Terrorists, Rain Fail To Dampen Easter Spirit

By United Press International

CHRISTIANS observed Easter around the world Sunday, from the cobblestone streets of Jerusalem where Jesus walked to the splendor of New York's Fifth Avenue, braving rain, snow and terrorist threats to celebrate the resurrection of Christ.

Rain dampened but did not stop the annual Easter Parade along Fifth Avenue. A few flashy dressers turned out, but most marchers hid their finery under drab raincoats as they huddled beneath umbrellas.

To the strains of Handel's "Messiah," several thousand persons poured out onto the stately avenue of posh shops after Easter services in St. Patrick's Cathedral.

One marcher, dressed as Abraham Lincoln, carried an American flag. Another wore a colorful colonial costume left over from the Bicentennial celebration.

In Rindge, N.H., freezing temperatures failed to prevent some 1,500 worshippers from attending Easter sunrise services at the Cathedral of the Pines.

Snow began to fall at the national shrine to America's war dead —an altar on a hilltop in a pine forest — as the Rev. Emily Preston of the United Church of Jaffery conducted services.

In Jerusalem, more than 10,000 pilgrims ignored the menace of possible Palestinian guerrilla raids to celebrate the resurrection of Jesus.

Clear skies and warm sun greeted worshipers at the ancient stone Church of the Holy Sepulcher, built on one of the traditional sites of Jesus' burial and resurrection. Police said the day passed without incident.

Pope Paul VI, barely recovered from a two-week bout with the flu, stood in a light drizzle and cold wind to preside over an outdoor mass for some 250,000 persons in St. Peter's Square in the Vatican.

The pontiff delivered his traditional Urbi et Orbi (To The City And The World) Easter blessing and called on the faithful to overcome the doubts of the modern world.

The Soviet news agency Tass reported Easter services in many churches throughout the officially atheistic Soviet Union. It said sermons included references to disarmament and attacks on America's neutron bomb.

In Northern Ireland, the rival Provisional and Official wings of the Irish Republican Army staged parades in Belfast to mark the anniversary of the 1916 Easter Rising against British rule.

And in Florida, about 150,000 vacationing collegians thronged to beaches to catch their last rays of sun before heading north to books and exams.

Police in the major resort towns of Fort Lauderdale and Daytona Beach said the annual invasion caused fewer problems this year than in the sometimes stormy past.

"They're having fun for themselves," a Fort Lauderdale police aide said. "Really, they're enjoying themselves and having fun."

Japanese Police Battle Rioters

NARITA, Japan (AP) — Hundreds of firebomb-hurling protesters surged past riot police Sunday and temporarily occupied the control tower at Japan's new billion-dollar international airport, smashing equipment and vowing to keep the airport from opening.

Hours after the bloody melee ended at the control tower, an estimated 30 to 40 protesters were still holding out against a police seige in a four-story blockhouse near the end of a runway.

About 13,000 riot police from all over Japan have been deployed at the airport, 41 miles northeast of Tokyo, and in the city of Narita, three miles due west of the airport.

Police reported some 6,500 protesters gathered at the airport Sunday, with most of them remaining behind the security fences and gates. They said another 8,000 persons staged a demonstration in Narita.

Aimed At Airport Opening

The attack on the control tower was part of a last-ditch effort by opponents to block Thursday's scheduled opening of the airport. Students, farmers and leftists oppose it for a variety of environmental and political reasons.

Police said groups of 200 to 300 protesters fought their way through police lines into the airport and some threw fire bombs at the control tower. Later, a group led by a truck equipped with a snowplow demolished a police barricade and about 300 charged through. Six of them smashed their way into the control tower with steel pipes and threw electronic equipment out of windows of the 16-story structure, according to police.

The protesters occupied the control tower for two hours before police moved in and arrested them. Five airport staff members who fled to the roof of the control tower were rescued by police helicopters.

Firebomb Assaults Launched

Planning for the assault on the control tower appeared precise. While many police were watching the protesters in the privately owned blockhouse, groups of demonstrators launched firebomb attacks at various places almost simultaneously. Sound trucks later drove around broadcasting protesters' claims of winning "an overwhelming victory."

Police said 17 officers were injured and 115 protesters arrested in the Sunday fighting. The number of protesters injured was not known, but one person claimed he had been wounded by police gunfire and another man was seen in flames, the victim of his own gasoline bomb.

Japanese police rarely use guns in riot control, but Associated Press photographer Tsugufumi Matsumoto said radicals withdrew at one gate when officers fired warning shots. AP photographer Sadayuki Mikami reported one demonstrator's clothes caught fire when the gasoline bomb he was carrying exploded. Police said the demonstrator's injuries were minor but Japan's Kyodo news service reported he was in critical condition.

Opening Previously Delayed

Five persons have been killed in previous riots at the airport that delayed its opening for six years. It was built after officials decided the existing Haneda Airport could no longer handle Tokyo's air traffic. Haneda will be used primarily for domestic flights after Narita opens.

The concrete blockhouse used by the protesters as a headquarters is built on private land near the end of a runway. It was the target of another police siege in February, when police fought a 40-hour battle with protesters before tearing down a tower atop the blockhouse that blocked flight paths and violated aviation law. Airport opponents rebuilt the tower annd when police approached late Satur-

Speakers Set For West Texas C-C Convention

U.S. REPS. George Mahon and Omar Burleson will share the speakers podium with area businessmen during the 60th Annual Convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce set for April 27-28 in Lubbock.

Mahon and Burleson will be the featured speakers during the April 28 banquet. The two congressmen, having collectively served 76 years in the United States Congress, will both be retiring from public office at the end of their current terms.

J. Fred Bucy, president of Texas Instruments in Dallas, will be speaking at the April 28 luncheon, to be held at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center starting at 12:15 p.m. Bucy's subject will be "Free Enterprise and Government Regulations".

Oilman To Speak

At the Friday morning session, Lloyd Unsell, executive vice president of the Independant Petroleum Association of America, headquartered in Washington, D.C., will speak on political action.

Bill Stewart, executive director of the Texas Air Control Board in Austin, will address the WTCC on the impact of the clean air requirements on West Texas, and Harvey Davis, executive director of the Texas Department of Water Resources, will discuss the newly created water agency's role and its relation to West Texas' water needs.

Registration will begin at noon April 27, with committee meetings beginning at 1:30 p.m. A hospitality reception will begin at 7 p.m. on April 27 in the Hilton Hotel Ballroom for WTCC members and guests.

Ranch, Museum Tour Set

A special tour of the Ranching Heritage Center and Museum at Texas Tech has been scheduled for Friday afternoon as an added activity for the wives of WTCC members and guests.

The WTCC Executive Committee will meet April 28 at a breakfast beginning at 7 a.m. At 2:30 p.m. the annual business session will be held. Officers for the 1978-79 year will be elected and the 1979 convention site will be selected.

The annual banquet also will be held at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center beginning with a reception at 6:30 p.m.

Kidnapped Belgian Released

PARIS (AP) — Kidnapped Belgian industrialist Jean-Edouard Empain was freed unharmed by his captors in downtown Paris Sunday night, the Interior Ministry announced.

A spokesman said the 40-year-old baron who was kidnapped Jan. 23 appeared to be in good health. He was set free in the Place de L'Opera in the center of the city, officials reported.

Fears had mounted that Baron Empain would be killed after police foiled an $8.6 million ransom pickup Friday night in a gunfight that killed one of the suspected kidnappers. Another gang member was wounded and captured in the shootout that also left two policemen slightly wounded.

Three Escape

Three other men in a getaway car exchanged shots with special anti-gang police at the ransom drop site and then escpaped.

Baron Empain heads the Empain-Schneider group, one of Europe's largest industrial empires. He was seized by five gunman outside his luxurious Paris aparment and the gunmen later threatened to kill him if a multi-million dollar ransom in Swiss francs was not paid.

Empain's family had indicated it would pay a ransom and investigators said the abduction was the work of common criminals and not political terrorists.

Police said Empain's family arranged the ransom package and a representative drove with the money to a prearranged drop point at a telphone booth beside a major highway just south of Paris.

But police, concealed in a truck, were waiting at the site. They said that as the family representative approached the phone booth, two masked men ordered him back into the car and they then drove about 500 yards before police ordered them to stop and opened fire.

The family aide was not wounded and

Residents Of One County Area Make Long Trek To Cast Votes

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

WHEN VOTERS go to the polls in voting box 40 east of Lubbock, their destination is an old domino hall which is now a storeroom for Acuff Co-op Gin.

On the eight-mile journey on FM 40 they pass the town of Roosevelt where many of their neighbors vote at the the Roosevelt precinct clubhouse.

Earlier this week the county Democratic Executive Committee voted to urge the county commissioners to permit voters in box 40 to vote in box 39 (Roosevelt), or in box 41 (Idalou).

However, there's one small problem.

Voters in box 40 are in commissioner's Pct. 2 (Slaton), but in justice of the peace Pct. 3 (Idalou).

Near City Limits

On the west are the Lubbock city limits and the box is bounded on the east by the county line.

It's illegal for the box to cross any of those boundaries so Lubbock county ends up with a box which is a 2 1/2 mile wide and 15 mile long sliver with no "suitable" voting place.

Madison Sowder, county Democratic chairman, placed the number of voters in the box at close to 800, most of whom live immediately east of the Lubbock city limits.

However, election judge Jerry Mimms said the largest vote he remembered was about 250 during a presidential election.

Often Few Vote

He said in many elections only 30-40 people stop by the gin storeroom to cast a ballot.

Mimms said the "little ole office" three miles west of the Lubbock County line is "kind of hard to find and unhandy."

He said it's especially inconvenient for those who live on Lubbock's outskirts.

Roosevelt would be more convenient for most voters, Mimms said, and would cut about four miles off the trip to the polls.

Some Vote Illegally

Mimms said "a lot" of residents of box 40 vote in box 39 anyway, albeit illegally. Many times they vote in the wrong location because they are assigned to the wrong box.

But more often, voters are simply permitted to vote in box 39, and that situation could be questioned if an election is ever contested, he said.

Mimms is convinced the taxpayers could save between $100-200 each election if the boxes were consolidated. "The same people handling box 39 could handle 100-200 more voters," he said.

The Acuff farmer said he's been trying to get the commissioners to "do away with the box and throw it in with another box," but without success.

He said 8 to 10 years ago voters from boxes 39 and 40 voted together in the Roosevelt clubhouse "until somebody decided it was illegal."

About that same time the precinct lines for justices of the peace and commissioners were changed.

"Nobody really paid attention until the beer elections in the Slaton area," Mimms said. "The people in my box were ineligible to vote in the beer election in box 39" because the election was held within justice of the peace precincts.

Mimms said the solution is simple: "put the commissioner precinct and the justice of the peace precinct on the same boundaries.

To consolidate box 40 with box 39, the justice of the peace Pct. 3 boundary could be shifted north to meet the commissioner Pct. 3 boundary.

However, any such change must be submittted to the Justice Department for approval under the federal Voting Rights Act.

Mount Etna Volcano Spews Forth Lava

CATANIA, Sicily (UPI) — The Mount Etna volcano erupted for the first time in five months Sunday and scientists said a thick stream of lava and dense clouds of smoke were pouring from its central crater.

Scientists at the Catania Institute of Volcanology said the lava already had destroyed some pine trees on the crater's slope.

They said a strong wind was carrying some of the ashes and smoke toward Catania, 15 miles south of the volcano.

At 10,707 feet, Etna is Europe's tallest active volcano. It began a series of eruptions last summer that continued until October.

Agency Developing New Tornado Radar

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tiny arrows form a smooth pattern across the dark screen, except in one area where they chase each other, tip to tail, in a counter-clockwise circle.

The watcher taps out a new command on his computer terminal: WARN.

And the word goes out from the government's latest innovation in the struggle to avoid danger from the elements — Doppler radar, which can detect the formation of a tornado 20 minutes before a funnel touches down.

Today it's still in the experimental stage, with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration developing the computer and training its forecasters to understand the complicated Doppler signals.

But in a few years it could help ease the annual toll exacted by twisters which tear through much of the United States during the warm months.

"We're about halfway through the study period and right now it looks encouraging," said Donald W. Burgess of NOAA's Severe Storms Laboratory.

He said test results have been postive and there is every indication that the system will be suitable for general use by the weathermen eventually.

National Weather Service officials report that there is an average of 708 tornadoes in the United States each year, taking 117 lives.

Oklahoma has the most tornadoes, although Mississippi has recorded the top death toll with 13 persons being killed annually, on average.

The biggest tornado outbreak on record occurred April 3-4, 1974 when 148 tornadoes touched down over a 13-state area in the Midwest, killing 307 persons, officials said.

NOAA's first Doppler system, one of a pair, was set up at Norman, Okla., and in addition to extra warning time of tornadoes experts say it's showing "unexpected promise" in detecting heavy thunderstorms that can lead to flash floods.

But tornadoes were the original impetus for the Doppler use, and experiments so far indicate that it produces a warning an average of 23 minutes ahead of a conventional sighting.

Since the sighting of a tornado gives no lead time — a funnel has already formed — the difference is significant.

Observing the wind and rain movement five to six miles up in a thundercloud, a Doppler radar detects the formation of mesocyclones, the parents of tornadoes, explained Carl Posey of NOAA.

Burgess said the new radar can detect the "signature" of the mesocyclone, and since it came into use last summer there have been no tornadoes in the area which were not first detected by the radar.

There have been false alarms, though, when the "signature" was detected but only heavy wind and hail followed.

"You're probably better off to have a warning and only have wind and hail than to have no alarm and get a tornado," Burgess said.

He added that the center is now "trying to learn how to separate mesocyclones which will produce tornadoes from those that produce only wind and hail."

"We're learning how to use it," he said, and "working on how to transfer the technology to the day to day work of meteorology."

Doppler radar uses the same basic principle as other radars, sending out an electronic signal and then detecting that signal when it bounces back. This allows radar to detect airplanes, storms and so forth and tell you where they are.

But Doppler adds a variation, based on the work of a 19th Century Austrian for whom it is named.

He noted that movement of an object changes the frequency of signals. For example, the change in sound of a train whistle as it approaches or departs.

By measuring this frequency change, the Doppler radar can not only tell you what is out there in the sky, but which way it is moving, and how fast.

In addition to the field of arrows for the wind the radar can display conditions as colors, showing wind movements or concentrations of rain.

And Bugess said it may also be useful in detecting wind shears, strong wind currents, which can be a hazard to aircraft.

Winter of 1977-1978 Officially Proclaimed Coldest In U.S. History

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Oldtimers can talk about memorable cold snaps of past years, but government weather experts said Sunday the winter of 1977-78 was the most frigid in history east of the Rocky Mountains.

Furthermore, several states set new records for snowfall and rain during the December-to-February winter months, according to statistics supplied by the National Climatic Center in Asheville, N.C.

Widely scattered cities — like Galveston, Texas, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Nashville, Tenn., Concordia, Kan., and Jackson, Miss. — established new records for average low temperatures this winter.

"While January of 1977 still stands as the coldest single month since formal weather records-keeping began in the late 1800s," a government statement said, "for the winter as a whole this winter's temperatures probably were worse than last."

Robert Quayle, a spokesman for the National Climatic Center, explained that a large sector of the eastern two-thirds of the United States had average temperatures more than eight degrees below normal last winter.

He said preliminary data showed there were three general "pockets" that were more than 10 degrees below normal — the Ohio-Illinois-Kentucky sector, the Nebraska-South Dakota region and Montana.

Far western states were warmer than normal, he said.

Quayle said determining snowfall and rainfall records is more difficult because precipitation is often localized and not as easy to gauge as cold fronts, which are more consistent and larger.

However, he said, the two states that stand out for abnormally heavy snow or rain were Massachusetts and California.

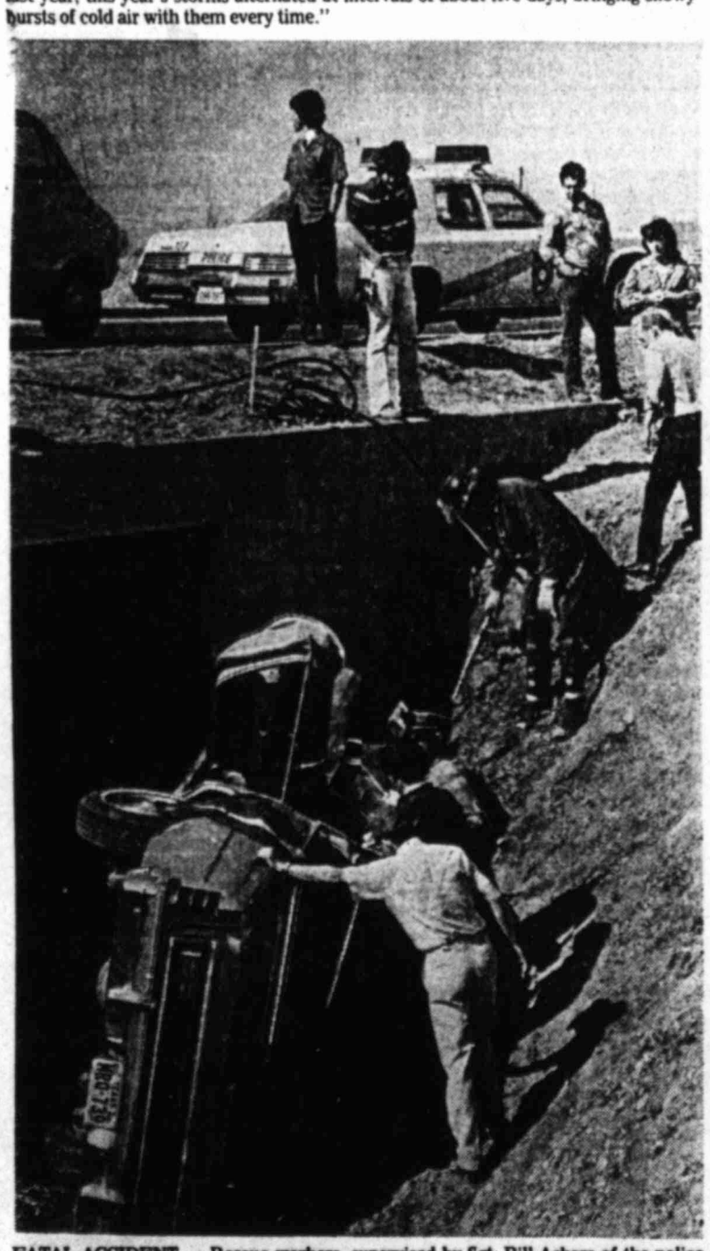

Quayle said the only winter to compare with the past two for cold was in 1917-18.

Although both were abnormally cold, the government said there were some differences in weather patterns between this past winter and the winter of 1976-77.

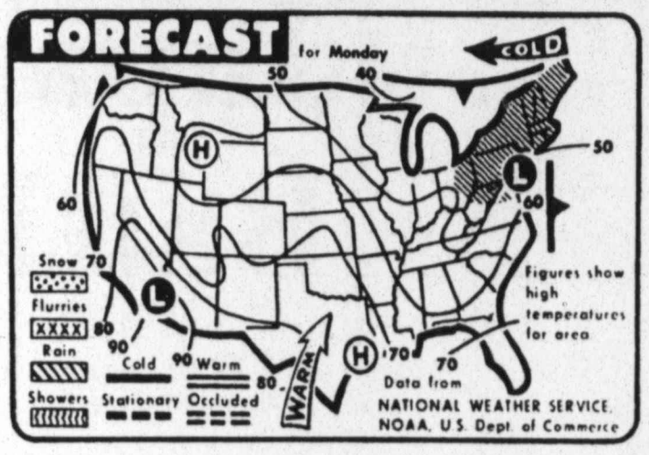

Both winters, the government said, exhibited high pressure in the West and low pressure in the East, combining to pump cold Arctic air deep into the Midwest.

However, this year's high pressure area was farther north and east over Canada, leaving California "open and exposed to Pacific storms."

"The jet streams were more intense, farther south, and less convoluted this year, with storm after storm hammering away at the U.S. Instead of a steady cold flow, like last year, this year's storms alternated at intervals of about five days, bringing snowy bursts of cold air with them every time."

