunch is the Soviet leader will have guessed as wrong about the Democrats and our European allies as he did if he really thought President Reagan might swallow the bait to scuttle SDI.

What astounds me is that critics of the president's determination to protect us from nuclear attack continue to ignore the fact the Soviets have been developing a strategic defense system for the past 25 years and maintain the world's only operational antisatellite system. They are also upgrading and expanding the world's only operational Anti-Ballistic Missile system. Which reminds me again of the then Soviet Premier Kosygin's outburst at the Glassboro, N.J., meeting with President Johnson in 1967. Rejecting the American appeal to stop escalating the arms race with deployment of defensive anti-ballistic missiles, Kosygin angrily responded: "Defensive weapons are moral, offensive weapons immoral."

Now as to my own reasons for believing President Reagan may still achieve a major arms breakthrough with the Soviets before the end of his term.

Both sides have sent their negotiators back to Geneva to discuss details of the issues on which tentative agreement was reached in Iceland. President Reagan said: "We made great strides in resolving our differences and we are going to continue our efforts. There is good reason for hope." Gorbachev said: "We can deal with President Reagan. What we have discussed here (in Iceland) makes it possible to have a productive (summit) meeting in Washington. This meeting has demonstrated that accords are possible."

Secretary of State Shultz, former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and national security officials in the Carter and Johnson administrations have said promising prospects now exist for "historic agreements" with the Soviets.

So let us not be misled by those who, for partisan political reasons or just plain ignorance, contend the President missed the bus in Iceland. We all should be proud of his leadership there.

South African praises God through 'African gospel music'

GREENVILLE (AP) — The music of Victor Phume spans two continents and two cultures.

A South African Zulu by birth, the 31-year-old Phume is also a born-again Christian who praises God through what he calls "contemporary African gospel music."

In Greenville recently, Phume recorded an album with Lazer Productions, a studio owned by Sam Loy.

The two men met at the 12th Annual Christian Artists Music Seminar in Estes Park, Colo., in August. "It's the most prestigious event in gospel music," said Loy. "There are concerts every night for five days. Victor was there as a performer, and I went as a registrant — to go to the classes — but I wound up performing with him."

At the close of the seminar, Phume went back to South Africa but returned to this country three weeks later at the invitation of Loy and his wife, Didi, to record an album of eight songs. The music will have an African beat but all the songs are original numbers, Loy says.

Most of the profits from the sale of Phume's record will go to support his ministry in South Africa. In addition to serving as director of Phume Ministries, he also performs with a group of born-again Christian dancers and singers called The Syndicate. The 10 men and women represent a variety of tribes, and all wear their traditional native garb when they perform.

"I want to build a relationship between Christ and the African culture," said Phume. "I take the initiative of identifying with the people."

Many of these "grassroots people," as they are called, have been told that they must eliminate the old culture and their traditional ways of dressing if they are to be part of the Christian community, he explained.

"They say, 'We can't get rid of our culture,' and I say to them, 'God is not against your culture. What is important is to get right with Jesus.' I wear the traditional clothes and sing traditional songs in order to communicate with our people," he added.

The lyrics in Phume's album will be in both Zulu and English, and the album title will be "Inkhosi Ya Makhosi," which means "King of Kings" in the Zulu language.

A late October release date is planned, and Loy said he has been in contact with a large video-TV production company in Denver about marketing ideas.

Lazar Productions was begun primarily as a hobby for Loy, who has been a Hunt county resident for three years. Once a professional musician, he says he longed to get into the engineering and production of music. He has a degree in computer science and physics and has used his knowledge in producing music with automation and multi-tracking techniques.

"If you're a songwriter or singer, I can produce a full-fledged band sound for you," he said. "I did a Christmas album for Aldersgate Church that was pretty successful. Victor is my first contract production though. He's not paying me it's a speculative deal."

Phume's plans for his ministry received a boost just before his trip here. "A miracle happened," he said. "God opened doors for me to purchase 22 acres of land which I had not anticipated I would be able to get."

Eleven acres will be devoted to farming and the remaining half will be devoted to buildings for Bible study and workshops to teach skills such as carpentry and building.

"My wife will teach floristry, my sister will teach sewing, and I'll be doing the general office routine," said Phume. "I want to motivate Christians to start their own small businesses."

Doctor to speak on chemical dependency

From Staff Reports

Dr. Vernon E. Johnson, an expert and author on chemical dependency, will be speaking on "Intervention, How to Help Those Who Don't Want Help" at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Midland Center, Room 5.

The free public information seminar is sponsored by Clearview, the Midland Council on Alcoholism and the Odessa Council on Alcoholism and Drug Abuse.

Twenty years ago, when Dr. Johnson and the Johnson Institute first opened its doors, few people believed that chemical dependency was a disease, according to a press release provided by Clearview.

Even fewer people believed that anything could be done to help the alcoholic or addict other than waiting for them to "hit bottom" and then try to pick up the pieces. For tyhe past 20 years, Johnson has been saying that chemical dependency is a treatable illness that can be successfully intervened upon at an early stage.

The seminar is open to anyone concerned about or faced with problems of drug abuse or alcoholism and how to help those who are afflicted. It will be of particular interest to counselors, teachers, health professionals and law enforcement personnel.

For additional information, contact Clearview at 697-5200.

Historical Society to meet Saturday

The Texas Sesquicentennial meeting of the Permian Historical Society will be held Saturday at the Midland Hilton.

Registration begins at 9:30 a.m. Lectures begin at 10:30 a.m. and are presented every half hour.

At 1:30 p.m., members will meet for a symposium entitled, "The Future of Texas."

For reservations, call Eileen Welch at 682-0839.

Texan reacts angrily to proposed penalty on imported wood

DALLAS (AP) — A Texas oil man reacted angrily to a proposed penalty duty on Canadian lumber that he said highlights hypocritical trade policies of the Reagan administration.

"In the name of a free market, the administration is allowing OPEC to decimate the domestic oil industry and to wreak economic havoc throughout a large part of the country," said Texas independent oil producer George Mitchell.

"Yet the administration turns around and slaps penalties on imported softwood of which there is a plentiful supply domestically."

The Commerce Department, reversing a 1983 decision, recommended a 15 percent penalty fee on imported Canadian softwood. The department found that cutting fees levied by Canadian provinces constituted an unfair subsidy for lumberers. The ruling will not become final until a Commerce Department meeting Dec. 30.

Texas oil producers have been pursuing a similar fee, on imported crude oil. The cheaper imported crude from the vast oil fields of the Middle East is priced so low domestic producers cannot compete, they say. In effect, they say the cheaper prices are shutting down the domestic oil industry.

A press release from Mitchell's office said some "suspect the penalty is a political favor for Republican Sen. Bob Packwood of Oregon who co-sponsored tax legislation sought by the administration.

"In any event, the lumber industry's needs cannot be compared to the growing threat to the nation's military and economic security that is directly attributable to the absence of an oil import fee." Mitchell said.

In addition, The National Association of Home Builders agrees with Mitchell but for different reasons.

The association says the average price of a home could rise between $1,000 and $1,300 pricing a possible 300,000 home buyers out of the market.

Texas bought $108 million worth of Canadian softwood last year, the association says. In contrast Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Arkansas and New Mexico combined bought only $43 million of Canadian wood.

Nature Center to present program on winter birds

From Staff Reports

The Friends of the Nature Center will present a program on the winter birds of Midland County at the Sibley Learning Center in Hogan Park at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

The center is located just off of Wadley Street, next to the Midland Woman's Club.

The speaker will be Frances Williams, former Midland County librarian, who has been studying the birds of Midland for almost 40 years. She is a charter member of the Midland Naturalists and the Texas Ornithological Society, and is a regional editor of American Birds, which is published by the National Audubon Society.

"Many people think there are no birds in the city of Midland except sparrows and blackbirds, said Mrs. Williams. "The Midland Naturalists organization, through its long series of Christmas Bird Counts and frequent field trips, has learned that Midland is an oasis for birds, and over 100 species spend the winter here."

The emphasis of Mrs. Williams' talk will be on the birds of the city and how they can be attracted to yards and gardens. She will also discuss unusual birds which have visited Wadley Baron Park since the lake was formed, and some of the birds which can be seen at the Outdoor Learning Center in Hogan Park.

The program is open to the public at no charge.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

Bank to interview students

ODESSA — Interfirst Bank representative Tom Alcala will interview students planning to graduate from the University of Texas of the Permian Basin in Decemeber.

Interviews will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Oct. 23 at the UTPB campus.

Accounting and business management students interested in setting up an interview should sign up at the UTPB Placement Office.

For information, call 563-2400, extension 551.

Keg Roll to benefit MD

ODESSA — The Muscular Dystrophy Association's sixth annual Keg Roll will be at 10 a.m. Nov. 8.

The race begins in the UTPB Gymnasium parking lot and will end on State Highway 80 across the street from Coors Distributing.

Prizes will be awarded to individuals based on their success in raising money. Team trophies will be awarded to the club that raises the most money and to the overall winning club.

For information, call Woody Kupper, director of Student Life at 367-2136.

Women's symposium slated

A women's symposium entitled, "The Time for Leadership: Women in the 80s" will be from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday in the Student Lounge of the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

The day-long symposium will feature local, state and national speakers in hands-on workshops, panel discussions and lectures.

A wine and cheese reception will follow the symposium.

Admission is $25 including lunch.

To register or for information, call the UTPB Women's Center at 367-2218.

Bonham to hold fall festival

The Bonham Elementary School "Disney on Parade" fall festival will be from 5 to 8:30 p.m. Saturday.

There will be a costume contest for each grade level and for adults.

At 8 p.m., there will be a drawing for a video cassette recorder, 10-speed bicycle, tote bag and $50 gift certificate.

Game booths include face paint and tattoo, pan for gold, balloon shave, darts, bean bag, bombs away and penny pitch, hat walk, grab bag and duck pond, ring toss and lollipop tree, fish pond, ball throw, basketball throw, candle shoot, cake walk and sponge throw.

Emerson craft day planned

Emerson Elementary School will have a craft day for parents from 1 to 2:30 p.m. Tuesday at 5 Stutz Court.

Items will be donated to the school's Fall Festival, slated for Oct. 31.

The food booths and country store will be open at 5:30 p.m. Prize booths will be open from 6 to 8 p.m.

Midland oilman honored

FROST IS FOR PUMPKINS, NOT PEOPLE!

So, be sure your gas heating system is in tip-top shape right now, before that first winter cold snap.

For complete servicing, call your heating contractor or plumber. Ask him to change filters and check fans, belts, and vents.

Or, if you prefer, Energas will light pilots, adjust burners and survey the condition of your heating unit for a nominal service charge.

But call early and avoid the rush. Keep the frost outside, on the pumpkins.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Alcohol Awarness Week activities planned at MC

By H.A. TUCK

Several activites are planned this week in observance of Alcohol Awareness Week, organized through the efforts of the Student Senate and the Student Activities Office.

Since Midland College is a commuter school, with no on-campus housing, many of the alcohol-related problems experienced at universities aren't a factor at MC. However, if students have alcohol-related problems so it bothers their behavior or causes grade-problems, then the school ultimately is affected.

Included in the week's activities are: movie and panel discussion at 7 p.m. Monday in the Allison Fine Arts Building auditorium; "Mocktails Party" from 12:30 to 2 p.m. Tuesday in the Student Center; Alcohol Awareness Fair from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Wednesday in the Student Center; "Root Beer Bash" and ping pong tournament from 7 to 10 p.m. Thursday in the Student Center; and a discussion on the Training Intervention Program from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Friday in the Faculty Lounge.

On Saturday the college organizers will join with others in the community for a 1:30 p.m. "Midland Says No To Chemical Abuse" rally at Clay-Desta Plaza.

Regular monthly meeting of the Midland College Board of Trustees is set for 4 p.m. Tuesday in the Board Room, Administration Building. College President Dr. Jess Parrish will brief the board on the final funding amount set by the special session of the Texas Legislature as it relates to public community colleges and particularly its effect on the Midland College budget.

• • •

Midland Arts Association's ninth annual juried show remains on display at McCormick Gallery, located in the Allison Fine Arts Building. One new feature of the show is the balloting for "People's Choice Award" by those who see the show. This allows input from those who mumble to themselves, "How on earth could the juror pick anything like that!" as they look at the chosen pieces and awards. Just look for the ballot box and vote for the item you think is best.

McCormick Gallery is open today from 1 to 5 p.m. Regular hours also include 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday. There's never a charge for admission. The MAA show remains on display through Nov. 14.

• • •

Four sections of three "Flexible Entry" classes start the Oct. 27, with registration opening on Friday.

Dr. Eileen Piwetz will teach two identical classes in Medical Terminology, open to any person interested in building a background vocabulary in medical terminology. It's especially useful for individuals employed in health-related occupations. One section meets from 2 to 3:40 p.m. Monday and the other from 5:10 to 6:50 p.m. Tuesday. These classes last eight weeks.

Two real estate classes are being offered. Real Estate Finance meets from 1 to 3:50 p.m. and Real Estate Brokerage from 9 to 11:50 a.m. Both meet Monday through Thursday for four weeks.

Those interested may register in the Student Services Office, Administration Building, from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Friday or Monday and Tuesday prior to the start of each class.

• • •

There'll be more about it later, but Civil War enthusiasts might want to start thinking about taking a class being offered next spring in "Civil War History." Jack Scannell teaches the class, utilizing much of his own research and his visits to the important sites of the Civil War.

• • •

Chaparral golfers compete in a large tournament next Thursday through Saturday. It's hosted by Sam Houston State University and traditionally includes many of the region's top university and community college teams. The 54-hole event is played in Huntsville.

• • •

Now that there's been a cool spell we can make our annual, totally unofficial, observation about campus fashions. And our observation this year is that there's no one style that's favored. There are short skirts, though most of these were put up after cold weather arrived; long skirts, very long skirts, and long sweaters. Jeans and T-shirts remain popular, as do cowboy boots and sneakers. The girls are wearing a lot of long, fashion boots, plus large, colorful jewelry and some hiar ribbons. There are some flat-top and very short haircuts among the young men, but most are favoring a smoother look.

Oh yes, and everyone has to have a back pack for a book bag; well, almost everyone...some of the older students decided lugging around 20 pounds of books was easier on those little airline luggage dollies.

In summary, almost anything goes. Some of the students still refuse to acknowledge fall's arrival and continue to wear shorts.

Do you think Vogue or Seventeen would be interested in my views about campus fashion?

H.A. Tuck is public relations director at Midland College.

STATE IN BRIEF

FBI officials begin giving aides lie detector tests

AUSTIN (AP) — FBI officials said they have begun giving lie detector tests in connection with the bugging of the office of a key campaign strategist for gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements.

Agents said Friday they began giving polygraph tests to aides in both the Clements and Gov. Mark White campaigns in an effort to find out who placed an electronic listening device in the Austin office of Karl Rove, a Clements' strategist.

"We anticipate going to the grand jury in the very near future," said Byron Sage, FBI agent in charge of the Austin office.

The FBI and Texas Department of Public Safety began their investigation Oct. 5 after the device was discovered by two private detective working for Clements.

Sage said selected people from both campaigns are being asked to voluntarily submit to the lie detector tests.

Soon after two Fort Worth private investigators retained by the Clements campaign discovered the bug, aides in both campaigns volunteered to take polygraphs but were told by the FBI it wasn't necessary at the time.

'Pruners' clip elderly

FORT WORTH (AP) — Police hunted Saturday for swindlers who charged two elderly residents a total of $33,700 for yard work.

"We've got to stop them," said former police officer Richard Morris, who lives on the same street as both victims. "If they've done this to other people, they probably made between $50,000 and $70,000 last week."

An 80-year-old woman paid several times to have her trees pruned, for a total of $31,000, police said.

"It's just such a mess, I've tried to put it out of my mind," the victim said. "I'm just sick about it."

The workers spent more than a day pruning trees in her front and back yards, sawing limbs off neighbors' trees that extended into the woman's yard, spreading mulch in the flower beds and around trees, then lining them with white wire fences, police said.

Three escape from jail

AMARILLO (AP) — Two of three Potter County jail prisoners who threw blankets over an 8-foot-tall, razor-wired fence to escape remained at large Saturday night, authorities said.

The third prisoner, James Edward Farmer, 26, was recaptured Saturday morning as authorities investigated a call about a man sleeping outside a city residence, Sheriff Jimmy Don Boydston said.

Boydston attributed the Friday night escape of Garlyn Dale Eye, 22, of Amarillo; James Randy Jones, 28, of New Orleans; and Farmer, of Coos Bay, Ore., to human error and a lock that could be cracked.

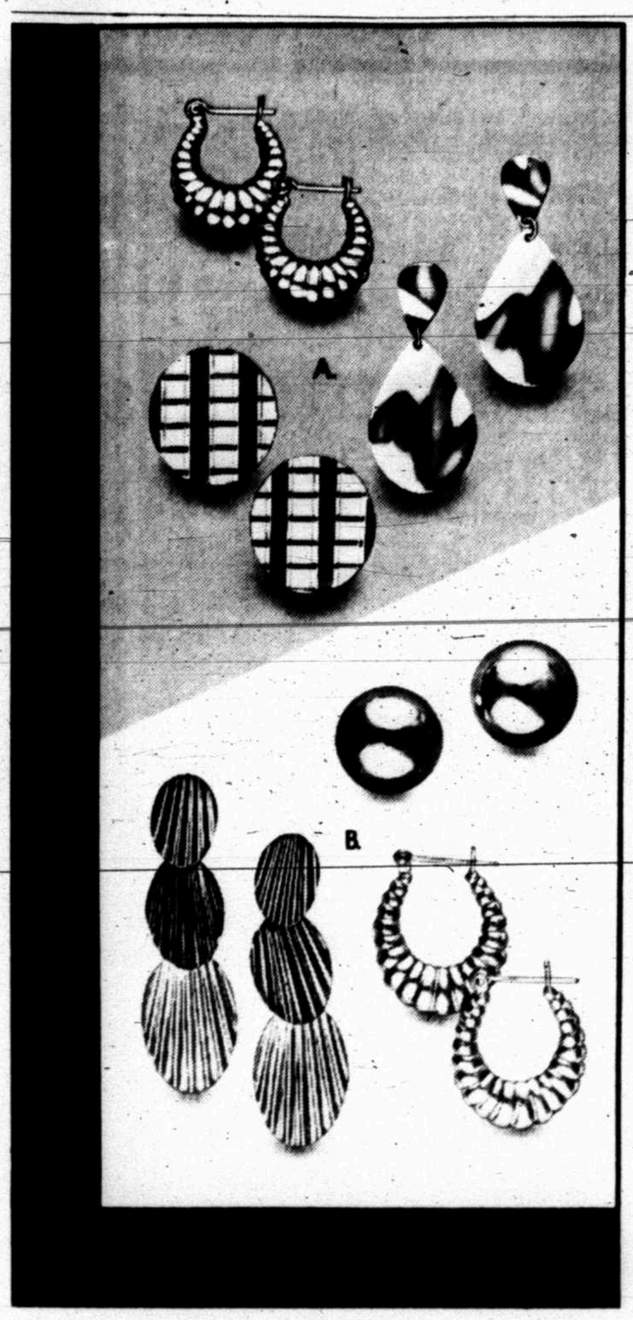

Kirkpatrick: Oil fees needed

FORT WORTH (AP) — Import taxes and quotas on foreign oil would help strengthen the domestic oil industry, Jean Kirkpatrick, former U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, said Saturday.

"We should be able to sell our oil in Japan and other countries," Ms. Kirkpatrick said. "Import taxes and quotas would help stablize our oil industry and support it in times when the market isn't good."

New laws should be created that would stir a more creative approach in the search for new energy markets, she said.

Unemployed, homeless couple await return of abducted son

CHANNELVIEW (AP) — An unemployed, homeless Texas couple were waiting Saturday for the return of their 10-year-old son who was found in Louisiana after a hitchhiker allegedly abducted the boy to give him a better life, officials said.

Clifton Gardner, the oldest of six children, was taken from a local motel on Thursday and recovered the next day by Louisiana police.

The boy stayed overnight at the office of the St. John the Baptist Parish Sheriff's Department and was doing fine Saturday, officials said.

"I feel great knowing he is OK," his father, Wallace Gardner, said. "I hope I can get some work and get my life straightened out."

Gardner, an unemployed construction worker, said he and his family were on their way back to Houston after unsuccessfully looking for work in New Orleans when they met up with a hitchhiker.

The man allegedly took the child in one of the couple's two cars.

The suspect later picked up another hitchhiker and confessed during a cross-country drinking session, according to authorities.

The second hitchhiker, Lance James, managed to escape with the boy after the suspect stopped beside Interstate 10 in Louisiana and fell asleep, authorities said.

Kenny Lee Dale, 22, was arrested Friday in Laplace, La., north of New Orleans and charged with possession of a stolen vehicle and kidnapping, said Lt. Drew Warren, with the Harris County Sheriff's Department in Houston. Dale was being held at the Louisiana parish jail, officials said.

Dale told authorities he had a good motive for taking the child because the boy's parents were homeless and poverty-stricken, an investigator who was not identified told the Houston Post.

The man allegedly wanted to take the boy to the Salvation Army to give him a better life, the investigator said.

The child told authorities he was treated well and never bound during his 12 hours of captivity.

"His only complaint was that he was very hungry," parish sheriff's spokeswoman Judi Guillory said. He got a stomach ache after eating two breakfasts and a lunch, she said.

His mother, Debbie Gardner, said she was thankful he was safe but worried about how the family would get their station wagon back to Texas.

"All our kid's clothes, everything we own, is in that car," she said.

The family had been living on only $110 a week from benefits Mrs. Gardner began receiving after her first husband was accidentally killed at work, she said.

Her other children are ages 8, 6, 4, 3 and 4 months, she said.

White campaign picks up steam

By STEVE LEVINE
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

GRAND PRAIRIE — The rest of the exhausted entourage stumbled slowly to the cars, longing for some food, drink and relaxation on the fourth and final airplane trip of the day. Gov. Mark White lagged behind, shaking what must have been his two-thousandth hand, beaming.

"Tremendous day," he said, high on the pressing-the-flesh campaigning he obviously relishes. "This is the only fun part of the job."

White had good reason to be pleased. The eight-stop, 12-hour tour of East Texas and the Dallas suburbs had been a rousing success. The crowds grew larger and warmer and the governor became more enthusiastic as the day wore on. At each stop, supporters had good news: White's re-election campaign against former Republican Gov. Bill Clements FINALLY seemed to be gaining momentum.

Five months ago, during the Democratic primary, things were real different. In Panola, Rusk and Cherokee counties — where White began the day with five campaign appearances — the governor had barely won or lost the primary election to Dallas businessman Andy Briscoe, a distant relative of former Gov. Dolph Briscoe.

Despite Andy Briscoe's endorsement of Clements the day before, White backers had reason to believe the governor's message was beginning to catch fire in that yellow-dog Democrat part of the state.

"Close; it's a conservative county," attorney Rex Houston of Henderson — White's hometown in Henderson County — said of the governor's chances. "But I think he's beginning to lead in all of the counties, even those conservative East Texas counties."

Sen. Roy Blake of Nacogdoches dismissed the Briscoe factor. "I don't think anybody's going to pay attention to what Andrew Briscoe does. I think they wanted the other Briscoe — the real Briscoe."

Backers said the East Texas uproar over the mandatory seat belt bill White signed had died down. "There's a great acceptance of it generally," said Panola County Judge Ruff Wall.

At an afternoon rally in the Democratic stronghold of Henderson County — White pulled 63 percent against Clements there in '82 — Sen. Chet Edwards stopped by after a speech to the local chamber of commerce.

"Two months ago those same people were saying, 'Mark White's down the tubes,'" Edwards said. Today they're optimistic, attributing the turnaround, perhaps somewhat surprisingly, to White's successful passage of a tax bill in the summer special sessions.

State Democratic Executive Committee member Randy Daniel offered a similar view. "Back around May, I wouldn't have bet a nickle on the governor's chances; now I'm real optimistic," Daniel said. White's TV ads reminding voters of some of Clements' outrageous comments have helped, he said.

"They remember Bill Clements for what he is: a vindictive, obnoxious, shoot-from-the-hip kind of governor. They don't want that."

White even managed to turn the day's only foulup into a net plus. Bad communications brought the governor one hour late to an hour-long, after-work rally at a Grand Prairie union hall. About 150 workers waited to cheer White, shake his hand and pose for pictures.

The election, of course, is still three weeks away, and partisan campaign visits obviously offer a highly skewed picture of political reality. The most recent poll — now nearly a month old — showed White and Clements in a dead heat with 46 percent of the vote each. White had gained as many as 15 points from the midsummer surveys.

Much has happened since the last poll: the Legislature passed and White signed an $872 million tax increase; the governor looked far from invincible in a TV debate against Clements that should have been a shoe-in victory for the camera-conscious White; a Fort Worth security firm reported finding an electronic bug in a Clements campaign office. It's difficult to predict how those events will play in the voters' minds.

But somehow — perhaps it's the millions he's spent on TV commercials, perhaps it's all the hand shaking and baby kissing, perhaps it's the impression of leadership in the special session, probably it's a combination of all three and more — Mark White has turned his campaign around.

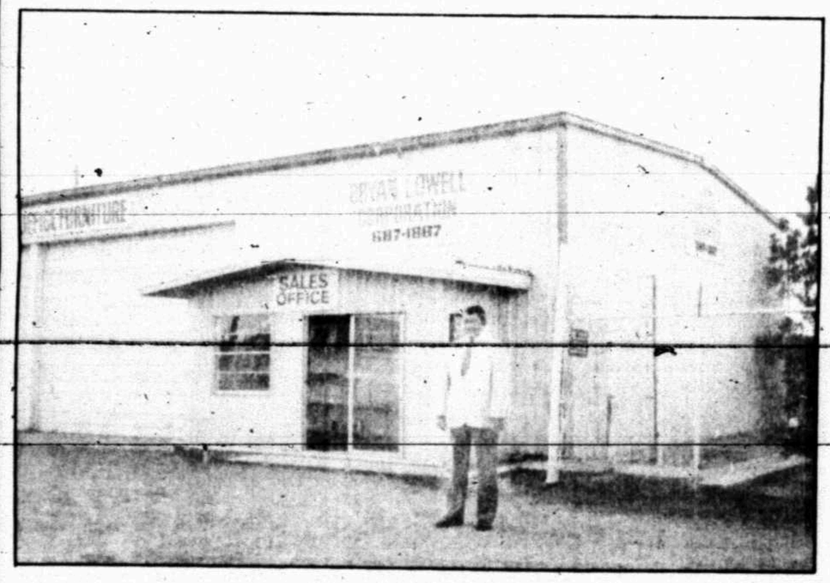

Whether he can maintain that momentum through Election Day, however, is another question.

A&M QB rallies Aggies by Bears

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Texas A&M put away its Baylor "ghost" Saturday to keep on track for a successful defense of its Southwest Conference football title.

The 11th-ranked Aggies, who had lost to Baylor the last two years, outlasted the 20th-ranked Bears 31-30 on quarterback Kevin Murray's three touchdown passes, including the game-winner with 3:48 to play.

Texas A&M Coach Jackie Sherrill called it "the greatest game I've ever seen a quarterback play."

The Aggies, who have a 12-game wining streak at home since Baylor beat them here in 1984, lost to the Bears 20-15 last year.

Baylor jumped to a 17-0 lead and appeared headed for another A&M upset until Murray took control.

Murray, who also ran for a touchdown, passed for 308 yards and repeatedly scrambled out of the grasp of blitzing Baylor defenders.

"Kevin was going uphill all day," Sherrill said. "He was 17 points down but he still always did the right thing."

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff said Murray's scrambling hurt the Bears the most.

"There was one play when it was third and 3 and we thought we had Murray and he scrambled for a first down," Teaff said. "Murray just did miraculous things. I saw the films of all A&M's games and that's the best they've played and it's the best we played. And it's Murray's best game."

For Murray, it was sweet revenge against the Bears.

Gray, McGuire guide Tech past Rice, 49-21

HOUSTON (AP) — Texas Tech took advantage of seven Rice turnovers, James Gray's running and quarterback Monte McGuire's passing to defeat Rice 49-21 in a Southwest Conference game Saturday.

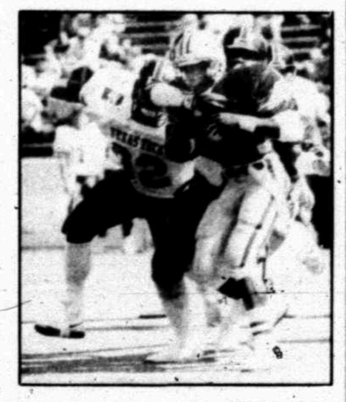

Five of Tech's seven touchdowns followed Rice turnovers, and the Raiders added scoring plays on a 60-yard blocked field goal return and a 55-yard run following an interception.

"It was a strange game," Tech Coach David McWilliams said. "There were turnovers on both sides. I'm disappointed we had so many offensively, but I'm happy we got so many defensively."

The Red Raiders got their first two 100-yard performances of the season from Gray, who scored on runs of 54 and 60 yards, and from fullback Isaac Garnett. Each runner gained 135 yards.

The Raiders rushed 332 yards, their biggest total on the ground since they gained 342 rushing against the Owls in 1979.

"Coming in, we didn't expect to run that much," McWilliams said. "But in the fourth quarter, we came back and did what it took to win. They took away our throwing game."

Ponies fight back, take 10-3 win over Houston

IRVING (AP) — Southern Methodist Coach Bobby Collins said the Houston Cougars were up to their same old tricks Saturday.

"Houston comes to Texas Stadium, and they think they own it. They always play tough here," Collins said after his team rallied from a 3-0 halftime deficit to beat the Cougars 10-3 in a Southwest Conference game.

Jeff Atkins, who was bottled up in the first half but eventually emerged with his most productive rushing game of the season, said "We just had an off day today."

Atkins added, "You're going to have days like this. It just happens. The good teams can overcome flatness, and the bad teams go under."

SMU quarterback Bobby Watters got the Mustangs rolling in the third quarter, and Atkins' touchdown on the first play of the fourth quarter gave SMU all the points it needed.

SMU offensive guard Kevin McKinney said the Mustangs might have still been reveling over last week's upset of Baylor.

"We were so high last week against Baylor that it was inevitable that we'd be a little flat this week," McKinney said.

Houston Coach Bill Yeoman praised his team's effort.

"All the kids are playing really hard. They just have to become more mentally tough in the head. Our young players became too frustrated from early mistakes, but they will learn."

Houston dominated the first half, holding the Mustangs to 17 yards and no first downs in the second quarter, and led 3-0 at intermission on Chip Browndyke's 32-yard field goal.

Two interceptions and a fumble halted first-half SMU drives.

Red Sox edge Mets, 1-0

Error by Mets' Teufel too much to overcome

NEW YORK (AP) — Maybe only the Boston Red Sox could have anticipated the outcome. The New York Mets certainly wouldn't have thought of it.

Coming into the World Series underdogs and expected to fall victim to the New York Mets' pitching, the Red Sox used the pitching of Bruce Hurst to win Game 1 of the 1986 World Series 1-0 Saturday night.

The winning run scored on an error in the seventh inning by Tim Teufel, half of the Mets' second-base platoon. The outcome also hinged on a gamble that paid off for Red Sox Manager John McNamara, who lifted Hurst in the ninth for a pinch hitter and closed with Calvin Schiraldi.

"It's great for us, too bad for them," said Hurst, who stopped the Mets on four hits over eight innings and helped hand them their first shutout at Shea Stadium Since Sept. 11, 1985.

"Teufel is a good player," Hurst said. "It's a shame, but that's the nature of the game."

The victory sent the Red Sox into Game 2 in New York with their ace, 24-game winner Roger Clemens, going against Dwight Gooden, 17-6, the best of the Mets.

"Obviously, I'd rather be one up with Clemens going in Game 2," McNamara said. "We feel like we have a good chance. He's going up against a fine pitcher, and it should be a good ballgame."

Ron Darling took a three-hit shutout into the seventh when he walked Jim Rice for the second time, threw a second wild pitch and fell victim to Teufel's error on a ground ball by Rich Gedman.

