Lebanese confrontations continue

Beirut area bombarded

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Druse artillery and tanks hammered Souk el-Gharb and Beirut's outskirts today in the heaviest attacks in three weeks, and Lebanese jets and armor battled back.

The U.S. ambassador's residence came under shelling during the night, and the U.S. Navy retaliated with a 10-minute barrage, but the Navy guns were silent today.

Lebanon's army said its Hawker Junter jets flew rocket and strafing sorties over Aley, 9 miles southeast of Beirut, where Druse gun emplacements have been firing at the army trying to hold off attacks in Souk el-Gharb.

Capt. Youssef Atrissi, the Lebanese army spokesman, would not say how many planes took part in the attacks. The air force is believed to have three operational Hawker Hunter jets.

Atrissi said the troops at Souk el-Gharb, which overlooks the U.S. Marine base at Beirut airport, had come under heavy artillery barrages and were returning fire with tanks and mortars.

Western military sources said a tank column was leading the fresh attack on Souk el-Gharb. The artillery blasts coming from Druse guns were so fierce that the entire ridgeline above Beirut was smoking from the shelling.

The Druse attack is a major challenge to Lebanon's army and loss of the strategic town would undermine both the army and the government of President Amin Gemayel.

Lebanon's state radio and the independent Beirut newspaper An-Nahar said the U.S. ambassador's residence in suburban Yarze east of the capital was evacuated overnight as shells from Druse militia batteries rained around it.

The reports said one shell struck a garden gate and another hit the swimming pool. Personnel in the mansion were taken to the nearby palace of President Gemayel and no one was injured, the radio and the newspaper said.

Shultz pleads with Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, saying U.S. Marines are in Lebanon on "a peackeeping mission, not a war-fighting mission," appealed to Congress today to unite behind President Reagan's policies in the Middle East.

"What we are doing in Lebanon is right," Shultz said in testimony before the House Foreign Affairs Committee on a compromise resolution authorizing the administration to keep 1,200 Marines in the strife-torn Mideast nation for 18 months.

Shultz said the administration does not expect the compromise to resolve definitively the differing views of Congress and the executive branch "about the requirement of congressional authorization for presidential disposition of our armed forces."

But he said the administration was "prepared to consider practical proposals that enabled us to protect our common, national interest in Lebanon without prejudicing our respective positions on the basic issue of principle."

And he said, "Those who seek to improve their position by force (in Lebanon) will probably not agree to a cease-fire until they run up against a stalemate on the battlefield."

He said the international force of which the Marines are part, along with British, French and Italian troops, "is a truly multilateral, cooperative effort."

"Its task is a peacekeeping mission, not a war-fighting mission," he told the committee.

"Our strategy in Lebanon," said Shultz, "is to help create conditions that will make it in everyone's interest to help produce a kind of equilibrium which will encourage a cease-fire, a political accommodation, and ultimately the withdrawal of all foreign forces."

He said the Marines "cannot tip the balance of forces alone" but are "one crucial pillar of the structure of stability."

Negotiators preparing to alter arms control stance

WASHINGTON (AP) — After consulting with the NATO allies, the United States is preparing to alter its stand in negotiations with the Soviet Union to promote an agreement reducing the risk of nuclear war in Europe.

The changes include a willingness to discuss limits on U.S. bombers that can carry either conventional or nuclear bombs, a U.S. official said Tuesday.

Also, he said, the Soviets would be told that an accord would lead to the United States cutting back on Pershing 2 as well as cruise missiles targeted on their territory.

The fast-moving Pershings are considered a much graver threat than the cruises. A total of 572 missiles are due to be deployed in western Europe beginning in December.

Meanwhile in Moscow Tuesday, Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov urged the West Germans to take "the most vigorous and decisive action" to forestall deployment on their soil of the missiles.

The changes, which grew out of a series of unpublicized sessions with NATO officials, are designed to pump life into the slow-moving U.S.-Soviet negotiations.

They may be announced this week by the White House or by President Reagan when he addresses the U.N. General Assembly next Monday.

On a related front, the administration is preparing to propose to the Soviets that both sides remove two strategic nuclear warheads from their arsenals for each new one deployed.

The move to integrate the so-called "build-down" concept into the U.S. negotiating position at the Geneva arms control talks is certain to improve prospects for congressional approval of the MX missile program.

A number of key senators, including Democrat Sam Nunn of Georgia and Republican William Cohen of Maine, have urged Reagan to adopt the build-down approach. He indicated he might be receptive last spring, while making other changes in the U.S. position in the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks (START).

Since the administration already has proposed a cut of some 2,200 U.S. warheads — the Soviets would have to destroy about 2,900 to reach Reagan's proposed ceiling of 5,000 on each side — the 2-for-1 proposal could be easily incorporated into the U.S. stand, said another official, who also declined to be identified.

The negotiations resume Oct. 5 in Geneva, Switzerland, despite a slump in U.S.-Soviet relations caused by the downing of a Korean passenger jet carrying 269 people.

Edward Rowny, the chief U.S. negotiator to the talks, told a small group of reporters on Tuesday "we certainly are aware of the Korean airline incident. You can't brush it away."

But, Rowny said, "we feel it is in our interest to continue arms control, and we are going to go back to negotiate and do it."

Separate talks with the Soviets on intermediate-range nuclear missiles in Europe resumed Sept. 5. While progress on both fronts has been slow, Reagan wrote the allied leaders to assure them he intends to pursue arms control and is prepared to take a flexible approach.

Richard Burt, the assistant secretary of state for European affairs, met secretly in Brussels on Monday with the disarmament chiefs of the NATO governments, it was learned.

West German sources in Bonn said the allies had given Burt the go-ahead for a new U.S. initiative at the intermediate-range talks.

A U.S. official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said it would also involve an easing of the American demand to count the 108 Soviet SS-20 missiles targeted on Asia against the U.S. ceiling.

Now, the official said, the United States will assert the right to match the missiles but may not exercise it.

Previous shifts in the U.S. position in both the START and the Euromissile talks have been matched by Soviet concessions. But the two sides are still far apart on a number of issues.

Apart from proposing a "build-down," Rowny is known to be prepared to offer a number of undisclosed and limited revisions in the strategic weapons talks.

'Weak' prospects forecast

Midland area employers predict weak employment prospects for the next three months, according to the quarterly Employment Outlook Survey conducted by Manpower Inc., the world's largest temporary service firm.

Pam Phillips, manager of Manpower's Midland Office, said, "Overall, 13 percent of area employers polled plan to hire additional workers during the fourth quarter of 1983. Another 17 percent expect staff reductions, and 70 percent plan no change in staff."

This represents a deterioration in the situation reported for the third quarter of 1983, when 20 percent of employers planned to hire, 7 percent expected reductions and 73 percent predicted no change.

These results for the fourth quarter 1983 appear to be due to both seasonal factors and expectations of business conditions.

August unemployment declines as area's labor force decreases

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

The unemployment rate fell in Midland and Odessa last month as the size of the labor force available to fill jobs decreased in both cities.

Midland's jobless rate was 5.8 percent for August, compared to 6.2 percent in July and 5.1 percent in August 1982, according to figures released by the Texas Employment Commission this morning. Midland ranked 11th in Texas for unemployment.

Laredo continues to suffer with the state's highest jobless level, with a rate of 24.1 percent. Bryan-College Station again topped the list with the least unemployment, 3.6 percent.

In Odessa the unemployment rate was 8.8 percent, ranking that city 15th in the state. In July, the rate was 9.6 percent; a year ago in August it was 6.0 percent.

The TEC said the rate for Texas as a whole was 7.6 percent, an improvement from the 8.3 percent recorded in July.

In Midland, the civilian labor force was 67,800 in August, representing a drop of 200 from the July total. TEC-Midland labor analyst Paul Adams attributed the slight decrease to a seasonal phenomenon when students leave the labor force to prepare for going back to school.

"We're just in a leveling off period," Adams said. "We are back to the pre-boom days where we will see just the usual variances or management adjustments from month to month."

The size of Midland's lab .. pool has increased by 3,100 from what it was a year ago, however, when there were 64,700 people available.

The percentage drop in unemployment is caused by fluctuations in the size of the labor force, according to TEC-Midland manager Ed Miller. "But, I don't think there are so many people leaving the area now. I think it has stabilized."

Miller met with TEC district managers from Houston, Beaumont, Corpus Christi and Longview Tuesday prior to a quarterly TEC meeting. In comparing notes on their respective cities, Miller said Midland's economy fared well. The other representatives were "really marveling at the amount of construction still going on in Midland," he said. "I think our economy is basically sound."

The total number of unemployed in Midland in August was 3,900, down from 4,200 in July, but more than the 3,300 out of work a year ago in August. Miller said the effect of layoffs at First National Bank and, to some lesser extent, at El Paso Products in Odessa, will be felt this month.

The number of Midlanders who are working increased slightly in August, from 63,800 to 63,900.

There were 4,123 continued claims on file for unemployment benefits in August and 535 initial claims filed, versus 3,841 continued claims and 520 first-time claims filed in July.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Showers for parts West Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and central California are forecast for today by the National Weather Service. Precipitation also is predicted for Wyoming, Montana, Minnesota and the East Coast.

High temperature in 70s forecast

Tuesday's cold front which blew up the dust in the Tall City also pushed down the temperatures, setting a new record low for the date.

The overnight low of 40 degrees was nine degrees cooler than 1971's previous record of 49 degrees.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, temperatures will drop into the middle 50s tonight and should reach the middle 70s Thursday.

Increasing cloudiness is expected tonight with a 20 chance of light rain or drizzle.

Winds will be southeasterly at 5-15 mph through Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 79 degrees was 28 degrees cooler than the record high for that date of 107, set in 1953.

Insurgents bombard Beirut area

Associated Press photographer Don Mell, who tried to enter the compound but was turned back by U.S. security personnel this morning, said he saw minor damage caused by a rocket which landed next to the swimming pool.

About 10 yards from the pool, shrub fires were smoldering, but one guard said there was little damage to the residence — "Just some broken glass and a little shrapnel."

A rocket-propelled grenade hit the rear side of an apartment building used as a temporary U.S. Embassy early today, Embassy spokeswoman Beth Samuels said. She said no one was hurt, although the grenade went through two walls of the structure, on west Beirut's main seafront avenue.

Samuels had no comment on the shelling of the residence. But White House spokesman Larry Speakes earlier confirmed that Ambassador Robert Dillon's residence came under fire, prompting a partial evacuation of the compound.

Speakes said Dillon and Richard Fairbanks, assistant to special Middle East envoy Robert C. McFarlane, were at the residence when shells struck, but McFarlane was not in Beirut.

American warships responded to the shelling with a 10-minute barrage against the anti-government gunners in the hills overlooking the capital.

U.S. Marine spokesman Maj. Robert Jordan said the destroyer John Rodgers and the guided missile cruiser Virginia "responded" to firing near Dillon's residence. He said the residence was not hit and the 1,200 Marines in the peacekeeping force went on "Condition One" alert at their positions near the Beirut airport.

Police said Druse gunners from Syrian-controlled positions in Lebanon's central mountains escalated their shelling of east Beirut and outlying Christian neighborhoods after the naval bombardment.

The barrages touched off brush fires around the presidential palace, Dillon's residence and the neighboring Defense Ministry compound, police said.

They said at least 71 people were killed and 59 wounded in shelling and fighting around Beirut between Tuesday morning and this morning, raising the overall Lebanese casualty toll to 764 killed and 1,599 wounded since war erupted on Sept. 4.

However, there were no reports of any new injuries during the night among the U.S., French, Italian and British contingents of the 5,400-man multinational peace force.

Several hours before the late-night shelling began, Druse militiamen and Palestinian guerrillas resumed their attack on Souk el-Gharb after being repulsed twice earlier in the day.

One attack during Tuesday caught U.S. military observers in the strategic Christian town overlooking Beirut. It was believed to be the first time American military personnel were in the front lines since the civil war resumed when Israeli troops pulled out of the mountains.

Souk el-Gharb, described as "vital" by U.S. officials, straddles a ridge that controls access to the capital from the southeast and is known as "the backdoor of Beirut." It offers a clear line of fire on the Marine base beside the Beirut airport nine miles to the northwest.

U.S. officials said Navy fire Monday was ordered because Druse control of Souk el-Gharb would endanger the Marine base.

But U.S. officials in Washington made clear that the Reagan administration was equally concerned by the effect the loss of the town would have on the Gemayel government and its army.

One State Department official said the capture of Souk el-Gharb would put the Druse in position to challenge the government's control of Beirut.

Pentagon sources said the battleship New Jersey has entered the Mediterranean and should join the U.S. Navy armada off Lebanon Friday. The New Jersey's weapons include nine 16-inch guns that can fire a one-ton shell up to 25 miles.

"As a former Marine, I will not allow anyone to cast doubt on how formidable even this small number of Marines can be," Shultz said.

"Nothing would give more reassurance and hope to all our friends in the world than to see the president and Congress working harmony, united behind a strong and purposeful national policy," he told the panel.

Some Democrats, meanwhile, were saying an 18-month authorization is too long.

"We are not in on this deal," Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia said Tuesday. "It may seem very reasonable, after listening to administration witnessess, to go with eight months or 10 months or even a year, but certainly not 18 months.".

Byrd spoke for the Democratic minority in the Senate. His views were echoed by some of the Democrats who make up the majority in the House.

But some Republicans also criticized the compromise. Sen. Charles McC. Mathias, R-Md., sponsor of a resolution calling for a six-month timetable, was described by a spokeswoman, Ann Pincus, as "not comfortable" with the compromise.

Rep. Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said only 10 of 15 Democratic members at a caucus on the issue agreed to co-sponsor the compromise. He said the 18-month hitch for the Marines was the big stumbling block.

"There is great concern over the length of time," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass.

Both President Reagan and congressional leaders nevertheless acclaimed the agreement and Senate GOP Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee predicted it could reach the Senate floor this week. Zablocki said House action might follow next week, although O'Neill said it would not be scheduled "until I have a pretty good survey of where the votes are."

Zablocki said his committee plans to act on the compromise Thursday.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he had asked Shultz and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger to testify later today. Percy said he had scheduled action for next Tuesday, but might move it up if Senate leaders so requested.

Congress will get grudging application of War Act

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — A week of negotiations in an eroding political and diplomatic climate helped President Reagan avoid a potentially sharp confrontation with Congress over the use of U.S. Marines in Lebanon.

Now, the question is, what did he get?

The president was clearly reluctant to declare the 1973 War Powers Resolution in force and seek congressional approval under it for the use of the 1,200 Marines, who are part of the multinational peacekeeping force assigned to the war-torn Middle East nation.

Under the compromise worked out in negotiations conducted by White House chief of staff James A. Baker III, the president will sign a congressional resolution, yet to be passed, acknowledging that the troops "are now in hostilities requiring authorization of their continued presence under the War Powers Resolution."

It also includes a declaration that a key section of the War Powers Resolution "became operative on Aug. 29, 1983." That was the day when two Marines were killed in Lebanon. Two others have been killed since then.

So, Congress is getting from Reagan a grudging recognition of the application of the War Powers Resolution.

Reagan, on the other hand, gets what a White House official said is "a strong expression of support from the Congress" for his use of the troops.

The president is also getting the freedom to deploy those troops for 18 months — a period that will go four months beyond the 1984 election. Under the War Powers Resolution, the deployment could have been cut off in 60 to 90 days unless Congress gave specific approval for the mission.

Some Democrats in the Senate don't like the 18-month timetable. Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., in a speech prepared for delivery today, called it a "cynical, political act" and said the timing "was selected to put it past the 1984 presidential election."

The administration sees it differently.

"What you don't get is a clock ticking," said the White House official, who spoke on condition that he not be identified by name. "You don't get the president required to submit anything" for congressional approval.

The show of support, and the lifting of any constraints that might have been imposed on the duration of the Marines' mission, officials hope, will give the administration more leeway in negotiations involving the Lebanese government and its Moslem opponents.

A senior administration official, who spoke on condition that he not be identified by name, said that although Reagan will sign a new congressional resolution, he will also issue a statement outlining the areas with which he disagrees. Reagan himself said that he has "substantial reservations about parts of the resolution."

The official, talking to reporters aboard Air Force One as the president flew to South Carolina on Tuesday to deliver two speeches, said he disagreed with the finding that the War Powers Resolution was triggered on Aug. 29.

So, while Congress appears to be winning the president's signature over such a statement, the White House is coloring the statement as "simply a recitation" of the facts as seen by Congress but not necessarily by the administration.

Reagan's representatives have argued, despite the four deaths and the wounding of more than two dozen other Marines, that the troops are not in imminent danger of hostilities and that therefore the War Powers Resolution did not apply.

The resolution, passed as the Vietnam War was ending, asserts the role of Congress in permitting the use of U.S. troops in dangerous situations overseas. It sets a 90-day limit on how long American troops may remain overseas in battlefield situations unless Congress specifically approves the deployment.

The agreement between the administration and Congress for Reagan to sign a "Joint Bipartisan Resolution" followed almost daily conferences on Capitol Hill. Each day, Reagan's representatives faced greater uneasiness in Congress over the use of the troops, an uneasiness fueled by heightened tensions in Beirut and eventually an escalation in the fighting there.

Growth rate settles at 7 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. economic growth is cooling down to an annual rate of 7 percent after a second-quarter spurt that was even more heated than earlier thought, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said in its preliminary estimate for the still-unfinished July-September quarter that the growth will come from the building of inventories by business firms and from final sales, which covers all buying by consumers and business.

It said the economy grew at an annual rate of 9.7 percent in the April-June period — even faster than the vigorous 9.2 percent it had estimated last month.

Although the spring spurt in activity was welcomed as the economy burst out of the 1981-82 recession, many economists have said growth at such a clip was unsustainable — not to mention undesirable because of the threat that it could rekindle inflation.

In advance of today's report, economists' predictions for third-quarter growth as measured by inflation-adjusted gross national product ranged from 5 percent to 8 percent.

The report said inflation, as measured by the GNP-linked, fixed-weighted price index, is running at 3.8 percent, compared with 4.3 percent in the second quarter.

Robert Wescott of Wharton Econometrics could have been speaking for many economists when he said in advance of today's report that the economy is going through an expected and equally welcome "winding down" process. Council of Economic Advisers Chairman Martin Feldstein explained, "We're seeing the economy shifting gears from the spurt of activity in the second quarter to a moderate, more sustainable pace."

Today's report on GNP covers the entire economy, attempting to measure or estimate the nation's entire third-quarter output of goods and services and comparing it to the second quarter.

Other narrower reports have also signaled a slackening in the economy in recent weeks, including those showing declines in factory orders, home sales and retail sales in July as well as one showing that industrial output in August rose the smallest amount since February.

"This is a natural winding down of the rapid acceleration that we saw in the second quarter," Wescott said.

"That was clearly the kind of quarter that you only get in the early startup of a recovery — it wasn't sustainable — the economy was shaking off the recession," he said.

Other economists agreed, saying that just as consumers led the recovery with surprisingly strong buying earlier this year, the slowdown in growth will also begin with consumers.

"Interest rates had been coming down, employment was growing, the economy was expanding, and consumers were looking forward to the third installment of the tax cut," said Steve Wood of Chase Econometrics.

"They were feeling very jubilant and going out and buying houses, appliances, cars and all sorts of things," he said, "but they ran out of money and the savings rate went down because you can't go on a spending spree forever."

He said the recent slowdown in consumer spending will be the major factor slowing economic growth in the third quarter.

"As the consumer goes, so goes the economy," Wood said.

Fed rumors, easing interest fuel stock market advance

By The Associated Press

Easing interest rates and rumors the Federal Reserve Board is relaxing monetary restraints have fueled a three-day stock market advance that sent the Dow Jones industrial average to a record high of 1,249.19, analysts said.

The Dow gained 15.25 points Tuesday to reach the record, nearly one full point ahead of its previous high set June 16. The closely watched blue-chip indicator had risen more than 34 points in three sessions.

Interest rates fell moderately Tuesday, and analysts attribute the rise in stock prices largely to the interest rate decline.

Speculation swept Wall Street that the Federal Reserve Board had taken a more accomodating stance in monetary policy, pumping more money into the economy in order to push interest rates lower and keep the economic recovery going.

Some analysts cautioned, however, that it was too early to tell what the Fed's intentions might be.

The stock price rally came as the Commerce Department said personal income rose 0.2 percent in August, less than the 0.6 percent rise the month before and the smallest increase since February.

The department also said personal spending fell 0.3 percent in August after rising 0.6 percent the month before. The national savings rate rose to 5.2 percent in August from 4.7 percent in July and a 33-year low of 3.6 percent in June.

The slowdown in income gains was due in part to the telephone workers' strike and reductions in rental income as a result of damage from hurricane Alicia, the Commerce Department said.

Sandra Shaber of Chase Econometrics Associates Inc. predicted that with the telephone strike ended and the effects of hurricane damage already accounted for, income probably will show "another reasonably strong increase in September."

In a similar survey conducted one year ago at this time, 10 percent of employers reported intentions to hire and 7 percent predicted reductions.

Local job opportunities are predicted by the mining industry and durable goods manufacturers. Staff reductions are expected by the construction industry, wholesale and retail merchants, and to some degree the services sector.

A strong upward trend in the post-recession rehiring process is indicated for the second consecutive quarter, according to the findings of the fouth quarter 1983 Employment Outlook Survey.

More than 11,400 employers in 354 U.S. cities participated in the survey and overall, 26 percent plan to increase their workforce during the next three months while only 9 percent expect cutbacks. Current hiring intentions are substantially stronger than those reported last year at this time when only 18 percent planned to add staff while 14 percent anticipated cutbacks.

The current predictions closely match the third quarter 1983 forecasts in which 27 percent of the firms polled said they planned to hire more staff while 8 percent planned staff reductions.

The hiring outlook for the last quarter parallels the survey findings in a like period of the 1976 upturn following the 1974-75 recession.

Man fights odds, crawls away from wreck

FARMINGTON, N.M. (AP) — Fighting broken bones, ant bites and thirst for three days, a 21-year-old man managed to hoist himself from his crushed pickup truck, climb a 50-foot ravine and lie down in the road pretending "I was real sick" to attract rescuers.

Sam Lee suffered two broken collarbones, a compound fracture of the left arm, two broken ribs, a broken leg and a compression fracture of the spine when his truck careened off a New Mexico highway Thursday and fell down a deep gully.

"All these cars were going by and they weren't going to stop and I figured I had to get my butt up there or nobody's going to find me," Lee said Tuesday from his bed at San Juan Regional Medical Center. He was in fair condition.

Clad only in a T-shirt, jeans and tennis shoes and carrying no food or water, Lee said he fell asleep at the wheel of his truck and woke up at the bottom of a ravine about 13 miles south of Cuba, in a mountainous region of north-central New Mexico.

"I left Thursday night and I only remember wrecking," Lee said. "The truck turned upside down. My legs were pinned in the cab and my upper body was on the outside of the cab."

As temperatures dipped into the 30s overnight and soared into the 80s by day, Lee said he tried climbing out of the ravine Friday, Saturday and Sunday, but spent most of his time sleeping or passed out.

Lee said he managed to crawl on his hands and knees about 20 feet to a concrete culvert at the bottom of the ravine that contained a bit of water, which he drank. He said he was not too hungry.

"I was feeling just mostly thirsty. If I moved my arm, it hurt real bad. My back, my knees really hurt," Lee said.

The bank of the gully was "rocky and sandy and real slick and bumpy," said Lee, adding that he was bitten on the chest and armpits by ants. "At one part I had to go up with the weeds. I crawled on my hands and knees."

On Monday, Lee began his final ascent around 6 a.m. or 7 a.m.

"I got myself up and started climbing up the hill. I went about 10 feet up the hill, but I was real weak and passed out. I would go five or six more feet and pass out, five or six more feet, and pass out."

Around 3 p.m., he said he made it to the top and, exhausted, waited for someone to pick him up on the shoulder of New Mexico 44.

"A lot of cars and trucks came by and nobody came to stop," Lee said. "I finally laid down and pretended I was real sick and about four or five cars stopped. That did the trick right there."

During the ordeal, his mother, Jane Lee, said she retraced the route he had taken from his home in Farmington to Deming, in the southern part of the state about 30 miles from the Mexican border.

"Looking at that truck, I don't see how he survived that, let alone the climb up the hill. I was told that was the fifth wreck in that arroyo and he was the only one who survived," she said.

TV station appeals judge's gag order

AUSTIN (AP) — A television station has asked an appeals court to set aside a judge's order that would keep cameras and recording devices out of the Williamson County Courthouse until a verdict has been reached in a grain theft trial.

KVUE-TV Inc. said if Georgetown District Judge William Lott's order is allowed to stand, "a free press in Williamson County will be nothing but an empty promise."

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals withheld an immediate ruling Tuesday and gave Lott until Thursday at 9 a.m. to respond in writing to the station's petition.

Lott's Monday order forbids interviews by those involved in the trial and prohibits all cameras and recording equipment from the courthouse and courthouse grounds until a verdict has been reached in the trial of Victor and Modene Marek of Bartlett.

The Mareks are charged with stealing and selling $150,000 worth of grain from a warehouse.

Jurors in the trial were selected Monday.

KVUE said in its petition to the appeals court that Lott's order "constitutes a blatant violation" of the station's constitutional rights to a "free press."

According to the petition, Williamson County deputies — acting upon Lott's directions — confiscated KVUE cameras and recording equipment Monday after a Channel 24 news team had taken the equipment to the second floor of the courthouse. The petition also alleges that deputies threatened to eject the news team from the building should they return with the equipment. The equipment later was returned to the station.

"Generally speaking, cameras are not allowed in the courtroom, but the hallways and courthouse have been public, and we're part of the public," said news director Russ Stockton. "We're the eyes of the public. This is an arbitrary decision against the electronic media."

The petition said Lott issued his order after "merely 'consulting' with the prosecuting and defense attorneys, neither of whom 'objected.'" There had been no motion to exclude cameras, the petition said.

KVUE said it was not complaining about Lott's order to block interviews, but its complaint is directed solely at the camera prohibition.

TEA official: Programs need to be coordinated

AUSTIN (AP) - A top official of the Texas Education Agency says the state must coordinate vocational education instruction to prevent duplication between high school and junior college.

"Can we afford to have students go through four years of high school and take vocational education then go on to junior college and get the same thing all over again?" said Dr. William Kirby, the TEA's deputy commissioner for finance and program administration.

"We've got to train kids for jobs that exist not just today but with skills that will enable them to handle a job that will exist for a long time," he told the State Job Training Coordinating Council Tuesday.

"It is unbelievable with the technology that we have today what we can build, but we can't fix anything," Kirby said.

"Talk about the automobile...let something go wrong and you cannot get it fixed. You can get it replaced, and take the whole component out and throw it away, but you can't get it fixed," Kirby said.

He said studies show that vocational students are not even being trained for jobs that exist today, let alone tomorrow.

"We have tremendous duplication in effort," he said.

"We've got so many people in the act there is no real system in existence today...many different people, different groups, many different agencies are involved in delivering vocational education," Kirby said. "When you look at the amount of money we are spending you can see we can make a lot of improvements."

Kirby said he checked a Texas school recently, and "They had a hundred kids enrolled and they had two vocational agriculture teachers and two vocational home economics teachers. There is no way with the financial crisis we have in state government today that we can afford that kind of expense."

Houston boy celebrates birthday in 'bubble'

"He seems happy. He seems to accept his life."
— Susannah Moore Griffin, spokeswoman, Baylor College of Medicine

HOUSTON (AP) — A boy who has never been touched by a bare human hand or kissed by his mother celebrates his 12th birthday today in the plastic bubble that protects him from the potentially lethal, germ-filled world.

The party for David will be small and private — his family's identity has been kept secret — but there will be a cake, set on a plate sterilized with a paracetic acid solution and passed to David through an airlock.

"He seems happy. He seems to accept his life," said Susannah Moore Griffin, spokeswoman for the Baylor College of Medicine, which directs his care.

Doctors say David is the world's oldest survivor of severe combined immune deficiency, which involves the lack of two types of white blood cells: T-cells, which ward off infection, and B-cells, which produce antibodies against germs.

The condition, discovered while David was in his mother's womb, makes every germ potentially lethal. So the consecrated wafers he receives when a Roman Catholic priest visits to minister communion are irradiated; his books, clothing and bedding are sterilized with ethylene oxide gas.

From inside a four-compartment bubble that takes up most of the living room and dining room, David can watch movies on a video cassette recorder the family installed last year. He plays an electronic game and has started to play a miniature electronic piano.

For his birthday he expects to receive "Jedi" toys, favorites since he was treated to a special showing of "Return of the Jedi" at a local theater. He will also get video game cartridges, electronic toys and adventure books, Mrs. Griffin said.

Doctors had planned after David's birth to transplant bone marrow from his sister, but abandoned the idea when they found the blood types were incompatible. Bone marrow produces lymphocytes, which are used in the production of antibodies.

