COMING SUNDAY

Nursing

Since May Midland Memorial Hospital has been successful in recruiting nurses from all over the country. Recently the hospital attracted three young Filipino nurses. Read Sunday how these nurses are adjusting to West Texas and an American hospital.

Dancing

Headed for Forth Worth as a dancer in Casa Manana's production of "Lorelei," Midlander Kelly Patterson is teaching several dance classes at Theatre Midland before he leaves. Kelly talks about his past, present and future in Sunday's Reporter-Telegram.

Caring

Everyone needs a big brother, sister or special friend who listens, answers questions and cares. Big Brothers/Big Sisters matches special people with kids who need a friend. Read about it Sunday in the Lifestyle section of The Reporter-Telegram.

Elevator trappings

President Reagan smiles as he apologizes to representatives of the National Health Fair in the state dining room of the White House Thursday for being late. Reagan, Secretary of Health and Human Services Richard Schweiker and three others were caught in the elevator for about five minutes due to a power outage at a nearby power plant.

Ups, downs, trap Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The job of president has its ups and downs and sometimes it goes nowhere.

For five minutes Thursday it went nowhere. The leader of the free world, the most powerful man in the United States, the head of his party and his nation, was stuck in an elevator between floors.

At the White House, yet.

"I don't know just how to approach this and tell you why we are late," explained President Reagan, a little sheepishly, to 200 people he'd kept waiting.

"In 18 months it never happened," he said. "What really scared me was when the gentleman who's been here for many, many years, who was with us, said it never happened (before). We've been (between) here and the floor below in the elevator. We had plenty of time to get acquainted."

The "we" were Secretary of Health and Human Services Richard Schweiker, Secretary of Education T.H. Bell, the president, elevator operator Freddy Mayfield and a Secret Service agent.

"I've been stalled in elevators many times, but I never felt so secure," said Schweicker. "I felt sure that help was on the way."

The elevator was taking the five from the ground floor to the main first floor where representatives of National Health Fair programs were waiting in the fancy state dining room.

The quintet spent a cozy five minutes in the elevator.

"I asked the president what happened when the elevator stopped," said deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes. "He said 'we looked at each other for a while and looked at the ceiling for awhile.'"

The health fair people noticed only that the lights flickered for short periods. Later it was learned that a fire in a power station nearby had caused similar momentary problems in a wide area of Washington.

The Capitol switched to an emergency system. It did not provide enough power for air conditioning so members of the House and Senate, both meeting in full session, pulled out fans as conditions in the chambers grew uncomfortably hot and muggy.

It wasn't much better in parts of the White House.

Outside, the temperature was 86 degrees with humidity at 66 percent, a typically miserable August afternoon in Washington.

"I began to wonder if I might not become a permanent fixture" of the elevator, Reagan said.

After he left the state dining room, Reagan said, "I believe I'll take the stairs — I need the exercise."

Israel keeps bombing, refuses to pull back

By The Associated Press

Israeli jets and gunboats bombarded west Beirut today after Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government refused U.S. and U.N. demands to give up new military gains in the Palestinian guerrilla stronghold.

The warplanes bombed near the Lebanese prime ministry, collapsing two four-story apartment buildings in rapid divebombing sorties that shattered a 30-hour lull in the war.

There was no immediate word on casualties. But ambulances rushed victims to the American University hospital from the bombed buildings, which are about 300 yards from Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan's office.

One gunboat salvo struck near the abandoned beachfront Summerland Hotel about a half mile south of west Beirut's downtown. Guerrillas fired massive barrages of anti-aircraft fire but they scored no apparent hits.

Government sources in Jerusalem said earlier that Israel was giving U.S. mediator Philip C. Habib time to negotiate a PLO withdrawal. Habib met again today with Lebanese officials, who said the Palestine Liberation Organization was ready to leave within 15 days of the arrival of a multinational peace force.

Police said 12,000 people streamed out of west Beirut on foot and in bumper-to-bumper traffic Thursday after Israeli forces opened one exit for eastbound travel, and that the exodus was continuing this morning. But Israel maintained its 12-day-old blockade of food, water and power supplies to the 480,000 civilians believed remaining in west Beirut.

Correspondents in Beirut said Israeli tanks had dug in about 1.2 miles north of the Beirut international airport near the Henry Chehab Lebanese army barracks in order to tighten a noose around the Palestinian refugee camp of Bourj el-Barajneh, a major PLO stronghold.

But PLO spokesman Mahmoud Labadi said Israeli armored forces pulled out of the barracks and rolled back to the golf club ground near the airport.

Labadi also said the Israeli tank push to seize the mid-city horse racetrack was repulsed and the Israelis "could not advance one single inch. They are back at their original positions."

Labadi admitted, however, that Israeli troops were in the pinewood forest behind the race grounds and that they more or less controlled the seaside Ouzai area north of the airport, three miles south of downtown west Beirut.

House rejects nuke freeze

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says the House of Representative's dramatic rejection of a nuclear weapons freeze proposal "signals to the Soviet Union" America's support for his arms control policy.

In a blow to the nuclear freeze movement, the House voted 204-202 against the resolution Thursday night.

Then it proceeded to approve 273-125 a White House-backed substitute that makes no mention of a freeze but instead supports U.S.-Soviet negotiations now under way in Geneva to reduce strategic arms.

Reagan said the House action "provides strong support for our negotiators" in Geneva. He said it "signals to the Soviet Union the American people's determination to seek peace through arms control agreements that will effectively reduce the nuclear arsenals of both sides."

The "statesmanlike position," as Reagan put it, was adopted after nine hours of emotional debate on the House floor, capped by shouts from freeze supporters and opponents watching the see-saw vote.

The voting on the non-binding resolution came a day before the 37th anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima, an attack noted by numerous speakers.

Although it was the first major national loss for the grassroots freeze movement, its leaders said they were not disheartened.

"We are disappointed," said Randy Kehler, national coordinator of the freeze campaign, told a Capitol news conference. But he said the close margin "demonstrates the great progress which the freeze campaign has made."

"The real vote, however, will come this fall," Kehler added. One American voter in four will have a chance to express opinions on the freeze since referenda are expected to be on the ballots of seven states and a number of cities.

The defeated freeze proposal called for an immediate halt to the production, testing and deployment of nuclear weapons. The Republican-sponsored substitute urged efforts to achieve "an equitable and verifiable agreement which freezes strategic forces at equal and substantially reduced levels."

Kehler and Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., attributed the narrow loss to intense administration lobbying. "The White House pulled out every inside tool they had," Markey said.

Throughout the day, Reagan made several phone calls to try to win votes for the decision that both sides agreed would be very close.

In a last-minute letter to Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich., chief sponsor of the substitute proposal, Reagan said approval of the freeze "would undercut our negotiators by suggesting to the Soviets that we would be willing to accept something less than the reductions we have proposed."

It was a theme echoed throughout the debate by freeze opponents.

Boardings continue at record pace

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

"If the economy has cooled off a bit or if the recession has hit Midland, it's certainly not evident at Midland Regional Airport," said Col. Wilson Banks, director of aviation, in announcing record-setting boarding figures at the airport.

For July, 62,991 boardings were recorded at the airport, which is 13.5 percent above the previous July which had been a record setting month in 1981 with 55,490.

Total boardings for the year to date number 399,552. This, said Banks, is 79,693, or 24.9 percent above the 1981 figure of 319,859 for the same period.

Midland Regional Airport is served by Texas International, American Airlines, Southwest, Muse Air, Trans-Central and Air Midwest.

Banks said he wasn't surprised at the high figure on boardings since he sees the people every day at the airport. He started noticing this monthly increase in boardings in July 1981.

However, he said, he doesn't expect the 25 percent increase to hold out through the end of the year. "The closer we get to the close of the year, we'll see the figures dropping down close to what they were last year."

The increase in boarding figures also reflects a continued need for scheduled expansion of the parking system and revision of the road and drainage system.

"The engineers are still on schedule with their plans and specifications. They should be completed by October or November," Banks noted.

Of the overflow parking lot which has been filled for months, Banks said parking there is a mess. But "it's impossible to mark spaces for that lot" because it's never empty enough.

Nation's unemployment rate pushing close to 10 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's unemployment rate pushed closer to the 10 percent level in July, hitting a 9.8 percent rate, the highest in 41 years, the government reported today.

The jobless rate had held nearly steady as the recession continued through the spring — rising only from 9.4 percent in April to 9.5 percent in May and June. But today's Labor Department report was filled with newly discouraging figures.

In July, the report said, about 10.8 million Americans were officially unemployed — actively looking for jobs but not finding them — about 360,000 more than in June. About 1.5 million more have given up, the government reported last month.

July's jobless rate for adult males, who make up the bulk of the nation's blue-collar workers, rose to 8.8 percent, a post-World War II record. Unemployment for blacks held steady at 18.5 percent, although the jobless rate for black teen-agers declined slightly to 49.7 percent from June's 52.6 percent.

Unemployment rates rose 0.3 percentage point to 8.7 percent for whites and to 8.4 percent for adult women of all races.

The current overall jobless rate is already the highest since the 9.9 percent for all of 1941 at the end of the Great Depression. Unemployment hasn't been over 10 percent since the 14.6 percent of 1940.

In the last 13 months alone, the unemployment rate has risen from 7.2 percent to 9.8 percent, the government's commissioner of labor statistics, Janet Norwood, said.

In that period, she said in testimony before the congressional Joint Economic Committee, unemployment rose by 2.9 million as 1.8 million people joined the labor force and the number of available jobs fell by 1.1 million.

Summing up the newest figures, she said simply, "The employment situation data released today show little labor market strength in July."

In advance of today's report, economists cautioned that unemployment could well climb even higher, despite some encouraging signs that a modest recovery from the recession is beginning — or is about to begin. Employers, the economists noted, are typically slow to rehire laid-off workers until a recovery is well under way.

The number of people who involuntarily accepted part-time work for lack of full-time jobs rose by 48,000 to 5.5 million. The number of such workers rose sharply earlier in the recession, which set in last summer, then declined in May and June before last month's gain.

Total employment held steady at 99.7 million in July, down from the 99.8 million reported for June.

Those figures were all adjusted by government economists to discount for normal seasonal variations, such as increases in the labor force that typically occur each summer. The adjustment is aimed at making the figures more useful in analyzing long-term trends in the economy.

Before such adjustment, employment rose about 800,000, but department economists said that increase was almost exactly in line with what would normally be expected at this time of year.

Without such adjustment, July's unemployment rate would have been 9.8 percent, the same as the figure for June.

Reagan's tax boost won't come easily

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, who says he had to swallow hard before calling for higher taxes, is having little luck convincing some conservative allies in the House to help him win a $98.9-billion election-year tax increase.

A tax boost is the "price we had to pay" to win further spending cuts in a campaign to reduce interest rates, Reagan said in a letter to columnist John Lofton, which was the subject of a copyrighted story in today's Washington Times.

Reagan recalled the coalition of House Republicans and conservative Democrats that produced major tax and spending victories last year. "We found we could not put last year's coalition together (again) unless we agreed to some increases in revenue," he wrote.

"Personally, I had to swallow very hard. I believe in 'supply side,' and that tax increases slow the recovery," Reagan wrote. "I'm also determined that we haven't had all the spending or tax cuts we're going to get," he added.

The letter was an effort by Reagan to put down a growing conservative rebellion against the tax increase. Another move was to summon more than 50 congressmen to the White House on Thursday for a little friendly persuasion.

Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., told reporters that under no circumstances could he support the tax bill. "It's an abomination, it's counterproductive to everything the president believes in and stands for."

Reps. William Dannemeyer and John Rousselot, both R-Calif., agreed.

All sides in the tax debate say there is little chance the tax increase can become law unless at least half the 192 GOP members of the House support it. About 80 of them have signed a letter to Reagan saying they will oppose the bill on grounds it runs counter to the economic program passed last year.

Meanwhile, the Senate-House conference committee that is writing a compromise version of the tax bill approved a higher tax on employers to finance unemployment compensation. It would cost employers an extra $1.20 per month per worker.

But the panel delayed until next week consideration of a plan to provide an additional 10 to 13 weeks of unemployment benefits — to a maximum of 49 to 52 weeks — for many of the nation's jobless. Republican leaders hope such a benefits increase would make the tax bill easier for some lawmakers to accept.

The Senate, in a non-binding 84-13 vote Thursday, urged the committee to approve higher benefits.

Hot temperatures to remain for Saturday

Today's bright and clear skies may not shine on Midland Saturday, but the hot temperatures should remain.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, Saturday is expected to be partly cloudy with a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms. Temperatures are expected to climb into the upper 90s once again.

Tonight will remain fair and warm with the mercury expected to drop only near 70.

Winds will be variable at 5-10 mph tonight and Saturday.

Thursday's blazing high of 100 degrees missed the record high of 103, set for that date in 1964, by only three degrees. The overnight low of 69 was eight degrees warmer than the record low of 61, set in 1975.

Walgreen's to give refunds on Oraflex

Walgreen's pharmacy will make refunds to customers who have purchased Oraflex, an arthritis drug known as benoxaprofen. Oraflex was voluntarily removed from the market Wednesday by Eli Lilly and Company.

"For any FDA (Food and Drug Administration) recall, the merchandise will be taken back and the customer will be refunded," Paul Tunell, Walgreen's chief pharmacist, said today. "This is Walgreen's policy on any FDA recall, including Oraflex."

In a story in Thursday's edition of The Midland Reporter-Telegram, a spokesman for Walgreen's stated he believed federal regulations prohibited Walgreen's from making such refunds.

Armed robbery suspect held in Roswell

A man wanted in connection with the Wednesday night armed robbery of a stranded woman motorist near the OIME plant on U.S. 80 is being held in Roswell, N.M., following his arrest there on a warrant issued by Midland County authorities.

Jim Artirp, 29, of Roswell, was arrested about noon Thursday on a warrant charging him with the aggravated robbery of a 21-year-old Odessa woman who told Midland sheriff's deputies she was robbed of jewelry and a small amount of cash after her car broke down and she accepted a ride from a man who had stopped to see if she needed assistance.

The woman said she pulled off the highway after her car developed engine trouble two miles east of OIME on U.S. 80 about 8 p.m. Wednesday. She was walking toward Midland when the man pulled up and offered to help. Instead, he pulled onto a nearby side road and robbed her at gunpoint.

She jumped from the car and escaped on foot after the man indicated he was going to rape her, according to deputies, who said the woman was able to provide a description and license number of the car he was driving.

Roswell authorities said the suspect is expected to be returned to Midland sometime today.

Andrews girl dies from accident injuries

ANDREWS — An Andrews girl died at Odessa Medical Center hospital Thursday afternoon from injuries suffered in a single car accident about a mile southeast of Andrews Tuesday night.

Geraldine Grantham, 7, of Star Route, Box 82 T, was pronounced dead at 3:20 p.m.

Also injured in the rollover were passengers Randy Hanks, 11, Cindy Sullens, 10, and Kandy Grantham, 10, all of Andrews. The driver, James E. Bass, 15, was uninjured.

According to Department of Public Safety trooper Edward Angel, the car was traveling east on Harrison Street when it swerved out of control, left the road and rolled over.

Odessa man critical after accident

ODESSA — A 23-year-old Odessa man is in critical condition in the Odessa Medical Center Hospital's intensive care unit after the vehicle he was driving struck a semi-trailer truck early this morning in the 200 block of University Boulevard.

Michael Arthur Hanson, 4018 Amherst, was hospitalized after the 1979 Chevrolet Suburban he was driving collided with a Rainbo Bakery Truck driven by James M. Dailey, 32, of Lubbock.

Odessa police department reports indicate the semi was struck while blocking both east and west bound lanes of the four-lane boulevard as the driver attempted to back into a private driveway at approximately 12:58 a.m.

Sheriff's department investigates theft of water truck

The Midland County sheriff's department is investigating the apparent theft of a red, 1974 Chevrolet water truck at 349 Ranch Estates, Shawnee St., reported at 8:28 a.m. Thursday. The truck belonged to HBH Construction Co., Inc., of Odessa and was valued at $14,000.

Nancy brings drug campaign to Iowa

By DONNIE RADCLIFFE
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

IOWA CITY, Iowa — President Reagan billed her as the "feature act" in the Reagan road show, and Thursday First Lady Nancy Reagan brought her campaign against drug and alcohol abuse to the Iowa heartlands.

"While the cities and suburbs get the most attention," she told an audience of youth and parents in Ames, "rural areas are increasingly getting caught up in the drug culture. Really, no area is safe from the threat."

She was the second Reagan to show up in the Hawkeye State this week, and she laughed when she said, "I hope you don't get tired of them." The president was here on a fence-mending trip Monday to reassure farmers and other supporters that he hadn't forgotten their election-time help.

Mrs. Reagan was in Iowa to inspect drug abuse prevention and treatment programs in several cities and to see Gov. Robert D. Ray, with whom she had a working lunch.

Earlier in the afternoon, Mrs. Reagan was a guest on a call-in show on radio station WHO in Des Moines, where her husband had once been a sports broadcaster. Coincidentally, the station's frequency is the same as that given Radio Marti, the station the Reagan administration established to reach Cuba. WHO is seeking congressional relief from having the same frequency because of fear that Cuba will jam the station and wipe out WHO's nighttime service.

THURSDAY, THE call-in show's host, Jon London, told listeners that the only topic "we'll be able to take your calls on" would be drug and alcohol abuse. Sheila Tate, Mrs. Reagan's press secretary, said later "that was our wish." She added that since the entire day was devoted to drugs, she felt it was the only way to handle the program.

London reminded Mrs. Reagan that had she walked in the door some years back, she might have found her husband at the mike. How did she feel about coming to WHO, he asked?

"Disappointed," the first lady said. "I thought this was the same building but it isn't. I have the microphone he used to use."

"Yes, we gave it to him," London said.

"It's strange," said the first lady. "I feel if I looked over my shoulder, he'd be there."

Gary Riedmann, director of the Iowa State Substance Abuse Program, and Dr. Carlton Turner, director of the White House Drug Abuse Policy Office, joined Mrs. Reagan on the show. Riedmann's office is losing half a million dollars of federal funds in the coming year.

One caller asked Mrs. Reagan how she suggested these drug programs she was supporting be financed. "I don't think financing is the real problem," Mrs. Reagan said. "Alcoholics Anonymous is extremely successful, and it's not federally financed. I never have thought that money is the answer."

Mrs. Reagan said she is a "big believer" in parents' groups and "since we started on this they've grown from 1,000 to 3,000." She told of the effect they are having in closing down paraphernalia shops, in changing laws and in alerting schools to the problem.

TO ANOTHER CALLER asking what advice she would give a parent whose child was using drugs, the first lady said, "Keep the lines of communication open, be more knowledgeable about drugs and be aware of changes in your child's personality."

Tate said later that Mrs. Reagan was not taking credit for the increasing number of parents groups. "As she said herself, it's a grass roots effort that is starting up on its own," Tate said.

But she said that Mrs. Reagan has had a lot to do with helping "spread the word."

Carlton Turner said she did "a wonderful job" on the call-in show. "I didn't coach her at all. She handled things very nicely. In fact, I needed coaching from her."

In Ames, a small band of sign-carrying protesters calling themselves the Ames Peace Network, accompanied by another group seeking legalization of marijuana, NORML, met Mrs. Reagan as she arrived at the Welch Junior High School. She was there to tour a display of programs offered under an umbrella group called Youth and Shelter Services.

On of the woman protesters wearing a long gown and carrying a champagne glass, carried a sign bearing the slogan "Cheese for the poor, champagne for the rich."

Inside the school, wearing a red and white three-piece Adolfo suit and red shoes, the first lady sampled hot dogs and sipped a Pepsi sold by the group to raise money to send about 50 children to the International Meeting of Recovering Chemically Dependent Youth in New York next month.

THE AGENCY also offered strawberry rhubarb pie, which Mrs. Reagan said "sounds as wholesome as Ames itself."

"But even in rural areas, drugs and alcohol are growing problems. There's just no place safe," she said, calling drug and alcohol abuse "the most democratic of all the problems we have."

Mrs. Reagan said programs like Youth and Shelter Services were providing essential aid to young abusers of the substances.

"I'm so proud of these kids, I could just pop," she said. "If I lived here, I would be out there throwing kisses at the buses" as the youths leave for New York.

George Bellitsos, director of the program, said Mrs. Reagan's visit helped raise enough money to send 10 more people to the New York seminar.

Later, when she arrived at the University of Iowa in Iowa City, a small band of highly vocal protesters were there to meet her as she got out of her car. "Nice dress Nancy — 10,000 bucks?" yelled one youth. Another called, "How would you like to eat garbage?" At the university, she observed a series of skits and took part in a group discussion that was part of a summer school training program for professionals and counselors in substance abuse.

Later, aboard her Air Force jet en route to Dallas, she and her projects aide Ann Wrobleski demonstrated to others on her staff how the circle was done. "See," the first lady said, "you don't feel anyone's weight."

MRS. REAGAN'S Iowa visit had been heralded by the president when he told corn growers in Des Moines that he was just the warm-up for the real star in the family. Recalling how vaudeville acts were scheduled, he said, "The feature act was always preceded by a lesser act, usually a trained animal act," he said. "Well, here I am."

Gov. Ray and his wife Billie were at the airport to meet the first lady when her plane arrived in Des Moines. Traveling with her were the wives of both of Iowa's senators, Barbara Grassley and Dee Jepsen. The White House said it was "just coincidental" that both Reagans visited Iowa in the same week. Barbara Bush also has been here recently, and her husband, the vice president, is due here soon.

Both Senate wives said reaction to the president's announcement that he has extended the current grain agreement for one year had been positive. "My husband's reaction was that it is the greatest farm speech he ever heard," said Dee Jepsen.

Barbara Grassley said she thought most people realized the president's economic program hasn't been "in place all that long."

Republican plan to reduce budget deficit sent to House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The final, $12.6 billion installment of a Republican plan to reduce the federal deficit is headed for a potentially hostile House of Representatives after winning swift approval in the Senate.

The GOP bill's key provision — containing $5 billion of the overall savings — is a 4-percent cap in annual cost-of-living increases for federal retirees through 1985.

The House rejected that proposal on an earlier 236-160 vote, a roll call that Republican leaders concede will be difficult to turn around only 90 days before the congressional elections.

The 73-23 Senate vote Thursday marked the second time in less than two weeks Republicans won approval for legislation to reduce the deficit.

House and Senate negotiators are at work drafting a compromise on the other bill, a measure to raise taxes by $99 billion over three years and cut spending for Medicare, Medicaid and welfare programs by $17.5 billion more.

Republicans and President Reagan hope that, taken together, the two measures will cut the deficit, bring down interest rates and help the economy toward a stronger recovery.

The cap on federal pensions would apply to about three million former civil service, military, Coast Guard, foreign service and Public Health Service personnel. Officials estimate that without the 4-percent cap, the retirees would otherwise receive pension increases of 6.6 percent next year, 7.2 percent in 1984 and 6.6 percent in 1985.

The measure also includes a $2.5-billion reduction in food stamps and another $1.5 billion in cuts in dairy price supports. Efforts by Sens. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., and S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., to cut more deeply from the dairy program were turned back.

Ironically, even while voting to cut the budget, the Senate indicated a willingness to increase spending on unemployment benefits for victims of the recession.

The Senate voted 84-13 to order its negotiators on the tax bill for fiscal 1983 to seek an extension of jobless benefits of between 10 and 13 weeks. Current benefits are limited to a maximum of 39 weeks.

In addition, the vote put the Senate on record in favor of restoring certain cuts in jobless benefits voted a year ago but not scheduled to go into effect until next month.

It was the first official indication the Senate was ready to vote on relief for victims of the recession.

Passage came after prodding by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, a liberal Democrat from Ohio whom GOP sources said probably had enough votes to force immediate passage of the increased-benefits provision if he insisted.

Other elements of the $12.6 billion in savings include:

—A $2.1-billion provision requiring holders of Farmers Home Administration loans to make lump-sum payments on their mortgage insurance premiums instead of spreading them out over the life of the loan. The House passed an identical provision 337-69 Thursday.

—Reductions in the size of the Federal Communications Commission from seven members to five beginning July 1 of next year; and of the Interstate Commerce Commission from eleven to five beginning Jan. 1.

—Cuts in veterans spending by about $560 million over three years, in part by phasing out student benefits under the veterans' pension program and in part by imposing a fee of one half of one percentage point on VA-backed loans. A similar provision had already won House approval.

Armored car company head targeted for kidnapping, says FBI

BY EILEEN PUTMAN

NEW YORK (AP) — The head of an armored car company says the FBI told him that fugitives from the bloody robbery of a Brink's truck last October may have targeted him for kidnapping.

John Wentworth, president of Armored Express Co., said Thursday the FBI told him that wiretaps of telephone calls by suspects in the robbery indicated "we would possibly be the victim of a hit — a kidnapping of me or an assault on one of our vehicles."

Copies of wiretap records obtained by The Associated Press show four calls were made to Wentworth's Manhattan apartment early in the morning of Feb. 21, and calls were made on Feb. 25 and 26 to company offices.

The records showed the calls came from a Greenwich Village apartment that had been used by Mutulu Shakur, a fugitive who is suspected of masterminding the holdup in Nanuet, N.Y. A Brink's guard and two policemen were killed in a subsequent shootout.

The FBI will not discuss the case, but affidavits say that even before the Brink's heist, the group members — many linked to radical organizations — "maintained a list of possible kidnapping targets and had conducted surveillance of individuals whom they appear to view as targets."

The group planned to move "to a higher revolutionary level" — from robberies to "prisoner of war exchanges (kidnappings) and to free 'comrades' (prison escapees)," the affidavits said.

With nine group members jailed in the Brink's heist, the affidavits said "it is very logical to assume that the remaining members of the group will attempt kidnappings and prison escapes on their behalf."

Two weeks after the calls to Wentworth, Shakur was overheard by an eavesdropping device apparently plotting to rebuild his group with a new robbery and flee to a foreign country, according to FBI affidavits.

Wentworth, 50, said the first three calls to his home were answered by his answering machine, but on the fourth call, he talked with someone for 5½ minutes.

He declined to discuss the conversation or say whether the caller was a man or woman. The calls to Wentworth's office never reached him, he said.

Armed robber hits Big Spring Safeway

BIG SPRING — Big Spring police were investigating an armed robbery that took place this morning at the Safeway supermarket, 1300 S. Greg St.

Police said they responded minutes after the 8:20 a.m. incident, but the suspect got away with about $1,050. There were approximately $800 in one-dollar bills and $250 in five-dollar bills taken in the robbery, police said.

According to Sgt. J.D. Carter, a person described as Anglo-American, five feet, eight inches to five feet, ten inches tall, wearing a blonde fuzzy wig, dark glasses, a lady's pink blouse with pleats and black gloves entered the store when it opened and browsed around.

Police said the store employees were not sure if the person was a man or a woman, but reported that the person was wearing pancake make-up, blue jeans, dingo-type boots and spoke in a deep voice.

The suspect apparently approached the cashier's window carrying a green bag and a nickel-plated automatic, possibly .45-caliber, according to police.

Apparently the suspect told the cashier to put all the store's money in the bag, police said.

Investigation was continuing and there were no suspects at press time.

Greenland celebrates founding farmer's find

NARSSARSSUAQ, Greenland (AP) — This largest island in the world is observing this week the 1,000th anniversary of its discovery and settlement by the Viking Eric the Red.

It also is puzzling over the reason for his Norse descendants' mysterious disappearance 500 years later.

For the millennial celebrations of Eric's first voyage to the island in the year 982, Greenlanders are being joined by Queen Margrethe II of Denmark, the Danish-owned island's monarch; King Olav of Norway, which used to own it; President Vigdis Finnbogadottir of Iceland; and Gov.-Gen. Edward R. Schreyer of Canada, whose Eskimos have ethnic links with Greenland.

To archaeologist Knud Krogh, long-time supervisor of the Danish National Museum's explorations of the Norse settlements in Greenland, the observance means that history is finally doing justice to Eric and his Norsemen — recognizing them as Greenlanders in their own right, on an equal footing with the succession of Eskimo cultures from Canada and Alaska that have come and gone over the years.

"It's about time," Krogh said. "After all, they created an independent culture and society that survived for five centuries and can be classified only as Greenlandic. They were Greenlanders indeed."

The Norsemen vanished mysteriously from Greenland in the 15th century. They left nothing in writing. But excavations over the past few decades have provided a picture of a flourishing arctic farm society with 4,000 to 6,000 people living in two major settlements about 450 miles apart.

So far more than 20 churches have been excavated, along with 330 farms, including Eric's Brattahlid (farmstead). Every summer new ruins are discovered in what has been called "a Pompeii in permafrost." In a book for the millenium, Krogh describes the sites as "a Viking and Middle Ages society frozen in its medieval condition."

No one thought of farming in Greenland again until this century, when Greenlanders chose exactly the same plains for their sheep stations that Eric the Red chose. The Norsemen, in fact, left their pastures so thoroughly fertilized with manure that the fertilizing effect remains active to this day, helping the lush grasslands resist weeds and shrub.

As the Sagas have it, Eric was a Norwegian who settled in Iceland, but became an outlaw after a tribal feud and spent three years exploring the shores of Greenland.

Krogh says he is convinced that Eric was no adventurer, but a farmer who painstakingly looked for the best grazing grounds — and found enough lush meadows to justify the name Greenland.

So Eric did not lure anyone into the unknown when he loaded 25 ships with men, women and children, cattle, sheep, timber and provisions and set out to colonize Greenland in 985.

