'I know how to work with victims. My experience dealing with victims is probably my biggest selling point.'

Stacey Urbanczyk says her new job as crisis center director is more challenging than daunting.

Urbanczyk revels in new challenge

By DIANNA F. DANDRIDGE
Staff Writer

Six weeks isn't a very long time when it comes to getting settled in a new house, a new town, and a new job. But for Stacey Urbanczyk, the new title of administrative manager of the Women's and Children's Clinic and the director for the Hereford Crisis Center, is more challenging than daunting.

Urbanczyk comes to Hereford from Dalhart, where she had been working with CASA (Court Appointed Special Advocate) for the last eight and a half years.

"I know how to work with victims," said Urbanczyk. "My experience dealing with victims is probably my biggest selling point."

Urbanczyk began her career in the nursing field at the West Texas A&M University campus, choosing to take time out for her family and eventually getting involved with the CASA program.

"I was really lucky then," she said. "One of the directors told me how much he appreciated my enthusiasm."

'Trained volunteers are must. I would really like to see more people get involved with breaking the family violence circle.'

Stacey Urbanczyk

That's what got me in. Now I hope my enthusiasm will carry over and let me do big things in Hereford."

Urbanczyk admits there is a lot left to learn about the clinic and the crisis center, but she is already making plans for both organizations.

"First, I want everyone over at the clinic working as a team. We do pretty good right now, but I want everyone to know we are in this for the patients," she said.

She wants to see the clinic get more publicity and let the public know what is offered through the agency.

"Right now, the clinic offers well baby checks and immunizations, but if someone comes in with a problem like a sick baby, we're pretty limited in what we can do."

"I know this frustrates the staff, but at some point, I will try to write a grant which will allow us to get a nurse practitioner or physician's assistant, at least for pediatrics," Urbanczyk said.

The addition of a nurse practitioner or a physician's assistant would greatly increase the services offered by the clinic as well as the number of patients that could be helped.

Urbanczyk plans on taking a different tack with the Crisis Center.

"Trained volunteers are a must," she said. "I would really like to see more people get involved with breaking the family violence circle."

Urbanczyk has seen similar numbers of domestic violence cases in Dalhart and Dumas and knows the importance of breaking the cycle, educating young people to a different lifestyle and convincing victims there is no need for anyone to live in fear.

"My big hope, for both the clinic and the center, is to see them self-sufficient. I'd like to see them be able to stand on their own merits," Urbanczyk said.

"Ultimately, I would like to see CASA of Hereford open their doors to the abused children. I'd like to see the day when it wasn't needed."

Urbanczyk is married to Sgt. Ben Urbanczyk, the new Texas Department of Public Safety officer for the area. They have three children, Vincent, 12; Blaine, 10; and Katie, 6. The family is complete with their Springer Spaniel/poodle cross, Clover. They attend the Central Church of Christ.

Urbanczyk said she feels lucky to be able to move to Hereford, where the people have gone out of their way to welcome her and her family.

"Hereford is still a small town and the people are still small-town friendly. Hopefully, together we will be able to accomplish much."

'We (the partners) made a determination to keep an open mind. We're still learning what the needs are. A new hospital isn't the end goal, even though it would enhance health services. ... we want people to keep open minds because we're just at the beginning of the process.'

Partners still have long way to go in finishing task

By DONALD M. COOPER
Brand Editor

The 23 members of the Community Health Improvement Partnership (CHIP) couldn't be blamed if they were to be seen around town wearing T-shirts emblazoned: "No Bulldozers Yet!"

After all, the dreaded "B" word surfaced after last Monday's brainstorming session.

That's "B" as in "building." In a raw vote of participants in the brainstorming session sponsored by the partners and conducted by health care consultant Paul B. McGinnis of McGinnis & Associates of West Linn, Ore., a new hospital was considered by some participants to be the best way to improve health care in Deaf Smith County.

However, that is misleading, community health organizer Pat Stone said.

A majority of the participants at the brainstorming session were health care professionals or involved in health care, she said.

For those individuals working in the health care profession, a new, state-of-the-art facility naturally would be considered the best way to improve health care in the county, she said. However, a building is just one part of the overall health-care delivery system that must be considered.

Stone and CHIP Chairman Ernest Flood of Westway said last week's meeting was just one part of the partnership's job in identifying the county's health care needs and arriving at a consensus on possible solutions.

Both Stone and Flood said the partnership is still a long way from completing its job.

"Monday's meeting was just one piece of the needs assessment (process)," Stone said, noting the partners still are gathering data pertaining to health issues in Deaf Smith County. The partners will be reviewing the material gathered at the meeting last week, as well as poring over demographics obtained from a variety of sources, including the U.S. Census Bureau.

"We want to expand awareness of our services (available) in the community. Perhaps the public hasn't thought yet of the full scope," Flood said.

"We (the partners) made a determination to keep an open mind. We're still learning what the needs are. A new hospital isn't the end goal, even though it would enhance health services," he said. "But we want people to keep open minds because we're just at the beginning of the process," Flood said.

Stone said the partnership is not a "single-issue group of folks. We've been charged with a broad scope (project). This is going to be a much bigger task because we've been given the directive to look at the full scope of health care."

The partners are playing a marathon meeting in March to begin to go over the data compiled at last week's session, as well as that gathered during interviews with residents of the community and other data obtained during the course of the process.

"We will try to assimilate even more data at the meeting in March," Flood said. He also said residents who attended last week's meeting were asked to register, so the partners will stay in contact with them.

"This is a learning process for all of us," Stone said.

And, the process is a long way from completion and no one, not even the partners, are ready to predict what the final package of recommendations will be -- just that whatever is decided will be a consensus of opinion.

Report compares tax bite for Texas cities, schools

Special to The Brand

An Austin-based, non-profit research group recently released a report comparing local property tax burdens in Texas.

The report, "Property Tax Rates, Tax Burdens and Appraisal Ratios 1995-96," was compiled by the TTARA Research Foundation, which is affiliated with the Texas Taxpayers and Research Association (TTARA). The TTARA is a non-profit association of businesses and individuals monitoring state fiscal policy and other public policy issues.

The report lists and ranks the tax rates applying to property in 386 Texas cities with populations over 3,500. The report also includes data for the largest city in those counties that do not contain a city of more than 3,500 population. Because some cities encompass more than one school district, separate rates are included for each city/school district location, resulting in a listing of 570 "taxing areas" for which comparisons are made.

Texas has more than 3,500 property taxing jurisdictions, and the report shows that property tax burdens vary substantially throughout the state. In 1995-96, the total tax rate on all types of property ranged from a high of $3.53 per $100 value in Robstown (in Nueces County near Corpus Christi) to a low of $1.58 in Gun Barrel City (in Henderson County southeast of Dallas).

Among the state's 25 largest cities, 1995-96 overall property tax rates, adjusted to account for appraisal level differences, were highest in Fort Worth at $2.93 per $100 value, and lowest in Laredo at $2.18 per $100.

Locally, property tax rate totaled $2.3342 per $100, 405th highest among the 570 taxing areas that are ranked in the study. The total rate consisted of 42 cents levied by the City of Hereford, $1.293 by Hereford Independent School District, 22.4 cents by the Deaf Smith County Hospital District, and 52 cents by Deaf Smith County.

For a residential homestead valued at $100,000, the highest tax bill in the state was $3,494 in Robstown and the lowest was $1,273 in Glen Rose (in Somervell County southwest of Fort Worth). These are the taxes that would have been due after deducting all generally available homestead exemptions. No adjustments were made to account for homestead exemptions available only to special groups of taxpayers, such as the elderly, disabled or veterans.

In Hereford, a homeowner with a $100,000 homestead in 1995-96 would have paid a total of $2,192 in local property taxes, 334th highest in the state.

The TTARA Research Foundation report also has similar tax burden and ranking data for commercial, industrial, oil and gas, and utility properties valued at $100,000. The local tax burdens and rankings for such properties were $2,245 for commercial, $2,403 for industrial, $2,403 for oil and gas, and $2,492 for utility properties.

Unless all property is appraised uniformly, tax burdens will vary among jurisdictions and among types of property within the same jurisdiction. Uniformity in appraisals insure

Golf tourney

Where's the beef?

There will be plenty on hand when Hereford hosts the Beef Capital of the World Ice-Breaker Open Golf Tournament at John Pitman Golf Course Feb. 21-22.

The two-person scramble will be limited to the first 40 paid teams. Entry fee will be $120 per team and includes green fees, prizes and a beef dinner following Saturday's round. Carts will be extra. Checks should be made payable to the John Pitman Golf Course Association.

The tourney title, "Ice-Breaker Open," refers not only to the first tourney of the year but it will sound familiar to feedyard operators who may still be breaking ice so the cattle can get to the water.

There will be a shotgun start each day, and teams will be flighted after the first round by the tournament handicap committee.

Based on a full field of 40 teams (80 players), prizes will be $300 for first place, $180 for second and $120 for third.

For information, call 363-7139 or 1-800-687-6255.

DSEC scholarship

Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative will award five $2,000 scholarships in May to eligible applicants of immediate families of active members and active employees of Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative.

Applicants may be either traditional high school graduates or student wishing to continue an education after an extended absence. Applicants must be of good character and provide at least three letters of recommendation from teachers, principals, or counselors. Selection will be based grade point average, community activities, service work and recommendations. Secondary criteria will include: written essay, SAT/ACT scores and academic honors.

Applications may be obtained from area high schools, extension offices of Deaf Smith, Parmer, Castro and Oldham counties, or Deaf Smith Electric Cooperative office in Hereford.

Applications must be received no later than March 13. Awards will be announced within sixty days of closing date.

Class of '78 plans meeting

Hereford High School graduating class of 1978 will hold a reunion planning meeting at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the Hereford Community Center in preparation for its 20 year reunion during the Town and Country Jubilee. All class members are urged to attend. Call Mona Klein at 364-6326 for more information.

Hospital board

Directors of the Deaf Smith County Hospital District will meet at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday in the board room of Hereford Regional Medical Center, 801 E. 3rd.

The directors will receive a report on the Community Health Improvement Partnership's project from community health organizer Pat Stone.

Also, the directors will receive a report on construction of the new medical office complex from construction manager Shannon Wilburn.

In other business, the board will hear a presentation from Mary Boeckman, director of the cardio-pulmonary rehabilitation department; discuss retaining a computer consultant; set an election date for positions on the board; award bids for furniture; and receive departmental reports.

Free trees

Ten free Colorado blue spruce trees will be given to each person who joins the National Arbor Day Foundation during February.

The free trees are part of the nonprofit foundation's Trees for America campaign.

Colorado blue spruces have silver blue-green color and compact conical shape. They can be used as individual ornaments, an energy-saving windbreak, a privacy screen or as a living Christmas tree.

The trees will be shipped postpaid at the right time for planting between March 1 and May 31 with enclosed planting instructions.

To become a member of the foundation and receive the free trees, send $10 to 10 Free Colorado Blue Spruce Trees, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Ave., Nebraska City, NE 68410. The deadline is Feb. 28.

Cattlemen rest; now it's Oprah's turn

AMARILLO (AP) - Now it's Oprah Winfrey's turn.

Her attorneys will begin calling witnesses Wednesday morning in defense of allegations she was responsible for a cattle price drop that cost a group of Texas cattlemen millions of dollars.

The cattlemen rested their case in their beef defamation trial Friday after 18 days of testimony, spread over four weeks.

Attorneys finished two days of arguments over what damages, if any, Ms. Winfrey, her production company and a vegetarian activist guest should pay after cattle prices slumped in the wake of her April 16, 1996, show on mad cow disease.

Once the plaintiffs rested, defense attorneys immediately filed motions asking U.S. District Judge Mary Lou Robinson to grant a directed verdict in their favor.

"There's a lot of material to be covered here," Judge Robinson said, inspecting the thick filings from the bench. She then recessed for the holiday weekend and ordered the jury to return Wednesday morning.

Lawyers will argue the directed verdict motions outside the jury's presence on Tuesday.

One of the cattlemen spent much of Friday explaining an alternate - and much lower - damage theory he presented to the jury.

Bill O'Brien stuck by his initial damage estimate of $4.5 million in damage, based on what he says were changes in the value of cattle he and associates owned before and after the show. However, O'Brien said they lost just $525,000 in actual sales in the succeeding three months.

O'Brien and co-plaintiff Paul Engler seek to recoup their alleged losses plus unspecified punitive damages.

Ave Tucker, an accounting consultant hired by plaintiffs, also slightly refined the damage estimate for Engler. Tucker said Engler has lost $6.5 million, $700,000 more than his attorney claimed in opening statements.

The bulk of Engler's claim, about $4.4 million, centers around the fact that he sold off an unusually high amount of his stock in the futures market directly after the show. He also claims $1.5 million in losses on the cash market in the days following the program.

Babcock inferred that Engler wouldn't have lost as much money had he simply held onto his cattle, rather than hedge by selling futures.

The defense motion for a directed verdict summarizes the complaints they've had with the case from the beginning. Ms. Winfrey's attorneys argued that the cattlemen's attorneys failed to prove under Texas law that she and her show falsely disparaged perishable food products. Furthermore, they argued that the state's "veggie libel" law, itself, is unconstitutional.

in brief

Administration takes case against Iraq to public

WASHINGTON (AP) - Still lacking a congressional endorsement of its Iraq policy, the Clinton administration is taking its case directly to the public with warnings about Iraqi aggression and caution about U.S. casualties.

After spending the holiday weekend at Camp David, Md., President Clinton will go to the Pentagon on Tuesday for a briefing by the Joint Chiefs of Staff and then address the nation from there, said a senior administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

With little sign of a breakthrough on the diplomatic front, Clinton said Friday "I hope and I pray" that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein gives up his resistance to U.N. weapons inspections. Otherwise, he said, a U.S.-led military operation will "significantly diminish" Iraq's ability to regenerate the arsenal of doomsday weapons it was developing before the 1991 Persian Gulf War.

A day after Russia's defense minister publicly rebuked the United States for threatening Iraq, the president said he respects Moscow's view but added, "Nyet" is not "no" for the United States under these circumstances.

Meanwhile Friday, Iraq's deputy foreign minister, Riyadh al-Qaysi, accused the administration of fabricating charges against Iraq and of itching for a fight.

Retired Secret Service agent to testify about Clinton, intern

WASHINGTON (AP) - A retired Secret Service officer who once guarded President Clinton's life now will divulge what he knows about Clinton's relationship with Monica Lewinsky in the continuing investigation of an alleged presidential affair and cover-up.

Whitehouse prosecutors and officials of the Justice and Treasury departments reached a deal late Friday that will allow Lewis Fox to testify before the grand jury, while ensuring "that protective techniques and procedures of the Secret Service are not disclosed," said a Justice Department statement.

The statement did not spell out what restrictions would be placed on the questioning of Fox, who has said previously that he let Ms. Lewinsky into the Oval Office in the fall of 1995 while Clinton was working inside. The president has said he does not recall ever being alone with Ms. Lewinsky, the 24-year-old former White House intern with whom he is alleged to have had the affair.

Justice spokesman Bert Brandenburg said the agreement applies only to the questioning of Fox and that negotiations would continue as needed on any other Secret Service officers or agents that independent counsel Kenneth Starr seeks to question.

Meanwhile, The Associated Press learned that one of Ms. Lewinsky's high school friends, Neysa A. Erbland, 24, of Sherman Oaks, Calif., was questioned for 2 1/2 hours by the grand jury on Thursday. Prosecutors are trying to identify friends and relatives in whom Ms. Lewinsky may have confided a relationship with the president.

Victory over polio leads in early vote for 1950s postage stamp selections

WASHINGTON (AP) - Beating polio, driving cars with chrome and tail fins, drive-in movies and listening to rock 'n' roll are the things Americans say were important in the 1950s.

At least that is the result of early voting as the Postal Service invites the public to choose the subjects for 15 stamps to commemorate the decade.

More than 200,000 ballots have been cast, with the most interest being shown on the West Coast, Azeez Jaffer, director of stamp services, said Friday.

The leading vote-getter is the victory over the dreaded disease polio with 87,455 votes.