Snow, Ice Make Nation's East Struggle Through White Easter

By United Press International

A white Easter was painted by a wintry storm that glazed the eastern half of the nation with snow and ice, causing massive power outages, hazardous travel conditions and placing a chill on traditional holiday activities Sunday.

"It's beautiful and scary all at the same time," mused Woody Mosger, an Illinois state spokesman in Springfield of the sheets of ice that encased hundreds of square miles and caused extensive blackouts.

"But when you wake up in the morning and your nose is cold, it's not so beautiful."

The winter-like storm that was responsible for at least eight deaths as it cut a swath through the nation's midsection and descended on lower Michigan Sunday, turning roads and highways near Grand Rapids into lengthy sheets of ice and slowing traffic to a crawl.

Snow and freezing rain also prompted travelers advisories for the mountains of western Pennsylvania, southeastern New York and the higher elevations of western New England. Three inches of snow blanketed Albany, N.Y., and at least another inch was expected.

Flash flood watches were posted throughout the day over the mountains of Pennsylvania, the Virginias, western Maryland, New Jersey and southeastern New York.

City, state and utility company officials in central Illinois scrambled to restore power in the wake of the massive ice storm that crippled the area by snapping power lines like toothpicks.

"As fast as they put them (the power lines) up, another tree falls down again," said Mosger, a spokesman for the Illinois Information Service. "In some cases, in the smaller communities, it might be until next weekend until power is restored."

A 1,000-foot television tower in hard-hit Decatur, the state's largest such tower, snapped under the weight of the ice, said Gary Fogerson, a spokesman for the Macon County Emergency Services agency.

"We have four main power lines coming into this town from other communities. Three are out of service and the other seems to be breaking every 15-18 hours," said Fogerson. "The line runs about 30 miles from Decatur to Pana, and every time that happens, utility crews have to go out and find it (the break)."

Some Easter celebrations were canceled but others went ahead — better wet than never.

Wet weather caused President Carter to cancel plans to attend sunrise services at Fort Ritchie, Md. But peristant rains failed to dampen the spirts of New York City die-hards, wrapped in raincoats and topcoats as they ogled a few flashy dressers who appeared for the annual "Easter parade" on Fifth Avenue.

The dismal conditions seemed worlds away in the Los Angeles area where 600,000 sunbathers flocked to the beaches Saturday in 89-degree temperatures and were expected back for an Easter Sunday encore.

Sunny Days To Continue

The warm spring weather that dominated the Texas weather scene over the Easter weekend is expected to continue through the week with today's high reading climbing into the mid 70s.

Tonight's low reading will be in the mid 40s and winds will continue to be light across the South Plains.

Sunday's weather, which tempted many Lubbockites to picnic in local parks, was caused by a high pressure system that is expected to remain over the region throughout the week.

The high pressure will keep South Plains skies mostly clear and by Tuesday high temperatures in the Lubbock area are expected to reach into the 80-degree range.

Though limited rainfall was recorded in the region Saturday, no precipitation was reported in the state Sunday and National Weather Service forecasters say the dry trend should continue in the South Plains region.

Lubbock's high temperature Sunday reached 69 degrees, following an overnight low of 34 degrees.

Elsewhere across the state Sunday, temperatures were in the 80s across South Texas, with other Texans enjoying 60-and 70-degree readings.

New Game Challenges Gamesters, Taxpayers

DALLAS (UPI) — Two local Internal Revenue Service employees have created a board game to allow you to cheat the taxman in the comfort and safety of your home. It will cost $11.98 and won't be tax deductible.

Called "Challenge the IRS," a sample run of 200 of the games has been produced. The object is fairly simple.

"Claim every possible deduction and end up as the taxpayer with the largest refund," explained the IRS employees, who asked not to be identified "for very obvious reasons."

One player is selected as the District Director. He plays a role similar to that of the banker in the board game Monopoly.

Special spaces on the board include U.S. Treasury — where the game begins — Records, Local Office of H&R Block, Presidential Campaign Fund and Jail — where a player goes if he bluffs, is challenged and is found guilty of criminal fraud.

If a player loses all his money at any point in the game, he is eliminated.

"Skill is developed by learning to collect sufficient substantiation cards to make it safely through the audit cycle while avoiding costly challenges from the other players and the district director," said one of the inventors, who began developing the game three years ago.

"It's fun too to skirt the dangers of civil and criminal tax fraud by convincing the director of your basic honesty," he added.

Matt. 14:31-36, 15:1-19, The Living Bible

31 Instantly Jesus reached out His hand and rescued him. "O man of little faith," Jesus said. "Why did you doubt?"

32 And when they had climbed back into the boat, the wind stopped.

33 The others sat there, awestruck. "You really are the Son of God!" they exclaimed.

34 They landed at Gennesaret.

35 The news of their arrival spread quickly throughout the city, and soon people were rushing around, telling everyone to bring in their sick to be healed.

36 The sick begged Him to let them touch even the tassel of His robe, and all who did were healed.

CHAPTER 15

1 Some Pharisees and other Jewish leaders now arrived from Jerusalem to interview Jesus.

2 "Why do Your disciples disobey the ancient Jewish traditions?" they demanded. "For they ignore our ritual of ceremonial handwashing before they eat."

3 He replied, "And why do your traditions violate the direct commandments of God?

4 For instance, God's law is 'Honor your father and mother; anyone who reviles his parents must die.'

5,6 But you say, 'Even if your parents are in need, you may give their support money to the church instead.' And so, by your man-made rule, you nullify the direct command of God to honor and care for your parents.

7 You hypocrites! Well did Isaiah prophesy of you,

8 'These people say they honor Me, but their hearts are far away.

9 Their worship is worthless, for they teach their man-made laws instead of those from God.'"

10 Then Jesus called to the crowds and said, "Listen to what I say and try to understand.

11 You aren't made unholy by eating non-kosher food! It is what you say and think that makes you unclean."

12 Then the disciples came and told Him, "You offended the Pharisees by that remark."

13,14 Jesus replied, "Every plant not planted by My Father shall be rooted up, so ignore them. They are blind guides leading the blind, and both will fall into a ditch."

15 Then Peter asked Jesus to explain what He meant when He said that people are not defiled by non-kosher food.

16 "Don't you understand?" Jesus asked him.

17 "Don't you see that anything you eat passes through the digestive tract and out again?

18 But evil words come from an evil heart, and defile the man who says them.

19 For from the heart come evil thoughts, murder, adultery, fornication, theft, lying and slander.

Penalty, Award Taxation For Firms Favored

By LOUIS HARRIS

Sizable majorities of the American people favor changing the basis of federal corporate taxation to reward with lower taxes companies that meet standards which are socially desireable, and to punish with higher taxes corporations that flout those standards.

This new concept of gearing the taxes business pays to the measure in which it fulfills some of the larger objectives of society has begun to gain favor with a number of economists and members of the House Ways and Means Committee which writes tax legislation.

Public approval of this new principle for taxing corporations ranges over a wide assortment of applications, as shown in a recent Harris Survey of 1,510 adults nationwide:

— At the top of the list, an 82-9 percent majority favors a new tax law under which "companies that are bad polluters of the air and water would have to pay higher taxes, and those cleaning up air and water pollution would pay lower taxes." Despite arguments by industry and organized labor that it is desireable to slow down the pace of cleaning up the environment in order to keep more people employed and to save more energy, the public consistency rejects such compromises. The commitment of the public to cleaning up air and water pollution is firm and deep. And a 9-1 majority would like to see such a value judgement reflected in the corporate tax structure.

— Moreover, a substantial 81-8 percent majority favors a new tax law under which "companies wasting energy are taxed more and those conserving energy are taxed less." Clearly, the public thinks that such tax incentives on energy would lead to less waste at the industry level.

— By 77-11 percent, a majority would like to see a tax policy under which "companies not taking proper safety precautions for their employees are taxed more, and those making working conditions for their employees safer are taxed less." The public's concern for the problem of employee safety has risen sharply in recent years.

— By 75-13 percent, a majority would also like to see the new tax principle applied to a situation where "companies not taking proper safety precautions in their products are taxed more, and those taking real safety precautions in their product are taxed less." Previous cause of people's disenchantment with the quality of products from American industry is their feeling that an increasing number of them are unsafe.

— By 66-20 percent, a better than 3-1 majority favors changing the corporate tax system so that "companies ignoring product complaints are taxed more, and those correcting product faults when complaints are made are taxed less." In recent years, many companies have set up separate departments which not only keep careful track of all product complaints, but also follow through in tryng to give each complainer a meaningful answer.

— By 66-16 percent, a sizeable majority also favors a corporate tax provision under which "companies which create new jobs where they did not exist before are given a special tax credit for the first $4,000 paid in wages for those jobs created." Ways and Means Committee Chairman Al Ullman made such a proposal last year but met opposition from Treasury Secretary Michael Blumenthal. As a result, the principle was adopted, but its application was severly limited. It is likely that the jobs tax incentive plan will surface again soon in Congress.

— By 56-21 percent, a better than 2-1 majority of the public favors a corporate tax system unmder which "companies which limit their price and wage increases to under 6 percent are taxed less as and incentive to control inflation, while those which increase their prices and wages over 6 percent are taxed more."

— By 55-28 percent, the public also favors a new tax law based on the principle that "assuming no difference in the price of products, companies putting out lower quality products are taxed more, while those putting out higher quality products are taxed less."

— By 55-28 percent, a majority of the public also favors changing the corporate tax system so that "companies that do not try to upgrade the skills of minority workers are taxed more, and those training minority workers to do more skilled jobs are taxed less."

— By 54-29 percent, a majority also favors a corporate tax law under which "companies that do not try to upgrade the skills of women are taxed more, and those training women for better positions are taxed less."

Although the majorities vary from 9-to-1 to just under 2-to-1, it is apparent from its public support that this new tax principle of trying corporate taxes to the larger goals of society is an idea whose time has clearly come.

Gambling Viewed For Mexico

CIUDAD ACUNA, Mexico (AP) — Mexican government officials say the country's sagging economy and relaxed religious views may provide the necessary push that would permit horse and dog track bettting followed by Las Vegas-style casinos on the Texas border before the year is out.

One location being considered is Mexico's resort community at Lake Amistad, near Del Rio, Texas, according to a Mexican government official.

Jesus Ramon, a spokesman for the governor's office in the Mexican state of Coahuila, told the San Antonio Express and News in its Sunday editions that legal horse and dog track betting would probably be the first step in a program that could be expanded to include casino gambling throughout the country's less affluent areas.

"Top officials are beginning to consider it," said Ramon. "The top people in government have commented it is not impossible to open more dog tracks."

Ramon stressed that consideration of moving pari-mutual betting into the border area is merely speculation at this time.

"I think it would be done in stages," said Ramon. "I think we would have horse racing and dog racing first. The results would then be analyzed and then the possiblity of casino gambling would be considered.

"If results of horse and dog racing are good, I would say there is a strong possiblity of casinos."

Ramon said a decision is expected on the gambling question "sometime this year."

Elias Cardenas, director of tourism for Coahuila, said legalized gambling is also being considered by other Mexican cities.

"I think they may be making studies in Acapulco," he said.

In addition to Lake Amistad, Ramon said candidate cities for expanded gambling include Acapulco, Cancun and Baja California.

"The government would be most likely to look for resort places which are already functioning, which have rooms and hotels but need some economic help," he said.

Pari-mutual betting is already legal in some Mexican cities. However, none are located near the Texas-Mexico border.

Aside from the obvious economic pluses casinos and track betting would have, Ramon said another very large factor has encouraged consideration of expanded gambling by Mexican officials.

"Things have become more relaxed as far as the (Catholic) Church is concerned," he said. "The Mexican public is open to the idea of expanded gambling. There is a need for work. I think that is the key to the question."

Management Produces New York Newspaper

NEW YORK (UPI) — Management personnel at the New York Post, preparing for a possible strike by its union employees, put out a 48-page test run of the newspaper Sunday, despite alleged "sabotage" at its printing plant.

Martin Fischbein, special assistant to publisher Rupert Murdoch, said the experimental Sunday edition was reported and written entirely by management personnel and non-union staffers at the city's only afternoon newspaper to familiarize them with producing the paper.

He said "several thousand" copies of the edition were run off by 7:30 a.m. The paper, which publishes Monday through Saturday, was not for sale.

Contracts between The Newspaper Guild and the Post, the New York Times, and the Daily News expire at midnight Thursday and Guild members have authorized a strike. The three newspapers have been negotiating as a unit with the guild and the mailers' union.

Murdoch has vowed to continue publishing if the unions strike.

"The test was completed," Murdoch said in a statement, "in spite of substantial sabotage in certain sections of our plant. This sabotage was not the work of a single individual, but of an organized group."

Fischbein declined to discuss the nature of the alleged sabotage pending completion of an investigation by the paper. He said there would be no further comment until Monday.

A spokeswoman for the Newspaper Guild denied any involvement in "the alleged sabotage, if it really occurred."

Barbara Yuncker, the Guild's unit manager at the Post, said the union "treated the dry run with the disdain which it deserved."

"There's no way he (Murdoch) can get out the paper on a daily basis" using management personnel, she said.

Air Missile Dropped In Alaska

WASHINGTON (UPI) — An air-to-air missile was "inadvertently dropped" from an Air Force F4 jet March 19 over a remote area of Alaska, and the search for it is continuing, a Pentagon spokesman said Sunday.

The spokesman said officials believe there were no injuries due to the incident and there is no danger the missile will explode, since it had not been activated.

He said the incident occurred when two F4 aircraft were flying from the base to an area off the coast to check out an unidentified plane that came into their air defense zone.

"During the process of going from the base to the (offshore) area, a missile from the aircraft was inadvertently dropped," he said.

"It was not fired. It was not launched against any other aircraft. It was inadvertently dropped in an isolated area. The rocket motor did not start up. It was not activated. It was not aimed at anybody."

He said there was a lot of snow on the ground, making it difficult to find the missile. But "there's no danger of any kind of explosion or fire. It has to be activated. It is not a nuclear missile."

CUTTING EDGES

Chisels, knives and other cutting tools can be kept sharp by honing frequently on a clean oilstone. Frequent grinding is not necessary. Grind only when the cutting edges are nicked or badly worn.

Still Time To Save Mideast

WHILE THE clash between Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and President Carter is a serious one, it should not be allowed to stall continued efforts to keep Mideast Peace talks going.

In the wake of the confrontation between the two leaders, pronouncements from both the White House and the U.S. State Department tended to take a "doom and gloom" view of the future.

Back in Israel, Begin instead of being a target of criticism, as some State Department officials apparently had hoped, seems to be gaining support.

WHAT ALL this portends for future U.S.-Israeli relations, the Mideast Peace talks themselves and the proposed sale of U.S. planes to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia remains to be seen.

There are some observations which should be made on the whole affair, however. Hopefully, all concerned can learn something from what has happened.

In the first place, President Carter brought part of the Mideast problem upon himself by his on-again, off-again statements seeming to support a Palestinian homeland and in pushing for PLO representation in any final Geneva parley.

Secondly, he made a major tactical error in "inviting" the Russians back into the Mideast picture, no matter what his reasoning was at the time.

OF COURSE, indirectly, this may have played a role in causing Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to make his dramatic peace trip to Jerusalem.

But, even here, for all practical purposes, the U.S. was bypassed. Later, Washington entered the picture with a renewal of Kissinger-like shuttle diplomacy. Throughout all the negotiations, we have gotten the feeling that Washington, and to a point Cairo, has not been listening.

From the start, Begin and other Israeli leaders have been saying that Israel will not give up all of the lands seized in past conflicts with the Arabs. Obviously, the thrust needed to be toward some sort of interim or permanent compromise plan which would give the Israelis the "guaranteed peace and defensible borders" they long have said was necessary to any agreement.

THE ADMINISTRATION also can be faulted for its handling and timing of the proposed sale of sophisticated U.S. planes to Egypt and Saudi Arabia in the same package as those for Israel.

One gets the feeling that the administration—as opposed to the majority of the American people, incidentally—is willing go take the Arabs at their word on any Israeli pullback and resultant peace guarantees. The continued pledge of the Palestine Liberation Organization that it will crush Israel belies such faith.

There is still time, and room, for discussion and the Carter people, in their pique at not dictating the terms, should not let it pass by default. While UN Resolution 242 may seem important, the survival of Israel, to which we are pledged, is more so.

AN EDITORIAL:

Being No. 1's Not Worth It

SINCE THE United Nations was established the United States has been far, far and away the major over-contributor to the establishment's financial underpinning.

During many post-war years of growing affluence in other countries, Washington has succeeded in somewhat reducing its share of the world bill. But America nevertheless remains well ahead of the runners-up.

The U.S. currently provides 25 per cent of the regular budget, compared with 12.97 for the Soviet Union and 7 per cent each for West Germany and Japan. Furthermore, the U.S. bears a similarly large proportion of the burden for most of the specialized agencies.

EFFORTS TO shift the burden usually meet with considerable resistance from those expected to pick it up.

But that resistance now is being outflanked by the preeminent fact of current international economic life—the decline of the dollar.

With the continuing drop in the value of the dollar in relation to other major currencies, the real value of the U.S. share of UN financing is also dropping.

The effects are not so immediately painful to the headquarters organization in New York City since it functions largely within the insulated U.S. economy. But UN operations based elsewhere are in a different situation.

MANY ARE located in Geneva, Switzerland, and according to the Wall Street Journal the effects there are becoming very painful.

The Swiss franc is one of the currencies gaining most strongly against the dollar —currently worth less than two francs.

UN dollars exchanged into expensive francs no longer cover agency budgets.

In a lefthanded sort of way, the situation could make a point for Washington in its repeated efforts to bring the U.S. contribution into more reasonable balance with those of other economic powers.

But for our money, it's too expensive a way for the U.S. to be making it.

ART BUCHWALD:

Newspapers Never Die; They Just Go Suburban

WASHINGTON—I'm going to wax nostalgic today. The International Herald Tribune, still known to everyone around the world as the Paris Herald Tribune, is moving from its grubby offices on the Rue de Berri, where it has been printed since December 10, 1931, to a snooty new home in Neuilly.

As someone who worked there from 1949 to 1962, I was deeply sorry to hear of the move. It always seemed to me that the Paris Herald Tribune (I refuse to call it the International Edition) was in perfect location for an American newspaper abroad.

It was within walking distance of many tourist hotels and the Champs Elysees. From the outside the building looked fairly new compared to the ones around it. But inside it was another story.

The original paint was still on the walls, the elevator creaked in pain when it went up. The stairs were crooked. The city room was straight out of the Thirties.

THROUGH THE years management would never replace a chair until someone sat in it and it broke under his own weight. The reporters' desks were from the Clemenceau period, and the lighting had been designed by Thomas Edison.

In France nothing is ever thrown away and the typewriters we used were bought at garage sales of Gertrude Stein, Ernest Hemingway, and Marcel Proust.

It was in this atmosphere that a handful of people put out a newspaper that went to 19 countries every morning—a paper that many people still consider one of the best in the world.

The men who printed the paper in the cavernous basement of 21 Rue de Berri, all belonged to the French Communist printer's union.

They used to sing Communist songs as they prepared the edition, but they never let their ideology interfere with their work.

There were far fewer mistakes in the Paris Herald's first edition than any newspaper put out by American printers in the United States.

WHAT MADE THE Rue de Berri offices so interesting was that they were so conveniently located near the Champs Elysees where most major political demonstrations were held.

All a reporter had to do was stroll a block to the Champs, watch the demonstrators throw cafe chairs and tables at the police, and report on how many rioters were clubbed over the head by the gendarmes.

One time a colleague, Robert Yoakum, came back from a left-wing demonstration with his head bloodied. He said he had been whacked by a policeman for just standing on the sidewalk.

"Why didn't you show your press card?" Eric Hawkins, the managing editor, asked. "I did," said Yoakum, "that's when he hit me."

THE FIRST EDITION came out at 11:30 in the evening, and a small crowd of Americans used to gather in front of the building waiting for it to come off the press.

They were all thirsting for the New York Stock Market results, and there were times when, after reading them, they attempted to throw themselves in front of our delivery trucks.

Because of its location, we had a constant flow of visitors in the city room. One of them was a deported American gangster who offered to blow the whistle on all his pals in Naples.

After I wrote a column about him he returned and said he wanted to kill me. I was off at a film festival so he said he would kill the general manager, Sylvan Barnet, instead. Barnet told him it would be better to wait until I returned.

