Summerfest nets Rehab Center $20,000

By LISA MUSSER
Staff Writer

Fireworks, crowds, entertainment and team events — all of these contributed to the estimated $20,000 earned by the Dora Roberts Rehabilitation Center at Summerfest Thursday.

"The crowd was fantastic," said John Sparks, chairman of the event, in estimating the amount of money made at the fund-raiser held at Dora Roberts Community Center.

The only real difference from last year's Summerfest was the number of people who participated and attended, Sparks said. Over 5,000 people attended the day's team events on a come and go basis, and many more than that enjoyed the fireworks display funded by businessmen.

The display, costing $4,000, boasted bursts of brilliant colors and attracted crowds around the center, in the city's shopping center parking lots, along Highway 87, and in area communities within a 15-mile radius of Big Spring.

This year 18 teams participated in the sporting events, six more than last year. These groups, of four females and four males, adorned themselves with names like the Jailbirds, the Sparkies, the Illegal Beagles, the Traveling Jocks, Christopher Co. and Jet Sweat.

The heated competition occurred throughout the day's events of mechanical armadillo races, football throw, horeshoes, washers, tennis tournament, Rose Magers Game Field, obstacle course, wheelbarrow race, canoe race and volleyball.

The finale was the Great Mud Pull. It resulted with the Jailbirds, sponsored by Danny's Bail Bond service, and the Sparkies, sponsored by the Big Spring Fire Department, tieing in a victorious finish over the other teams.

Individuals and groups providing entertainment were: Paul Neighbors, Jay Phinney, Miss Howard County Ronda Fowler, "Nightshift" from Snyder and "Eagle Creek" from Midland.

Fireworks blamed for building blaze

By KEELY COGHLAN
Staff Writer

Fireworks probably were responsible for a blaze at a vacant building on West Highway 80 Thursday evening, Fire Chief Carl Dorton said today.

Cause of the fire at what once was a greenhouse is being probed by Arson Investigator Burr Lea Settles, Dorton said.

No one was injured in the blaze or in any other fireworks-related grass fires or incidents, Dorton said.

It is illegal to set off fireworks inside city limits.

"We were really pretty lucky this year. The rain helped and there wasn't any wind until late in the evening," Dorton said.

"Fireworks were everywhere. It's hard to catch someone because they run away; you almost have to be waiting for them," Dorton said.

The fire department did not issue any citations to people setting off fireworks in the city, but "I must have warned 50 people to go outside the city limits," he said. "If they don't start taking more care, we could end up having only fireworks with permits."

July Fourth is traditionally the worst day for fireworks-related fires and injuries, Dorton said. "We'll have some trouble this weekend, but yesterday is usually the worst."

No damage estimate has been set yet for the old D&M Garden building at 3209 W. Highway 80. "It wasn't much of a building," Dorton said.

The wooden building, which had a masonry front, suffered heavy fire damage to its walls, floor, ceiling and roof, the department report stated.

According to the report, firemen arrived at 6:48 p.m. at the building.

The nation celebrates

Release of hostages highlights July 4th

By the Associated Press

Millions of Americans hit the beaches, bellied up to backyard barbecues and watched spectacular fireworks displays as the nation celebrated its 209th birthday with a renewed appreciation for Independence Day triggered by the freeing of the 39 hostages held in Beirut.

For many of the former TWA Flight 847 hostages, the Fourth of July was a day for town parades, backyard picnics and quiet times with family.

Vice President George Bush, after leading a parade in Bristol, N.H., offered a message for the seven Americans who remain captives in Lebanon.

"The message is we are going to keep working diligently doing absolutely everything we can until you're free," Bush said.

A black convertible with an empty back seat symbolized the seven kidnap victims in the 81st Fourth of July parade in Huntington Beach, Calif., home of David Jacobsen, one of the remaining hostages.

The Independence Day parade in Towson, Md., was capped by a Providence Volunteer Fire Company truck carrying a sign that read, "We Welcome Home The 39," and another truck with the sign: "Let's Not Forget the Other 7."

Thousands of people lined New York City's East River for one fireworks display and watched from New York and New Jersey as bursts filled the sky over the Statue of Liberty, which is closed for renovation.

In New Jersey, thousands took to the shore and to festivities around the state, including a party in Jersey City featuring rockers Daryl Hall and John Oates to raise money for Lady Liberty's facelift. More than 100,000 people jammed the Hudson riverfront park for the show.

One of those was Elena Hanuse, a 54-year-old schoolteacher who completed a 3,900-mile hike that began Jan. 4, 1984, in San Francisco. "Can't think of a better way to celebrate it," she said.

Crowds gathered early at the Mall between the Washington Monument and the Capitol in Washington, with 550,000 flocking to shows featuring performers from Leonard Bernstein to Mr. T and the Beach Boys, who have been a fixture at Washington's Independence Day fetes in recent years.

The Beach Boys performed earlier for a crowd of about 1 million people in Philadelphia, where the Declaration of Independence was signed.

Former hostages George Lazansky and his wife, Joann, of Algonquin, Ill., and Isabelle Carpio of Aurora, Ill., spent the day at Wrigley Field in Chicago, where Lazansky tossed out the first ball in the Cubs' game with the Giants.

Lazansky, whose Cubs cap was taken by terrorists aboard the hijacked flight, got a new cap and a standing ovation.

TWA 847 pilot John Testrake spent part of the day in a barber's chair. He felt "like a woolly bear" in captivity, his son, John, said.

It rained on Willie Nelson's picnic at an outdoor amphitheater in Austin, Texas, where one-half inch fell Thursday, but some 10,000 people sloshed around in the mud to hear the country singer anyway.

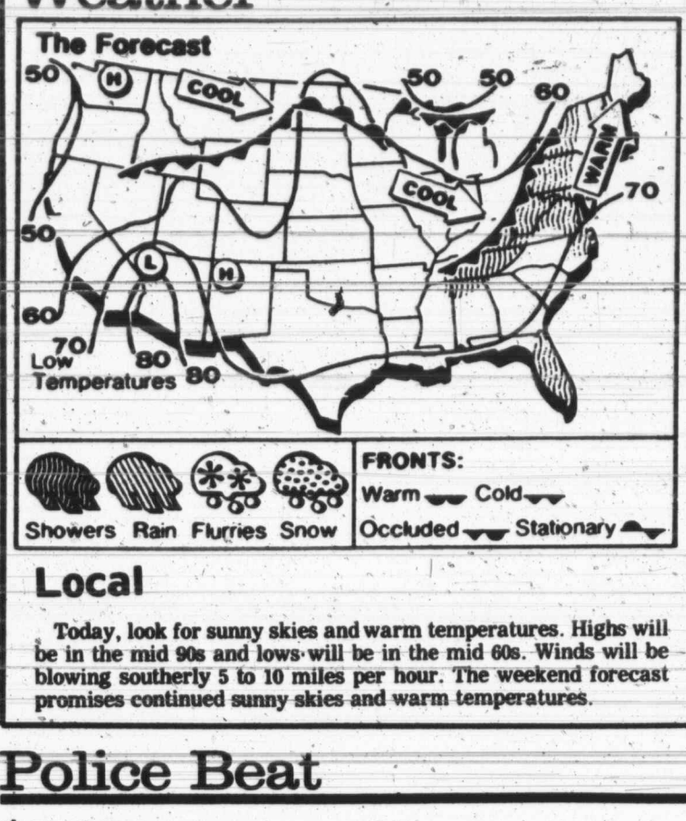

More than 1,500 people became U.S. citizens Thursday during ceremonies in Seattle, Miami and Northridge, Calif.

Bomb threat shuts down mall

The Big Spring Mall closed early Thursday afternoon after a J.C. Penney employee received a bomb threat.

According to police reports, an employee received an anonymous phone call at 2:30 p.m. warning that a bomb was set to go off in the mall at 6 p.m.

A search of the mall by firefighters and policemen failed to uncover any kind of suspicious explosive device, according to reports.

At 3:16 p.m. officials decided to close the mall even though no explosive device was found, according to a fire department report.

"It was closed as a safeguard. Although they didn't find anything, they wanted to make sure a bomb didn't go off and injure anyone," said Police Sgt. Erwin Ballarta.

Fire

They used three trucks and 1,900 gallons of water to douse the abandoned structure, which spewed smoke that could be seen as far away as Gregg Street.

They returned to the station at 8 p.m., after cleaning up the site, according to the report.

• Firemen also extinguished a grass fire Thursday night at 500 N.W. Fifth, reports show.

The fire was reported at 9:55 p.m. as a grass fire started by fireworks. When firemen arrived at the scene, they found a small patch of grass in flames; the two firefighters extinguished it and returned to the Central Fire Station.

• Firefighters also responded to a report of a grass fire at 9:31 p.m. on vacant land behind 2805 Lynn, near the side of the mountain behind Kentwood Senior Citizens Center. However, they could find no fire, according to reports.

Oil ministers meet in Austria

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Oil ministers from 13 OPEC nations met today in a Vienna hotel in yet another effort to find a new pricing formula that would avert a further drop in oil prices.

Nigeria's oil minister, Tam David-West, said many ideas had been offered during OPEC's morning session and the ministers had agreed "OPEC must be united" to prevent prices from falling further.

Indonesian Oil Minister Subroto, current president of the cartel, said the members discussed "the whole aspect of the market. There was a general exchange of views.

Subroto said no formal proposal to lower prices had been raised.

The ministers convened without their aides, who usually participate from the outset in meetings of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. The aides were expected to participate later.

Analysts have said the conference may turn out to be one of the most difficult in OPEC's 25-year history.

In the past, the cartel has reduced the price of its oil and ordered members to cut production to reduce the glut on the world market and make their crude competitive with that produced by non-OPEC members, such as Britain.

But United Arab Emirates oil minister Mana Saeed Oteiba said Thursday that the OPEC ministers would seek a different answer this time.

"We are suggesting a new way. This time we are not talking about prices or production," Oteiba told reporters.

"We are talking about income, constant income," he said following a meeting of the six-member OPEC monitoring committee.

Oteiba, who chairs the committee, would not elaborate on the steps it would propose to the full ministerial conference.

"This has to be looked at by the conference," he said.

In the wake of recent terror attacks in Europe and the Middle East, Austrian authorities imposed the tightest security ever seen for an OPEC session.

Members of the federal anti-terrorist squad armed with automatic weapons ringed the two luxury hotels where the member delegations were staying in central Vienna.