Since then, except for the filtering of the air in his bubble and the constant protection from the dirty outside world, David has received no treatment for his condition.

He is monitored for two weeks a year, one each in June and December, at the Texas Children's Hospital in Houston. Two rooms are reserved for him at the hospital the year around.

David has been found to have a superior IQ and the scholastic abilities of an eighth-grader. A tutor teaches him at home for two hours daily, and he spends another 2½ hours each morning and afternoon participating by a telephone hookup in a regular sixth-grade class at a nearby school.

His family takes him on outings in a portable isolator which fits in a van. David himself takes care of the inside of his bubble, passing out clothing, bedding and wastes for disposal.

Dr. William Shearer, David's physician, said a bone marrow transplant appears to be the only treatment possible, but no matching donor has been found.

"David's parents and I are watching developments at other medical centers that have treated SCID patients with unmatched bone marrow treated with monoclonal antibodies," said Shearer.

Jury convicts man of capital murder

MOUNT PLEASANT (AP) — A state district court jury rejected the testimony of six alibi witnesses and convicted Calvin Loyd Padgett of capital murder in the robbery-slayings of three employees killed at a Pizza Hut in this Northeast Texas town.

State District Judge William R. Porter ordered the panel to return today to decide whether Padgett should be sentenced to die or face a life prison sentence for the slaying of Howard Leroy McClaflin, 25.

After the jury returned its verdict Tuesday, about an hour of testimony was heard in the punishment phase before the hearing was recessed for the day.

Six people had testified that Padgett was working on May 10, 1982, at Healdton, Okla., 220 miles away from where the three victims were killed that night.

But prosecutors countered the alibis with the testimony of the bookkeeper at J.D. Bray's Paint Co. in Healdton, who said there were no records that Padgett, 28, worked on the day of the murder. Payroll records showed he was paid for 10½ hours fewer than usual that week, the bookkeeper said.

Padgett, 28, also is charged with capital murder in the deaths of George Dwain Landrum, 42, and Shirley O'Bier Thompson, 24.

The bodies were found in or near a walk-in cooler at the rear of the restaurant. All had been shot.

Officers arrested Padgett late last year with his girlfriend and 15-year-old brother in Oklahoma, where he was charged with the November robbery of a service station-restaurant. He pleaded guilty.

DPS trooper won't be suspended over death

GARLAND (AP) — A Texas Department of Public Safety trooper who accidentally shot and killed a DPS captain will not be suspended, one of the officer's supervisors says.

Trooper Ross Powell has been on indefinite emergency leave since Friday, but has not been suspended or disciplined, said Lt. Ray Ward of DPS regional headquarters in this Dallas suburb.

"I don't think there is any question but that the shooting was accidental," said DPS spokesman Larry Todd in Austin. "It's going to be thoroughly investigated, but there are too many factors that point to it being an accident."

Capt. Robert R. Jones, 58, was fatally wounded Friday when Powell's revolver accidentally discharged, investigators said.

Powell, acting at Jones' request, was demonstrating weapon-handling techniques he learned at a recent "officer survival" seminar, a DPS spokesman said.

Jones was hit once in the chest when the .357 Magnum revolver discharged, witnesses said. He was pronounced dead at Baylor Medical Center shortly after the shooting.

Ward said Powell would return to active duty as soon as he is able.

"It is up to his discretion and that of the department as to when he returns," Ward said. "This is a very traumatic thing for him."

Rescue workers remove one of nine men injured Tuesday in an explosion at Charter Oil Co.'s asphalt unit, located on the Houston Ship Channel.

Nine injured in explosion at Charter Oil Co. refinery

HOUSTON (AP) — Nine persons were injured in a flash explosion and fire Tuesday at the Charter Oil Co. refinery complex here.

Charter spokesman Jim McKinley said the fire was isolated to a small asphalt storage tank and was put out in less than two hours.

Of the nine injured, he said, only two were hurt seriously. One was burned and the other was hurt in a fall. The men were taken to Hermann Hospital by helicopter.

McKinley said the explosion and fire occurred as workers for a subcontractor were applying new insulation on the asphalt tank. He said the insulation was damaged by Hurricane Alicia last month.

Two of those injured, both Charter employees, were treated for heat exhaustion. The other seven were all contractor employes.

Cause of the fire was not known, said McKinley.

Judge refuses to halt dredging

GALVESTON (AP) — A federal judge refused Tuesday to order the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to stop dredging a section of the Intracoastal Waterway, a job which two groups contend is fouling East Matagorda Bay.

U.S. District Judge Hugh Gibson denied the groups' requests for permanent injunctions against the $2.4 million project, which is designed to keep the channel at least 12 feet deep so that barge traffic will not be impeded.

The state of Texas and a group of shrimpers sued the Corps and asked for the injunction Sept. 6.

Gibson ruled that "the corps and the company are in sufficient compliance with federal regulation."

Shrimpers and oyster fishermen testified Monday their catches have dropped from as much as 500 pounds a day to as little as 50 pounds since the work began.

Counties declared disaster areas

HOUSTON (AP) — Four more Texas counties hit by Hurricane Alicia last month were designated "major disaster" areas Tuesday, making them eligible for federal assistance, officials of the Federal Emergency Management Agency said.

Fort Bend, Liberty, Montgomery and San Jacinto Counties were added to the four counties named disaster areas on Aug. 19 — Brazoria, Chambers, Galveston and Houston.

Robert D. Broussard, FEMA coordinating officer, said officials of the four newly designated counties have been invited to a Thursday meeting to be briefed on the type of aid they and residents of their counties can apply for.

Hurricane Alicia came ashore at Galveston Island on Aug. 18 with 115 mph winds, causing damages estimated at over $1 billion. The storm's death toll eventually reached 17.

Body of cleaning woman found

AUSTIN (AP) — The strangled, partially nude body of a 22-year-old cleaning woman was found early Tuesday in the men's restroom of a South Austin office building.

Police identified the victim as Laurie A. Stout, who with her husband, Gary Lee Stout, 24, had a maintenance contract with the owner of First Baniste Place.

Police said a wire was wrapped around the woman's neck and toilet tissue was stuffed in her mouth. Clothing was scattered on the floor beside her.

Jury panel fails to reach verdict in weapons trial

DALLAS (AP) — Jurors in the trial of five men accused of conspiring to smuggle infrared radar units to Libya could not reach a verdict after seven hours of deliberations and were directed to try again today.

The panel began its considerations Tuesday after six days of testimony.

Defense attorneys argued during the trial that the defendants were entrapped by overzealous government informants.

But prosecutors contended the five defendants became involved because of their "love of money."

On trial are former Harris County deputy constables Mike Deans and Tom Johnson, Fort Worth businessman Hugh Briscoe, Houston helicopter pilot Greg Zwarycz and Ed Frasher, an employe of Briscoe's.

The five were arrested three months ago as a result of a sting operation set up by U.S. Customs agents and using a man posing as a wealthy Arab and other government informants who claimed to have a market for the military equipment.

Agents secretly recorded two meetings between the man posing as the wealthy Arab and some of the defendants.

Deans and Johnson testified Monday that the infrared equipment was for commercial use only and that they had no idea it was intended for Libya, anyway.

Deans said they also understood that they were hired only to provide security for the transaction. The two deputy constables run a body guard service in Houston.

Baby girl abducted from day care center

GRAND PRAIRIE (AP) — State officials have begun an investigation to determine whether a day care center in this Dallas suburb violated state regulations that forbid the release of children to anyone except their parents or authorized adults.

Jessica Davis, 3-month-old daughter of Charles and Kathryn Davis, was abducted Monday morning from Jack & Dee Doshier Learning Center in Grand Prairie by a woman who called to say she would be by to pick up her niece for a photo session, police said.

Police said Tuesday they had no suspects. The parents made a tearful plea for their child's return.

Jack Doshier, co-owner of the day care center, said attendants who released the baby to the abductor had "no way to suspect anything was wrong."

"It's not uncommon for parents to call (that someone else will pick up a child). We thought the mother had called this time. It was certainly a setup. It wasn't because of negligence on our part. She was very clever. It could have happened anywhere," Doshier said.

The Texas Department of Human Resources, which oversees day care centers, refused Tuesday to release inspection files concerning the center because its investigation into the abduction is pending.

John Polk, assistant department administrator for the North Texas region, said the day-care licensing office sent an investigator to the Grand Prairie center Tuesday to "evaluate the security arrangements."

"We're reevaluating our security and the way a child is picked up," Doshier said.

Police said the woman who took the baby was in her late 20s, about 5 foot 5 and weighed about 130 pounds. She had acne scars on her face, brown eys and wavy brown hair pulled back in a bun and was dressed in a blue hospital lab coat with the initials OB/GYN embroidered on the front, investigators said.

Texan pleads for Job Corps extension

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A plea for Congress to pass an extension of the Jobs Corps program was made in the House of Representatives Tuesday by Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D-San Antonio.

The House spent three hours debating the Community Renewal Employment Act which includes the Job Corps program, but the vote on it was put off. It may come Wednesday or Thursday.

This is the same Job Corps program that was nurtured by President Lyndon B. Johnson. In the course of operation, the program absorbed federal reformatory schools.

According to Rep. Tom Petri, R-Wis., the operation provided training in job skills to many unfortunate youths from "broken homes and others who had records of violence, yet the program worked and as a result of the training, 90 percent of the youths were placed in jobs."

Gonzalez said the need for jobs which this bill would provide is acute.

"Since 1980, unemployment has increased 50 per cent," he said. "The number of persons forced into part time work has also increased by almost 50 percent. The real wages of Americans are not improving at all.

"Yet despite this, a great economic recovery is being trumpeted. Where is that recovery?" he demanded. "At least 11 million Americans are looking and not finding it.

Eagle flies aboard plane to wildlife reserve

PATUXENT, Md. (AP) — A slightly injured bald eagle flew from Minnesota to Maryland — aboard an airplane — as part of a program to boost the population of the species.

"It is difficult to find birds for the program, because we're looking for good health but minor problems," said Dr. James Carpenter, research veterinarian at the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Services reserve in Patuxent, the bird's destination Tuesday.

"Something like an injured wing or a broken talon, which would make it impossible for them to survive in the wild."

The bald eagle, named Okie after its native state of Oklahoma, suffered a gunshot wound in its left wing and underwent rehabilitation in Minnesota. Officials there had bad news — the bird's wing became arthritic.

But that was good news for Carpenter, who immediately thought Okie would be perfect for the reserve's research and breeding program.

"I think we very lucky," Carpenter said.

Carpenter said the arrival of Okie at the reserve would raise the total of eagles there to 15 couples, and said he was looking forward to "a banner year."

The reserve has produced 52 eaglets, most in the last three years, since its inception in the mid-1970s.

Carpenter said the program initially focused on research, but has shifted its emphasis to breeding.

Oregon voters may approve school district operating levies

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Students in one coastal county were guaranteed that their classes would resume as voters statewide Tuesday appeared to be approving school district operating levies.

Early returns from the largest of the 56 Oregon school districts seeking levy approval showed all of them passing, reversing a year-long trend of voter rejection of school funding requests in the state.

However, some districts still had yet to count most of their votes and other races were very close.

In Lincoln County, where schools have been closed since Sept. 8, final unofficial results showed the levy being approved 7,099 to 6,069. Voters had rejected the same levy requests on four previous occasions.

School officials said the 5,000 students in the coastal county district would return to class Friday.

In Salem, the state's second-largest district, near-complete returns showed the district's $38.8 million request being approved by a sizeable margin.

Early returns also showed levies being approved in Eugene, Greater Albany, Coos Bay, Oregon City, Gresham Union High, Josephine County.

There were no early returns from several of the other school districts that had set closure dates if their Tuesday requests were rejected.

A larger-than-usual voter turnout was reported throughout the state in the wake of widespread publicity given to the school closure in Lincoln County and the threats of closures elsewhere.

Larry Austin, a spokesman for the state Department of Education, had blamed earlier negative votes on taxpayers upset at the Legislature's failure to enact a tax relief plan. Lawmakers went back into special session last week after they could not to reach accord on the issue during a lengthy regular session.

Tuesday's levy requests affect 38 percent of the state's schoolchildren, or 180,000 students. Ten of the state's 20 largest districts — Salem, Eugene, North Clackamas, Albany, David Douglas, Lincoln County, Klamath County, Josephine County, Oregon City and Roseburg — are seeking operating funds.

School levies have been unpopular with the voters all year. In August, two-thirds of the 70 levy requests that appeared on ballots across the state were rejected.

But Austin called Tuesday's vote "the most serious situation we've had, in terms of of the percentage of students and the number of districts."

The statewide average school tax rate is $13.29 per $1,000 valuation, or $664.50 on a house valued at $50,000 for tax purposes.

Oregon pays 31 percent of the average district's education costs, with property tax receipts maing up about 60 perent in many districts. Of the state's 309 school districts, 251 have financing approved and two don't have votes scheduled until Nov. 8.

Community struggles without bank

BLOOMFIELD, Iowa (AP) — Some merchants are extending credit and others are taking potentially worthless checks, but the strain of going five days without the millions of dollars tied up in the failed Exchange Bank is beginning to show in this small town.

"It's always been great walking around the square in Bloomfield," said Angela Steinkruger, co-owner of PS Notions on the square. "Everyone always had a smile and a friendly 'hello.' But not these days.

"I think we'll survive it, though," she said Tuesday, a week to the day since state banking officials quietly closed the bank's doors and froze its assets.

State Banking Superintendent Thomas Huston declared the 112-year-old bank insolvent, unable to cover $17 million in deposit liabilities. The bank, one of only two in farming-oriented Davis County, was not insured, meaning most of its deposits were not covered against loss by any federal or state agency.

The area suffered some of Iowa's worst losses in this summer's drought, and the bank failure has been attributed in part to loans made to keep farmers going.

While Huston has said the bank's 4,000 to 5,000 depositors eventually could get back 50 cents on each dollar, all accounts have been frozen while auditors determine what assets can be salvaged.

As a result, customers have been unable to withdraw their money, and some workers whose employers used the Exchange Bank have received no paychecks or only partial pay.

"The people are trying to pull together and see what we can work out," said Carol Reames, president of the Bloomfield Chamber of Commerce and owner of R Place restaurant.

Named receiver of the failed bank, Huston is attempting to sell its assets and draw a new bank to the southeastern Iowa community of 2,850. Potential bidders were to contact him by today.

The highest bidder will be granted an emergency state charter so the new bank can open immediately.

Although Ms. Reames' assets were in the Exchange Bank, one of only four private banks and five uninsured banks remaining in Iowa, she said there was enough cash in her restaurant to keep it going.

Other businesses, such as a pharmacy and a few others that operate primarily on credit, "aren't getting any cash in," she said.

The Chamber of Commerce met in an emergency session Monday night and discussed asking the Small Business Administration for loans to tide merchants over.

The town's remaining bank, the Davis County Savings Bank, has made loans to some businesses to keep them afloat, and the town's two grocery stores have extended credit to customers whose accounts were cut off and who were not getting paychecks.

"Keith's (Super Valu) has been letting people write an Exchange Bank check," then holding the check until it can be redeemed, Ms. Reames said. "I don't know how long they can keep doing that."

Many businesses that need money are waiting until the bank's assets are secured and divided before seeking loans, Ms. Reames said.

"Unless they need money right away, lots of people are waiting until the bank opens to see how much is left," she said.

Ex-waiter wants to get in mob

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — An ex-waiter who admitted to helping blow up reputed organized crime boss Philip "Chicken Man" Testa hoped the killing would advance his career in the mob, authorities said.

Theodore DiPretoro, 22, already serving a life sentence for a 1980 slaying, pleaded guilty Tuesday to first-degree murder in exchange for prosecutors' agreement ynot to seek the death penalty.

In a statement read by prosecutors, DiPretoro said Rocco Marinucci, now dead, told him Testa's removal would earn them "money and power" by allowing reputed underboss Pete Casella to take over the Philadelphia-South Jersey crime operation. Police believe Marinucci joined DiPretoro in setting off the fatal March 1981 explosion.

Jewish chapel erected at academy

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP) — President Reagan says a new Jewish chapel at the U.S. Military Academy will honor the contributions of Jews "who have served with distinction in every battle for freedom we Americans have ever fought."

The cornerstone for the privately financed, $5.5 million chapel was set in place Tuesday at the academy, where Jews had to attend Catholic or Protestant services until Jewish worship was approved in 1934. Reagan sent a telegram marking the occasion.

Herbert Ames, a businessman leading the fundraising effort, said one of the two cadets in the academy's first graduating class in 1802 was Jewish. About 1 percent of the current 4,500 cadets are Jews.

Priest faces 30 years in prison

BALTIMORE (AP) — An Episcopal priest faces up to 30 years in prison after pleading guilty to a second-degree ysexual offense and violating the child pornography ylaw in his relationship with a 10-year-old boy.

The youth, who was studying to be an altar boy, testified Tuesday he ended the nine-month relationship with the Rev. Christopher Steven Mann, 66, when he decided it was "dirty." Mann is a founder and dean of the Ecumenical Institute of Theology at St. Mary's Seminary.

Assistant State's Attorney Olga Bruning asked that Mann, who could also be fined $15,000, be sentenced to no more than 10 years because he pleaded guilty under an agreement with prosecutors.

Couple uses drug 'religiously'

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A couple who testified they smoked marijuana "every waking hour" as a religious observance face sentencing Sept. 29 after being convicted of marijuana trafficking.

David and Christine Nissenbaum, both 35, told a Hampden Superior Court jury marijuana represented "the body and blood of Christ" in the Ethiopian Zion Coptic Church. Mrs. Nissenbaum said she added marijuana to the family's food and occasionally gave the substance to their 9-year-old son, Truth.

Before the verdict Tuesday, Judge William Simon told jurors "religious belief was not a defense."

Fire destroys most mall stores

BRUNSWICK, Ga. (AP) — The biggest fire in the city's history destroyed 39 of 43 stores at the Brunswick Mall, where officials had been planning to install a sprinkler system, fire officials said.

About 1,000 jobs will be lost because of Tuesday's early-morning fire, said Fire Chief Tom Nichols. He said the fire's cause was being sought, and estimated that "at least two-thirds" of the 16-year-old mall was "a 100 percent loss."

Nichols said firefighters had trouble getting equipment inside the mall, where manager Ken Tollison estimated that damage would run "in the millions."

Attorney: Ms. Foat's rights violated

GRETNA, La. (AP) — The long-time refusal of Ginny Foat's ex-husband to testify against her does not justify a six-year delay in trying the California feminist leader on a murder charge, her lawyer says.

Attorney John Reed told the state 5th Circuit Court of Appeal on Tuesday that Ms. Foat's right to a speedy trial was violated while the state waited since 1977 for John Sidote to break his silence.

Ms. Foat, former president of the California chapter of the National Organization for Women, is to go on trial Oct. 11 for the 1965 clubbing death of an Argentine businessman outside a New Orleans bar. Although authorities had known of the accusation since 1977, Ms. Foat was not arrested until Jan. 11 when Sidote agreed to testify against her.

Recovery could be endangered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress could endanger the nation's economic recovery if it doesn't pass tax increases yand spending cuts laid out in budget blueprints earlier this year, Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., says.

y "Congress has to show some guts and back our June promises with September performances," Chiles, ranking Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee, said Tuesday.

Chiles also attacked Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan's view that there is no link between deficits and high interest rates as "patently absurd."

Congress asked to restore program

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some educators have asked Congress to restore a program that used to funnel millions of dollars to school districts attempting to desegregate.

That desegregation aid, called the Emergency School Aid Act, was the largest of the 29 education programs that Congress folded into a block grant in 1981 at the urging of President Reagan. The programs separately received $724 million in 1980, but were trimmed to a combined level of $479 million in fiscal 1983 under the block grant program.

Parents plan party for fatally ill baby

TEANECK, N.J. (AP) — A couple who fought for Medicaid coverage that would let them care for their extremely ill baby at home say they are so sure she will survive that they have reserved a restaurant for her first birthday three months early.

Maria Bitting said Tuesday her 9-month-old daughter, Suzanne, has flourished since she was taken out of St. Joseph's Hospital in Paterson on May 16.

"She's come so far, it's unbelievable," Mrs. Bitting said. "When she came home, she could just move her arms a bit. Now she holds her head up perfectly. She kicks her legs, moves her arms, rolls over from side to side."

Suzanne suffers a rare form of muscular dystrophy that weakens her muscles, hinders her breathing and has left her unable to make sounds. Doctors are still predicting she will die before she's 1 year old, Mrs. Bitting said.

Her progress has left doctors "just totally amazed. But the prognosis stands. That's what they say," Mrs. Bitting said.

The Bittings have invited more than 150 people to Suzanne's first birthday party at a North Haledon restaurant.

"It's going to be a big celebration," Mrs. Bitting said. "I brought her home to live, not to die. I just had a feeling in my heart, in my soul."

Suzanne was brought home after Mrs. Bitting and her husband, Barry, won assurances that the baby would continue to receive Medicaid coverage, which is automatically granted for dying babies who are treated in hospitals.

Agapito "Butz" Aquino, younger brother of slain opposition leader Benigno Aquino, addresses about 7,000 students during Tuesday's anti-government rally in front of the post office in Manila. The younger Aquino called President Ferdinand E. Marcos "shameless" if he supports Marcos in November.

Official: U.S. may have found 'crucial portions' of wreckage

WAKKANAI, Japan (AP) — A top Japanese maritime official said today the United States may have located "crucial portions" of the wreckage of a downed South Korean airliner in the Sea of Japan.

Rear Adm. Masayoshi Kato of the Maritime Safety Agency did not specify what the portions might be or whether they had been recovered. But he said the search for debris and victims of the jetliner might be drawing to a close in the next few days.

He noted that the Soviets have set a time and place to turn over "items and documents" recovered earlier from the aircraft, which was shot down Sept. 1 by Soviet interceptors.

"The search operations are reaching a critical point with the news of the Soviets handing over material recovered by their ships," Kato said.

KOREAN AIR LINES Flight 007 was shot down by air-to-air missiles after it wandered into Soviet air space on a flight from Anchorage, Alaska, to Seoul. The 269 people aboard were killed.

The search — pitting a Soviet flotilla against U.S., Japanese and South Korean vessels — is focused on recovering the flight data recorder that might explain why the jumbo jet went astray.

U.S. officials in Washington said the U.S. Navy salvage tug Narragansett had twice picked up and then lost the "pinging" signals from the so-called "black box" carried in the Boeing 747's tail section.

Pentagon spokesman Benjamin Welles said the signals were heard in international waters about 2,500 feet deep.

THERE WERE UNCONFIRMED reports the Soviets had found the black box, but Pentagon sources were skeptical.

"We've heard they may have found something, but it could be a plant," said one source, suggesting the Soviets may announce finding a black box that had been doctored to support Soviet charges the KAL flight was on an American spy mission.

Kato said the Americans had "lagged behind" the Soviets in searching for the flight recorder, "but there is a possibility that the United States has located crucial portions of the aircraft far away from where the Soviet fleet is operating."

He did not indicate whether he was referring to the flight recorder or whether he meant "crucial" wreckage had been recovered or located on the sea floor.

BAD WEATHER CURTAILED the search Tuesday but the weather improved overnight. Japanese observers said the Soviets resumed operations about midnight, lowering a mini-submarine from the rescue ship Georgi Kozumin, one of a score or more Soviet ships in the area.

The Soviet fleet has been searching about 24 miles north of Moneron Island, where the jetliner crashed. The United States has had up to seven ships in the search, the Japanese about 18 and the South Koreans five.

Welles said U.S. search ships are being harassed by Soviet vessels.

He cited "continuing instances where U.S. ships have maneuvered to avoid potentially hazardous navigational situations"He also said the Soviets have created "electronic disturbances," apparently to jam the U.S. hunt for the flight recorder.

SOVIET OFFICIALS IN Moscow told Japan they would hand over unspecified "items and documents" from the airliner at a rendezvous Monday at Nevelisk, on the western coast of Sakhalin Island.

Kato said a vessel from the non-military Maritime Safety Agency probably would be sent.

In South Korea, Seoul newspapers said the government has decided to move carefully in pressing its grievances over the airliner attack because it feared a lukewarm response from non-aligned countries if the Soviet Union made a "cold war issue" out of the incident.

The reports said Seoul had not decided whether to raise the plane issue at the U.N. General Assembly and might wait until the International Civil Aviation Organization makes an interim report Oct. 16 on its investigation of the incident.

In Montreal, the ICAO opened its 24th assembly Tuesday, and Canada proposed sanctions on nations that use force against errant commercial aircraft and on airlines whose planes disregard rules of interception.

Protesters prepare for nationwide rallies

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Opponents of President Ferdinand E. Marcos gathered today for nationwide rallies aimed at keeping alive an anti-Marcos campaign sparked by last month's assassination of opposition leader Benigno Aquino.

Aquino family members joined with other prominent opposition leaders to declare today a "national day of sorrow." The day of mourning came one month after Aquino was murdered at the Manila airport upon arriving from three years of self-imposed exile in the United States.

Today also marks the 11th anniversary of Marcos' declaration of martial law, which lasted eight years.

Hours before the demonstrations were slated to begin, some 50 youths gathered at the main rally site in front of the Manila's Central Post Office. Marchers were to converge on the site from four city churches.

MARCOS PROMISED "MAXIMUM TOLERANCE" by security officials monitoring the demonstrations, and reportedly ordered police assigned to crowd control not to carry firearms.

In interviews Tuesday, Marcos again rejected opposition calls for him to step down after 18 years of rule. The president has not come out of his heavily guarded Malacanang Palace for any public appearance since the Aug. 21 assassination of Aquino.

Some Marcos critics have accused the government of complicity in the assassination, but Marcos has denied the charges, and authorities claim the reputed assassin — killed at the scene by guards — was a notorious killer-for-hire employed by criminals or subversives.

Newspaper ads, sponsored primarily by government-affiliated agencies, today hailed Marcos' "peaceful revolution," but editorials in two newspapers reflected the pressure on the beleagured president.

"TODAY WE SEE A TROUBLED nation, a people visibly agitated by the swift and confusing events that began with the Aquino assassination. The cracks of divisiveness are deepening," said the pro-government Philippines Daily Express.

The Bulletin Today, another pro-Marcos paper, warned against overuse of the military in quelling dissent, saying a tolerant approach "is the only way to remove the irritants between the military and the civilian population.

"THE OPPOSITION'S STRENGTH appeared to increase Tuesday when 7,000 students marched through Manila streets. Meanwhile, office workers in the financial district showered a pro-Marcos rally with debris thrown from high-rise office windows and shouts of "Ninoy, Ninoy," Aquino's nickname.

The student march ended peacefully, but three people were injured and five arrested for vandalism in connection with the Makati financial district demonstration.

The pro-government rally attracted about 2,000 people, but it quickly broke up when white-collar workers began pouring out of office buildings to jeer at the government crowd.

A memorandum from Manila Vice Governor Ismael Mathay had ordered government employees to attend the pro-Marcos rally. "Attendance is a must...Don't wear uniform," the statement said.

Missile stance approved

BONN, West Germany (AP) — A NATO committee has approved a new U.S. initiative in medium-range missile talks with the Soviet Union, West German sources say, but the planned deployment of new U.S. missiles in Europe sparked acts of protest in three countries.

Sources in Bonn said NATO's Special Consultative Group acted at a secret meeting in Brussels. The sources, who requested they not be identified, said the new proposals would "widen, deepen and make concrete" the current U.S. position at the Geneva talks.

A U.S. official in Washington said the changes include a willingness to discuss limits on U.S. bombers that can carry either conventional or nuclear bombs.Also, he said, the Soviets would be told that an accord would lead to the United States cutting back on Pershing 2 as well as cruise missiles targeted on their territory.

The changes, which grew out of a series of unpublicized sessions with NATO officials, are designed to revive the slow-moving U.S.-Soviet negotiations.They may be announced this week by the White House or by President Reagan when he addresses the U.N. General Assembly next Monday.

The Special Consultative Group of representatives from NATO countries was set up in 1979 to consult with the United States on arms control talks.

NATO voted in 1979 to deploy the 572 U.S.-built Pershing 2 and cruise missiles in Europe starting in late 1983 unless the Soviets dismantle their arsenal.

Union furious at Cunard's decision

LONDON (AP) — British shipping unions are furious over a decision by Cunard Line to send the luxury liner Queen Elizabeth 2 to West Germany to be overhauled.

Jim Murray, a leader of the General and Municipal Workers Union, called Cunard's decision Tuesday a "disaster and an insult" and challenged claims that a British shipyard could not complete the work in time.

Cunard denied it was being unpatriotic and said the company had "no choice" but to send the 67,000-ton liner to the Hapag Lloyd Yard in Bremerhaven for a $6.8 million refitting.

State-owned British Shipbuilders was the first choice to do the work but withdrew from consideration because it could not fit a dome over the quarterdeck in time to allow Cunard to meet its cruise schedule, a Cunard spokesman said.