"As long as we win, I don't care how we do it," Gedman said. "Sometimes that's what it takes in a game where there is such good pitching."

Teufel said the ball scooted on him, then went between his legs. "It's my responsibility to get it," Teufel said. "You always hope it's not the loser. It was this time."

Mets Manager Davey Johnson blamed his club's continued lack of offense. The Mets set a playoff record for the lowest team batting average, .189, in beating the Houston Astros in six games to win the National League pennant.

"Yes, I'm concerned," Johnson said. "It's tough to win when you don't score any runs. The game wasn't lost on an error. When you don't score in nine innings, you can't blame an error. You can't expect to win."

But, Johnson reminded, the Mets also were shutout 1-0 in the first game of the playoffs, "and we came back. I expect us to come back tomorrow."

Asked if he would compare Hurst to Houston left-hander Bob Knepper, with whom the Mets had such trouble, Johnson said, "I think Hurst was better."

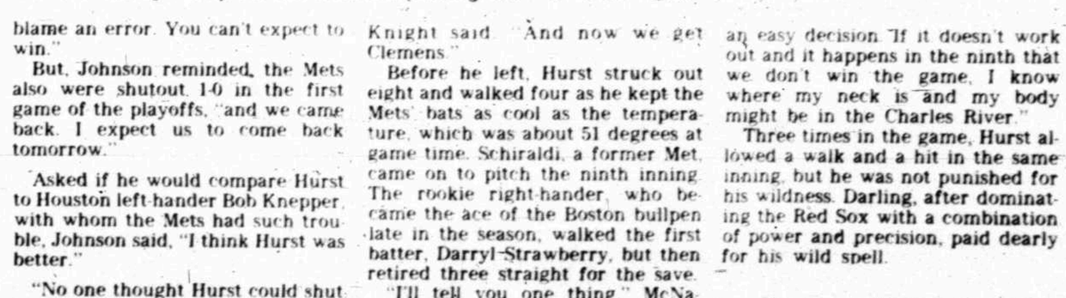

"No one thought Hurst could shut us down," Mets third baseman Ray Knight said. "And now we get Clemens."

Before he left, Hurst struck out eight and walked four as he kept the Mets' bats as cool as the temperature, which was about 51 degrees at game time. Schiraldi, a former Met, came on to pitch the ninth inning. The rookie right-hander, who became the ace of the Boston bullpen late in the season, walked the first batter, Darryl Strawberry, but then retired three straight for the save.

"I'll tell you one thing," McNamara said. "Taking Hurst out wasn't an easy decision. If it doesn't work out and it happens in the ninth that we don't win the game, I know where my neck is and my body might be in the Charles River."

Three times in the game, Hurst allowed a walk and a hit in the same inning, but he was not punished for his wildness. Darling, after dominating the Red Sox with a combination of power and precision, paid dearly for his wild spell.

Lee, Permian to play before packed house

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Just in case you were wondering, there are no tickets left for Friday's key District 4-5A football game between Midland Lee and Odessa Permian.

Actually, the game was a sellout before the season even started. Midland Lee sold all of its available season tickets prior to the season and Odessa Permian was given half the stadium as required by University Interscholastic League rules.

Since Permian has just over 5,000 season ticket holders, according to Odessa athletic director John Wilkins, Permian had to hold a drawing for the remaining adult reserved seats, which was around 3,000.

"The game is a sellout and we won't be selling any tickets this week," said Midland athletic director Gil Bartosh.

Miami blows by Cincinnati

Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Quarterback Vinny Testaverde threw a pair of touchdown passes, fueling a 31-point first half that carried the No. 1-ranked Miami Hurricanes to a 45-13 victory Saturday night over Cincinnati.

The 7-0 Hurricanes, off to the best start in school history, extended their regular-season winning streak to 17 games by scoring two touchdowns in the game's opening two minutes and coasting from there.

Testaverde completed 24 of 35 passes for 262 yards to move past George Mira into third place on Miami's all-time passing list with 5,136 yards. His two touchdown passes leave him one shy Bernie Kosar's career school mark of 40.

Cincinnati, 3-4, couldn't get closer than 11 points after Miami's opening two-touchdown explosion.

Testaverde, a senior, drove the Hurricanes 47 yards in just four plays after the opening kickoff, lobbing a 5-yard scoring pass to halfback Warren Williams.

Thirty-seven seconds later, defensive back Bubba McDowell blocked a punt by Shaun Burdick, scooped the ball and returned it 34 yards for a touchdown.

Phil Insalaco got Cincinnati its first points on its next possession, kicking a 20-yard field goal. It was the first time Miami had allowed a first-quarter score in 10 games.

KNOXVILLE — Bobby Humphrey scored three touchdowns and ran for 217 yards, third best in Alabama history, as the second-ranked Crimson Tide crushed Tennessee.

Mike Shula also accounted for three touchdowns as the Tide scored on six of their first seven possessions, twice following Tennessee fumbles, to stretch their winning streak to 10 games and end a four-game losing streak in this storied Deep South rivalry.

Alabama had a 21-0 lead before the game was 10 minutes old, but the Vols fought back to cut the lead to seven before the Tide put the game out of reach with scoring drives of 74, 62 and 48 yards in the second quarter.

Humphrey scored on runs of 27, 1 and 7 yards in the Tides' greatest outburst ever in the series, bettering their 51-0 victory in 1906. It was the most points given up by the Vols since a 60-0 loss to North Carolina in 1893.

LINCOLN, Neb. — Tyreese Knox ran 92 yards for a touchdown and Dana Brinson chalked up a 63-yard score, leading the third-ranked Nebraska over Missouri in the Big Eight Conference.

The Tigers took the opening kickoff and marched 68 yards for a field goal. They didn't advance beyond their 44-yard line again until the fourth quarter. The Cornhuskers are off to a 6-0 start for the fourth time in 12 years and are 2-0 in the Big Eight. Missouri, which has lost five straight, is 1-5 and 0-2.

Knox, a sophomore reserve I-back, dashed through a gaping hole off tackle for the longest run ever against Missouri and the longest by a Nebraska player since 1981. Knox also scored on a 2-yard run and finished with 127 yards in eight carries.

Mavs battle Rockets, take 105-98 victory

HOUSTON (AP) — Derek Harper scored 17 points, while Sam Perkins and Rolando Blackman added 14 apiece to lead the Dallas Mavericks to a 105-98 win over the Houston Rockets in an NBA pre-season game Saturday night.

Houston, 2-3, was led by Akeem Olajuwon and Ralph Sampson, who each scored 16 points. The Rockets led by as much as nine in the first half and held a 52-49 advantage at halftime.

Dallas, also 2-3 in pre-season play, took its first lead of the game, 62-60, at 8:56 in the third quarter after five straight points by Harper.

The Mavericks reeled off 10 points midway through the third period to move ahead 72-64, but the Rockets managed to cut the deficit to 79-76 going into the fourth quarter.

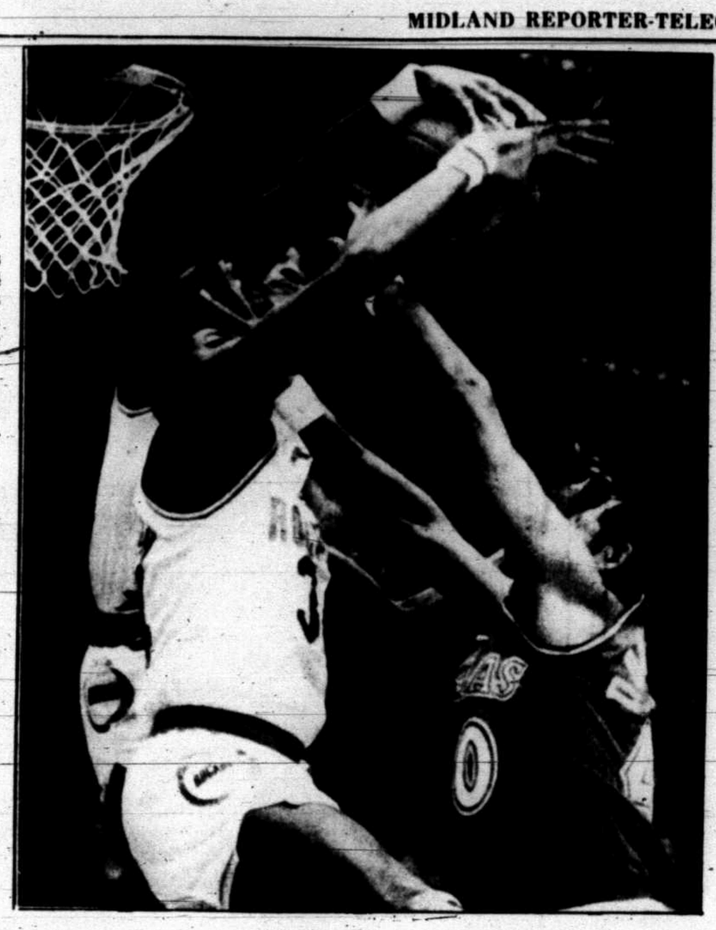

The Mavericks increased their lead to 92-82 midway through the fourth quarter and the Rockets never got any closer than five points after that.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Mike Gillette kicked a 34-yard field goal as time expired to give fourth-ranked Michigan a victory over No. 8 Iowa in a finish that was the exact opposite of last year's game.

Sore-shouldered Mark Vlasic, who missed Iowa's last two games, had come off the bench late in the third quarter to throw a game-tying 15-yard pass to Robert Smith with 11:15 remaining. 4

And when Michigan's Pat Moon's missed a 27-yard field goal attempt with 6:10 to go, it appeared the game would end in a tie.

NORMAN — Tim Lashar tied a school record by kicking four field goals, and linebacker Dante Jones returned an interception 55 yards for a score as fifth-ranked Oklahoma defeated pesky Oklahoma State in Big Eight action.

Lashar had field goals of 38, 32, 20 and 32 yards as he tied a record he also achieved in the Orange Bowl last season. Mike Vachon also kicked four, against Texas in 1966. Jones intercepted a Ronnie Williams pass by stepping in front of intended receiver Thurman Thomas in the flat. 5

Penn State 42, Syracuse 3

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Running backs Blair Thomas, Tim Manoa and D.J. Dozier combined for 312 yards rushing and four touchdowns as sixth-ranked Penn State rolled.

Manoa scored 11- and 3-yard touchdowns and Dozier dove 1 to give Penn State a 21-0 third period lead, and Thomas raced 38 as the unbeaten Nittany Lions posted their sixth triumph. Syracuse dropped to 1-5 in losing to Penn State for the 16th straight year of this longtime Eastern rivalry. 6

Auburn 31, Georgia Tech 10

AUBURN, Ala. — Jeff Burger passed for two touchdowns and Brent Fullwood ran for 183 yards and another score as No. 7 Auburn defeated Georgia Tech.

Burger, a junior giving the Tigers a passing attack they have lacked in recent years, guided Auburn to scores on its first four possessions to build up a 24-3 halftime lead. 7

When Tech narrowed the gap to 24-10 in the third quarter, Fullwood almost single-handedly put the game out of reach, bursting for 44, 10 and the final 13 yards in a single drive to make it 31-10.

Washington 48, Bowling Green 0

SEATTLE — Rick Fenney rushed for Washington's first two touchdowns and Andre Riley scored on a 66-yard punt return as the ninth-ranked Huskies took a break from the Pacific-10 Conference football race.

Tony Zackery intercepted two Rich Dackin passes and the Huskies' defense held Bowling Green's offense to 100 yards. The Falcons finished the game with third-string quarterback Jeff Sandru after Dackin and his backup, Eric Smith, were knocked out of the game. 9

Arizona State 29, USC 20

LOS ANGELES — Jeff Van Raaphorst's second touchdown pass of the day, midway through the final quarter, put Arizona State in control as the unbeaten and 10th-ranked Sun Devils downed No. 15 Southern Cal.

Arizona State, which has beaten Southern Cal three straight, is 5-0-2 overall and 3-0-1 in the Pac-10. The Trojans, losing for the second week in a row, are 4-2 and 2-2 in the conference. 10

LSU 25, Kentucky 16

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Eddie Fuller scampered 16 yards for a touchdown with three minutes left to help 12th-ranked Louisiana State to a 25-16 Southeastern Conference victory.

Fuller's run capped a 12-play, 75-yard drive after Kentucky had trimmed the margin to 18-16 on Joe Worley's 49-yard field goal with 9:01 to go. 12

Louisiana State won its third straight game to improve to 4-1.

Mississippi State 34, Tulane 27

NEW ORLEANS — Don Smith rushed for 104 yards and one touchdown and passed for 125 yards and another score, leading 13th-ranked Mississippi State over Tulane.

Smith's touchdowns came on an 8-yard run in the first quarter and an 18-yard pass to Louis Clark with two seconds left in the first half. 13

Kicker Artie Cosby booted field goals of 38 and 24 yards, both in the first half, to give Mississippi State a 20-13 lead.

Clemson 35, Duke 3

CLEMSON, S.C. — Cornerback Delton Hall returned an interception 67 yards for a touchdown to key a determined Clemson defensive effort as the No. 17 Tigers whipped Duke.

Hall's interception of a Steve Slayden pass gave Clemson a 21-3 lead with 2:00 left in the first half. 17

The Tigers had 15 tackles for losses, tying a school record set in 1979 against Maryland.

N. Carolina St. 35, N. Carolina 34

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Eric Kramer was thinking field goal, but North Carolina State's quarterback got a break, a touchdown and a narrow victory over No. 18 North Carolina.

UCLA 36, California 10

BERKELEY, Calif. — Matt Stevens connected with Willie Anderson on a 68-yard touchdown pass early in the game, sending UCLA ahead to stay, and the 19th-ranked Bruins rolled to a victory over California.

The 68-yard play broke a 3-3 tie midway in the first period. Stevens hit Anderson, his split end, for another TD with an 18-yard pass in the fourth quarter. 19

The defending Rose Bowl champions, in beating Cal for a 15th consecutive year, improved their season record to 4-2.

SAINT-NOM-LA-BRETECHE, France — Spanish star Severiano Ballesteros fired a 4-under-par 68 Saturday and grabbed a one-stroke lead after the third round of the $238,000 Lancome Trophy golf tournament.

Ballesteros, seeking his third Lancome title, had a 54-hole total of 12-under-par 204.

Ballesteros, whose season's winnings of nearly $295,000 has already clinched the No. 1 spot in the European Order of Merit, will be chasing his sixth tour victory of the season Sunday.

With a second straight 66, West German Bernard Langer closed on Ballesteros with a 205 total. Second-round leader Sam Torrance of Britain slumped to a 74 and dropped to a tie for ninth place at 209, five strokes back.

Five players were tied for third at 206...

SYDNEY, Australia — Australia's Greg Norman continued his bid for a fifth straight tournament victory Saturday by firing a 4-under-par 67 to open up a five-stroke lead after the third round of the $80,000 New South Wales Open.

Norman, who has won the European Open, Dunhill Cup, World Match Play Championship and Queensland Open titles in recent weeks, has a 54-hole total of 202, 11 under par.

New Zealand's Frank Nobilo moved into second with a 2-under-par 69 for a three-round total of 207 and Australian Lyndsay Stephen is in third place at 208 after shooting a 69...

Tennis

FILDERSTADT, West Germany — Martina Navratilova eliminated fellow American Pam Shriver 6-1, 7-6 (8-6) Saturday to advance to the final of the $175,000 Porsche Grand Prix women's tennis tournament.

Navratilova gained a berth in today's final against Czechoslovakia's Hana Mandlikova, who routed Argentina's Gabriela Sabatini 6-2, 6-1 in the other semifinal match.

Navratilova, the world's No. 1-ranked women's player, ousted Shriver, 24, in an 82-minute semifinal...

HOUSTON — The Houston Rockets' No. 3 pick from last June's draft decided to leave the basketball team and return to college to work on his degree in speech communication, officials said.

Anthony Bowie, a 6-foot-7 guard, was concerned that if he stayed he would lose his scholarship at Oklahoma, Rockets Coach Bill Fitch said.

Stewart survives putter problems to lead Disney

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — Payne Stewart had putting problems Saturday, but managed a 1-under-par 71 to take a two-stroke edge over three other players into the final round of the $556,000 Disney World Oldsmobile Golf Classic.

The knickers-clad Stewart, gunning for only his third victory on the PGA Tour, had a third-round total of 14-under 202 over Disney's three par-72 courses. He has led — or shared the lead — all three rounds.

Two strokes back of Stewart at 204 were U.S. Open champion Ray Floyd, veteran Lon Hinkle and Mike Sullivan, a University of Florida golfer from Ocala with one Tour victory.

"I never got the putter going today," said Stewart, whose last Tour victory was the 1983 Disney tournament.

Gusty wind, which drove scores higher than the first two days, made it "tough out there," he said.

"My putter accounted for my round, nothing else," he Stewart said.

Stewart made only his second bogey in three rounds. He failed to hit the green on the par-4 10th hole and then missed an 8-foot putt. He played the narrow 6,967-yard Palm course.

His other bogey came Friday on the 7,190-yard Magnolia course, which the low 70 players (and ties) will play Sunday.

Stewart opened with a 65 on the 6,706-yard Lake Buena Vista course and fashioned a 66 on the Magnolia to go with Saturday's 71.

Floyd, who played the Magnolia, also complained about the "very trying conditions." He said the wind was "so gusty and variable ... I fought it all the way ... I'm pleased with my 70."

Hinkle turned in a 68 on the Palm course for his 204 total.

Sullivan, who shared the first-round lead with Stewart, was the last of the leaders into the clubhouse after shooting a 70 on the Buena Vista course, considered the easiest of the three. His only Tour victory is the 1980 Southern Open.

Following at 206 was Brian Claar, who shot a 68 Saturday. At 207 were Morris Hatalsky, Tom Purtzer, Buddy Gardner and Gary Koch.

Cowboys' Tuinei two-way Jack of all trades

DALLAS (AP) — Mark Tuinei is a man for all positions in the front line of the Dallas Cowboys.

The three-year pro veteran has played both on offense and defense, and has played a little center, a little tackle and a smattering of guard. He is, they say, a peg that will fit in any hole.

"It's been an experience," says Tuinei mildly. "That's all I can say."

He doesn't have time to say more — he's been too busy moving around.

Tuinei, who came to the Cowboys as a free agent in 1983 after playing college football at UCLA and the University of Hawaii, joined the National Football League team expecting to play defensive tackle. That's what he was in his college career.

But for two seasons, the California native spent most of the games watching from the bench.

"I played a couple of times in blowouts," Tuinei said. He was credited with a total of three tackles over two seasons.

Dallas coaches, who are known for their waste-not, want-not attitude, decided they could find better use for a 6-5, 270-pounder.

So the coaches turned him into a center. Through the 1985 season, Tuinei was carried on the roster at that position.

"I don't know what gave them the idea," he recalls. "I guess no one really is a center — they make centers. It was strange being on the other side of the ball."

The Cowboys starting center stayed healthy for all 16 games, so Tuinei spent the 1985 season as a virtually unused spare part.

In 1986, the coaches decided to try another experiment. This time they moved Tuinei to offensive tackle, and suggested, by the way, that he may also want to learn how to be a guard.

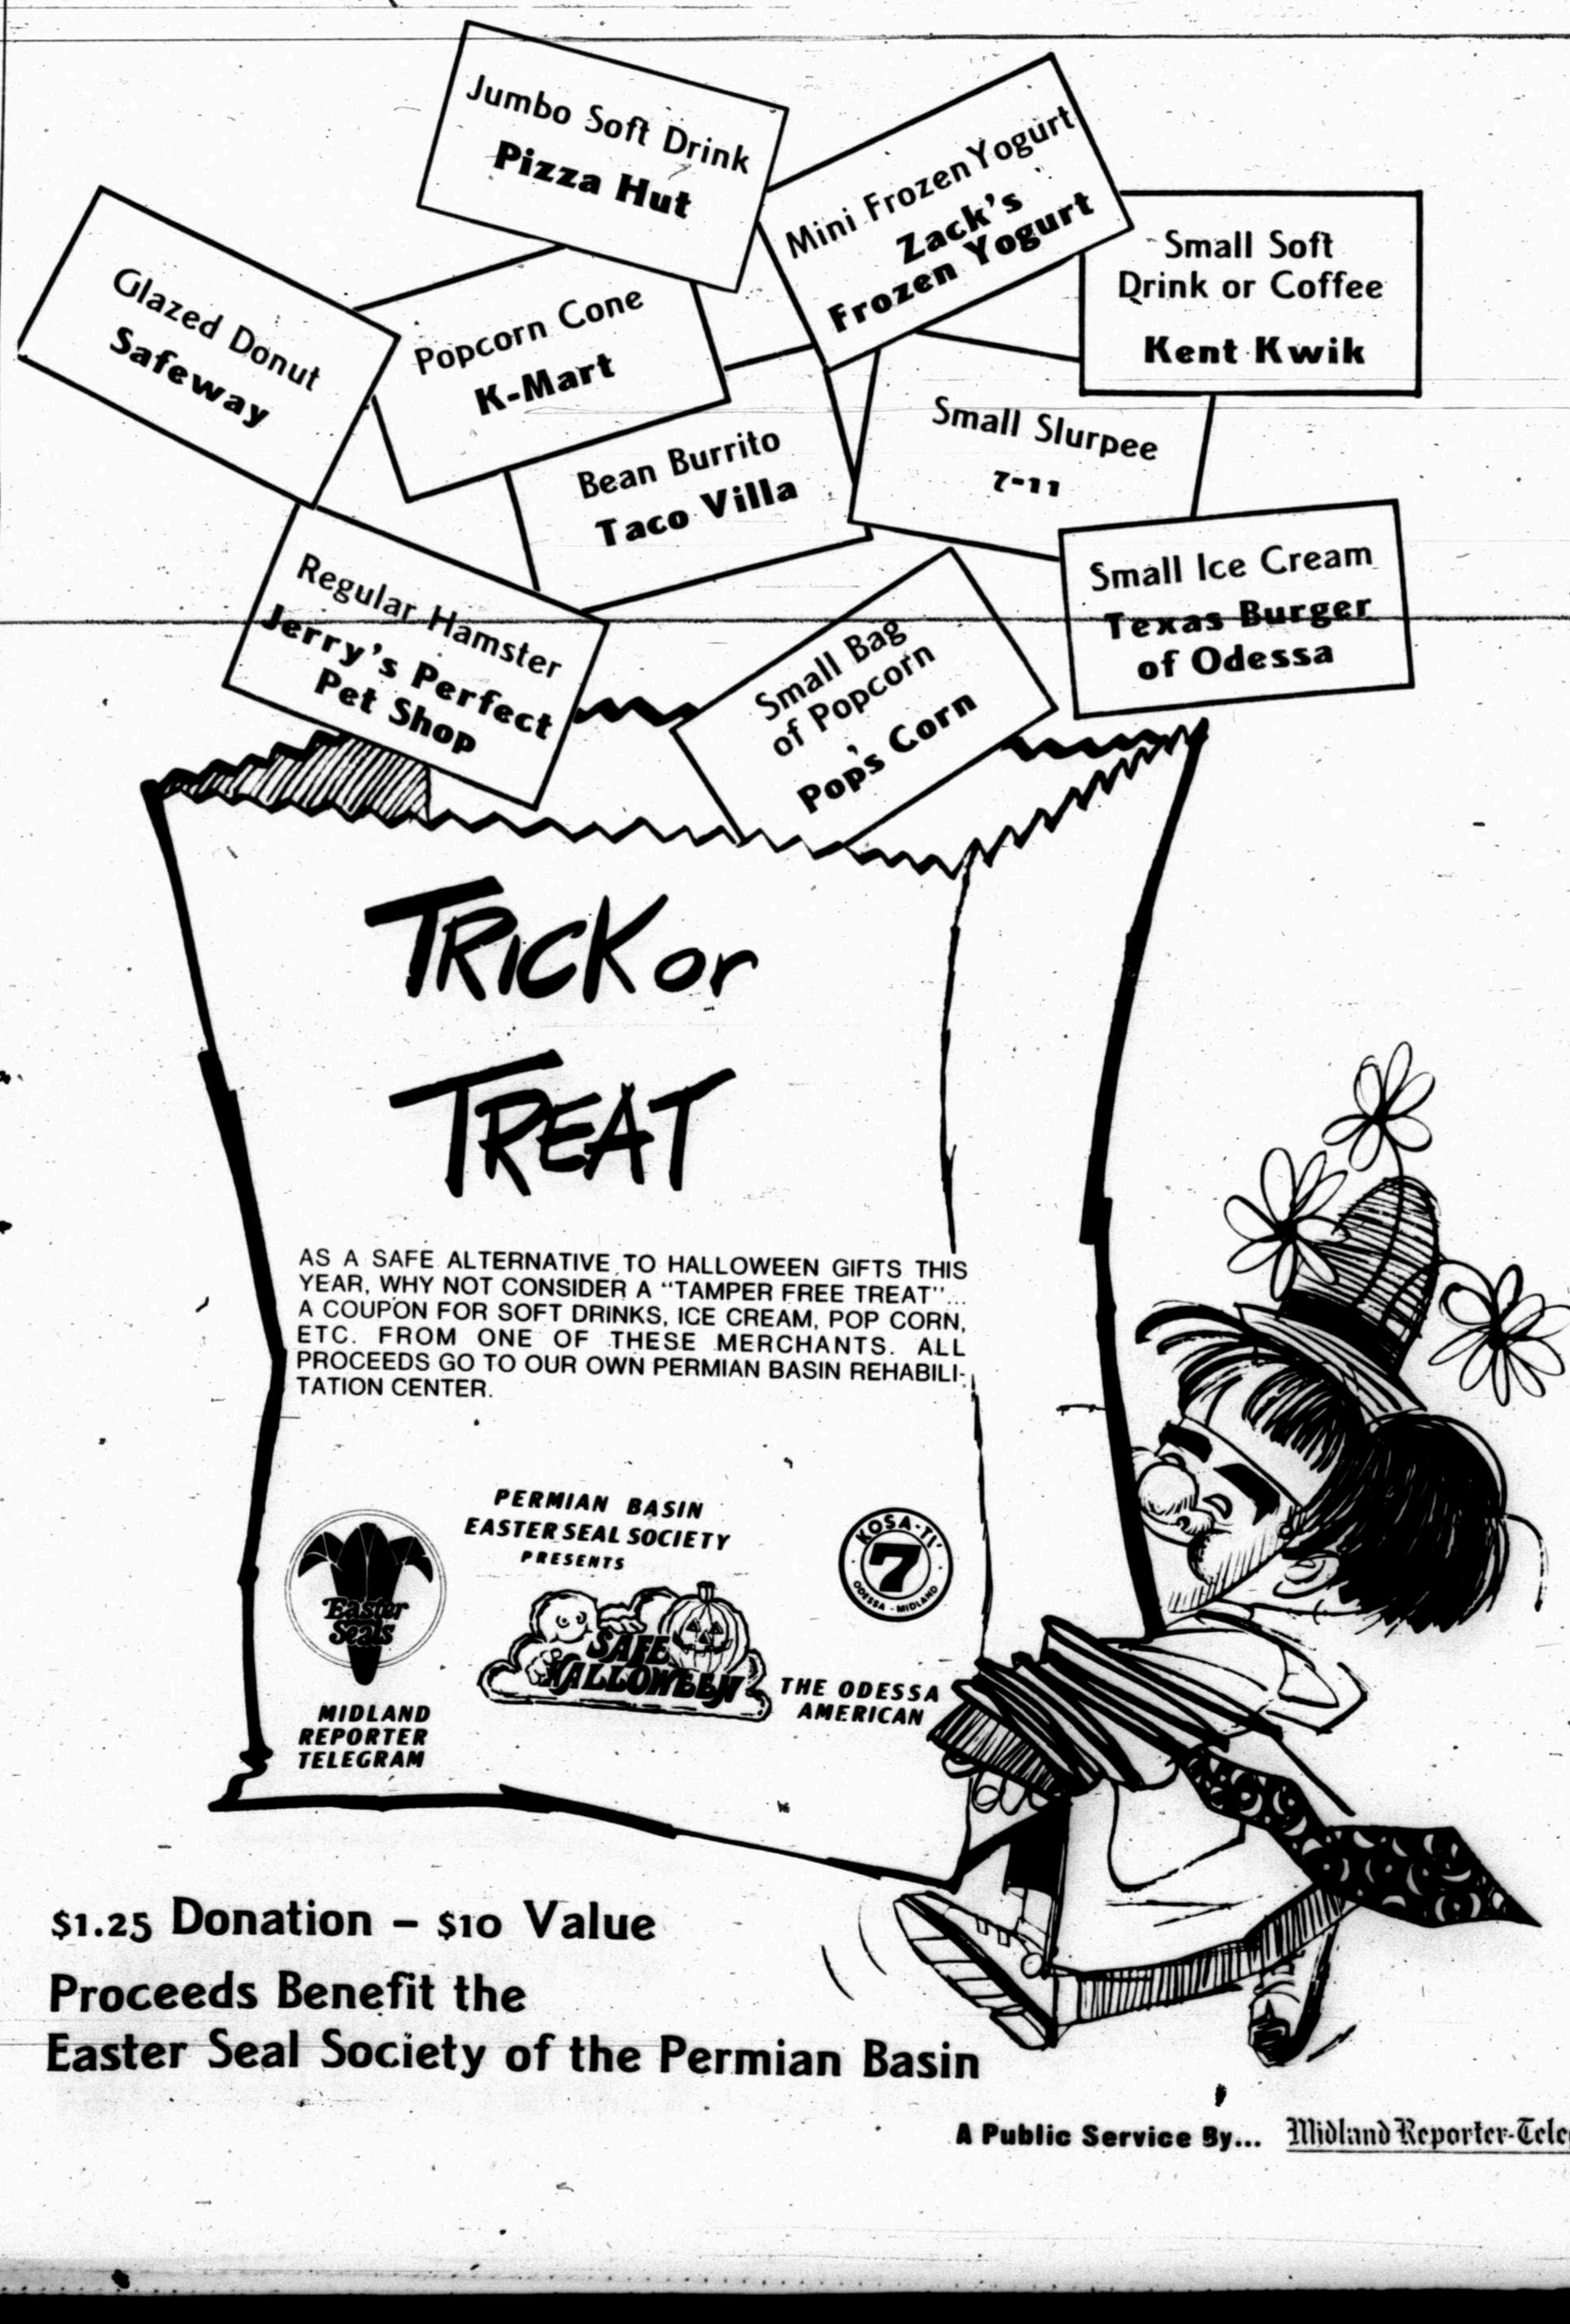

He was ready to go in with the offensive unit when the action started, but injuries took out two defensive linemen during the exhibition season. Ol' "Play Anywhere" Tuinei played on the defensive side of the battle line through the exhibition season, and then switched sides when the Cowboys started playing for keeps.

He played for part of both the St. Louis and Detroit games, filling in when the starters needed rest.

In the fifth week of the season, injuries created an empty spot on the defense, so Tuinei switched again. Against Denver, he got six tackles.

Lady Rebs keep playoff hopes alive

By ERIC SCHURER
Sports Writer

While Midland Lee can just take care of its own and hope for District 4-5A volleyball leaders San Angelo and Midland High to stumble, there is good reason for hope next season.

And that reason is Susie Dunn, who Saturday kept the third place Rebels in the playoff chase by taking charge in a 15-11, 15-11 victory over Abilene Cooper at Lee Gym. The Rebels evened their season mark to 14-14 and improved to 6-3 in district. Cooper is 3-5.

Volleyball

"We were less than spectacular, but we were good enough to win," said Lee coach Janice Baulch. "We played well just at the end of each game. But we didn't practice well three times this week and I'm a firm believer that you play the way you practice.

"Now we have an open date so that gives us a full week to get ready for the Permian game. We can't look past that one because we did a poor job against them the first time."

Elsewhere in 4-5A volleyball, San Angelo took over first place in the district with a three-game victory over MHS, 15-5, 13-15, 15-5. The Bulldogs, 7-2, took a 2-0 lead in the third game before the Bobcats ran off 10 straight points to take command.