Ahmed Zaki Yamani, the influential Saudi Arabian oil minister, said on arrival in Vienna Thursday that his country would "defend prices."

Asked if he would consider a change in production limits, Yamani replied: "That's another matter."

The continuing slump in world demand and increased production by non-OPEC nations has put pressure on OPEC to further reduce its official benchmark price of $28 a barrel.

Reports before the meeting suggested that the oil ministers might decide to lower the current production ceiling of 16 million barrels a day, although actual output in May and June was estimated at about 14.5 million barrels daily.

However, some analysts said Oteiba's comments could mean each OPEC member would be allowed to set its own production and price levels, without endangering the structure of the cartel.

Mom knew of threat

MIAMI — A nurse and the mother of a comatose child shot to death in a hospital crib last week both warned months ago that the toddler's father was a threat to her safety, according to The Miami News.

Joy Griffith, 3, was "in danger" from her distraught father, Charles Griffith, according to testimony filed by lawyers for Rebeca Griffith in January, the newspaper said Thursday. Mrs. Griffith said "harm would befall" Joy unless Griffith were kept from visiting the irreversibly brain-damaged child.

In a supporting affidavit, a nurse at the hospital said Griffith, who was on probation for firearms violations, disobeyed medical orders, offered drugs to nurses and once asked her to steal a drug for him, the newspaper said.

"His caring for the child in his intoxicated conditions is extremely detrimental to the child and could be life-threatening," said nurse Cheryl Wright.

Griffith, 25, was charged with first-degree murder after firing two bullets into Joy at the Miami Children's Hospital on June 28. He said he killed the girl to end her pain and imprisonment within "a dead body."

Death toll climbs

The nation's Fourth of July holiday traffic death toll climbed past 130 today, with more than half the long weekend still ahead.

A total of 134 deaths had been reported by 6 a.m. CDT.

The National Safety Council estimates between 580 and 680 people could be killed in traffic accidents during the weekend, which began at 5 p.m. CDT Wednesday and continues until midnight Sunday, local time.

During the last four-day Fourth of July holiday period, in 1978, 712 people died and 31,000 people were injured in traffic accidents, the council said.

This year's estimate is lower than the 1978 toll because of increased awareness of seatbelt use and campaigns against drunken driving, said council spokeswoman Barbara Carraro.

Moon out of jail

NEW YORK — The Rev. Sun Myung Moon, the Unification Church leader freed from a federal prison after 11 months, must now perform 46 days of community work at a drug rehabilitation center as part of his sentence.

Moon left the medium-security prison in Danbury, Conn., on Thursday, getting time off for good behavior from his 18-month sentence for tax evasion, said Jeff Garbow, a prison spokesman.

Moon, whose imprisonment was assailed by some religious leaders, will fulfill his church duties by day but must report each night until mid-August to Phoenix House, a halfway house in Brooklyn involved in treating drug abuse.

Stubborn blazes

Fires continue to burn in Western states

By the Associated Press

Armies of battle-hardened firefighters struggled today to control stubborn blazes that have laid waste to more than 150,000 acres of brush and rangeland in 10 parched Western states, forcing the evacuation of thousands of people.

Thousands of firefighters battled blazes today in Arizona, Idaho, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Washington, Wyoming, and California, which has been the hardest hit since the waves of fires began June 27.

Encouraged by reduced winds and temperatures that dropped into the 90s after days in triple digits, 2,700 firefighters worked for a fifth day today to control a blaze that has charred 78,000 acres in Southern California.

"If the weather holds, we should be in pretty good shape," said U.S. Forest Service spokesman Max Reed. "The winds have laid down. It's the first bright spot we've had."

The fire, which was about 40 percent contained Thursday night, rolled into coastal Santa Barbara County after threatening Ojai in Ventura County and forcing cancellation of area fireworks displays.

Traditional fireworks shows in the Hollywood Bowl, the Rose Bowl, Disneyland and other locales went ahead. Officials asked people to turn in anyone using fireworks recklessly.

The Santa Barbara fire, in the Los Padres National Forest, was a few miles from the outskirts of Carpinteria, a beach town 12 miles east of Santa Barbara and 40 miles east of President Reagan's ranch.

The blaze has cost more than $1 million to fight and forced the evacuation of up to 5,000 people since it began Monday, officials said. Ventura County Sheriff John Gillespie said he suspected arson.

Winds were forecast for today and the Forest Service brought in fresh crews from as far away as Michigan and Arkansas.

Resources had been stretched so thin by the Ojai fire that the Forest Service offered civilian truck and van owners $7 an hour and up to 35 cents a mile to haul supplies. The response triggered a traffic jam of trucks and vans headed toward the ranger station and the offer was canceled two hours later.

"It was just overwhelming," said spokesman Steve Beck. "We really appreciate what people did."

Two fires, a 350-acre blaze at Black Mountain southeast of Santa Paula and a 25-acre fire to the north, converged on the city of 20,000 and prompted the evacuation of a few scattered ranches.

A 25,000-acre brush fire was 40 percent contained in San Luis Obispo County but had entered the San Lucia wilderness area, forcing evacuation of 6,000 people before the holiday. Damage was put at $1.75 million.

Numerous other fires burned across California, including a 1,600-acre blaze in Yosemite National park that was about three-fourths contained Thursday, said park dispatcher Darlene Hales. It started Sunday with an unattended campfire.

Ministers sworn in

MADRID, Spain — King Juan Carlos swore in six new ministers in the Socialist government today, less than 24 hours after Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez announced a major Cabinet shuffle.

Gonzalez denied the changes indicated a crisis in his 31-month-old Socialist government, and said they did not augur any changes in his economic and foreign policies.

Gonzalez announced the shakeup — involving the replacement of the economy and finance minister, the foreign minister and four others — Thursday night at a news conference.

The king presided over the swearing-in ceremony at his Zarzuela palace residence.

Foreign Minister Fernando Moran was replaced in a move widely linked to his opposition to Spain's continued membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

His successor, Francisco Fernandez Ordonez, was seen as supporting Spain's continuation in NATO. Gonzalez has promised to hold a referendum on continued NATO membership by next summer.

Robot finds wreckage

LONDON — A submersible robot searching the floor of the Atlantic off Ireland has found wreckage from the Air-India jumbo jet that crashed June 23, killing all 329 people aboard, the operators said today.

The robot transmitted pictures of seats, pieces of the interior and a fragment of the plane's tail.

But there was no sign of wreckage that might contain the flight recorder, or "black box," investigators hope will explain what caused the Boeing 747 to crash, said a statement from Cable and Wireless Telecommunications Co., which is operating the submersible.

In New Delhi, two Indian news agencies said investigators believed the crash was caused by an explosion in the plane's cargo container.

Shooting style disputed

MANILA, Philippines — A medical examiner testified today that if opposition leader Benigno Aquino were shot in the manner demonstrated by a prosecution witness who claims she saw the shooting, he would still be alive.

Appearing as a defense witness in the murder trial of armed forces chief Gen. Fabian C. Ver and 25 other men, Dr. Constantino Nunez said the results of an official autopsy proved that witness Rebecca Quijano was wrong.

"If we are to believe the testimony of Rebecca Quijano, then Aquino should be alive today," said Nunez, also a lawyer and a medical-legal consultant to several prestigious hospitals. "Medical evidence negates the testimony of Rebecca Quijano insofar as the trajectory is concerned."

Escaped prisoner shot today after holding officers hostage

ODESSA, Mo. (AP) — An escaped prisoner who took six law enforcement officers hostage was critically wounded and captured early today outside a mobile home in western Missouri.

About a dozen officers opened fire on fugitive Robert T. Allen as he stepped onto a porch of the mobile home at about 2 a.m., according to Sgt. Jim Watson of the Missouri Highway Patrol. The six hostages — five of whom had been released earlier in the night — were not harmed.

Allen, 25, was taken to St. Mary's Hospital in nearby Blue Springs, where he was listed in critical condition early this morning with a bullet wound to the head, the patrol said.

Allen was shot when he fired at the last of his six hostages, Missouri Highway Patrol Cpl. Dennis Boss, said Sgt. Jim Watson, a patrol spokesman. Boss escaped while walking out onto the front porch to retrieve some soft drinks left by authorities for Allen.

The first of five officers was released about 9:15 p.m. in exchange for an electrical generator. Another hostage was traded for a television set so Allen he could watch himself on the news.

The incident began Thursday morning when officers were called to a home located near the mobile home in a rural area five miles south of Odessa.

Laverne Wood said she called police after a man came to her home and told the couple that Allen was trying to kill him.

Allen ambushed one of the officers at about 3:30 p.m. while authorities were searching the area around the mobile home, Watson said. The other officers arrived at the scene about 20 minutes later.

"Apparently the suspect came out of the trailer (using the) officer as a shield and forced the other officers that had arrived on the scene into the mobile home," Watson said.

Authorities at first reported that five officers and one civilian, a female resident of the mobile home, were being held. The patrol later revised its report to show that six officers were involved.

Odessa is a town of about 3,000 people, approximately 20 miles east of Kansas City.

Allen escaped June 19 while being transported in a van from the Jackson County Courthouse in Independence to the Jackson County Jail in Kansas City, according to Kansas City police.

Glare of rockets inspired holiday

"And the rockets red glare,
the bombs bursting in air,
gave proof through the night,
that our flag was still there."

Rockets lit up the sky, not only in red but in gold, silver, blue, yellow and green as Big Spring celebrated July 4th with fireworks for the first time since the closing of Webb Air Force Base in 1978.

It was in inspiring sight, seen by thousands in Comanche Trail Park, from along Highway 87, and even from some peripheral points like the parking lot of Highland Mall.

The colorful rockets and startling exposive reports drew synchronous "ooohs" and "aaahs" from children and adults alike. It was a tangible, measureable celebration not only of Independence Day, but of this city as well.

The fireworks display was a community event, an attraction that inspired townspeople, capping private and public celebrations on the holiday.

It was great fun. A note of thanks is due the businesses affiliated with the Chamber of Commerce which contributed to make it possible. We hope it becomes an annual affair in the Crossroads County city.

Billy Graham

'Prodigal' plot is familiar

DEAR DR. GRAHAM: I just got back from watching a film that your organization put out, called "The Prodigal." It really shook me, because I can see myself in it. I haven't gotten into all the things that young man did, but down inside I have to admit I am rebellious and would do them if I had a chance. But now I see this is wrong, and I want God. How can I know Him? — P.L.