Second came drive-ins with 84,286 votes, followed by cars with chrome and tail fins, 81,121, and rock 'n' roll, 76,619.

The popular early television sitcom "I Love Lucy" rounded out the top five with 75,542 votes in balloting between Feb. 3-11.

Voting continues through the end of the month and ballots are available at post offices or via the Internet at <http://stampvote.msn.com>. Voters are asked to choose potential stamp subjects from 30 nominees in a variety of areas, such as people and places, arts and entertainment, sports, science and technology and lifestyle.

"There are a lot of ones I expected would be there, but given the fact that we have such a strong following of people who like military themes on stamps I am frankly surprised that the Korean War and Cold War are not among the subjects that are right up there," Jaffer said.

"It'll be interesting to see, in the remaining two weeks of the balloting, if shifts occur or if these are the candidates most reflective of the '50s," he added. "The good thing is, it's the people's choice, they are deciding which events are most significant."

TAX BITE

that all categories of property in all parts of the state are being treated fairly. By law, most property should be appraised at 100 percent of market value. An appraisal ratio over 100 percent means that property will face a higher tax burden because it is appraised at more than market value, while a ratio below 100 percent means the opposite. Across the state, average ratios of tax appraisals to market value ranged from 82 percent in Spurger ISD (in Tyler County south of Lufkin) to 127 percent in San Vicente ISD (in the Big Bend area in Brewster County).

The average appraisal ratio in Hereford ISD was 97 percent and appraisal ratios for specific categories of property ranged from 93 percent for commercial real estate to 104 percent for utilities.

The property tax is the largest source of tax revenue in Texas, 50 percent higher than the $11 billion sales tax, and it continues to grow rapidly. Statewide, more than 58 percent of all property taxes now are levied by school districts, and school tax account for more than half of the property taxes paid by most taxpayers.

Statewide, total property taxes grew from $8.1 billion in 1984 to $16 billion in 1995, a 97 percent increase. In comparison, school district levies jumped 124 percent, from $4.2 billion in 1984 to $9.3 billion in 1995.

Levies by cities, counties and other special districts increased by 59 percent, 78 percent and 74 percent, respectively, over the same period.

Meanwhile, total local taxable values in Texas have moved up and down from year to year for the past 10 years, and 1995's $651 billion total was 7.1 percent greater than a decade earlier. However, the nearly $36 billion, or 5.8 percent, increase in statewide taxable values experienced in 1995 was the biggest gain in any single year since 1985.

Seven of 14 categories of property have declined in value since 1985, while seven have increased. The total value of oil, gas and mineral properties fell almost 63 percent from $86.6 billion in 1985 to $32.2 billion in 1995. Single-family residential property values rose more than 34 percent, from $223.8 billion to $300.8 billion, during the same period.

The various state-mandated and local option homestead exemptions account for most of the total amount that is exempted from property taxation. All together, the value that is shielded from property taxation due to homestead exemptions increased by 50 percent from $50.6 billion in 1986 to $75.9 billion in 1995. The total amount of property value that is not taxed because of the various exemptions and special valuations combined was $127.1 billion, or more than 16 percent of the market value of all taxable property.

Candidate's firm in trouble

AUSTIN (AP) - Republican Land Commission candidate David Dewhurst has a company in bad standing with the state, comptroller's office records showed Friday.

That's even after he paid $1,500 for back taxes, penalties and interest for a separate business, the comptroller's office said.

Dewhurst's campaign said required paperwork already has been filed and the company shown in bad standing. David Dewhurst Investments-I, has no tax debt.

Dewhurst paid the back tax and penalties this week for Trans-Gulf Supply Co., which failed to file a franchise tax return in 1984 and did not pay the minimum $68 tax.

Dewhurst said he had severed his relationship with that company before then. However, he said, because someone else mistakenly left his name as Trans-Gulf's registered agent - and did not properly dissolve the firm - he agreed to pay the state $1,542.

"I had no moral or legal obligation to pay that bill and I did not want it to become a political football," Dewhurst said in an interview with The Associated Press.

"This is a company that has been liquidated for over 15 years. Someone, and I don't know who, slipped up in not closing the company down and I went ahead ... and paid the tax bill," he said.

To Our Many WONDERFUL Customers & Friends ...

We take this opportunity to share our decision to sell our interest in Custom Cleaners, effective January 30, 1998, and to convey our appreciation to each of you who have stood by us, as both friends and customers, for the past 18 years.

Our decision hasn't come lightly, but we feel it is the right one for us personally. And even though we will be leaving Hereford, Hereford will forever be a part of us. There is truly no better place to call home.

We are also very proud to announce that the business will remain under local ownership and will be operated by two people who know it from the ground up - Terry Murray and Elle Jimenez.

We know they will continue the Customer Cleaners tradition of offering "custom service with a personal touch." And it is our sincere hope you will afford them the same opportunity to serve you as you extended to us.

THANKS AGAIN, HEREFORD!!!

"It's amazing how many people beat you at golf when you're no longer president." --George Bush.

"Did you ever meet with an accident?" inquired the insurance agent of the farmer.

"No," said the farmer, then added as an after-thought, "A mule kicked in two of my ribs once and a rattlesnake bit me on the leg."

"Good grief," gasped the agent. "Don't you consider those accidents?"

"Naw," said the farmer, "They done it on purpose."

Congratulations to two Hereford FFA chapter members who made big news this week at the Fort Worth Stock Show. Chad Christie showed the Grand Champion steer, which sold for $75,000, and Zack Wall exhibited the Reserve Grand Champion, which brought $40,000 in the sale. The news was reported in Friday's Brand. The stock show president said it was the first time in memory for FFA chapter to claim both grand and reserve champions.

Speaking of firsts, The Brand also reported Thursday that contributions to the Dee Anne Trotter Music Scholarship Fund at West Texas A&M University have eclipsed $85,000. According to a news release from WTAMU, it represents the largest contribution ever to a memorial endowment through the WTAMU Foundation. The endowment fund serves as a great tribute to the late Mrs. Trotter.

Thanks to a column in The Snyder Daily News, we finally read something about global warming that we understand.

According to the article, there is hope. "To keep the polar ice caps from melting and turning many towns into beach communities, a new organization has been formed." The political action group is called SOBER - as in Slow on the Beans, Enjoy the Rice.

SOBER intends to keep earth temperatures down by setting reasonable levels on bean consumption, especially here in West Texas where the consumption could light up a major city.

According to the article, scientists attending the UN summit in Japan didn't pick up on this. Not one of the delegates from 159 countries even considered beans when adopting a treaty that would make substantial cuts in emissions of greenhouse gases.

One of the gases is methane, which is produced after beans are consumed. Still, not one mention of a need to put a cap on beans. Maybe it's because none of the scientists are Texans. Think about it. Beans are served as a side dish in just about every barbecue joint and Mexican food place in this state.

According to the Texas Restaurant Association, there are 6,856 Mexican food establishments and 2,135 barbecue joints in Texas. Nearly all of them serve beans.

If the treaty is ratified, the U.S. will agree to cut greenhouse gas emission by seven percent below 1990 levels. To do our part in Texas, restaurant owners could cut back the amount of beans served by seven percent.

It might take some getting used to, but West Texans are hearty types. They could learn to gulp down Brussels sprouts with beef enchiladas and rice. Just bring more hot sauce.

Dear Editor:

Thanks to the Hereford Young Farmers again for the wonderful job they do on the junior stock show. We also appreciate the people who donated animals to Girlstown, and auctioneers Jack Howell and Kenneth Gregg for their time.

Thanks again for your generosity.

Dear Editor:

I just want to point out the fact that the Hereford/Deaf Smith County area needs to be very proud of our Emergency Medical Services group. I will put them up against any group anywhere. If they are not the best, they are equal to the best.

I suffered three cardiac arrests since June 7, 1977, and would not have survived any of them without the EMT's fast and skillful action. They managed to get me to the emergency room alive so the doctors (also the very best) could do their job.

Quite simply, I would not be alive today without the Hereford EMTs and medical staff. My most grateful thanks to both groups!

Bill Bradley

Dear Editor:

Let me first say that I'm an avid reader of The Hereford Brand for over 30 years and listen to KPAN each day and observe that considerable space and time is given to reporting the crime each day, such as stealing, break-ins, convenience store robbery, dope dealing and drive-by shootings.

I know our police solve some of these, but it seems that they are more focused and well-trained in solving the more serious crimes, such as seat belt and sticker violations.

Anywhere you drive in Hereford, you notice they are set up in unmarked vehicles, with radar guns trying to capture some vicious housewife making 21 mph in a 20 mph speed zone, or some old man or home health aid without seat belts on properly.

I don't believe anyone can drive over two blocks in the city limits of Hereford without seat belts or sticker and not receive a ticket.

Just some of my observations.

Inside Politics

For Clinton, millennium a bridge not too far

WASHINGTON (AP) - As he works to show it's business as usual at the White House, President Clinton has been showering a lot of attention on the millennium.

Hardly a speech goes by when he doesn't evoke the 21st century. And tonight, he begins a series of White House lectures aimed at ushering it in.

The speaker at the first of the "Millennium Evenings" will be historian Bernard Bailyn, a Harvard University professor who has written 11 books on U.S. history, including two Pulitzer Prize winners.

Repeatedly bringing up 2000 is one way for Clinton to reinforce the notion that he'll still be on the job two years from now - and thus will have weathered the present personal storm.

For a president with more than just a passing interest in his place in history, talking up the millennium is clearly a topic Clinton savors.

After all, he offered to build a "bridge to the 21st century" during his acceptance speech at the 1996 Democratic National Convention in Chicago. And his 1997 State of the Union address talked about making "the year 2000 a national celebration of the American spirit."

By the time of this year's State of the Union, Clinton was using the 21st century and "the information age" almost interchangeably. And he reminded his audience: "With barely 700 days left in the 20th century, this is not a time to rest."

The White House even has a millennium program page on its Web site (www.whitehouse.gov) that includes a clock counting down the days, hours, minutes and seconds until the calendar rolls over to 2000.

"We are entering this new millennium, the new century, with restored confidence - the information age, a growing global economy, they're changing the way we live and work," Clinton said earlier this week in a speech at Georgetown University about Social Security overhaul.

Bailyn, the speaker at tonight's kickoff White House lecture, will address "some of the core American ideas that crystallized during the revolutionary era that have shaped history thereafter and that must be preserved as we move into a new millennium," said a White House fact sheet.

Julie Mason, a spokeswoman for first lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, said the lecture series will consist of "different events, a variety of experts." Other speakers have not yet been selected, she said.

Some critics have suggested Clinton may have ulterior motives. "This is so typical of Clinton to attempt to sweet talk his way into history by inviting historians to the White House," said University of Virginia political scientist Larry Sabato.

Clinton defenders scoff at such notions.

And Mike McCurry, Clinton's spokesman, said anew Tuesday that Clinton is "fully focused on the agenda that we will pursue in the year ahead."

There also are a whole lot of side celebrations planned for 2000: the

Bud made baseball fun

DON COOPER

Reflections

It doesn't seem possible, but baseball's lurking in the wings. The major league training camps opened last week, and the season's just about six weeks away.

The major leaguers won't be the only players taking the field soon. Little Leaguers will be getting ready for their season -- even though the passage of the last cold front is still weeks away.

As a former Little Leaguer, I have good memories -- and bad memories -- of youth baseball. I think the Little League program is good for kids, but like any other program, it's only as good as the adults who run it.

Back in the late '50s when I was a Little Leaguer in Nashville, Ark., the youth baseball program was fun for those of us who were learning and playing baseball. Looking back with the advantage of time, I know that I enjoyed Little League in Nashville because of the adult who was the league's only coach -- Bud Crawley.

I guess one of the things that made our Little League program a good one was because Bud loved kids and he loved baseball. And, if there was something that could put these two elements together, then Bud Crawley was a happy man.

Bud had another job, but I don't know what. I always remember him as a catcher for the Nashville Cubs, a semi-pro team that played in the town ballpark on Friday and Saturday evenings during the summer. He was too old and probably just not quite talented enough to have ever made it to the big leagues, but that never seemed to dampen his enthusiasm for playing baseball and teaching it to kids.

Our Little League program wasn't the sophisticated operations you see these days. It just started one morning when boys who wanted to play brought their gloves and caps to the ballpark. When we got there, we found Bud Crawley with a couple of old Army duffel bags stuffed with bags, balls and spare gloves -- he knew there would be some kids who couldn't afford gloves.

He tossed out some baseballs and told us to play catch for a few minutes. Then he pitched some batting practice and shouted advice as each youngster got a turn at the plate, while others shagged flies or fielded ground balls. He watched the kids playing in the field as closely as he did the batter, like he was mentally finding positions for each of us.

After batting practice, he counted heads and found there were enough kids to field four teams with a few left over.

He split us up into teams and told us to go choose our team names. We ended up with typical team names, "Jets," "Sharks," and "Rattlers." The fourth team had the unlikely, or maybe optimistic, name of "Go-Getters."

After that, Bud told us to go home and be back at the ballpark at 9 the next morning.

The next day, we found out how Bud planned to run our Little League program. He divided the park into two playing fields. He offered some suggestions about where each boy should play -- he had been taking mental notes the day before -- and the two teams took each field and we played a game.

Bud wandered between the two games, offering tips to the pitchers and batters, stopping to show an outfielder how to judge a fly ball or showing a shortstop how to get a jump on a hot grounder in the hole.

It didn't seem possible that one coach could see everything that was going on, but Bud seemed to be right there whenever you muffed a fly or threw a wild pitch or let a grounder go between your legs.

He never raised his voice or lost his patience; he just helped us learn how to play baseball. To Bud, learning how to play baseball and enjoy the game, not winning, was the important thing for kids. He even would stop the play when he saw a baserunner sliding into second the wrong way, he would go over and show the runner how to slide properly and let him take a few practice slides before the game could resume.

This was our routine for several weeks. We'd gather at the park, where Bud often would have batting practice and fielding practice before we'd split up and play our game of the day. All of us played because that was one of Bud's rules: Every kid on the team played, even if it meant you had an extra shortstop or outfielder.

Something else was missing at our games -- parents. Bud didn't mind having one of his teammates from the semi-pro team drop by to help out, but he didn't want parents hanging around. He thought the parents would put pressure on the kids when all we were trying to do was learn how to play baseball and learn how to play.

Just before the season ended, Bud called us together and said we would have a couple of games before our parents. We would get to play under the lights on a field that was lined properly and with real umpires.

I don't remember who won the games that night or even how I did. I remember playing catcher for a couple of innings before moving to third base, but that wasn't important -- we just had fun. And, thanks to Bud Crawley, we had fun the entire summer.

The next summer, I was living in Texarkana and decided to play Little League baseball. This time it was not fun at all. The coach thought the most important thing was winning, so he picked out his nine best players and they played all the time, every inning, every game. The rest of us sat on the bench and watched. The coach screamed at the players for the slightest mistake. It was absolutely no fun.

Two summers; two different experiences.

Bud Crawley loved baseball and kids; the other guy loved winning. Bud had things in perspective. He knew we were just kids and, after all, baseball's really a kid's game.

Even someone who detests sports sees some good

DIANNA E. DANDRIDGE

The Real World

I suppose nearly everyone who claims to know me knows how I feel about sports in school.

Mostly, I detest sports. I have no problem with kids playing football, basketball, tennis or any other sport. My problem is when students are pulled out of classes to allow for travel time to get to a game or a tournament.

I won't even discuss the complete lunacy of expecting non-sports-minded students to enjoy and participate in pep rallies.

I still owe Hereford High School more than 30 hours of detention for all the times I cut pep rallies. I never missed class, but I refused to go to a pep rally.

As much as I dislike sports, though, there are some positive things I can say for them.

If an athlete has the ability, regardless of financial standing, he or she will get to play -- barring, of course, such screwups as failing a course or two.

Also, sports do provide entertainment for many who just enjoy the games. Just because I don't enjoy them, I see no reason for someone else not to.

Used properly, the sporting fields can teach some tremendous lifelong lessons: good sportsmanship, the beauty of winning, health benefits of an active physical life, the realities that hard work pays, although not always enough.