Government frees opposition leader

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The military government has freed opposition leader Rodolfo Seguel after 12 days in jail and dropped slander charges against him.

Seguel, released Tuesday, had consumed only water to protest his arrest Sept. 9 for calling President Augusto Pinochet, Chile's authoritarian ruler for the past decade, an "absurd, blind and fanatic dictator."

Monsignor Juan Francisco Fresno, the Catholic archbishop of Santiago, appealed for Seguel's release after the 29-year-old labor leader suffered a sharp drop of blood pressure on the eighth day of the hunger strike.

Seguel, president of the Copper Workers Confederation, spent 34 days in jail in June and July on charges of threatening national security by organizing anti-government demonstrations. Those charges are pending.

Admiral put under house arrest

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Navy sources say Adm. Horacio Zaratiegui, who spent a year in jail for criticizing Argentina's handling of the Falkland Islands war, was put under house arrest two days after regaining his freedom.

The sources, who asked not to be identified, said Tuesday that navy commander Adm. Ruben Franco ordered the 15-day house arrest because of further criticism Zaratiegui made from military prison before his release Sunday.

Zaratiegui was commander of the southern naval zone during the 74-day war over the islands.Three months after Argentina's surrender June 14, 1982, he issued a document accusing his superiors of incompetence in the struggle.

Nations must spend less on arms

TORONTO (AP) — Prime Minister Robert Mugabe of Zimbabwe says wealthy nations must spend less on the arms race and more on development aid if they want to ensure world peace.

"The great majority of mankind, who live in the South, will not agree to starve to death in peace while those in the North have so much to eat and even more to spend on armaments," Mugabe said.

"North," in discussions of international development, has come to refer to the world's well-to-do countries, most of which are in the northern hemisphere. "South" refers to have-not nations regardless of their location.

Government has fulfilled promise

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Prime Minister Felipe Gonzalez says his 10-month-old Socialist government has fulfilled its promise to hold inflation at 12 percent and would reduce it to 8 percent next year.

In a "state of the nation" address Tuesday opening the fall session of Parliament, the 41-year-old labor lawyer told the deputies there are no rapid solutions to "200 years of problems."

The Socialists control 202 of the 350 seats in the lower house, so their ability to pass laws was never in doubt. But there has been criticism, notably from the Socialist and Communist trade unions, over economic problems, particularly unemployment, which rose to 16.7 percent in August.

American priest dies after fleeing troops

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — An American priest who had joined leftist guerrillas died of exhaustion while trying to flee Honduran troops, a military spokesman said, while in El Salvador authorities searched for a Foreign Ministry official kidnapped by four armed men.

Elsewhere in Central America, the Nicaraguan government said Tuesday it has renewed its invitation to a U.S. diplomat who canceled a September trip after an apparent snub, and in Guatemala the army reported it killed 25 guerrillas in attacks on three rebel camps.

Honduran Col. Cesar Elvir Sierra said James Francis Carney, 48, a Roman Catholic priest from St. Louis, died while trying to escape with a rebel force in the jungles of Olancho province during a government sweep of a mountainous area near the Nicaraguan border.

He provided no other details on Carney's death, but said guerrilla leader Jose Maria Reyes Mata was killed Sunday during the drive.

He claimed both Carney and Reyes Mata had received guerrilla training in Cuba and Nicaragua.

U.S. Embassy officials declined comment on Carney's death.

Carney, a Jesuit priest, was expelled from Honduras in 1979 after being accused of trying to organize a peasant revolt, according to acquaintances. They said that except for a few months in the United States he had spent most of his time since then in Nicaragua.

Sources at the Jesuit Missouri Province office in St. Louis said their records showed he was still a member of the order and had been reassigned from the Missouri Province to the Central American Province some time ago.

Sierra described Reyes Mata as the leader of a 1,200-member guerrilla force that infiltrated Honduras from Nicaragua in July.

Reyes Mata, 46, was convicted in the 1980 kidnapping of Arnold Quiros, a vice president of United Brands, a U.S. banana exporting firm. Authorities said he was freed under a 1982 amnesty.

In San Salvador, a search was under way for Amilcar Martinez Aguera, 60, head of the Salvadoran Foreign Ministry's economic division.

Martinez Aguera, his wife Gilda and a daughter were abducted by gunmen who intercepted their car near their home Tuesday morning, said a ministry spokesman asking not to be identified for security reasons. He said the wife and daughter were released a few hours later.

Martinez Aguera was a professor of international law at the National University, which the government closed in June 1980, claiming it was a center of leftist activity. Two other law school professors, Hugo Francisco Carrillo and Pedro Flores Pena, were abducted last week and their fate is unknown.

None of the five guerrilla groups fighting for power in El Salvador or the right-wing death squads took responsibility for the kidnapping.

Yitzhak Shamir to replace Begin

JERUSALEM (AP) - President Chaim Herzog today appointed Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir as Israel's prime minister-designate, assigning him the task of forming a new government as successor to his colleague, Menachem Begin.

Herzog named Shamir, 67, as the candidate to replace Begin during a brief midday meeting at the presidential residence in Jerusalem.

Shamir is expected to consolidate his alliance with five small religious and right-wing parties within two weeks and then present a new Cabinet to Parliament for a vote of confidence. The law gives him a three-week deadline, with the option of requesting a three-week extension.

In a banner headline, the Yedioth Ahronoth newspaper said Shamir would try to form a government within seven to 10 days.But the Maariv daily reported that two religious parties in the coalition were expected to hinder Shamir's efforts by posing new demands.

After talking during the past three days with all parties in the Knesset, or Parliament, Herzog found a majority of 64 members of the 120-seat body supporting Shamir "without any reservations," according to presidential spokesman Ami Gluska.

Begin formally submitted his resignation last Thursday, saying he was too tired to continue in office. He has been in seclusion for two weeks, reportedly with a rash on his face that prevents him from shaving.

Shamir was elected leader of the dominant Herut party after Begin announced Aug. 28 that he intended to step down.

Herzog telephoned Shamir with his decision this morning after reading through a thick portfolio of minutes from his talks with the parties in the Knesset.

The decision was a bitter setback for the opposition Labor Party, which Begin's Likud bloc ousted in 1977 after 29 years of unbroken rule. Labor, with a 50-to-46-seat advantage over Likud in Parliament, argued that it should have the right to try to put together a ruling coalition.

As the largest single party in the Knesset, Labor argued that its leader, Shimon Peres, could build a government with the backing of nearly two-thirds of the Knesset. But none of the fringe parties aligned with the outgoing government indicated they were ready to defect.

The two religious factions, Agudat Israel and the National Religious Party, held the key swing votes that put Shamir over the top.

THE BETTER HALF

"My boss appointed me to his committee on corporate piracy!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, Sept. 22, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Lighting another candle with you will be actor-writer-director John Houseman, singer Debby Boone, boxing's Ingemar Johannson, CBS U.N. correspondent Richard Hottelet and the Yankees' off-and-on-again manager and all-star pitcher Bob Lemon. A prestigious invitation or job offer will turn your world upside down in a wonderful way. Financial worries fade. An ambitious business or professional venture is worth pursuing. Spend more money on travel. It will benefit your career and enliven romance. Mate is willing to fall in with your suggestions. Do not abuse his or her trust. Show your appreciation for a parent's concern.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Unobtrusive teamwork is the key to financial success. Smooth over differences of opinion to gain cooperation. A love relationship brightens your evening hours. Avoid unfamiliar places and people.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your lively ideas will lead to home improvements or greater financial security. A talk with mate reveals some thorny problems. Be willing to make compromises. A young person is counting on you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A phone call or letter raises your hopes regarding a new attraction. Do not allow your emotions to overrule your common sense. A close relative plays the role of Cupid.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A new assertiveness prompts you to take a big career step. Overreaction could put a damper on what promised to be a fun relationship. Take things one day at a time.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A moneymaking scheme may have gotten off to a slow start. Do not lose faith; it is reliable. Keep confidential information to yourself. Forget past grievances if entering into a new partnership.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You now learn why friendship and finance do not mix. Be prepared to spend money to get out of a partnership or contract. Your intuition is correct where romance is concerned.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get in touch with people who work behind the scenes. Their information will be very helpful. Try to anticipate any changes higher-ups might be considering. Your imagination is a valuable asset.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You feel restless now. Avoid acting impulsively. A social event gives you the chance to meet new clients. Read the fine print before signing agreements. A phone call enlivens your evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A small gift sends your spirits soaring. If you achieve something special today, it will be due to your efforts alone. A compromise helps you patch things up with loved one.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Develop the self-discipline you need to complete important assignments before thinking about recreation. Any spare time can be put to good use by those who work at home. Dine with friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Seek the advice of experts if thinking about marketing your ideas or products. A hobby could be turned into a profitable business. The news from abroad is very encouraging.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A banner day for career or business! Tell loved ones what is on your mind. They need to know. A stroke of luck helps you land new clients.

New shows to debut this week

NEW YORK (AP) — The news consultant, who knows nothing about news, lectures the weatherman on ABC's "Just Our Luck" on what really counts in local-yokel, chit-chat journalism: "People enjoy cute, they appreciate funny, but they remember weird. ... This is what television is all about."

When "Just Our Luck," the so-so comedy that debuts tonight, is telling truths about the news-entertainment business — intentionally or unintentionally — it really gets rolling. When it becomes a gimmicky sitcom about a white weatherman and his black genie, it rolls over.

Keith Barrow (Richard Gilliand), who has few highs or lows as a TV weatherman at a San Diego station, has his humdrum existence shaken by a jive-talking genie named Shabu, played by comedian T.K. Carter.

Gilliand, who looks like Chevy Chase, is white and dull, Carter is black and hip. TV will have made progress when its major black stars aren't required to be adorable kids, upstaged sidekicks or, as in this case, pseudo slaves who are prodded to do their Richard Pryor imitations.

Shabu is used to traveling in faster company than Keith. In previous times, he's catered to Cleopatra, King Arthur and Napoleon. This could have been a funnier program about culture shock, but, instead, the focus is on Shabu working his magic in turning Keith into an exciting weatherman and man's man.

Both new personalities please Meagan Huxley (Ellen Maxted), the consultant who is having a Margaret Houlihan-Frank Burns kind of relationship with the childish station manager, played by Rod McCary.

Keith wants to be just Keith. "I'm a weatherman, not a used car salesman," he says. His goal is "to be an anchorman some day, when I'm qualified."

Maybe in another program. Against NBC's "The A-Team," this remake of "I Dream of Jeannie" should join Barbara Eden in the Genie Hall of Fame in a fast twinkle of the nose.

Glen Larson, whose specialty is the fast-moving pictures of "The Fall Guy" and "Knight Rider," is bringing his heavy touch to the medical profession in ABC's "Trauma Center," which debuts Thursday night.

The objection some had to the cerebral, character-oriented "St. Elsewhere" was that there wasn't enough action, jeopardy or life-saving heroics. "Trauma Center," which will be on at 8 p.m. Eastern time, takes the fast-lane approach to hook the kids, particularly with the use of helicopters and the Herculean bravery of massive Lou Ferrigno, the former Incredible Hulk who plays an ambulance driver.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

If partner doesn't do the expected, there must be a reason. Faith in partner is a cornerstone of good defense. Consider this hand from the Epson Invitation Team Tournament in Japan, won by Canada.

East's three spade opening is typical of tournament bridge. South can do little other than bid four hearts.

Sitting East-West were Canadians Eric Kokish and Sammy Kehela. Kehela led the king of clubs, and it was no mystery to Kokish, who was looking at four spades in the dummy, why his partner had not led a spade — he could not have any. So Kokish rose with the ace of clubs and returned the two of spades.

That was clearly a suit preference signal, so Kehela ruffed the spade and returned a low club. A nasty partner would now play the nine and make you sweat it out until declarer followed with a low club. Thoughtful partners do what Kokish did — they play the ten of clubs to save partner a few moment's anxiety. Another spade ruff and declarer was down one before he had really started to play.

Note the implicit faith that the Canadians displayed in each other. East did not for a moment think that his partner was leading a club from an honor sequence "to take a look at dummy, partner." And West did not hesitate to return a club away from his honors when partner requested that suit by leading the deuce of spades at trick two.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Tough questions

Enacted in 1973 at the end of the Vietnam War, the War Powers Act had a good intent — preventing presidential wars.

But now a decade later, with U.S. Marines dying and being wounded in Lebanon, President Ronald Reagan has found the act a bit limiting. That it is because of its inherent attempt to restrict a president from involving military troops in an undeclared "state of war" without the approval of Congress. In so doing, it gives the various warring factions in Lebanon — or wherever — the perfect opportunity to see the United States' planned moves well in advance and to restructure their plans to take advantage of that scenario.

To a large degree, that's probably why President Reagan has been hesitant to invoke the War Powers Act, which requires U.S. troops caught in hostilities on foreign soil to be brought home within 90 days unless Congress gives its approval to their continued presence.

Of course, the situation in Lebanon isn't one of those in which there are only black or white colors. There are a lot of grays. For one thing, the 1,200 Marines stationed there are part of a multinational peacekeeping force sent in after the Beirut massacre more than a year ago. As such, they are policemen, more spectators than soldiers.

But in another respect, there is no question that those who insist that the Marines merely are caught in "hostilities" in that corner of the world are deluding themselves. Since the Marines were sent to Beirut, four have been killed and more than 25 wounded. For them, the "hostilities" they are involved in really constitute a deadly war.

The hostilities in Lebanon are centuries old and no solution is likely to be dictated in a matter of months. The peacekeeping force is merely buying time.

In one respect the compromise solution worked out earlier this week between White House and congressional negotiators will be beneficial if, in fact, it is put into effect because it will give 18 months for Congress and Mr. Reagan to assess whether the United States should have troops in Lebanon or whether this nation's presence there will be futile. A prime question to answer is whether the War Powers Act is in the best interests of this nation since it limits the president in the exercise of his constitutional mandate to direct the armed forces.

These aren't easy questions, but the answers must be found. Americans are dying in an unrecognized war in Lebanon. Is our presence there worth the cost?

"IN KEEPING WITH THE 3% DROP IN VIOLENT CRIME, I'M ONLY TAKING 97% OF WHAT'S IN YOUR WALLET."

Another View:

Intellectual tools

Many Americans say that the Japanese and the West Germans and others are outcompeting the United States, taking American jobs and that something must be done about it. Something like quotas on foreign products and tariffs and "domestic content" legislation that would require automobiles sold in the United States to be made with mostly American parts.

Americans would do better to look at the domestic content of minds. A number of blue-ribbon commissions have done just that and agree that this nation faces what one of them, the National Commission on Excellence in Education, called a "rising tide of mediocrity."

Now yet another commission, this one appointed by the National Science Board, policy-making body of the National Science Foundation, has been heard from. But will it be listened to? The 20-member panel, headed by William T. Coleman, the former Philadelphia attorney who served as secretary of transportation under President Ford, spent 17 months studying the condition of precollege education in science, mathematics and technology. It arrived at a somber conclusion:

"The nation that dramatically and boldly led the world into the age of technology is failing to provide its own children with the intellectual tools needed for the 21st century."

Like its predecessors, the Coleman commission notes the "severe shortage" of qualified teachers of mathematics, science and technology. It points out that American children are much less likely to take three years of science and math in high school than are children in Japan and West Germany as well as in the Soviet Union, whose military competition the last six presidents repeatedly have warned against. It calls for higher achievement standards and longer school days and years — the average school year in the United States is 180 days, as against 204 in the Soviet Union, 210 in West Germany, and 220 in Japan.

Like its predecessor again, the commission insists that, as Coleman put it, there is a "crying need for national leadership and a national commitment" to overcome the failures of American education.

Early this year, the Reagan administration, which practically had eliminated federal support of science education, proposed a quick-fix program of $75 million to recruit and train science and math teachers. The Coleman panel calls for the commitment of $4.6 billion over the next six years for the same purpose and for improved curriculum standards and a network of "exemplary" science and math schools.

Is the price too high? What's the price of losing American jobs and business to foreign competitors? What, in a world where science and technology are racing ahead, is the price of falling behind? What's the price of mediocrity?

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Assad toying with U.S. diplomats

WASHINGTON — Syrian President Hafez Assad has been running our diplomats in circles as they scramble with growing frustration to bring peace to Lebanon. Once again an American administration is being humiliated by a second-rate strong man.

Jack Anderson

Two months ago, largely to please Assad, the White House withdrew special envoy Philip Habib and turned his thankless job over to the president's deputy national security adviser, Robert McFarlane. But the ex-Marine colonel has had no better luck with the Syrian prima donna.

There were a few meetings, which accomplished nothing. Then Assad simply refused to see McFarlane again. At press time, despite the efforts of our Damascus embassy to arrange another meeting, the Syrian leader hasn't budged.

The reason that is given shows calculated contempt: Assad is at the beach, the embassy was told. American Marines are being killed; Lebanon is being torn apart by factional violence; the whole Middle East is about to blow up — and the man who has been inciting the insurrection is enjoying the sunshine and surf at Syria's Mediterranean resort of Latakia.

State Department sources told my associate Lucette Lagnado that U.S. Ambassador Robert Paganelli begged the Syrian foreign minister, Abdel Halim Khaddam, to set up another meeting between McFarlane and Assad. The foreign minister refused, explaining that the president was resting at Latakia.

According to a classified report, Ambassador Paganelli protested that surely, at a time of such crisis, Assad could make himself available to the American envoy. Khaddam was unmoved. He offered to meet with McFarlane himself, which of course would have accomplished nothing. Assad alone makes the decisions.

The affront is deliberate, of course. The crafty Syrian dictator is playing a waiting game. He already has the Reagan administration kowtowing ignominiously; Israel has pulled back its troops; Lebanese President Amin Gemayel, the last faint hope for a peaceful, independent Lebanon, has one foot on a banana peel. Just a little longer and Lebanon will fall into Assad's hand like a ripe fig.

The White House is desperate, and Assad knows it. President Reagan is under congressional pressure to pull the Marines out. He is improvising policy day to day as his discomfort grows. Assad figures a few more American casualties — which he can easily arrange — will raise such an outcry in the United States that Reagan will have no choice but to pull out of Lebanon.

An embarrassing reflection of U.S. impotence in Damascus is the fact that Paganelli has considered asking the Saudis to use their influence to arrange a meeting between Assad and McFarlane.

Unfortunately, the Saudis have no real influence with the Syrian dictator. Though they continue to provide him with millions in aid, the Saudis are really terrified of Assad. They know he could foment serious trouble for the shaky Saudi regime through one or more of the Palestinian terrorist groups under his thumb. The effort to use the Saudis as mediators with Assad was described by a State Department official in one word: "pathetic."

With the Syrian president frolicking in the Mediterranean surf, there's a growing feeling at Foggy Bottom that McFarlane's peace mission is doomed, just as Habib's was before him.

Footnote: Even when Assad makes himself available, he gives U.S. peace seekers the runaround. For the past year, he has been playing coy while rebuilding and bolstering his power in Lebanon.

When I first reported this a year ago, Assad had been devastated by the Israelis, the Palestine Liberation Organization had been driven out of Beirut and a pro-U.S. government had been installed in Lebanon.

While Assad has kept the Reagan administration guessing, he has loaded up his arsenals with Soviet equipment, brought in Soviet advisers, stirred up a revolt against the Lebanese government and brought the PLO back into Lebanon through Syria.

THE MONEY MEN: The Federal Open Market Committee is an independent arm of the Federal Reserve System that controls the nation's money supply. The group includes five members named by the banking industry and seven appointed by the president. They will have an additional subject for discussion at their next secret meeting: a lawsuit that challenges the committee's very existence.

The Committee for Monetary Reform and 800 other plaintiffs are hauling the Fed into court charging that its "erratic and unstable monetary policy ... has had profoundly harmful effects on business, employment and consumer welfare."

One of the suit's main legal points is that the FOMC is unconstitutional on two grounds: Five of its members are not appointed by the president, and the Fifth Amendment's guarantee of due process is violated by delegating governmental authority to anyone with a direct interest in the regulatory body's decisions.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

World Bank: Trade beats aid

WASHINGTON — "Two cents more for cotton — better than aid."

That, the World Bank suggests, is a possible solution to the problems faced by the Brazils, Mexicos and other less-developed countries of the world.

William Giandoni

If the Latin Americas and others could only sell the industrialized world more of the goods they produce, they would not need foreign aid, economic assistance, "mini-Marshall plans" and the like.

The idea is not new. Mexico has been talking it up for nigh onto four decades now, since the end of World War II. But it has failed to catch on. Here in Washington there seems to be some prejudice against do-it-yourself economic recovery programs.

What that 2 cents more for cotton could mean for Latin America and the rest of the developing world is indicated by a recent International Monetary Fund report that commodity prices continued their recovery in July.

"The U.S. dollar wholesale price index of 30 primary commodities (which excludes petroleum and gold) rose 1.2 percent in July to 81.0," the Fund reported. The base of 100 for the index is 1980. July's was the seventh monthly increase since November 1982, when the index fell to its low of 72.1, but it was "still far below its monthly peak of 104.3 in February 1980," the Fund reported.

Put another way, those developing countries that export basic commodities now are earning some 20 percent less for their shipments abroad, at a time when what they want or have to import from the United States and other countries is costing more than ever.

Much of this is brought out by the World Bank in its bimonthly Report, just released, which included interviews with two bank economists, Nicholas C. Hope and Chandra S. Hardy.

Hardy, an acknowledged expert on Mexico's problems, recalled that commodity prices are at a 30-year low. Prices are below cost for some commodities like sugar and copper, and "countries simply cannot sell more coffee, tea and cocoa by lowering prices which are already at rock bottom." At the same time, industries in the developed countries are "operating at just 75 percent capacity and with 10 percent of the labor force unemployed, there is little demand for industrial raw materials."

Hardy suggested that "just a modest departure from their restrictive monetary and expenditure policies (of the major industrial countries) would have a fantastic effect on commodity prices, and that alone would ease the situation: Just a 2-cent change in commodity prices does more for developing countries than aid."

Hope, chief of the bank's external debt division, said that "while one often hears that countries borrowed imprudently, I don't think they did." They assumed the recession in the industrialized countries would not be as long as it has been. "They couldn't have anticipated that U.S. monetary policies and the deflation of other countries would bring interest rates to unremembered levels for two years, that lack of demand would drive commodity prices to their lowest level since World War II, that oil would be affected like other commodities, that protectionism would re-emerge and that trade would stagnate for two years in a row.

"And those advising the developing countries on policy, like us here in the bank, didn't anticipate these conditions, either," Hope admitted.

"Even some countries that seem to have been poorly managed did not do all that badly," he said. "Mexico, for example, grew nearly 50 percent in real terms in the six years before 1981."

On the matter of increased trade, Hope warned that all countries cannot maximize exports and cut imports. "The longer imports are restrained — as opposed to boosting exports — the longer a country's development prospects will be poor. ... The longer the developing countries restrict imports, the longer the recovery will be delayed as the industrialized countries will be missing the stimulus to export on their end."

Hope would like to think "that 1983 will be the beginning of an upturn, and that the policies needed to prolong recovery and create momentum for global economic growth will be adopted."

As Hope sees it, "Eventually, economies bounce back, and they do so because they've got nowhere to go but up."

Hardy cited the IMF's role in helping restructure Mexico's debt and persuading banks to go along as offering hope for the future. "We must hope that the IMF can continue to do this and get enough money to lend to all the developing countries in trouble."

That, and 2 cents more for cotton, which is the way the bank summed up her comments on commodity prices.

ART BUCHWALD

What fun seeing what's in a word!

My Aunt Pauline knows I own a personal computer. So she came over to the house the other night and said, "I understand with those machines you can break into other computers and tell them to do things."

Art Buchwald

"It's not that easy, Aunt Pauline," I said. "I know there are a lot of stories in the newspapers that kids have been doing it, and you probably saw 'War Games.' But you have to be awfully lucky with the code word before the other computer will talk to yours. Why do you bring up the subject?"

"I want you to get into the Sears Roebuck computer and tell it I already paid for the slipcovers they keep billing me for every month."

"That's a tall order," I said.

"And while you're at it, give me a $50 credit for all the anguish and agony I've suffered trying to straighten it out."

"I'll try," I said. I turned on my machine and dialed into the system. Then I asked her, "What code word do you think they would use for people who don't pay their bills?"

"Try DEADBEAT," she suggested.

I typed in DEADBEAT. "Any luck?" she asked.

"No, but I think I broke into the computer at the International Monetary Fund. I better try another code name."

"Wait! As long as you're in the International Monetary Fund why don't you cancel Mexico's foreign debt? I'm going there this winter and it would be nice if they weren't so worried about money."

"I can't just cancel Mexico's debt or the IMF books won't balance. I have to give it to another country."

"So give it to Marcos. He deserves it for what he did to the opposition in Manila."

"Okay. I just put Mexico's debt in the Philippine account. Now Marcos owes the IMF $120 billion. Let's get back to Sears Roebuck. You have any other code words their charge people might use?"

"Try BLOOD," she suggested.

"That doesn't seem to be it. I just hooked into the Internal Revenue Service."

"Good. Tell it to give John McEnroe a personal audit. Maybe that will teach him to behave better on the tennis court."

"Anything you say, Aunt Pauline. Now let's feed in the password MONEY. Oh boy, now I've done it. I just broke into the CBS payroll computer."

"No kidding," Aunt Pauline said. "How much does Dan Rather make?"

I typed the question. "It says $1,200,000 a year."

She whistled. "Just for reading the news? How much does Diane Sawyer get?"

"The computer has her down for $500,000."

Aunt Pauline was furious. "She's getting less because she's a woman. Tell the computer to take $350,000 off Dan's salary and give it to Diane."

"Dan will go up the wall when he gets his next paycheck."

"Tough," she said. "Someone has to strike a blow for equal pay between the sexes on television."

"I've done it. But we still haven't solved your Sears Roebuck problem."

"Try the password SLIPCOVERS just for a long shot."

I did and found myself talking to the U.S. Navy's master computer in the Mediterranean. When I told Aunt Pauline where we were she became very excited. "Let's give Colonel Kaddafi a bloody nose."

"Now look," I said. "Giving Diane Sawyer a raise is one thing. But I'm not about to start a war for the hell of it."

"Your cousin Milton always said your Apple was all talk."

"Look, I don't think we're going to break into the Sears Roebuck computer tonight, and I could get in trouble for this."

"Do me one more favor before you turn off your system. Get into the Social Security computer."

"What for?"

"I want to tell the girls at my bridge game how old Raquel Welch really is."

TODAY IN HISTORY

One year ago: Amin Gemayel, brother of assassinated President-elect Bashir Gemayel, was elected president of Lebanon.

Today's birthdays: Actor Larry Hagman is 52. Actor-comedian Henry Gibson is 48. Former White House Chief of Staff Hamilton Jordan is 39.

Thought for today: "Praising what is lost makes the remembrance dear." — author William Shakespeare (1564-1616).

'Museum of the Extinct Race' survives longer than 'thousand-year Reich'

WASHINGTON (AP) — To museum curator Hana Volavkova, the task she was given by the Nazis was like the biblical Noah's. She cataloged their collected artifacts of Jewish civilization for a gloating "Museum of the Extinct Race."

When Hitler's armies seized the Jewish Museum of Prague, its eight Jewish curators were kept at work rather than sent to the death camps. The Nazis wanted exhibits to ridicule the Jews and to prove that they were an inferior people.

So the curators spent the war years assembling relics of Jewish life — from prayer scrolls to kitchen utensils — seized from 153 Jewish communities in the regions of Czechoslovakia known as Bohemia and Moravia.

The Jews went to the death camps, and their possessions went to the museum.

After 15 years of negotiations, the Czech government has agreed to allow about 350 of those objects to go on display outside of Prague.

The exhibition, arranged by the Smithsonian Institution's Traveling Exhibitions Service, will open in Washington and visit Miami Beach, Fla., New York, San Diego, Calif., Detroit and Hartford, Conn. in a 22-month tour.

Project director Anna Cohn told a news conference earlier this week that it was a macabre twist that the Nazis became the overseers of one of the world's greatest collections of Judaica.

She said the project began in 1940 with Hitler's order for the creation of a center of Nazi doctrine and education and Nazi officer Alfred Rosenberg's plan to confiscate Jewish libraries, archives, religious artifacts and personal property.

Ten-foot frogs may soon find party's over

DALLAS (AP) — Ten-foot-tall animated frogs that dance and play musical instruments atop a Dallas nightclub may find their engagement ended unless a court overturns a city of Dallas ruling that they are signs — not art.

If the frogs had been determined to be art, they could have stayed atop the Tango Club.

Despite testimony from the curator of the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts and the frogs' creator, Bob Wade, the Dallas Sign Control Board ruled earlier this week that the frogs are a sign and must come down to comply with Dallas' sign ordinance that forbids businesses from erecting signs on top of buildings.

A city building inspector issued a citation, alleging that the Tango Club violated the ordinance, setting into motion the hearing.

Wade, who has art on display at the Dallas museum and the Pompidou Center in Paris, said the frogs were art and were not meant to be synonymous with the Tango Club, "no more than any other artwork in front of a building."

