TEXARKANANS WILL FIGHT FOR RECALL

VAUGHAN ANNOUNCES INTENTION TO LEAD FIGHT TO PASS THE CHARTER BILL.

COLQUITT IS DETERMINED

Executive Notices Interested Parties That We Intend to Endeavor to Change His Views on Matter.

Austin, Texas, Feb. 4.—Governor Colquitt's views upon the initiative, referendum and recall will result in an effort to have the Texarkana city charter bill containing those provisions carried over his veto.

Senator Vaughan returned today from Texarkana, where there was a mass meeting upon the question and it was intimated that the commission form of government was not wanted without the recall.

In considering the proposition the meeting voted first upon a charter with the initiative and referendum provisions, second upon the recall. The recall received a bigger vote of approval than the charter with the initiative and referendum clause alone.

Vaughan called upon Governor Colquitt today in regard to the matter and the chairman of the Texarkana charter committee called him over long distance telephone to discuss the advisability of having a delegation come to Austin to confer with him relative to the approval of the charter with the initiative, referendum and recall propositions intact.

Colquitt informed both the chairman of the charter committee and Vaughan that it would be a useless expense to send to Austin a delegation to urge the approval of the Texarkana charter with recall in it as he will veto such a charter.

Vaughan, after the conference announced that it was his intention to make an effort to carry the charter over the Governor's veto. To do this he will take a two-thirds vote and the Governor does not believe it will be forthcoming.

Vaughan says that he regrets very much to have to make a fight upon the Governor, but that he wishes to see the will of the majority of his constituency carried out and that he will make a vigorous effort in that direction. However, it may be said without violating any confidences that he doubts very much that he will succeed.

Governor Colquitt will soon send to the Legislature another message to show the condition of the State finances. This message will go in just as soon as the various subcommittees of the two finance committees return and complete their estimates of the needs of the various State institutions. He gave notice that he would submit a special message upon the question of finances when he submitted his first message. He has collected a vast amount of data along this line, and all of it will be contained in a special message.

A special message upon penitentiary system and the laws governing it in which Governor Colquitt is to make recommendation for certain changes, will also be forthcoming just as soon as the legislative committee returns from its inspection of the State's penal institutions. Material for this message has also been gathered by the Governor and it promises to be interesting.

It was indicated several days ago that redistricting of the State is very doubtful. This idea is continuing to grow daily. Governor Colquitt will not call a special session for this purpose in the information, and it is said that he doubts himself that the Legislature will pass a suitable redistricting bill. Congress has not fixed the basis of apportionment for the congressional districts and no steps have been taken relative to the representative and senatorial districts.

WORK ON OIL WELL HAS BEEN RESUMED

Work has been resumed on the oil well being put down near Floral Heights by Messrs. Marlow & Stone and their associates and will be pushed to completion as fast as conditions will admit. Considerable trouble has been encountered since this work was begun and as a climax to the disadvantages under which the men have labored the drill was hung in the old hole, rendering it necessary to abandon that well. However, a new hole has been started just thirty feet from the former well and the work is progressing in a very satisfactory manner.

In discussing the matter with a Times reporter yesterday afternoon Messrs. Marlow and Stone stated that they intended to dig the well without a doubt and would not stop short of a thorough test of this section for oil or gas. They have faith in the proposition, and those who are acquainted with these gentlemen will know that they will back their judgment to the fullest extent. In this connection they are anxious to have the co-operation of all those who originally subscribed to the stock of the company organized in order that there may be no delay in carrying on this important work.

By Pharr for the publication of contributions to campaign funds.

By Henry providing for the management of public schools by the trustees of the district.

By Hamilton of Childress for a foreign and domestic corporation franchise tax.

ARCHER CITY TO OWN WATER WORKS

ELECTION TO VOTE BONDS WILL BE CALLED AT NEXT MEETING OF CITY COUNCIL.

NONE OPPOSE THE MOVE

Supply Will Come from Huge Reservoir in Which Storm Water Will Be Impounded.

Special to The Times. Archer City, Texas, Feb. 4.—At the regular meeting of the Archer City city council on the 3rd Monday in February an election to vote bonds for a city water works system will be ordered. This was unanimously agreed at a mass meeting of citizens together with the members of the council one night this week. The amount of the bond issue has not been decided but will be sufficient to give the town a first-class water works system.

It is proposed to provide a water supply by impounding the surface water near the city in a huge reservoir which can be secured by building a dam across one of the ravines above the city. This will give an inexhaustible water supply.

DIRECT ELECTION QUESTION IN SENATE

IS NOW PENDING BUSINESS DESPITE FILIBUSTER BY OLD GUARD MEMBERS.

PASSAGE IS DOUBTFUL

Preliminary skirmish Shows Friends of Measure Apparently in Majority, But Vote Will Be Close.

Washington, Feb. 4.—The United States Senate after a short, ineffectual open filibuster against the resolution providing for the popular election of Senators, acceded this afternoon to Senator Borah's insistent demand to make that resolution the unfinished business of the Senate.

After the disposition of the ship subsidy bill yesterday, Senator Nelson called up his Alaska coal and oil bill, and today attempted to make it the unfinished business, but the Senate by a vote of 41 yeas to 36 yeas refused to take up the matter. The Republican, Senator Borah, moved to make the election of Senators resolution the unfinished business. Immediately there were filibuster motions to get into executive session and to adjourn, which on roll call were defeated by the narrow majorities of 4 and 5 votes.

Senator Borah insisted on a roll call on his motion to make his resolution the unfinished business, and the "Old Guard," seeing that they were doomed to defeat, gave up the filibuster, and at the suggestion of Senator Hale adopted, without roll call, the Borah motion.

With this preliminary victory for the resolution, by which it must be laid before the Senate every afternoon at 2 o'clock, Senator Borah said he would not press for a vote until after several Senators, who intended to speak on it next week, have had a chance to discuss it.

While this brings the Senate practically face to face with a vote on the resolution, there is still considerable doubt whether the measure will pass. The outlook is that the vote, if it can be forced before March 4, will be a very close one. The advocates of the resolution, nevertheless, are much encouraged by their success today in forcing the measure on the Senate calendar, as the pending unfinished business of the body.

RESENTS A SPEECH JEROME DELIVERED

Lawyer Invited to Repeat Assertion That New York Jurist Is "Half Baked."

New York, Feb. 4.—Judge Edward Swann, presiding judge of the trial of John G. Robins, the alleged bank wrecker, whom William Travers Jerome, in a speech called a "half baked judge holding office by grace of Charles Murphy," indicated today that he will prosecute the lawyer for his remarks.

"If it can be shown to me," he said, "that Jerome knew a reporter was present and taking notes with the intention of publishing his speech last night before the Academy of Medicine I will get so swiftly that I am ashamed to tell you what will happen. There won't be any fine, but I'll give you his cell number."

The meeting of the former district attorney and Judge Swann was attended with great interest by many lawyers as well as a large crowd of non-professional spectators, among them jurors whom Jerome in the same speech last night called "a rag tag jury," because they found counter to the opinion of allentists and declared Robins sane. Judge Swann had complimented the jurors on the verdict and for their "horse sense," and it was this commendation that drew down the wrath of Jerome. Robins' counsel.

Wichita Falls, Texas, February 4, 1911.

The Electric merchants have announced that they will give a special sale and trades day on the first Saturday in each month. They are making special efforts to secure the farming trade in that section. Their co-operation and enterprise are commendable and no doubt will bring the results they merit.

The Times started out several weeks ago to publish the news of the development in the Wichita country. So many reports of new enterprises have come in that it has been found necessary to enlarge the paper to print all the news that has been received and some items have been left out. It is a difficult undertaking to keep up with the progress of this section.

According to reliable authority the volume of business transacted by the "Katy" railroad at Wichita Falls ranks fourth of all the stations in Texas, not excepting such places as Dallas, Fort Worth, San Antonio and Galveston. This being true, the patrons and friends of that road in this city are entitled to and should receive a much better service than it has so far been disposed to give this city. Wichita Falls, it is true, is the terminal of one of its branch lines, but that should not mean that it is necessary to place in service on this branch line the cast-off rolling stock and equipment that have outlived their usefulness on the main line. The Katy deserves to be treated, and in return for fair treatment should render its patrons good service.

Greenville is one of the many prosperous and growing little cities in Texas. Her streets, which a few years ago were so muddy and boggy during the wet season that it was impossible to use them, are now paved with brick from one end to the other in the business section and that means that on one street, at least, the business section covers nine blocks. The city has used more brick and mortar during the past few years in the construction of buildings than for twenty-four years prior to that time, and there is a desirable tenant for every desirable building; her merchants carry good stocks; her streets are crowded with shoppers and not a beggar was to be seen during the winter's four days' visit to that thriving, bustling, little commercial metropolis. Greenville is often referred to as a "dead one," but if she is dead, then the same thing which it is said that killed her should by all means be extended to some other towns.

Owing to the great pressure brought to bear on its advertising columns today The Times is forced to come out in twenty-page form, and even with the extra edition, many ads were refused for the reason that they came in too late and could not be handled in the composing room. This was disappointing to those whose ads could not be given insertion, but in order to guarantee insertion, advertising matter intended for Saturday's paper should be handed into the business office not later than Friday noon. The Times trusts its patrons will bear this in mind in the future.

The Times prints in today's issue a fourteen column double page cut in one piece, showing a panoramic view of Wichita Falls as it appears today. This is probably the first time such a cut has ever been published in a newspaper in Texas. The Dallas News, the Fort Worth Record, and other papers have sometimes published cuts of this kind, but have been compelled to print them in two separate pieces, because they did not have the equipment for handling a double page cut. The Times is equipped to handle almost anything in the printing line.

The most luxurious prison in Japan, about fifteen miles from Tokyo. The cells are spacious and airy; the lighting throughout is by electricity, and the apartments are furnished luxuriously. Bath rooms with marble baths, hot and cold water being furnished, dressing rooms and reading rooms—nothing seems to be wanting to make the sojourn in this prison pleasant.

During the middle ages red, not black, was the color of mourning.

The Preservation of Health

A recent writer in an American magazine maintains that overwork is a greater danger to health than is dissipation.

The proposition would be somewhat hard to prove and it would be necessary to begin by an exact definition of the terms employed.

For example, does overwork mean excessive muscular exertion or an undue strain put on the mental faculties?

Then, again, where does dissipation begin? There are few persons who, in the strictest sense, are temperate and self-controlled in all their habits. At times they do not drink too much, they eat too much or too fast or partake of food that is not good for them.

The truth is that the greatest enemy to health, in general, is the lack of discipline in the individual. The activities of most men are ill regulated; there is lack of system in both their business and their pleasures.

The strain which the exigencies of modern business put on the men who are in the thick of it is undoubtedly great, but even here the menace to health which these exigencies imply is not primarily direct. The trouble is that these men want to burn the candle at both ends and the effort necessarily imposes on them unhygienic habits. When we say that the pace of modern business kills we advance a doubtful proposition. What kills is not the pace of modern business combined with self-indulgence and the performance of complex obligations.

By this we do not mean that the business man should have no other interests. On the contrary, we think that an outside interest, be it intellectual or artistic, or devotion to some form of physical exercise or sport (the latter, in any case, as far as possible) is a powerful factor in the preservation of health under adverse conditions and at the same time is an antidote to that narrowness, that atrophy of the higher faculties, that comes of a too exclusive devotion to commercial pursuits of mere money-getting.

J. Pierpont Morgan is an example of the beneficial effects of the higher culture in the maintenance of health and a cheerful temper of the mind in the midst of exacting business avocations, and the conception and execution of large financial combinations.

But to return to our magazine writer. He remarks that certain clinic experiments recently conducted in New York seem to prove "that excessive industry does more to shorten life in the majority of men than dissipation." He does, however, that the experiments and observations in questions were conducted on too small a scale to justify any general conclusion. His own conclusions are, on the whole, optimistic. He says:

To sum up: Bright's disease and other renal disturbances are probably increasing somewhat. This is only because more of us are living to be old enough so to speak, to have varied them.

The chief causes of them, apart from the necessary wear and tear of life, are muscular overwork for long hours and the use of alcohol, all of which are perfectly preventable and in fact are being rapidly prevented by industrial legislation, by sanitary improvements and by the growth of temperance and self-restraint. In other words, civilization is curing and will continue to cure the diseases which it has helped to cause.

Civilization, no doubt, is doing something in the direction indicated. But it is for the individual endowed with good or average health to do what is necessary to preserve it, and not to squander the precious treasure which, once seriously impaired can never be recovered.

General Dix is an instance of the importance of personal habits in the maintenance of health. He is, indeed, endowed with an exceptionally sound and vigorous constitution, but he owes its conservation to careful personal habits, to great abstemiousness at table, to fondness for outdoor exercises, and to method and system in the accomplishment of his daily duties.

He has had what would be called a hard life. In his youth and to an advanced period of his mature years he passed through all the fatigues, the vicissitudes and exposure incidental to campaigning; he was twice wounded, once very severely; he passed through adventures that leave their mark, that in the case of most men prematurely furrow the brow and sap the organism; yet, as we all perceive, he enjoys at 80 the vigor, physical and mental, which many men begin to lose soon after 50.

The largest volcano in the world is in the Hawaiian Islands. The crater is twenty miles in diameter, and the stream of lava flowing from it is fifty miles long and in places four miles wide.

The nut trees of the world could, it is calculated, provide food all the year round for the population of the globe. Brazil nuts grow in such profusion that thousands of tons are wasted every year.

Illustrating His Point.
The student of human nature was hanging to a strap in a subway car. Next to him "hung" a man, possibly ten years his senior. By them sat two women talking about a mutual friend—a man. The student of human nature smiled at the man next to him.
"Have you ever noticed," he said, "that when two women get together they invariably talk about men?"
"Can't say that I have," replied the other man. "Never paid much attention to the proposition."
"Well, they do. These two women right here by us are talking about a man. Notice that?"
"Yes."
"I'll bet those two down near the door are talking about men. I'll bet my life the one on this side is."
"That so?" said the older man, showing a little more interest.
"You know it," said the student of human nature. "I'd bet on her particularly because I sat near her in a car yesterday."
"Oh, you did?"
"Yes, and all the time she talked about some fellow who worried her to death, or something like that."
"That so?"
"Yes. She said she was an old fool half the time. I imagine she was talking about somebody that boards at her house."
"Why?"
"Well, she said he came home drunk one night recently and went into the kitchen to cook himself a meal."
"Yes."
"And that he tried to fry an egg in soft soap?"
"What else did she say?"
"Oh, a lot of stuff about getting even with him by going out with Henry, or some such name. It was all about men, which merely illustrates what I said. Get two women together and they'll talk about the men almost every time. Queer isn't it?"

"Not in this case."
"Why not?"
"That woman you pointed out over there near the door is my wife."
The student of human nature was surprised. He was also somewhat confused.
"Why—er—are you the man who fried the eggs—er—oh, of course not. Well, good-bye; here's my station."
And then the student left the car in a hurry.—Hild Dudley in the New York Morning Telegraph.

ANNOUNCEMENT

Bon Ton and Royal Worcester CORSETS

In this year Nineteen-Eleven our business is going to be better than any previous year in the history of our career. You know why? Simply this: Our stock is larger, cleaner, more "up-to-now" and complete in every way. And we are going to do our best that is consistent with good business making to get and hold your trade. Business is built on confidence. We make our money off our friends—our enemies don't buy of us. To sell a person something at a price above its actual value hurts the seller because he thereby loses the confidence of the buyer.

We want to let you know that we're in a better position to serve and give you value received for every dollar you spend with us than we have ever been before. And get this: Every article that is taken out of this store is strictly guaranteed to be exactly as represented—no ifs and ands about it.

Our Spring Goods are arriving daily and our White Goods Sale starts Wednesday morning February 8th. Yours for legitimate business only,

CAPITAL WRANGLE AGAIN DISCUSSED

Oklahoma Legislature Divided on the Question of Abolishing State Capital Commission. Oklahoma City, Okla., Feb. 4.—The House, though divided on the matter, took a different stand this morning from the Senate on the State Capital commission. A few days ago a bill was introduced and acted on favorably in the Senate establishing the commission. Today the bill by Speaker Deussen came up in the House. An amendment by Herbert of Pottawatomie County to substitute the name of the board of affairs for that of the capital commission, however, was defeated by a vote of 21 to 19. The speaker declared the motion had lost, although there was scarcely any discussion of the vote. He refused a standing vote or roll call at the time. The attention of the House was then turned to a resolution that had just come from the Senate. It was by House of the Senate and asked the concurrence of the House to appoint the Governor to appoint adequate counsel to assist in defending certain election officials in the State involving the test of the grandfather clause of the election law. The resolution was adopted by a vote of 21 to 19. The district attorney's bill was passed to engrossment in the House, with amendments. It now provides that the district and county attorneys shall both be elected by the people, and that the district attorney in counties of certain population may appoint not to exceed two assistants at $1,200 each. The district attorney is also given authority to appoint a stenographer. The bill appropriates $22,000 for the pay of stenographers of the district court, including a deficiency up to June 30, 1911, was passed in the House. Also one of $14,570.40 to complete the Murray school of agriculture at Tahlequah. The bill by Jones providing that all crippled and deformed children not able to complete their education in the higher schools of the State, who have been residents of the State three years to be sent to the schools at

AUDITOR MAKES REPORT.