The Norsemen stuck it out for more than 20 generations in extreme conditions, applying sometimes surprising ingenuity and skill to make the plains on the edge of the icecap sustain a flourishing farm society, self-sufficient in everything from food to tools and clothing.

Recent excavations revealed remnants of irrigation systems, with river dams and canals. One excavated farm had river water running through a system that brought it to a kitchen floor basin.

The Norsemen also appear to have spared the grasslands on the plains through mountain pasturing in summer.

Rodeo to be in early September in Amarillo

AMARILLO — The Cal Farley's Boys Ranch Rodeo will be held here Sept. 5-6.

Two performances are scheduled in the Ranch's Rodeo Arena at that time. Ranch officials expect approximately 10,000 people to attend the afternoon performances that begin at 2:30 p.m. each day.

Nearly 400 boys between the ages of 5 and 18 are now at the ranch and all will have some part in the rodeo.

Barbecue beef plates will be available for $3 per plate. Reserved box seat tickets are now on sale for $3 and can be obtained by calling 1-806-372-2341. General admission tickets for $2.50 may be purchased at the office, 600 W. 11th St. in Amarillo, or at the rodeo arena.

Hiroshima will remember

TOKYO (AP) — Hiroshima, the first city to suffer a nuclear attack, will hold a memorial service today to observe the 37th anniversary of the American bombing that hastened the end of World War II.

Thousands of people, including a group of about 500 who marched 600 miles from Tokyo, will join in the services commemorating the estimated 150,000 killed in the Aug. 6, 1945, atomic bombing by the United States. A second U.S. nuclear attack on the port city of Nagasaki three days later killed about 75,000 people.

Hiroshima Mayor Takeshi Araki will deliver a peace proclamation at the service where 2,000 additional names will be entered on a scroll kept inside the crypt in the cenotaph in Hiroshima Memorial Peace Park. The scroll has a list of names of those killed in the bombing or from fallout resulting from it, plus names of victims whose identities were confirmed later and those who have died subsequently of radiation sickness.

Eskimo artifacts seem to be in perfect shape

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Dozens of artifacts found with seven bodies in a 200-year-old Eskimo home were so perfectly preserved in ice that it looked "as if time had stopped," an archaeologist says.

The traditional sod house, possibly smashed by a huge block of sea ice, contained a skylight made of seal skin and a wealth of everyday tools, jewelry and other objects, said John Lobdell, an archaeology teacher at the University of Alaska.

"They were preserved virtually as if someone had stopped time," he said. "Normally in archaeology you find things discarded. In this case, we found them still in use — as if time had stopped."

The preserved bodies of the Inupiat Eskimos found in the home on the outskirts of Barrow included two adult women and a 10-year-old girl.

"Clearly these are the same people who live there today," Lobdell said. "It was a picturesque and beautiful society."

A tub of caribou remains, the hood of a raincoat, two pairs of mukluk boots, 20 barbed bone arrow points, several baleen-sewn baskets, and a cup made of baleen also have been recovered, he said.

Sexual controversy invades Long Beach campus

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Foes of a women's studies program say it promotes lesbianism and feminism, while supporters say academic freedom is being threatened by right-wing critics. The result has been a long hot summer of controversy at a public university.

Since the dispute began at California State University, Long Beach, the institution has suspended the Women's Center and canceled a class in the Women's Studies Program. Thirteen faculty members and two students responded with a lawsuit against the university.

In another campus controversy this summer prompted by criticism from conservatives, Dr. Barry Singer, who taught a class in "Psychology of Sex," resigned after admitting he offered course credit for experimental sex experiences.

"THE THING that ticks the evangelicals off is both women's studies and I are impartial in our coverage of homosexuality," Singer said at the time. He is trying to get his job back.

"The issues in the current dispute go beyond any one university," said Sharon Sievers, a history professor who serves on the women's studies advisory board.

"I'm quite sure that women's studies programs are going to be a target in the '80s of right-wingers especially," she said Thursday. "The power of the right wing rests on its political alliances and its ability to raise enormous amounts of money either to elect people or defeat them.

"Academic freedom sometimes involves raising controversial issues," she said. "I think everyone on a university campus takes that for granted and I think we believe that when someone takes what we say out of context that the university will then exercise its right to protect us. It hasn't happened that way at Long Beach and we're not exactly sure why."

Jo Ellen Allen, co-chairwoman of the conservative California Eagle Forum, said Thursday: "Our biggest objection is that the entire women's studies program is imbalanced. It teaches one point of view about women's studies programs and that point of view is feminism. Yes, there is an emphasis on lesbianism and an advocacy of it."

The Eagle Forum was founded by anti-Equal Rights Amendment crusader Phyllis Schlafly. Mrs. Allen was among four women who sat in on some women's studies classes in the spring, read textbooks and interviewed students. They complained to state Sens. H.L. Richardson and Ollie Speraw and Assemblyman Dennis Brown, who took the complaints to the administration.

The complaints included an allegation that a part-time instructor, Betty Brooks, showed slides of her genitals in class, told students to imagine themselves on a beach "doing things" to other women and invited a lecturer who partially disrobed. Ms. Brooks was relieved of teaching assignments and the university has not said whether her contract will be renewed.

MS. BROOKS could not be reached through the university, and her telephone number was not available.

The Women's Center, where women could seek advice and counseling, was temporarily closed and no courses were offered in the Women's Studies Program during the second summer session. The future of the program is unclear, with university administrators refusing to comment Thursday.

Administrators also removed the director of the program, Sondra Hale, from that position although she apparently will continue as an instructor, said Susan McGrievy, an American Civil Liberties Union attorney.

Ms. Hale, Ms. Sievers and other faculty members sued the university Wednesday with assistance from the ACLU, seeking to reinstate Ms. Hale as director and reinstating the canceled classes and Women's Center activities.

"This is not a matter of academic freedom, but of academic quality," University President Stephen Horn said in response to the suit. "The university is completely within its rights and will not be intimidated by anyone in its quest for quality."

The campus Associated Students passed a resolution calling for Horn to "stand up for the academic freedom of this university and oppose the attempts at repression."

Ms. Sievers said she believes the issue of lesbianism was seized on because it's "such a volatile issue, it's easy to use to get people excited," but said that in the program, it's one of a series of presentations on various sexual lifestyles.

Midland Christian School kicks off new campaign

A new annual sustaining fund program at Midland Christian School will be introduced at 6 p.m. today at a reception in the Permian Ball Room of the Midland Hilton.

The campaign, titled "The Tree of Life Program," will be symbolized by a large bronze tree to be mounted in the school offices. Bronze leaves inscribed with names of persons donating a minimum of $1,000 will be added to the tree. Those donating a minimum of $10,000 will have their names inscribed on brass rocks, to be placed at the base of the tree.

"The Tree of Life Program," which follows last year's successful $1.3 million "Vision for the 80s" campaign, will differ from the latter drive, which specifically provided funds for the construction of a new gymnasium, classrooms and library.

The new campaign will be conducted annually to ensure contributions for school operating costs. The goal this year is $150,000.

The kickoff tonight, which is expected to draw about 110 guests and friends of the school, will feature Jack Pardee, former coach of the Washington Redskins and an active member of the National Christian Athletes Association, as the speaker.

A victory event, ending the campaign, is scheduled for Nov. 12, with Art Linkletter attending as the featured speaker. Also to be featured is the Earth Star diamond, the world's largest brown diamond, which is valued at $5 million.

Winston Bell, president of the school, will introduce the new sustaining fund program tonight. Dwayne Casbeer is general chairman of the program and Robert Slaydon and Lowell Fuller are co-chairmen.

War's left its (unhappy) marks on Argentina

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Argentina is a far different country because of its war with Britain over the Falkland Islands, but hardly a better one.

"The war was an unmitigated disaster," said a West European diplomat, "both in terms of Argentina's international position and in its internal affairs."

Interviews with other diplomats and Argentine officials and political leaders produced the same conclusion — the country's economic, social and political structures are near disintegration because of postwar pressures.

"THE ONLY REAL benefit I can see is in the promised acceleration from a military government to some sort of civilian rule," the European diplomat said.

But he cautioned, "There is no guarantee the military truly will give up power, and even if it does, (no guarantee) that a civilian government will be an improvement — not under the conditions it will find if and when it takes office."

The new military administration led by President Reynaldo Bignone and the army commander, Gen. Cristino Nicolaides, has pledged to hold elections no later than March 1984. A military establishment disgraced by defeat in the Falklands had no other choice.

Even with the promise of elections, however, there is skepticism that the military will relinquish the power it has held since the overthrow of the last constitutional government in March 1976.

"The generals enjoy the wages of corruption, for one thing," a former Argentine Cabinet minister said. "They believe that all politicians are useless and a danger to the country's honor, and they fear having to answer for their human rights practices."

There appears to be good reason for doubt about the benefit of a civilian government. In Argentina's century and a half of independence, civilian governments generally have been as corrupt, politically unstable and anti-democratic as those of the military. And the political parties, weakened under military rule, hardly seem ready to take over now.

THE RADICAL CIVIC Union, considered the most democratic and responsible of Argentina's myriad political groupings, commands only about 20 percent of the popular support, and it is splintered, an Argentine authority said.

Even more divided are the Peronists, whose formal name is the Justicialist Party and who are universally acknowledged to be the likely winners of any election.

The Argentine political authority described a recent Peronist rally at which all the party's leaders were scheduled to address the faithful. When Delindo Bittel, the party's acting president, stood to introduce the speakers, he was shouted down by hundreds of younger, more radical members.

The meeting broke up in a shoving match that spilled into the street, where a confrontation with riot police was averted only when the policemen backed away at the last minute.

"That is the way of the Peronists," the Argentine observer said. "First they shout, then push and then out come the guns. So maybe the acceleration toward a constitutional form of government is not a benefit."

Were there any positive results from the war then? Some of those interviewed had to strain even to find a negative benefit.

For example, a former ambassador to the United States and the United Nations said, "It was a hard way to learn, but the loss of the war may have brought a recognition of reality" in world affairs.

"We are a small country...and we cannot initiate an adventure without thinking of the consequences," he explained. "We received a crash course in international relations."

HE AND OTHERS suggested that ruptured relations with London and estrangement from the United States will lead Argentina to "know that a small country by itself is nothing and can only deal with the large powers through association with the rest of Latin America."

A U.S. diplomat spoke in a similar vein, suggesting that Argentina could benefit by embracing Latin American economic integration, a notion to which this country has always paid lip service but which it has largely ignored in practice by conducting most of its foreign trade outside the region.

The American said, for example, that "Argentina could be feeding the rest of Latin America," something that would serve U.S. interests by reducing Argentina's economic dependence on the Soviet Union, now the largest market for its exports.

Another former Argentine diplomat, once the nation's foreign minister, added that a return to constitutional rule ultimately could — and he stressed the conditional — lead to better relations with the Western nations because these tend to favor democratic governments.

This, indirectly, could benefit the region by showing other military regimes the advantages of constitutional government, the former diplomat said.

'Interim' prime minister should be re-elected

TOKYO (AP) — With growing political confidence, Zenko Suzuki has begun his third year as Japan's prime minister, a post he once said he never wanted and few political experts thought he could ever keep.

But political observers say he is almost sure to be re-elected this fall as president of his governing Liberal Democratic Party, which would ensure his continued grip on the nation's leadership.

Thus, barring an unforeseen political crisis, the 71-year-old son of a fisherman is expected to outlast the country's last four prime ministers, among whom only Kakuei Tanaka held office more than two years — July 1972 to October 1974.

Suzuki himself emerged as a compromise candidate after the death in June 1980 of former Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira — an event that touched off a power struggle within the Liberal Democratic Party, a loose alliance of conservative factions that has held power almost continuously since the end of World War II.

Political pundits were quick to judge Suzuki as only an "interim" leader, pointing out that he had never held a major Cabinet post and was an obscure party functionary best known as a behind-the-scenes peacemaker. There were widespread predictions that he would be be cast aside when one of the party's faction leaders gained backing for a power play.

Suzuki was formally chosen prime minister on July 17, 1980, after a Liberal Democrat election sweep, and quickly began to use his talents as a mediator to apply a political philosophy of harmony.

Suzuki's determination to avoid confrontation at all costs has struck a chord in this nation where decisions made by consensus and conformity often outweigh charisma as a political virtue.

"The fact that he has managed to avert any major political disturbance by means of his own unique political method may be interpreted as a sign of success. Suzuki's political method is first to avoid tackling any difficult problems head-on," said a commentary in the English-language Japan Times.

The vitality of the Japanese economy has also made his job easier. Japan had a growth rate of 2.7 percent in the fiscal year ending last March, has an unemployment rate of only 2.4 percent and an inflation rate of about 2.5 percent, figures that any world leader could envy.

On the other hand, Suzuki has made little headway in reforming the nation's bureaucracy, a goal he earlier said he would "stake his political career on." Although he has reduced the budgetary dependence on deficit spending from 39 percent in 1979 to 31.6 percent this year, he is expected to fall far short of a pledge to eliminate deficit spending by fiscal 1984.

"The drastic reforms which he promised us are nowhere in sight, and his policies have been marked by an element of makeshift 'emergency evacuations,' " said the Asahi Shimbun, a leading newspaper.

On the international front, Suzuki has escaped from several tight spots. Last year, faced with a growing threat of U.S. retaliation for Japan's huge auto exports, his government pressured Japan's automakers to agree to "voluntary" restraints on exports. This year, it has at least temporarily eased friction with Japan's major trading partners by taking steps to make Japan's markets more accessible to imports.

Dick Smith, an Australian businessman, took off this morning from Fort Worth in a single-engine helicopter on what will be the first leg of his year-long solo around-the-world flight. Although he'd feel better with a two-engined plane, Smith says the helicopter is so much fun to fly that he decided to take it. Besides, he says, the chopper will give him a view of the world like none ever seen before.

Copter will show world 'like never before'

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Dick Smith, a millionaire businessman from Australia, admitted he'd rather have two engines to depend on during his around-the-world jaunt.

But the small, single-engine chopper he boarded Thursday morning is so fun to fly that "it's worth it," he said.

"Most people you talk to say it's impossible to fly a helicopter around the world. I think that's the challenge," said Smith, 38. "You can do it in a 747, but you're up too high. I'll be just a thousand feet up, so I can see everything. I'll see the world like it's never been seen before."

Smith took off at 10:25 a.m. Thursday from the Bell Helecopter Textron plant, which built the $350,000 single-engine Bell JetRanger-III he is flying.

Smith is dividing the journey into three segments — arriving in London Aug. 19, in Sydney in early October, and back in Fort Worth next July 22, the 50th anniversary of the date Wiley Post finished the first solo flight around the world in an airplane.

To make the flight safer and more comfortable, Smith and mechanics have equipped the aircraft with an automatic pilot, an auxiliary fuel tank and a VLF Omega navigation system that will tell Smith how to get anywhere in the world, which course to take, how many miles off course he is, and what time he will arrive.

Smith will carry a full range of safety and survival equipment, including a life raft, and will wear a special Arctic survival suit during the North Atlantic crossing. Smith has been an active amateur radio operator for more than 20 years and said he will be on the air constantly during the flight.

He'll cover close to 30,000 miles during the flight. In taking a year to complete the trip, Smith acknowledged he won't break any speed records. He plans to film his entire journey — to be shown on television later in 1-hour documentaries about each segment of his trip — and to write a book about the voyage.

His first leg takes him northeasterly toward Washington, D.C. and New York City.

Smith said the riskiest part of his trip will come within a week when he flies over Greenland, hits generally poor weather across the Arctic Circle, then heads over the windblown North Atlantic for Iceland and London.

Smith will stop in 12 countries on leg two to Australia. He will lay over in Sydney several months, pass through Southeast Asia and land either in the Soviet Union or on ships offshore if he is denied permission to land in the U.S.S.R.

He will reenter the United States at the Aleutian Islands and head south for Fort Worth.

His total flying time in the air is estimated at more than 260 hours.

Although Smith has been flying airplanes for more than 10 years, he first flew in a helicopter in 1978.

"I was hooked" after that first ride, he said. "I bought one before I'd even flown one myself," he added.

After getting his pilot's license later that year, Smith regularly turned to his chopper for business and pleasure travel. He uses the aircraft when visiting his 30 retail electronics stores in Australia.

Smith describes his interest in aviation as "passionate." He was the first person to organize commercial charter flights over Antarctica.

But he considers the around-the-world solo helicopter junket his greatest challenge.

"It's the world's last great aviation adventure," he said.

Defense questioning Chagra-taping agents

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Defense attorneys in the Judge John H. Wood Jr. murder case are questioning FBI agents who electronically eavesdropped on thousands of conversations of inmates at a federal prison.

Lawyer Warren Burnett complained Thursday that his client, Elizabeth Chagra, was "a prisoner of the candor of the executive branch of government" in determining whether the wiretapping and electronic bugging was done in accordance with the law.

Burnett was expected to complete his cross-examination of FBI supervisor Gary Hart today, the fifth day of a pretrial hearing in the case.

Hart testified Thursday that agents monitored more than 10,000 inmate conversations at the Leavenworth, Kan., penitentiary during a four-month period of 1980-81 in the massive investigation of Wood's death.

THESE INCLUDED 321 telephone conversations and 21 visiting room conversations involving inmate Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra, who is charged with paying $250,000 for a hitman to kill Wood, Hart testified.

Prosecutors and defense attorneys have indicated the first break in the investigation of Wood's assassination here on May 29, 1979, came during Chagra's recorded conversations with his brother Joseph, an El Paso attorney, in November 1980.

Burnett and other defense attorneys contend FBI agents violated the attorney-client privilege of the Chagra brothers, and the husband-wife privilege of Jimmy Chagra and his wife, Elizabeth, during the court-ordered electronic eavesdropping from October 1980 until January 1981.

In the course of listening to the telephone conversations, Hart said agents "heard at least in part" a total of 10,085 inmate calls from pay telephones in two cell blocks at Leavenworth after a federal judge in Kansas authorized the eavesdropping.

He said agents, trained to recognize Chagra's voice, would listen to the first 15 to 30 seconds to determine if it were Chagra making the call.

Because of past practices of inmates making calls for other prisoners, Hart said that agents at times would make 10-second spot checks to be sure Chagra was not on the phone.

Hart repeatedly testified that all possible steps were taken by the monitoring agents to ensure that the rights of the Chagras were not violated during the eavesdropping through a process he termed "minimization," switching off the recording device when privileged communications were in progress.

Defense attorneys have moved to bar the tapes from the trial of the case set for Sept. 28.

DURING THIS hearing, U.S. District Judge William S. Sessions is scheduled to rule motions to disqualify himself as judge, supress the tapes, move the trial from San Antonio on a change of venue; and try the defendants separately. The judge has said he will not rule on any of the motions until the end of the hearing, expected sometime next week.

Jimmy Chagra is accused of hiring Charles V. Harrelson to shoot Wood to prevent the judge from presiding over Chagra's 1979 narcotics trial. After Wood was killed, Sessions presided and sentenced Jimmy Chagra to 30 years in prison without parole.

Joe Chagra and Elizabeth Chagra are accused of joining in the plot to kill Wood, and Harrelson's wife, Jo Ann, is charged with perjury and conspiracy to obstruct justice.

A surprise government move to declare the marriages of Jimmy and Elizabeth Chagra and Charles and Jo Ann Harrelson bigamous was expected to be argued next week.

Baker's daughter wins nomination

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The daughter of Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker, boasting of clout in Washington, and the son of a former governor have won primary elections for a congressional seat.

In the Democratic gubernatorial primary, Knoxville Mayor Randy Tyree, 42, defeated state Sen. Anna Belle Clement O'Brien, 59, and seven other candidates in Thursday's election. In the Nov. 2 general election, he will face Republican Gov. Lamar Alexander, who was unopposed in the GOP primary and is seeking a second four-year term.

Unofficial returns from 1,724 of the state's 2,430 precincts gave Tyree 209,558 votes, or 49 percent, to 183,469 or 42 percent for Mrs. O'Brien, who was seeking to become the state's first woman governor. No other candidate collected more than 3 percent.

Long lines of voters were waiting in many counties when the polls were to have closed at 8 p.m. All in line at the closing hour were allowed to vote, delaying ballot counting for two hours or more.

Republican Cissy Baker, the 26-year-old daughter of the Senate majority leader, and Democrat Jim Cooper, the 28-year-old son of the late Gov. Prentice Cooper, won their primaries and will meet in November for the right to represent the state's new 4th Congressional District.

Miss Baker lost no time in attacking her opponent.

"Now the choice is down to two," she said. "Running up a huge campaign debt with your mother's money may win a primary, but it won't win you an ounce of clout in Washington...I do have it. I'm proud of it and I intend to use it..."

She called Cooper a "high-flying, Harvard-educated, spend-now, pay-later credit-card congressional candidate."

In the 7th Congressional District, Democrat Bob Clement, 38, will face Republican Don Sundquist, a Memphis businessman and former fund-raiser for Baker. Clement is the son of the late Gov. Frank Clement.

The winner will take the House seat of Republican Robin Beard, who withdrew to challenge U.S. Sen. James Sasser, a Democrat seeking a second term. Both won easy primary victories Thursday.

Incumbents winning renomination to the House were James Quillen, a Republican in the 1st Congressional District; Marilyn Bouquard, a Democrat in the 3rd; Bill Boner, a Democrat in the 5th; Ed Jones, a Democrat in the 8th, and Harold Ford, a Democrat in the 9th. They are opposed in the general election.

Reps. John Duncan, a Republican in the 2nd, and Albert Gore Jr., a Democrat in the 6th, were unopposed in the primary and have no challengers Nov. 2.

State voters also picked nominees for 17 of 33 state Senate seats and all 99 seats in the state House of Representatives.

Saturday, August 7, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The late American statesman Ralph Bunche, glamorous WWI spy Mata Hari and German industrialist Gustav Krupp were born on this date. In the coming months, you increase your business clout and gain a firmer financial footing. A family feud comes to an end, closing a generation gap once and for all. Count on romance to sizzle! Employment affairs will be more to your liking after a dramatic event occurs early in 1983. Hang on to the job you have for a while longer. A new position will not prove as rewarding as a promotion which is due in November or December.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A relative's casual remarks reveal a family secret. You could be surprised. Authorities bend the rules for you today. Mate's opposition to an idea weakens.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You can speak your mind now without getting into trouble. Remain true to your goals even in the face of family member's opposition. Joint financial efforts are lucky.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Divided loyalties put you on the spot in a family matter. Settlements are costly, but the peace of mind they bring are worth the price.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): This should be the start of a wonderful weekend for you and your mate. Problems that had you on edge during the work week can now be forgotten. Short trips prove memorable.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Concentrate on finding ways to please those you love the most. News from a distance stimulates you to act quickly in a family matter. Avoid brooding over things you cannot control.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may not feel very energetic, but you have a wonderful time when the whole family gets together. An important new pattern emerges. Break free of past restraints.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You sometimes get too involved in other people's lives. Give your friends and relatives the same privacy you want for yourself. Loved ones draw closer if you back off a bit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You are a terrific host/hostess at a party that takes place today. Romance is wonderful. You could find yourself in a marrying mood. Be sure before you say "yes."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Self-confidence lets you relax and have a terrific time even when with people you have just met. Your fiery, romantic ways make you attractive to a new friend.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You find romance without commitment unfulfilling. Socialize with those who are serious about what they do and say. You are the first to respond to a friend's cry for help.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are someone who needs freedom in your personal relationships. If romantic partner is too possessive, declare your independence.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Retrench. Look for less expensive ways to entertain on the weekend. You will find lots of things that you and loved one can enjoy for free or for only a modest price.

Opening lead: Two of ◇.

Hard upon the heels of the death of Herman Filarski, we learned of the passing of another of our old friends — Eric Jannersten of Sweden, founder of the International Bridge Press Association. It made us proud to find that he was known as "the Goren of Sweden."

Since Eric was often found behind a typewriter at international events, many tended to forget what a fine player he was. Here is an example of his dummy play technique from a Scandinavian tournament. We have often expressed our dislike for the "unusual no trump" convention. See how Jannersten turned his opponent's use of this gadget to his own advantage.

West led his singleton diamond against Jannersten's heart slam, and declarer captured East's eight with the nine. The ace of trump revealed the bad break. Jannersten crossed to dummy with the ten of trumps and led a spade to his ten. When he cashed the ace of spades, fortunately the king dropped.

The king of trumps provided the entry to the table to lead the queen of spades, and on this trick declarer made the winning discard — he sluffed the ten of diamonds! Back to his hand with a spade ruffed high, and the last trump was drawn. This was the position:

When Jannersten led his last trump, West could let go a club, while dummy parted with the diamond, but East was in trouble. If he discarded a diamond, both of declarer's diamonds would be good, so he had to pitch a club. If he kept the ace of clubs, declarer would end play him with a club to force a diamond return into the ace-queen; and if he jettisoned the ace, declarer would cash the ace of diamonds and lead a club, and the queen in dummy would become the twelfth trick.

Fed accused of playing politics

By OWEN ULLMANN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Remember the last time the prime rate was as low as 15 percent? It was the week before the 1980 presidential election.

With the 1982 congressional elections just three months away, interest rates are falling again from their extraordinarily high levels. And, once again suspicions are growing that somebody's playing politics with the economy.

Charges of election-year economic hanky-panky surface every political season. Heading the list of suspects are usually the president of the United States and the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

The nation's cental bank influences the course of interest rates through its control of the nation's supply of money and credit. The president influences the head of the central bank through the power of the Oval Office.

And, as is customary, the president's men and the bank proclaim total innocence.

"I HAVE TO grant you, people have suspicious minds," a senior official at the bank acknowledged this week after the prime rate banks charge corporate customers sank to 15 percent, the lowest level since late October 1980.

That is pure coincidence, insisted the Fed official. "We are neutral. Our policies are not colored by the political climate."

"I think it's just good luck," a Reagan administration official said of the interest rate slide. "It's one of those things that mystifies everybody."

Another administration official added: "Does this administration have a desire to get interest rates down before the election? Of course." But its political desires just happen to "coincide" with an economic policy that finally is paying off, he said.

Experts outside the administration tend to agree with the Fed and the administration.

"Anyone who thinks the Fed can control things so well is out of his mind," says Barry Bosworth, an economist with the Carter administration.

THE FED IS an obvious target for charges of political tampering because it exercises more direct control over the economy than any other institution in the country. And, it's no secret that high interest rates have become the No. 1 problem facing the economy and the bane of congressional incumbents.

Over the years, the Fed has stimulated economic growth by making credit plentiful and interest rates low, and it has thrown the economy into recessions by making credit tight and interest rates high. Both cycles also have produced damaging byproducts: high inflation during the booms and high unemployment during the busts. Over the last two decades, both problems have been worsening.

Critics of the Fed charge that the bank traditionally has fostered booms just before elections by speeding up the growth of money, and then when the election is past, it cracks down again to restrain inflation. This pattern is of obvious benefit to incumbents in Congress, to whom the Fed is ultimately responsible.

SOME REPUBLICANS accused Fed Chairman Paul Volcker of playing politics in 1980. They say Volcker tried to help the man who gave him his job, Jimmy Carter, first, by getting interest rates down, and then, by pumping up the economy before the November election. The prime rate, which hit 20 percent that April, was 14.5 percent just before the election. Six weeks later, the prime rate had jumped to a record 21.5 percent. Whether the charges are true or not, Carter wasn't re-elected.

Now, some Democrats think Volcker is helping the Republicans.

Fed officials deny the allegations. Since the fall of 1979, they argue, Volcker has consistently maintained a policy of fighting inflation with a tight-money policy that has meant high interest rates and a severe recession.

DEFENDERS OF the Fed note that economic conditions are unique this year, namely that interest rates have remained abnormally high throughout the recession. Moreover, they say there is no evidence that the Fed is abandoning its anti-inflation policy and pumping up the economy in time for the election. Rather, the growth of money and credit is sluggish and expectations of a strong recovery this year have vanished.

So why are interest rates suddenly falling? Private economists say the reason is that the economy has grown very weak from the year-long recession and this finally has curbed individual and business appetites for credit.

Economist Bosworth believes the Fed wants to keep from becoming an election issue. The best way to do that is to prevent interest rates from going higher and resist temptations to force rates lower than private market forces would dictate based on economic conditions, he says.

BOSWORTH REASONS that an overzealous anti-inflation policy hurt the economy more than the bank intended. Volcker can afford to ease up a little without worrying about inflation surging up again, but he doesn't want to go too far in the other direction.

An administration economist said he agrees with Bosworth that the Fed is trying to keep things on an even keel. "I think the Fed's view is to try to be neutral. It doesn't want to play any games by making things better or worse," said the economist, who did not want his name used.

The Cuban connection

It's becoming increasingly clear that Soviet military influence in Cuba did not end with the 1962 Cuban missile crisis. Periodic intelligence reports indicating Soviet activity around the island nation are becoming more frequent.

As East-West tensions increase, it's likely that at some point President Reagan must demand that the Soviets abide by the 1962 agreement between Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev and President John F. Kennedy be finally honored and Soviet forces withdrawn. The only question remaining is when.

Writing in Human Events in July, R. Christopher Whalen noted that "over the past decade, the Soviet Union has re-introduced offensive weapons into Cuba, in direct violation of the 1962 agreement prohibiting their presence. These weapons are based both in and around Cuba, on planes, ships and missiles, and are operated today by the Soviet armed forces."

Whalen says the Soviet Union has used an incremental approach designed to avoid another confrontation with the United States and has slowly increased its military capability in Cuba "to a level far in excess of the forces which provoked the 1962 missile crisis. The present level of Soviet activities in Cuba places the basic foundation of U.S. foreign policy — a policy which assumes peace and tranquility at home — in grave danger."