Wade also created controversy in New York City with his rendition of a giant iguana which sat atop the Lone Star Cafe.

Wade compared the frogs, who dance in a circle holding their musical instruments on the roof of the popular nightclub, with a Henry Moore sculpture in front of Dallas City Hall. The sign board, however, was not impressed.

Alaskan women missing

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — They were slim, young and attractive, women who spent their working hours in topless bars and massage parlors.

Now one of them is dead, found buried in a shallow grave on a riverbank, and six others have been missing for months, police say.

The suspect — the man police believe murdered all seven women and perhaps two more — is described as a "clean-cut and soft-spoken" sweet-talker who won his victims' trust.

"He's still here," says Maxine Farrell, an Anchorage homicide investigator who has been tracking the women for two years. "The publicity might have pushed him under a little, but he's here...

"They're going off with somebody they trust," she said earlier this week "I believe he's in his late 30s, early 40s, probably clean-cut, and soft-spoken to where the girls feel really safe with him. He may be affluent. If not, he pretends to be.

"These girls aren't stupid. He's got to be able to show he can pay," she said. "I don't think they just ran away. These girls are leaving behind things they would not normally leave."

So far, at least seven women — most in their 20s with light hair, most new in town — have vanished under similar circumstances.

The women often are transients "and when they turn up missing, nobody calls it in," Ms. Farrell said.

Hunters last year found one of the seven, 23-year-old Sherry Morrow, buried on a sandbar along the scrub-choked banks of the Knik River, about 25 miles north of Anchorage.

She was fully clothed and had been shot with a rifle, investigators said. Her shallow grave was located in a remote area.

A second partially decomposed body, as yet unidentified, was unearthed nearby this month. She too had been shot and appeared to have been dressed. Police think she is one of the missing dancers, but are awaiting dental records to be sure.

Ms. Farrell said records checks now indicate two more women may fit a profile compiled by police.

They are Kathy Disher, 23, who disappeared late last year, and Delynn Frey, 20, who was reported missing this month, but may have vanished in March.

Also missing are: Karen Baumsguard, 24, of Portland, Ore.; Sue Luna, 23, of Washington state; Tamara Pederson, 21, of Washington state; Teresa Watson, 22, of Sacramento, Calif.; Paula Goulding, 30, of Hawaii; and Angela Fetter, 26.

Ms. Farrell says the women were between 5-foot-4 and 5-foot-7, weighed between 120 and 125 pounds, and were "slim, usually busty."

The first of the seven being considered as one case was reported missing August 1980, the most recent in April.

Brazil has largest Japanese community outside Japan

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — On June 19, 1908, the steamship Kasato Maru out of Kobe, Japan, docked in the Brazilian coffee port of Santos and 781 Japanese peasants disembarked with dreams of fortunes whirling in their heads.

Fortunes came to only a few, but on that day the largest Japanese community outside Japan was born.

Yamato Kinjo, then 15 years old, was one of them.

"It was a journey to the unknown," he recalled recently in his home here. He is now 89.

"ALL WE KNEW WAS that we were going to some large, underpopulated country where we would work hard, become rich and return to Japan in a few years."

The Japanese immigration was a joint effort between Japan's government and the coffee growers of Sao Paulo, according to Atushi Yamauchi, secretary general of the Brazilian-Japanese Cultural Society.

He explained in a recent interview that the Japanese government did not know what to do with thousands of peasants "who had been marginalized by the country's rapid industrialization which began in the late 19th century."

In Brazil, meanwhile, coffee growers were in need of a large and cheap labor force to pick their coffee beans and Japanese diplomats in Brazil informed their government of this need.

"AND THAT WAS HOW the immigration process began," Yamauchi said.

The immigrants signed contracts agreeing to work on the coffee plantations for periods that varied between two to four years. After their contracts expired many of them became sharecroppers and eventually purchased their own farms.

"Some never completed their contracts," Yamauchi said. "There were those who fled from the plantations after one or two years and headed for Sao Paulo where they established their own businesses or found jobs that paid better wages."

KINJO, WHO WAS put to work as a servant in the house of the plantation owner "because I was considered too young to work out in the fields," fled after one year.

"I realized I would never get rich working at the plantation," he said. "We were paid with vouchers which we exchanged for food at the store that belonged to the owner of the plantation. The value of the vouchers was never enough to cover the cost of the food we ate so we were always in debt."

Kinjo eventually made his way to Sao Paulo where he apprenticed himself to a dentist and began learning Portuguese, Brazil's language. In 1923, he graduated from dental school — the first Japanese to graduate from a Brazilian university, he said.

Figures compiled by the Brazilian-Japanese Cultural Society show that between 1908 and 1975, 250,209 Japanese immigrants entered Brazil. During World War II, immigration was stopped but was resumed in 1946.

ACCORDING TO Yamauchi, between 1975 and 1982 about 350 immigrants came to Brazil.

Brazil's Japanese community is now estimated at about 800,000. Of these, some 100,000 are native-born Japanese.

Seventy-six percent of the Japanese live in the state of Sao Paulo. Smaller groups are scattered throughout the country.

MOST JAPANESE in Brazil are active in the agricultural sector but there is also a strong Japanese presence in industry and commerce as well as in the academic and professional worlds. Among these:

— Shigeaki Ueki, president of the government-owned Petrobras oil firm. Previously he served in the Brazilian Cabinet as minister of mines and energy.

— Dr. Milton Nakamura, an obstetrician responsible for Brazil's first test-tube babies and considered one of the country's best in his field.

— Manabu Mabe, an abstract painter whose works have been exibited and sold around the world.

— Tizuka Yamasaki, one of Brazil's leading movie makers. She directed the film "Gaijin," which received critical acclaim in the United States.

— Faio Riodi Yasuda, who served in the Cabinet in 1969-1974 as industry and commerce minister.

— Fujio Tachibana, president and one of the founders of the Banco America do Sul, an important and large bank founded in Sao Paulo by descendants of those first immigrants.

FOR YAMAUCHI, mixed marriages which have become commonplace and the numerous Japanese doctors, lawyers, engineers, businessmen and politicians are evidence of the smooth assimilation of the Japanese into the mainstream of Brazilian society.

"But assimilation does not mean the end of our cultural heritage," he added.

Helping to keep this heritage alive are the three daily Japanese-language newspapers published in Sao Paulo, two weekly television programs, a museum and the colorful neighborhood of Liberdade (Portuguese for liberty) with its typical Japanese arches, gardens, restaurants and shops.

Both Yamauchi and Kinjo said the Japanese in Brazil seldom were discriminated against.

The Japanese community did suffer some hardships during World War II when they were not permitted to gather in groups of more than two.

Students prepare for hi-tech

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — At a time when officials are pressing the need to prepare students for high technology jobs, the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville has doubled its undergraduate enrollment in chemical engineering.

In the meantime, the number of bachelor's degree candidates in computer science in Arkansas has grown from 531 in the 1980-81 school year to 633 the following year, the state Department of Higher Education said. Newer figures weren't available, but department officials expect enrollment to keep growing.

"All the talk about high technology hasn't escaped the attention of young people," Gary Chamberlin, director of the Higher Education Department, said. "They tend to be drawn to areas where they know there will be excellent opportunities. Being prepared in Arkansas is going to be important to attract industry."

Increasing enrollment in UA's chemical engineering department is important because the chemical industry employs more Arkansans than any business aside from agriculture, Jim Gaddy, department director for the past three years, said.

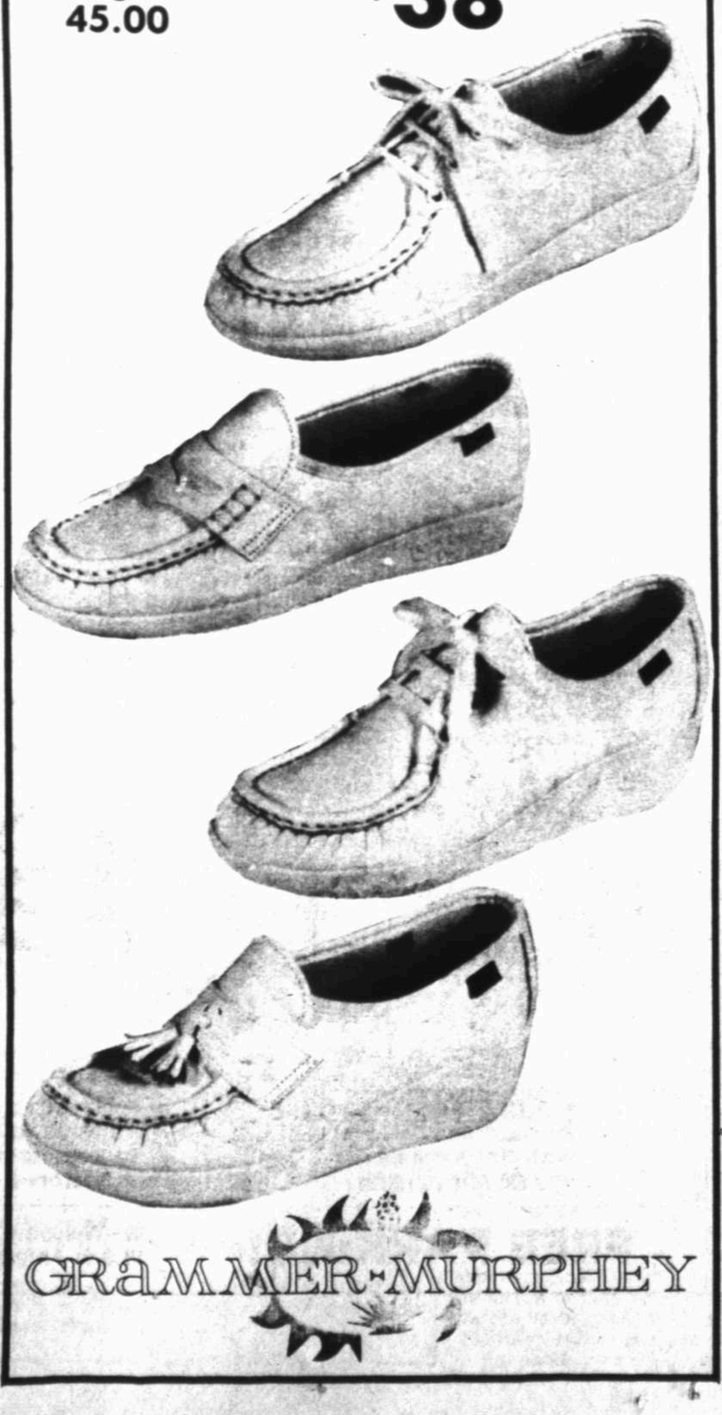

The industry includes paper, mineral and petroleum businesses like International Paper, Reynolds Metals and Murphy Oil.

UA officials say undergraduate enrollment in chemical engineering has doubled to 320 during the past two years and the number of graduate students has increased from seven to 52. Gaddy said there will be 400 undergraduate students in the department this fall, and graduate enrollment will be 65.

WVU cage program censured

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. (AP) — West Virginia University's basketball program has been reprimanded and censured by the NCAA for recruiting violations for the second time in two years.

The NCAA Committee on Infractions said Tuesday night it had uncovered three violations that occurred during the 1982-83 school year involving the way a prospect was approached, transported to and from a meeting with the West Virginia coaching staff and entertained, the committee said.

The penalty does not include sanctions, and the university's basketball team remains eligible for postseason competition and television appearances, the National Collegiate Athletic Association said.

Midland girls suffer first defeat

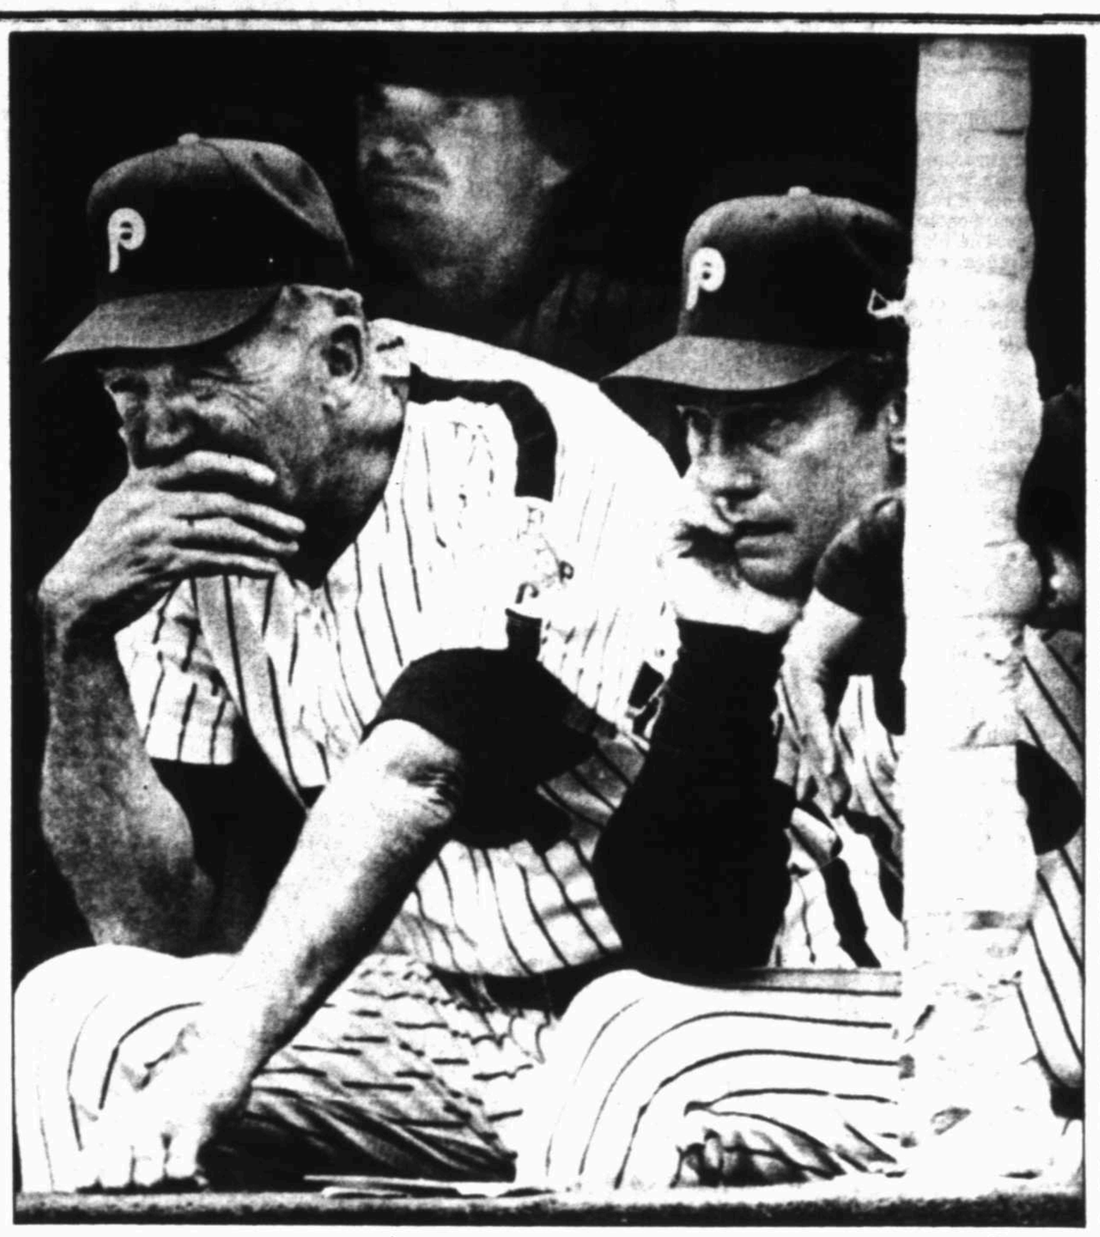

Midland High's girls volleyball team lost for the first time in district play last night at Abilene Cooper to drop to 2-1.

It was the first time this year the team has been swept, 6-15, 6-15. "We didn't play very well," said MHS coach Linda Jolly. "We had played well in Canyon (at the West Texas tournament), but we had to play nine matches.I don't think we recovered from that."

The Bulldogs overall mark fell to 11-7. The evening was not a total disaster, however, as the Midland JV team beat the previously unbeaten Cooper JV 15-7, 5-15, 15-7. "I'm really proud of them," Jolly said.

Midland Lee had a productive night, beating Abilene.

Elsewhere in district volleyball, San Angelo beat Odessa Permian 15-8, 15-9, and Big Spring defeated Odessa High 4-15, 15-8, 15-6.

Oilers swap Manning to Minnesota

HOUSTON (AP) — Quarterback Archie Manning and tight end Dave Casper said they were surprised but happy about a whirlwind trade that sent both of them from the Houston Oilers to the Minnesota Vikings.

"I'm shocked," Manning told the Houston Chronicle Tuesday night after both teams announced the deal. "I never expected something like this. I've been very dedicated to this job.

"I've busted my butt to help the team get out of ths slump, but I'm looking forward to going to Minnesota because they're a winning team."

The Chronicle quoted a source close to the Vikings as saying Houston will receive choices in the second and fourth rounds of the 1984 draft. Oilers Coach Ed Biles refused to confirm that report.

Biles said the deal came about in a single day.

"THEY CONTACTED us today," he said. General Manager Ladd Herzeg negotiated with the Vikings "throughout the day, talking back and forth with them and keeping me informed of what was going on. It was finally finalized this evening."

Herzeg said the Oilers would pay a substantial portion of both players' salaries through 1985.

The Vikings' starting quarterback, Tommy Kramer, is expected to miss the rest of the season because of a knee injury he suffered Sunday against Tampa Bay.

Casper, a native of Bemidji, Minn., said he is delighted with the change.

"I've always wanted to play for the Vikings," he told the Chronicle. "I told Ed Biles that this would be my last year with the Oilers. I guess that had something to do with the trade."

He did not criticize the Oilers, who have lost all three of their games this year and have dropped 10 games in a row.

"I think this is a good deal for both teams," Casper said. "The Oilers have improved as an organization. They're growing."

BILES SAID the loss of Manning, 34, and Casper, 31, would not hurt the team this year.

"The young tight ends, Chris Dressel and Mike McCloskey, are doing a fine job for us," he said. "We want to give them more playing time."

As for the quarterback job, Biles said, "We thought there was very little to choose from from day one between Archie and Gifford (Nielsen). Giff's playing time — when he's played, he's done well for us."

Manning, who has never played for a winning team in his 13-year professional career, agreed he is happy with the opportunity the trade affords him.

"I think if you took a poll of players around the league and asked them what team they'd like to play for, I bet Minnesota would be among the top five," he said. "Year in and year out, they contend for the playoffs."

Manning started at quarterback in all three of the Oilers' games this year, completing 44 of 88 passes for 755 yards with two touchdowns and eight interceptions.

He is coming off his worst performance of the season. Manning threw four interceptions and lost a fumble against the Pittsburgh Steelers Sunday.

CASPER has been hampered by a lower back injury. He was the Oilers' leading receiver last season with 36 receptions for 573 yards and six touchdowns. Casper has caught seven passes for 79 yards this year.

Manning joins the Vikings as the No. 2 quarterback — behind Steve Dils, who has replaced Kramer.

Casper has a chance to make an immediate impact. Starting tight end Joe Senser is out with a knee injury. His replacement, Bob Bruer, has a sprained ankle.

Huskers' Gill undecided

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Quarterback Turner Gill is the man who makes Nebraska's explosive offense click, but he isn't sure whether his future lies in football or baseball.

Gill was drafted in the second round by the Chicago White Sox in 1980 (he turned down a reported $80,000 offer) and in the 17th round last spring by the New York Yankees, although he had previously announced that he would return to Nebraska for his senior campaign.

After three years away from baseball, Gill, a shortstop, batted .284 for the Cornhuskers last season.

"I really don't know what I'll do," he says. "Right now, I just want to concentrate on football. It will be a difficult decision. I really love baseball and I really love football. I made the decision this year that it was best for me to stay in school, get my education and see what happens.

"I'm fortunate God gave me the ability to play both sports. When the time comes to make a decision, I'll make it."

GILL HAILS from Fort Worth, Texas, where "growing up I had wanted to play for Oklahoma. A lot of people in Texas said I made the wrong decision by going to Nebraska. Why did I choose Nebraska? Maybe because I knew I'd be happy there. I trusted Coach (Tom) Osborne, I liked his staff and he said he would let me play both sports."

When Gill was drafted by the White Sox three years ago, "it was like a dream come true. At first I wanted to go. I didn't care about the money. But I sat down and talked with my parents and decided to get my education."

Now, Gill says his "goal each game is to score 35 points." He's off to a good start. Nebraska has crushed Penn State 44-6, Wyoming 56-20 and Minnesota 84-13. Those 84 points in one game are more than 90 of the other 103 major-college teams have scored all season.

HOW-THE-MIGHTY-HAVE-FALLEN DEPT.: Penn State's NCAA record of 44 consecutive nonlosing seasons may be in jeopardy and the three-game losing streak matches the longest in Joe Paterno's 18 years as head coach, but the Nittany Lions' 0-3 start is not the worst by a defending national champion.

After winning the crown with a 10-0-0 record in 1938, Texas Christian lost its first four games in 1939 (to UCLA 6-2, Arkansas 14-13, Temple 13-11, Texas A&M 20-6) before beating Centenary 21-0. The Horned Frogs slumped to 3-7-0 that season, one of only two times since the Associated Press poll began in 1936 that a defending champion has had a losing record the following year.

The other one was Ohio State, the 1942 king, which slipped to 3-6-0 in 1943. The Buckeyes lost their opener to the Iowa Seahawks, a service team, 28-13, and dropped five of their first six games. Notre Dame, 4-4-1 in 1960, was the only other champion which failed to post a winning season a year later.

Besides TCU and Ohio State, the only other national champs to even lose their opener the next year were Minnesota in 1961 (Missouri 6-0); Alabama in 1965 (Georgia 18-17), but the Crimson Tide recovered to win a second consecutive national title; Nebraska in 1972 (UCLA 20-17); Pitt in 1977 (Notre Dame 19-9); Notre Dame in 1978 (Missouri 3-0) and Clemson, which lost to Georgia 13-7 last year. The Tigers then were tied by Boston College 17-17 (the 0-1-1 start was the second worst by a defending champ until this year), but won their last nine games.

THERE WERE some hard feelings in last weekend's Nebraska-Minnesota and Syracuse-Northwestern games.

Nebraska tailback Mike Rozier said Minnesota's defenders "would shout junk in your face like they were out to hurt somebody. They did a lot of talking. We were up 50 points and they were still talking. I guess they wanted to talk, not play."

"I'm real proud of what we've done with our teams in terms of people graduating and going into the community and being productive people. We're in the business of educating young people, so there's some validity in what we've done here." — Rice Head Football Coach Ray Alborn, who's team holds the longest losing streak among major colleges, 14 games. Rice led the eight Texas members of the Southwest Conference last year in the number of athletes who enrolled on scholarship, completed their eligibility and earned a degree.

Baseball Today...

1934 — Daffy Dean of the St. Louis Cardinals no-hit the Dodgers 3-0 in the nightcap of an Ebbets Field doubleheader after his brother, Dizzy, handcuffed Brooklyn on three hits in the 13-0 opener.

1964 — Manager Gene Mauch's first-place Phillies lost 1-0 to the Cincinnati Reds on a steal of home by Chico Ruiz in the sixth inning. It was Philadelphia's first of 10 straight losses, a streak which cost them the National League pennant. They had a 6½-game lead with 12 games remaining but were overtaken by the St. Louis Cardinals.

1970 — Oakland A's phenom Vida Blue pitched a no-hitter in his eighth major-league start, beating the Minnesota Twins 6-0.

Consistent Fuzzy gets nod in LaJet Classic

ABILENE (AP) — Fuzzy Zoeller, the most consistent player on the PGA Tour this year, will attempt to add to his new money-winning lead this week in the $350,000 LaJet Coors Classic.

Rex Caldwell, for one, thinks he will do it.

"Fuzzy has been the No. 1 player this year," said Caldwell, whose last-gasp bid in the final round of the Las Vegas Pro Celebrity Classic fell just short last weekend.

"Everytime you look at a leader board, week after week, there's Fuzzy, first or second, fourth or fifth, somewhere around the lead.

"He's had a great year, just great," said Caldwell, a career non-winner who now has been scored four runner-up finishes this season.

He closed to within two shots of Zoeller with two holes to play at Las Vegas, but Zoeller held on and scored his second victory of the season, a triumph that was worth $135,000.

The biggest check offered on the tour this year pushed his money winnings for the season to $413,852, and enabled him to move from fifth on the list to first, a slender $429 in front of Hal Sutton.

Sutton, who had led the money-winning list since March 28, failed to make the cut in Las Vegas and so did not add to his $413,423 total.

"Winning the money title is something I'd like to do very much," said Sutton, who has taken both the PGA and Tournament Players Championships in this, his second year on the tour.

All's well with Liberty

Dennis Conner, skipper of the Liberty, the defender in the America's Cup competition, checks out one of the winch grinders prior to the yacth's third win over the Australia II.

Liberty leads, 3-1

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The adjectives flowed all summer like water over Australia II's winged keel. The device was called unusual, radical, innovative, mysterious, even revolutionary.

The New York Yacht Club called it illegal.

After all that, Australia II syndicate boss Alan Bond found a new word for it — overrated.

"The difference between the winged keels and conventional keels is very small and it's probably only in maneuverability," Bond said Tuesday as his boat drifted to within a single loss of being eliminated from the America's Cup by U.S. defender Liberty.

"If you can see a 12-meter — Liberty — without a winged keel and Australia with one, you can see how small the differences are," he added. "I think there has been, perhaps, an overaccentuation, other than the turning factor."

In a memo, Liberty navigator Halsey Herreshoff wrote that the Aussie boat "will likely win the America's Cup" if allowed to keep its keel without being penalized.

Herreshoff was wrong.

A victory in today's fifth race of the best-of-seven series would end Australia II's bid to become the first foreign boat to win the Cup since the U.S. schooner America captured it in 1851.

Skipper Dennis Conner, whose 43-second victory Tuesday put Liberty on the brink of stretching the American string of successful defenses to 25, still was curious.

"Have you ever raced a race horse with a blanket around its legs?" Conner said in reference to the keel's plastic shroud. "It's hard not to be in the dark. Yes, we're in the dark and, yes, we'd like to see what we're racing."

Sight unseen, Conner sailed a steady, solid race. The winged keel notwithstanding, Australia II skipper John Bertrand couldn't recover from a crucial pre-start error.

"It's purely a judgmental decision when you're lining two boats up for the start," he said. "We were lining up to start at the starboard end of the starting line" to force Liberty to go astern of Australia II.

"I was just a little late to hit the line when the starting gun went and Dennis took the opportunity and went for it," said Bertrand. "We would have had a much better chance to win the race if we had beaten Liberty the way we planned to at the start.

"We gave Liberty 10 feet that she shouldn't have had, or 15 feet, whatever it was that she crossed us by. That was an opportunity not to be missed and the closeness in the standard of the racing is so tight now, you can't afford to throw 10 or 15 feet away, even in 24 miles."

Liberty crossed Australia II's bow at the beginning of the 24.3-mile contest and led by six seconds across the starting line. That edge allowed Conner to control the rest of the race.

Coetzee preps for title challenge

CLEVELAND (AP) — Trainer Jackie McCoy hasn't been around Gerrie Coetzee that long, but he's heard the talk — the South African heavyweight has a negative attitude.

"In the last month, he hasn't talked that way," McCoy said Tuesday before watching Coetzee train for his third bid for the World Boxing Association heavyweight title in a scheduled 15-round bout against Michael "Dynamite" Dokes at the Coliseum in Richfield, Ohio.

"He hasn't talked about losing"

McCoy, a veteran California trainer of several world champions is helping South African Willie Locke prepare Coetzee, for his "last chance." Locke has been with Coetzee for his last five fights — four knockout wins and a draw.

The word on the 28-year-old challenger was that he went into his title fights against John Tate and Mike Weaver thinking more about losing than about winning.

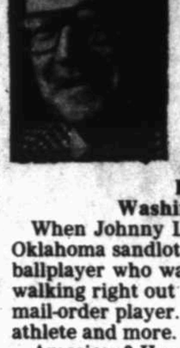

Coetzee admitted to having a negative attitude before he lost to Tate on a 15-round decision Oct. 20, 1979, at Pretoria, South Africa, for the title made vacant by Muhammad Ali's retirement and before he was knocked out in the 13th round in a challenge to Mike Weaver Oct. 25, 1980, at Johannesburg.

Coetzee and people around him feel that he could have been negatively affected by fighting in his homeland, which has been severely criticized and certain areas, such as sport, censured for its race-separation policies.

"He says he's glad he's fighting here," said McCoy.

"He better off being here," said Coetzee's father, Philip. "There' not as much pressure on him."