DEAR P.L.: The film to which you refer is a modern day retelling of one of Jesus' most familiar parables, which you can read for yourself in Luke 15:11-32. In that story, Jesus tells of a young man who had a good home but he left it and decided to live for himself. As time went on, however, he discovered that all the pleasures and good times his money could buy were not enough to give him lasting happiness and when his money ran out he was left with no friends or hope. Finally, he realized he had been wrong and decided to return to his father. When he did, his father ran out to greet him and welcome him.

Jesus told this parable to explain God's love and forgiveness to us. We never will find true and lasting happiness apart from God; instead, we only end up in misery. The Bible warns, "The way of the unfaithful is hard" (Proverbs 13:15). But God loves us in spite of our sin, and Jesus Christ came into the world so we could be forgiven and reconciled to God. When we turn to Christ in repentance and faith, God is ready to receive us and welcome us into His family forever.

Turn to Christ right now, by a simple prayer of faith. Get on your knees and confess your sins to Him — including your rebelliousness and your desire to live apart from Him. Then ask Christ to cleanse you of your sins and come into your heart as your Lord and Savior. If you will do that, God has promised to receive you and save you. Make your commitment to Christ without delay.

'Yes, Mother, everything's fine'

The best time for parents of teenagers is when they can get away and take a short vacation by themselves. The worst time is when they call home to find out if everything is going all right.

"Hello, Alfred, this is Mummy. Well, we just arrived at the beach. Where's Grandma? ... Why did she go home? She said she would stay for the week ... What's that music in the background? ... How many friends? ... You're not sure? ... How many did you invite? ... You only asked 10 but 40 showed up? ... Alfred, we told you you couldn't have parties while we were gone ... If it's not a party what is it? ... A high school reunion? ... But you don't graduate from high school until next year ... It's a reunion of the kids who have already graduated from the school? Where do you come off entertaining college freshmen? ... They're not freshmen, they're rugby players from Detroit? ... That does it. Put your sister Grace on ... How can she be out? She promised to stay home and guard the house while we were gone ... Alfred, you gave us your solemn word you would not fight with your sister ... What was that crashing noise? ... Where are you talking from? ... It does make a difference. If you're speaking from the kitchen it means someone has just broken my china — and if you're speaking from the upstairs bedroom it means someone just smashed my perfume bottles. I'm going to put your father on."

"Hello, son, how goes it? I hear you're throwing a little party? ... It sounds like everyone is having a lot of fun ... Seems to me we had a deal in exchange for your using my car that when we went away you'd kinda keep people out of the house. Isn't that what we agreed on? ... I tell you what, son. Why don't you just ask everyone to leave the house quietly, and if they don't want to go tell them you'll kick their butts in for them ... No, I must admit I have never asked a Detroit rugby team to leave my house. At the same time, since you let them in, you're going to have to figure a way of getting them out ... Alfred, are those sirens? ... Out of curiosity, are they police sirens or fire sirens? ... Police sirens. Well, at least that means the house isn't burning down. Any idea, Alfred, why the police are at our house? ... You'd prefer to put the sergeant on.

"Yes, sergeant, this is Sam Savage. I know something is wrong so we better get to it right away ... I see. There have been complaints from the neighbors about screaming, shouting of obscenities, breaking windows, beer cans on the lawn and some nudity in the bushes.

"Yes, there is a possibility that our son could be hosting such a party. If his head comes to a point and if he strikes you as a first-class idiot who can't say no when his parents go out of town, then that has to be our Alfred ... Sergeant, how much damage do you estimate has been done? ... Yes, include the bottle of red wine that was spilled on the sofa ... Two or three thousand dollars? ... Well it seems Mrs. Savage and I got off cheap ... What do I want you to do? I'm not in a position to say. Are you people into police brutality? I'll tell you what, sarge, any way you could clear out the house would be very much appreciated. I'll see that your men get a commendation medal for each kid they throw out in the street. Let me speak to my son again.

"Alfred, the sergeant has offered to persuade the Detroit rugby team to leave the premises. Tell them not to take it personally. I've asked him to bounce everyone whether they're involved in sports or not. It has nothing to do with your friends. It has to do with your mother's and my dream of spending a few more years in the house, after we get home from vacation.

"Look, son, after the sergeant boots everyone out he could take you down to the station house and book you for disorderly conduct. If he does, he may give you the right to make one telephone call. If this happens, son, don't waste your quarter on us, because we're going to try to get some sleep."

India's Gandhi, Reagan forge strong friendship

By JACK ANDERSON and JOSEPH SPEAR

WASHINGTON — Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi's four days in the United States were enough to change the direction of nearly four decades of uneasy relations between the world's two largest democracies.

The youthful Indian leader not only got along famously with the septuagenarian American president in a 30-minute private conversation, but managed to impress even the most skeptical and hard-bitten of Washington's power brokers. The visit laid a solid foundation for improved ties between India and the United States, which have been frequently at odds over the years.

Senior administration officials told our associate Indy Badhwar the Gandhi trip was a definite turning-point, that it was a personal triumph for the former airline pilot whose political experience effectively began last Oct. 31 upon the assassination of his mother, Indira.

"We hit it off!" exclaimed president Reagan after their one-on-one meeting. The president, Gandhi effused, was "frank, forthright, warm and very human."

CIA Director William Casey said of Gandhi: "He has made a tremendous impression here."

"This was certainly one of the most successful visits I've seen," said U.S. Information Agency Director Charles Z. Wick. "The young man is quite remarkable."

What makes these reactions particularly significant is that in speeches before Congress and the National Press Club, Gandhi had openly criticized the Reagan administration for its "Star Wars" initiative and for its failure to keep Pakistan from building a nuclear bomb. The administration's refusal to take offense at these public rebukes was a clear demonstration of Reagan's genuine desire to improve relations with India.

Gandhi worked his considerable charm to equal advantage in meetings with the media and other groups. While he was polite and attentive, he managed to get across the image of a self-respecting, confident leader of a major power, not some obsequious Third World politician looking for a handout from the U.S. Treasury.

Remarking on what he called the "Rajiv phenomenon," a senior diplomat explained: "You can really talk to the guy. Even when he disagrees he's not preachy or tendentious. His grandfather (Jawaharlal Nehru) tended to be aloof and aristocratic. His mother was often sullen and withdrawn."

The diplomat added that one solid result of Gandhi's visit is that the two countries "are now in a position to resolve future crises and differences that may arise in an atmosphere of true friendship." He said "the days of Krishna Menon diplomacy are over" — a reference to a former Indian foreign minister who was both acerbic and anti-American.

Another thing Gandhi accomplished was to lay to rest any doubts administration officials had that he was really in charge in India. There had been some suspicion that the young, inexperienced prime minister was relying heavily on a small coterie of advisers inherited from his mother's regime.

"That Rajiv is totally in command is in very little doubt," a diplomat said later. "He was always in control. And while he was never afraid to speak his mind, he did so in a disarming way."

While differences between the two countries will continue to exist, Gandhi managed to persuade the Reagan administration that India wants to be a friend — and will be a valuable one. That's quite an achievement in just four days.

EXECUTIVE MEMO: When complaints of criminal misconduct are leveled at FBI agents, the bureau's Office of Professional Responsibility is supposed to be notified forthwith. This is an obvious step to avoid the possibility that a regional office will cover up wrongdoing.

But a recent audit obtained by our reporter Stewart Harris discloses that several FBI offices have been remarkably slow in letting the front office know about such charges. One local office, for example, took 50 days to notify OPR that one of its special agents had been accused of pushing drugs before joining the FBI.

In addition, the audit noted, one-fourth of the cases reviewed turned up a "potential for conflict of interest" when regional office supervisors took part in OPR investigations of their own people. The OPR investigates higher-ranking FBI personnel, such as agents-in-charge, but generally turns low-level investigations back to the regional offices.

Guy Zimmerman, who headed the Justice Department audit, said the OPR has "taken corrective action" since the audit. An FBI spokesman declined comment.

WATCH ON WASTE: Under the Medicare program, Prudential Insurance Co. paid the medical bills of Nathan Jacobson of Linwood, N.J., then sent him a check for the balance he had coming. The check was made out for a grand total of 2 cents. No one would say what it cost to process the check. One estimate: $4.20. The cost, of course, was reimbursed by the taxpayers.

HUSH-HUSH: A top-secret CIA analysis has concluded that, under Fidel Castro, Cuba has become a colony of the Soviet Union. Declares the document: "Cuban submission has been complete," and Castro has become a "self-critical member of the team."

Today

By The Associated Press

Today is Friday, July 5, the 186th day of 1985. There are 179 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Fifty years ago — on July 5, 1935 — President Franklin D. Roosevelt signed into law the National Labor Relations Act, designed to promote organized labor's right to collective bargaining.

On this date:

In 1801, American naval hero David G. Farragut was born.

In 1810, showman Phineas T. Barnum was born.

In 1811, Venezuela became the first South American country to declare its independence from Spain.

In 1830, the French occupied the north African city of Algiers.

In 1865, William Booth founded the Salvation Army in London.

In 1940, during World War II, diplomatic relations were broken between Britain and the Vichy government in France.

Ten years ago: The Cape Verdes Islands officially became independent after 500 years of Portuguese rule. And Arthur Ashe won the men's singles title at Wimbledon, defeating Jimmy Connors in four sets.

Five years ago: Tennis star Bjorn Borg won his fifth Wimbledon singles title, defeating John McEnroe in five sets.

One year ago: The U.S. Supreme Court weakened the 70-year-old "exclusionary rule" by deciding that evidence seized with defective court warrants can be used against defendants in criminal trials.

Today's birthdays: Actress Katherine Helmond is 52. Actress Shirley Knight is 49. Julie Nixon Eisenhower is 37. Baseball's Rich "Goose" Gossage is 34.

Thought for today: "You have not converted a man because you have silenced him." — Lord Morley, English statesman (1838-1923).

Dr. Donohue

Acid reflux linked to esophagus problem

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: My husband was examined by a doctor and has had a second opinion. It has been agreed that he has Barrett's esophagus. He is now on a diet that eliminates foods like citrus, coffee, chocolate and tomatoes. He has to be checked over regularly. Please comment on my husband's condition. Will taking vitamin C help it? — Mrs. A.D.

This is a problem of the esophagus lining. It is unlike the lining of the stomach, which is designed to resist the corrosive effects of gastric juices. Yet, in Barrett's esophagus the normal esophageal lining has in places developed stomach-type tissue. Sometimes that is a result of another problem, the chronic regurgitation of stomach acid into the area.