What it boils down to is this: Lack of money is not going to stop any qualified, talented player from being on a team. The team (school) provides the uniforms and most of the equipment, transportation to and from the events.

On the other hand, there are lots of school-sponsored, extracurricular activities that unless the families are truly well-off, most kids can't participate in on an equal basis.

At one town, cheerleaders, even at junior high school level, were required to purchase three uniforms totalling $250; attend cheerleading camp, $175; pay $65 for special shoes and $12 for socks.

That's $502. I know they have fund raisers and such to pay for it, but with nine members on the cheerleading squad, can they really raise $4,518? Even if they raise half the amount, how could some families with talented, athletic girls really come up with an additional $251?

Then, when they acquire all the necessities, their main duty is to perform for the sporting activities. They NEVER cheer on the academic decathlon team; the academic debate team, the drama club, the arts or the valedictorian at graduation. Kind of limited, huh!

It's not just cheerleaders, there's other groups as well.

Stock show events are a real case

See DANDRIDGE, Page 5A

DANDRIDGE—Should Clinton settle now?

of money talks and %*^@! walks. I realize there are a number of very generous people who donate animals for the underprivileged kids to raise. I applaud their generosity and I cheer the efforts of the kids who do as well as they do with what they have.

But, when I hear of a kid, who has won a hometown show and several distant shows, and has shown more than one animal in every class, and each of these animals cost, as a new baby, more than $1,000 each, how can I consider this competitive?

Classing an animal that was specially bred to have all the qualities of conformation, efficiency and productivity points against an animal that was bred to be what it is, a piece of meat on the hoof, is like comparing a Lamborghini to a '73 Plymouth Fury III. Sure they both get the job done, but which makes the better show?

And speaking of the shows, how would the underprivileged participants or the ordinary kids ever be able to get their animals to a major stock show? Most of the kids don't have the pickups, the trailer and other equipment necessary to haul the animals cross country; nor can they get it. So if an animal, with less than true blue blood actually shows off some of his betters, how will they get to the next show?

Don't get me wrong. Most of these events have some useful purpose, whether I like them or not. But, if they are being offered in public schools as extracurricular activities, then they should be offered on an equal basis.

Just like the kid who is a terrific running back, who can catch anything thrown his way and then can run like the wind to the end zone, competes on an equal basis as does the rest of the team, then every other extracurricular activity should be based on that same standard.

If the school is going to provide uniforms, equipment, time out of classes and a pep team for one event, it should really carry over to all events, making them truly competitive.

200th anniversary of presidents occupying the White House, the 200th anniversary of the first meeting of Congress in the Capitol and the 200th anniversary of the Library of Congress.

Clinton last week named a White House council to coordinate efforts to head off computer problems that threaten critical federal services when the calendar year changes to 2000. Many of the government's computer systems are aging and programmed only to recognize the last two digits in a date - and thus may misinterpret 2000 as 1900.

That could produce havoc at agencies from the Pentagon to the Internal Revenue Service to the Federal Aviation Administration unless the problem can be overcome.

Clinton has also set a number of other goals for 2000.

He has called for connecting every classroom and library in America to the Internet by the year 2000. His national volunteer service program, AmeriCorps, wants to double the number of full-time volunteers. And the Peace Corps has set a goal of tripling the size of its global learning partnership program by 2000.

One footnote on the White House millennium Web site: Even though Clinton and much of the world will celebrate on Dec. 31, 1999, when the calendar flips to 2000, the next millennium "is not officially reached until Jan. 1, 2001."

It cites no less a source than the United States Naval Observatory, "the nation's official time keeper."

BOSTON (AP) - Remember, you should not aim pepper spray at your eyes. Oh, and also, please do not drop an air conditioner out of a window.

If those warnings seem like common sense, it's easy to understand how they were among the winners in the "Wacky Warning Label Contest" held by the Massachusetts Civil Justice Reform Alliance.

The group says it gave the awards to highlight the outrageous lengths to which businesses must go to protect themselves from frivolous lawsuits.

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON - If President Clinton had settled the Paula Jones case months ago, Americans might never have heard of Monica Lewinsky or thought of an Oval Office affair as anything more than a far-fetched movie plot.

A settlement would have headed off the sworn statements in which Clinton and Ms. Lewinsky reportedly denied having a sexual relationship - denials that now are the subject of a criminal investigation into possible perjury and witness-tampering.

The chance to avoid that crisis has been lost. But would Clinton still gain by settling the Jones case now?

Yes, says Larry Pozner, a Denver lawyer and president-elect of the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers.

"Once trials start, the one thing we know is weird things happen," Pozner said. "Cases are settled every day on the basis that this is more aggravating than it's worth."

Georgetown law professor Susan Low Bloch disagrees. "Settling it won't undo any of the damage, and it keeps him from having a forum where he might win," she said.

Northwestern University law professor Steven Lubet thinks Clinton should simply default - refuse to defend against Mrs. Jones' claim and pay whatever money the court orders him to pay.

Clinton should say the lawsuit was harming his ability to govern and announce he is "going to do the noble thing on behalf of the country, which is take the financial hit and put all this behind him," Lubet said.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"It goes against the grain of every lawyer who ever walked and breathed," Lubet acknowledged, but added that in this case, "The risks of default are far less than the risk of trial."

A trial is scheduled for May 27 on Mrs. Jones' claim that Clinton exposed himself and propositioned her in an Arkansas hotel room in 1991. The trial judge has barred testimony about Ms. Lewinsky but has not said whether evidence about any other women will be allowed.

Occasional settlement talks never bore fruit. Many people thought a settlement with Mrs. Jones would be too embarrassing for the president even if it did not involve the type of admission and apology she wants.

But now, "If I were (on Clinton's side) I'd be pretty upset that they missed those opportunities," said Gilbert Davis, a former lawyer for Mrs. Jones. He and another lawyer withdrew from the case last fall after she rejected a settlement proposal.

If the case had been settled earlier, "I thought the firestorm would be over in a week," Davis said. "It certainly wouldn't have led to Lewinsky and Kathleen Willey (a woman who reportedly said Clinton groped her at the White House) and all the rest of the problems he's facing."

Neal Sonnett, a Miami criminal defense lawyer, said that if Clinton resolved the Jones case now, "One thing to be gained is the time and effort that has to be put into preparing for trial can be moved over" to dealing with the criminal investigation, a matter that is "ultimately more important to him."

But settling the Jones case apparently would not give Clinton an advantage in Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr's investigation. The Lewinsky evidence already has been ruled out, and someone can be charged with obstructing justice or witness-tampering even over statements that were never used in a trial.

It is hard to assess whether Clinton should redouble his efforts to end the Jones case, said University of Virginia law professor Pamela S. Karlan.

"It depends on his assessment of what's going to happen at trial," she said. "Since Day 1 it's been obvious that this is going to be an ugly trial."

Audit: Many ineligible now receiving SSI

EL PASO (AP) - A federal audit has confirmed the long-held suspicions of Social Security workers that many Supplemental Security Income recipients here are not eligible for the aid because they're not citizens.

The Social Security Administration study showed nearly half of the 2,107 SSI recipients in two areas of the city were not citizens, which is an automatic disqualification for the benefits, except under certain circumstances, because of welfare reforms Congress adopted in 1996.

"We are not surprised. Reports from our field offices along the border alerted us to the potential for fraud," John Trollinger, a spokesman in the administration's headquarters in Baltimore, was quoted as saying in Friday's El Paso Times.

Those identified by the audit released Jan. 20 as improperly receiving benefits have been dropped from the SSI program.

But unlike in similar cases in Chula Vista, Calif., where the findings led to arrests, indictments and convictions, federal authorities do not appear ready to mount a criminal investigation in El Paso.

An inspector general's report indicated that El Paso's Social Security workers do not expect to see an investigation.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Debra Kanof declined to comment on the report after consulting with her superiors in the San Antonio office that oversees El Paso.

SSI provides assistance to aged, blind or disabled adults and to children who are blind or disabled. The program was established in 1972 to assist people who had little or no

Social Security coverage.

Obtaining SSI assistance generally brings automatic eligibility to Medicaid, food stamps and other federal state assistance programs.

There are about 21,000 Supplemental Security Income recipients in El Paso County who are receiving about $6 million a month, or $72 million a year in benefits.

GOP positions tax message to appeal to women voters

WASHINGTON (AP) - Listen to the Republicans talk about taxes these days and frequently you will hear a message tailored to appeal to women, a strategy that could help the party deal with a long-standing gender gap.

Congressional Republicans and consultants say the attention to women's issues is part of a broader push to build support for the GOP's tax agenda by humanizing the tax issue.

"One thing Republicans are trying to do in this cycle is to more effectively talk about the reasons why we want tax cuts," said David Hill, a Houston-based GOP pollster. "I don't know if I would say that (it) is a gender-gap strategy, but that plays into it."

Evidence the GOP's tax agenda addressing women's concerns is easily found these days:

Innocent spouses. The Senate Finance Committee held hearings this week on the problems of "innocent spouses," often divorced women, who are liable for tax debts resulting from actions of their former spouses.

"Financially insecure, many times struggling as a single parent to raise children, working for an income that's a fraction of what her ex-spouse earns, now she has to confront the often-unrelenting Internal Revenue Service," Senate Finance Chairman William Roth, R-Del., said at a hearing Wednesday.

Retirement savings. The GOP claims women and the elderly stand to suffer from a provision in the 1999 Clinton budget that would tax certain transactions within variable annuities, which are popular retirement investment sold by life insurers.

"Annuities are particularly important to women. In fact, 55 percent of annuity owners are women," Rep. Jon Christensen, R-Neb., said in a letter Thursday to President Clinton, signed by another dozen House Republicans and one Democrat. Earlier, House Ways and Means Chairman Bill Archer, R-Texas, denounced the annuity tax plan as harmful to widows.

Marriage penalty. Proposals to eliminate the so-called marriage penalty tax are the leading contenders for this year's tax cut bill. The marriage penalty refers to the higher taxes that many two-earner couples face when they marry and file a joint return.

Rep. Jerry Weller, R-Ill., sponsor of a bill to eliminate the marriage penalty, said polling last year revealed that women viewed the marriage tax as more unfair than men.

Republican pollsters long have noted the party's lackluster showing with female voters. A survey by pollster Linda DiVall last fall showed that among all voters, men favored Republicans over Democrats by a margin of 47-37; among women, the trend was reversed, 38-47.

The trend was more pronounced among men between the ages of 27 and 59, where Republicans enjoyed a 51-33 edge; for women in the same age group, the GOP trailed 33-53.

To Rep. Robert Matsui, D-Calif., a member of the House Ways and Means Committee, the GOP's move to position its tax agenda to appeal to female voters is plain. "I don't think there's any question that's been their push. And it's been subtle," Matsui said.

"My feeling is this is not going to work. The overall perception by women of the GOP is very negative," Matsui said, citing the abortion rights issue as a key dividing point.

Rep. Jennifer Dunn, the

'One thing Republicans are trying to do ... is to more effectively talk about the reasons why we want tax cuts. I don't know if I would say that (it) is a gender-gap strategy, but that plays into it.'

David Hill, GOP pollster

highest-ranking woman in the House GOP leadership, said the Republicans were not attempting to craft a tax agenda for women. "There's not any coordinated message," said Dunn, R-Wash. But she was happy to see that point getting across just the same.

The Senate Finance Committee's focus on the innocent spouse issue is part of a broader effort to "put real stories and real faces on a numbers issue that traditionally would be really dry," said the committee's spokeswoman, Ginny Flynn.

Flynn said the dramatic testimony by four women at the innocent spouse hearing would help propel the broader IRS overhaul bill.

"Their stories will most definitely add heat to the effort to get the IRS reformed and reformed right," said Flynn.

Abduction not what it seemed

CHICAGO (AP) - At first, it appeared an infant had been abducted from Cook County Hospital. What really happened was much more strange and much more benign.

A 14-year-old girl, who had a good school record and no history of trouble, was visiting a friend who had just given birth at the hospital when she saw a 3-week-old boy who had been undergoing treatment for crack cocaine withdrawal since birth.

His real mother, who was homeless, disappeared after giving birth.

"She saw all the other kids getting fed, and she saw nurses holding the other babies, but this one child didn't get the physical nurturing," the girl's court-appointed attorney, Calvin Aguilar, said Wednesday. "Her maternal instincts took over." After several visits when she fed the baby with nurses' approval, she brought in a diaper, changed him and left, baby in her arms.

The teen spent the next 2 1/2 days at a friend's home, feeding and caring for the baby, but was caught when a friend congratulated the girl's mother on becoming a grandmother.

"This is a kid with a compassionate heart," Aguilar said. "She felt sorry for the baby and she thought she could help him."

Prosecutors agreed. They dropped kidnapping charges in exchange for the girl's pleading guilty to a misdemeanor, and recommended a year's probation and 10 hours of public service.

WASHINGTON (AP) - Marcia Clark was stumped when "Hardball" host Chris Matthews asked her if she belongs to a political party.

DAVID LETTERMAN

NEW YORK (AP) - David Letterman didn't exactly flee a blaze Friday atop the 14-story building where he tapes his show.

"I was busy on the roof saving interns," he joked.

The fire at the midtown Manhattan building that houses the Ed Sullivan Theater was under control about 20 minutes after it was reported. Flames burned roof repair material and never got close to the ground-floor theater, said a fire spokesman, Brian Dixon.

Letterman was inside the building at the time. No injuries were reported.

NAGANO, Japan (AP) — A quick look at the Winter Olympics: ANOTHER SNOW NO-GO Rain and snow wiped out women's downhill on Happono, and a lightning warning did the same to men's super-G. Men's super-G was rescheduled for Sunday (Saturday night CST) and the women's downhill will be Monday (Sunday night CST). The forecast was for snow on the mountains through early evening, more snow Sunday, with temperatures dropping.

BOBBLED Italy's Guenther Huber gained the lead in the two-man bobsled after two runs. No U.S. sled was in the top 10. CROSS-COUNTRY SKIING Thomas Alsgaard of Norway outsprinted teammate Bjorn Dahlie at the finish to win the 15-kilometer pursuit, preventing Dahlie from becoming the first man to win seven Winter Olympic golds.

CURLING The U.S. men advanced to the semifinals with a 5-4 victory over Japan. The Americans won on the final stone of the 10th end. In women's play, Denmark assured itself its first Winter Games medal by beating Sweden, 7-5, to reach the finals.

ICE HOCKEY The U.S. men used four power play goals to defeat Belarus, 5-2.

NORDIC COMBINED Bjarte Vik of Norway won the gold medal in Nordic combined by finishing the cross-country portion in 41 minutes, 21.1 seconds.

SPEEDSKATING Catriona Le May-Doan of Canada won the women's 500-meter gold medal. Chris Witty of West Allis, Wis., wound up 10th.

NAGANO NUGGET IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch said marijuana testing should continue at the games because it involves an "ethical point." The first positive test for pot in games' history was overturned this week by an arbitration panel.

IN BRIEF

Astros begin camp

KISSIMMEE, Fla. (AP) — The Houston Astros pitchers and catchers begin workouts Saturday as they search for a replacement for last year's starting ace Darryl Kile, who signed as a free agent with the Colorado Rockies.

The Astros lost out in a bidding war for Kile, who had a 19-7 record and 2.57 ERA last season in helping the Astros win the NL Central Division title.

Manager Larry Dierker already has named Shane Reynolds his openingday starter and Mike Hampton, Chris Holt and Ramon Garcia also are likely to be in the starting rotation. That leaves one spot to fill.

Non-roster invitee Pete Schourek will get a chance. He was the runner-up for the Cy Young Award in 1995 but has battled arm injuries since. Sean Bergman, who played at San Diego last season, and John Halama also will get chances.

Steelers search

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Steelers coach Bill Cowher has sharpened his pencil to start a list of prospective offensive coordinators to fill the shoes of the departed Chan Gailey.

And applicants have come to him, not reluctant to take on the leadership of the NFL's No. 1 rushing offense. They began calling Cowher less than an hour after Gailey signed a Cowboys contract.

"I warned our secretary what takes place after these things happen," Cowher said.