Fortunately, by the time I got back the French had decided to deport him. I was forbidden by Barnet to write about deported gangsters for six months.

THERE WAS SOME talk that the present owners were seriously thinking of moving the paper out of France when they closed down the Rue de Berri offices. Fortunately, cooler heads prevailed.

No matter how many countries the paper is sent to, the soul of the Herald Tribune belongs in Paris.

The Paris Herald Tribune is still alive and well in Neuilly. For those of us who worked in the vineyards of the Rue de Berri it is a painful thought. How can you put out a paper in the French suburbs, after you've seen Paree?

ROWLAND EVANS & ROBERT NOVAK:

Foul Weather Fiends

WASHINGTON—An abnormal spell of very bad weather, not a planned "lapse" of Israeli security, explains the ability of Palestinian terrorists to get ashore at Maagan Michael Kibbutz for their bloody work.

Storms across the eastern Mediterranean not only forced the terrorists to stay at sea in their small rubber boats for almost 72 hours but also explained the startling lack of Israeli naval and air patrols which should have captured or sunk the attackers long before their secret landing.

Intelligence services of several nations are now piecing together the extraordinary success of the terrorist raid that resulted in 36 Israelis and nine Palestinian invaders killed.

One purpose: to discover how highly-touted Israeli security forces had been thwarted by the landing force.

That would answer whether there was a planned "lapse" of security to lure the terrorists onto the beach—an obviously risky procedure. The answer:

Weather, not any security "lapse," explains the evasion of Israeli patrols.

SO BAD WAS THE weather that sea passage from the now destroyed Lebanese port of Damur to the planned destination of Tel Aviv took three days—three times as long as estimated.

Heavy winds and low ceiling stopped Israeli naval and air patrols; the winds sank one of the terrorist rubber boats, drowning two Palestinian occupants.

The totally unplanned landing on the coast about 50 miles north of Tel Aviv, after the dangerously rough three days at sea, disrupted the attackers' whole plan (approved by Yasser Arafat, Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) chief).

That plan was to come ashore at the Pan American Hotel in the heart of beachfront Tel Aviv, round up tourists as hostages and demand release of PLO terrorists in Israeli jails.

Israeli sources believe the attackers planned to take a plane from Tel Aviv's Lod airport (using hostages for protection) and fly to Damascus.

Instead, after killing 36 Israelis, nine of the terrorists were themselves killed and two were arrested.

★

THE POLITICAL nervousness of the U.S. government was glaringly evident when it ordered a naval "demonstration" against Soviet penetration into the Horn of Africa an almost incredible 4,000 miles away in the South China Sea.

A naval squadron making a show of force is a venerable form of great power diplomacy.

So, to show displeasure with Soviet military intervention in the Ethiopian-Somali war in the Horn, the Security Coordinating Council (SCC) in Washington was presented with several naval options.

The most pointed was to dispatch the aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk and its accompanying task force to the Indian Ocean adjacent to the Horn.

Voices were promptly raised in horror. The preponderance of opinion at the SCC meeting felt this would be too provocative.

Never was Vietnam's numbing effect on U.S. policy so obvious.

Instead, the SCC sent the carrier task force to the South China Sea, far to the east, to demonstrate without provoking. Actually, the Kitty Hawk first went even further east, to Subic Bay naval base in the Philippines.

By the time U.S. warships steamed into the South China Sea, Somali forces had effectively bowed to the Soviet-backed Ethiopians. What kind of naval demonstration can be made 4,000 miles away?

"I would say it was no demonstration at all," a Defense Department official told us.

SEN. PAUL HATFIELD, a conservative Democrat serving out an appointment, reluctantly announced his approval of the first Panama Canal treaty after Mike Mansfield returned to his native state to plug it.

Mansfield, former Senate majority leader and now ambassador to Japan, is probably the most popular politicisn in Montana's history.

Ex-Judge Hatfield, who will be opposed by liberal Rep. Max Baucus for his Senate seat this year, could scarcely ignore Mansfield's wishes and hope to win a Democratic primary.

Both the State Department and Hatfield's office say Mansfield only mentioned the Canal treaties among a variety of questions he discussed in speeches to fellow Montanans.

Nevertheless, some conservative Republican Senators are vexed that a U.S. ambassador was brought home to lobby for a piece of pending legislation.

They have not raised the matter publicly only because of their personal high esteem for Mansfield.

"Since the election," Sen. Robert J. Dole, (R-Kan.) says, "I've been doing a lot of work with the handicapped—the Republican party." And he says, "Alf Landon and I are working on a book together. We're going to call it, 'Victory Is Just Around The Corner.'"

The Republicans, Dole says, must help themselves because "we can't depend on Jimmy Carter to do it all for us."

HENRY J. TAYLOR:

Oily Soil Pays Off

SECRETARY OF the Treasury W. Michael Blumenthal secretly has made a study of Saudi Arabia's resources—so important to the U.S. dollar.

Saudi Arabia requires our Treasury not to make public the amount of its Treasury securities or direct investments. The Treasury's "Monthly Bulletin" details the reports country by country. But not for Saudi Arabia.

However, Blumenthal knows that every three months the Saudis buy up to $1 billion in Treasury bonds, bills and notes.

In the past five years this highly secret figure has grown to about $30 billion in Treasury securities, including Federal Home Loan Bank, etc. And in U.S. Treasury bonds alone the Saudis have bought more than any bank or corporation. In fact, the purchases outstrip all traditional buyers like West Germany.

SAUDI ARABIA has enormous petrodollar holdings and also channels immense sums through commercial bank loans to First National, Chase Manhattan, Chemical, etc.

Blumenthal privately estimated that, all in all, Saudi foreign holdings exceed $60 billion.

He believes that in 1938 Arab oil-producing nations can make overseas investments greater than U.S. companies have accumulated throughout this century.

And the Arab oil producers aim for a minimum 10 percent return in interest and dividends—a fact often overlooked.

BLUMENTHAL ALSO believes that by 1980, at the present rate of accumulation, Saudi Arabia will hold a reserve of more than $100 billion.

As for Western investments, the Saudis are placing their wealth where they calculate it ties them more tightly to nations that can protect Saudi Arabia militarily. This also means nations that provide markets for oil and petrochemical exports.

Blumenthal reveals that, internally, Saudi checkbook diplomacy is an intricate network of influence.

It consists of $5.7 billion in foreign aid (the U.S. figure is $4.9), arms purchases, charity, economic aid, etc. Saudi Arabia's first five-year plan cost $10 billion and the second five-year plan $124 billion.

King Khalid bin Abdul Aziz, 65, a son of the late King Fisal (assassinated in March 1975) rules without a constitution or parliament as a hereditary monarch.

SAUDI ARABIA, three times the size of Texas and a third the size of the United States, covers 873,000 square miles; 80 percent of the immense Arabian Peninsula.

Its deserts and mountains (some 10,000 feet high) stretch from the Red Sea to the Persian Gulf and from the Gulf of Aqaba to the Indian Ocean. But only 8.1 million people live there.

In the last five years Saudi Arabia has built a new $12 billion military complex at Tabug, 125 miles from Israel's southern port of Elath and 140 miles from the Straits of Tican's Sharm el-Sheikh.

Another project is a $10 billion arms center at Al Kharj, 60 miles southeast of Riyadh, the capital.

OVERHEARD: Good supervision is the art of getting average people to do superior work.

WHO SPEAKS for you? In local, state and national government? In business? Your church?

Who determines what stand these various entities take? Do you usually agree with the position?

We got to wondering about this recently as more and more persons vented their anger over the Panama Canal vote. Millions obviously feel that what they think makes no difference to the people who should represent them and vote Their conscious.

The nagging worry came up again after the clash between Israel's Prime Minister Begin and the Carter Administration last week.

In the wake of the disagreement over a Mideast settlement, the White House, the State Department and even some media people started saying "the U.S. and Prime Minister Begin sharply disagreed today..."

IN THE SENSE that the President and State Department to a point do represent the American people, perhaps the terminology is correct.

But, in reflecting the sentiments of the majority of American citizens, it is subject to scrutiny.

Does the use of the phrase, "the U.S. today..." mean that is really what most of us think about a given subject? We doubt it, especially in recent years.

Not only is this so as it relates to Israel's precarious position but to the Panama Canal treaties, so-called black "majority rule" in Rhodesia and South Africa and any number of other crucial issues.

It's too bad there isn't a quick, easy way to ascertain what "the people" are thinking at any given time on any given issue. Waiting until election time is not satisfactory. With progress in the electronics world, perhaps one of these days someone will come up with a system whereby a nationwide referendum can be taken merely by each home phone number being given a vote. It's something to think about—for the frustrated citizen and the politicians.

IF YOU THOUGHT the ERA battle had simmered down, think again. It boiled up on two fronts last week.

In Frankfort, Ky., Lt. Gov. Thelma Stovall vetoed a resolution rescinding the state's ratification of the controversial amendment. Mrs. Stovall acted in the absence from the state of Gov. Julian Carroll. Now there is a double argument: The old one of whether a state can rescind its okay of the ERA and did Mrs. Stovall have authority to veto such a resolution.

In the meantime, Boulder, Colo., approved a resolution banning payment of travel expenses to municipal meetings in non-ERA states.

Kentucky was the fourth state to rescind its ERA vote. In Washington, the push to extend the time limit for ERA approval continues. Meanwhile, back at the ranch, one wonders why if it is so good why all the frantic maneuvering?

THE WHEEL was man's greatest invention, until he got behind it.

SPEAKING OF wheels, and traffic and 55-mph speed limits, "fuzz busters," a number did after our column on the subject the other day.

We quoted Col. Wilson E. Speir of the Department of Public Safety as saying he felt the 55-mph limit should be enforced, that he needed more State Troopers and that radar detectors should be outlawed. The reaction was predictable and swift.

A newsman in the office recalled that Col. Speir had been quoted last year as saying the speed limit was unenforceable, that he favored a 60-mph limit in certain areas, and that the way things were it invited the average citizen to defy the law.

We contacted Jim Robinson, DPS public relations man at Austin. Robinson confirmed that Col. Speir in effect did make the remarks attributed to him. But, Robinson says the DPS chief was not being contradictory. What he is saying, Robinson says, is that although he feels that in some areas the 55-mph curb may be too low, as long as it is the law of the land it should be enforced.

AND IT IS "the law of the land," having been mandated by the federal government, ostensibly to conserve gasoline and save lives.

Any state which did not enact such a statute and which does not "enforce it in good faith" stands to lose its federal highway funds.

Robinson told us, Gen. Fred Vetter of the U.S. Department of Transportation, was at the meeting where Col. Speir spoke and said there wasn't a chance the limit would be changed. He left no doubt but that Washington expected all states, including those in the wide open spaces, to enforce the law.

Which brings us back to the fact that many people—by DPS admission—do not observe the law. Some who commented noted that the record death toll, exceeding that for 1973 by six, came with thousands more cars on the road. Others said they didn't think Big Brother had any right telling them they couldn't have a "fuzz buster." All of which leaves us where we started, watching out for the other fellow, and ourselves!

ITEM NO. 625C in our Love and War man's file for single girls in search of gentlemen friends is a report out of Munster, West Germany.

Six attractive unmarried women there hired out to train as tax collectors. Each of them used her authority to investigate the financial status of the town's most eligible bachelors.

Within six months, all six had resigned to get married to their selected men.

The town of Y in France is not the only one-letter municipality in the world, please note. There's a village called A in Norway.

Lubbock Police Investigate Alleged Gang Rape

A 14-year-old Lubbock girl told police Sunday she was raped by six boys who earlier Saturday asked her if she wanted to go "riding around."

Lubbock police still were investigating the alleged incident late Sunday, but reports indicated the North Lubbock girl told her grandmother she was going riding with three boys about 11:30 p.m. Saturday and left her home in a white pickup.

Officers were called to that residence about 3 a.m. Sunday when the girl still had not returned home. Ten minutes later, patrolmen were called back to the address to be told the girl had returned and had been raped by all six youths.

The girl told police three boys came by and picked her up about 11:30 p.m. Saturday. They drove around for an hour, she said, and then picked up another boy at a Uvalde Avenue residence. The four youths and the girl drove to an East Lubbock residence and picked up two more friends, she said.

Because of the hour, she said she told the boys to take her home, but they refused and instead drove her to a dirt road east of Lubbock.

After a short discussion, the boys ordered her to disrobe, and she did, she reportedly told officers. After each boy had raped her, she said they drove to another Uvalde Avenue residence, and each youth reportedly again raped her in a garage area there.

One boy gave her a leather jacket, she said, and ordered her to walk home. Officers were still investigating her report late Sunday.

While that was going on, officers in another part of Lubbock found a 19-year-old Amarillo man beaten, robbed and left unconscious in his van parked northwest of the city.

Officers found Carlos Reyna in his van three-fourths of a mile northwest of Loop 289, patrolmen said, and tried to wake him without success. Officers noticed blood and a knot on his head and opened the vehicle.

Reyna told police he had been at a North University Avenue club earlier Saturday night and went outside to get into his van and sleep. He was awakened by four Mexican-American men who broke a window, climbed in and ordered him to drive, he said.

The next thing he knew, he said, were the officers awakening him. Reyna was missing his wallet, containing $100, and two stereo speakers from the van.

Other officers arrested a 25-year-old Mexican-American man for unlawfully carrying a weapon after a dancer at a 1108 25th St. club told police he had threatened her and fired shots at the club after being told to leave about 10:45 p.m. Saturday.

Another 42-year-old man went to jail on a similar charge after officers investigating a domestic disturbance in the 4400-block of 38th St. stopped the man for driving erratically and found a pistol under his seat.

Burglars who reportedly broke into Tim Edwards' 2611 Ave. H business took a $70 television set, he told police.

Items taken in other burglaries included a $1,000 stereo from Phillip Davis' 2801 Slide Road No. 46 home, two accordions valued at $1,155 from Rodger's Music at 1722 Broadway, a $125 television set and a clock from the home of Michael Wayne Joiner of 2010 5th St. No. 18 and a $250 stereo from the 708 Ave. X home of Horace A. Robb.

Burglars pried open a small safe in Burke's Texaco at 3311 Ave. Q Saturday to take $250, Sam Burke told police.

Officers arrested a Lubbock youth for possession of a controlled substance and burglary early Sunday after finding her standing outside the Top Dollar Store at 1821 Parkway Drive.

Officers responding on a burglary alarm found the girl standing outside a back door to the store about 7:45 a.m. Sunday. She ran, reports indicate, but officers who caught her later found drug paraphernalia and substances believed to be heroin.

Lindsey Buckner of David's Stationary at South Plains Mall told police a black man ran off with a money bag containing $63.50 from that store about 1:30 p.m. Saturday. The bag reportedly had been placed on the counter earlier.

Thieves took a $100 saddle from Floyd Dee Thomas' 214 N. Mulberry St. home.

Space Dust Pounds Earth Daily

WASHINGTON (AP) — A little bit of outer space falls to earth every day, says National Geographic. About a thousand tons of space dust, space particles and micrometeoroids reach the earth's surface daily, they report.

Larger heavenly visitors, meteorites, are not so common, but arrive in a more spectacular manner, says Geographic. A meteor shower in 1833 was described as a "constant succession of fireballs, resembling rockets."

Scientists are divided about the origin of meteorites, called meteors before they hit the earth's surface. Although some believe the bits of stone and metal from space to have once been part of a larger celestial body, others believe them to be primordial accumulations of matter that never coalesced to form a larger body.

Recently, a party of American and Japanese scientists found the fragments of an 898-pound meteorite, the largest ever found on the continent, near McMurdo.

Friona Pilot Dies In Crash

FRIONA (Special) — A Friona man was killed Sunday afternoon when the crop dusting plane he was piloting crashed and exploded after apparently hitting power lines in the area.

John D. Walter, 56, was the only occupant of the small plane, which witnesses said hit the power lines twice before crashing into the field and exploding.

Walter was dusting a wheat field about one mile south of Friona when the 5:20 p.m. crash occurred. Witnesses said the wheels of the plane hit the lines, Walter pulled away from the lines and then hit them again.

Friona police, Parmer County sheriff's deputies, Amarillo Department of Public Safety troopers and Friona fire department officials were called to the scene of the fiery crash which left both Friona and Bovina without power for about an hour, due to the damaged power lines.

Services for Walter, who moved to Friona 13 years ago from Hereford, are pending with Parsons-Ellis Funeral Home here.

He was an employee of Benger Air Park here.

Survivors include his wife, Mozelle; a son, Kenneth Walter of Friona; three daughters, Mrs. Jacquelyn Monk, Mrs. Jerrie Landrum and Johnnie Walter, all of Friona; two sisters, Shirley Walter of Edinburg and Jerrie Walter of Tulsa, Okla.; a brother, Donald of Clayton, Okla.; and four grandchildren.

Earthquakes Jar California Area

UKIAH, Calif. (AP) — A pair of moderate earthquakes jarred a 40-mile long area of Mendocino County Saturday, rattling windows and causing some damage to store merchandise knocked from shelves.

Bob Erhammer of the University of California Seismology Lab at Berkeley said the first tremor at 4:27 p.m. registered 4.4 on the Richter scale. An aftershock at 5:19 p.m. was recorded at 3.4.

Erhammer said more aftershocks could be expected during the next several days.

Both the Ukiah Police Department and the Mendocino County Sheriff's office said they had no reports of damage.

However, the manager of one Ukiah supermarket said his store suffered a $10,000 loss when merchandise toppled into the aisles during the initial temblor. There were no injuries.

Loretta Brooker, a dispatcher with the Mendocino Sheriff's office, said the quake was felt at least as far north as Willits and as far south as Lakeport.

State officials in Sacramento said the epicenter of the quake was in Hopland, a small community about 14 miles south of Ukiah.

Morphine Addiction Of Nazi Described

BONN, West Germany (UPI) — Hermann Goering, Nazi World War II commander of Adolf Hitler's Luftwaffe, was committed to a Swedish mental asylum in the mid-1920's for morphine addiction, a West German newspaper reported Sunday.

Welt am Sonntag, the Sunday edition of the daily newspaper Die Welt, said Goering became a morphine addict while recovering from bullet wounds suffered during Hitler's abortive uprising in Munich, Nov. 9, 1923.

On that day, Bavarian state police opened fire on Hitler, Goering and about 3,000 of their storm troopers as they marched from a downtown beer hall in the direction of the Bavarian Ministry of War.

Welt am Sonntag said Hitler fell to the ground, crept to his nearby parked automobile and fled the scene after police opened fire.

"One bullet of the first salvo hit Goering in the (groin) region. Goering fell to the ground. Goering bled profusely. He could hardly move," the paper said.

It said that Goering's onetime personal physician, Dr. Hanson von Ordarza, repeatedly had told colleagues that the police bullet had hit his patient's testicles.

"Goering's personal nurse, Christa, told several of Goering's aides that he was suffering from 'serious injuries of the testicles,'" the newspaper said.

"Hermann Goering used morphine to ease the pains of his injury. His ration rose to six injections a day," the article said.

Accompanied by his Swedishborn wife, Carin, who died in 1931 in Stockholm of an incurable lung ailment, Goering escaped to Sweden shortly after Hitler's abortive uprising.

During his time in Sweden, "Goering lost control of himself because of the morphine injections. He shouted frequently at Carin and smashed the furniture in their home," the newspaper said.

His wife's family finally managed to talk him into entering a hospital for treatment.