Your husband is getting the standard treatment for Barrett's — avoidance of acid-producing foods and a careful watch over development of the esophagus lining, for this can become cancerous, as you have been told (another part of your letter).

No vitamin will reverse the process going on in the lining. It is true that generally speaking vitamin A is needed to maintain the integrity of many body linings, but supplements help only when such linings become deranged because of its lack. That isn't the case with Barrett's. Nor will vitamin C help change things. Your husband's diet should bring improvement.

DEAR DR. DONOHUE: When I was 7 years old I got very sick and the doctor told mother I had yellow jaundice. That was 45 years ago. I've been told that I can't give blood. Is there some kind of test I can get to determine if our country doctor back 45 years ago was right about the jaundice? — J.D.

There's more than one kind of jaundice and more than one cause. The kind that keeps people from donating blood for others is hepatitis, type B. It would be very unusual for you to have had that kind at such a young age. You certainly would not have been included in the group most likely to get it — those exposed to the virus by contaminated needles.

But nevertheless, if you want it there is a blood test to see if you are now unable to donate your blood. It's called the hepatitis B antigen test. It will tell if you have been exposed. I am sure that if this is bothering you your doctor will order it for you.

Dear Abby

Key opens door to trouble

DEAR ABBY: My husband's parents live next door. We gave them a key to our house in case of emergencies. This was the worst mistake we ever made. Before they had the key we had a good relationship, but no more.

His father is a very early riser, so he lets himself into our home while we are still in bed. He reads our mail and invades our privacy. His mother also lets herself in and looks around. Last Sunday morning I walked into our kitchen stark naked and my father-in-law was standing there! We never know when they are going to surprise us. When we have company, they walk in as though they lived here.

We hate to hurt their feelings, so we haven't said anything to them, but we will not feel comfortable until we get our key back.

Have you any suggestions?

NEEDS PRIVACY

DEAR NEEDS: Yes. With as much diplomacy as he can muster, you husband must tell his parents that their surprise visits are disturbing and often inconvenient, so would they please return the house key. It won't be easy, but it's the only way you can regain your privacy.

DEAR ABBY: A good friend came to visit me with her two children, both under 3 years of age. By the time they left, my stereo was damaged, my carpet stained, an antique clock broken — and that was just in the living room. The rest of the house looked like a tornado went through it. All this occurred while my friend sat and talked, apparently oblivious to the whole thing.

I was afraid if I asked her to control her kids or leave, our friendship would be over because she is very sensitive about her kids.

Please don't think I'm an old fuddy-duddy who hates kids. I'm not. I love kids, and hope to have my own someday. However, my husband and I have worked hard to furnish our home and don't appreciate it being destroyed by kids like hers. I'm beginning to wonder if the friendship is worth it.

Surely I'm not the only one with this problem. A printed solution might help.

READY TO SCREAM

DERA READY: Screaming will not restore your lock, repair your stereo and clean your carpet. Kids usually tear around like tornados because they are bored. A few toys and some coloring books in full view of you and their mother might be helpful. And should the child get out of line, a firm reprimand would not be out of order.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "TIME TO THINK" IN EAST HAMPTION: A friend sent this poem, which is more than food for thought — it's a banquet:

THE HARDER PART
Inventing the artificial heart —
That was the easy part.
Who can splice a severed soul?
Who can invent a glue to mend a broken heart?
Can shattered minds be traded in for new,
Or egos rusted by despair be given body shop repair?
To find a cure for these
That are beyond prosthetic remedies
That is the harder part.

Families can avoid vacation disasters

By REDBOOK

The family vacation can be a great getaway — or a disaster — depending on how it is planned.

"The family vacation is a delicate social event," said Paul Rosenblatt, Ph.D., University of Minnesota professor of family social science, in Redbook. "The rest of the year family members have built-in breaks from each other — they go to work, to school, they visit with friends.

"But on vacation, people have to spend every minute of every day having fun together — or they think they do. It can be very stressful."

Another aspect of the problem was pointed out by Robert Felner, Ph.D., director of clinical training at Alabama's Auburn University.

"What's bad in a family can get worse on vacation," he said. "You see your mate in a new light, and it's not always a flattering one."

Felner's point is backed up by the Family and Children's Service Agency in Minneapolis, which gets a record number of requests for counseling the day after Labor Day.

Vacation tension can be eased by following some simple "Don'ts":

— Don't expect too much. Felner calls it "the Christmas Morning Syndrome," when people are disappointed in vacations because their expectations were unreasonably high.

"Get the family together and do a little anticipatory coping," Felner advised. "Talk through what each person expects out of the vacation, and then assess the chances of actually realizing those expectations. If you all want different things, you are all going to have to work out a compromise."

— Don't overschedule. "People try to do too much," Felner said. "They turn the vacation into an endurance contest." This applies particularly where children are concerned. "Parents simply don't give their kids a chance to rest," Kim R. Devos, public relations representative of Sea World of Florida, said. "The kids get cranky; everyone's yelling."

— Don't turn it into a guilt trip. "If you haven't gotten along with your own mom for 30 years, chances are you're not going to have a great visit home just because you've brought your husband and kids along," Felner said. He advised that if you're only visiting your parents because you have to — then don't.

— Don't ignore differences. "Discuss differences and build them into the vacation," Felner said. "Let the one who likes to sit, SIT, and let the one who likes to race around take the kids on a whirlwind adventure."

— Don't think money buys fun. "If you've saved all year for one big splash, that in itself can cause vacation stress," said Hy Day, Ph.D., psychology professor at Toronto's York University.

— Don't neglect your spouse. Felner advised going somewhere offering baby-sitting, or leaving the kids with the grandparents.

The experts advised breaking up vacations. For example, take a series of long weekends throughout the summer.

"You have more respites to look forward to," Felner said, "and no big expensive trip to be disappointed in."

Rebekahs make plans for installation and official visit

The Big Spring Rebekah Lodge began making plans for officer installation and the Rebekah Assembly president's visit during a meeting Tuesday. Thirty visits to the sick were reported.

New officers will be installed at the next meeting Tuesday evening. Members will be in formal dress. Those having July birthdays also will be honored during the meeting.

Jonnie Hefner, Rebekah Assembly president, will make her official visit to the Lodge Thursday at 7:30 p.m. The Stanton Rebekah Lodge No. 287 and the Big Spring Rebekah Lodge No. 284 will be consolidated during the meeting. Dress will be formal.

The next meeting will be Tuesday at 7:30 at the Lodge Hall.

Engineer says railroad more romantic in 'old days'

By GAIL REDDEN
Sweetwater Reporter

SWEETWATER (AP) — It is 115 miles to Brownwood from Sweetwater.

Bill and Doris Ransberger say "every mile of it is there, too." But they don't have to make the trip except for pleasure since Ransberger's retirement after more than 39 years with the Santa Fe Railway.

They made trips to Brownwood for three years when Ransberger and other Sweetwater Santa Fe employees were given a choice to transfer after a local cut-back.

Ransberger hired out with the Santa Fe in 1945 after serving in the Navy in World War II. He worked his way from the water service department to locomotive fireman to engineer.

Shortly after joining the railroad, he met Doris, who worked in the Santa Fe depot office in Brownwood. They married in Talpa, and had five children, living in Brennan and Brownwood before moving to Sweetwater in 1949.

Ransberger says the railroad was more romantic in the old days of steam engines, days that ended for him when the diesel engine came to Sweetwater in 1953. "The steam engine was hot to work on, but it was a different kind of heat, not unpleasant," he said.

"We knew that every locomotive had its own personality. Each one had to be fired up differently," he said. "They burned crude oil to make steam."

Diesel engines have changed at least five times, he said. "The box cars are larger, and they've gone to containerized cars, piggy-back cars and everything is on computer now."

"The 'number grabbers' (railroad clerks) used to check the cars in and out. Now the computers do this job."

In the old days of railroading, he said, engineers would ride "by the seat of your pants" — telling the speed of the train by the click, click of the wheels on a track. Now, the railroads have gone to "welded rails" that are smooth and make no noise as the train passes over them. "We had to watch the speedometer closely or you'd be going 60 instead of 40 before you knew it."

Modern trains are a lot longer and more difficult to handle than those run in Ransberger's early days of railroading, sometimes more than 10,000 feet long. "It's hard to keep from tearing a train up, but most engineers avoid accidents quite well," he said.

"The recent-day railroad employees attend school. Us old-heads had to learn the hard way," Ransberger says.

Ransberger says his favorite railroad yarn is one that dates back to 1948, told many times by the late Roy Sullivan, a veteran conductor from Sweetwater. "Roy said once when he was aboard the train headed for Brownwood, several hobos were spotted in a gondola (a long, open-top car used to haul coal).

Ransberger said when the train passed Toland, just outside Sweetwater, the brakemen sneaked off to watch as Sullivan climbed the gondola to chase away the hobos.

Sullivan's story goes that a "great big guy" stood up first, and he noticed the rest were also "great big guys." He asked the free-loading group, "Where do you guys think you are going?"

They replied, "To Houston."

"Well," said Sullivan, "you're on the right train," and went back to his conducting.

Some of the brakemen asked what Sullivan told the hobos. "Oh, he said, "that's some of my kinfolks, and I decided to let them ride."

Scientists hope for Parkinson's disease cure

ATLANTA (AP) — Scientists have reversed symptoms of Parkinson's disease in monkeys, a development they hope will lead to a cure for the debilitating illness in man, a study's chief researcher said.

Injecting brain tissue from fetal monkeys into the brains of rhesus monkeys with chemically induced Parkinson's symptoms restored production of dopamine, a compound that acts as a transmitter in the nervous system, the researchrs said.

Parkinson's sufferers' dopamine deficiency causes the rigidity, jerky movement and tremors that characterize the disease, which afflicts half a million older Americans.

"We've got some very important preliminary data which indicates that certain types of neurologic disease can be corrected ... diseases which previously were thought to be totally untreatable," said Dr. Roy A.E. Bakay, lead researcher on the study at Atlanta's Yerkes Regional Primate Research Center.

In trials beginning last summer with two monkeys in which Parkinson's symptoms had been induced with a chemical called MPTP, Bakay and his colleagues at the Emory University center have seen restored dopamine levels and noticeably improved movement within two months after the implant of dopamine-producing fetal brain cells.

In an interview this week, Bakay stressed that his technique is two to five years away from possible human trials and should not be considered a cure. Also yet to be tackled are the profound ethical questions of transplanting tissue from human fetuses, he said.