The buildup of Soviet forces on the island has taken place over a number of years, at a time when the United States had its hands full fighting "brush fires" in other parts of the world. It's only logical that the Reagan administration should demand that the forces be withdrawn and employ whatever sanctions necessary to see that the request is accomplished in as short a period of time as possible.

"The Soviet forces on the island are a problem, and they must be removed," says Whalen. "The logic which says that we must await a Soviet move before we take action against the Soviets in Cuba is fatally flawed; they have already moved by placing offensive weapons on the island."

He's correct. It's long past time for the Kennedy-Khrushchev agreement to be honored.

Undying Polish spirit

The spirit of the Polish people will not stay muffled. This was proved again the other day as 10,000 to 15,000 Poles gathered to honor those who died in the Warsaw uprising of World War II.

The scene was the Powazki military cemetery on the outskirts of the Polish capital. The rally was scheduled for the very hour when 38 years ago a courageous Polish army rose up in revolt against the Nazi occupiers. The Nazis put the rebels down, killing about 200,000 of them, and then to get revenge burned and tore down large sections of Warsaw.

On the 38th anniversary of that revolt, the new generation of rebels spoke out against their present overlords, the Communists in Warsaw, and in Moscow.

Powazki cemetery echoed with the chant of "Free Lech Walesa," the Solidarity leader who has been imprisoned for months. They protested the imprisonment of hundreds of others, and let the world know that despite the cruel and unusual punishments they are suffering, they will not give up their fight for freedom.

A fugitive Solidarity leader, Zbigniew Bujak, spoke for his fellow countrymen as his tape-recorded voice came through a loudspeaker.

"We shall fight for the rights of Solidarity," he said. "We shall fight for the release of our colleagues. Let us pray for our Solidarity comrades who are in jail."

The free world joins in praying for a Poland that has suffered so much for so many years, but whose freedom fighters refuse to surrender.

Another View:

Give up the fight

President Reagan should give up his campaign against a natural-gas pipeline from the Soviet Union to Western Europe. Poland's slight softening of its martial-law decrees offers a chance to do so gracefully: Mr. Reagan can treat the change as a response to his embargo on pipeline equipment. Such an interpretation would be welcome, if far-fetched. For lifting the embargo would help undo the damage it has caused already — to the West, not to the Soviet Union.

The worst of that damage is to drive America's allies into open defiance of U.S. leadership. France has ordered production of the same turbine blades that Mr. Reagan prohibits. British Prime Minister Thatcher calls the embargo "wrong" and questions its legality. West German Chancellor Schmidt is "very emphatic" about not supporting the U.S. move. And the 10-nation European Community formally complained about Mr. Reagan's "unilateral and retroactive decisions."

While unifying Western Europe, the embargo has provoked divisions within the Cabinet. It contributed to the resignation of the president's secretary of state and brought vigorous opposition from advisers experienced in diplomacy and trade. And as Western Europe and the Soviet Union have made clear, the pipeline will be built whether or not the embargo is maintained.

The pipeline project has gathered momentum that the United States probably cannot stop. In deep recession, Western Europe needs industrial jobs to supply pipeline equipment. Even before the recession, European long-term goals favored the pipeline. West Germany, France and Italy want to end their excessive energy dependence on the unstable Middle East and on suppliers like Libya and Algeria. Britain and Norway want to stretch out the useful life of their North Sea oil and gas. Beyond energy, the 25-year natural-gas commitment serves Western Europe's need for expanded trade across the Iron Curtain. And by late in the 1980s gas exports would provide hard currency for the Soviet Union to buy grain and other Western products.

Against this convergence of interests Mr. Reagan tries to stand like Canute against the waves. He complains that the Soviets are getting their pipeline equipment too cheap and should pay a political surcharge like leaving Afghanistan or letting Solidarity function freely in Poland. The complaint belittles Western Europe's ability to strike a fair bargain. The demand for Soviet political concessions is unrealistic. President Reagan also argues that Soviet access to Western industrial markets can only serve the Kremlin's anti-Western designs. The reasoning reflects suspicion that natural-gas imports will make Western Europe vulnerable to future Soviet pressures. That fear ignores the sophistication of America's allies and exaggerates their susceptibility to a communist bear-hug. Further, it discounts the reality that commitment to the pipeline is a heavy Soviet investment in long-term stable relations with Eastern Europe.

East-West economic interdependence can coexist with political rivalry. The pipeline deal embodies that conviction of America's European allies. Mr. Reagan's conviction is different. But the allies are unlikely to act against their interests in order to please him. The attempt to pressure them into doing so will not work. The president should seize his chance to give it up.

Affidavit discrepancy in FBI murder case

WASHINGTON — Leonard Peltier, a 37-year-old American Indian Movement leader, is serving consecutive life sentences for the murder of two FBI agents on a South Dakota reservation in 1975. But there is disturbing evidence that the FBI doctored the case against Peltier with the knowledge of the federal prosecutor.

Jack Anderson

The FBI were understandably desperate to nail Peltier for the death of their two former colleagues in a shootout on the Pine Ridge Reservation. Of the four suspects in the killings, two were tried and acquitted and charges against a third were dropped. Only Peltier remained as a means of avenging the agents' murder.

But Peltier had fled to Canada. It was the FBI's task to produce sufficient evidence for his extradition.

A persuasive part of their extradition case was affidavits from one Myrtle Poor Bear. She made three sworn statements, but only the second and third were sent up to the proceedings in Canada. It's not hard to see why.

In her first affidavit, Poor Bear claimed to have been Peltier's girlfriend and that he told her he had killed the two G-men. (Peltier and other witnesses testified at his subsequent trial that they had never heard of her.)

The second affidavit, obtained by the FBI two days after the first, was identical except for the addition of two significant sentences: "I was present the day the Special Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation were killed. I saw Leonard Peltier shoot the FBI agents."

The third affidavit, obtained still later, was a lurid account of the shooting by the self-proclaimed eyewitness.

Obviously, the affidavits contained serious internal contradictions. If Poor Bear had been present and seen Peltier shoot the agents, why would he feel obliged to tell her he had shot them? The timing and progressive strengthening of Poor Bear's accounts were also suspicious.

At Peltier's trial, Poor Bear recanted all her affidavits. She claimed the FBI had threatened her, and she said she hadn't even read the statements before she signed them. But the trial judge refused to allow Poor Bear's testimony of FBI abuse to be heard by the jury.

The appeals court judge, Donald L. Ross, was not so obliging. He chastised the prosecutor for using the conflicting affidavits to extradite Peltier.

"Why the FBI and the prosecutor's office continued to extract more to put into the affidavits in hope to get Mr. Peltier back to the country is beyond my understanding," he said, "because you should have known, and the FBI should have known, that you were pressuring the woman to add to her statements."

The prosecutor, U.S. Attorney Evan Hultman, denied any involvement in selecting which of Poor Bear's statements were used in the extradition request.

"Your Honor, I personally was not present at that stage," he said. "I read the affidavits after they had been submitted, so I want the court to know that."

But FBI documents obtained by my associate John Dillon and Indy Badhwar, show that Hultman may have misled the judge about his role. Referring to William Halperin, the Canadian government attorney who represented the United States as the extradition hearing, an FBI memo states: "It was upon Halperin's recommendation, with the concurrence of special prosecutors Evan Hultman and Robert Sikma, that only Myrtle Poor Bear's second and third affidavits were used in the Peltier extradition."

Besides the Poor Bear affidavits, there was testimony from another "eyewitness" — an FBI agent who claimed to have identified Peltier through a telescopic rifle sight at a distance of 800 yards. Yet Hultman did not disclose to the jury, or the defense, the existence of an FBI test that cast serious doubt on the possibility of such an identification.

In a memo to Hultman, the FBI reported that its expert recreated the situation and found that he was "hampered by extreme mirages at ground level." The defense had tried to make this point with its own witness, but didn't know the FBI itself had corroborated the theory.

Finally, FBI documents show that the FBI suppressed the result of initial ballistics tests, which said the shell casings found at the murder scene were "not identifiable" with the rifle that Peltier owned.

Footnote: Peltier has requested a new trial. Hultman did not return our calls.

NIMMO RESPONDS: In a recent column, I called Veterans Administrator Robert P. Nimmo the worst of President Reagan's appointees, citing his penchant for personal perks while the VA budget was being slashed, as well as accusations from close aides that he was uncomfortable around the handicapped and unsympathetic to Vietnam veterans.

Calls to Nimmo for his side of the story went unanswered. But within hours of the critical column's publication, I got a hand-delivered letter from him. Here is the response he failed to provide in time for inclusion in the original article:

"I am not uncomforable dealing with the handicapped," he wrote. "Any suggestion that I didn't want 'no-legged' persons around me is personally repugnant and without foundation.

"Your quote... that I referred to veterans who seek aid from the VA as 'malingering welfare bums' is also totally without foundation."

Nimmo characterized the allegations as based on "falsehoods, half-truths or statements taken out of context."

He added: "The truth is that I have pressed for an increased budget for veterans' programs. We are moving at full speed to resolve the Agent Orange problem and to increase the number and effectiveness of the Vietnam Veterans Outreach Centers.

"I am not mistake-proof," Nimmo concluded, "but am trying to improve the efficiency... of one of the largest agencies in the government."

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: Fidel Castro likes to stir up the Puerto Rico independence issue. A top-secret CIA report explains why: "Puerto Rico independence is an issue that has appeal in much of Latin America. Castro apparently reasons that Cuba can use it to earn kudos while running little risk."

— Aside from military advantage, the big goal of the Soviet space program has always been political propaganda. The Kremlin hopes to overshadow the major role the United States has played in space since the Russians' early triumphs. That's why the space shuttle has proved a major embarrassment to the Kremlin's space cadets, according to a secret CIA report.

— In the same vein, Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., is counting on the Russians as his best hope of getting Reagan administration support for his American Defense Education Act. Only if the Soviets are seen to pull ahead of us scientifically, Hart figures, will the administration go along with education expenditures. That's the way it worked when the Rusians launched Sputnik and inspired the National Defense Education Act of 1958.

INSIDE REPORT:

Anti-Reaganite unopposed Senate nominee

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Sen. Lowell Weicker (R-Conn.), who has rebuked his state for preferring Ronald Reagan to Jimmy Carter in the 1980 election, was given a seat on Air Force One taking President Reagan from Hartford, Conn., to Washington Tuesday, following an internal White House debate.

The White House congressional liaison office recommended that Weicker be put aboard the presidential plane after Reagan's address to the Knights of Columbus convention in Hartford. With the withdrawal last week of Prescott Bush Jr., the vice president's brother, Weicker is unopposed for the Republican nomination for the Senate.

But the White House political office argued that the consistency and intensity of Weicker's opposition to Reagan ought to preclude such courtesies for the senator. It would be particularly inappropriate to embrace the liberal Weicker after a trip intended to woo conservative Catholics, the political aides argued.

The dispute was settled by White House chief of staff James A. Baker III, who decided to put Weicker on Air Force One. But that did not end the grumbling over the decision.

Weicker has consistently opposed Reagan policies, most recently as the only Republican senator to vote for delaying the third year of the Reagan tax cut. But what has most irritated presidential aides is his rhetoric.

"The worst thing that happened to us here in the state of Connecticut," Weicker said April 16, "was when we cast our votes for Ronald Reagan rather than Jimmy Carter." On April 7, he said of Reagan's economic policies: "God help the United States of America if we have two more years like that." On Feb. 18, he accused Reagan of "putting devotion to a particular ideology above his duty to the American people."

On July 23, Weicker was invited to the Oval Office for a bill-signing ceremony the day after he broke party ranks to vote against the Reagan tax cut. A photo of a smiling Reagan and Weicker together at the White House was distributed July 24 at the Republican State Convention in Hartford, which gave its party designation to Weicker over Bush.

Bush's managers pointed to the White House attitude as one reason why Bush, who had campaigned on a solid pro-Reagan platform, decided not to contest the September primary against Weicker.

Weicker will oppose Rep. Toby Moffett, an anti-Reagan liberal, in the general election.

CHARLEY REESE

Governmental employees do not pay taxes

People who receive money from the government don't pay taxes even though they may return a portion of their money and fill out a tax form. It is all a charade.

Charley Reese

To understand why, let's suppose we live in a three-person country. I am the government. You, a farmer, are the private sector. The third person is a government employee.

I the government tax you the private sector 15 apples. I pay the government employee 8 apples, but I require him to give two of them back as a "tax." Now, did my original store of apples increase as a result of my employee returning two of them? No. I would have had the same number of apples — all of which came from the private sector — if I had just paid him six apples instead of eight with a supposed tax of two apples.

The total resource of the government is 15 apples and it is immaterial whether I hand out eight and get two back or just hand out six in the first place. The government employee produces no apples. The only way I, the government, can increase the total resources is to get more apples from you, the private sector.

This silly little analogy contains truth obscured from the public, most likely on purpose. The only source of wealth in the United States is the private sector which produces it by applying human labor to natural resources. The only resource of the government is that portion of private wealth taken from the private sector by taxes. Government employees are irrelevant to the production of wealth since their only income is from the money taken by taxes. They provide services. They don't produce wealth.

The significance of this is somewhat frightening considering the enormous scope of government.

The private sector is not only supporting itself but also the government and all government employees and all recipients of government welfare or as they like to call it, entitlements. If you are in the private sector and you wonder why you are tired at night, just remember the burden you are carrying on your shoulders.

The unpleasant truth, however, is that this private sector, which is the one and only source of support for the public sector, is shrinking. Fewer and fewer people are supporting with their labor more and more people who are in the nonproductive public sector.

Moreover, the continued productivity of the private sector is the key to survival of the public sector. Too many people these days have the exact opposite idea. They think that if the private sector collapses, the public sector will support it. That can never happen.

What can happen is what has happened in the Soviet Union. The public sector, by creating a monopoly of guns, can enslave the surviving members of the private sector and force them to produce, on the pain of death, a minimum amount of wealth. Under such a system, however, only the men with the guns eat well.

Because such a system is so inefficient, inevitably there is a slaughter of excess population. The Soviet Union has, for example, eliminated some 67 million of its own citizens under one pretext or another.

If I were black, I would be the most anti-welfare, pro-capitalism, pro-growth son of a gun you ever saw because if the private sector collapses and government resorts to tyranny, you don't have to be a genius to figure out who is most likely to be classified as surplus.

The power structure will remain the power structure even if there is an economic collapse and if you examine the power structure, you won't find any blacks or Jews except for a token one or two on the fringes.

The hope of the world remains what it has always been — freedom, so private individuals can employ their ingenuity and energy to produce wealth. Whenever that freedom is lost, either by conquest or by surrender in return for the illusion of government-supplied security, the result is always the same: human misery.

The present debt structure tells me the American people may have already voted themselves into slavery and all that remains to be decided is the form it will take.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Check with doctor before using hypnotism

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father has a very painful knee from arthritis, but he does not like to take pills. He is retired and isn't rich, but he isn't poor either. He would like to know if hypnosis would be worthwhile. — Tony, Chicago

Dear Tony: Hypnosis has been used to help patients cope with their pain, but that is no guarantee that your father will be helped. If he decides he wants to explore the advisability of hypnosis, I would urge him to discuss the subject with his doctor. Eliminating or reducing medication is not something a patient should do on his own.

As for the possible value of hypnosis, Dr. Harold J. Wain, of the Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, says that hypnosis can reduce a patient's reliance on medication for the relief of pain. Whether or not it proves effective depends in large part on the relationship between the patient and hypnotist.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I don't understand why the government is getting involved in the drunk driver problem. Don't get me wrong — I think these guys that drink and drive should be put in jail. But I don't think drunk driving is that important. — Rusty, Kansas City, Mo.

Dear Rusty: Anyone who has been the victim of a drunk driver would certainly disagree with you about the importance of this issue. I would also point out that accidents due to drunk driving, just like diseases due to smoking, are preventable, and that seems to be reason enough to do something about them. In addition, some authorities who have studied the subject maintain that deaths related to the use of alcohol are grossly under-reported. According to one study that compared driver death certificates with blood alcohol tests, there is a 90 percent under-reporting of alcohol-related deaths.

I am not arguing for or against government involvement in this area, but merely suggesting that drunk driving is a serious problem.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

Oil glut more bad than good for Venezuala, its economy

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — The world oil glut is lashing Venezuela's once-healthy economy:

—Talk of devaluating the oil-producing nation's currency, the bolivar, currently 4.28 to the U.S. dollar, is rife both on the street and in financial circles.

—The nation's annual growth rate has fallen from 8.4 percent in 1976, when oil prices were strong, to 1 percent now.

—Central Bank reserves have dropped from $8.6 billion at the beginning of this year to $6.3 billion as of July 16.

"The country is going through a fiscal crisis and nobody doubts the gravity of the economic situation," said Haydee Castillo, vice president of the House of Representatives and a member of the governing Christian Democrat (Copei) Party, in a recent newspaper interview.

Commented Rodger Farrell, official spokesman for the Venezuelan-American Chamber of Commerce: "Something has got to happen soon. The government is going to have to cut back on projects, spending and trim the state bureaucracy."

Falling oil revenues led President Luis Herrera Campins to slash almost $2 billion off the government's projected $20.2 billion 1982 budget in April this year.

Herrera's ax fell mostly on the public sector.

Bogus alligators surface

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A federal judge has barred 31 retailers here from selling shirts and sweaters that may be counterfeits using the Izod-Lacoste alligator symbol.

The company says such counterfeits have cost it "hundreds of thousands of dollars" in potential sales.

Attorneys for General Mills Inc., which manufactures the clothing, served U.S. District Judge William Gray's restraining orders on the retailers Wednesday, when the company confiscated the knit polo shirts emblazoned with the allegedly phony alligators.

Jeffrey Sheldon, one of the Los Angeles lawyers handling the case, said "quite a few" of the retailers were located in the garment district. He said other orders were served to people working "swap meets," informal open-air markets.

Sheldon said the company may seek more orders against local retailers in the next few days. The orders prohibit future sales of the counterfeit shirts. The company in some instances is also seeking damages, attorneys said.

This is the Minneapolis-based company's third round of action against Izod-Lacoste counterfeiters. Previous action includes restraining orders served in May to Miami retailers and the confiscation of some 3,600 shirts bearing bogus alligators in New York City.

Actor may be jailed for refusal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John Holmes, the porno actor acquitted in the bludgeon murders of four people at a Laurel Canyon home, has been ordered jailed for refusing to tell a grand jury about the killings.

Holmes, known on the screen as Johnny Wadd, told Superior Court Judge Julius Leetham on Wednesday, "I cannot answer any questions" about the July 1, 1981, killings because he feared for the safety of himself and his family if he told what he saw.

Leetham ordered Holmes jailed until he testifies. He was in custody for eight months pending the trial. He has been in jail for possessing stolen property since his acquittal June 25.

Grand jury takes case

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The case of a World's Fair employee charged with possession of explosives and stolen computer equipment that he kept in his rooms at a YMCA has been handed over to a grand jury.

Parking lot attendant Michael Gerald King, held in lieu of $155,000 bond on warrants charging him with 20 counts of burglary and possession of explosives, appeared Wednesday before Knoxville General Sessions Court Judge Harold Wimberly, who sent the case to the grand jury.

King was arrested July 23 by police who raided his room at the YMCA near the fairgrounds and found dynamite caps, explosive chemicals, a bomb-making book and allegedly stolen computer equipment.

Surgical procedure developed to remove tumors on spine

By LAWRENCE KILMAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Six years after his parents discovered he had cancerous tumors growing on his spinal cord, 7-year-old Jonah Press of Stockholm, Sweden, found a friend with the same disease — and a New York doctor who may have helped save them both.

Last week Jonah underwent a six-hour operation at New York University Medical Center to have the tumors removed, and on Thursday he met 9-year-old Steven LaRocca of Lindenhurst, N.Y., who two years ago became the first patient to undergo the experimental surgery.

In their bedside meeting at the medical center, the two boys discussed their operations, and Steven reassured Jonah he would soon be running and playing ball. As Jonah rested on his bed and smiled, Steven seemed the living image of his words as he ran around the room and cavorted for his new-found friend.

Steven, who could not walk and was in great pain before his operation, now "runs, jumps, plays. He does everything a normal 9-year-old would do," said his mother, Roseanne LaRocca.

DR. FRED EPSTEIN, associated professor of pediatric neurosurgery, said the prognosis for Jonah is good, but "since I'm only doing this for two years, I can't say they're cured."

The condition had long been considered inoperable because surgery to remove the tumors could also destroy healthy spinal tissue and cause paralysis. Traditional therapy is radiation treatment, but the children inevitably become paralyzed and die.

"We were told he was going to be paralyzed and he would not survive, but we were not satisfied with that," said Jonah's mother, Lolou Press, who sought help for her son for six years before learning of the new procedure.

"It's such a miracle. I'm thinking of what he went through," said Mrs. Press, who said the tumors weakened her son's legs and arms.

Recent advances in microsurgery made the operation possible and Epstein has performed the procedure on 27 patients. Other surgeons are now performing similar surgery.

"I can't tell you I don't have anxiety with this operation," he said. "No one has been made worse by the procedure. I knock on wood when I say that because you know damn well it will catch you. I don't rest easy until I see them move."

THE OPERATION calls for opening the spinal cord and removing the tumors, which can run the length of the spine, Epstein said. "The analogy I use is like the lead in a lead pencil," he said.

A tool called a Cavitron Ultrasonic Surgical Aspirator is used to perform the operation. The complex machine, developed at NYU, has a microscopic needle that vibrates 23,000 times a second. The surgeon guides the needle under a microscope, and the vibration liquifies the tumor. The surgeon must be careful not to touch healthy tissue.

"If I can operate on patients like Jonah, who could walk, or Steven, who could scissor his legs, they get better," Epstein said. "If they're really bad, they may improve or they may stay the same. If they're paralyzed, they do not improve."

Borderline high blood pressure may be treated

CHICAGO (AP) — Borderline high blood pressure, which affects about 18 million Americans, can be effectively monitored at home and reduced with drugs, a study says.

The study, detailed in today's issue of the Journal of American Medical Association, examined 16 people ranging in age from 24 to 47 who were able to measure their borderline high blood pressure successfully at home. The researchers also found that one drug taken in small doses reduced blood pressure readings.

The value of treating borderline high blood pressure has been controversial and the study did not focus on the usefulness of such treatment.

The researchers at the University of Michigan School of Medicine suggested that if individual doctors decide to treat these cases, home treatment monitoring would help.

Researchers say borderline high blood pressure can go undetected because it often has no symptoms.

But sometimes the condition can lead to an increased risk of heart attack, stroke or kidney damage, said Dr. Andrew Zweifler, who heads a hypertension clinic at the University of Michigan Medical Center.

Borderline high blood pressure is generally considered that with a systolic reading hovering around 150 millimeters of mercury and a diastolic reading around 90 millimeters of mercury, according to the authors of the report.

The American Heart Association says normal is 120 over 80.

Systolic pressure is measured when the heart muscle contracts and the diastolic pressure is measured when it relaxes.

The study showed home blood pressure readings dropped with the use of propranolol and clonidine, drugs that slow the pulse rate and nervous system functions.

The study said the drugs produced only small drops in blood pressure, but the authors said even decreases of between 5 millimeters and 10 millimeters of mercury are enough to reduce readings to normal levels.

The millimeter reading is the standard measure for blood pressure.

Zweifler said blood pressure measurements may be lower when taken at home because some people may react unconsciously to being in a doctor's office, causing a higher reading.

Blood flow to brain while thinking greater in women, scientists show

By WARREN E. LEARY

WASHINGTON (AP) — Increases of blood flow to the brain while thinking is greater for women than men and, for both sexes, flow varies to each half of the brain depending upon the mental task performed, scientists have learned.

Researchers at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia, in a report published today in Science magazine, said they are not yet sure of the significance of the findings.

But the results are another in a growing list of indications that there are some fundamental differences between the brains of males and females.

Previous work indicates male and female brains differ in response to hormones, and recent research at Columbia University showed one part in female brains is proportionately larger than in males.

Scientists are curious about whether these physical differences may cause dissimilarities in behavior or skills between the sexes.

The new study also said that handedness is a factor in brain blood flow. Like females, left-handed men were shown to have a greater rate of blood flow to one hemisphere of the brain while performing certain mental tasks than right-handed men.

The report said this could indicate these groups have a greater percentage of one type of brain tissue — the outer gray matter portion — than right-handed males. Liquids, like blood, appear to travel through the gray matter more easily than the underlying white material of the brain, it said.

"Our findings that females and left-handers have a higher rate of hemispheric blood flow and a greater percentage of fast-perfusing tissue shows that brain organization in these groups...differs from that in right-handed males," the report said.

The brain is divided into two hemispheres, with the left side controlling the movement, vision and sensation of the right side of the body and vice-versa.

For most people, the brain halves appear somewhat specialized. The left side seems more responsible for reading, mathematical and analytical skills and the right side is dominant for abstract and spatial thinking.

Researchers Ruben C. Gur and Raquel E. Gur, and their colleagues in the university's neurology department, monitored changes in flow by measuring a radioactive isotope added to the blood of 62 volunteers aged 18 to 26.

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Surgeons today reattached the foot of a woman who was injured when an unattended plane with its engine idling broke loose from its moorings and crashed into her tent, authorities said.

The woman, Sandra Gross, 25, of Franklin, went into surgery at 2 p.m. Thursday to reattach arteries and veins for the left foot, severed just above the ankle, said James King, a spokesman for Froedtert Memorial Hospital.

The surgery was completed early today and Ms. Gross was listed in satisfactory condition, said a hospital spokeswoman.

Part of Ms. Gross' right foot also was chopped off in the accident, with the heel portion remaining attached, King said.

The accident occurred at 8:15 a.m. Thursday at the Experimental Aircraft Association fly-in at Oshkosh when a Piper Comanche broke loose from its moorings, traveled 400 feet and crashed into a tent in a camping area, said Henry Ogrodzinski, the association's public relations director.

Dane County Circuit Judge Angela Bartell, a former Miss Wisconsin, is the first woman to head a Wisconsin judicial district. She juggles the duties of a demanding legal career with the demands of a large family.

Wisconsin's first woman chief judge

By ELLEN PORATH
AP Writer

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Angela Bartell was planning a career in music education in 1964 — the year she became Miss Wisconsin.

But when her term was over, she turned down a music scholarship to Northwestern University and went to the University of Wisconsin to study psychology. She decided on a legal career after meeting her future husband, a law student.

Today, the 36-year-old Ms. Bartell is the first woman to serve as a chief judge in Wisconsin.

"If someone had asked me to predict 10 or 15 years ago what I'd be doing today, I'd be nowhere near it," Ms. Bartell says.

Her appointment to Wisconsin's most overloaded judicial district — which began this week — continues her record of "firsts."

NAMED TO THE BENCH four years ago, Ms. Bartell was first in her class at the University of Wisconsin Law School in 1971. She was the first woman to serve as a law clerk to U.S. District Judge James Doyle Sr. And she became Dane County's second female judge in 1978.

In her new position, she will be responsible for court administration in the 5th Judicial District — a district of 19 judges in Dane, Rock and Green counties. It is one of 10 Wisconsin judicial districts, and with state government centered in Madison, certainly one of the busiest.

"Judicial resources are definitely limited," she said in an interview in her Madison office. "We have the greatest pressures now to use those resources."

MS. BARTELL'S OFFICE reflects the personality of its occupant — organized, committed to career and family, with flashes of wry humor.

Law books and legal awards dominate the room, but a montage of family photographs occupies a prominent spot on one wall and large photos of her children dot the windowsill. A worn pair of running shoes sits on a closet shelf, not far from a retired bailiff's gift — a beer mug emblazoned with the words, "magna cum lager." Paintings by her mother, musician and artist Marie Baldi, decorate the walls.

"I'm optimistic that there's a way to accomplish whatever I want to accomplish," she said.

MS. BARTELL'S HUSBAND, Jeffrey, is a lawyer. They have five children, ranging in age from 2 to 10.

"Everyone has to pull for the group good," she said. "No one bends the family for his own purposes."

The three oldest children help with the chores. And when a family emergency occurs, Jeffrey and Angela Bartell are equally likely to rearrange their schedules if their full-time baby sitter needs help.

"We have, of necessity and preference, approached the problem with who can best handle the situation today," she said. "We each do our share, as we're able to do it."

Her husband, she said, has always been "extremely supportive and encouraging."

"He's never interposed any feelings of his that I should be doing anything but what I wanted in my career," she said. "We've always both been the second best helper to the other.

"What I do at home is what I have to do well, what I want to do well and what I expect to do well," she said. "It's the same at the office."

AS CHIEF JUDGE, Ms. Bartell will be in charge of the court's budget and the assignment of judges. Parties in legal proceedings will complain to her. Other judges will come to her for advice. She will serve as liaison between the court and county and state governments.

"Their input is extremely important if the output of the chief judge is to be accepted," she said.

Historic preservation sparks new interest

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

In Western Europe, where historic preservation and restoration is thought worthy of serious study, there are centers of higher learning devoted exclusively to these subjects.

Here in the United States, however, the emphasis has been on building the new — not in keeping the old up to par. But the evidence suggests such attitudes are changing here.

One example of this new interest is the recent establishment of the Restoration College Association at Mount Carroll, Ill. Ultimately, the nonprofit group hopes to create a center of higher education in the U.S. devoted exclusively to restoration and historic-preservation studies, similar to schools already existing in Europe.