The Dallas Cowboys hired Gailey as their new head coach Thursday to succeed Barry Switzer.

At least two of the Steelers' offensive assistants, tight ends coach Mike Mularkey and offensive-line coach Kent Stephenson, have offered their services, and quarterback Mike Tomczak has suggested he could become a player-coach.

Cowher declined to say who tops his list.

Winter Games or X Games, which is it?

You know those guys the ski patrol chases off the mountain? Well, now they're in Nagano competing for medals. Snowboarding and freestyle skiing are Olympic medal sports. Freestyle skiing is what I think used to be called hot-dog skiing. This is where you ski sort-of fast down this really bumpy slope. Then you go over a small ramp and do some hot-dog move in the air. Jonny Mosely won the United

State's first gold medal in the Nagano Games by winning this event where the skier soars off a ramp and then does aerial acrobatics (hopefully) before he falls back to earth.

Well, it's not a real sport, but I guess we'll take the medal.

Snowboarding is basically skiing for people not coordinated enough to go down the hill on more than one piece of composite fiber and/or plastic.

Snowboarding is something of a combination between surfing and skateboarding, only on snow. It's making its first appearance as a Winter Olympic medal sport.

In addition to the downhill component of snowboarding, there's also snowboarding through half-tunnels of snow called "pipes," I believe. This is where this "sport" really looks like skateboarding.

I guess that'll be a medal sport in the near future. Hey, I wouldn't bet against it. Would you ever have thought snowboarding would make it?

Anyway, snowboarding might be something I could actually do, since I can't keep two pieces of composite fiber and/or plastic going in a straight line.

But these guys are so obnoxious I'd probably rather just run over them than run down the course or through the "pipe."

Mavs finally win on road

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — This time, Michael Finley didn't wait too long.

Two nights after a potentially game-winning 3-pointer was ruled too late, Finley made one at the buzzer with time to spare as the Dallas Mavericks beat the Indiana Pacers 85-82 in double-overtime Friday night.

"I knew if I got the ball I was going to take the shot," said Finley, whose 3-pointer in Philadelphia was ruled too late Wednesday night in a 91-90 loss to the 76ers.

Finley scored 32 points as the Mavericks snapped a 22-game road losing streak.

Earlier, the teams set records for scoring futility as Indiana built a 34-24 halftime lead. That tied the NBA record for the fewest points scored in a half, set on Jan. 15, 1955 when Syracuse played Fort Wayne at Buffalo, N.Y.

The 24 points were the fewest allowed by the Pacers in a first half, topping the mark of 25 set by Detroit on Nov. 8, 1989. The Mavericks tied their franchise record for fewest points in a half.

"We played excellent defense the first half, but we couldn't make a shot. They came out in the third quarter and man-handled us," Indiana coach Larry Bird said. "We had a number of opportunities to win the game, but couldn't close them out."

Reggie Miller, who had 10 points, missed shots at the end of regulation and the first overtime after the Pacers squandered a 16-point first-quarter lead.

The winning basket was set up when the Pacers had the ball with 7.9 seconds left in the second overtime and committed their 22nd turnover -- an illegal pick out of bounds.

Finley took a pass from Dennis Scott and wouldn't be denied this time.

"What goes around comes around," Finley said. "This time I made sure it was before the buzzer."

The Pacers led 73-69 following a jumper by Miller with 17.1 seconds left in regulation. Hubert Davis, who scored 16, cut the deficit to two with 12.5 remaining. Derrick McKey then hit one of two free throws for Indiana with 7.1 seconds to go.

Finley, who was 13-for-36, was then fouled attempting a 3-pointer with 3.5 seconds to go. He missed the first, made the second free throw and then deliberately missed the third attempt.

Shawn Bradley, who had 13 rebounds, got the offensive rebound and tied the game with a layup with 2.2 seconds left. Miller got an open jumper at the buzzer that missed.

"Everything just fell right into place like we wanted it to. It was about the only chance that we really had and it worked perfect," Bradley said.

Each team scored four points in the first overtime. Finley missed an 18-footer with 7.7 seconds left in the second overtime with his team leading 82-81. Rik Smits, who led Indiana with 12 points, then got around Bradley underneath, but his layup rolled off the rim.

One of two free throws tied the game at 82 with 1:02 left in the period, which ended with another Miller miss just before the buzzer.

Huston fires 65 to claim 2nd round lead at Hawaiian HONOLULU (AP) — While John Huston and Skip Kendall talked about the importance of keeping the ball in the fairway at the Hawaiian Open, veteran Tom Watson quietly sharpened his putter.

Huston shot a 7-under-par 65 Friday to reach the midway mark of the $1.8 million tournament with a record-tying 16-under 128 and a 2-stroke lead over Kendall (67-63).

But lurking close by, three shots behind Huston, is Watson (67-64), who had nine birdies with what he described as the "Watson roll" with the putter.

"I didn't hit the ball well starting out," the winner of eight majors said.

"But I had the Watson roll. It started me off well. Then I hit some quality shots after that."

"I always said if I could get back to the way I putted (in his younger days), I could win again."

How good was his putting? With birdies on three of the first four holes, he holed putts from 45, 12 and 35 feet.

Then, as a warning to the rest of the field, he added, "If I can make an average of six birdies a day the next two rounds, I may have a chance to win."

Dahlie nearly wins seventh gold medal

NAGANO, Japan (AP) — It was an Olympic day notable for what didn't happen: Picabo Street didn't ski. Bjorn Dahlie didn't win a gold medal. And the struggling U.S. hockey team didn't turn an early lead into a loss.

A combination of snow, rain and lightning was enough to cancel Street's shot at a second gold medal Saturday (Friday evening CST). The elements weren't enough to stop Dahlie's bid for more gold -- that took a spectacular effort from one of his teammates.

Dahlie, vying to become the first Winter Olympian with seven gold medals, nearly pulled it off. But Norwegian teammate Thomas Algaard came on strong at the end of the 15-kilometer cross-country freestyle to deny Dahlie the victory.

Dahlie did not go down easily in a rainstorm that pounded the Snow

Harp course. Algaard's time of victory was a mere 1.1 seconds ahead of Dahlie after the pair skied shoulder to shoulder for the last half of the race. Vladimir Smirnov of Kazakhstan took the bronze.

Dahlie's finish gives him six golds and four silvers in his career, equaling Raisa Smetanina's total (4 gold, 5 silver, 1 bronze) for the most

Hereford holds off Dumas

By BOB VARMETTE
Sports Writer

DUMAS — When a team shoots 57 percent from the field, it's a good bet that at the final horn, they're going to be the winner.

It's a good thing you didn't make that bet on Friday night's Hereford-Dumas District 1-4A boys basketball game.

You'd have lost -- just like the Demons did.

Even the Demons' hot shooting couldn't outdo Hereford freshman Cody Hodges who was 7-for-8 from the field in the second half on his way to a game-high 25 points as Hereford held off Dumas 65-62 in front of 350 at the Dumas High School gym.

"I'll tell you what the key to the game was," Dumas head coach Ted Epley said. "The big factor was Cody Hodges in the second half, especially those two big 3s he hit."

Hodges' final two shots from the field were 3s. He hit both of them. The 6-0 senior guard went 3-for-5 from beyond the arc. The only shot he missed in the second half was a 3-point attempt.

"We were just taking the shots that came available to us," Hereford head coach Randy Dean said. "The ball was coming to Cody in some open spots and he did a nice job of knocking them down."

Hodges also did his job on the boards, snaring a game-high nine rebounds.

Senior Matt Payne led four Demons in double figures with 18 points. Ross Jones added 14. Cody Hendricks had 11 points and topped Dumas (15-16 overall, 3-9 District 1-4A) with seven rebounds.

Bryant McNutt added 18 points for Hereford (15-13, 9-3).

Dean said despite putting only two Whitefaces in double figures, it was a big team effort to get the win heading into the Class 4A playoffs.

"There were several people who stepped up and made shots and made contributions," he said. "Matt Cosby made a big shot at the end of the third quarter. Eric McNutt made a big shot coming down on transition. It was several people who jumped up and made some big shots at big times."

In the first half, Hodges was having his troubles, hitting 4-for-10 from the field. But Bryant McNutt scored 14 points in the opening two quarters to post Hereford to a 37-35 margin going into the break.

"He's killed us everytime he's played us, since I've been here," Epley said. "He killed us in the first half. The only reason he didn't in the second half is because Hodges was hitting from outside."

"Hereford's got a great team," Epley added. "They can go inside, they can go outside. That's what good teams do."

Dumas started hot, shooting 12-for-22 (54.4 percent) in the first half and 5-for-8 (62.5 percent) on 3-point attempts.

"We were making some fundamental mistakes defensively," Dean

UTEP women do well in obscurity

By EDUARDO MONTES
Associated Press Writer
EL PASO -- Usually when folks around here talk college basketball, they're going on about Hall of Fame coach Don Haskins and the winning tradition of his Texas-El Paso men's squad.

This year, though, it's the women who are giving UTEP fans something to gab about.

Laboring in virtual obscurity -- they average about 800 spectators at home -- the Miners have clinched only the sixth winning season in the program's 24-year history, have been on pace to put together one of its best records and briefly held a share of the top spot in the Western Athletic Conference's Mountain Division.

"I think we might have had better talent on other teams, but as a team," this one has made an impression, said forward Kiaqua Taylor, UTEP's all-time leading scorer with 1,068 points and a key factor in this season's success.

"This will have to be the best team as far as chemistry," added center Kanequa Chancellor.

Going into the season's stretch run, the Miners have used their strong inside game, led by top scorers Taylor (15.9) and Chancellor (13.5), to muscle their way to a 13-9 record (8-4 WAC). They're among the top four teams in their division.

While that hardly qualifies them as a powerhouse, the success is major for a program where victories have been few and the next NCAA Tournament berth will be the first.

By contrast, the men's team won the 1966 national title and has seven WAC crowns under Haskins, one of only 10 Division I coaches with at least 700 victories.

This year, the women have outpaced their male counterparts (12-10, 3-7), upset nationally ranked Utah and could go into the WAC Tournament next month knowing they've beat most of the teams in their division at least once.

"I'm very optimistic. I think if we just go out and play like we know we can play we can get the NCAA bid (for winning the tournament)," Taylor said.

The confidence expressed by team leaders is tempered by the knowledge that the Miners could have been on top if they had been able to press the advantage they held after beating No. 11 Utah 50-46 on Jan. 31.

Instead, the Miners slumped on the road, falling to division leader Colorado State and Wyoming last week.

"I really hate to say that we're backsliding," coach Sandra Rushing said. "But, yeah, we had an opportunity to play for first. Now we're playing for third or fourth."

The chances of still finishing first are slim as the Miners would need some major losses by division leaders to get there.

"We kind of put our destiny in their hands," Chancellor said.

So approaching their final two games -- Saturday against Air Force and Thursday against New Mexico -- their talk has been of refocusing, getting back to the game that put them in contention in the first place.

The players acknowledge that the final games will be vital, but there is also the keen realization that a good run in the WAC Tournament could make this an unprecedented year.

"I have a lot of confidence in this team," Chancellor said. "We're close. We should be there."

Rider leads Portland past Rockets, 105-81

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) -- Isaiah Rider returned from a one-game suspension to score 25 points as the Portland Trail Blazers defeated the Houston Rockets 105-81 Friday night despite being short three players because of a trade with Toronto.

Rider, who was suspended for leaving the bench during a game against the Los Angeles Lakers, was booed early. The jeers quickly turned to cheers as Rider scored 14 points in the first half. The Blazers never trailed and led by as many as 27 points.

Arvydas Sabonis had 17 points and 14 rebounds, while point guard Rick Brunson had 16 points and a career-high eight assists in his first NBA start.

Charles Barkley had 18 points for the Rockets, who cut Portland's lead to 12 early in the fourth quarter. But rookie Kelvin Cato scored six points during an 8-0

Portland run that put the game away.

Earlier in the day, the Blazers sent Kenny Anderson, Alvin Williams, Gary Trent and two first-round draft picks to the Toronto Raptors for Damon Stoudamire, Walt Williams and Carlos Rogers. The new Blazers are expected to join the team for Sunday's home game against Denver.

From the opening tipoff, the Blazers, who have won five of six games, showed more quickness and aggressiveness than the Rockets could handle.

Portland scored the first 11 points and took a 19-4 lead before Hakeem Olajuwon scored Houston's first basket of the game with 5:45 left in the first period. Rider and Sabonis each had nine points in the quarter.

Kobayashi leads at LPGA's L.A. stop

GLENDAL, Calif. (AP) -- Playing her first competitive round in nearly three months, Hiromi Kobayashi of Japan wasn't sure what to expect. Six birdies in her first eight holes was certainly a pleasant surprise.

Thanks mainly to all those birdies, Kobayashi shot a 5-under-par 67 Friday, giving her a 3-shot lead entering today's second round of the Los Angeles Women's Championship.

Kobayashi, 30th on the money-winning list in 1997 with $261,814 in earnings, had a 30 on the back nine, which she played first.

"Maybe in Japan, not here," Kobayashi said when asked if she had ever shot a 30 for nine holes. "It was great. I was getting nervous toward the end. I was trying not to think about birdies, just hit it."

After the birdie spree, Kobayashi parred nine of her final 10 holes to come within two strokes of matching the low round of her career, which she recorded during the final round of the 1993 Minnesota LPGA Classic -- her last victory.

Kobayashi is playing in her first tournament since she finished in a four-way tie for 11th in the ITT LPGA Tour Championship in Las Vegas from Nov. 20-23.

"I tried not to expect too much, just play," she said. "My stroking was good. Today's putting was very good."

Kobayashi had her best year in 1993, when she recorded both of her LPGA wins and ranked eighth on the money-winning list with $347,060 in earnings.

The 35-year-old Kobayashi, who finished in a tie for 52nd at 4-over-par 220 in last year's inaugural L.A. Women's Championship, said she needed the break she took from competitive golf.

"I needed some rest for myself," she said. "I was busy in Japan."

Tied for second with 70s on the 6,276-yard, par-72 Oakmont Country Club course were four players in search of their first LPGA victory -- Australian Wendy Doolan, Alicia Dibos, Karen Weiss and qualifier Janice Moodie -- along with veteran Elaine Crosby.

Next at 71 were nine golfers including Annika Sorenstam, the leading money winner on the LPGA Tour last year and runner-up to Terry-Jo Myers in this tournament; Helen Alfredsson of Sweden, who won The Office Depot on Jan. 24 at West Palm Beach, Fla.; and LPGA Hall of Famer Nancy Lopez.

They were tied with Wendy Ward,

Cristie Kerr, Dottie Pepper, Kris Tschetter, Amy Benz and Luciana Benvenuti.

Among those at even-par 72 were Karrie Webb, the LPGA's second-leading money-winner in 1997; Laura Davies, Pat Hurst, Donna Andrews, Shelly Hamlin and Leigh Ann Mills, who qualified for the tournament Monday with a 68.

Twenty-three of the top 25 money-winners and 94 of the top 100 from 1997 are playing in this tournament -- third on the LPGA tour this year. The 54-hole event which has a top prize of $97,500 from a purse of $650,000 finishes Sunday.

Myers opened defense of her championship with a 3-over-par 75, and Kelly Robbins, who won the Healthhouse Inaugural at Orlando on Jan. 18 -- the first LPGA tournament of the year -- had a 76.

Baylor hires FB assistant

WACO (AP) -- Baylor has hired North Carolina assistant coach Eddie Williamson as an assistant head coach under Bears coach Dave Roberts.

Williamson, a 1974 graduate of Dickinson College, was an assistant coach at Baylor under Grant Teaff in 1983 and 1984. Most recently, he was an offensive line coach at North Carolina.

Williamson was head coach at Virginia Military Institute for four seasons, and has coached at Georgia, South Carolina, Wake Forest and Duke.

Rodriguez to report late

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. (AP) -- The Texas Rangers was one big player short when pitchers and catchers reported Friday for the start of spring training.

Missing was All-Star catcher Ivan Rodriguez, who is entering the first season of his new five year, $42 million guaranteed contract.

