Three Men Injured When Terrific Explosion Wrecks Burkburnett Refinery

FIRE FOLLOWS VIOLENT BLAST OF OIL STILL

Superintendent of Bi-State Plant and Three Men Receive Burns

FIREMEN HELPLESS

Refinery Located Outside Of Range of City's Water Lines

Special to The Record News.

BURKBURNETT, Texas, Aug. 8.—Three men were burned and the plant machinery partially wrecked Thursday afternoon in the violent explosion which followed the blowing out of a plug on the high pressure still at the Bi-State refinery here.

The force of the explosion hurled parts of the machinery into the air and endangered the lives of the workmen within the plant. In the fire that followed P. D. Mahoney, superintendent, Tom Word and Jack Deisher, workmen, suffered slight burns about the face and arms. The Skelly refinery, on the adjoining property was threatened with destruction from the sweep of the flames which destroyed 75 barrels of crude oil before they could be brought under control.

Recently Re-Opened

The Bi-State refinery, formerly known here as the Chrystal plant, re-opened the first of this week after having been closed down for repairs for several months. Mr. Mahoney who was working near the still at the time the force of the explosion shook the buildings throughout the section, said he believed a plug on the high pressure plant must have blown out to cause the blast.

The plant is outside the limits of the Burkburnett water system so that members of the fire department which is unequipped with chemical extinguishers, were helpless before the spread of the flames which practically destroyed the plant.

Loss Not Estimated

Estimates of the extent of the damage were unavailable Thursday night, but officials believed that an almost complete reconstruction would be necessary.

The terrific noise of the explosion and the spectacular flames which followed were heard and seen throughout the town and attracted a large crowd of onlookers who were powerless to stop the destruction and looked on helplessly at the endangering of the adjoining plant. Small flames still played over the ruins early Thursday night but all danger was believed to have passed.

Mabel Replies to Burke's Statement

'Corruption' Subject of Fifth Article

Graft in Prohi Forces Bared By Former Official

THE INSIDE OF PROHIBITION
V. Corruption in High Places
By MABEL W. WILLEBRANDT

(Copyright, 1929, by Current News Features. All rights publication reserved throughout the world).

(In this, the fifth article of her remarkable series on prohibition, Mrs. Willebrandt tells how the prohibition force was demoralized by the appointment through corruption in high places of government agents, little if any better than the criminals they were hired to pursue).

That the prohibition force, largely as the result of political influence, was for several years filled with with unfit men is proved by official records. Those records disclose that in the six years from 1920 to 1926 more than 750 prohibition agents were dismissed from the force for delinquency or misconduct. Among the charges which brought dismissal were extortion, bribery, solicitation of money, illegal disposition of liquor, or other property, intoxication, assault, the making of false reports, and theft. Sixty-one were dismissed for acts of collusion or conspiracy to violate the very law they had sworn to enforce!

Mrs. Willebrandt

But I know, from actual contact with members of the prohibition force, that there has been a real improvement, much of it due to the fact that qualification under civil service rules and regulations has been required since 1927.

School for Agents

Long before that—in fact, in 1922—I urged the establishment of a "school" to train agents, not only for the protection of law-abiding citizens, but for the assistance of the department of justice in prosecuting cases on evidence gathered by the prohibition unit. The plan provided for bringing all agents under at least three months' systematic and intensive tutoring by experienced investigators and lawyers who had tried cases in court. The details were all worked out including the selection of qualified men already in government service who could give training without waiting for an elaborate set-up and appropriations.

I made such a proposal because it was plain even in those early

CORRUPTION REDUCED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8. (UP)—Just as President Hoover's law enforcement commission announced the appointment of a sub-committee to consider the subject of lawlessness by governmental law enforcing officers, Assistant Secretary of Treasury Seymour Lowman said in an interview that corruption in the federal prohibition service had been reduced to a minimum. His statement was not in comment on the action of the law enforcement commission but a coincidence.

GRAF ZEPPELIN DODGES FOGS

Giant Bag Speeds Along at 75 Miles Per Hour

NEW YORK, Aug. 8. (US)—At 8:30 tonight, eastern daylight time, the Graf Zeppelin, about 20 hours out of Lakehurst, had already covered something like 1,400 miles of the first leg of its trip around the world.

Radio messages from the big airship intercepted by wireless stations along the Atlantic coast, indicated smooth and even progress at a speed averaging around 75 miles an hour in the finest of weather.

Dodging the fog banks off Newfoundland by turning slightly to the south and east when touching within 250 miles of Halifax this forenoon, the Graf Zeppelin headed towards in a somewhat more southerly route than Dr. Eckener had intimated he planned to follow on his way back to Friedrichshafen.

A message picked up shortly after 1 o'clock this afternoon stated that the airship was 933 miles from New York.

At 5 this afternoon a radio message to the Lakehurst naval station said the Graf was making better than 70 miles per hour.

As the curtain of night dropped over the ocean, the Graf's course was expected to swing toward the northeast, possibly continuing to follow the steamer lanes.

Before departing, the Zeppelin commander, Dr. Hugo Eckener, grizzled skipper of the skies, had expressed the wish to soar over Ireland and England before cutting across the continent to the dirigible's home port, Friedrichshafen, Germany.

Girl Hiccoughs 59 Days Without Sign of Relief

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Aug. 8. (AP)—Fifty-nine days of incessant hiccoughing had reduced an 18-year-old girl's strength to such a low ebb today that physicians entertained doubts of her recovery.

Miss Vera Stone began to hiccough at her home at Ripley, Tenn., last June. Unalarming then, the malady persisted. Recently she entered a hospital here.

Hundreds of "cures" suggested by newspaper readers have failed to help the girl.

Miss Stone talks freely but must pause at intervals to hiccough. She loses much sleep. The wracking and repeated shocks have numbed her arms and hands.

News Syndicate Says Remark Was Never Delivered

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8. (AP)—Current News Features, sponsors of a series of articles by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former assistant attorney general in charge of prohibition, today issued a statement referring to an announcement by James Francis Burke, of the Republican national committee, taking exception to a part of Mrs. Willebrandt's writings. The statement read:

"It was stated on behalf of Mrs. Willebrandt that the remark 'Go back to your pulpits and preach this doctrine' referred to in the statement by James Francis Burke last night, was not in the prepared manuscript of the speech delivered nor did she deliver any such remark extemporaneously, nor did any press association which covered the meeting report any such remark."

Said Speech Edited

Mrs. Willebrandt in one of her articles wrote that Burke edited the speech in question, which was delivered at Springfield, Ohio, in the last campaign. Burke said the manuscript of the speech received at Republican headquarters did not contain the sentence and that he never had inserted or attempted to insert "any religious comment" in Mrs. Willebrandt's speeches.

Mrs. Willebrandt's speech attracted considerable attention at the time. It was delivered at a meeting of Methodist ministers and later she was accused by Alfred E. Smith, the Democratic presidential nominee, of raising the religious issue.

In a recent article she wrote that "of course the much heralded Springfield, Ohio, 'speech to the Methodists' wasn't an attack on the rival candidate's religion, and it wasn't in a church, and I didn't go as a 'free lance' to embarrass the Republican committee.

Played the "Sport"

"The simple truth is that over my own written protest I was urged by the Republican national committee in two telegrams (which now repose in my files) to make that speech. The week before it was delivered, every word of it was carefully edited by James Francis Burke, a Catholic and counselor of the Republican national committee. He did this at committee headquarters.

"When wet eastern Republicans started bombing me as a 'free lance' and 'an embarrassment' to the party, I had to choose whether to disclose the telegrams and actually embarrass the committee, or keep still and take punishment. It seemed to me that good sportsmanship dictated the latter course."

Burke's statement was in reply to the mention of his name in this article.

STATE TO ASK OIL PENALTIES IN COURT HERE

Injunction to Bar Use Of Vacuum Pumps Also To Be Asked

$120,000 IS CLAIMED

Action Follows Recent Investigation of Field Methods in Use

An injunction stopping the use of vacuum pumps on certain Wichita county oil wells and judgment for around $120,000 in penalties against three Wichita Falls oil operators will be sought in a petition to be filed in the 78th district court here by Mike Anglin, assistant district attorney, who will act for the state in the suit.

The petition to be filed names the McCarty Oil company, including Ed Peterson and J. A. McCarty, and F. B. Jackson, independent producer, as defendants. It seeks a judgment for the state of $1,000 a day for every day upon which the vacuum pumps are alleged to have been used in violation of railroad commission rules. The state will claim that the pumps have been in use on the Watkins lease, Kemp Wichita Valley Farm lands since April 1, a period totaling 130 days.

The preparation of the suit follows a recommendation from the railroad commission adopted at the close of a recent investigative session here, Mr. Anglin explained. During the meeting the commission members heard the report of John L. Martin, deputy supervisor, who conducted the investigations of the allegations contained in the petition. The commission recommendation, upon which the attorney is acting, alleges the violation of rule 40, forbidding vacuums, and invokes an action seeking the $1,000 daily penalty.

Mr. Anglin will first seek a temporary injunction from Judge W. W. Cook, after which the case will be set for a hearing on the 78th civil docket.

State Prisoner's Story Opens Dundee Death Case

Information From Penitentiary Leads to Arrest of Man At Oklahoma City for McDaniel Slaying

Information given by a prisoner in the state penitentiary at Huntsville has resulted in the arrest in Oklahoma City of a man suspected of the fatal shooting of Charlie McDaniel, Archer county ranchman, in Dundee, during July of last year, according to information made public by county officials here Thursday. The suspect, who is under three robbery complaints in Wichita county, was arrested by federal authorities in Oklahoma and will be returned to Texas in the near future. The filing of a murder complaint against him will depend upon the results of efforts at identification to be made as soon as the suspect is brought back into the state, it was explained.

Duckett Acquitted

George Duckett, of Newcastle, arrested by W. G. Bralley and other members of the sheriff's department here after McDaniel was shot in an effort to prevent the robbery of a bank at Dundee, was recently acquitted of the murder charge by a jury in Seymour, where he was tried on a change of venue motion for the defense. Testimony for Duckett corroborated his alibi defense and witnesses for the state failed to be unanimous in their identification.

After the acquittal of Duckett, officials here learned that a man serving sentence at Huntsville wanted to tell what he knew of the McDaniel affair. The filing of the robbery charges and the arrest of the suspect in Oklahoma followed the revelations made by the prisoner, backed up by finger print records in the hands of investigating officers.

The next step in the inquiry will involve taking witnesses to the shooting in Dundee and to a series of hi-jackings believed to be connected with it, before the prisoner for identification, officers said.

Lunch Stand Held Up

Investigations of the Dundee affair start with a double holdup on the Electra road on the night before the shooting. The driver of a Whippet roadster held up Rozzell's lunch stand and Jenkin's filling station. A man using a similar machine the following day attempted to force Mr. McDaniel to open the doors of the Dundee bank. The cattleman was shot twice and fatally injured when he defied the armed bandit and turned to resist. In his flight from the scene of the shooting, the hi-jacker engaged in a gun battle at Mankins, and twice commandeered the cars of passing motorists after his own machine was disabled.

The victims of the hi-jacker and witnesses to the flight of the slayer from Dundee will be given an opportunity to identify the man now being held in Oklahoma City. Upon their testimony will depend the question of adding a murder count to the three robbery charges already filed.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Aug. 8. (UP)—Prosecutor James R. Horse Doctor Breaks Under Chester's Fire

By MORRIS DE HAVEN TRACY

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 8. (UP)—Dr. James Howard Snook today sat in the middle of a sweltering hot courtroom, with 300 women and 100 men ranged round, and crucified himself to save his life.

He recited a tale of what was once supposed to have been a romance between himself, a 49-year-old college professor, and Theora Hix, the 24-year-old co-ed he is alleged to have killed. But what he told was as shameful a recital as human tongue could speak.

It even shook the calm of this strange, complex, colorless man and twice he wept. He left the witness stand tonight, after 12 hours of testimony, flushed with shame at the things he had said and had admitted.

Story Grows Worse

The day had been hard enough with his tears as he told of the death of Miss Hix; how he had hit her with a hammer when she had made a vicious assault upon him in a frenzy of frustration; and with all the minute of detail with which his story was accompanied.

But in the last hour it grew even worse. John J. Chester Jr., a re-

Predictions For Cloudiness Again Made for Vicinity

Predictions of cloudy weather and probable thundershowers failed to materialize Thursday and found Wichita Falls sweltering under the influence of 102-degree temperatures, marking the eleventh consecutive day in which the mercury has not failed to overreach the century mark.

Forecasts for Friday, however, still predicted cloudiness and showers for West Texas and Oklahoma. The rains which struck the Panhandle region as far south as Childress Wednesday night failed to reach Wichita Falls and residents here awoke Thursday morning to find clear skies and burning sunshine as on every morning for the last two weeks.

MARKET FACES TEST

Broker's Obligations Reach $6,020,000,000 for First Time in History

By ELMER C. WALZER
United Press Financial Editor

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Just when everything seemed serene and peaceful in Wall street and traders were leaving for home—a few for a long week-end vacation—the federal reserve board set off two bombshells that reverberated over the world of finance in a few seconds. First the New York rediscount rate was raised to 6 per cent, completely taking the street by surprise. Then came the announcement that brokers' loans had increased $60,000,000 to a record at $6,020,000,000.

This combination of adversity was a shock. Brokers rushed back to their desks. Wires were set up that had been taken down for the day; the news was flashed over the country and cabled to all corners of the world.

Selling Awaited

Then the brokers waited for the avalanche of selling orders that was sure to pour in. They commenced to come before 5 o'clock and were expected to continue all night.

The stock market was facing a supreme test of its endurance. It was in none too enviable a position when the closing gong sounded as many issues were selling dozens of points above their

Mauretania Fails To Break Bremen's Record

NEW YORK, Aug. 8. (AP)—The 22-year-old Cunarder Mauretania came to port today after her speediest Westward crossing of the Atlantic but even that was not sufficient to reclaim the record now held by the new liner Bremen.

Retarded by bad weather and a curtailment of speed for an operation aboard, the Mauretania passed Ambrose lightship, the "tape" at this side, at 10:30 a. m. (eastern daylight time) 4 days, 21 hours and 44 minutes, after leaving Cherbourg breakwater, Saturday on a voyage of 3,078 miles.

Minister's Son, 15, Tells Amazing Story of Banditry to Judge Here

A 15-year-old boy who said he is the son of a minister in Dodge City, Kan., Thursday told Archer county court officials of his wild ride across Texas in a stolen automobile, hi-jacking filling stations for his gas and oil and dodging the bullets of pursuing officers in a chase that stretched from Wichita Falls to Junction, Texas.

The boy was brought to Archer City early this week on a bench warrant from Judge Allan D. Montgomery in connection with the hi-jacking of a filling station near Archer City on the night of July 31. He had been arrested at Junction, near the border, at the end of a series of hold-ups and robberies which began in Wichita Falls 10 days ago. In a car stolen from Sam Gibbs here he had started for Old Mexico, the youth asserted, making a last desperate flight to escape a long line of offenses held against him.

The story the boy told Judge Montgomery Thursday afternoon

State Department Chief Resigns When Accused by Young Girls

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8. (US)—Frederick D. K. Leclercq, 33, resigned as acting chief of Western affairs in the state department today shortly after he appeared in court to answer charges brought by eight young girls.

His resignation was immediately accepted by the state department, though he had been regarded as one of the most promising of the career men in the diplomatic service.

The erstwhile attache, graduate of Oxford university and later a lieutenant in the United States navy, was charged with having annoyed the girls, all of whom are students at a summer high school here.

A charge of assault was placed against him, based on a complaint from the daughter of a prominent police official. Seven other girls were listed as witnesses in this case. In a second assault charge, a single girl is the only witness.

prices a few weeks ago and there was no short interest in these to act as a cushion for the fall.

At the same time, pool managers and banking sponsors of stocks quickly summoned all the resources at their command to fight the storm. They were ready to throw millions—billions if necessary—to prevent a chaotic market with prices catapulting downward.

Bankers as well as brokers and traders were taken completely by surprise by the rise in the rediscount rate. As a matter of fact they had anticipated a decline to help finance the moving of crops and other autumn business.

Loans Set Record

The reason for the increase obviously lay in the unwieldy height to which brokers' loans have risen. They crossed six billion dollars today for the first time in history. The stock exchange is using too much money for the good of business, the federal reserve reasoned, and after careful consideration decided to raise the rate to 6 per cent.

Today's advance of a full point is unusual. Ordinarily the figure mounts by fractions. The six per cent figure is the highest since July 21, 1921 when it was reduced from 7 to 6 per cent. The 5 per cent rate supplanted today has been in effect since July 13, 1928.

Sterling Hits Bottom

As soon as the news was flashed to London today, sterling broke to a new low level for the year and a point where gold shipments to New York would be profitable. Should any gold leave for this port, it was certain that the Bank of England would raise its discount rate which now is one-half of one per cent below that at New York.

The combination of these factors would mean that money would be more expensive for stock market quotations. No one looks for a drastic break that would end the prolonged bull market. That does not seem possible but a slowing up in trading is confidently expected after a thorough shakeout. Incidentally when the 5 per cent rate became effective a year ago, stocks soared to new records for all time.

The reason given for the rise is to provide capital for autumn requirements. The reserve board made the decision after a long deliberation. Its members are interested in keeping money moving to business and agriculture—the backbone of the country. Today's rise was not considered a shot at the stock market even though that was what it proved to be.

diplomatic career has been nipped in the bud, appeared extremely nervous as he waited in the court room for trial. Trial was set for Sept. 5 and his bond was placed at $1,400. He spent last night in jail.

William R. Castle, assistant secretary of state, accompanied Leclercq to the court. Prosecutors said that there was no attempt to use "influence" on the defendant's behalf. The district attorney said a high-ranking official of the state department, whose name he did not divulge, testified that Leclercq's character was excellent.

Leclercq was assigned to the United States embassy in London, when he passed his examination for entry into the American foreign service. He was recently assigned to the American legation at El Salvador.