The San Angelo win leaves Lee grasping for straws in the playoff chase. With three losses and three games to play, the Rebels are going to need some help if they are going to make it to the playoffs for the first time since Baulch took over six years ago.

AGAINST COOPER, Baulch had the steady play of seniors Michelle Lance and Daphne Rhoads and the occasional brilliance of Dunn to thank for keeping the Rebs as close as they are.

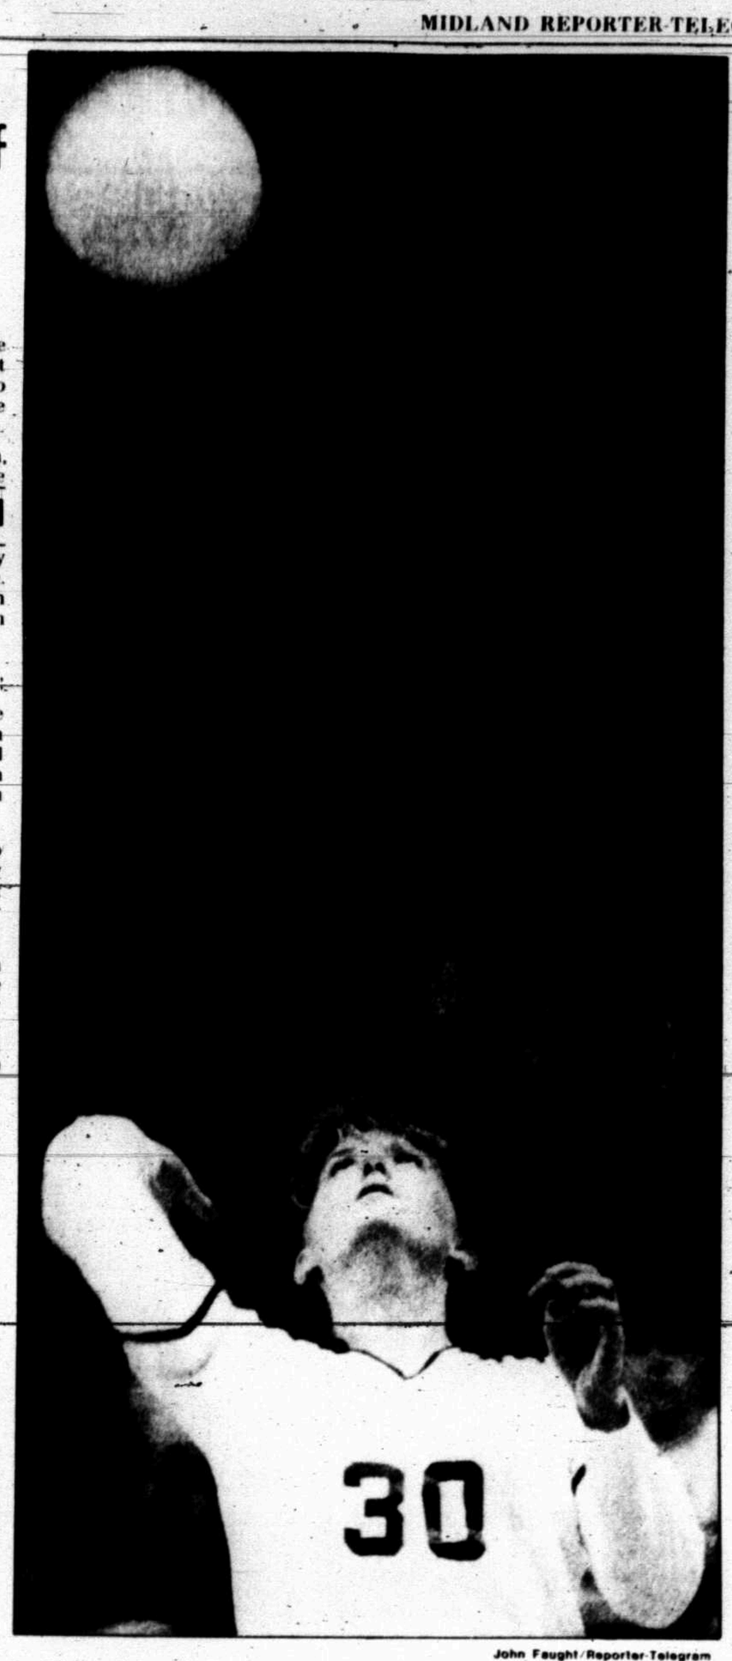

Although she is the only junior on the varsity, Dunn took command in the two-game defeat of the Cougars. Through most of the afternoon Dunn was dominant when playing on the front line where she could best utilize her size and spiking skills.

"She did play her strongest game so far — she's made a lot of progress this year," said Baulch. "She maybe didn't block as well as she has, but she hit better than she has all year."

But in the second game, after not serving all day, Dunn led a four-point rally from the service stripe to erase an 11-10 deficit and push the Rebels to a 14-10 lead.

From there it was short work to finish off the Cougars.

"She never practices her serve, she knows she isn't going to use it. She rarely plays the back line, but when she's used all her entries and there's a chance of her getting back to the front she'll stay in," Baulch said of her practice of subbing for Dunn when it's her turn to serve.

Midland Lee Rebel Daphne Rhoads prepares to serve the ball against Abilene Cooper Saturday at Lee Gym.

AND IN this case, it worked, but for the Rebels, all they can do is hope — and ask for a little help from their friends around District 4-5A.

In the junior varsity game, Cooper earned a hard-fought three game win. The Rebels won the first game 15-13, but the Cougars came back to win the next two, 15-9, 15-7.

"They're just now coming around to playing the way I'd expect them to be," Baulch said. "Their record is not very good right now, but they're playing the way I'd like them to now."

LEE

He added, "There is a lot of confusion among some of the fans. Many felt that we would have at least some tickets to sell this week. Many have been able to purchase tickets for Lee games this year and sit on the east side of the stadium and they felt like those would be available again.

"However, that just isn't the case when you play Permian because they always take their full allotment to try to get as many of their season ticket holders into the game as possible. It's a sellout and that's all we can say at this point. We could probably sell another 10,000 tickets, but we don't have them."

Last year's game, a 13-7 win by Permian at Memorial Stadium, was also a sellout, but that game was moved to a Thursday night and televised live by KTPX-TV. That soothed both communities and made the lack of seating at Memorial Stadium less of a sore spot.

The two teams could not reach an agreement with TV this year, which means that there will be a lot of unhappy people who will have no way of seeing the game this year.

Lee was willing to move the game to Thursday night, but Permian wanted the game to be moved to Saturday. Neither team would budge from that stance. The major problem was that Lee had an open date prior to the matchup with Permian and the Panthers thought that would give too much of an advantage to Lee. Permian is open next week while Lee has to prepare for an equally important game in San Angelo with the undefeated Bobcats and were unwilling to move to Saturday.

The UIL will not allow a game to be televised on Friday night because it could cause fans to stay at home instead of watching other games. After last year's TV ratings, the rule probably has a lot of merit. The matchup was the highest rated program in its time slot by a wide margin.

So, we have a sellout with no TV but there is a winner. KBAT radio has the Midland broadcast rights to the game and that should be a bonanza for the station.

West Texas rolls by Howard Payne, 31-7

BROWNWOOD — West Texas State, on the strength of J.R. Compton's rushing and quarterback Todd Mayfield's passing, coasted to a 31-7 Lone Star Conference victory over Howard Payne.

Compton led a balanced West Texas attack with 96 yards on 13 carries, while Mayfield was 28 of 39 for 212 yards and two touchdowns. Mayfield went over 2,000 yards on the season early in the first half.

Howard Payne came back in the third quarter with Derwin Lewis' 1-yard TD run to make it 24-7, but Mayfield connected with Stan Carraway in the fourth quarter to put the game away.

Lamar 17, SW Texas St. 3

BEAUMONT — Lamar quarterback Shad Smith threw for two touchdowns as the Cardinals ended a school record 13-game losing streak, with a 17-3 victory over Southwest Texas State.

Smith's two touchdown passes came after the Bobcats scored on a 28-yard field goal by Kyle Matlock early in the second quarter. The Cardinals came right back to take the lead 7-3 on a 17-yard pass from Smith to fullback Shawn Morgan.

Angelo St. 35, E. New Mexico 14

SAN ANGELO — Angelo State quarterback Ned Cox threw for three touchdowns and ran for a fourth to lead the Rams to a 35-14 Lone Star Conference victory over Eastern New Mexico.

Eastern New Mexico held the lead twice in the first period.

Tarleton St. 27, Austin Col. 10

SHERMAN — Tarleton State, rallying behind running back Gaylon Bowser, scored 21 second half points to defeat Austin College 27-10 in a Texas Intercollegiate Athletic Association game.

Tarleton increased its record to 5-1-1 for the season and 3-0 in TIAA play. Austin College fell to 5-2 and 1-2.

MHS runners claim ACUI title

ABILENE — The Midland High boys won the championship here Saturday with 52 points in the Abilene Christian University Invitational cross country meet.

San Angelo was second with 56 points.

Sammy Venegas paced the Bulldogs with a second place finish while Presialiano Natividad was ninth, Eracilo Sanchez, 12th; Jose Hernandez, 13th; Rogellio Salinas, 18th; and Ramon Najera, 21st.

MHS also got a fourth place finish from Marya Pina in the junior varsity girls division. Also running on the JV was Mariza Martinez and Mary Jane Diaz. Varsity girls were Tammy McEndree, Eli Reyna and Natalie Thevenaz.

Midland Lee took the week off, but both MHS and Lee will host the Tall City Invitational Cross Country meet at Hogan Park next Saturday morning with races beginning at 10 a.m. at the old Hogan Park pro shop, next to Angel Stadium.

Texas eagles vacation in Canada

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's bald eagle marking and tagging program has received reports of sightings of Texas-born eagles as far away as Ontario, Canada, officials said Thursday.

Biologist David Mabie said 28 eaglets hatched in Texas nests have been tagged and color-marked during the past two years.

Besides the Ontario sightings, marked eagles have been spotted at Earthquake Lake, Mont.; Pine Bluff, Ark., and in central Nebraska.

Mabie said that nesting eagles and their young will be returning to Texas over the next few months.

TP&W to hold javelina, Chachalaca hunts

AUSTIN (AP) — Public hunts for javelina and chachalaca will be held in several wildlife management areas, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department announced Thursday.

The public chachalaca hunt will be held within the Las Palomas management area in the lower Rio Grande Valley on Dec. 6-7 and Jan. 10-11. About 150 permits will be issued and the bag limit will be five per day, officials said.

The deadline for submitting applications for the chachalaca hunt is Nov. 3. A $20 fee will be charged for each permit for both the javelina and chachalaca hunts.

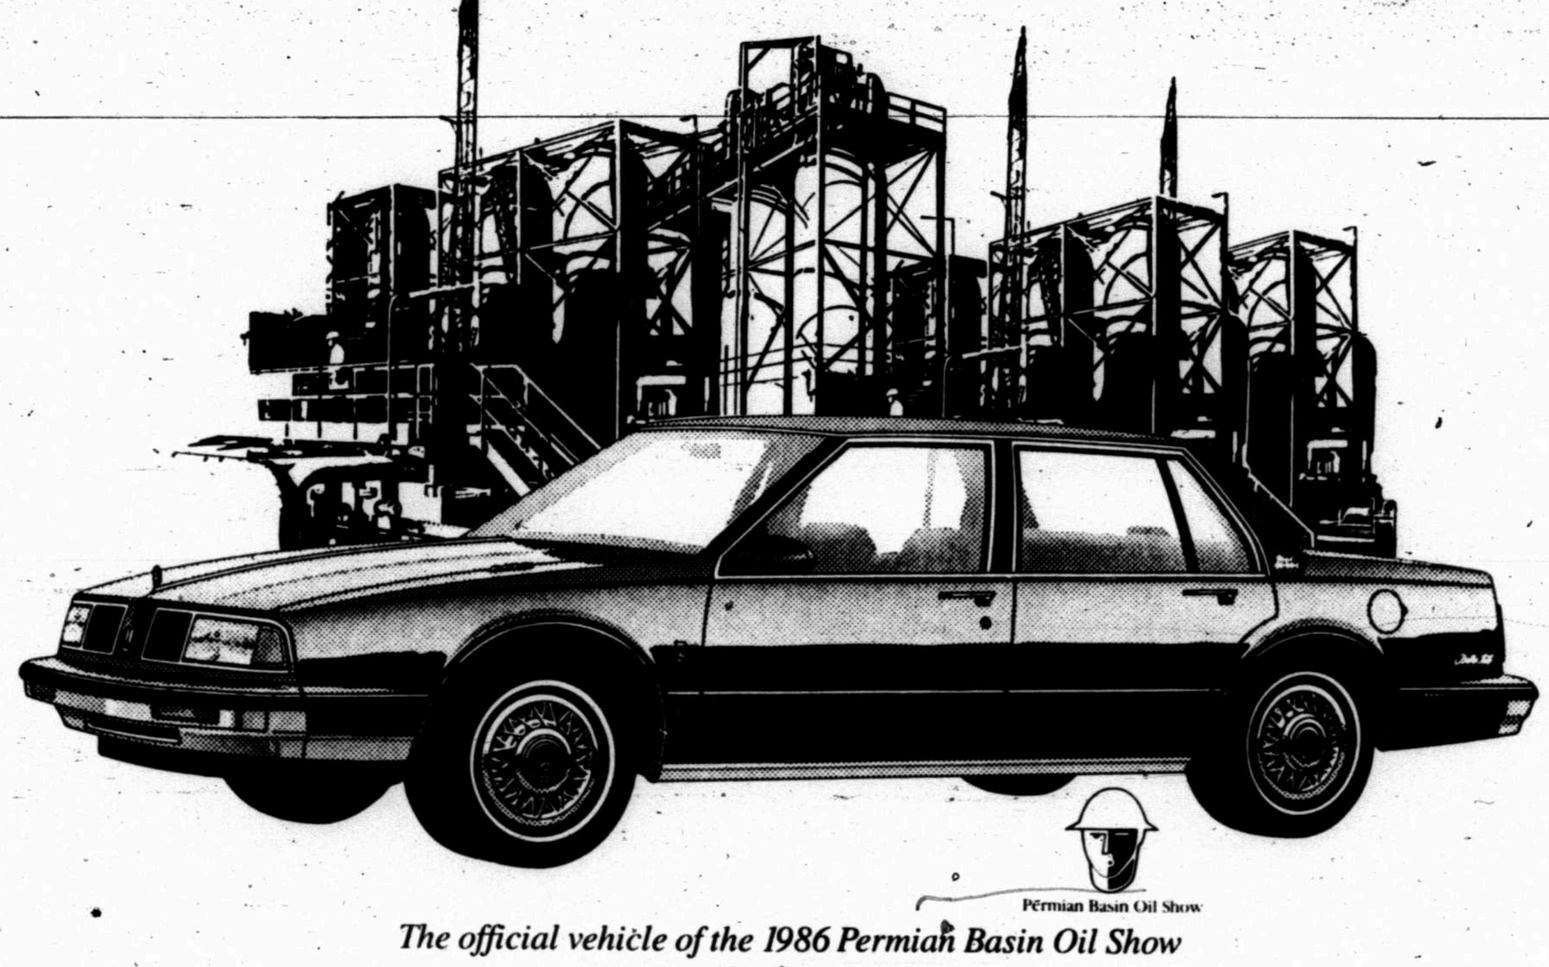

Prospective hunters have until Dec. 1 to submit applications to the department hunt javelinas in five areas. An archery hunt will be held in the Walter Buck management area in Kimble County during January. Gun hunts will be conducted during January and February in four other areas.

Spartans post first Big Ten win to spoil Illini homecoming

Associated Press

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Bobby Morse scored two touchdowns for Michigan State as the Spartans whipped Illinois 29-21 to grab their first Big Ten Conference win of the season.

Michigan State is now 1-2 in the Big Ten, 3-3 overall. Illinois, playing its homecoming game, fell to 1-2 in the league, 2-4 overall.

It was Michigan State's first victory over Illinois since 1979, after six straight losses, even though they played without injured star tailback Lorenzo White.

Wisconsin 35, Northwestern 27

EVANSTON, Ill. — Quarterback Bud Keyes passed for two touchdowns and ran 13 yards for another and Larry Emery scored two TDs.

Quarterback Mike Greenfield rallied Northwestern to two fourth-quarter touchdowns.

Midwest

With 3:04 left, the Wildcats went for two points but Greenfield was tackled by Leon Johnson on a scrambling run.

Then Emery raced 40-yard touchdown run with 42 seconds remaining for the final TD.

Minnesota 19, Indiana 17

MINNEAPOLIS — Chip Lohmiller kicked four field goals, including a 21-yarder with two seconds to play, and Darrell Thompson rushed 30 times for 191 yards, rallying Minnesota to a Big Ten victory.

Thompson, a freshman whose 802 rushing yards lead the Big Ten, gained 37 yards on the Gophers' final 14-play drive, which began at their own 20-yard line. Rickey Foggie, whose three lost fumbles hurt several Minnesota comeback attemxts, completed a 16-yard pass to Mel Anderson at Indiana's 20 to help set up Lohmiller's winner.

Notre Dame 31, Air Force 3

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Tim Brown returned a kickoff 95 yards for a touchdown, inspiring a Notre Dame offense that rushed for three more touchdowns, as the Irish stifled the Air Force wishbone.

Air Force, 5-2, had come from behind to win three times this season, but failed to score after Chris Blasy kicked a 32-yard field goal late in the first quarter.

Quarterback Steve Beuerlein, fullback Pernell Taylor, and tailback Anthony Johnson each scored for Notre Dame, 2-4, on 1-yard runs against an Air Force line that allowed the Irish 237 rushing yards.

Air Force rushed for 186 yards, well below its 232-yard average.

W. Michigan 27, Miami Ohio 17

KALAMAZOO, Mich. — Chris Conklin threw for two touchdowns and ran for another as Western Michigan earned its first victory of the season.

Western, 1-6 overall and 1-4 in the MAC, has not lost to the Redskins, 5-2 and 4-1, since 1981.

Conklin engineered several long drives for the Broncos beginning in the first quarter. He threw an 8-yard TD pass to running back Jamie Hence with 2:28 left in the opening period to cap a 13-play, 88-yard drive.

Kansas State 22, Kansas 12

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Erick Harper returned an interception 39 yards for a touchdown and Mark Porter kicked three field goals while an aroused Kansas State defense shut down Kansas in a Big Eight game.

Ohio State 39, Purdue 11

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind — David Brown set a modern-day conference record with a 100-yard touchdown return of an intercepted pass and Cris Carter caught seven passes for 118 yards as Ohio State overpowered Purdue, keeping the Buckeyes in a tie for first place in the race for the Big Ten football championship.

Freshman tailback Jim Bryant had his third 100-yard rushing performance of the season for the Buckeyes, finishing with 129 yards on 24 carries as his team accumulated 544 yards on offense.

BYU teaches UW facts of life, 34-22

Associated Press

LARAMIE, Wyo. — Lakei Heimuli rushed for 177 yards and one touchdown and Steve Lindsley passed for two more scores Saturday as Brigham Young held off a resurgent Wyoming, 34-22, in Western Athletic Conference action.

Brigham Young, now 4-2 overall and 2-1 in the WAC, led 22-0 at the half on touchdown passes to Mark Bellini and Trevor Molini, two Leonard Chitty field goals and a safety, and a rout seemed likely.

But Wyoming, which managed just 34 yards in the first half while yielding 270 to the Cougars, scored twice in the third quarter to cut the lead to 28-15.

UCLA 36, California 10

BERKELEY, Calif. — Matt Stevens connected with Willie Anderson on a 68-yard touchdown pass early in the game, sending UCLA ahead to stay and the 19th-ranked Bruins rolled to a Pacific-10 football victory.

West

The 68-yard play broke a 3-3 tie midway in the first period. Stevens hit Anderson, his split end, for another TD with an 18-yard pass in the fourth quarter.

Colorado St. 31, Hawaii 7

FORT COLLINS, Colo. — Hard-nosed Steve Bartalo racked up his 23rd 100-yard game and a pair of short-range touchdowns and safety Ron Cortell returned an interception 32 yards for a TD as Colorado State rolled to a Western Athletic Conference victory.

With the victory, the Rams move to 4-2 overall and 2-1 in league play, while Hawaii dropped to 3-2 and 2-2.

Bartalo, already the top rusher in the WAC history, finished with 108 yards on 37 carries to push his career total to 4,054 yards.

Colorado 31, Iowa State 3

BOULDER, Colo. — After a blowout loss, three demoralizing fourth quarter setbacks and a less-than-inspiring victory, the University of Colorado football team needed a solid, no-nonsense rout to gain confidence heading into next week's showdown with third-rated Nebraska.

And that's just what they got, as the Buff wishbone steamrollered Iowa State in Big Eight football.

Freshman halfback O.C. Oliver scored two first-quarter touchdowns and CU converted three Iowa State fumbles into scores.

The Buffs ran for 303 yards against a defense which had been yielding just 106.8 yards per game on the ground. They scored 17 points in the first quarter, one more than ISU had given up in the first quarter of its five previous games.

Stanford 41, Oregon 7

EUGENE, Ore. — Brad Muster rushed for 151 yards and two touchdowns and caught a pass for a third touchdown to lead Stanford to a Pacific-10 Conference victory.

Quarterback John Paye completed 14 of 20 passes for 191 yards and two touchdowns for the Cardinal.

Oregon quarterback Chris Miller became the Ducks' leader in career total offense and completions, surpassing records set 14 years ago by Dan Fouts.

Miller completed 25 of 40 passes for 242 yards.

Texas Tech's Tyrone Thurman (81), a former Midland Lee Rebel, is stripped of the ball by Rice defender William McClay Saturday.

So much for 'Hogs 20-year jinx

AUSTIN (AP) - Coach Ken Hatfield of No. 14-ranked Arkansas said Saturday night his team's 21-14 victory over Texas should silence comments about Arkansas not winning at Texas.

'At least they won't be writing about us not winning here in 20 years any more,' Hatfield said.

It was Arkansas' first victory at Texas since 1966, which also happened to be the last time a Texas team got off to a 2-3 start.

Halfback Joe Johnson scored two rushing touchdowns and tireless fullback Marshall Foreman added another for Arkansas. Johnson, a sophomore from Longview, Texas, said, 'It's a great feeling coming back to my home state and beating Texas.'

Coach Fred Akers of Texas said, 'We shot ourselves in the foot with plays called back on penalties and other errors.'

'I was pleased with everything tonight except the penalties,' he said. 'We just made some mistakes and got killed on penalties,' said Texas defensive end Blake Brawner.

Three key penalties in the first half allowed Arkansas to score one touchdown and stalled two Texas drives inside the Arkansas 25-yard line as the Longhorns fell to 2-3 on the season, 1-1 in the Southwest Conference.

Arkansas, losers last week to Texas Tech, rebounded to 5-1, 2-1 in the SWC.

A fourth penalty against Texas erased a pass completion to the Arkansas 25 in the fourth quarter.

Foreman ripped through the middle for 10 yards and a 7-0 Arkansas lead with 12:03 left in the first period.

Texas tied it on tailback Eric Metcalf's 7-yard cutback run. But Arkansas, after missing a 30-yard field goal, took the lead again on a 2-yard run by Johnson after Texas was penalized on the missed kick for having 12 players on the field.

Texas' Edwin Simmons, returning from a two-game suspension for disciplinary reasons, scored from the Arkansas 2 with 11 seconds remaining in the half to make the score 14-14.

Johnson, a 200-pounder, scored Arkansas' winning touchdown on a 9-yard run with 8:09 remaining in the third quarter.

Texas, playing with two starting linebackers out with injuries, lost two more linebackers to injuries against Arkansas.

Simmons also injured an ankle, leaving Texas with Metcalf as its only healthy tailback.

Holy Cross stops Army in final seconds

Associated Press

WEST POINT — Tackle Andy Martin dropped Army quarterback Tory Crawford for a 3-yard loss on fourth down with 21 seconds to play Saturday as Holy Cross remained unbeaten with a 17-14 victory over the Cadets.

Trailing by three points and facing fourth-and-14 from the Holy Cross 17, Army elected to go for the winning touchdown rather than a 25-yard field goal with 28 seconds remaining. Coach Jim Young opted for a sprint-out flood pass with three receivers in the end zone, but Crawford was forced to scramble and was tackled by Martin with 21 seconds left to give the Crusaders their sixth straight victory.

Army, which last week upset Tennessee in the final minute of play, dropped to 3-3.

Sophomore quarterback Jeff Wiley completed 18 of 28 passes for 230 yards and one touchdown for the Crusaders. His main target was tailback Gordon Lockbaum, who last week tied a school record with six touchdowns in a win over Dartmouth. Lockbaum caught four passes for 73 yards Saturday.

East

Boston College 41, Louisville 7

NEWTON, Mass. — Troy Stradford rushed for 171 yards, and quarterback Sean Halloran passed for 167 as Boston College cruised over Louisville.

Lousiville, 2-4, scored the first touchdown, but a balanced Eagles scoring attack put Louisville behind thereafter as Boston College, 3-3, breezed to a 27-7 halftime lead.

Stradford had 127 yards in the first half rushing, and Halloran connected on 12 of 18 passes good for 136 yards.

Penn 30, Navy 26

ANNAPOLIS — Quarterback Jim Crocicchia threw for four second-half touchdowns, three of them to tight end Brent Novoselsky, to lead undefeated Pennsylvania to a 26 victory over Navy.

The touchdown pass that put Penn ahead to stay was a 33-yarder to Novoselsky with less than three minutes left in the game. After a Navy fumble on the ensuing kickoff, Crocicchia put the game out of reach with a 29-yard scoring pass to running back Jim Bruni that gave the Division I-AA Quakers a 30-20 lead.

The Midshipmen, now 3-2 for the season, moved to within four points when running back Chuck Smith carried over from the one with less than a minute to play, but a try at an on-side kick was unsuccessful and Penn ran out the clock.

The loss overshadowed a record-setting performance by Navy quarterback Bill Byrne, who became the Middies' all-time leading passer, breaking the old record of 3,996 yards compiled by Mike McNallen in 1976-78.

Lehigh 48, Princeton 28

BETHLEHEM, Pa. — Tailback Lee Blum scored four touchdowns and quarterback Mark McGowan passed for 266 yards to lead Lehigh over Princeton.

McGowan, starting his first varsity game at quarterback in place of Jim Harris, completed 11 of 16 passes for three touchdowns. Harris missed the game with mononucleosis.

Blum carried 18 times for 92 yards and three touchdowns, while adding two catches, including one for a 64-yard touchdown play.

The Engineers held a 34-7 halftime lead, and extended it to 48-7 before Princeton scored three touchdowns in the fourth quarter.

Derek Wassink set a Princeton single-game record with 185 kickoff return yards on seven runs. Lehigh is 2-4 on the season, while Princeton is 1-4.

TECH

"It really felt great to get back out there and contribute to the team again," McGuire said. "I was a little nervous on the first couple of plays but I settled down after that."

The Owls were in the game until the Raiders' 28-point fourth quarter.

"It's a shame we took a good football game and turned it into a rout," Rice Coach Jerry Berndt said. "We played as bad as we could ever play in the last eight minutes of that football game, and to their credit, Texas Tech took advantage of it."

Gray's 60-yard scoring run came with 10:13 left in the game to put the Raiders ahead for good in an error-filled game that included 14 turnovers.

McGuire, returning from the injury list, replaced starter Billy Joe Tolliver and hit Wayne Walker with a 55-yard touchdown with 5:26 left in the game and threw an 8-yard touchdown to Eddy Anderson with 2:34 to go.

Tech improved its overall record to 4-3 and is 2-2 in SWC games. Rice dropped to 2-4 and 1-3.

A&M

"Baylor put a lot of pressure on us but left our receivers in a lot of man-for-man coverage," he said. "We did a good job of adjusting."

A&M went without a first down in the first period before it learned to handle the Baylor defensive pressure.

"Some of my receivers made some great catches," Murray said. "I played bad against Baylor last year. I had been thinking a whole year about it. It was embarrassing. We all came on the field with a little chip on our shoulder."

Sophomore Tony Thompson's juggling catch of Murray's 4-yard, third-down pass put away the scrappy Bears, who had jumped to a 17-0 lead.

It was the first touchdown catch of Thompson's career and gave 11th-ranked A&M the lead for the first time in the game.

Playing before 74,739 fans, the third largest Kyle Field crowd in history, the Aggies increased their record to 5-1 overall and 3-0 in SWC play. Baylor, ranked No. 20, dropped to 4-3 and 2-2.

Murray, who completed 25 of 40 passes for 308 yards, took the Aggies 80 yards in 16 plays after Mark Mahler's 41-yard field goal gave the Bears a 30-24 lead.

The game wasn't secure until Jeff Holley intercepted a pass at the A&M 40 with less than a minute to play.

SMU

But late in the third quarter, receptions of 17 and 11 yards by SMU split end Jeffrey Jacobs got the Mustangs to the Houston 13, and Atkins scored from the 2 four plays later.

Atkins' 12-yard run and Jacobs' 20-yard reception set up Brandy Brownlee's 19-yard field goal in the fourth quarter.

Atkins had only 41 yards the first half, but added 112 in the second half — including a 41-yard burst in the fourth quarter — to finish with 153 yards, his best game of the season.

It was Atkins' 15th 100-yard game of his career and fourth this season.

The 153 yards pushed Atkins over the 3,000-yard mark for his career. He now has 3,147 yards, becoming the 11th player in SWC history to surpass 3,000 yards.

SMU, which is ineligible for the league title, improved its record to 5-1 for the season and 4-0 in SWC play. Houston fell to 1-5 for the year and 0-3 in league warfare.

Watters completed 10 of 20 passes for 124 yards and two interceptions, and was sacked twice.

Houston quarterback Gerald Landry hit eight of 22 passes for 71 yards and was also the Cougars' leading rusher with 93 yards in 20 carries off Houston's veer.

North Texas State stuns Texas Christian, 24-20

FORT WORTH (AP) — Kim Phillips returned a kickoff 98 yards for a touchdown and North Texas State recovered five fumbles Saturday as the Eagles carved out a ragged 24-20 non-conference verdict over Texas Christian.

Phillips, a sophomore defensive back, swept untouched through a stunned Horned Frog specialty team to pull the Eagles back from the grave and propel them to their first victory over TCU since 1919.

North Texas trailed 17-3 in the third quarter when Phillips took off on his near-record romp.

Eagle quarterback Bron Beal sneaked 1 yard to tie the count at 17 in the same period and then guided North Texas 56 yards in seven plays for the winning touchdown with 6:59 left.

Fullback Darrin Collins slashed in from 3 yards out for the final score as the Eagles hiked their record to 4-2. TCU fell to 2-4.

Tate's three TD outing leads Georgia to easy victory

ATHENS, Ga. — Georgia tailback Lars Tate scored three touchdowns and quarterback James Jackson ran for one and threw for another as the Bulldogs dominated Vanderbilt 38-16 in a Southeastern Conference game.

Georgia, 4-2 overall and 2-1 in the SEC, broke open the contest in the second quarter, scoring three touchdowns after managing only a 3-0 lead on a 31-yard field goal by Steve Crumley after one period.

Tate, who had 112 yards on 19 carries, broke through a huge hole for a 12-yard TD scamper after only five seconds of the second quarter and scored again on a 6-yard run 4:53 later. Jackson's 32-yard scoring pass to John Thomas with 1:45 left before halftime made it 24-0 at intermission.

Vanderbilt, 1-5 and 0-3, averted a shutout when quarterback Tim Richardson scored on a 1-yard run with 8:20 left in the game. The Commodores scored again four minutes later when second-team quarterback Eric Jones scored on a 2-yard run.

South

Mississippi 21, SW Louisiana 20

OXFORD, Miss. — Cornerback Stevon Moore intercepted a Southwestern Louisiana 2-point conversion attempt with 1:17 to play to ensure a Mississippi homecoming victory.

A last-gasp 59-yard field goal attempt by Ragin' Cajun kicker Patrick Broussard failed also in a game that many thought was finished after Mississippi rolled to a 21-6 third quarter lead.