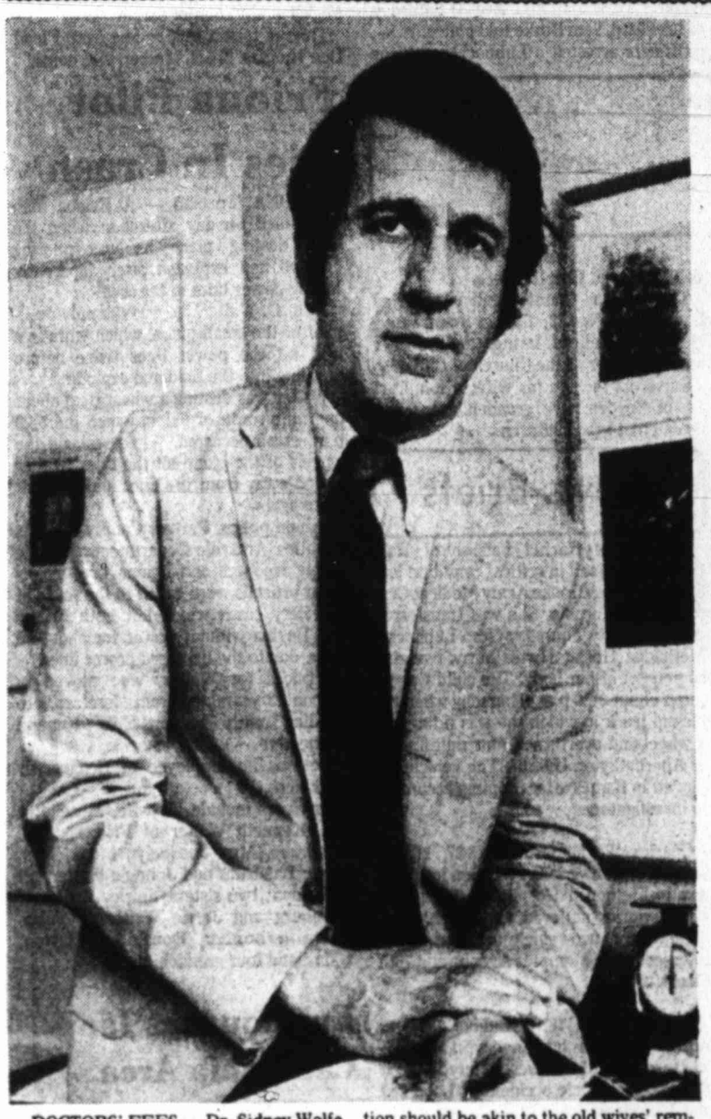

"One night, the nurse told him that he would have to wait 12 hours for his next shot. Goering began sobbing and asked the nurse to give him an injection on the spot.

"When she refused and told him he should not behave like a coward, he ran toward the nurse, his fists raised. The nurse cried for help.

"Goering was put into a strait-jacket and sent to an insane asylum. He remained there until all symptoms of his morphinism had gone."

Goering returned to Germany in the fall of 1927.

After Germany's collapse in 1945, the International War Crimes Tribunal in Nuremberg sentenced him to death. But Goering committed suicide by poison two hours before his scheduled execution.

DOCTORS' FEES — Dr. Sidney Wolfe, head of the Ralph Nader-founded Health Research Group in Washington, D.C., says doctors' fees are rising faster than a flu victim's temperature, and the solution should be akin to the old wives' remedy: "starve a fever." Wolfe is an advocate of ending the traditional fee-for-service method of paying doctors. (AP Laserphoto)

Medical Fee Structure Viewed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Doctor's fees are rising faster than a flu victim's temperature and a prominent consumer advocate says the solution should be akin to the old wives remedy: "starve a fever."

"The traditional market forces of supply and demand are meaningless in the health care system, demand is not created by the patients but by the doctors" who want to make more money, commented Dr. Sidney Wolfe, head of the Ralph Nader-founded Health Research Group.

Wolfe is an advocate of ending the traditional fee-for-service method of paying doctors. He blames this system for medical costs which a recent Council on Wage and Price Stability study showed to be rising half-again faster than other consumer prices.

"In the long run, the only way of effectively controlling the total cost of physician services may be to pay doctors on a capitation (per person) basis for providing comprehensive physician services to patients," Wolfe said in a study released last year by his organization.

Wolfe said his proposal would be similar to the health maintenance organizations and to the pre-paid group practices which already are operating successfully in some parts of the country.

"A recent survey by Medical Economics magazine showed that many doctors believe that HMOs (health maintenance organizations) really are the thing of the future, but they're uncomfortable because they'll make less money," he said.

These services allow an individual to pay a regular fee to the group in return for all necessary medical services. The HMO pays a salary to physicians which it employs.

The new government study released Wednesday showed physicians with a median income of $63,000 as of two years ago and said their fees were rising at 9.3 percent a year while other consumer prices were going up 6.2 percent.

And unless the consumer feels the bite personally, the report said, "there is little reason to predict that physician fee inflation will not continue to outpace price increases in the overall economy."

Medical insurance covers 80 percent of the population, and Wolfe concurs with the report's conclusion that this has "exempted physicians' fees from the usually restraining effect of market forces."

The government report said the highest earnings among physicians are for pathologists and radiologists, whose average incomes were estimated at more than $100,000 in 1975.

Specialties with lower mean earnings included psychiatrists, $41,258; pediatricians, $42,112; and general practitioners, $44,727.

"It is of interest to note," the report said "that those specialties with higher earnings receive most of their revenue through insurance, while those with lower earnings receive most of their revenue directly from patients."

Wolfe said that the crux of the problem is the Medicare system of compensating doctors.

The fee schedule is set on a local basis at the 75th percentile of fees actually being charged, he said.

This means that Medicare will pay fees higher than three-quarters of the doctors in an area charge, but lower than the most expensive one-quarter charge.

For example, assume there were only four doctors in an area and their charges for a gall bladder operation were: Dr. A $325, Dr. B $375, Dr. C $425 and Dr. D $475.

The prevailing charge for the area would then be set at $450, which is higher than three-quarters of the doctors (A, B and C) but lower than one-quarter, Dr. D.

Medicare would then pay up to $450 for the operation, although it would pay less if a doctor actually charged less. A doctor could also charge more, however, and bill the patient for the difference.

Wolfe said that one immediate reform which would be possible would be to reduce the prevailing fee set by Medicare to 50 percent of customary charges in an area. This, Wolfe said, would save $1 billion a year.

Wolfe also commented that there seems to be no relation between the fee charged and the quality of medical care. And he said an abundance of doctors in an area seems to raise the price of care, not lower it as would be expected with normal supply and demand.

Where there are more doctors, he said, there tends to be more surgery done, including more unnecessary surgery and more unnecessary diagnostic procedures and testing which raise prices.

He said there is some validity to reports that doctors must perform more tests now to avoid malpractice suits, but most of the extra work, he said, is merely done to make more money.

AMA Disputes Fee Findings Revealed By Federal Agency

CHICAGO (AP) — The American Medical Association's chief executive officer says much of a recent government study that blamed doctors for soaring medical bills was "built on old data" and faulty research.

Dr. James H. Sammons, executive vice president, also said a summary and press releases that accompanied the report by the Council on Wage and Price Stability last week amounted to "a political hatchet job."

The report said doctor bills are increasing half again as fast as the overall inflation rate and that the situation may get worse. It also accused the AMA of trying to limit the number of doctors in practice.

"We are incredulous that this unit of the executive branch of the government would publish a press release and summary report that is not substantiated in the body of the report itself," Sammons said in an interview.

He said the AMA has actively worked to increase the number of medical schools and practicing physicians in this country. Almost 16,000 doctors are now graduated from U.S. medical schools each year, about double the number of five to seven years ago, Sammons said, adding that the charge is "just plainly ridiculous."

He said the data about physicians' income and fees in the report are incorrect.

The study said that two years ago the median income of physicians was $63,000. The AMA, which yearly publishes statistical studies of medical practices, says the projected median for 1976 is $54,000 and that the actual median, before taxes, for 1975 was $50,337.

"That's not even close to the incredible figures being used" in the report, he said.

"It would appear that there is a concerted effort to make this release and report indicate some sort of dishonesty or fee-gouging or call-it-what-you-will on the part of physicians in this country which is absolutely untrue," Sammons said.

The figures for physicians' earnings, he said, are "neither unreasonable nor unrealistic" in view of the number of hours they work every week and the number of patients for whom they are responsible.

AMA statistics show that the average workweek for all doctors in 1975 was 51.8 hours and that they had an average of 126.5 patient visits per week.

Sammons, who formerly maintained a family practice in Texas, also pointed out that in some areas physicians must work seven days a week and be on call 24 hours.

He said the $100,000 yearly average income for radiologists and pathologists cited by the report does not represent those physicians' actual income. From that sum many must pay their employees and other expenses, he said.

The actual median for radiologists for 1975, he said, was $70,500 and the projected figure for pathologists for 1976 was $74,900.

Sammons pointed out that the high cost of malpractice insurance also plays an important part in the income of various specialties, especially the high-risk specialties.

The government report said consumers have become unaware of what health care costs since so much of it is paid for by insurance. The Federal Trade Commission is considering allowing doctors to advertise so consumers might compare fees.

Sammons said patients have come to expect a luxury level of medical care and that their demands do not always have anything to do with whether therapy is indicated and helpful.

The AMA, he said, is deeply involved with the American Hospital Association and other groups in a voluntary cost-control effort to try to stem the rate at which health care costs are rising.

He said that advertising by physicians would increase the cost of care, increase utilization rates and increase morbidity and mortality.

Such advertising, he said "is going to provide an incredible number of procedures that may not need to be done."

The type of advertising the FTC is talking about, he said, "would be pure solicitation of business."

Carter Honors Top Teacher

DENVER (AP) — What advice would the 1978 National Teacher of the Year have for aspiring teachers: "Be a good listener. Also, don't expect to go home when the bell rings."

Elaine Barbour, who was selected by a panel of educators and school administrators, got the award and a kiss from President Carter last week at the White House. She stopped here on her way back to her sixth-grade class at Coal Creek Elementary School in Montrose, Colo.

"I'd tell them unless they are totally dedicated to kids, don't get into the profession," she said when asked her advice to young people thinking of being teachers. "And don't go into the profession with the idea of furthering yourself. So often one sex — I won't say which for fear of being thought a woman chauvinist pig — goes into teaching with the idea of becoming an administrator.

"Teaching itself is rewarding and important," she said.

Unconventional College Opens

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — There won't be any fraternities and sororities or long lines at the bookstore when Indianapolis' newest college opens on April 1 — just students and teachers, usually in a one-to-one ratio.

Martin Center College, set to begin with a class of 20 students, is planned as an alternative way to a degree for persons who, for one reason or another, cannot attend a conventional university.

"The people we want to hit are mostly in the work force already, all races and ages," said administrator Rita Kohne-Brodnax, who got the idea for the college when she chaired a special survey committee for the Indiana Higher Education Commission two years ago. "We don't want those right out of high school — that's more of a social experience. We want people whose goals are defined."

The college is a project of Martin Center, an social agency that has been battling sex and race discrimination since the mid-1960s. The new college's students will design their own curricula — provided they meet state degree requirements — plan their own schedules and choose their professors and classrooms, often their own homes.

Candidates Well Acquainted

HOOPER, Colo. (AP) — Three husbands and wives and a son make up seven of the eight candidates for the six town board seats in this south-central Colorado town's April 4 election.

Odd man out in this town of 100's election is incumbent Franklin Ornton. He isn't running against a relative.

The other candidates are incumbent Donald Chrisman and his wife, former town clerk Carolyn; incumbent Walter Kangas and his wife, Lloydeen; Rachel and Paul Williams and their son, Charles.

Mrs. Chrisman said, "We've kind of had a problem with a lack of interest in city government (three elections in 20 years), so we decided we'd all run" to spur local interest.

She added, "Afterwards, we're trying to get together a big party and invite everyone in town."

SCOUTED ENVIRONMENT

BALTIMORE (AP) — These days, there's more to Scouting than learning how to tie a double-sheep-shank. For a group of young men and women students in Baltimore, the Exploring division of Scouting has given them hands-on experience in environmental control, and an award.

Alabama's Guntersville Lake, a man-made body of water that is the largest in the state, has 962 miles of shoreline.

FIDDLIN' AWAY — Impromptu bluegrass concerts were easy to come by during the weekend at the Old Time Fiddlers' Convention, which drew an estimated 130,000 to tiny Union Grove in western North Carolina. These youths took advantage of a sunny break in the rainy weather that plagued the convention. (AP Laserphoto)

Fiddlers' Confab Drenched By Rain

UNION GROVE, N.C. (AP) — About 130,000 bluegrass music lovers packed up their gear and plodded homeward through a sea of mud Sunday as the 54th annual Old Time Fiddlers' Convention came to an end in a driving cold rain.

"They're clearing out of here like crazy. It's bumper to bumper and we've got 15 or 20 tractors pulling cars out of the mud up there," said Iredell County Sheriff Tom Thompson.

A few hours earlier, a new "world's champion fiddler" was crowned after three days of competition and an all-night parade of musicians before about 20,000 noisy fans fortunate enough to gain shelter from the rain under a covered arena.

"The main problem playing here is just being heard above this doggone crowd," said J.B. Prince, 21, of High Point. Prince took second place by scratching out a bluegrass standard, "Sally Gooding," on a $500 fiddle.

Tim Smith, a 21-year-old professional musician, walked off with top fiddling honors and the $1,000 prize.

Smith was among nearly 200 acts that performed before a handful of judges selected by convention promoter J. Pierce Van Hoy.

The convention, which was started by Van Hoy's father in 1924 to raise money for the local school, has grown from a few musicians and listeners to a rite of spring for many. Nearly 400 acres of farmlands about 50 miles north of Charlotte were set aside for the three-day event which drew a predominantly youthful and boisterous crowd.

Rain set in late Friday, turning the convention site to a quagmire, but the crowd kept growing and complaints about the weather were rare.

"You can't hear bluegrass in New Jersey," said a 22-year-old interior decorator who came to tiny Union Grove, N.J., with 30 friends.

The event was marred by one death. Authorities said Richard Durham, 19, of Newport, Tenn., was found dead early Saturday, apparently of a drug overdose.

Illegal drugs were openly bought and sold inside the convention compound which was policed only by private security guards.

But local deputy sheriffs and highway patrolmen worked the roads leading to the convenion.

Thompson estimated that about 100 persons had been jailed during the weekend, most for drug or alcohol violations. About as many were arrested on lesser charges and released after posting bond, he said.

"The rain didn't cut down on the crowd or the activity at all," Thompson said. "No sir, once these people get here there's no stopping them."

Doctors at a temporary hospital on the convention grounds treated 150 to 200 patients a day, most with drug problems.

"Last night when it got down into the 30s we got a lot of people who were wet and had no place to stay," said Mike Miller, a nurse. "Some of them didn't even have shoes. We put up as many of them in here for the night as we could."

South Africa Schools Enroll Some Blacks

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — About 1,000 black pupils have quietly enrolled in some of South Africa's best white private schools this year despite the government policy of keeping schools segregated, a Johannesburg newspaper reported Sunday.

The Sunday Times said admitting black students into private white schools was "a quiet revolution" engineered by National Education Minister Piet Koornhof, who is considered a liberal.

Koornhof said he had no comment on the report. Many of the schools will not discuss the situation for fear the publicity might cause strict enforcement of segregation laws.

Most of the integrated schools are run by churches. Last year some Roman Catholic schools admitted blacks in defiance of the government. In the resulting controversy, the Catholic schools promised Koornhof not to admit more black students during the 1977 school year.

The agreement did not cover this year. Koornhof has indicated privately he favors integrating schools and sports in a quiet way. He said that as long as no one complained he would not stop integration.

In Transvaal, the northern province that includes Johannesburg, the provincial chief executive ordered black pupils turned away from white private schools. Some principals ignored his order, which has not been enforced. Public schools remain segregated.

In some other areas there have been no orders from provincial authorities, or black students have been admitted with concurrence of local officials.

Roman Catholic Archbishop Denis Hurley would not comment on the situation because of a "press moratorium" agreed to with Koornhof last year. Fearing an official backlash, Catholic schools telephoned by The Associated Press recently would not comment on their integration attempts. Church officials said they wanted to integrate quietly and that it was up to parents to complain if they objected.

Mayoral Candidates Address Issues

This is the first in a series of interviews with city council and school board candidates running in the Aprfl 1 election. Views of the four mayoral aspirants are presented today

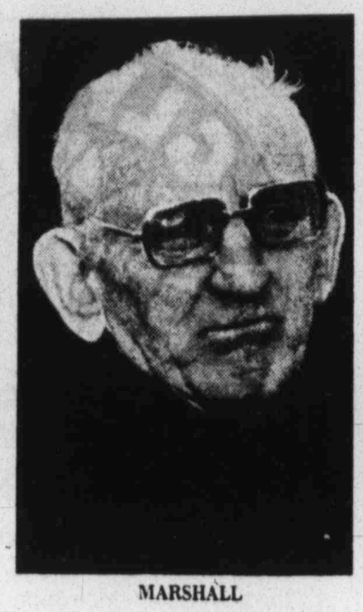

KIZER

Robert D. Kizer, 29, is an attorney and building contractor. He received a business degree from Texas Tech University and was graduated from Tech law school. He served in the U.S. Army Reserve and is a member of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce, Jaycees and the national, state and Lubbock bar associations. Kizer lives at 2504 64th St.

WEST

Dirk West, who owns an advertising agency, has been Lubbock's mayor pro tem for four years. He is a Texas Tech graduate and past Tech instructor. West, 49, served on the Parks and Recreation Board for seven years and is a member of the Red Raider Club. He is past president of the Lubbock Advertising Club and has been Southwest Conference cartoonist for 10 years. He lives at 3416 56th St.

MARSHALL

James G. Marshall is a 65-year-old self-employed Realtor. He lives at 2217-24th St.

KELLY

Leland Kelly, 21, owns a downtown vending company. He is a former Texas Tech student and lives at 3212 22nd St.

Qualifications

The job of mayor is as a logical decision maker. Being that that's the job, in my past I've been in business and been an attorney. The basis for those two things is logic and that logic is from my business experience and my legal experience. With those two backgrounds and with that logic I can fill the office.

My four years of hard work as mayor pro tem are a qualification. I think the first two years of anybody's term on the council is a learning experience. It requires a lot of learning and familiarizing yourself with departments and duties of the city. After four years over there, I feel that I have prepared myself by watching, learning and taking part to do the job. I have tried to develop a feel for all the citizens and what they want and expect from the city, and I think I have a feel for that. I believe it is unbeatable as a qualification.

I went to the University of Texas and Texas Tech. For for more than 10 years I have conducted my own study of matters at City Hall. I have the best file on City Hall of anyone in Lubbock. And as a result of my study and files and experiences of City Hall, I think I am the best qualified person seeking the office of the mayor.

I have been in business for eight years and backed other businesses and have other investments that make me qualified businesswise toward managing the city. It gives me knowledge enough to be mayor. If I was mayor, it would help me in the next 20 years to move up in government—Congress, maybe even president.

Crime

Crime has to be one of our biggest problems. It needs to be dealt with now, permanently, and to do that I think we ought to look at, number one, police who are the problem solvers, and number two, our surroundings which are the problem. I think in the past too many people have allowed the police force to direct us without adding any direction or any push to make it a stronger problem solver. If we studied the police and find they are efficient, then I feel we need to study the area and find what problems are unique to it and what way we can solve those problems through an efficient police force which has a very humanistic approach. That humanistic approach means that it takes the problems of each section of the community and deals with it separately in relation to that section.

For four years my record of support for our police department is stepping up efforts to fight crime in Lubbock. Each year I have asked for more support and more money for the police department. The growth of this city has brought about increasing crime and our police need help and citizen support. I feel that they do a great job with the manpower and facilities they have. I intend to work towards adding strength and personnel and equipment to stem this rise in crime and to make Lubbock an unpopular place for the criminal element. For instance, closer work between the council and county and frequent meetings between the council and our police officials to assess the crime situation in our city.

There is much to be done in the area of crime in the City of Lubbock. It's my understanding from talking to policemen in Lubbock that they are discouraged when they make an arrest and there is no conviction. The criminals are arrested for similar offenses time and time again. There certainly needs to be more effective convictions and court proceedings. I think we need to stress the convictions of criminals and discourage crimes of all kinds and make the penalities stricter. As for the massage parlors, I would station photographers as near the front door of every massage parlor in town or any other house of ill repute and photograph their customers as they entered the establishment, 24 hours out of the day.

We very definitely need stricter enforcement of the laws and I would like to see it harder for people to get out on bails. The only way to do that is to have higher bails set where they can't get out on bail. And restitution comes in because it would make a thief think twice about doing it again if he had to pay back what he stole. People need to be informed more on how to protect themselves against it.