According to arresting officers, complaints have been coming to the precinct for many weeks of a young man who made it his habit to ride on street cars and busses conveying girls to and from summer classes now being conducted at Western.

It is said by the police that the man had made obnoxious advances to many of the youthful girl students.

lentless, hot tempered prosecutor, had a snarl on his lips as he unfolded a sheaf of letters. Dr. Snook looked at them. His direct testimony had just ended and the cross-questioning begun.

"Yes," he said, "I wrote them."

So Chester began to read. There were eight letters. Seven were signed "Mabel." The eighth was signed "Janette." For the most part their content is unpublishable obscenity.

Letter Is Read

"My Dearie," began the first letter. "Your Monday morning note received. Am sorry that you have been so upset, so as to affect your digestive department. I have been that way, too, since you left, with the exception of the two days I spent in Cleveland. I am surprised at your forlornness and turbulence and now saying you 'now wish you never had.' Once you said you'd never say that. I don't believe you really feel that way. It is because you are up there alone and that is new for you, especially in the last year. I could be content to be with you even omitting special features, and you should feel that way about it."

The prosecutor demanded an explanation of the meaning of the letter.

"She had simply become lonely," he said. "She had had two men."

Explains Operation

Almost every letter trailed off into obscenities — discussions of their relations, and finally one described an amazing operation Snook had performed upon himself.

"Just explain that operation to the jury," Chester said, with a sarcastic tinge to his voice.

Dr. Snook turned towards the jurors and explained to them how he had performed an operation so personal it is seldom mentioned.

"And now, Dr. Snook," said Chester, "why did you do it."

The answer was as amazing as the operation. Some of his clothes didn't fit. So he performed the operation hoping that its results would save for him a suit of clothes.

By that time Dr. Snook's face was a study in humiliation. His mouth was sagging. His color was livid. His hands went back and forth from the arms of his chair to his bald head, to his ears and to his mouth.

At last adjournment came and he walked straight from the room, across the bridge to the county jail and to his cell.

GUARDSMAN IS HURT IN DIVE

Amarillo Soldier Taken To Hospital in Plane

CAMP PALACIOS, Texas, Aug. 8. (AP)—Suffering from a probable fracture of the spine sustained when he dove into the shallow water of Tres Palacios Bay, Corporal Mark H. Brasher, Headquarters company 142nd Infantry, a Texas national guardsman from Amarillo was rushed to the base hospital at San Antonio Thursday afternoon in a third attack group plane.

Col. J. J. O'Reilly, in charge of the camp hospital, said his condition was serious.

TROOPS NOW IN "DECISIVE BATTLES"

CAMP PALACIOS, Texas, Aug. 8. (AP)—A decisive battle between a division of the Red army, which has landed along the coast for a drive into Central Texas, and the 36th division, Texas National guard, was under way Thursday night in the vicinity of Blessing as a part of the annual maneuvers.

The 36th, advancing south from Wharton established contact with the Red front line early Thursday night, and was to attack in full force about daylight Friday morning.

The red forces are represented by regular army instructors who from time to time issue bulletins showing the tactical situation of the reds. The 36th division, under command of Maj. Gen. John A. Hulen, has been assigned the task of driving the reds into Matagorda bay.

The maneuvers are command post exercises and do not require the actual use of troops except in the communications network. Original plans were to perform the maneuvers in the field near Blessing Thursday night and Friday, but heavy rains caused the instructors, Major Albert Tucker and Major Ruchard Tindall, to order the exercises conducted in the headquarters at Camp Palacios, although the theoretical situation is not changed.

Character Building Is Moreland's Subject

Three character-building factors in a boy's life for which he must depend upon the adults of his community were discussed by Rev. Patrick D. Moreland, pastor of the Grant Street Methodist church, before the Rotary club in its weekly meeting Thursday noon at the Kemp hotel.

"No boy can choose his father, his home, nor the place of his residence and education," said the speaker. "He can have no knowledge of the blood which will flow in his veins, but with the growth of his own thoughts and ideals, he will expect it to be the best. He can not choose the home in which his childhood will be spent, but he will look back upon it as upon a treasure house if his father and mother were sincerely interested in his destiny. He can not choose the city or school in which he is enrolled, but they may mold his character to conform to high ideals.

Criticism of the young men of this city is not justified, Mr. Moreland said, when they are not even provided a Y. M. C. A.

Piano solos were given by Alvin Roper, brother of Mrs. Wayne J. Holmes of this city, and a composer of sacred music. Both Rev. Mr. Moreland and Mr. Roper were introduced by Dr. S. S. McKenney. The program was arranged by Ted Krohn.

Minister's Son Held as Robber

started back in Dodge City, Kan., several years ago. He lived there the life of a preacher's son in a small town, he declared. His first difficulties, were concerned with the theft of a bicycle. Later he took money from a store and was sentenced to the reformatory on a grand larceny charge.

"I got out of the training school on probation last November" the youthful prisoner continued. "I stayed at home as long as I could stand it. I left about a month ago and headed for Mexico. In Wichita Falls I stole a Dodge coupe and a pistol. On my way out of town I stopped at a filling station for gas. When the tank was full I pulled my gun on the lady who waited on me and made her go into the house. I guess I cussed her a little. I drove on most of that night.

"I got some more gas at Carbon, in Eastland county 'that same way" the boy went on. "The same thing happened in Mason county, except that I picked up $2.50 out of the cash register there besides the gas and oil I got. When I headed into Kimbell county, near Junction, the officers tried to stop me. I ran right on and ducked when they began shooting. I was arrested down there."

Mike Anglin, assistant district attorney, and Warren W. Belcher, deputy sheriff, last week went to Junction to take possession of the stolen car, leaving the young prisoner in the hands of officials who had other charges against him. Early this week the boy was indicted for robbery with firearms by the 30th district grand jury in Archer county, and brought back for trial on the authority of a bench warrant from Judge Montgomery. He told his complete story to the court after the case had been transferred to the juvenile section in the county.

Judge Montgomery took the case under advisement and will pronounce judgment Friday morning.

The boy whose exploits astounded the court officials Thursday afternoon is an average size for a 15 year old, George Berry, assistant district attorney, declared. He weighs about 105 pounds talks well and has a rather pleasing manner the attorney declared. Kansas reformatory officials, called over the long distance telephone Thursday, said he would be 16 years old in December.

First prize for the number and variety of charges filed against him could be claimed by a man arrested here about 5:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon by Plainclothes Officers Ellis Summers and A. L. Stubblefield. The arrest was made on Tenth street, in the residential part of town.

The man was booked at the city jail for "investigation, operating a motor vehicle with wrong license plates, operating a motor vehicle without a motor number, operating an unregistered motor vehicle and vagrancy."

The man was released on a personal bond of $200, the bond for each charge, except investigation, having been set at $50. Trial of the case will be held in the corporation court Saturday morning.

Those who wish to enter the class should bring their own knives and a quantity of white pine if possible.

The park will be in charge of Miss Charlotte Kennedy and Miss Clarice Clark will direct the wood carving, with Miss Frances Hyland as assistant.

Negro's Lust For Blood Brings On His Incarceration

The spectacle of a negro man crying and pleading with officers to let him "kill dat fellow" confronted police about 3 o'clock Thursday morning when they arrested the negro and took a small guage shotgun from him. He was placed in the city jail "to cool off."

Several minutes before the arrest the negro came into the police station with a story of having been in a poker game with another negro man who drew a knife at the end of the game and absconded with the money involved. The negro told police that he "wouldn't have minded it at all if he hadn't run off" with his money. He added that he was going out to his home, which is four miles out on the Iowa Park road, and get his gun.

Officers were at a loss to know what to do, they said, and allowed the man to go, thinking he would change his mind by the time he had gone four miles to his home. However, he returned with the gun, having gone to his home and walked back to town, his purpose unchanged. He walked directly in front of the police station and officers stepped out and arrested him and took his gun. When in the station, he cried and begged to be allowed to go on with his plans.

By the time of his release later Thursday, he was quite repentant, officers said, and was released on the promise that he would not concoct any such schemes a second time.

POTEAU, Okla., Aug. 8. (UP)—Two hundred men who had fought a losing battle for three days against forest fires in southeastern Oklahoma, broke into a cheer today when clouds rolled up and continued showers assured them of victory.

Popularity.. begins with a Clear Skin

IT'S the person with a clear, smooth, lovely complexion that usually wins.

To be sure, not much is said openly about skin eruptions, but secretly they influence many important affairs. Personal likes and dislikes are quickly formed.

Everybody wants to be attractive. It is a just and natural ambition. A clear skin makes everyone more attractive.

Skilled physicians recognize the appearance of pimples, boils, eczema and other skin eruptions as being an indication that the body's power of resistance is low—that there is a deficiency of red-blood-cells.

The sure way to remedy this condition is to restore the red-blood-cells to normal.

This is why so many thousands have been enabled to free themselves of those unsightly blemishes and painful skin annoyances by taking a course of S.S.S.

S.S.S. helps Nature restore the blood to its normal state. Healthy blood makes the body strong and resistant to disease.

Without plenty of rich, red blood there could be no strong, sturdy, powerful men, or healthy, beautiful women.

If you are troubled with so-called skin disorders or if the count of your red-blood-cells is low, take a few bottles of S.S.S. Seek energy, vitality and a clear skin through the remedy, which is made from fresh vegetable drugs, and has stood the test of over 100 years.

TWO KILLED IN FALL OF HOUSE

Building Method Blamed For Collapse

HOUSTON, Aug. 8. (AP)—With the toll in Thursday morning's warehouse collapse boosted to two by the death of an injured negro workman, a city engineering report stating that awning support methods were "entirely inadequate and unstable" was to be embodied in inquest verdicts.

Booker T. Walton, negro, died at a hospital Thursday afternoon a few hours after the collapse of a block long portion of the Damon Wells warehouse which was under construction. Charles Petty, 55, white, was crushed to death beneath falling brick and two others were injured.

J. G. McKenzie, city building engineer, said the method of supporting awning brackets was "inadequate and unstable" due to the fact that the brick wall supporting the brackets could not take bending stresses introduced by a cantilever awning. Justice of the Peace Overstreet said McKenzie's report would be incorporated in inquest verdicts.

Contractors and workmen within the building blamed a bolt of lightning for the collapse of the brick wall and the steel awning.

Two Convictions End Archer Criminal Cases

A jury in the 30th district court at Archer City Thursday morning sentenced Leo Belew to two years in the state penitentiary on charges of burglary. Belew was indicted by the August grand jury which adjourned at noon Tuesday.

William Lee indicted at the same time on similar charges, pleaded guilty and was given a two-year suspended sentence. He is being held for Oklahoma authorities on swindling charges, George Berry, assistant district attorney, who represented the state in the trial, declared.

The two trials Thursday completed the criminal docket for the month, Mr. Berry announced. The cases were heard by Judge Allan D. Montgomery.

Pollard and Hatcher Exchange Hot Letters in Banking Board Warfare

AUSTIN, Aug. 8. (AP)—It was tit for tat in the state banking board war today. Attorney General Claude Pollard addressed a communication to State Treasurer W. Gregory Hatcher in reply to one received yesterday, and Hatcher answered it almost before the messenger that brought it had time to get around the corner to the attorney general's office.

The controversy started over Hatcher's action in refusing to honor some drafts by Banking Commissioner James Shaw. The drafts were in favor of banks with an interest in the guaranty fund over-assessment money. Of about $900,000 ordered returned pro rata to the banks that were assessed for it, $304,439 was in Hatcher's possession, the balance having been retained by the banking commissioner.

Hatcher Writes Letter

After he refused payment on the drafts, Hatcher addressed a letter to Pollard and Shaw jointly. While Shaw remained silent Pollard declared Hatcher's action was "so arbitrary" that he is "probably creating a liability against the sureties" on his official bond.

Hatcher answered that he had little faith in the attorney general's construction of the law.

"As to your opinion about my paying out money, you must know I regard it as worthless since you authorized the passing of a resolution on Sept. 20, 1928, to pay to certain banks out of the guaranty fund, the sum of $789,000, and the supreme court afterwards held the reverse of your opinion, and had I paid it out then on your say so, and that of the banking commissioner, my bondsmen and myself and you would have been sued to the limit," Hatcher stated.

Difficulty Recalled

Replying to a reminder from Pollard that Hatcher had "for some reason" failed to attend a meeting of the banking board on Aug. 2, when the money was ordered paid back to the banks, Hatcher recalled a personal difficulty he had had with Shaw at a previous meeting.

"You will recall that I came out of that office then in a hurry—just like a cat out of a corner'—after James Shaw started his rough stuff, with you as the sole witness behind closed doors and that ought to be sufficient reason why I did not attend the meeting you referred to," he wrote.

Pollard said the part of the over-assessment fund held by Hatcher erroneously had been paid into the state treasury as a part of the guaranty fund by banking commissioners before Shaw.

Pollard declared the state banking board, of which he is chairman, on April 2, passed a resolution directing Hatcher to return the money to the banking commissioner, "in whose custody it properly belonged."

Pollard Reminds Him

"You refused to follow the direction of the state banking board, and thereafter at a meeting of banks held in this office, you made the statement that if a resolution were passed directing the banking commissioner to pay to the banks the money that he had, and directing him to draw on you in favor of the several banks for the money in your possession, that you would, to use your own words, 'pay these banks this money before breakfast'," Pollard wrote to Hatcher.

"Simply to expedite the repayment of this money to the banks to which it belongs, and not because we deemed it at all necessary, but solely to gratify what appeared to be a whim of yours, another banking board meeting was called on Aug. 2, and a resolution passed to conform to your requirements in the matter."

Hatcher claimed that he would not honor the drafts because they both were signed and endorsed by Shaw and submitted the form of a draft providing for each of the three members of the banking board to countersign them, and endorsement of the payee bank, these to be retained as receipts.

Thieves Escape After Robbing Oil Station

Thieves who robbed the cash drawer of the Mears Filling station, 402 Fort Worth street, late Wednesday night while the attendant was outside for a few minutes escaped somewhere between Wichita Falls and Jolly after a pursuit out the Henrietta highway by Motorcycle Officers John Lowry and J. H. Pogue.

The automobile driven by the fugitives was not equipped for speed, officers said, and they evidently turned off the highway along a little traveled side road since no trace of them had been found by the time the motorcycle officers, running at high speed, reached Jolly.

The amount taken from the cash drawer was not determined since no check-up had been made of receipts during the evening, it was said.

Convicted Shoplifter Appeals to High Court

The issues involved in the alleged theft of a $9.95 dress from the J. C. Penney store here will receive the attention of the Texas court of criminal appeals. It was announced Thursday afternoon Judge Irwin J. Vogel had overruled a motion for a new trial in the case of the state against Savannah Jackson, negress, in the county court at law.

The defendant, accused of shoplifting in connection with the alleged theft of the dress, was sentenced to 30 days in jail after a recent trial here. Her motion for a new trial was overruled late Wednesday afternoon and notice of an appeal to the higher courts was given by attorneys Thursday.

Two Innocents Are 'Fall Guys' In Dice Game Raid

Unless his luck changes before his case is tried on appeal in the county court, a discouraged Wichita Falls negro must pay $19 in fines and costs for his native distaste for leaving his bed and moving about in the heat of the day. And a second negro, equally disconsolate, Thursday night counted the cost of going visiting in search of ice water and lingering too long.

It wasn't their fault, the pair told R. V. Gwinn, justice of the peace, Thursday afternoon, that a quartet of evil doers chose the place of their retreat for a wicked Sunday afternoon of crap shooting. Before the one could bestir himself from his bed, or the other could leave the coolness of his borrowed drink, the officers were upon the crap shooters in the middle of the floor and the helpless "sweaters" were picked up in the crowd.

All half dozen were fined $1 and costs, a total of $19, after a hearing before Judge Gwinn Thursday afternoon. All the cases were appealed to the county court.

Camp Fire Girls Will Break Camp Friday

A slight illness which has broken out among the Camp Fire girls now participating in their annual summer camp at Craterville park, will necessitate breaking camp Friday morning, according to Miss Mary McIlheran, camp director and local director.

Dr. Wallace Masters who went to camp by plane Wednesday inspected the camp thoroughly. The water he brought back to test was not good and in view of other conditions in camp, Miss McIlheran decided, after consultation with him, that camp should be broken.

The second period of camp, which was scheduled to start Monday, will be postponed indefinitely, Miss McIlheran said Thursday.

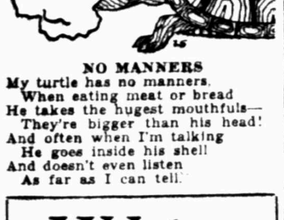

Miss McIlheran personally looks after matters in the camp and has at heart the interest of the girls.

Dr. Wallace J. Masters made the trip to Craterville park Wednesday without any charge. He has won many mothers' thanks. Mrs. Mary Priest, who owns the plane which carried Dr. Masters there and back, offered it freely and would not even let the passengers furnish the gas.

Bread An' Jam

A Daily Illustrated Poem For Children

By Wymond Garthwaite

NO MANNERS

My turtle has no manners.
When eating meat or bread
He takes the hugest mouthfuls—
They're bigger than his head!
And often when I'm talking
He goes inside his shell
And doesn't even listen
As far as I can tell.

We Women

By BETTY BRAINERD

Fair Play

There has been much talk about the poor, and all of it conceived in a fine, true sympathy. And that is as it should be. But when we go so far as to deprive rich men of elemental justice, in our consideration of the poor, we are only indulging in what the colored folks call "tall talk."

I have a specific instance in mind. It concerns the collapse of a marriage. The man in the case started out in life as a laborer. Recently he was divorced in what I deem a gentleman's way. No laws were violated. There was no scandal. The marriage had simply become colorless, insignificant and dull. It was intolerable to both the man and his wife.

But the husband had risen to the head of the business which he started out, years ago, as a humble laborer. Now he is a millionaire—and some people said it was all a shame.

Certainly it would not have been a shame if the man had remained poor. But because he had grown wealthy there was a disposition to criticize him on the grounds that he had started out in life as a laborer with his wife and was no longer happy with her or she with him because he had money.