W. F. Fitzgerald Analyzes State Road's Condition Previous to Its Sale.

Austin, Texas, Feb. 4.—The report of W. F. Fitzgerald, auditor of the Texas railroad commission, on the Texas state railroad was made public yesterday.

Mr. Fitzgerald made his investigation by order of the railroad commission at the instance of the legislative committee. It is known to be a prelude to a possible sale of the road. The present administration desires to sell the road, and is having its condition thoroughly analyzed with that purpose in view.

NORTHWESTERN BRICK COMPANY PLANT NEARING COMPLETION—LARGE INSTITUTION

Several months ago, through the efforts of some of our enterprising citizens, ably seconded by the Chamber of Commerce, Messrs. O. E. Kender and Jno. B. Paul, two of the best known and most successful operators of brick manufacturing plants in the country were induced to locate a plant at this place, and as a result the Northwestern Brick Company was organized with a capital stock of $1,000,000 and the following officers of the company were selected: O. E. Kender, president; J. A. Kemp, vice-president; Jno. B. Paul, secretary and T. C. Thatcher, treasurer.

In consideration of the organization of the company, the city provided a site of 40 acres across the river on the north side and in addition there to gave a cash bonus of $2,000. Soon after the deal was consummated and the company organized, work was begun on the plant which is just now being completed and will be ready to start within the next few days, possibly by the middle of the week.

Few people realize the extent or importance of this enterprise or the value it will be to Wichita Falls in developing one of the natural resources of this country. The soil is taken from the ground and converted into a finished product that is distributed over the country, the returns from which remain in the city and do not have to be paid out for the raw manufacturing industries. It is doubtful if there is any enterprise more beneficial to a town or city in proportion to the volume of business than a successful brick plant.

The plant of the Northwestern Brick Company is one of the most complete and up-to-date in the country and has been constructed throughout with a view to permanency and with the idea of obtaining the best results. Every piece of machinery is of the latest and most approved make, the foundations and structural work is all of the best material and installed with due regard for durability and safety. To begin with the site was graded at a heavy expense, and one that is not often incurred, and when operations shall have begun much time and labor will be saved as a result. This work completed, the foundation was laid for the plant and it is here that the company has executed a piece of work that is not only serviceable, but will be as durable as the ages. The foundation for all the machinery, for the drying sheds and for the kilns is concrete of a sufficient depth to meet any demand that may be made upon it by the service of the plant.

In this connection it may be of interest to the readers of The Times, in addition to the illustration given herewith, to give a brief description of the plant, together with an idea of its capacity, in the way of buildings

REAL ESTATE FIRM REPORTS FIVE DEALS

Additional real estate activity is manifested each succeeding week in the volume of business reported by the different firms, and as a part of the recent record of transfers, the following firms of Stehlik and Josephson has to its credit the following deals:

C. E. Minnick to Mrs. M. M. Adickes and E. E. Perry, lots 1 and 2, and one-half of lot 3, block 230 $2250.

Tobs Foster to Henry Smith, lots 4, 5, 6 and 7, block 97, across the river; $850.

Lloyd Wilson to W. D. Hill lot 17, block 22; $425.

R. H. Suter to Wm. Smith, lot 6, block 26; $250.

R. H. Suter to Otto Stehlik and John Hater, block 24 across the river; $3500.

The company has an office and oil room building 20x30, blacksmith shop and line-shaft building 20x50, an engine room, 40x50, together with the main machinery building 35x110. There are all constructed of heavy frame work and covered with corrugated iron.

The dry house, which is 58x105, is built entirely of iron, brick and cement. The cooling sheds have a concrete foundation, covered with sheet iron and are of sufficient capacity to accommodate the output of the plant.

The power for operating the plant is furnished by two boilers with a four-hundred horse power capacity, a Corlies engine of equal capacity, together with a smaller engine that is used for driving the big fans of the drying house, also water heater and two boiler pumps.

The process and machinery for making the brick includes a "Thev" automatic shovel which loads the clay on cars that carry it up an incline track to the top of the building where it begins the process of manufacturing the soil into building material. Gradually from machine to machine the mud wends its way, by force of gravitation, to the cutting machine where the finished product is perfected. In connection with this process the clay is first emptied into a twelve-foot granulator, from which it goes to the rolls and then to the fourteen-foot pug machine. From the pug machine the mud is transferred to the big No. 45 Giant Anger, which machine is one of the most complete and successful known to the brick making industry, where it is pressed into a solid column.

Passing the auger machine the clay next goes to the big No. 20 cutter from which the blocks are carried to the drying house cars on a thirty-eight foot belt, and, loaded on the cars, each of which hold 550 bricks, are transferred to the drying sheds. The machinery is all set on structural steel specially ordered, which is erected on a concrete foundation and is perfectly rigid and entirely independent of the building. The plant is equipped with the American Clay Machinery Company's best make of machines that are recognized to be as good, if not better, than on the market.

In addition to the main machinery, the company has 350 cars for use in transferring the brick from the time they leave the cutter until they reach the kiln, and as each car has a capacity of 550 brick it will be seen that a large quantity may be handled in the process of making. The company has also transfer tracks to the extent of 250 feet, which together with other trackage and the private railroad spur constructed to the property, gives them a total trackage of about two miles.

The plant has an ample capacity for making 100,000 brick per day of 16 hours, and with the forty acres of land owned it is estimated that there will be a sufficient supply of clay with which to operate many years. In that particular locality the soil is deep and it is said will be available for a depth of 25 feet.

Gas will be used throughout the plant, under the boilers, in the drying house and the kilns, and it is estimated that a total of a million and a half cubic feet per day will be consumed, representing an expense of about $100 per day for fuel alone.

Fire was started under the boilers yesterday preparatory to testing out the machinery and it is expected that a public test of the capacity of the plant will be announced at an early date.

NORTHWESTERN'S NEW ROUND HOUSE AND MACHINE SHOPS

The accompanying cut shows a view of the Northwestern new machine shops and round house on the north side of the river. These improvements have cost more than a quarter of a million dollars and are probably the best equipped of any in Texas. The round house will accommodate twelve engines.

Falls heads the list in Texas by 25 to 25 per cent, taking the gross receipts for the joint station into consideration, on the entire system with the exception of St. Louis and Kansas City. Mr. Stoner said that while this would give him an advantage over some of the other stations, nevertheless, it counted for the amount of business done in Wichita Falls and that was what he was talking about.

Whist Club.

The members of the Whist Club and a few guests were most delightfully entertained Tuesday afternoon by Mrs. Chas. Hines, 1119 Tenth street. The favor a bunch of carnations, fell to Mrs. Shepperd in a cut with Mrs. Weeks and Woods. Two hours were spent in playing whist, at the conclusion of which a business meeting was held. Mrs. Everett Jones and Mrs. Robert Thorburn were elected to the two remaining vacancies in the club and the game was changed to bridge. A salad course was served to Mrs. Coats, Little, Maer, Marchman, May, Myles, Shepperd, Scruggs, Smith, Sherman, Weeks, M. Walker, W. H. Walker, Woods and Misses Carrie Kell, Brown and Gibson. Mrs. Little will be the next hostess on February 14th.

Mexican Menu.

Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Wade Walker entertained a small bridge company Wednesday evening at their commodious home, 704 Scott street. Those participating were Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Reece, Mr. and Mrs. Myles, Mesdames Sherman, Smith, Scruggs, Shepperd, Marchman, Woods, Howard and Mr. Ryland. After enjoying the game for a reasonable time the guests were invited to the dining room. Seated at this hospitable board they were regaled with the various toothsome Mexican dishes that always appeal to the finer man; and this was ended a very happy evening.

The Mission of the Mothers' Club.

The object and desire of the Mothers' Club is to raise the standards of home life, by bringing into closer relations the home and the school, that the parent and the teacher may cooperate intelligently in the education of the child, realizing that united, concerted work in training little children will bring better results than any other philanthropic work that can be done. "As the twig is bent, the tree will grow," so in the young impressionable years of child life, we should try to develop good, healthy citizens. To carry mother-love and mother-thrift into all that concerns, or affects child life in the school, home, community, and legislations, in the assurance that to accomplish the best results men and women must work together. Therefore mothers' clubs should endeavor to secure such legislation that children of tender years may not be tried in criminal courts, but that each school district work for the establishment of Juvenile Courts, with special officers, whose duties will be to save the child from evil ways. To rouse the whole community to sense of its duty and responsibility to blameless, dependent and neglected children, because honor is a term evolved from education. Children without proper education follow their natural instinct which leads them to do what they want to do, because they want to. Education teaches the difference between honor and desire.

Mothers' clubs aim to reach the children and parents of all classes, and is civic work in its broadest and highest term, as it aims for organized effort for an improved, superior home life, and nobler national individuality.

MARY C. CHRISTENSEN.

The Stephen F. Austin Mothers' and Teachers' Club will meet Thursday afternoon, February 9th, at 3:30 and discuss the following interesting program:

The Cultivation of the Emotions—Miss Hattie Stallings.

Discussion—(1) The Sense of Modesty; led by Miss Parker. (2) Guarding Children from Emotional Intemperance; led by Mrs. G. F. Campbell.

This club will introduce a question box and desire all those who have any pertinent inquiries to make on the living issues which interest both mothers and teachers to put them in this box for discussion.

The guests, who are the official members of the church, included Messrs. Jackson, Snyder, Eagle, Bullard, Maricle, Downing, Mathis, Trevathan, Knight, Waggoner and Dr. Guest. The birthday cake with its unmentionable number of candles graced the center of the table, surrounded by a floral profusion of pink geraniums and smilax. Little "Miss Thornton" also gave an interesting recitation.

The inclemency of the weather prevented many ladies from attending, but the twenty-five who did attend were lastly treated to chocolate and cake. Each expressed, as they bade the hostess good-bye, "One of the happiest of meetings."

Last Monday the Baptist Woman's Alliance entertained with a family reunion of all its members. The day was ideal and about 125 ladies responded to the invitation. The program consisted of beautiful piano selections by Miss Luella Brooks, vocal solos by Mesdames Boone and Barron and a splendid talk by the pastor and a goodly number of heart to heart talks by the old and new leaders and others. Dainty refreshments were served consisting of sandwiches, pickles, coffee and cake, and all went away thanking each other for a most delightful afternoon.

Taut and Trim--the White Sale Spreads Its Wings and Sales Smoothly On?

It isn't a squally affair, blowing over in a few days. This White Sale has "ballast"—quantities of merchandise and scores of unsurpassed values. The strength of the Pennington White Sale is in its quantities and varieties. Those who came Saturday, the first day of the sale, discovered that we did not exaggerate regarding them. It is our sincere belief that the quantity of undermuslins here exceeds the combined stocks of Wichita Falls.

That being true, it is scarcely necessary to say that the sale is as good throughout next week as it was on the first day; it is in fact better, as it naturally should be. Plenty of undermuslins, plenty of the same surpassing values.

You May Argue Yourself Blue About White Sales--the Economies of the Event Like This Refute You

The White Sale offers a real service. It is a time saver, labor saver, money saver. A labor saver in that it eliminates the necessity of making your own garments at home; a money saver in that it brings these daintily made-up garments to you at a cost never much more and sometimes less than the bare materials are worth.

Indeed the Pennington White Sale Justifies Itself Very Thoroughly--Come Monday by all Means Everything that is white is on sale, at special prices—White Madras, India Linon, Cambrics, Domestic, Ladies' Waists, Nainsook, Long Cloth, Table Linen, Napkins, Counterpanes, Waistings and Ladies' Muehlin Underwear.

THORNBERRY PEOPLE TO PLANT TREES

Big Celebration is Planned at the School on Washington's Birthday.

Thornberry, Texas, Feb. 4.—Mr. Fred Stephenson left yesterday for Lyford, Texas, to take out a saw horse or else, decide this is the best place for him to locate.

Mr. Baker buried his infant daughter yesterday. It was three weeks old. The mother and sister are not doing very well but it is hoped they will improve now.

Little Joseph Stephenson has been very sick but is improving slowly.

Mr. R. L. Knox has been on the sick list for some time but is improving some.

Mr. R. E. Sawdon is having a well dug on one of his farms for water. We had hoped there would have been a well going down after oil or gas before this time.

Wheat is looking fine and the peach trees will soon be in bloom if this warm weather continues much longer.

Our school is so crowded that the trustees have had to employ another teacher. We are glad to see this. Send the children to school before the compulsory law goes into effect. The Thornberry people are planning to have a great day on the 22, by planting trees and beautifying the school grounds. The teachers are planning an exercise for that day and in order that it may be a success all everyone in the district come and help and in a few years we will be able to see that we have done something. Trees must be planted before they can grow. Also the ground can be planted in Bermuda grass instead of growing weeds to seed the adjoining land.

BILL FOR OKLAHOMA STATE ROAD MAY PASS

Measure, Regarded as Nonpartisan, Provides for $15,000,000 Bond Issue.

Oklahoma City, Okla., Feb. 4.—Oklahoma's much-talked-of state railroad bill was introduced in the house yesterday afternoon and general indications denote that it will be speedily enacted into law. Ex-Governor Haskell, who is still a power in Oklahoma despite his somewhat turbulent career, has given his unqualified indorsement to the measure, and it has many strong supporters in both houses, regardless of politics. In fact, the measure is regarded as nonpartisan, and is the most unique idea of its kind ever brought before a legislative body.

Briefly summarized, this bill provides that the state of Oklahoma at a cost of $15,000,000, shall build a railroad diagonally across the state of Oklahoma from the extreme northwest to the southwest corner, there to connect with the M. K. & T. running into Texas. It further provides that a railroad benefit district shall be created, consisting of the counties of McCurtain, Choctaw, Bryan, Atoka, Coal, Pontotoc, Seminole, McLain, Cleveland, Oklahoma, Canadian, Kingfisher, Blaine, Dewey, Woodward, Beaver, Harper, Texas and Cimmaron. The governor is to be authorized to call an election at which the people shall vote upon the proposition to issue bonds to the extent of $15,000,000, and a state board of public utilities is to be appointed by the governor to have direct charge of the construction work, the president of such board to receive a salary of $10,000 per year. Haskell has figured from the viewpoint of a railroad builder, where such a road can be constructed for $15,000,000.

Correct Version of It Chicago Tribune. Rip Van Winkle had just awakened from his twenty years' sleep. "Haff dey raised der baddie ship Maine already yet?" he asked. "No," they answered him. "Hass Bernhard kvit making favevells?" "No." "Vot de use!" he exclaimed. And he went to sleep again.

THE COLONIAL HAS SPLENDID PROGRAM

The Colonial has for tonight one of the best programs in vanderbille and pictures presented in Wichita Falls for some time.

Martyne & Hardy, comedy change artists, have delighted large audiences the past two evenings, with their splendid work and tonight will present an entirely new program, the best of the engagement and they should be greeted by a capacity house. New pictures will be presented tonight and Mr. Taylor will sing a popular illustrated song.

Newlyweds Tonight.

"The Newlyweds and Their Baby" is the latest addition to the class of cartoon comedies, and it may be truthfully termed last season's biggest success. The company is a large one composed of 80% people. The "half" of course, being the baby. The show is in two acts and four scenes, the finale of the first act proving a distinct innovation. The credit for the book goes to Aaron Hoffman and Paul West, and the dialogue, extra characters and situations they have applied to help make "The Newlyweds and Their Baby" into a play, constitute a combination which has proven highly satisfactory to theatergoers where the play has been seen. The music is by Seymour Brown, Nat D. Ayer and John W. Bratton. There are sixteen musical numbers, counting the final of the second act, all of which will obtain wholesale popularity but the ones to attain distinctive hits are "Boogie Boo," "Love Time," "Every Baby is a Sweet Bouquet" and "Can't You See I Love You." "Boogie Boo" is given by Monte Arbo, assisted by "The Eight Porter Pigeons." The play-ballet of young girls are without a doubt a most entertaining feature of the show. The scenic embellishments of both acts are entirely adequate and the costuming of the company is worthy of special mention. The gowns of Mrs. Newlywed and the thirty-two Newlywed girls are of the stunning variety. William Clifton and Emory Alton, carefully and cleverly portray Mr. and Mrs. Newlywed, who Earl Knapp makes an individual hit as Napoleon Newlywed, the baby, D. L. Don, is the laughing hit as the German waiter, while the entire cast and chorus are entirely adequate. "The Newlyweds and Their Baby" are the attraction at the Wichita Theatre today, matinee and night.

"PAID IN FULL"

Eugene Walter's powerful play of contemporary American life "Paid in Full" is to be seen at the Wichita Theatre on Wednesday night, and the United Play Company, who will make the production, promise one of the strongest and most notable acting companies ever gathered in one organization and the production itself will be complete in the minute detail. The play is in four acts, and the theme is taken from some incidents in real life. The handling of the story throughout is done in a most forceful style, the characters breathe real life, and their actions are not the studied movements of the ordinary play-of-the-day actor. They are human and for this very reason, departure from conventional lines and themes, it would seem that Mr. Walter made the thanks of the theatre-going public. "Paid in Full" is now in its second year in New York and the play has to its credit a run of six months in Chicago. There has been a big demand for seats here, and the tickets are a packed house will meet the United Play Company's long-looked-for offering.

BASEBALL HALL OF FAME ON NEW LINES

Autoist Agrees to Give Car to "Most Valuable Man" in Each League.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Tentative plans for the creation of a baseball "Hall of Fame" on broader lines than anything of the kind hitherto attempted were announced yesterday by a Detroit manufacturer. He offered to put two automobiles into the hands of a committee of five or seven newspaper men to be awarded at the end of each playing season to the player in each major league who, in the opinion of the committee, had done the most for his team in the pennant race.