"You don't think it really gets to you," Coetzee, who currently lives at Brigantine, N.J., said of the pressure of being a home-country hro. "Every day, reading it in the papers, hearing it on the radio, meeting people in the streets."

When Johnny Lee Bench came strolling in from an Oklahoma sandlot in 1965, baseball drooled. This was a ballplayer who was not born, he was invented. He was walking right out of the pages of dime-novel heroics. A mail-order player. Everything you always wanted in an athlete and more.

American? He was part Indian, and you couldn't get more American than that. Good-looking? Hollywood was on the phone before he got a time at bat. He was articulate, sunny, gregarious. They didn't know whether to send him to Cincinnati or Mt. Rushmore. It seemed a shame to make him play for 20 years. Why didn't he just go straight to Cooperstown?

Everything was magic. He busted up every league he was ever in. They retired his number at Peninsula even though he only played 98 games there. He could throw out an ocelot at second base. He could catch a bullet. He introduced the one-handed catcher's style to the grand old game at a great saving of knuckles.

He was Rookie of the Year his first year and MVP his third. He hit 22 home runs in 98 games in one minor league and 23 in 98 games in another three classifications higher. He hit 45 home runs in the majors and led the league in that and runs batted in. He was the youngest MVP ever chosen.

HE WAS ONZEof the Beautiful People. He played golf with ex-presidents when he was barely old enough to vote. He dated Miss World. He was on the cover of Sports Illustrated before he was a regular. He went on Bob Hope's troop tours, did cameos in TV shows, sang duets with the country-and-western greats.

It was heady stuff for a kid from Binger, Okla. What was next – governor? King? Saint? The world looked easy from up there. Made out of rock candy.

There were World Series. Bench hit the home runs that put the Reds in there. The Big Red Machine, that was Johnny Bench. The others were supporting players.

His wedding made Princess Di's look like an elopement. The guest list was in the thousands. The party lasted almost as long as the marriage. The cake looked like a ski slope.

WHEN HE HIT two home runs the final game and batted .533 in the 1976 World Series, his manager, Sparky Anderson, said of the Yankees' catcher, Thurman Munson, "Don't embarrass anybody by comparing 'em to Johnny Bench" and Munson never spoke to him again, but that was the kind of testimonial Bench inspired.

When Bench came through Los Angeles this week on his farewell tour, a kind of Bernhardt swing through the provinces, people could hardly believe it. It seemed too soon. Why, it was only yesterday he was the kid out of Binger with the world in his mitt. What was he doing quitting still 326 home runs short of Babe Ruth, even more behind Henry Aaron? Why, he was barely 35. The great ones don't quit at 35. They go on to 42 like Henry Aaron, 43 like Stan Musial. Pete Rose is still playing and he was a veteran when Bench came along.

The truth of the matter is, the music began to stop 10 years ago. It was at the end of the '72 Series, the second of four Bench would lead the Reds into. John played knowing there was a spot on his lungs that could be malignant. It wasn't. It was a fungus. But Johnny Bench was Johnny Bench only in flashes, if you're talking of the incandescent Bench of 1970, the 45-homer hitter, the 148-RBI man.

Bench hit 154 home runs the first five years of his career, most of them with the game, or the flag, on the line. He now has 388. Johnny Bench drove in 745 of his 1,371 runs in his first five years.

He has never hit .300, but the year after his fungus operation he hit .253. In 1976, he hit .234. He had a scar that ran like a railroad from the front of his chest down and around to the back.

BENCH HAD SO much talent he could be an extraordinary ballplayer even underweight and understrength as a recuperating patient. But, it seemed to observers, the great promise remained unfulfilled after that one misfortune. Bench would always be a dangerous hitter, but he had been a catastrophic one. Pitchers might have walked him to get at Ted Williams.

Catching is one of the lunatic occupations, like kickoff returner, oil-well fire putter-outer. It is especially contraindicated for anybody who can bat .293 with 45 home runs, 35 doubles and the league lead in RBIs. But Bench may have been the best there ever was at all phases of this difficult profession. Sparky Anderson may well have been right when he said you embarrassed other receivers comparing them to Bench.

But Bench finally chafed under the restraints of his trade. He wanted to put on the tools of intelligence instead – a first baseman's, a third baseman's, an outfielder's glove.

It was too late. All that stooping, bending, all those foul balls on the chest area, the one with the stitches in it, all the foul tips off the knuckles, had made Bench a liability at any other station.

THE BIG RED Machine came apart bolt by bolt. Johnny found himself not hitting behind Morgan, Rose, Perez, Foster anymore. The pitchers were not pitching with their tongues hanging out when they got to him. They didn't dare send Bench out in trade, but the Big Red Machine was without its transmission.

So Bench is calling it a career, ringing the curtain down at the end of the second act — "I find I can't face the thought of one more hotel room," he says. Or one more curveball on the outside corner? "I can still get excited by a challenge, but I'm just not able to swing things the way I once did. I'm not able to play a position as well as I'd like."

Bench will still make the Hall of Fame, but he might have needed his own room if he'd been able to put together fifteen 1970s.

Did the 1972 lung infection stall the career, motivate the early retirement?

"It hurt. They cut nerve, they cut muscle. They cut strength. They cut confidence. I thought I shook it off. I had some great years afterward."

But not supernatural. If the Johnny Bench of 1970 wanted to retire at 35, baseball would have gone to court. As it is, it acts as if it needs the mitt.

Tigers tie hit record

By The Associated Press

Larry Herndon's two-run homer capped an 11-run Detroit first inning that featured a major league record-tying 10 consecutive hits as the Tigers blasted the Baltimore Orioles 14-1 Tuesday night in a game called after five innings by rain.

The game was to have been the opener of a doubleheader. The second game will be made up as part of a twinbill on Wednesday.

The Tigers' 10 consecutive hits in 10 official at-bats is a record although there was a walk in between. It tied a record held by five teams.

Alan Trammell started the Detroit streak with a one-out single, and after Herndon walked, nine straight Tigers got hits off Baltimore starter Dennis Martinez, 7-15, and reliever Jim Palmer.

In addition to Herndon's 19th homer that finished the run-scoring in the inning, Lou Whitaker slammed his 12th homer for a 9-0 lead.

Detroit starter Dan Petry, 18-9, gave up four hits in five innings to pull the Tigers to within 6½ games of the Orioles in the American League East.

ELSEWHERE IN THE AL, Willie Upshaw drove in two runs, making him the first Toronto player to reach 100 RBI in a season in the team's seven-year history, as the Blue Jays topped the Seattle Mariners 7-3.

John Montefusco won his third straight decision with relief help from Rich Gossage as the New York Yankees edged the Boston Red Sox 3-2.

Cecil Cooper got four of Milwaukee's 20 hits and drove in three runs as the Brewers ended their 10-game losing streak by outslugging the Cleveland Indians 11-7.

Doug DeCinces doubled home two runs during a three-run first inning as the California Angels beat Kansas City 6-4 with the help of six Royals errors.

Pinch-hitter Bobby Jones belted his first home run of the season, a two-run blast that capped a three-run rally in the ninth inning that lifted the Texas Rangers over the Oakland A's 3-2.

Minnesota at Chicago was rained out.

IN THE National League, Joe Morgan, who has eight hits and seven RBI in his last 10 at-bats, went 4-for-5 and drove in three runs to trigger Philadelphia to an 8-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs and keep the Phillies two games in front of Pittsburgh and Montreal in the NL East.

Left-hander Larry McWilliams pitched a two-hitter, struck out 11 and walked none, and Dave Parker homered, leading the Pirates to a 4-0 victory over the New York Mets.

Bill Gullickson tossed a six-hitter and drove in two runs, including the first run of the game with his first career home run as the Expos whipped the St. Louis Cardinals 10-1.

Cincinnati at Atlanta was rained out.

In late NL games on the West Coast, Jose Cruz slugged a grand-slam homer and knocked in six runs to lead Houston to a 15-2 rout of Los Angeles, trimming the Dodgers' West Division lead to 3½ games over Atlanta as they lost for the fourth time in five games.

Right-hander Mark Calvert pitched six strong innings for his first major league victory and the San Francisco Giants rolled to an 8-1 victory over the San Diego Padres.

Ags' Smith AP Player of Week

From wire reports

FOOTBALL— Texas A&M's Alan Smith came within inches of owning a cherished NCAA record by himself. But he didn't know it until he read the Bryan-College Station Eagle the next day. Smith kicked six field goals Saturday night of 44, 45, 42, 33, 59 and 57 yards in a 38-0 victory over Arkansas State. He also hit the crosssbar on a 36-yard attempt. He broke the Southwest Conference record of five held by A&M's Tony Franklin and tied the NCAA mark owned by four other placekickers. The performance earned him AP SWC Offensive Player of the Week award...

Freshman Blanford Paul will replace Egypt Allen at halfback for TCU against SMU after Paul turned in a 73-yard effort against Kansas State last Saturday. "We haven't given Egypt a fair shake yet," Coach Jim Wacker said. "But we looked a lot of backs during the Kansas State game and have decided to go with the hot back."...

Unhappy Dallas Cowboys wide receiver Butch Johnson was given Monday off after a 45-minute closed door meeting with coach Tom Landry. Johnson has been unhappy about the amount of playing time he has been getting. "I didn't tell him to take the day off, he asked for it," Landry said, admitting it was unusual, but "not out of the ordinary" to give a player the day off."...

BASEBALL—No indictments were issued by a federal grand jury that was to be briefed by a U.S. attorney on a cocaine investigation involving members of the Kansas City Royals. The grand jury was excused after a one-day session Tuesday. Although its next regular meeting is set for Nov. 1, federal authorities have said that a special session of the panel may be sought...

Former Chicago Bears GM Jim Finks is expected to move across town to take over as president of the Chicago Cubs. The Chicago Tribune reported Wednesday that Finks will take over the president's job held by Andy McKenna, although McKenna will retain his title as chairman of the board...

BOXING—Carlos DeLeon defends his WBC cruiserweight title tonight against veteran Alvaro "Yaqui" Lopez, but the champion has his mind on a bigger money match against light heavyweight king Michael Spinks. DeLeon knocked out Spinks' older brother, Leon, the former heavyweight champion, in six rounds last March. Michael is a much better boxer than Leon, but DeLeon figures he can knock him out as well — and make a lot more money than he's getting for Lopez...

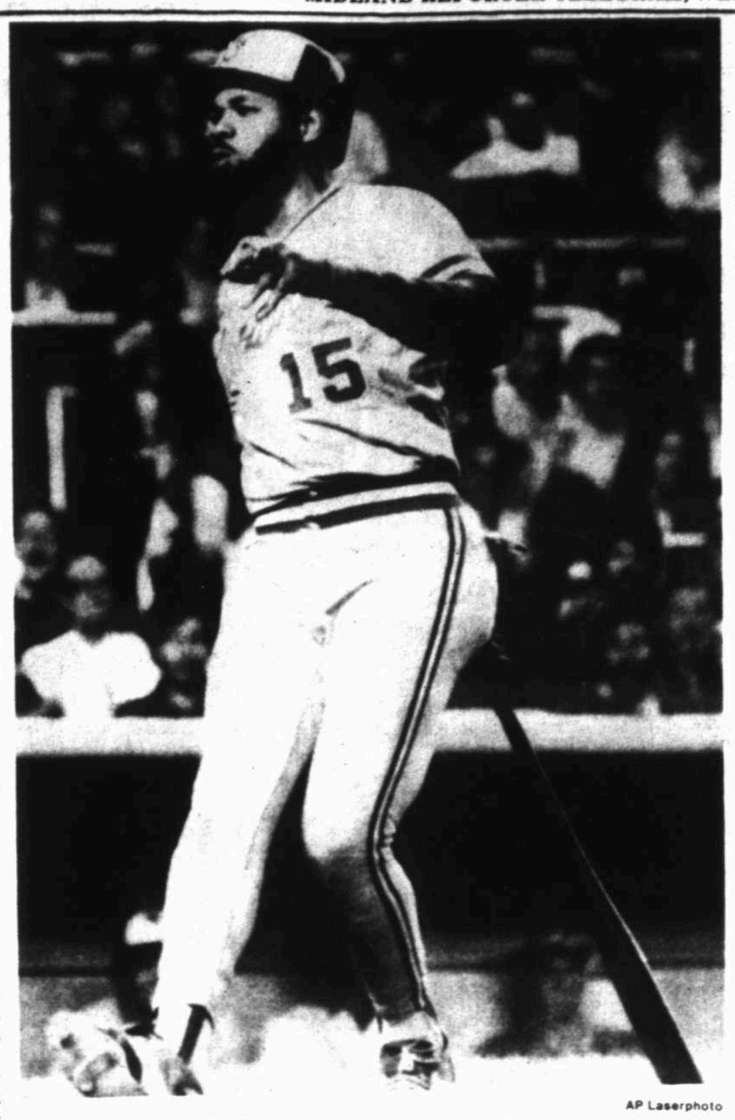

Voters decide TL fate

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP) — Louisiana may lose its only professional baseball team if voters here reject a $3.5 million November bond proposal to build a new stadium, said Taylor F. Moore, president of the Texas League's Shreveport Captains.

Moore's statement came after the city council in neighboring Bossier City failed to meet Tuesday's deadline for putting a $2 million stadium bond proposal on that city's Nov. 19 ballot.

Prior to the recent death of Bossier City Mayor Marvin Anding, both cities were working for a new showcase for the Captains, who now play at Shreveport's 45-year-old SPAR Stadium.

"We have some other priorities right now," said Acting Mayor Frank Blackburn. With Anding's death, he said, "there is no single person on the council or administration who is willing to try to push it (the stadium plans) through right now."

BOWLING BEAT

LaFleur misses 300 game by two pins

RANDY ISENBERG

Clo LaFleur missed a perfect 300 game by a mere two pins while rolling in his Early Mixers League opener last week. LaFleur rolled a 298 game and 655 series, both personal highs.

Darrell Hopkins is off to a good start in the Civic Commercial Men's League. Hopkins rolled a 267 game and 632 series in the opening week and followed with a 663 series in week two.

Two more professionals have been added to Fairmont Parks Grand Opening Celebration. Betty Morris and David Husted will join Joey Berardi and Leilah Wagner. The foursome, repressenting Columbia and AMF, will hold clinics and stage a match in the scheduled October opening.

In other lane happenings, the Dellwood Lanes-KMID TV 2 West Texas Masters Championship tournament is scheduled for Oct. 8. Entry fee is $75. First place prize money is a guaranteed $2,000.

The PABA will hold its weekly tournament at Dellwood on Sept. 24-25. They are at Super Bowl on Sept. 17-18.

The SWABA is in Andrews on Sept. 17-18, and in Odessa on Sept. 24 at Tiffany Lanes.

Joe Murrah, left, sponsor of the Labor Day weekend Camp Texarkana big bass tournament, looks at a big bass held by John Wade of Ore City. Wade and his brother, Archie, were top prize winners in the tourney until their entries were pulled because the fish did not appear fresh.

WEST TEXAS OUTDOORS

Initial lab tests indicate winning bass were ringers

BY RODNEY RIEHLE

Investigators claim that initial tests on bass that took top prizes at a Texarkansas tournament were caught elsewhere. Bowie County Chief Deputy Dewayne Cannon said, "I feel like there will be an indictment on it, no doubt."

John Wade and his brother Archie turned the fish in with their catches and came in first and second respectively in a Labor Day derby at Lake Wright Patman. The brothers won a combined $65,000, but were disqualified after failing the required lie-detector test, authorities have said.

The Texas Bass Association began challenging the winners' fish stories with lie-detector tests amid allegations that a ring is planting frozen Florida bass in tournaments in Texas, Louisiana and Arkansas.

Texas A&M scientists are more tests on the fish.

Coy Milam, president of the Texas Bass Association, said a 12.18-pound bass broke a 1977 lake record of 10.08 pounds. The next day, a 9.78-pound bass was turned in.

Officials say cheaters simply conceal a big fish in their boats, turn them in with the rest of their catch at the end of the tournament and claim the prizes.

MIKE HALAMICEK, Fort Stockton, caught 15.69 pounds of bass to win $1,000 in the Permian Basin Bass Club's Invitational tournament at Lake Amistad, beating out a field of 374 contestants.

A.D.Collins, San Angelo, took the Big Bass of the tournament, 7.34 pounds, while Alex Beck, San Antonio, won Saturday's contest and Jack Bartlett, San Angelo, was the Sunday winner. Terry Tuck, Midland, was eighth.

Dow Scott, Midland, took a 6.34 pounder for fifth and Fred Nobles, 5.73, for sixth Saturday. Jackie Wilkes, 6.78, was Midland's best finisher Sunday with a fifth. Larry Cross was ninth.

Test reports predict disaster — $98 oil

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — In the most realistic test of how the U.S. government would deal with a new world oil crisis, the Reagan administration's free-market approach turned an oil shortage into a national "economic disaster," according to reports by 10 states that participated.

The type of crisis postulated in the two-month test, coordinated by the International Energy Agency, was very similar to what could occur, government and industry analysts said, if further escalation of the Iran-Iraq war cuts the flow of Persian Gulf oil.

"The threat of such a thing happening is very serious. And I'm not talking about six months from now. I'm talking about six weeks," said James Akins, a Middle East expert and former ambassador to Saudi Arabia, who forecast the 1973 Arab oil embargo.

Since completion of the test June 17 The Washington Post has obtained internal government documents, evaluations by the 10 states that participated and three IEA reports providing the most detailed look to date of how the Reagan administration would deal with a new oil crisis and what the impact would be on the United States.

In the exercise, which hypothesized a partial blockage of oil exported from the Persian Gulf, the Reagan administration took no regulatory action and let the price of crude oil, now $28.63 a barrel, rocket to $98.

THIS HUGE INCREASE, which sent the retail price of gasoline and home heating oil soaring to more than $3 and $4 a gallon in some parts of the United States, had the effect of lowering consumption in this country by 18 percent.

The administration contended that the test thus proved that letting the free market determine the price of oil in a crisis would reduce consumer demand sufficiently to eliminate the need for government regulation to restrain prices and consumption or allocate supplies.

"This is a significant achievement and reaffirms the validity of President Reagan's market-based approach to energy emergency preparedness," Assistant Energy Secretary William A. Vaughn declared following completion of the exercise.

But strong disagreement came from states participating in the test, which surveyed widespread business and industrial shutdowns, bankruptcies, massive unemployment, commuters unable to afford gasoline, farmers abandoning their crops and low-income and elderly residents without heat or electricity.

"The administration's refusal to deviate from its allocation-by-price scenario transformed the petroleum crisis into an economic disaster in which petroleum supplies were adequate for those who could afford them," the Vermont State Energy Office said in a postmortem.

Florida Gov. Robert Graham's Energy Office, criticizing the administration's "general disregard for the enormous and social costs" of its approach, urged that "the federal government's policy of total reliance on the uncontrolled market ... be reconsidered."

THE 20 OTHER nations belonging to the IEA, formed at U.S. urging in 1974 to coordinate efforts of the industrialized world to minimize the impact of future oil emergencies, also were highly critical of the Reagan administration's decision to let the price of oil soar.

"The whole idea behind the IEA is to keep emergencies from resulting in vastly higher oil prices," a Dutch official said. "That can't work if the other 20 countries are trying to restrain demand and hold down prices and the United States allows the price to go through the ceiling."

The IEA's emergency system depends on the willingness of its members — the major European industrial nations plus the United States, Japan, Canada, Australia and New Zealand — to share the pain equally in a major world oil disruption.

If forecasted oil supplies fall short of historical use by more than 12 percent, each member country is required to cut domestic consumption by 10 percent. The IEA then activates a sharing system to ensure that available supplies are distributed equally among members.

To test the system, the IEA periodically notifies members that a hypothetical disruption has taken place. Members then devise a new supply plan based on amount of oil available, and the IEA calculates which nations should share oil.

The countries and their member oil companies then hypothetically redirect oil supplies to mitigate the crisis.

THIS TEST, the fourth since the agency's creation, was to be particularly significant. For the first time, the IEA planned to include the element of price.

But at an IEA Governing Board meeting last Oct. 28, the United States suddenly announced that it opposed any consideration of pricing.

A major reason for the switch, Energy Department official Romulo L. Diaz Jr. explained in a subsequent memorandum, was "concern that a simulated world price would erode support in the Congress for the president's market approach to energy emergencies."

While the other IEA members, according to State Department memos, strongly opposed the switch, the United States, as the most important member of the agency, prevailed. No price information would be generated as part of the test.

Hence, the other countries "expressed shock when, in its first official communication in the test, the Energy Department announced that by its calculations, world oil prices would increase to $98 per barrel in the month following the hypothesized oil-supply interruption," Deputy Assistant Secretary of State E. Allan Wendt reported in a memo June 3.

IN ADDITION to the U.S. government, 19 major American oil companies belong to the IEA.

Under a special antitrust exemption, they provide information on world oil supplies and movements to the IEA secretariat. In a crisis, the IEA would rely to a great extent on member oil companies to make the sharing system work.

Each country asks its oil companies to "volunteer" as much oil as can be spared to meet that country's sharing obligations.

Most oil companies have indicated since formation of the IEA, however, that they would not volunteer to divert supplies to other countries — at the risk of not having enough for regular customers — unless guaranteed that all oil companies would be equally disadvantaged.

To achieve this, most member countries established so-called "fair-sharing" programs. Until 1981, the United States accomplished this under the domestic crude-oil allocation system.

IN EARLY 1981, however, the Reagan administration abolished oil allocation and price controls. The oil industry, while generally welcoming deregulation, nevertheless noted that a standby fair-sharing system was needed. The industry also reiterated that it would not volunteer to share oil in an emergency unless such a system was in place.

The Energy Department, however, has not established such an emergency program and did not use the fair-sharing system in the test.

Instead, to meet the U.S. obligation to provide 22 million barrels of oil to other IEA nations, the administration relied heavily for the first time on voluntary pledges from independent oil companies and large industrial users, including U.S. Steel, Monsanto Co., Union Carbide, Burlington Industries, Inc. and Corning Glass Works.

In the opinion of several government officials, the appeal to many of these companies to volunteer oil was blatantly political.

Deputy Assistant Energy Secretary Ronald L. Winkler, in a memo April 29 seeking help from outside companies, said: "If we cannot demonstrate that the free market and voluntary programs work, even during this simulation, that will be turned against us up on the Hill."

VAUGHN, IN A letter to General Motors Corp. Chairman Roger B. Smith urging him to aid this "important test for the Reagan administration's market-based energy programs," said:

"Your company's participation in making simulated voluntary offers would greatly assist in demonstrating that mandatory and intrusive government regulatory programs are not needed to respond to energy emergency situations and that cooperative and voluntary programs will, indeed, do the job."

Smith, whose company volunteered to surrender some of its oil during this mock emergency, later wrote Energy Secretary Donald P. Hodel declaring: "The success of the test reaffirms our belief that President Reagan's market-based approach is the best way to deal with the issue of emergency preparedness."

While non-IEA member companies volunteered to provide 35.8 million barrels of oil, letting the United States comfortably exceed its sharing commitment, many industry and IEA observers expressed doubt that this oil would be available in a real emergency.

Khomeini threatens to halt oil shipments

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini is threatening to block shipments of crude oil from the Persian Gulf if major powers continue aiding Iraq in its war with Iran, the official Iranian news media reports.

"It should be announced to the world and stressed that if they help (Iraqi President) Saddam Hussein more than they have done, their hands will be cut off from oil resources. If they help Saddam to attack our economic resources they will not see oil any longer. I hope that this will not be the case," Tehran radio quoted Khomeini as saying Monday.

Khomeini spoke to a commission headed by Kamal Kharrazi, head of the Iranian war information office, which is arranging a week-long celebration starting Thursday to mark the third anniversary of the war with Iraq.

There was no specific threat of how Iran would try to halt the flow of oil. Iran controls the eastern shore of the 12-mile-wide Hormuz Strait in the southeastern tip of the Persian Gulf, through which most of the Western world's oil imports from the gulf area pass.

Khomeini said the United States, France and the Soviet Union feared that consolidation of his Islamic republic in Iran would cut them off from the gulf region.

Zeros add up to plenty

CHICAGO (AP) — Nine zeroes may seem like a whole lot of nothing, but that's not the case when they follow a dollar sign and the number 1. Just ask oil baron Armand Hammer, who recently wrote a check for $1 billion.

Hammer, chairman of Occidental Petroleum Corp., hand-delivered the $1 billion check to top executives of Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co. of Chicago and Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co. of New York last week.

The money was in partial repayment of $4 billion in loans used to finance Occidental's acquisition of Cities Service Co. last year.

Continental chairman Roger E. Anderson said in jest that he was sorry to see Occidental repay its loans so quickly at a time when general lending demand was so slow.

Wealth spread

FORT WORTH (SWN) — InterFirst Bank Fort Worth, as Trustee of the Permian Basin Royalty Trust, Tuesday declared a cash distribution to the holders of its units of beneficial interest of $.103172 per unit, payable October 17, 1983, to unit holders of record on September 30, 1983.

OIL FACTS

Test reports predict disaster

"Oil-company representatives participating in the allocation system in Paris found many of these offers dubious," the State Department's Wendt said in the June 3 memo. "Oil was reported in locations where no oil facilities exist, or in vessels too large to enter the specified port or in quantities greater than the United States normally imports.

"In response to IEA questions, DOE acknowledged that, in the press of tight deadlines, they had 'made up' details relating to some of these offers," Wendt added.

U.S. ALLIES' concern about how the administration's approach would affect them in a new oil crisis was at least matched by the 10 participating states.

Despite the administration's insistence through most of the test that free-market allocation would move petroleum products to where they are most needed, New York and California each reported a fuel-oil shortage on the East Coast and a glut in the West.

Maine's Office of Energy Resources complained that during the test "no administration spokesman confronted the real crisis: the hardship created by the huge increase in oil prices.

"The tourist industry faces a bleak summer. ... Many schools, hospitals and mills have suffered. Coal prices have also skyrocketed due, we suspect, to hoarding," Maine reported.

"Our utilities have also been hard hit ... and are seeking emergency rkte hiker. We are hearing from many consumers who cannot afford to heat their homes and-or hot water and commute to work," Maine added.

"The impact of the disruption and high energy prices on the low-income group would be devastating," Florida said.

ALL OF THE states echoed Wisconsin's complaint that the federal government "had abdicated its responsibilities for formulating a comprehensive economic response package."

In its final hypothetical message to the White House, the Wisconsin Division of State Energy said: "Although Milwaukee's situation is severe, there are several other major U.S. cities in worse shape.

"We hope it will not take the economic collapse of one of these cities, probably ensuing riots and accompanying destruction and death, before the administration realizes that its policies have failed the country and must be changed."

Nor was the hypothetical crisis in the IEA exercise the most severe oil shock possible.

A Congressional Research Service study released Sunday examined two other Persian Gulf disruption scenarios and concluded that they could produce a catastrophic drop in the U.S. Gross National Product of as much as 28 percent.

"Looking at the IEA test results, looking at the comments from our allies, from the oil companies themselves and from the states, the Reagan administration's approach clearly does not pass the test," said Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., whose House Government Operations subcommittee is to open hearings Thursday on U.S. preparedness for oil emergencies.

"I believe in the free market, but I am a pragmatist," he said. "Reality dictates that something more than the free market is going to be necessary in a crisis."

'Get Watt' measure could get OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — A proposed moratorium on coal leasing, portrayed as a "get (Interior Secretary) Jim Watt" gesture by administration allies and as a major victory by environmentalists, is headed for near-certain congressional approval.

Both chambers — the House last June and the Senate by a 63 to 33 margin on Tuesday — have now approved similar versions of the ban, which would halt the issuance of coal leases on public lands at least until an independent commission has reviewed Watt's previous leasing practices.

The Senate was expected to give final approval later today to an $8 billion Interior Department spending bill containing the moratorium and to send the overall measure to a House-Senate conference committee to work out a compromise version that can be sent to the White House.

Tuesday's Senate vote approved an amendment by Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., that would hold up all coal leases until a blue-ribbon panel, already named and gathering information, reported back to Congress with its recommendations.

A similar ban was passed by the House, but had been stripped from the bill by the Senate Appropriations Committee. Bumpers' measure restored the moratorium to the legislation, which provides funds for the Interior Department and related agencies for the fiscal yeqar that begins Oct. 1.

Bumpers, calling Watt "a rogue elephant" seeking to "give away our national heritage," said the ban was needed to keep Watt from leasing some 10 billion tons of coal in the West in 1984.

Bumpers said that 18 billion tons of coal on federal lands are already under lease to energy companies, "or a 170-year supply."

The House-passed ban would continue until Congress and the administration agreed to new coal-leasing policies based on the commission's report. The Senate version written by Bumpers would provide that the leasing ban would end 90 days after the report was released — in the absence of further congressional action.

Debate stakes $27 billion

AUSTIN (AP) — Opposing attorneys informally debated a question now before the Texas Railroad Commission that could decide who profits from oil and gas reservoirs in the Texas Panhandle estimated to be worth $27 billion.