I don't undertsand why he should be blamed any more than his wife should be blamed. Blame them both, if you wish, or blame life. But do not blame him simply because he became rich.

I know it to be a fact that the husband is a gentleman and good sport in every sense of the words. His wife is a lady and an equally decent sort. Even decent people sometimes find it impossible to get along with each other. Is there any reason why they should perpetuate their misery when an equitable arrangement can be made for the wife's future?

That is what the man in this case did. He was generous and gracious. There was no bitterness on either side. But most of their friends say it was a shame and attribute the failure of their marriage only to the fact that he grew wealthy.

This decidedly is not fair—and curiously, the one person who more strongly than anybody else defends the husband is his former wife. Public opinion condemns him because he started out as a laborer with his wife and grew rich.

To penalize a man simply because he has been a success in business is just as unfair as denying justice to men who have not been big successes. The rich, too, are human beings.

If you have a domestic problem on which you wish help, send me a stamped self-addressed envelope.

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 8. (US)—A rich woman in Arizona, married her Indian chauffeur. All members of the Pueblo tribe wear, somewhere on their person, a white sheet. This one wears his twisted around his waist, belt-fashion, his hair in long braids, another red belt, and he is a fine specimen physically. He lives in his rich wife's house, and while there are rumors in the town that she feels perhaps she hasn't used good judgment in her choice, the Indian thinks it's elegant and intends to stick fast.

This Los Angeles has its very rich Indian married to a woman who has slicked him up and built a fine house, and the Indian can be seen any day standing on the corner across the street from his fine house, watching the cars and people go past. He stands like a cigar store sign and even an automobile wreck can't disturb his calm. He sees his fine home from the outside mostly because he doesn't care for the indoors.

In Henry's restaurant saw Charley Chaplin sitting at a table with Georgia Hale and Henry, and making faces and talking and gesticulating, and often showing his nice white teeth in an expansive smile. He has only three homes, but movie stars get so used to an audience that only they themselves can understand the strain of eating at home unless an audience can be brought there. So you see them wherever their public is.

A cozy tea room run by a lovely, tall, slim lady with white hair, a sister of Carrie Jacobs Bond. In the patio—every place has one—there is a well with an oaken bucket suspended above it. And water keeps dripping from the full bucket. People gather around trying to find out how and why. There is a tiny tube runs through the bucket in such a way that the water never stops dripping.

There is a dressmaking shop where each gown costs a small fortune and only the most successful of the stars shop there. Tea is served at all hours, and lovely models display the wares.

The waitresses in Los Angeles care, they actually do, if you want something and don't get it. They make the New York waitresses look like morons by comparison. They are not only smarter, prettier and less different, but they prove that it pays to be that way, because they are prosperous. It's a pleasure to be generous with them.

A thriving little cafe called the Brown Derby, brown and built in the shape of a derby hat. The light shades are derbies, and the curtains a yellow oilcloth that looks like a satin hat lining. The manager tells you that all arrangements have been made to start one like it in New York, at Forty-seventh street and Fifth avenue.

"But such a big corner for such a little place," you say, and he tells you: "Oh, it will be much bigger." Probably a couple of brown derbies.

It doesn't sound like New York's Fifth avenue. It takes a California disposition to appreciate such oddities and laugh at them from the inside.

New York, outside of Greenwich Village, takes itself very seriously. You don't notice how seriously until you get out here.

Canada to Help In Border Fight

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 8. (INS)—Premier W. L. Mackenzie King today confirmed reports that the dominion government is considering ways and means to co-operate with the United States in stopping rum-running.

The premier's confirmation was coincident with the release of figures showing the effectiveness of the Detroit river dry blockade.

Premier King said at the conclusion of yesterday's cabinet meeting, at which the rum smuggling situation was discussed: "Since the United States officials have become more active themselves in preventing liquor smuggling, it seems appropriate that further measures of cooperation should be considered by the Canadian government."

Dorothy Rejoices That Women Have Ditched Tear Jug

"The World Is a More Cheerful Place to Live in Since Women Have Quit Using the Tear Jug and Nailed on the Smile That Won't Come Off," Rejoices Dorothy Dix.

There is much argument, pro and con, conserning whether the world is growing worse or better, but be this as it may, there is no disputing that it is getting to be a more cheerful place to live in and people are happier now than they used to be.

Of course, every one, including those who lament for the good old days, that they wouldn't have back on a bet if they could, concedes that modern inventions have made physical living easier and pleasanter than it ever was before. The laborer, earning even a modest wage, with his electric lights and his bathtub, with his hot and cold running water, with steam heat for the cold weather and an electric fan for the hot, with his homemade radio with which he can tune in on grand opera and prize fights, with his flivver tethered at the back door and a movie theater around the corner, enjoys luxuries of which the millionaire of a couple of generations ago never even dreamed.

To wander through the historic palaces of Europe with their cold stone floors and walls and drafty windows and doors, with their utter lack of every heating and lighting facilities and absence of every comfort, is to be filled with pity for the poor kings and queens who had to live in them and who didn't have even a bed to sleep in that wasn't as hard as a rock nor a chair to sit in that wasn't a backbreaker. Why, we positively could not stand to endure such hardships!

And modern machinery has taken the curse off work. We milk bossy by turning on an electric switch and the only difference between plowing corn and taking a joyride is that one is profitable and the other isn't. Mother turns on the gas when she starts to get breakfast instead of having to go out in the cold to split kindling to light a fire. She punches a button and the vacuum cleaner and the electric washer save her having to bend over the broom and the washboard. Factories, instead of tired women, sing the song of the shirt and the overall and the babies' rompers and the delicatessen store has taken the place of the cellar with its dozens of jars of jam and preserves.

Women nowadays don't know anything about labor compared with their grandmothers, who had to do all of their own housework and make all of the family clothes, before there were any gas ranges or sewing machines or labor-saving devices. No wonder the old cemeteries are full of monuments to devoted wives and mothers who perished of exhaustion in their early 30s.

But it is not so much of the increase in the comfort of living that I wish to speak as of our improved morale. Unfortunately, there is just as much tragedy in the world as there ever was. No human ingenuity can do away with that. Death still desolates every household. Sickness lays its blighting hand upon us. All of us know disappointment and disillusion and anxiety and the frustration of our heart's desires. But, somehow, we have got a saner viewpoint on our misfortunes, more courage to endure our sorrows, more philosophy with which to meet the ups and downs of life.

In my childhood I well remember a group of spectral figures, draped in crepe from head to foot and with pallid faces, who would come periodically to visit my mother and hold a lodge of sorrow over misfortunes that had happened 40 years before. They never smiled. They never uttered a cheerful word. They were literally skeletons at every feast they attended. They took a morbid pride in never having "got over" whatever grief befell them in their youth and they were accorded a sort of respect in the community for maintaining this attitude of perpetual woe. People seemed to think it showed extraordinary devotion or faithfulness or strength of character or something.

This weeping sisterhood is as extinct now as the fabled Niobe. Women who lose the husbands they adored and the children they worshiped still have their hearts broken, God pity them, but they don't make a cult of their grief and they don't go around sailing the world down in the brine of their tears. They bury their sorrows in their own hearts and they deliberately set about salvaging all the happiness they possibly can out of their wrecked lives.

Many women are leaving off wearing mourning, which keeps their own sorrow ever before them and makes memories of their own loss stab every passerby, and in this we see no disrespect to the dead, only a brave acceptance of the inevitable and an effort not to darken any one's sunshine with their own shadows.

It was an older generation that wrote that "men must work and women must weep, so runs the world away." Women have wiped their eyes. They are no longer crybabies and the few lachrymose sisters that are left don't get much sympathy, nor have many shoulders offered for them to weep upon. Instead we call them whiners and quitters and give them a wide berth.

Another figure of grief who used to be common, but that we seldom meet nowadays is the old maid who had been jilted in her youth and who had spent her lifetime pining for her faithless lover. Romantic, she used to be considered. Plain fool, we would call her now. And there was her sister, the deserted wife, whose husband had left her for some younger and fairer woman, or for no reason except that he had just lost his taste for her. And she also spent the remainder of her life, weeping and waiting for her recreant spouse to return, while we all dissolved in sympathy whenever we thought of her sad plight.

But there are mighty few modern women who wear the willow for 30 or 40 years for worthless men who have played them false. They realize that when they gave their hearts to men who were not worthy of them, they made a bad investment and they simply charge the affair off to profit and loss and get busy with something else instead of going into total bankruptcy. All of us know plenty of women who have had to divorce their husbands, who have simply put their old lives behind them and built new structures of happiness on the ruins of the old.

Women used to make a profession of invalidism and their conversation was an exchange of symptoms and a resume of operations, but now they are ashamed of being sickly and only the old-fashioned and the morons mention their ailments. Many women used to be bitter company because they were envious and covetous of the finer-les rich women had. Now they hustle out and get what they want for themselves and boast of their possessions.

Women make most of the happiness of the world and that is why I say it is a more cheerful place to live in because they have quit using the tear jug and nailed on the smile that won't come off.

"SARGON PROVED A BLESSING TO ME"

"Sargon has done more for me in a few weeks than all the other medicines I took put together during the 10 years I suffered.

"I had awful attacks of nervous indigestion and my stomach was in such a disordered condition I could not eat a good meal. I couldn't even drink a glass of buttermilk without suffering. In fact, for the 10 days before I started Sargon I had not swallowed one mouthful of solid food; I had lived on orange juice. I had sharp pains in my stomach and was so weak I had to give up and go to bed. My nerves just went all to pieces and I neves got a good night's rest.

"Sargon has surely proved a blessing to me. I can now eat most anything I want without bad after effects. My nerves are normal, I sleep fine and never have to use a laxative any more like I did before I started taking the Sargon Soft Mass Pills.

"This remarkable treatment has given me back my health and I feel like telling everybody about it."—Mrs. Lonie Nelms, 3227 Pine street, Dallas.

Lubbock Steel Company Fortunately Located in Center of Growing Area

Special to The Record News

LUBBOCK, Texas, Aug. 8.—Lubbock and the South Plains section has been experiencing a most remarkable building program within the past several months and the Lubbock Steel Works, Inc., the only steel works concern in the South Plains, has been taxed to capacity to take care of orders, J. I. Boggs, vice president and secretary of the concern, declared.

The Lubbock Steel works is one of four in the entire West Texas section, other such concerns being located at Wichita Falls, San Angelo, and Amarillo.

Formed in August

The concern has furnished structural steel for some of the larger buildings that have been erected on the South Plains since last August when the institution was formed.

Right at this time over 10 men are busy early and late at the plant in the northern part of Lubbock, getting out steel for a number of buildings.

Among the larger buildings under construction for which the concern is now preparing steel are the Ford garage at Turkey, 150 miles northeast; a Catholic hospital at Slaton, 18 miles southeast; a church at Ralls, 35 miles east and a high school building at Lockney, 50 miles northeast.

New Stanton School

In addition to these jobs a number of smaller jobs are being supplied, and a large number of jobs have just been completed or are nearing completion. A new high school at Stanton is just being completed that was supplied with steel by the Lubbock Steel works. All the steel that went into the big underpass on East Broadway here at Lubbock that is nearing completion was furnished by the concern. The Beacon Master Service station, one of Lubbock's newest and most up to date automobile service stations was furnished by the steel company.

"We have just recently been granted a fabricating in transit rate by the Panhandle and Santa Fe railway." Boggs stated recently in commenting on the progress of their business in Lubbock. "This new rate will enable us to ship in car loads of steel, fabricate it and prepare it to go into a building then ship it on out to the point where the construction work is under way, all on one bill of lading."

Centrally Located

Being located right here in Lubbock where a majority of the contractors make their homes and headquarters who are getting the big construction jobs in Lubbock and over the South Plains section, the Lubbock Steel Works, Inc., is in a position to render a much more personal and a quicker service than companies located away from the section. The local builders can come in direct contact with officials of the local steel works and get just what they want. They will also be contributing to a local industry by patronizing the local concern.

"We want to see Lubbock grow," Boggs said in commenting on the growth of their business. "We are just as interested in Lubbock and the South Plains section as any other local institution."

Ben Sibbitt, of Wichita, Kan., is president of the corporation with J. I. Boggs, vice president and secreary and Edgar G. Lewis, treasurer.

The Lubbock Steel works has one of the best equipped plants in the Southwest. Their work compared with the very best work in the nation. Their plant is equipped with all kind of machines, loading and unloading devices and other equipment necessary in the work.

Car loads of steel are shipped into Lubbock to the company. The steel is fabricated and made ready to be put into buildings and then shipped out to the construction work. Hundreds of car loads of the steel come in and out of Lubbock each month to and from the concern.

The steel works is one of the many industrial institutions in Lubbock that is helping to stabilize business conditions and to lend their part in the up building of Lubbock and the South Plains section. Ten men are employed at the plant now and others will be added as the work increases. Materials are purchased by the concern here in Lubbock and the plant supports the 10 workers and their families.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 8. (AP)—An automatic holy water sprinkler has been invented by a local man who claims that with installation of his invention in the churches propagation of disease will be avoided.

The invention consists of a glass container which when a button is pushed automatically sprinkles holy water into the operator's hand.

The inventor claims that through the ordinary container disease is easily spread inasmuch as everyone dips his hand into the same water and then touches his forehead or lips with it.

WHEAT BLAZE IN WHITE DEER

Hugh Edwards Loses Seed Crop in Fire

Special to The Record-News.

WHITE DEER, Texas, Aug. 8.—Hugh Edwards had the misfortune of losing several hundred bushels of wheat by fire on his farm some three miles south of town last Monday. An alarm was turned in to the volunteer fire department, which was responded to with all possible haste. By the time the fire boys reached the scene the fire was under big headway, and although available water was very scarce the brave boys fought to the bitter end.

The fire truck has a 60 gallon capacity water tank which is kept full and in readiness at all times, this amount was used and several hundred gallons of water was pumped from a near by farm home, but due to the fact that every thing was so dry from a continued dry spell the fire spread very fast.

Mr. Edwards says the damage was several hundred dollars, partially covered with insurance. This grain was extra good wheat as he had selected it from other parts of the Panhandle to seed his ground this fall. The origin of the fire was unknown.

WARDWEAR TIRES

a 10,000-mile guaranteed tire at the lowest price ever known!

THE Standard WARDWEAR – while it is our lowest-priced tire – is made in the same factories, has the same fine design and carefully supervised construction, as our first-quality RIVERSIDE line.

We emphasize this fact because it is important. Too many motorists are today being confused with price-and-quality comparisons which are deceptive. Many manufacturers insist on calling "first-quality" what are actually their "second-line" tires—and suggesting that their prices are lower than Ward's by comparing them with the prices of Ward's first-quality lines!

This sort of "tangled talk" should be straightened out. All such comparisons should in reality be made only between leading makers' second lines and the WARDWEAR. When they are, Ward's prices will always be found to be lower.

In buying your tires, therefore, don't be misled by off-hand "claims" of any kind. Insist on getting the FACTS. Do not be induced to pay first-quality prices for second-quality tires. Do not be satisfied by less than a definite, specific guarantee, backed by the manufacturer, for 10,000 miles of service. Do this, and you will reach but one conclusion: that WARDWEAR prices save you MORE, and WARDWEAR quality is guaranteed to serve you BETTER, than any other tires in their class!

Visit your nearest Ward Retail Store ... examine these splendid-value tires for yourself. Tremendous sales volume, and distribution to the car-owner direct, explain why we can give you such remarkable guaranteed performance at such unusually low prices.

We carry all sizes of tires and tubes to fit all cars —at proportionate savings.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

Mr. Twitchell's Little Boy Takes the Edison Test

Elmer Twitchell's little boy, Felix, was among those taking the recent test to determine a successor to Mr. Thomas A. Edison. He was in the examination room so long after all the other boys had finished and without attracting anyone's attention, in fact, that he was disqualified on the ground he was a stowaway rather than a contestant.

PHILLIPS

Although Felix at no time stood any chance of being named successor to Mr. Edison he was unanimously voted successor to Gus the Gas Man. The honor carries with it a three-year course in the Norwich academy of Frankfort design, and a year's supply of paper doils. Felix's answers follow:

Q.—What did James Watts do?

A.—Stole second with the bases full.

Q.—What are three very low forms of life?

A.—People who call you down at bridge, grasping lawyers and bathhouse proprietors who raise the rates on Saturdays and Sundays.

Q.—Who was Jenny Lind?

A.—I don't know; I'm a stranger here myself.

Q.—What is a tourniquet?

A.—It is like a bassoon only louder and funnier.

Q.—What is a meteor?

A.—A device for recording gas consumption.

Q.—Define work, energy and power.

A.—Work is a game played with a driver, brassie, six iron clubs and a quart of Scotch. Energy is a noise made on a typewriter by a stenographer anxious to convince the boss she deserves a vacation. Power is something you are recognized as having when you

(a) Get a 300-yard drive.

(b) Ignore a speeding summons and hear no more about it.

(c) Ask for a good cut of melon in a dining car and get it.

Q.—The specific heat of water is 1, and of mercury 0.0333; the specific gravity of water is 1, and of mercury 13.6. For a foot-warmer state which you would choose and why; a two-quart hot-water bottle filled with water at 100 degrees C. or a two-quart flask of mercury at 100 degrees C.

A.—Make mine vanilla.

Q.—What should be done to improve the airplane?

Q.—Put in electric cigarette-lighters.

Q.—Assume the increase in any colony of mice to be such that the number doubles every three months. How large will the colony be at the end of three years if we start with a pair?

A.—It depends on the cat. The thing to do is to start with one mouse and a pair of kittens.

Q.—If you were marooned on a desert island in the South Pacific without tools, how would you move a three-ton weight, such as a boulder, 100 feet horizontally and 17 feet vertically?

A.—We would write Dorothy Dix.

Q.—If you had been given a difficult experiment to perform, and had failed 10 times, what would you do?

A.—Rap on the ceiling for the people upstairs to keep quiet.