The association started in 1979 when it acquired the campus and buildings of defunct Shimer College, and turned them into the Campbell Center for Historic Preservation Studies. A variety of classes and workshops taught by experts is geared to professionals and interested amateurs from May through November.

Establishment of the school is an example of historic preservation at its best, since the school's opening permitted the mid-19th century campus to survive intact. Saving the college from the wrecker's ball also played a role in revitalizing the town of Mount Carroll.

"If a 12-acre site in the center of a town of 2,000 becomes a derelict, it can have a devastating effect," said Bob Richardson, a former philosophy teacher at Shimer College and now director of curriculum and development for the Restoration College Association.

The college has played a major role in the town since it was established in 1853, according to Richardson. Its growth helped stimulate development and restoration of some of the town's central business district, built around a courthouse constructed in 1858.

As a quiet rural county seat, nothing much happened in Mount Carroll over the years. This meant most of the old 19th-century buildings around the courthouse were still standing and looked much as they did when first built when Campbell Center opened. In fact, the town now serves as a laboratory for Campbell Center students.

The credit for the idea of turning the bankrupt college into a center for preservation studies goes to Ralph Kennedy, a furniture restorer who lives and works in Mount Carroll. His enthusiasm and fund-raising efforts led to a generous donation from the late S.J. Campbell of Mount Carroll and others which enabled the group to acquire the campus for $170,000 at auction in 1979.

Soon, both the campus and the central business district were placed on the National Register of historic Places as part of the Mount Carroll Historic District. This generated interest in restoring some of the town's buildings.

As a result, several buildings have been renovated for new businesses and "there is a more positive attitude toward solving the town's problems," Richardson said.

There is still a long way to go toward establishing Campbell Center as a mecca for preservationists. But each year, classes have increased. Several hundred students now come from all over the U.S. to study with experts and learn by doing, in courses on wood carving, decorative-surface and furniture finishes, historic wallpapers and textiles, the restoration of historic buildings, and similar subjects.

The classes are geared toward those already knowledgeable in their fields — architects, engineers, historical-society employees, curators, collectors and craftsmen. Teachers of the workshops come from leading institutions such as Colonial Williamsburg, the Smithsonian Institution, and the Library of Congress.

Classes appealing to a wider audience, such as individuals who are restoring their own homes, are being planned. Another goal is to provide working and showroom space for craftsmen and artisans on campus.

(Information about courses is available by writing the Restoration College Association Inc., Campbell Center, Box 66, Mount Carroll, IL 61053.)

Endometriosis: Young women's disease, cause not yet discovered

By CAROL POLSKY
Hearst Feature Service

ALBANY, N.Y. — Any woman of childbearing age can have endometriosis, but the typical victim is a career woman in her late 20s, 30s or 40s who delayed having children — the classic product of the baby boom generation.

It attacks her slowly, surreptitiously. Often, she never knows specifically what is causing her discomfort. In many cases, she has never heard of endometriosis, a disease associated with menstruation in women.

ENDOMETRIOSIS CAN CAUSE infertility, pain, destruction of pelvic organs and — rarely — death. But with drug and surgical treatments, endometriosis does not have to mean permanent infertility.

Still, not all of its victims are so lucky. And the disease, first reported in the 1800s, is now being diagnosed with increasing frequency.

In 1965, 186,000 women who had endometriosis were discharged from hospitals nationwide, according to a sampling conducted by the National Center of Health Statistics. In 1980, the number had doubled.

DOCTORS ATTRIBUTE the increase largely to better diagnostic techniques and greater interest in treating infertility as adoption becomes more difficult. But there's a feeling among many doctors that more and more women are developing the disease.

"It is affecting so many people," says Dr. Robert Franklin, a Baylor College of Medicine gynecologist in Houston. "Everyone you talk with has some relative with it."

The disease for a long time was thought to occur primarily in high-achieving, slender, perfectionist, white professional women. But doctors are now diagnosing it in teen-agers, housewives and mothers.

ENDOMETRIOSIS OCCURS when the endometrial lining of the uterus, which is shed along with blood during menstruation, flows back into the abdominal cavity through the Fallopian tubes and implants on the ovaries, uterus and bowels. The tissues bleed or swell, causing inflammation and scarring of the abdominal organs.

According to Dr. Robert Kistner of Boston's Brigham and Womens Hospital, who who pioneered treatment of endometriosis in the late '50s, one-third of women with endometriosis don't show any symptoms except infertility. Others, however, experience disabling menstrual cramps, pain between menstrual periods, backaches, painful intercourse, extreme premenstrual tension and abnormal periods.

IF UNRECOGNIZED, THE DISEASE can close off the kidneys, cause bowel obstructions, great pain, misery and marital disharmony. Rarely, the condition turns into cancer.

The disease can be treated through surgery by removing the endometrial growths or with drugs that cause either pseudo-pregnancy or pseudo-menopause by halting ovulation and menstruation for four to nine months. The treatments clear up the endometriosis temporarily, permitting pregnancies in about 75 to 80 percent of women treated in the earlier stages of the disease, although the pregnancy rate can fall to 25 percent in later stages.

ONE OF FRANKLIN'S PATIENTS underwent a hysterectomy last year for a combination of endometriosis and fibroids — growths on the uterus. She had experienced back pain and fatigue for five years, but always attributed her ailments to menstruation, a demanding job and a car accident.

The 33-year-old woman said the operation was the best thing that could have happened to her. "I never realized how sick I was until I got well," she said. "I'd gotten sick over a period of years, and I didn't realize how much pain I was in until it was gone."

DESPITE IMPROVED DIAGNOSIS, treatment and increasingly active research interest, the disease is still a mystery in its most important aspects.

Dr. Robert Schenken of the National Institute of Health is doing research on how endometriosis might cause infertility. "Circumstantial evidence exists that endometriosis causes infertility when you treat it, and it goes away and then you get pregnant. But there are also cases of women — untreated at any stage of the disease — who do get pregnant," he says.

As for its cause, Franklin of Baylor says, "Whether it's because of the delay in having children, nobody knows. Whether it's because of the increased tension and anxiety, nobody knows."

STUFFED CABBAGE

It's a zesty dish.

2-pound head green cabbage
1 pound spicy pork sausage meat
1½ cups cooked rice
1 tablespoon (finely grated onion (pulp and juice)
¼ cup minced parsley

Remove any open leaves from cabbage, cover cabbage with boiling water and boil 15 minutes; drain well, top side down. Mix together sausage, rice, onion and parsley. Open all leaves from center of cabbage without removing core. Beginning at the center of the cabbage, plaster the sausage mixture over the inside of the leaves, folding them back as you do so; fold last bottom leaves toward top to make compact. Cook core side down in a solid bottom steamer, tightly covered, over boiling water until cabbage is tender — one hour. Turn out onto steamer lid to drain; remove liquid; turn back onto serving plate. Makes six servings.

Juggling is catching at University of California convention

By DAVE LARSEN
Los Angeles Times

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — The bumper sticker on the out-of-state car in the parking lot of the University of California Santa Barbara said: Juggling Is Catching.

Judging from the scene inside Robertson Gym on the campus, it was an epidemic.

Everywhere, clones of W.C. Fields. By the hundreds they were there, all the sexes from Maine to Texas, from every age group, juggling hats, balls, scarves, cigar boxes, rings, clubs, plates, beanbags — some on unicycles, pogo sticks, even eating as they performed.

It was the 35th annual convention and extravaganza of the International Jugglers Association, an organization that president Gene Jones of New York City said has more than 2,000 members in 21 nations. Recently, many of them staged the Super Bowl, the World Series, the International Chili Cookoff of juggling.

The jugglenaut included Larry Vaksman of Philadelphia, whose repertoire embraces juggling a rubber ball, an apple and a cucumber while on a unicycle.

As a finale, while performing, he eats part of the apple and the cucumber, although not the rubber ball.

"I'm at the point where I can make a decent living at it," said Vaksman, a professional. "Although it's probably less than a good plumber makes."

And plumbers probably think just the opposite. Indeed, among the faithful in attendance was John Beckner of Colorado Springs, Colo., a plumber who said he can keep seven balls in motion.

"I practice on my lunch breaks," he said. "I've even tried hammers and pipe wrenches, but they aren't blanced the right way."

Overwhelmingly, the skills on display were those of juggling. Such as Paul Cohen, a professional specialist in what he called eccentric juggling.

Cohen, of New Jersey, bends forward and flips balls the size of softballs over his head and onto his spine. Then, as five of them rest on his back, he flips them one at a time over his head and into his hands again.

"This is my invention and you have to be obsessed enough to learn something like this," he allowed. "I've tried six, but five seems to be the maximum."

As with just about anything, records are also kept on juggling. According to the Guinness Book of World Records, the only juggler in history able to juggle 10 balls or 8 plates was the Italian Enrice Rastelli, who died in 1931. Reportedly, he could even keep his checkbook in balance.

Guiness also lists a Japanese woman who was able to juggle 16 hoops (hands and feet), three people tied for proficiency with seven clubs, three tied for the top spot with 11 rings, one with pirouettes with three cigar boxes, and a Russian who holds a duration record of 16 minutes and 20 seconds with five clubs.

In an article on the physics of juggling in the publication Juggler's World, excerpted from a French scientific journal, it is stated that:

"It has been observed that le$rning to juggle is like learning mathematics. One starts from obvious or known f$cts or skills and is led by a careful process to apparently new facts or skills...Someone who accepts Euclid's axioms knows geometry, and someone who can throw and catch and see knows how to juggle!"

"That is true," said Tom Beckman of Chicago, a professional juggler and clown. "The most difficult thing, really, is starting out, learning the basic cascade pattern with three balls. As one is coming down, another is going up, and all are being thrown into the opposite hand."

Beckman has progressed to the point where, using Ping-Pong balls, he catches them in his mouth and rhythmically spits them out.

Cathleen Clancy of New York City, who said she begins medical school in the fall, credited her ability at juggling with helping put her through her first year at Yale.

Estrogen might improve sex lives of menopausal women, study says

By SHARON COHEN
AP Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of women who have gone through menopause may be able to improve their sex lives by taking small doses of estrogen, a study says.

The estrogen needed is so minimal that the risk of cancer also is minimal, said Dr. James Semmens, one of the study's authors.

He warned, however, that estrogen should not be used by some women, including those with high-blood pressure or weight problems.

The American Cancer Society said several studies have linked the use of estrogen by menopausal women with an increased risk of endometrial cancer, cancer of the lining of womb. The increased risk is independent of other factors previously linked with a higher rate of this cancer, such as high blood pressure or diabetes.

THE CANCER SOCIETY said the risk of endometrial cancer for women who use estrogen during and after menopause appears to be four to 13 times greater than for non-users, and that the risks seem to increase with the duration of use and higher doses.

The Semmens findings are based on a study showing estrogen reverses some physiological changes that can cause pain or discomfort during intercourse.

Fourteen women — from 51 to 70 years of age — participated in the study conducted at the University of Copenhagen.

Results of the study, believed to be the first to measure the physiological effects of menopause, were reported in today's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Menopause, caused by ovarian failure, is the time in life when a woman's menstrual cycle ends. The average age for menopause is 51, Semmens said.

THE STUDY SAYS most sexual problems experienced by menopausal women are caused by the loss of lubricant in the vagina. The loss of lubrication can result in painful tears in the vaginal wall during intercourse.

Semmens, a professor at the Medical University of South Carolina, said more than half of the women between 50 and 60 frequently experience discomfort during intercourse. When sex becomes difficult and painful, some women decide to abstain.

Semmens' study found estrogen can, with varying degrees, improve blood circulation to the vaginal wall and thus increase secretions. Semmens also said the hormone, which can be administered with a vaginal cream or a pill, can reduce the acidity level in that area and hold down the normal bacteria level, reducing the chance for irritations.

All these improvements stop if estrogen is no longer used, he said.

He said a follow-up study is being conducted at the South Carolina school and early results show continued success with estrogen.

Quick follow-up for oven spill: sprinkle with salt immediately. When oven is cool, brush off burned food and wipe with damp sponge.

Fall scarf fashions for spring range from country peasant to eastern exotic, with a spicing of American Indian. They can be sashed, wrapped or twisted for heads, necks and hips in prints that run the gamut: Provincial flowers, calico patchworks, Indian paisleys. Colors range from bizaar brights, desert neutrals and the mellowed shade of French impressionist painting — blues, jade greens and lavendar, yellows and peach.

Upper left: Provence bouquets add the sparkle of the sun-drenched French countryside to a cotton square that wraps the neck.

Top right: Pure silk crepe in a paisley square with Provence border folds horizontally to create an oblong, knotted under a collar for a touch of softness at the neck.

Lower left: The pure silk square wraps once around the forehead and knots on the side for a touch of Indian summer.

Old Chickering piano has colorful history

By ROCH THORNTON
AP Writer

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — It once belonged to a U.S. senator and the famed Gen. John "Black Jack" Pershing. It survived a fire that wiped out most of Pershing's family at the Presidio in San Francisco in 1915. And then, it disappeared for decades.

The 100-year-old piano now belongs to the Wyoming State Museum, donated recently by a woman who bought the piano 25 years ago from a disgruntled Cheyenne landlady for $100. A penniless soldier had left it in lieu of a rent payment.

"We consider it the greatest donation we've received in 1982," said museum spokeswoman Linda Rollins. "It's in remarkably good condition for its age."

Testimony to the piano's resilience is the fact that pianist Luciano Trebse played a concert on it to mark its debut at the museum in May.

The piano's eventful history began in 1882. Wyoming rancher Francis E. Warren — Wyoming's first state governor and a U.S. senator for 39 years — bought the piano new that year from the Chickering Piano Co. of Boston, Mrs. Rollins said.

Warren gave it to his daughter, Helen Frances, when she married the 44-year-old Pershing in 1905.

Pershing led the U.S. force that pursued Mexican freedom fighter Pancho Villa in 1916, and also commanded the American Expeditionary Force in France in World War I.

He was away from home on Aug. 15, 1915, when the upper story of his family's quarters at the Presidio burned down and his wife and three daughters were killed. Pershing's 5-year-old son — and the Chickering — survived.

Mrs. Rollins said that the piano eventually was shipped back to Warren's Belvoire Ranch southwest of Cheyenne. After several years at the ranch, the piano disappeared — until 1947, the year 14-year-old Judy Mason became its new owner.

Miss Mason, now married and living in San Diego, said that her mother had given her $100 and told her to buy the best piano available. She answered a newspaper advertisement placed by a rooming house landlady, who told her that the piano was "horrible" and that she probably wouldn't want it. But the young girl knew she had found a bargain.

After taking possession of the piano, she sent its number to Chickering Piano Co. and learned that Warren had bought it 75 years earlier. The senator's old housekeeper also identified the instrument, according to Mrs. Rollins.

Miss Mason moved to California, leaving the Chickering with a friend in Phoenix, Ariz., because the new home in San Diego was too small.

"We didn't contact her," Mrs. Rollins said. "She just came out of the blue last September or October and said she felt the piano should be back home so the citizens of Wyoming could enjoy it."

Smoke alarms may save your life

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Last week a man here in Dayton lost his wife and three children in a fire. The fire chief said a smoke alarm might have saved them.

It hit me hard, Abby, because I lost my three daughters in a fire, wrote to you, and you printed my letter. Please run it again. My three daughters are gone, and that man's three sons plus his wife are gone, but if a rerun of my letter can save one life, it will be worth the space.

By the way, Abby, I'm getting along just great. Thank you very much. — VIRGINIA IN DAYTON

DEAR VIRGINIA: Here's your letter — it's worth the space:

(Aug. 30, 1981)

DEAR ABBY: Last Memorial Day our house caught fire. Our three daughers were asleep upstairs, and my husband and I were asleep in the downstairs bedroom. The fire spread so fast and the smoke was so thick we weren't able to get the children. Melinda, 5, was dead on the scene; Suzanne, 2, was dead on arrival at the hospital; and Tonya, 7, was in a coma for two days. She died without coming out of it.

My husband and I still can't believe our little girls are gone. Maybe if we had had a smoke alarm we would still have our children.

While Tonya was in a coma, we were expecting the worst, so we willed her kidneys to the organ bank so that two children who needed a kidney could have them. That gave us some comfort.

Please print this. It's too late for us, but it may save some other parents from having to go through what we went through. — STILL GRIEVING IN DAYTON

DEAR ABBY: I am a sort of unofficial "office manager" by virtue of the fact that I have seniority. (I've been here for 21 years.) There are six girls in this office. Our boss is really the office manager, but he leaves a lot of the details to me.

We recently hired a new secretary. She is a nice person and came well-recommended, but she comes to work at 8 a.m. (like the rest of us), fixes coffee for herself (we have a coffeemaker with cream and sugar here, compliments of the office), but she also brings cottage cheese and bagels, and sometimes hard-boiled eggs and fruit, and she has her breakfast here. She is rarely finished before 8:45 because she brings the morning paper with her to read while she eats.

Do you think she's out of line? She's paid to work from 8 to 4. No location or names, please. — UNOFFICIAL OFFICE MANAGER

DEAR UNOFFICIAL: She's paid to work from 8 to 4, so at 8 she should start WORKING — not EATING.

DEAR ABBY: "No reunions," said the person who had no desire to go back and see the classmates who snubbed him (her?) in high school. I know exactly how that person feels.

I was lonely and miserable in high school, too, but I lost some weight, bought some sensational clothes, borrowed a Mercedes and went to my 25th reunion.

All the cute, popular girls who had snubbed me when I didn't have a friend (or a date) showed up looking old and faded. I was the belle of the ball! You should have seen the men line up to dance with the attractive, sultry brunette I had become.

Revenge is sweet. I say, "Don't get mad. Get even!" — GOT EVEN IN IOWA

Use of colors can affect career, self-image

By REBECCA SALNER
Hearst Feature Service

MENLO PARK, Calif. — How high and how fast you climb the career ladder can — believe it or not — have a lot to do with your use of colors, says color consultant Jeane Johnson.

Johnson's color consciousness dates back to the days when her mother refused to allow her to wear any red clothes — except pajamas — fearing that the offending hue would mar her red-headed daughter's appearance. Johnson later rebelled by wearing purple, red and pink throughout college.

Johnson is one of the new breed of advisers hired by people who want to know how to make the most of their looks. Her premise is that clients will look better once they begin to think of themselves in color.

The 56-year-old consultant, who has a master's degree in clothing and textiles from San Jose State University, says, "When you feel better about yourself, you can become more interested in others and be better at your job. It's the people that are insecure, worrying about how they look, that don't perform well."

Most of Johnson's clients are professional women between 30 and 55, because "they're the ones who can afford it and need to know how to dress." The dimension Johnson tries to tell her clients to consider is how the color makes them look. Most clients start with preconceived notions about what they should wear, which can create problems.

One of her clients had always considered herself a "pink person." When Johnson told her that her skin tone was golden and that she should wear a new range of colors, the client couldn't relinquish the pink image. Johnson went shopping with her client and helped her pick out clothes in the new shades.

Another client couldn't bring herself to wear bright colors without hearing her mother's voice saying, "Nice girls only wear navy."

What Johnson does during three 2 1/2-hour group sessions and one three-hour private appointment is teach her clients how to wear colors.

She provides her clients with a color wheel a group of fabric swatches taken from any number of the 26 pulled-out drawers of material that line the walls of her sparsely furnished office. In addition, she analyzes hair and eye color and skin tone before telling her clients which colors are enhancing.

Back-to-school dresses feature, left, handsmocking with blue floral skirt and white top and a yarndye plaid smock-style.

Seniors' band still has rhythm

By GREG FISTER
The Prescott Courier

PRESCOTT, Ariz. (AP) — The room is still. Then, as the word is given, 32 people swing into "Hail Hail" and "The Old Gray Mare."

Another performance of the Arizona Pioneers' Home rhythm band has begun with zest and life.

The youngest member of this group is 67 and the oldest is 94. The average is about 82.

But age isn't important — the only requirement is the ability to enjoy yourself and have fun.

That's the key word when members of the band talk about their experiences.

Nina Jones, 77, who has been in the band since its inception last fall, says she is having fun and always did like fun things.

"This brings me back to life," she added. "I was getting too lazy."

The band was the brainchild of Irene Brodie, a resident who died earlier this year.

After seeing a band from Kingman perform, she told Corine Gadarowski, the home's activities specialist, that Prescott could do the same thing if not better, and Mrs. Gadarowski began recruiting members.

Soon there were 10 members and it "just kept growing," Mrs. Gadarowski said.

At first, the instruments "were just a bunch of junk," Marie LaPrade recalled. "There was one little snare drum and the rest of us had spoons, sticks, tin cans."

Later, instruments were purchased and "Boy, we were class then," she said. "Everybody got a kick out of it."

Mrs. Gadarowski thinks of the band as more than a good time. She sees it as mental and physical therapy. In fact, she has to be on guard against overexertion by some.

Doris Mylott conducts "She'll Be Coming Round the Mountain" and leads the singing.

"I feel self-conscious sometimes," she said. "My mouth gets a little dry, but I enjoy it even so."

The band is "a tremendous icebreaker," Mrs. Gadarowski said. "It makes them part of something. It is one project that gives the infirm, the crippled, the older person an opportunity to be special."

Stan Girdner, the 81-year-old washtub-bass player, says students make the best audience. He remembers sixth-graders "were whooping and a-hollerin'" at one performance.

Florence Makin, 86, said she was "a little embarrassed" during a recent performance "because the children were so used to the staid grandmother."

From the Winnie-the-Pooh back-to-school collection are these dyed-to-coordinate color separates. Left, an engineered stripe knit shirt and chino slacks; right, pin stripe knit shirt, snap vest and brick-colored slacks.

Valentino shows daring styles

By DANIELA PETROFF
AP Writer

ROME (AP) — Valentino, the maestro of Italian elegance, showed a new side to his fashion character with a daring fall-winter high fashion collection sure to put heat into the colder months of the year.

The suave designer, now in his 50th year and with 20 years of fashion excellence behind him, veered from his usual romantic chic to present a slinky collection Thursday, full of skin-tight gowns, slit skirts and plunging necklines.

Gaudy shades of red and pink, alternating with stark black and white, and flimsy feather collars and myriads of sequins completed the "speakeasy" look.

One concession to propriety was the basque, a type of hip petticoat, that recurred to tauntingly conceal part of the female contour by day and night.

For daytime, Valentino propopsed the layered look, in suits with dirndl skirt and basque, spencer jacket or doublet overvest. Coats tended to be loose.

A master of fabrics, Valentino played the mixing game this year, combining plaids, prints and velvets to create a cozy enveloping look. Colors ranged from drab grays, browns and purples to the bright orange and red of an autumn leaf.

'Ruby Yacht of Omar Khayyam' sinks; 'Bullwinkle Show' cancelled

By Edvins Beitiks
Hearst Feature Service

Almost unnoticed, "The Bullwinkle Show" has slipped from NBC's Saturday morning programming, probably spelling the end of a 23-year television tradition.

In stations still carrying the program, it was replaced last Saturday by things like superkids in a Death Disco with The Robonic Stooges or cobwebbed copies of "The Jetsons."

We are not talking here about the death of an expendable piece of cartoon trivia like "Tennessee Tuxedo," "Baggy Pants and the Nitwits" or even the Wagnerian "Mighty Mouse." We are talking about the death of one generation's pun-starved, pre-teen way of laughing.

For them, it's painful to watch Bullwinkle sink to the bottom of a cartoon sea already scattered with the wreckage of Quick Draw McGraw, Wally Gator, Gandy Goose, Godzooky (nephew of Godzilla), and Inch High, Private Eye.

If Rocky the Flying Squirrel is, indeed, being chucked into the cartoon-hero ragpile, he'll have lasted one month short of 23 years. The premiere episode came out on ABC in September 1959 and lasted until 1961.

Then Bullwinkle nudged Rocky aside to take his rightful place as outsize star, and "The Bullwinkle Show" moved to NBC, where it ran for three years. ABC picked it up again in 1964 and kept it until 1973, when it went into syndication. It's found its way into Saturday mornings at some time, some place, ever since.

There was even a spinoff, "The Dudley Do-Right Show," featuring the cleft-chinned doubly-dense Dudley, a Canadian Mountie who blundered to the rescue of Nell Fenwick every week between March 1969 and September 1970 on ABC.

Dudley, a regular character on "The Bullwinkle Show," is the favorite of Jay Ward, one of Bullwinkle's creators. But it was Bullwinkle, Ward acknowledged, who made the series go. Ward said the absence of the moose from Saturday television may only be temporary, until NBC tries out a few new programs for audience-response. "Bullwinkle never dies," he said. "He's like Douglas MacArthur."

Jay Ward Festivals have sprouted up from his programs. They make use of footage from "Crusader Rabbit," the first made-for-TV cartoon show, as well as Super Chicken, George of the Jungle, Rags the Tiger and other Ward creations. But it's Bullwinkle and his cast of characters who take center stage.

There's Boris Badenov, Natasha Fatale, Snively Whiplash and segments slandering history in every conceivable way, from "Aesop's Fables" to "Fractured Fairy Tales" to "Peabody's Improbable History."

Whether it was Boris, Natasha and Mr. Big trying to outwit the flying squirrel or Dudley dumbing his way through a buzz saw, Bullwinkle and his band would wallow in puns without number: A jewel-encrusted boat was called the Ruby Yacht of Omar Khayyam, an anti-dunce cap was named the Kerwood Derby and Bullwinkle's alma mater was Whatsamatta U. And if the jokes forced one too many groans, the voices themselves were worth sticking around for.

Edward Everett Horton narrated "Fractured Fairy Tales," and Ward said, "He was always full of pep, even though he was in his 70s when we started doing it and got to be in his 80s before we finished."

Other memorable voices included Charlie Ruggles as Aesop, Paul Frees as Boris and a bunch of background hacks, June Foray as Rocky, Natasha and Nell, and Hans Conried as Whiplash. Co-creator Bill Scott took the part of Bullwinkle for himself, but the tour-de-farce for the show came from Rocky's narrator, actor William Conrad.

Last year, remembering those times on the Rocky show, Conrad said, "It was the brightest cartoon show on the air. I loved working with those people."

Conrad said Ward tested him by "giving me a script and saying, 'I want you to read this.' I did. 'Now read it in half the time,' he said, and I did. Then he said, 'Now read it in half that time,' and that's when I got it."

Conrad remembered that "they allowed me to do one part — it was always Sam the Native, and he had one line. He'd say, 'Ugh.' I'd do it, but after they'd taped it, they'd always taunt me.

"They'd say, 'No, that's not right,' and they'd call over Bill Scott or someone and say, 'You do it.' They'd always disgrace me in front of people that way and I never, ever got a speaking part in seven years. But I loved it."

So did Ward, who thought the success of the program came from the hours spent making the humor seem off-handed and casual. "Like anything else, you've got to work at it," he said.

'Taxi' gets new lease on life from NBC

By FRED ROTHENBERG

NEW YORK (AP) — "Same time, better station."

That's the on-air promotional pitch for "Taxi," which begins its reprieve season Sept. 30 on NBC after four award-winning years at ABC.

NBC announced last week that the new "Taxi" would be driving the same route. That means Thursdays at 8:30 p.m., giving NBC the best single night on television.

It starts with "Fame" at 8, then a highly touted new comedy called "Cheers," followed by "Taxi" and TV's finest hour, "Hill Street Blues." NBC did us all a favor by moving "Taxi" into the spot held down by "Gimme A Break." Now we don't have to switch the dial to watch "Hill Street."

"I'm really excited about being a part of that Thursday night schedule," says James L. Brooks, executive producer of "Taxi." "It's kind of ambitious for NBC to program a quality night like that."

In fact, NBC plans to exploit that schedule's superiority over other nights at all three networks. The network plans to launch a campaign that will sound like this: "For those who think there's not much good on television, watch NBC on Thursday night."

ABC turned off the meter on "Taxi," which won best-comedy Emmys in each of its first three seasons, because of eroding audiences. One of the only ABC comedies to play up to the public's intelligence, "Taxi" ranked 10th and 13th in the ratings race in its first two seasons. Last year, it was 53rd.

"Barney Miller," the other sophisticated ABC comedy, finished 54th. That show was also dropped from the schedule, but that was because the producers were running out of ideas and they pulled the rug out themselves.

Brooks reacted angrily to cancellation of "Taxi" last spring, calling it "an incompetent decision." After NBC came to the rescue, ABC axed the series' reruns. ABC is allowed two plays on each episode, but the network stopped rerunning "Taxi" June 10. In contrast, "Barney Miller" is getting a full summer showing.

"I guess it was a business decision," says Brooks. "ABC didn't want to do any advertising for NBC. They didn't take a financial bath, but they lost some money."

Brooks is smitten with third-rated NBC and its chairman Grant Tinker. (Brooks worked at MTM Productions when Tinker ran the company.) "Their style sets them apart," says Brooks. "They're not as fat."

There's no difference creatively in producing "Taxi" for ABC or NBC. Brooks says ABC never nixed story ideas or steered the program away from the producers. But ABC had developed an indifferent attitude

FBI foils plot to steal paintings, demand ransom

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — An FBI agent posing as a hired gun helped foil a plot by four people to hold up a museum, steal 10 paintings worth $25 million and threaten to shred them unless a ransom was paid, authorities said.

Works by French Impressionist painters Monet, Manet, Degas and American painter John Whistler were targeted for theft, the FBI said earlier this week, also announcing the recovery of about $1.4 million worth of paintings stolen two years ago in Florida.

Four men were arrested for allegedly plotting an armed robbery, which had been set to take place Wednesday, at the stately Hill-Stead Museum in Farmington, a wealthy Hartford suburb.