Quarterback Matt Young scored two touchdowns and passed for another and Howard Moss made two third-quarter interceptions to contribute to the victory but an error-prone offense almost blew the non-conference game for the Rebels, now 4-2-1. Southwestern fell to 4-2.

Richmond 40, VMI 9

RICHMOND, Va. — Sophomore Erwin Matthews returned a kickoff 87 yards for a touchdown and ran 65 yards from scrimmage for another to lead Richmond's Spiders.

Matthews, who had 75 yards on only four carries, had to share the spotlight with senior tailback Greg Grooms, who ran 74 yards for the game's first touchdown midway through the opening quarter. Grooms finished with 179 yards on 16 carries.

The triumph even Richmond's record at 3-3 while the Keydets dropped to 1-5.

Spider quarterback Bob Bleier hit 11 of 22 passes for 124 yards and an 8-yard touchdown to Steve Shields. Freshman quarterback Chad Grier had a 38-yard scoring strike to Johnnie Ealey.

The Keydets, their two quarterbacks sacked 7 times for 48 yards in losses, had to settle for field goals of 49, 45 and 26 yards by Jim Wall. Ned Ahnell kicked field goals from 27 and 34 for the Spiders.

Temple 29, Virginia Tech 13

NORFOLK, Va. — Paul Palmer rushed 44 times for 239 yards and one score and Lee Saltz passed for two more touchdowns to lead Temple's Owls.

Bill Wright added three field goals of 38 yards, 22 yards and 24 yards as Temple improved to 5-2 and Tech fell to 4-2-1.

Palmer's output was the most against Tech since Barry Redden of Richmond rushed for 233 yards in 1980.

Saltz completed seven of 16 passes for 149 yards.

Florida 15, Rutgers 3

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Jeff Dawson kicked three field goals and Rodney Brewer threw a 36-yard touchdown pass to Ricky Nattiel as Florida defeated Rutgers in the Gators' first trip north-in 44 years.

The victory was the second straight for Florida, and in large part was made possible by its defense, which continually frustrated Rutgers sophomore quarterback Scott Erney in his collegiate debut. It also was a measure of revenge for the Gators, who were tied 28-28 by the Scarlet Knights last year.

The loss was the second straight for Rutgers, which opened the season 3-0-1. Penn State defeated the Scarlet Knights two weeks ago in a game in which quarterback Joe Gagliardi suffered a separated shoulder and was lost for the season.

Tennessee St. 25, W. Kentucky 3

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Tennessee State defensive backs Tony Stargell and Terry Welch returned third-quarter pass interceptions for touchdowns to lead the Tigers to a victory over Western Kentucky.

With the Tigers leading 12-3, Stargell returned his interception of a Jeff Cesarone pass 49 yards for a touchdown with for a 19-3 lead.

On the Hilltoppers' next possession, Welch stoled a David Armstrong pass and raced 39 yards for the game's final score.

Marshall 34, E. Tennessee St. 19

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn. — Marshall quarterback Tony Petersen passed for 394 yards and two touchdowns to lead the Thundering Herd to a victory over East Tennessee State.

Aztecs defeat UTEP, 15-10

EL PASO (AP) — Led by junior quarterback Todd Santos, the San Diego State Aztecs outlasted the University of Texas at El Paso 15-10 in a Western Athletic Conference game.

Santos, recovering from a broken wrist, set up the four scoring drives and completed 16 of 25 passes for 183 yards to defeat the Miners.

San Diego led 6-0 after the first quarter, where kicker Kevin Rahill connectd on field goals of 34 and 28 yards. The Miner offense was shut down in the opening quarter with a total of only 22 yards.

The second quarter was not much better for UTEP as the Aztecs increased their lead to 12-0. San Diego scored late in the second quarter when Aztec running back Chris Hardy fumbled into the end zone and Robert Awalt recovered for the touchdown.

The Miners came to life in the second half, taking the opening kick-off and marching to a touchdown three minutes into the third quarter.

Oilers have to watch out for Bengal tricks

CINCINNATI (AP) — Houston Oilers Coach Jerry Glanville isn't interested in trying to rival the variety of gridiron magic tricks that Cincinnati Bengals Coach Sam Wyche uses.

Wyche, in his third year as Cincinnati's head coach, has already become known around the National Football League for innovations including the no-huddle offense, sideline team huddles and unexpectedly juggling the roles and responsibilities of backs and kickers. There is disagreement around the NFL among coaches and broadcasters as to whether Wyche's gimmicks are effective, or necessary.

But Wyche's Bengals did employ a trick to defeat the Pittsburgh Steelers in Monday night's nationally televised, 24-22 victory. Bengals punter Jeff Hayes faked a punt before running 61 yards for what proved to be the winning touchdown.

Glanville, who is trying to build a respectable Oilers team, said he isn't concerning himself with football sleight of hand.

"In order for a gadget play to work, you have to have something the enemy respects, and you have to be playing good, basic football," Glanville said. "We're still trying to get to that stage.

"The biggest trick we have is hand the ball off and try to stick it to you. Then we might have a play-action pass off that," he said.

The Bengals, known for starting their recent seasons with losing streaks, are 4-2 and are tied for the lead in the AFC Central Division with cross-state rival Cleveland. Houston, coming off Sunday's tough 20-7 loss to Super Bowl champion Chicago, is 1-5 to share the AFC Central's cellar with Pittsburgh.

The Bengals have already displayed highs and lows this season, looking sharp in a 30-13 defeat of the Browns in Cleveland on Sept. 18, but appearing woeful Sept. 28 in their 44-7 loss to the Chicago Bears in Cincinnati.

The Bengals hold a 20-13-1 series edge over Houston, including a 12-5 record in games played in Cincinnati. The Bengals have won the last five games played in Cincinnati, after Houston's 13-10 victory at Riverfront Stadium in 1980.

The teams split their 1985 series with the Oilers winning 44-27 in Houston — marking their highest point total since 1977 — and the Bengals triumphing in Cincinnati, 45-27.

The Bengals are in the midst of a scheduling stretch that has them playing four out of five consecutive games against AFC Central Division rivals. Three weeks from Sunday, the Bengals are to play the Oilers in Houston.

Pioneer Savings & Trust, F.A. and it's subsidiary, Pioneer Mortgage Company have been listed as the 107th largest issuer of GNMA mortgage-backed securities according to the National Thrift News. This ranking places Pioneer first among all financial institutions in the State of New Mexico. Mortgage-backed securities are the secondary market instruments which provide the medium for pooling and selling governmentally backed home loans. The volume of GNMA securities sold indicates the volume of residential loans made by lenders. Pioneer has total assets in excess of $2,000,000 and has savings and loan offices in Roswell, Artesia, Alamagordo, Carlsbad, Hobbs, Ruidoso, and Las Cruces. Pioneer Mortgage Company, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Pioneer Savings has mortgage origination offices in El Paso and Midland, Texas, Albuquerque, New Mexico and Denver, Colorado.

Who can help move a successful person into a more rewarding career?

Who else but Merrill Lynch.

Explore the career potential you can have with Merrill Lynch's expanding Midland office. We're looking for successful people who want to become Merrill Lynch Financial Consultants.

To be selected you should have a successful record of achievement in previous endeavors, a keen interest in the financial world, the ability to communicate well and the desire to work very hard for our customers. Sales or other related business experience is a plus.

If you feel you are one of the individuals who can contribute to our growth, then we'd like to hear from you. Convince us you can absorb financial facts quickly, make decisions, handle details, and make effective personal presentations to sophisticated investors, and we'll teach you the rest.

Please write for an application to:

Mr. Steve Specht
Resident Vice President

It'll FLOOR you!

The maze of flooring choices can be confusing and frustrating to the consumer. Wood, tile, indoor and outdoor carpet or linoleum. Each has its advantages and disadvantages.

Before purchasing new flooring for you home, consider how much traffic the room gets. Do small children eat in this area? Then an easy-cleaning floor would probably be the right choice. A formal living room would usually call for carpeting, but not the same carpeting you might use in a den, which sees more use.

Pictured on today's Homes & Living cover is a new option in carpeting, carving and sculpting.

Offering as many options as one has decorating ideas, carved and sculpted patterns can lend great versatility to a room design. They can be sued to highlight furniture groupings, create a focal point or border and divide areas of a large room.

Carving is the process of shearing the carpet surface to create a design that was not orifinally tufted into the fabric at the mill. Sculpting carries this process a step further by cutting out carpet sections and replacing them with colorful inlays to form a design.

Carpet sculpting has benefited greatly from innovations in carpetmaking technology. In the past, carpet manufacturers experienced some problems with inlays ocming apart. Today, new sealing techniques make possible beautiful inlaid carpets that last for years.

Please see FLOORING, Page 2D

Photos, from top to bottom: Different patterns of bright colors in the carpeting, ceiling border and upholstery fabrics give a cheery theme to this room.

A custom-carved rose adds a complementary pattern to solid-color carpeting without clashing with this bedroom's floral patterns.

Colorful inlays in sculpted carpet of Du Pont Antron nylon give dashing flair to this contemporary decor.

Carpeting your stairway, 3 steps in the right direction

An upholstered stairway has a rich elegance that complements any decor. If you choose a plush cut-pile for your stairway, make sure it is a dense nylon to resist wear from heavy traffic.

Up the stairs and down the stairs — if your home is like most, the stairways are some of its busiest areas. When you think about how much wear and tear your stairs take, you realize just how important it is to choose the right floor covering.

Carpeting is a wise choice for several reasons. It offers you long-term performance, safety and acoustical benefits, decorating flexibility and increased comfort.

There are three basic steps in finding the right carpet for your stairway: selecting a carpet texture suitable for heavy-traffic areas, choosing color and determining the look you want — formal, casual or in between.

Carpet texture determines surface appearance as well as performance. Busy traffic areas, like stairways, require a high-quality carpet that is densely tufted or woven with a low pile height. A plush carpet with a high pile height or a carpet without a tight, dense pile will mat down and wear out in a short amount of time.

Nylon is the most durable carpet fiber, outperforming natural fibers, like wool and other man-made fibers, like polyester. Nylon is available in textures that provide the best in performance, color and style at a reasonable price.

Level-loop pile carpet is an excellent texture choice for stairways. It is made of loops of yarn of the same height. Its tight, pebbly surface can take more than a normal load of traffic, is easy to clean and hides footprints and soil.

Another good choice for stairs is a low, dense cut-pile carpet. The most familiar type of carpeting, cut pile is noted for its luxurious texture. A low, dense cut-pile carpet is durable enough to withstand the heavy amount of traffic most stairways receive.

Color and pattern are important considerations for overall performance when selecting a stairway carpet. In extremely heavy-traffic areas, avoid light-colored carpets, which show stains and soil. Good choices for stairways are medium to dark colors.

The look of your stairway is dramatically affected by the method of carpet installation you choose. The "upholstered stair" is the most luxurious custom-fitted look. Cut squares of carpet are tacked on the risers of your stairway (the vertical part of your stair that leads up one step). Then a second piece of carpet is wrapped over the stop and the nose, around the rails and around the outer edge of the steps.

The "waterfall stair" uses one single piece of carpeting, which runs down from the top of the stairway, leaving a wood border around the rails and edges of the stairway. The carpet is stapled underneath each step and at the inner edge of each riser. The waterfall stair gets its name from its elegant, flowing look.

If you shop carefully for your carpeting, keeping in mind these important steps, you'll know that you're buying the best carpet for your stairway, your budget and your style.

FLOORING

For best results, both carving and sculpting should only be doen with thick, plush carpeting. Rich wool and nylon carpets are both well-suited for these techniques. However, nylon wears longer and is less expensive.

While it was once quite an expensive process, carving and sculpting processes have now become quite affordable and within the range of most budgets as a result of recent advances in carpet-making technology.

Both techniques are available in both wall-to-wall carpeting and area rugs from many large carpet dealers and carpet specialty stores.

If you're artictically inclined, you can crate your own totally customized design to be carved or sculpted onto the carpet of your choice. Design possibilities are limited only by your imagination.

Of all the decisions you will have to make when decorating or redecorating you home, carpet selection is one of the most important. Carpeting represents a significant and sound financial investment. Therefore, knowledgeable selection is crucial to your ultimate satisfaction. Following are some tips to help you make the right choice.

Check for true color: Since showroom lighting is generally quite different from the lighting in your home, the color you see in the store may be quite different from the color that later appears on your floor. To avoid disappointment, try to shop during the day.

Research before buying: Check your options carefully to make sure you are getting the best value for your dollar. Read information labels attached to samples carefully, they can save you time and money.

Don't skimp on padding: Saving a few dollars on the padding to be used under your carpet will could cost you big bucks in the long run. Padding protects the carpet backing and prolongs the life of the carpet.

The more you know about your carpet before you purchase it, the longer you can enjoy it.

Maintenance adds years to carpet life

Once you've spent time, effort and money selecting and buying a new carpet for your home, you'll want to take good care of it. Maintaining your carpet on a regular basis is easy and will add years to its life.

Dirt and grime wreak havoc on carpeting, especially when they're ignored. They scrape and cut away at the fibers like sandpaper, wearing them away and ruining the carpet's appeareance. According to "The Complete Book of Carpeting" from Du Pont, vacuuming is the single most important way to reduce the damaging effects of dirt and grime on your carpet.

There is no such thing as too much vacuuming — it won't hurt your carpet and, in the long run, will prolong its luster and vibrance. A carpet should be vacuumed an average of three or four times a week.

Depending upon the kind of carpet you have and the amount of traffic it bears, you'll probably have to shampoo it every one to three years. You'll know it's ready for shampooing when it starts to appear dull. You can have your carpet cleaned by professionals, or you can try one of the four do-it-yourself methods recommended in "The Complete Book of Carpeting."

Steam cleaning is the most thorough way to shampoo a carpet and the do-it-yourself method that is closest to professional cleaning. In this process, a high-powered jaet spray distributes hot detergent solution into the carpet and a vacuum immediately sucks up the dirt and water. Steam cleaning equipment can be easily rented or purchased at your local supermarket or hardware store.

Wet shampooing is the most widely used home cleaining process, but it is not necessarily the best for you carpet. This method is mroe work for you, and the detergent and water solution employed can skink into the carpet, damaging the backing and your floor if left on too long.

In wet shampooing, the carpet is wet down with a liquid detergent, which is then brushed through the fibers with a rotary brush machine. This machine also is easily rented.

Accidental spills and stains are common occurrences that hsould be attended to as soon as possible. If you notice a spill on your carpet, the first step is to blot or scrape up as much as you can before treating it with chemicals or detergents. What you do next will depend on the kind of stain it is.

For oil-based stains, such as crayon, asphalt, butter, lotion or ink, it is best to use a commercial spot remover. Be sure to read the label before applying any preparation to your carpet to guard against further damage. Blot on the spot remover, then wash with detergent and rinse with celan water. Remember to blot excess moisture before allowing the spot to dry.

For deeper stains, like blood, chocolate, egg and catsup, Du Pont's "The Complete Book of Carpeting" suggests that you use both detergent and ammonia. First apply the detergent and follow with ammonia. Apply additional detergent and rinse with clean water, again blotting up the excess moisture before the spot dries.

A combination of detergent and vinegar will remove a host of other stains, including beer, coffee, berries, cand and fruit juice. If you have a dye or paint stain, consult a carpet cleaining professional. Before having your carpet professionally cleaned, do some research and check with friends to find a reputable cleaning service that is up on current cleaning methods. It is always wise to comparison-shop before making a final decision.

Professional carpet cleaning can be done in your home, but unless your carpet cannot be moved (if it's wall-to-wall), it is best to send it out.

Get the look of casual but sophisticated

Are you searching for a home-furnishings look that is casual but sophisticated, rustic but chic, durable but beautiful? The carpeting you'll want to complement your decor is a nylon Berber.

Berber carpeting originated in North Africa, where the Berber tribesmen made rugs from undyed, naturally colored wools. Expensive imported wool Berber carpeting has been a popular choice of interior designers for several years. Now the hand-loomed look of wool is available in long-wearing nylon Berbers.

Nylon Berbers are less expensive and more durable than their wool counterparts. Special bulky yarns, like those Du Pont Antron nylon, combine the strength, stain-resistance and static control of man-made fibers with the stylish look and appeal of traditional Berbers.

Nylon Berber carpets are made up of wide, low loops of yarn in level, multilevel or combination textures. Some include low, dense cut-pile fiber and are patterned in interesting geometric designs or sophisticated marbling effects.

Berber carpets of Antron nylon, unlike typical wool Berbers, come in pastels and warm earth tones. They are available as wall-to-wall carpeting and as area rugs.

The pebbly look and nubby feel of nylon Berbers coordinates well with casual furnishings. Berbers are ideal for family rooms and, as area rugs, lend a sense of warmth and comfort in living and dining rooms.

The durability of this carpeting also makes it an excellent choice for creative projects, such as platforms or box seating. Nylon Berbers even look terrific as contemporary wall coverings.

However it is used, nylon Berber carpeting adds an air of rustic coziness to any decor. The new Berber colors, textures and patterns add spice to a room as well, defining the area's character as casual chic.

The wool-like look of imported Berbers is now available in area rugs and carpets of Du Pont Antron, nylon. Nylon Berbers are more wear-resistant under heavy household traffic than their wool counterparts and are also less expensive.

Pleats are hot

Among the newest looks in this year's window fashions are pleated fabric shades, which feature clean horizontal lines, a soft designer look and a wide range of colors, prints and textures.

Fascinating Facts

by Bob & Bill Drummond, Licensed Master Plumbers

What is outside of our galaxy? Because of the great distances involved, what seem to be island universes have not been seen clearly enough to find out whether or not they contain stars. However, the term "galaxy" is applied to all such island universes or the assumption that they are star systems similar to our own. The term matagalaxy is often applied to the overall system of galaxies. Our own galaxy is about 100,000 light years in diameter and 10,000 light years in thickness.

Astronomers are just beginning to plumb the depths of our own galaxy. If your plumbing system is a mystery to you, call the experts at SANITARY PLUMBING, HEATING & AIR CONDITIONING. New carpet styles will complement many decors

The nubble, crinkly look of frieze carpeting is just one of the popular, high-fashion carpet textures.

Carpet customers are demanding more variety from floor-covering selections, and carpet mills are responding with imaginative combinations of basic carpet textures, styles and patterns that generate exciting new and updated fashion looks.

Three carpet styles riding the crest of the new fashion attitude toward carpeting are friezes, patterned plushes and Berbers.

Friezes are an update of a carpet style that first became popular several years ago. They are highly textured carpets whose roots are in the saxony family. Like saxonies, they have tightly twisted, heat-set yarns. In friezes, however, the twist is so tight that the carpet appears nubby and curly.

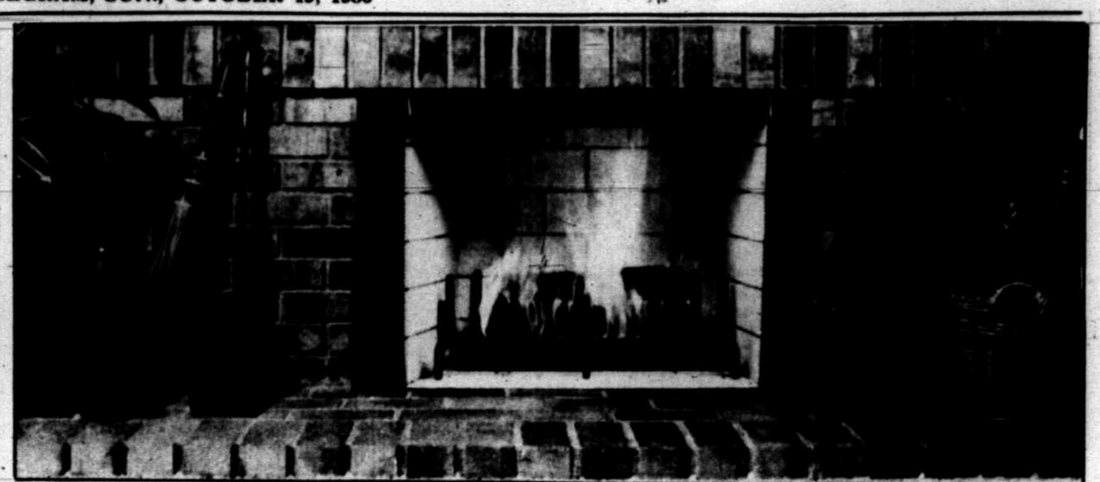

Also called textured plushes, many friezes are made of nylon fiber, like Du Pont Antron. Nylon gives them added strength and durability. They have a rich, cushiony look that complements many decorative styles, and they wear well, hiding footprints, shading, furniture marks and dirt.

Patterned plushes are also a hot carpet style. Unlike friezes, they have the flat smooth surface of traditional plush and velvet carpets. What distinguishes them is their printed patterns, which give them extra verve.

Patterned plush styling includes everything from subtle pin-dot designs to crisp geometrics. They are highly decorative carpets that add sophistication to basic or traditional furnishings. Nylon Berbers are another popular new carpeting. Berbers are named for the North African Berber tribesmen, who crafted carpets from undyed wool. This carpeting has a rough, pebbly surface created by wide, bulky loops of yarn in level and multi-level designs.

Today's nylon Berbers of Du Pont Antron offer the homespun look and feel of traditional wool Berbers with the advantages of lower cost, extra durability, stain-resistance and static control. They are available in many attractive colors and patterns.

Friezes, patterned plushes and Berbers complement many decor and furniture styles. They are meeting the public's demand for high-fashion floor coverings.

A realistic-looking factory-built fireplace with a 45" screen opening has been introduced by Superior. The traditional-style unit provides the look of masonry construction with rugged refactory interior, combining the benefits of radiant heating and cost-saving zero clearance installation.

Stackable appliances' capacity increased

By WILLIAM R. GREER
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — For those living in cramped apartments, washers and dryers often take up too much space to be practical. In the past year, however, General Electric and Speed Queen have introduced compact washers and dryers. Now, Toshiba, the Japanese consumer electronics company that has sold laundry equipment in Japan since 1930, has entered the American market.

What makes the Toshiba models different are their size and their design. The electronically controlled AW-100 washer is top-loading and operates with electronic touch pads that control three different temperature settings, three wash times and cycles for permanent press and knits.

Most top-loading machines, which generally do larger loads than front-loading machines, wash clothes by swishing water and clothes around with a central agitator. To increase space in the small machine, Toshiba removed the central agitator. The bottom of the washtub agitates the clothes by rotating back and forth. It can wash 10 pounds of dry clothes; the largest conventional washers handle 16 pounds.

Toshiba's ED-100 dryer, which has mechanical controls, has an automatic drying selector that shuts off the machine when an electronic sensor perceives that clothes are dry. The dryer can also be set at three temperature settings and timed for up to 130 minutes.

The Toshiba washers and dryers can be stacked. Most washers are about 29 inches wide by 28 inches deep. The Toshiba washer, which can be hooked to a sink, is 22½ inches wide by 22½ inches deep. The dryer, which stacks on top of the washer in a DS-100 dryer stand, is 25⅜ inches wide by 16½ inches deep.

Probably the most widely used of kitchen floorcoverings is loose lay resilient flooring, available in a variety of handsome patterns and easy for the do-it-yourselfer to install. Like glue-down sheet vinyl, it is a no-wax material requiring minimum maintenance.

Loose lay flooring is tops on kitchen floors

For bathrooms, the most popular and widely used of today's flooring products is ceramic tile. For kitchens, it's a relatively new development known as loose lay flooring, according to Michael Karol, editor of the trade magazine Modern Floor Coverings.

In rolls six feet wide, loose lay resilient flooring is easy for the do-it-yourselfer to butt and cut with a utility knife to accommodate cabinets and corners.

It comes in a variety of handsome patterns — florals, geometrics and take-offs of such natural materials as travertine, marble and wood — and has a fiberglass backing so as to be dimensionally stable.

While it needn't be taped or glued to base flooring, it can be, and it requires the minimum maintenance of any no-wax material, including resilient flooring of the sheet vinyl type.

Standard glue-down sheet vinyl, of course, remains a major covering for kitchen floors, and can be cut to order.

Also popular for kitchens are vinyl tiles available at home and building supply centers in cartoons, to take home and install the same day if do-it-now is you idea of interior design.

Tiles, whether 9x9 inches or 12x12 inches, generally cost less than loose lay flooring, but may require more time to lay, depending upon how talented you are and how much cutting has to be done.

Quarry tile and wood flooring are other products widely used in kitchens, and while more expensive than resilient materials are often more appropriate.

Quarry tile, for example, looks wonderful with European-style cabinets, and many people prefer that a true country kitchen have a wood floor.

For the kitchen, as for the bathroom, ceramic tile has its advantages even though it, too, costs more. Impervious to water and steam, it won't stain or scratch, it cleans easily, and it is available in a range of patterns and colors.

LET'S TALK ABOUT CORPORATE PROPERTIES...

This Sunday, Many of our corporate properties will be featured on open houses, giving rise to the question, "What are corporate properties?" Simply put, they are homes bought by an employer, at-an appraised value, from transferred employees.

While these transactions are costly to employers, they may save money in the long run because they enable Corporations to have transferred employees on the job, where and when needed, without the worries of homes than must be sold, and usually with the family units intact.

Some Corporations have "in house" departments to negotiate these purchases and resales, but most contact with banks or third party companies to handle these transactions. That way you may also hear these homes referred to as third party properties.

Because purchases of employe homes tie up valuable business dollars, and because each day of holding time adds to the costs of purchase, corporate homes are usually priced most competatively and are put in top condition so that they will resale as quickly as possible.

Corporate homes are among the best buys on the market; drop by and see for yourself this Sunday!

Tough Love

Julie Pearson is a member of Odessa Toughlove, a self-help crisis intervention parent support group.

Last June, after escalating emotional battles, Julie Pearson's 17-year-old daughter, Jennifer, left home. Julie Pearson, an Odessan, did not know her daughter's whereabouts for two months.

"During that time, our household was terribly upset. I didn't know if Jennifer was dead or alive."

When Jennifer returned, she found her mother waiting with a contract; a contract that she would have to sign in order to rejoin her family.

"I felt terrible," Jennifer said. Nonetheless, Jennifer signed the contract, agreeing to obey the rules of the household and suffer the consequences if she broke the rules. Her boyfriend acted as a witness.

The contract was the result of Pearson attending the meetings of a parents' support group, called Toughlove. For a growing number of parents facing emotional stand-offs with their teenagers, the support group has a solution; "When tender love fails, there is always Toughlove."

When the teenager rebels it effects the whole family. In the case of the Pearson family, Mrs. Pearson and her husband,— Jennifer's stepfather — a six-year-old and a toddler, 20 months old, Mrs. Pearson said, "Jennifer was in control of our household for months before she left. We were all in an emotional upheaval."

"When Jennifer left, she was in control. When she came back, we were in control," she said.

TOUGHLOVE IS a term that was coined over 50 years ago by Dr. Alfred Adler, founder of Alcoholics Anonymous. The concept was copyrighted in 1980 by therapists Phyllis and David York of Pennysylvania. They formed a network of parents to support them in dealing with their own teenagers.

According to a 1981 issue of "Time" magazine, in 1975 police in Lansdale, Pa., showed up at the York house with shotguns and a warrant for their 18-year-old daughter, Judy. The charge: holding up a cocaine dealer.

Soon after that event, the Yorks founded Toughlove as a crisis-intervention program. They decided understanding and forgiveness were laudable, but didn't always work with problem teenagers.

Last year, CBS aired the movie "Toughlove."It brought national attention to the subject once kept behind closed doors. At that time, groups in Midland and Odessa were already active. Following the movie, a local minute segment was aired on KMID, Channel 2. Mr. and Mrs. Joe Dominey of Midland appeared on that program. Their experience with Toughlove is one of the success stories.

"When our sons were ages 15 and 17, they were abusing chemical substances. We got help from Palmer Drug Abuse Program (PDAP) which practices the Toughlove concepts," Dominey said.

"When our 15-year-old turned 16, we made the decision that he would live by the rules of our house or not come home. It was scary to commit to throwing a 16-year-old out. But that decision was made on pre-agreed upon consequences for infractions of the rules," he said.

"Throwing children out" doesn't literally mean putting them out on the street. Toughlove parents have formed a network and will tell a child what homes and options are available to them.

Dominey said PDAP uses the same principles as Toughlove, although the support and suggestions are different.

For the Dominey's there was a measure of success — one of their sons is in graduate school and the other son is graduating from college.

Debbie Mace, a parent active in the Odessa segment of "Parents that Win Using Toughlove," said that the organization operates on the basis of signed contracts. Usually, the parents draw up the rules and regulations. The contract includes the consequences of breaking those rules. However, occasionally the teenagers draw up the contracts or at least the consequences.

"It sounds harsh, but in the real world, kids need to be responsible. When they have control over their families, we take back the control and give them responsibilty for their actions," said Mrs. Mace.

Mrs. Mace moved to the Midland area from Denver and brought the idea of the Toughlove program with her. She offered it to Jan Vargas, the juvenile probation officer of the Youth Center in Ector County.

"We aren't professionals, our groups are run by parents," Mrs. Mace said. "We offer to intervene for parents when they are too emotionally involved to handle a crisis, such as appearing in court or facing a school principal for the fifth time," she said.

Her husband, Robert Mace, sits in on the support group for the teenagers. "What happens in the teenager's group is confidential between Rob and the kids — unless it is a critical situation, such as drug abuse," Mrs. Mace said.

She also said the process of gaining control can cause a crisis when the teenager rebels against sudden authority.

"However, the program helps prepare parents for this. It's not the same emotion as spontaneous anger. The situation has been discussed thoroughly beforehand and the parents know what to expect," Mrs. Mace said.

ONE MOTHER from Odessa who asked to remain anonymous said, "In our family of three children, we made the decision that maybe we would have to sacrifice one kid to save the whole family."

Another mother, Carol Brady of Odessa, made an unusual sacrifice. She had her teenage son, Dwanye, arrested. Mrs. Brady has been Dwayne's stepmother since he was six-years-old.

"I don't feel he got enough love from his mother during his earlier years," Brady said.

"However," Mrs. Mace said, "We don't deal with the past. The whys aren't important, just the hows."

Have you heard...?

By MARILYN McKNIGHT HARRISON

Although lots of hard work was involved, members of the Midland Woman's Club and the 10 shareholding clubs enjoyed the time spent in staging their recent fund-raiser. The clubhouse in Hogan Park was the setting for a two-day Recession Sale and Food Mart. Although the final figures are not in yet, the event was termed "most successful" by club manager Beth Adcock.

Each member was asked to bring enough of the "treasures" to equal $35 in sales. Besides the glorified "garage sale" and baked goods in the club's Great Hall, the event included a "Nearly New" Shop in the parlor, which featured better clothing; a Silent Auction in the Garden Room and a "Recession Soup Kitchen" in the Tea Room, where lunch was served both days.

A special feature was informal modeling of "Nearly New" items. Mrs. Adcock was among the models, and at one point she was spotted wearing a sign which advertised: "I bought this dress in the Nearly New Shop for $5 and this necklace at the jewelry table for $1.50."

Members of the Midland Junior Woman's Club staffed the popular "Kid's Corner," which featured bargains galore for the younger set. Some lucky dog (literally) will be riding in style in the infant car seat a gentleman purchased there for his pet.

LaVerne (Mrs. Jack) West's handiwork — the darling navy blue aprons, trimmed in red, white and blue — which she made for all the workers, not only added a touch of color but made it easy for the public to spot help when needed.

Club president Dorothy Perkins and Marg. (Mrs. Jack) Samples co-chaired the ways and means project.

EARLY-DAY ROCK AND ROLL music set the mood for the Fifties Party, which Mary Jane and Tom Whiles gave last weekend at their home.

Guests jitterbugged and slow danced in the den to such "oldies but goodies" as Buddy Holly, Fats Domino, Little Richard, the Everly Brothers, Bill Haley and the Comets and the not-to-be-forgotten Danny and the Juniors.

The party-goers got into the spirit of the occasion by sporting such Fifties' fads and fashions as ducktails, ponytails, bobby sox, saddle shoes, poddle skirts, rolled up blue jeans, letter jackets and class rings on neck chains.