Community Development Funding Policies

I'm concerned that too often we try to find in areas of the city that we don't have enough money for and put the community funds into that area. I feel that the funds should be specifically used for the purpose that they're given us. If they're given for housing, it ought to be complete housing. If it is given for lights, use it for lights. If we use the funds as proposed from the federal government, then no one area or groups of people can complain that we're either being biased or prejudiced.

Community Development funds should be used wherever the greatest need that qualifies under governmental regulations. There are many, many requests for the apportionment of these funds from all parts of the city, as well as the city staff requests. As a top priority in these funds, I really think we should always look at the health safeguards and environmental conditions. The amount allocated to the betterment of housing each period should always be based on the scope and the immediacy of the problem.

I own a home in the Arnett-Benson district and since that is currently part of this program (in the Urban Renewal project for the Arnett-Benson addition), I think every person in that project should be treated equally as near as possible. I think that there's too much emphasis on some of the residents and too little or none at all on others. And what's good for the goose should be good for the gander. Everything in the area should be more equal.

If it's for helping the community, I'd be for it. If it does the people good and brings in participation of people who live in the community, I think it would be good because it would give more self-pride.

Fuel Cost Pass-Through

At the present time we're paying an excessive amount for all types of power. The pass-through affects this in ways which we are at present not able to control, mainly in the way we audit the power company's books. At the present, a certain company may be able to hide profits. We should better be able to handle or control the costs of industrial-type gas and better be able to define our present term called "a reasonable profit." At the present time, I feel the profits are unreasonable and the people are the losers.

The automatic fuel cost pass-through was passed by the city council before I ever got on the council. Every city that I know of has a fuel pass-through. Because of the energy crisis, the scarcity of fuel and costs of producing oil, gas and electricity, this pass-through has become a way of life across the nation. I don't like high utility bills but anyone that tells you that they can control the energy crisis or runway inflation on a local level is blowing smoke.

There are too many unmetered electric accounts in the City of Lubbock, in my opinion. Also, there are too many freeloaders on Lubbock Power and Light (LP &L). Nearly all of our street lights are unmetered. The freeloaders don't pay as much as they should. When we average out the amount of pass-through that is necessary to cover the costs of the operation of LP&L, the free service and the freeloaders (the cost of the electricity that they use) is added on to the rest of our service. This creates too much of a pass-through that's affected by the freeloaders. Consequently, the average household customer has to carry the pass-through that's caused by the free services. I think all electricity should be metered, all the charges and rates should be the same, and this would make all the pass-throughs the same. And then the pass-throughs and the charges would be fair and equal.

I think we should either stop the pass-through or at least make it where it goes through the council every time it comes up. And I think they should very definitely make a veto a lot of times against all the hikes that they have. They're supposed to give an annual report on their hikes. They don't do that. They should give a financial statement at least semiannually and have it on public record so people could look at it. I think they should drop the minimum charge. Either that or cut it down so it would make it stable. Doing away with it might not be the best thing but at least control it so you have the power over it.

Utility Company Duplication

I feel that for Lubbock to lose its utility system (Lubbock Power and Light) Lubbock would be losing a viable income-maker and business. I feel at the present time LP&L should be made a stronger company and more of its profits be plowed back into it so as to make it a stronger competitor with an already threatening giant (Southwestern Public Service Co.)

The city has an enormous investment in Lubbock Power and Light (LP&L). It serves a need of a great many of our citizens along with Southwestern Public Service Co. (SPS). Competition is good. That's what our economy is built on. It promotes better service and most importantly ensures an adequate energy source for a growing city such as Lubbock. Unlike California and some eastern parts of the country, we do enjoy an adequate energy supply. And if the two power companies are the reason for that, then I see nothing wrong with having them. As a businessman, I prefer competition in every area of business. We have the two power companies here and as long as they both serve the citizens' needs and there's a desire for the citizens to have them, then I think it is a good situation.

The city council sets the rates for both LP&L and Southwestern Public Service Co. (SPS). Let's just take the streetlights alone. LP&L has to add all the costs of the electricity that lights our streets into their cost of operation. That's just one example. And when you get into the free-loading area, that's added in, too. It isn't fair for the city to furnish all of the electricity for streetlights. This is a tremendous advantage for SPS. I think our council a long time ago should have required in the franchise that SPS must obtain for the use of our streets and alleys to furnish just as much electricity for our streetlights as LP&L does. If this is done, it would reduce the rates both companies are charging.

It would be cheaper if we had just one power company but since we do have two, what I think we should do is let Southwestern Public Service Co. (SPS) have part of the cost of the free electricity we give away. Like the citizens of Lubbock pay for the electricity we give to Texas Tech by giving them a lower rate. And it's so low we're losing money. And they're passing the charge on to consumers like you and me. I believe SPS should pay for some of the free cost of electricity in the outer city limits. Out in the country rates are cheaper because there is only one electric company. Maybe it would be best just having one instead of two.

Priorities

Number 1: Power.
Number 2: Police.
Number 3: Re-evaluation of property taxes.

Number 1: Making Lubbock a safer city, which encompasses fighting crime and doing something immediately about our horrendous traffic problem.
Number 2: Creating an atmosphere of complete cooperation between City Hall and the taxpayers.
Number 3: Coping with the problems of a growing city.

Number 1: Mismanagement of LP&L and its operation and policies which have caused the electric rate to be so high.
Number 2: The fallacy in this city of the operations of our police and court system in not being more effective than they are and have been in controlling crime.
Number 3: The juggling of various city funds, the misuse of bond funds and sinking funds and special funds as I understand the law.

Number 1: Stop the automatic fuel cost pass-through.
Number 2: Work on establishing a better minimum charge on utilities.
Number 3: Put people into positions that really want to work.

Priorities For City Divergent

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The four mayoral candidates profiled by The Avalanche-Journal cited differing priorities facing the city in the next several years.

The candidates, who will be competing in the April 1 election for the council position being vacated by Mayor Roy Bass, are, in alphabetical order:

—Leland Kelly, 21, a downtown business owner;

—Robert D. Kizer, 29, an attorney and building contractor;

—James G. Marshall, 65, a self-employed real estate agent; and

—Dirk West, 49, president of an advertising agency.

The candidates, who answered identical verbal questionnaires, were asked to take stands on issues the A-J believes will face the city council during the next several years.

Broad topics were posed, including crime, Community Development block grant funding policies, fuel cost pass-throughs and utility company duplication.

Each candidate also was asked to name according to priority their three major concerns for the city.

Only two of the candidates—Kizer and West—listed police or crime as a major issue.

Kizer's priorities, in order, are utility costs, the police department and re-evaluation of property taxes.

"Making Lubbock a safer city" ranked at the top of West's list, which also included creating a more cooperation between City Hall and taxpayers and "coping with the problems of a growing city."

Kelly also spotlighted utilities as his two major concerns, calling for elimination of the pass-through and establishment of "a better minimum charge on utilities."

He concluded his list by advocating assigning people who "really want to work" to positions.

For Marshall, the number one issue facing the city council should be "mismanagement of LP&L (Lubbock Power and Light) and its operation and policies." Such actions have forced the electric rate to skyrocket, he said.

And, Marshall said, another problem is the "fallacy" of the city's police force and the court system. They are not effective, he said.

His third concern, Marshall concluded, is the "juggling" of city funds and the "misuse" of bond, sinking and special funds.

The A-J posed the issue of crime to the candidates and asked each to state his views on the subject. Citing his longtime support of the police department, West proposed adding more manpower and equipment to stem the rising crime rate.

He also said closer cooperation between the city council and police department is necessary to deal with the crime situation.

Marshall proposed more "effective" convictions, court proceedings and stricter penalties to keep criminals from being turned out into the streets to repeat their crimes. Continually arresting repeat offenders is discouraging for the police, he said.

If he were mayor, Marshall said, he would order that photographs be taken of all massage parlor patrons as they entered the establishments.

Kizer advocated more citizen input into police department activities and a more "humanistic" approach to crime by the police force.

Higher bails for arrested people are necessary to "make it harder for people to get out on bails," Kelly said.

He also suggested that a restitution program be initiated to give potential thieves second thoughts before breaking the law.

Public education about crime also is needed, he added.

None of the candidates emphatically advocated eliminating one of the two electric companies that serve Lubbock.

West said competition is healthy. And as long as Lubbockites want both Lubbock Power and Light and Southwestern Public Service Co. service, he will support the dual system, West added.

In addressing the duplication issue, Marshall decried what he calls freeloading and SPS's advantage over LP&L, which pays the cost of electricity to city streetlights.

The city council should demand that SPS share in the streetlight costs, Marshall said, explaining that would mean lower rates for customers of both companies.

Kelly generally agreed with Marshall's ideas. He also suggested that "maybe it would be best just having one instead of two" power companies here.

Kizer rejected the idea of closing LP&L and suggested that the company's profits be returned to it to strengthen the firm.

None of the candidates expressed controversial views or new policies for allocation of Community Development block grants received by the city each year.

But the fuel cost pass-through topic aroused firm opinions. Kelly and Kizer advocated closer council review of the charges, with the latter saying he believes Pioneer Natural Gas Co. may be making an unreasonable profit from the cost adjustments.

West adopted a more moderate view, saying that the pass-through is necessary here as in other cities because of the energy crisis, fuel scarcity and rising fuel production costs.

Marshall suggested meeting the high pass-through cost problem by eliminating unmetered accounts, such as streetlights. He said said the cost of such accounts is passed on to consumers through the pass-through.

Europeans Demanding More Bullet-Proof Autos

PARIS (AP) — A growing number of kidnappings by Europe's terrorists and big-money criminals has created a sudden boom market in bulletproof cars for French business tycoons.

Benoit Labbe, who with his father runs an auto body factory in Brittany, is making a successful enterprise out of these fears by turning discreet French sedans into armor-plated bunkers on wheels.

Even the U.S. State Department has made inquiries about bulletproof French cars for American diplomats in countries where big U.S.-made cars draw attention, Labbe said.

"I have banks, industrialists, big multinational companies, administrations, everything," Labbe said in a telephone interview from his Brittany office. "It's a market that didn't even exist a year ago."

Government leaders long have ridden in custom-made bulletproof cars and in recent years diplomats in sensitive areas also have been issued them. The rash of kidnappings in Europe now seems to have broadened the market to include high-income entertainers and business barons.

Labbe's little factory is turning out two bulletproof cars a month and plans to expand production to more than 20 a month within a short time. Labbe said he is getting two orders a week, mostly from French-based business firms, magnates or protection agencies.

To keep the orders coming, he placed an advertisement showing a Luger pointing at the reader under the headline: "It's not only a safety belt that saves." With his clientele in mind, Labbe put the ad in the monthly bulletin of the National Council of French Business, equivalent to the U.S. National Manufacturers Association.

"These people are afraid of getting attacked in their cars, like Revelli-Beaumont, Hanns-Martin Schleyer, the Baron Empain, Aldo Moro," he said, referring to recent kidnap victims in France, West Germany and Italy. All but former Italian Premier Moro were businessmen.

"All these people were kidnapped in their cars. Big executives want to protect themselves.," Labbe said. "It could be expensive, but when you compare it to two months of detention it's not so bad."

Bulletproofing a standard Peugeot 604 costs $16,700 to $25,700, depending on the kind of armor needed and whether the windows are curved along the lines of the body so they don't look reinforced.

The standard job quadruples the thickness of body panels by adding special steel developed from knowledge gained during U.S. moon shots.

Behind that goes a synthetic fiber with special resistant qualities to stop any bullet that may have made it through the steel. The back window, reinforced by plastic, is nearly an inch thick.

Labbe claims the result will stop most rifle or pistol bullets, but not rocket-launched grenades or bazookas.

To accommodate the extra weight, Labbe's firm rebuilds the suspension and strengthens the springs. Often the gear ratios have to be changed as well to help the motor pull all the armor.

Labbe's prototype, which was purchased by the French government, was used by President Carter during his visit here in January and by President Tito of Yugoslavia a few months earlier.

The firm has long experience in the area since it has built more than 500 armored trucks for money-moving firms and banks. Labbe said the firm was the first to enter the bulletproof-car market in France and previously Frenchmen had to rely on an Italian company or buy factory-built armored Mercedes-Benz cars.

Israeli Cabinet Backs Begin In Confrontation With Carter

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's Cabinet unanimously supported Prime Minister Menachem Begin's handling of his recent talks with President Carter Sunday and decided against altering its peace plan.

Cabinet spokesman Arieh Naor said the government still believed the plan calling for Palestinian autonomy in the West Bank of the Jordan River is "a fair basis for the continuation" of peace talks with Egypt.

The brief statement to reporters after a cabinet meeting appeared to reject U.S. demands for an Israeli commitment to eventually withdraw from the West Bank, which Israel captured from Jordan in 1967.

But Naor said the government "restates its commitment to the achievement of a total and comprehensive peace in the Middle East."

Naor said Begin would deliver a major address to the Israeli Parliament, the Knesset, later this week on his talks in Washington.

Opposition leader Shimon Peres said, meanwhile, his Labor Party probably would not submit a motion of no confidence in Begin's government, contrary to earlier speculation.

"I am not sure that this is the occasion," he said, "because the results can be foreseen, and we are not for making empty gestures."

Begin's coalition commands a comfortable majority with 78 seats in the 120-member house.

By some accounts, the failure of Begin's mission has thrust Israel into its deepest confrontation with the United States in more than 20 years.

Naor also said Begin would reply this week to a letter sent to him by Egyptian President Anwar Sadat two weeks ago. The Egyptians have insisted that Israel alter its positions, but they, too, have said they are willing to continue the search for peace.

The contents of the Sadat-Begin exchange, made through U.S. diplomatic channels, have been kept confidential.

Reports that a senior Carter administration official said Begin's removal from office was necessary for the continuation of peace talks also was raised in the cabinet session, Naor said.

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance said Friday there was no U.S. attempt to bring down Begin's government, saying it would be "totally improper" for Washington to meddle in Israel's politics.

Naor said that every minister who mentioned the reports "rejected them with open contempt."

Greek Independence Day Celebrated In Lubbock

It's been 157 years since Father Germanos raised the Greek flag at a monastery outside Patres in Greece to begin the revolution against Turkish domination, and the anniversary of that hard fought independence was celebrated Saturday night in Lubbock by the budding local Greek community.

The festivities, which included Greek food, dancing and music, were hosted by Dr. Pat Pappas, and were attended by many descendants of the original Greek families to move to Lubbock.

John Kallas, whose father, Gust Kallas, was the first Greek to move to Lubbock back in 1925, was one of those on hand for the gaiety.

The elder Kallas built the first social center for students here when he opened the Tech Cafe at the southeast corner of Broadway and Ave K.

Relatives of the Zernes, Pratas and Vallas families, who moved here shortly afterward, were also on hand for the independence celebration.

The Greek community in Lubbock continues to thrive. The local Greek Orthodox Church has grown to a membership of over 100 persons and plans are underway for construction of a church here. Currently, a priest from Denver, Colo., travels to Lubbock for monthly services at the YMCA.

It is estimated that the average American consumes 12 sheep during his lifetime.

Transatlantic Cheap Flights To Expand

LONDON (UPI) — Freddie Laker's no-frills Skytrain celebrated six months of service Sunday with an announcement that it has made a net profit of nearly $1.5 million and will expand to two flights a day each way, starting April 1.

A Laker spokesman said that since the inaugural flight Sept. 26 between London and New York, Skytrain's no-reservation DC-10 service had carried 97,763 passengers across the Atlantic Ocean, filling an average of 78.26 percent of the seats each trip.

The net profit was $1,498,000, the spokesman said.

"We are delighted with the success. Over the past six months almost everyone who wanted a ticket has got one," said the Laker official. "The concept of being able to turn up, buy a ticket and take off has worked just as we said it would."

A total of 345 tickets go on sale in each direction every morning for the flight. Starting April 1 there will be an additional 189 seats sold on a second daily flight in each direction.

Skytrain's success, which followed a six-year campaign by Laker to persuade the British government to allow cut-price trans-Atlantic travel, has forced all the other airlines on the route to introduce competitive stand-by and budget fares not only to New York but to a dozen other U.S. cities as well.

The Laker official said they were not worried by the new competition.

"Our whole premise has been that we would create a new market and we have been proved right. Everybody has benefited from Skytrain," he said.

"We are looking forward to a good summer peak period for Skytrain. Don't forget that the other airlines will only have a few stand-by tickets on sale each day because their flights will be booked up with regular fares. But we will be selling 534 tickets every day in each direction, starting April 1."

Laker has applied to run a second Skytrain between London and Los Angeles but faces competition from rival British Caledonian, which has underbid with a proposed one way stand-by fare of $140. The British government, which has heard arguments from both airlines, was expected to make its decision next month.

Palestinians Continue Skirmishes; U.N. Troops Move To Truce Areas

BEAUFORT CASTLE, Lebanon (AP) — Palestinian guerrillas entrenched in the ruins of this clifftop Crusader-built fortress fired mortar shells Sunday into Israeli-held territory in southern Lebanon. Increasing numbers of U.N. troops, meanwhile, moved into the region to take up peacekeeping chores.

Associated Press correspondents who traveled extensively in south Lebanon Sunday said most of the blue-helmeted U.N. troops had yet to move between Israeli and guerrilla lines.

(In Israel, a spokesman for the U.N. peacekeepers said a Swedish reconnaissance patrol near the Kardali Bridge over the Litani River was caught in a crossfire Sunday during a skirmish between guerrillas in the Beaufort outpost and Christian militiamen south of the Litani.

"The fire was not directed at U.N. troops," said spokesman Jacques da Silva. He said none of the Swedes was hurt.

An Israeli commander in Tel Aviv told the state radio that guerrilla rocket fire from Tyre, the guerrillas' last major stronghold south of the Litani River, struck an area of northern Israel. No casualties or damage was reported.)

An officer of a French U.N. unit bivouacked at a former Lebanese army barracks near Tyre said his superiors would probably contact Israeli officers later in the day to discuss deployment.

As he spoke to reporters gunfire echoed from nearby Israeli and guerrilla lines.

Additional French paratroopers Sunday joined two companies already camped at Tyre, raising the unit's strength to about 400 men.

In Beirut, Yasser Arafat said his Palestine Liberation Organization "will help the U.N. forces to obtain an unconditional withdrawal of Israeli forces from South Lebanon."

Israeli troops entered Lebanon March 15 in response to a guerrilla raid in Israel March 11 that killed 35 Israelis. They have occupied virtually all of the region south of the Litani except for a band around Tyre and a belt linking the biblical port city to the Litani.

Reporters watched guerrilla mortar rounds arch from the Beaufort ruins, about two miles north of the Litani, toward Israeli lines in the south and the Israeli frontier six miles to the southeast. The correspondents were unable to determine where the shells fell.

The reporters also heard sporadic artillery fire and saw shells exploding in nearby hilly farmland and orchards.

Communiques issued by various Palestinian groups in Beirut reported increasing guerrilla action along the front and "behind enemy lines."

One report spoke of heavy Israeli shelling overnight at eight locations north and south of the Litani. The guerrillas said they returned fire "hitting enemy gun positions and troop emplacements" in southern Lebanon. There was no immediate comment from the military command in Tel Aviv.

Guerrilla communiques said an Israeli truck was blown up by a rocket propelled grenade near Marjayoun in the southeast corner of Lebanon, and another truck was destroyed near Qana, southeast of Tyre, and "a number of enemy soldiers in it were killed."

Despite continued skirmishing in the south, reporters noticed a number of Lebanese refugees returning to homes evacuated when the invasion began. At least two dozen tractor-pulled trailers and taxis piled high with mattresses and other belongings were seen heading south.

A higher number of refugee-laden vehicles continued to flee northward, joining the estimated 200,000 Palestinians and Lebanese who left earlier.

Franchising Changes Image Of Real Estate

WUSHINGTON (UPI) — In the age of multinationals and conglomerates, small businessmen still flourish in real estate. But times are changing and the small fry are joining together in order to survive.

The change, embraced by small firms who feared competition from strong local chains, was spurred in part by Anthony J. Yniguez.

After 19 years as a Northern California realtor, Yniguez sold out to his partner in 1962 and spent a year golfing at Pebble Beach while he came up with a new idea — franchising real estate.

A National Dream

"It was basically a 'Mom and Pop' business throughout the country," the father of real estate franchising recalled. He dreamed of a national real estate business, but realized that a centralized firm would be hampered by different real estate laws in 50 states.