Rodriguez has told Rangers officials not to expect him to make it for Saturday's first workout for battery men. He called team officials from Puerto Rico on Wednesday to advise that he needed an extra day to handle a local legal matter.

More worrisome to manager Johnny Oates was Rodriguez's violation of a pledge to forego winter ball this past off-season.

From the "Boy, This is a Big Surprise" file: Canadian Ross Rebagliati was stripped of the gold medal he won Sunday in snowboarding. Rebagliati tested positive for marijuana. He maintains it was second-hand pot smoke.

Uh-huh. But all's well that ends well for Rebagliati. Thursday, he got his gold medal back, basically on a technicality.

You might think he'd be somewhat contrite following his scare. But that wouldn't be in keeping with the brashness of this new medal sport.

Rebagliati said he wouldn't consider ending the friendships that allegedly led to the controversy. That is, of course, if you believe he tested positive because of second-hand pot smoke.

Apparently, the Japanese police aren't so sure. They hauled Rebagliati in for questioning Thursday. He was released, but the investigation continues.

The Japanese apparently aren't quite as tolerant of smoking the evil weed as are Canadians and Americans. Just ask Paul McCartney.

There is also another Olympic sport making its medal debut. Curling. I haven't watched a lot of curling because neither CBS nor TNT have shown much.

But TNT did show some this past week in the afternoon. It's another sport where not a lot happens if you're looking for non-stop action.

I enjoyed watching it, though. Not being very familiar with the game, I can't say this with total certainly, but curling seems to focus heavily upon strategy.

In some ways, it reminds me of baseball in the way the game is thought, not just played.

On another Olympic note, I saw where CBS is not pleased TV ratings for the 1998 Winter Olympics are lagging behind past Winter Games. It seems people don't want to see all figure skating, all the time, after all.

Maybe CBS will now figure out that some figure skating is inevitably going to make it on TV, but you don't have to show practice sessions. People can only take so much.

Also, all those feel-good features get old. I imagine that provokes some viewers to grab for the remote.

Or a gun.

Picabo's 2nd shot at gold medal postponed

HAKUBA, Japan (AP) -- Rain and snow washed out the women's downhill Saturday (Friday night CST), delaying Picabo Street's bid to become the first U.S. woman skier to capture two gold medals in an Olympics since 1952.

Organizers still hoped to run the men's super-G as scheduled Saturday, but worsening weather made that unlikely.

The women's downhill was called off barely after dawn, as snow fell on the top of the course and rain soaked the finish area.

Street, who won the women's super-G on Wednesday, is among the favorites in the downhill. She won silver in the 1994 Olympic downhill in Lillehammer.

The postponement came one day after the off-delayed men's downhill finally was run and the men's combined event was completed. The men's downhill, originally scheduled for last Sunday, was postponed three times.

The wipeout of the women's downhill will further complicate an Alpine skiing schedule that has been tormented by snow, rain, wind and fog. In the first week of the Olympics, not a single Alpine race has been run on its original date.

Snow and rain were forecast to continue until Saturday afternoon. Then, after a dry night, the precipitation was expected to resume Sunday morning and continue through Monday morning.

There are open days in the Alpine schedule this Monday and on Feb. 22, the day reserved for closing ceremonies. Organizers have said they will do whatever is necessary to try to complete all Alpine races in these Olympics.

It is likely that officials will have to schedule more doubleheaders, such as the downhill-combined downhill on Friday, to get in the rest of the Alpine program.

Hawaiian

second straight day at the 7,012-yard oceanside course resulted in the cut being placed at a record 5-under 139, with 79 players advancing to the final 36 holes. Of the 143 players, 126 played at par or better.

Huston, who had to use his one-time Top 50 career money list exemption to remain in the PGA Tour, tied the 36-hole record set by Davis Love III by birdieing the final two holes.

"I took advantage of the chances I got," said Huston, who started in the afternoon. "It was a little more difficult today, but as long as I hit it in the fairway, I'll do well."

The key over the final two days will be posting staying below par on the par 5s, he said. On Thursday, Huston birdied all four -- and for good measure birdied the four par 3s. In the second round, he picked up three more strokes on the long holes. "If you hit it in the fairway, you have a good chance to make a birdie, even an eagle," Huston said. "If not, you're giving away a shot."

Kendall's philosophy said simply: "The main thing is get the ball in the fairway. When you do that, you have better chances. So far, I'm doing that."

David Ogrin, who shared the first-round lead with Huston, shot a 69 to head the 132 group that included Frank Lickliter (64), Keith Clearwater (65), Curtis Strange (67), Tom Byrum (68) and Hugh Royer III (65).

Ogrin, Lickliter and Clearwater jumped back into contention with eagles at the 505-yard 13th hole, while Strange eagled the 411-yard 14th and Royer birdied the final two holes.

At 133 were Olin Browne (66), Steve Stricker (67) and Mike Reid (68) with 1990 Hawaiian Open winner David Ishii (69) heading a group of nine at 134.

The 138 slot was a haven for former Hawaiian Open winners with Corey Pavin (1986 and 1987), John Morse (1995), Gene Sauers (1989) and defending champion Paul Stankowski, who triple-bogeyed the final hole. Jim Furyk, the winner two years ago, stood at 137 with 17 others.

This is the 33rd and final Hawaiian Open, which is sponsored by United Airlines. Next year, Sony Corp. will sponsor the Sony Classic in Hawaii in the same slot on the PGA Tour calendar, following the Mercedes Championships, which will be played at Kapalua on Maui.

Winter Olympic medals.

The U.S. hockey team, still smarting from a loss to defending gold medalist Sweden, bounced back Saturday with a 5-2 victory over underdog Belarus. Captain Chris Chelios scored for the second straight game and Pat LaFontaine added a power play goal to pace the Americans, who blew a 2-1 lead in their opener.

The Americans, with 23 NHL players, watched their lead dwindle to 3-2 against Belarus, which claims just a pair of marginal NHL performers. But Brett Hull's third-period goal locked things up for the United States.

The ski course in Hakuba continues to be a meteorologist's dream and a skier's nightmare. The Saturday (Friday night CST) weather featured a little bit of everything: snow at the top of the mountain, rain at the bottom, lighting somewhere in between.

The Nagano Olympics have looked better for U.S. athletes in the last three days, when they've picked up two medals a day after a drought in the games' opening days. On Friday, the United States ended a 34-year string of Olympic futility in the luge with two medals, a silver and a bronze.

One full week into the games, Norway tops the medal chart with 14 -- five gold, six silver, three bronze. Germany is second with 13 (5-4-4), while Austria follows with nine (1-2-6). The United States is fifth with its six medals (2-1-3).

got a chance to talk about it at halftime and got that part corrected."

Dean said the Whitefaces can play better defense than they played Friday night, particularly in the first half, but Hereford got a win to take some momentum into the playoffs scheduled to begin next week.

"We wanted to come over here and get a win," Dean said. "This group gets nine wins in district... it's a statement that they truly are one of the top teams in the district. To be able to get a hard-fought win and take that into the playoffs should be a plus."

The Demons, meanwhile, continued their climb back to basketball respectability.

"We really wanted to finish the season on a positive note," Epley said. "We went over to Pampa Tuesday night and didn't even show up (a 77-48 loss). To play Hereford like this, I'm really pleased with our performance... I thought we could play with them. I thought we ended the season positively even though we lost a tough game."

Hereford will open the playoffs Thursday, Friday or Saturday against the third-place team from District 2-4A.

Greenpeace protests organic food standards

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) - Meet "Fishberry" - part fish, part strawberry - and, if he really existed, potentially an organically labeled nightmare.

That is the opinion of Greenpeace activists and others protesting proposed federal standards for organic foods during a hearing convened by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

To help make their point, they brought along an activist costumed as a fish-headed strawberry - an example of what might happen through genetic engineering.

In real science, plants with genes from common soil bacteria produce their own pest-killing toxins, allowing farmers to skip the use of chemical sprays. But opponents say insects may become resistant to the bacteria more quickly if they constantly are exposed to the plants, which would hamper the effectiveness of new crop sprays that are also bacteria-based.

Some also have said that the foods resulting from genetically engineered plants may have harmful side effects. Among other changes, they want the new regulations for organic foods to ban use of genetic engineering in products labeled "organic."

"Consumers, organic farmers and the whole organic industry don't want this stuff. But the USDA has hijacked the process to keep from placing any kind of stigma on genetically altered foods," Greenpeace spokesman Bill Jackson said Thursday.

The Sierra Club says a proposal for allowing genetically engineered food to be deemed organic conflicts with current practices and the expectations of consumers.

"If the USDA's proposed rules are adopted as written, consumers will lose all faith in the 'organic' label, and a $3.5 billion industry in organic products will be threatened," said Carl Pope of the Sierra Club.

The Texas Agriculture Department said the state's organic certification standards could be significantly weakened if the proposals are adopted as written.

Under the state organic certification program, "consumers are assured the products they buy labeled as 'Texas Organic' are truly organic," said state Agriculture Commissioner Rick Perry. "National standards should not create any doubts for consumers but rather maintain the high level of confidence now set in Texas."

USDA spokesman Andy Solomon emphasized that what the agency has put out is a draft, not a final rule for organic labeling.

Even the initial proposal does not suggest allowing the use of genetically engineered organisms, but asks for public comment on whether they should be included, he said.

"We're very much engaged in a process now of seeking broad public participation and input.... Nothing is final," Solomon said.

U.S. Agriculture Secretary Dan

Glickman earlier this month delayed action on the labeling rules to allow more time for public comment. The deadline is now April 30.

The USDA has received hundreds of objections to the possibility that products undergoing irradiation, genetic engineering and fertilization with sewage sludge could be put under the organic label.

Growers also have said the rules would allow the organic label for livestock fed with up to 20 percent non-organic feed, and that loopholes would allow synthetic pesticides that never have been permitted.

Biodegradable bags, not so clean

BISMARCK, N.D. (AP) - When Don Griffin buys garbage bags for North Dakota state agencies, he asks suppliers for a type that's made partially from corn starch. He must.

For nine years, it's been the law - the legislature's attempt to promote products that benefit farmers.

But manufacturers don't sell the plastic bags, and for good reason. When they're lifted, sometimes the trash stays behind.

"They're worthless," Griffin said. "If they sit outside in the sunlight, they deteriorate, so if they're there for a period of time, they completely lose their strength.... When you pick them up, the bag falls apart."

A recent audit of buying practices in state government and North Dakota's university system questioned whether some requirements, approved to encourage the buying of recycled paper and products made from farm commodities, were being ignored.

North Dakota law requires agencies to purchase certain amounts of recycled paper, ask for soybean-based ink on printing jobs and buy "starch-based" garbage can liners.

In recent years, other ideas have been floated in the legislature as well, including a ban on state government use of plastic foam coffee cups and a requirement that state vehicles be fueled with ethanol, a blend of gasoline and grain-based alcohol.

Some of the directives are less onerous than others. State agencies have little problem buying recycled stationery and copier paper, purchasing agents say, and use of soybean-based ink is fairly common.

The state's office of management and budget used soy ink for printing an informational tabloid, inserted in North Dakota newspapers last month, which featured charts, graphs and other details of state spending.

However, trash bags with a high starch content are another matter. Griffin said when the state requested bids for garbage liners in November, companies had no problem supplying prices for conventional ones, which use petroleum derivatives. But no supplier responded to a request for starch-based trash bags.

Pam Sharp, deputy state budget director, said OMB would ask the 1999 legislature to change the law. Gov. Ed Schafer ridiculed the provision.

"We should encourage agencies to recycle, to buy recycled materials if possible," Schafer said. "But to go through and ... make it a legal requirement of the state of North Dakota, I think is a waste of resources."

Wallie Hardie, a Fairmount farmer who is chairman of the National Corn Growers Association, lobbied for the proposal during the 1989 legislature. At the time, the development of trash bags made partly from corn looked promising. Officials estimated it could create demand for between 150 million and 300 million bushels of corn annually.

"It looked at that time like this was a technology that was going to catch on, and we felt it was appropriate for state government to encourage that," Hardie said. "It seems as though that's not the trend today."

However, corn derivatives are being used in other plastic products, such as eating utensils, Hardie said.

Farming - one hazardous occupation

WASHINGTON (AP) - Farmers enjoy their own work schedules, daily contact with the outdoors, the satisfaction of a connection to the land - but they also work at one of the country's most hazardous careers.

Researchers at the Agriculture Department examined census data from 1992 and found 673 fatalities on U.S. farms that year, about one for every 2,861 farms in the country. Tractor rollover accidents often kill.

Nonfatal injuries took a much bigger toll, with almost 65,000 fractures, lacerations, sprains, eye injuries and other accidents that caused many farm workers to miss a few days to a week of activity. Of those, more than 44,000 were hired workers.

"Agriculture is an icon of American history, but it remains one of the most dangerous industries in America," said Jerry Scannell, president of the National Safety Council.

Despite such a record, farming is subject to fewer regulations than almost any other work, the Agriculture Department study found.

For instance, the Fair Labor Standards Act sets limits for child farm workers on age, hours worked and conditions, limits that don't apply if the child works on a farm owned or operated by the parents.

There were 490 fatalities and 20,430 other injuries from mishaps involving farm operators and family members in 1992. Not all were children, but the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health estimates that 100 people under age 20 are killed on farms each year.

In addition, by order of Congress rules of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration long have exempted farms employing 10 or fewer workers and those "that do not maintain a labor camp."

"OSHA regulations could apply to less than 3 percent of U.S. farms and cover less than 56 percent of hired workers on farms," said Jack Runyan of USDA's Economic Research Service, the report's author.

Yet new regulations are unlikely on farmers, who have a long history of resisting labor restrictions. They point out that farming doesn't operate by a 40-hour clock, it involves long hours using dangerous machinery and its tradition is for family members of all ages to pitch in.

Some other farm-safety problems: farmers and hired workers often don't receive formal safety training and do their jobs in rural areas far from quick emergency response.

The Agriculture Department report concludes that more education and better safety devices on machinery are needed to reduce farm accidents, and action is being taken on several fronts to meet those recommendations.

The National Farm Medicine Center in Marshfield, Wis., was recently awarded $3 million in federal money over five years to create the National Children's Center for Agricultural Injury Prevention, which will study how to improve farm safety for younger workers.

Perhaps the most frequent cause of fatal accidents for all age groups is tractor rollovers. Once a multiton tractor hits a hole and starts to tip over, nothing will stop it and it's difficult for the operator to jump free.

Tractor makers agreed as early as 1985 to begin selling only machines with rollover protection, but hundreds of thousands remain in use without the structures. Many also lack seat belts.

In fact, a recent survey by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention found that although almost 40 percent of tractors in use in Iowa feature rollover protection structures, an estimated 156,000 tractors do not. Two-thirds of them are used more than 100 hours a year.

But not every farmer can afford to buy a new tractor with the protection. Five leading tractor makers, including Deere & Co. and New Holland North America, are encouraging dealers to offer rollover and seat belt kits to farmers at cost for the older machines.

The estimated dealer cost of these kits is about $600, not counting freight and installation.

Cow-car collisions cause concern

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) - In Nebraska, cattle outnumber people by almost six to one, and there are more than 350 collisions between cows and motor vehicles every year.

A 1995 Nebraska Supreme Court ruling required cattle owners to prove they are not negligent in cattle collisions with vehicles. That is just plain wrong, Sen. Roger Wehrbein told a legislative committee Wednesday.

Before the court's decision, lawsuits usually were not filed when a motorist struck a cow that had wandered onto the road, retired farmer Cy Miller told the Judiciary Committee.

"The farmer lost a critter and ... (the driver) lost a pickup," Miller said.

Now farmers are well-advised to keep up to $3 million in liability insurance, Kansas State University law professor Roger McEowen testified.

The high court three years ago ruled that a Saline County farmer was liable for damages sustained by a truck driver who collided with a cow that had escaped from a pen.

In that case, the court found that the legal doctrine called "res ipsa loquitur" is applicable in instances of motor vehicle collisions with escaped livestock.

The doctrine, which means "the thing speaks for itself," placed the burden of proof on the livestock owner to prove he or she was not negligent in maintaining fences and taking other reasonable steps to keep cattle confined.