Among those sharing the evening of fun with its overtones of the past were Barbara and Bob Avakian, Leah and Glenn VerSteeg, Jan and Steve Mouton, Carol and George Moody, Barb and Glenn Jennings and Debbie and David Whiles.

EVA KEMP and Ginny (Mrs. Bob) Harell have returned from an interesting week's cruise through Canada and New England. They flew with a tour group to Montreal, where they boarded the Royal Viking.

Ports of call included Quebec and St. Piere Island in Canada, then they sailed back around to Boston and Rhode Island before docking in New York. As the ship passed the Statue of Liberty, a special ceremony was held on board to commemorate the statue's 100th birthday.

Highlights of their three-day stay in New York City included Broadway musicals, "The Big River" and "Cats," shopping and a tour of Manhattan, with a visit to the Statue of Liberty their final stop before enplaning for home.

THE MIDLAND JUNIOR COTILLION recently opened its 1986-87 season, and fortunately the dress for the ninth graders' first party was designated "casual." There would have been a problem getting our No. 2 son ready for the occasion if ties had been required that evening, as Dad was away, and he is currently the only person at our house who has the skill to knot a tie.

However, it brought to mind a humorous incident that occurred last year when a friend (who chooses to remain anonymous) was readying her son for that evening's semi-formal dance party. Neither she nor the boy could tie a Windsor or an overhand knot. The hour of the dance approached and Father was not there. What would you do? What did she do? First, she tried the neighgbors, but no one answered her knock. In desperation the pair set out for the dance in hopes of finding aid.

Help comes when you least expect it! The mother in question spotted a construction worker on the street. Brakes squealed, the doors flew open and mother (with embarrassed child in tow) pleaded for help.

The puzzled workman willingly obliged, but after a few futile attempts with the tie on the boy, he found it easier to knot the tie on himself, thereupon lacing it on the young man, who made it to the dance just in time for the 7:15 p.m. receiving line.

Toughlove parents are encouraged to set a "bottom line" each week on acceptable behavior and back it up by forbidding the use of the family car, limiting phone calls, refusing to intervene when the youngster is in trouble or "grounding" them.

If a teenager consistently breaks curfew or disappears without anyone knowing their whereabouts, parents may lock him or her out. Then they will tack a note to the front door listing names of other parents in the group willing to take the offender in until he or she agrees to live by the rules.

A teenager with a drug habit may come home to find bags packed and a note advising him or her to get into a drug rehabilitation program or find another place to live.

The hardest thing for these parents is to stick to the contract and not return to "marshmellow strength." Larry Dortch, a member of the Midland Toughlove, said, "Once parents make a decision, they can't back off. Toughlove will support them in their decisions. We are always ready to help anybody."

Don Vaughan, also a member of the Midland group, said, "Parents go through a period of denial. They don't want to believe that their kids are 'acting out teenagers' — taking drugs, talking back, using profanity, drinking — but when they hear the other parents describing their teenagers, it hits home."

"The problems don't reflect on the parents so much as the times we are living in," he added.

PARENTS from both groups agree that the support group changed their attitudes more than their teenagers attitudes were influenced.

"Toughlove may not change the attitude of the teenager, it may point them in the right direction," said Larry Dortch of the Midland group. "It helps the parent become aware of the problems and adjust to them."

"Occasionally parents will reverse roles," said Vaughan. "The parent who was always silent may become a shouter and the parent who was a shouter may become silent. That really blows a teenager's mind."

One mother who belongs to the Midland Toughlove group, said, "We were never extremely lenient. We didn't change the existing rules so much as beginning to consistently adhereing to them — and we no longer listen to 'snow jobs.' "

"Toughlove is great for uniting the parents," she added. "We were able to reach a common ground, instead of being played one against the other, and solved a problem before it became a crisis."

Toughlove promises no guarantees and most parents stressed it is not a quick remedy, but a process. Professional help is advised when needed.

Teenagers often have their own peer groups and have formed networks to aid each other. Now parents are doing likewise in an effort to form self-help groups to demand responsibility from out-of-control teenagers.

"The Toughlove process works well for those willing to work and change and gain control of their lives," Mrs. Mace said.

Toughlove may not be for everyone. "If you are having a lot of screaming and hollering going on at home and feel helpless," said Mrs. Brady, "then it is important to know that you are not alone. There is help."

MISTER ROGERS

Sense of smell brings back memories

By FRED ROGERS
with BARRY HEAD

Rogers

"The nose knows," the saying goes, but while we look over it every minute of our waking lives, the part our nose plays in shaping who we are and what we become is, for most of us, overlooked in quite a different way. What are the first smells you remember?

Most people find that a hard question to answer, as though those earliest smells weren't held in memory the way, say, and our early sights were. I just asked a grown-up friend, and he couldn't answer — but when I asked: "Are there any smells you come across nowadays that take you way back in childhood?" he was able to come up instantly with an example: "A certain kind of floor wax," he said.

"At my grandmother's house, when I was little, there was a wooden staircase, and it always had the same smell. Every now and then I'll come across that smell somewhere, and that's where I'll be: back at my grandmother's. And it brings a feeling, too — a strong feeling of safety, coziness and comfort."

That friend thinks his memory of that smell goes back to when he was about 4 or 5, but the chances are it goes way back beyond that; being 4 or 5 is most likely when he can recall a visual memory of the staircase to go along with the smell. After all, he was probably at his grandmother's off and on right from birth.

There's one series of smells that suggest that our smell memories are there from the beginning: Several parents have told me that the smells associated with their infants gives them a certain pleasurable reassurance. Some have said it's the smell of the nursery room where their baby sleeps.

Others have been more specific and mentioned the smells of baby oil and talcum powder, and even the odor of diapers. Those, of course, are the smells they, themselves, were smelling when they were tiny babies.

At the beginning, those smells must have seemed to come from our earliest caregiver rather than from ourselves, and in part, of course, they did. If that caregiver was our mother, then, at changing time, the smells of oils and powders came most strongly when her face was close, her hands were upon us and her voice was soothing in our ears. At that time, we didn't know who or what we were; we were everything, and everything was us.

It was only little by little that we began to differentiate between those things that belonged to our own bodies and other things — and people — that didn't. And as our sense of our own separate and distinct selves began to "hatch," the things that told us we were us, including smells, took on great importance.

In those early understandings may lie significant parts of our later understandings of female and male. There also may lie some of the origins of deep, unconscious associations we may have with kitchens and gas stations, farms and factories, cityscapes and countrysides, barber shops and beauty parlors — with any of the places and occupations that generate the smells that rub off on the people we love.

Yes, "the nose knows," and it knows a lot more than we think it does. In fact, perhaps more than any of the other senses, it serves as a reminder that the child we once were is still very much alive within us — not only the child, but the toddler, baby and infant as well.

Materialism never loses fashionable appeal

By ERMA BOMBECK

Bombeck

I go to a supermarket that is reportedly frequented by Yuppies. I have not the slightest idea what that means.

I thought a carry-out man could shed some insights on the group the other day when I asked him if he was a Yuppie.

"Don't I wish," he laughed. "Do I look like a Yuppie? God, I'm 26 years old and I don't even own a VCR! I got a car you have to start on a hill," he said, "and a bicycle that I could leave in an alley and no one would steal it. Of course, I didn't get materialistic until two years ago last May."

Having given birth to three Yuppies, I found that statement rather amusing. Many of the kids of the '60s and '70s may have stopped off for a few years at apathy and boredom before becoming born-again capitalists, but non-materialistic? Never! My own son went to the Peace Corps carrying a ghetto blaster he could have sold and had enough to buy the entire country.

They were fooling no one. The hair was long and straggly. It cost $20 a month in shampoo and rinses to sustain it. Work was meaningless and stupid, but they would stoop to it if they wanted a new album.

"Are you saying all those kids who left home taking half of their parents' house with them, were escaping from materialism?" I asked.

"Right," he said. "None of the trappings."

I pursued the subject. "But what about when you were between jobs and came home to crash and stood in front of a full refrigerator and a car full of gas?"

"Meaningless," he said.

I got into the car and thought about those 77 million Yuppies who were trying desperately to catch up to babies, three-piece suits, careers and mortgages. I leaned out the window and yelled to the carry-out man, "I'm curious. What made the difference? When did possessions begin to mean something to you?"

He smiled. "When I had to buy them with my own money."

Home buying needs documentaion

Hearst News Service

There's an old saw that says, "The job's not finished until the paperwork is done." When buying a spec home, that's sound advice — get the contract and sale thoroughly documented. It's all for the buyer's protection.

Getting through this aspect of home buying needn't be a traumatic experience, even for the novice buyer. The thicket of paper can be overwhelming, but there are services ordained just to take the lumps out of an otherwise onerous task.

One such is Threshold Documents, a trademark of Wilhelm Publishing Inc. The firm currently offers three different packages covering the options of building on one's own property, building on the builder's site and buying a home that is already under construction. The latter is the usual situation for the spec home buyer.

Unless a buyer is well-versed in the subtleties of acquiring a home, an attorney's advice usually is recommended to steer clear of any submerged shoals.

The spec home package is No. 183 (Buying or Selling a Home Under Construction). The 153-page packet is available for $18, plus $3.50 for handling and shipping. Contact Wilhelm Publishing Inc., 615 Providence Road, P.O. Box 922, Columbia, Mo., 62505-0922. Telephone (314) 442-6134.

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Loss of hearing tramatic for elderly

By STEVE EDWARDS

"But I don't want to see your mother! She either doesn't hear or doesn't want to listen to me, and besides she's been so cranky lately."

These words were spoken by a son-in-law. It concerns hearing loss being an underlining critical problem confronted by elderly people. It is common knowledge that in the aging process many physical changes occur. Yet what often goes unnoticed is that these changes can also affect all five senses: vision, hearing, taste, touch and smell. These changes, which may not be noticeable to the onlooker, have a profound effect on a person's ability to remain independent and function adequately within his physical and social environments.

It's not unusual for an older person to suffer some hearing loss, to be able to hear sounds without being able to distinguish or understand the words. All physical losses bring to the individual feelings of grief. A hearing loss, though perhaps more so than other physical changes, will have the greatest effect on a person's ability to relate to others and receive pleasure from his surroundings. Feelings of frustration, isolation, confusion, anxiety and depression can be the products of even mild hearing impairments. As hearing loss becomes greater, the feelings may become intensified.

Added to the feelings would also be suspicion and fear. Individuals suffering from hearing impairment will often see people looking or talking in their direction, yet are not able to discern what is being said. This inability to hear clearly may lead the person to wonder if the conversation was about him. "Perhaps they are keeping something from me. Why don't they include me? Are they laughing at me?, I wish they would speak more clearly."

These same feelings may produce high levels of uncertainty or fear. The individual may begin to question his level of independence. "What if I cannot hear alarms or the telephone ringing? What if someone comes into the house unannounced?" The feelings of anxiety become more pronounced as a person with hearing loss struggles with these concerns.

Hearing aids have been used quite frequently to assist the elderly in maintaining conversational levels or to otherwise lead normal lives. However, unlike eye glasses, hearing aids have not been totally accepted by all who need them. Whether as a matter of vanity, inconvenience or because of problems with mechanical adjustments, the individual may not use the device as it was intended.

In relating to an older person with hearing loss, understand that more is happening to the individual than difficulties with this one sense. Aging is taking its toll on other senses as well. Other biological and social changes are occuring at the same time. Very negative and frustrated feelings may occur from the older person because all of these things may be happening at once. These emotions are grief-related feelings and do have a profound effect on the individual, even to the point of causing social withdrawal. In failing to understand the losses or changes that may be occuring, family members or friends may label the older person as cantankerous, "senile" or extremely moody. The inability to hear is often misconstrued as not wanting to listen or possibly "he doesn't even care about me."

These communication problems create barriers between generations as younger people see the elderly as being rigid or hearing only what they want to hear. The end result in many families is alienation and isolation. The older person becomes ignored. Further communications become blurred and messages become confused.

Withdrawal is a frequent result of an elderly person going through hearing loss. The person may not want others to know of his problems or may be embarrassed at having to ask others to talk up or repeat the statement. This isolation only compounds the adjustments the individual has to make in encountering multiple physical and social changes.

If you find yourself shouting at an older person with hearing loss, think about the situation. The person may have a hearing impairment and shouting will not help. Understand that people with hearing loss may hear low-pitched voices rather than high ones or vice versa, which accounts for their communicating with some people better than others. Speaking slowly and enunciating your words clearly may help some but not others.

If you suspect hearing loss is a problem, the following steps are recommended:

- Check with a physician for diagnosis and treatment.
- If a hearing aid is required, consult with a reputable company. A hearing aid is not an item to be casually bought off the shelf at a local store.
- Encourage the individual to compromise. Adjustments may have to be made over a period of time. Even though individual compatibility is essential with a hearing aid, there will not be the precise correction that you will get from eye glasses.
- Contact the telephone company for special telephone arrangements.
- Check with the local television stations for programming schedules for individuals with impaired hearing. News programs in many cities provide a commentary which can be read as the news events are watched.

Extremely vital to our being able to function in our society is our ability to communicate. The aging process often impedes the communication process.

Yet with understanding, medical help, compromise and acceptance, communication skills can be reworked so the older person may remain independent and able to function within his home.

Steve Edwards is executive director of Community and Senior Services and the Visiting Nurse Service of Midland.

Anniversaries

Parkers celebrate 60 years

Walter and Inez Parker of Midland celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary Saturday at Cotton Flat Baptist Church. Hosts at the gathering were the couples' children and their spouses.

Parker and the former Inez McGlaun were married Oct. 18, 1926, in Athens. They have six children, Betty Moreland of Midland, James W. Parker of Carlsbad, N.M., Jerry D. Parker of Del Rio, Joan Hines and Kenneth W. Parker of Midland, and the late R.F. Parker. They also have 24 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren.

The Parkers moved to Midland from Athens 40 years ago. Parker is retired from County Maintaince Dept. and farming. Mr. and Mrs. Parker are members of Cotton Flat Baptist Church.

Couple repeats wedding vows

Wilbart and Daphinie Bledsoe celebrated their 40th anniversary by repeating their wedding vows at Hollowell United Methodist Church. Their son Rev. Wilbart Earl Bledsoe of Houston and Rev. Hadley Edwards of Midland officiated.

Wilbart and the former Daphinie Shaw were originally married Oct. 21, 1946, in Falls County. They have five children, Betty Lathan of Midland, Pervis Bledsoe of Dallas, Rev. Bledsoe of Houston, and Sylvia Sims and Larry Bledsoe, both of Midland. They also have 16 grandchildren.

Bledsoe is a retired minister and a member of the Masonic Lodge of Midland. His wife is a member of the Delores Chapter of Eastern Stars. The couple has resided in Midland for 16 years and are members of Hollowell United Methodist Church.

New drug reduces or eliminates PMS

Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

A drug has proven effective in the treatment of some symptoms of premenstrual syndrome, Australian doctors report.

The drug, mefanamic acid, has been used for women with difficult menstrual periods, Dr. Michael Mira and his colleagues at the University of Sydney report in the journal Obstetrics and Gynecology. But the value of mefanamic acid, a non-steroidal anti-inflammatory medicine, like that of other drugs used for PMS, had never before been proven.

There is no general agreement on the exact definition of premenstrual syndrome, but its symptoms include fatigue, headache and mood swings, including sadness, irritability and a sense of pessimism.

In the 15 women given mefanamic acid, all of the psychological symptoms and many of the physical symptoms were reduced or eliminated, the researchers found. The women took the drug for 12 days before and three days after the start of their period.

Unlike many previous studies of PMS drugs, the researchers said, this one was double-blind, meaning that neither doctor nor patient knew whether a real drug or a placebo was being administered. This is done to separate a drug's real effect from the "placebo effect," which occurs when a patient believes a drug is going to work.

In the case of PMS, the doctors said, "a placebo response of up to 70 percent may be expected."

ASK DR. RUTH

Minister is widow's heartthrob

By DR. RUTH WESTHEIMER

Q. My heartthrob is a minister. I am a widow in his church and he always asks me to sit with him at dinners (he has been divorced a while) and he goes out of his way to be with me. But he has never asked for a date. Finally I asked him home for dinner and he was so pleased and he showed it. He brought flowers and later dropped by unexpectedly with a houseplant. But never a kiss! Not even a peck. Is he showing respect for my bereavement, after two years? Why is he acting that way? And what is my move?

A. I can only guess why he acts that way, but if he goes out of his way to be with you and singles you out in front of other people, you have to find out what he has in mind. You have to take a risk, and in this case the risk is special, because if he doesn't respond when you kiss him, you are still going to be in church on Sunday, right?

You have to face that before you do anything. And he has to know that whatever happens, you are going to be a good parishioner. That may be what he wants — a favored parishioner, who sits with him and keeps all the other women off him.

On the other hand, he just may be holding back for no better reason than that he thinks the next move is up to you. He's brought flowers, plants, he lets people know he favors you, so why are you holding back? He may be thinking that. Write and tell me what happens.

Q. I think you were insensitive in condemning cosmetic surgery in your answer to the young girl who was worried about the appearance of her breasts. For many people, the chance to alter some physical attribute that is giving them, whether you approve or not, a damagingly poor self-image, is a miracle. And it is an increasingly safe and sure one performed by skilled medical people who are especially attentive to the psychological aspects of the therapy.

A. I have some old-fashioned ideas, and one of them is not to alter the body God has given us without serious reasons. OK, modern cosmetic surgery is marvelous work and can improve the entire outlook of someone who has fixated on something in his or her own appearance. I certainly do not condemn something that really helps people, and I wouldn't restrict cosmetic surgery to people who are badly scarred by burns or other major injuries.

If a client tells me in my office that she is going to have a facelift, and I see she is determined, has her heart set on it, has considered it and has been given careful advice about it, I wish her well. It is her choice. But to a young person, still developing physically and not yet mature in mind or character either, I may give other advice if my advice is sought.

The girl who asked me about cosmetic surgery for her breasts had the impression that they were unequal in size — she never said how unequal — and that this would spoil her love life in the future, or make her uncertain in dealing with boys and men when she got to that stage in life. I could not encourage her to go straight to surgery in order to correct a negative image she has of her own appearance — possibly a wrong one.

At that stage of her development, I suggest to a girl that she emphasize other things. Let her think about all the attractive people she knows, and ask herself whether such minor differences in two sides of a face, or a chest, really make or break a prepossessing personality. She is too young to begin thinking that by changing her face or body to look like some ideal, possibly a very misconceived ideal, she may affect people around her.

I would much rather have her develop those good relationships with other people that are appropriate to her age, to discover how well she can be liked and share life with others.

A friend tells me how his cousin had very heavy breasts. She was chronically depressed by her appearance and breast reduction made her life better. Well, if she was mature and had that problem, combining physical and emotional difficulties — all right, I believe in that happy ending — though I have known some popular and happy women whose heavy bosoms were definitely part of their total images.

But each case has its own merits. If the girl who wrote to me finds, in four or five years, that there is such a disparity between her mature breasts that she knows people are disturbed, even those who really like her, if an emotional problem about that persists, it is a different story. In a young adolescent girl, on the other hand, we don't know what her breasts will look like when she is 20.

Ideally a young girl asks her mother and her mother gives kind and sensible advice. That some mothers will actually put needless fears in their daughters' minds is more than possible — somewhere it's happening right now. Somewhere a child is fighting off unwise cosmetic surgery. But ideally a mother would take a girl who has a funny feeling about the way her breasts look to a doctor who will reassure her and persuade her to wait a while, and see what life brings.

Flags began in China

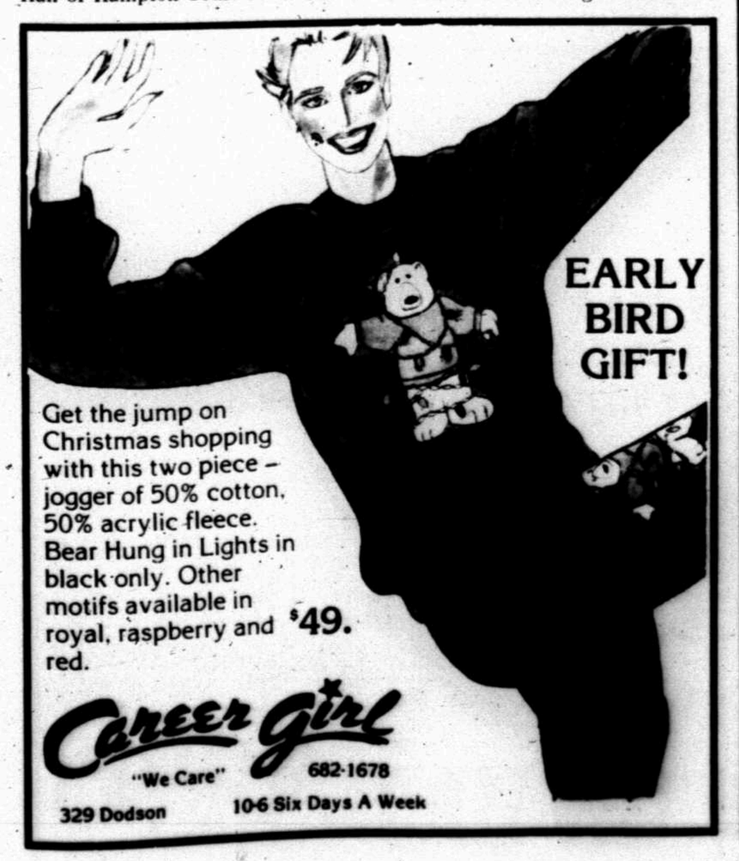

Copley News Service

The first real development in cloth flags took place in China. Carried on poles and bars, they came to symbolize religious and philosophical concepts. Then the idea moved to India and the Arab lands where, in the early 7th century, it flourished.

Old theater in 16th century residence

Copley News Service

Plays are presented in the Great Hall of Hampton Court Palace, 16th century residence of many kings and queens, situated 12 miles from the heart of London. The hall is England's oldest surviving theater.

Positively pasta!

Text by LINDA ANDERSON

October means pumpkins, crisp air and football. October is blue skies, yellow and red leaves and a "fall back" to standard time. October is also National Pasta Month.

"National spaghetti month?" asked one puzzled Italian food lover.

"No. National Pasta Month. Spaghetti is pasta, but pasta isn't necessarily spaghetti," his co-worker explained.

Pasta isn't necessarily Italian, either. In his book, "On Food and Cooking," Harold McGee writes: "According to a long-lived legend, noodles were first invented in China and then introduced to Italy by the traveler Marco Polo ... There is no doubt that the noodles were there for Polo to discover. It is thought today that the Chinese had noodles by the first century A.D., and special noodle shops became popular sometime during the Sung dynasty, from 960 to 1280. ... (but) there is good evidence that both India and the Middle East had known noodles at least by 1200 and probably long before."

Although the Marco Polo legend lives on, in "Food in History," author Reay Tannahill states: "The history of pasta is not easy to disentangle. There are unsubstantiated claims for its existence during Etruscan times, and again during the Ostrogothic period. But the most popular story is that it was introduced into Italy by Marco Polo, who is said to have brought the idea from China. Certainly, the Chinese noodle, developed centuries earlier, was an idea which could be expected to recommend itself in other regions where wheat was grown ... At least 50 years before Marco Polo even left Venice on his travels to the East, however, both Indians and Arabs were already eating noodles, and from the Arab lands to Venice in the later Middle Ages was a very short step. It is possible that pasta may have been introduced to Italy by this route, perhaps as early as the eleventh century."

Tom Stobart, writing in "The Cook's Encyclopedia," scoffs at the Polo theory: "... it is not true that it (pasta) was introduced into Europe when Marco Polo came back from his journeys to the Orient in 1293. Gadgets which look as if they were for making pasta have been found in Pompeii; in any case, macaroni is mentioned in writings from as early as 1200 ... almost a century before Marco Polo returned."

The word pasta is defined in Webster's New World Dictionary as "1. the flour paste or dough used in making spaghetti, macaroni, ravioli, etc. 2. any food or foods made of this," but Stobart goes one better and defines 59 varieties of pasta. These are a few:

- Calzone: stuffed form like a folded pizza.
- Cannelle: pipes.
- Cappelletti: little hats.
- Cravatte: ties or bow ties.
- Fettuccine: Fettuccia is ribbon. In Rome the name is used for strip pasta.
- Fiori di sambuco: elder flowers; small stars for soup.
- Gnocchi: small dumplings of pasta, often shaped with a fork and ridged; sometimes made at home from potato or semolina flour.
- Linguine: long, flat; narrow and slightly tapered at the edges.
- Manicotti: muffs. Large tubes, usually stuffed.
- Noodles: Pasta in German is Nudeln, and includes Makkaroni and Spaghetti. Hausmachernudeln, or homemade, and Spatzle.
- Perline: little pearls.
- Rigatoni: very large grooved tubes.
- Sedani: like celery.
- Tortellini: twists of stuffed egg pasta described in Italian as Venus' navel.
- Vermicelli: little worms; very fine spaghetti.
- Ziti: large macaroni cut in lengths.

With all this — and more — to choose from, what is the favorite?

Midlanders seem to prefer various traditional pastas — but with flair. At Anasazi Restaurant in Midland, the pasta ordered most is "spaghetti, followed pretty closely by fettuccine," said owner John Williams. Third on the popularity list is linguine, he added. "There are various sizes of spaghetti. Of course there's regular, then vermicelli and angel hair."

At Claudio's, the favorite pasta dish is "misto pasta — three different kinds of pasta" — fettuccine, lasagne and cannelloni — "in the same dish," said manager Carmine Scarcelli.

At Carmela's Restaurant customers prefer lasagne. "After that, spaghetti," said manager Dawn Elliott.

Steve Kempton, manager of Luigi's Italian Restaurant, agreed. "Lasagne is the most popular, followed by cannelloni and manicotti. Pasta has become very popular; there are all kinds of pasta now." While spaghetti is still popular, he said, it's "not as exciting."

Small children are pasta fans, too, but eating the dish may not be the way they like it best. Uncooked macaroni and other pasta products — especially the green and orange ones — can be strung on yarn to make necklaces or pasted on sturdy cardboard to make picture frames. Alphabet noodles can be glued on clothespins to make nametags, and wheel and bow tie shaped pasta can become Christmas ornaments.

Pasta is a versatile and popular food, a fitting subject for a national month.

Ask any gourmet — or the mother of a preschooler.

Lasagna spinach roll-ups make hearty meatless meal

Associated Press

Lasagna noodles are a staple in my cupboard because they can be used to make many main dishes in addition to the familiar layered lasagna.

I like to spread the cooked noodles with filling and roll them individually.

These meatless spinach rolls are halved and arranged so the spiral layers show.

LASAGNA SPINACH ROLL-UPS

½ cup hot water
1 10-ounce package frozen chopped spinach, thawed
⅓ cup grated Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons cooking oil
1 clove garlic, minced
1 teaspoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt
2 3-ounce packages cream cheese, softened
1 egg yolk
⅔ cup chopped walnuts
¼ cup plain yogurt
6 lasagna noodles, cooked and drained

In a blender container or food processor bowl place water, spinach, 2 tablespoons of the Parmesan, the oil, garlic, lemon juice and salt. Cover; blend or process until smooth. Set aside.

Combine cream cheese, egg yolk, half the nuts, yogurt and remaining Parmesan.

Pat noodles dry. Spread each with a scant ¼ cup cream cheese mixture; roll up.

Cut rolls in half, forming two spirals. Spread 2 tablesoons spinach mixture in each of six 10-ounce baking dishes. Place 2 rolls, cut side down, in each dish; pour remaining spinach mixture over.

Bake, covered in a 350 degree oven for 20 minutes.

Uncover, top with remaining nuts. Bake 5 minutes. (Or place ¾ cup spinach mixture in 13x9x2-inch baking dish; top with rolls and remaining spinach mixture.)

Bake, covered, in a 350 degree oven for 30 minutes. Uncover; top with remaining nuts. Bake 5 minutes. Serves 6.

Pasta Verde easy fix-up for any type pasta

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Here's an easy fix-up for pasta. Serve it instead of potatoes as a side dish with beef or pork

PASTA VERDE

3 slices bacon
5 ounces spaghetti or other pasta
½ of a 10-ounce package frozen chopped spinach
1 clove garlic, minced
Dash pepper
¼ cup cream-style cottage cheese
3 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

In a skillet cook bacon until crisp; drain, reserving 1 tablespoon drippings. Crumble bacon; set aside.

Cook pasta in large amount of boiling salted water for 10 to 12 minutes until tender but firm.

Meanwhile, in a saucepan cook spinach according to package directions. Place undrained spinach, reserved bacon drippings, garlic and pepper in blender container or food processor bowl. Cover and blend until smooth.

Add cottage cheese; cover and blend until smooth.

Drain pasta and turn out onto platter. Pour spinach mixture over pasta; toss. Sprinkle individual servings with bacon and Parmesan cheese. Serve immediately.

Makes 5 to 6 side-dish servings.

DEAR ABBY

Adoptive parents express their emotions

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am writing not to tell my story, but to share this beautiful poem. If you consider it worth printing, it may inspire others. Thank you. — ANONYMOUS, PLEASE

Van Buren

DEAR ANONYMOUS: I do.

LEGACY OF AN ADOPTED CHILD

Once there were two women
Who never knew each other
One you do not remember
The other you call mother.
Two different lives
Shaped to make yours one.
One became your guiding star
The other became your sun.
The first gave you life
And the second taught you to live in it
The first gave you a need for love
And the second was there to give it.
One gave you a nationality
The other gave you a name
One gave you the seed of talent
The other gave you an aim.
One gave you emotions
The other calmed your fears
One saw your first sweet smile
The other dried your tears.
One gave you up —
It was all that she could do.
The other prayed for a child.
And God led her straight to you.
And now you ask me
Through your tears,
The age-old questions
Through the years;
Heredity or environment
Which are you the product of?
Neither, my darling — neither
Just two different kinds of love.
– AUTHOR UNKNOWN

DEAR ABBY: I have been wanting to say this for a long time: My wife and I adopted a child years ago, and since then I've become fed up with the so-called "rights" of biological parents and the so-called "rights" of adopted children. What about the rights of parents who adopted that child?

In recent years I have seen numerous TV shows, articles and letters in your column pushing for the "rights" of everyone involved in an adoption — except the adoptive parents.

Remember us? We're the ones who sent our pictures and letters stating our qualifications for parenthood to over 100 doctors, lawyers, adoption agencies and hospitals begging for a child. We're the ones who waited seven years for one of those contacts to pay off. And when it finally did, we're the ones who loved this child with all our hearts. This child is ours!

Abby, I am not one of those jerks who believe that most children are given up for selfish reasons. I know that they were given up because their birth parents wanted what was best for their child. Nevertheless, when they gave up that child, they also gave up their right to contact that child.

Finally, Abby, I'm not going to prevent my child from finding her biological parents, if that's what she wants to do when she's of legal age. On the contrary, I've kept records in my safe-deposit box that will help her locate the birth parents. But in the meantime, if anyone tries to interfere with my family and our lives, he will need a lot more than a handful of so-called "rights"! — DETERMINED IN L.A.

(For Abby's booklet, "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

THE INVINCIBLE OIL SHOW

By JOHN PAUL PITTS
Business/Oil Editor

With oil prices slashed in half and the rig count down by more than 60 percent, one would have not been unwise predicting that the same disastrous downturn would be reflected in the Permian Basin Oil Show, but that was not the case.

What could have been one of he darkest years in the history of the Oil Show has turned into one of the brightest. Not only did the 1986 Oil Show sell out, but it had more exhibitors than ever. And when the final tally is in, attendance at this year's show is expected to exceed the record year of 1984 when more than 200,000 attended the show. The Midland Hilton, while not entirely sold out for the event, reports that it was ahead of 1984. Oldtimers who have attended decades of oil shows say 1986 is one of the best years they have seen at the Permian Basin Oil Show, because they were able to see the people they needed to see.

Why has the Oil Show been able to defeat the downturn? Spokesmen for the show attribute it to the nature of the show itself, hard work on the part of the board and good press.