Details of the proposition, such as the size of the committee, its selection and the method of arriving at the choice of the player entitled to the prize in each league have not been worked out. The offer stands for a period of five years and will be open to all the players in each major league exclusive of the managers, whether bench or playing managers.

The idea, as explained, is to eliminate the question of batting, fielding or pitching average as arbitrary determining factors and to reward the players who do the most to advance the interests of their respective teams in the two pennant races. In addition to taking into consideration the performance of a player in batting, fielding, pitching, base running and other departments, it is intended to include loyalty, deportment and adherence to discipline, both on and off the field.

Being the composite opinion of a committee of newspaper men and not based on records, the choice would carry with it no official recognition. The winners would be in the position of football players chosen annually by Walter Camp for his all-American eleven, except that there would be two prize winners instead of eleven and the choice would represent the personal opinions of five or seven men instead of an individual.

The Business College Basket Ball team left for Bowie this afternoon for a game tonight with the athletic team at that place.

FOUR-YEAR TERM FOR STATE OFFICERS URGED

Austin, Tex., Feb. 4.—A radical change in the elections of Texas is proposed in a constitutional amendment resolution introduced in the House by Gilmore and Russell. The object of the resolution is to change the term of office of all county and state officers from two to four years. Clarence Gilmore, one of the authors, believes it would greatly benefit the State if this change were made.

"The great expense of running for State office, as well as county office," he says, "and the demoralization of business on account of our present election, seems to me to be sufficient reason for changing our present term of office. Our resolution provides that no State or county officer shall be eligible for re-election which will have the effect of giving an officeholder an opportunity to discharge the duties of his office without any reference to its effect on his next election, and will also save to the State the time which the officeholders necessarily have to spend each two years in making the campaign to succeed themselves, even if it be for a second term.

Of course, occasionally an inefficient and incompetent man is elected to office, but these cases are so rare and the benefit derived from the four-year term are so great that I believe it will have a salutary effect to adopt the amendment.

Another resolution, proposing a constitutional amendment, has been introduced by Rowell. It provides for a separation of the funds of the A. & M. College and the University. This is the twentieth proposed amendment to the constitution proposed since the opening of the session.

TESTED AND PROVEN

There is a Heap of Solace in Being Able to Depend Upon a Well-Earned Reputation.

For months Wichita Falls readers have seen the constant expression of praise for Doan's Kidney Pills, and read about the good work they have done in this locality. Not another remedy ever produced such convincing proof of merit.

P. W. Nolan, 896 Eighth street, Wichita Falls, Texas, says: "Doan's Kidney Pills certainly live up to the claims made for them and I think they are the best kidney medicine in existence. I had heard several people speak highly of this remedy and when I saw it advertised, I got a supply from the Wichita Drug house. My kidneys were weak and I was obliged to get up often at night to pass the kidney secretions. In the morning I felt stiff and lame across my back and was hardly able to straighten. Whenever I stooped, a sharp twinge darted through me. I used in all three boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills and they entirely cured me." (Statement given June 16, 1908).

A Second Endorsement.

Mr. Nolan was interviewed on Dec. 3, 1910 and he added to the above: "I willingly re-endorse Doan's Kidney Pills and confirm every word of the statement I gave in their favor two and a half years ago. I have recommended this remedy to many people and have always taken pleasure in doing so."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

THE ONLOOKER.

Lodge, in Massachusetts, evidently means more than a temporary abiding place. More like permanency.

Artist who announced he had discovered a new type of American girl has raised a riot, about seventy-five other artists claiming they saw her first.

Among the interesting details of the coming coronation in England now being arranged are the privileges of the Earl of Shrewsbury to carry a white wand as Lord Steward of Ireland, and of the claims of the Duke of Newcastle to provide a glove for the King's right hand.

All this talk about anti-trust suits is hush, anyhow. By the time statesmen get through framing up a tariff you can't buy anything but a trust suit. An anti-trust suit would consist of a discarded newspaper gracefully garbed about the figure with twigs.

Japanese woman dentist who has settled in London says she is there to "pull the teeth of England." Is that alliance off?

THE ROAD IS NOT LONG ENOUGH YET

Last Sunday morning at the W. F. & N. W. depot just after the early morning passenger train had pulled out south, a local freight made up for Hammon backed into an open switch which was very short and before the engineer could be signaled down eight cars were backed off the track and away down the hill. The caboose struck a telephone pole and the eight cars buckled out and two or three of them were telescoped, and leaving their trucks and smashing in the sides.

A crew worked all day Sunday and Sunday night pulling the cars back into position and getting them back on the track.

No further damage was done, but to say the least of it, the W. F. & N. W. railroad track isn't long enough yet, and the Democrat would suggest that the company continue the construction work until they have plenty of room for their traffic.—Elk City Democrat.

Object to New County.
 Kingsville, Texas, Feb. 4.—Numerously signed petitions were today forwarded to the legislature protesting against the formation of the new county, of Jim Wells out of Neuces county with Alice as the county seat.

Baby Fatally Burned.
 Taylor, Texas, Feb. 4.—The 3-year-old baby boy of Otis Robertson, a carpenter, was burned to death late Thursday, while playing under the house of the Robertson home on South Main street. A 4-year-old brother was playing with a bunch of matches and striking them on a stove threw them into the lap of the baby, whose cotton flannel skirt caught fire, and was practically consumed before his screams brought the mother, who was across the street at a neighboring home.

A 5-year-old sister witnessed the accident. The baby died after two hours of agony.

LITTLE STORIES

Trying Out Texas.
From Lemmon, S. D., they came, bound for Buckeye, Tex. There were seven in the family, and each had all the luggage he could carry as they marched down the long waiting room at the union depot, led by an usher, who carried on his shoulders their immense bundle of blankets.

One of the boys dragged a washing-wringer by the handle, and the youngest, a 5-year-old, clung tight to a new, shiny accordion. But the thing that attracted every eye in the depot was a huge clothes-basket that the father and the oldest boy carried between them. In the basket was a large square box of some sort, covered with a cloth.

"You're not doing your washing on 'ere you?" asked an old man who moved over on the long bench to give them room to pile their roots.

"No," answered the man with the basket. "We know we were to be pretty high five days on the road, and we laid out to take along enough victuals to see us through."

"I guess we did, too," he added, "but a vase. 'We had that clothes-basket and the tin bread box both full when we started. Teh only mistake was that mother forgot to put in the little oil stove to make the coffee with."

"If we like it well enough at Buckeye after spending the winter there," concluded the father of the family, whose name was Henry Baustla, "we're not going back to Lemmon," Kansas City Star.

Otherwise All Right.
A Missouri dandy was endeavoring to sell a mule to a Jefferson City man, who, however, was in doubt as to the animal's age.

"If," said he, "this mule is as young as you claim, why is it that he bends so at the knees?"

"Oh, don't let dat little fact worry you, boss," the negro hastened to say. "Dat mule bend at de legs, but it ain't due to no age dat he does. De boss' truth, boss, is dat I ain't had de money to look after dat mule de way he oughter been. My stable is kinder low, an' dat mule he been 'bliged to stoop a little, dat's all."—Harper's Magazine.

Swimming Match.
A number of North Atchison girls recently invited their friends to a party, saying that a feature of the entertainment would be a swimming match between two girls. Every one went and found that this part of the program was carried out by two girls sitting at a table with a bowl of water between them, in which a match floated. The men felt that they had been cheated.—Atchison Globe.

GREAT TWILERS.
Chief Bender may be the proud possessor of the title of the premier of American league pitchers by virtue of his having won the largest percentage of games played during the season of 1910.

But there is another hero of the baseball world whose efforts should not forever remain unsung. Sure he has never been a member of the world's championship team, no, not even of a pennant-winning team.

On the contrary, his club has never even risen from the second division, and for many seasons was the undisputed holder of the title of "cellar chumps." He has never been heralded as the champion pitcher of the league with which he has been identified, but still has been known as one of its best pitchers and most valuable assets, and it has been said by many experts, that if he had a team like the Athletics, the Cubs or the New York Giants, the great Christy Mathewson would have to look to his laurels. The gentleman who has called forth all these eulogiums is Walter Johnson of the Washington Nationals.

While, as before mentioned, Johnson has never held the title of champion pitcher of the American league, in the season of 1910 he held two records of which no twirler need feel ashamed.

In the first place he was the hardest worked slabster in the league, having been called to the mound to participate in 373 2-3 innings, 42 games in all, 25 of which he won, having a percentage of .595; not so bad when one considers that he was with a second division team. In that time he was taken out but once.

Ed Walsh of Chicago was Johnson's nearest rival in point of service, taking part in 369 2-3 innings, just four less than the man from Idaho; Walsh had an average of .474, failing to win a majority of his games.

The other record secured by the indomitable Walter is one he can indeed be proud of, and one that will without doubt stand for a long time to come—the strikeout record, not only for the season of 1910, but also for all during the history of major league ball.

Johnson, during the season, struck out no less than 313 batters. Up to this time the record was held by that former great, albeit somewhat erratic pitcher Rube Waddell, who in 1903 struck out 301 batsmen.

Johnson passed this mark on Sept. 25, when he fanned, 11 of the St. Louis Browns at St. Louis, bringing his mark up to 303. In addition to making the Browns punch holes in the air upon this auspicious day of his career, the Idaho Wonder held them to one lonely hit, a single by Truesdale.

His greatest feat of making them hit the air was on Aug. 31, when 14 of the St. Louis Browns were his victims. His next best record was against the same team on July 12, getting 13 on that occasion. He also managed to get Detroit, Chicago and Boston for 12 each in a single game. The worst he did in one performance was against Boston, Oct. 5, when he fanned only two.

WHITE MAN'S HOPES.
Since Jack Johnson wrested the world's championship honors from Jeffries "Hopes of the white race" have sprung up without number. The following comment on these so-called "hopes" is therefore interesting:

Carl Morris was formerly an engineer. He is from Oklahoma and weighs about 240 pounds. He is twenty-five years of age, and stands six feet four inches in height. Entered the professional boxing ranks about three months ago and came into prominence through his knockout of Marvin Hart. Trained by Eddie Robinson.

Con O'Kelly of Ireland is twenty-three years of age. He weighs 220 and stands six feet four inches in height. Started boxing about six months ago, and has appeared before the public eight times. Record, four knockouts and three victories on decisions. The other bout was stopped by police to save opponent. Trained by Tommy Ryan.

Miles McLeod, who hails from Missouri, is twenty-six years of age. He weighs 225 pounds and stands six feet five inches. He has had practically no ring experience, but is vouched for by Joe Choynski.

Jack Lester is only nineteen years old. He weighs 157 pounds and is six feet tall. Is trained by Tommy Burns. He won his first fight the other night.

Walter Monahan is at present the sparring partner of Jack Johnson. He is twenty-one years of age, weighs 204 pounds, and stands 5 feet 11 1/2 inches. Showed no ability in his bout with George Cotton in Pittsburg December 20.

Bombardier Wells is the heavy-weight champion of England. He is twenty-three years of age, weighs 200 pounds and stands six feet three inches in height. Won the championship of the British army while stationed in India. In recent months he has defeated all English heavyweights of any pretensions.

George Henderson comes from Titusville, Pa. Very little is known of him outside of his own locality. He is twenty-six years of age and claims to distinction in his ability to take a kick from a horse and be none the worse for it.

IN LIGHTER VEIN.
The Homeilet Kentuckian.
"Did you boys ever hear that back in the eighties I was regarded as one of the homeliest men in Kentucky," inquired Senator Bradley, according to the Washington correspondent of the New York World. "It's a fact, and I'll tell you a story to illustrate it."

"Under the law of Kentucky the governor has the power of pardon even before grand jury proceedings or trial. During my first term as governor my attorney general was John K. Hendrick. Some folks said Hendrick was the homeliest man in Kentucky; others said I was. In those days I wore a beard, as did Hendrick. John always maintained that he was a better looking man than I, and I always disputed his argument."

"One day Hendrick walked into my office."

"I want a pardon, governor," he announced.

"All right, Hendricks, I said, 'but what have you done?'"

"I just shot a man down the street," said Hendrick calmly.

"What for?" I demanded.

"He said I looked like you," answered Hendrick, "and I could not stand for that."

"You shall have the pardon at once," I answered. "If you hadn't shot the cuss, I would have done so on sight."

Morgan on Washington.
When J. Pierpont Morgan, the money king, tarried at Washington early in the week, he met a Massachusetts republican of some prominence, who asked:

"Morgan, what do you think of the business outlook?"

"First rate," said he, "all over the country, outside of Washington."—Washington correspondence Boston Herald.

MORRIS TO TRAIN IN THE MOUNTAINS

Bob Armstrong Will Be in Charge of the Camp—To Fight at Early Date.
Kansas City, Feb. 3.—Bob Armstrong, the big negro who was a member of Jeffries' camp in Reno, will probably be employed in a few days to take charge of the training of Carl Morris, the Oklahoma fighter.

This statement was made by W. F. Stone, formerly manager of Morris, while here. Stone, accompanied by "Kid" Bruno, who has prepared Morris for all of his fights thus far, was visiting Billy McCarney. Regarding the plans of the syndicate which purchased Morris, Stone said:

"These men who purchased my contract are worth, all told, about $30,000,000. They are not prize fight promoters, but are interested in Morris winning the title from Johnson. They will send him away to the mountains with a good trainer in the next few weeks to get in condition. Morris will probably fight again within sixty days."

The occasion was one long to be remembered goes without saying. The trip was without accident in the way of "blowups" or "breakdown" and perhaps phenomenal in that respect.

Luncheon.

An informal luncheon was given Thursday by Mrs. E. B. Correll, 708 Travis. The afternoon was pleasantly spent in needlework and chatting upon those topics so dear to a woman's heart.

White cake and sherbet were served the many dainty pieces of Japanese and other delicate ware that were in evidence stimulated the admiration of all present and was, as it should be, a source of pleasure to behold as well as to possess. It goes without saying that the pleasure for the evening expressed at leave-taking came from sincere hearts.

Civic League. The Civic League will hold its regular meeting Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock with Mrs. J. A. Kemp, 1200 Indiana Ave. They hope to outline plans for future work and usefulness along lines within their jurisdiction, and are more than pleased to find a staunch friend and strong ally in the new secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. The annual Tag Day is approaching as it probably will come early in March this year, and they hope to enlist the hearty cooperation of everybody as already applied. The Civic League is a most worthy organization and deserves the hearty support and patronage of every loyal citizen, man or woman. As a band of women working for the general uplift and betterment of our city we cannot afford to allow any little bickering or trivial grudge to interfere with a general "pull together for the good of all."

Unity Club. Unity Club met at the home of Mrs. A. D. Anderson, 1106 Austin avenue, on Friday afternoon. Roll call was responded to with current events and the various topics of interest elicited spirited discussion. Items of interest concerning the country and its people were brought out in roll call. Papers and talks on the peculiar climatic and geographical conditions were contributed by Mesdames Montgomery, Reese, Beavers, Adickes, and the lender, Mrs. Guest. After the lesson, the hostess, who is also president of the club, invited the ladies to the dining room where, from a beautifully spread table, with places marked by miniature sombreros, was served a three-course Mexican luncheon, consisting of chile con carne, wafers, tamales, pimiento sandwiches, olives, celery, nut gelatine, cake and coffee.

The Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the Baptist Church to the number of fifteen met Friday with the president, Miss Della Stone, at her home, 1109 Brook Street. RAILROAD PROSPECTS IN S. W. OKLAHOMA

Lines Proposed Across Southwest Part of State Through Randlett.

Randlett, Okla., Feb. 4.—A number of Chicago promoters are in the state looking up railroad matters. It is said by those who profess to know that these gentlemen will build a railroad northwest across the state. The gentlemen who gave this information say positively that a road will be built from the east part of the state and will run in a westerly direction and will touch the towns of Pauls Valley, Comanche, in Stephens county, Temple, Randlett, Thence to Devo, where it will connect with the Wichita Falls & Northwestern.

It is said this is a Kemp and Kell road, and that it is only a question of time until it will be in course of construction. At any rate, there is something in the air as regards railroads coming this way and let us hope that this prediction will soon be a reality. In addition to the above Lawton has offered a $50,000 bonus for a road between that city and Randlett. This is the original plan of the W. F. & N. W. railroad, and it is now under consideration among men ever before, and Messrs. Kemp and Kell, will, beyond every doubt, begin the construction of this road in the spring. The Harmon extension has been completed some weeks ago and trains now enter that city. This leaves the W. F. & N. W. now idle as far as construction is concerned, and it is natural to presume that this is the next point to begin operations.

Lawton has offered $50,000 for a road north of Sallisaw, via Stealing, and Messrs. Kemp and Kell, it is true, will pick up this $120,000 bonus, as they intend to enter Oklahoma City and it is not amiss to presume further in this case. Watch the wheel of fortune and when the pointer along the "Gateway City" will be the lucky number and the long looked-for reign of prosperity will begin.

SINKING SHAFT FOR COPPER IN OKLAHOMA

Frederick, Okla., Feb. 4.—In the hope of striking a paying vein of copper, J. T. Ayres & Son, experienced miners, are sinking a shaft on the U. S. Henson farm, 15 miles northeast of Frederick. The shaft is now down a depth of 35 feet. The Messrs. Ayres are operating under a mineral lease, and have reasons to believe that they will make a paying strike.