If you want a wife with lots o' backbone this is the summer to pick her out. "I thought mebbe she might be fleein' from a burnin' husband," said Constable Plum, this mornin', after he'd questioned a scantily clad woman who was hurryin' along the street.

Our washer woman won the noiseless loud speaker yesterday. While delivering the clothes she remarked: "Lawd, Lawd. Before the election all you could heah was Al Smith and de pope. Now all people talk about is Hoover and De Priest."

Dr. James Snook, on trial for the "drug-sex" murder of Theora Hix, Ohio university co-ed, is an excellent pistol shot, having won the Olympic championship once in his career. He should have stuck by his guns.

The legislature in Michigan has started an investigation to determine whether or not co-eds smoke. After they're through with that one, they might try to find out also whether or not any of them bob their hair.

Mussolini has a plan to give the fathers of the largest families the best jobs. Wonder what assignment that will leave open for the couple with "the canary that seems almost human."

Wrong food is the chief cause of sin, disease and crime, says Henry Ford. President Hoover evidently hadn't heard of that when he appointed his crime commission.

Ambassador Dawes persists in refusing to wear those knee breeches. In a verbal way, however, he would be a perfect success on any golf course.

The Crass Materialist and the Finer Life

IT IS THE FASHION in this country, especially among people who are better educated than the average, to speak slightingly of America as a "materialistic nation."

By this, of course, it is meant that we think too much about making money and not enough about finer living, freer and more satisfying lives. Our scale of values is material rather than spiritual. The cash ledger is, if not our Bible, at least our prayer book.

All of this sounds quite discouraging. Yet there is a side to it that is often overlooked. One of the approaches to a fine spiritual civilization may lie straight through the region of crass materialities.

Take this little story as an illustration.

Not long ago a California farmer loaded a refrigerator ship with a cargo of green vegetables and ripe fruits from his farm and sailed for the Orient, determined to see if lands like China, the Philippines and the Malay islands could not provide a good market for such produce. The home market was glutted. Prices were low. An industrious farmer with a fertile piece of ground could not always count on finishing the year with more money than he had when he began it.

So this enterprising farmer sailed to the Orient. He visited a dozen ports—Shanghai, Manila, Sourabaya, Bankok, Saigon, Batavia; and he found a ready and eager market for his wares. He sold all he had, at a nice profit, and returned home to tell his fellow farmers that the Orient, properly cultivated, could make them all prosperous.

Now that man was strictly a materialist. He wanted only one thing—a chance to get more dollars. Yet the thing he did may eventually open the way to a broader, finer life for many, many men and women.

Despite all of our talk about the crassness of the quest for money, the fact remains that it is a lot easier to get spiritual values into your life if you have money than if you have not. Nothing shuts a man out from a free and satisfying existence like poverty.

Consider it, now; on a farm where there is a constant struggle to make both ends meet, how are men, women and children going to lead lives that are anything but sordid, uninspiring fights for more money? How can they enjoy the fruits of a rich civilization—music, literature, leisure, quiet study and reflection? They simply can't. The job of making a living takes all their time.

But suppose a "materialistic" exporter finds them a new market and enables them to make more money? They are freed from the grip of poverty. They have the time and the money to go after the things that are really worth having. They can think about something besides their bread and butter.

The "materialist" has been given too bad a name. There are times when he is by way of being our salvation.

The Time Is Ripe for the Man

WE HAD hoped that in the coming campaign in Texas there might be candidates and issues that would be above the questions of how one voted in the 1928 election, whether the candidate had been a life long political prohibitionist, whom he had supported in previous campaigns and similar trivialities.

In the flock of candidates who have so far made their appearance in the gubernatorial contest there does not seem much hope that the old bickerings can be forgotten. Rather there is the probability that they will be accentuated and that they will become the factors that will be of the largest influence in the result.

Such threadbare things offer a sort of entertainment when discussed by men who have a gift of accusation and repartee but they serve only to keep alive some things that had better be forgotten, and obscure vital issues that ought to be considered by the people.

We cannot but believe that the people of Texas would welcome some relief from such a situation no matter how much they appear to enjoy the performance of those who keep us bound to such inconsequential matters. And if the Democratic party continues to put on only a punch and judy show we would not be surprised to see them seek entertainment elsewhere.

We believe the time is ripe for some candidate for governor big enough to make us lose sight of old bickerings and to go before the people with an intelligent plan for the solution of at least some of the problems that are before us and which will continue to arise.

Quotations Worth Noting

"Society is necessary in our competitive scheme of existence which makes it impossible to escape the human appetite for distinction. CHATTY—GODDESS OF GAB

By BEATRICE BURTON, Author of: "HER MAN," "HONEY LOU," "SALLY'S SHOULDERS," "MONEY LOVE," "LOVE BOUND," ETC.

COPYRIGHT 1929, CENTRAL PRESS ASS'N, INC., CLEVELAND, OHIO.

"You're going to be the cat's party dress, all right!"

READ THIS FIRST

Charlotte Chatterton, nicknamed Chatty, is a born gossip. She loses her job in a hat shop because she talks too much. Her mother, a widowed dressmaker, has one wealthy customer, Mrs. Van Nuys, an old friend. Through her Chatty gets a position at the telephone switchboard in Mr. Van Nuys' bond house. There she meets Dave Jordan, a young bond salesman, and falls in love with him.

Millie Langenau, who works in the office, and her sister, Sara, come to live in the flat across the hall from the flat where Chatty lives with her mother and her brother, Pud. Pud attends high school, and works evenings in Ben Tomlison's drug store. Chatty learns that he sells gin for Ben, and that one of his customers is Winnie Talcott, a stenographer in Mr. "Van's" office. She begs Pud to leave Tomlinson, but he refuses to.

Dave Jordan falls in love with Chatty, and the two have several pleasant parties and picnics with Billie and George Mayhew, another bond salesman. Then Sara tells Chatty that Billie has been married to a man named Brewster, but never divorced from him. Billie has not told this to George because she insists that they are only matter-of-fact friends and that there is no need to bare her past life to him. But when Chatty sees George with another girl, and tells her about it, Billie bursts into tears, admits she is in love with him, and stops seeing him.

One day Chatty sees Dave hand a note to Agnes Herford, Mr. "Van's" secretary. Jealous, she goes through Agnes' desk that night to find the note. It is a harmless message about some bonds, but Chatty also finds Agnes' diary, which tells the whole story of Agnes' love for Mr. "Van." She sends some of the pages of it to Mrs. Van, and later advises Mrs. "Van" to make her husband discharge Agnes. He does, and Agnes is given two weeks' notice. Her job is promised to Winnie Talcott, who is jubilant over it. Dave Jordan is the only person in the office who knows why Agnes was fired, for he found the torn diary in Chatty's handbag when she left it in his car one night. He tells her what he thinks of her, and throws her over. Chatty is heart broken, and one morning, when Winnie tells her that a handsome new bond salesman is starting to work that day, she is not even mildly interested.

Now Go on With the Story

CHAPTER XXI

"Many a heart is caught on the rebound," says the old proverb.

And something like that happened to Chatty's sore and aching heart on that warm, sunny Monday morning in June, when she stepped into the big main office.

She stood still, just outside the door of the cloak room, for a moment, looking around the room for Dave Jordan. For weeks and weeks he had been the first person she had looked for when she set foot in the office in the morning—and it was second nature for her to do it now, even though she knew that he was through with her forever.

He was nowhere in sight, and another man was sitting in his desk chair, looking over the morning paper.

As Chatty stood, looking at him, he turned his head. His eyes met hers and held them fast.

"This must be the man Winnie was just telling me about," she thought, and she knew that no matter how much Winnie had raved over him and his good looks, she had not said the half of it.

For this man was better looking than any other man Chatty ever had seen in her life. He was handsomer than any of the professional man beauties on the moving picture screen. He was even better looking than Dave Jordan, Chatty confessed to her self . . . He was better looking than any man has any right to be.

His deep-set eyes were blue, and in all the time she was to know him Chatty was seldom to see them when there was not a twinkle in them. The minute she looked into them she understood what Winnie had meant when she said he was "more darned fun."

He was very blond, and above his carved mouth was a little toothbrush of a mustache. He smiled suddenly, showing teeth that were as white as new ivory.

Hardly a girl in the world would have been proof against that smile—and Chatty found that she was smiling back at him, in spite of herself.

Her heart, that had felt like a wound in her breast for days and days, began to stir even such a little once more. She felt herself blushing violently as she looked away and hurried across the room to her chair at the switchboard.

As soon as she saw Winnie vanish into her office she got her on the office telephone.

"Oh, my Aunt Abigail!" she said in an excited whisper. "That man is a wow and a knockout, Winnie! I'm crazy about him! What did you say his name was?"

"Bryant Dunning," answered Winnie. "I told you he was a zizzer! I used to go 'round with him some, and oh, boy! how he can spend money on a girl when he likes her! His dollars just gallop—"

"Tune out!" cried Chatty, her eye on the door. "Here comes your boss! See you later!" She hung up.

Mr. Van did not say "Good morning" as he passed her.

He did not speak to anyone, as he usually did. He looked very grim and bad tempered, and disappeared into his own office.

"He knows someone in the office has been carrying tales about him and Agnes to his wife—and so he's sore at the whole bunch of us," Chatty told Billie Langenau later in the morning, when she went into the filing room for a two-minute chat. "If he ever finds out that Mrs. Van sent for me that night to ask me questions about them he'll probably show me the outside of the door, won't he?"

Billie groaned. "I wish you hadn't told Winnie Talcott about her sending for you," she said thoughtfully. "If Winnie ever is angry with you about anything, it would be just like her to tell Mr. Van about it."

Chatty laughed. "Winnie and I are very good friends, though," she answered, light-heartedly. "We're getting to be what you might call 'clubby,' almost!"

"Well, be as clubby as you want to be with her—here in the office," advised Billie. "But please don't run around with her and her gang after hours. She goes with a mighty fast-stepping crowd. I know—George and I used to see her with them in roadhouses and places like that—"

"That would suit me fine!" Chatty broke in upon her words. "I'm sick and tired of hanging around like a bed-ridden oyster, never going anywhere or having any fun! I've never had any fun! Never!"

"You had lots of fun with Dave and George and me, when we four went 'round together," the other girl reminded her, gravely. "And it was decent fun, too. But if you start going out with Winnie's crowd you'll have a very different kind of good time. They all drink and raise Cain generally. They're—they're tough! They're wild. They're just no good!"

Chatty stared at her in astonishment. It was so unlike Billie to say unkind things about anyone, that she could hardly believe her own ears now.

"Well, they haven't asked me to go anywhere with them yet—and the chances are they never will," she replied, after a minute or two. "So save your breath, Billie, to cool your soup!"

Oddly enough, late that very afternoon Chatty had her first invitation to go out with Winnie's crowd.

She had closed her switchboard for the night, and was just getting up from her chair to get ready to go home when Winnie came flying across the office to her, all noise and excitement, as usual.

"Darling, a mariele has come into your life!" she announced so loudly that Dave Jordan, who was the only other person in the room, could not have helped hearing what she said. "The best looking man in the whole world has fallen for you like Niagara! He's dying to meet you and bring you to my birthday party on Friday night! How's that for fast work?"

"You mean Bryant Dunning?" faltered Chatty, flashing a look at Dave Jordan, who was pretending not to hear.

But it was perfectly clear that he had heard; for he was scowling down at his desk and his ears were very red. He slammed a drawer shut, got up, and went hurrying out of the office. The door closed after him with a bang.

"Your ex-boy friend didn't care so much for what I said about Bryant Dunning falling for you, did he?" asked Winnie, when he was gone. "Go and put on your hat and a lot of face powder, Chat, and make it snappy. Bryant's downstairs, waiting for us."

He was. He was standing in the big white lobby of the building, looking for all the world like a Greek statue of an athlete, dressed in the clothes of 1929.

"Miss Chatterton—Mr. Dunning," said Winnie, introducing them. "I hope you'll both forgive me if I run along. I have a weight date for dinner and I'm late for it now. See you all of a sudden!" And she was gone, leaving Chatty feeling as helpless as a baby abandoned on a doorstep.

She racked her brains for something to say to this perfect stranger. But she could think of nothing. Her mind was a blank.

"I am going to take you home," the man named Bryant Dunning, said solemnly, and for just a second the twinkle went out of his eyes, leaving them a cold cobalt blue. "I have a date later on tonight, or I'd ask you to have dinner with me. But, after tonight, I'll have no more dates."

He tucked her hand under his arm, as if they were old and affectionate friends, and side by side they walked out of the lobby and down the alley to the wide parking space behind the building.

His car was an open roadster. It was painted a showy bottle green, and it was decorated with gilt lines that ran around the body and the hood.

"Some boat!" said Bryant. He liked it.

"Some boat!" echoed Chatty, climbing into it.

It was not until she was settled beside him in the seat that she saw another open roadster—one that she knew—on the other side of the parking space.

It was a gray, snub-nosed car. Its top was down, and so was its windshield. It was weather beaten, and a great deal of its gray paint was gone. . . . It was Dave Jordan's Pride of America.

Under it, flat on his back, lay a long-legged, red-headed man, who was tinkering with something that evidently had gone wrong with its mechanism.

"Hello—that's Jordan, isn't it?" Bryant Dunning asked Chatty, looking at the shock of red hair that was visible at one end of the car. "Perhaps I ought to see if I can help him."

"Suit yourself." Chatty's tone was flat.

"Well, I guess I won't, then," Bryant decided. "There's no reason why I should. . . . He and I never did get along very well, and he probably wouldn't give me a hand if I needed one."

"Have you known him a long time?"

Bryant nodded. "Went to school with him years ago. Known him ever since. But let's talk about you and me. How many engagements have you for this week?"

Chatty giggled happily. "None—except for Friday night. Winnie's having a birthday party—"

"And you're going to it with me," he finished the sentence for her. "And you're going to see me every night this week, besides."

Chatty giggled again, excitedly. This sort of thing was new to her, and it went to her head like wine.

"How lovely," she said, blinking up at him, the sunset in her eyes. "How lovely to see you every night! I—mean it. I think you're wonderful."

She had almost forgotten about Dave Jordan, lying under the Pride of America, tinkering with its 1924 motor. . . . The dull ache that had been in her heart for a week was gone. Completely gone.

When Bryant Dunning put out his right hand and took hers in it, she did not take it away. All the way out to Lipton street he held it, stroked it, petted it.

"Now, remember, every night this week," were the last words he said to her when he left her at her door. "Every one—for me."

But the next morning he told her that he was going out of town and wouldn't be back until Friday night.

"Doggoned shame," he said, and he said it as if he meant it. "I'm embarrassed about having to go, too, just now, when I'm starting this new job—but it can't be helped. By the way, my train doesn't get in until nine o'clock Friday night, so why don't you go to Winnie's house from the office, and I'll meet you there?"

So on Friday Chatty took her only party dress to the office in a little leather bag that belonged to her mother, and when Winnie went home at half past five she went with her.

Winnie's flat was cozy, with its dark-red silk curtains, its deep armchairs heaped with cushions, its many lamps and vases and knick-knacks. "Stuff my mother left me when she died," Winnie explained, when Catty admired it.

Winnie's dressing table was a jumble of curling irons, perfume bottles, cold cream jars, tissue papers for removing cold cream from the face, powder boxes, rouge boxes and lip sticks.

"I am going to make up your face for you, Chat," Winnie said, when they began to get dressed. "And, believe me, I can do it. Mabel Jenkins, who lives here with me—only she's away on her vacation now—is the most colorless thing on earth. But you should see her when I fix her up!"

She tied a towel around Chatty's shoulders and began to wave her hair with her curling iron.

"Don't burn it," said Chatty, nervously. She did not want to have her hair waved, but she did not want to offend Winnie, either.

"Don't you worry—I won't," Winnie promised, and when the hair was all waved and done up, she got out a box of mascara and spread it all over Chatty's eyelashes that were so thick and dark naturally that they needed no mascara at all.

"You're going to be the cat's party dress, all right!" declared Winnie, picking up a box of salmon-colored rouge. "All you need is to be painted up a little. . . . I've been dying to do it ever since I've known you!"

"Dave would hate me like this," thought Chatty, watching the clock and wishing that it was half past nine and that Bryant was there.

SIDE GLANCES By George Clark

The Day Book of a New Yorker

Broadway Chatter by Grant Dixon

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Mayor James J. Walker's office carries with it a great deal of newspaper attention. The mayor's judgment on what is a good newspaper story is unerring. Recently he made a long speech accepting the petition of 700 citizens that he run again for mayor. It had long been a foregone conclusion that he would run, but for this occasion everyone pretended to be unaware of his intention. The mayor spoke at great length, reviewing the accomplishes of his administration. And then, in answer to the petition, he said:

"Who could say no?"

Immediately afterward, in his private chambers, Mayor Walker shook his head dubiously. "'Who could say no?'", he repeated. "I suppose I'll never live that down."

He was right. Before the week had ended, vaudeville actors were getting big laughs from that line, dozens of newspaper editorials had been written on the topic, and columnists were having a field day with it.

Mayor Walker's newspaper sense is without doubt highly trained. The question is, did he plan that line, or didn't he realize its possibilities until after it was spoken?

Can't Find One

No chorus girl who is in her right mind will admit that her legs are anything but perfect, and one cast-agent on Broadway has been having a difficult time filling a commission on that account. A producer, for reasons unknown at present, wants to hire a bow-legged chorus girl, and has sent the order to the agent he regularly employs. The demand for chorus girls is picking up with the approach of the fall season, but it has been very light, and girls have been tramping from casting office to casting office in search of employment. When they arrive at this particular caster's office, he gives them a swift once-over. "If a girl's legs are shapely and straight, he says:

"Sorry. I have nothing now."

But if a girl's legs are bowed—and there are plenty of dancing lassies whose limbs are parenthetical—the agent says:

"All I have at the moment is a request for a bow-legged girl. Do you you know where I can find one?"

Invariably the job-hunter says, "No, I don't," and walks out.

Coney Passing?