Two of the suspects were seized at Miami International Airport, allegedly en route to Europe where they planned to negotiate the return of the paintings, the FBI said.

An FBI agent infiltrated the plot and was hired as the gunman who would hold up museum employees while others loaded the paintings into a van, said FBI special agent Richard Farley at a news conference here.

The paintings were to be held for $7.5 million ransom, he said.

The FBI said the conspirators "planned to ransom back the paintings with the threat that the paintings would be shredded, and that the shredded material would be sent to the art editor of The New York Times."

Museum curator Philip Wright said someone "probably came in and took a tour" to get an inside look at the mansion.

Wright, who has been curator for only a week, said the FBI and the museum had been sharing information on the planned theft before his arrival.

The museum, in a sprawling neo-Colonial mansion, houses the private collection of 19th century industrialist Alfred Atmore Pope, who made a fortune in iron manufacturing.

The FBI said the plot called for the undercover agent to take the paintings to New York, where they would be hidden. Two of the men were then supposed to travel to London and begin negotiations with the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, leading authorities to believe the paintings also were in England, said FBI agent Chris Mazzella of Miami.

Two other men were arrested in the recovery of two paintings by Rubens — "Adoration of the Shepherds" and "Presentation in the Temple" — stolen from the home of Jason Witney Jr. in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in 1980.

The FBI identified the target paintings at Hill-Stead as "Guitar Player" and "La Posada" by Manet; "Haystacks" of 1889, "Haystacks" of 1890, "View of Bay in Maritime Alps" and "Boats Leaving the Harbor" by Monet; "The Tubs," "Dancers" and "Jockeys" by Degas, and "The Blue Wave" by Whisler.

Charged in the thwarted Connecticut robbery were Walter J. Kregelstein, [illegible], of East Hartford, Conn.; his brother, Francis R. Kregelstein, 46, of Rocky Hill, Conn., and Lighthouse Point, Fla., an investment broker; Israel D. Glassman, 50, of Margate, Fla., also an investment broker; and Philip Shapiro, 41, of Lauderhill, Fla., who owns the Interlude Motel in Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Arrested in the theft of the two Rubens paintings were James G. Tortoriello Jr., 37, of Berwyn, Ill., who also listed an address of Lantana, Fla; and Robert Montanus, 40, of Boca Raton, Fla., an investment counselor. Agents said Shapiro had been negotiating with Tortoriello about the Rubens paintings.

Tortoriello, Montanus and Shapiro, arrested at a Marriott Hotel room in Fort Lauderdale, where the two stolen Florida paintings were recovered, were charged with conspiracy to transport stolen goods in interstate commerce, the FBI said. They were being held in the North Dade County jail pending a bail hearing today.

Francis Kregelstein and Glassman were arrested at Miami International Airport and were also being held pending a bail hearing. Walter Kregelstein, arrested at a shopping mall in West Haven, Conn., was being held at the Danbury federal prison in lieu of $500,000 property bond.

Shapiro was also charged, along with the Kregelstein brothers and Glassman, with violating the Hobbs Act, which prohibits interference, delay or obstruction of foreign or interstate commerce by robbery or extortion.

Reagan home-buying scam results in fraud charges

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two businessmen who allegedly falsified figures in escrow papers in attempting to buy a home from President Reagan have been charged with fraud.

The grand jury indictment was returned Thursday against William C. Ogle, 54, of Costa Mesa, and Roger E. Wright, 48, of Pomona. Ogle was identified as the head of an investors' group and Wright as the group's accountant.

The two were accused of falsifying figures in escrow papers in an effort to get a loan for more than the $1 million purchase price of the home in Pacific Palisades. In addition, they were accused of submitting false financial statements to federally insured lenders.

The indictment was returned only a few days after an elderly couple pleaded innocent to charges that they tried to swindle the Reagans in a phony deal to buy the home with a $1 million loan from Reagan.

A preliminary hearing was scheduled for Sept. 29 for James Yarbrough, 60, and his wife Anne, 74, whose attorney, Harry Weiss, has denied that any fraud was intended.

The grand jury Thursday alleged that in September 1981 Ogle and Wright agreed to buy the Reagan home as representatives of the Zoller Group for $1.03 million. But escrow was "installed and prolonged" by the defendants while they tried to arrange a loan for more than the purchase price and escrow documents were falsified to show that the home was to sell for $1.9 million, the grand jury said.

Young moviemaker arrives to save studio with 'Tron'

By BILL HAGEN
Copley News Service

HOLLYWOOD — It sounds like a plot, such as it was, from an old "gee, kids, let's put on a show" movie:

The studio of late has been reeling a bit, and the search for a movie that will turn it around has become, if not yet desperate, at least anxious.

At this moment, who should arrive but an aspiring moviemaker, not yet 30, with an original and very intriguing idea. Moreover, it's an idea whose time definitely has come.

The studio was Walt Disney Productions; the moviemaker was Steven Lisberger. The idea with which he was armed was for a movie that would make extensive use of computer-generated images, capitalize on the then just burgeoning craze for video games and would, when completed, be titled "TRON."

Lisberger said he had approached a couple of other studios with the idea, and both had expressed interest. The interest waned, however, when Lisberger insisted that he be allowed to direct. It was, the studios decided, too great a risk to entrust a substantial budget to a young man who had never before made a feature film, no matter how good the idea. No deal.

"I just had to direct that movie," Lisberger said. "I had to. But they couldn't understand that. Or they couldn't go along with it."

So it was on to Disney and a warmer reception.

Lisberger, whose track record was mostly in animated short subjects, a few television shows, some commercials and a 90-minute animated feature for television called "Animalympics," had his deal and all the pressure that went with it. And he was ready.

"I had begun work on 'TRON' in 1978," he said, "mainly because I was totally fascinated with the beginnings of computer technology."

He was, himself, a video-game junkie for a while, he said, even before it became so fashionable — and profitable.

"Everyone's looking for new fantasies in the movies," he said. "We've created this world in 'TRON' by taking video games and just blowing them out to the point where they are a reality. At the point where the games met computer graphics, something came alive that hadn't been alive before. Video games were the basis for the fantasy; the computer imagery was the means to create it."

Lisberger is understandably ecstatic about the reaction — critical and commercial — to his movie, he said.

"I suspected we were going to be all right when I saw a line wrapped around a theater in Westwood to see our movie," he said. "It's been a long time since Disney attracted a Westwood crowd."

Still, his joy is not unrestrained.

"We spent much more time on the story and screenplay than on the effects," he said, "but the story apparently has been overwhelmed by the effects. As a writer, that doesn't make me feel great. I guess it's the price that's paid for breaking new ground.

"Computers are going to be a major source of special effects in the future, but they aren't going to replace actors or conventional animation. Actors are the ultimate special effect. And, in spite of what some people think, they're not going to make it possible to remake 'Gone With the Wind' for a dollar ninety-eight, either, although it is a thriftier way of creating effects. For some movies, computers and computer-imagery can be an artist's tool, no more, no less. But certainly not for every movie, or even most movies."

Lisberger would like to think of "TRON," he said, "as a statement on behalf of those people who feel overwhelmed by technology.

"If we all have access to the technology and aren't scared of it, we'll all be better off."

Iowa child bashful around first lady

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa (AP) — To 4-year-old Katie Beckett, Nancy Reagan was a stranger to be regarded bashfully even though the first lady presented her with a cuddly, stuffed rabbit.

But to Katie's parents, Mrs. Reagan's brief visit to Cedar Rapids on Thursday was something special. It was President Reagan who focused attention on Katie's entanglement in federal Medicaid regulations and who helped bring her home from the hospital for the first time in three years.

Katie was catapulted into national prominence Nov. 10 when the president cited her as an example of regulations gone awry.

Born prematurely, Katie suffered a brain disorder and required constant medical attention since shortly after birth.

That care could be provided at home, at approximately a sixth of the cost of keeping Katie in a hospital. But Medicaid eligibility rules would cover her only if she stayed in the hospital, and her parents said they couldn't afford the cost of taking care of her at home.

Following Reagan's mention of Katie's plight, federal medical welfare rules were reviewed and an exception was made for the toddler to go home in time for Christmas.

In eastern Iowa on Thursday to visit drug abuse and treatment facilities, Mrs. Reagan was greeted at the Cedar Rapids Municipal Airport by Katie's parents, Mark and Julie Beckett.

Katie extended a tiny bouquet of flowers to the first lady. Mrs. Reagan lightly kissed her, then gave her the large, stuffed animal.

Katie shyly turned back and held onto her mother.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Dean Martin has pleaded no contest to a charge of carrying a concealed weapon and was placed on one year's probation and fined $120.

Martin, 64, was arrested May 8 by California Highway Patrol officers who stopped his car in West Hollywood on suspicion of drunken driving. Troopers said they found a .38-caliber pistol in a holster in the entertainer's boot.

Under terms of his plea, made Thursday, Martin will serve no jail term and a second count of carrying a loaded weapon will be dropped if he completes probation successfully.

Municipal Judge Andrew J. Weisz said, "I'm sure he was not about to go out there and harm anyone with the weapon..." Martin said outside court he carried the gun for "protection and I was just ignorant of the law."

Last week, Deputy Distict Attorney Phillip Wynn said there was insufficient evidence to pursue a charge of drunken driving.

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Ann Odre, wounded last year at St. Peter's Square in the assassination attempt on Pope John Paul II, will be interviewed about what she saw and heard at the time of the attack, says assistant U.S. Attorney Roger Williams.

Williams said Thursday a companion of Mrs. Odre's on the Vatican visit, Jeanne Griffin, also will be interviewed.

He said the interviews were requested by the Italian Ministry of Justice, which wants to learn whether the man convicted in the attack on May 13, 1981, Mehmet Ali Agca of Turkey, acted alone.

Italian officials also want Mrs. Odre to describe her injuries and recuperation. Mrs. Odre, then 58, was shot in the chest during the attack.

Mrs. Odre could not be reached at her home Thursday night despite repeated telephone calls.

Williams said he was appointed to handle the interviews on Thursday by U.S. District Judge John T. Curtin.

Agca, who admitted at trial that he tried to kill the pope, was convicted July 22, 1981, of attempted murder and sentenced to life in prison.

Drug seems to help transplant patient

HOUSTON (AP) — A woman who was the second patient here to receive a new heart using an experimental anti-rejection drug is "doing well" and responding to commands to move her feet, a hospital spokeswoman says.

The patient, identified only as a 45-year-old woman, underwent the transplant operation shortly after midnight Thursday at the Texas Hearet Institute, said hospital spokeswoman Hazel Haby.

"She seems to be doing well," Ms. Haby said. The patient was able to respond to commands to move her feet before fully recovering from the anesthesia.

The operation was the second performed here using Cyclosporin A, an immuno-suppressant which impedes the activity of the body's immune system, doctors said.

The drug, manufactured by the Swiss company Sandoz Inc., is made from a common soil fungus.

"This drug does seem to offer a great deal of hope because it does seem to lessen the chances of rejection," Ms. Haby said.

Last month, a 43-year-old man underwent the same operation. Doctors have said he is doing well and may be released from the hospital soon.

Ms. Haby said there is a marked difference between the two patients who have used the drug and those who had the same surgery here between 1968 and 1970.

"Those patients were just as sick as they could be," she said.

A team of doctors headed by Dr. Barry Kahan and Dr. Denton Cooley got permission from the Food and Drug Administration to use the experimental drug in the program, in which about 35 patients are expected to undergo transplants in the next two years.

Kahan had already performed 89 kidney transplants using the drug.

Using Cyclosporin A, 80 percent of cadaver grafts, or transplants using kidneys from a dead person, are functioning after a year, he said. "Our patient mortality is only 5 percent."

Stanford University doctors have used the drug in 27 heart transplants and had only three cases of rejection, according to Cindy Katz of the Texas Heart Institute.

'Hill Street Blues' tops Emmy list; Stars want to repeat 1981 feat

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Now that NBC's "Hill Street Blues" has duplicated its 1981 feat of receiving 21 Emmy nominations, the key question that remains is how many of the golden statuettes the highly acclaimed police drama will take into custody.

The show won an unprecedented eight Emmy awards last year. NBC had taken a chance in renewing it for this season, saying it was shaky in the ratings, but its Emmy-winning performance attracted enough attention to boost it near the top.

The Academy of Television Arts and Sciences will announce the Emmy winners on Sept. 19 at the 34th annual awards presentations to be broadcast live from the Pasadena Civic Auditorium. John Forsythe and Marlo Thomas will be hosts.

"Hill Street Blues," which dominated many categories, got nearly twice as many nominations as any other show. It completely swept the category for supporting actor in a drama series.

"Isn't that something?" said its star, Daniel J. Travanti. "We thought we'd pick up one or two more nominations for supporting actor, but this is amazing. It's nice when your work is recognized."

The nearest show behind it was "Fame," NBC's rookie series about budding singers, dancers and actors of New York's High School for the Performing Arts, with 12 nominations. "Brideshead Revisited," the popular PBS miniseries of upper-class British manners, got 11 nominations. Another perennial favorite, CBS' "M*A*S*H," which will go off the air at the end of next season, received 10 nominations.

Despite its third place in the ratings, NBC garnered 90 nominations. CBS, first in the ratings, received 83 and ABC had 70. PBS got 29 and syndicated shows got 13 nominations.

NBC's "Ain't Misbehavin'," based on the music of Fats Waller, and "Marco Polo," the miniseries of the 13th century Venetian's journey to China, each received eight. The same number went to "Lou Grant," the newspaper drama whose unexpected cancellation by CBS upset many viewers, and to "Taxi," the three-time Emmy-winning comedy dropped by ABC and picked up by NBC.

ABC's "Inside the Third Reich," NBC's "SCTV Network" and Operation Prime Time's "A Woman Called Golda" each received seven nominations. Three-time Academy Award winner Ingrid Bergman was nominated as best lead actress in a limited series or special for her portrayal of former Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir.

ABC's "Barney Miller," another popular show leaving the air, got five nominations.

"Hill Street Blues" was nominated as the outstanding drama series and Travanti and Veronica Hamel were nominated for best lead actor and actress in a drama series. It won all five nominations for best supporting actor: Taurean Blacque, Michael Conrad, Charles Haid, Michael Warren and Bruce Weitz. Barbara Bosson and Betty Thomas were nominated for best supporting actress in a drama series.

"Hill Street Blues" also picked up two nominations for best direction and four for best writing, as well as nominations for best art direction, film sound editing and other craft categories.

"Fame" was nominated for best drama series. Its star, Debbie Allen, was nominated for best lead actress in a drama series and for best choreography. It also received two nominations for best direction, two for hairstyling, two for film editing, and one each for cinematography, art direction and other craft categories.

Watt in hot water with courts again

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — The U.S. Secretary of the Interior has been ordered not to lease 33,000 acres at Fort Chaffee for oil and gas exploration at $1 per acre to a Texas firm.

U.S. District Judge H. Franklin Waters issued a temporary restraining order Thursday prohibiting James Watt from reinstating the leases to Texas Oil and Gas Corp. until a hearing Monday. The hearing is to be before Waters or U.S. Magistrate Ned Stewart, at Fort Smith or Fayetteville.

Arkla Exploration Co. of Shreveport, La., filed a lawsuit Wednesday in federal court at Fort Smith asking that the leases not be granted until it could be decided whether they should be subject to competitive bidding. The U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington ordered Watt on June 11 to reinstate the leases to the Texas firm at $1 per acre. Former Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus had canceled the leases in 1979 after U.S. Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., protested.

About 24,000 acres at Fort Chaffee have been leased competitively to 15 companies at an average of $1,739 per acre. If the Texas Oil leases were awarded competitively at that average price, they would be worth $75.3 million, said Jim Guy Tucker of Little Rock, an attorney representing Arkla.

Arkla asked for a hearing Monday because of the possibility that Watt might reinstate the leases and issue drilling permits.

"I think it's a good solution and a fair one that doesn't hurt anybody," Tucker said of the order. Waters signed it Thursday after almost four hours of conferences.

Tom Walsh, a legislative assistant to Bumpers, said the senator supported Arkla's position because of the amount of money the leases might be worth to the state and western Arkansas. State law divides the lease money among the federal and state governments and the counties that surround Fort Chaffee — Logan, Crawford, Sebastian and Franklin.

"We're just 100,000 percent behind Arkla in this case," Walsh said.

Andrus issued the leases in 1979 under a federal law allowing non-competitive bidding for oil and gas leases on land where no oil and gas has been discovered and which has not been proved to be productive.

Bumpers protested the low price and Andrus canceled the leases, saying they had been awarded through an administrative error that he had the power to correct.

Texas Oil and Gas filed a federal lawsuit saying that Andrus had abused his power. The U.S. Court of Appeals ruled in its favor, ordering the leases reinstated. Because the disputed leases are for land adjacent to land for which leases were awarded competitively, Arkla alleges that the disputed leases should be competitive as well.

Chaffee, a military reservation, sends lease money to the U.S. Treasury, which sends half back to the state. Of the state's share, 25 percent goes to the four surrounding counties, which divide it among school districts, road departments and county and city governments.

Muse plan OK'd by FAA

The Federal Aviation Administration Thursday approved a slot exchange agreement between Muse Air and several other airlines, enabling Muse to continue its present level of flights between Dallas, Houston, Midland-Odessa and Tulsa.

The agreement was submitted to the FAA for approval last Thursday.

Muse launched service to the Permian Basin and Tulsa on May 16, using emergency slots granted by the FAA in the aftermath of Braniff Airlines bankruptcy announcement May 13.

With the granting of the slot exchange agreement, Muse's exemption request that had previously been filed with the FAA is moot, and the company has withdrawn it.

"We are most grateful for the excellent spirit of cooperation shown by the FAA in working out this problem," said Michael L. Muse, president. "We are extremely pleased that the dark clouds of uncertainty surrounding the status of our Midland-Odessa and Tulsa routes have finally been lifted."

Since Continental Airlines curtailed its schedule out of Midland-Odessa and Braniff ceased operations, Midland-Odessa and Tulsa have been air travel centers badly in need of air service such as Muse can provide, he added.

The Dallas-based airline was founded in October 1980, by Michael L. and Lamar Muse, who was formerly founder and president of Southwest Airlines.

"We have received overwhelming response from Midland-Odessa and Tulsa and we're delighted to continue to be corporate citizens in these two dynamic cities," Muse said. The awarding of the Midland-Odessa and Tulsa slots has enabled Muse Air to double its size in one year of operation.

Inflation reasonfor Peso devaluation

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Why has Mexico devalued its basic currency, the peso?

Mario Cantu, a Washington, D.C., economist whose specialty is Mexico, said, "Despite its oil wealth, Mexico is expected to have a foreign debt of more than $80 billion by the end of the year, the biggest in the Third World.

"The economy is also reeling from 60 percent inflation and a sinking currency that already has dropped in value against the dollar by about 50 percent since the beginning of 1982," Cantu said in a telephone interview with the El Paso Times Thursday evening.

Mexico is strapped by high unemployment, high inflation and one of the worst recessions in 40 years.

An estimated 40 percent of the labor force is either unemployed or underemployed — earning little more than the legal minimum wage of 95 cents an hour.

The value of a country's currency is determined by what it can buy. Domestically, if a high rate of inflation exists, each peso buys less and therefore is worth less, he said.

The Mexican government's quick solution to the problem is to lower the peso's value in terms of other currencies — devalue the peso.

Cantu said governments voluntarily can lower or raise the worth of their currencies at any time. To survive, the Mexican government felt it must float its currency or allow it to seek its own level against the value of the U.S. dollar.

Many Mexicans and Texas border residents were caught by surprise for the second time this year.

The first time was Feb. 17, when Banco de Mexico, the country's central bank and the equivalent of the U.S. Federal Reserve Bank, announced it temporarily had withdrawn from foreign exchange markets and stopped buying and selling dollars to control the value of the peso. In effect, Mexico devalued its currency by 30 percent and had maintained a policy of daily corrections in the currency since then.

The second time was late Thursday, when the Mexican government effectively devalued the peso, letting the currency float to a new dollar level based on supply and demand for most transactions. The government said a preferential rate would be instituted for certain essential imports, basic foods and other products.

The de facto devaluation of the peso came as no surprise to Wayne McClintock, who publishes in El Paso "The Mexico Report."

"It could come in a sudden jolt now that the election is over," he wrote in his June-July issue.

McClintock, marketing director for Las Americas Industrial Park in Chihuahua, said, "The outgoing president has to take his lumps so as to leave a clean slate."

The previous administration did the same for Jose Lopez Portillo, now the outgoing president, he said.

McClintock said the free-market exchange rate at the opening of banks Friday would not stabilize for several days, perhaps weeks. "It will bounce around for a while."

But the last time the Banco de Mexico left the peso market, the exchange rate per dollar leaped.

Such a short-term leap may be expected, he said.

In the meantime, he said, the Mexican government almost certainly would continue its extensive series of price controls.

Any increase in domestic prices would offset the value of the de facto devaluation, which makes Mexican exports more attractive, he said.

"Anyway you look at it, they are not going to let (manufacturers, retailers) catch up."

The de facto devaluation is a gradual but hard process of bringing the peso back in line with world currencies, said Jose I. Ortega, director of the Centro Patronal del Norte, a Juarez businessmen's association.

It is one the Mexican people will have to get accustomed to, he said.

Ortega said the actual rate of the pesos to the dollar will depend on the demand for dollars as this latest devaluation goes public at the teller's window Friday.

Santa may bring happy days

NEW YORK (AP) — It may be Christmas before a significant recovery gets underway in the retail industry, some analysts say, abandoning hope that consumers will return in force to stores during the upcoming back-to-school season.

The gloomy forecast came Thursday as the major retailers reported poor sales for July, when a cut in federal income taxes and a reduction in Social Security payments had been expected to lure shoppers back to the stores.

J.C. Penney Co., F.W. Woolworth Co. and Montgomery Ward Co. said their sales declined in the four-week July period compared with the month a year before. Sears, Roebuck and Co. — the nation's largest general-merchandise retailer — K mart Corp. and Federated Department Stores showed small increases.

"While the economy remains soft, consumers would rather use their money to reduce their debts and increase savings," said Monroe Greenstein, an analyst with Bear, Stearns & Co.

Greenstein and other analysts dropped predictions of a fall recovery in the retail industry and cautiously pinned their hopes on Christmas, traditionally retailers' busiest season.

Investors must now learn to play disinflation game

By ARELO SEDENBERG
Hearst Feature Service

Just as investors once learned to play the inflation game by buying gold and speculating in real estate, they're now finding they must switch to the disinflation game.

That could be true for some years into the future, as the battle against inflation continues to sting the economy. Whether the pain is worth the cure can be debated, but there seems little doubt it will continue to be inflicted. Hyperinflation could occur sometime in this decade, but for now, look for disinflation, a slowdown in price growth, or even deflation, actual price declines.

One astute observer who pegged the trend years ago is Bill Manning, president of Manning & Napier, a Rochester, N.Y., company that manages some $600 million in pension fund money. He was talking about disinflation when most others were warning of hyperinflation.

Manning believes disinflation is far from over. He sees continued unsettlement in the economy throughout this year and most of 1983. Interest rates will come down sharply, he thinks, as unemployment climbs and bankruptcies accelerate.

"Industry is all screwed up," he says. "I see a rash of bankruptcies, just as happened in other panics. It's almost a classic pattern. Many companies are the walking dead right now. They're bankrupt, but just haven't filed Chapter 11."

Manning doesn't encourage you to jump from the top story window just because hard times will continue. He prefers investing in disinflation to investing in inflation. All you do is concentrate on government securities. For those whose worth is not Daddy Warbuck's size, buy one or two of the 20 or so government money funds. The yields are comfortable, and there is a chance of appreciation, since the discounted instruments will rise if interest rates continue to decline. And Manning anticipates a massive decline.

He's proud of his firm's performance in bad times, when the stock market usually plays dead. In 1977, he says his company had a positive return of 14 percent, with the market down 8 percent; in 1981, Manning was up about 12 percent in a 5.6 percent market losing year. The firm's employees were rewarded with an expense-paid vacation at any place in the country.

A move to government bonds is almost a general consensus of disinflationist investment advisers these days, but Manning adds a kicker. He wouldn't be exclusively in government bonds. He thinks it's time to reconsider the stock market — with extreme selectivity.

For those who know Bill Manning, that could sound like an heretical statement. For the first time ever, Manning & Napier is committing to equities, putting about 60 percent of client funds into government bonds and 40 percent into stocks. Which ones? Manning is buying the battered cyclical issues, even smokestack America stocks.

"The rate of return is so bad for some of these companies that there can't be an expansion of their capacity," he reasons. "They haven't got the money to expand. So they become a supply-demand play. You've restrained supply by the lid on capacity, so prices of their products cannot go down."

How about oil stocks? Manning wouldn't touch them, even at current distressed prices. He anticipates an oil glut for some time to come; indeed, OPEC may lower prices more at its next meeting in a few weeks, he believes.

He also is thumbs-down on bank stocks. "I'd never buy a bank stock. You never know what their assets are, so you never know what you're buying."

Real Estate needs interest cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — A representative of the National Association of Realtors says the housing market "would begin moving substantially" if 13 percent or 14 percent became the typical mortgage rate.

John Wood, a Naples, Fla., Realtor and past president of the association, said Thursday home builders are meeting only half the current demand because high interest rates have priced many would-be buyers out of the market.

"The consuming public cannot stand the 16 percent or 17 percent mortgage," Wood told a House Government Operations subcommittee.

He said a new policy of the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. will add to the problems of the real estate industry. The corporation, a major purchaser of mortgages from lenders, is moving against assumption of mortages by buyers at the rate of the original loan agreement.

Unemployment claims down

WASHINGTON (AP) — The smallest number of people in more than five months filed first-time claims for unemployment insurance during late July.

The Labor Department said Thursday 500,000 seasonally adjusted initial claims for regular state unemployment benefits were filed during the week ending July 24, the fewest since the week ending Feb. 13.

Since late June, initial claims have been averaging about 525,000 a week, down from nearly 600,000 a week during the previous four months.

Robert Ortner, chief economist at the Commerce Department, called the latest report an encouraging sign of the long-overdue economic recovery the Reagan administration has been predicting.

"While we're looking for signs of a turnaround, this is, at least, a little ray of sunshine," said Ortner.

What goes up must come down even if it's slow

By BILL SING
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

In the physical world, what goes up must come down. In the banking world, what goes up usually comes down — but coming down may take a lot more time than going up.

That, at least, is what many financial analysts and government officials have been saying recently even as the prime lending rate dropped to 15 1-2 percent from 16 1-2 percent in the last two weeks. One major bank even dipped to 15 percent.

While critics applaud the drop in the key interest rate, they say it should be falling much faster and farther. After all, they note, several key interest rates that determine banks' own costs have plummeted in recent weeks.

The critics, and chief among them is Federal Reserve Board Chairman Paul A. Volcker, say banks are keeping the prime rate artificially high, in part so that they can make more money to recoup losses that have resulted from a mounting number of problem loans.

"Every business likes to buy cheap and sell dear," says Otto Eckstein, chairman of Lexington, Mass.-based Data Resources Inc., a leading economic forecasting concern. "That's what the banks are doing."

But many bankers strongly deny that they are propping up the prime. Among other things, they argue, interest rates that play a key role in determining their cost of funds must stay down longer before banks can lower the prime still more.

Recently, the rate on 90-day certificates of deposit — an important source of money that banks use for loans — has fallen below 11 percent.

"It's a matter of being sure this is where the rates are going to stay," says Ted Gibson, an economist at Los Angeles-based Crocker National Bank. "If the rates stay where they are for another month, you can expect to see a move to a 14 1-2 percent prime."

The debate over how fast and far the prime should fall is important because many economists and political leaders say a lower rate is needed to stimulate an economic recovery. A high prime, the benchmark for many business loans, has discouraged investment that might encourage economic growth and reduce unemployment.

At 15 1-2 percent, the rate already is the lowest since early last December.

But Fed Chairman Volcker told a Senate Budget Committee hearing last week that the prime rate should be lower to reflect the sharp decline in the banks' cost of funds.

While the difference between the prime and the 90-day CD rate has averaged about two percentage points for much of the last two years, the spread was almost four percentage points last week.

Since the end of June, the so-called federal funds rate that banks charge each other for overnight deposits has fallen to as low as 10 3-4 percent from as high as 14 3-4 percent. As of Friday, the federal funds rate had risen somewhat to 11 1-4 percent.

The rate on 90-day, $100,000-plus jumbo certificates of deposit has fallen in the same period from more than 15 percent to as low as 10.85 percent last week. On Friday, the CD rate stood at 11.8 percent.

As a further indication of lower interest rates, the Fed on Friday lowered its discount rate — the interest it charges on borrowings by member banks — from 11 1-2 percent to 11 percent, the lowest rate since November 1980.

And Pittsburg-based Mellon Bank, the nation's 15th largest, on broke ranks Friday with the rest of the banking community and lowered its prime to 15 percent from 15 1-2 percent. No other major banks immediately followed the move.

Volcker and others say the unusually high prime in part reflects bank efforts to shore up their profits, which have been hurt in recent months by an epidemic of problem loans and business bankruptcies.

"With bank earnings hurt because of a high percentage of nonperforming loans, banks are trying to enhance their profit margins," says Donald Maude, chairman of the interest-rate policy committee at Merrill Lynch & Co., the New York-based investment company.

Data Resources' Eckstein contends that another reason the prime is so high is that banks have become more selective regarding companies to which they will lend, particularly after the collapse of Penn Square Bank in Oklahoma City and the debacle in which Drysdale Government Securities Inc. failed to pay interest on billions of dollars' worth of government securities it borrowed through Chase Manhattan Bank. This selectiveness, Eckstein says, has lessened pressure on bankers to lower the prime faster.