One lying on the top of the ground on the tract where the shaft is now being sunk, has been assayed and has run as high as $32.50 to the ton. There is considerable of this ore lying about, enough seemingly to justify the hope that there is some where below the surface of the earth copper in sufficient quantities to pay to mine it.

Mr. Bosson, when asked about the plans for the development of the property, said that they were not yet in form to give to the public.

ELK CITY'S FUTURE VERY PROMISING

Value of Advent of W. F. & N. W. Railroad is Emphasized.

Elk City, Okla., Feb. 4.—There is much speculation in reference to the future of Elk City by our people. They are discussing pro and con the influence of the new conditions now evident. The effects of this agitation is apparent and the consequent results in the future depends altogether upon the efforts of our citizens and the selfless application of the means at hand.

The surroundings are, abundantly at hand and the resources of the country are very advantageous, favoring every prospect for our future greatness, but all this may be cast to the wind, as it were, if the principal promoters exert their efforts for only pecuniary benefits, and the general welfare must suffer the loss of such splendid advantages.

Let us consider the added values to some of our cheapest real estate already as a result of the second railroad, and other advantages we have secured thereby, as well as those in the future. Take for instance the difference in the taxable values in the real estate just south of the Rock Island railroad, which is now very valuable, also the addition to the business roster of our city. Many new enterprises already secured by the investment of this bonus—chief among which are two great wholesale houses, doing thousands of dollars worth of business monthly—and we see some of the benefits.

This is not all. The possibilities in the future are many times what they were, when before, if the road had missed the city, utter failure and demoralization was inevitable. Besides all this we have doubled in our shipping facilities and brought into the town a competitive line, whereas, before the shipper had only one alternative, and that was to ship by the one route and take whatever service they were disposed to furnish. It also opens up a new route and puts us in touch with new territory.

Now then, with these added advantages, who is it that can say Elk City is dead, or even dying, or even the least bit indisposed? None, save and except the croaker and the ever present calamity howler who is perpetually afflicted with liver complaint.

Jones County Receives New Court House.

Anson, Texas, Feb. 4.—Last Saturday the commissioners court of Jones county received from the contractors the new $100,000 court house, holding back about $500.00 of the contract price for the finishing of a few details.

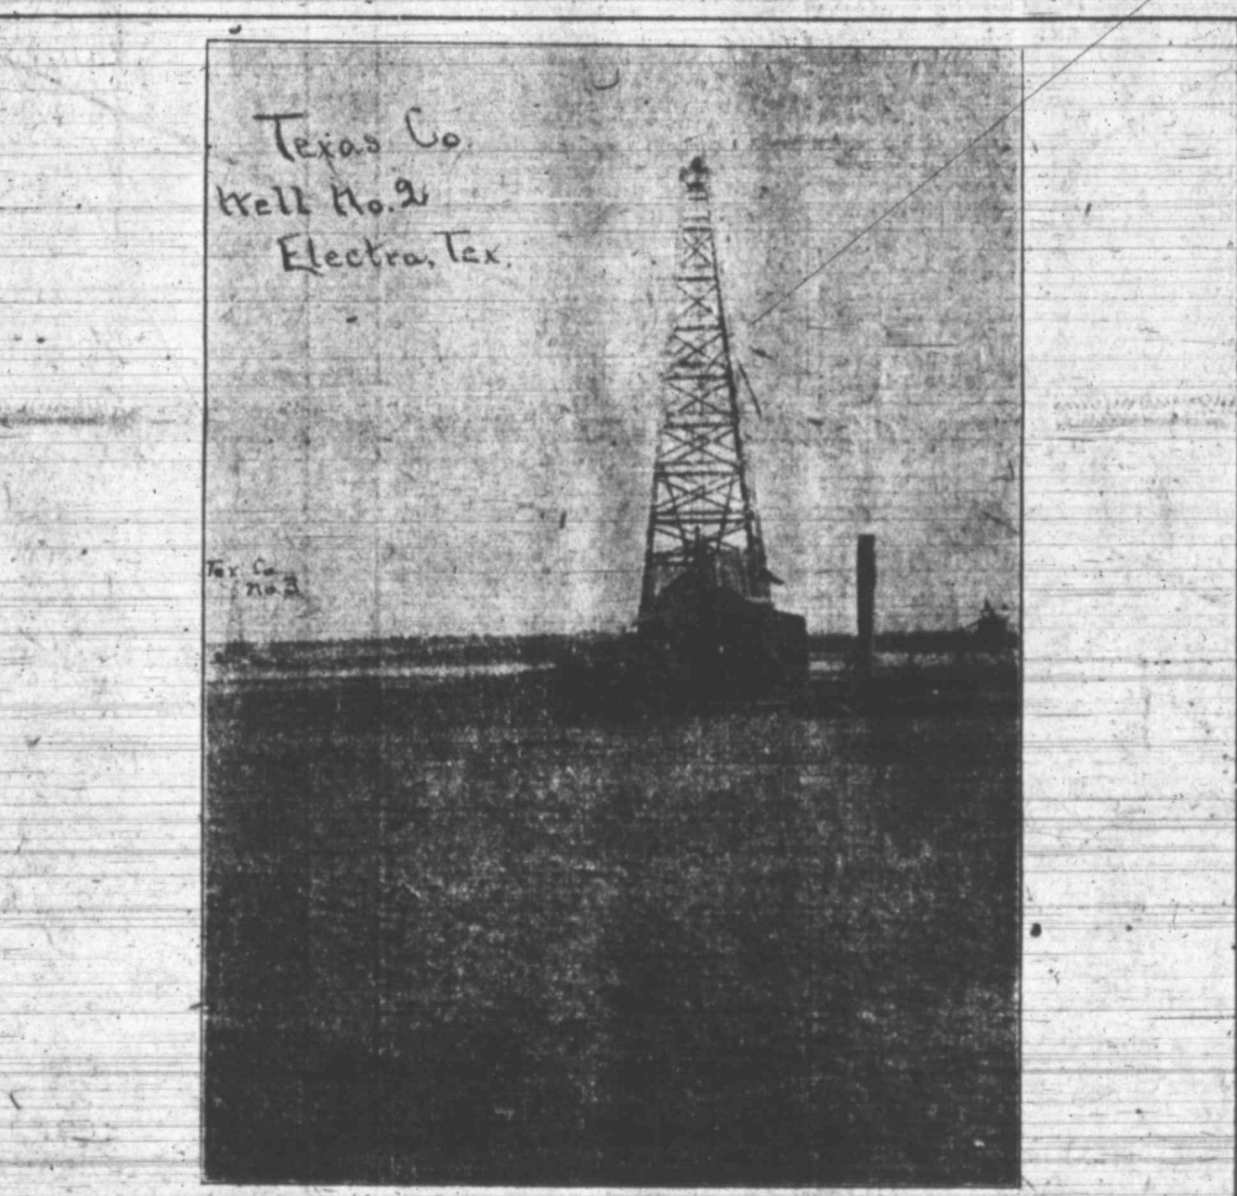

All officers moved in Monday and district court opened in the magnificent and spacious district court room. Jamtor Frank Stone is also on duty in the new building and when once straightened out will keep everything in "apple pie order."

Hammon controls a trade territory of one thousand square miles, which is more than that enjoyed by any other town in the state.

There is no territory in the whole United States that is undergoing a more rapid development than Northwest Texas and Southwest Oklahoma. Progress is moving here with Atlantis strides and the achievements of today will become history tomorrow when the best and finest citizenship in the Nation—a commingling of southern chivalry and tradition with western energy and open heartedness, will be looking forward to and working for things that are not ever dreamed of now.

The farmer is supplanting the cowboy on the Texas ranches and in Oklahoma the Big Pasture quarter-section men have tamed the soil that had felt only the touch of Indian ponies' feet and are reaping bountiful harvests. New lines of railroad are threading their way across the prairies and new towns are springing up along these times and the interchange of products and commodities is resulting in freight blockades.

Vast areas of coal have been discovered and hundreds of miners are quarrying out the black diamonds. As if not content with giving practically inexhaustible mines of coal, Nature has bestowed upon us natural gas and oil and the more wells, and the deeper they are sunk add to the supply of both. Immense deposits of clay lie at the surface from which are being made brick and tile that is not excelled anywhere. Deposits of glass sand close to beds of coal and natural gas await only the capital to form a glass-making industry that will give employment to hundreds. It is no wonder that the towns and cities of this section are growing at a marvelous rate and that the progress being made here is the wonder of all observers. Events move so swiftly and development comes so quickly that it is difficult to report the march of progress.

MAY ESTABLISH CEMENT WORKS

Proposition Will Be Made to Jernyn by Oklahoma City Firm.

Jernyn, Tex., Feb. 4.—A Mr. Mulkey of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, was in the city last Saturday and Sunday investigating the stone and coal in this vicinity with a view of establishing a lime and cement works near town. Mr. Mulkey is not a practical man himself, but came as the special representative of the Oklahoma Portland Cement Company with headquarters at Oklahoma City. This company is said to be one of the strongest in the United States and does a voluminous business in its southwestern territory, which embraces all that territory southwest of the Missouri line. Mr. Mulkey was more than pleased with what he saw here and if the specimens which he had gathered at random, proved of sufficient merit, he stated that his company would take immediate steps looking to the establishment of such a works at this point. This will mean much to the town of Jernyn and contiguous country in event such an enterprise is established here. Mr. W. P. Stewart informs the writer that one among the first things he did after reaching this country (thirty years ago) was to burn a lime kiln near the old Stewart homestead, about five miles north of the city. He also stated that lime rock from this vicinity was hauled to Archer City and burned and the product from same was used in the construction of the Archer county court house, which is said to be one of the strongest of its kind in the entire west. This being the case there can be little doubt as to the findings of the experts to whom Mr. Mulkey will submit his specimens. With an abundance of stone, fuel and adequate transportation facilities, offers unparalleled advantages to any company seeking a location for such a works. He was elated over his discovery and left with the assurance that he would return in a few days and make active preparation to develop the stone, in event the experts' findings warrant him in doing so. Here is hoping that he may soon return with full authority to begin active work.

HANMON CALLED LITTLE GEM CITY

Hammon, Okla., Feb. 4.—The "Little Gem City" is still forging to the front—bigger and better every day.

Hundreds of visitors show with us in the belief that we will have a population of 3000 in two years.

EIGHTY-SIX TEAMS MAKING GOOD ROADS

Initial Work Has Begun on This Improvement in Taylor County.

Ablene, Texas, Feb. 4.—While the work of paving goes on in the business district of Abilene the building of improved rural roadways in Commissioners Precinct No. 1 is well under way. Judge Bledsoe and the county commissioners have organized their forces mapped out the initial campaign, and have settled down to a year and perhaps a year and a half of systematic, unremitting work. One hundred and fifty thousand dollars is a jolly big wad of money, and will build many a mile of rock and gravel road.

Already eighty-six teams are at work on the J. F. Handy place east of the city on the bank of Lytle lake. Part are hauling rock and putting it in place for the rock crusher when that machine shall arrive. Others are on the grading work.

What is known as the Elm Dale road is being graded first, on account of its close proximity to the Handy place. It is the road skirting the east and north bank of Lytle lake. Mr. Handy has generously given all the rock on his place to the county and for that reason the work was commenced on his place.

Work has been begun at the city limits, and it is likely that the Elm Dale road will be completed before another is laid up. It is pointed out that two thirds of the rock in the precinct is to be found east of Lytle lake, while most of the gravel is west of the lake.

"I am glad we are now actively at work," said C. R. Thomas, the engineer from the Goods Roads Bureau of the Department of Agriculture, whom Uncle Sam sent to Abilene gratis to the county. "We have eighty-six teams hard at work and in several weeks will almost double that number. In a short time, when the work is well organized, there will be jobs waiting for every man with a team who wants to work."

"The people of Taylor county do not yet appreciate the benefits to be derived from improved rural roads. Taylor county will take the initiative and teach her Central West Texas neighbors the wisdom in building up the country roads in a permanent manner for the benefit of the farmers who have produced to town. I have visited sections in all parts of the United States and notice that wherever good roads have been built farmers are more satisfied."

ICE FACTORY AT ALTUS REBUILDING

Will Have Improvements. No Other Plant in Southwest Oklahoma Possesses.

Altus, Okla., Feb. 4.—When the warm season opens up Altus people need have no fear of not being able to obtain all the ice they may need. The People's Ice Co., L. K. Jones, manager, is putting in a modern, up-to-date 40-ton plant, and expects to have same ready for use by the 1st of March.

Instead of using the old system of freezing, which requires about 45 hours to make ice, the new plant is installing the flooded coil system, which only requires 30 hours. This is one of the latest inventions in the ice manufacturing business, and no other plant in Southwest Oklahoma is equipped with it.

Water for making the ice will be obtained from two big, deep wells which have been dug. Last Monday morning one of them contained 20 feet of water, and it is thought the two will furnish an abundant supply.

One thing that will appeal to the consumers, more than any other, is that Manager Jones had 400 300-pound freezing cans specially made so that, in reality, instead of holding only a 300-pound cake of ice they actually will contain 330 pounds. In this way, when a wagon is loaded with ice in the morning and started out, no matter if it is several hours reaching the customers, they will receive their full weight of ice, the company thereby losing the shrinkage by melting, as the cakes are figured at only 300 pounds when placed in the wagon.

Three cars of the machinery have already arrived and are being unloaded, and the balance—six more cars—will arrive this week. Workmen have the foundation for the heavy machinery all ready and the same will be placed as fast as possible as soon as unloaded from the cars.

WELLINGTON GROWING TOWN OF THE STATE

Besides New Homes Going Up, There Are Handsome Brick Business Houses and More to Build.

Wellington, Tex., Feb. 4.—You cannot go to your business of a morning without passing several new houses in the course of construction. These are not only new, and in many instances handsome residences, but there are numbers of brick buildings going up around the public square. For instance in addition to the two beautiful structures now being reared on the west side for the City National Bank and the Famous Mercantile Co., we learn there are three other bricks to be started soon just south of the State Bank, and too, there is rumor that there will also likely be put three or four more such buildings on the west side where the recent fire was. Of this west side growth however, we shall have more to say later when we receive more definite information and the particulars. The new State Bank and Hotel building on the north-east eye tooth corner of the square, about which we have already spoken, has understand is materializing right along.

Ally! this takes men, business men and workmen. No wonder residences are springing up everywhere. No wonder we find tents in many places over town where people are camping in wait for the completion of some house. All this shows people are coming. Men are coming every day. Watch Wellington grow.

More Brick Buildings.

That Wellington is to continue to grow and grow more substantially is evidenced by the fact that the firm of Pritchard Bros. real estate dealers Howell & Adams, grocery dealers, both on the west side of the square, together with Messrs. E. and O. Smith who own the lots next to the State Bank on the south are to soon let the contract for three handsome one-story brick business houses 35x100 each. This contract in all probability will be let before the week shall have passed. It is also very likely that A. V. Cooke and L. W. Gribble who suffered the loss of buildings in the recent fire will soon build bricks where the frames formerly stood. And still Wellington grows.

OUTPUT OF COAL MINES AT NEW CASTLE WILL BE GREATLY INCREASED

Extensive developments of the New-castle coal fields 65 miles southwest of this city on the Wichita Falls and Southern Railway are being made by the Belknap Coal Company and by next November the output of these rich mines will be increased from 500 to 600 tons daily.

President J. J. Perkins of the Belknap Company has been spending a greater part of his time at the mines recently and on returning home yesterday reports the completion of a second new shaft and says that the fourth shaft will shortly be sunk which will give the mine output about the number of tons mentioned.

President Perkins also states that a new air compressor has been installed in shaft No. 2 at a cost of about $4,000 and that it will be used to pump air into No. 4 a mile away when that shaft is sunk and put in operation.

These shafts Mr. Perkins says will have a capacity for twelve mining machines each of which will mine from 30 to 50 tons of coal a day.

The town of Newcastle, Mr. Perkins says, is undergoing quite a business and building boom, there being now four large business and several residences under construction.

Rotation in Office.

San Antonio Express.
"Changes of administration at reasonable intervals are not only consistent with progress, but essential to it," says the Houston Post.

When a man has been too long in office he may conclude that the office belongs to him and that he is warranted in using the money of the taxpayers and the patronage of his office to keep him in a place and power. The Post thinks the mayor of that city has been in office long enough and that it is time for a change.

There may be nothing wrong with the books or with the system of checking up, but it is a fine idea to have a new broom in the municipal household as often as once every year, at least, for it is said a new broom sweeps clean, and cleanliness is next to godliness.

Representative government means a square deal and equal opportunity for everyone. Autocracy means the rule of an autocrat which means no place in a democratic government.

Rotation in office effectually disposes of the autocrat. He may strut for a time, and lord over the common people, but rotation gets his scalp before he knows it. This is not said in disparagement of the Houston mayor, who has made good, as has been clearly demonstrated by results, but nevertheless and notwithstanding, rotation in office is better than autocracy, as democracy is better than autocracy. No public office should be the lifetime perquisite of any citizen, even without his self-seeking.

ASSOCIATION IS GROWING RAPIDLY

The work of the Wichita Baptist Association, organized at this place some time ago, is growing rapidly and already considerable preparation has been made to carry on the work in this county to an extent that will be production of much good, not only in advancing the interests of the church but in promoting the cause of Christianity in general.