Coney Island is going slightly high-hat, and the change dates from the construction of the board walk. When the board walk was built over the beach, streets were cut through as approaches, and the layout of the island became orderly instead of chaotic. A tall hotel was built, expensive theaters grew right in the midst of the cheapest of sideshows, and good restaurants began to compete with the establishments where one paid a dime for an ear of corn and ate that graceless article right out in public, on the street curb.

The board walk and improved and extended beaches have greatly increased the capacity of the island, and a summer Sunday crowd now numbers a million persons. Even in winter 100,000 persons a day is not uncommon.

The result of this stupendous and growing traffic is a skyrocketing of land values, and experts are predicting that some of the larger amusement places on the island will disappear. The land they occupy has become so valuable that, according to these experts, the only sane thing to do is to sell it for apartment buildings and hotels.

Yacht Trouble

This business of buzzing about New York's waters in luxurious yachts and cabin cruisers appears to have its mental and material drawbacks. Many's the time that I have wished, as I piloted an automobile through dense Sunday traffic, for a sturdy boat to take me out in the open, away from collisions and tire punctures. But I have recently learned from a friend who is the worried owner of a modest $15,000 cruiser that my wishes have been colored with the rosy-tint of ignorance.

"How I'd love to have a little tire trouble," he exclaimed. "It's so simple. You just put a nationally advertised jack under the axle, move it up and down a few times with your little finger, and remove the wheel with the flat tire. Then, just as easily, you put on a convenient spare. In half a summer season you couldn't possibly have 14 punctures. Yet in that length of time I have lost just 14 propellers. Every time I take the boat out I am obsessed with the fear of running into some debris and breaking my 18th. I am considering buying a diving suit, so I can make my own repairs."

AMARILLO GETS COLLEGE HEAD

Beaumont Educator May Go to Amarillo

AMARILLO, Texas, Aug. 8. (AP)—D. W. Boltnott, president of the South Park Junior college, Beaumont, has accepted a conditional two-year contract as head of the Amarillo Municipal Junior college at a salary of $5,000 a year. His employment is contingent upon an election the latter part of this month to determine whether the college will open this fall.

Should the election carry, college work will start Sept. 23. Seven rooms in one of the ward schools will house the enrollment this year.

Amarillo is the first city to take advantage of the new Texas law providing for junior colleges in connection with the public school system.

Subsea Upheavals Raise Ocean Floor To Create Hazards

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8. (AP)—Upheavels in the ocean bed off the coast of Nicaragua, which are believed to be of volcanic origin, have been reported to the navy department by the cruiser Cleveland, now on duty in Latin American waters.

About 13 miles off the coast in the Carribean sea, the Cleveland found bottom at 4½ fathoms at a spot on the chart where the bottom should have been 37 fathoms down. Later the same ship took soundings of 8½ fathoms near the entrance of Nicoya Gulf, Costa Rica, at a spot where the depth should have been 268 fathoms.

The commander of the special service squadron suggested that shipping should be warned of these hazards, which are to be investigated further.

Buckingham Seems 'Great' to U. S. Youth

LONDON, Aug. 8. (INS)—Fourteen-year-old James McDonald of Dansville, N. Y., a member of the delegation that presented a message of greetings from the Boy Scouts to King George, found spick and span Buckingham palace far different from the muddy, sticky, tented field at Arrowe park, Birkenhead, where the Boy Scout jamboree is under way.

"The king's house is certainly great," young McDonald was quoted by the Daily Mail today as saying. "We had a fine welcome. It was a good thing we cleaned our shoes before we got there. There is lots of deep mud at Arrowe park and if any of it had got upon the fine carpet from our dirty shoes it certainly would have ruined that carpet."

Many of the visiting Boy Scouts are absent from the encampment at Birkenhead upon sight-seeing trips.

Experts to Test Water From Quanah Wells

Special to The Record News.

QUANAH, Texas, Aug. 8.—Experts from the Grand Island Nebraska company who specialize in supplying cities with water from wells, will be in Quanah next week to make exhaustive tests of the Maginnis well, recently drilled to augment Quanah's water supply. This well is reported to be drilled in a plentiful supply base of water located about four miles northeast from Quanah on direct line with pipeline from the present city wells on Red River. The city has not had equipment for proper tests, and the well experts are expected to drill several other wells in the immediate locality to prove up the quantity of water available.

The supreme court authorized the release of Waldock from the state penitentiary where he is serving a five-year term on an embezzlement charge from McCurtain county in connection with a habeas corpus plea late Wednesday.

Hearing on the habeas corpus action is set for Sept. 3 before the supreme court.

Zeppelin Stowaway Back With His Mother

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 8. (INS)—Morris Roth, 15-year-old plumber's helper who was stowed away on the Graf Zeppelin, was moved to make a pun when he arrived home here today.

"I am bound to rise in the world," he said. Roth told his mother the officers at the naval air station had treated him splendidly.

"No harm was done—but I didn't succeed," he said.

The Japanese government has acquired 500,000 eggs of American shad and is attempting to produce the fish in Japanese waters.

WILL CONTEST GETS BITTER

Counsel Threatens to Bare 'Sordid Story'

By ROBERT WELLES RITCHCIE

LONDON, Aug. 8. (US)—The contest over the $5,000,000 estate left by Princess Hatzfeldt, daughter of the late Collis P. Huntington, has reached a most bitter stage. Angry at opposition tactics, John Francis Neyland, counsel for Edward Whitman Prentice, of San Francisco, threatens to reveal the stenographic testimony of the "most sordid story I have ever heard."

Attorney Neyland, fired into hot retaliation by a statement made before sailing yesterday on the Aquitania by Max D. Steuer, counsel for English inheritors under the will, and the Hanover Trust, of New York, executor, to the effect that there is "no possibility of a compromise in the suit," and that it was a "point of honor" for him to continue the defense of princess Hatzfeldt's rightful heirs, tonight told Universal Service:

"Amazing" Statement

"Steuer's statement to the press in respect to Princess Hatzfeldt's will case is amazing. Steuer by implication seeks to give the impression that the talk of compromise originated with Prentice, when he knows the direct opposite to be the fact.

"Steuer says, 'This is a question of honor,' and that the will to be submitted for probate is that of Princess Hatzfeldt and not some other will which some people might desire to substitute.

"I knew little of the facts of this matter until July 29, when we began examining the witnesses. The majority of witnesses examined were either Steuer's clients or employes of those clients. At the request of Steuer and his clients, representatives of the press were excluded from the hearing, and I can well understand why.

"During the eight days of the hearing I saw the most amazing series of documents I have ever seen.

"Those people were forced to produce not one will of the late Princess Hatzfeldt, but 15 wills executed by her, 10 having been executed, beginning with a date two weeks after the death of her husband in 1910. That series of wills beginning with Nov. 18, 1918, tells as sordid a story as I have ever heard or read.

"Gradually charities, educational institutions and relatives were eliminated. The final alleged will of the princess was a masterpiece.

Princess Was Squanderer

"In the last few years of her life, suffering from a complication of diseases, the princess was vigorous enough in health to squander $230,000 per annum. Gifts of money running into tens of thousands to one gentleman are features of this 'honorable' record.

"One very important gentleman in this 'honorable' transaction was forced to admit under oath that he was a party to the sale of stock to the public at 17 shillings a share when he personally did not believe it was worth one shilling.

"Giving the princess a movable domicile was another interesting feature of this affair of honor. If Steuer desires still further to set aside legal ethics and try this matter in the press, I will be very glad to release for publication the entire stenographic report of the testimony taken under oath."

Pretty Wife of Young Boatman Held While Officers Probe River Death

DETROIT, Aug. 8. (INS)—Mrs. Maxine Heath, pretty 23-year-old private secretary, was held today in connection with the death of Richard J. Sandlands, special federal prohibition agent whose body was found in the Detroit river.

Search continued, meanwhile, for her husband, Jack Heath, 27, a boatman who is alleged to have struggled with Sandlands last Friday night when the officer boarded Heath's small motor cruiser, the Maxine, and attempted to arrest him for violation of navigation laws.

During the course of the scuffle, according to Heath's story as reported by his attorney, both men fell overboard and the officer disappeared while Heath swam back to his boat.

Mrs. Heath was on the boat at the time and has told substantially the same story of the fatal encounter as that related by her husband. She is secretary for Max Finkleston, an attorney, who says Heath came to him Monday, told of the struggle, and announced he would surrender himself. Thus far, however, he has not appeared.

Federal agents took Mrs. Heath into custody last night and she was held in a police cell today. She asserts that her husband grappled with Sandlands only after the latter had refused to show his credentials. Heath feared robbery, his wife declares.

Contrary to the story of the Heaths that Sandlands' death resulted from drowning, an autopsy on the body has revealed a broken neck.

State Aids Road Work In City of Quanah

Special to The Record News.

QUANAH, Texas, Aug. 8.—The state highway department granted assistance to county and city officials in paving the three-block gap on the west end of Third street to connect with highway No. 5 paving, which just came to the corporate limits of Quanah. Judge J. E. Wiley and County Commissioner R. S. Reed recently visited Austin to secure this aid. The routing when accepted had practically no residences and no business houses located on this three blocks, but now there are several built, and the department had taken the stand that it did not comply with the requirements concerning population along the paved areas through cities.

Bids are being advertised for now.

THEY FADE

Treasury Warns Holders Of New Bills Not to Wash Them

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8. (UP)—The treasury today warned persons with new money not to make the mistake of sending any of the currency to the laundry in their clothing.

This tip came after secret service agents reported from Beaumont, Texas, that one of the new five dollar "flivver" green backs mysteriously turned from green to gold.

It was first thought that the money was counterfeit but later an investigation showed the bill had gone to a laundry in a shirt and washing powder caused it to change color.

MANY GATHER TO 'CUT PLUM'

Liquidation of Guaranty Fund Planned

OKLAHOMA CITY, Aug. 8. (UP)—The Oklahoma state capitol building seethed with political swapping, threats and promises today as politicians from all over the state discovered that in liquidation of the Oklahoma guaranty fund lay the biggest political plum of the year.

The banking board and the Oklahoma Bankers association first recommended liquidation of the fund. When the step was followed by Gov. W. J. Holloway's order, it was regarded as merely procedure on a non-active account of money. Like a wave, however, the report swept over the state that someone was going to make "big money" out of the liquidation.

Size Unknown

The wave backwashed men from every section of the state to the capitol for a "cut of the plum."

Although there is no way of estimating what the "plum" may amount to, it is believed by those close to state affairs that it will be more than $100,000. Despite the fact that the proposition is not even in court yet some of the applicants are already beginning to insinuate that the ground floor is full and the rest are working in vain.

The supposedly leading candidate is said to be a former member of the state supreme bench who held office until a short time ago. Under present plans the attorney general's office will place the proposition before the state supreme court as an original action.

That court is then expected to appoint a referee to liquidate the old fund.

Referee Gets Fee

The referee will take his fee from the fund, in which there is over $1,300,000 to be liquidated. Activity of more than 20 men in attempting to land the position could be traced at the state house today with more coming.

Absence from the state of Governor Holloway and a number of members of the supreme court is retarding the activity, however, it was reported. There is no legal precedence to be followed in liquidation of the case since a similar proposition has never been handled here before.

Settlement of all the claims and disbursement of the fund is expected to be a long procedure since it involves hundreds of state persons and institutions, including a number of smaller banks.

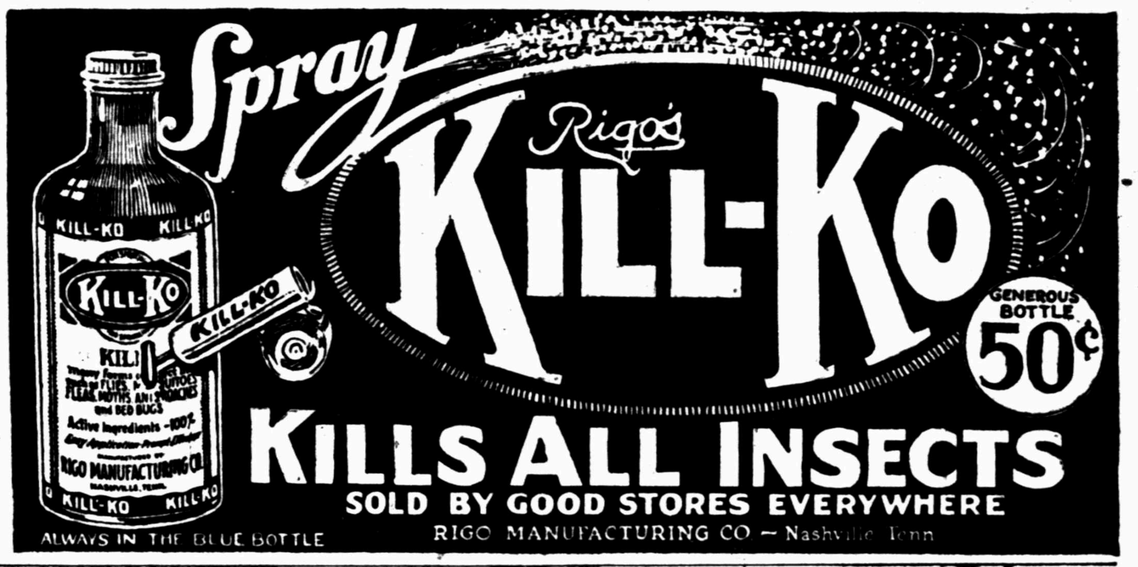

Although the assets of the fund total over $1,300,000 it is believed that about $200,000 worth of these assets cannot be converted into cash.

The fund was created by act of legislature soon after statehood for the protection of state depositors. It was abolished about 10 years ago by the legislature and has been more or less dormant since that time.

BENNETT'S HOME RUN AND SINGLE WIN FOR SPUDS IN 9TH, 6-5

PAYNE SCORES SEASON'S 18TH

Hunt Clouts Two Four-Base Drives, Moore One

By LARRY DAILEY
Record News Sports Editor

The moral to this story is: Do not pitch to Red Bennett. That is, walk him when the situation is dangerous.

Skipper Gene Bailey, Pitcher Art Reinhart and other members of the Houston Buffaloes doubtless will agree with that sentiment. For it was the mighty bat of the titian-thatched, stocky outfielder that yesterday snatched victory from the w. k. jaws of defeat, and enabled our Spudders to cop the opener of the series from the Buffaloes, and their fifth straight victory.

The score was 6 to 5, and the Spudders won in the ninth, thanks to a hit by Bennett. But that was not the only part played by Red in the fifth straight triumph of Galloway's gallopers. Trailing 5 to 1 in the seventh inning, the Spudders filled the bases with two out. Up came Bennett. Reinhart pitched to Red in one sense of the word; that is, the ball he tossed was wide. But not wide enough. A terrific drive of Red's mighty shoulders sent the ball over the left field wall and his three comrades scampered home ahead and the score was tied.

In the ninth the fates again cast Bennett in the hero role and he again came through. Benton, who played a great all-around game, fielding and batting brilliantly, got his third hit of the pastime, stole second and went to third on a wild pitch. Fitzgerald walked. Two were out. And again Bennett smashed one of Southpaw Reinhart's hooks, this a slashing drive to right field that sent Benton ambling home with the winning tally, and keeping the Spudders a game and a half ahead of Fort Worth in the hectic pennant battle.

Red Nears Homer Lead

His home run yesterday was Bennett's twenty-fourth of the season and placed him only one behind Bob Sanguinet of Waco, leading the league in circuit drives. And of course his three hits, the third a single, helped keep Red in the van of Texas league hitters, still with a mark of more than .370.

Bennett was not the only home run slugger of the day. Joel Hunt, the former Texas A. & M. college football and basketball star, smacked a brace of four-base blows, in the fifth and sixth innings, the latter coming with a comrade on the lines. Those two knocks followed a home run by Roy Moore in the first inning, which also was made with a teammate on base, and thus the three circuit drives accounted for all the Buff tallies.

Save for those homers George Payne chucked a great game of ball. In six of the nine innings the screw ball master retired the hostiles in order, a highly commendable and rare feat of pitching. He allowed only six hits and with his usual superb control passed nary a Buffalo. It was the eighteenth victory of the season against nine defeats for Payne and puts the sturdy righthander in the lead of Texas league hurlers.

Reinhart Pitches Well

Reinhart also turned in a first-class pitching performance, though not equal to that of Payne. The former Cardinal was touched for nine hits, but pitched exceptionally well in the clinches and also was accorded some sparkling support. The first Spudders at bat in six innings got on base through hits or passes but except in the fifth when Fitzgerald's three-base smack drove home a run and the above-narrated winning blows of Bennett, they languished on the lines.

Bennett and Benton with their three blows apiece were batting leaders of the day. Moore, Hunt and Hack Miller, returned to the loop a few weeks ago, smacked two knocks each.

Other new faces were shown by the Buffs since their last visit to this great, thriving, booming, substantial (attention Hubert Harrison) commonwealth.

Roy Blades, until a couple of years ago a foremost outfielder in the National league, is now playing left field for the Buffs. Flint Rhem, another former Cardinal and Joe Brown, the ex-Sport of Shreveport, both pitchers, also have only recently donned regalia of the bayou city.

Moore Clouts Homer

Benton singled to deep short and continued to second on Hunt's erratic peg but was stranded on the lines, due partly to Hunt's going back of second for Bennett's grounder.

Payne turned back the Buffs in order in the second, aided by Benton's fast play on Miller's roller.

Sullivan opened the Spudder second with a golf shot to center for a base, but Hock made a nice play on Hermann's sharp bounder and started a double play.

Houston again failed to get on base in the third. Lapan walked and Turgeon singled but to no avail.

George Washington retired the Buffaloes one-two-three for the third straight inning in the fourth.

Spuds Muff Chance

The Spudders muffed a chance to tally in the fourth. Bennett led off by bouncing a hit over Bailey, the fourth Wichitan that started an inning by getting on base. He was forced by Sullivan. Hermann slashed a hit to left. Stapleton forced Hermann, Sullivan going to third, but Lapan lifted to Taylor.