The debate centers on how a gas well differs from an oil well, which is important to producers because Commission rules allow 64 oil wells per square mile and only one gas well.

Major gas producers say independent oil drillers are calling "gas wells" "oil wells" so they can sink more wells on a parcel.

Independent producers say all wells produce some oil and some gas, but that doesn't make them all gas wells.

Gas producers, such as Phillips Petroleum Inc., say the independents drilled so many gas wells on the Panhandle field that they are depleting supplies, and could eventually force gas rates in Amarillo, now the lowest in the state, to soar.

Phillips and others have asked the Railroad Commission to stop the independents from using refrigerating units on Panhandle wells that turn gas into a liquid and qualify the well as an "oil well."

"We will establish that it's a gas when it reaches the surface and it's a gas in the reservoir and it should be counted as a gas for determining whether the well is a gas well or an oil well ...," Phillips lawyer Joe Cochran told Ivan Hafley, an Austin attorney for the independents, during a recess Tuesday.

"They've already taken our oil and made it into gas underground by blowing the reservoir pressure down with their gas wells. They have vaporized our oil. Now they say we can't get our oil back as a liquid and call it oil," countered Hafley.

"I'm saying it doesn't make any difference what phase it's in now as long as Mother Nature had it as part of a liquid in 1918," when the first well was drilled in the field, said Hafley.

But Cochran said, "What he's calling vaporized oil would never have been produced as a liquid from that reservoir."

Geologist Raymond Stottler of Dallas was the first witness to testify for Phillips on Tuesday. He recited the geologic history of the Panhandle field, which encompasses about 1.5 million acres mostly in Moore, Hutchinson, Carson, Potter, Gray and Wheeler counties.

Lawyers said Stottler's highly technical testimony was little more than a "lesson in geology." Cochran said his case would probably take two weeks to present.

The commission classifies an oil well as one that produces less than 100,000 cubic feet of gas per barrel of oil. The problem comes in determining how much oil and how much gas the well produced.

"Most places it doesn't make near the difference it does here, because in everywhere except the Panhandle field, an operator has a lease on all the oil and gas. It doesn't make a rat to him whether you call it oil, gas, whatever," said Hafley, who estimated the worth of the remaining oil and gas in the Panhandle field at $27 billion.

"I think it does make a difference in any field in the state," said Cochran. "The ruling here will apply only to this field, but the principle could be used in other parts of the state."

Patients shown how to cope

New tools against cancer on the way

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

With cancer specialists constantly scraping up new methods, the head of chemotherapy at the Allison Permian Basin Cancer Center said he thinks treatments will be sharpened within a decade.

"I think within the next 10 years, our tools are going to be greatly increased," said Dr. David Snyder.

Snyder, who was the featured speaker at the third I CAN COPE session at the cancer center Tuesday night, explained current methods of chemotherapy treatment to about 50 cancer patients, their friends and family.

Chemotherapy, or the treatment of cancer with chemicals or drugs, is applied to the body in two ways, he said.

Hormonal treatments especially are effective in treating cancers of the breast and prostate because those organs depend on certain hormones for their growth, Snyder said.

"The hormonal milieu is important for particular cancers to grow," he said.

If that growth can be affected, cancer often can be arrested.

ABOUT 40 PERCENT of breast cancer patients are treated with hormone pills, according to Snyder. In prostate cancer victims, a female hormone is injected or sources of male hormones are eliminated to arrest the cancer.

While hormones can be used in the treatments of kidney, uterus and ovary cancers, the effectiveness "is less clearly defined, but still a possibility," Snyder said.

Cytotoxic treatment, where a drug or a mixture of drugs are injected into the body to affect cells in specific stages, is the other method of chemotherapy.

According to Snyder, all cells are in a stage of resting, growing and dividing. Different drugs affect different stages of cell growth, whether the cells are cancerous or not.

The percentage of cells growing and resting has a great effect on the drugs chosen for each patient, Snyder said, explaining some drugs only affect cells in specific stages while others may work in any phase.

"All cells in the body go through the same cycle," said Snyder. "Chemotherapy doesn't have any selectivity to cancer cells or regular cells."

BECAUSE CELLS IN the hair, gastrointestinal tract, bone marrow and skin are constantly undergoing replacement and repair, they, too, are affected by chemotherapy treatments.

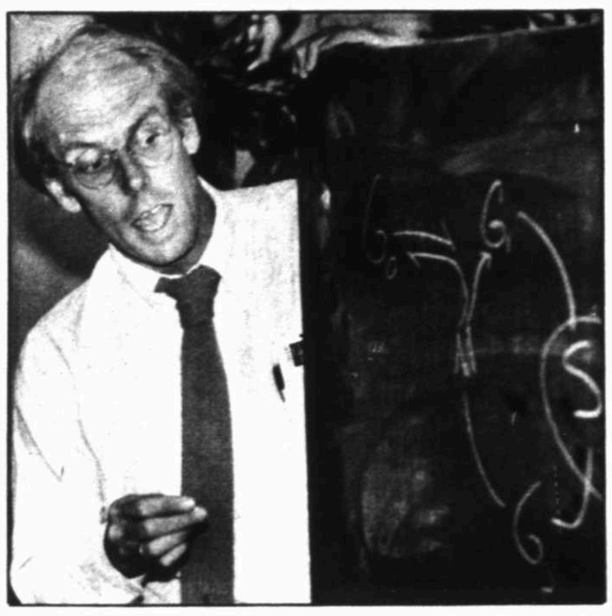

"That's why we see the toxicity and the side effects in those areas," Snyder said.

When side effects occur, many times it is a dose-related problem, Snyder said. "Everybody is different, everybody's tolerance of the drug is different. That really comes into play on how we dose and administer the drugs."

This is especially true in bone marrow, where the amount of cellular activity varies a good deal, he said. As a person ages, the bone marrow decreases so that someone who is older would be more sensitive to toxicity of a drug in the bone marrow than someone who is younger.

Some effects on other parts of the body are not dose-related, Snyder said, but due to the specific properties of some drugs, damage still may occur.

Damage to the lung, kidney, nerves and sometimes the heart can be attributed to the inherent properties of a particular family of drugs and their relation to parts of the body, Snyder said.

Dr. David Snyder explains how chemotherapy, the treatment of cancer with chemicals or drugs, affects cells in different stages of growth. According to Snyder, all cells are either resting, growing or dividing. The percentage of cells growing and resting has a great effect on the drugs chosen for each patient, he said.

MOST OF DOSE-RELATED side effects are temporary and should decrease within a few days. Some, however, will linger for five to 10 days, he said.

Because drug resistance often develops, more than one drug sometimes will be administered at once.

"Some of the cells might be senstive to one drug and others might not be at all, even on the onset," Snyder said. "Others may acquire resistance. One of the reasons has to do with the ability of the cancer cell to take the drug into the cell itself. If it can't, it won't have any effect on the cell."

A number of drugs are injected at once because they have a higher degree of response than if the drugs were injected one after another, according to Snyder.

"Cancer is not one disease," he said. "It's a multitude of diseases. Any cell is capable of malignant transformation and any tissue in the body is capable of malignant transformation.

"Each disease is different. That's why we treat patients differently."

With new breakthroughs, such as bone marrow transplants, particularly successful in young children, Snyder said cancer treatments constantly are improving.

"I think we can do better than what we do and I think we will," Snyder said. "I think 10 years from now, we'll look back at what we're doing and kind of shake our heads, 'Did we really do that?'

"I think there are a lot of new things coming."

Widow of Midland man awarded $1.75 million

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

One of the largest out-of-court settlements in West Texas was reached this week when the widow of a 45-year-old Midland businessman killed in a pickup-tanker truck mishap in 1982 was awarded $1.75 million.

The settlement came on the eve of the dispute's trial date in Midland's 238th State District Court.

"That's one of the rather larger settlements in this part of the country," said Ruff Ahders, attorney for the widow, Nelda Salisbury, 44, of Midland.

Her husband, Paul Henry Salisbury, 45, was killed Aug. 10, 1982, when the crew-cab pickup his son-in-law was driving collided with an 18-wheel oilfield tanker at Farm-to-Market Road 1379 and County Road 160 East southeast of Midland.

Salisbury and 60-year-old Paul E. Dardis, driver of Tripp Construction Co. tanker of Odessa, were killed in the wreck.

Injured were Salisbury's two sons-in-law, Paul Mathews, about 21, who was driving Salisbury's pickup, and John Meador, about 26. Mathews, the more seriously injured of the two, was awarded $75,000, while Meador was awarded $12,500, Ahders said.

When the lawsuit was filed in late August 1982, Mrs. Salisbury had sought $11 million in damages. Later, asked-for compensation was cut to $5-6 million.

"I'm excited about it," Ahders said of the settlement.

The Salisbury-Tripp trial was to start Monday but was settled Sunday among the litigation's attorneys, including Ahders for Mrs. Salisbury and L. Lloyd MacDonald for Tripp and its insurance companies.

"Everybody started looking at their hold cards," said Ahders. "I had about 22 witnesses and aerial photographs," he said. "I had all kinds of experts."

Ahders said he was prepared to prove the brakes on the tanker's trailer were defective and the Tripp truck had run a stop sign at the intersection. After determining that the tanker wasn't going to stop, Mathews apparently sped up the Salisbury pickup to get through the intersection before the tanker got there, and almost did, said Ahders. But the tail-end of a trailer pulled by the pickup was struck by the Tripp tanker truck.

Salisbury, a Midland businessman and horse breeder and racer, founded Lact & Meter Maintenance Co. about 20 years ago. Both of his sons-in-law were employed by the company, which did oilfield metering work.

"He had a good business," said Ahders, "and grossed about $200,000 a year but cleared between $70,000 and $80,000. He hit the big time and got killed."

"He was a real substantial guy from Midland and was an excellent businessman."

After Salisbury's death, the meter business collapsed, Ahders said. "He was the rock of the whole family and the business."

Though perhaps one of the largest — if not the largest — settlements to be made in or out of court in Midland, Salisbury's case was not the largest Midland-related settlement.

In mid-1983, Randy Sellars, 21, was awarded $2.4 million in an out-of-court settlement in Louisiana. It came for injuries he suffered after a twin-engine Louisiana state aircraft ferrying two prisoners crashed last Sept. 24 into the Warwick Apartment complex here where Sellars was living.

In mid-1981, the family of Calvin Keith Jezek was awarded $975,000 in damages following a suit against the city of Midland. The youth, then 16, was rendered paralyzed, comatose and suffered "irreversible brain damage" in June 1976 in a wreck at a "blind" city intersection — an intersection obstructed by weeds and bushes. The Jezek youth died in October 1978. The city was found liable and negligent.

Midland College trustees hear good and bad news at meeting

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

The good news was record enrollment at Midland College this fall, and the bad news was problems with the employees' annuity program. Both topics were discussed at a meeting of the MC board of trustees Tuesday afternoon.

"We reached an all-time record," President Jess Parrish commented on the 3 percent increase in student enrollment recorded in a preliminary report. The total number of students attending MC was 3,350 — up 96 from last year.

The number of fulltime students increased 7 percent, from 892 to 953. And, it was reported, the students who were attending were taking more course hours than their predecessors.

However, trustees were sombered by the threat of possible litigation arising over the school's employee annuity program. For the past 10 years the college has invested 7 percent of an employee's salary into a tax-sheltered retirement fund. This is in addition to the 6.65 percent of his salary a teacher is required to contribute to the Teacher Retirement System of Texas.

College officials contend the 7 percent annuity is part of a teacher's salary, but the TRS claims under a law passed in 1981 the compensation is a benefit and not a wage.

About 20 at Tuesday meeting of Greenwood school board

By RHONDA RIGENHAGEN
Staff Writer

About 20 people attended Tuesday night's meeting of the Greenwood school board. The first meeting in its new facility seemed significant, because it was almost as if a new board presided.

After recent controversy over tax rates, budgets and accountability of finances, trustees carefully scrutinized a couple of dozen pages detailing the month's spending, often asking questions on particular items.

"You did good James," President Patsy Herrington commented to Superintendent James Warlick. "This is better."

Most of the three-hour session, was taken up with routine business.

The board approved the addition of two bus routes to ease overcrowding. Three buses are currently serving more than 80 children, but the vehicles are only designed to seat 71.

Another noon route for kindergarteners was added, but since it would only carry five or six students trustees are considering making a contract to have a private vehicle transport the children. The route covers a distance of 30 miles, and trustees felt this was too far to add to either of the other noon routes, because some children had to spend up to two hours on the bus.

It was reported total enrollment was 1,244 students — about 300 more than the same time last year, Warlick said.

Classes were held today for the first time in the new Carver Occupational Development Lab, 1600 E. Wall St. The building replaces a facility by the same name which was destroyed by fire in March of 1982. Thirty mentally retarded youth, ages 14 to 20, attend Carver O.D.L., which is designed to prepare its students to become productive citizens through employment and independent living as adults. The facility cost more than $600,000.

Pamela Singleton and Mark Gosch stand beside this newly erected Neighborhood Watch sign in the 2100 block of Wydewood. The signs are available through the Midland Crime Prevention Commission and are used to warn criminals that residents of the neighborhood look out for each other and report suspicious activity to the police. More informantion can be obtained by calling the commission at 682-6542 or the police department at 683-4281.

For the past two years teachers have based their 6.65 percent contribution to TRS on a salary figure which includes the annuity. The TRS ruling would mean teachers would pay 6.65 percent of a lesser amount. So teachers will be paying less money into the TRS fund and be reimbursed for overpayment over the past two years. However, they would also receive less money upon retirement, because payments are based on a teacher's highest income for three years — an amount which would be decreased by 7 percent if the annuity was not included in the calculations.

Parrish explained if the annuity program were optional — and employees could decide to participate or receive the 7 percent in cash — the money would be considered salary instead of a benefit.

"Now we have a guaranteed amount to invest each year," Parrish explained. "With a voluntary program we would not have a set amount of dollars to invest. So where we have been getting an excellent interest rate on this, it would go down at least a couple of points."

"We do not agree with the TRS ruling that that's not a part of their salary," explained Bob Phillips, vice president of business and finance at MC.

"It's our contention that it was an oversight," college spokesman H.A. Tuck said. "It shouldn't be the intent of the Legislature to penalize people who contribute more to enhance their retirement income."

"We'll appeal to the executive director and then the board of directors of the Teacher Retirement System," Parrish said. If the decision is not overturned, he brought up the possibility of joining with other schools in litigation.

"We feel our employees are not getting fair treatment," Phillips said. "We feel an obligation to them to see they get the full benefit."

In other action trustees were informed of repairs required at Chaparral Center. The athletic building suffered structural cracks in the seating area, possibly due to the settling of dirt underneath the facility. Although engineers had not yet determined what the repair cost would be, Parrish said it is expected to be considerably less than previously estimated. "All we know is it's not going to be a tremendous amount of money."

Trustees also heard reports on two upcoming conferences: The Association of Community College Trustees will meet in Arizona Oct. 12-16, and the annual meeting of Junior College Board Members and Administrators will be in Austin Oct. 31 through Nov. 1.

Finally, the athletic department gave a status report, and coaches of tennis, basketball, golf, cheerleading and drill teams predicted a promising year.

Truck accident forces evacuation

SHAMROCK (AP) — Some residents near this Panhandle community were forced to leave their homes for a time and traffic was diverted after a truck loaded with hundreds of military rockets overturned on Interstate 40, authorities said.

The truck was enroute from Fort Smith, Ark., to Alamogordo, N.M., when it flipped over about 3:30 a.m. Tuesday about two miles west of Shamrock, said Larry Todd, spokesman for the Texas Department of Public Safety.

The warheads were being shipped separately, Todd said.

Residents living within one mile of the accident site were evacuated for a short time and traffic was diverted for most of Tuesday, officers said.

BBB banquet set for Sept. 29

The 20th Anniversary and 1983 Membership banquet for the Better Business Bureau is set for 7 p.m. on Sept. 29 at Green Tree Country Club.

Sixteen Permian Basin businesses have been nominated to receive the BBB Exceptional Business Award. An independent committee will select the winner and present the award at the banquet.

Barbershop music will be the entertainment, as the Natural Flair Quartet will sing contemporary songs like "The Way We Were" as well as old-fashioned barbershop favorites such as "Sweet Little Heaven Back Home" and "Dixieland One Step."

The Natural Flair Quartet is the 1983 Region 10 Sweet Adeline Champion, an organization designed to promote barbershop singing. The group competed against 19 quartets from Texas and Louisiana to become regional champions and will compete against 49 groups in the Sweet Adelines International Competition in October. The Natural Flair Quartet placed fifth in the international competition in 1978.

Additional information concerning the banquet can be received by calling 563-5730. Reservations must be made by Friday.

Man held after arrest on felony drug charges

A San Antonio man remained jailed this morning, following his arrest on stolen property and felony drug charges Tuesday.

According to city narcotics agents, the 37-year-old suspect, an unemployed construction worker, was arrested at a West Wall Avenue motel about 2:30 p.m. after a quantity of marijuana and prescription pain relievers were found during a search of his vehicle.

In addition to the drugs, agents said they seized a 12-gauge shotgun stolen in a Live Oak burglary two months ago and a prescription pad taken from a San Antonio doctor's office.

The arrest stemmed from a week-long investigation. Formal charges were to be filed sometime today.

Suspect arrested in June shooting death

Sheriff's deputies have arrested a suspect in last June's shooting death of 65-year-old Charles "Darby" Kirby of 503 Longview — the victim of an apparent case of mistaken identity.

In the county jail this morning under $50,000 bond set by State District Judge Pat Baskin was 31-year-old James Edward Lee of 3212 A Street.

Sheriff's investigators said Lee was arrested at work Tuesday afternoon on a sealed grand jury indictment issued last month.

Kirby had been shot at least once in the head with a small caliber weapon and was found lying on the bed of his mobile home the morning of June 8. He was last seen alive about 9:45 the night before.

Deputies believe the suspect went to the wrong house to settle a disagreement over some business dealings he had had with a man who lived behind Kirby's residence.

DEATHS

Betty Morgette

KERMIT — Services for Betty Jean Morgette, 55, of Kermit, mother of Samuel L. Austin and sister of Robert E. Wallace, both of Midland, were to be at 2 p.m. today in First United Methodist Church in Kermit with the Rev. David Matkins officiating. Burial was to be in Kermit Cemetery, directed by Cooper Funeral Home.

Mrs. Morgette died Monday in an Andrews hospital after an illness.

She was born Dec. 25, 1927, in Bradshaw. She married Freddy William Morgette May 29, 1960, in El Paso. She was a Kermit resident for 39 years and a Methodist.

Survivors include her husband, another son, a daughter, two other brothers, three sisters and five grandchildren.

Ralph Myers Jr.

Services for Ralph Myers Jr., 62, of 302 Thornridge, will be at 11 a.m. Friday in the Ellis Funeral Home chapel with David Wallace, minister of North A and Tennessee Church of Christ officiating, with burial in Resthaven Memorial Park.

Myers died Monday afternoon in a Midland hospital.

He was born Dec. 19, 1920, in Ponca City, Okla., where he grew up. He entered the Army Air Corps in 1940, and served in the Pacific Theater of Operations during World War II. After his discharge in 1946, he was associated with Sun Oil Pipeline Company in Kilgore for three years before moving to Delhi, La., for 15 years. He moved to Midland in 1969 and became an independent landman, working with El Paso Gas for a number of years.

Survivors include his wife, Ruth Myers of Midland; a son, Michael Myers of San Antonio; three daughters, Donna Gehner of Washington, Belva Grossweiler of Corpus Christi, and Melanie Young of Lubbock; his mother, Esse Myers of Bellvue, Wash.; a brother, Donald Myers of Tulsa, Okla.; a sister, Marcelle Wright of Bellvue, Wash.; and eight grandchildren.

KILGORE — Services for Kenneth Lynn Fitzgerald, 28, of Liberty City and formerly of Midland, were Monday at Trinity Assembly of God Church with the Rev. Roger Hoffpowier officiating. Burial was in Lakeview Cemetery in Gregg County, directed by Rader Funeral Home of Kilgore.

Fitzgerald died Friday at his home.

He was a native of Lubbock and was co-owner of J&K Oil Tool Sales Co. in Kilgore. He was a member of the Assembly of God Church.

Survivors include two sons, Robert S. Fitzgerald and Kenneth S. Fitzgerald, both of Kilgore; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J.W. Fitzgerald of Kilgore; two brothers, Kirby Fitzgerald of Kilgore, and Jerry Fitzgerald of Williamsburg, Ky.; a sister, Melissa Fitzgerald of Kilgore; two grandmothers, Mrs. R.S. Kirby of Kilgore, and Mrs. J.B. Fitzgerald of Tyler; a nephew and a niece.

M.O. Woolam

ANDREWS — Services for Maurice Owen "M.O." Woolam, 78, of Andrews, were to be at 2 p.m. today in Means Memorial Methodist Church with the Rev. Milton Jochetz officiating. Burial was to be in Andrews Cemetery, directed by Singleton Funeral Home.

Woolam died Monday in an Andrews hospital following a lengthy illness.

He was born Nov. 4, 1904, in San Augustine. He married Nancy Newell McGuire June 26, 1924, in Stillwater, Okla. He retired in 1965 as school bus manager and assistant supervisor for Andrews Independent School District. He was a former district governor of the Lions Club, past president of the State School Business Association and a member of Means Memorial Methodist Church. He also worked with the Boy Scouts of America.

Survivors include his wife; a daughter, Marie Huff of Laramie, Wyo.; a brother, Rawson Woolam of Lubbock; nine grandchildren; and nine great-grandchildren.

About 20 attend GISD meeting

Trustees voted to delay until next month naming a representative to the Midland County Appraisal District board of directors. The board hears appeals of people disagreeing with the valuation of their property. Five members serve on the board: Midland Independent School District gets to elect three, the City of Midland names one, and Midland County and Greenwood Independent School District together get one. Trustees chose to wait until after the county makes its nomination before voting.

A contract with Galame, Linebarger and Graham was renewed. The law firm is in charge of collecting the district's delinquent taxes. In the past two years the firm has collected $15,000 in past-due taxes, 10 percent of the total.

The board voted to have two temporary buildings appraised. After determining their value, trustees plan to accept bids to sell the facilities. They were used as classrooms until the new high school was completed.

Trustees also heard a report on the special education program, which now has five teachers and more than 100 students. Afterward they voted to hire another teacher for the program.

A motion to spend more than $43,000 on a high school wood shop was tabled until the next meeting. The old shop is housed in what is now the elementary building, although elementary students do not take shop courses. Some of the equipment will be moved to the high school shop, high school principal Max Dickerson said, but most of it needs to be replaced.

The board also approved the purchase of score boards at a cost of $5,350. They expressed hope some businesses or individuals may donate the boards.

Trustees are scheduled to meet again 7 p.m. Oct. 4.

City to conduct tests to locate PCBs

ROBSTOWN (AP) — City officials have been ordered to conduct tests to determine the source and extent of PCB contamination at a city utility storage yard and to see if the cancer-causing chemical polluted ground water.

Contamination by polychlorinated biphenyls was discovered after a city official acted on an anonymous tip and requested a soil test by the Texas Department of Health, officials said.

Paul Kutchinski, regional director of the Texas Department of Water Resources, ordered the tests and said the investigation should include a survey to locate electrical transformers that may have been buried at the Robstown Utility Systems storage yard.

In the past, PCBs mixed with oil have been used in electrical transformers as a coolant. Now, the high toxicity of PCB has prompted a federal ban on the agents.

During a meeting Tuesday between Robstown utility officials and Kutchinski, Utility Systems representatives said that some electrical equipment had been buried at the contaminated yard within the past year.

Any equipment that uses PCBs as a chemical agent must be disposed of in an approved burial site. Robstown has not secured a permit to bury such materials, Kutchinski said.

If transformers are buried at the site, the Robstown Utility System could face fines ranging up to $25,000 a day, said State Rep. Hugo Berlanga, D-Corpus Christi, who attended Tuesday's session.

But Charles Schwarz, an engineer with the Texas Department of Health, Region 8, said preliminary tests of soil indicate the highest concentrations of PCBs are under a rack holding several electrical transformers.

Soil samples taken from the area where the transformers reportedly are buried had the lowest levels of PCBs, less than one part per million. That level compares to the 110 parts per million found under the transformer rack.

Federal regulations stipulate that any concentration of more than 50 parts per million must be investigated and properly discarded. Texas regulations mandate an investigation if at least one part per million PCBs is discovered.

Arsonist attempts to burn fire truck parked in station

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Arson investigators, who look into hundreds of cases of intentionally set fires each year here, have a case with a new wrinkle.

Someone tried to burn a fire truck while it was parked in a firehouse, authorities said.

The unknown firebug sneaked into Station 8 sometime Monday afternoon and set ablaze a piece of paper on the front seat of a fire truck, investigators said.

The arsonist also took about a gallon of Varsol, a flammable liquid used to clean engines, from an unlocked closet and dumped it on the garage floor, said Capt. Oscar Guerrero. The liquid did not ignite, he said.

"Varsol is flammable, but it is not highly volatile," Guerrero said. "It is not nearly as volatile as gasoline."

The arsonist apparently paid his visit while the station's four firefighters and two paramedics were in another part of the building waxing floors, Guerrero said.

About $50 worth of damage was done to the truck's seat, Guerrero said.

Judge denies request for new trial

ODESSA (AP) — State District Judge R. L. McKim has denied a request for a new trial for a man convicted and sentenced to death in the bomb slaying of a former business associate.

Defense lawyer Jim Vollers requested a new trial for John Clifford Skelton on grounds that he was convicted on circumstancial evidence and alleged there was no real evidence connecting his client to the death of Joe Lee Neal.

Neal died April 24, 1982, when a bomb exploded in his pickup truck. There was testimony that Skelton had threatened Neal and that he purchased a quantity of dynamite not long before the bomb exploded.

Skelton was convicted July 8 and sentenced to death by lethal injection. McKim did not explain his ruling, saying that Texas law does not require a judge to explain his actions in turning down a request for a new trial.

Couple drowns in rough surf

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — Authorities were attempting to identify the bodies of a man and a woman who drowned while playing in rough surf off North Padre Island.

The bodies were discovered Tuesday night, about 90 minutes before a cold front dumped heavy rain on the area, investigators said.

The couple, both of whom appeared to be in their 40s, was last seen playing in the surf about 6:30 p.m.

No identification was found on the bodies, but investigators found a truck nearby, according to the Nueces County medical examiner's office.

Two friends mix savvy, open shop

By DIANE BOOTH
Lifestyle Writer

Parties Etcetera at San Miguel Square is the result of Nell York and Doris Burton's combined abilities of party-giving and organizing, under one roof.

Their business helps plan social events — from a cocktail party for 200 to a brunch for 30 — sells items such as housewarming gifts and centerpieces and advises how to organize closets.

"I've always given parties," said Mrs. York, a native Midlander. "I have done a lot of entertaining."

The two women enjoy planning parties. "People aren't planning anything that isn't fun," Mrs. Burton said. "It's a happy thing," Mrs. York said.

Mrs. York said she convinced her friend, Mrs. Burton, to leave Dallas, where she owned a party supplies store, to come to Midland. The pair opened the shop in May.

Since the store is larger than they planned to rent, the two women decided to have two stores in one. "Container stores were highly successful in Dallas," Mrs. Burton said.

Most of the parties they have coordinated are cocktail affairs, and they are now planning one for 5,000 people. Other parties include a wedding rehearsal dinner, brunch, debutante breakfast, dinner party and decorations for a 10-year high school reunion.

The services extend to handling every detail right down to the invitations. They address, stamp and mail invitations if people want to pay for it, Mrs. Burton said.

First they draw a proposal which may be limited to decorations or may include everthing from arranging the catering and purchasing liquor to hiring maids and bartenders and creating the decorations. They also book entertainment.

The partners visit the home or other party location to survey the rooms and look at colors and decor.

Although they have a manager to run the store, the two businesswomen always handle every detail of every party. "We go to the house and see that it's done properly."

Information, such as the customer's likes, dislikes and house colors,is compiled in a file folder.

Although they have never gone to people's houses to help them organize their closets, studies or kitchens, they said they are willing to.

Their store carries wire baskets which stack in units, shoe holders, tins, cannisters, mirrors and wastebaskets.

The shop also sells "adult gifts" which are kept away from eyes 18 years and younger, behind a black curtain.

"There's not much we can't get because we have the resources," Mrs. Burton said.

The secret to successful entertaining, she said is "You have to be prepared in case something falls through."

"You have to be organized," Mrs. York said, "Details are important."