Also cited as contributing to the unusually high prime have been continued high demand for loans from businesses needing short-term cash to survive the recession and doubts about the direction of interest rates. Many economists and bankers say that, while interest rates may fall more in the short term, they will rise over the long term in part because of the high projected federal budget deficit.

For their part, banking officials do not deny the unusually high spread between the rate and the prime. But they say they must be sure that the rate on certificates will stay at current low levels, a matter of considerable doubt given recent volatility in the market.

"We don't want to reverse ourselves within a week or two," says Robert Heller, vice president and senior economist for San Francisco-based Bank of America, noting that the prime was raised to 17 percent from 16 1-2 percent last February only to drop back to 16 1-2 about a week later. Such flip-flopping "gives wrong signals to our customers," Heller says. "They're trying to look for something more stable."

Heller adds that banks, for the same reasons, also have been hesitant to raise the prime when their cost of funds has risen. In fact, in each major rise in the prime since 1979, the spreads between the 90-day certificate rate and the prime have tended to narrow, indicating that rises in the prime lagged rises in the certificate rate.

In addition, many bankers argue that if the prime were too high, competition would have forced it lower. They note that borrowers can seek loans through other sources, such as the commercial paper market. In addition, while the prime is the benchmark rate for most business loans, banks often offer loans to their most credit-worthy customers at rates below the prime.

"If we keep the base (prime) rate too high," says John Maloney, a spokesman for New York-based Citibank, "people just won't borrow."

S&L given OK to move

AUSTIN — The application of Citizens Savings and Loan Association, Midland, to move a branch office was unopposed Monday at the monthly docket call by the Texas Savings and Loan Department.

Citizens is seeking to move a branch from No. 35 Delwood Plaza to the Midland Regional Air Terminal.

The request has been referred to Savings and Loan Commissioner Alvis Vandygriff for a decision.

WTGS to hear Kluth

Mr. Charles F. Kluth, Chevron U.S.A., Denver, will be the featured speaker for the West Texas Geological Society on Tuesday, August 10, 1982. Mr. Kluth will present his paper "Plate Tectonics of the Ancestral Rocky Mountains."

The Meeting will be at 11:30 a.m. at the Midland Hilton. Cost of the luncheon is $7.50. Reservations should be made by Calling the Society at (915) 683-1573 before 4 p.m. Friday Aug. 6.

FCC to begin trust busting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Communications Commission has made it clear it intends to break down monopolies that have controlled international communication services for years.

The FCC on Thursday voted to allow any customer wishing to communicate overseas via satellite to deal directly with the Communications Satellite Corp. (Comsat), instead of going through the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. or the firms that specialize in handling telex, telegraph and data transmissions to overseas points.

It also solicited public comment on allowing any carrier to construct a satellite earth station instead of going through earth stations 50 percent owned by Comsat.

In addition, it authorized Western Union Telegraph Co. to extend its domestic telex and data services to international points, re-entering a market from which it was barred in 1943.

Autoworker layoffs increase

DETROIT (AP) — The number of U.S. autoworkers on indefinite and temporary layoffs rose this week, and July car production hit a two-year low.

Automotive News, an industry journal, said Thursday the major U.S. automakers built 455,558 cars in July, down 12.1 percent from 518,456 in July 1981. It was the lowest since 417,038 cars were built in July 1980, the trade journal said.

The five major automakers said 213,921 hourly workers were on indefinite layoff, up from 213,473 last week.

Temporary layoffs rose to 78,250 from last week's 63,200 because of more model changeovers, the companies said.

Ambassador against restrictions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Protective measures are not the solution to the trade gap between the United States and Japan, Japanese Ambassador Yoshio Okawara says.

Both countries recognize that this gap is a problem, he said Thursday, adding that increasing Japanese exports to the United States can lead to resentment among American workers.

Stock market mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mixed today, steadying after the sharp drop of the past few sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off 21.26 points in the last three days, rose 1.14 to 796.99 by noontime.

Losers held a narrow lead over gainers in the 12 o'clock tally of issues trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Before the market opened, the government reported that the unemployment rate jumped from 9.5 percent to 9.8 percent last month.

The increase in the jobless rate was larger than many Wall Street analysts had been expecting.

Eli Lilly was actively traded, down 1⅝ at 47⅞ after a drop of $3.75 on Thursday. The company said Wednesday it would take its antiarthritic drug Oraflex off the market, with a resulting charge of $11.4 million against its earnings.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks slipped .01 to 60.43. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .06 at 248.06.

Volume on the Big Board totaled 19.54 million shares at noontime, against 24.25 million at the same point Thursday.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

IRS casts shadow on some annuities

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I'm considering switching 80 percent of my capital from bank savings certificates, U.S. Treasury bills and money market mutual funds to a tax-deferred annuity. Principal is guaranteed by the A-rated insurance company issuing the annunity. Interest is credited at 14.25 percent the first year. If the interest ever falls below 13.75 percent, the entire principal can be withdrawn without penalty.

My broker says his firm is selling $6 million worth of these annuities daily. What do you think?

Doyle

A. I think you should double-check those sales numbers. An Internal Revenue Service ruling has cast a dark cloud over tax-deferred annuities and put a crimp in their sales.

The latest IRS ruling on this subject stated that insurance companies must pay income tax on "excess" interest credited to those annuities and the new, so-called, "universal" life insurance policies.

What's excess? It's the amount above and beyond the interest rates mandated by state laws — usually 4 percent.

A previous IRS ruling stated that holders of annuities and life insurance policies would not be taxed, when excess interest is credited.

But because the newer ruling says the insurance companies will have to pay tax on that excess interest, the companies will have lower profits. As a result, they might not be able to credit such high interest to annuitants and policy holders.

The provisions on tax-deferred annuities vary from one insurance company to another. The one you describe, with its provision for penalty-free withdrawal, would give you a way to get out if the insurance company issuing that annuity had to cut its interest rate.

Both of the IRS rulings came in "private" letters to individual insurance companies and, technically, are not binding on other companies. So the tax status of those annuities, as well as of universal life insurance, remains hazy.

It's going to take federal legislation to clear things up. Congress is studying the situation at its usual equivalent of a snail's pace.

Q. An investment adviser-financial planning agent is trying to convince me to redeem all of my Series E, U.S. Savings Bonds and put the money in a tax-deferred annuity.

The annuity would pay about 13 percent the first year. After that the interest would never fall below 4 percent and would most likely be higher, depending upon prevailing interest rates. Federal income tax would be deferred until I withdraw the interest.

Since I am retired and already getting 9 percent interest, tax-deferred, on my E bonds, I can't see much benefit in the move the agent suggests. Do you?

A. I would call it a good idea to hold off any move into a tax-deferred annuity, until the tax status of that kind of annuity is clarified. From your letter, there seems to be no pressing need for you to make a hurried move. So wait.

When you redeem your E bonds, of course, you will have to report and pay federal income tax on the interest that has built up on those bonds. If you have a bundle of E bonds and redeem them all in one year, that will kick you into a higher tax bracket where the tax bite will be large — leaving you with less money to put into an annuity or anything else.

Q. My insurance agent says the most attractive feature of the tax-deferred annuity he is trying to sell me is that I could withdraw 10 percent a year and, as long as I have not withdrawn the total amount I paid in, I would not have to pay income tax.

Isn't this almost too good to be true?

A. It's true. Why shouldn't it be? When you withdraw your own money — not interest on your money — there's no reason in the world for you to pay income tax.

Look at it this way. If I give you money today and you hand some of it back to me at some later date, why should I pay tax on my own money coming back to me?

But if you pay me interest on my money, then I should pay income tax on the interest my money earned. With an annuity, income tax on the interest is put off until the interest is withdrawn.

Danger of deficits may be downplayed

NEW YORK (AP) — What is this fear that everyone seems to have about federal budget deficits? A fear that pushes down stock prices, pushes up interest rates, and creates such uncertainty?

Since deficits continue to grow in defiance of White House and Congressional efforts, it is entirely possible you may begin hearing a new approach — that deficits aren't the danger they're said to be.

Plenty of factual evidence is available that would seem to document that thesis. It was offered, in fact, earlier this year by Murray Weidenbaum, chairman of the President's council of economic advisers.

Weidenbaum wasn't seeking to defend deficits — as much as to explain how they could be defended — when he presented his research before a meeting of the Conference Board, made up largely of business people.

With fiscal year deficit projections then ranging from $98.6 billion in 1982 down to $82.9 billion in 1984, Weidenbaum observed that "they are not unprecedented when measured against the size of the economy."

In the 1975-1976 period, he noted, the relative size of the federal deficit was larger than the 1982-1984 projections. "Specifically, the deficit was 4 percent of gross national product in fiscal 1976 compared to our current estimate of 3.2 percent in fiscal 1982."

The deficits then foreseen weren't unique as a percentage of private savings, which are necessary to finance federal deficits. In fiscal 1976 the deficit represented 22.5 percent of total private saving, compared to 19.1 percent in fiscal 1982, the council chairman said.

He offered still another perspective: In the European Economic Community, general government deficits in relation to gross national product, have averaged much higher than U.S. public sector deficits.

But having said this, Weidenbaum then warned against complacency.

Survey says money market mutal funds top performing investments

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Nothing — not bonds, nor oil, nor any of the other investments included in a performance survey by Salmon Brothers — brought investors a better rate of return during the year ended in May than money market mutual funds.

Bonds placed highest in the survey of 14 investments, returning 11.4 percent for the 12 months. But money market funds — which were not included in the survey — returned about 15 percent during the same period.

Meanwhile, the Consumer Price Index rose 6.6 percent. Among the investments charted, oil (up 6.3 percent) and housing (up 3.4 percent) were the only others that grew at all. Even they lagged behind inflation.

Money Market Funds

Money Funds with assets of $100 million or more that are available to individual investors. For period ended August 4, 1982.

Donoghue's MONEY FUND AVERAGE(TM)
-(Averages for all 202 taxable funds)		35	11.9	12.7

Yields represent annualized total return to shareholders for past seven and thirty day period. Past returns not necessarily indicative of future yields. Investment quality and maturity may vary among funds. (x) - average term to next rate adjustment date. Reprinted in condensed form with permission from Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT (TM) of Holliston, MA 01746. 617-429-5930.

MONEY FUND TABLE COMMENTARY: Assets of the 202 money funds reported by Donoghue's MONEY FUND REPORT (TM) of Holliston, MA 01746 increased $3.24 billion to $213.97 billion for the week ending August 5, 1982.

The funds' 7-day average yield decreased to 11.89 percent from 12.2 percent. The funds' 30-day average yield also decreased, to 12.65 percent from 12.94 percent.

The funds' Average Maturity Figure decreased one day to 35 days following a one week jump to 36 days.

Publisher William E. Donoghue says, "It's a flight to quality. Money fund assets continue their record level growth as the last four weeks have seen assets increase $13.5 billion. Institutions-only money funds grew $1.2 billion this week. Much of this growth can be attributed to the Federated and Dreyfus institutions-only funds - funds which are sweeping individual investors' money from bank checking or NOW accounts into money market funds. This week's shorter average maturity and lower yields can, in part, be attributed to the growth of money funds that are 100 percent invested in U.S. government securities. Government-only money funds tend to have shorter average maturities and lower yields than the more broader based funds. If you are a conservative investor don't exclude these funds based on their lower yields alone. Be aware that some money funds are now yielding 13.4 percent."

NDT Systems announces large layoff

NDT Systems Inc., a Midland and Houston-based manufacturer of nondestructive oil field tubular inspection equipment, has announced a reduction in work force of approximately 40 percent, effective July 30, 1982.

In making the announcement from NDT's headquarters in Midland Vic-President/Marketing R. W. "Bob" Leslie cited the move as being "due in part to the continuing economic deterioration and the resulting decline in sales of tubular goods inspection equipment." Prior to the layoff, NDT has reduced the number of its employees by 10 percent due to the consolidation of nine facility locations to two.

According to Leslie, "current conditions accelerated the move and increased the number of personnel to be let go." Although 1/3 of the layoff affects NDT's Houston operation, approximately 25 more employees will be added at the Midland manufacturing facility due to the location of NDT's electronics production from Houston to Midland. NDT recently completed construcion of new, multi-million-dollar facilities in both Midland and Houston.

Remaining at the Houston facility will be the technical training center, research and development, sales, customer service and parts warehouse. The Midland plant will contain NDT's corporate headquarters, Manufacturing, engineering, electronics, customer service and sales offices.

According to Leslie, NDT will continue to be a major employer in the industry. " We are one of two major pipe-inspection equipment manufacturers producing for independent inspection companies. From $8.4 million in sales in fiscal 1979, NDT has growth to a company whose sales will exceed $37 million in 1982."

Mutal fund sales reach $1.07 billion in June

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Sales of mutual funds in June amounted to $1.07 billion. The total, which is for all funds except short-term funds, includes a special underwriting of one fund for $245 million. Sales in May were $869 million and in June a year ago $862 million.

Redemptions of these funds rose barely to $539 million from $530 million in May. They were $695 million in June 1981.

Thus, funds other than short-term funds had net sales of $527 million in June, $339 million in May, and $167 million a year ago. In the past 18 months these funds have had net sales in every month except one.

Assets during the month fell slightly to $54.1 billion from $54.9 billion in May. They were $58.9 billion in June of last year.

As for short-term funds, assets of limited maturity municipal bond funds rose to $7.9 billion from $7.4 billion in May and, as previously reported, assets of money market funds increased to $201.7 billion from $200.5 billion in May.

BLOCK TAX COURSES CAN GENERATE EXTRA INCOME
H&R BLOCK INCOME TAX COURSE BEGINS SEPTEMBER 2nd

Thousands of people with spare time are earning money as tax preparers in the growing field of Income Tax Service.

H & R BLOCK is offering Basic and Advanced Tax Courses starting September 2nd. There will be a CHOICE OF MORNING OR EVENING CLASSES. Classes will be held at numerous convenient H & R BLOCK LOCATIONS IN THE MIDLAND AREA Including- BIG SPRING, MONAHANS, ODESSA & CRANE.

For a total of eighty-one hours over approximately three months students will study all areas of tax preparation and receive actual experience in preparing individual returns. Experienced Block personnel will teach current laws, theory and application as practiced in their offices coast to coast. There is a classroom lecture on each subject and practice problems at every level. The course is programmed to teach students increasingly complex tax problems as study progresses. Students find this course interesting and challenging.

Anyone may enroll. There are no restrictions or qualifications of any kind. The course is ideally suited for housewives, retired persons, teachers or anyone wanting to increase his tax knowledge.

While qualified graduates of the course WILL BE OFFERED JOB INTERVIEWS, they are under no obligation to accept EMPLOYMENT with H & R BLOCK. There are franchises available to residents of small cities as well as job opportunities locally. There are seasonal full-time part time job opportunities available for trained tax preparers.

The modest fee charged for this course includes all textbooks, supplies and tax forms necessary for completion of the school. Certificates are awarded to all graduates.

Registration forms and brochures for the Income Tax Course may be obtained by contacting THE H & R BLOCK Office at 1201 E. 8th St. Odessa, Tx 79761. Phone 332-7801 Collect (ADV.)

Floyd shoots best round ever to take PGA lead

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Veteran Ray Floyd reeled off a string of nine consecutive "3's" on the way to the best effort of his career, a record-breaking, 7-under-par 63 that staked him to the first round lead Thursday in the 64th PGA national championship.

"Probably the best round of golf I've ever played, anywhere," said Floyd, who has won 17 titles — including two this season — in two decades of competition on the PGA Tour.

"And, with it coming in a major, and on a golf course like this, it's something I'll remember forever," Floyd said after his trek through strength-sapping heat that soared beyond the 100 degree mark.

"Anybody who thinks he can beat this heat for four rounds is crazy," said Floyd. He kept a wet towel draped around his shoulders, drank fluids on every hole and "sought the shade at every opportunity.

"I didn't walk down the fairways," he said. "I stayed over in the rough, under the trees."

Floyd's spectacular effort tied the PGA record for the best 18-hole score ever recorded in this championship, set the course record for the difficult, demanding 6,862 yard Southern Hills Country Club layout, and tied the PGA record for the largest first round lead, three strokes.

"Realistically, if I go out and hit the ball as well as I did today, I might not have this good a score, but I see no reason for my game to go sour in the middle of the night while I'm sleeping. I see no reason I can't continue to play well," Floyd said.

Tom Watson reluctantly agreed.

"We might not be able to catch Raymond," Watson said after fighting a balky putter to a round of 72.

"That's a great golf score. He's a great player and he's very, very tough when he gets in front."

Watson, seeking to complete a career sweep of the game's Big Four titles and add the PGA crown to the British Open and U.S. Open championships he won earlier this year, said "one mistake (a 4-iron he hooked into the water for a double bogey) and poor putting turned a 68 or 69 into a 72.

"Obviously, I'll have to play three very good rounds to have any chance of winning — and even three very good rounds might not be good enough to catch Raymond."

Despite brutal heat — the temperature went past 100 degrees in early afternoon and was moving toward a high of 102 — scores were exceptionally low.

Bob Gilder, another 2-time winner this and long-hitting Australian Greg Norman shared second at 66, three [illegible]ck o[illegible]oyd.

Fred Couples also got in on the record-breaking act. He birdied his last six holes for a back-nine 29, breaking the PGA tournament record of 30 set by Art Wall in 1958 and equalled four times since.

Couples finished with a 67 and was tied with Rex Caldwell and Nick Faldo of England.

Vance Heafner, Mark Pfeil, Jim Simons, former U.S. Open and PGA champ David Graham and club pro John Jackson shot 68s.

Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina returns a serve against Anders Jarryd of Sweden during their match at the U.S. Clay Court Championships in Indianapolis. Clerc, who is seeded second in the tournament, won the match 6-2, 6-2.

Clerc on way to third U.S. Clay Court crown

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Over the past two years, Jose-Luis Clerc has won 15 straight matches in the U.S. Open Clay Court tennis tournament, and two of his victories have come at the expense of a frustrated but still-determined Mel Purcell.

"I want this very much. He's a very tough player," Purcell said of tonight's quarterfinal showdown against Clerc, who is trying to become the first man to win three straight U.S. Clay Court championships since Bobby Riggs in 1936-38.

Clerc beat Purcell 7-5, 6-3 in the title match two years ago. Last year, en route to a three-set victory over Ivan Lendl for the championship, Clerc stopped Purcell 6-3, 6-3 in the quarterfinals. The two rivals have also played four times at other tournaments, and Clerc has won them all.

"He's a champion," Purcell said of the 23-year-old Clerc, who is seeded No.2 for this tournament and ranked No.6 in the world. "When I've played him, I've always gotten ahead of him early. But he's always been able to come back. If I can close him out, I'd be okay.

Purcell, seeded No.7 and ranked 22nd in the world by the Association of Tennis Professionals, reached tonight's round with an easy 6-3, 6-4 victory Thursday over Jimmy Brown. Clerc had a bit rougher time, losing the first set 6-7 to France's Guy Forget, then registering a pair of 6-3 triumphs for the match victory.

"It's difficult to be the defending champion," Clerc said. "Especially with all the young guys. I was really tired. I play so many young guys, they give me a hard time on the court."

"I had to work hard," Clerc said of his match with the 17-year-old Forget, the world's top-ranked junior player and a wild-card entry in his first Clay Court appearance. "He played really, really good, but I don't think he has had so much experience. I'm really lucky to win."

Purcell said Brown is a good player "but I intimidated him the whole match, I think. A couple times, he made good shots, but not consistently.

The three other men's quarterfinals, all scheduled for the afternoon, matched fifth-eeded Jose Higueras of Spain against No.12 Pablo Arraya of Peru; No.6 Andres Gomez of Ecuador against unseeded Hans Simonsson of Sweden; and No.14 Hans Gildemeister of Chile against No.10 Jimmy Arias, the only other American still playing still in the tourney.

Arias, 17, beat Spain's Angel Gimenez 6-4, 6-4 Thursday night. Higueras, runner-up to Jimmy Connors in the 1978 Clay Court tourney, moved to the showdown with Arraya by beating France's Gilles Moretton 6-3, 6-3. Simonsson beat Mike Cahill 2-6, 6-2, 6-4 to advance to the quarterfinals against Gomez, a 6-3, 7-6 winner over Spain's Juan Aguilera.

Women's play moved into the semifinal round today, headed by top-seeded Virginia Ruzici of Romania, the runner-up to Andrea Jaeger in last year's Clay Court finals. Ruzici fell behind 4-1 in the first set, then rallied to a 7-5, 6-2 victory over Michelle Torres in Thursday's quarterfinals.

Ruzici was matched against fourth-seeded Bonnie Gadusek, who ousted Korea's Duk Hee Lee 6-2, 6-0.

Cubs wake up with 8-4 win over San Antonio

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

The Midland Cubs appeared to be somewhat lethargic in the first two games of the current series with the league leading San Antonio Dodgers, but the Bruins broke that pattern at Cubs Stadium Thursday night with a 17-hit, four homer attack, which included some hard nosed running on the base paths.

The 8-4 victory turnaround came none to soon for Cub fans, who watched Midland deal away hefty leads in the first two games of the series. It also kept the Cubs within striking distance of the Dodgers, only 2½ games off the pace instead of 4½ games out had they lost again Thursday.

THE CUBS stung Dodger starter Chris Malden for three homers in the fourth inning and ended up with a 4-1 lead. Joe Carter led things off with a Reggie Jackson-type stop-to-watch-it-sail-out-of-the-park blast to left center for his 20th homer of the year and Carmelo Martinez followed with the first of two homers on the night to give him 23 for the season. With two outs, Carlos Lezcano connected for his ninth of the year and Javier Fierro scored the last run on a "chink" single to center by Dave Owen. Martinez followed with his second solo homer in the fifth inning and that proved to be the game winner.

The Cubs put three runs in lights in the seventh on a single by Mike Kelley, who broke an 0-for-10 skid, a double by Joe Carter and a sacrifice fly by Martinez.

THE FINAL outcome could have been even worse since the Cubs had the bases loaded with no outs in the eighth against reliever Shayne Hammond with Kelley, Carter and Martinez due to bat. But Hammond got all three on shallow flies to left field. Carter and Martinez both admitted that they were looking to add to their homer totals.

"Two other times this year I've had two homers in my first two at-bats and I always end up flying out or hitting grounders. I was going for another homer in the eighth, but I got under the ball," said Martinez.

"I popped up in the eighth because I was looking for a fastball and I didn't get it," Carter noted.

The Dodgers never quit and collected 11 hits off Jon Perlman, who went the distance to haul in his 10th victory against six defeats. San Antonio got two runs in the sixth off Perlman on a hit and run double by Sid Bream and a run scoring single by Ed Amelung. They made it a 5-4 game in the seventh with an unearned run off Perlman when Alex Taveras walked, moved to third on an errant pickoff throw by Perlman and scored on a sacrifice fly by Todd Gauntlett.

"IT'S GOOD to get the 10th win and I've won two in a row, but I felt like it was a struggle all night. San Antonio has some great hitters and I wasn't getting ahead on the count like I have been in the past few starts," Perlman said. "I kept getting myself in trouble, but I got a couple of pickoffs that helped and was able to get the big out when I needed it most of the night."

The Cubs were dazzling on the base paths, four times knocking down Dodger second baseman Mark Sheehy with hard, aggressive slides. This side of the game had been missing in recent days. But even though Sheehy was taking his beating around the bag on the pivot, he turned two double plays and hung in there all night despite the onslaught of the Cub runners.

"I think we were much more aggressive tonight," said Fierro, who had a stolen base to go with three hits. "I think he (Sheehy) paid the price out there because everyone was really running hard. We knew we had to win some of these games and it's been a long time since I've gotten three hits in a game. I needed that."

Shortstop Owen did Fierro even one better with a four-for-four night at the plate with a double to go along with three bloop singles. "Pitchers hate those chinkers, but hitters love them," said Owen when asked if he was on a hitting binge. "This is a big series for us and I think everyone is trying to pull out all the plugs. I think you saw that in our play tonight."

Of the 18 hitters who got to the plate Thursday night, only Midland's Henry Cotto didn't come up with a hit, but Cotto did lay down a sacrifice in the seventh to help produce a run and walked once. The teams combined for 28 hits, including six doubles and the four homers.

Today's 7:30 p.m. two-for-one beer night will feature Midland's Doug Welenc (10-9) against San Antonio's Dean "The Stat Man" Rennicke (9-6).

Tall City Golf Championship up for grabs with new field

By CHAD PUERLING
Sports Writer

> "Find a man with both feet on the ground and you've found a man about to make a difficult putt."
> Fletcher Knebel

Seventy golfers will be planting their feet firmly on the ground at Hogan Park Saturday for the opening round of the Midland City Golf Championship, sponsored by The Midland Reporter-Telegram.

The two-day low-ball tournament features seven flights, determined by handicap, and looks to be a wide open affair. There will be no returning champion in this year's tournament, which Joel Jackson, an assistant pro at the host course, said could be won by seven or eight different players.

The Championship flight, for persons with a handicap of less than five, has the largest number of entrants at 22. Their tee times will be from 12:30 to 1:07 p.m.. It is the only flight that will be medal play as all other flights will utilize a handicap.

HEAD PROFESSIONAL Rex Worrell said the four key holes on the par 70 course will be nine through 12. "If they can play those holes well, they will be in good shape," he said.

Coming home in good shape will bring a trophy to the top two finishers in each flight.

The fourth and fifth flights will start the tournament with tee times from 8:45 to 8:52 a.m.. The fifth flight is for golfers with handicaps over 20, while the fourth flight has golfers in the 17-20 handicap range.

New to this year's event was the addition of a Senior Division. Unfortunately, only two linksters signed up for the over-50 age group. Despite the low turnout, Jackson said they will try again next year to give the elder statesmen a chance to enter the City Championship and have an extra chance to win a trophy.

"Trophies in the senior category will be given to the low net and low gross scorers," he said.

FOLLOWING THE combined early morning flight will be those golfers with a handicap ranging from 13-16, the third flight. The 14 golfers will tee it up between 11:15 and 11:37 a.m. The six golfers in the second flight, with handicaps ranging from 10-12, will hit the links between 11:45 and 11:52 a.m.

At noon the first flight, six to nine handicappers, will begin play with the last group teeing up at 12:22 p.m.

Both rounds of the tournament will be played on the first 18 holes, which measure 6,615 yards. According to Worrell the easiest and most difficult hole is number four.

"The fourth hole will play a par-4 for the championship flight and a par-5 for the other flights. It is a good swing hole since its easy to get a four or six," he said. "With its length (425 yards) and the water hazard, it becomes the key hole."

Worrell said that last week's rains have left the course in good shape for the tournament and he believes the weather could be a factor.

The head professional gave a target to the golfers saying a 4-under par score could win it all this year.

All flights will play from the red tee markers accept the championship flight which will use the blue tees.

Last year's champion was Kelly Eng, who won the tournament in a playoff with Boogie Childers.

Texas Exes play Florida

The University of Texas Exes Golf Tournament drew 60 linksters to Green Tree Country Club, Thursday, for an ABCD Florida Scramble.

The foursome of Hal Gill, Rip Horkey, Randy Roan and Steve Payton won the spirited event on a card playoff.

Bob Mathews won the closet to the pin contest while Jimmy Clayton captured the prize for the longest drive.

Midland teams win two of three

SNYDER — Midland's Division IV team in the United girls Softball Association National tournament was a double winner Thursday while its Division III counterpart suffered defeat.

Midland opened Division IV play with an 11-4 victory over Dennison and posted a 15-run rule win over Snyder, 17-1. The Division III team lost to West Henrico out of Richmond, Va., 5-2.

Midland and Dennison were tied after the first two innings of play, 1-1, before the Tall City team started pulling away. Three runs in the third inning, five in the fifth and two in the seventh from a 17-hit attack accounted for the scoring. Dennison managed to score three runs in the sixth.

On the mound, Tonya Coker went the distance to take the victory while Kim Campbell suffered the loss.

It was no contest in the second game as Midland used an 11-run second inning to set the pace for the 17-1 destruction of Snyder. Snyder's lone tally came in the third inning.

Janice Littlefield pitched a five-hitter for Midland to record the victory while Debra Quintela suffered the loss with Bunny Roe coming in in relief.

Tonight, Midland will face West Henrico at 7 p.m. with the winner advancing into Saturday's championship game at 1 p.m.

In other Division IV games, West Henrico posted easy victories over Breckenridge, 11-1, and Odessa, 10-1.

In Division III, West Henrico produced four runs in the fourth inning for a 5-0 lead and held Midland to two in the sixth for the 5-2 victory.

Midland played Abilene North today at 11 a.m. in an elimination game with the winner playing at 9 tonight against the winner of the Snyder-West Henrico game.

In other Division III action, Mount Pleasant edged Snyder 13-12 in nine innings (regulation is seven) and was also a 10-9 winner over Abilene North. Odessa blasted West Henrico 16-7.

Midland loses Texas Teen championship game

SAN ANGELO — Midland Trott & Company went into the championship game of the Texas Teen Tournament sophomore division needing to beat Houston twice to claim the title, but a four-run outburst in the second inning set the pace for Houston's tournament-ending 7-3 victory.

Houston, with a 4-0 tournament record, claimed the crown while Midland finished in second place at 3-2.

Along with the four-run second inning, Houston tallied solo runs in the third, fourth and fifth innings while Midland scored one in each of the fourth, fifth and sixth.

Troy Carroll, who was the tournament Most Valuable Player, went the distance for the victory while Midland's Terry Baxter suffered the loss.