Hunt led off in the fifth with his circuit smash over the center wall. Miller hit through short and Payne fumbled Funk's sacrificial bunt. Both were advanced on Reinhart's sacrifice but George then tightened up and caused Hock to ground to Turgeon and struck out Bailey.

The Spudders finally broke through to tally one in the fifth. The first batter, Payne, again led off with a hit to right. Benton flied to Miller and Turgeon forced Payne. Fitzgerald banged the left field wall for three bases, scoring Turgeon.

Moore and Hunt got into action again in the sixth, Roy whamming a double to center and riding home on Joel's second four-base smash, this over the left field wall. Miller singled but was left.

They Go Out in Order

The Spudders went out in order on three ground balls.

Houston failed to get on the lines in the seventh.

And then mighty Powerhouse

Boys' Baseball Games Postponed

Wichita-Fort Worth Tilts Set Back Week

The two baseball games scheduled for tomorrow between two teams from the Panther Boys' club of Fort Worth and the two leading teams in the Rotary Knothole league of Wichita Falls have been postponed until the following Saturday, it was announced Thursday by W. B. Ward, charman of the Rotary boys work committee, and C. C. Frazee, city recreational director.

A special entertainment program for the visiting boys has been planned, Ward said. They will be given a swimming party and a big picnic supper at Westmoreland park pool Saturday night following the two games.

Tri-City Tennis Meet Postponed Indefinitely

The tri-city tennis meet, scheduled to be played next Saturday at Fort Worth, has been postponed, according to a telegram received Thursday by C. C. Frazee, city recreational director. Teams from Denton, Fort Worth and Wichita Falls were to have contested for honors in the meet. Another date for the meet will probably be set, the telegram stating that a letter would follow.

Wichita Racqueteers To Play at Amarillo

Tom McCarty and Raymond McPhail, two of the outstanding tennis players in Wichita Falls, left here Thursday morning for Amarillo to represent this city in the tri-state tennis meet to be played there on Aug. 9, 10 and 11. Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico will be represented in the meet, in which approximately 30 players from cities in the three states will be entered.

Red Bennett smote his home run that scored three comrades ahead and tied the count at 5-all. Lapan, first up, walked. Taylor was under Payne's lift. Benton singled, Turgeon popped to Hunt and Hunt booted Fitzgerald's grounder. The bases filled and two out—and Bennett at bat. And a screaming drive over the left field wall.

Turgeon handled two plays and Benton one to set back the Bisons in rotation in the eighth. Reinhart also retired the side by pitching to only three men.

Payne turned back the Buffs in order in the ninth for the sixth inning.

Hal Wiltse probably will pitch today and will be opposed by Flint Rhem or Jim Lindsey.

Red Bennett got a neat sum for his home run yesterday—the fans contributing to a collection.

TITLE SOUGHT BY CITY NINE

Wichita Boys to Play For State Championship

Wichita Falls, junior baseball champions of North Texas, will send a team to play the South Texas champions for the state pennant in a series of games on Aug. 23 and 24, it was announced Thursday by C. C. Frazee, city recreational director.

The South Texas championship rests between teams from Austin and San Antonio. The deciding games to determine which city will play against Wichita Falls will be held this week-end. At present, there is a three-way tie between the Wichita Falls teams in the junior league. The Alley Rats, the Nine Rookies and the Broadway Batters have each won an equal number of games. The playoff series, to decide which team will make the trip to South Texas will begin next Tuesday, Frazee said.

Mrs. Wightman Heads Net Team

U. S. Squad Completed for Matches With British

NEW YORK, Aug. 8. (UP)—Mrs. Hazel Hotchkiss Wightman, donor of the Wightman cup, was selected today as the fourth and final member of the United States team which will meet the English women in the annual international tennis series at Forest Hills Friday and Saturday.

Mrs. Wightman will pair with Helen Jacobs of California on the No. 2 doubles team. She is the only easterner on the United States team which is completed by three Californians, previously named, as follows: Singles, No. 1, Helen Wills; No. 2, Helen Jacobs; No. 3, Edith Cross. Doubles, No. 1, Miss Wills and Miss Cross.

The order of play of the English team was named today by B. C. Covell, manager of the invading forces, as follows: Singles, No. 1, Betty Nuthall; No. 2, Mrs. Michael Watson; No. 3 Mrs. L. R. C. Michell. Doubles, No. 1, Mrs. Watson and Mrs. Michell; No. 2, Mrs. B. C. Covell and Mrs. Shepherd-Barron.

Seven matches, five singles and two doubles, will be played, with four victories determining the winning team. England won the Wightman cup last year, four matches to three. In six years of competition, each country has won the cup three times.

Sam Mandell Signs For Non-Title Bout

CHICAGO, Aug. 8. (AP)—Sammy Mandell, world lightweight champion, signed with Promoter Paddy Harmon today for a 10-round engagement in Chicago stadium Aug. 23.

Mandell's title, however, will not be at stake as the match will be fought over the 135-pound limit. "My" Sullivan, St. Paul, rated as one of the outstanding welterweights of the country, may oppose Mandell, with the winner meeting Jackie Fields, welterweight champion, next month.

Harmon also is considering Billy Petrolle, Louis "Kid" Kaplan, Luis Vincentini, and Billy Wallace.

One Night

(Recalled by reading "All Quiet on the Western Front," "Squad" and other war books).

I had found what weariness meant
As night came by;
An open field was the only tent,
Under the sky.
Another fellow was sleeping there,
So I spread my pack,
With only a foot or so to spare
Where night was black.

I wondered how a man could sleep
Through all that rain,
With the endless flood of a torrent's sweep
In its surf refrain.
I envied his greater weariness
As he quietly lay,
And I watched through dawn for the dreariness
Of another day.

Light came—and I saw then why he slept,
I saw—as the first faint gray light crept
Over our plot.
A German uniform, blood stained,
In a crimson trough;
Who cares at night how much it's rained
When your head is off?

Not Soon

"Will there ever be another fight," asks L. G., "like that meeting between Dempsey and Firpo?"

Not in our time. Here happened to be two punchers who were willing to trade. Most of the bunch today can't punch and they are not willing to trade anything but clinches. Dempsey that night came out to murder Firpo with one wallop. The only thing Firpo knew about fighting was to swing that right hand and let nature take its course.

All that happened six years ago and yet it is one of the main reasons today why Dempsey can still outdraw any other fighter by two or three to one. He was never good against a good boxer such as Tommy Gibbons or Gene Tunney. Even Bill Brennan cut him into ribbons through 10 rounds. But it was something else against any fellow willing to mix it, or any big fellow who couldn't get out of his way. If Harry Greb had been in the ring the night that Dempsey met Firpo, I have always believed the champion would have taken a terrible beating for 10 rounds any way. But give him a target and the demolishing process was over soon. Dempsey today would have no chance against a good, careful boxer. But any one willing to step out and meet him would collect a headache in a few seconds.

Grove and 30 Victories

If any pitcher is going to win 30 games again, to recall old days, it will be Bob Grove of the Athletics.

He has only 12 or 13 victories to go and there are nearly two months left. If Mack gets the pennant sewed up he may give his big left-hander a rest down the stretch, but Grove under steam could bring back the old days of Matty, Johnson, Walsh and Alexander, who could turn in 30 or more victories without taking an extra breath.

Pitching hasn't drawn any of the easy breaks in the last few years, but they all work on even terms. Which is fair enough for any one who happens to carry his share of stuff.

The Far West Challenge

When the amateur golf championship was held in St. Louis a few years ago the Pacific Northwest and the west coast in general suddenly swooped down on the field and captured nearly half the qualifying places, much to the astonishment of the Middle West and the East. With the next championship held in far western territory the west coast delegation expects to meet even a better showing. There are any number of fine golfers between San Diego and Seattle who are unknown east of the Mississippi. The Middle West and the East will need all its combined stuff to occupy as many as 16 of the 32 qualifying spots. Fortunately, Chandler Egan and his associates have geared Pebble Beach to a championship test, where the better golfers from all sections will have a better chance to prove their swings, where the lack of the greens won't be such a dominating factor, as it sometimes is in these qualifying rounds. The main job at Pebble Beach will be first to reach the greens. One weakness of qualifying rounds is that some good match play golfers are weak at medal play and some strong medal play entries are not so much to the nectarine at the man to man game. But this can't be helped.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 8. (AP)—Grover Cleveland Alexander failed today in an attempt to better the late Christy Mathewson's National league record of 372 victories in his career.

Old Alex was defeated by the Pirates by 5 to 1. But he can blame the reverse upon the poor support the Cardinals accorded him. Gelbert's poor throwing in the fourth paved the way for four Pittsburgh runs which delayed Alex's 373rd triumph. Score:

Mandell's Fight With Canzoneri Indicates He Is Through as Lightie

Making Weight Weakens Sammy and He May Enter Welter Ranks for Bout With Champion Jackie Fields

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1929, by Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—It is the opinion of many citizens who viewed the struggle between Sammy Mandell, the lightweight champion, and Tony Canzoneri in Chicago last week, that Samuel is washing up as a lightweight.

While agreeing with this view to some extent, I'm not so sure that it is altogether fair to Canzoneri. I thought he made a great fight. Maybe the fact that Mandell is sliding gave Tony the opportunity of a favorable presentation of his ability. That often happens.

"They criticized me for five years for my showings against ordinary opponents," Abe Attell, the former featherweight champion, remarked to me once. "Then when I finally dropped my title, they said 'Attell is all washed up.' But I was washed up just as much years before, and they didn't know it. I did."

The late Harry Greb, the great middleweight champion of another day, was trying to argue me into picking Mr. James J. Tunney, formerly Gene, to lick Jack Dempsey in their first fight in Philadelphia, and he presented the following in support of his argument:

Tunney Improves Fast

"Damon, when I fought Tunney the first time in 1922 I thought I licked him easily. I thought I won the second time in 1923 too, although he got the decision. But let's allow that it was close. I fought him again in 1923, and again he got the decision, and I'll concede that he really won it. I fought him a 10-rounder in 1924 which was fairly even, and then another 10-rounder in which he won beyond argument. In fact, he gave me a good beating.

"He had improved to some extent from fight to fight up to that last time, and then he had fairly leaped ahead. I never before saw a man come on so far as Tunney did betwen our last two meetings. It was really remarkable.

"Ah, yes," I said, "but perhaps you forget, Harry, that you aren't improving any yourself. Maybe it isn't that he is coming on, but that you are dropping back to him."

"Well, I never thought of that," said Greb, reflectively. "Maybe it's true."

Maybe Sam Has Gone Back

And maybe it's true that Mandell has merely dropped back to boys like Canzoneri, but I repeat this is scarcely justice to Canzoneri. He is entitled to credit for his display against Mandell, regardless of the status of the lightweight champion.

But there is little doubt in my mind that Mandell is about through in the division over which he has reigned for a couple of years by virtue of a somewhat synthetic claim to the title. His dynasty is the outgrowth of a New York boxing commission tournament, but the line of succession undoubtedly now runs through him.

He hasn't fought many formidable contenders since he beat old Rocky Kansas of Buffalo, for the championship which Kansas had won from Jimmy Goodrich, winner of the New York tournament. The resignation of Benneh Leonard produced plenty of confusion in the lightweight division. But after all is said and done, I suppose Mandell was the best of the lightweights of the time of his title succession, at that.

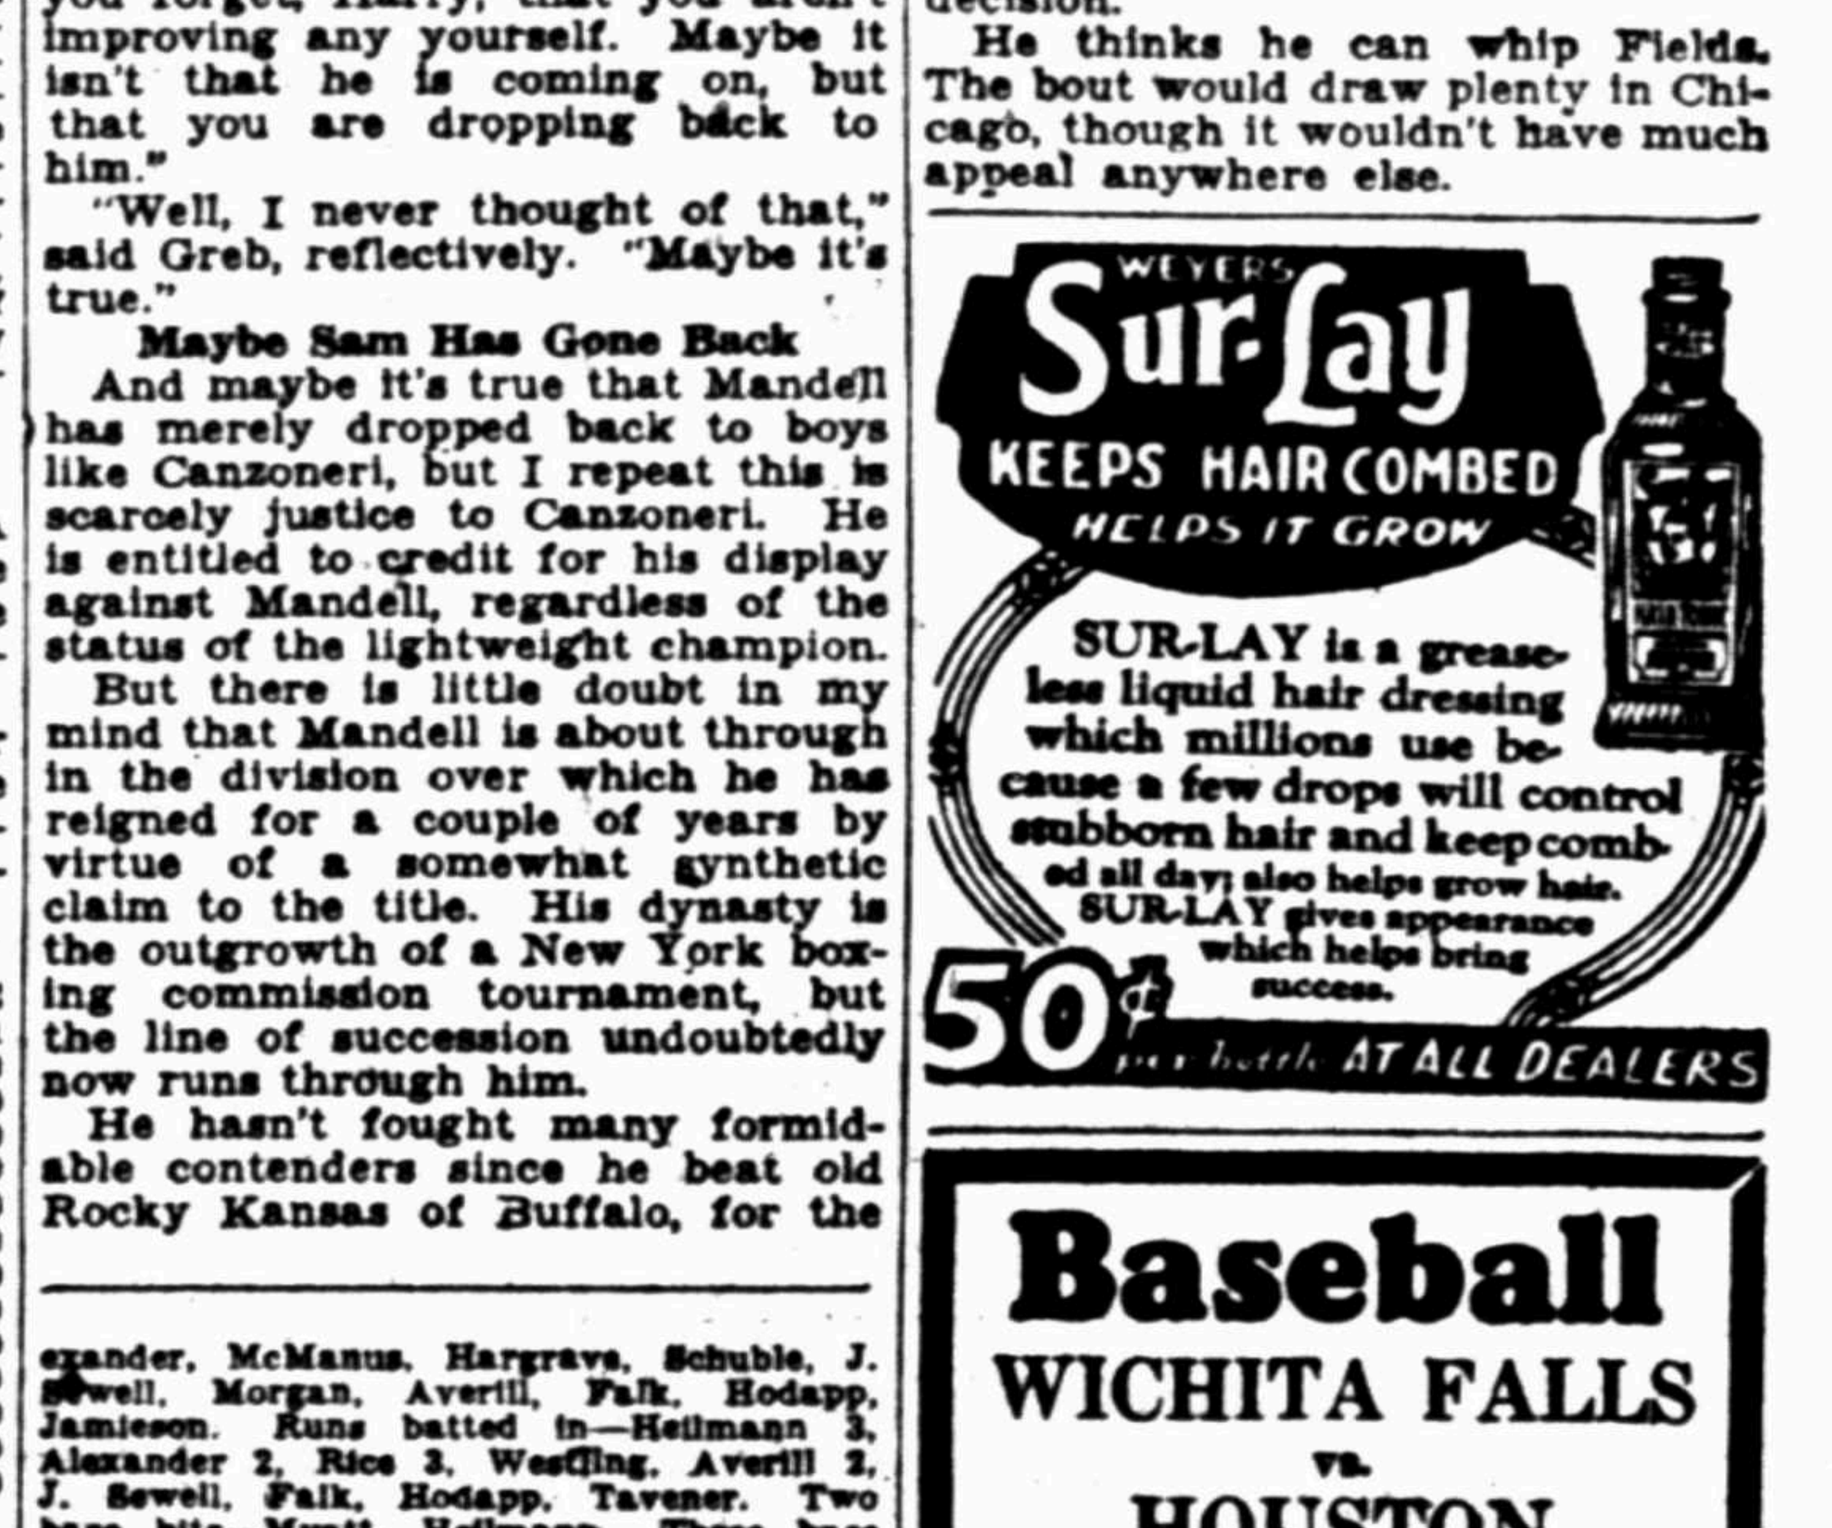

He can't punch his way out of a paper bag. He is a very clever boxer, with a world of fistic style and class, but that lets him out. His best fight was undoubtedly his battle with Jimmy McLarnin in New York. He won that night like a real champion. He wasn't half as impressive in his fight with the small Canzoneri.