To this day, he anguishes over the legal bills his firm must pay to stay abreast of laws in each state.

"I couldn't see that any company would grow large in this country in a single entity," he suid.

He decided to gather existing independent real estate brokers under a common name. In exchange for franchises, he would offer sales training, marketing research, recruiting help, joint advertising, management development, referral and an image.

Local Ownership

Yniguez, 54, wanted a national company with one name while retaining local ownership in each community. "When the idea came out of the other end of the tunnel, we found we had franchising."

In 1966 he established Red Carpet Corp. of America with six offices in Contra Costa County, Calif. At the end of 1977, the firm had 970 offices in 13 states with hopes of 3,500 by mid 1982. Red Carpet has many copiers, some larger than the original.

There is some dispute over Red Carpet's claim to be the first real estate franchise operation.

Gallery of Homes opened its first office in 1949 in Rochester, N.Y., and offered franchises the next year, emphasizing selling homes with attractive photographs shown in a living room setting.

Photograph Network

Now located in Atlanta, Gallery, which has 700 members, claimed to be the first, but Yniguez insists he created the first total franchise system and that in its early days Gallery was mostly a real estate photograph network.

"They did not get into the full franchise business until they were nudged by Red Carpet," said Yniguew.

Red Carpet kicked off 1978 by entering the Washington area, one of the world's premiere real estate markets. Two years ago the marketing team decided to enter the area because of its mobile population, high median income, emphasis on resale homes and relatively young home buyers.

Twenty-eight real estate firms, courted by the firm, added Red Carpet to their name and, as required by the franchise agreement, laid red carpeting in their offices.

Each firm put up $7,900 and promised to pay six percent of its monthly gross income.

Beginning Of Invasion

Yniguez promoted the opening in the capital and its Virginia and Maryland suburbs as the beginning of an invasion into the East. The next targets are Baltimore, Norfolk, Va., and Philadelphia.

A grand opening dinner and ball was held at, by coincidence, the red-carpeted Sheraton Park Hotel. The newly affiliated brokers were dressed in red blazers, garb recommended by Red Carpet, and seated around tables with red table cloths.

"Are you sitting in office waiting for roast duck to fly in open mouth?," chided real estate educator Brian Roper, quoting a Chinese proverb, as he gave the real estate brokers a taste of Red Carpet's upbeat training.

Five Days Of Training

W. Ronald Evans of Washington recently took a five-day Red Carpet course in real estate management and a three-day nourse in communications skills. He will use the company's films and video tapes to train others in the Washington area.

Evans, vice president of the local Red Carpet realtors council which coordinates cooperative advertising, said he was introduced to Red Carpet by a California friend who increased his business two-to three-fold after three years with Red Carpet.

Robert and Barbara Shreffler said their County Wide Realty Inc. firm is prospering in Gaithersburg, Md., a suburb where a nice home can still be purchased for a reasonable price by high-priced Washington standards.

Mrs. Shreffler said they must look to the future when independent firms like theirs might be swallowed up by large local chains.

Impressed With Image

After talking with several franchisers, Shreffler chose Red Carpet. He was impressed with the image and the newly designed red and black trademark, which he believes will make his "for sale" signs stand out.

The initial cost to Shreffler was an estimated $15,000, including the $7,900 fee, installing red carpet, changing his signs and printing new cards and stationary.

"I've made lots of money tonight in tips," he joked, comparing his red blazer to the hotel waiters' uniforms. But he said the blazer will help his image.

Called A Network

Electronic Realty Associates, known as ERA, is another group which gravitated to the financial rewards in the Washington area, and other major real estate market areas, along with other imitators of Red Carpet.

In less than one year in the area, ERA has signed up 27 realtors. The firm, established in 1972 in Kansas City, has about 2,600 offices.

ERA calls itself a network, not a franchise, because it sells its services in exchange for monthly fees instead of percentages of gross commissions. It features a national multiple listing service and transmits fascimile photographs to ERA offices throughout the nation.

Tim McCoy, sales manager of Time Realty, said his firm's business in the Washington suburb of Falls Church, Va., had improved since it joined ERA.

Much Larger Firm

Century 21, which opened its first offices some six years after Red Carpet, has far surpassed the original in size. It has 5,200 offices in the United States and Canada.

The long-range goal, according to Robert E. Williams, local director of administration, is 10,000 offices.

Century 21's Williams attributes his firm's greater growth, compared to Red Carpet, to its "decentralized management" system in which 32 sub-franchises have been sold to individuals who have control over 32 regions of the nation.

Yniguez disagrees with that concept, saying the sub-franchises are an extra layer of management he would rather do without.

Other Companies

Homes for Living, which is a marketing network and not a franchise, was established in 1962. It has 900 firms and 1,800 offices in its network, which charges membership fees, but does not take a percentage of gross profits.

Realty World International, established in Canada in 1973 with its first American offices opening in Boston in 1975, has more than 750 offices, including 25 in the Washington area. Its headquarters are now in the nation's capital.

"The independent realtor who is fighting to retain his identity and compete against the chains has only one place to go — to a franchising operation," said Carmon Greer, a senior vice president of Realty World.

Major Competition

There is spressure from another angle. Some large firms, like Coldwell Banker of Los Angeles, are rapidly acquiring local real estate firms.

In those early real estate franchise years, when some persons were skeptical about the new idea, it took Red Carpet five years to grow to 100 offices but only one and a half more years to reach 500. Yniguez said the pace of growth slowed down after the brokers complained they were getting insufficient attention.

A new push is on. A number of executives have been replaced and a five-year plan was drafted.

Fraud Hearing Will Feature Fabled Estes

TYLER (AP) — For more than a year, cigar-chomping Mississippi promoter Don Trull has been telling anyone who would listen how paroled swindler Billie Sol Estes bilked him out of a small fortune.

On Monday, he gets his chance to tell it to a jury.

Trull, 40, is on trial for kidnapping, an act he claims was motivated by Estes' refusal to pay up. The defense has subpoenaed 55 witnesses and the names on the list indicate defense attorneys would like to get Trull's allegations against Estes read into the official court record.

Included on the witness list are several Houston and Abilene businessmen who have told The Associated Press they, too, were caught up in bogus promotions authored by Estes.

However, the star witness will be Estes himself. The one-time West Texas wheeler dealer is expected to testify Tuesday afternoon. He was paroled in 1971 after serving about half of aa 15-year sentence for fraud that involved the U.S. Government and 400 individuals.

On Aug. 9, Trull allegedly held a man hostage for four hours in a gasoline-soaked Tyler office building, all the while threatening to burn the place down. He surrendered after an aborted attempt to extort $10,000 and a Cadillac from Tyler millionaire Billy Pyron, a man Trull claims was in some way connected with his deal to buy some East Texas land from Estes.

Pyron has denied any involvement in the mattter. Estes has deferred all comment to his attorney, Jack Bryant, who has branded Trull a "common felon."

Administration To Introduce Farm Proposals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A package of new administration farm proposals to be unveiled this week probably will include a plan to seek higher 1978 crop prices by paying farmers to idle surplus cropland, government sources say.

The plan, which sources said was still subject to last-minute changes, would supplement an existing "set-aside" program under which wheat and feed grain growers are required to idle part of their land in order to qualify for price supports.

Growers participating in the Agriculture Department's "set-aside" get no direct rental payments for their idled land. Under the supplemental plan, producers who have qualified for price supports by retiring "set-aside" acres would also be offered direct rental payments for idling additional acreage.

Sources said they were uncertain whether such a program would cover crops other than grains.

There was no immediate indication of the size of the program under discussion. Administration officials have indicated indirectly, however, that any such program would be substantially smaller than pending congressional proposals to idle up to 46 million acres.

The administration's announcements were scheduled for this week to get them into effect before a Senate-House conference committee returns to work April 3 to seek agreement on a compromise emergency farm bill.

The bill, sent to the conference panel last week after passage by the Senate, includes an increase in 1978 crop support loan rates and target prices for grains and cotton. It also includes two separate plans for reducing 1978 acreage of grains, cotton and soybeans, including a controversial "flexible parity" program backed by members of a farm strike movement.

Sources said that in addition to the potential land diversion program — which would be operated under terms of existing law — administration moves that may be made soon include:

—An increase in soybean price supports from $3.50 a bushel in 1977 to a probable $4.50 for this year.

—Government purchase of 220 million bushels of wheat to be stored for use in meeting future disaster emergency needs abroad.

—A 43-cent-per-hundredweight increase in milk price supports effective April 1. This action will be required automatically under a formula written into law in 1977.

A spokesman for the farm strike movement said strikers did not expect the pending administration moves to come anywhere near giving them the amount of aid they want. The movement will continue to pressure Congress to pass the "flexible parity" plan included in the pending farm bill, said Lee Scheufler of Sterling, Kan.

Social Tolerance Said Biggest Abuse Problem

(EDITOR'S NOTE — Those who work with victims of domestic violence say society's tolerance of spouse abuse is one of the toughest problems they face.)

By MARTY HAIR

YPSILANTI, Mich. (AP) — A housewife, wearing a designer dress that cloaks her badly bruised arms and torso, visits her family doctor. He shakes his head in disbelief:

"Your husband's too nice a guy to beat you."

The wife of a factory worker, on advice from a social agency, calls the local prosecutor's office. She asks what legal action will stop her husband from beating her.

"Call back Monday," she is told.

Another woman sees a counselor about the beatings she is subjected to when her husband comes home drunk.

"What do you to do provoke him?" the psychologist asks.

Spouse abuse seems to be culturally accepted, says Dr. Elissa Benedek, a psychiatrist who works with both abusers and their victims.

Who's at fault? Nearly everyone who deals with cases of spouse abuse, says Dr. Benedek, a clinical associate professor of psychiatry at the University of Michigan and training director at the Center for Forensic Psychiatry in Ypsilanti.

"We have to tell these women not to feel guilty, that it's not something they are causing," she says.

The prevailing attitude among physicians, mental health workers, police, courts and husbands and wives themselves, she feels, is that domestic violence is bad, but it's nobody else's business.

"Nobody needs it. That's probably the biggest thing that has to be refuted, that if a woman is abused, she wants it, she needs it, she's provoked it, she enjoys it.

"Women are in very difficult positions. Many have no resources, nowhere to go. Who can you go to and say your husband's beating you?"

Some battered women testify in court that having no one to listen, nowhere to go, made them so desperate that they resorted to violence against their husbands.

One of them, Francine Hughes, has moved to Jackson, Mich., following her acquittal by reason of insanity of a first-degree murder charge in the death of her ex-husband.

The 30-year-old woman told the Ingham County Circuit Court jury last fall that her ex-husband choked her, threatened her with a knife, teased their children to tears and allowed a family pet to freeze.

After years of this, Mrs. Hughes said she splashed gasoline around the bed where James Hughes slept and lit it.

This year, in another case, Jennifer Patri of Waupaca, Wis., who contended she was the classic example of a battered wife, was convicted of manslaughter in the death of her husband and sentenced to 10 years in jail.

"This is absolutely the last option," Dr. Benedek says. "They looked, they tried everything and there just was no other choice — or they didn't see that there was another choice."

There is no "typical" spouse abuser, although the person is usually male and often he uses alcohol and was abused himself as a child, she says.

"People abuse because the legal sanctions against it are not all that stringent. You can get away with it.

"Mental health people are as guilty as anybody of saying, 'What did you do to cause it?' and in fact there may be some direct relation to something a woman did. But certainly not with all women. And even if there is, that's not the way to handle it."

The problem is getting experts to realize "it takes two. To say not what did she do, but why is he doing that to her?"

To facilitate this, she advocates special training, such as Detroit police officers are now receiving, in dealing with spouse abuse.

One of Dr. Benedek's patients was living with a man who was a drug dealer.

"She said murdered him, he came home drunk and beat her dozens of times. The night before she murdered him, he came home drunk. He beat her and raped her. And then he wanted to go out and look for a car! She said, 'No, I won't do that.' And he left and she sat by the window and waited and shot him with a gun. She said she had tried to leave him and he had followed her each time."

Another woman, middle-class, has a job and several children. Her arms show bruises where her husband beats her. She told Dr. Benedek that she is staying with her husband for her children's sake, and will leave when her oldest child is grown.

"That's not a legitimate thing to do," the doctor said. "Kids know. And you're setting up the pattern of violence again. It's important to weigh the options, but, in fact, you're not doing your children any good. There are no family secrets."

Dr. Benedek tells patients they should get police officers' names and badge numbers when they arrive at the scene of a domestic dispute and should ask the officers to file a report. If the woman has to be hospitalized, she should get the name of the treating physician and request that pictures be taken showing her injuries.

Beyond that, she may go to a lawyer or Legal Aid clinic to find out how to file criminal charges against her husband.

Ideas for abuse shelters and funding for abuse programs will be contained in recommendations from the President's Commission on Mental Health subpanel on women and minorities, of which Dr. Benedek is a member.

"It's hard to know whether to be pessimistic about the treatment of spouse abusers because they haven't been able to catch enough of them. There are some people who are violent not only to their spouse but also to casual strangers. For these people, I'm not optimistic. But for others, who are more able to change their behavior, the situation may get better with treatment."

Travel Tips Explore Service Links To Major Airports

By United Press International

Air fares are probable the lowest in history as a result of the no-frills and other special flights offered by international and domestic airlines. But getting to and from many international airports by ground transportation can still be a costly hassle.

Take Japan's new international airport at Narita. It's about 40 miles northeast of Tokyo and the expressway between the two is often clogged with heavy traffic. During peak traffic hours, air passengers can expect at least a two-hour taxi ride and fares of up to $50. A private limousine can cost nearly $100.

One alternative is the new Skyliner express train, fare about $4.25, which takes about one hour on a non-stop run between Narita and central Tokyo. There is also scheduled airport bus services to the downtown terminal, about $7.75 one way, and two national railroads, fare about $7.25, linked from Narita depots to the airport by shuttle bus.

New York authorities are still talking about a high-speed rail link between John F. Kennedy airport and the city. In the meantime, however, taxi fares into midtown New York can cost fro $15-$20, and the 20-mile ride can take an hour and more, depending on traffic. There's a round-the-clock airport bus service to the East Side terminal, fare $4. If you are traveling light, and really pinching pennies, you can take the Q-10 bus which runs through the airport to Lefferts Boulevard where connections can be made with subways to Manhattan, Bronx, Queens and Brooklyn. The fare is 50 cents for the bus and 50 cents for the subway. Exact change is required.

Budget travelers can save money in London by using the recently extended underground service between Heathrow international airport and Piccadilly Circus. It's about a 45-minute ride and the fare is about $1.55. It can get crowded during the morning and evening rush hours and the trains do not run during the night. The airport bus costs about $2, while taxi fare between the airport and midtown London averages around $13.50.

Gatwick, about 30 miles south of London, also is an international gateway. A taxi costs nearly $24 for the about 85-minute ride, but there are excellent train services into downtown London during the day and the 35-minute ride costs about $4.75 in first class, $3.25 in second — actually there is very little difference between the two.

Here are some facts and figures that could help you beat the high cost of transfers — as such transportation is referred to by the travel industry — in major cities:

Brussels: cheapest, fastest and convenient is the train between the airport and central station in town, fare $2.50; taxi fare is about $16.

Paris: airport bus between Roissy-De Gaulle or Orly and city air terminals is about $2.60; taxi to midtown from Roissy is about $11, from Orly about $9.

Rome: airport bus between Da Vinci and central terminal is about $1.75; taxi fare about $17.50.

Stockholm: airport bus fare about $2.60; taxi about $30.

Singapore: regular bus to city center about 16 cents; taxi fare about $2.

Manila: bus fare is about 28 cents; taxi fare about $2.80.

Hong Kong: airport bus to center city about 40 cents; taxi fare between $4 and $6 to hotels in Kowloon or across the bay on Victoria island.

London: airport bus to city terminals or the city or Miami Beach; taxi fare from about $9.50.

San Francisco: airport bus costs $1.40 to the downtown terminal and takes about 30 minutes; cab fare is about $14 and goes about as fast as the cabby can haul — possibly 20 minutes.

Los Angeles: taxi fare is about $15 and travel time could range from 30 minutes to an hour, depending on the time of the day and traffic conditions; airport bus to terminal and stops at certain major hotels is $1.70.

Montreal: airport bus from Dorval is $3.25; a taxi can run up to at least $10.

Transportation to your hotel or other destination from intown terminals or depots is extra, naturally.

You generally won't have to worry about transfers if you are traveling with a group on a package plan arranged by a travel agent — such transportation is usually included.

If you are on your own, and you intend to rent a car, you might save money by picking up and leaving the car at the airport.

Inventor Left Mark On U.S. Industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The first steam engine is attributed to James Watt, but an ingenious ex-storekeeper named George Henry Corliss added so many improvements to this invention that he can be credited with powering a large part of America's industrial growth, according to Intellectual Property Owners.

As a general store owner, Corliss found little outlet for his mechanical genius until he was 35, when the shoes he was selling brought complaints of weak stitching. So he invented and patented a machine that stitched from both sides, says IPO, a non-profit group devoted to preserving the patent system.

When Corliss attempted to sell this device to a Providence, R.I., machine builder, he was hired on the strength of his creativity. He then began a string of inventions that revolutionized the steam engine, beginning with his first patent granted on March 10, 1849.

Corliss set up his own company to build steam engines on the new principles he had worked out. One of his most spectacular achievements, IPO says, was designing the monumental Corliss steam engine that was the most striking exhibit at the 1876 Centennial celebration in Philadelphia. It provided power for 8,000 different machines at the exhibition.

CONCRETE ADVICE

When making concrete, the directions on the bag of cement will tell you how much water to use. However, the condition of the sand has some bearing on this. If the sand is damp, use less water in the mixture than specified.

$85,000 ISN'T ENOUGH — Old car buffs look over a 1931 solid gold Cadillac on auction in New Orleans. The car is covered with 23-karat gold, its floors are carpeted in mink and its hubcaps are studded with diamonds. Glen Boydstun, a Ft. Worth collector who owns the car, turned down an $85,000 offer and decided to take the car back home. "Some day, somebody will pay $200,000 for this car," he said.(AP Laserphoto)

Cadillac Owner Gives Cold Shoulder To $85,000 Offer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The 23-karat gold Cadillac headed home to its Texas garage Sunday after a brief appearance here at an auction. Offers to get it to Mississippi fell thousands of dollars short.

The Cadillac, a dazzling 1931 Fleetwood convertible with mink carpet and diamond-studded hubcaps, brought a high bid of $85,000 from Odis Brown of Jackson, Miss., a retired insurance executive whose taste for elegance is obvious.

"Some day somebody will pay $200,000 for this car," said Glen Boydstun, a Ft. Worth collector who decided he liked his gilded prize better than Brown's offer. "I think it is worth $100,000 or more right now."

Brown had outlasted two museum dealers at the Kruse Collector Car Auction Saturday when the bidding was closed far short of Boydstun's demand.

"I surely was disappointed," said Brown. "I thought I'd bought it. But there aren't any cars around here worth that kind of money."

Boydstun, a manufacturing executive who says he collects cars as a hobby, picked up the Cadillac last year from a man who paid $100,000 for it at an auction. He won't say what he paid, but described it as less than that.

It is a spectacular vehicle, with one-sixty-fourth inch gold plating all over — even on the wire wheels, door handles and windshield wipers. Any metal that couldn't be gilded is chromed.

Boydstun's wife Charline takes off her shoes when she steps inside on the mink carpet. The keys are ruby-studded. The upholstery is white leather.

"It's just one of a kind," Boydstun said, "and people get a big thrill out of owning one of a kind. I'm no different. Our feeling is enjoyment to own something of this caliber."

So why sell it?

"The value of every car has been going up annually 15 per cent if it is a good classic. It's a better investment than money in the bank."

The car, built in the depression but gilded later, would be worth considerably less if it didn't have all that glitter. Sitting next to it at the auction was a conventionally painted metal Packard, 1931 vintage, which remained unsold despite a $37,000 bid.

At the auction Boydstun drove his golden coupe from its parking place to the green-carpeted block 100 feet away and back. It was shorter than his usual drives — but not much. He says they usually range eight or ten blocks around the neighborhood back home.