Rev. C. R. Stewart, of Silvertown, Texas, has been elected missionary for the association and has accepted and will at once enter upon his duties in that capacity. He will make his residence in Wichita Falls and with his family will move here next week. Rev. Stewart will devote half of his time to mission work in the city while the remainder will be spent in connection with the work over the country.

Murder Made Easy.

Courier-Journal.
"He used a 'ten-shot' 32-caliber automatic pistol and each shot aimed at Phillips took effect."

This statement occurring in the Associated Press report of the shooting of David Graham Phillips by a maniac, who turned his pistol on himself and committed suicide, calls attention to the fact that any maniac who has enough of the appearance of sanity to make known his wants in a hardware store, can buy a "ten-shot" automatic pistol, put it in his pocket without any especial risk of being arrested for carrying a concealed weapon, and go forth to murder an unoffending and defenseless individual. Any sane criminal may secure a "ten-shot" automatic pistol for a small sum to wreak vengeance upon his enemy. Any lad whose mind has been fed upon stories of the exploits of "bad men" and who harbors an ambition to duplicate the career of Jesse James, can buy one of those highly destructive weapons and after he has used it the jury may be safely counted upon to acquit him because of his youth and inability to grasp the magnitude of his crime.

One theory of preventing murder is to allow citizens to bear arms, but punish those who abuse the privilege. An example of the success of this plan is pointed to by travelers, and has been frequently commented upon by readers of travel literature. There is a "native state" in India called Hyderabad, which is ruled by his royal highness, the Nizam, a pattern of the benevolent despot of the dark ages. In Hyderabad everyone is encouraged to bear arms, and nearly every adult male is a walking arsenal, bristling with knife hilts and pistol butts. But when a murder is committed the murderer is executed. The result, it is asserted, is that there are few murders in the realm of his royal majesty, the Nizam. Comparisons between the homicide record in the "native state" and adjoining division of India under British rule, as well as comparisons with the record in this country, are favorable to Hyderabad.

The proportion of lunatics who are at large and are possessed by a mania for murder is small. The 7,000 "killings" that occur annually in the United States are done chiefly by perfectly sane bearers of concealed weapons, who are not afraid of punishment because we convict less than 2-per cent of the murderers arraigned in court. If murder were punished the custom of carrying weapons would still be more dangerous to the life of the law-abiding American than it is in Hyderabad, where weapons are ostentatiously displayed as a feature of personal adornment somewhat less vain than the American red scarf of green vest because of the potential utility. But homicide figures might be reduced to a point somewhat below their present totals.

It has been amply demonstrated that lunatics in America will not convict man-killers. There are exceptions to the rule—less than two to the 100—but they merely prove it. Our condition is somewhat like that of Hyderabad might be if it were the "emotional insanity," "dementia Americana," "brainstorming," the unwritten reflection, veridical, sudden bent of passion, a disturbed mental equilibrium resulting from promiscuous and various other causes, as being sufficient to exonerate the owner of a "ten-shot" automatic pistol from discharge

Rolled up Brims Will Make Everybody Younger... Trimmings
Cover the Crown or Appear in Spots... Brown Tones
Vie With Black and White Effects.

One consolation there is for those of us who may not run away in February to Palm Beach or other desirable summer spots. We can see the spring hats coming. There is a pleasant forecast of summer joys to be in this bustling about the millinery shops when the first dainty straws, decked with flowers and heaped with maline, are displayed; and lives there a woman with soul so dead that she has not a beam of curiosity about what is to be worn "next season?"

Spring hats are always more interesting than more or less somber winter models and this year is no exception to the rule. In fact never before has spring millinery been so altogether charming and smart into the bargain. And mind you, charm and smartness are two very different things, not always interchangeable. Upturning Brims Are Youthful in Effect.

Thank goodness the mushroom epidemic is past and gone! Now instead of melancholy, drooping brims, everything rolls up a bit at the edge and the result is a certain liveliness and gaiety in the spring millinery that is sure to be flattering to all faces. These upturned brims, however, do not show a great deal of hair, for before commencing its upward slope the brim first slopes steeply downward from the crown opening and the upcurling edge forms a sort of picture frame around face and hair. The hair is pulled much lower under the hat than in some other fabric. This completely covered, little curling tendril being coaxed to peep out under the sides of the hat.

Many of these upturned brims are faced with velvet and sometimes the brim is of straw with a crown of plush or some other fabric. This method of having brim and crown of different materials is a feature of the new millinery and even when straw is used for the whole hat the crown is often made of hand sewed straw braid in a contrasting color and of a different texture. The larger hats for midsummer wear promise to be of chip, loghorn, hemp, neapolitan and other straws of a firm and supple character, but there is no question but that the coarse, heavier straws will be smartest in first models for street wear. Symmetrical Shapes and Lovely Colorings.

Some of these new hats are in most lovely colorings, subtle shades of ecru, shell-green and blue and a whole range of soft browns being obtainable now in straw braids. Brown is to have a tremendous vogue, if the signs are to be believed, and will vie in popularity with the black and white effects which are to continue fashionable through the coming season. Brown has been creeping back to favor in high class costume effects for some months, and though no color is so trying and so horrible as brown in the cheaper materials, in soft, rich tones only to be produced in rich materials, brown is charming.

Along with brown we shall see a great deal of gold, for this splendid color dominates all dress just now. A turban in gold and brown tones is among the models illustrated. This dainty little hat is made of champagne colored erin, crown being of golden brown velvet and on this are grouped star shaped ornaments of gold lace. A cluster of quills in tan and brown shades rises high at one side.

Another crushed erin model is veiled with net brown maline and at intervals around the crown are massed stiff little clusters of pale yellow roses set in bronze-green leaves.

Masses of White Tulle Used for Hat Brims

Still another hat showing this combination of brown and gold is a rose colored hemp toque with bronze velvet. Back of this brim, against the rather high crown, is a band of rich gold lace flecked with green threads. Two smart black quills slant forward from the back.

Bright green, an uncompromising shamrock shade of green, is just now the demier cri in Paris and was to be the women who adopt it by mistake, for with some faces green is ghastly. Just a touch of this vivid color, however, is rather charming, and the white-frock, accompanied by a green and white hat and a hot summer day, is the idea regals for a hot summer day.

A woman waiting in the foyer of the Hudson Theater one matinee day last week wore a small beret hat of black satin, the turned-up brim being faced with black velvet. Back of this turned up brim showed a flat wreath of green ostrich, and at the top of the white Irish crochet, rabbit bow under the chin was a tiry, tiny bow of bright green satin ribbon. The effect was charming and smart to a degree.

A big black erin hat by Charlotte, just brought over for wear at Palm Beach, is trimmed all around the crown with black champagne and with green hearts, and the brim is faced with green satin velvet with green hat will be carried a green parasol having black stripes around the edge.

A very smart spring hat in shades of green is illustrated, this model being one of the best styles on today's page. The brim of reseda green milan straw has a very dark green velvet facing which curls up over the edge. The crown is covered with lighter green pongee, a folded band of the pongee separating brim and crown particles should come off quite naturally and easily after the skin is thoroughly saturated by ordinary friction. A rough soft towel is the best for drying purposes.

The problem has been only slightly touched when artificial light is bad for the eyes as well as the nose. Much can be done to make a room light by the use of white-paint or a sunny yellow paper or thin curtains against the windows and no shades. Thin yellow silk curtains are very pretty as well as suitable in the way of lighting.

A room that is naturally dark should not be fitted up with dark furniture. Although dark picture frames are the latest fad, they do much to make a room look darker. Bright gilt frames, bath to improve the tone and color of rooms are also good in a dark room, giving an effect of light. A very dark corner can be lightened to a considerable degree by the introduction of a long mirror. This can be framed in gilt and hung with bright tapestries. Brass ornaments also aid.

Much depends on friction with the bath to improve the tone and color of the skin. It should not be as violent as often recommended, for the skin can be bruised by too much friction. Soap and friction remove the deadened parts of the skin, but these

At the back is massed the trimming, a splendid cabochon of pleated maline; rows and rows of it, shading from quite a dark shade at the outer edge to the heart of pale reseda over white. Of course, a great deal of maline is required for a cabochon of this sort, 12 yards being, none too much, but as the hat has no other trimming the cost does not mount up exorbitantly.

Milane To Be a Most Popular Trimming.

Another hat shows the use of maline as a crown covering. Anything more airy and delicately lovely for summer-time than this maline trimmed hat could scarcely be imagined. The shape is a high-crowned Pierrat model of white chip with a deep brim facing of dark blue-velvet. Yards and yards of white maline, doubled over, are used in pleated ruffles set one over the other up the sides of the blue crown and tumbling over the blue velvet brim. Over the top of the hat are arranged the huge loops of white maline, the material being used double to give greater substance to the filmy loops. Black hats made in the same way are especially rich and beautiful.

A medium-sized roll brim sailor of cream Panama hat in a band of ecru velvet around the base of the crown and above this were loops of white maline, one lapping over the next around the hat. Forty-five loops of the airy stuff were counted and the amount of maline necessary for such black velvet frock worn during tea, was a cluster of bright red geraniums. Some of the flower-trimmed hats for spring are accompanied by these smart little boutonnieres for the coat lapel, the cluster of posies being tucked into the big bandbox in which the hat is kept home.

Tea Cozy Teques Fashion's Very Latest Whirl.

Some of the new close-fitting straws have an elongated shape from back to front and they settle down over the hair exactly as a comfortable tea-cosy is dropped down over a teapot. From Camille Kofler comes one of these peculiar toques, made of bottle green straw. There is no brim, but around the base of the steep crown is a broad band of folded black ribbon, finished by a flat, broad bow at one side. A Fifth Avenue milliner is displaying a tea cosy hat of supple white straw braid, the crown being shaped in a tall peak, which is doubled over and caught to the edge of the hat just above the right ear with a silver cabochon set with emerald glass. Metal ornaments of all sorts are to be very fashionable and some of the big cabochons in antique gold or oxidized silver effects, with coral-colored, emerald or lapis lazuli settings, are richly Oriental in suggestion.

Ribbons, Ribbons Everywhere.

The woman who can make handsome ribbon bows will be in her element this spring and her services will be begged by all her friends, for never were ribbons more fashionable. The new ribbons are wonderful, too—soft as chiffon, lustrous as satin and having for all their softness a "body" and substance that make them stay in position almost without wring. Many of the rolled-brim sailor or beret shapes, as they are sometimes called, are the enormous bow-ribbon set on the edge of the crown at the back, the ribbon wings extending out to the edge of the brim at either side. A black rough straw model of this character had white gardenias all around the base of the crown, with an inch or two of the black straw showing between the flowers and across the back of the hat, perched high on the crown, was a huge bow of white ribbon. Ribbon plumes are a new millinery notion and they are so easy to make that they are sure to take like wildfire. Very broad satin, or soft tulle ribbon is gathered through the center to a long strip of ribbon wire. The ribbon is shirred thickly on the wire and the end forming the tip of the plume is hemmed neatly. The long plume may be curved around the crown or laid across it as one fancies and usually a metal ornament or a cabochon of straw hides the starting point of the plume.

Ostrich Feathers Suggest Military Trimmings.

When real ostrich plumes are used they are massed closely against the hat and do not swing out gracefully, as they did last summer. In fact, a military shako is suggested by some of the tall hats, with a drooping plume set closely against the crown in front. With tailored costumes these small, high ostrich-trimmed hats are exceedingly smart, but they have not the charm or grace of the plume-trimmed hat with more flowing lines.

Six Black and White Hats Typical of Spring Styles.

Nothing is so practical for early spring wear as a black and white hat. It harmonizes with any colored suit and has a trim, smart look among all its sister creations in every color of the rainbow. Most women insist on having at least one black or black and white hat for summer wear, and six of these "simple" models were noted at a fashionable opening the other morning.

Number one was of black Milan straw in the beret shape, with pigeon breast-plumage all around the crown back of the rolled-up brim, and a smart white egret standing stiffly upright at the back.

Number two was of coarse black straw braid, with a black velvet band around the base of the crown and a huge cabochon of lace at one side; this cabochon being made of narrow chanelly pleatings arranged in cartwheel effect.

Number three was of finer black straw, with a crown of hand-sewed black straw braid and a cartwheel of white German yal lace at the side.

Number four was of black Milan, with a crown of white kid and huge loops of white maline set around in wreath effect.

Number five was of black straw, with black and white velvet ribbon around the crown and a stiff black and white bow ornament at the back. The velvet around the crown was in two widths, two-inch black velvet ribbon being used over three-inch white velvet ribbon, the white edge showing above the black, and both white and black being used for the smart, small bow at one side.

Number six was a black and white raffia affair in a peculiar Indian weave, with two black quills slanting up from the back. This hat was in Pierrat shape.

To Clean Upholstery.

Housewives are well acquainted with the fact that upholstered furniture is a lurking place for germs and dirt. It is well to know that it may be kept clean without taking outdoors to beat or without raising a cloud of dust. Wring out of warm water a cloth which is not linty. Spread over chair or sofa and beat with a rat-tan beater, then turn the cloth and beat over the other side. Several cloths may be necessary, but all of the dust will finally cling to the surface. To remove dust from tufts use a small, stiff brush moistened with hot water.

Notes and Novelties of Feminine Interest

THE MOST CONVENIENT WORK-BOX YET.

The clearest and most compact sewing kit ever devised was shown by a woman who had brought the contrivance from Paris, and who said she had never seen its duplicate in this country. The "workbox" was a pig-skin leather case, as large around as a five-cent piece and about three inches long. Inside the leather case was another of nickel, which had a tightly fitting lid a third of its length. Upon removing the lid a thimble was revealed, and upon removing the thimble one discovered a slender column of nickel coining up through a flat disc on which the thimble had rested. Pulling this out of the case, it became apparent that the column of nickel extended all the way to the bottom of the case beneath the disc for the thimble and was divided into three sections by smaller discs, thread being wound in bobbin fashion in each section. The long hollow tube of nickel also had a fitted cover and was filled with needles.

A DOORMAT MADE OF BOTTLE TOPS.

The woman who loves to make handsome screens of bichen clothes-horses and sleeps hollow chairs out of old barrels now has a new economy find. This is the doormat made of the tops of beer bottles and other bottles having the small, close-fitting caps such as are put on beer bottles. The little circles of metal, when enough have been collected, are nailed to a board, close together, with the rough edges up, and these edges will readily remove the dirt and mud from boots worn on this novel doormat. One nail will hold each bottle top, and if the children are pressed into service enough of the bottle tops may be picked up in a few days to make a

TRIFLES FROM THE OLD REGIME.

In the window of a fashionable Fifth Avenue candy shop and luncheon rendezvous is a pretty display, in front of which more than one passerby lingers. This is a miniature set of furniture in the style of the gay empire days. Here are tiny Recamer couches, fauteuils, endsoles, dressing tables, and the like, in cleverly imitated lialud wood, with tapestry cushions and curving legs. Before the cunning dressing table sit a languishing lady in wonderfully dressed hair and an entrancing peacock, who holds a rose and a mouchoir to her bit of a china nose, with eyebrows raised exactly as though she were saying: "La, la, what a monstrous effort 'tis to be fashionable!"

WASHINGTON and LINCOLN DINNER HONORS IN DINNER FAVORS

The two holidays coming in February make the favor tables in the shops very full of interesting new notions for dinner table decoration and collation souvenirs. Washington's Birthday comes in the middle of the week this year, and there will be no week-end parties for the holiday, dinners and dances in town taking their place.

A Colonial Cotillion has been arranged by one New York hostess for the evening of the twenty-second. There will be cocked hats and long, tailored coats, made of blue and buff cambric, for the men, and the girls have been asked to come in Colonial costumes, that is, with draped polynaises over short petticoats, square-necked bodices fitting snugly at the waist line, slippers with high heels and big Colonial buckles, and, of course, powdered hair piled high on the head.

Old fashioned quadrilles will be danced in some of the figures, and the favors will include Colonial slippers filled with sweet peas, square belt-buckles, huge flowered hand-bags containing dainty lawns and lace caps—truly Colonial in style and very smart just now for breakfast wear. For the men there will be blue and buff couch pillows, paper cutters in the shape of swords, and paper weights in the shape of little composition busts of General Washington.

The supper table will be decorated, not in red, white and blue, but in blue and buff, ribbons of these colors being draped from the chandelier to the corners of the room, and the center decoration being a huge bowl of blue asters and the tiny pale yellow dwarf chrysanthemums. The "candle" of the table will be tiny ladies of the Colonial period, with powdered hair and spreading petticoats, and beneath the petticoats will be electric bulbs. These little Colonial dames will, of course, be tiny dollies, the sort that have blonde heads with natural hair and bodies of kid or stuffed muslin. The lower limbs are rubbishly clipped off, the upper portion of the doll, only being used, and the full petticoat, shirred at the waistline setting out over the electric bulb which is attached to the floor under the center of the table and along beneath the table to the outer corner. Of course, the petticoats of the Colonial dames are made of thin silk so that a pleasant glow is cast over the dining table. The doll's hair, after being arranged high on the head, may be thickly powdered.

Some very dainty Colonial dolls are shown on Washington's Birthday favors illustrated with this article. The small dame seems to be stepping out of a dignified wing chair, and the little handies are very gay, indeed, with their powder hair and lace ruffles. The hair on all these dolls is made of white cotton batting and the costumes are of crepe paper, the dolls being attached to the bonbon boxes by means of ribbon straps which pass through the lid of the box over the dolls' laps.