Mandell Was Rusty

Perhaps it was because Tony gave Mandell proper respect for him by hurtling from his corner at the opening gong and belting the champ all over the joint, as the boys say. Mandell showed his lack of active endeavor in the early rounds. He was very rusty. He always looked frail, but he seemed rather weak at the weight. Here again, however, Tony's strength may have made Samuel look weak. Tony is a little bull of a boy.

I wouldn't be surprised to see Mandell step into the welterweight division. He has one rich match in prospect, with Jackie Fields, the new welterweight champion, as an opponent. Mandell and Fields fought a no-decision thing on the coast, some of the observers giving the decision to Fields, others to Mandell. They met again in Chicago and this time Mandell won a decision.

He thinks he can whip Fields. The bout would draw plenty in Chicago, though it wouldn't have much appeal anywhere else.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCOY
Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions in regard to health and diet will be answered by Dr. McCoy who can be addressed in care of this paper

(Copyright, 1929, by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

The Fast Way to Health

Dr. McCoy's menus suggested for the week beginning Sunday, Aug. 11:

Sunday—Breakfast: Coddled egg, wholewheat muffins, stewed figs. Lunch: Avocado salad, carrot loaf, lettuce. Dinner: Broiled chicken, asparagus, salad of chopped raw cabbage, celery and beets, ice cream.

Monday—Breakfast: French omelet, small piece of broiled ham, melba toast, applesauce. Lunch: Berries or grapes as desired. Dinner: Leg of mutton, baked squash, McCoy salad (lettuce, tomatoes and cucumbers), pineapple gelatin.

Tuesday — Breakfast: Cottage cheese, fresh peaches. Lunch: Combination salad of cooked string beans, shredded carrots and beets in gelatin, glass of sweet milk. Dinner: Roast beef, zucchini, green peas, celery and ripe olives, prune whip.

Wednesday—Breakfast: Eggs and tomatoes on melba toast. Lunch: Cooked okra, baked egg plant, cucumbers. Dinner: Fish loaf, spinach, buttered beets, salad of sliced tomatoes with chopped parsley, no dessert.

Thursday — Breakfast: Poached eggs, toasted shredded wheat biscuit, stewed raisins. Lunch: Apples and pecan nuts. Dinner: Roast pork, cooked greens, mashed turnips, salad of chopped raw spinach and celery, apricot whip.

Friday — Breakfast: Toasted breakfast food with cream (no sugar), ripe figs. Lunch: Cooked string beans, *Spinach and rice en casserole. Dinner: Broiled white fish, spinach, cooked tomatoes, salad of raw asparagus tips eaten as celery, jello or jell-well (no cream).

Saturday—Breakfast: Crisp waffle, two or three slices of well-cooked bacon, baked apple. Lunch: Ice cream, with one kind of fresh fruit, except bananas. Dinner: Salisbury steak, mushrooms en casserole, baked ground beets, salad of diced celery, cooking string beans and parsley and peach whip.

*Spinach and rice en casserole: Measure a half cupful of rice and wash thoroughly. Let soak in the last water for an hour or more, drain, and cook until tender in about a quart of boiling water. Then throw the rice into a colander and rinse in cold water. This washes away the sticky liquid, and separates the grains of rice. There will be about two cupfuls of the cooked rice, to which add one cupful of cooked and mashed spinach. Mix together thoroughly, put into a casserole, and bake for 15 or 20 minutes tightly covered. Remove cover and place under broiler flame until slightly crisped on top. Serve each portion with a lump of butter.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Breathholding Habit

Question—Mrs. G. H. writes: "My baby holds her breath until she is black in the face at times, and nothing we can do seems to get her out of this habit. Will you tell me something to do?"

Answer—Babies often learn to hold their breath this way just to frighten their mothers and to attract attention. However, it is possible there may be something wrong with the child, and I would suggest that you take her to a baby specialist. If you find there is nothing wrong, pay no attention to this habit, for she will always begin to breathe again before there is any danger.

Question—G. H. asks: Can potatoes or carrots or asparagus replace spinach in your celery, tomato and spinach soup? Do butter and cream make a good mixture with this soup?"

Answer—Carrots or asparagus could be used to replace the spinach in this soup, but I do not advise the use of potatoes because they do not combine well with tomatoes. Butter and cream may be used with the soup.

Cancer

Question: S. F. writes: "I am to begin working in a family where one of the members has cancer. I am to do no washing, only ironing. I have heard that cancer is contagious, and I am doubtful whether it is wise for me to become employed here."

Answer—The exact cause of cancer is unknown, but doctors are practically all of the opinion that it is not contagious, and I do not believe there will be any danger in your taking over the housework in the family you write about. There is not much danger of a person contracting cancer if he lives upon the correct diet and uses enough exercise to maintain good health.

Jammed Weapon Prevents Suicide Following Murder

LAWRENCE, Kan., Aug. 8. (UP)—Fred Erb's heart was torn with sympathy and pity for his invalid wife—who 58 years ago had been his pretty smiling bride.

Today he brooded over life and death. He and his wife each had lived well more than their allotted three score years and ten.

Erb removed his old pistol from its place on the living room mantle. He shot Mrs. Erb. The 75-year-old woman slumped in her chair—dead.

Erb then turned the weapon on himself. He pulled the trigger—he wanted to join his wife in death. Fate thwarted his desire. The gun jammed.

Sobbing his disappointment he turned to the telephone and called officers, telling them what he had done. He is being held for his wife's murder.

Mr. and Mrs. Erb came to Lawrence recently from Ponca City, Okla.

MABEL TELLS OF CORRUPTION

Woman Blames Failure on Dumb Agents

days that prohibition ultimately would be either respected or derided, depending on whether the cases were successfully prosecuted, and whether the methods of gathering evidence were legal or so oppressive so as to provoke the animosity and criticism of thoughtful citizens.

Intelligence Lacking

Outrages against law-abiding citizens which have inflamed the public mind and done more harm to orderly enforcement than anything else, in most instances I believe have been the result of lack of intelligence, or lack of training, rather than any criminal intent on the part of the agents.

It is unfair to the agent himself, to take a young, impulsive fellow and give him a gun, saying, "Now bring us in bootleggers." I well remember the pitiful fright of a 22-year-old youth who was sent on his first case with some older agents to a bad spot on the water front. They attempted to arrest some foreigners who threatened them. The youthful agent was terrified. He began shooting wildly. An Italian by-stander was wounded. The agent was arrested. He and his mother came to my office begging the protection of the federal government. He was wrong. I couldn't legally defend his official conduct. But who was to blame—that poor, frightened, 22-year-old boy, with his life ruined, facing a trial for assault with intent to kill in a hostile state—or the politically strangled higher-ups who turned him loose with no preparation except a gun he didn't know when nor how to use?

"Dumb" Men Obtained

The first civil service weeding resulted in retaining far more well-meaning but "dumb" men than those who were actually corrupt. The force has always needed, and still needs, systematic and extended training on such subjects as how to legally gather sufficient evidence, when papers can be seized, when a defendant should be put under arrest, what facts justify the issuance of a search warrant, and under what circumstances an agent is justified in shooting. There are, of course, many other subjects on which instructions should be given before a prohibition agent is allowed to exercise authority.

I worked hopefully with the training school plan for months, but eventually it died in the mire of inter-departmental differences of opinion, division of authority and responsibility, and political interference with policies. The net results were just newspaper headlines that all prohibition directors would call in agents and give them four days' training! In the last year some steps have been taken to train special agents who work under Assistant Prohibition Administrator Oftedal, but that has not been extended to enough of the force to say yet that agents receive any real training such as is given in other investigation services like the special intelligence unit of the treasury, inspectors of the postoffice department, and bureau of investigation men of the department of justice.

To place on the rank and file of prohibition agents all the blame for past and present unsatisfactory conditions would be wrong. The responsibility must be placed where it belongs—higher up.

Gen. Andrews Rapped

It will take many a day for law enforcement to recover from the set-back it suffered from Gen. Lincoln Andrews. I recognize that many people believe General Andrews to have been a martyr to the prohibition cause. He multiplied publicity; he created a public psychology in his own favor; but shortly after his appointment as "generalissimo of prohibition," as he styled himself, he began to put in office men who were temperamentally and in every other way unfitted for the task to which he assigned them. Two of his most notorious appointments were Roscoe Harper, later tried for conspiracy to issue illegal alcohol permits at Buffalo and Frank Hale. To the latter General Andrews gave unlimited control of the alcohol output in the whole New York territory. Hale had been in the service before, and had been suspended by the commissioner of internal revenue after I had stated on four different occasions that I would not direct any United States attorney to conduct a prosecution on evidence he gathered, because of his unreliability. This opinion was based on facts reoprted from our field offices, now a part of official files, and later given to a senatorial committee.

Soon after General Andrews assumed office in the treasury department, J. N. Chamberlain of Atlantic City, his close personal friend, took an unusual interest in the difficult district of New Jersey. Chamberlain wrote General Andrews to appoint Hale, because he said, "Hale is a good 'sojer,' nuff said." Subsequent circumstances indicated that Hale's association marked the beginning of great "prosperity" to Chamberlain. Before Hale was appointed to the prohibition job, Chamberlain had never deposited more than $300 in the bank at one time; but immediately after the "good soldier" Hale was given unlimited authority by General Andrews, Chamberlain began to make deposits of from $1,000 to $5,000 a month. Chamberlain died suddenly. In the process of the administration of his estate his safety box was found to contain huge sums of cash. Its source has never been traced.

Writer as Sleuth

Another one of General Andrews' grand flourishing appointees who left a devastating trail on prohibition enforcement is Maj. Walton Green. Major Green was made chief investigating officer, though his past record had been one of opposition to prohibition. The fact is that Major Green was a writer and not an enforcement officer. As an enforcement executive, he was sartorial perfection! He spent much time in assembling material which he carried out of office with him and which has been used in preparing articles of a profitable nature that have had wide circulation. But much of the information furnished by Major Green's investigator's was of the stuff of fairy tales. And though, as I have pointed out, Major Green had no adequate past training or experience qualifying him to make generalizations on the way to succeed in assembling evidence to enforce prohibition, his repeated inferences that "it can't be enforced" have carried weight simply because he has done this country, by constantly presenting a distorted and unreliable picture of the whole enforcement problem is a big factor in present public pessimism on the subject of prohibition.

Another utterly demoralizing appointment of General Andrews was another military man named Green. This one was Col. Ned M. Green, who served as prohibition director in San Francisco. He was an old army friend of General Andrews, and publicly boasted of being a "sport" and hard drinker. That was his outstanding qualification for so important a post. Of course he degraded the office. He was indicted and tried on the charge of unlawful diversion of government property which came into the possession of agents working under him. A jury acquitted him. After his acquittal, General Andrews recommended that Colonel Green be reinstated, given back pay, and that the government pay his expenses for a trip to Washington.

Proceeding Stopped

But David H. Blair, then commissioner of internal revenue, saved the government honor by stopping such a proceeding. He called General Andrews' attention to the flatly contradictory statements Col. Ned Green had made at various times under oath as to illegal use and possession of intoxicants, his frank admission of misappropriating contraband liquor, and concluded his rebuke to the general by stating:

"I cannot bring myself to believe we ought now to put our stamp of approval on such conduct just because Colonel Green happens to be acquitted in a criminal case."

These illustrations show that the harm that has been done to the cause of effective prohibition enforcement is not properly attributable to the men in the lower rank. They have lacked training and judgment and many have gone to the "bad." But prohibition has been dealt its hardest blows by those at the head or near the head of the enforcement organization.

I am not saying something now that I did not dare to say before. The fact is that I wrote regarding General Andrews' appointments to the attorney general on Aug. 2, 1926, three years ago, as follows:

"I feel that before this Republican administration faces another campaign, something must be done about the prohibition situation throughout the country. It is now marked by such inefficiency and lack of training that the public is losing confidence in the sincerity of effort. In my judgment, failure to succeed in as high a degree of enforcement as one might wish will never be fatal to any administration; but continuing to place the reins of responsibility in those exhibiting hopeless lack of training will prove unexplainable."

Civil Service No Cure

I have already said that the shooting and maiming of innocent people is inexcusable. But even more inexcusable, and criminal, in my judgment, is the incompetence of "chiefs" who place authority and weapons in the hands of untrained, unfit men, many of whom have been given their jobs merely as a reward for petty political service.

The mere fact that there is now provision in law for civil service examination to govern appointments will not cure the sore. While standards have been improved, they ought to be raised and the tests made more practical so as to bring the prohibition service men of the same high caliber as the postal inspectors, the special intelligence service of the treasury department, the bureau of investigation of the department of justice and the secret service.

Those services have been getting the right kind of men for years, and they have trained their men intensively and effectively. United States attorneys all testify to the quality of evidence they assemble. I refuse to believe that it is impossible to find 4,000 honest men in the United States with the basic character and intelligence to gather proper and dignified evidence for prohibition enforcement and prosecution. I refuse to believe that out of one hundred million population and perhaps twenty million who believe in prohibition, 4,000 can't be found who can't be bought! I know a pride of service must be developed. It is sprouting in the small group of special agents under Alf Oftedal and in the districts of some of the able administrators. It ought to be further nurtured.

The prohibition law can and will be properly and effectively enforced. Courage, vigor, intelligence, and experience must begin at the top and spread down. Until then, the country will continue to be influenced against prohibition by the acts of incompetent agents. But thinking people ought to quit blaming the "end men."

("Are the cities hopelessly wet?" is Mrs. Willebrandt's next topic.)

Injury Fatal for Comanche Brave

Special to The Record News.

LAWTON, Okla., Aug. 8.—Sam Hooah-wah, aged 43, who suffered a crushed leg and internal injuries in an auto accident here Tuesday when a car driven by his friend, Lookingglass, ran upon the sidewalk and crushed Hooah-wah against a large box, died Wednesday morning. Both men are Comanche Indians.

Hooah-wah was taken at once to the Fort Sill Indian hospital, where his crushed leg was amputated in an effort to save his life, but loss of blood and shock caused his death at 6:30 a. m. Wednesday. Hooah-wah lived at Indiahoma.

The eerie death wailing of two-score Comanche Indian squaws at a local undertaking establishment testified to Indian grief over the loss of a prominent brave.

Funeral services were held Thursday at the Becker mission and burial was in Post Oak mission.

NEW YORK COTTON

NEW YORK, Aug. 8. (AP)—A decline of about $3 a bale followed the publication of the government crop report in cotton here today. December contracts which had sold up to 19.25 before its publication, broke to 18.59 and closed at that figure under liquidation and more or less general selling. The general market closed steady at net declines of 56 to 60 points.

The market opened steady at decline of 6 to 8 points under liquidation and some local selling promoted by relatively easy Liverpool cables and reports of showers with lower temperatures in northwest Texas. Active months sold about 9 to 10 points net lower during the early trading. This buying was sufficient to steady the market and caused rather sharp bulges before trading was supended to receive the government report at mid-day. October contracts sold up from 18.81 to 19.00, while March rallied from 19.27 to 19.40, making the active months 3 to 9 points net higher.

The government report placing the indicated crop at 15,543,000 bales and the condition at 69.6 per cent was evidently above expectations. The condition was quite close to the average of the private condition reports recently issued which had pointed to 70, but the crop indication was about 200,000 bales above the average of these reports and there was heavy selling when the market reopened after the 20-minute interval.

The market showed very little rallying power, and the close was within a point or two of the lowest on most positions. October sold off to 18.32 and March to 18.79 or about 61 to 68 points below the high levels of the morning. Liverpool also eased off sharply after the government report and while houses with foreign connections had both buying and selling orders earlier they were credited with selling cotton on the break. Exports today 1,486, making 44,567 so far this season. Port receipts 8,145. U. S. port stocks 522,362.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 8. (AP)—A larger government crop forecast than looked for resulted in a slump of over $3 a bale in cotton here today. Previous to the issuance of the report short covering carried October up to 18.93, or 14 points net up but the resulting heavy selling on the report forced that month down to 18.23. It closed at 18.35 for a net decline of 54 points. The general market closed easy at net losses of 53 to 54 points.