Nebraska is the only leading livestock-producing state that uses the doctrine to place the burden of proof on the owners of the cattle, McEowen said.

For cattle owners to prove they were not negligent is very difficult, if not impossible, in cow-car crashes, Wehrbein said.

His bill would require a motorist who strikes a stray cow to prove that a rancher was negligent in allowing the animal to escape. There would be no presumption or inference that the collision was due to negligence or behalf of the owner of the livestock or the person in possession of the livestock.

"Cattle, and other livestock, are not inanimate objects; they are not machines that you can program," Wehrbein said. "They, as large domesticated animals, do have minds of their own and can, when provoked by factors outside the control of the livestock owner, escape the most formidable and well-cared-for fences."

Wehrbein's proposal does not clear farmers of liability for their herds, McEowen said. Instead, it would specify that an ordinary standard of care and ordinary negligence rules apply in livestock trespass cases, he said.

Attorney Bob Chaloupka of Scottsbluff argued against the measure, saying it would give cattle owners an unfair advantage. He recently persuaded a Nebraska jury to require a livestock owner to pay damages after an accident.

N.M. farmers wage war on boll weevils

DEMING, N.M. (AP) - Cotton farmers in Luna County, N.M., have declared war on the boll weevil.

"We've got to get a handle on this boll weevil before it wipes us out - and it has the potential to do that," said Martin Sweetser, chairman of the Luna County Pest Management Association. "We've got a good chance of eradicating the weevil."

An eradication program, including insect traps and spraying, should begin by April, said Jay Yates, a member of the association board.

The reddish-brown insects feed on cotton plants, diminishing their value.

An overwhelming majority of the county's growers recently approved a referendum to form a district to work to eradicate the pest.

The farmers formed the pest association and set up a voluntary $5-per-bale assessment for cotton processed since the beginning of last season.

State law requires approval by farmers representing at least two-thirds of the acreage to form a district. In Luna County, that threshold was 4,616 acres. Farmers representing 5,817 acres voted for the referendum.

The weevils are migrating west from Dona Ana County. Last year, more than 150,000 of the insects were captured in Dona Ana County, compared with 160 in Luna County, according to the U.S. Agriculture Department.

Dona Ana County growers twice last year rejected the formation of an eradication district, but are considering it again.

Brooks' hat is part of his style

By The Associated Press
Call them sartorial signatures. Ever since Adam and Eve worked the fig leaf and Honest Abe doffed his stovepipe hat, famous folks have developed trademark looks that set them apart.

Garth Brooks' favored topper is a Stetson, size 7 5/8, typically black. (Not to be confused with fellow country crooner Alan Jackson, whose signature Stetson is white).

Going back 20 years, Brooks would score his hats in Western wear stores. But now "he buys in bulk directly from Stetson and saves a little money," said publicist Scott Stem.

The appeal? Whether performing at Nashville's Grand Ole Opry or in New York's Central Park, Brooks loves looking West-dressed. "I've heard Garth say that he has tremendous respect for the true cowboy," Stem said.

Suspenders are practically a calling card for CNN's Larry King. Is this his way of making a fashion statement? Nope. One of his ex-wives suggested he wear them. Now King owns dozens and dozens of pairs.

For R&B singer Erykah Badu, her colorful head wraps are a return to her roots. Typically adorned in African-inspired garb, Badu says she is proud to show mainstream America a side of black America that she says is often ignored.

"I didn't create the head wrap," she said in the January issue of Allure magazine, "but I did inspire people to wear it. It's important that children see there's more than one way to be black in America. I wear it for that purpose, and to look Nefertitius whenever I can."

Designer Isaac Mizrahi may have shed his headbands along with some pounds, but former New York Times style editor Carrie Donovan is still unmistakable in her thick, black-rimmed, oversized eyeglasses. Vogue magazine's Anna Wintour and her shades are a little bit of darkness in a sea of limelight as she sits in the front rows along the runways at the fashion collections.

Chanel designer Karl Lagerfeld moves within the elite social circles of Paris sporting a white-powdered ponytail.

Then there's Lagerfeld's ubiquitous prop, a fashionable fan, be it ornate gold or simple black, culled from his extensive collection.

Long may it wave. "It's one way to avoid cigarette smoke," said Chanel publicist Anne Fahey in New York.

Besides, Lagerfeld "likes to chat with people at parties, and with the fan, he can pull someone aside and say something a bit discreet," Fahey said.

Color offers a snappy signature, such as Nancy Reagan red or Johnny Cash black.

Take Sally Jessy Raphael's red frames. They were an impulse purchase about 15 years ago, the only specs on sale when she desperately needed a pair to read the TV monitor.

Does her prominence on daytime television sentence her to a life with her eyes rimmed in red?

"The glasses are definitely a double-edged sword. I'd be lying if I said I never got tired of them," Raphael said. "Maybe that's why I've changed my hair so many times."

"At this point I have no idea whether they're still in my contract or not," she said. "But I certainly have no intention of changing. They're so much a part of me, and being famous enough to have a trademark is flattering and fun."

New York social-page clothes-horse Anne Slater has been wearing her sapphire-blue frames "every day and night for 30 years."

"I bought one pair of Lugenies at their Madison Avenue store in a style called 'Debutante' and wore them for about a week and liked them the most. So I went back and said, 'I'll take them,'" Slater said.

She didn't mean one pair.

She bought three dozen.

HRMC seeks to promote awareness, educate public as to cardiac services

The first minutes after a heart attack are vital to save lives, and appropriate care after diagnosis or heart surgery is important for quality of life.

February is designated as National Heart Month and the staff of Hereford Regional Medical Center is taking this opportunity to promote awareness and educate the public about risk factors, warning signs, healthy eating, and cardiac services available in Hereford.

According to Donna Kemp, RN, BSN, director of nursing at HRMC, "Our team of health care professionals are trained in the techniques and medications that must be used in the early minutes of a heart attack. Our goal is to stabilize and then provide a specific diagnosis of the condition with an appropriate treatment plan."

"We want people to understand that we're here for the patient, both before and after a heart attack or a serious heart condition has been diagnosed," Kemp said. "There is a misconception that if a hospital does not do open heart surgery, then it cannot offer services to heart patients. But that is far from reality," she added.

Jim Robinson, CEO/administrator, explains the various aspects of cardiac care available at HRMC. "The physician has various diagnostic tools accessible to him. Stress testing and cardiac ultrasound are a couple of examples that we have here at the hospital to assist in the proper diagnosis and treatment of a heart problem."

"In addition, a physician may order

Change in eating behavior is best way to keep heart healthy

Most people know one of the best ways to get heart healthy is to change eating behavior. What they don't always know is how to do that without giving up some favorite recipes.

Cutting fat, cholesterol, calories and salt can actually be pretty easy, said a nutrition specialist at Texas A&M University.

"The Texas Agricultural Extension Service has a new guide called 'Altering Recipes For Good Health.' With a little planning and experimentation, many of our favorites can become better for us," Dr. Mickey Bielamowicz said.

One thing chefs should remember is that recipes are chemical formulas, Bielamowicz said. All changes are experiments. Some work very well, others are less satisfactory.

"Recipes for combined foods, like casseroles and soups, are more flexible than others. A cookie recipe is more adaptable than a cake recipe. Recipes for most based products can be altered, but recipes for any preserved product, such as pickles, salsa, jellies or candies shouldn't be changed," she noted.

Most people don't notice much difference in their goods when the following kinds of changes are made.

"Reduce sugar and fat by one-third," Bielamowicz said.

For example, if a recipe calls for 1 cup of sugar, use two-thirds of a cup instead. As a general rule, try using a half-cup of sugar per cup of flour in cookies and cakes. For quick breads and muffins, use 1 tablespoon per cup of flour.

"To enhance the flavor when sugar is reduced, add vanilla, cinnamon or nutmeg," Bielamowicz suggested.

Fats constitute lard, oils, shortening, margarine, butter and beef fat. If a recipe calls for a half-cup of fat, use one-third cup instead. This works best in gravies, sauces, puddings and some cookies. For cakes and quick breads, use 2 tablespoons of fat per cup of flour.

Herbs, spices or salt-free seasoning mixes will help eliminate salt from recipes while adding flavor. Another suggestion is to reduce salt by one-half.

"Don't eliminate salt from yeast bread or rolls -- it is essential for flavor and helps texture," Bielamowicz warned.

By substituting whole grain and bran flours for all-purpose flour, new flavors, textures and fiber are added to food.

For example, whole wheat flour can replace from one-fourth to one-half of the all-purpose flour in a recipe.

Oat bran or oatmeal can replace up to one-fourth of the all-purpose flour. "Make sure it's ground to flour's consistency in a food process or blender."

Bran cereal flour is made by grinding ready-to-eat bran cereals in a food process or blender for 60 to 90 seconds, Bielamowicz said. "It can replace up to one-fourth of the all-purpose flour."

Not all products are interchangeable. Bielamowicz does not recommend substituting margarine for solid shortening when baking.

"Just because an ingredient is a fat, it doesn't necessarily make it interchangeable with another," she said.

For example, oil is 100 percent fat. Margarine is an emulsion containing 80 percent fat and 20 percent water. Substituting 1 cup of oil for 1 cup of margarine adds more fat than the recipe intended. "The cookies would feel and taste greasy," Bielamowicz explained.

Though it is possible to substitute lite margarine-type spreads for solid shortening when baking, Bielamowicz offered another solution.

"Rather than substituting reduced-fat margarine, try using less margarine. You won't have to alter the amount of liquid in the recipe and you'll save calories." Lite or diet margarine have more water in them, so the amount of liquid ingredients would also have to be reduced.

Alternative sweeteners may be used instead of sugar. According to a maker of a non-nutritive saccharin sweetener, its product can replace up

CECELIA ALBRACHT, CHARLIE ADKINS

St. Anthony's selected as site of May wedding

Thomas and Annette Albracht of Hereford announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Cecelia Mary, to Charles Ryan Adkins of Tulia.

The prospective bridegroom is the son of Jerry and Richelle Culifer of Tulia.

The couple will be married May 23 in St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Hereford.

The bride-elect graduated from Hereford High School in 1993. She is a senior elementary education major at West Texas A&M University where she is a candidate for December 1998 graduation.

Adkins graduated from Tulia High School in 1990. He attended North Western State University and WTAMU. He is currently employed by B&R Thriftway in Tulia.

Revival to begin Wed. at Hereford Nazarene

Hereford Church of the Nazarene will hold a revival beginning a 7 p.m. Wednesday and continuing nightly through Saturday, Sunday, Feb. 22. Services are set for 10:30 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Evangelist will be Elaine Pettit, registered evangelist in the Church of the Nazarene.

In the past year, Pettit has held 32 revivals in 12 districts, preached at a campmeeting, Olivet College Church, Bethany First Church, various women's retreats and held a prayer seminar.

Ted Taylor, pastor of Hereford Church of the Nazarene, said, "Like the Promise Keepers, we believe revival is the extraordinary work of God among His people causing extraordinary results in and through the church."

CEAP workshops set to begin Tues.

Panhandle Community Services is offering the Comprehensive Energy Assistance Program (CEAP) which helps pay gas and electric bills for qualifying area residents.

While income guidelines will help determine eligibility, a priority rating point system will be used and applicants who have not received assistance in the past will receive more points, according to Celia Serrano, coordinator for Panhandle Community Services.

Qualifying applicants, other than elderly and disabled, must attend a series of six consecutive energy conservation workshops or they will be disqualified from the program.

The first workshop will be from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. Feb. 17 in the Hereford Community Center.

For more information, contact Serrano at 364-5631.

HJH Roundup

By CAROLYN WATERS

"When you are in charge, act with integrity. The people on your team need a leader they can trust."

Pink Team students who passed all parts of the practice TAAS in November include: Michelle Bernhardt, Armando Montano, Stefan Friemel, Dusty Clark, Kody Lewis, Amy Bell, Kevin Winget, Aaron Landers, Marcus Ramirez, Greg Zepeda, Angela Morris, Estaban Lopez, Dominique Brown, Regina Condarco, Brandon Bigham, McKenzie Tabor, Tyler Nielson, Cody Marsh, Joanna Olson, Abigail Caperton, Becky Fuller, Matthew Rivera and Ruben Lancon.

Blue Team history students, taught by Diedra Drake, are studying the Bill of Rights. They are searching for newspaper articles that relate to one of the first amendments, will summarize the article and justify how it relates to the amendment.

Yellow and Green Team history students will be voting on postage stamp ideas to commemorate the '50s. Some units of study provided by the USPS that cover this century will be used in these classes through the '99 school year. There are a number of exciting activities included in the material.

That long-awaited-for long weekend will be one day longer for HJH students. Tuesday will be a teacher in-service and students will stay at home. They have been reminded that they are not to be on any school campus that day. Perhaps they can have chores to do at home!

Those students who plan to go to the History Fair in Canyon on Saturday, Feb. 21, will have a full agenda during the long weekend as each and all have plenty of work to do. To date, all are behind schedule and they must be finished no later than 4:30 p.m. on Friday, Feb. 20. If not, they will not be attending the fair.

At the present time we have the possibility of having six projects, one performance and one paper entered in the competition. Those who place first or second in Canyon earn the right to advance to the state meet in Austin in May.

Junior Historians will be preparing recipes for their cookbook during the next two weeks and will begin advance sales. They are designing the cover to coincide with the 100th birthday of Hereford. This will be their only fund-raiser, besides dues, and hopefully, the sale will be good. They will also be advertising the T-Shirt design competition very soon. This is also to be used in conjunction with the birthday celebration.

"Be there when your children need you, even if they don't think they need you until after you are present."

Red Cross Update

A Lifeguarding class will be held during spring break. Call the office or Aquatic Center for the schedule and cost of the class. Those interested in taking the class should check with Shawn at the pool to practice the skills needed to take the class.

March is National Red Cross Month and as part of that observation, chapters across the nation will focus on Family Safety and providing training for families. Call our office for information on programs helping families with safety training.

Thanks to West Texas Rural Telephone, the chapter has an E-mail address. Send your messages to redcross@wtrt.net. and they will be answered promptly. The Red Cross web page is very interesting and the Disaster web page keeps us informed of disaster developments in the Red Cross. Call the office for the Red Cross web page address.

We are accepting contributions to the National Disaster Relief fund here at the office. Those checks should be earmarked for disaster relief or a specific area if you would like and the donation will be sent to headquarters or you may call 1-800-HELP NOW to send a credit card donation or for more information.

A garage sale will be held in March to raise funds for disaster relief.

The board of directors, David Castillo, chairman, is accepting applications for the chapter manager's job. Applications may be picked up at the office or contact Lupe Chavez, search committee chairman.

MRS. LEWIS ANTON FETSCH
...nee Marcia Susan Homer

Couple united during afternoon ceremony

Marcia Susan Homer and Lewis Anton Fetsch were united in marriage Saturday afternoon in St. Anthony's Catholic Church in Hereford.

The bride is the daughter of the late Martin J. and Mary Lou Homer. The bridegroom is the son of Felix and Wilhemine Fetsch of Hereford.

Monsignor Orville Blum of St. Anthony's officiated at the ceremony. Matron of honor was Debbie Fetsch, sister-in-law of the groom. Best man was Dennis Weeg, brother-in-law of the groom.

Bridesmaids were Christy Crawford of Kress and Janie Holt of Amarillo, both sisters of the bride, and Sherry Hall and Stacy Ruga of Hereford.

Serving as groomsmen were Ronnie and David Fetsch, brothers of the groom, and Jim Warren and Phil Berend, all of Hereford.

Jason Lueb of Amarillo and Rick Fetsch of Seymour served as ushers.

Victoria Brown, daughter of Marty and Grace Brown, was flower girl. Andrew Fetsch, son of David and Cindy Fetsch, was ring bearer.

Christy Crawford and Stacy Ruga served as candle lighters.

Cheryl Betzen was organist. Ann Lueb, sister of the bride, and Bill Sava were vocalists.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother Tim Homer, wore a full-skirted white satin gown. Lace inserts decorated the drop waist bodice and the leg of mutton sleeves were accented with a satin bow. A flat bow set off the cathedral train which was trimmed with lace teardrops and edged with looped ribbon.