Two months after implant of the dopamine-producing cells, the rhesus monkeys' cerebrospinal fluid showed normal dopamine levels as the newly implanted cells connected with surrounding brain tissue, the Yerkes researchers reported. The monkeys showed no signs of rejecting the new brain tissue.

The animals moved with less rigidity and more playfulness than before, although recovery was less than 100 percent.

"One thing that never gets back up to the (normal) baseline is skilled movements," Bakay said, noting that more study is needed to determine if different implantation techniques might produce better effects.

It also is not known yet if the technique will reverse the characteristic trembling of Parkinson's patients. Bakay, an Emory neurosurgeon, said it is almost impossible to induce tremors in lab monkeys.

Bakay said the task now is to determine which of three types of cell implants is most effective — fetal brain cells, cells from the adrenal gland or cells grown in lab cultures.

By far, the best results have come in implanting cells from the brains of fetal monkeys. But the suggestion of such a technique in humans raises moral, legal and ethical questions — "enormous social problems I would not tackle at this point," Bakay said.

Researchers in Sweden have transplanted cells from the adrenal glands — which also produce dopamine — into the brains of two human Parkinson's patients. While the brains did not reject the new cells, the patients' improvement was slight.

Allyn Conwell speaks out at a press conference while his mother Lois Conwell listens in the background. Conwell clarified several things he said while held hostage by Shiite terrorists.

Former hostage says he has no compassion for hijackers

HOUSTON (AP) — Former TWA hostage Allyn Conwell says he is in full accord with the United States wanting to retaliate against the Shiite hijackers and those who murdered Navy diver Robert Stethem.

Conwell, 39, told reporters at an invitation-only press conference Thursday, he totally supports the Reagan administration's efforts to seek retaliation.

"I have absolutely no sympathy for and I have absolutely no understanding of the act of murder. I have no compassion for, understanding of, and I have never voiced any compassion, sympathy, understanding or tolerance for murderers or the hijackers," Conwell said.

He said the comments he made at a Damascus press conference, which were construed as being sympathetic to the Shiites, dealt with only one group — the Amal militia.

"They entered this situation reluctantly," Conwell said. The other Shiite groups consisted of the hijackers and supporters of the hijackers, he said.

Conwell said the Amal were wrong in holding them hostage, but he said he understood how they would consider the holding of Americans equal to that of Israel holding 700 Shiites as prisoners.

"(Nabih) Berri and the Amal were acting against the law," Conwell said. "I also think the Israelites were working against the law."

As elected spokesman for the American hostages, Conwell said he was used to a certain degree by the Amal.

Conwell has been the target of much criticism by former hostages for the "sympathetic" comments he made about his captors and for the apparent special treatment given him by the Amal.

"Apparently, after reviewing tape there is tremendous amount of confusion over my role as spokesman — perhaps some debate over my political affiliation. I want to clear this up as soon as possible," Conwell said as his wife, Olga, and brother, Ron, sat next to him.

Several former captives have said they didn't agree with Conwell's statements about the cause of the Amal, who held the passengers and three crew members of TWA flight 847 for 17 days.

Some hostages also have said Conwell received special treatment compared with the rest of the 38 hostages. Criticisms made about Conwell included that he had a separate room, had his laundry done for him while others did theirs in a sink, had better food and was privileged to drive a car.

Conwell, however, said that he was treated no differently than any of the other hostages. The only exception, he said, was that he ate a few slices of watermelon once.

"There were no special considerations afforded to me," Conwell said. "I slept with and lived with my fellow hostages when I was able to sleep."

His role as spokesman called for less sleep because he was taken by the captors to visit all the hostages during the night, Conwell said. He wasn't allowed to visit the others during the day because of security reasons, he said.

Conwell said he drove a car for about five to seven minutes but that it wasn't his idea.

The eloquently-spoken Conwell said he had seen the "slanderous remarks" made by fellow hostage Peter Hill of Hoffman Estates, Ill., accusing him of being naive about the Amal. He said the allegations made by Hill caused him a great deal of concern.

"He (Hill) contributed to the statement I read and at no time did he or anyone come to me and voice objection to what I had said," Conwell said about Hill.

Melon scare

California illnesses linked to melon sales

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California grocers responding to a state-ordered recall stopped selling watermelons during the peak Fourth of July sales season after more than 35 people in three states became ill from melons apparently tainted by pesticide.

Fifteen to 17 people became ill after eating striped watermelons in the Portland, Ore., area, including part of southwest Washington; 21 illnesses were reported in California by people eating green melons, health officials said Thursday.

"The numbers are fluid and they'll probably get bigger," said California Department of Health spokesman Peter Weisser.

The state health department issued the recall late Thursday afternoon during the melon's peak of popularity — the Fourth of July holiday. Officials also urged people not to eat melons already purchased.

Dr. Kenneth Kizer, health department director, said Thursday that he made the move to guard against further illness.

"It's a statewide recall that means all watermelons are recalled as a precautionary measure," Kizer said in a telephone interview from Sacramento. "Occurrences in Oregon came from people who ate striped watermelons, but the ones here in California have been from solid green watermelons."

The melons may have been contaminated by the pesticide aldicarb, Weisser said.

Traces of the pesticide, sold under the brand name Temik, were found in melons taken from a grocery store and a wholesaler's warehouse, said Dalton Hobbs, spokesman for the Oregon Agriculture Department.

The pesticide is approved for use on some fruit but not for watermelons, Hobbs said. It was suspected that the melons became contaminated by absorbing the chemical through the roots, he added.

United Grocers, based in Milwaukie, Ore., ordered all watermelons recalled Wednesday.

Because of the different types of melons people ate before becoming ill, Kizer said investigators worried that contaminated melons might be coming from different areas.

Victims reported the melons looked normal and had no unusual odor or taste, Foster said.

"If individuals were to become ill, they would become ill within an hour after eating the melon," Kizer said. "No deaths would be expected ... although it is a highly toxic pesticide."

The holiday complicated efforts to limit the potential effect of a contamination outbreak, Kizer said.

Supermarket clerk Philip Peneyra displays watermelons which were pulled from store shelves Thursday afternoon in Los Angeles after state health officials ordered all green melons and striped melons removed from grocery shelves.

Government offices and grocery distribution centers closed for the holiday hampered health officials' efforts to determine the extent of the problem.

"It couldn't have come on a worse day," he said.

Suspect melons were reported to have been shipped from Yuma, Ariz., or El Centro, Calif., but as a safety measure, Kizer asked that shipments of watermelon from Kern and Riverside counties be stopped as well.

Victims included six workers from Vons Grocery Market Inc. in the greater Los Angeles area, four each in Alameda, Lake and Kern counties; and one each in Orange, Marin, and San Diego counties, officials said.

Brooklyn neighborhood sinking into ground

NEW YORK (AP) — Part of a Brooklyn neighborhood is slowly screwing itself into the ground, and it's got the residents all bent out of shape.

Apartment buildings and brownstone houses in a 20-square-block area of Sunset Park are twisting, buckling and sinking, city officials say, and no one knows why.

"This is such a freaky situation that almost nothing is beyond the realm of possibility," said Gerald Turcetto, a project planner at the Mayor's Office of Construction.

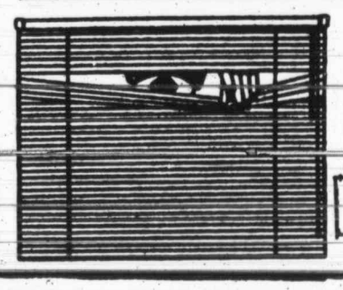

Mayor Edward Koch has called for an investigation of the "structural problems" in the area, but no cause has been determined since the problems were first detected in April 1984 and cropped up again after heavy rainfalls in December and May.

The sinking, which some residents have contributed to shifting subsoil, has caused the facades of several buildings to crack or buckle, the floors and interior stairways of some to tilt and the stoops of others to settle or separate.

The city has tried an electronic lead-detection survey, hydrant and water-main soundings, soil borings and other tests, but officials are still baffled. The city Department of Environmental Protection has hired a consultant, and the Buildings and Transportation departments also are conducting investigations.

Residents offer some of their own theories. Some believe the heavy flow of traffic by trucks may be causing "vibrations" that somehow cause the subsoil to sink. Others think the condition of 80-year-old sewers in the area are responsible, arguing that leaking may have caused settling.

ZINA GARRISON, of Houston, returns a shot in her women's semifinal match against MARTINA NAVRATILOVA Thursday on the grass courts of Wimbledon. GARRISON was the first black women to reach the Wimbledon semis since ALTHEA GIBSON won the singles title in 1957.

Men's semis rained out

Lloyd, Navratilova gain finals

By ANDREW WARSHAW
AP Sports Writer

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — While defending women's titlist Martina Navratilova prepared once again to meet arch-rival and co-top seed Chris Evert Lloyd in the final of the Wimbledon tennis championships, Peter Fleming sprang to the defense of the vanquished men's champion, John McEnroe.

McEnroe was hammered to a straight sets defeat by Kevin Curren in the quarterfinals of the men's singles, the worst post-war loss for a defending Wimbledon champion.

"I certainly do not expect the way he played here to be a long-standing situation," said Fleming after he and McEnroe, his long-time friend and doubles partner, won their quarterfinal match Thursday. "I expect him to be playing extremely well by the U.S. Open."

The South African-born Curren, who received American citizenship earlier this year, continued his bid for a first men's singles title today by taking on veteran Jimmy Connors, a three-time winner, in one semifinal.

In the other, West Germany's Boris Becker, the youngest player ever to reach the last four here, faced Sweden's Anders Jarryd. Becker, 17, was just two steps away from becoming the first non-seeded player to win the title.

In women's semifinal matches Thursday, Lloyd crushed 18-year-old Kathy Rinaldi 6-2, 6-0 by exploiting the teenager's lack of variation and inexperience of the big occasion.

Navratilova, meanwhile, had to battle before overcoming Zina Garrison 6-4, 7-6 in the other all-American semifinal.

Lloyd's path to the women's final has looked more impressive on paper than Navratilova's. Lloyd has dropped only 16 games in six matches, while Navratilova has had to struggle through tiebreakers against Bettina Bunge, Pam Shriver and Garrison.

But Lloyd throws out paper comparisons.

"I think Martina's a little bit more eager for this tournament," said Lloyd, who beat Navratiolva in their last meeting, the final of the French Open.

"Whenever you have a loss, you maybe work a little bit harder. So I think she will be out to avenge that Paris loss."