Zucchini treat

ZUCCHINI OMELET

¼ cup olive oil
2½ cups thinly sliced unpared zucchini
6 large eggs
1 teaspoon salt
Pepper to taste
1-3rd cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese

In a 10-inch skillet gently cook zucchini in the hot oil until tender — about 5 minutes. Beat eggs with salt and pepper until foamy; stir in Parmesan. Pour egg mixture over zucchini. As mixture sets, lift edges with a wide spatula and tilt pan so soft portion runs down to bottom of skillet. While top is still slightly soft, cut in wedges and turn to brown lightly. Serve at once. Makes 4 servings. —(AP)

Celery good for dieters, non-dieters

Copley News Service

Whether you're on a diet or not, celery can be used in your meals for added flavor and texture.

SUPER-EASY CELERY SAUCE

1 cup celery, thinly sliced
2 tbsps. butter or margarine
1½ tbsps. flour
½ cup milk
½ cup vegetable stock or bouillon
½ tsp. dehydrated minced onion
1 tsp. chopped parsley
¼ tsp. salt
Dash white pepper

Saute the celery in butter or margarine; remove from heat. Stir in flour an blend well. Cook over medium-low heat, stirring constantly, for ½ minute, or until bubbly. Remove from heat and stir in remaining ingredients. Then cook 2 to 3 minutes longer, stirring often, until sauce is of medium thickness. Serve over croquettes or cooked vegetables. Makes 1¾ cups.

CREAM OF CELERY SOUP

4 cups celery chopped into 1-inch chunks
3 cups potatoes, chopped into 1-inch chunks
4 cups water
½ tsp. salt
3 tbsps. butter or margarine
1 cup minced onion
1 cup finely minced celery
Scant ¼ tsp. celery seed
Dash thyme
1 cup milk
½ cup sour cream
White pepper to taste

In a saucepan, bring to a boil the 4 cups celery, potatoes, water and salt.Cover, turn down heat and simmer until vegetables are soft. Let cool; puree in a blender, then place in a soup kettle. Melt the 3 tablespoons butter or margarine in a small fying pan. Add onion and saute over medium-low heat until translucent. Add celery, celery seed and thyme; saute until tender. Add this mixture to the soup kettle and simmer at low heat until warmed through. About 10 minutes before serving, whisk into the soup the milk and sour cream, warming gently over low heat. Sprinkle with white pepper to taste. Serves 4 to 6.

CELERY REMOULADE

3 medium-size celery stalks
1 small onion
1 cup mayonnaise
1½ tbsps. prepared Dijon mustard
Dash dill weed (about ¼ tsp.)
1 tsp. lemon juice
6 romaine lettuce leaves

Wash celery stalks. Cut off root ends and leaves, peel away stringy outer rbs, and mince inner ribs. In a large bowl, mix celery, onion, mayonnaise, Dijon mustard, dill weed and lemon juice. Place romaine lettuce leaves on 6 plates and top with celery mixture. Chill until ready to serve. Serves 6.

Bread, butter pickles may be new concept

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

Bread-and-butter pickles are comparatively new in American home preserving. Fannie Farmer, in the first (1896) edition of her famous cookbook, doesn't mention them. As a matter of fact, she gives mighty few pickle recipes.

BREAD-AND- BUTTER PICKLES

8-9 (each about 4 inches long) pickling cucumbers (about 1¾ pounds)
1 large onion (about 5 oz.)
1 lg green pepper (5 oz.)
¼ cup salt
2¼ cups water
2 cups cider vinegar
2½ cups sugar
3 tsp. white or yellow mustard seed
1½ teaspoons celery seed
1 teaspoon ground turmeric
¼ teaspoon ground cloves

With a brush, scrub cucumbers under cold running water; drain; do not peel, but trim ends; slice thin — there should be 8 cups. Peel onion, quarter and slice thin — there should be 1 cup. Quarter green pepper, remove seeds and membranes and rinse; slice thin crosswise — there should be 1 cup.

In a large bowl stir together salt, water and vinegar. Add cucumber, onion and green pepper; mix well. Cover and let stand at room temperature for about 3 hours. Strain, reserving cucumber mixture and liquid separately.

Pour reserved liquid into a medium saucepan; add sugar, mustard seed, celery seed, turmeric and cloves. Over moderate heat, stir until sugar dissolves; bring to a boil; simmer, covered, 15 minutes. Add reserved cucumber mixture; bring to a boil; simmer, covered, until cucumbers begin to become transparent — about 1 minute. Store in the refrigerator.

Makes about 1½ quarts.

Bring the garden indoors with refreshing Lemony Zucchini Brown Rice. This healthful combination of nutritious brown rice, fresh zucchini and lemon juice is a snap to prepare.

Brown rice salad tasty, nutritious

Brown rice consumption is on the rise in the United States, from four tons per year to more than 20,000 tons per year in a little more than 10 years.

Consumers have discovered that brown rice is more than just nutritious. Besides contributing significant amounts of fiber, protein, calcium, phosphorus, niacin and vitamin E to the diet, brown rice also adds variety and interest to everyday and special occasion meals.

LEMONY ZUCCHINI BROWN RICE

1 small zucchini, cut into 1 x 1/8 x 1/8-inch strips
1 to 2 cloves garlic, minced
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 cup fresh spinach leaves, cut into 1 x 1/8-inch strips
2-2/3 cups water
1 cup brown rice
1 teaspoon salt
2 to 3 teaspoons lemon juice
1/8 teaspoon pepper

Saute zucchini and garlic in butter in medium saucepan, one to two minutes. Add spinach; cook an additional one minute. Remove and set aside. Add water to saucepan; bring to a boil. Stir in rice and salt. Cover tightly and cook over low heat until all water is absorbed, about 50 minutes. Stir reserved zucchini and spinach, lemon juice and pepper into rice. Remove from heat. Let stand covered two to three minutes. Makes six servings.

three minutes. Gradually stir hot sesame seeds into oil. Add vinegar, soy sauce, ginger, garlic and cayenne pepper; mix well. Stir dressing into rice and vegetable mixture. Cover and chill several hours or overnight. Makes six servings.

Squash popular

Spaghetti squash is becoming popular at U.S. produce counters.

The gourd is namedfor the way the interior unravels into spaghetti-like strands when cooked, but has fewer calories than pasta.(AP)

BETTER BUSINESS

Buying land requires caution

By LINDA TRUITT

"Land will be skyrocketing, so buy now while prices are still within reach."

This statement appears in a brochure offering land for sale in Hudespeth County, Texas. Claiming "The Future Is Now!!!", the company, Apache Acres Ltd., is enticing prospective purchasers to buy land with pictures of oil rigs and reports on how much oil and gas exploration is taking place in Texas.

Selling land through the mail is becoming increasingly popular. Unimproved land is sold not only as vacation, recreation or retirement sites, but also as a good investment (especially in oil rich Texas).

Often the brochure or a salesman who later calls as a follow-up will use questionable sales practices to entice you to purchase the land. Know them and exercise caution if they are encountered:

Misrepresentation of important facts about the subdivision. The seller may give false or incomplete information about the property. These misrepresentations often involve the seller's ability to deliver clear title or the availability of necessary facilities such as roads, water, sewage disposal and electricity.

The "guarateed investment pitch" is used in marketing lots in unimproved subdivisions. You may be told that the lot will double or triple in value in just a few years. However, the sales price may be already highly inflated since it includes the seller's costs for advertising, sales commissions and profit.

The promise of a full refund at any time. Beware of conditions attached to the refund that make it difficult or even impossible to obtain, such as a personal visit to the subdivision at your expense within a given period of time.

A sales practice known as "bait and switch." The seller advertises lots at extremely low prices to lure you to the subdivision. Then you may be told that the low priced lots are all sold. Or sometimes the cheaper lots are available but are too small, in undesireable locations, or are inaccessable.

You may be offered a "special" discount only if you purchase immediately. Don't be pressured. In most cases another lot, just like the one you are being shown, will be available tomorrow or next week at the same price.

In an effort to help protect consumers against unscrupulous land promotions, the Interstate Land Sales Full Disclosre Act was enacted in 1968 and is administered by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). Under this law, if the seller is offering 100 or more unimproved lots for sale buy mail, telephone or advertising in publicaions with circulation across state lines the poperty must be registered with HUD. The law also prohibits the use of fraud by the developer or his agents.

The purpose of the registration is to ensure that prospective purchasers receive full disclosure about the subdivision and the seller. However, it is important to note that a registration with HUD does not mean that the federal government has approved or physically evaluated the subdivision or determined that the land is a good investment.

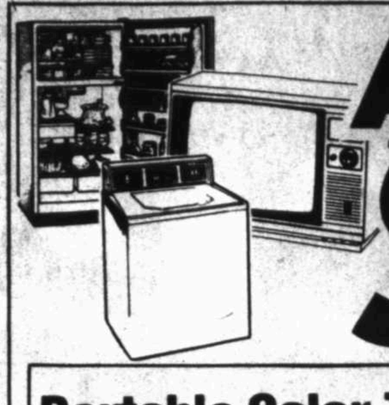

The seller of a registered subdivision is required to give out a disclosure document called a "Property Report" before the signing of any contract or agreement. Failure to provide the Report is a violation of federal law. The developer is required to keep the information in his Report current and accurate for future lot buyers.

In the Report the buyer will learn about availability of existing and proposed recreational facilities, roads and utilities; existence of any mortgages or liens against the property and their effect on a purchaser; type of deed, when it will be received, and whether it can be recorded; estimated annual taxes, dues and assessments; financial information about the seller; and existence of a Property Owners' Association and any obligations as a property owner.

If a contract is signed the lot buyer has a "cooling off" period to revoke his contract for a period of seven days from the date it is signed. In revoking the contract during this period the purchaser should notify the seller at the address shown in the Property Report, in writing by certified mail, so that there can be no doubt that the cancellation was requested in a timely manner.

HUD does not have the authority to represent you in a court of law if you feel the land was misrepresented or certain disclosures were not made. Therefore, your best protection is to investigate before you invest. As one inquirer found out when asking about Apache Acres, there are no commercial oil wells in Hudspeth County. That was a deciding factor in the decision not to buy.

Linda Truitt is president of the Better Business Bureau of the Permian Basin Inc.

DEAR ABBY

Girl's dates want to pay

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My parents wouldn't let me date guys until my 16th birthday last April, so this is a new problem to me. Who should pay for the date?

All the guys I've gone out with insist on paying for everything. I've offered to pay for my own pizza, movie or to contribute for whatever it costs, but I'm not allowed to. Some even take my offer as an insult.

If a girlfriend asks me to eat out or to see a movie with her, I would automatically assume we will go Dutch, right? Why should it be any different with a guy? My parents and friends say I'm crazy — the guy always pays. Why should he? I have a job, too, and can pay my own way. — MONEY MATTERS IN IOWA

DEAR MONEY: When a guy asks a girl for a date, he is asking her to be his guest — so he pays. Feeling as you do (and I think it's a great idea), if you want to treat a guy in return for his treating you — ask him to be your guest.

You're not "crazy," you're just ahead of your time.

DEAR ABBY: My granddaughter, whose father is my son, is being married soon, and I am making the trip from several states away to attend the wedding. I have always stayed with my son and his wife, who have a lovely home, but I was informed that this time they would put me up in a hotel because the parents of the groom will be occupying their guest room.

Abby, I am a 73-year-old woman and not in the best of health. The parents of the groom are much younger and in better health than I am. Just what is the protocol in this situation? Don't you think I am more entitled to stay at my son's home than the parents of the groom? Should I express my disappointment? — JUST WONDERING

DEAR JUST: There is no "protocol" concerning who is more entitled to occupy your son's guest room. Please don't cast a cloud over this joyous occasion by expressing your disappointment.

DEAR ABBY: This is for the lady who had the swimming pool dilemma. The neighborhood kids climbed over her fence to use her pool. She couldn't afford to feed the whole neighborhood, and she didn't have time to play lifeguard every day.

Years ago I had a friend who had the only pool in the neighborhood. This friend called a neighborhood meeting and invited all the children and their parents in the block — on both sides of the street. Everyone who wanted to use her pool showed up.

This is what she told them:

"1. If you want your child to use our pool, you will accompany your child.

"2. You must provide your child with his own towel.

"3. You will feed your child at home before he comes to swim. No eating here!

"4. When the pool is open for guests, you will see a flag in my front yard. If you do not see the flag, that means the pool is closed to visitors."

Needless to say, my friend had made herself clear. The kids in the neighborhood loved swimming in her pool, and she was never pestered by ringing doorbells or telephone calls asking if "we" can come over to swim.

I think she handled the situation beautifully. Print this if you think it will help others with this dilemma. — P.M.

DEAR P.M.: I think it's a great idea, though a tad tardy for some this year. But there's always next year.

Claims on food labels explained

WASHINGTON (AP) —Increasing interest in nutrition has prompted manufacturers to begin making special claims for their products in hopes of increasing sales.

These label claims may not always be clear, however, so the Federal Trade Commission has provided a few explanations. Those include:

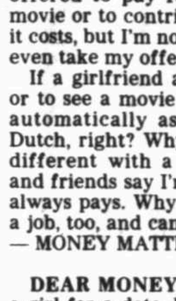

"LOW CALORIE" — Under Food and Drug Administration guidelines, this means a product cannot contain more than 40 calories per serving. A package may contain more than one serving, however, so check the label for serving sizes.

"REDUCED CALORIE" — Foods labeled "reduced calorie" are not limited to a specific number of calories per serving. However, they must be at least one-third lower in calorie content than a similar food which does not claim to be reduced.

For example, if an average serving of cheesecake contains 600 calories, the reduced calorie version is limited to 400 calories per serving.

"NATURAL" — While many foods labeled as natural do not contain additives or preservatives, there is no official definition for the term regulating its use. You can check the claim of natural by reading the list of ingredients on the label.

"LIGHT" or "LOW-CALORIE" — Those terms have no official definition, and some products may contain more calories than you might expect.

LIVING TODAY

Smoking can be halted

By SHARON A. HILLIS

Women's death rate from lung cancer has tripled since the 1960s. The U.S. Surgeon General now predicts that it will surpass the death rate from breast cancer and become the leading cause of disease-related death among women.

In addition, cigarette smoking is a major threat to a woman's ability to bear healthy children and increases her risk of heart disease and peptic ulcers. Most women realize the danger smoking holds for their health and the health of their children, and they know it costs them a lot of money.

MANY WOMEN especially say they can't give up cigarettes because they will gain weight. If you're one of those keep in mind that most people who quit do not gain weight.

According to the National Cancer Institute, studies show about 1/3 of the people who quit do gain; 1/3 stay the same; and another 1/3 actually lose weight, often as the result of a combined exercise and diet program.

Also remember that giving up cigarettes is far healthier for you than adding a few extra pounds. It would take the addition of over 75 pounds to offset the health of benefits a normal smoker gains from quitting.

MOST SMOKERS want to quit, they just don't know how. Successful methods for quitting are as different as the people who use them. Some people can quit "cold turkey," some must gradually reduce their smoking, some plan a special program, or receive professional and medical help.

Some successful quitters have given up cigarettes by replacing them with new habits or by using some gimmick. Whatever the method the key is to quit and quit again until the habit is licked for good.

THE FOLLOWING methods suggested by the National Cancer Institute have been used by successful quitters:

• When you are thinking about quitting list all the reasons why and repeat one of the reasons 10 times before going to bed each night. Think positively and avoid negative attitudes. Set a target date for quitting and make it sacred — let nothing break that date.

• Change your habits. Condition yourself physically by starting a modest exercise regime, drinking more fluids, getting plenty of rest and avoiding fatigue.

• Involve someone else by getting a friend or spouse to quit with you. Bet a friend that you can quit by your target date, and then put aside your cigarette money every day and forfeit it if you smoke.

• Switch to a distasteful brand or to one that's low in tar and nicotine.

Sophisticated souffle can be created in microwave

By DESIREE VIVEA
Colpey News Service

Is there a person on the globe who can resist the glamour of a light, fluffy souffle? Savory or sweet, main dish or dessert, the souffle towers over other egg dishes to reach the height of sophistication.

A souffle looks as good as it tastes, opulently over-brimming the baking dish and rising in all its magnificent glory to a puffy crown. It's a sure bet to impress dinner guests. And yes — you can create one a la microwave!

All souffles consist of two parts. First is the thick base sauce, made of butter, flour, liquid and egg yolks. The second part is simply egg whites and lots of air. The sauce is usually flavored with something, and then mixed with the beaten egg whites just before baking. It is the air, beaten into the eggs, which expands with heat during baking to cause the souffle to rise.

The baking dish should be a little wider than it is high. A dish which is too wide means a larger horizontal area for expansion, and thus less height fr your souffle. The sides of the dish should be straight and smooth. If you don't have a regular souffle dish, use a straight-sided casserole. For individual souffles, custard cups work just fine. And in the microwave, even coffee mugs can be used!

A souffle will expand two to three times in volume, so container size is important. Be sure to use the size recommended in your recipe. When using a collar, cut it to extend 2 or 3 inches above the rim of the container.

Next time you're having guests (or even if you're not), consider serving a scrumptious, sophisticated something special — a souffle!

PUFFY CHEESE SOUFFLE

1½ cups milk
One-third cup unsifted all-purpose flour
½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. Worcestershire sauce
1½ cups sharp cheddar, shredded
2 tbsps. butter or margarine
6 eggs, separated
1 tsp. cream of tartar

Combine milk, flour, salt and Worcestershire sauce in a 4-cup glass measure Beat with rotary beater until smooth. Stir in cheese and add butter or margarine. Microwave for 5 minutes on roast setting. Beat well and continue cooking for 2 to 3 minutes on roast or until thickened (about 180 F); set aside.

Beat egg whites and cream of tartar in large mixer bowl until stiff but moist peaks form; set aside. Beat egg yolks in small mixer bowl until thick and lemon colored. Beat thickened cheese sauce into yolks. Spoon mixture over egg whites; fold in gently. Pour into ungreased 2-quart souffle dish. Microwave for 30 to 34 minutes on defrost setting, or until set. Serve immediately. Serves 4 to 6.

Some leave their artichoke hearts in Castroville

By DESIREE VIVEA
Copley News Service

Castroville, on the California coast, is billed as the "Artichoke Capital of the World."

Not very far south of San Francisco, this town boasts field upon field of large, fernlike perennials. And on these plants grow lots of lovely artichokes, dusky green and delicious. (I left my heart in Castroville – my artichoke heart, that is ...)

When I was a little kid there were two vegetables I wouldn't touch. One was lima beans and the other artichokes. I still blanch at the sight of a lima bean on my plate, but I've since grown to adore artichokes. Perhaps it's an acquired taste. After all, I didn't like wine as a child either, and now, well ...

It may surprise you to learn that an artichoke is actually a flower bud. If not harvested in time, this bud will blossom into a feathery purple thistle. Very pretty, but hardly edible.

Globe artichokes are the one whose leaves are eaten. These are generally plucked, dipped into melted butter, mayonnaise or hollandaise sauce, and then scraped between the teeth. The leaves, stripped of their tender flesh, are then discarded.

These artichokes are rich in iodine, mineral salts and iron. When shopping, choose those which are firm and whose leaves are plump. Leaves should be closed tightly onto he body of the artichoke, not loose.

Cooked artichokes will keep for two or three days in the refrigerator. Fresh globe artichokes are very simple to prepare in your microwave oven, and cooking instructions are included below.

FRESH GLOBE ARTICHOKES

Clip sharp tips from the leaves of the artichoke, using kitchen shears. With a sharp knife, cut off the pointed end opposite the stem. Wash thoroughly, allowing some water to cling to the leaves. Wrap in plastic wrap and place in microwave oven. Cook 6 to 7 minutes per medium artichoke (4 inches in diameter), rotating artichokes one-quarter turn halfway through cooking time. Let rest, still wrapped, 5 minutes before serving.

ARTICHOKE-CHICKEN CASSEROLE

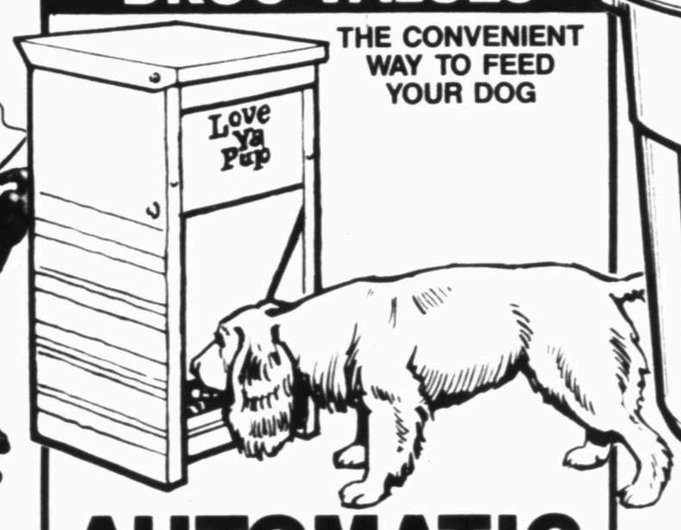

1½ lbs. whole boned chicken breasts
1 cup packaged bread coating mix
1 tbsp. butter or margarine
1 (8 oz.) pkg. frozen artichoke hearts
¼ cup white wine
2 strips cooked and crumbled bacon

Cut chicken breasts in half. Dip in crumb coating. Preheat browning skillet 4½ minutes. Place butter and chicken pieces in skillet and cook in microwave 4 minutes. Turn pieces over. Place artichoke hearts around chicken breasts. Pour in wine. Cook, covered for 2 minutes or until chicken is fork-tender, turning dish halfway through cooking time. Top with crumbled bacon and season with salt and pepper to taste. Serves 4.

Time has come for popcorn to be taken seriously

By KIT SNEDAKER
Hearst Feature Service

It's time to take popcorn seriously.

A popcorn stand in the middle of the international airport at Prestwick, Scotland, is astonishing. But watching it peddle bags of buttered popcorn to anxious British, Swedish and Japanese tourists means that popcorn is international.

So popular has this original American snack become that some 100 schools in the county of Hertfordshire, England, are pushing popcorn in a effort to wean British youngsters from sugary deserts. At the cafeteria in St. Anglea's Roman Catholic Girls School in Stevenage, students are tempted by bowls of popcorn sprinkled with dried fruit or yogurt for dessert, or with melted cheese and herbs for a vegetable course or snack. Other strange new popcorn combinations are popcorn and pork rind, horseradish, onion and red chilies; popcorn with paprika and crushed red chilies sprinkled on, and popcorn as a condiment for curries.

From American Indians, with whom it originated, to India's curry, popcorn has come a long way. When the Pilgrims landed, the Indians showed them how to pop corn by holding a cob in the fire or tossing in kernels and eating the ones that popped out.

Old New England recipes that have come down to us indicate that popcorn was popped as needed for cookies, custards, even turkey stuffing, and usually chopped before adding. With a food processor or blender, this is a snap.

BAKED POPCORN CUSTARD

2 cups milk
2 cups popped corn
1 egg
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1/4 cup sugar
1/8 teaspoon salt

Pour milk over the popcorn and let it stand. Beat the egg, add the other ingredients, drain off the milk and mix it with the egg mixture. Put the soaked popcorn into a buttered baking dish. Pour the custard over it and bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, until the custard is set, about half an hour. Serve with cream. Makes 6 servings.

POPCORN CAKE

2 cups unpopped corn
salt
1 cup walnuts
1 pint molasses
butter the size of a walnut
2 or 3 loaf pans, well greased

Pop the corn. Add salt to taste. Turn out into a large roasting pan or dish pan. Add nuts and mix. Boil molasses until it forms a soft ball in cold water (232 to 234 degrees). Add butter. Quickly stir into popcorn covering all kernels. Pile mixture into loaf pans, pressing down with slightly wet hands. Pack tightly and finish by pounding with a potato masher. Wrap in waxed paper. Let stand overnight. To serve, tip out of the pan and slice down like a cake.

Swiss say sauces turn simple entrees into something special

By CHARLYN FARGO
Copley News Service

If you asked the Swiss what makes their food unique, they'd say sauces. Sauces are what turn their veal, pork or beef into something special.

They don't go for the elaborate food of their French neighbors. The Swiss instead describe their food as simple — dishes of cheese, fried potatoes, sausage, bread and entrees, with a sauce or two to dress them up.

The country also is known for several dishes: Probably the most famous is Swiss fondue — sausage in a hot pot or bread dipped in egg, sugar and cinnamon.

Fondue is a specialty of the western states, or cantons. Best known is Fondue Neuchatel or Fondue Neuenburger, which boldly combines cheese with white wine.

The other famous cheese dish is raclette or fried cheese — remember when the old grandfather in "Heidi" fried the cheese at an open fire? Basically, that's the principle behind it — cheese fried to the melting point, then scraped.

A mature Tilset or Gruyere cheese is halved and the cut side is held in the flames until the surface begins to melt. The melting cheese is scraped onto a warm plate ("racler" means "to scrape") and eaten with small potatoes, salted cucumbers and onions pickled in vinegar.

Recipes that follow are from the "Swiss Kitchen" by Eva Maria Borer. Unfortunately, Europeans measure by weight rather than volume, so amounts are given in ounces rather than cups. But where possible, equivalent amounts are given.

FONDUE NEUCHATEL
(Per Person)

2½ ozs. sparkling white wine
Clove of garlic
5½ ozs. grated or finely shredded cheese, such as half Emmenthal (Swiss) and half Gruyere
1 tsp. cornstarch
1 small glass Kirsch
Pepper
Nutmeg or paprika
Approximately 6 ozs. white bread

Fondue is usually prepared in a glazed earthenware dish with a handle, but n enameled saucepan with a handle may be used. Rub the inside of the saucepan with ½ clove of garlic and warm the wine. Pour cheese into pan and slowly stir in wine until the cheese melts. Add the Kirsch to the cornstarch, add to the cheese and keep stirring over heat until mixture comes to a boil. Add freshly ground pepper and nutmeg or paprika according to taste.

To serve, the fondue should be kept simmering, but not boiling. The bread, which has been cut into cubes, is arranged in a small basket.

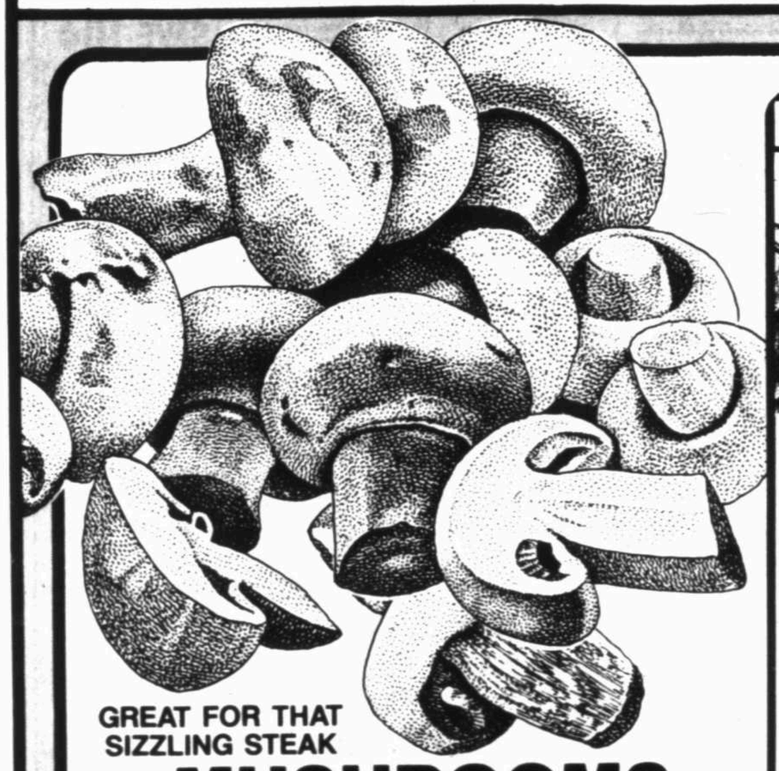

BASEL FLOUR SOUP

2½ ozs. butter
2½ pints beef stock
3¾ ozs. flour (1 oz. flour equals 4 tbsps.)
2 ozs. grated cheese

Heat butter in a shallow iron pan and fry butter until golden brown, stirrig constantly. Work in ¼ pint of stock. Pour all into a saucepan and add the rest of the stock. Allow to simmer on low heat for 30 minutes. Pass through a sieve, add grated cheese. Serves 4.

Celery low-cal, good for teeth

Copley News Service

Celery is a favorite vegetable with dieters, and no wonder — an 8-inch stalk provides a lot of crunch for just 5 calories. (A whole pound has only 85 calories, compared to a medium-size pear at around 110!)

Besides going easy on the calories, celery is also what dentists refer to as a "detergent" food. No, this doesn't mean that it contains detergent nor that it tastes like it, but that it acts as a detergent. Chewing crisp, crunchy foods which are low in carbohydrates, such as celery, can help to clean the teeth of lingering food particles. Pack a stick along with your lunch and munch it for dessert.

The leaves and stems of celery have little sugar or starch. Most of its bulk is made up of cellulose, which provides the fiber necessary for proper intestinal functioning.

Don't soak celery sticks in water to make them crispy. Instead, sprinkle with water, wrap in a damp cloth, and refrigerate. (Soaking in water can mean nutrient loss as water-soluble vitamins get leached out.)