"When oil prices crashed this year, it looked like this might be a disastrous year for the Oil Show," said Bobby Sparkman, assistant to the executive director for the Oil Show, "but we were able to turn it around in time — thanks to a lot of hard work from the Oil Show board."

He said cancellations began to flow into the Oil Show office when oil prices collapsed, but the board immediately launched a sales effort that would turn it around.

"In previous years we have had a long waiting list of oil field related businesses that wanted to get into the show. We began to call this list and signed up many, but found that many on the list had also gone out of business," said Sparkman.

Telemarketing rings up profits

By DEANNA J. NEAL
Business/Oil Writer

To thrive in today's competitive market, a business must be able to reach its market effectively and efficiently — and before the competition. A new tool which is filling that need is telemarketing.

Telemarketing, which identifies potential customers, has doubled in size since 1980 and experts predict it will be a $118 billion industry in the United States this year. And the benefits of this booming industry are going to a limited number of companies currently providing telemarketing services.

Midland is no stranger to this new marketing approach, and has seen a marked increase in its use in the past three years. There are several local companies engaged in the telemarketing businss.

One local telemarketer, Jerri Shelnutt, says telemarketing has been an effective tool teamed with direct sales. "We can reach virtually every one in the marketplace with the least time and cost," she says.

Shelnutt, who manages telemarket sales for local publications, says the time factor is the biggest advantage to a company using telemarketers for sales.

Money is a primary reason for the success of telemarketing. Seen as an alternative to on-the-road sales, industry experts estimate the cost of Energy bankers get down to basics

Low prices, uncertainty force lenders 'back to the future'

By ALLEN E. HOWLAND
Business/Oil Writer

The new era of energy lending which began with the oil price collapse of 1986, has taken banks "back to the future" in terms of the criteria they use in lending money for oil and gas operations.

Not since before the Arab oil embargo of 1973 have financial institutions been so cautious in their application and approval processes, according to Marvin Schiebout, executive vice president of energy lending for RepublicBank First National Midland.

The days of revolving "borrowing base" loans and loans for lease acquisition costs seen during the period from 1973 to 1981 have been relegated to the history books, with today's loans being made only using proved producing (or shut-in produceable) reserves and secured collateral for backing.

The price outlook bankers are planning with these days is a base case of current $14 per barrel oil prices escalating to $18 to $19 by year-end, where prices will remain flat through mid-1989.

However, bankers have learned the lesson of the unpredictability of oil prices and the adverse effects rapid movements can have on their loan portfolios. So, each base case economic evaluation is run in conjunction with two price sensitivity analyses: one based on flat $14 per barrel prices through mid-1989 with 4 percent annual escalation from there; and, an acid test "worst case" scenario of $10 per barrel prices remaining flat for the remainder of the decade.

These economic criteria are used to evaluate the effect on the applicants' future cash flow and their ability to repay the loans.

Gas project economics are founded on a base case of current prices remaining in effect for one year and then adjusted up to $2.00 per thousand cubic feet (Mcf) through July, 1989.

Price analyses are run for gas price scenarios of current prices remaining in place for the next year and moving to $1.62 per Mcf through mid-1989 and another scenario based on prices flat at $1.25 per Mcf for the remainder of the decade.

LOCAL BANKERS SAY that loan demand for financing of new drilling projects is virtually nonexistent and that the bulk of current loan business is refinancing of existing debt.

Bankers note that most borrowing is for maintenance of operations, as experienced operators adjust to current economics.

Marvin Schiebout

Because of low prices, production costs of proved reserves are being factored in as a degree of the risk analysis on new loans. With price levels falling to near the break-even point, a high-cost producer becomes a higher risk borrower.

"Cash flow is the key," says Schiebout. An increasing number of banks are lending on the basis of the applicant's balance sheet position, rather than on the basis of in-the-ground reserves.

JOHN PAUL PITTS

Threat of nuclear disaster comes home to roost

Once again a superpower summit has come and gone, and once again the talk was of nuclear weapons, missiles, defense, offense, and mutual annihilation.

The only thing different at the Iceland meeting was the introduction of a new bargaining chip in the form of the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) or "star wars project." But does any of it really make any difference? Is there really any defense against a nuclear attack? If America was able to set lasers in space to stop every ballistic missile fired at us, would we then be safe from nuclear attack? Probably not!

There is another threat so sinister and dangerous that not even the super powers will talk about it in public. That is the threat of a nuclear attack from within. With much ease such an attack could probably be launched within the borders of the U.S., and with much more difficulty in the U.S.S.R.. Both nations are vulnerable to internal nuclear attacks, but especially the U.S.

The U.S. is an open society. Goods and people move freely within our borders without the constant scrutiny of a secret police and endless checkpoints. Also, our borders are not exactly an "iron curtain." There is no country in the world with as many miles of open and unprotected borders as the U.S. The horde of illegal aliens and tons of dope that pour into this country everyday are indisputable evidence of this. In addition, our economic system is wide open. Anyone willing to pay taxes and secure a minimum of permits can start a business to manufacture computers, oil field equipment, shoes or bombs.

Bombs? Yes, bombs! Who's to know if a machine shop in Odessa is really manufacturing wellhead equipment or nuclear bombs? If a student in Colorado can make one, certainly a machine shop in Odessa can make one.

"The principle behind an atomic bomb is very simple, but the engineering is more sophisticated. The problem is to keep the thing from blowing up before its time," said Don Winston, director of media relations for the Atomic Industrial Forum Inc., which promotes the peaceful applications of atomic energy. "In 40 years there has not been a successful free lance production of an atomic bomb. It takes government effort to produce atomic bombs."

But that is exactly what we are talking about: one nation operating within the borders of another nation to construct and distribute atomic bombs. For some mysterious reason, both Reagan and Gorbachev have taken great efforts to convince the public that nuclear warheads can be delivered only by airplane or missile. The fact is: they can be delivered by 18-wheelers, boats, motorhomes, trains, automobiles — even UPS. And they don't have to fall to explode. They can be detonated remotely by radio signals or by on-site timers. Or by demented Islamic suicide squads. Chances are, each of us has passed an unarmed atomic bomb at one time or another on the highway. Unarmed they are relatively safe, if they fall they just break. Armed they are a different story.

Consider this scenario: could it happen? A group of Russians who speak fluent English are smuggled across the border near Ojinaga, Mexico. With a large stash of cash and some A-bomb plans, they rent a machine shop in Odessa and set out to do custom machine work. There is some legitimate machine work, but the main enterprise is the manufacture of unsophisticated hardware for atomic bombs.

When the hardware is brought together in a complete bomb package, it is a round cylinder about 12 feet long and two feet in circumference. It looks like a big water heater, but it could as easily look like a refrigerator, furnace or diesel engine.

Now, it is time to bring hardware and enriched uranium warheads together. It takes about 10 pounds of critical mass for each bomb, and getting it into this country will be the

The importance of bank financing as a source of drilling funds is growing, because competing sources of outside capital are drying up at an alarming rate.

Proceeds from public and private placement drilling fund sales peaked in 1981 at $1.976 billion out of total energy fund sales of $2.884 billion. In 1985, those funds shrank to $371 million in drilling funds from total placements of $698 million.

Reclassification and less favorable treatment of passive investments under the reformed tax code may further contract the funding pool in 1987 and future years.

Technical energy expertise is important for lenders. Many of the city's smaller banks are unable to finance the staff necessary to do an effective job of energy lending, notes Steve Holt, senior vice president of Midland American Bank.

WHAT EFFECT the advent of interstate banking may have on the availability of energy credit remains open to debate.

Backers of interstate banking, including the state's largest banking associations, note that 38 other states already permit interstate banking.

They argue that the Texas economy needs the immediate influx of money that interstate banking may allow, and note that deregulation in the national banking industry has broken down old, geographic barriers.

Opponents, including consumer groups, say out-of-state banks won't have the best interests of Texans at heart and would allow large New York-based banks to drain Texas institutions of their deposits.

In addition, they point to the disastrous consequence of inexperienced, non-traditional lenders getting involved in energy loans during the 1973-81 boom. Out-of-state holding companies coming in to Texas at the bottom of the oil economy cycle could have the reverse impact of the boom, with those unfamiliar and unaccustomed to the oil field dismissing all energy lending out of hand, without considering the merits of individual lending proposals.

CALLING

client contact through telemarketing to be five times cheaper than the cost of sending a representative on a personal visit.

Additionally, telemarketers can contact approximately 1,500 customers per week, while field representatives usually make no more than 25 in-person sales calls per week.

One of the largest telemarketing operations in Midland is ClayDesta Communications. Originally started to sell its own long-distance service at the height of the equal access battle, telemarketing manager Gail McCulloch says company management decided to take advantage of that experience and the resources already in place to add to the company's services. Thus, telemarketing has grown to become a big money-maker for the local firm.

"We felt it would be a viable way to utilize the equipment and people we already had in place, while continuing to market our long distance service," says McCulloch.

McCulloch notes that ClayDesta's telemarketing services are used in numerous ways by a variety of firms. In addition to direct sales of both products and services, the company is involved in charitable solicitations, and was recently involved in a nationwide campaign to raise funds for the Special Olympics.

Another application of telemarketing by the local firm is fund raising for Texas universities. "Currently, we are contacting alumni of Texas Tech University, attempting to get donations for the school. This has been a very successful campaign for us and for them."

McCulloch says telemarketing can also be helpful in developing sales leads. "Lead generation can be a real time saver. We can call and locate interested consumers, set up appointments and then the direct sales people will spend their time contacting only those who are truly interested in the product or service."

But the concept of telemarketing is not without criticism. "We have had to overcome a bad image, created by all of the telephone fraud that used to be very common."

McCulloch notes that his firm has researched and developed ways to overcome the 'annoyance' factor that is often associated with telemarketers. "We try to time our phone calls so that they never come during meal times or at a late hour.

"Additionally, we have all of our customer contacts on computer, where we code responses. If someone indicates that they don't want to be contacted by phone, we flag their names in our system so we won't recall them.

"We have had an amazing amount of success in Midland, and I would estimate that approximately 91 percent of all contacts are willing to listen and talk with our telemarketers. The key is to represent a viable commodity and go about it in a professional manner."

The telemarketing manager indicates that data base development can be of great use in providing companies with insight into which customers buy and what kinds of things they buy.

He says the industry is working to overcome its image and attempting to look introspectively in order to be accountable for the way telemarketing operations are run. But he admits that proposed legislation to regulate telemarketing operations could prove a hindrance to the industry's future development.

"We are uncertain how proposed regulations would affect the industry, but some of the proposals they are looking at are: requiring telemarketers to be bonded; restricting the hours in which calls may be made and penalizing telemarketing firms who call customers that have made it clear they do not wish to be solicited by telephone."

Nevertheless, McCulloch believes telemarketing is here to stay and as an industry will grow and expand at a phenomenal rate into the 1990s. "Four hundred of the Fortune 500 businesses already use telemarketing in some form and it is estimated that by the year 2000, there will be more than 8 million people working in the field."

He expects much of the increase to swing toward business-to-business sales and inbound telemarketing, where a company can list an 800 number during an advertisement, and a telemarketing firm answers those calls.

McCulloch sees it as a realistic way to diversify. "This is the information age, and Midland has every capability to become an information processing center. Telemarketing is a vital process in that endeavor."

The local communications company can testify as to the effectiveness of telemarketing. Telemarketing contributed half of the revenue from ClayDesta's long distance sales efforts but required only one-third of the total sales costs of the campaign. It cost the outside sales force twice as much to generate its half of the sales.

Telemarketing is advantageous in that it gives a product initial recognition into a market, thus enabling a firm to determine the interest factor of a product before going out and hiring an outside sales team.

"From a marketing standpoint, you get instant feedback from customer responses, enabling a company to change its direction quickly if necessary," adds McCulloch.

Another advantage is the vast amount of territory one telemarketer can cover. Anywhere there is phone service, a telemarketer can reach a potential customer.

Telemarketing can be used effectively to sell almost any product, however, McCulloch indicates it is easier to sell a tangible product than a service or soliciting for a cause.

BIDDING CONCEPT SAVES TAXPAYERS DOLLARS

Todays economic situation has seen many changes in the way consumers approach purchasing, likewise, with shrinking tax bases, the purchasing departments of our governmental agencies are also adopting developing new ideas to insure the tax payer receives the best value for the dollars spent. At one time bids were awarded on the basis of lowest initial cost with little consideration for machine life, parts costs, repair and down time cost, or Resale value. The search for a tool to better evaluate the actual cost of purchasing, owning and operating a piece of equipment led to the development of a concept called Total Cost Bidding or Life Cycle Costing. Now many governmental agencies evaluate initial cost, maintenance and repair costs and guaranteed buy backs before awarding bids. Warranty normally takes into consideration defects in material and workmanship but does not take into consideration other factors such as desinn and engineering and how fast the equipment will wear out after the warranty period is over. A piece of equipment that costs less at purchase time but lasts only half as long as a higher priced machine with more quality built into it is not the best value for the taxpayer.

Mark Phillips, Materials Manager for the City of Midland, indicated the city has recently employed the Total Costs Bid concept in the purchase of two large pieces of equipment and is well pleased with the results. Phillips said, "Total Cost Bidding allows the City to place a ceiling on repair costs for a designated period of time which allows for more realistic budgeting, since we know our repair costs will not exceed a certain dollar figure over the life of the machine." "Also," Phillips continues,"An annual guaranteed buy back figure assures the City that the City will receive maximum value from the sale of a piece of equipment." With market fluctuations such have occured over the Permian Basin, a guaranteed buy back hedges against a declining market value and the City has the option to sell the machine or retain it, whichever provides the City with its greatest value.

This also helps when an agency might purchase a model that goes out of protection or is outdated as new technological improvements are developed. Another factor which effects the value of any piece of equipment is the product support provided by the dealer. Total Cost Bidding requires a dealer to indicate just what form and level of support will be provided. Phillips has used this concept to assist him in making purchases that will provide the best value which translates into the City buying quality equipment with less owning and operating costs. Total Cost Bidding can be applied to the purchase of many items that retain a residual value.

As more and more counties and cities began to evaluate their process for handling bids which involve large dollar expenditures, it appears the value of looking beyond the initial price is being recognized. Several cities and counties in the Permian Basin including City of Midland are using this approach and finding it does allow them to select the options in Total Cost Bidding that best meet their individual needs.

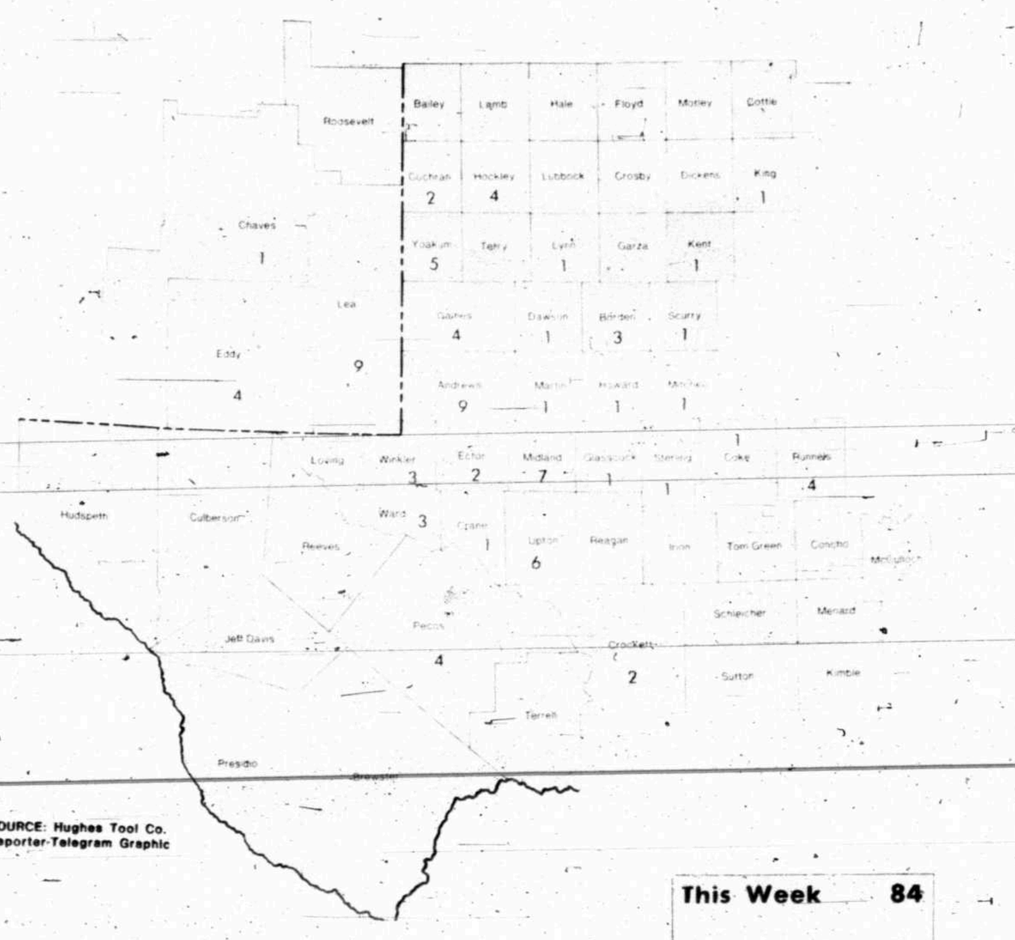

West Texas Equipment Co. is pleased to submit bids that ask for guarantees that will save taxpayer dollars. They believe responsible bidders should be committed to providing guarantees at the time of purchase that will insure the lowest overall costs to the tax payer.

West Texas Equipment Company is the Caterpillar dealer for eighty-seven counties in the Permian Basin, Trans Pecos and Panhandle regions of Texas. Full sales and service facilities are located in Odessa, Abilene, Amarillo, Lubbock and San Angelo.

Drilling activity reverses direction

The number of working oil rigs in the United States dropped this week to 814, down four from the 818 total posted last week, while the Permian Basin count also took a nose dive, down from 92 to 84, according to the latest count by Hughes Tool Co.

Last year at this time, the national count was 1,906 and the Permian Basin total was 277.

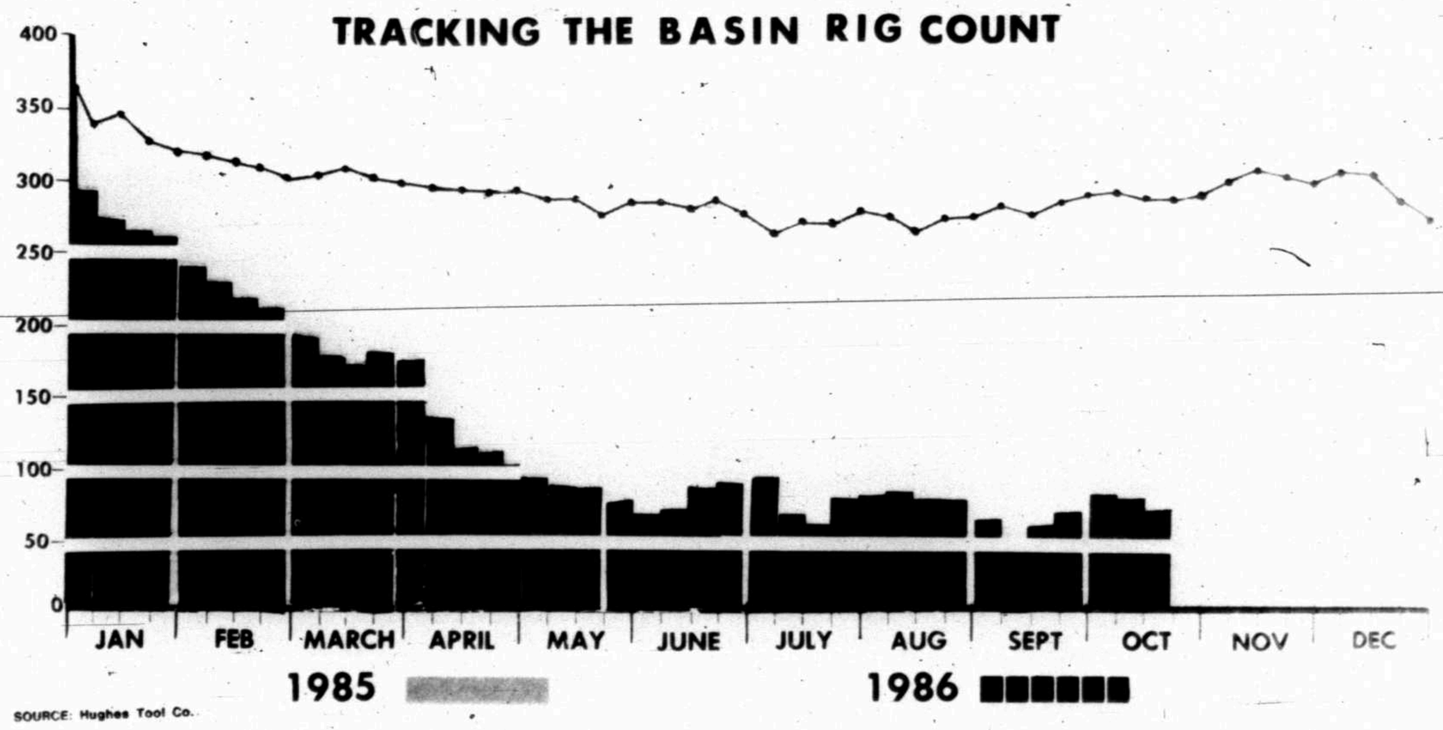

A possible factor in the decline may have been wet ground in Oklahoma and Colorado. Hughes economist Isaac Kerridge said. Oil equipment is hard to move on wet ground, he said.

Before this week's decline, the count had increased six weeks in a row, officials said.

Locally, Lea and Andrews counties posted nine working rigs, while Midland tallied seven.

Texas was up one and Louisiana gained six for the week. But those gains were not enough to offset losses of eight in Oklahoma, nine in Colorado and five in Michigan.

most difficult operation. Here's how difficult it is: flying the route of dope smugglers, a small plane flies low, at night, across the Mexican border. It lands on a caliche road near Mentone and proceeds to transfer its cargo to waiting trucks. It's a scene that has been repeated many times by dope smugglers, only this time the cargo is enriched uranium in 10 pound canisters. Since the movement of radioactive material can be traced by satellites from outer space, there are frequent trips and small cargo loads.

Within the next few days, the bombs and radioactive material are mated in Odessa and the unarmed bombs dispatched in private vehicles to strategic areas around the nation.

Then, at an appointed hour, they are armed and detonated — and most of America is vaporized.

If the scheme sounds too far fetched, try one a bit more simple. Nuclear missiles are loaded on to 20 or 30 freighters and tankers of Panamanian registry and dispatched to arrive at Boston, New York, Miami, New Orleans, Houston, Los Angeles and San Francisco at about the same time. Every major port city in the U.S. is vaporized.

The point is: in an open society there is no defense against nuclear attack, because there is no problem with delivery. I am sure the Russians already know this, and have discussed these very scenarios behind closed doors in the Kremlin. One intelligence source reports that there are already plans afoot in certain nations to produce miniature nuclear bombs that could be carried by in a backpack by one man. I am sure the threat of internal nuclear attacks by terrorist or communist governments has also been acknowledged and discussed at the Pentagon.

So why do we hear nothing but missile talk? And why this incessant need to stockpile nuclear warheads? Shouldn't this nation begin worrying more about "unconventional" terrorist-type, nuclear attacks? And, when the U.S. already has enough warheads to blow up the world 15 times, why does it need more? Wouldn't some of this warhead money be put to better use securing our borders? Last question: is the American public being told the truth about the nuclear threat or, is the whole notion of nuclear offense and defense just an exercise in futility — a useless game that nobody knows how to quit playing?

Helicopter company cashes in on newest management tool

NEW YORK (AP) — The Aerospatiale AStar, outfitted with a plush, gray-blue interior, bobs as it slowly rises from the heliport alongside the Hudson River, banks to the right as it gains speed and aims for 1,000 feet.

The Statue of Liberty is visible ahead, and the aircraft soon whirs past the twin towers of the World Trade Center, leaving the car-cluttered streets of Manhattan behind.

Helicopters take off and land 400 times a day in Manhattan, most of them carrying high-powered executives to a myriad of destinations.

James Robinson, chairman of American Express Co., gets around in a helicopter. So do financier Saul Steinberg of Reliance Group Holdings Inc., and Jonathan Tisch, president of Loews Hotels.

Robert Brennan, the former chairman of First Jersey Securities Inc., appeared in advertisements for the investment firm featuring a helicopter.

Because companies are more likely to charter rather than own helicopters these days, one small company called Damin Aviation is cashing in.

"Our business is up considerably," says Anthony Amanzio, vice president of sales for Damin, which bills itself as the largest provider of executive-class helicopter service on the East Coast.

"We saw a niche in the marketplace itself for corporate service. We saw that nobody had a fleet that was dedicated to corporate travel," Amanzio said.

In its luxury helicopters with cabins that are outfitted like stretch limousines, Damin flies executives around New York City, to the area airports, to the Hamptons beaches at the eastern tip of Long Island, and along the Boston-New York-Washington corridor.

Executives use helicopters heavily in the Northeast, largely because of the concentration of corporate headquarters in the area. Helicopters are also especially popular among executives in Texas and California.

This expensive means of transportation — Damin's fees range from $475 to $1,950 an hour — offers executives escape from traffic jams, on the highways and in the commercial airways. It allows them to do a two- to three-day trip in one day.

"What we sell more than anything else is time. What we offer is the ability for the chief executive officers to put hundreds of hours back into their schedules," Amanzio said.

For example, a flight to one of New York's major airports takes a scant 11 minutes. A trip to the nation's capital takes an hour and a half but circumvents airport delays.

"The helicopter is definitely not a perk. It's a management tool," Amanzio said. "There are people who point to the helicopter and say there goes a fat cat. That is not true. They would not be able to operate efficiently without it."

A combination of factors has discouraged companies from operating their own helicopters.

There were 134 business and private helicopters in operation in 1960, compared with a peak of 1,728 in 1982 and 1,552 in 1985, according to the Helicopter Association International in Alexandria, Va.

"One of the biggest reasons is economical and that the recession was felt in some industries more than others," said Frank Jensen, president of the association. He cited the slump in oil drilling in particular.

During hard times, companies decide to charter a helicopter when it is needed rather than maintain one or an entire flight department, Jensen said.

And as helicopters have been upgraded to carry more passengers in recent years, companies have decided to share, he said.

In addition, the tax advantages of owning a helicopter are less favorable, insurance costs are higher and companies fear liability, he said.

Under today's product liability laws, any entity that has ever had title to an aircraft remains liable for the entire life of that air vehicle, Jensen said.

There are no statistics readily available on the chartering of helicopters by executives. But David Lawrence, director of strategic planning for Sikorsky Aircraft, a Stratford, Conn.-based division of United Technologies Corp., said executive "flight hours are up. This has been steady growth in the last five years and significantly in the last two or three."

"What's different is that a lot of flight hours are not taking place in their own helicopters. What they are doing instead is chartering helicopters. The charter business is up," Lawrence said.

Matt Zuccaro, a spokesman for the Eastern Region Helicopter Council in Newark, N.J., said: "Trendwise it is quite apparent to us in the industry that executives are using helicopters more and more and chartering rather than going out and purchasing, owning and operating."

Here are some sketchy statistics:

—Helicopter takeoffs and landings at Manhattan's four public-use heliports rose 6.8 percent to 146,150 in 1985, according to the council.

—There were 3,120 non-military heliports in the country last year, an increase of 34 percent from 1980, the Helicopter Association International said. New Jersey has the largest number, 413.

Damin mirrors that growth.

Founded three years ago with just two helicopters, the company now operates with 35 pilots and 21 helicopters, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, out of a 50,000-square-foot facility in Weehawken, N.J.

Damin's fleet consists of Aerospatiale AStars, Sikorsky S-76s and Bell 222s, all of which are leased. Some of the helicopters are equipped with a conference table, a beverage center, a telephone, a television and a VCR.

Flights can be catered with refreshments. And Damin can arrange limousine service at either end of the flight.

Damin has had three accidents and one fatality, a pilot, Amanzio said.

Five percent of Damin's flights are canceled because of bad weather, he said.

Damin had revenues of $7 million in 1985. It expects this year's to reach $12 million. The company, a partnership, does not release profit figures but says it is operating in the black.

Anthony Amanzio, vice president of sales for Damin Aviation of New York, flies over the tip of Manhattan in one of his company's executive class helicopters.

Despite troubles, IBM still has customer loyalty

NEW YORK (AP) — In spite of the squeeze on its profits, International Business Machines Corp. retains the true-blue loyalty of important customers, according to recent interviews with computer managers at several Fortune 500 companies.

Directors of computing at companies ranging from Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. to Chevron Corp. said they remained confident in IBM over the long term despite Monday's announcement that its earnings fell 27 percent in the third quarter.

"IBM is one of the greatest things that's happened to this country in terms of technology and we ought not to forget that," Joseph Brophy, senior vice president for data processing at Travelers Corp. in Hartford, Conn., said Monday.

IBM earned $1.08 billion in the July-September period, or $1.76 a share, down from $1.47 billion, or $2.40 a share, in the year-earlier period, the company said Monday. Revenue rose 1.8 percent to $11.9 billion from $11.7 billion a year earlier.

For the first nine months of the year, IBM said earnings fell 12.3 percent to $3.40 billion, or $5.53 a share, from $3.87 billion, or $6.31 a share, a year earlier. Revenue for the nine-month period rose 4.3 percent to $34.3 billion from $32.9 billion a year earlier.

The depth of IBM's penetration into corporate America makes it vulnerable to ups and downs in the nation's capital spending, something that financial analysts say is the main cause of the current earnings troubles.

But that same penetration gives IBM unmatched loyalty from the people who buy computers in the big companies that provide most of its $50 billion in annual revenue.

The turndown in earnings — IBM appears likely to face back-to-back annual earnings declines for the first time since the Depression — has prompted the company to be more attentive to its customers, some computer executives said.

"Certainly Digital (Equipment Corp.) is doing a better job than IBM in certain areas. But I feel that IBM's response is excellent. It's a little disappointing that it's so long in coming," said Charles Oldenburg, general manager of computer services at Chevron in San Francisco.

IBM's dominance of computers encourages other companies to ride its coattails by creating hardware or software that will work with IBM products. That, in turn, reinforces IBM's strength.

Rockwell International Corp., for example, has been using IBM computers more and more for computer-aided design at the expense of the much smaller companies that specialize in the area, according to James Sutter, Rockwell's vice president for information systems in Seal Beach, Calif.

More programs are being written by outsiders for IBM than for the other companies' machines, Sutter said. Also, using IBM machines for computer-aided design makes it easier to share the results with Rockwell's other IBM computers, he said.

An often-overlooked strength of IBM is its state-of-the-art information storage devices that are hooked up to its computers, Brophy said. IBM leads the world in both disk drives and tape cartridge systems for mainframe computers, Sutter agreed.

At Goodyear, in Akron, Ohio, assistant comptroller Joseph Gilchrist said his biggest complaint against IBM was that it had not taken more leadership in providing unified computer solutions to business problems. Goodyear's staff is forced to piece together systems itself, he said.

Nevertheless, Gilchrist, said, "We still have a very good feeling about IBM."

But one thing that is out of IBM's hands is the long-term easing of growth in industry demand for computers, the executives agreed.

License for pumping unit granted

Lufkin Industries, Inc. has been granted an exclusive license by Laney Manufacturing to manufacture and market the patented x-caliber trailer mounted portable pumping unit under the Lufkin name.

The announcement was made jointly by Roy Laney, president of Laney Manufacturing, and by E.G. Pittman, vice president of Lufkin Industries, Inc.

Judgements against Abilene bank adds to troubles

DALLAS (AP) — A group of oilmen may have won a $69 million lawsuit last spring against an Abilene bank, but they still haven't got their money and they may have to wait even longer.

The financially troubled MBank Abilene, ordered to pay the judgment, doesn't have the funds to cover it.

Federal regulators said this week that the bank can't be allowed to pay the judgment because it would jeopardize its solvency.

MBank Abilene reported on June 30 a net worth of $16 million, a $5 million decline from its net worth at the end of 1985.