Her veil was attached to a white satin bow accented with strings of pearls and baby's breath.

She carried a silk floral bouquet of red, pink and white tea roses accented with baby's breath and ribbons.

Bridal attendants wore red satin drop waist dresses and each carried a single long stemmed red rose.

The couple was honored with a reception following the ceremony.

Those assisting with the reception were Yvonne Weeg of Canyon, Vicki Lange of Amarillo, J.J. Hill and Julie Lueb of Hereford.

The bride's table was covered with a red cloth and white overlay. The three-tiered cake was topped with satin bells and accented with four heart shaped satellite cakes.

After a wedding trip to Cozumel, the couple will be at home in Hereford.

The bride is employed at Hereford Regional Medical Center. The groom is engaged in farming.

to half of the sugar called for in a cookie or cake recipe.

Here's where experimentation come in. This product's literature stated that in a cake recipe, liquid ingredients may have to be increased or dry ingredients decreased. For cookies, dry ingredients should be reduced 25 percent. If the batter is still stiff, an extra egg white may be added.

Sweeteners made with aspartame are not recommended for cooking or baking, Bielamowicz said.

Dairy products offer a variety of choices for making a recipe leaner.

"You can use reduced-fat sour cream, low-fat or non-fat yogurt, or cottage cheese instead of regular sour cream in sauces and dips. Skim milk can be used instead of whole milk in most recipes," Bielamowicz said.

"Altering Recipes For Good Health" also contains ideas for fiber substitutes. One suggestion is to use brown rice, barley or wheat kernels as a substitute for white rice in casseroles, soups, stir fry and side dishes.

"This guide has it all," Bielamowicz said. "It also contains an herb and spice guide, recipes and all kinds of ideas for substituting foods. It even works for persons with diabetes who follow the food guide pyramid."

The "Altering Recipes For Good Health" guide is available through the Deaf Smith County Extension office. For more information, contact Beverly Harder, CEA-FCS, at 364-3573.

HIDDEN VEGETABLES

Tips on how to get children to eat more vegetables

If your child "just says no" to vegetables -- try hiding them in other dishes.

Finely chopped or mashed broccoli or spinach can be added to lasagna -- or mixed with cheese in a stuffed baked potato. They can also be blended into yogurt based-dips to be eaten with carrots and celery.

Bits of onion, mushroom and green pepper are barely recognizable in spaghetti sauce and casseroles.

And many children enjoy soups -- they're a great way to serve a wide variety of vegetables to your family.

Variety makes life interesting -- and may also hold the key to better nutrition for your family. So try some variations on the plain vegetable theme.

Dear Friends & Loved Ones ...

We are at a loss for the words to express our deep appreciation for your loving support shown to us in so many ways after the tragic deaths of Gary in November and Bruce in December.

The Lord's grace is sufficient and we thank you for the food, flowers, cards, visits and most of all for your prayers and loving concern. The food brought in after my return from the hospital has been a tremendous help. My recovery from burns has taken all of my time and energy. My focus has had to be 100% on my healing. It is with overwhelming emotion that I write to you today to say, "You have made it easier and by God's grace the healing is taking place."

Thank you so much for being obedient to the Lord. It has helped in so many ways. May each of you be blessed as we have been blessed with His love and peace.

Thank you to the Pastors, Churches, Friends and Law Enforcement who took part in his services. God bless everyone!

God looked around his garden and he found an empty space, he then looked upon this earth and saw your tired face. He put his arm around you and lifted you to rest. God's garden must be beautiful, he always takes the best. So he closed your weary eyelids and whispered "Peace Be Thine." He then took you up to heaven with hands so gentle and kind.

Where Medicare Steps In

Medicare, the basic medical coverage for most senior citizens, plays a role in eye health, too.

What's not covered are eyeglasses or the basic eye exam for visual acuity. But where the eye health care services of licensed optometrists are necessitated by a health-related condition, symptom or complaint, Medicare steps in.

If an individual reports blurry side vision, which might be a symptom of glaucoma, then the test for glaucoma and the rest of the eye exam would be covered. An eye exam for a patient with a history of diabetes or headaches would be covered as well. Testing for cataracts is a bona-fide Medicare expense, as are the cost of the glasses and contact lenses required for after-surgery care. And, in all those states where optometrists are permitted to treat eye conditions as well as diagnose them, that treatment also would be covered by Medicare.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Your column on masturbation was vile -- an abomination not fit for a family newspaper. I wonder how many of your editors published something else in its place.

Don't you read the Bible? Have you never heard of the sin of Onan, who spilled his seed on the ground? The Lord gave us the gift of sex for the purpose of procreation, not for the pleasure of the act.

You, Miss Landers, have millions of readers and a great deal of power. It is distressing to me that you are using that power to undermine the morals of our country, especially those of young people. As you can see from this stationery, I am a minister, but I would prefer that you not use my name if you print my letter. You have a great many fans here, and I have no desire to get into arguments with these people. Just sign my letter -- An Appalled Clergyman in Missouri.

Dear Appalled: You are right about the criticism. I did receive some, but those letters were outnumbered 50 to 1 by letters of gratitude and praise. Please keep reading for more on this subject.

Dear Ann Landers: I just read your column suggesting mutual masturbation as an alternative to sexual intercourse. As the mother of a 17-year-old son and a 20-year-old daughter, I want to applaud your courage. I am sure you realized when you wrote that column that there would be some risks.

I have heard some sad stories about older couples who are frustrated and reluctant for religious reasons to take the path you recommended. I hope they saw your column and will go ahead and do what comes naturally. -- Realistic in Woodland Hills, Calif.

Dear Ann: Bravo for your column on masturbation. You were brave to print it. Poor Joycelyn Elders, who was an extremely competent surgeon general, was pilloried for saying exactly the same thing. The greatest sin has been that of religious fanatics who make people feel guilty for discovering the wonderful gift of their sexuality. -- Fritz in Downey, Calif.

Dear Fritz: I agree wholeheartedly. I am sure Dr. Joycelyn Elders would not have been clobbered so unmercifully had my readers been in charge. Unfortunately, Dr. Elders was a woman ahead of her time.

Dear Ann: I am a clergyman. Don't let the whining and carping of self-righteous, holier-than-thou folks get you down. You are saving lives. The perennial harping on the "sin of Onan" has been greatly misunderstood by millions of people. The real sin of Onan was refusing to procreate in the place of his deceased brother and raise up sons.

Masturbation has beneficial aspects that go beyond the prevention of disease and pregnancy. For the complete satisfying of sexual energies directed toward a loving partner, mutual hand play is necessary. Solitary masturbation will not suffice. It is a well-known fact that the pleasure we get is in the pleasure we give. What could be more uplifting and rewarding than that? I support your position, Ann, and I appreciate your brave efforts to help your readers. -- Retired Minister in Chicago

Dear Minister: Too bad you retired. We need more ministers like you. My thanks to you and all the others who wrote to back me up. This topic resulted in a most gratifying batch of mail. To pick up on an old commercial, "We've come a long way, baby."

Gem of the Day: War is not about who is right. It's about who is left.

Feeling pressured to have sex? How well-informed are you? Write for Ann Landers' booklet "Sex and the Teenager." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $3.75 (this includes postage and handling) to: Teens, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. We Can Explain Why You Need An IRA In Two Words:

Social Security.

If you're going up the hump, not over the hill, then you've probably realized by now that Social Security isn't going to be quite as secure as you once believed.

An Individual Retirement Account at Hereford State Bank is a very smart investment toward your future because it's a personal savings plan that provides a substantial retirement fund, and also allows you to defer taxes on the principal as well as the accrued interest each year.

Because your earnings on an IRA investment are tax-deferred, they build much faster than many comparable investments.

Of course, the sooner you start the better off you'll be. After all, you're getting close enough to see the top of the hill. Which leads us to our final two words.

Don't delay.

MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Don Taylor

Learning is a key to success

The benefit of knowledge is not in having it, but in using it for good.
-Anonymous

In many small businesses I work with, I find a direct correlation between learning and earning. In the business world, we do get paid for what we know.

However, knowledge in and of itself is of little value. You must apply that knowledge to solving problems, serving customers and selling products and services. Applying what you learn will increase your bottom line and improve your quality of life.

You often read in this column that success in business is the result of doing simple things well. The challenge is knowing what to do and how to improve.

Meeting the learning challenge

For nearly four years, we've dreamed of bringing a high-quality, affordable training program to the Amarillo area. We wanted to use professional presenters who can deliver content-rich messages for business and personal growth.

Thanks to Don Powell and our friends at The First National Bank of Amarillo our dream is becoming a reality. Beginning in March, we'll offer an all new training program titled, Entrepreneur's Institute 1998. This year-long program is a results-oriented management training series for small-business owners, managers and key employees.

Program highlights

• On March 10, 1998, Thom Winninger will deliver, "Hiring Smart: How to hire a team that wants to work." Thom is known as America's Business Coach. He is an author, successful entrepreneur and the 1995 Cavett Award winner - the highest honor accorded by the National Speakers Association.

• On April 14, 1998, Jerry Miller will present, "Investing in You: How to use the economic outlook to secure your personal future." Jerry is one of the region's most knowledgeable investment analysts. He's an experienced entrepreneur, consultant and is Dean of the T. Boone Pickens College of Business at West Texas A&M University.

• Our May 12, 1998, program will feature Jeff Slutsky and is titled, "Street Fighter Marketing: How to out-think rather than out-spend your competition." Jeff is a prolific author, successful business owner and marketing guru. He appears frequently on national television and has been profiled in The Wall Street Journal, USA Today, Success and Inc. magazines.

• Ely S. Valas will present our June 9, 1998, program titled, "Doing, Delegating or Dreaming: What is the entrepreneur's real job description." Ely is the executive director of the North American Retail Dealers Association. She is a veteran retail business owner, and a nationally-known training developer and seminar leader.

• On July 14, 1998, I'll present, "Controlling the Explosion: Dynamic growth strategies that won't blow your budget." In this program I'll share some of the strategies that have helped me sustain a 93.8 percent annual growth rate over the past five years in my own part-time business.

In addition, this power-packed program will include seven other extraordinary speakers and programs. We'll feature Len Baker's, "How to get a bigger piece of the pie," Roxanne Emmerich's, "Thank God it's Monday," Bill Harrington's, "Charting a course to success," Donny Mason's, "Renewing your own contract," James Owens, "Succeeding to death," David Shipman's, "Street-Smart Financial Management," and Sue Taylor's, "Business without borders."

I know you'll want to join us for this great learning experience. Call us at 372-5151 and we'll send you a catalog. Mention that you read about it in this column and we'll chop $100 off the regular price of $3999. At $299, you'll receive 36 hours of training for less than $9 per hour. This program comes with a written, money-back guarantee.

Don Taylor is the co-author of "Up Against the Wal-Mart's." You may write to him in care of "Minding Your Own Business," PO Box 67, Amarillo, TX 79105.

Between the Covers

By MARTHA RUSSELL

"Sewing With Rebecca" takes place every Monday night from 6-8 p.m. in the Story Room of your Deaf Smith County Library. March classes will feature the selection, placement and alteration of patterns.

If you don't know beans, or you are an accomplished seamstress, you are welcome to attend. Rebecca was a home economics teacher before she came to the library, and invites you to bring your sewing questions and requests for special topics.

When Life Hurts by Rabbi Wayne Dosick was written after the California wildfires of 1996 destroyed Rabbi Dosick's home. He candidly discusses the feelings that devastating events bring -- anger, grief, and despair -- as well as the discovery that life will never be the same again. "Our lives will now and forever be defined 'before the fire' and 'after the fire,'" Dosick writes.

When Life Hurts instructs, by example, how to create a new and deeper life in the aftermath of pain.

Another of the Sourcebooks is new this week. The Heart Disease Sourcebook by Roger S. Cicala, M.D., claims to be everything you need to know about causes and symptoms of different types of heart attacks, medications, the latest surgical techniques, and cardiac risk factors. The information is arranged in simple, easy-to-read format, an excellent resource.

Don't think that the current flap surrounding the White House is anything new. The Dark Side of Camelot by Seymour M. Hersh provides historical precedent for what we are hearing on the news today. However, much of what this book exposes did not make the nightly news in the 60s. Either they covered things up better back then or reporters and others were not as skilled at digging up dirt.

In another blast from the past, Gabriel Kolko explores the result of the 1975 Vietnam Communist victory in Vietnam: Anatomy of Peace. Kolko argues that the Communists were not prepared to cope with the reconstruction of the war-torn nation. Based on extensive research and first-hand experience, he outlines how Communists are failing to cope with the contradictions between daily realities and their original idealistic aims.

Other new nonfiction books are: Horse Owner's Veterinary Handbook by James M. Griffin, M.D., and Tom Gore, D.V.M.

Musical Instruments of the World: An Illustrated Encyclopedia

In The Winner by David Baldacci, LuAnn Tyler is a tough, dirt-poor young woman who is struggling to escape an abusive relationship and a life of endless poverty. Suddenly, a mysterious Mr. Jackson makes her an offer he thinks no one can refuse; a guarantee to be the next winner of the $100 million national lottery.

She refuses--at first. But when falsely charged with murder, she sees the offer, and its condition that she leave the country forever, as her only hope for her and her infant daughter.

Ten years later, LuAnn secretly disobeys Jackson and returns to the United States, where she is still wanted for murder. Then she meets Matthew Riggs, a man with a past as murky as her own. A reporter smells a scam in the national lottery and picks up her trail. Jackson comes to punish her for her disobedience. The FBI is looking for her when they suspect someone may have fixed the lottery. Everyone is closing in on her and she finds herself turning to Matt Riggs for help, but he may be just another predator in her life.

Four Letters of Love by Niall Williams brings together two seemingly unrelated stories into a novel about the fated love of Isabel and Nicholas.

William Coughlan abandons his wife and his son, Nicholas, to paint the pictures he believes God has commanded. He disappears into the west of Ireland, daubing paint on canvas and staring at the Atlantic light.

On an island off the West Coast, a boy gifted in music falls mute and lame while playing with his sister. Isabel Gore must help her brother, Sean, home across the island to meet the disbelief and sorrow of her parents.

In Heaven's Song by Marilyn Kok, Nick Meyers is a single father and doctoral student at Texas A&M University. Cassie McCormick has just begun pursuing her master's degree. Both carry wounds from the past they would rather hide. Their paths crossed in a sleepy airport terminal, where they revealed just enough to hope they'd never meet again. But just around the corner, a greater destiny is drawing Cassie and Nick together.

Other new fiction include: Paradise by Toni Morrison, a selection of You-Know-How's Book Club

The Bohemian Murders: A Fremont Jones Mystery by Deanne Day

The Bear Went Over the Mountain by William Kotzwinkle, a satirical, whimsical story of a bear who enters the business world of the 1990s

To Say Nothing of the Dog by Connie Willis, a sci-fi time-travel adventure

Tight As A Tick: A Laura Fleming Mystery by Toni L.P. Kelner

Women's Division seeks members

The annual membership drive for the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce Women's Division begins this month.

The board of directors of the Women's Division is encouraging all current members to recruit new members. The member who recruits the most new members will receive $25 in Hereford Bucks.

As a way of welcoming new members, names of all new members will go into a drawing and the winner will also receive $25 in Hereford Bucks.

The Women's Division acts in conjunction with the Chamber of Commerce in providing services to Hereford. They are responsible for decorations for the annual Chamber of Commerce Banquet. Other activities include Miss Hereford pageant, Little Miss Hereford contest, activities at the Town and Country Jubilee and naming Beauty Spots during the summer months.

Anyone interested in joining Women's Division can contact the Chamber office, a current member of membership drive chairpersons Shannon Redwine and Rita Bell.

Prizes will be presented during the quarterly meeting in April.

Writing Want Ads that really sell!

Unsure how to write a Classified Ad that will get results? Follow these pointers and you'll soon have an empty space in your storage room and cash in your pocket.