At the plate, Houston's Jim Webb and Baxter for Midland were home run hitters while Houston's Craig Fontana added a two-run double and Carroll an RBI single.

To gain the finals, Midland had to get past Denton in an early Thursday game. MT&C did, 3-2, and it was Baxter's two home runs that set the pace.

Both teams scored one run in the first inning and Denton took the lead in the third with its final run, 2-1. Midland tied the game at 2-2 and scored the winning run in the sixth.

On the mound, Raul Pena was the winning pitcher while Craig Harris suffered the loss.

Young Twins show no respect to elders

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

In his return to the major leagues, old Luis Tiant ran into the young Minnesota Twins, who haven't been showing much respect for their elders lately.

The 41-year-old Tiant, purchased by California earlier in the week from the Mexican League, saw his return to the majors spoiled Thursday when the Twins tagged him for four runs and five hits in 31-3 innings — including a three-run homer by Ron Washington — and defeated the Angels 8-6.

"I wasn't as sharp as I could have been," said Tiant. "But I have no excuses. When you make a mistake, you have to pay for it."

Tiant, who last pitched in the majors with the Pittsburgh Pirates a year ago, started out like a late entry for Comeback Player of the Year, striking out five of the first nine Twins he faced.

But with Tim Laudner, who singled, and Bobby Mitchell, who walked, on base with two out in the third inning, Washington homered to give the Twins a 3-1 lead.

"The first time up, I couldn't really get what he was doing," said Washington, who struck out in the first inning against El Tiante's herky-jerky motion. "But when he was pitching from the stretch with not so much motion, I could see his move.

"Since we started playing good baseball, being down a few runs doesn't really bother us because we know we have the ability to come back," Washington added after the Twins' third victory in the four-game series that knocked the Angels out of first place in the AL West.

"If he doesn't hit the ball out, I have a chance to pitch six or seven innings," said Tiant.

The Twins made it 4-1 in the fourth when Gary Gaetti doubled and scored on the first of two RBI singles by Mickey Hatcher, which chased Tiant. Minnesota had one final jab at the ancient right-hander.

Orioles 5, Royals 1

Jim Palmer held Kansas City hitless for five innings and finished with a three-hitter for his seventh consecutive victory as Baltimore snapped a six-game losing streak to the Royals. However, Kansas City held on to first place in the AL West, one percentage point ahead of the Angels. The third-place Orioles are 3½ games out in the AL East.

Palmer shut Kansas City out until the seventh inning when George Brett homered. Al Bumbry provided the first Oriole run when he hit a leadoff homer off Vida Blue in the bottom of the first inning. The Orioles chased Blue in the fourth when they scored three runs, two on Rich Dauer's bases-loaded single.

Tigers 5-7, Blue Jays 2-4

Jerry Turner drove in three runs with a homer and single in the second game after the Tigers won the opener behind Jerry Ujdur's seven-hit pitching. With Toronto leading 2-1 in the nightcap, Larry Herndon opened the Detroit fourth with a single and scored on Turner's homer off Roy Lee Jackson. The Tigers wrapped it up with three runs in the fifth on Tom Brookens' two-run single and Turner's RBI single.

In the first game, Glenn Wilson's single, Alan Trammell's triple and Lou Whitaker's sacrifice fly gave the Tigers a 2-0 lead against Luis Leal in the fifth inning and Rick Leach rapped a two-run double in the sixth.

Rangers 7, Yankees 2

Dave Hostetler homered and drove in four runs for Texas while knuckleballer Charlie Hough scattered eight hits over seven innings in beating the Yankees for the third time this season. Hostetler, who drove in four runs with a pair of homers against New York last Sunday, slugged a two-run homer, his 17th, in the first inning off winless Doyle Alexander, the Rangers added a run in the second on an RBI single by Mike Richardt and Hostetler's two-run single in the third chased the Yankee starter.

California Angels Bobby Grich slides into home ahead of the tag by Minnesota Twins catcher Tim Laudner during second inning action Thursday in Anaheim. Grich scored on a single to center field by Ron Jackson.

Rangers' Rivers has foot in cast

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Outfielder Mickey Rivers has been placed on the 21-day disabled list because of a severely sprained left ankle, the Texas Rangers announced Thursday.

Terry Bogener was recalled from the team's Denver farm club to replace Rivers, Rangers officials said.

Rivers hurt his ankle Wednesday night in Cleveland when he tripped over first base trying to avoid a tag. His foot will be in a cast for four weeks, club officials said.

Rivers missed the first three months of the season, getting only one plate appearance through July 15 because of a knee injury.

Bogener previously was called up from Denver on June 12, remaining with the Rangers for 17 days. Since his return to Denver on June 29, Bogener has hit .343 with the Bears. For the season, he has a .326 average with 17 doubles, five triples, four home runs, and 30 runs batted in.

Tigers' Gibson out for season

DETROIT (AP) — Nobody will come right out and say so, but it's rather apparent that Detroit center-fielder Kirk Gibson is finished with baseball for this season.

The Tigers' slugger has his sore left wrist in a stiff plaster cast and Gibson said Thursday it will remain that way for about two weeks.

Dodgers close in on Braves with another victory

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Rick Monday has been around long enough to know that you stick around until the very end of a baseball game. Otherwise, you might miss a spectacular comeback.

"I was never one to leave the park early," said Monday. "In this game you can't take anything for granted."

The Atlanta Braves will attest to that after blowing Thursday night's game with the Dodgers on shoddy fielding. Los Angeles moved within 4½ games of the first-place Braves with a 3-2, 10-inning triumph greatly aided by three Atlanta errors.

The key miscue came with two out in the bottom of the ninth and Pedro Guerrero on second base as the tying run. Pinch-hitter Monday's sharp grounder went through the legs of Braves second baseman Jerry Royster to tie the game.

"That's my specialty — game-ending plays," said Royster. "I didn't get down on it. It was a simple play. I messed it up. It was the biggest bonehead play since I've been in the majors."

"I was upset when I hit the ball," said Monday. "It was hit hard but right where he was standing. But it was hooking and spinning."

Atlanta, which has lost five games to the Dodgers in the last week, jumped ahead 2-0 on Claudell Washington's long homer off Fernando Valenzuela in the fifth. A throwing error by catcher Bruce Benedict on a steal by Steve Sax helped LA to its first run.

The winning run came on Ron Cey's bases-loaded sacrifice fly in the 10th. Sax led off with a bloop single which Washington bobbled in right field as Sax advanced to second. He was sacrificed to third by Ken Landreaux and, after two intentional walks, Cey won it.

Valenzuela was knocked out of the game in the sixth when struck on the left knee by a line drive off the bat of Bob Horner. Valenzuela sustained a bruise on his knee but wasn't expected to miss a start.

Reds 4, Padres 2

Tom Seaver had gone five weeks without a victory, so he called on his old prey from San Diego. Seaver, 5-11, allowed one run on four hits over six innings to earn his first victory since June 26.

"I felt good for five innings. I had some pop on the ball but I didn't want to irritate the inflammation in my shoulder," said Seaver, who won for the 18th time in 21 decisions at San Diego Stadium. He is 32-7 lifetime against the Padres.

"This club being an expansion team in '69 and '70 when I was throwing extremely well has a lot to do with it," Seaver explained.

Expos 9, Phillies 2

Joel Youngblood kept busy running around for the second straight day with three hits, three RBI, a stolen base and an excellent fielding play in right for the Expos. Youngblood joined Montreal Wednesday night and collected a single after knocking in two runs for the New York Mets in an afternoon game in Chicago. Midway through that game, he was told he'd been dealt to Montreal and to head to Philadelphia.

The pace was slightly less hectic for Youngblood on Thursday, though he had to go some to keep up with teammates Tim Raines (5-for-6, three runs scored and two stolen bases) and Tim Wallach, who belted his first major-league grand slam.

"The base hits went through just at the right time" said Youngblood. "It's all the difference in the world hitting for a contender. I have a lot of confidence in my ability."

So did Raines, after a change in strategy.

"The way I've been swinging lately I told myself I had to bunt more and use my speed," said Raines, who had two hits on bunts. "The bunt brings the infielders in and opens things up more."

Giants 5, Astros 2

San Francisco's star rookies, pitcher Bill Laskey, centerfielder Chili Davis and third baseman Tom O'Malley, were the main men for the Giants. Laskey pitched seven shutout innings, Davis had three hits and O'Malley chipped in with two.

Laskey, 10-8, allowed seven hits, struck out two and walked none before yielding to relievers Al Holland and Greg Minton, who recorded his 19th save.

Cubs 5, Mets 1

Randy Martz was reached for singles by Ron Hodges in the second and eighth innings and nothing more. At one point, he retired 17 straight Mets. Jay Johnstone slammed a two-run homer for Chicago in the third inning after Bill Buckner's single to snap a 1-1 tie.

"I've never had a two-hitter before," said Martz. "I don't know if I pitched that great. They helped a lot by swinging at a lot of first pitches."

Cardinals 7, Pirates 3

Ken Oberkfell rapped a pair of two-run doubles and Steve Mura hurled a four-hitter in the rain-shortened contest.

'I'm going to suggest to my general manager and tell him I want to put in a protest. It looked like they were just trying to get the five innings in," said Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner. "We didn't get the chance to come back. I just think we got jobbed."

The game was called in the bottom of the fifth after a two-hour, two-minute rain delay. Tanner said he considered the rainfall, accompanied by lightning, to be hazardous to players of both teams as early as the top of the fifth. But the action continued through that half-inning, making it a complete contest.

God told Richard he would pitch again

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — J.R. Richard, the onetime Houston Astro fastballer about to begin playing Class AAA baseball on the second leg of his major-league comeback effort, said Thursday, "Everything's just fine, no complaints."

Richards, promoted this week to the Tucson Toros, Houston's farm team, said he's confident of making it all the way back, and credits his faith in himself and in God for his improvement since he suffered a disabling stroke two years ago.

"I always had the faith and ... never doubted in my mind one second that I would not come back," the 6-foot-8 right-hander told reporters at a news conference. He arrived in Tucson Wedneday night with his wife and three sons after a stopover in Houston, en route from Daytona Beach.

The Astros moved Richard up from their Class A team after he pitched a complete game Monday night and received a standing-ovation sendoff.

After joining Daytona Beach in mid-June, Richard compiled a 3-1 record in six appearances. Earlier, he had undergone extensive physical therapy, including weightlifting and coordination exercises.

The 32-year-old Richard, who wore blue wash pants with the Astros' emblem on the right leg, probably will pitch the second game of Saturday night's Pacific Coast League doubleheader against Spokane, Toros Manager Jimmy Johnson said.

Richard said he feels as confident and strong, physically and mentally, as before the stroke, which followed a blood clot in his left shoulder. But he admitted, "I don't know how far I am" from being the old J.R. Richard, whose fastball consistently was clocked at 98 mph, Johnson said.

"Sometimes (I feel) like I'm almost there and sometimes I feel like I'm not there at all." He said he's throwing at a speed of about 89 mph currently.

Richard said he has set no timetable for returning to the Astros, but expects to do so later this season after the Toros' schedule is completed.

"Time will take care of everything ... you just have to be patient," he added.

Richard praised the Daytona Beach club as "the loosest Class A ball club that ever was," yet with players "more dedicated ... than when I was coming up years ago." He also praised the absence of any "black-and-white stuff," and added, "I enjoyed it very much."

Richard said he isn't concerned about facing tougher hitters in Triple-A ball than he did in the Florida State League. The secret, he said, is in knowing how to pitch the hitters. "His weakness is your strength," Richard said — knowing what to throw in a certain situation.

The ex-Astro also said reports questioning his mobility and ability to react on the mound to sharply hit balls "are not my concern at all." He said he's found he no longer needs to ice down his arm after pitching. He did before the stroke.

As for his diet, Richard said he's on one: "Food."

Richard said he is a committed Baptist whose faith has grown since his stroke, said God had told him he would pitch again and that he's never doubted he would.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fernando Valenzuela, the 1981 National League Cy Young Award winner, had his left leg struck by a line drive off the bat of Atlanta's Bob Horner in the sixth inning Thursday night, knocking the Los Angeles left-hander out of the game.

Valenzuela was examined by Dr. Frank Jobe, a Dodger team orthopedic surgeon, who determined thet he had sustained a bruise on the outside of his knee. Jobe indicated the injury is not serious, and no X rays were immediately prescribed, although Valenzuela will be reexamined Friday.

Horner's sizzling liner struck Valenzuela as he pivoted to his right in a futile attempt to evade the shot. He tumbled to the ground, where he remained several moments, then left the game.

The Dodgers indicated that Valenzuela should be able to make his next start Tuesday against Cincinnati in Los Angeles.

PUBLIC NOTICE MIDLAND COUNTY, TEXAS HOUSING AND COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

Midland County has submitted an application to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development for $535,000 in 1982 Community Development Block Grant funds. These funds, if awarded by HUD, will be used to benefit low and moderate income citizens in our community.

A copy of this application is available for review in the office of the County Judge, 200 W. Wall, between the hours of 8:00 A.M. and 5:00 P.M., Monday through Friday.

Citizens may submit comments and objections on the County's CDBG application directly to the Dallas Area Office of The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, P.O. Box 10050, Dallas, Texas 75207. HUD will consider objections based only on the following grounds:

(A) The County has described its housing and community development needs in a manner clearly inconsistent with available facts and data;

(B) The activities proposed by the County are clearly inappropriate to meeting the County's needs and objectives;

(C) The County has not complied with CDBG porgram requirements; or

(D) The proposed activities are not elegible for CDBG program assistance.

In submitting any comments and objections to HUD, citizens must plainly identify the source of their complaints and cite alternative data, if applicable, in correspondence addressed to the HUD Dallas Area Office.

Handicapped individuals who need special assistance in reviewing the County's application should contact the Midland County courthouse at 682-9481 to arrange for such assistance. For further information, contact William B. Ahders, County Judge, at the Midland County Courthouse.

NFL strike has TV scrambling

By LARRY SIDDONS
AP Sports Writer

Uncertainty over the fate of the coming National Football League season has the three networks looking for programming to fill the gap should the players decide to strike.

It's a fairly easy situation for ABC, which has only Monday night prime-time slots to fill. At CBS and NBC, however, it's a tougher task to find replacement programming that will do as well in the ratings on Sunday afternoons.

Ironically, ABC could face the first strike cancelation, although it's not from the players.

The network is scheduled to open the NFL preseason with Saturday's Hall of Fame Game from Canton, Ohio, this year featuring the Baltimore Colts and the Minnesota Vikings.

But the game is being threatened by a strike — not by the players, but by Viking Coach Bud Grant and his staff.

Grant is upset because the coaches don't get paid extra for the Hall of Fame Game, and is threatening to stay away Saturday afternoon unless the NFL come up with some money. Grant's players have indicated they will follow their coach's lead.

If that happens and the game is called off, ABC probably will fill the time with regular "Wide World of Sports" programming. The game telecast is labeled a special edition of "Wide World," so not even the logo or theme music has to be changed.

By late Wednesday, however, definite word on ABC's plans for the Hall of Fame time slot was unavailable.

Much the same remedy will be used by ABC if a strike by the NFL Players Association occurs during the regular season.

Officials at the network say they would fill the 9 p.m. EDT slot with regular prime-time programming — situation comedies, movies and so on — as they did during last summer's baseball strike.

At NBC and CBS, the problem is stickier, but alternatives are being readied in case of a strike.

NBC is looking northward. The Canadian Football League would help fill the gap for U.S. fans on the American Conference's home network, officials say.

Beyond that, few details of the contingency plan are available. It's not known, for example, if the CFL would make it on NBC every Sunday, or what would happen if an NFL strike lasted beyond late November, when the Canadian league decides its champion.

But NBC officials are betting that 10 extra yards — the middle of a CFL field is the 55-yard line — and just three downs to make a first down won't matter that much to football-starved U.S. viewers.

CBS, on the other hand, is thinking collegiate.

If the NFLPA strikes, look for CBS to fill at least some of the time with NCAA football.

Industry sources say there appears to be a provision for the networks to move college games to Sunday afternoons, under the $263.5 million deal ABC and CBS signed with the NCAA last winter. If so, it would bring college football to a time spot it has never before filled.

If college football cannot be used, or if there are limits to how often it can be shown on Sundays, CBS — the network of the National Conference — will use other sports and entertainment programs to fill the gap.

Whatever alternatives the networks take, a strike surely would cut their revenues. Pro football is, in the minds of many Madison Avenue executives, the ultimate advertising vehicle. Just take a look at two figures:

—NBC, which has the TV rights to the Super Bowl in January 1983, is starting to sell time to advertisers at the rate of $800,000 a commercial minute. That compares with $670,000 a minute charged by CBS for last January's Super Bowl XVI — a 19 percent increase.

—Atari has just signed a $7.5 million contract with NBC to advertise its home video games during the network's major sports programming. The World Series is included in the package, but the bulk of it goes to pro football.

No matter what happens in Canton, Ohio, this weekend, ABC has its late afternoon schedules full with the last of the year's "major" golf tournaments, the PGA.

Beginning with a half-hour highlight show at midnight EDT Friday, ABC is set to telecast 6½ hours of PGA coverage, capped by 3½ hours on Sunday's final round, beginning at 3:30 p.m. EDT.

Plans call for ABC to carry action starting with the fifth hole Sunday. But because the PGA can be decided with a sudden-death playoff, the network must be set up to cover all 18 holes, since a tie would take it back to the No.1 tee as soon as the 18th hole was played.

Demolition scheduled for Speedway

Cadillacs to Continentals are pre-entered for the annual National Demolition Derby and Kids Night at 8:30 Saturday at the Twin Cities Speedway.

Backers of the giant hit-and-run fest said the 79 cars in last year's derby was the largest to be thrown into the arena at one ~~time~~ in the history of demolition derbies.

First place will earn $500 of the $1,000 purse. Second place will get $300 while third place will pay $200. Ladies are welcome to enter.

Under the established rules, no vehicle can remain stationary longer than five minutes and the derby is scheduled to continue until there is just one car left running.

Drivers in the derby may maneuver forward or backward, but deliberate head-on collisions or hitting an opponent's car in the front door on the driver's side is prohibited.

All glass must be removed and all doors and wagon gates must be strapped, wired or welded shut. Junk buyers will be present to purchase all wrecked vehicles.

Twin Cities Speedway is located five miles east of Odessa on Highway 80. General admission tickets are $5 for adults. Kids are free. Gates open at 5 p.m. Saturday.

Scully agrees to Dodgers broadcast deal

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Vin Scully has agreed on a long-term contract to continue in the Los Angeles Dodgers' broadcast booth, the National League club has announced.

Scully, in his 33rd year broadcasting Dodger baseball, will continue to broadcast home games and the majority of road telecasts, a schedule he has maintained since 1977.

Wilnader upset in U.S. Clay Court Championships

The other women's semifinal paired No.2 Kathy Rinaldi against seventh-seeded Helena Sukova of Czechoslovakia. Rinaldi, 15, trying to become the youngest-ever Clay Court champion, beat Susan Mascarin 6-4, 1-6, 6-4 in a marathon match that lasted nearly three hours, while Sukova downed Australia's Dianne Fromholtz, the 1975 runner-up, by a 6-1, 6-3 score.

The biggest upset Thursday was Arraya's stunning 7-6, 7-6 triumph over third-seeded Mats Wilander of Sweden, the 17-year-old winner of the French Open who came into the Clay Court tourney ranked No.9 in the world. Arraya, 20, a member of Peru's Davis Cup team and seeking his first major championship as a professional, beat the favored Wilander in two tie-breakers.

Wilander was leading 5-4 and was within one point of taking the second set, but Arraya held serve and tied the set at 5-5 and 6-6 before winning the tie-breaker seven points to five.

Four of Arraya's winning points in the second-set tie-breaker came on back-spinning drop shots Wilander was unable to reach.

"I was kind of surprised," grinned Arraya.

Roberts has Kimco parts

Paid Advertisement

Roberts Auto Supply and Machine Shop is proud to announce they have a complete line of Kimco rebuilt auto parts in stock and ready for your repair jobs. Kimco rebuilt alternators, starters, clutches, water pumps, brake shoes, disc pads and starter solenoids are just a few of the parts available.

According to manager Bruce Hart, Kimco rebuilt parts make the cost of car repair more affordable, as well as being parts you can depend on.

. Another new service at Roberts is custom-made hydraulic hoses. Hart says Roberts is now equipped to make any type of hydraulic hose for heavy duty equipment in just a matter of minutes. "Instead of driving to Odessa, with the travel time involved, you can just bring your broken hose in to us, and we'll make one to match in minutes," he says.

L Roberts handles whatever you need to keep your car in good running condition, from auto parts to car care products. And Roberts automotive machine shop carries a complete stock of rebuilt crankshafts, short-blocks, alternators and water pumps. They are also distributor for Toro rebuilt engines.

If you need any type of hand tool or speciality tool, it's available at Roberts.

L Visit Roberts Auto Supply and Machine Shop, located at 1003 E. Florida or call 683-4301 and keep your auto in good running condition.

Need a gift for that special someone? Graham's Pharmacy-Crawley's Rexall Drug has a complete line of beautiful and functional gifts for all occasions at their location in the Village, 319 Dodson.

Owned and operated by Paul Keele and Wesley Graham, Graham's offers complete prescription service, including family profile records, computerized accounting system and records of your prescriptions for tax and insurance purposes.

L Graham's also offers free delivery within Midland city limits on all prescriptions.

While you're waiting on your prescription, you can browse through the hundreds of beautiful gift items displayed. Graham's has a large collection of Hummel figurines, as well as Hummel books. Graham's also carries the Pfalzraff line of pottery, and there is a full line of cosmetics, sundries and greeting cards. Graham's truly offers one-stop shopping.

L If you're in the mood for an old-fashioned milk shake or malt, Graham's has a soda fountain and serves fountain drinks and sandwiches from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

In addition to the pharmacy and gift items, Graham's is a dealer for the Hepanaire HP50 air cleaner in Midland. This portable air-filtering unit frees room air of better than 95 percent of airborne contamination. Hepanaire offers immediate benefits of a soft, even flow of cleaner, healthier air, and is a valuable aid for those who suffer from allergies.

For fast friendly service, whether prescriptions or the many other items available at Graham's, you can't beat shopping at this unique pharmacy. Graham and Keele believe in old-fashioned service and are never too busy to give their customers their full attention.

L Come by Graham's Pharmacy at 319 Dodson, just off Andrews Hwy. in the Village, or you can call for prompt prescription service at 684-0569.

Turkish political refugees face uncertain future

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — More than 250 Turkish political refugees in Greece face an uncertain future because their asylum here is only temporary and no Western country seems ready to accept them.

The refugees, mostly leftists fleeing Turkey's military government, slipped into Greece alone or in pairs without passports or money over the past year.

In a typical case, a 23-year-old hotel clerk rented a motor launch last October in a fishing port on Turkey's Aegean coast and set out for a Greek island. He said a Turkish coast guard vessel opened fire on his craft, but he managed to make it to Greek waters.

But as a political exile with extremist views, the clerk has little chance of realizing his ambition to settle in West Germany, which already has a large Turkish-worker population and wants to send some of them home.

Greek security officials say the exodus began last July when the Greek government made it clear that Turkish political refugees were in no danger of being sent home.

Some made the sea crossing to the eastern Greek islands, visible from the Turkish mainland and only a few hours' sailing time in a small boat.

Turkey's best known political exile, film director Yilmaz Guney, is rumored to have got away to the Greek island of Castellorizo aboard a yacht.

But the majority enter Greece by swimming the Evros River that marks Greece's northern border with Turkey.

A year ago, Fatma Omer, a 30-year-old schoolteacher and her trade unionist husband Hassan floated across the river on an inflated inner tube.

"We waited for a moonless night and had some villagers show us a good crossing place away from the border patrols," she said. "It only took 10 minutes, but I was terrified."

Some refugees, hoping to join friends or relatives in the Netherlands, West Germany or Scandinavia, jump ships at Salonica.

Most request political asylum in Greece, which has a Socialist government, and are transferred to a United Nations reception center at Lavrion, a small town 40 miles outside Athens.

"The Turkish arrivals are almost all young men, who are mostly skilled workers or students, and many of them are intensely political," said Leslie Goodyear, a representative here of the U.N. High Commission for Refugees.

"They're in a rather different situation from the usual kind of refugees who arrive here from Eastern Europe often with professional skills and looking to settle in the United States, Canada or Australia," Goodyear added.

Unlike the refugees from communist countries who spend an average of four or five months in Greece while formalities for resettlement are completed, none of the Turkish exiles has been accepted for permanent residence in a Western country.

"Unfortunately, we're going through a period when there are shrinking quotas for political refugees generally," Goodyear said. "The Greek government has been sympathetic and generous to the Turks, but I'm afraid the outlook for them isn't promising at present."

About 90 Turks, recent arrivals or those without money or friends, live at the Lavrion center, a concrete complex where free food and medical care are available.

Despite centuries-old suspicion between Greeks and Turks, going back to the days when Ottoman Turkey ruled Greece, and current political tensions between the two NATO allies, the Turks say they don't feel unwelcome here.

"People are usually kind to us," said Hassan Omer. "Since I got a job in a restaurant and we moved into Athens, things are better. But the longer we stay the more we worry about the future."

Premier Andreas Papandreou's government grants the Turkish exiles work permits if they can find jobs. Some leftist Greek political groups provide support and funds, although the Turks, as political refugees, are not supposed to take part in political activities.

Greek security officials say they expect about 200 more Turkish refugees by the end of the year.

"Remembering the military dictatorship here, we can't turn these refugees away, but we'd prefer to avoid a new Turkish minority being created in Greece," said a Public Order Ministry official who declined to be identified.

Brazilians toil almost half day to purchase kilo of coffee

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Most Brazilians were caught up with the excitement of the World Cup soccer tournament in Spain last month when the government announced that the inflation rate had hit the 97.6 percent mark.

Then economists predicted it would hit 100 percent by the end of the year.

Inflation has been rising so fast that supermarket owners change prices on their goods every day.

The average Brazilian now has to work almost half a day to earn the money to buy a kilo (2.2 pounds) of coffee — in a country that produces more of it than any other in the world.

"We can afford to eat in a restaurant once a month," said a young woman who lives in nearby Sobradinho. "But the poor are mixing water with milk and they eat meat only once a month."

The woman said she and husband earn a combined salary equivalent to $250 a month, putting them in the nation's middle class. The minimum wage in Brazil is slightly under $100 a month, and 70 percent of the workers earn less than $180 a month.

The price of coffee increased 15 percent recently to the equivalent of $4.50 a kilo — or $2.04 a pound.

It would take almost a week's pay for the average Brazilian to buy an electric coffee maker or small cassette tape recorder.

In a effort to help people cope, Brazil has a wage law that automatically provides for two salary increases a year to keep roughly in line with inflation, but these increases are described by some officials as inflationary in themselves, aggravating the problem.

U.S. wants Israel to give up areas of west Beirut

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, hoping to create a buffer zone between fighting forces in west Beirut, is calling on Israel to surrender areas of the war-torn city that were seized from Palestinian guerrillas earlier this week.

"It is virtually impossible to maintain a cease-fire while the fighting forces are so close together," a State Department official said Thursday.

The administration wants Israel to refrain from further attacks on west Beirut for about two weeks to see if Palestine Liberation Organization fighters can be removed peacefully from the city, The Washington Post said in today's editions.

That time period is the breathing space U.S. special negotiator Philip Habib needs to determine if the PLO will follow through with its promise to leave Lebanon, the paper quoted unnamed officials as saying.

THERE WAS NO immediate response from the Israeli government to the new request.

But Israeli Ambassador Moshe Arens, in an interview with the Associated Press on Thursday, said negotiators are "miles away" from a settlement for evacuating PLO guerrillas from west Beirut.

"We are talking all kinds of nonsense," the Israeli official said in characterizing the eight-week-old negotiations. "If the PLO doesn't get out of west Beirut, Israel will get it out of west Beirut."

Disputing published reports that Habib was on the verge of an agreement when Israeli forces escalated their shelling of PLO positions Sunday, Arens said: "Unfortunately, it isn't so...I wish it were."

The PLO had constantly shifted its demands, intentionally bogging the negotiations down with peripheral issues, Arens claimed. "They really haven't moved off dead center," he said.

One U.S. official, who asked not to be identified, said Habib is "still optimistic that given the negotiating room and a cease-fire he can (now) move forward on the issues," especially on the withdrawal of the PLO fighters.

IN AN AMPLIFICATION of U.S. policy, the official said the United States wants Israel to pull back to the east of all crossing points into west Beirut.

"These movements would restore some distance between the opposing forces, thus helping the cease-fire," one official said.

Alan Romberg, the State Department's deputy spokesman, had no comment on what, if anything, the United States would do if Israel ignored the request.

On Wednesday, President Reagan called on Prime Minister Menachem Begin to maintain a "strict cease-fire in place" that would permi Habib's negotiations to proceed.

Romberg explained that Reagan's call for a cease-fire in place referred to the cease-fire line; in effect last Sunday.

ARENS, IN THE interview, also said the Reagan administration may have contributed to PLO intransigence by not vetoeing a U.N. Security Council resolution that censured Israel and by implying that U.S. sanctions might be imposed.

These actions could create the impression that the PLO is "going to get a new lease on life," he said.

But he said the United States and Israel were in agreement that the PLO should get out of Lebanon. "We have a difference of opinion about the means that should be employed to do it," Arens said.

Administration officials had raised the possibility of U.S. sanctions after Israeli forces launched their assault last Sunday.