The opening was easy. Initial trades showed losses of 4 points and prices continued to ease in early trading until active positions were 6 points below the previous close. Belated shorts covered in advance of the official figures and when trading was suspended for reception of the report, December reached 19.13, or 12 to 14 points net up.

The official forecast of 15,543,000 bales was larger than looked for. When business was resumed, after the customary 15-minute suspension, active months plunged 39 to 41 points and prices continued to ease off under heavy selling. In late trading December touched 18.44, or 69 to 70 points down from the highs. This represented a loss of over $3 a bale from the day's high points. Closing prices showed recoveries of 3 to 12 points from the lowest.

Afternoon Rally, After Quiet Day Closes Stock Market Higher

By BROADAN WALL

NEW YORK, Aug. 8. (US)—An afternoon rally closed the stock market higher after a very quiet session today. Irregularity in Utilities and worry about the local money situation offset the maintenance of the Bank of England rate at 5½ per cent and caused renewed selling in the morning. Call money renewed at 8 per cent and eased off to 7 with loans reported on the outside at as low as 6 per cent.

Easing in call money and sustained strength of steel common influenced better support and gradually brought recovery through the list. Steel closed 5½ points higher in new high ground, Can gained 4¼, Consolidated Gas 4, American Tobacco 5½, American and Foreign Power 4½, and National Power and Light 3. Atchison featured a firmer Railroad list with gain of 10¼. Oils remained quiet and somewhat irregular. Turnover dropped below the 3,000,000-share level.

It was the consistent strength in Steel that proved the most powerful influence in rallying the market. The bears were industriously floating advices that buying of Steel was covering important liquidation in other parts of the list but with money easing steadily they failed to offset its influence. With the increased membership of the exchange and the additional number of room traders anything less than a 4,500,000-share day does not permit of much important liquidation for professional traders alone turn over at least two and a half or three million shares daily. So long as business remains as good as at present Steel common is likely to remain a bolstering factor for the market for continuance of current record breaking earnings should bring a split up of the shares late this year or early in 1930 at the latest.

Recovery in the utilities in the afternoon was not surprising as there has been weak selling throughout the group for several sessions. Electric bond interests, it was declared, were continuing their constructive activities and in this respect early announcement of the National Power and Electric Power deal was forecast. There was further voicing of expectation of a "railroad market" soon inspired by the report of further increase in car loadings. The gain indicates sustained good earnings for most of the carriers. Steady accumulation of St. Paul preferred reflects expectation that the new management will effect further economies that will be reflected in net revenues.

One of the biggest bulls on Montgomery Ward arrived in the city from the West. He expects continuance of the "market in stocks" for a while longer and resumption of a broad market in the fall when money conditions are more favorable and the several important market leaders, who now are absent, return to dealings. Newmont Mining group was said to be interested in American Metals. The two organizations have been affiliated in African mining properties for some time. Newmont group also is interested in Texas Gulf. It is pointed out that Gulf now is selling much lower than it did before it doubled its assets through investment in the new properties. Further report of early split up of Western Union was heard.

The Reserve bank slipped over a fast one. Advancing the rediscount rate a full 1 per cent, to 6 per cent, when the Bank of England maintained its rate at 5½ per cent, comes as a complete surprise to everyone.

It will give the market its strongest test in several months and will show to what extent important interests have passed on holdings in recent weeks. The "official explanation" is to be found in announcement that the bill rate has been lowered, thereby inferring that the action was to help the agricultural districts. Every bank director knows that while call rates are high here idle funds will not be attracted elsewhere.

In fact, insofar as the cost of stock trading is concerned, the call rates that have prevailed were such as would normally come only in a period when a 7 per cent rediscount rate was warranted. The main influence marketwise of the action of the Reserve bank will be the fear that it will hurt general business conditions.

CHICAGO GRAIN REVIEW

CHICAGO, Aug. 8. (AP)—In a rapidly shifting market, wheat today averaged lower, but closed with an upward slant.

Closing quotations on wheat were irregular, from ¼c off to ½c up compared with yesterday's finish. Corn closed at ⅜c net decline to 2⅛c gain, oats showing ⅛c setback to ⅜c advance. Provisions unchanged to 20@22c drop.

Faced by unexpected lower quotations at Liverpool, wheat market here made a wavering start today, but speedily advanced.

Excellent progress in relieving congestion at domestic winter wheat terminals, Omaha in particular, was noted.

A quick transient tumble of nearly 4c a bushel from the day's top prices of wheat came about in the middle of the board of trade session.

Unusual strength was manifested by September delivery of corn, whereas later months were bearishly influenced by a forecast of unsettled weather promising moisture where needed for the new corn crop. Talk was heard that stocks of corn here had been unduly depleted to make room for wheat, and that difficulties might be met with in filling September corn contracts here. Oats followed corn.

Provisions averaged easier on account of scattered selling.

DRYGOODS MARKET

NEW YORK, Aug. 8. (AP)—Cotton goods prices were firmly maintained today, despite a bearish tone in the government crop report and subsequent cotton declines. The position of the goods market was further strengthened by curtailed production and July sales. Trading was light. Some rough woven fine goods were of interest. Reduction of output due to strikes, large July shipments to all quarters, and probably substantial August plate call. Spots here were firm and more active. Spot Japan raws New York were up 5 cents on securities and stronger Japan market, with Chinas in demand and low in stock.

KARAKUL HERD TO BE HELPED

Dundee Rancher Searches Europe for Stock

Further development of the Karakul sheep herd maintained by Alex Allbright on his ranch south of Dundee is expected during the coming year as a result of Mr. Allbright's presence in Europe now in search of a certain type of breeding stock.

There are about 1,000 animals in Mr. Allbright's herd at present. It was said comprising what is perhaps the foremost Karakul breeding herd in the country. Parent stock was selected animals from the steppes of Russia, and the herd has been developed by experimental breeding in which Mr. Allbright is widely recognized as an expert.

The trip now being made will take Mr. Allbright to Germany, Sweden and Russia it was said, for the selection of particular strains which will be used in development of the herd near Dundee.

Karakul sheep from Mr. Allbright's ranch are being distributed not only for breeding purposes, but find a ready market both for meat purposes and the production of high grade furs.

KATIE DAFFAN IN STATEMENT

Woman Candidate for Governor Answers Query

AUSTIN, Aug. 8. (AP)—Selection of the Democratic nominee for president in 1932 "will not be and should not be a direct issue" in the 1930 campaign, Miss Katie Daffan of Ennis, candidate for governor, told Mrs. Claude De Van Watts of Austin, president of the state Woman's Christian Temperance union in reply to a questionnaire sent all gubernatorial aspirants.

She is opposed to barring from the 1930 primaries anyone—candidate or voter—who did not support the party presidential choice.

"It is not necessary, as I see it, to discuss the Democratic nominee for president in 1932, other than to say that I will favor for president, and for every other office, a candidate who unequivocally stands for the maintenance and enforcement of all prohibition laws," she stated.

She said she opposed control of the Democratic party by "any individual anywhere, or by any group of individuals anywhere."

She favored removal from the statutes "what is left of the rule of evidence law passed in 1925. This is the search and seizure act.

She declared in favor of "the exercise of the individual right of conscience."

SCOUTS' CAMP BUSY PLACE

Interesting Program Followed by Youths

An interesting recreational and educational program is being followed by the 40 boys attending the final period of the Boy Scout summer camp at Camp Ehpriam Griffin on Diversion lake. The camp is under the direction of Frank B. Creighton, scout executive, who is assisted by the following leaders: George Napier, troop 2; Maynard Creighton and Bryant Creighton, both of troop 15; Warren Jones, troop 1, Archer City; and Carl Willis, troop 1, Clara.

Two nights of the camp period will be devoted to stunts, one night to a court of honor, one night to challenges and Sunday night to a dramatization of the scout laws. A field meet will be held next Saturday morning, the 'Battle of Flowers" to be staged that afternoon. An initiation into the Tong society will be held Saturday night. A swimming meet is planned for Monday afternoon and a treasure hunt for Tuesday.

Daily Program

The daily program is in itself an interesting feature of the camp. At 6 o'clock in the morning "reveille" is sounded by the camp bugler and every scout turns out for morning exercises and a swim. The swim is not compulsory, as the water in Diversion lake is anything but warm in the morning, according to Mr. Creighton. Next comes the flag raising at 6:55 and then breakfast. For half an hour after breakfast each boy must do his part in cleaning up the camp, for inspection follows and proves hard on any who shirk their work.

One hour each day is devoted to work on scout tests. During the last few days, 19 boys went on a 14-mile hike to fulfill one of the requirements of the first class test. It is the aim of the camp, Mr. Creighton said, that each tenderfoot become a second class scout and each second class become a first class scout when the camp closes. First class scouts are working on merit badges in carpentry, leather craft and masonry.

From 11 to 12 o'clock each morning the boys may devote their time to handicraft. Bows and arrows, leather lanyards, boomerangs, sail boats, leather purses and neckerchief slides of bone, celluloid, cedar and leather are being made at the camp.

Wholesome Food

Dinner is served at 12 o'clock each day. Wholesome food is prepared by a negro chef, specially hired for the camp, and the menus are arranged by Mr. Creighton. Following the noon hour, an hour is devoted to rest. Every scout must observe the "rest hour." During "free time," which lasts from 2 o'clock to 4:30, the boys are allowed to do as they please. Fishing is permitted during this time provided an adult is taken along. From 4:30 to 5:30 o'clock, the scouts enjoy a swim, with the scout leaders acting as life guards.

Following the swim the flag lowering ceremony is held and supper is served. An hour is given over to recreation after supper. Tournaments in baseball and horseshoe pitching between the patrols at the camp are in progress. A prize will be given to the winners of each tournament at the close of the camp. At the present time, the Shining Stars lead in baseball and the Gold Bricks in horseshoe pitching.

A different council fire program is held each night, the stunts and acts being arranged by the boys in one tent in the order of their arrangement.

RELEASED ON BOND

W. H. Knight, arrested in Dallas Wednesday on a forgery indictment returned here two weeks ago, Thursday was released under a $1,000 bond. The defendant was brought back from Dallas by Dick Morris, deputy sheriff, Wednesday night after he had been taken into custody by Dallas county officials at the request of the sheriff's department here.

Mrs. C. L. Silvis of Rock Island, is the first woman to serve as a member of the official family of the Illinois governor. She was named to the department of welfare.

'My Wife Feels Like Different Woman,' Says Holliday Man

"She Wasn't Able to Do Her Work, Wouldn't Go to Sleep Until 2 in The Morning, Orgatone Relieves Her," He Said

"When I saw Orgatone was helping so many people, I persuaded my wife to try a bottle of it," said L. F. Martin, an employe of the Humble Oil Co., Holliday, Texas, while talking with the Orgatone representative a few days ago.

"I consider the money well spent for Orgatone was about the best investment we made, for she is like a different woman now, and feels simply fine." He continues, "She suffered from dull, severe headaches that would keep her awake until sometimes 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. She was very restless and nervous and her sleep was always broken. She was just in a general run down condition, and needed something to build her up, for she kept slipping every day, and never seemed to get any better. She had to be careful of what she ate, for at times she was bothered with attacks of indigestion.

"She has now taken about four bottles of Orgatone, and anyone could notice the difference in her. She has more life and energy and is certainly feeling better. Her terrible headaches are gone and she isn't at all nervous any more. She goes to bed and sleeps the whole night long, without having to get up; she doesn't even wake up once. She isn't restless, but her nerves are very calm. She has certainly been benefited by Orgatone. We think there is nothing like it, and always insist on the genuine Orgatone, when we buy it, for it is the best remedy that we have ever got hold of. I have received great results also, and we both are loud in our praises of it."

Genuine Orgatone is manufactured by one of the world's greatest laboratories and is not a so-called secret or patent remedy but a new scientific bile treatment and is sold in Wichita Falls exclusively by the Allison Drug store.—Adv.

MAJESTIC: Alice White in "Broadway Babies," all-talking, singing, dancing extravaganza. Paramount news.

STRAND: Last day with Grant Withers and Betty Compson in "The Time, the Place, and the Girl." Vitaphone vaudeville. Movietone news.

OLYMPIC: "The Strange Case of Captain Ramper." Mystic characters entangled in polar ice. Pathe review. Comedy. Pathe news.

GEM: Jack Perrin and Rex in "Hoofbeats of Vengeance." Chapter 5 of "Pirates of Panama." Comedy.

Any cry for variety in moving picture themes which may have been raised in this column or elsewhere finds at least one definite and striking reply in the present offering at the Olympic. "The Strange Case of Captain Ramper" probably will not be equaled during the year for unusual theme and treatment.

The production has all the earmarks of originating in Germany, under the direction of Lubitsch. The title role, powerfully interpreted by Paul Wegener, depicts a man in whom the beast-like tendencies of Jack London's "Sea Wolf" have developed so fully as to approximate the natural animal state. The background for the story palpably was furnished by the many polar tragedies of late years, particularly those of Commander Nobile's ill-fated crew, and Capt. Roald Amundsen.

The most bizarre feature of the picture to an American audience, however, will not be in the wierd experiences drawn for Captain Ramper, but the amazing degree to which the production unintentionally reflects the differences between continental Europe and the United States. The element of mysticism, free acceptance of supernatural forces in nature, the native readiness of the mind to conceive fantastic creatures embodying irresistible evil — these traits of the European masses dominate the treatment of the Captain Ramper story.

As a reflection of the European mind for whose entertainment the picture ostensibly was made, it carries immediately a forceful reminder of the completeness with which America's founders severed the chains which bound them formerly to Europe. Peoples of the continent still walk under the influence of countless centuries, deeply shadowed by the gloom of the dark ages. When the adventurous souls which settled this country set foot on American soil, they shook off from their feet the dust of fearful dependence and superstition. Europe's heritage of age-old fairy story atmosphere crowds to the fore in "Captain Ramper" in sharp contrast to the realism which this new and young people demands.

Coming back to the picture as a screen production, those who see it will be reminded by several little details that it did not issue from our Hollywood. As the troth is plighted between the lovers, both retain complete freedom in breathing. And we also learned that a moving picture actor can smoke a short stub, instead of having a long, graceful Havana for every camera shot.

In the feature opening at the Majestic Friday, "Broadway Babies," Alice White will be portraying a role for which she has had much real experience. The diminutive blond star knocked around Hollywood several years, sustaining herself with every kind of work from ringing doorbells to acting as script girl in the movie studios. Selling real estate, acting as secretary and filing clerk, and playing an occasional bit as "extra" comprised Alice White's Hollywood career until booked in Milton Sill's "The Sea Tiger." Since then she's been coming, and throws all of her 99 pounds into a vigorous role as Delight Foster, Broadway "hoofer."

While the designation is unofficial, "Miss Wichita Falls" will be seen among the seaboard vacationers at Virginia Beach, Va., next week. Miss Reba Newman, who graces the offices of Dent Theaters, Inc., in the Majestic, as secretary to Manager Howard C. Federer, will leave Friday afternoon for the Virginia summer resort. A brilliant new sun-back bathing suit was mentioned as a safe bet to "show" at the beach. Miss Newman will go by boat from Washington to Virginia Beach, and following her outing there expects to visit New York.

Morgan Says Plane Mishap Was Unavoidable

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 8. (AP)—An investigation by Thomas E. Morgan, general manager of the Pickwick Airways, whose tri-motored plane was wrecked here in a forced landing yesterday, injuring 10 persons, brought a statement today that the accident was "unavoidable."

He said an inspection of the motors revealed they were in perfect condition and it was not ignition trouble which caused two of them to fail, as had been presumed at first.

Oil Theft Suspects Captured After Chase

Following a rapid chase down the banks of the Wichita river, near the Ohio avenue bridge, two men were arrested about 2:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon and placed in the city jail, booked for theft of under $5. Plainclothes Officer A. L. Stubblefield and Motorcycle Officer Ralph Rohatch were called to the Magnolia filling station near the bridge following a report that a quantity of oil had been stolen from the station.

The officers reached the bridge and upon seeing the two men, abandoned their car and gave chase. The flight led down the banks of the river bed and along the sand at the base of the embankment. One of the two fugitives stopped near the bank and surrendered immediately, the other continuing his flight until caught, it was said.

Attendants at the filling station reported that oil and other supplies had been missed on several occasions during the last few weeks. Investigation of the two men arrested will be held Friday.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Calif., Aug. 8. (AP)—Sun tan or no sun tan, all Stanford male students must wear shirts out of doors in the future, Controller A. E. Roth, of the university, so decreed today.

The ultimatum, characterized by some of the students as "provincial and a reversion to the mauve decade," was supposed to have been occasioned by the action of undergraduates who played tennis clad only in gymnasium trunks. Students employes about the campus as truck drivers also were said to have offended by removing their shirts while at work.

DRESS MAKERS' STRIKE CALLED

80,000 Affected by New York Order

NEW YORK, Aug. 8. (AP)—The general executive board of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union today authorized a strike of 80,000 workers in the women's dress industry in the United States and Canada.

Nine cities are affected, New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Baltimore, Kansas City, Toledo and Toronto. The strike in each case to go into effect at the discretion of the local union.

David Dubinsky, acting president of the international union, said the strike in New York, involving 45,000 workers, was set for Dec. 1, at the expiration of the present contract.

At the same time an immediate strike of 7,000 workers here, 90 per cent of them women, was ordered by the board for the embroidery workers, tuckers', pleaters', and hemstitchers' unions. This will be a strike for a 40-hour week, Dubinsky said.

A general strike of 1,800 cloakmakers in Toronto also was ordered immediately, Dubinsky said.

Dubinsky said that the strike was called to fight "sweat shop" conditions in the garment industry and that the present 50-hour week must be supplanted by a 40-hour week. He said that an increased wage scale would be worked out at conferences later.