Lloyd, who trails Navratilova 33-32 in previous matches and is yet to beat her in four Wimbledon finals, is feeling confident as she tries to add Wimbledon to her French and Australian titles. A victory would send Lloyd to the U.S. Open bidding to become the fourth woman to win the Grand Slam.

"I am playing my best, maybe because in the back of my mind I know I'm not going to be playing for five or 10 more years," said Lloyd, who has won Wimbledon three times and nine-time finalist.

"It's nearing the end, and I feel more eager because of that. There's always a lot of pressure playing Martina but I know we are very closely matched."

The 28-year-old Navratilova is going for her fourth consecutive Wimbledon singles crown and sixth overall.

Like McEnroe, she has been at the top of the sport for many years.

"I can relate to what McEnroe's going through," Navratilova said. "My advice to him would be to play less and take more time off between tournaments and try to do other things besides just playing tennis."

Fleming's interpretation of McEnroe's shocking defeat was that the temperamental left-hander had too much on his mind when he was blasted off the court by Curren.

"He was not so much tired as lost or bewildered," Fleming said. "Therefore he had no confidence and was not the player we are accustomed to seeing.

"Even if John exaggerates a little, the fact that in his mind there are things disturbing him, that inhibits him. If you are tense about things, nothing flows."

A thunderstorm dumped heavy rains on the All England Club Friday afternoon just as the first men's semifinal match of the Wimbledon tennis championships was scheduled to begin.

A flood of water eascaded down the steps on Centre Court and visibility was so limited that it was almost impossible to see across the street.

Heavy winds, lightning and thunder accompanied the dowpour, as spectators huddled under the concession tents and inside the buildings on the grounds.

The grounds crew, which had covered the court before the rain began, rushed to raise the center of the tarpaulin so the water would run off to the sides.

The first semifinal was to pit second-seeded Jimmy Connors, twice a champion on the grass courts here, against fellow American Kevin Curren, the eighth seed who upset top-seeded John McEnroe in the quarterfinals. West Germany's 17-year-old Boris Becker was to play No. 5 seed Anders Jarryd of Sweden.

Astro's Ryan Express hurtling toward 4,000 K milestone

HOUSTON (AP) — Atlanta's Pat Jarvis started it all when he struck out against flamethrowing 19-year-old Nolan Ryan of the New York Mets on Sept. 11, 1966.

It was Ryan's first major league strikeout and the start of a phenomenal string of batters' swings and misses that is still continuing.

San Diego's Bobby Brown was the latest to feel the sting of Ryan's arsenal when he fanned in a game Monday to become the 3,990th strikeout victim of Ryan's 17-year career.

Ryan will pitch again Saturday night against Montreal in the Astrodome with a chance to become the first pitcher to reach the 4,000-strikeout milestone.

Ryan, 38, was the leader of an assault on a record many experts thought would never be broken — Walter Johnson's career strikeout total of 3,508 that stood for 56 years until Ryan broke it April 27, 1983 by fanning Montreal's Brad Mills.

Philadelphia's Steve Carlton and Seattle's Gaylord Perry also surpassed Johnson and suddenly the unbreakable record has been broken by three pitchers.

Three other active pitchers, Chicago's Tom Seaver, New York's Phil Niekro and Oakland's Don Sutton, also are well over 3,000 career strikeouts.

How could such an unreachable goal be ecliped by three pitchers after it had stood for more than half a century?

Ryan says it's better conditioning and nutrition. Philadelphia pitching coach Claude Osteen suggests it's because some of the game's hitting stars have retired from the game.

"We're just in one of those cycles where people are pitching longer," Ryan said. "I think it's from the fact that we are benefitting from increased knowledge in nutrition and conditioning.

"Athletes are more advanced today than they were 20 years ago when I came into the league."

Ryan has trained meticulously throughout his career, especially during the off-season.

"There is a new generation of players," Osteen said. "In the National League, four, five, six years ago, every club had superstars. Chicago had Billy Williams, Ron Santo, Ernie Banks. Cincinnati had (Johnny) Bench, (Pete) Rose, (Tony) Perez, (Joe) Morgan.

"That generation has been weeded out and replaced by all new players. Inexperienced hitters are undisciplined hitters and undiciplined hitters swing at a lot of balls. Consequently, you end up with a lot of strikeouts."

Ryan disagrees.

"I struck out a out more people in the 70s than I have in the 80s," Ryan said. "I faced probably as many Hall of Famers or future Hall of Famers in the period I've pitched as any pitcher that's pitched in the big leagues."

Osteen also thinks pitchers coming into the major leagues are more versatile.

"They're coming out of college with more than two pitches," Osteen said. "In addition to a slider and refined curve ball, they also have trick pitches, unorthodox pitches, good screw balls, fork balls, palm ball, split finger fastballs and a variety of off-speed pitches."

Carlton, currently on the disabled list with 3,908, and Ryan, became effective strikeout pitchers when they developed their breaking pitches, Tim McCarver, Carlton's former catcher says.

"Back then, he (Ryan) couldn't get the breaking ball over, so you had to wait on the fast ball," McCarver said. "Carlton didn't develop the slider until 1969 about the same time Ryan developed the ability to get the breaking ball over."

Sacks cruises in Firecracker 400 victory

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Sports crowds tend to love an underdog and the fans at Daytona International Speedway were quick to jump on Greg Sacks' bandwagon when he moved in front of superstar Bill Elliott midway through the Pepsi Firecracker 400.

"I knew the crowd was behind me," the jubilant Sacks said Thursday after winning his first Grand National stock car race. "Every time I came by the stands after I got near the front there were arms waving out through the fence and people with thumbs up and waving me on. What a feeling."

It was an incredible victory for the 32-year-old driver from Mattituck, N.Y., who had never finished better than sixth in 40 previous Grand National starts and whose own family-backed team ran out of operating money in May.

Sacks, who earned a career-high $45,350 for the victory, was at Daytona as part of a new research and development effort organized by Bill Gardner, who along with his brother, Jim, owns the DiGard team that fields a car for 1983 Winston Cup champion Bobby Allison.

Gary Nelson, who recently took over the research and development effort full time for Gardner, giving up his team manager duties with Allison, headed a rag-tag pit crew that helped Sacks to victory in the group's first race together.

They beat the red-hot team of Bill Elliott and his brother-crew chief-engine builder, Ernie, who had combined for seven victories in the last nine races on superspeedways — tracks one mile or more in length.

"We had one fellow on the crew who is from New Zealand and had never even been to a Grand National race before," explained Nelson, who acted as a tire changer during the event. "It was almost less than a skeleton crew. Greg was just running so good he was able to make up on the track what we cost him in the pits."

Elliot commanded much of the 160-lap race after fellow front-row starter Cale Yarborough went out with a broken transmission after only 24 laps around the 2.5-mile, high-banked oval.

Sacks led the first time on lap 45 under a caution flag, but it was on lap 100 when he caused the first real stir in the crowd by catching and passing Elliott's intimidating Ford Thunderbird.

Defending champ leads Canadian

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — Defending champion Greg Norman overpowered the par-5 holes on the way to a 5-under-par 67 Thursday that provided him with a share of the lead after the first round of the $650,000 Canadian Open Golf Tournament.

Norman was tied for the lead with Jim Gallagher, who has won twice this season on the Tournament Players Series, a secondary circuit, but has played infrequently on the PGA tour.

Norman, known as "The Great White Shark," reached three of the long holes using irons for his second shot, got in a greenside bunker in the other and played those four holes five under par with three birdies and an eagle. He missed a second eagle when he 2-putted from five feet on the 16th hole.

"I got excited. It's nice to feel the adrenelin flowing again," said Norman, who was slowed by illness early in the year and has been fighting a balky putter in recent weeks.

Gallagher reeled off one string of three consecutive birdies, chipped in for another one, and had the lead alone until he bogeyed his final hole.

Johnny Miller finished eagle-par-birdie for a 68 that put him alone in third.

"I've finished three shots out the last two tournaments I've played. I've had a good record here. To tell you the truth, I've kind of been pointing for this one, thinking it's a tournament I can win," said Miller, a former U.S. and British Open champion who hasn't won in two long years.

Bruce Lietzke, a 2-time Canadian Open winner, led a group at 69 that also included leading money-winner Curtis Strange, Allen Miller, Brett Upper, Bob Tway and Pat McGowan.

Jack Nicklaus, who designed the Glen Abbey Golf Club course in suburban Toronto as a permanent home for the Canadian Open, shot a 70 in pursuit of the biggest title that has eluded him. A 6-time runner-in this event, he has yet to win it.

"I'd love to win the Canadian. That's one reason I keep coming back. I just hope I'm not still coming back when I'm 80," Nicklaus said.

Dan Halldorson, with a 71, led the 25-man Canadian field.

Norman's round was centered on the long holes. He came out of a greenside bunker on the fifth and dropped an 18-foot putt for birdie. On the 13th, he hit a 1-iron to 12 feet and made the eagle putt. He needed only a 4-iron to reach the 16th and 2-putted from five feet for birdie. And he 2-putted for birdie on the 18th after hitting an 8-iron for his second shot on the 500-yard hole.

Gallagher chipped in from 30 feet for birdie on his fifth hole, had a string of three in a row later and was the sole leader until he missed the green and bogeyed his final hole.

Mets win marathon in 19th

By The Associated Press

The New York Mets have played some long and whacky baseball games in their colorful existence, so any claim that a 19-inning victory over the Atlanta Braves was the most eventful bears careful scrutiny.