But the officials stressed that any embargo of U.S. military or economic aid to Israel was only "theoretical" at this point.

SECRETARY OF State George P. Shultz informed the Senate Foreign Relations Committee on Thursday that the administration was not on the verge of imposing sanctions, congressional sources said.

Most of his testimony dealt with Reagan's letter Wednesday to Begin calling for strict observance of a cease-fire, the sources said.

The committee chairman, Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., said afterward that Arab governments had warned of "very severe retaliation" against the United States if Israel pressed its attack against the PLO.

Percy did not identify the countries. He implied to reporters that there could be an oil embargo similar to the one leveled by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries after the 1973 Mideast war.

Steelworkers raise money for laid-off colleagues

By BOB DVORCHAK

BEAVER, Pa. (AP) — Steelworker Dan Caton paid his dollar, picked up the sledgehammer and took three swings at an already battered Fiat — the latest gimmick to raise grocery money for his laid-off colleagues.

"We try to help one another out," the 30-year veteran at J&L Steel Corp.'s Aliquippa Works said Thursday as he paid one dollar to take three swings at the car. "I feel good hitting it. I'm taking out my frustrdtions on it because too many of my fellow workers have lost their jobs."

The steelworkers are raising money to help feed fellow hardhats whose unemployment benefits have been exhausted in the steel industry's worst slump in 50 years.

In Aliquippa, Nick Crivelli Chevrolet Inc. donated lot space and agreed to match the money raised from smashing the Fiats and Toyotas. "We're just a group of people helping a group of people," said Joseph Druzisky, sales manager.

The foreign cars were donated by Donawitz Auto Wrecking.

Money from the six-day effort ending Saturay goes to the food of United Steelworkers Local 1215, which hopes to raise $100,000.

"All we're trying to do is raise some money to hold us over until the mills turn around. It's a stop-cap measure," said Pete Eritano, president of Local 1211 who recently got a call from President Reagan congratulating the steelworkers for donating $1 to $20 from paychecks for jobless colleagues.

"But the real answer is jobs," he said. "We don't want unemployment compensation. We don't want welfare. We want to work."

The local will begin handing out $25 food certificates to the needy Wednesday.

The food fund is being financed by a payroll deduction plan expected to raise $40,000, a $20,000 contribution from J&L Steel, a $10,000 donation from the local and other sources such as the car smashing.

A $1,000 donation came from Lawrence Zagar, who once lived in West Aliquippa and read about the food fund in the Los Angeles Times.

"The gesture reminded us of our years spent in Wast Aliquippa when neighbors converged to cook, clean, wash, iron and care for a neighbor who had experienced a birth, illness, mishap or death," Zagar srote in a letter from California.

Italy's government may resign

ROME (AP) — The Socialist Party was expected to withdraw today from Italy's 41st postwar government, forcing Premier Giovanni Spadolini and the rest of the five-party coalition to resign.

The Socialists announced Thursday they were "ready to resign," and the announcement of the withdrawal was expected after a caucus of party leaders this morning.

Socialist leader Bettino Craxi told reporters his party was ready to quit the government because the Chamber of Deputies, the lower house of Parliament, rejected a Socialist tax bill that was part of a government austerity package to trim the 1982 deficit, estimated at the equivalent of $47 billion.

Craxi accused members of other coalition parties of reneging on a commitment to vote for the program, thus "violating precise agreements between the parties of the coalition."

"In these conditions the country is literally ungovernable," he said.

Some political analysts said the Socialists hoped that by bringing down the government, they could force an election in which they might make gains that would give them a lever to demand more Cabinet seats or even the post of premier.

The deputies voted 223-198 late Wednesday against a bill proposed by Socialist Finance Minister Rino Formica that would have made petroleum companies pay taxes within 15 days of distributing products to retailers and would have forced them to pay interest rates of 18 percent on unpaid taxes during the grace period.

The present law gives the companies a 30-day grace period, and they do not pay interest. The oil industry claimed the bill would add the equivalent of $825 million to their costs for 1982.

Some politicians claimed the proposal was defeated by dissident Christian Democrats, members of Italy's dominant conservative political party.

The proposal was part of an austerity package that included budget cuts, increases in the value added tax and changes in unemployment insurance.

The Socialists, with about 10 percent of the popular vote in the last national election, are the second largest party in the government and have seven of the 28 Cabinet posts. Their support has been essential to give the government a majority because the Christian Demócrats and the Communists, Italy's second largest party, could not get together.

U.S. Navy airmen presumed dead

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Six U.S. Navy airmen missing for two days after their plane crashed into the Indian Ocean were presumed dead Friday after search planes and ships failed to find any trace of them, the U.S. 7th Fleet announced.

One crew member was rescued, apparently unhurt, shortly after the EA-3B Skywarrior reconnaissance jet plunged into the ocean during a training flight, Lt. Steve Honda of the 7th Fleet Information Office at Subic Naval Base said.

Honda said the aircraft carrier Ranger, four other Navy ships and a plane from Diego Garcia Island abandoned the search for the missing men after finding only scattered debris from the plane.

Dream of women's clubs turns into nightmare

By LINDA DEUTSCH

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the beginning, two women had a dream — a stylish idea suited, they thought, to the feminist climate of the 1980s.

They would open a snazzy private club for professional women — a combination health spa-restaurant-boutique, a plush spot for the camaraderie and contacts that private men's clubs had prized for decades.

But in 90 days, their sweet dream, the Wilshire Club, went financially sour. The demise of the Wilshire and the problems suffered by two others that have opened in the last two years are now leading some women to wonder if they want or need such a club.

The Blaisdell Place Club in Minneapolis has filed for reorganization under bankruptcy laws. The Women's Commerce Club in Atlanta has attracted only 250 members, few of whom attend club events.

"I don't need to have a place to go," said Janice Weiner, a Minneapolis psychotherapist who resigned from Blaisdell Place after disputes about its operation. "I like to go to different places to eat. I like a coed atmosphere. I don't need to be around all women."

JOANNE OHANESIAN, who has an executive search business and served on the Wilshire Club's advisory board, had seen the Wilshire Club as "a place I could be supportive of other women, help them gain access and make money."

"I probably would have used it for meetings," said Los Angeles Deputy Mayor Grace Davis, who served on the Wilshire Club's advisory board. "Men always invite me to places like the Athletic Club for lunch. When they called, I could have said, 'How about the Wilshire Club?' and I know they would have said yes."

"We felt if we could just get the club open, people would start using it, women would join and the cash flow would increase," Jennifer Armstrong said of the Wilshire Club, which closed July 19.

"We didn't find that to be true...We weren't getting a lot of support from women."

Ms. Armstrong and her mother, Joan McCarthy, lost their savings, apartments, cars and the good will of investors who lost thousands.

"These two women have walked away with barely the clothes on their backs," said their attorney, Beth Hansen. "It was a wonderful idea. But there was a lot of bad timing involved."

THE CLUB OPENED while the Equal Rights Amendment and the economy were floundering, she said, and had too little capital.

"In the economic climate of the last few years, you have to have tremendous business skills to open a business and stay in business," Ms. Ohanesian said. "These women were not $100,000-a-year executives with those skills."

The president of Blaisdell Place, Sandra Daddio, said running the Minneapolis club has "been a lot harder than anybody envisioned ...

"We all started with the assumption that given a club, women would flock to it," Ms. Daddio said. "Women have not done that."

In Atlanta, bookkeeper-administrator Claude Nolen said the 1-year-old Women's Commerce Club has had trouble establishing an image.

"Members do not understand fully what it is," Miss Nolen said of the club. "They're willing to support us with their dues, but they're not coming to events we schedule. Very few are really involved."

BLAISDELL PLACE filed for reorganization under Chapter 11 bankruptcy laws March 15, and supporters hope for new financial backing.

The Wilshire Club's problems were far worse.

Ms. Armstrong, 28, and Ms. McCarthy, 48, turned down by traditional financing institutions, took promises of private loans for about $300,000 and announced they would open at a swank Wilshire Boulevard address in September, 1981. That week, an investor who had promised $150,000 pulled out, Ms. Armstrong said, and the opening was delayed.

Employees went unpaid while the club scrambled for money. Some 800 potential members had paid $1,500 to join by the time news stories reported money trouble and a change of location to a former Elks lodge in a less desirable area of town.

Many members demanded refunds, which the two women could not provide. Some angry employees led by the club decorator went to the district attorney demanding an investigation, which so far has produced no charges. The advisory board of prominent local women resigned en masse.

Ms. Armstrong blames the publicity as much as money troubles for the death of the Wilshire Club. Others disagree. Freddie Miller, hired as the club's program director, is suing for $11,300 in unpaid salary.

"They claim the messenger killed the club," she said. "That's baloney. Bad management killed the club. They were undercapitalized from the beginning. They didn't have the in-depth business experience that was needed... I hate to see women fail, but these women brought it on themselves."

Scandal causes bumps in rural Oklahoma

By CHARLIE SMITH

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Folks in rural Oklahoma were rocking happily down their narrow, dusty roads before the county commissioners' scandal swept across the prairie. But these are bumpier times.

County government may be more honest, but some say county roads are going to pot.

There's grumbling about the "good old days," when commissioners would send crews where they probably weren't supposed to go — often onto private roads where a man's ruts were supposed to be his own problem.

"At least the old commissioners tried to keep their promises to the people and they're well thought of," said David Baird, a truck driver who lives south of Oklahoma City in rural Cleveland County.

"This new bunch, they're country club people. They don't care about us."

BAIRD SAID that before the scandal, county graders and patch crews were familiar sights on the dirt road near his home.

But the present commissioners have told Baird that his is a private road — not to be maintained by the county.

"I think everybody is running scared because of all the kickbacks and everything," said Baird.

Federal prosecutors described the scandal as the largest case of government fraud in U.S. history. Hundreds of commissioners were convicted or agreed to plead guilty to submitting vouchers for nonexistent materials, splitting the funds with material suppliers or padding the costs of road materials.

> "At least the old commissioners tried to keep their promises to the people and they're well thought of. This new bunch, they're country club people. They don't care about us."

The Oklahoma Legislature's response to the scandal included creation of county purchasing agents, who have taken the financial responsibility away from commissioners.

As a result, commissioners elected since the scandal are working to improve their images and playing things by the book.

TWO-THIRDS of Oklahoma residents live outside urban areas. State-maintained highways form the major links between the state's 982 towns and cities, but county-maintained roads, which generally are secondary roads, are lifelines for the hardy souls who staked a claim to this dry land, held it during the Depression and continue to work it for a living.

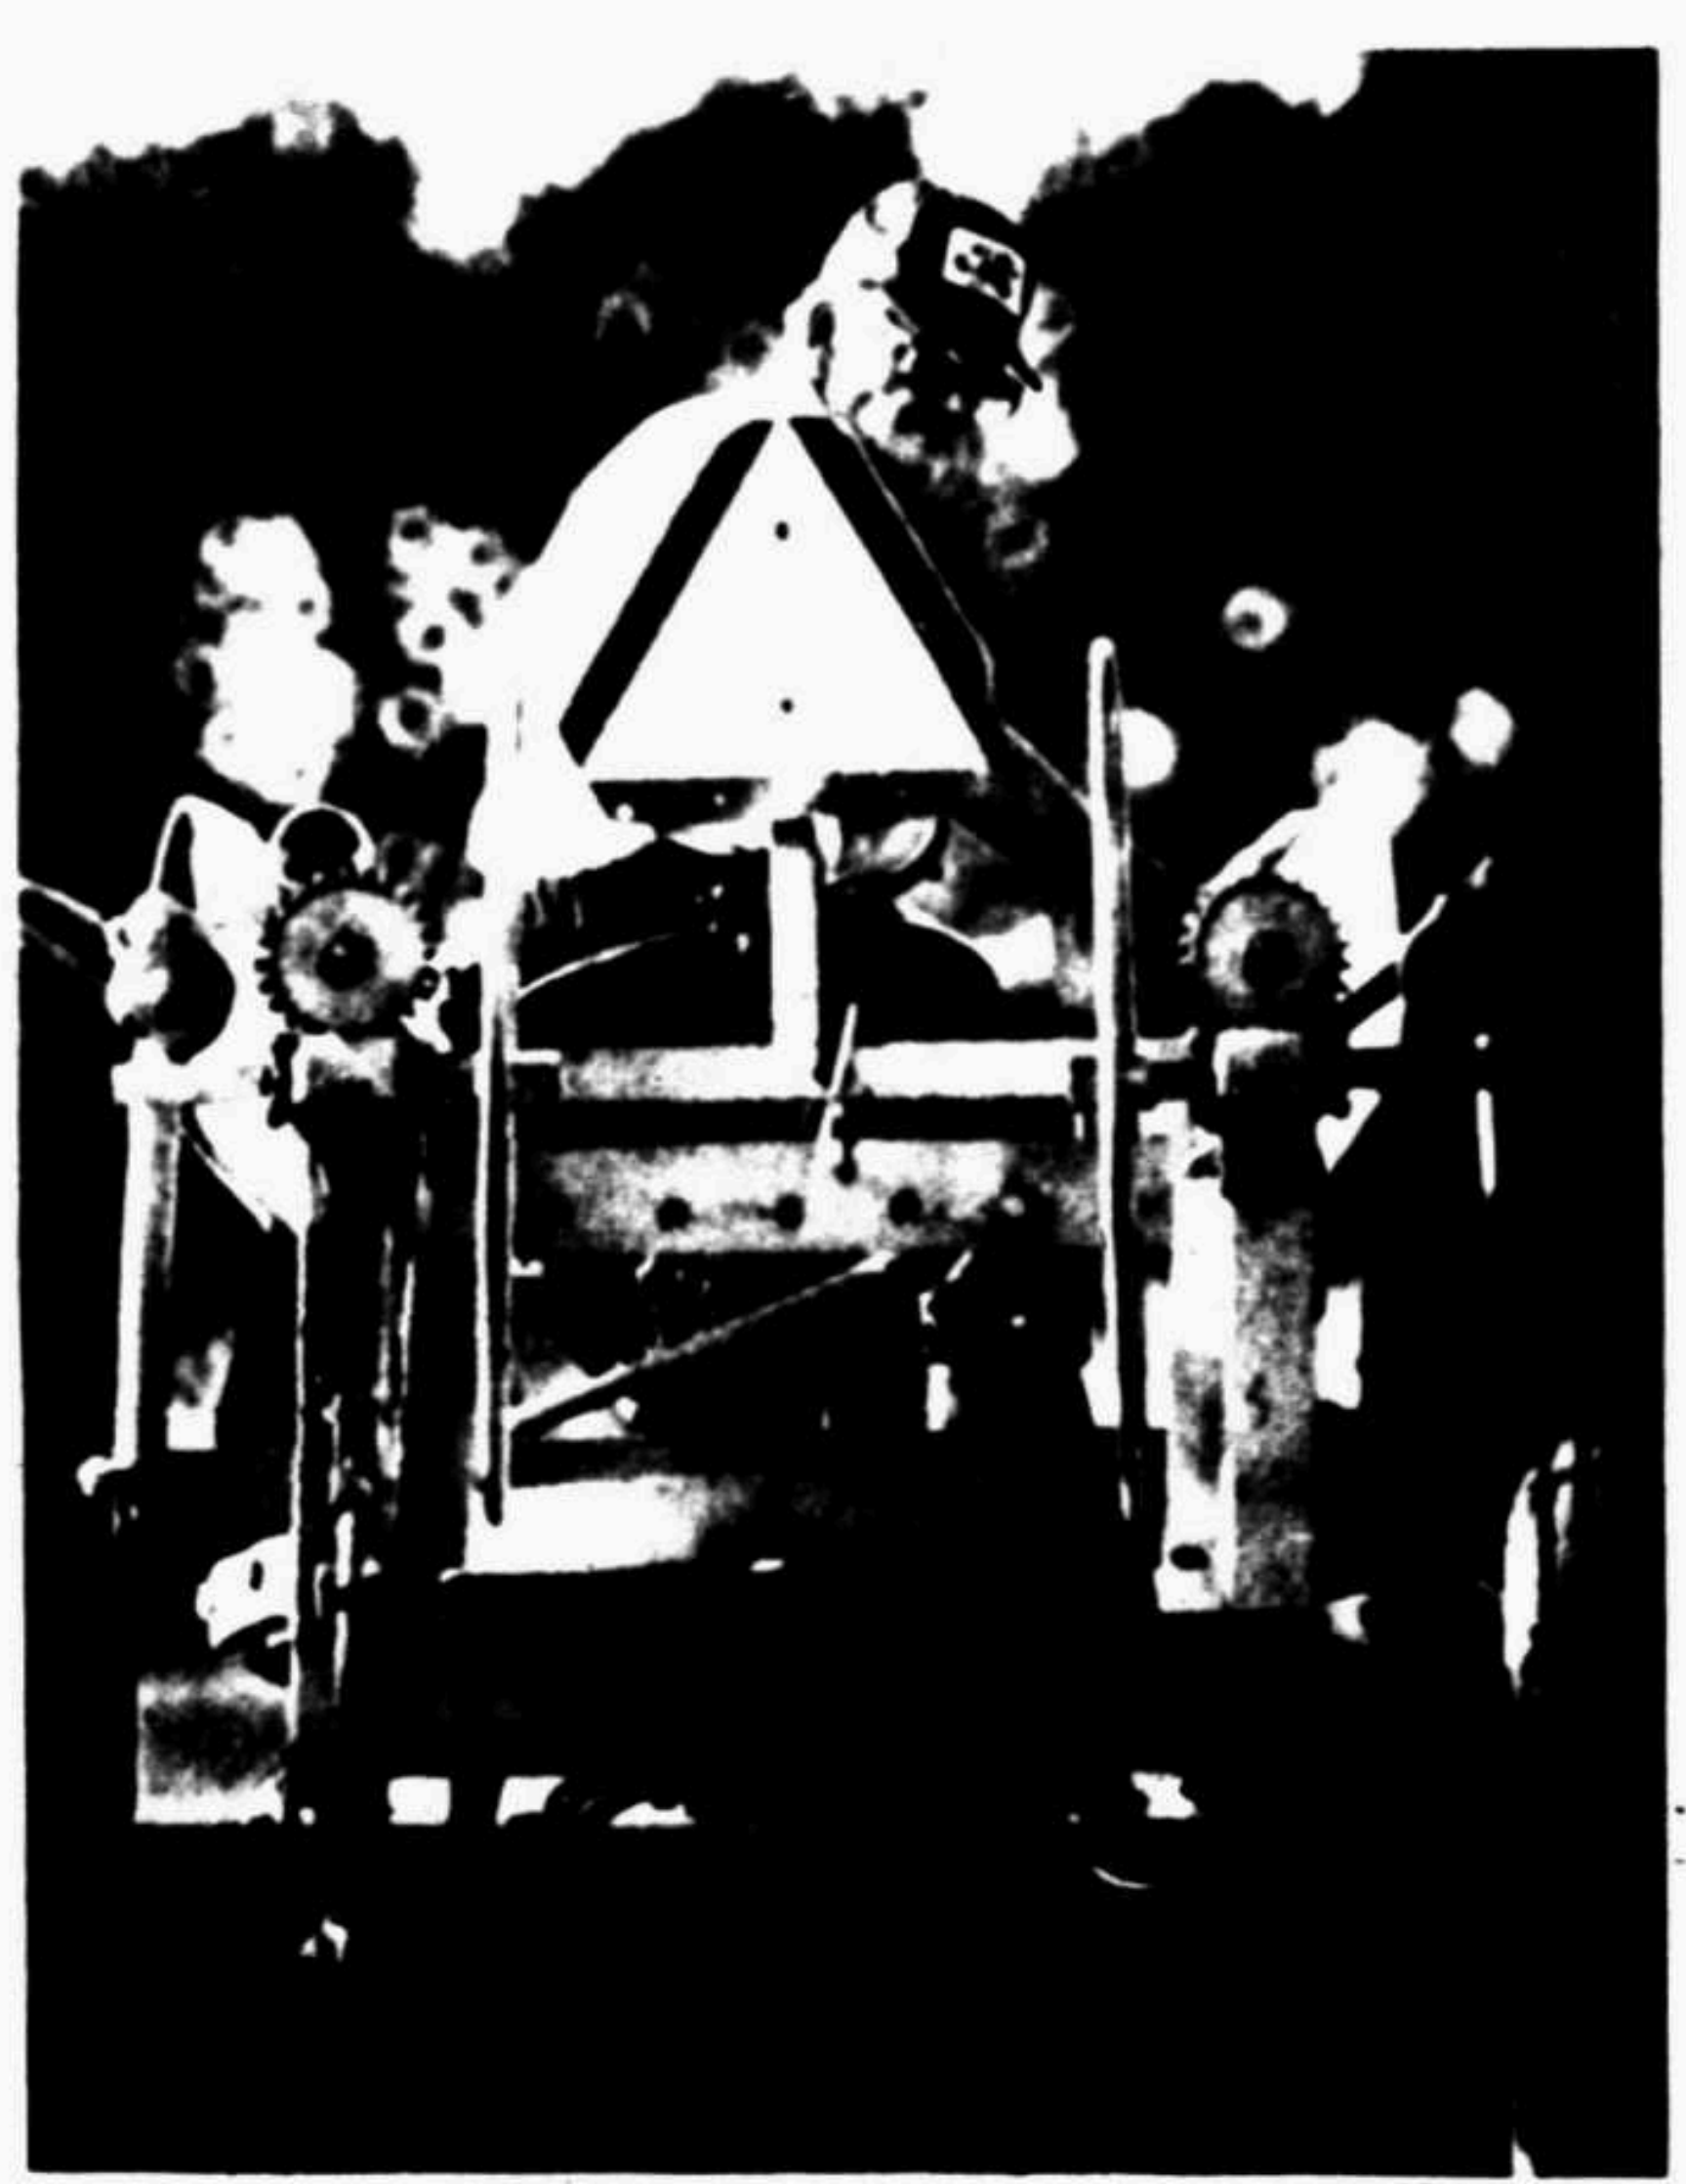
County commissioners oversee road maintenance in their districts, and in the past they had a free hand in dispatching road crews, residents say. The commissioners realized they could point to the roads as tangible accomplishments at re-election time.

Prosecutors and current commissioners agree there's little evidence the commissioners had criminal intent in doing illegal road work. It's more likely they didn't know which roads could be maintained by the county.

Evelyn Orth, chairwoman of the Board of Commissioners of Cleveland County, is aware that work on private roads has been done in the past.

"If the commissioners had only followed the rules when they were set up and not spoiled the citizens the way they did, then we wouldn't be in such a mess," she said.

Mrs. Orth has asked the attorney general's office to define what is a county-maintained road. Until the ruling is made, county road work has been virtually halted.



AP Laserphoto

David Baird, a truck driver, operates the $600 road grader he and his neighbors bought to spread gravel on their roads. Baird says that ironically, the road was in better shape before Oklahoma's commissioner scandal led to a cleanup in county government. Before the scandal, private roads often were maintained by county crews.

BAIRD ISN'T waiting. He and some neighbors bought a $600 grader and take turns dragging it behind a tractor to smooth the road. They're also raising "roughly $3,000" to buy gravel.

"We've been doing a pretty fair job ourselves...We don't want the county out here anymore," said Baird, 58.

Soon after accounts of Baird's plight were published in an area newspaper, he contacted The Associated Press and said a county crew appeared one day to work on the road.

Mrs. Orth, County Manager Carl Remus and Commissioner Ken Wilson — in whose district Baird lives — said they had no explanation for the crew's appearance.

The new commissioners "keep telling us the road is private and wasn't accepted into the county's road system," Baird said. "But I think it's just how you want to read the law.

"One neighbor said she'd lived here nine years and the county never had any question about the thing before."

IN NORTH-CENTRAL Oklahoma's Payne County, Commissioners Kenneth Nelson and Lee Ray Stiles say they've had requests for road maintenance in housing additions. Nelson said he's been told the former commissioner had "thrown a little gravel" on roads, but he refuses to do even that.

"I know some driveways have been done in the past, but (now) we don't go past the entrance," Nelson said.

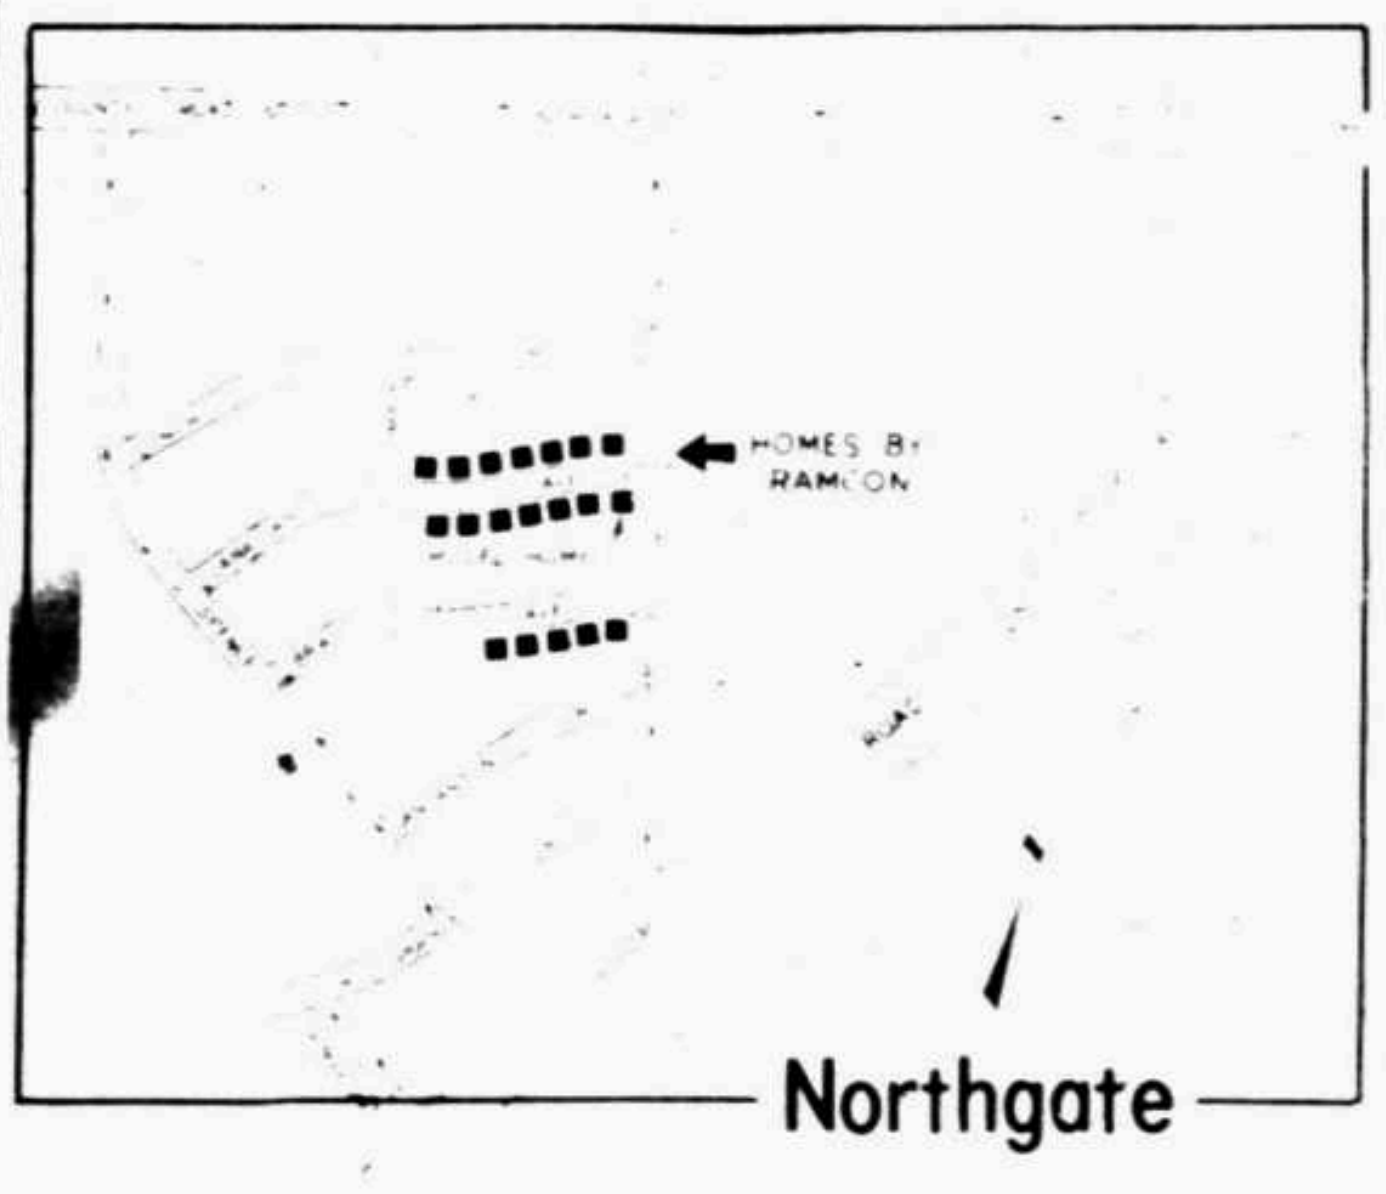
$673.30 Per Month



Northgate

You can't afford NOT to buy any longer!

Total move in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 plus $1450 limited closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first year's payment of $673.30 (principal and interest only) is based on a loan amount of $71,400. The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 10 7/8% for 95% loan to value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15 7/8% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be changed at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage bases upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. Annual percentage rate approximately 16.575%.