Cocked hats, hatches, cherries and many miniature reproductions of the immortal cherry tree are ready for fun making on the holiday. Two cherry tree favor boxes are illustrated; one a section—presumably—of the tree itself with the immortal George's hatchet stuck in the bar; the other a cocked hat made of cherry tree bark or a clever imitation of it, and modishly trimmed with a cabochon of cherries and a hatchet ornament.

Cherry bark baskets filled with candy and tied with red, white and blue ribbons, may be used afterward for work-baskets, for the red satin lining is protected by oiled paper and there is a cunning pincushion inside of the lid, made of red satin cherries fastened together.

Wonderous Jack Horner pies in the shape of cherry trees are ready for Washington's Birthday table centers. The tree, loaded down with natural sized cherries—which if the tree also were built to scale, would represent fruit as big as coconuts, is set on top of a round, "grass" covered terrace which, of course, hides enough tissue-wrapped favors to go around. George Washington and his father stand beneath the spreading tree; the father in a threatening attitude and George, clad in red, white and blue, manfully grasping a hatchet almost as large as himself.

Red, white and blue trifles are also displayed for Lincoln's Day, but the favors are much more warlike in suggestion than those for Washington's Day. There are knapsacks, canteens, small cannon, army tents, flags and little horses bearing gallant cavalrymen. There are also irresistible picnic baskets with fat black legs under simple garments of yellow cotton, Topsy from Uncle Tom's cabin, in ragged pinafore and with braided pigtails is also in evidence.

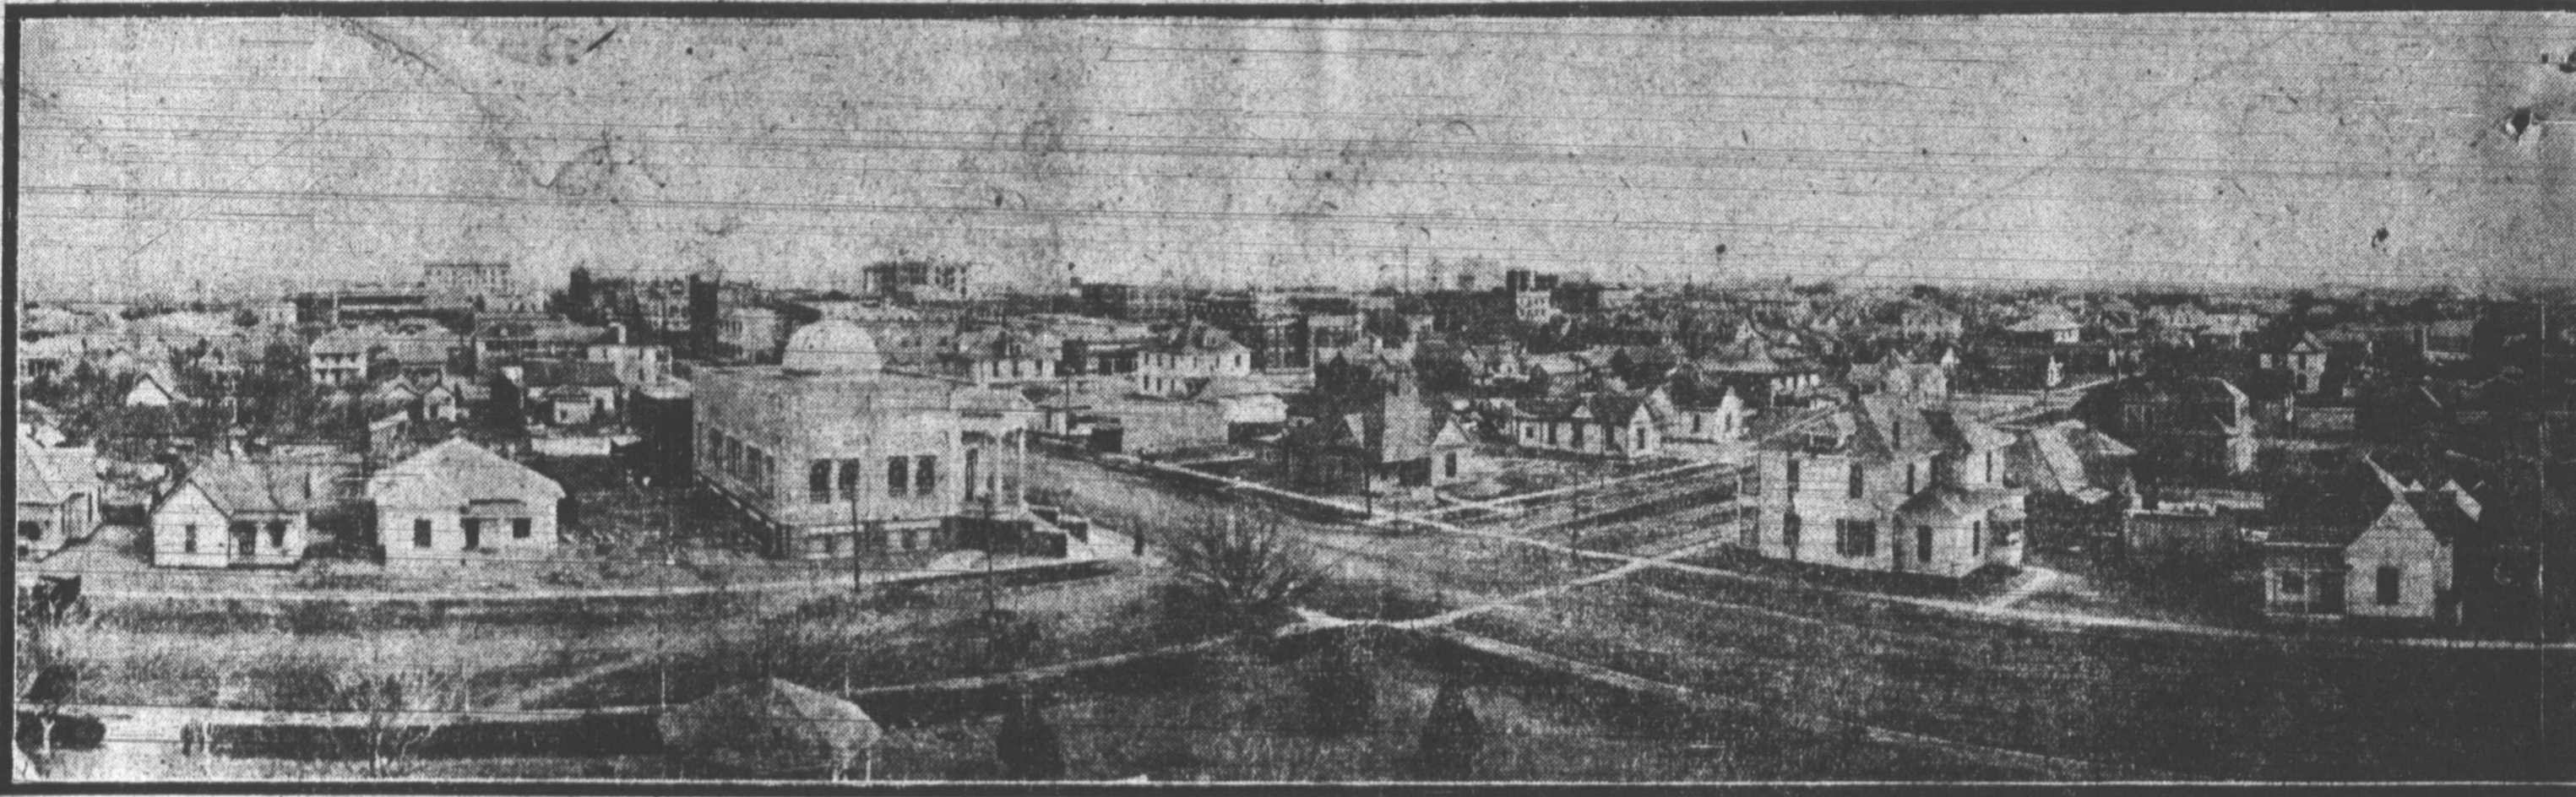

More dignified are the paper boxes and baskets with small busts or prints of the martyred President. Some of these are pictured, the oval bonbon boxes bearing a head of Lincoln on the lid being especially attractive.

A Lincoln luncheon, to take place on the 19th, the day on which the holiday will be celebrated this year, will be given by one young debutante, the February and the idea is a pretty one. All the eight young women invited are to come in wartime costumes and rare fun there will be in dressing up for this party, for everybody is to bring her furberlows in a suit case and dress will have other girls in a big room set aside by the hostess for this purpose. Curis and crispines will be worn, dangling earrings, fusch, huge bracelets, jet bracelets, lace shawls and all the old-time finery that can be conjured up from attic trunks for the occasion.

After luncheon everybody is to sing an old-fashioned song with piano or pianoforte, to be truly 1860—according to meat and mother's and grandmother's memories are being ransacked for appropriate ditties. Some of the things that will be sung are "Sweet Junonia," "I'll Be No Submissive Private tremolos and the YUGSHRDU White," "Robin Adair," with appropriate tremolos and the "I'm a Soldier." "Oh Believe Me, If All These Endearing Young Charms."

City of Wichita Falls Then and Now

A Striking Illustration of a Very Remarkable Growth

Transformed from an uninhabited prairie to the "busiest and best built city in Texas," built within comparatively a few years from a prairie dog village to a city of magnificent buildings and extensive enterprises, developed in all its material resources until it is now recognized as the most progressive of all the younger Texas cities, and possessed of advantages such as but few localities can claim, such in brief is the history of Wichita Falls.

Having just passed through the most prosperous and progressive year in the history of the city, and entering as we are upon a period that promises to eclipse in the extent of its development any twelve months of the past, it is well that we take a retrospective view of the achievements of the years gone by, as also a glimpse of the possibilities of the future.

WICHITA FALLS IN 1890.

Wichita Falls stands pre-eminently above all other Texas cities in the nature of its development. It is referred to as a model by other aspiring municipalities, and is the envy of the ambitious town-builders throughout this section of the State. It has a reputation conspicuous in its nature and far-reaching in its extent, it is known far and wide as the city that does things and is heralded as one that is peopled with a united citizenship on all questions pertaining to the welfare of the place.

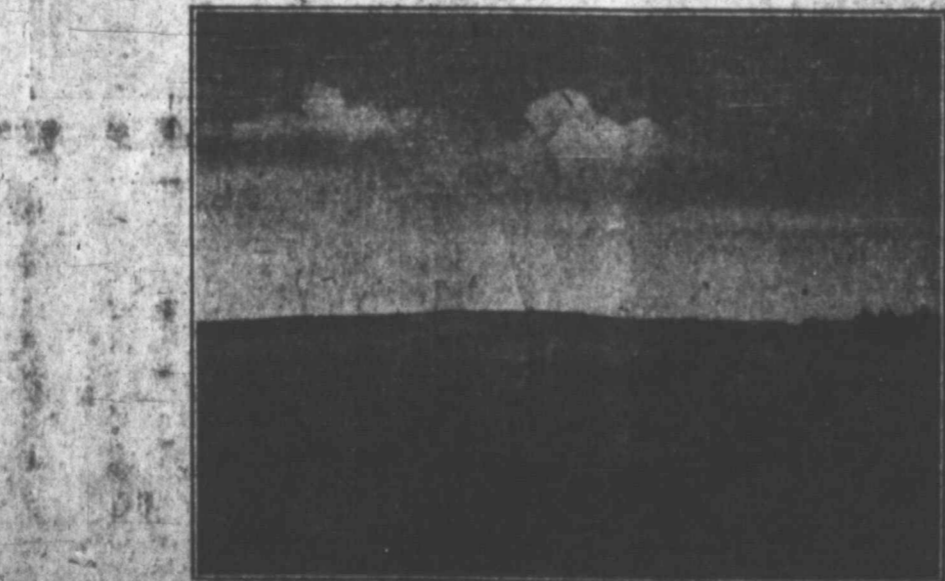

mark has been seen our people have gauged the battle and will never give up the fight until the victory is won. It is the "Wichita Falls Way" to get the things it goes after and it is not unreasonable to anticipate that in this instance as in the past, its people will be rewarded with success that they so justly deserve.

WICHITA FALLS IN 1885.

Interwoven in the fabric of the robe of progress that protects the future of this place is that same indestructible thread of enterprise that has added strength to the past and which promises to last through the years to come, at least until the city has attained that eminence in the commercial world to which the natural surroundings and the developed conditions so fully justify.

Such a change is indeed remarkable and justifies the most enthusiastic encomium in reciting local history. We see the evidence each day in every direction, and around and about us are everywhere to be found the most aggressive argument that could be conceived on behalf of any place. While these views are pronounced and very positive in their nature, they do not tell all the story and much could be said by way of emphasis in elaborating on the work of the recent past.

WICHITA FALLS IN 1910.

Other improvements of a recent nature that may be mentioned are the elegant new Union Station, constructed at a cost of $100,000, the five-story Kemp and Kell office building, valued at $150,000, the five-story Westland Hotel built and furnished at a cost of $150,000, the plant of the Northwestern Brick Company which represents an investment of $125,000 and the improvements at the plant of the Wichita Brick and Tile Company, made at a cost of $100,000. In addition to these, several hundred thousands of dollars have been spent in the construction of school buildings and churches, while new factories and wholesale houses also represent an investment of several hundred thousand dollars.

There are mentioned as the more important improvements and do not include the numerous smaller enterprises and buildings, which in the aggregate will represent quite a large sum of money. Every interest of the city has developed in like proportion and no character of improvement has been neglected in the construction of new enterprises. The banks have increased their capital, many of the mercantile firms have rebuilt and added to and increased their stocks, while the development of the educational and the religious interests have kept pace with the progress in other lines.

The record is one that our people refer to with pride, and to which they point the stranger with a feeling that the results will be understood and appreciated. In the face of such a history it is not necessary to speculate as to the future, but it will not be out of place to call attention in this connection to some of the improvements planned for the present year and in the near future. These include the construction of a million dollar packing plant, and the erection and operation of an automobile factory, to cost $200,000 for which arrangements are already in progress with actual work to begin within a short time. There is also a proposition on foot for the location of a cotton mill in Wichita Falls to cost $400,000 and several factories are in prospect for the current year. A storm sewer is being constructed and the business section is to be paved within a very short time, while the capacity of the light plant is being doubled to meet the demands of the growing city. A new gas company has been organized and proposes to furnish gas at 25c for domestic purposes, and at 5 cents for manufacturing, thereby giving Wichita Falls the best and cheapest fuel to be had anywhere in the country.

Great things are in store for 1911 and those who have kept in touch with developing conditions evince the opinion that this will be the best year in the history of the city.

NEW JAIL WILL BE THOROUGHLY MODERN

Heated by Steam, Lighted by Electricity and Will Have Modern Sewerage Arrangement.

The Wichita County is soon to have a large and modern jail building furnished jail building is now assured.

County Judge Felder today gave to the Times the plans as adopted by the Board of County Commissioners on which bids have been advertised for and which will provide a building of a first class character and entirely adequate for the use of the county for several years to come.

The building will be of brick and stone, three stories high with ground dimensions of 45 feet and 7 inches by 63 feet.

The first floor will be devoted entirely to the jailer's quarters; the second will contain four felon cells, four misdemeanor cells and one bath cell, while the third floor will contain three cells from the old jail, a cell for females and a bath cell and the remainder of this floor space will be reserved for such cells as the future may require.

The building will be heated by steam with gas heated furnaces, lighted by electricity and will have complete sewer connections.

The jail will occupy a place on the north side of the court house yard and the bids for its construction will be opened and passed upon by the Court on the 16th of the present month.

New Gin for Devo.

Devo, Okla., Feb. 4.—The citizens of Devo have responded promptly to a call for stock in a new gin to be erected here this fall. Nearly the whole amount has been raised and it has been shown by this willing spirit that our people are ever ready to help those enterprises which tend to the development of the city.

This season with one gin Devo turned out nearly 2,000 bales and it is safe to predict that with two gins the output will be more than doubled. This is a real live issue and Devo falls comes our little city will be the largest in the Big Pasture if all things which are now up are materialized.

L. Jernigan who has been selected by the County Commissioners to take charge of the county road gang has the present necessary teams and machinery for improving the highways and will now prosecute that work without delay.

A City of Splendid Opportunity

Offers Every Advantage That Could Possibly Be Desired

STORM SEWER WILL BE COMPLETED WITHIN THE NEXT FOUR WEEKS

Good progress in the work of constructing the storm sewers preparatory to paving of the streets in the business section of the city has been made this week.

George Dobson who is superintending the excavation work today finished it up to Eighth street, the extreme north end of the main sewer, leaving only the excavating for the laterals on Eighth, Ninth and Tenth streets to be completed. Mr. Dobson has three gangs of men, the shovelers, the back-filler gang and the rippers engaged in the work, the latter placing broken rock at the mouth of the big ditch.

The sewer which is of concrete is being put in by Contractor Roberts and is graduated in size from 6x7 feet at its mouth in which three large men can walk abreast, 5 feet 4 inches at Tenth street and 4 feet wide at Eighth street there being an average of about 1000 square yards of dirt to move in each block of the line.

Contractor Roberts states that about one month will be required to complete all of the sewer work and it is stated that actual paving construction will begin about April 1st, and the initial work of putting down the concrete base and laying the cross-roads blocks will be done on Seventh street between Indiana and Ohio avenues.