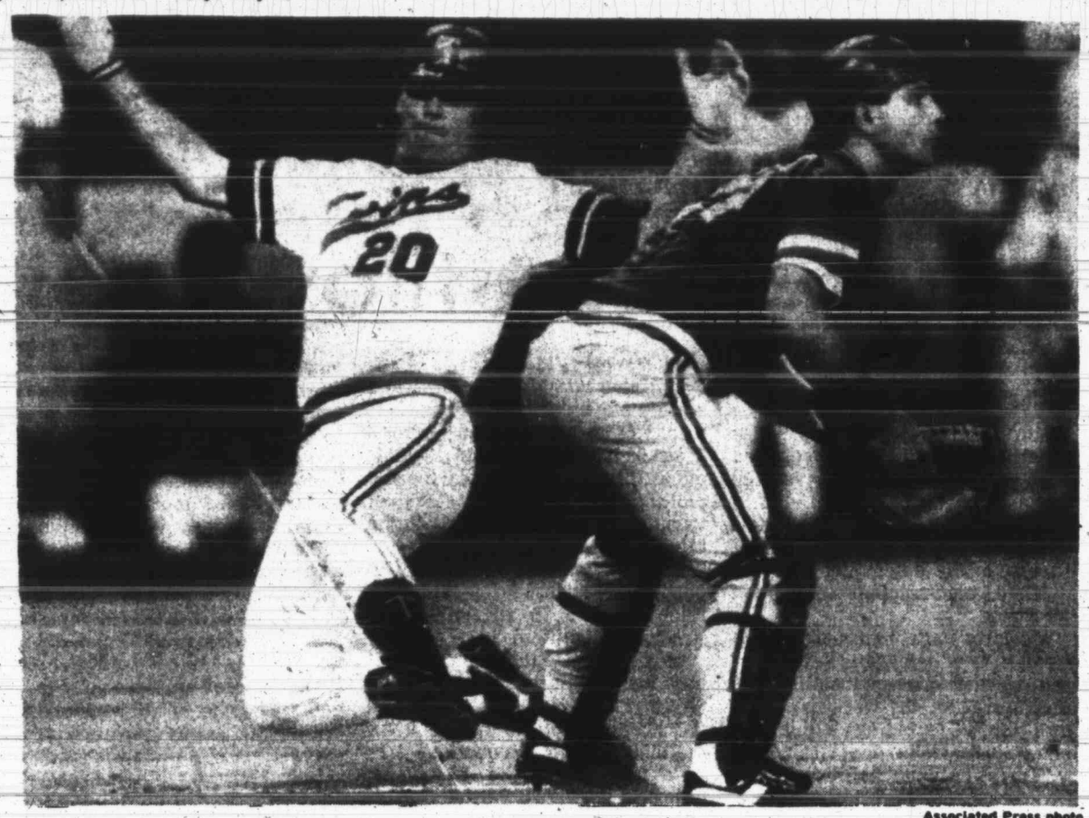

But the 6-hour, 10-minute game — which started Thursday night and was extended into the wee hours of the morning by two rain delays and a pair of two-out, two-strike, game-tying home runs by Atlanta — won't soon be forgotten by those who witnessed it.

"It was the most unbelievable game I have ever seen or been involved in," said Ray Knight, whose two-run double keyed the five-run 19th that led the Mets to a 16-13 victory.

"I saw things I had never seen in a game before in my career," said 12-year veteran Keith Hernandez, only the second Met ever to hit for the cycle. "At the 17th inning, I felt that I just had to call somebody. I called my brother Gary and told him that I just wanted him to know I was still out there playing."

And then there was winning pitcher Tom Gorman, who kept thrilling the dwindling thousands — not to mention Atlanta's Rick Camp and Terry Harper — each time he was within one strike of closing it out.

"I thought then I had seen it all," Gorman said. "I had two strikes on Harper (in the 13th inning) and he hit it out, and then I had two on Camp (in the 18th) and he hit it out."

NL Roundup

Normalcy prevailed elsewhere in the National League on Thursday night. It was St. Louis 3, Los Angeles 2; San Diego 9, Pittsburgh 1; San Francisco 6, Chicago 4; Philadelphia 3, Cincinnati 1; and Montreal 9, Houston 3 in 12 innings.

New York tied the game 8-8 in the ninth on an infield single by Len Dykstra off Atlanta relief ace Bruce Sutter.

Then Johnson gave the Mets the lead with a two-run homer in the 13th off Terry Forster.

Padres 9, Pirates 1

It was a sad day for baseball in Pittsburgh where the Pirates, last in the league in attendance and victories, suffered humiliation both on the field and at the box office.

Garry Templeton drove in four runs, three with a sixth-inning double, and Eric Show, 7-5, scattered seven hits as San Diego handed Pittsburgh its fourth straight loss before a derisive holiday crowd of 10,102 at Three Rivers Stadium.

Giants 6, Cubs 4

Bob Brenly is not an accomplished bunter, and he took the Giants out of a possible second-inning rally when he failed to sacrifice. But his 10th homer of the season, a two-run shot off Steve Trout in the fourth, and his run-scoring single in the eighth led a San Francisco comeback.

The Cubs had taken a 3-0 lead on Chris Speier's run-scoring double in the second inning and Ryne Sandberg's two-run homer in the third, his 10th. Sandberg has now hit in 16 consecutive games.

Phillies 3, Reds 1

Philadelphia's Kevin Gross wasn't feeling well when he arose, but it wasn't reflected in his pitching.

Gross, 7-7, tossed a three-hitter and Juan Samuel, Von Hayes and Ozzie Virgil hit solo homers off Cincinnati's Mario Soto.

But Gross, who pitched his second consecutive complete game, got early support when Samuel hit his seventh homer and Hayes his eighth in the first inning. Virgil had his 11th in the sixth.

Expos 9, Astros 3

It took 12 innings, but Montreal muscled its way past Houston with Tim Wallach's three-run homer highlighting a six-run final inning. Wallach hit his fifth homer off Bill Dawley, who relieved loser Frank DiPino.

The Expo offense had been limited to rookie Mitch Webster's second and third homers, which drove in all three runs. Webster has had only 31 major league at-bats.

Yankees keep July 4 streak intact

By The Associated Press

The New York Yankeesjust can't seem to lose on the Fourth of July. The way Ron Guidry is pitching, he can't lose on any day.

Both the team and the player continued relentless streaks Thursday in a 3-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins — the Yankees winning their eighth straight game on Independence Day and Guidry winning his ninth straight this season.

"We knew we had enough for 'Gator' in the first inning," said Ken Griffey, whose single helped the Yankees score three runs right off the bat.

Guidry's 10-3 record is his best start since his 25-3 season of 1978, when he won the Cy Young Award.

The last time the Yankees lost on July 4 was in 1975, when they were beaten by Baltimore. They were rained out in 1978 and the 1981 season was interrupted by a strike.

In other American League games, it was Chicago 5, Cleveland 0; Seattle 7, Milwaukee 1; Texas 4, Detroit 1; Baltimore 5, Kansas City 3; California 5, Boston 4; and Oakland 3, Toronto 2.

Guidry, whose streak is the longest by a pitcher in the AL this season, hurled a six-hitter.

The Yankees bunched four hits in the first inning to score three runs off John Butcher, 5-8, who lost for the sixth time in his last seven decisions. Don Mattingly drove home one run with his league-leading 23rd double, another scored on Don Baylor's single and a third came home on Willie Randolph's sacrifice fly.

and Carlton Fisk collected two hits and knocked in a run to lead Chicago over Cleveland, only the third victory for the struggling White Sox in their last 14 games.

Burns, 8-6, struck out five and walked two while pitching his fourth complete game and second shutout of the season. The left-hander has defeated Cleveland three times this season without allowing a run in 23 innings. Burns pitched the first five innings of a 4-0 shutout over Cleveland on May 8 before pitching a complete-game, 8-0 shutout on May 13.

Bert Blyleven, 7-8, took the loss despite pitching his league-leading 11th complete game. Blyleven gave up eight hits as Cleveland lost for the 39th time in 53 games since May 4.

Mariners 7, Brewers 1

Mike Moore hurled a four-hitter and Dave Henderson hit a three-run homer to lead Seattle over Milwaukee.

Moore, 7-4, retired the first 17 batters and didn't allow a runner to reach second base until the seventh when Cecil Cooper doubled with one out. Ted Simmons singled home Cooper for the Brewers' only run.

The Mariners put together 13 hits, three each by Ivan Calderon, Barry Bonnell and Bob Kearney, to pin the loss on Moose Haas, 7-4. Henderson knocked in four runs altogether.

Rangers 4, Tigers 1

Burt Hooton pitched a six-hitter and Pete O'Brien knocked in two runs to lead Texas over Detroit. Hooton was backed by the defensive play of third baseman Buddy Bell, who made three good plays to rob Detroit batters of hits.

Hooton, 4-2, walked two and struck out seven, a season high. Loser Walt Terrell, 9-4, went all the way for the Tigers, walking three and striking out two.

The victory, Hooton's 150th career win, came in front of 42,445, the second largest crowd in Rangers' history.

Orioles 5, Royals 3

Floyd Rayford and Eddie Murray drove in two runs apiece, powering Baltimore over Kansas City. Dennis Martinez, 7-5, was the winner with 5 2-3 innings of six-hit pitching, leaving after giving up a three-run homer to Darryl Motley in the sixth.

Nate Snell finished up for the Orioles, recording his fourth save. Royals starter Bud Black, 5-9, suffered his sixth straight loss.

"Snell was outstanding," said Baltimore Manager Earl Weaver. "We've won four out of our last six. Now we need to take four out of the next six."

Angels 5, Red Sox 4

Jerry Narron's three-run homer in the seventh inning lifted California over Boston before an Anaheim Stadium crowd of 62,951, the major league's largest of the season.

With Boston leading 4-2, Bobby Grich and Doug DeCinces delivered one-out singles off Dennis Boyd, 9-7, before Narron hit his fifth homer.

Rookie reliever Pat Clements, 5-0, was the winner with last-inning relief help from Donnie Moore, who posted his 16th save.

A's 3, Blue Jays 2

Former Blue Jay Dave Collins' single scored Mike Heath from third with the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning, leading Oakland over visiting Toronto before a holiday turnout of 46,770.

Reliever Bill Caudill, 4-4, the fourth Toronto pitcher, had worked out of a bases-loaded jam in the eighth inning before giving up the winning run in the ninth.

The A's took an early lead in the third on Bruce Bochte's fourth homer.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Your Daily HOROSCOPE from the CARROLL RIGHTER INSTITUTE

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, JULY 6, 1985

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is a Saturday when you need to be careful that you do not go flying off on various tangents that can make it a non-productive time for you. Organize your day efficiently.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Do something constructive about any worries you may have since running away from them could worsen the situation.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Do not argue with good friends because you want your own way and you safeguard the relationships. Be objective.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Not a good day to handle civic or credit matters since others could prove very disappointing. A bigwig is not in a good mood.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Some trip you plan today could yield you nothing, so handle the work at hand and you gain much.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Put aside that worry and concentrate on whatever will flow smoothly for you and get much done. Formulate new plans.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Long talks with partners now could interfere with production, so postpone them. Avoid one who irritates you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You could find it difficult to carry through with plans to improve your surroundings today. Your partner is uncooperative today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Be more willing to go along with whatever is current, also where amusements are concerned. Don't be too forceful with others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try to get home matters well-handled and make the improvements at home that are needed. Steer clear of arguments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Be very careful with your wallet when out shopping today or tonight. Make sure your car is running smoothly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't do anything that can add expense where real estate and other possessions are concerned. Avoid confusion at home.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You could feel disappointed today because nothing seems to go right for you, but you are really better off than you think.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be happiest when making occasional changes in employment and meeting the challenge intelligently, so don't try to hold your youngster down to one straight course, be it in personal or business life.