The oilmen, represented by attorney Bruce Claycombe of Dallas, charged the bank, then known as Abilene National Bank, with fraud and libel in a 1982 suit. A Fort Bend County jury awarded them $69 million last spring, and the Texas Supreme Court has refused to hear an appeal.

The bank now is owned by MCorp of Dallas, a holding company with assets of $21.7 billion. But MCorp spokesman George McCane said the giant holding company "is not a party to the suit."

On Sept. 21, the oilmen tried to garnish the MBank Abilene assets held by the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas, but federal regulators talked the group out of pursuing that line.

Claycombe said in a hearing before U.S. District Judge David Belew that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. would be the preferred creditor should MBank Abilene fail. Belew issued a temporary restraining order on Sept. 22 preventing the oilmen from moving to collect the judgment, but last Thursday agreed to consider the collection efforts again.

The FDIC put $50 million into the bank when the agency helped rescue it from insolvency in 1982. Under the agreement, the FDIC would boost the bank's capital through September 1987. But when the agency puts money into a bank, it assumes the position of preferred creditor.

Should the bank break up, then the FDIC would collect its money first and officials said it appears there would be little left for other creditors.

MBank Abilene faces three other suits, also. A jury awarded a $32 million judgment against the bank in favor of HECI Exploration of Dallas last summer, and two other suits are pending.

The bank's troubles stem from the last months of its existence as Abilene National Bank.

Donald Earney bought a controlling interest in 1977 and expanded it from an institution with less than $20 million in assets to $450 million in assets. The bank was closed by regulators and sold to MCorp in August 1982.

MEETINGS

Division Order analysts plan seminar

The Southwestern Association of Division Order Analysts will be conducting a one day seminar titled "Analyzation of a Division Order and Interpersonal Communication Development." The seminar will be held at the Pecos Inn in Artesia at 8:30 a.m. Oct. 25.

The morning session will be a basic understanding of the division order and the oil and gas legal concepts which act as groundwork for the division order. The presenter will be Sara Tays, senior division order title analyst with Exxon Company U.S.A. in Houston.

The afternoon session be cover interpersonal communication, centering on self-confidence, managing stress and time, effectively communicating with others and attitude. Paul L. Moore of Peak Consultants of Amarillo, will be the presenter.

Fee is $35 per person, which includes lunch. The guest speaker will be Congressman Joe Skeen, who will speak on the New Mexico oil and gas industry.

Engineers to host waterflooding expert

The Permian Basin Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers will meet Oct. 21 at Ranchland Hills Country Club. Social hour will begin at 5:30 p.m. and dinner at 6:20 p.m.

Guest speaker will be Loren Stiles, senior technical advisor in the Southwest Rocky Mountain Division of Exxon Company U.S.A. He will speak on "Problems and Opportunities in Mature Waterfloods."

Waterflooding began in the larger Basin fields in the early 1960s and progressed through several expansion phases. Stiles will cite examples from Texas and New Mexico fields to illustrate how old concepts gave way to more detailed studies, resulting in increased production.

Stiles is a 1948 graduate of Texas A&M University and has been involved in waterflooding projects in the Permian Basin and Rocky Mountain areas since the early 1960s. He has recently been active in enhanced oil recovery projects.

Echometers to be topic at SPE meeting

The Trans-Pecos Section of the Society of Petroleum Engineers will hold its monthly luncheon meeting on Oct. 22 at Mission Dorado Country Club. The meeting will begin at 11:30 a.m.

The guest speaker will be James N. McCoy of Echometer Co. His topic will be "Automatic Echometers and Analyzing Well Performance."

Illinois store has seen everything in 82 years

LIBERTY, Ill. (AP) — Buggies have given way to satellite dish receivers on the sales floor of Linnemeyer's HWI during the past 82 years.

Even the name has changed since the original Klarner Implement Co. opened in a buggy shed in 1904 across the street from where Linnemeyer's stands today in this east-central Illinois town.

Roy Linnemeyer, 58, the store's owner, helped guide the farm implement and hardware business through nearly half its history. But he says 40 years is enough time in the store. He plans to sell.

Linnemeyer's grandfather, Walter Klarner, founded the business in 1904 and within a year had moved it to a two-story frame building shared with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Klarner passed the store to his son-in-law and daughter, Delbert and Dora Linnemeyer, before his death in 1934. Linnemeyer still recalls the advice of his grandfather, who told him, "Don't put all your eggs in one basket."

Klarner practiced that rule by branching his businesses into John Deere and International Harvester farm equipment sales and seed cleaning. During the early days of the automobile, the store also became a showroom for Chevrolet 4-90 cars, a competitor of the Model T Ford, Linnemeyer said.

The business survived the Great Depression during its four decades in Liberty, and moved to its present site in 1946 — the year Linnemeyer started work fresh out of high school. But the store today is not the store of Linnemeyer's youth.

The type and packaging of merchandise has changed. Back then, most items came in bulk containers. Packages were dull in color, usually displayed on a brightly painted wall or shelf, he recalls. The shelves are plainer now and the packages brighter.

The source of merchandise also has changed. The Linnemeyers once ordered goods by letter for shipment within weeks. They dealt mainly with wholesalers. The store is now a member of HWI, a group representing hundreds of stores that can buy goods in volume from manufacturers for a lower price.

"You get bottom-line price," Linnemeyer said. "If you don't belong to a group like that, there's no way you can exist."

The different buying methods require more planning. Instead of placing orders by mail weeks ahead, Linnemeyer must predict what he will stock six months from now. Ordering is done by computer.

Linnemeyer's has survived into a time when retailing is dominated by one-stop-shopping store chains. Keeping competitive by stocking its shelves with such non-hardware items as shirts and jackets brings the store full circle in a sense.

"It's kind of getting back to the general store," Linnemeyer said.

True to Klarner's philosophy of servicing what the store sells, Linnemeyer repairs gas and electric heaters, windows, kerosene heaters and pumps.

The mix of merchandise and service has worked.

"We've got some real loyal customers," Linnemeyer said. Some have been shopping at Linnemeyer's for three generations. And despite the depressed farm economy, sales and customer traffic is up this year over 1985, he said.

Oldest railroad being consolidated into parent

BALTIMORE (AP) — The historic Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, the nation's oldest, is being eliminated as a separate business and consolidated into its parent company's transportation division, the company announced.

CSX Corp. will also consolidate the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway into the division, CSX Transportation, as part of an overall restructuring of the company.

The consolidation means the company will surrender the B&O Railroad charter, which has been in existence since 1827. The decision will cost CSX an estimated $3 million a year through loss of partial state and city tax exemptions, the company said, but it will save operating costs.

The distinctive logos of B&O, which includes a capitol dome, and C&O, which includes a cat sleeping on a pillow, will be erased from the company's equipment, said Thomas E. Hoppin, spokesman for the Richmond, Va.-based CSX.

The B&O name will continue in the B&O Railroad Museum in Baltimore, he said.

SHOW

The Oil Show executive added that publicity by the media had served to inform many people that there was space available at this year's show, and that when firms who had given up on getting into the show heard about it they made application.

Said Sparkman: "Many saw this as an opportunity to obtain a place in the Oil Show for years to come."

He said an oil firm could make more sales calls in four days of the Oil Show than if they had a salesman on the road for a year: "Upturn or downturn, there is no better place or more efficient way to make contacts than the Permian Basin Oil Show."

He added that with oil company mergers and retirement of some of the older personnel, the new group of managers and the younger people coming into the Permian Basin were finding the Oil Show an excellent training ground. "They can see about all the services and hardware available in the Permian Basin and the people who sell them," he said.

Oil and gas fundamentals, remote sensing classes set

The Permian Basin Graduate Center will offer courses on oil and gas fundamentals and geologic remote sensing.

"Oil & Gas Fundamentals II" will be Mondays, Oct. 27-Nov. 27 from 7 to 9:30 p.m. This informative basic course includes procedures necessary in an oil office. Topics include oil and gas and mineral leases, delay rentals, and division orders; oil and gas accounting; production reports, beginning and advanced. Instructors will be Yolane Hartsfield, owner, TYMD Production Service and Tom R. Scott, lawyer, Bullock, Scott & Neisig. Fee is $80 complete, $25 each session. Eligible for 10 CPE credits.

"Geologic Remote Sensing" is set for Tuesdays and Thursdays Oct. 28-Nov. 6 from 7 to 10 p.m. This course introduces remote sensing as an exploration technique that is a cost effective method for evaluating areas for potential hydrocarbon or mineral prospects. The first three classroom sessions will cover the principles and applications. The fourth session will be held at the office of Orion, Ltd., where students will see how Landsat data are digitally enhanced for exploration purposes. Actual examples of prospect generation will be shown to demonstrate the effectiveness of remote sensing as a tool in exploration. Dr. James R. Lucas, Orion, Ltd., Midland, will instruct. Fee is $150, $15 for those unemployed after Dec. 31, 1985.

Keach

Q. Please tell me everything about Stacy Keach.
Lana Lamb
Junction City, Ohio

A. He's 45 (born June 2, 1941), one of two sons of Stacy Keach Sr. and Mary Cain Peckham Keach, both actors. He was born in Savannah, Ga., where his father was then a drama teacher at Armstrong Junior College, and raised in Hollywood, where his father became a studio dialogue coach.

Stacy Jr. realized early that he wanted to follow his parents into the profession and be great at it. He wanted to play the types of roles that his idol Laurence Olivier played. His parents, however, wanted to spare him the up-and-down life of an actor and urged him to become a lawyer instead.

He compromised and began to study economics at the University of California at Berkeley but midway through, switched to drama and English. During his summer vacations, he established his preference further, by appearing at the Ashland, Ore., Shakespeare Festival.

Following graduation, then, his parents weren't surprised when he moved on to the Yale School of Drama. He stayed a year, appeared next with Joseph Papp's New York Shakespeare Festival and then resumed his studies at the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Arts on a Fulbright Scholarship. While in London, he met Olivier, who encouraged him to become a character actor. When he returned to the United States, that's what he did.

His stage break occurred in 1967 with the off-Broadway satire "Macbird!" His performance won him a slew of awards and led to appearances later that year in the plays "We Bombed in New Haven," and the Yale Drama School Repertory Theater's "Coriolanus."

The next year, he starred in "Falstaff, then "Peer Gynt" with the New York Shakespeare Festival, followed by "Indians" and "Long Day's Journey Into Night" on Broadway. He also began to appear in movies: "The Heart Is a Lonely Hunter," "End of the Road," "Brewster McCloud," "Doc," "The Life and Times of Judge Roy Bean," "The New Centurions," "Fat City," "The Long Riders," and more recently, "That Championship Season."

He's also done a lot of TV: "The Blue and the Gray," "Princess Daisy," "Mistral's Daughter," "Intimate Strangers" and the "Mike Hammer" series. Currently, he's in production on "Hammer" and during that show's hiatus next spring plans to star in a miniseries based on the life and marriages of writer Ernest Hemingway.

He's been married four times. Current wife is Polish actress Malgosia Tomassi whom he met when she appeared on "Mike Hammer." And, as you're probably aware, he spent six months in a British jail for cocaine possession last year. He now spends much of his time in anti-drug-abuse efforts.

Broderick

Q. I want to know about Matthew Broderick.
Vanessa G.
Pharr, Texas

A. He's 24, one of three children of the late actor James Broderick and his artist wife, Patsy, and was born and raised in New York. To get his kids out of the city during the summer, the elder Broderick always took them with him on his tours in summer stock and it was on one such tour that Matthew first realized that he might become an actor.

To that end, he attended New York's Walden School because it had a renowned theater department. He was afraid to try acting at first, however, so he channeled his energy into sports. When a knee injury sidelined his sports activities, he finally threw himself into acting — and did terrifically well.

After graduation, he got an acting job immediately in the play "Valentine's Day" at the HB Studio. In it he co-starred, the only time, with his father. Several months later, he was cast in his first film, "No Small Affair," which was to star Sally Field and directed by Martin Ritt, her director in "Norma Rae." Ritt's subsequent illness forced the postponement of the film (it was later made with a different cast) and that disappointment seemed to set off a string of others. He spent a year auditioning for roles that he didn't get.

His luck changed, however, in 1981 when he was cast as the adopted gay son in the play "Torch Song Trilogy." It brought him to the attention of Neil Simon who was then casting a play, "Brighton Beach Memoirs," and a movie, "Max Dugan Returns." Broderick auditioned and got both parts on the same day. "Brighton Beach" won him a Tony, "Max Dugan" brought him a film career, which has now also included "Ladyhawke," "1918," "WarGames," "Valentine's Day," "Master Harold and the Boys" on TV, and the recent "Ferris Bueller's Day Off."

Next up is "Project X" in which he plays a pilot assigned to a secret military project involving chimps. It's due out next spring.

Willis

Q. Please help. Did Bruce Willis star as a character named Tony on a "Miami Vice" episode? I say no. My son says yes. There's money on this one.
Marie Armato
Richland, N.J.

A. Pay up. According to the show's casting director, he played a character named Tony Dee in an episode called "Three Eyed Turtle."

Q. Is Dick Van Dyke doing any TV?
F.L.
Odessa, Texas

A. Trying to. He appeared in the premiere episode of the series "Matlock" and is currently talking to writers and production companies about doing another series on his own. The concept, however, hasn't been ironed out yet, so it will be a while before you see anything.

Smith

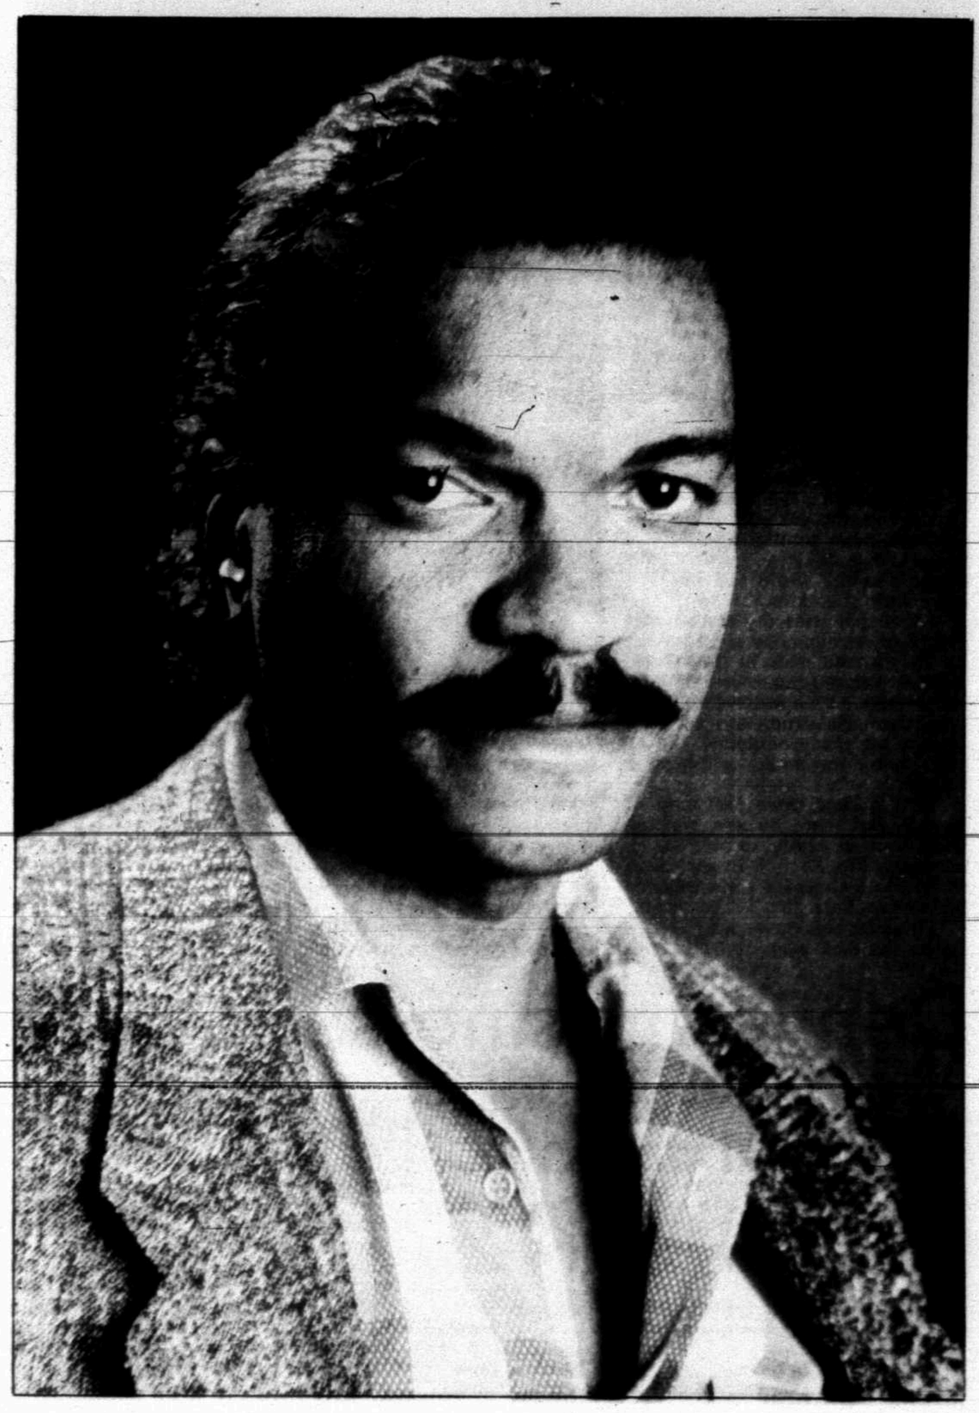

Q. What will Rex Smith be doing next? He's great.
Lori Rosenan
Modesto, Calif.

A. Broadway, it seems. He's scheduled to start performances this month in an off-Broadway musical called "Brownstone," which details the stories of five people living in a New York brownstone. If all goes according to plan, the show should move to Broadway in December. He's also having discussions with various record companies looking to revive his recording career.

Billy Dee Williams

Billy Dee Williams has just finished filming "Number One With a Bullet," with Robert Carradine, an action-adventure film about two hard-nosed narcotic agents investigating a murder.

By JANE ARDMORE
King Features

"My whole life I've been surrounded by women," he says, turning his sleek head and dark glasses from side to side in disbelief. "My mother, my sister, my grandmother — my father had a tough time with me. I was so spoiled. And then three wives. Always women in my life, always women."

Today he's living with his exquisite Japanese wife, Teruko; his stepdaughter, 24-year-old Miyako; his adored 13-year-old daughter, Hankao; Lulu the poodle; and four female cats; all of which his wife and daughters brought home to surprise the head of the house, Billy Dee Williams.

"These women of mine go out shopping. They always stop at the pet store, fall in love with some small animal and without a word to me, bring it home. They know me. They know I'll object — that doesn't seem to mean anything to anyone — and then I'm going to fall in love with the animal too," he confesses.

"It's a chaotic household. I'm surrounded by beautiful women with beautiful names. Teruko means 'little wind,' Hankao means 'flower,' Miyako means 'temple.' The breeze, the flower, the temple; but you never get the feeling of dreamy stuff. I love women, but they're very difficult. They have their own way of looking at things; they are noisy." And in mock sorrow, he leans back in his chair as if weary from a long day's work.

Well, it has been pretty hard work lately. He and Robert Carradine have just finished filming "Number One With a Bullet," an action-adventure film about two hard-nosed narcotic agents investigating a murder (to be released in early 1987).

"Bobby's a lot of fun to work with," Williams says. "He's the third Carradine I've worked with. I've worked with Keith, and David and I were in 'Oceans of Fire' which ran on CBS in September, and I recently met their father, John. Quite a character. Yeah, well; all actors are nuts. All actors are crazy. If you don't believe it, look at me."

...Very handsome black shirt with a white metallic stripe, handsome white pants with a black metallic stripe...relaxed, handsome, fearless on screen, this is a man a with great deal of authority, a powerful presence.

From "The Last Angry Man" and "The Out of Towners" with Jack Lemmon, his stage role as Martin Luther King in "I Have a Dream," through his co-starring with Diana Ross in "Lady Sings the Blues" and "Mahogany," he has conveyed strength and maturity.

In person, he looks much younger and a lot more laid back. "A walking absurdity," he says, laughing. "Like Grandmother used to say, 'He's acting the fool now.'" The fact is, Williams is a complicated man behind the smile and the dark glasses. "My favorite hangout is the Carter Sexton Gallery in Laurel Canyon where I buy all my supplies and yak art with the owner.

"I never did have any idea of going into this business," he says. "What I loved best from the time I was a little kid was art, painting. I sort of fell into this acting bit, or was pushed. As I told you, there's always been a woman. To begin with and chief influence: my mother. Naturally, because my mom was the best person in the entire universe, a super human being. Well, she introduced me to this business. She was an aspiring actress and was studying opera. She was working at the Lyceum Theater in New York, first as elevator operator, then as secretary, and they were looking for a little kid for a Kurt Weil musical with his wife Lotte Lenya. I was 6.

"The audition was totally ridiculous. They had me walk across the stage, once, twice, then I wanted to do it again. They wouldn't let me, so I cried. Hard. You should hear my mom tell the story. I got my way. To shut me up, they let me walk again. I sang a chant, 'Make way for the duchess, for her graciousness, the duchess.'

"No. I wasn't scared. When you're a kid you're not scared. I'd stick my tongue out at kids in the audience. I knew everybody's lines. Melville Cooper used to hate me 'cause I'd steal scenes. Jack Cassidy was in that musical. He used to give me some of the white stuff he put on his teeth. Big musical, resounding flop. It lasted two months, but I had a taste of something."

What Williams actually thought about as he got into his teens was to be an architect or a city planner. "I have," he explains, "great admiration for people who think on broad, high levels. And to create an environment for people is such a wonderful idea. But I guess I was destined..."

A junior-high teacher, impressed by his painting, recommended him for the entrance exams at the High School of Music and Art. "My sister and I both ended up there. My sister, Loretta, is my twin. And she's been a great influence. She's eight minutes older and I've always looked up to her — not because of the eight minutes but because she is such a genuine individual. All the women in our family are strong individuals and interesting people. 'Lady,' I call her, and Lady always looked after me. She was the balanced one.

"While I was studying art, she was studying ballet. She would have been great, but she had a rheumatic heart and had to give up dancing. No matter what kind of illness she had, she was working two jobs and going to NYU. She's always amazing to me. We're very close."

While he was still in high school, director John Stix recommended that he study acting. "I thought acting was silly," admits today's Williams. "When I got out of high school, I got a scholarship to the Academy of Fine Arts and Design, but I needed money to buy canvases and paints so I started doing extra work on television. Destiny again. I got involved.

"I'm part of the tail end of the beatnik generation, so there's a certain attitude: you're a beatnik for most of your life, you know. I didn't know much about acting. I didn't care that much. I'd go to the Actor's Studio but just as an observer.

"I started getting Broadway plays at a point where I really didn't know much about acting. I was just going on instinct. I did 'Taste of Honey' in the theater and almost at the same time, a friend said, 'Hey, you want a job acting in a movie?' and I said, 'OK.' The movie was 'The Last Angry Man,' a great book. Columbia was doing the movie with Paul Muni. She sent me over to meet the director, Danny Mann. He sat me down and after we'd talked for an hour, he said, 'I want you to play the role of Josh Quincy.' Just like that. I was 21, almost 22. It was the first time I'd ever been away from home."

In the following year, almost everything happened at once. He got married. A girl he'd known in school. "I was too young, of course. So that didn't work. But marriage is just something you're brought up with. The idea of marriage, and a family. I'm actually the kind of man who shouldn't get married because I'm a bit of a problem.

"But something great came from that marriage. My son, Cory, now 25, and a jazz musician. He has his own band and plays bass guitar. He also works on the side as a contractor.

Halloween comes early to house in the woods

By ROSEMARY BRECKLER
King Features

Faith 'n begorrah — Halloween arrived almost two months ago at my house — the lights flickering day and night like lightning bugs and the ceiling fans in my bathrooms screaming like banshees while the refrigerator groaned like an old man snoring. And me without a drop of Irish blood in me.

And why do I drag the Irish into this, you wonder? Well, it was the Irish, fleeing from the Great Potato Famine, who brought Halloween to our bonnie shores. We were rather dour-spirited folks back then — hard workers with the church pouring cold water on most fun.

But once we met up with Halloween, we quickly adopted it because it gave us a chance to dress up, pretend to be somone else and have fun in the dark or play tricks on those who had offended us.

For over 2,000 years Halloween has been a festivity of power and magic. It was invented by the Celts who lived in the British Isles 20 centuries ago, many of who were the ancestors of the Irish. Way back then it began as an attempt to fight the evil spirits who seemed to be stealing the light from the sun, and the life from the fields.

One of their special gods was named Samhaim, the god of death, and the Celts believed that on October 31st each year he brought all the dead back to the earth with him to their New Year's celebration. To fool him (and protect themselves), they dressed up in costumes of fur and animal's heads, then built large bonfires and huddled around the fire in fear. It was the birth of Halloween.

Down through the years, costumes began representing one power over another — today the favorite costumes of children still represent power in the form of witches, ghosts, skeletons, fairies, he-men or (more recently) Masters of the Universe. They all give little children, for that one night, the belief that they're magical creatures in control, especially since it's the one night they can revel in the dark and scare and fool everyone.

When the Romans conquered the Celts, they brought with them their own festival for Pomona, the goddess of fruit. They gave gifts of her apples to the gods of fire and rain to thank them for not ruining their fruit harvest. During the next 400 years, apples got wedded to Halloween.

The Irish also believed that black cats were people who had been placed under magical spells. They tied silver chains to the cats and posted them in churches to guard the treasures at night. Imagine wandering into an Irish church in the dark of Halloween and confronting two glowing amber eyes and a twinkling silver chain — apparently attached to nothing — that moved in the dark!

And then there was poor Jack. He was a very naughty fellow who liked to play so many tricks that when he died he went to hell. There (the Irish say) he continued to play so many tricks that the devil sent him out on Halloween with a lantern to roam the earth forever.

And the ghosts? The starving Irish peasants draped themselves in sheets during the bad times and visited the homes of the rich saying, "I'll leave you alone for a small gift of food or pence." The superstitious Irish were happy to give them a few small treats so they'd be off and gone.

In the early 1800s when the Great Potato Famine forced so many of the Irish to immigrate to the United States, they brought with them Halloween and their belief in ghosts, hobgoblins, black cats and "Jack of the lantern."

But it wasn't these hobgoblins who were haunting my woodsy home this summer. At first I thought it was my lamps — old, maybe jarred when I moveed. Then I thought I had bought bad bulbs. I replaced them three times. Still, it was twinkle-twinkle every light.

I called the builder. The superintendent and the electrician came, very polite, checked everything. "Must be fixed now," they said. Five minutes after they left, it started again.

All the lights in my house seemed dim — or was it my aged eyes? I bought more lamps. Suddenly one night, all the lights came on so brightly it was as if lightning was inside my house. After years of working as a reporter, I'd absorbed many bits of knowledge. I knew I had just had an electrical surge and that it could ruin all of my brand-new appliances. I called the utility company. They checked everything, they were very polite, then said, "Everything is OK."

An hour later, another surge.

I called again: The next day they put a recording voltmeter on my house for 48 hours. I looked over the service man's shoulder as he checked every socket in my house. My current was fluctuating from 80 to 128 volts. He said it was the builder's problem.

The next day the builder was back with his electrician. After three hours they assured me that everything was fixed. Thirty minutes later I pressed the button to close my electric garage door and blew my whole house, plus all the lampposts for some distance around me. I live on a corner, across the street from a dense woods. What a perfect night for Halloween!

WILLIAMS

Generally, most fellows the age I was, all of a sudden, there's a kid in your life, you panic. That was not the case with me. I was out on location and missed his birth. He was 5 weeks old when I first saw him, and it was love at first sight. I just held him on my arm, his head on my hand, his feet reaching to the inside of my elbow and I couldn't take my eyes off him. Unbelievable.

"Suddenly I had a friend for life. A responsibility, yeah. I mean, I've always felt like a mother and father. I always felt right with Cory. We grew up together, and it's still the same. I remember years ago seeing Paul Robeson and his son walking all the time in New York City. I loved that relationship, that complete devotion between two people.

"I have the same thing with my daughter. They are my children and that's it. I have total, complete responsibility so far as my children are concerned and nothing can ever change that. I am the father; nobody gets in the way of that and nothing that happens to a marriage can change that. It's the greatest relationship in the world, the one you have with your kids.

"I had that with my father, that complete devotion. He passed away in '75. He died back in New York, and he waited for me to get there before he died. I'll never forget him lying there. He was so thin, and he'd been a big man, invincible. We always thought nothing could happen to him.

"He'd worked three jobs most of his life; but there he was, slipping away from us, trying to pull the intravenous tubes out of his arms, and so glad to see me. His main concern had always been that I'd be secure.

"I'll never forget the time he saw me in my first play, and I'll never forget how he cried the night he saw 'Lady Sings the Blues.' I think he was crying because he was happy something was really happening for me. Maybe, too, he knew something was going wrong with him. I know one thing — I'm happy that I wrote him that letter six months before he died. I'd never written him in my life. We'd gone through a lot of frustration while I was growing up. I think lots of fathers and sons do. I loved my father, but I didn't think he always understood me. As I got older and began to understand his frustration because of what I myself was going through, I one day just sat down and wrote him this letter to express how much I loved him and that I understood his pain.

Billy Dee Williams and Robert Carradine star in "Number One With a Bullet."

"I tell everybody to this day, families should never leave anything unsaid. I've seen too many times, people passing away and things not cleared up. You have these irrevocable ties. There in the hospital as he was dying he held my mother's hand and said, 'What's my little girl going to do without me?' Such a beautiful moment between two people. I wonder if anyone would ever be there that way for me? They were definitely there for each other. They'd been married 35 years and had grown closer as time passed."

Williams agrees that in the real world those attitudes are changing, but in casting departments, people are still categorized. "She's not black enough to be black or not white enough to be white — that sort of thing. I had so much love as a kid it was ridiculous, but I was still angry about a lot of things, little things I saw going on in the street. Young people get angry; there are a lot of disenfranchised children. We live in a nice part of the world, preinsulated. But the other day, my son had to go on one of his jobs into a ghetto area. He said, 'My God, Dad, I couldn't believe it!'

"I can believe it. I've never been so aware of anger and of crime in my life as now. The world seems so uncertain. It's a time of transition. Nobody seems to have a vested interest. Men don't have the dignity they had years ago. It's that lack of feeling self worth today that causes people to have more psychological problems. It's lack of stability all the way down the line."

He continues, "Years ago when you saw a movie, if the bad guy committed a crime, he paid for it. Today, the good guy is also the bad guy. Everything sort of melds. It creates an uncertainty. People seem motivated by greed. Morality is put aside in favor of violence. We're beginning to accept that morality can be anyone's morality depending on who has the most power at the moment.

"And I'm caught in the same little web. I sit here pontificating but I also have to make a living and I make it doing what I like — acting. What I try to do — in 'Number One with a Bullet,' for example, Bobby and I are good guys, and we're out to get the bad guys, but we are a little crazy and a little wild and I try to mitigate the violence by looking right off the screen to the kids in the audience as if to say, 'What am I doing with this gun?' The fact is, I'm happier playing the trumpet in the nightclub sequences...I'm studying the trumpet now, just went in and bought one for myself."

He is obviously a man with a conscience, and his greatest concern is his young daughter, Hankao. "She is quite beautiful. She'll be a lovely woman," he says. "And you know I'm concerned. I want her to become someone who doesn't have to depend on anyone, who can walk out of any undesirable situation, who can take care of herself. I know how guys use women. Sex, sex, sex. I'm a man, and I understand these things.

"Luckily, women have come a long way. My daughter is not a follower. She's not affected by peer pressure. She's not the kind of kid who feels she has to do what the other girls are doing. My son has always been the same way. They each are the kind that pick one friend. One on one. So far, so good.

"But I worry. More about my daughter than my son because I know the score. Luckily, like her mother, she is a quiet person and very cerebral, my baby. She also reminds me so much of myself when I was a kid. She can sit in her room and keep busy and doesn't need a lot of people. Always you'll find her busy doing something."