Will Bore for Oil

Aspermont, Jan. 28.—Parties from Corsicana have already shipped their machinery for the purpose of boring for oil in Stonewall county. The test will be made on Salt Fork in the Holt neighborhood about 12 miles northeast of Aspermont. The machinery is already on the ground and men are engaged in placing same in shape for boring. The men who are back of this enterprise are experienced oil men and they seem to know what they are doing. They say that the indications are good for both mineral and oil too. It would not surprise us at all for them to strike a gusher down there because old Stonewall county is rich in soil, climate, oil and minerals.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS AT POND'S LAUNDRY

In keeping with the many other improvements being made in the city, J. W. Pond manager of Pond's Laundry has just completed the installation of a lot of important and expensive machinery in his big plant on Ohio avenue.

Among the improvements is the very newest thing in gas engines, one of the up-to-date pieces of machinery that operates every accessory that is run by the use of pulleys and wheels in the house that is one of the most extensive in the southwest.

Manager Pond has also added the best there is in mangles, curf and collar machines and the new automatic dryer, with which it is possible to make heavy bed clothes bone dry in a few hours.

Manager Pond is not only pleased with the machinery of the plant, but is well satisfied with his daily increase of business as well.

NEW HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING

Water Main Extended

Superintendent Stokes of the Wichita Falls Water Company has devoted the past week with a large force of men to the work of changing the 4-inch water-mains under the streets that are to be paved to 8-inch pipes, and last night that work was completed.

Mr. Stokes also extended the mains from Seventh street north to the intersection of Sixth and Indiana avenue a matter that is very essential to the safety of property in that part of the city.

Every man knows what he would do until the time arrives for doing it.

FREAR-BRIN MATTRESS FACTORY IS NOW RUNNING AT FULL BLAST

BEAUTIFYING GROUNDS AT LAKE WICHITA

Manager St. Claire of the Wichita Falls Traction Company is one of the busiest men in the city these days.

About two weeks ago Mr. St. Claire began making extensive improvements at Lake Wichita and that work when added to his regular official duties keeps him constantly on the job.

The work at the Lake Mr. St. Claire says consists of grading streets building cement sidewalks and preparing for the setting of a large number of shade and ornamental trees and shrubs all of which will add to the convenience of the public and the general beauty of the Lake surroundings, for all which the Traction Company engineers have recently made a complete survey.

Mr. St. Claire hopes to have the improvements completed in two months.

The new Frear-Brin mattress factory on Tecan street is now running full blast and presents one of the busy scenes in the factory district of the city, all of the operatives this week having worked full time.

In speaking of the matter today Mr. Brin of the firm said that all of the new machinery was running like clock work and that a large amount of the finished product had already been turned out and is being delivered on the first orders.

The first consignment of mattress material arrived from the Eastern factory a few days ago and the store room at the local factory presents the appearance of a large supply house.

GOOD PROGRESS ON 4TH STREET SUBWAY

For the past two months the Fort Worth and Denver Railway Company has been engaged in the work of constructing a subway, 40 feet wide and in less than two months it is estimated that the work will be completed and the underground crossing will be thrown open to the traveling public.

A visit today to the scene of the big improvement that will cost about $20,000 revealed the fact that only two more of the five lines of piling across the eight railroad tracks there remain to be driven and that Contractor C. H. Parker has already begun the work of making the excavations with a force of men and teams that involves the removal of about 10,000 square yards of dirt.

WICHITA PLANING MILL COMPANY

Of the many manufacturing enterprises in Wichita Falls there is none which has a brighter outlook or a more promising future than that of the Wichita Planing Mill Company, organized just about one year ago.

Its principal business is the manufacture of window frames, sash doors and builders material.

The plant is equipped with the latest and most up-to-date machinery, located in its 50x150 foot, two-story brick structure where a force of about twenty men are given employment the year round at good wages.

The demand for the company's product is growing rapidly and the indications are that before it is another year older the working force will have to be doubled in order to meet the demand for its product.

Messrs. Moore & Richolt are the promoters and principal stockholders of this splendid enterprise, with Mr. J. A. Richolt as president and general manager, and Mr. W. C. Jonte superintendent or foreman of the working force.

The enterprise is one that well merits the splendid success which it is meeting with.

WICHITA FALLS FOUNDRY AND MACHINE COMPANY ENLARGES ITS CAPACITY

The Wichita Falls Foundry and Machine Co. is expecting the arrival in the new few days of a new cupola which will be installed immediately. The cupola now in use will still remain in operation giving a capacity of twelve tons of iron castings daily in addition to a production of from 1,500 to 2,500 pounds daily from the brass furnace.

The installation of the new cupola will necessitate the enlargement of the foundry building and will give employment to at least ten additional men.

The members of the firm are determined to have a plant that will take care of all Northwest Texas and Southwest Oklahoma and are going after the machine and foundry work and getting it.

They are founders for no less than half a dozen railways including the Fort Worth and Denver and the Wichita Falls and Northwestern besides their extensive trade in structural iron, gin and oil machinery castings, washweights, sewer manhole covers and other foundry products. During the three years the concern has been in operation it has grown from a small plant employing three men to a big concern employing as many as forty-five men at times with an average pay roll in excess of $3,000 per month.

In proportion of the amount asked by this firm to locate here with the results obtained no industry in Wichita Falls has brought better returns. It was established here at a cost of about $400 to pay freight and a lease for its site. Its growth has resulted from the merits of its work and products and the energy and knowledge of those at its head.

Fads and Fashions

New York, Feb. 4.—Judging from appearances the fur season is at its height just now. Be the weather cold or mild, dry and clear or gloomy and in one of the most deservedly and now, fur may be seen everywhere. Long swathing coats of rear seal, musquash or electrical seal are seen on all slaves, trimmed heavily around the hem with some contrasting fur, chinchilla, ermine, skunk or opossum, and cuffs of corresponding peltry.

Calashes of sable, chinchilla or ermine, with broad turn-over collars of zibeline, are the most popular furs worn by fashionable women, who, moreover, indulge in magnificent mantles or tailcoats of ermine, trimmed and ornamented with snails or seal. Labrador lynx and other fancy furs are made up into muffs and toques, while the ultra-smart and stylish broadtail coats, hemmed and trimmed with sable, skunk or chinchilla, according to the taste of the wearer, are the last words of distinguished fashion.

Russian pony coats are worn with collars of dooskin embroidered with silver and large tortoise shell buttons. For rainy weather these parkists do nothing but Russian coats, which are certainly most useful if not supremely elegant. Countless broad scarfs are seen, invariably bordered with fur of a contrasting color, not the least attractive being those of the soft gray mole skin lined with satin to match, and bordered with sealskin or baby bear, accompanied by voluminous muffs to match.

The new style mantles of marten and fox are extremely fashionable just now. These mantles entirely cover the dress, and have taken the place of the tailor costume for all dress occasions. It is not to be inferred that the practical coat and skirt in velvet or raiene are no longer worn by the woman or girl who walks, but for all elegant purposes it must be admitted that the mantle has taken precedence, and thrown every other kind of toilet into the shade. For this reason "les potitues robes" are so much in evidence. Women require a number of these "little dresses" to vary the effect, as their mantles are either laid aside or left open at the fashionable tea meetings. These little dresses worn with the velvet or fur mantle are so much prettier than the blouse and skirt that have formed the home dress of more than half the number of women in the civilized world for the last ten years.

Everywhere on gowns and coats and evening wraps and separate blouses and negligees, the sailor collar is prevalent. It is the one new touch in neckwear this season. As a rule it is of enormous proportions, sometimes reaching almost to the waist, and it may be of any color or fabric. Moreover, it may be or may not match the rest of the costume. The sailor collar effect may, of course, be only an apparent one. In this case the collar is simply a stiffened square applied on the blouse, and is used chiefly because it gives an appearance of height.

Fur millinery of every sort and kind is enjoying a wonderful popularity this season, and worn with stoles and muffs to match, these hats in skunk and in fox in ermine and in gray squirrel, have proved themselves equally comfortable and becoming. The furriers seem to have discovered some means, too, of making this kind of headgear comparatively light in weight, a great improvement on the state of things which prevailed only a year ago, when to wear a fur hat usually meant a bad headache for the wearer. Fortunately this is no longer the case, for one can procure nowadays soft caps in ermine and in mole skin, as well as quite large toques in fox furs, which are as light as a feather and coolly warm into the bargain. They are softly mounted, too, that they can be folded and draped to the shape of the head, almost as easily as if they were made of velvet, and in this way a deft touch here and there may often make all the difference between a final effect which is chic and striking or merely commonplace. Contrasts of brilliant color are sometimes introduced very successfully on these fur toques, in the shape of a bunch of bright purple violets perhaps, or an emerald green ostrich feather on a gray squirrel cap, or a large flower in orange velvet on a mole skin background.

In the case of the hats made in skunk and in black fox, Louis XV. bows are being used for trimming, carried out in metallic trimming or ribbon. The smartest new toques are very soft; in the hand they appear shagreened, on the head they follow every line of the head. Bristle and crown are the same height, but of different materials. A velvet crown, encircled with a band of old gold or jeweled passementerie and with a very full airrette, either white or black. This model is copied in an endless variety of colors and fabrics and is one of the most deservedly popular of the season. Airrettes and feathers of all descriptions are not placed as high as was the fashion last year, and the trimming is more toward the back than the front of the hat.

Almost without exception the fashionable hat is worn well down over the head, the head size being made large enough to permit of this. Should it prove unbecoming in those circumstances, then a halo or a band can be worn in addition, but only when the hat is otherwise unbecoming. Apparently the aim of the new fashion is to cover up as much of the hair as possible, but as this is singularly trying to the majority of women, something has to be done to mitigate the trouble, and the trim of the hat is rolled up or turned back at one side far enough to throw out at the back, but the line they give is not ugly, provided the line at the side is becoming.

High crowned turbans and full covered bonnet shapes hobnob with big picture hats. Styles in these show great variety. The foil and velvet combinations are the richest and most effective for early spring wear. All kinds of flowers are employed for them—cavallipa, narcissus, hyacinths, lilacs, violets, gardenias and roses and all the unnamed little blossoms that the manufacturers have lately introduced. Frequently the flowers are combined with velvet of their own shade or with a brighter color, green, royal blue, cerise, and white being the most popular contrasts.

One of the new colors of the season shown in Paris recently is a peculiar green blue, named for the sea. It is iridescent, and therefore friendly when the question of alliance with other shades is considered.

Some of the most luxurious lace gowns have ribbon sashes made of several lengths wide, soft satin ribbon, knotted at intervals and weighted with heavy balls or with tassels. These sashes fall at one side of the back or front from a wide girdle of the satin.

All evening gowns are longer. Round length models touch the ground. Although long and narrow lines are still imperative, the skirts are a trifle wider, so that one may now walk with comparative ease.

Fonlards promise to be as popular during the coming season, if not more so, than during the past season.

The BUSINESS AUTOMOBILE

The Modern Stage Coach

THE week of February sixth will see the first really comprehensive and representative exhibition of self-propelled work vehicles that has ever been made in this country. Indeed nowhere in the world will there be found as complete a line of commercial automobiles as will be exhibited at the Coliseum in Chicago and for the next six days thousands of people will be astonished at the vast exhibit, showing as it does, a great variety of machines that are taking the places of horse-drawn vehicles in practically every line of business in all parts of the country.

More than two months ago manufacturers of motor business vehicles engaged space and the rush continued until now not only the entire floor area but all the gallery space of the huge building has been taken up by the makers of complete vehicles and of parts and accessories.

The show will be an exposition of an industry in which, according to the best available information, more than 300 builders of complete machines and experimental constructors are now engaged, employing thousands of men. It is an industry that is already well developed and established upon a solid foundation and yet it is only the beginning of a growth the magnitude of which but few can realize.

It is estimated that there are now employed in the United States between 25,000 and 30,000 business automobiles, not one of which is used for anything else. Assuming that each one cost $2,000 these machines represent a valuation of between $50,000,000 and $75,000,000 while, if one takes into consideration the cost of garages for the storing of these machines, the valuation reaches into figures of considerable magnitude.

The growth of the business side of the automobile has been one of the wonders of the age. There is hardly any line of business in which transportation figures that motor vehicles are not employed. A few years ago such a thing as a motor truck was a curiosity. Today it is as common as the horse-drawn vehicle.

Among physicians the automobile has found a place so well established that it is hardly worth while to mention it. While it is not possible to get the number of machines owned by doctors yet it is safe to say that they number thousands and they serve not only for business but for pleasure as well. The automobile has proven of inestimable value to the men of professional callings. Contractors and architects have found them absolutely necessary. In many cities the various city departments have their machines.

In Baltimore the chief of the fire department and his assistants have automobiles. The street-cleaning department has one for the inspector. The marshal of police has one. The auto police patrol has become a fixture. The auto fire engine and hose truck will be next.

The auto fire engine has already found its place in many cities and suburbs. Springfield, Mass., has probably the most complete equipment of this kind, there being 11 pieces of apparatus of various types.

For city departments that use machines for inspections the regular touring car is used but it is a business vehicle just the same for the private use of them is generally forbidden.

But while the touring car has been pressed into some phases of business there is a distinct business car that is just as different from the family carriage. These motor vehicles are technically known as "trucks" and they vary from the light delivery wagon to the great five-ton machines that will transport thousands of pounds of anything that can be loaded upon them.

The popularity of power vehicles is spreading fast all over the country. Even the hills and badly paved streets of small towns and cities have been conquered by machines that will almost climb up the side of a wall. In cities that are fairly level and well paved the machines have been installed by the hundreds. In New York there are not fewer than 2,300 motor trucks, delivery wagons and other forms of industrial vehicles. In Chicago, in three years, the number has increased from 45 to 900, according to good information.

For heavy hauling the motor truck is particularly well adapted, especially where draught rather than speed is a requisite and it has been proven that a truck laden with two tons will go farther and more quickly and at a less cost than it would be possible to transport it by horse.

Just as the messenger auto has worked its way into popular approval so is the working machine, and during the past few weeks an endurance test from Chicago to Milwaukee and return a distance of about 230 miles, awakened the keenest interest.

The event was held on two bleak days, the wind blowing half a gale and the roads were in wretched condition. The winning car was a four-ton machine which covered the course at the rate of an average of eight miles an hour on a consumption of 67 gallons of gasoline at 15 cents a gallon and 34 gallons of oil at 50 cents a gallon, making the ton-mile cost .0133.

A 1,000-pound truck made the run on an average of 12 miles an hour on 161.3 gallons of gasoline at 15 cents per gallon, and 6 pints of oil at 50 cents per gallon, making a ton mile cost .0247.

Another notable performance for a heavy truck was a run from Detroit to New York, a distance of 937 miles in 53 hours and 5 minutes, establishing a record that is highly creditable to those who were on the machines.

While these endurance contests are interesting and go far toward demonstrating to the public that the business automobile is an important factor there are many employers of them who have found that they will easily do the work of two and three teams in certain lines.

This is true especially in light delivery where the machines can make high speed and maintain it for hours at a time.

The flexibility of the automobile is what is adding so materially to its popularity. It will not only do almost anything that horses can do but there are many other functions that it can perform. The power developed in the engine or released by the battery thru the motor can be applied in a score of ways besides moving the machine which can be used either for hauling or pulling.

Well anchored, the engine can be used for operating a winch for loading or discharging cargo. Farmers have rigged up their autos to operate small sawmills. Threshing machines have been run by them. Wherever and for any purpose small power is needed, the automobile gives it. There is hardly any limit, for, after all, it is merely a vehicle with an engine, a development of the steam traction engine that is so well known and which has done so much to make possible the planting and reaping of vast crops on thousands of acres.

Again and again the question has been asked: Will the automobile supplant the horse? The last census report shows that there are more horses today than ever. The same report also shows an astounding increase in the number of self-driven vehicles. In many instances the auto has taken is not only common, but the Army is the place of the horse. It probably will continue to displace the equine. Whether it will do so entirely is a matter for the future to decide. Men have always sought power. First war, then steam, then electricity. Now it is gasoline. The automobile, with of the Boer War has its applicability in the sand niches where other power is not available, gives the greatest promise. Not only in business, but in war the automobile now has its place. The use of ordinary machines by officers and automobiles. It is believed to be just using them for the transportation of equipment. The Pennsylvania militia employed a huge truck to carry its tents of the encampment at Gettysburg last year and the way the machine got over the rough ground was a revelation.

In the famous "war game" in Massachusetts an automobile with a machine gun mounted upon it was tried with success. To be sure it couldn't go across country, but it could follow the roads, and it frequently demonstrated its ability to get to places with astonishing speed. Scouts on motor-cycles also played their part in the "war game." The famous armored car the thing for police to use when fighting a mob. Entirely covered by heavy steel, it would easily resist rifle bullets and it would become a veritable juggernaut if it were sent into a mob.

The steady strides toward perfection that the manufacturers of automobiles are making is encouraging. The discouraging breakdowns are becoming lessened by the using of better materials and putting them together with more knowledge. The simplicity of the gasoline engine is becoming more and more a feature. The marine gasoline engine, which is a sister to the automobile, has entirely displaced the small steam yacht, and motor boats of steel 150 feet in length are now being built. The gasoline age is not coming. It is here.