Celery is also a favorite of vegetarians, since it adds just the right amount of crunch to any number of dishes. Cook celery just to the crisp-tender stage, as Oriental chefs do. Both taste and texture will remain at their peak.

For extra celery flavor add celery leaves or celery seed. The latter comes from a wild variety called "smallage," known for centuries in Mediterranean kitchens. Celery salt is made of the ground seed, mixed with table salt. This should not be used as a salt substitute in low-sodium diets, since it is really salt flavored with celery.

Celeriac is a variety of celery grown for its root. Its flavor is that of celery, but the texture is more like that of a turnip.

Muffins sweet, light

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

SWEET BRAN MUFFINS

They have a light texture and store well.

1¼ cups all-bran cereal
⅓ cup raisins
½ cup boiling water
1¼ cups unbleached all-purpose flour
1¼ teaspoons baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
1 large egg
¼ cup salad oil
½ cup molasses
1 cup buttermilk

In a small bowl soak bran and raisins in boiling water. Cool. On wax paper or in a small bowl stir together flour, soda and salt. In a large bowl beat together until blended the egg, sugar, oil, molasses and buttermilk; stir in bran mixture. Add flour mixture and stir only until moistened. Turn into oiled ⅓-cup capacity muffin-pan cups, filling two-thirds full. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in center comes out clean — 20 to 25 minutes. With a small metal spatula, loosen edges; let stand on wire rack about 5 minutes; remove. Serve warm. Makes 15.

Surplus wines sold cheaply

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

California's near-record harvest in 1982, combined with slow wine sales due to the recession and lower prices for imports, generated a huge surplus of wine in the state — a situation that was made for the so-called "negociants."

In France, a negociant buys wine already made by small growers and puts together a regional or district-named wine or proprietary blend that can sell for very little.

The concept of the negociant had not been tried much in California before the surplus, but cash-flow problems grew for many wine makers, who then were happy to simply sell their wine in bulk to pay bills. So a host of "private label" wines began to spring up, some of which were produced by entrepreneurs who went into the wine country "looking for juice," in the argot of the trade.

And this is where Coastal Wines, Ltd., became a major force in medium-priced wines — though you may never have heard of them.

Russ Woodbury, better known as a producer of fine California port, joined forces with J. Pat Dor almost two years ago, and this year expects to ship more than 300,000 cases of wine — perhaps as many as 500,000 cases. About 80 percent of it will be simple, quaffable, generic wines — chablis, burgundy and vin ros — all selling for $1.49 per bottle and competitive with other like-priced wines.

To find Coastal's wines, look for the words "Signature Selections" diagonally on the attractive labels. Dor's signature runs up a side panel.

Student asks if princess pregnant

WESTONING, England (AP) — Giving Princess Diana's stomach two firm pats, 13-year-old Fiona Passmore boldly asked the question that many Britons are thinking — "How's your baby?"

The incident occurred when 22-year-old Diana, who is widely rumored to be expecting a second child, visited the McIntyre Communities Center for the Mentally Handicapped, 40 miles northwest of London, on Tuesday.

Diana stepped back, smiled and replied "Did I hear right?." But she didn't answer the question.

Fiona, a pupil at the center, then presented the princess with a hand-picked bunch of daisies.

Buckingham Palace has refused to confirm or deny recent newspaper reports that the princess, whose son Prince William is 15 months old, is pregnant again. Diana and her husband Prince Charles also aren't commenting.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Mackenzie Phillips has been "suspended indefinitely" from CBS' "One Day at a Time" because of a health problem that has made her thin and tired, a spokesman for Embassy Television says.

Miss Phillips is suffering from hypoadrenia, a malfunction of the adrenal gland, spokesman Barry Stagg said Tuesday.

Stagg said the 23-year-old actress taped three shows in her role as Julie Cooper Horvath, playing the elder daughter of Bonnie Franklin, before she went on sick leave.

"Mackenzie Phillips has been suspended indefinitely, which is a legal term, but basically she's on sick leave," said Stagg. "We don't need her back until mid-November, when she's due to make her next appearance in an episode."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tough-talking Charlie Daniels, who told the Soviets where to go in his 1980 hit song "In America," says the United States ought to take a hard line against the Soviet Union in view of the downing of the Korean airliner.

"We ought to quit trading with them...sell to anybody but them. I wouldn't sell them a screwdriver," the 46-year-old country-rock singer said in a telephone interview from his home Tuesday.

However, Daniels said if given the chance he'd still like to play his fiddle and guitar in Moscow's Red Square for 100,000 to 200,00 Russian people.

"If I could go and just entertain the people and play in a way that I wanted, and be guaranteed that I could get back, I'd love to do it," he said.

But he added that Soviet officials would never let that happen.

"There are such jackasses that run the country," said Daniels, "It's so repressive a society."

BOSTON (AP) — Joan Kennedy showed up for a fashion show confessing she was wearing hose for the first time in three months, but designer Bill Blass appeared at the same occasion sockless.

"It's still summer," Blass said Monday at a show to benefit Boston's Wang Center for the Performing Arts. "I don't wear socks in the summer."

"I feel like a kid on the first day back in school," the 46-year-old Mrs. Kennedy was quoted as saying. "I still have sand in my shoes. It's the first time I've worn pantyhose since June 22."

Mrs. Kennedy, whose divorce from Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., becomes final in December, spent the summer at the Kennedy family home in Hyannis. Her younger son, Patrick, 16, started boarding school of Phillips Academy in Andover on Monday. She said that for the first time, none of her three children are at home with her.

Her son Edward Jr. is at Wesleyan College in Middletown, Conn., and her daughter, Kara, is living in New York City.

"Kara is looking for a job," said Mrs. Kennedy. "We're both in the same boat, thinking about a job."

ATLANTA (AP) — The students still call him "Mr. President," but Jimmy Carter's current role is more like that of Mr. Chips.

The former president addressed about 65 students in a political science course at Emory University on Tuesday as guest lecturer for more than an hour.

"I felt while I was president, I should do what I thought was best, despite politicial consequences," said Carter, 58. "I addressed the issues forthrightly and tenaciously and many of them were unpopular."

"When I heard he was speaking, I got real excited," said freshman Lee Lazarus, an 18-year-old New Jersey resident. "I can't wait until he comes back. He's supposed to speak two more times. I wish he was our regular instructor."

Before Carter spoke, the students were assigned to read his memoirs and several other standard political science textbooks.

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Prince Claus and his wife Queen Beatrix rolled into Parliament Square in a gold horse-drawn coach flanked by army bands and marching troops to the cheers of onlookers and legislators.

It was the first public appearance of the 57-year-old prince, who suffers recurring depressions, in almost a year.

Public broadcasts shouldn't air ads, study concludes

ENTERTAINMENT

WASHINGTON (AP) — A special federal task force says public radio and TV stations should forget the idea of accepting commercials as a way to offset federal budget cuts.

The task force, created by Congress in 1981 to study alternative fund-raising possibilities for public broadcasters, voted Tuesday to recommend the existing ban on commercials on the public airwaves be maintained.

The matter should only be reconsidered if "it can be established clearly that overall benefits to public broadcasting will exceed the costs," the task force added.

Several task force members said after Tuesday's vote that while a 15-month experiment had showed some public TV stations could raise extra money by airing commercials, it also showed advertising was no panacea and that there was no preferable alternative to direct federal financing.

"I just think it's a very wise and very prudent decision," said Edward J. Pfister, the president of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and a member of the task force. "It's good for public broadcasting, because it maintains our public service character."

Rep. Al Swift, D-Wash., another task force member, said the advertising experiment had shown him "that it's difficult for public stations to sell advertising because in the main, they don't have the audience numbers. And if they compete for mass audiences, that inevitably leads them away from public broadcasting."

In reviewing its final report Tuesday, the task force did agree that Congress should direct the Federal Communications Commission to relax its guidelines for on-air credits given to program underwriters.

As long as a company is willing to help underwrite the production of a show, the task force said, the public radio or TV station should be able to air a brief institutional message, brand name, slogan or public service announcement on behalf of that company.

Such a form of "enhanced underwriting credit" would prohibit a "hard-sell commercial" promoting a specific product, but it would still likely improve the ability of public stations to attract additional support, said James H. Quello, the task force chairman and a member of the FCC.

Overall, however, the task force concluded Congress should renew public broadcasting's authority to receive federal funds at least through 1989, and "set a target level of federal funding during this period that provides a strong base that allows public broadcasting to maintain, expand and enhance the reach of its services."

The lone dissenting vote on most of the recommendations was cast by Ken Robinson, a Commerce Department official who represented the administration. Robinson said he thought the report "overplayed" the risks of advertising and removed an option that stations should at able to decide on their own.

Series' debut gives ABC second top week

LOS ANGELES (AP) — ABC's "Hardcastle & McCormick" show, about an unlikely crime-fighting duo, came on like gangbusters in its two-hour debut — giving ABC two straight weeks on top of the ratings for the first time since May.

The premiere finished No.1 for the week ended Sept. 18, five points ahead of its nearest rival, and helped give ABC its first Sunday victory in non-special programming since October 1980.

"Hardcastle & McCormick" was created by Stephen J. Cannell, whose other creation, NBC's "The A Team," finished fourth for the week. Cannell has yet another tongue-in-cheek adventure coming up, NBC's "The Rousters."

ABC won the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings with a network average of 16.2. CBS was second with 14.0 and NBC was third with 13.8. The networks say this means that in an average prime-time minute 16.2 percent of the nation's television homes were tuned to ABC.

Tied for second were the season premiere of CBS' "60 Minutes" and an original ABC special.

CBS' "NFL Football Post Game Show" was in fifth place and NBC's telecast of the Miss America Pageant — traditionally first in the week of its broadcast — was sixth.

Math up, verbal down on scholastic test scores

NEW YORK (AP) — College-bound seniors scored slightly higher in math on the Scholastic Aptitude Test in 1982-83, but verbal scores dropped for the first time since 1980.

The latest score results, released by the College Board on Sunday, left up in the air whether public schools have truly begun to reverse nearly two decades of steady decline. A year ago, by contrast, math and verbal SAT scores both went up for the first time in 19 years, and many educators took that as a solid sign that the downtrend had reversed.

The board, a private, non-profit organization that sponsors the SAT, said math scores of the 1 million students taking the college entrance test averaged 468, one point higher than the year before. Verbal scores fell one point, to an average of 425. The SAT is scored on a scale of 200 to 800, and is designed to be of equal difficulty each year.

"The rise in this year's mathematics score, coupled with last year's increase, seems to imply that positive things are happening in the nation's schools," said College Board president George H. Hanford. "However, as this year's flurry of reports on the state of American education suggests, it is equally obvious that much more remains to be done if we are to raise the level of secondary school performance of our students."

In fact, math and verbal scores have barely changed in the past six years. And the scores are still far below 1963 averges of 502 in math and 478 in verbal before the scores began their downward spiral.

The board, in its annual survey of test-takers titled "National Report on College-Bound Seniors," also found:

—The average score on College Board achievement tests was 537, unchanged from 1982 but the highest since 1976.

—The proportion of minority students taking the SAT rose to a record 19 percent, due largely to the seventh consecutive annual increase in Oriental test-takers.

—The median family income of those taking the SAT was $29,000, up 8 percent from 1982. The College Board estimated about one in five families can afford the cost of a year at a public, four-year college, and only one in 10 can afford the cost of a private, four-year school.

—Business and commerce was the most popular area of intended college study, same as last year, with 18.5 percent of high school senior stating that preference. Education was least popular, with just 4.5 percent declaring that as their likely field of study.

Drought damage estimated by states

By The Associated Press

Here is a state-by-state breakdown of the latest estimates of losses to farmers in states hardest hit by this summer's drought:

ALABAMA — Combined crop and livestock losses are estimated at about $100 million and Gov. George C. Wallace has declared a state of emergency in 49 of the state's 67 counties. About 100 of the 1,000 farmers in Madison County in northern Alabama are threatened with losing 75 percent of their crops and, ultimately, their farms.

ARKANSAS — The state office of Emergency Services said crop damage could exceed a half billion dollars, with heavy losses to crops such as soybeans, cotton, grain, sorghum and rice. Poultry producers have reported losses totaling about $50 million as a result of increased feed costs.

DELAWARE — The expected harvest of corn — Delaware's leading cash crop — is expected to be 32 percent below last year's 12.6 million bushels. The Delaware-based Delmarva Poultry Industry Inc., said it has lost $750,000 worth of chickens, and the nationwide poultry industry has been losing about 4 percent of the 9.5 million birds it grows each week.

GEORGIA — The state's $3 billion agriculture industry has lost an estimated $200 million, prompting a request that the entire state be declared a disaster area. Half the $373 million soybean crop has been lost, along with 20 percent of the $370 million peanut crop, 80 percent of the $175 million corn crop and half the $56 million cotton crop. The $913.8 million poultry and egg industry has lost more than one million broilers, 54,000 breeders and 32,000 laying hens. The drought followed a late spring freeze which cut the state's $22.4 million peach crop to 85 million pounds, down from 110 million pounds in 1982.

ILLINOIS — This state's farmers will harvest the smallest corn crop in 25 years, partly because of reduced planting under the government's pay-in-kind program, but also because of the summer's record heat and prolonged drought. The corn harvest is projected at 608.4 million bushels, down 60 percent from last year. Soybean production is expected to be 247.8 million bushels, a 22 percent decline.

INDIANA — The value of this year's corn crop declined by $900 million, from $2.1 billion to $1.2 billion, according to agriculture officials. The corn crop is forecast at 345 million bushels, the smallest since 1964. The 1983 price per bushel is $3.50, compared with $2.62 a year ago. The 1983 soybean crop is valued at $1.1 billion, the same as 1982's crop value, but the price per bushel has risen from $6.30 in 1982 to $9.75 this year. Soybean production is forecast at 109.8 million bushels, the smallest since 1974.

IOWA — The State Emergency Board estimates agricultural losses could exceed $680 million. Twenty-one counties have been declared disaster areas and another 13 are expected to be added. The state's corn crop is estimated to be 52 percent less than last year, or 756 million bushels, the smallest crop in 19 years. The soybean crop is off 18 percent from a year ago. Some farmers simply won't harvest any corn, while others could have yields of 10 bushels an acre or less, as compared to a statewide average of 121 bushels an acre in 1982.

KANSAS — Losses to farmers are estimated at $240 million with the corn crop cut by 17 percent to 82.8 million bushels; the grain sorghum yield reduced 28 percent to $120.4 million bushels, and the soybean crop by 40 percent to 24.2 million bushels below earlier forecasts.

KENTUCKY — Gov. John Y. Brown is sseking federal assistance for all 120 counties, with crop damage estimated at more than $480 million. That includes a 40 percent loss, or $300 million, for burley tobacco farmers; a 35 percent lower yield for corn, for a $106 million loss, and a 27 percent lower yield for soybeans, for an $80 million loss.

MARYLAND — Damage to corn, soybean and tobacco crops is estimated at $66.5 million. Gov. Harry Hughes has asked that all 23 counties be declared disaster areas and eligible for federal aid.

MICHIGAN — No reports of drought damage to crops, although it was the hottest August since 1959.

MISSOURI — Gov. Christopher Bond has declared 103 of the state's 114 counties disaster areas, with the corn and soybean crops hit hard. But officials said it was too early to estimate the damage in terms of dollars. Agriculture officials said the yields in the corn fields could vary from 5 bushels an acre to 75 bushels. For soybeans, it could vary from 5 bushels to 25 bushels.

NEW JERSEY — Early estimates indicate more than 50 percent of the Garden State's tomato crop was lost, along with more than 70 percent of the white potatoes and 50 percent of the soybeans and field corn.

NEBRASKA — Gov. Bob Kerry is analyzing reports that show as many as 10 southeast Nebraska counties could suffer as much as $125 million in crop damage losses. Six counties, and perhaps all 10, will be declared disaster areas. But officials said that because much of Nebraska's corn is grown on irrigated land, the state could be "saved" economically.

NORTH CAROLINA — With agricutural losses estimated in excess of $300 million, Gov. Jim Hunt has asked that the entire state be declared a disaster area. Hardest hit are the producers of corn, tobacco, soybeans, turkeys, broilers, breeder hens, livestock and dairy cattle.

NORTH DAKOTA — No dollar estimate is available, but agriculture officials say losses appear to be about 25 percent to such crops as spring wheat and barley. The state grows about 80 percent of the nation's barley, which is especially susceptible to heat damage.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Amniocentesis may save fetuses

Dear Dr. Solomon: Do you know of any statistics that show how many abortions are done because of prenatal diagnosis with amniocentesis? I am scheduled for amniocentesis and I would like to know in how many cases there is a recommendation for an abortion. Also, if there was no amniocentesis, are there any figures that show how many more infants would be born than is now the case? — Mrs. L.E., Oklahoma City, Okla.

Dear Mrs. E.: Dr. Ernest B. Hook, of the Albany Medical College of Union University, Albany, N.Y., reports that about two percent of diagnoses by amniocentesis reveal a fetal abnormality; of course, not all of these women decide to have an abortion.

Some surveys have shown that there are actually more children born because of the availability of aminocentesis, not fewer. In one survey of 300 women, for example, aminocentesis that revealed some abnormality in the fetus results in abortions in three percent; however, four percent of the women said they would have elected to have an abortion if aminocentesis had not been available, and an additional eight percent said they would have avoided pregnancy altogether. Therefore, aminocentesis appears to result in the survival of many fetuses that otherwise would probably have been aborted.

In addition, a nationwide poll showed that a number of couples who had not been aware they could obtain prenatal diagnoses had been planning to have an abortion but changed their minds when they learned about aminocentesis and found that the fetus was normal.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband has angina but he seems to be doing pretty good on the medication his doctor gave him. He can even play tennis now once in a while. But he is thinking of going for an operation because he feels it will make him even better, and his doctor says that this is a possibility. What do you think of the idea? Wouldn't it be better to leave well enough alone? — Mrs. L.K., Pittsburgh, Pa.

Dear Mrs. K.: Whether or not your husband should have surgery is something that he and his doctor will have to decide after exploring all possibilities. But the idea of coronary artery bypass grafting for someone who seems to be doing well with medical treatment is not too unusual.

In a report from Sweden, Dr. E. Varnauskas describes a study of more than 750 men. In general, survival after surgical treatment was slightly better than after medical treatment alone. Specifically, surgical treatment resulted in a 53 percent decrease in mortality at the end of five years.

Surgery is never something to be undertaken lightly, but I can understand why your husband and his doctor might want to consider it in his case.

Dear Dr. Solomon: If a woman is taking a drug for her nerves and she becomes pregnant, does she have to stop taking it? What I mean is, can the drug do any harm to the baby? — Lola, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Dear Lola: Whether any medication should be taken during pregnancy depends on whether the benefits of doing so outweigh the risks. Therefore, even though there may be a possibility of an adverse reaction on the fetus, the risk to both the mother and the fetus if the drug is discontinued must also be considered. Needless to say, close medical supervision is essential during this time.

Drugs may have an adverse effect not only during the pregnancy but at the time of delivery and even as the baby develops. Drugs should therefore not be given to a pregnant woman unless they are clearly indicated.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I would like to know how a breast biopsy is done and what the purpose of it is. I have heard different stories about this. — Ms. L.V., Camden, N.J.

Dear Ms. V.: The purpose of a biopsy is to obtain some cells for evaluation under a microscope to determine the existence of disease. It may be done surgically or with a needle.

A surgical biopsy involves removal of a breast lump or a piece of the lump. A needle aspiration biopsy withdraws cells from the lump. The choice between the two procedures depends on the patient's particular situation, the patient's preference, and the physician's judgment.

For Calvin, Phoeniz, Ariz.: The condom is a very effective, if not perfect, shield against most venereal diseases. Women who are deciding on a method of contraception might want to consider this before coming to a conclusion.

For Charlene, Brooklyn, N.Y.: Your husband is correct; despite what you may have read on the subject, ultrasound is a form of radiation.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).

Truckers get 'that old time religion'

SHERMAN (AP) — At the Big "B" Truck Stop on Highway 75 South a weary driver can fill his rig with diesel, down a steaming cup of java and hear some "old time religion" before the superslab summons him to cities along the line.

The fuel and coffee are there for a price. The religion is free, courtesy of Alvin Reynolds — teacher, preacher, counselor and friend to the trucker.

"Truckers are away from home for two to three weeks at a time," Reynolds explains. "They need someone to counsel and talk with them. I counsel with them according to the Bible, not according to any church."

Pinned to the pocket of Reynolds' white long-sleeved shirt is a button that reads "Jesus Is Love." The red cap he wears bears a cross, Bible and "Christ Is The Answer."

Reynolds, 65, recapped tires until he began his novel ministry from his "trucker's chapel," a renovated bread truck that also serves as his home. Inside are a small bed, table, cabinets and assorted color pictures of the Last Supper, Christ preaching to his disciples and truckers on the road at the time of the rapture. A pair of vinyl-backed chairs used as chapel "pews" sit in a corner next to a cardboard box filled with empty Winston cigarette packages.

"I've been around trucks and truckers for 35 years," Reynolds says as he sips coffee in the dining room of the truck stop. "I've been a layman, preacher and teacher for 25 years. When I retired about three years ago, I put the two together and dedicated myself and everything about me to the Lord."

Born in Blue, Okla., Reynolds worked in Gainesville, Sulphur Springs and Durant, Okla., before moving to Sherman where he retired. Before his eyesight began failing him, he used to take his chapel on the road, he said. Now he preaches and lives at the truck stop fulltime, thanks to Social Security "and what little the truckers donate."

Reynolds estimates that between 15 and 30 truckers visit his chapel every week for the personal brand of religion he practices and the counseling he offers.

"Most of 'em come to me to talk about marriage problems," he said. "There are more marriage problems than anything else. I show them in First Corinthians the whole chapter which talks about marriage."

Reynolds, divorced in 1950, said that experience has helped him deal with those types of problems. "I know what it's like. I've been through it. It has helped me a tremendous lot."

The greatest joy he receives from his ministry, he said, is turning someone to Christ. The stories are numerous.

"There was this woman between 25 and 30 who drove a truck," he recounts. "She came to me about 11 o'clock one day and told me her whole life story. I said, 'Jesus is on one side of the road and you're on the other, and Jesus can't help you until you cross that road.'

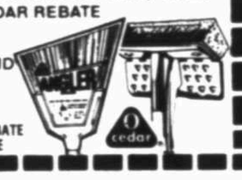

"Well, she left, and a little bit later she burst into my van and said, 'Alvin, I want to accept Christ.' She was dressed in old dirty khaki shorts and her hair was a mess. She wouldn't have gone to any church like that.

"But you see, the Lord used me in this old van to help her. And I did," Reynolds said.

Reynolds doesn't profess to be an ordained minister or have any formal church training. "It comes from within," he explains. "He has to call you first and then empower you."

Reynolds said he has been interested and intrigued with the ministry since he was a child.

House passes farm bill

Earlier USDA notices mandated

By STEVEN EISENSTADT
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Trying to make federal crop reduction programs easier for farmers, the House passed legislation Tuesday to give growers earlier notice of when the programs begin.

The House measure, which covers the 1984 and 1985 feed grain and 1985 wheat crop programs, would require the Agriculture Department to detail its policies a month-and-a-half earlier than it does now.

The government has dealt with agricultural surpluses by instituting programs that encourage farmers to idle some of their land. But growers complain they get little time to adjust their planting schedules to the programs.

The legislation, passed unanimously by a voice vote, was the result of a compromise between the Democrat-controlled House and the Reagan administration and precluded a vote scheduled for Tuesday on whether to override a veto by President Reagan last month on a similar bill.

Both the Reagan-vetoed bill and the compromise measure set Sept. 30 as the deadline for any announcements of feed grain reduction programs and July 1 as the last date for detailing wheat reduction programs. Presently, the deadlines are Nov. 15 for feed grain programs and Aug. 15 for wheat.

But the compromise bill added a provision allowing the Agriculture Department to make changes in the programs 30 days after the deadlines if there is a change in the commodities' supplies.

Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, said the new deadlines would give farmers more time to adjust their planting schedules. The provision, he said, would assuage administration fears of not being able to alter the programs should early frosts or drought alter the supply of crops.

"This compromise doesn't give us everything we wanted for farmers," de la Garza said. "But it does give producers a better break than they get today."

A de la Garza aide said the drive for a compromise was begun by House Republicans, who believed the scheduled veto override vote pitted them between the administration and farmers.

The Senate bill, sponsored by Sen. Walter Huddleston, D-Kan., is expected to also pass easily. "We think it will fly," a Huddleston aide said Tuesday. The Senate is expected to consider the measure next month.

AGRICULTURE

Ground beef impounded

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ground beef intended for school children's lunches from two Nebraska and Colorado plants has been impounded by the federal government after reports that the meat might fall below government standards.

Agriculture Secretary John R. Block on Tuesday ordered the government to impound meat processed by Cattle King of Denver and Nebraska Beef Packers Inc., of Gering, Neb.

Block said the action was prompted by reports indicating "the ground beef may have come from substandard cattle and may have been processed under less than sanitary" plant conditions. The impounded meat is being checked for "foreign matter, chemical residues and spoilage," he said.

However, a spokesman for the companies said the government's action was based on "false and slanderous" information.

The Agriculture Department said about 6.4 million pounds of the meat is still in distribution channels to school districts. John McClung, of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service, said Cattle King provided about 14 percent of the ground beef used in the school lunch program last year, and Nebraska Beef about 7 percent.

Block said routine USDA samples at the two plants since October 1981 showed no health threat and no reports of illness associated with beef produced by them.

But Block said he ordered the meat impounded and tested "in the interest of public safety and confidence in the meat supply."

"Commodities approved for the school lunch program have always been of the highest quality and it is imperative to take these steps as another indication of the government's commitment to maintain such standards," he said.

In Denver, Cattle King administrator Henry Stanko said, "This whole thing has snowballed from one report that NBC did" on Sunday night about the Cattle King plant.

"They are basing their story on one interview with one meat inspector who made false and slanderous statements about us ... The whole story is false," said Stanko, acting as spokesman for both companies. "This plant here, Cattle King, has not received any citations by the inspectors."

The USDA said Cattle King provides "a significant part of the ground beef" for the school lunch program "but routine laboratory analysis of meat samples from that facility going back to October 1981 show no evidence of any threat to health."

Block said USDA inspectors are already analyzing samples of the meat from 14 locations across the country. The results are expected in a few days.

Conservation policy changes delayed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is continuing to back legislation that bars federal program benefits to farmers plowing up highly-erodible land in future years.

But Agriculture Department officials say any other major changes in federal conservation policy should wait until Congress rewrites the entire farm program after next year's election.

"Because of the potential impact ... the department believes that this subject should be considered when the next Omnibus Farm Bill is developed in 1985," Deputy Assistant Agriculture Secretary Richard Siegel told the House Agriculture conservation subcommittee Tuesday.

But Siegel reaffirmed the administration's support for so-called "sodbuster" legislation designed to protect an estimated 248 million acres of highly fragile but yet-to-be cultivated land that could be brought into crop production as soon as next year.

The National Association of Conservation Districts, one of the country's leading conservation groups, joined the administration in calling for quick congressional approval of that bill, contending it's more important than ever now because of the drought's impact on U.S. agriculture.

President Milton Mekelburg said the association believes the sodbuster legislation is so important that any other needed but more controversial anti-erosion proposals should be discarded if they would hamper its passage.

"Despite the drought affecting much of the Corn Belt, the far western Great Plains have experienced many areas of above-normal rainfall in 1982 and 1983," Mekelburg told the subcommittee.

"This extra moisture, coupled with higher grain prices due to the drought and the PIK (payment-in-kind crop reduction) program, will encourage a great deal more plow-out of marginal lands in 1984," Mekelburg predicted.

"We need the sodbuster bill passed as soon as possible so that, at least, the USDA (Department of Agriculture) subsidies that help this process along will be eliminated," he testified.

Janitorial Service
A Maid is a Maid is a Maid

Not so!

Merry Maids is a very special cleaning service created expressly to answer all the problems involved in obtaining reliable help.

Our goal is simple. We will provide you with a pre-screened, courteous and efficient team to put your home at it best. Whether you need a deep cleaning or brisk maintenance, we guarantee your satisfaction. An whether you use us on a regular basis or sporadically (say, in anticipation of entertaining) we are prepared to meet your requirements.

Basically it works like this. We will interview you to ascertain how our services may be best customized to you and your schedule. For example, we'll work for you evenings or Saturdays. When the team arrives (two make a bed faster than one!) they will quickly and cheerfully complete their tasks. We then check their work to insure your specifications have been met. We leave you with a sparkling home and a daisy in a bud vase.

Its time your time was released from the responsibilities of cleaning and place in utterly dependable hands. We think that with personalized and conscientious attention we can address the problems of finding and maintaining competent help.

Please give us a call and find the freedom of Merry Maids at extremely reasonable rates. Of course, we are insured and bonded.