He continues, "She's very bright and writes beautifully. She really surprises me. Kids don't necessarily talk a lot, but read some of the things she writes. The other day I picked up a poem she was writing about old ladies with arthritis. How does she know about old ladies and arthritis? But there it was in the poem, so clear, so feeling. Her understanding was palpable. I view this child of mine as something special. She's going to offer something interesting to the world.

"She has one great advantage, my baby — she comes from strength. My wife is strong. My mother and my sister are strong women. They live out here in California together, my mother and sister and my sister's children. My mother has never had another man since my father died. My sister has been divorced and has never had another (man) since. They are both deeply religious, Jehovah's Witnesses, and religion and the joy of life sustains them. We are still very, very close.

"Sometimes I say to my twin sister, 'Lady, how can you live like this; have you no desires?' And she says, 'Billy, you are the one who got all of that desire stuff when we were born. I was only interested in marriage to have children. That was it.'"

"Can you fathom that? I never will understand women. But I'm surrounded, and on the whole, I guess there's a reason. In this business I meet an awful lot of people and you're never sure what the score is. Then you come home and find your wife and the girls on the their hands and knees making a great fuss over a new cat. No one pays any attention to you, no lights, no camera, not a word to tell you how great you are, you might as well be selling shoes. You know you're back in the real world. I love women, but..."

Denver businesses capitalizing on 'Dynasty' popularity

DENVER (AP) — Poor Blake Carrington, his dynasty is crumbling.

His oil company is in financial straits, his hotel, La Mirage, has burned down, and his ex-wife, Alexis, has moved into the family mansion.

Maybe Blake should move to the real Denver. He still wouldn't be able to make it in oil, but he probably could make a fortune in T-shirts, postcards, restaurants and travel agencies capitalizing on the hit TV series, "Dynasty."

At Dynasty Travel, owners have nicknamed their computer Blake and tried to hire a woman named Alexis to work for them.

"Nobody ever forgets us," said general manager Jackie Payne. The travel agency planned its name around the show and uses the Denver skyline as its logo.

"It's incredible," she said. "We call tour companies on the East and West Coast and they say, 'Oh, you're called Dynasty and you're in Denver.'"

Lou Cecchet (pronounced sashay), a partner in Dynasty Tours, said European wholesalers suggested the name of his two-year-old company.

"The Europeans have looked Colorado up on the map, and they want to come here and see it for themselves," he said. "They love dude ranches because they want to see how the rich people rough it."

Cecchet said tourists are not as interested in finding the actual buildings used in the program as they are in getting an idea of the state itself.

"They realize most of the buildings are a Hollywood set, but they want to see ordinary people and the mountains and aspens," he said. "Europeans are researchers, and they like places like the Mesa Verde because they want to get some idea of the old history of Colorado."

It's just as well Cecchet's tourists aren't looking for the Carrington mansion and Carrington's oil company in Denver because they don't exist.

Although Denver residents have been known to take visitors by imposing homes they swear are used in the show, the real mansion is in San Francisco, said Tim King, the show's associate producer.

The building used for outside shots of Carrington's oil company, Denver Carrington, is located in downtown Los Angeles.

"I've been lobbying for support to put a crew together and come back to Denver and get more shots, but the money just isn't there right now," King said. "The opening shots of Denver were made five years ago. Unfortunately, downtown Denver has changed during that time."

Mike Creeden's two Papple Mousse card shops opened this Dynasty season by selling sweatshirts which bear the names Denver Carrington and Colbyco, Alexis' company. The shirts sell for $18.99.

"Most of the shirts are sent out of state," said Creeden, who bought the rights to use T-shirt artwork created by a Denver businessman. "They're good conversation pieces, good gifts."

"The Europeans...love dude ranches because they want to see how the rich people rough it...They realize most of the buildings are a Hollywood set, but they want to see ordinary people and the mountains and aspens...They like places like the Mesa Verde because they want to get some idea of the old history of Colorado."

Lou Cecchet of Dynasty Tours

Although Carrington's hotel, La Mirage, burned this season, Creeden is thinking of bringing back the La Mirage shirt. "It's popular because nearly every member of the cast has either managed it or worked there at some point in the show."

Watching "Dynasty" is so popular at Garbo's bar that owners have set up three televisions. "They buy champagne and toast with Alexis. Lots of them get dressed up. It gets very campy in here," bartender Mike Gambino said.

John Ross renamed his restaurant Carrington's of Denver when he bought the business 10 months ago and has named each of the restaurant's six dining rooms for members of the cast. Their pictures are on the walls.

"The most popular room is the Blake room," Ross said. "Everybody comes to us from all different countries because they watch the show on TV."

John Kluge, a former Denver resident, started to insert weekly summaries of the show in Frontier Airlines' computers when he worked in its marketing department. Travel agencies across the country used them in customer newsletters, he said.

When a season cliffhanger left Krystle and Alexis trapped in a burning cabin, Kluge asked travel agencies how the two heroines would fare. "I got more than 17,000 responses, including some from Hawaii and Alaska," he said.

Continuing the updates was a condition of Kluge's employment when he left Frontier and became director of advertising and sales promotion at TranStar Airlines, a Houston-based carrier.

"When I was in Denver, we'd have dinner parties every Wednesday to watch Dynasty," Kluge said. "Friends who weren't invited stopped speaking to me. Sometimes I feel like I've created a monster."

HALLOWEEN

They worked until midnight but couldn't restore my power without getting arcing which could set the house on fire. I slept all night with candles burning — my house smelled like a church (amazing how much light one beeswax candle can give).

The next day they opened a metal cave down the street, ran an umbilical cord down into it, brought me electricity from the main feed line. There were eight men here for the ceremony. They held a long meeting of several hours on my flower beds — which are now print rugs — trying to establish the problem and blame. Present were attorneys for the utility company and the builder. Just when they were starting to agree on something, they received a call and all their men and trucks rushed away. "Down power lines!" they shouted as they disappeared into the sunset.

Exhausted, I started to bed early. I hadn't slept the night before. At 9:30 a woman from down the road, smelling of alcohol, rang my doorbell. "You know that's our electricity they're running into your house," she said.

"But that's all right — we'll figure out the bill later." I tried to explain to her that it wasn't, but it was like trying to talk to a robot. I went to bed. At the first crack of dawn I called the utility company and they were there by 8:30.

"Some sucker threw your main circuit breaker on the outside of your garage," they told me. "You'll have to put a padlock on it." And my clocks had stopped at 10:15 p.m.

As I'm writing this five days later, a young woman is out there with a jackhammer, wearing a helmet, safety vest and shoes that look like they were designed for walking on the moon. She's excavating a long trench to pull up and replace my sick cable.

While I'm watching her, I'm sorting out soap stubs. Guess who I'm going to start with on Halloween?

'Jumping Jack:' No flash in the pan

By MYRA LEE SALCEDO
Lifestyle Writer

Salcedo

A comic adventure, "Jumpin' Jack Flash," Whoopi Goldberg's first comedy film is somewhat illogical. But Whoopi proves that as an actress, she is no flash in the pan.

Showing another side of her than we saw in "The Color Purple," her film debut that she received an oscar nomination for, "Jumpin' Jack Flash" presents more of the old Whoopi that fans have come to know.

Whoopi plays Terry Doolittle, a bright young computer operator in a dull bank. She stands out in the staid bank like a bag lady at the stock market and her desk looks like the toy department of a Bargain City basement.

She breaks up the monotony of transferring money by punctuating her transactions with personal communications such as: a Yankee Pot Roast recipe to a Japanese correspondent, trading Bruce Springsteen tapes with a London customer and advice to another in France on how to handle his love life.

Just when her boss demands that she cease sending personal messages, Doolittle receives a request for help from a mystery man that changes her life.

Carol Kane Cynthia, Doolittle's ditzy promiscuous friend has some delightful moments, but it is Whoopi who carries all the humor. Whether she is deciphering a code from Mick Jagger's "Jumpin' Jack Flash" song while prancing around her apartment doing Jaggaeresque movements or sliding down the banister at her bank after being shot full of truth serum, Whoopi is a "hoot."

Her success is all the more notable given the lack of support from the director (Penny Marshall's debut) and the scriptwriters. There are a lot of holes in this espionage story.

The movie is R-rated for the four-letter words peppered thoughout Whoopi's dialogue to portray her street language and tough image. Fans who have followed her on Home Box Office (HBO) specials probably won't be offended at the constant stream of profanity.

The only low point of the film is ill-fitting slapstick scenes involving the villains. That they happen to get a tow truck in time to hook Doolittle's phone booth and drag it for blocks without harming her is cartoonish at best.

The pacing is good and the acting is fine. "Jumpin' Jack Flash" is entertaining but undemanding. The ending is predictable but still satisfying because — after all — we still want Whoopi to "get her man."

"Jumpin' Jack Flash," rated R for a constant stream of profanity, is playing at the North Park Cinemas.

'Peggy Sue' takes trip through nostalgia

From the moment the opening credits come on — script on a pink background reminiscent of diaries, yearbooks and penny loafers — you know that Frances Coppola is about to take you on a romp through nostalgia.

"Peggy Sue" was touted as a winner even before it was chosen to end the New York Film Festival recently and it looks like Coppola's latest film will be big at the box office this time.

After a string of slow box office movers ("Cotton Club," "Rumblefish," "The Outsiders," and "One From the Heart") it looks like Coppola has lightened up. "Peggy Sue," starring the irrepressible Kathleen Turner, is as charming and delightful as "Romancing the Stone" or "Back to the Future." In fact, "Peggy Sue" borrows the same premise of time travel from "Back to the Future" and asks the same question: if we could go back in time what would we do differently?

A former prom queen, Peggy Sue is whisked away from a 25-year class reunion when she faints after being crowned queen again. When she returns to her high school days, the fun begins.

Even though Peggy Sue is older and wiser, she still has to deal with teen-agers, especially the younger version of her estranged husband. There are some golden moments — Peggy Sue singing "My Country Tis Of Thee" full volume in a high school classroom to the chagrin of her fellow students is hilarious.

Barry Miller as the "four-eyed" nerd who she befriends, but ignored as a teen-ager, gives a wonderful performance, just as he did in "Fame." Joan Allen as Peggy's friend is bubbly and believable, also.

Nicolas Cage as her TV pitchman husband ("I'm married to the guy with the lowest price in town!") and high school sweetheart, Charlie Bodell, has ditched her for a younger woman before the class reunion.

Will Peggy Sue change destiny and marry the avant-garde poet (Kevin J. O'Conner), the nerd or will she re-marry her previous choice?

Those are the questions that keep the plot moving. The only flaw is when our heroine visits her grandparents and her grandfather belongs to a lodge that not only wears bizarre hats but just happens to practice time-travel rituals. But before things begin to slide too far downhill, Coppola saves the film by bringing in the real emotional conflict between Peggy Sue and Charlie.

The period detail is what makes the movie so charming along with the humorous human touches. When asked if he could go back in time, change history, change anything, Peggy's grandfather said, "I guess if I had to do it all again, I'da taken better care of my teeth."

Of course, everyone knows that the 50s were never as ideal as portrayed in most films, but it is fun to pretend for a while.

"Peggy Sue Got Married," rated PG-13 for sexual innuendo, (there is no nudity), is playing at the UA Cinemas on Cuthbert.

'Deadly Friend' has unparalleled violence

Once again Wes Craven brings one of his darkest nightmares to the screen with gore galore and buckets of blood in "Deadly Friend." Based on the novel by Diana Henstell, the plot consists of a teen-age genius who re-animates his girlfriend after she is killed by her psychotic and alcoholic father.

The boy genius, Paul, (Matthew Labourteaux), is not convincing as a troubled genius and the chemistry between him and his girlfriend, Samatha, (Kristy Swanson), not only doesn't exist, it just doesn't make sense. The problem is that the script is terribly lacking. Samatha, who should be depressed or angry for being alone in a frightening relationship, pops off with such gems as "Sometimes I want to run a truck over his face, but he is still my father."

Paul, the Boy Wonder has created a robot, BB, who seems like an obnoxious talking vacuum cleaner, but becomes one of the villains. However, not before we are afforded views of decapitations, brain surgery and the like.

Craven's last movie, remember, was "Nightmare on Elm Street," and with "Deadly Friend," he has attempted to bring on another tour de force of inane violence. "Nightmare on Elm Street," however, was much better. Craven should stick to horror and leave the slasher movies to the "Friday the 13th" folks.

Apparently the slasher films are where the box office receipts are, though. Kids in the audience were screaming like they were on the downhill side of a roller coaster. Surprisingly, there was no sex in "Deadly Friend," usually a common element in the slasher exploitation genre.

Instead, unparalleled violence was opted for, what with exploding heads that made "Scanners" look like the "Pee Wee Herman Show." The only golden moment is Ann Ramsel as Elvira, the alleged crazy woman on the block, who actually seems more real than anyone else. But, alas, she isn't on the screen long before she gets "offed" like all the other interesting characters.

"Deadly Friend," rated R for graphic violence is playing at the Midland Park Mall Cinemas.

ODESSA — The Globe of the Great Southwest and the Odessa College Jazz Ensemble will present the "Commodores," the U.S. Navy Band's jazz ensemble from Washington, in a free concert at the Globe at 8 p.m. Nov. 1.

The Navy Band Commodores features 18 top jazz and big band musicians offering a mixture of styles ranging from the authentic sounds of the swing era to contemporary high-energy music.

The Nov. 1 concert will feature such well known tunes as "Be-Bop Charlie," "Malaguena," "3-Ton Blues," "Shiny Stockings" and a special rendention of "Stars and Stripes Forever." Other numbers include "Doxy," "Love for Sale," "Wide Open Spaces" and "The Battle Hymn of the Republic."

Admission to the concert is free; however, tickets are required. For free general admission tickets mail a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Navy Commodores Concert, Globe Theatre, 2368 Shakespeare Road, Odessa, Texas 79761.

Tickets may also be picked up at the Globe Box Office from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Any unclaimed seats will be available to non-ticket holders at curtain time. For more information call 1-332-1586.

Violinst will perform

ODESSA — Acclaimed by the New York Post as "a brilliant young artist at the start of a major career," violinist Robert McDuffie will demonstrate his talents in concert at 8 p.m. Oct. 25 in the U.T. Permian Basin Performing Arts Center.

In addition to works by Sergie Prokofiev, Antonin Dvorak and Fritz Kreisler, McDuffie will perform Beethoven's Sonata No. 4 in A minor.

McDuffie has performed with such orchestras as the Chicago Symphony, Cincinnati Symphony, Boston Pops, American Symphony, Czech Philharmonic and the Danish Nartional Orchestra. He made his London debut this past season.

The violinist has performed in Europe, South America and the Soviet Union. In the United States, he has played at New York's Metropolitan Museum and the Library of Congress, Washington, D.C. He has frequently collaborated with his legnedary colleague, Yehundi Menuhin, in chamber music performances at Carnegie Hall and at Lincoln Center on the Great Performers Series.

The performance is open to season ticket holders. General admission is $8 and $5 for senior citizens and students. For more information call the Office of Student Life, 1-367-2136.

A.D. Players to perform

ODESSA — The A.D. Players's final performance of "John, His Story," a new play by Jeannette Clift George, at the Globe Theatre is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. today. Based in Houston, the A.D. Players area a professional Christian acting company found by George 20 years ago.

"John, His Story" is a play performed by four actors creating over 25 characters from the New Testament book of John.

From the confrontation between Nicodemus and Jesus to the feeding of 5,00 with a little boy's lunch, the play depicts the "mystery, excitement, wonder and humor surrounding the life and actions of Jesus Christ," according to David Weaver, a spokesman for the Globe Theatre.

Admission is $7 for adults and $4 for students and senior citizens. For reservations and information, call the Globe at 1-332-1586.

Jazz band to perform

BIG SPRING — The United States Navy Jazz Band, Port Authority, will perform a free concert at 2 p.m. today in the Municipal Auditorium in downtown Big Spring. The Concert is sponsored by the Big Spring Herald and the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce. The Port Authority is a modern jazz sextet and is based in Washington, D.C.

Port Authority will be playing a variety of music including tunes by Gershwin, Steely Dan, Chuck Mangione, Al Jarreau, and Ray Charles. The concert is free but tickets are required and area available at the Big Spring Herald and the Big Spring Area Chamber of Commerce office. Seating is by general admission.

Umlauf works exhibited

ODESSA — The Third Floor Gallery at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin is hosting an exhibit by artist Karl Umlauf through Oct. 31.

Umlauf has had one-man shows across the country and has won a number of awards including the 1985 Distinguished faculty Teaching Award from the Association of College Teachers at East Texas State University. Umlauf was artist in residence at Indiana University, Bloomington, and has received several research grants at East Texas State, where he now teaches.

Klingler works at bank

Nancy Klingler, formerly of Midlnad and a current resident of Cloudcroft, N.M., is showing a selection of dry brush watercolors in the lobby of RepublicBank First National through Oct. 31.

The exhibit features western and Indian still lifes.

A frequent visitor at the Lambshead Ranch in Shakelford County, Ms. Klingler painted a series of wildlife and landscape ranch scenes. She has also sketched and painted extensively in the Davis Mountains.

Her subjects presently include mountain scenes around Cloudcroft and sites on the historic Three Rivers ranch. She has also been commissioned to paint the Mescalero Indian dancers.

Ms. Klingler has studied with Ed Whitney, Ronald thompson, Ramon Froman, Zolten Szabo, George Post and Robert Ward.

Arizonan's work exhibited

An exhibit of recent works by Joe Abbrescia, Scottsdale, Ariz., is on display at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave., through Nov. 16.

This is the first major exhibition of Abbrescia's work in this region. His works have been viewed here at the Nita stewart Haley Memorial Library's Contemporary Western Art Show and Sale.

The museum is open Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sunday 2 to 5 p.m. There is no admission charge.

Cellist to perform with symphony, chorale

Cellist Sharon Robinson will perform with the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale Tuesday in Midland and Thursday in Odessa for the second subscription concert of the season.

Miss Robinson will perform Tchaikovsky's Variations on a Rocco Theme and will be joined by her brother, cellist Keith "Robby" Robinson, a member of the Thouvenel String Quartet and principal cellist with the symphony, for Vivaldi's Concerto in G minor for Two Cellos.

The Midland performance is sponsored by the Midland Reporter-Telegram.

In addition to her performance with the symphony, Miss Robinson will also perform as guest artist with the Thouvenel String Quartet for its opening concert Wednesday. Tickets for the 8 p.m. performance, which will be held at the Allison Fine Arts Auditorium, Midland College, may be purchased at the door.

Miss Robinson made her professional debut with the Houston Symphony when she was 14. Her appearances in the United States with major orchestras have included those of Houston, Pittsburgh, Baltimore and New Orleans and with such chamber orchestras as those of St. Paul, Ohio, and San Diego.

She has appeared in recital in most major cities in the United States and gives solo New York recitals on a regular basis. She has also performed often at such festivals as New York's Mostly Mozart, Spoleto and Marlboro and with such celebrated musicians as Rudolf serkin, Itzhak Perlman, Pinchas Zukerman, Jean-Pierre Rampal and Mstislav Rostropovich.

In Europe, she has appeared with The Scottish Chamber Orchestra as well as with The London Symphony Orchestra, The English Chamber Orchestra and others.

She regularly makes several U.S. and European tours each season as a member of the Kalichstein/Laredo/Robinson Trio. Her recording career includes solo recitals for Grenadilla Records and Moss Music, Vivaldi sonatas with Anthony Newman; a duo recital with Jaime Laredo for Second Hearing Records; and two new recordings with The Trio - the beethoven triple concerto with the English Chamber Orchestra for Chandos and works by Mozart and Dvorak for Second Hearing.

Among the awards and honors she has won are the Pro Musicis Foundation award, the Leventritt Foundation Award, the Avery Fisher Recital Award and the Piatigorsky Award from John Hopkins University.

Her television appearances have included The tonight Show with Johnny Carson, The Today Show with Gene Shalit, a profile by CBS Sunday Morning and The Today in New York Show with Ponchiette Pierce.

Single admission tickets are available at Texas Commerce Bank, Midland and Odessa, or at the door. Tickets are priced at $12 reserved, $9 general admission and $4 for students and senior citizens. For group discount rates or more information call the symphony, 563-5269.

Concert time for both symphony performances is 8 p.m.

Brussels sprouts haven't topped vegetable hit parade

By TED LARSEN
King Features

Of the many food topics I've written about, cabbage was my first. I picked it for a kind of shock value. Who, I thought, has loving or literary remarks for the lowly cabbage, king of peasant food?

From that humble beginning, the time has come to discuss the king of cabbages, the delicate and well-born Brussels sprout. While the cabbage family has some interesting and diverse members, such as kale, kohlrabi and cauliflower, none can compare with the Brussels sprout for pure perfection in miniature.

They look like the work of an artist who sculpts tiny vegetable models. Slice one carefully in half and you'll see mini leaves curled tightly against each other in regal shades from cream to bright green, just like their peasant cousin.

Brussels sprouts also have a regal but unusual history. They were born in what is now Belgium during the 13th century. The early Belgians must have been proud of their botanical creation because the strict regulations for the Brussels vegetable market written in 1213 mention the exotic sprouts, setting limits on their size and shape.

It appears they became much in vogue during the Middle Ages, and were featured in two royal wedding feasts by the Dukes of Burgundy during the 15th century. I hope the marriages fared better than Brussels sprouts because little else is written of them for the next 300 years until they appeared in a 1796 English cookbook. Since that time they have been considerably more popular in the United Kingdom than here in the colonies. That's a pity.

Thomas Jefferson planted his first sprouts at Monticello just as the War of 1812 was breaking out. The food-loving Jefferson had discovered them while he was minister to France in the late 1780s. He later made a hobby of ransacking the gardens and farms of Europe for new vegetable delights during several return trips to the continent.

Since the days of Jefferson, Brussels sprouts have never been at the top of the vegetable hit parade. That's unfortunate, because properly selected and prepared, they are delicious. Be certain to trim away outside leaves and carve a deep "X" in the stem end to insure thorough internal cooking. For those efforts you'll be rewarded with a vegetable that's a good source of fiber, vitamins A, B-2, niacin and C.

This glorious combination brings together three very complementary flavors: the richness of the Brussels sprouts, the smoothness of potato and the brightness of lemon. Each one keeps the other two under control. Delicious.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS AND POTATO SOUP

2 tablespoons unsalted butter
½ cup onions, chopped
½ cup celery, chopped
2 tablespoons flour
2 cloves garlic, minced
1 cup potato, cooked and cubed
½ teaspoon dried thyme
4 cups chicken broth, fresh or canned
1 pound Brussels sprouts, peeled, trimmed and halved
1 teaspoon lemon zest, grated
Salt, pepper

Melt butter in a saute pan over medium heat. Add onions and celery. Cook until just lightly softened, about 5 minutes. Stir in flour, cook 2 minutes more. Add garlic, potatoes, thyme and stock. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat to a simmer and continue cooking, covered for about 7 minutes. Add sprouts and lemon zest, increase heat and cook uncovered for 15 minutes or until Brussels sprouts are tender. Puree in a food processor, blender or food mill until coarsely blended. Do not overprocess. Soup should not be completely smooth. Season with salt and pepper. Reheat and serve.

Hints:

This makes an excellent cream soup by the addition of ½-1 cup heavy cream after blending and before reheating.

A few strands of lemon zest atop each serving make a nice finish for this hearty soup.

Lemon zest is the very outer part of the lemon peel that contains the bulk of lemon oil. Try to avoid the bitter "albedo" that lies below.

This simple sweet-and-sour recipe can make Brussels sprouts converts out of the most stubborn. I have first-hand proof: my wife!

SWEET AND SOUR BRUSSELS SPROUTS

1 pound Brussels sprouts, washed, peeled and halved
3 tablespoons unsalted butter
2 teaspoons honey
2 teaspoons red wine vinegar
2 teaspoons white vermouth or white wine
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
¼ teaspoon garlic powder
½ teaspoon poppy seeds
Salt, pepper

Steam Brussels sprouts until slightly tender. Do not over-steam. Reserve. In a saucepan melt butter over low heat. Add honey, vinegar, wine, Worcestershire sauce and garlic powder. Mix to combine. Add sprouts and toss in seasonings. Over medium heat cook, covered, until heated through. Do not overcook. Remove from heat and sprinkle with poppy seeds. Season with salt and pepper. Serve.

Hints:

If you find Italian balsamic vinegar in a specialty store, substitute it for the wine vinegar. Its mellow, deep flavor makes it worth the search.

Brown sugar can be substituted for the honey. Same proportions.

You might enjoy a squeeze of fresh lemon juice over the dish just before serving.

This rich and satisfying dish is perfect for a chilly fall dinner. It goes especially well with roast pork or lamb.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS

1 pound Brussels sprouts (trimmed with a deep "X" carved into the stem end)
3 tablespoons unsalted butter
1 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced
1 tablespoon flour
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup milk
1 cup sharp Cheddar cheese, coarsely grated
½ cup walnuts, chopped

Preheat oven to 350F. Add 1 inch of water and bring to boil in a 3-quart saucepan. Add sprouts, reduce to a simmer and cook until sprouts are fork-tender. When cooked, place the sprouts into a well buttered 1½-quart baking dish. Set aside.

In a saucepan melt butter and saute mushrooms until tender. Gradually sprinkle flour and pepper into saucepan and mix until well blended. Cook over medium heat for 2 minutes, stirring often, until lightly browned. Slowly whisk in milk until mixture is smooth. Cook, stirring constantly, until sauce thickens.

Remove from heat and whisk in cheese until well blended. Pour over sprouts in baking dish. Sprinkle top with walnuts. Bake for 20 minutes or until the dish is bubbly and slightly browned on top.

Hints:

If you have older and larger Brussels sprouts, don't hesitate to cut them in half.

Almost any cheese from dull American to exotic goat can be used in this recipe. Let your taste guide you to your favorite.

Toasted nuts will also work well as a topping. Consider macadamias or cashews.

Woman has thorny problem

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — It may look like everything's coming up roses for Heidi Blanton, but she has been left with a thorny problem.

Ms. Blanton, a sales assistant at Merrill Lynch, received 100 long-stemmed red roses and an engagement ring one morning last week at her Raleigh office. Several hours later, she received 120 more roses — from a different man.

"Everybody keeps telling me how lucky I am," said Ms. Blanton, who turned down the marriage proposal. "It's nice to get them (the roses), but not to try to outdo the other one."

Ms. Blanton, 23, said she had been dating both men, but that she never expected their affections to bloom like this.

"I told them both to leave me alone until I decide what to do."

GOREN BRIDGE

©1986 Tribune Media Services, Inc

BY CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—I am at a loss when I hold a freak hand in a competitive situation. It seems that whenever I double they make their contract when we could have bid one more and made it or sustained only a slight loss. And whenever I go on, we go down, sometimes doubled, when the opponents had nothing. I've searched through the books in our library for advice on the subject, but can't find much. What do you suggest? — L.G., New York City

A.—There's one very good reason why you can't find much about freak hands in the bridge books—no one really knows what to do with them. Some like to lie in wait; others prefer to preempt to the maximum.

One key factor is the spade suit. If you own the master suit, life is much easier. That is because you can outbid the opponents without having to increase the level of the contract. As a result, you seldom need to make a doubtful opening bid with a fistful of spades; you can usually afford to pass and enter the auction later.

Beware of doubling the opponents when it is obvious that they are bidding on distributional hands and they have found a fit. In such circumstances, it is usually right to bid one more. Whenever you are in doubt, try to buy the contract.

I'm sorry I can't be more helpful. But don't let it worry you. Freak hands do not occur often enough for you to get gray hairs over them.

Q.—With all your years of experience, if you were to give one tip that would improve every player's game, what would it be? — K.B., Tampa, Fla.

A.—That's easy. "Don't forget the word 'pass.' It's the magic word in many auctions."

Bridge is a bidder's game, and many hate to pass at any stage in the auction. However, we should not be afraid to pass when we don't really have a bid. We will save thousands of points over the years. And bear in mind that a pass is not always a weak bid. Indeed, in some auctions it is the strongest bid you can make. For example, consider this auction:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	5 ♢	?

Since North has shown a very powerful hand with his jump to game, this hand belongs to your side. A bid of five spades says you don't want to double the opponents. A double says you don't think you can make five spades. A pass by you is the strongest of the three actions. It is forcing and it leaves open all options.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon
Monday, October 20, 1986

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: You will get the kind of creative challenge that you relish -- one which can boost your career to new heights. A financial situation turns in your favor. Try to curb your spending a bit if you have been extravagant. Savings increase when you put your imagination to work. Take a short break from romance if a current relationship is not what you want. Continue to steer clear of disputes.

CELEBRITY BIRTHDATES: Actor Herschel Bernardi, psychologist Dr. Joyce Brothers, Washington humorist Art Buchwald, Arlene Francis, country star Grandpa Jones, actor-politician John Davis Lodge, Yankee great Mickey Mantle, Mets' all-star first baseman Keith Hernandez, "M*A*S*H"'s Father Mulcahy, William Christopher.

ARIES (March 21-April 19). Be patient; others will reveal their plans. Avoid the tendency to influence people for your own gain. Be more understanding with those who are under stress.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Put valuables in a safe place. Inspiration comes in mid-morning. Jot down original ideas. A romantic reconciliation puts you in a euphoric mood. Hold down entertainment spending.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20). New skills help you move up the career ladder. Who you know can affect your professional and social success. Use tact when mediating a family feud. A compromise works.

CANCER (June 21-July 22). Others enlist your help for a political cause. Think carefully before going ahead with this. Spend more time with someone who is confined indoors.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). Do not let a well-intentioned friend discourage your efforts to do what you think best. An older person shows renewed interest in your career. Pursue romance.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Show initiative with a flair. Have confidence in yourself and others will too. You enjoy a special rapport with an attractive member of the opposite sex.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). Travel is featured today. You could land a lucrative contract. Someone you meet for the first time will play a major role in your future happiness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21). You can now make important career advances. Be prepared to take on more responsibility. Those in authority want someone they can rely on.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Do not be afraid to take risks -- they will soon pay off royally! Persist even if others try to discourage you. A close friend asks you to referee a dispute. Be fair.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Involvement in community affairs can be very exciting. You get good news regarding a pet project. Follow an expert's advice regarding investments or securities. Big gains are possible.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Good news from afar arouses excitement. Your efforts to stir up action bring profitable results. You get in touch with a long-lost friend or business acquaintance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). Favors will probably be granted if your requests are reasonable and directed to the right people. Be understanding if a loved one cannot make a commitment.

Demolition derby has been rescheduled for Nov. 2

Due to inclement weather two weekends in a row, Twin Cities Speedway National Demolition Derby Finals, sponsored by Midland Suburban Lion Club, have been rescheduled for 2:30 p.m. Nov. 2. Gates open at noon.

Pre-registration deadline for derby drivers has been extended to 6 p.m. Nov. 1. To enter the derby call J.A. "Monty" Coldwell, Suburban Lions Club derby chairman, at 683-8541 or go by A-Quick Signs, 2917 W. Industrial Ave., Midland.

Cost for derby drivers is $25 per car entered. Individual as well as team entries are welcome. In addition to the $2,000 prize money for the first five places, $500 will be presented to the team with the most cars entered. More than $3,000 worth of trophies will be awarded.

A spectator drag will precede the derby. In this process of elimination event, a spectator runs one trip around the oval track with another vehicle. The winner stays, and the loser is eliminated. Vehicles entered must be street legal, have tags and four wheels. Prize money and trophies will be awarded.

Twin Cities Speedway is located off Highway 80 east of Odessa Country Club's golf course. Admission is $6.50 for adults, $2 for children 6 to 11 years old and free to those under 6 years old.

The July derby drew a capacity crowd. Eight additional acres of free parking were added to the track in September to provide adequate parking. The September derby drew the largest crowd in the track's history.

Children will have the opportunity at the October derby to get autographs from such celebritites as Wilbur the Playful Freckle-Faced Gorilla, Half "Quacky" Derby Duck, the Big Chicken and the Texas Mouse, winner of the first derby in the series.