For starters, look at ads which offer the same item/products. Get a sense of going rates and ideas for how to make your ad stand out. Once you're ready to write, begin with exactly what you're selling: "Dining room set, maple, six chairs." Then, remember these hints:

--Give the price. A newspaper consultant says 70 percent of classified readers won't respond to an ad with no price.

--Use key words to describe what you're selling. The key words for a car are make, model, year, body style, color, mileage and price. If it's a house, key words are location, type of construction, number of bedrooms and baths, and condition.

--Don't use abbreviations. It's tempting to abbreviate and save money if ads are billed by the line. Brand ads are billed by the words, so spell them out so readers won't be confused trying to figure out abbreviations.

--Don't be misleading. Think accurate and factual when you write. Be sure to include a phone number and the best times to reach you.

The House of the Week

A First-Rate Design

G-75

A STUCCO FINISH, appealing rooflines and elegant windows make up the exterior of this one-story home.

By BRUCE A. NATHAN
AP Newsfeatures

Nice features and sharp details make plan G-75, by HomeStyles Designers Network, a first-rate design. It provides 1,442 well-planned square feet of living space.

The airy entry opens to the large, central living room. This space features a 10-foot ceiling and a dramatic fireplace, and serves as the main spot for entertaining and relaxing. A covered side porch can be used for an extended entertainment area.

The living room flows into a nice-sized dining area where natural light pours through a picture window, brightening and warming meals taken there.

An eating bar and counter space are found in the adjoining U-shaped kitchen. The nearby hallway to the garage stores a washer, dryer and laundry sink.

Secluded in the back of the home is the private master suite, which includes a sitting area and a large walk-in closet with built-in drawers and shelves. Two sets of double doors introduce the lavish master bath, which has dual sinks and an oval tub.

Two secondary bedrooms and another bath are located across the home. The foremost bedroom has a ceiling that rises to 10 feet, 6 inches.

G-75 STATISTICS

Design G-75 has a living room, dining room, kitchen, three bedrooms, two full baths and a utility room, totaling 1,442 square feet of living space. This plan includes a crawlspace or slab foundation, and 2x4 exterior wall framing. The garage and storage area provide 516 square feet of additional space.

(For a more detailed, scaled plan of this house, including guides to estimating costs and financing, send $4 to House of the Week, P.O. Box 1562, New York, N.Y. 10116-1562. Be sure to include the plan number.)

THE ENTRY OPENS to the living room, which leads to a side covered porch, the dining room or the U-shaped kitchen. A short hallway houses the laundry area and leads out to the two-car garage. The master suite is just off the kitchen, secluded in the rear of the home. Two bedrooms and a full bath are found on the opposite side of the home.

HINTS FOR HOMEMAKERS

Protect Your Kitchen And Bath Investment

(NAPS)—Items considered special in your home deserve special cleaning practices.

Homeowners who have made a substantial investment in new sinks, appliances or cookware should make sure those items—and their surfaces—aren't accidentally marred.

While appearances count, it's important to prevent surfaces from being scratched for more than aesthetic reasons. When surfaces are scratched, dirt quickly settles into the scratch, making the surface much harder to clean.

To remove stains, rinse the surface cleaner and leave a smoother finish, experts suggest using a gentle, non-abrasive cleanser.

"It's important to use a non-scratching, non-dyed, non-chlorinated cleanser, not only for day-to-day cleaning but to polish away discolorations, pot marks and hard water spots," said Ben Stark of the Faultless Starch Company.

The cleanser should contain "only gentle abrasives and a good grease-cutting biodegradable detergent," Stark said. "You don't need the silica abrasives, perfume, dyes or chlorine found in many cleansers."

It's important to take special care protecting the surfaces of new countertops, sinks, tile or cookware.

One leading brand of cleanser, Faultless Starch's Bon Ami, has the gentle abrasive quality that makes it suitable to use on new and valuable hard surfaces. In fact, "hasn't scratched yet" is the product's longtime slogan.

"If you've invested a lot of money into new countertops, new sinks, high-end cookware or expensive tile, a non-scratching cleanser like Bon Ami could help protect the investment you've made in your kitchen or bath," Stark said.

★ Fred Rogers: big career caring for the little things

By Suzanne Gill

cTVData Features Syndicate

The soft-spoken, cardigan-wearing gentleman who likes us all "just the way we are" is marking his 30th anniversary as the host and driving force behind PBS' Mister Rogers' Neighborhood in two ways.

First, Fred Rogers has prepared a new batch of Neighborhood episodes for his young viewers. The shows, on the theme of "Giving and Receiving," air daily beginning Monday, Feb. 16 (check local listings). In Monday's show, Mister Rogers visits author and illustrator Eric Carle, sends Trolley to the Neighborhood of Make-Believe and — of course — feeds his fish.

Next, Rogers has a message for adults, too, particularly the press, and he uses the occasion of a 30th-anniversary press conference to share his thoughts.

"More than 50 years ago," Rogers reads from notes, "Adolf Hitler said, 'We will train young people before whom all the world will tremble. I want young people capable of violence — imperious, relentless, cruel.'"

In his customary thoughtful cadence, Rogers says, "I wonder what you might have written or broadcast the day that Hitler said that."

Rogers speaks of the 14-year-old West Paducah, Ky., boy who fatally shot three classmates. A few days before the incident, Rogers says, the boy had told people, "Something big is going to happen." The shooting, Rogers concludes, was his "something big."

"When I hear that story and others like it," Rogers says, "I wonder how much our society has encouraged children to idolize the big and the flashy and the loud."

"There have been and continue to be (TV) programs which encourage people to believe that big is best, that loud is necessary. And that violence and cruelty are the ways we human beings must solve our problems. How do children know that what they see on television isn't part of the tradition of their family?"

"You know, the most holy people of every tradition have always encouraged us to celebrate the good, the simple, the modest, the truthful, because that's what lasts forever."

"You and I must encourage the producers and purveyors of all mass media to help us raise children who will reject violence and cruelty. Reject it because they have become aware, at the deepest levels of their being, that they are lovable. Not because they're big and loud and noisy, but because they're one of a kind."

When asked how it feels to know that the first generation of his one-of-a-kind viewers is now raising the second, Rogers replies, "Wonderful."

"One of the greatest dividends of having done a program for so long (is) that the parents who are now offering the Neighborhood to their children have a chance of ... remembering what their own childhood was like," he says.

Rogers' concern for his first viewers — now middle-aged baby boomers and Generation Xers — is unflagging. For those longtime "television friends," his message is the same: Celebrate the small and the quiet.

"But how do we celebrate? (By) being attentive to what is authentic, mysterious and whole, not seduced by the announcement that big things are going to happen," he says.

"There is so much more in this life than ever meets the eye," Rogers says. "We don't know why we're here today. We think that we're here because we have a job to do. Well, it's much more than that. Life is a great mystery."

Or, perhaps, many small ones.

Series host Fred Rogers marks 30 years on PBS with five new episodes of Mister Rogers' Neighborhood. The programs, with the theme of "Giving and Receiving," air this week on most public television stations (check local listings).

HOROSCOPES

★ ★ February 15-21 ★ ★

ARIES - March 21/April 20

A minor problem at work escalates into a serious situation. Work with your superiors to calm everyone down. Your efforts will be recognized. Loved ones rely on you a lot this week. They need your help to organize a family gathering. Capricorn and Scorpio play important roles on Thursday.

TAURUS - April 21/May 21

Don't be stubborn when it comes to a romantic relationship this week. Taurus. You're not the only person involved; think about what your special someone wants and needs. A heart-to-heart talk will solve a lot of problems. A friend needs your help. Be supportive, and do what you can.

GEMINI - May 22/June 21

There are so many things going on this week, Gemini, that you don't know which way to turn. Clear your thoughts, and organize your priorities. It's the only way to get everything done. The weekend will offer you a lot of time to relax. Do something special for yourself. A loved one has a surprise for you. You're going to love it.

CANCER - June 22/July 22

Keep your temper in check early in the week, Cancer, even though many people will be asking for your assistance. Do what you can to help them, because they need your expertise. A family friend offers you a lucrative business opportunity. Look at the facts before making a decision. There's a lot of potential here.

LEO - July 23/August 23

This is your week to roar, Leo! You finish an important project ahead of schedule and make great strides in a personal relationship. That special someone finally responds to your advances. Now is the time to show him or her how much you care. Plan a romantic evening for the two of you.

VIRGO - Aug 24/Sept 22

Your opinion is the deciding factor when it comes to a business proposition, Virgo. Don't agree to do anything that you're not comfortable with. You need to think about your own welfare. The person you've been dating doesn't call. Don't get upset. He or she just has a lot going on.

LIBRA - Sept 23/Oct 23

A business associate asks your advice about a personal problem that he or she is having. Try to help, but don't get too involved. Mixing business and personal matters can lead to a lot of difficulties. A close friend lets you in on a secret. Keep it to yourself. He or she only told you because you are so trustworthy. Virgo plays a key role early in the week.

SCORPIO - Oct 24/Nov 22

You're seeing red early in the week, Scorpio. Everything seems to upset you, and you don't know what to do. Take some time for yourself. Clear your mind, and try to relax. It's the only way you'll get anything done this week. Someone whom you take for granted doesn't want to see you anymore. Only now do you realize how much he or she means to you. Turn to loved ones for support. They are there for you.

SAGITTARIUS - Nov 23/Dec 21

You don't know what you've got until it's gone — unfortunately, this adage applies to you this week, Sagittarius. Someone whom you take for granted doesn't want to see you anymore. Only now do you realize how much he or she means to you. Turn to loved ones for support. They are there for you.

CAPRICORN - Dec 22/Jan 20

You have a difficult decision to make on Monday. The "wrong" choice could anger a lot of friends, but don't let this influence you. You have to do what is best for yourself. A close family relationship becomes strained, and you don't know why. Talk to this loved one, and work out the problem.

AQUARIUS - Jan 21/Feb 18

A problem in the workplace takes up most of your time this week, Aquarius. You have to cancel some personal plans in order to remedy the situation. Don't worry — your loved ones and friends will understand. You meet an interesting person during the weekend. Be yourself.

PISCES - Feb 19/March 20

You feel like you're swimming upstream early in the week. Everything that you try to do backfires. Don't get discouraged. Your efforts will pay off in the long run. That special someone wants to take you out for a night on the town. Say yes.

HIGHLIGHTS

Tony Danza stars as a sanitation worker who gets the opportunity of a lifetime when he is offered a chance to play football in The Garbage-Picking, Field Goal-Kicking, Philadelphia Phenomenon Sunday on ABC.

Man of the people Danza a winner in pigskin comedy

By Suzanne Gill
©TVData Features Syndicate

"It's only a game," poor Barney Gorman keeps repeating to himself as a stadium full of Philadelphia Eagles fans waits for him to kick the winning field goal.

Barney may not always split the up-rights, but ultimately he's the hero and title character of The Garbage-Picking, Field Goal-Kicking, Philadelphia Phenomenon. The Wonderful World of Disney's warmhearted draft pick airs Sunday, Feb. 15, on ABC.

Life's deck certainly is stacked against this average Joe: As a city sanitation worker, he earns less than his wife and embarrasses his son during career day at school. Even after he gets his golden chance to be the Eagles' second-string place kicker, his teammates give him a hard time, his foot goes cold and his lonely wife gets fed up and sends him packing.

It's easy to root for Barney. The character is played by Tony Danza, an actor whose clumsy charm earned him a place in America's heart and a recent People's Choice Award for favorite male performer in a new series, even though that series was almost simultaneously canceled.

If the timing of a football-themed TV movie seems a little off as well, be assured that Phenomenon saves two of its three cheers for the everyday Everyman, not the Sunday afternoon lineman. Ever decent, Barney scores more points for the way he does his weekday job - making house calls to pick up a little old lady's trash and "recycling" usable items to a homeless man - than his performance in the NFL.

This may be the closest Danza ever comes to playing that other Philadelphia underdog, Rocky Balboa, but he's not in the film alone. Jessica Tucker co-stars as Barney's wife, Ray Wise portrays the Eagles' unsentimental owner, and Jaime Cardriche plays Bubba, Barney's gravitationally challenged teammate. ESPN's Chris Berman appears as himself and even gives Barney a Bermanesque nickname.

There is a whole lot to like in Phenomenon, so if it stretches credibility a bit thin for die-hard realists, there's just one thing to say: It's only a movie.

TV PIPELINE

Q: What ever happened to the actor who played Carlton Banks on The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air? What did he star in when he was younger? —Brandon Connell via e-mail.

A: Alfonso Ribeiro, who played Carlton on Fresh Prince, has been hiding in plain sight. After the cancellation of Fresh Prince, the actor went directly to the United Paramount Network sitcom In the House, where he plays Dr. Maxwell Stanton. He also provides the voice of Roland Jackson on the animated Extreme Ghostbusters.

Ribeiro, 26, has worked steadily since starring in the title role of the 1984 Broadway musical The Tap Dance Kid. He made his TV debut soon after as Alfonso Spears in the sitcom Silver Spoons and appeared in the TV movies Mighty Pawns and Out on the Edge.

Q: Please settle a bet: My wife swears that actress Virginia Christine, best known as Mrs. Olson in the Folgers coffee commercials, was Ann-Margret's mother. I disagree. Who's right? —McSpence via e-mail.

A: You are. Your wife may be confused by the fact that the younger actress was born Ann-Margaret Olsson in 1941 in Valsjöby, Jamtland, Sweden.

Christine (who is no relation to Ann-Margret) was born Virginia Kraft in Stanton, Iowa, on March 5, 1920. Her 1940 marriage to film comic Fritz Feld lasted until his death in 1993.

Christine's career spanned more than 40 years and included more than 40 films and some 20 guest appearances on popular TV shows. But certainly it is her 21-year stint (1964-85) as Folgers' matronly Mrs. Olson for which the actress is most fondly remembered today. She died of a heart ailment in July 1996.

Alfonso Ribeiro

Coincidentally, Christine's film debut in 1942's Edge of Darkness was as a woman named Miss Olson.

Q: In the film Four Weddings and a Funeral, there was a recitation from a lovely poem by W.H. Auden. What was the name of the poem? —Robert J. Penney, Casper, Wyo.

A: "Funeral Blues."

Q: Do you have an address where I can write to American Movie Classics? —H. Mendes, New Bedford, Mass.

A: Write to American Movie Classics, Attn: Viewer Services, 150 Crossways Park West, Woodbury, NY 11797.

Q: Will Jenny return to TV? If not, why? —"Pochacco5" via e-mail.

A: Jenny, one of the season's biggest bombs, has been pulled by NBC but remains in production. The Jenny McCarthy sitcom almost certainly will not return to the network next season. Perhaps MTV, McCarthy's former TV home, will consider it.

SOAP WORLD

Former Guiding Light star fights back

By Candace Havens
©TVData Features Syndicate

Dear Candace: Where is Michael Zaslow, who played Roger on Guiding Light? He left the cast suddenly and has not returned. We miss him. What can you tell us about him? —Ron Howell on the Internet.

Dear Reader: A sudden illness forced Zaslow to take a leave of absence, and Procter & Gamble Co. later let him go.

He has since been diagnosed with amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, which is known more commonly as Lou Gehrig's disease. The disease is terminal and causes the nervous system to degenerate.

But Zaslow is fighting and refuses to give up. He also has filed suit against

P&G with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

The actor, who hopes to continue working, will do his best to raise funds to help find a cure for the disease.

Dear Candace: My mother and I have been devout fans of General Hospital for as long as I can remember.

When we recently got together for the holidays, we got into an argument concerning the show. I say ABC ran a spinoff series titled The Quartermaines that highlighted the Quartermaine characters. She is positive such a show never existed. Who is correct? When did the show run and who starred in it? —Colin in New Jersey.

Dear Reader: You should listen to your mother. There was never a show called The Quartermaines, although there have been times on GH when it seemed like the Quartermaine show. The only spinoff from GH is Port Charles.

Dear Candace: Could you please tell me the name of the song they played on As the World Turns when Lily and Holden (Martha Byrne, Jon Hensley) first danced at their wedding? —Karen on the Internet.

Dear Reader: The song is This Is Our Moment. It was written by Olivia Newton-John, country singer Victoria Shaw and Earl Rose.