The golden coupe could go farther, but — face it — this is no touring car. It's more of a gold elephant that stays stored in a vault-like garage except when on well-guarded display.

Even the trip home: incognito inside a truck.

Fish As 'Brain Food' Gains Scientific Support

(EDITOR'S NOTE — There may be something to the saying "You are what you eat." Researchers are finding that foodstuffs, even familiar things like carbohydrates and protein, can affect the brain. Findings already have helped sufferers of tardive dyskinesia.)

By ALTON BLAKESLEE

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — "Fish is good brain food," according to folklore that implies fish makes you smarter.

Now scientists are finding that foodstuffs can indeed directly affect the brain.

Fish doesn't make you smarter, but it might help a failing memory. What you eat for lunch or dinner may also affect how well you sleep, your emotions, sexual desires, how healthy your brain is, how well some drugs work.

This brain research is only in its beginning phases, but one clue from food studies already has led to dramatic improvement in some people suffering from a brain disorder of uncontrolled facial movements.

Much more cause and effect knowledge appears to lie on the horizon, says a leading researcher in the field, Dr. Richard J. Wurtman of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

The exciting thing, he says, is that some chemical components of foods directly influence the available amounts of certain brain messengers, or neurotransmitters. In turn, these affect how the brain "talks" to itself and performs.

Brain nerve cells — called neurons, and you have some 10 billion of them — are tiny electro-chemical units. Electrical currents speed nerve signals through the neuron. Then, at the ending of the neuron, chemical neurotransmitters zip the message to other neurons. A single neuron may communicate with up to 10,000 other neurons this way.

There may be as many as 50 different neurotransmitters, with some 30 identified so far, Wurtham says.

"When we know about them all, we will know much more about how the brain works."

Some of the brain messengers are manufactured from simpler chemicals supplied in food. So, what you eat can bring an ample or insufficient supply of some of the very important messengers.

A first solid accomplishment is with a mental disorder that affects many thousands of people, Dr. Wurtman says. Known as tardive dykinesia, it brings on uncontrollable movements of the lips, tongue (fly-catcher tongue) and head, and causes grimacing. It often follows, or is caused by, taking certain anti-psychotic drugs.

The trouble basically stems from too little of one vital neurotransmitter, acetylcholine. This is made in the brain from choline. Choline is supplied naturally in such foods as cheese, eggs, meat and fish. Normally you consume enough choline to make all the acetylcholine your brain needs. One large omelette can boost acetylcholine reserves within a few hours.

But people with tardive dyskinesia probably have trouble making enough acetylcholine. Experiments with rats showed that giving them extra choline by mouth raised their manufacture of acetylcholine. This finding was quickly applied to humans.

In one study at MIT, oral doses of choline brought dramatic improvement in nine of 20 patients with tardive dyskinesia. Eight others had some improvement, while only one became worse in the study conducted by Wurtman, Dr. John H. Growdon, Madelyn J. Hirsch and Dr. William Wiener.

"This marks a new scientific principal. Virtually any brain disease due to too little choline should potentially be treatable," says Wurtman, who heads the Laboratory of Neuroendocrine Regulation at MIT's Department of Nutrition and Food Sciences.

Manic depression may be one such treatable disease, he says, judging from initial experiments by Dr. John Davis, professor of psychiatry at the University of Chicago.

Normal human memory too, arently depends upon an adequate supply of acetylcholine, too, Wurtman continues. Meals rich in choline, or extra doses of choline, might prove helpful in rescuing a failing memory. This possibility is being put to test by Dr. David Drachman, head of the department of neurology at the University of Massachusetts in Worcester.

There's a drawback to swallowing pure choline. It is broken down by bacteria in the gut, resulting in an unpleasant fishy aroma. A way out, it has been found, is to take lecithin, which is converted into choline in the body. Lecithin is an emulsifier used in products such as cupcakes and margarine, and it also occurs naturally in eggs, soybeans and liver.

Another vital brain messenger, serotonin, is apparently involved in sleep, appetite, sexual behavior and visceral functions, Wurtman says.

The amount of serotonin in the brain goes up or down with different kinds of meals. Lots of protein lowers it. Lots of carbohydrates raises it.

High levels of serotonin induce sleep and reduce appetite for more carbohydrates, animal experiments show.

Low levels give cats insomnia and increase sexual activity in both male and female rats. Low serotonin in one experiment made rats less sensitive to pain. Low levels also seem associated with the secretion of pituitary gland hormones.

Presumably, high-protein meals such as steak, fish, eggs would tend to make one more alert while high carbohydrate foods, like spaghetti and potatoes, would tend to induce sleep. And the meals might have other effects like those shown in animals.

The key in making serotonin is tryptophan, one of some 22 amino acids or building blocks of proteins.

At first glance, it might seem protein foods would boost serotonin in the brain, because it supplies tryptophan. But, as Wurtman explains, protein consists of only about one percent tryptophan.

Carter Set To Unveil Broad Urban Strategy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is to end a grueling year-long policy process Monday by announcing the first comprehensive urban strategy ever developed in the White House.

In a speech before several dozen mayors, several governors and a contingent of civic leaders, Carter will unveil a broad effort to fight urban decay while helping healthier cities avoid distress.

Sources familiar with the plan say it would cost an additional $2.6 million for urban programs, plus authority for spending an additional $1 billion. Tax credits to stimulate job creation and economic development would cost the Treasury $1.7 billion.

In fiscal 1978, about $80 billion is being spent by the federal government on grants for states and cities.

The urban plan has been in the works since last March when Carter appointed a Cabinet-level task force headed by HUD Secretary Patricia Harris.

Early task force work centered on an urban plan that was more narrowly targeted to help cities and people in distress, but that approach was junked by officials who said such a focus would never survive the Congress.

Thus, the Urban Bank long-sought by the big-city mayors was transformed into a National Development Bank, which will provide investment subsidies to distressed urban and rural areas.

In its final report to Carter, the task force said, "Our policies must reflect a balanced concern for people and places. They must assure immediate aid to the cities and people in distress (and) ... they must reflect concern for healthier cities by preventing small problems from growing into larger ones, and by guiding growth so that the environment is preserved and scarce resources are not wasted."

Carter finished his work on the urban policy last Friday and his staff worked over the weekend to prepare his speech and the accompanying message to Congress.

Carter worried some top aides Friday morning when he emerged with initial decisions on the urban policy that did not include some programs considered crucial to the success of the program.

Following a meeting with Vice President Walter F. Mondale, presidential aides Hamilton Jordan and Stuart Eizenstat and budget director James McIntyre, Carter restored the programs.

Chief among the restored programs is a $1-billion public works fund designed to create construction-company jobs for the hard-core unemployed on projects to improve public facilities.

Richard Nixon is the second president against whom impeachment proceedings were begun.

Schoolboys Get 'Whale' Of Ride

FELIXSTOWE, England (UPI) — Two schoolboys were released from a hospital Saturday night after flying through the air in a whale.

Justin Wright, 14, and his brother Keith were treated for shock and minor injuries.

They and other children were bouncing on an air cushion in an inflated plastic whale tethered to the Felixstowe waterfront when a freak whirlwind whipped up the 30-foot whale.

Attendants got the other children out, but Justin and Keith were still inside when the whale's tether broke and it whisked into the air.

It flew across the beach, over a road, tore down two lamp posts and damaged two parked cars before coming to rest 500 yards away in the gardens of the town hall, where Justin and Keith scrambled out.

Scientists Pressure Diamonds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists squeezed two diamonds together with so much pressure that one flowed like soft butter, a development that opens the way for experiments simulating conditions near the earth's core, it was announced Sunday.

The National Science Foundation said the sustained pressure in the test, equivalent to 700 times that exerted upon the earth by Mount Everest, was three times higher than any other steady pressure produced experimentally.

Scientists at the Carnegie Institution's Geophysical Laboratory here said they achieved pressure between the diamonds greater than 25.2 million pounds per square inch (psi).

Drs. Peter M. Bell and Ho Kwang Mao said their maximum pressure was greater than that at the boundary of the earth's rock mantle and its liquid and solid metal core. This boundary 1,800 miles below the surface has a pressure of approximately 22 million psi and a temperature of about 5,400 degrees Fahrenheit.

Simulating these conditions will lead to discovering minerals found only in these environments, the researchers said.

"We intend to explore this new experimental pressure region to determine the properties, composition and mineral components of the deep mantle and the physical and chemical nature of the core itself," Bell said.

"This is exciting because we are not really sure what's going on down there," Bell continued in an interview. "The outer crust of the earth is only about 35 kilometers (22 miles) thick and man hasn't even penetrated that."

Bell said bits of minerals can be placed between the diamonds of his pressure device and heated with an infrared laser to temperatures up to 7,200 degrees.

Previously unknown minerals form under these conditions and the researchers already have discovered several new ones. Bell said about 3,000 minerals are known, but that they probably represent only a small portion of those that exist on earth.

"We are putting together a model of the deep earth and this opens up a whole new area of research that has not been touched before," Bell continued.

In work sponsored by the National Science Foundation, the researchers use a device called a diamond anvil cell. The device uses both hydraulic and mechanical crank power to push together two one-third carat cut diamonds.

The diamonds, aligned with light beams, have a facing surface about one-25th of an inch in diameter. Applying a large force through such a small surface produces great pressure.

Bell said he uses diamonds, the hardest known substance, because other materials would shatter or deform under much lower pressure.

"But we were surprised to see one of the diamonds begin to flow like soft butter or plastic when we reached our highest pressure," he said. "This tells us we are probably pretty close to the limit in using diamonds for this."

House Conferees' Pipeline Action Praised By Hill

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General John Hill commended the House conferees Sunday for rejecting a Senate proposal giving the federal government the authority to allocate intrastate natural gas.

In a letter to House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Fort Worth, Hill said:

"The sweeping mandatory allocation provisions in the Senate conferees' version of the bill would have placed Texas' natural gas reserves at the mercy of inefficient interstate pipelines. With the federal government standing by to make up inefficient pipeline companies by diverting Texas gas to make up for shortages in the interstate system, an important incentive for efficient use of natural gas is eliminated.

"The end result of any mandatory allocation provision placing intrastate gas supplies under federal jurisdiction would be lost jobs for Texans.

"Our petrochemical complex and our irrigated farms are dependent on an uninterrupted supply of natural gas. For those reasons, I applaud the House conferees' actions and urge them to stand firm in their opposition to mandatory allocation authority for intrastate natural gas."

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

You know why I'm frustrated today?

I just figured out I've gone through life frying square bacon in a round skillet. When I finally found a square skillet, I was still stuck with four round burner units. It's the story of my life.

In 28 years of keeping house I have never had a "standard" window. Never had a "standard" ironing board. Never had a chair that would fit into a "standard" slipcover.

In trying to match the white paint on my dining room walls, I discovered it was especially mixed by a man who got out of the paint business and is sitting cross-legged in the mountains of the Himalayas trying to find out what is life. He took the formula for my dining room paint with him.

The square butter keeper in my refridgerator does not accomodate my little round tubs of butter. Celery has to be folded to fit into the vegetable crisper.

They are having a wonderful sale on those carpet kits that contain enough carpet to cover a standard 6 by 9 bathroom. My bathroom measures 6-3¾ by 9-4½.

I have the kind of sweeper bags that can only be gotten from the wholesale distributors of the sweeper, who are closed at 3 p.m. Tuesday through Friday and closed all day Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

With regularity, I throw away the top of the coffee unit in my percolator. With regularity, I send off to a company behind the Iron Curtain to have it replaced.

I always have the washer and dryer where the first thing they ask me is the serial number. I own the last models off the assembly line to have the serial number on the bottom.

My open stock dishes were closed out for lack of interest and I don't think I've ever owned a car where anything on it was standard and didn't have to be ordered during a truck strike.

My latest swimming upstream adventure involved a bag of white pebbles for my flower beds. The bag said, "These pebbles will cover an area 8 to 10 feet." My area measured 7¼ by 9¾. I was in business.

The first bag, when distributed, looked like the trail of Hansel and Gretel. The second bag looked like pigeon droppings. The third bag helped.

Six bags later, the area began to fill in. For the money I could have brought Mt. Rushmore. I was so depressed I put six round cookies into my round mouth. Some things were meant to be.

GOREN ON BRIDGE

BY CHARLES H. GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

© 1978 by Chicago Tribune

Q.1—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J ♡KJ7 ◇854 ♣Q98632
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 ♡	Pass	Pass	Dble.
Pass	2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Pass. Partner is showing a fair hand, but bear in mind that his double was in the balancing seat. Therefore, all of his following actions can be made on somewhat slighter values than what would be needed if partner were in the immediate seat. His raise to three clubs, therefore, shows only a solid opening bid, so it does not look as if you can come to nine tricks at no trump despite your heart stoppers.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠9763 ♡Q10852 ◇107 ♣A6
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	Dble.	2 ◇	?

What action do you take?

A.—Bid two hearts. Opposite a takeout double, you have a useful hand—a reasonable five-card major suit and 6 HCP. The danger with passing is that partner might not have the values to repeat his takeout double, and that would permit the opponents to steal the hand at two diamonds when you might have a makable contract in your direction.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠7 ♡AK1095 ◇95 ♣KQ972
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Even though you have only the equivalent of an opening bid and partner has shown a minimum opening, there are still chances for slam—for instance, if partner holds the queen of hearts, ace-king of diamonds and ace of clubs. Therefore, we would not simply bid four hearts at this turn, but would introduce our club suit in an effort to locate the right cards in partner's hand.

Q.4—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠65 ♡93 ◇Q9852 ♣AKQ10
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Slam is a distinct possibility, but Blackwood isn't the way to get there. If partner shows two aces in response to your inquiry, you still won't know whether you have one or two heart losers. The correct approach to the hand is a cue-bidding sequence, and you must start by bidding five clubs.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQ92 ♡83 ◇9542 ♣764
The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♡	Dble.	3 ♡	Pass
Pass	Dble.	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—First, remember that partner's double is still for takeout—the opponents have bid only the one suit he doubled for takeout at his first turn. Next, partner must have a very good hand, for he his forcing you to bid at the three-level on a possible bust. You have some useful values, and you should show them by jumping to four spades—you would be forced to bid three spades without the two high spade honors.

Q.6—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠10 ♡A ◇A1063 ♣AJ96542
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♡	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	3 ♡	5 ♠	Pass

What action do you take?

A.—Six clubs should be laydown, but a grand slam is possible if partner has second-round diamond control. The auction is crowded and you don't have the space for a full cue-bidding sequence. Bid five hearts. That will flash the grand slam signal to partner, and if he is looking at the ace of spades and king of clubs, he should be able to work out that you must have the ace of diamonds to be making such a try.

Q.7—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠KQ106 ♡73 ◇KQ95 ♣Q63
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Simple arithmetic should solve this one. Even if partner has a maximum of 20 points, your 12 only give a grand total of 32. In addition, there is no long suit to develop, so slam is remote. Bid three no trump.

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠KQ1073 ♡95 ◇KJ872 ♣9
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Though this hand is weaker in terms of high cards than the one in the previous example, its distribution has tremendous trick-taking potential. There could easily be a slam in either of South's suits. The way to find out is to introduce the second suit now. Bid three diamonds.

Your play to the first trick could decide the fate of the contract! A writer once remarked: "There's no such thing as a blind opening lead, only deaf opening leaders!" ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Do you believe in astrology? I have been following my horoscope in the paper for a long time and it seems like they really hit it on the head a lot of days.

I have some very intelligent friends who wouldn't make a move without consulting their astrologers. These people aren't dummies. They are bank presidents, lawyers, doctors and women executives. Please give me your frank opinion, Ann. Is there anything to this horoscope stuff? — Gemini

Dear Gem: I have never paid a great deal of attention to my horoscope but when your letter arrived I decided to check it out. Since I was born on July 4th, I am a Cancer. My horoscope reading for today was as follows:

CANCER (June 22-July 21): You are sympathetic and understanding about other people's problems. They think you ar a sucker. You are always putting things off. That's why you'll never make anything of yourself. Most welfare recipients are Cancer people.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: Me, a guy of 17 writing to you. I can't believe it. But I've been hit with a problem I can't handle and maybe you can help.

I am in love with a girl who is 16. She is great to be with and I just can't see myself going with anyone else.

The problem: she has had sex before — with five other guys to be exact — and has admitted she was "loose" with a few others. I've been involved with several chicks before this one, so I should be able to forgive her and forget about her past. But somehow I just can't.

This is the first time I have ever been in love and I know it's the same with her, but I can't erase those other guys from my mind. If I break off I'm going to be heartsick, but I think I have to do it. Please help me. — Haunted By The Past

Dear Haunted: Do what you have to do and see how it goes. Maybe you'll meet someone you like as well — or better. If not you just might get a different perspective and decide you want this girl after all. My advice is to split and see where it goes from there.

Dear Ann Landers: I married a man I knew only two weeks. It was the second marriage for us both. Talk about love at first sight, this dude knocked me out from the word go.

Now that Joe and I are man and wife I'd like to know more about his past, but he refuses to discuss it. His pet phrase is "Some day I'll tell you everything but I'm in no shape to talk about it now."

I wonder if he's hiding something — like a prison record or a couple of wives. Any advice? — Paging Sherlock Holmes

Dear Paging: Asking questions during courtship is called "sociological research." After marriage it's called "nagging."

Pumping Joe now will make him more reluctant to talk. Lay off for now — he may open up when he feels more secure. If he doesn't, you'll probably get the details elsewhere — and that would be too bad.

• • •

Are your parents too strict? Hard to reach? Ann Landers' booklet, "Bugged By Parents? How to Get More Freedom," could help you bridge the generation gap. Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

Tangerines Known By Many Names

VAN NUYS, Calif. (UPI) — Tungerines are showing up with a lot of different names in food markets these days.

Plentiful varieties include Algerians and Dancies, available from November through January, and Kinnows currently in stores. A Van Nuys-based growers' cooperative says this will be a bountiful year for Kinnows, a mandarin type with a light orange color, smooth skin and few seeds.

Orlando and Minneola tangelos, in markets through April, are a cross between a tangerine and a grapefruit. Minneolas have a knoblike formation at the stem end.

Temples usually are called oranges, but they are actually a cross between a tangerine and an orange.

TO YOUR GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. GEORGE C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 14-year-old boy who has a problem — Osgood-Schlatter disease in my knee. I realize that it isn't serious. About four months ago the doctor put on a small cast. It didn't help. So I started playing on it. I love sports and don't know what to do without them. When I went back to the doctor he told me I can't play. Now when I am at home I don't know what to do. Please don't say "rest," because I've heard that a million times. If I play records at home my mother gets angry, especially when it's rock and roll.

I have already played on my knee. I know I wasn't supposed to, but I could take it. So I'm writing to you for help. — M.H.

There is a normal bump at the upper end of the larger bone of the leg (at the knee) called the tibial tuberosity. The tendon of the kneecap attaches at this point and if there is any disturbance of the juncture it is called Osgood-Schlatter disease. It is, as you already know, not serious, but it can be painful.

O-S is what is called a "self-limiting" disorder. Yours will last from two to 11 months and clear up with rest and avoidance of irritation. You should not kneel with that leg.

For a boy who loves sports, this is a difficult pill to swallow. Although the cast did not help you, it is the only one available. It is usually OK to engage in activity that does not produce pain. Since you might have your own "personal view" of just what pain is, you had best take your parents' and doctors advice about what you should or should not do.

Rest, application of cold compresses, perhaps medicine to reduce pain is the standard treatment. You'll just have to adjust your home activities accordingly. Play your rock records a bit more quietly and accept the necessary restrictions. The disorder will disappear in due time. You will prolong the discomfort if you persist in overdoing.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is tinnitis a problem of aging? I assume it is because I seldom hear complaints from younger people with ear noises. I find the only answer for me (at night, anyway) is playing my bedside radio and going to sleep that way. Otherwise, it's like trying to sleep in a steam boiler. — Mrs. I.O.B.

No, it's not a problem of aging, although admittedly most sufferers are elderly. I believe most of this arises from the fact that the older we get, the more of the various medicines we take (such as aspirin for arthritis). These may cause the noises. High blood pressure, which seems to creep up on us with age, also tends to produce strange noises. Circulation changes as well as middle-ear disorders are other causes.