HEALTH IN THE SOLAR RAYS

That sunshine and health were closely connected the human race has at ways dimly understood without worrying greatly as to scientific whys and wherefores. The discovery of germs as causes of most diseases was quickly followed by the discovery that the sun's rays killed the evil germs in very rapid order.

By this was scientifically shown the cause and the effect from which sunshine derived its health-giving qualities, namely because the solar waves aided the human body by killing off such germs as it could reach. But civilization with all its blessings brought to man a great danger as regards his health, for with civilization came two necessary but undoubted disadvantages to human health—namely houses and clothes.

Now as houses and clothes will persist in modern times, physicians have advised open-air life for the unhealthy. At first suggested for tuberculosis, it is now held up as a panacea for all ailments, while pills and powders are regarded as mere extras that at the best can only afford some temporary aid to the sick human body, which must depend on sunlight and fresh air for the "big lift" back to health.

The latest reports made by investigating scientists are that the best bath of all baths is the simple bath in sunlight. It must be taken without any clothing, but only the throat, chest and back need be exposed to the sun rays. For all cases of anemia, where the person is what one commonly calls "run down," the bath in sun light is held out as a speedy and remarkable remedy.

Above all it is said to work marvelous improvement in all cases where consumption has not reached an advanced state. Three months of sun are declared to cure slight tuberculosis; a year for those patients seriously affected. But it is for those city people who get no long vacation on farm or by the seashore, that the sun bath may hold out a very fountain of health if not of perpetual youth.

And the scientific basis of the sun bath is simple. Every one knows that sunlight is made up of all the different colors, and also of chemical rays that come to the earth, but which cannot be seen. When a pencil of sunlight falls on the human body a small part is sent back or reflected off into the air. The biggest part of this light, however, goes through the skin, through the flesh, through the blood and sets up remarkable chemical activity and changes in the tissues and in the blood in the body.

The white sunlight in passing thru the skin breaks up into all the colors of the rainbow. Each color goes thru the flesh and the blood of the sunlight bath; but the colors travel at different rates of speed and affect different parts of the body.

The red waves excite the nervous system and give strength and tone to the nerves. The orange, yellow and green rays start to work on the blood. The chemical rays, that range from blue to violet and the ultra violet rays too fine to be seen by the human eye are powerful destroyers of substances formed from decomposition and clear up the blood by stimulating its cleansing qualities.

Such is what happens in every human body exposed to sunlight. It is the secret of why open-door life and sun tan have always been accompanied by strong and sturdy health. The millions of workers in towns can participate in these benefits simply by opening the windows on sunny days and exposing their throats, backs and chests to the health-giving rays of the sun.

THIS IS MY 50TH BIRTHDAY.

Sir John Jackson.
Sir John Jackson, one of the world's most prominent contractors on public works, was born in York, England, Feb. 4, 1851, and received his education at the University of Edinburgh. His first notable achievement as a civil engineer was in connection with the construction of the Manchester ship canal. He laid the foundations of the Tower Bridge, London, constructed the docks and other works of the Dover harbor, and also the extensive works of the admiralty at Devonport and Simons-Bay, South Africa, and Singapore. He also was the contractor of the railway across the Andes, connecting Chile and Bolivia. In addition to his great work as an engineer, for which he was created knight in 1895, Sir John Jackson served his country as a member of the royal commission which investigated the conduct of the South African war.

AVIATION'S DEATH TOLL in the PAST TWELVE MONTH

By A. R. Parkhurst Jr.

Arch Hoxsey in a Wright Biplane.

John B. Moisant in a Machine of his Own Design and Manufacture

Cecil Grace who was Drowned in the North Sea

Ralph Johnstone and the Machine that Caused his Death

Thirty-three dead—twenty-nine with in the past twelve months—is the appalling toll Death has levied upon aviation. Tragedy has followed tragedy so closely that the paramount question now in the minds of those actively or passively interested in aviation is: "Can man ever outstrip Death in the struggle for the mastery of the air by heavier than air machines?"

Scientists unequivocally assert that man will triumph. Naturally, when the wonderful achievements of the last three years in this direction are taken into consideration, their claims do not seem to be altogether unreasonably. But the man on the ground, who has visited the various aviation fields and watched with awe the performances of the man birds, is rather inclined to the opinion that Death has a long lead in the race and that man has a big handicap to overcome.

Those who have followed aviation closely vividly recall the afternoon of September 17, 1908. For on that date Lieut. Thomas E. Selfridge, of the United States Army, as the guest of Orville Wright at Fort Meyer, Va., fell to his death when the air craft in which they were sailing careened and buried them to the earth. Selfridge was killed instantly—the very first life to be sacrificed on the altar of aviation—and Wright was so badly injured that he did not attempt another flight for nearly a month thereafter.

From then on there has been an unending procession of casualties and fatalities, and in almost every instance the victims were men who stood at the very top of this nebular profession.

America has been hard hit in this respect. For in the deaths of Ralph Johnstone, John B. Moisant, Arch Hoxsey and Cecil Grace, she has lost those men who did more towards spreading this nation's fame in the world of aviation than any others. Another strange coincidence connected with the tragic deaths of these most daring sky pilots is that the majority died shortly after having established a new world's record of some sort.

Johnstone was killed shortly after having hung up new altitude figures. True, these were soon supplanted by Arch Hoxsey, his hangar-mate, but the latter did not achieve them until after Johnstone's death. Moisant was killed at New Orleans many months after having established an "across the English Channel flight with a passenger" record. Several weeks after soaring to an altitude never achieved by man before, Hoxsey came to his untimely end and, incidentally, on the same day Moisant was killed and only an hour or so after dispatching a message of condolence to the sisters of Moisant.

The close of Cecil Grace's career furnishes one of the saddest chapters in aviation. An American born and a nephew of the late Mayor Grace, of New York City, young Grace had spent the greater part of his life in England. He took up aviation within the past year and soon came to be known as one of the most daring and successful of those who soared through the air. In attempting a flight from English to French shores over the English Channel he successfully negotiated the first leg of his journey and was well started on the return trip when he ran into a fog bank. He lost his bearings and was soon enveloped in the fog. This was the last seen of him. Several days later his cap and goggles he wore were picked up by a fisherman in the North Sea. Ten days later the wreckage of his craft washed up on the Belgian shore. So far the body of the young aviator has not been recovered.

The long succession of tragedies on aviation fields has had a marked effect upon those interested in this, the most thrilling of all sports. Therefore the men performing for the edification of the thousands who paid admission to the parks vied with each other in doing stunts of the hair-raising, nerve-racking order. Straight swoops, vicious, quick turns and almost perpendicular plunges—earth-ward were a few of the thrillers that never failed to evoke the deafening cheers of the morbidly curious who flocked to the meets. These dare devils of the profession were raised to pliancy and idealized and worshiped with all the ardor that hero worshipers could lavish upon them.

Time and again these performers were warned and told sooner or later misfortune must overtake them if they persisted in their reckless pursuits. But the love of adulation and the lure of gold was in their blood, and they heeded not the warning of the older and saner exponents of the sport. Truly, it might be said that in striking a balance sheet for the year just closed one side of the ledger would be bordered with gold, while the other is piped in black.

The spirit of commercialism soon pervaded aviation and as a result those who took it up amassed considerable fortunes in a few months. Johnstone left a handsome estate, and made it all within a few months in pursues, prizes and fees won at aviation meets throughout the country. Moisant died rich, although less than a year so ago he was an impecunious soldier of fortune who had just returned from South America, where he took part in one or two of the revolutions that every once in awhile attracted the attention of the world at large to Latin-America. The fees and prizes won by Hoxsey, the Beau Brummel of aviation, were enormous, and he frequently earned more by an hour's climb into the clouds than the average fairly successful business man makes by a year's hard work. Grace was well off in his own right, but he, too, won golden prizes that greatly augmented his private fortune.

The following table, chronologically arranged, will give the reader some idea of the part death has played in aviation for the year 1910:

- January 4.—Leon Delagrang, one of the most famous of French aviators, killed in a Blériot monoplane near Bordeaux, France. Delagrang was making a turn at a high speed when a wing of the monoplane broke.
- April 2.—Hubert Le Blond, another well-known French aviator, killed near Brigue, Switzerland, for a prize of $20,000 for a flight to Milan. He tried to make a landing within 30 miles of Milan. He was with in 10 feet of the ground when the wind caught his Blériot and dashed it against the rocky surface of the earth. He died September 27.
- September 23.—George Chavez, Peruvian, had flown over the Alps from Brigue, Switzerland, for a prize of $20,000 for a flight to Milan. He tried to make a landing within 30 miles of Milan. He was with in 10 feet of the ground when the wind caught his Blériot and dashed it against the rocky surface of the earth. He died September 27.
- September 25.—Edmond Paillet, a Frenchman, killed at Chartres, France, while flying with a passenger, who escaped with slight injuries. The machine was with in 50 feet when a piece of canvas was ripped from one of the planes, causing it to turn turtle.
- September 28.—Flockmann, German, was in a machine that collapsed near Mannheim, Germany, at a height of 150 feet. He died the next day.
- October 1.—Herr Haas, German, killed at Wellen, on the Moselle River, Germany, by a fall from his airplane.
- October 7.—Captain Malzewitch of the Russian Army, fell from a Far-broke while Wachter was soaring at a height of 500 feet.

July 10.—Daniel Kinet, a Belgian while flying a Farman biplane, fell at Ghent, Belgium. The rudder of the machine broke.

July 12.—The Hon. Charles Stewart Rolls, youngest son of Lord Llangatlock, killed at Bournemouth, England, while flying a ShortWright biplane. The front control of the machine broke, hurling the sky-pilot to the earth and killing him instantly.

August 3.—Nicholas Kinet, also a Belgian, and a brother of Daniel, was flying 650 feet when a rear wire in his Farman biplane broke stopping the engine, thereby precipitating the machine to earth.

August 20.—Lieut. Marquis Vivaldi, of the Italian army, killed near Rome in a Farman biplane, while attempting to descend from a dizzy height.

August 27.—Van Massyck, a Dutchman, was making a cross-country flight in a Sommer biplane, when the motor stopped, causing the machine to turn turtle.

September 23.—George Chavez, Peruvian, had flown over the Alps from Brigue, Switzerland, for a prize of $20,000 for a flight to Milan. He tried to make a landing within 30 miles of Milan. He was with in 10 feet of the ground when the wind caught his Blériot and dashed it against the rocky surface of the earth. He died September 27.

September 25.—Edmond Paillet, a Frenchman, killed at Chartres, France, while flying with a passenger, who escaped with slight injuries. The machine was with in 50 feet when a piece of canvas was ripped from one of the planes, causing it to turn turtle.

man biplane, at St. Petersburg when up 1,640 feet.

October 25.—Captain Madlot, of the French army, at Douai, France, was flying 100 feet and trying to stop his engine and plane to the ground. The machine upset, hurling him to the earth.

October 24.—Lieutenant Monte, of the German army, killed near Mudgeburg while piloting the ground in a Wright machine. It turned turtle and he was instantly killed.

October 26.—Fernando Blanchard, a Frenchman, at Issy les Mouligneux, France, was preparing to land at the finish of a 140-mile flight from Bourges. He was flying at great speed when 150 feet aloft and lost control of his monoplane.

October 27.—Lieutenant Raglietti, of the Italian army, was killed at Cestello, Italy. The aeroplane tipped and Raglietti was unable to right it.

November 17.—Ralph Johnstone, flying partner of Hoxsey at Denver, Col., was making a spiral glide at a height of 500 feet, when the lower left piece of his machine broke. He fell to the earth and was dead when help reached him. Johnstone was the first of America's famous and popular aviators to lose his life while in flight.

December 3.—Lieutenant Cammarata, of the Italian army, while flying with a soldier near Rome, in a Farman biplane, lost control of the machine and dropped. Both were killed.

December 23.—Cecil Grace, a nephew of former Mayor Grace, of New York, disappeared while flying on a return trip across the English Channel from France. He was flying in a Wright biplane. He was drowned in the North Sea, his cap and goggles being picked up by a passing ship a week after his disappearance in a heavy fog.

December 25.—D. Picolo, killed in an Antoinette machine at San Paulo, Brazil.

December 28.—Alexandre Lafont fell 200 feet on what was to have been the start of a flight to Brussels, with

M. Paula, who owned the machine. Both were killed.

December 30.—Lieutenant Caumont, of the French Army Aviation Corps, while testing a new monoplane at Versailles, fell 50 feet and died soon afterwards.

December 31.—John B. Moisant, the American aviator, who won the statue of Liberty flight prize, killed while trying for the Michelin prize near New Orleans. He was flying in a Blériot monoplane. He was the first aviator to make a flight across the English Channel with a passenger.

December 31.—Arch Hoxsey, the famous Wright Aviator, killed at Los Angeles, Cal. He was the Beau Brummel of American aeroplanists and one of the most popular with the crowds that attended the meets about the country.

From the foregoing it can be seen that every country has offered its man—some three or four. Some have died leaving a word or two, or perhaps, records that will long stand by which they will be recalled by the pension-allowing and morbid public, which gathered to see them take their fatal plunge. Some met death from dizzy heights; Johnstone, for instance, who plunged straight down to the earth from an altitude of 8,000 feet. Others died as though from a tumble from a nosetop.

Some of the victims of aviation died as soldiers, inasmuch as they were regularly detailed to the aviation corps of the armies in which they held commissions. These nations honored them and they were buried with all the pomp and ceremony attending the laying to rest of a military hero. Lieut. Selfridge (Uncle Sam's only army of flier to lose his life in the skies, was not officially detailed to make his flight with Orville Wright, which cost him his life. Nevertheless the fatality occurred on an army reservation and at a time when Wright's flights were being held under the auspices of the War Department. Thus Selfridge can be included with other military heroes, who sacrificed their lives in the cause of a new science, which many still believe will yet revolutionize warfare.

Gould-Decies Wedding

New York, Feb. 4.—The wedding of Miss Vivian Gould, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould, and Lord Decies of London, which is to take place Tuesday, is the talk of fashionable New York. The affair promises to be more gorgeous and elaborate than was contemplated in the early plans. From present indications it will be the most notable affair of the kind that has taken place in the metropolis in a long time. The ceremony will be performed at 4 o'clock in the afternoon in fashionable St. Bartholomew's Church in Madison Avenue. Bishop David H. Greer will officiate, assisted by the rector, the Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks. Lord Decies will await his bride at the altar with his cousin, Lord Alastair Graham of the Royal Navy, a son of the Duke of Montrose, who will be his best man. Miss Edith Gould will attend her sister as maid of honor. The bridesmaids will be Miss Emilie Holmes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Japhis Holmes of New York; Miss Louise Cromwell, daughter of Mrs. Oliver Cromwell of Washington; Miss Beatrice Claffin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Claffin of New York and Lakewood; Miss Allison Pierce, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winslow S. Pierce of Bayville, L. I.; Miss Hope Hamilton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Hamilton of New York, and Miss Hannah Randolph, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Randolph of Philadelphia.

Miss Gloria Gould, the five-year-old sister of the bride, and Miss Diana Dalziel, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. Y. Dalziel, will be the bridesmaids. The ushers are to be Earl Percy, Lord Cairns, Phoenix Ingraham, Robin Gray, Robert H. Rippeel, Frank W. Crowninshield, Monseur Robinson and Anthony Drexel, Jr. Tonight, at Delmonico's, Lord Decies gives his bachelor dinner, with his best man, the ushers and several other intimate friends as his guests.

The bride will enter the church on the arm of her father, Mr. George J. Gould. She will wear a robe of white satin trimmed with point lace. The veil will be of point lace and will extend to the hem of the train. After the church ceremony the bridal party and guests will be driven over to the Fifth Avenue home of the Goulds, where an elaborate reception will be held. For the last week mechanics, decorators and chefs have been hard at work preparing for the wedding and reception. The town house of the Goulds has passed through an internal transformation, and has left the hands of the painters, decorators and upholsterers more magnificent than ever.

The bride of next week is not yet eighteen years old and made her social debut only a few weeks ago. She is the fourth child of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould, there being two older brothers, Kingston and Jay, and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, Jr., an older sister. She has a brother and two sisters much younger than herself, Miss Gloria Gould being the baby of the family. Miss Gould is rather tall, slender and dark, with a richly colored complexion, and is fond of outdoor sports. Last May she accompanied her father abroad to attend the wedding of Miss Margaret Drexel, sister of her brother-in-law, and Viscount Maidstone, and it was during this visit that she first met her future husband.

Lord Decies is forty-five years old and succeeded to his title a short time ago through the death of his brother. He is a Lieutenant Colonel of the Seventh Hussars and a member of the distinguished service Order. He has fought in many campaigns, serving against the Mad Mullah, in the Matabele war and the Boer war. He is famous as a polo player and a cricketer and is keenly interested in hunting and racing.

The peerage of Lord Decies is an Irish one and does not carry with it a seat in the House of Lords. It was created just a century ago in favor of the first Marquis of Waterford's younger brother, William Beresford.

The members of the Beresford family are closely linked to America through marriage. The youngest brother of Lord Decies, the Hon. Arthur Beresford, married Miss Florence Miller of Providence, R. I., and they now make their home on a ranch in Alberta. John George Beresford, another of the family, took for his bride Miss Emilie Jacin, daughter of the late Adrian Jacin of New York. Then there was Lord William Beresford, who married the American widow of the Duke of Marlborough, who before her first marriage was Miss Lillian Price, daughter of Commodore Cléore Price of the United States Navy.