The Rev. Richard Vera has been elected president of the Mexican Baptist Convention of Texas. The Southern Baptist Convention was held June 24-26 in San Antonio.

Vera is a native of Big Spring and pastor of the Calvario Baptist Church in Dallas.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Some little children were registered as voting "messengers" at the recent Southern Baptist Convention in Dallas, says registration secretary Lee Porter.

He estimates "75 to 100 children 6 years of age or younger" were registered from local churches, including one 4-year-old. He notes that the denomination's constitution provides only that "messengers" must be a member of the local church that sends them, and sets no age requirements.

"There's nothing we can do," he says, adding that it's up to local churches to set their own criteria.

Porter also says at least nine persons reported people passing out extra ballot cards prior to a controversial vote, and that about 12 to 15 others complained they saw some persons voting more than one ballot.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Reform rabbis have voiced "moral outrage" at the continued holding of seven kidnapped Americans in Lebanon and at the ordeal of the airline hostages released this week.

The convention of the Central Conference of American Rabbis condemned "those kidnappers and murderers masquerading as political idealists, who have threatened lives and torn families apart in these recent situations."

Rabbi Jack Stern of Scarsdale, N.Y., was elected president of the conference, succeeding Rabbi W. Gunther Plaut of Toronto.

WASHINGTON (AP) The U.S. Catholic Conference is backing efforts of the Federal Communications Coimmission to restrict use of telephone lines for transmitting obscene materials, such as "dial-a-porn" messages.

Such "services" are a "corrupting influence upon youth" and infringe on the "basic right of parents to direct the upbringing of their children," the conference said in testimony submitted to the FCC.

AMES, Iowa (AP) — The Rev. Avery D. Post has been re-elected president of the United Church of Christ, a post he has held since 1977. The biennial general synod of the 1.7 million-member denomination also re-elected Charles W. Lockyear as treasurer, and elected a Wichita, Kan., attorney, Kenneth P. Stewart, as moderator.

CHURCH COOPERATIVE — Kelli Swindell and John Swann rehearse for their wedding with John Allen, director of the Hopkins County Co-op Parish. The two-year-old parish recently won the first Marvin T. Judy Award for Excellence in Rural Ministry.

Co-op parish applies old principle

SULPHUR SPRINGS (AP) — A group of small Hopkins County United Methodist churches has been honored for its modern application of an old principle — working together for the common good.

The two-year-old Hopkins County Cooperative Parish recently won the first Marvin T. Judy Award for Excellence in Rural Ministry awarded by the United Methodist Board of Church Development of the North Texas Conference.

The Rev. John Allen directs the cooperative parish, made up of five small churches — Como, Arbala, Reilly Springs, Gafford Chapel and Pickton — that function both independently and together to meet the needs of their rural communities.

The circuit-riding minister serving more than one small church was a tradition in pioneer America, and the cooperative parish is a modern refinement of the idea.

"For 20 years in this area," he said, "the way Methodist churches reacted to diminishing parishes was to combine churches, and people didn't like this."

Marvin T. Judy began studying ways to alleviate this dissatisfaction, Allen said, and a cooperative parish is one solution he came up with. Judy came into this area over two years ago and helped the churches that now make up the Hopkins County Cooperative Parish (HCCP) decide to become a co-op.

Allen was asked to help set it up. A native of Northeast Texas and graduate of Southern Methodist University's Perkins School of Theology, he came to Como two years ago from First United Methodist Church in Wichita Falls where he was assistant pastor.

"They were given a choice to join," Allen said. "This way the churches have a vested interest and are not forced to participate."

There was only one cooperative parish in this area before the creation of the HCCP, Allen said. It is in North Lamar and has been there for 10 years.

Five more began in Northeast Texas last year, and two inner-city cooperative parishes were formed in Dallas.

Many small, rural churches have had trouble keeping a sizable congregation because there are usually too few people to participate in many normal church activities, Allen said.

A cooperative parish maintains the small-church atmosphere and each church's individuality, Allen explained, but the churches work together on ministries that take more people.

For example, each church in the HCCP conducts its own weddings, funerals, worship services, Sunday school classes and vacation Bible schools.

But they cooperate on a newsletter, youth group, children's choir, men's group and older adults' group. The churches also hold joint social events four or five times a year.

"We do together what these churches wouldn't ordinarily be able to do on their own," Allen said.

"Much that we do is just to enable groups to get together," he said. "It alleviates the frustrations of having too few to do things.

"This co-op has encouraged enthusiam and cooperation," Allen said, "because they know people will show up and participate, whereas before there might have been only a few."

Attendance is up in each church by about 30 percent, Allen said. All churches had seen significant decreases in attendance for 10 years prior to the creation of the HCCP.

The HCCP also enables better pastoral care, according to Allen. Before, only Como and Pickton had full-time pastors, and now Allen and his assistant, John Hicks, provide pastoral services for each of the five churches.

Both pastors share the full-time preaching duties. One week one of them preaches at 10 a.m. in Pickton and 11 a.m. in Como, while the other preaches at 9, 10 and 11 a.m. at Arbala, Reilly Springs and Gafford Chapel. The next week they switch.

The cooperative parish has had positive effects on the churches involved in areas other than attendance.

"I think there is still room for growth," Allen said. "It just depends on how hard we want to work."

"It has been challenging and rewarding," he said about serving and directing the HCCP, "and the people have been so good. Any success we're seeing is because of the prayerful, supportive work the laity have done.

"They have put their hearts, minds and souls into their work."

The Unpardonable Sin
Among the subjects that Bible sudents have found of special interest; and over which speculation and controversy has risen, is "The Unpardonable Sin — Blashphemy Against the Holy Ghost." Join us for a study of this fascinating subject during worship Sunday Morning.

Laymen to speak at Nazarene Church

Sunday's emphasis at the First Church of the Nazarene will be focused on laymen. Three laymen, Pete Rosenbaum, Jack Powers and Tommy Welch, will share their faith at the 10:50 a.m. service, telling how stability and assurance result from Christian commitment.

Children's Church begins at 10:50 a.m. in Kids' Korner. It provides a worship experience for kindergartners and youngsters in grades one through five.

The 6 p.m. "Celebration of Praise" combines special music, the reJoice Choir and congregational singing in an expression of praise. Speaker for this week's evening service will be the Rev. Helen Doll.

Smallwood leads skit, 'My Treasures'

Elsie Smallwood lead a skit, "My Treasures," at the Monday meeting of the Women of First Church of God. The meeting was held in the church's sanctuary.

Betty Reagan and Kathryn Thomas presented the treasurers of family, friends, accomplishments and treasured blessings of the Women of First Church of God.

Anna Smith and Renae Loy reported on the recent international convention held in Anderson, Ind.

Representing the local church unit at the Texas Camp Meeting in Eastland July 9-14 will be Smith, Reagan, Thomas, Ethel Hickson, Frances Miller, Smallwood and the Rev. and Mrs. Delmer Loy.

The next meeting will be the Annual Prayer Retreat Aug. 12 at the church.

St. Paul to host handbell hymn festival

The handbell choir of Trinity Lutheran Church from Spring, Texas, will have a handbell hymn festival Sunday at St. Paul Lutheran Church, 9th and Scurry.

The festival, beginning at 7 p.m., will include handbell solos, congregational hymn singing and organ solos performed by director Melvin Schiwart.

St. Paul Lutheran will host a contemporary Christian singing duet, New Creation, at 8 p.m. Thursday. The public is invited to both events.

Unity House of Prayer initiated

On June 22, Unity House of Prayer was initiated as a continuation of the ministry of the New Thought Center.

The ministry will be of interest to persons of the Religious Science, Eastern Thought, Unity and Quaker persuasions. Persons who believe in the unity of the Spirit of Christ also may be interested. A group meets for on Sundays at 7 p.m. for study.

Activities for the ministry are held at 1104 S. Benton. For more information call 263-6311 in the evening or on weekends.

PUBLIC NOTICE

IN COMPLIANCE WITH THE MAXIMUM CONTAMINATE LEVELS FOR TRIHALOMETHANES

The City of Big Spring is required under the Safe Drinking Water Act to reduce the maximum contaminate levels for Trihalomethanes below the 100 micrograms per liter limit. In order to comply with this public law the City of Big Spring will convert to the use of Chloramines as a disinfectant in the treatment processes and to maintain a residual throughout the distribution system. The combination of chlorine with ammonia does not allow the chlorine to alternately combine with the naturally occurring organic acids to form Trihalomethanes. Thus, the system will be able to be incompliance with the maximum contaminate levels for Trihalomethanes.

The change from the previous routines of water treatment to the use of Chloramines at the treatment plant can cause serious problems to persons dependent on dialysis machines then Carbon Filters are not employed to prepare for the dialysate. A condition known as Hemolyticanemia can occur. Therefore, the general public is hereby placed on notice that on July 15, 1985, the water treatment with process within the City of Big Spring water system will convert to the use of Chloramines as a disinfectant. Dialysis patents may be affected by this change, therefore, it is imperative that the pretreamtent scheme used for dialysis units provides some means such as, charcoal filters for the removal of the chlorinating (disinfecting) agent. In addition, the use of Chloramines for disinfecting the potable water system will require different pre-treatment prior to being utilized in aquariums and other uses where the disinfectant agent would prove a hazard to the proposed use. Anyone having any questions with respect to this process, are urged to contact the Director of Public Works or the Big Spring Health Department.

A special message from Bill Moyers for minorities about careers in journalism

Bill Moyers
Broadcast Journalist

Twenty-five years ago, the civil rights movement suddenly was the big story of the times. But although America's racial minorities were making the news, few of them were in journalism to report the news. I watched the second American revolution crack the barriers of legal discrimation. A lot has changed since then. Unfortunately, one thing hasn't changed.

There still are not many members of minority groups working in the news business. Too few have taken a chance on a career in journalism and too few have been given the chance to take.

If you belong to a racial minority and would like to consider a career as a news professional, call this number for more information free from the Society of Professional Journalists: 1 (800) 331-1750. Ask for Operator 128. In Nebraska call 1 (800) 343-4300.

Remember, minorities need journalism and journalism needs minorities.