But noises are no more limited to aging than are high blood pressure, ear infections, or other ailments that affect our ears.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Back in September you advised a man to be examined promptly if he had blood in his urine. At the time I had had this for about two months, but I didn't do anything about it. I thought it might go away, you know? Well, when I read the article I decided to go in and see the doctor. Sure enough, he sent me to the hospital the next day, then operated on me for kidney stones. He took seven out. I never knew I had them. You're also right about kidney stone-formers being poor liquid drinkers. I do want to thank you so much. — Mrs. R.M.

Thank you. Your kind of letter makes one's day. I am so glad you got in and had the treatment you needed. A good lesson for us all.

• • •

CONFIDENTIAL TO MRS. A.B.: Consult your doctors and explain your daughter's situation. Ask him if he can recommend a plastic surgeon of his acquaintance, one who might specialize in nose surgery. Don't expect miracles, but do expect considerable expense. However, I agee with you that, given your daughter's attitude and the fact that this nose appearance seems to be ruining her life, the cosmetic surgery should at least be considered.

• • •

Are you bothered with ringing in the ears? If so, write to Dr. Thosteson, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, for his booklet, "Ear Noises — Their Causes and Cures." Enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Hints from Heloise

DEAR DEARS:

Today I would like to give you a little advice on how to clean your vinyl leather-type jackets.

I have a pretty, light tan one that I just love and wear quite often. It soils very easily and I never really knew how to clean it. The instructions say, "Don't launder or dry clean." Great! Now what?

Man-made materials are great, hold up terrifically, but sometimes they are a stumper as how to take care of.

So I started thinking: It feels and looks like leather and I want to keep it soft and nice looking.

What cleans but is gentle to the surface? Spray cleaner that is oil-based or a wax-type kitchen cleaner?

I rummage through my collection under the kitchen sink and came up with both types. I tried the pre-wash spray on one area and the bottle wax-type cleaner and shiner on the other.

I liked the way the cleaner-shiner worked. It also left the jacket looking nice and it felt soft too.

Sometimes a damp cloth just won't wipe away the marks and this is my solution. But be sure to test it in a hidden spot first. -Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE:

I don't have a hint for you 'cause all my hints come from you and your readers. -A Reader

What a compliment, hon! -H.

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

I read your column every week and never thought a hint from me would be suggested by my 4-year-old grandson.

I had just emptied an 8-oz. Parmesan cheese can and was about to throw it in the trash.

My 4-year-old grandson picked it up and said "Grandpa could clean this out and use it for his seeds."

I told him to go tell Grandpa.

Grandpa said it was a gread idea. He said he could put the seeds in the large hold and close the smaller hole down to put the size he needed to sow the seeds. -Grandson Kim Haver

DEAR HELOISE:

I am 81 years old and have a problem.

I turned up the hem of my daughter's dress with that iron-on tape. Now I want to let the hem down for her, and the tape came off but the sticky strips won't come off at all.

It is a lovely dress only too short. Can you help me? I will be so thankful. -Edna Barrett

Well, dear friend, you do have a problem and I sure hope we can solve it for you...

You didn't say what kind of material the dress was made of, so I hope this method will do the trick.

Cover the sticky residue with a brown paper bag and carefully iron over the bag with a warm iron.

Good luck! -Heloise

• • •

DEAR HELOISE:

Don't put certain leftovers in your refrigerator. Put them in the freezer.

That way they won't spoil and, when your budget gets low, it's surprising how many meals you can get out of a little of this and a little of that.

The leftovers are good and it takes very little work to heat them. -Norma

BBC Program Looks At 'Americans'

LONDON (UPI) — The British Broadcasting Corp. is taking a look at Americans these days — and liking what it sees.

"Americans" is a major BBC television series focused on 13 American "archetypes" like the private eye, the movie star or district attorney. And on First Lady Rosalynn Carter.

"We've deliberately called it 'Americans' instead of 'The Americans'," said writer-narrator Desmond Wilcox at a preview showing.

"I wouldn't for a moment presume to present 'The' Americans. That would call for a scope and judgment we would not claim.

"This series is in fact some Americans, people who appealed to us as figures in an American landscape."

British views of the United States often can be unfairly critical or simply uncomprehending. This series, by contrast, comes across as an honest, unsensational and approving view of its chosen Americans and their world.

"It was born of a desire to record archetype or even stereotype figures, those who have become familiar to us through fiction," Wilcox said.

"Fictionalizing these characters has often blurred the truth. But, in truth, they do exist. They always have."

The BBC invested three years of work and $700,000 on the 13 50-minute documentaries. They will be shown shortly on at least 60 U.S. stations, BBC executives said.

Included is "the first documentary film ever to be made about Rosalynn Carter," according to a BBC statement.

"The First Lady" segment gives the first look at the Carter family's private White House quarters, shows Jimmy Carter chatting about his relationship with Rosalynn and followed her on public engagements.

Other famous names stud the series.

Woody Hayes of Ohio State is "The Football Coach." Jodie Foster is "The Film Star." Elliott "Pete" Estes of General Motors is "The Company President" and Rex Humbard is "The Preacher."

But the series looks as carefully and sympathetically at obscure Americans as at well-known names.

To portray "The District Attorney" it bypassed New York, Chicago or Los Angeles to focus on Fred Cox, county attorney of Carroll County, N.H.

Gerri Feemster is its pretty black schoolteacher fighting a Harlem problem class. Earl Hardeman is chosen as "The Rancher," trying to preserve a threatened way of life in Jackson Hole, Wyo.

Wilcox and executive producer Adam Clapham picked New York union leader Leon Stein to represent "The Immigrant" and Gen. Thomas H. Tuckuberry of the 82nd Airborne division as "The General."

In each case — as with plantation owner Andrew Gay of Plaquemine, La., private eye John O'Grady of Hollywood and Joe de la Cruz, chief of the Quinault Indian tribe in Tahola, Wash. — the documentaries have three unspoken aims.

They probe the personality of the chosen American, examine his job and life style, and use these to illustrate aspects of American life.

West opened the king of clubs and shifted to the 10 of diamonds.

South didn't see any way he could have reached the clinch three notrump. He was in four hearts with nine sure tricks and diamond and spade finesses easily available for a 10th one.

Could West have led away from the king of diamonds? Possible, but not a certainty. If East held that red king could he also hold a black one? Not a chance. Then where could a 10th trick be found?

South found it. He rose with dummy's ace of diamonds, led the 10 of clubs and discarded his last diamond.

West won and led a second diamond. South ruffed, drew trumps with two leads, led the nine of clubs and discarded the queen of spades. He might just as well have thrown the low spade, but South wanted to look as brilliant as possible.

West took his third club trick, but dummy's eight of clubs was now established as South's 10th trick.

Ask the Experts

A Nevada reader wants to know what a gambling three notrump is. Some people think any time they bid three notrump they are gambling, but this particular bid is a conventional three-notrump opning based on a long solid minor suit and little else. If doubled, the bidder runs out to his suit.

Full-Scale Return Of Miners Doubted

By The Associated Press

Mines and miners were ready to go Sunday, but the prospect of picketing by a union offshoot made it unlikely that all 160,000 striking coal miners would actually end the crippling 110-day strike.

Mines were given safety inspections Saturday and Sunday across Appalachia and other coal areas in preparation for the return of the miners, scheduled for early today

However, mine construction workers also represented by the United Mine Workers still had not reached a settlement, and some construction men and their local union officials said they planned to throw up picket lines.

It was picketing by these workers that delayed miners from actually going back underground after the last contract settlement in 1974.

The UMW negotiations for the 10,000 construction workers, who build shafts and above-ground facilities at mines, were continuing Sunday in Washington with the Association of Bituminous Contractors.

Progress was reported, and the union leadership urged the workers not to picket. But in the coalfields there was some spirit for taking to the picket line unless a settlement was announced.

Bryan Moak, a spokesman for Illinois' largest construction local, said his men decided Sunday to refuse to allow regular miners to enter the pits.

"We've got pickets in the field right now, he said. "We're making phone calls to the union halls to get other men."

Moak warned against the consequences should regular miners try to cross picket lines. "Our people are hostile," he said.

Some local union officials in Kentucky and Pennsylvania also said they expected picketing, despite the pleas from the UMW leadership. Those officials said they expected miners to honor their picket lines.

Indiana Pickets Alerted

In Indiana, mine construction worker Patrick Johns of local 1851, the only construction local in the state, said in a radio interview that picket lines would be set up at all mines in Indiana.

"We were going to wait until Tuesday and give the miners the $100 for reporting immediately," he said. "However, the Lynnville and Old Ben mines started up yesterday and to us that's a betrayal of confidence. We're going to have someone at every mine."

Melvin Whitson, president of Johns' local, said he was against the picketing but added: "There's no way I can control it ... we can't stop some guys from going out if they want to."

Whitson had said earlier that he would take action if a settlement were not reached soon. "If we don't have a contract by Wednesday, we'll have to do something. We have between 500 and 600 members in our local and we'd set up pickets at each mine in Indiana. I'm sure the other miners would respect our lines."

In Washington, Norman Beattie, a UMW official from District 12 in Illinois who is helping to negotiate the construction workers' contract, noted the progress and urged against picketing.

Want Similar Contract

It was believed the construction workers were after a contract comparable to that of the miners, whose three-year pact provides a 39 percent increase in wages and benefits, as well as the $100 bonus for going back to work immediately. The miners had made $7.30 an hour under the old contract.

"We're getting very close," Beattie said. "I just can't discuss the issues, but the talks are progressing very well."

An industry official, declining to be identified publicly, said "substantial progress" was being made.

The miners approved their contract by a vote of 57 to 43 percent last week, and the agreement, with the Bituminous Coal Operators of America, was signed Saturday night. Union officials said Sunday that the miners were ready to work.

The miners have a tradition of never crossing picket lines, however. And many miners remain dissatisfied with contract provisions that require them to pay up to $200 for health care they had gotten free in the past and that leave a wide disparity between pensions paid older miners and those who retired under the 1974 contract.

One concession made by operators was the dropping of provisions, included in two earlier contract proposals rejected by miners, that would have given operators more power to curb the wildcat strikes that persist in the coalfields.

the ransom money was recovered, but one of the masked gunmen, Daniel Duchateau, 39, was killed. His companion, Alain Caillol, 36, was slightly wounded and seized by police.

During the gunfight, three men in another car who were armed with a submachine gun and pistols fired at the police and then sped away, officials said.

They reported that Caillol provided information about the three men who escaped. Caillol was charged with being an accomplice to an illegal detention.

Marijuana Cache Seized By Agents

GALVESTON (AP) — A Galveston-based shrimp boat stuffed to the bulkheads with 10 tons of marijuana arrived in this seaport community Sunday.

Judson Kimpner, director of the U.S. Customs patrol division here, said the 50-foot Texas Star, owned by Interstate Exploration Company of Galveston, contained 506 bales of the illegal weed, each bale weighing between 40 and 50 pounds.

Kimpner said Customs agents boarded the boat Thursday off the Yucatan peninsula to check for "safety requirements." When agents went below deck, he said they discovered the marijuana bales stuffed everywhere.

The agents accompanied the boat's captain and three crewmen back to Galveston where all four are expected to be arraigned on smuggling charges before a U.S. magistrate.

Armed Men Kidnap American Woman

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — The American widow of a wealthy Nicaraguan rancher was kidnapped Easter Sunday as she put flowers on her husband's grave, authorities said.

Police said Mrs. Margarita Deshon was abducted by a group of armed men at the cemetery in Chinandega, 78 miles east of Managua.

A child who was with Mrs. Deshon said the men pushed her into a van and drove away.

Authorities said they suspected the kidnappers were Sandinista Liberation Front guerrillas.

Mrs. Deshon's hometown was not immediately known. Authorities said she has lived in Nicargua for 11 years.

Dole May Decline 1980 Candidacy

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas, one of a number of Republicans jockeying for position to run for president in 1980, said Sunday he'd be inclined to bow out if either Gerald Ford or Ronald Reagan were candidates.

Dole, who was Ford's running mate in 1976, said it would be "the height of ingratitude" if he were to enter the race against the former president.

Asked on NBC's "Meet the Press" what he'd do if Reagan wanted the nomination, Dole indicated he felt the same way about the former California governor.

50,000 Police Join Search For Aldo Moro

ROME (UPI) — An estimated 50,000 police Suneay stepped up their search for former Premier Aldo Moro, spurred by a second communique from his terrorist kidnappers who said Moro was being interrogated at a "people's trial" for oppressing the working class.

Extra roadblocks were set up around Rome, Turin and other major cities. Police said the operation was designed to take advantage of the heavy Easter weekend traffic to carry out identity checks.

Moro, 61, prime minister of five Christian Democratic party governments and a major candidate for president, was kidnapped March 16 by 12 Red Brigades terrorists who killed his five bodyguards.

Red Brigades On Trial

The abduction came one week after 49 Red Brigades members went on trial in Turin on charges of murder, kidnapping, sabotage and other terrorist acts.

In their second communique since the Moro abduction, the Red Brigades said Saturday the former premier was the man most responsible for turning Italy into "an imperialist state" that they said was dominated by multinational companies that oppressed the working classes.

The communique said Italy's official Communist party, led by Enrico Berlinguer, had collaborated in the oppression.

The Red Brigades message — two photocopied pages originally written on an IBM Selectric typewriter — said Moro was "the pointman of middle-class imperialism.

"Who better than he could arrange the institutions required for the multinational state?" it asked.

Previous Communique Received

Police analysts studying the document said it apparently was written on the same typewriter and by the same person as the Red Brigades' first communique March 18. That letter was accompanied by a picture of Moro in captivity.

The Red Brigades' latest communique accused the Communist Party, along with "its trade union collaborationists," of acting as the government's "anti-worker police, informers, spies of the regime."

The Communist newspaper L'Unita said Sunday, "It is an urgent necessity to stop this band of crazy criminals," and called the Red Brigades' Marxist theories of revolution "paranoid and mistaken."

Rioters Storm New Airport Near Tokyo

day they were driven back by the protesters shooting rocks and steel arrows from slingshots.

Issaku Tomura, a local farmer and leader of the Anti-Airport League, said after the fighting Sunday he would "like to give a V-sign. We damaged the very center of the airport guarded by 13,000 riot police. The opening on the 30th will be difficult. From now on, we'l employ everything we can. We'll fight until we see the airport abolished."

Flights Due April 2

It was not known whether the damage to the tower would keep the airport from opening on schedule. The first commercial flights are due April 2.

Farmers whose land was taken for the giant airport oppose it even though they were paid. Environmentalists are against it because of possible noise and pollution and leftists say it could be used for military purposes.

Chief Cabinet Secretary Shintaro Abe said every effort would be made to open the airport on schedule.

Mine Field Office Wrecked By Blast

ST. CHARLES, Va. (AP) — A dynamite blast wrecked a United Mine Workers District 28 mobile home field office here Sunday morning in what a UMW official said might have been the result of a bounty for the job.

No injuries were reported in the blast, which occurred between 1 a.m. and 2 a.m. on the eve of union miners' return to work after a nationwide strike that began Dec. 6.

It was the second dynamiting in the southwestern Virginia coalfields over the weekend.

Virginia State Police reported Saturday that more than $1 million worth of mining equipment was destroyed by dynamite at the MO Construction Co. strip mine in Russell County. That blast, in which there were no injuries, occurred sometime Friday night, police said.

Israel Seeks Renewed Talks With Egyptians

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Israel will take secret "initiatives" to try to renew peace negotiations with Egypt, a government spokesman said Sunday.

"The government is ready for all actions," cabinet secretary Arye Naor told reporters in Jerusalem after a five-hour cabinet meeting that he said was "thorough and serious, but not stormy."

The meeting reaffirmed support for Prime Minister Menachem Begin's peace plan.

"Certian Initiatives" Planned

"The government will take certain initiatives in order to advance the renewal of negotiations between Egypt and Israel in order to reach and sign peace agreements," Naor said.

He said Begin's reply to a letter from Egyptian President Anwar Sadat will be one such move, but he refused to cite any others, saying, "Disclosing them would lead to their failure."

"The prime minister does not think we've reached a dead end," he said.

"...We are ready and we want to resume the negotiations, to continue them, and we shall do whatever is possible to carry them out."

Sadat Makes Appeal

In Cairo, Sadat urged President Carter to deal as a "full partner" with the Middle East problem and said peace could be achieved in record time once the Palestinian question was resolved.

Speaking to a visiting delegation of American university professors lead by Texas Tech's President Cecil Mackey, Sadat said: "The United States and President Carter should deal with the Middle East problem as a full partner and not as a mediator or negotiator."

Sadat repeatedly had directed the same appeal to the U.S. administration since the Egyptian-Israeli peace negotiations broke down in January. But this time, the call assumed greater significance because it followed the deadlocked Carter-Begin summit talks in Washington last week.

Sadat refused in the past to define what he meant by "full partnership," but state-controlled newspapers made it clear Egypt expected America to put greater pressure on the Jewish state.

In an obvious reference to Israel's reluctance to evacuate the West Bank and insistence on maintaining Jewish settlements in occupied territories, Sadat said he had offered Israel "all the necessary guarantees for its security, but Israel wants to have its security at the expense of our land."

Emphasizing Egypt's sincerity in the search for peace, Sadat said: "We, in Egypt, speak one language, but Israel speaks two different languages."

Pullout Depends On U.N.

In other developments, the commander of the Israeli army's northern front said Sunday the Israeli forces in southern Lebanon are likely to pull out in two weeks.

"It depends on deployment of the U.N. force in territory taken by our troops ... and a total cease-fire by the terrorists who continue to bother our forces, our settlements and the Christian villages," Maj. Gen. Avigdor ben-Gal told military correspondents.

Syria Sunday challenged a ban on military reinforcements for Palestinian guerrillas in the area.

Official Damascus radio said, "Syria will go on allowing anything which comes in for the (Palestinian) resistance, be it humanitarian (aid) or military — especially since this is related to the conflict with Israel, whose forces still occupy part of Lebanon."

The surprise announcement challenged a ban Friday by Lebanon's mainly Syrian Arab peacekeeping force on "entry of military reinforcements — in the form of men or equipment — into Lebanese territory."

Western diplomats said the conflicting statements probably meant Damascus would allow military shipments across its frontier, but would tell its peacekeeping troops they must follow the arms ban inside Lebanon.

"But we'll have to wait and see," said one diplomat. "The situation could get touchy."

Doctors, Dentists Give Up Smoking

ATLANTA (AP) — Doctors and dentists, as well as their patients, are heeding those "no smoking" signs in their offices and the number of smokers among them has decreased significantly in the past decade, says a top official of the national Center for Disease Control.

Studies show that only 21 percent of the nation's doctors and 22 percent of the dentists smoke, said Dr. John J. Witte, medical director of the CDC's Bureau of Health Education.

In 1967, 30 percent of the doctors and 34 percent of the dentists smoked, he said.

Witte, who will give a report to the annual meeting of the U.S. Public Health Service's Professional Association this week, said he considers smoking "the single most preventable cause of premature death and disability in the United States."

Smoking is considered a primary cause of lung cancer and heart disease.

Car-Stealing Business Headed By Professionals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Statistics indicate that professional thieves now control the car-stealing business in America, government experts report.

The rate at which cars are being stolen has leveled off across the country since 1970, they say, but the percentage of missing autos that do not get recovered has risen dramatically.

The figures suggest the missing cars are either disassembled for their parts or put on ships headed overseas within hours after they are heisted.

Ralph Culver, chief of the private property unit of the Justice Department's criminal division, told a recent congressional hearing that car thefts are costing the public $2 billion a year, including the police work that goes into investigating them.

Millions Stolen Annually

Culver said the national theft rate for cars began to level off in 1970, due largely to the installation of steering column locks on cars. But still about 1 million cars are stolen every year.

"Today," he said, "substantially large numbers of vehicles are being stolen which are never recovered. As compared to a value recovery rate of 86 percent of all stolen automobiles in 1967, only about 59 percent of the value of all stolen automobiles was recovered in 1977.

"These figures suggest professional thieves have increasingly entered into the stolen motor vehicle area of crime," he said.

He said more than 400 commercial motor vehicle theft rings are under investigation or prosecution now by the Justice Department, compared to 125 in 1971.

Culver said improvements in locking systems which the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration has proposed should help. In the meantime, he said, the steering column lock, while it has cut down on theft, is still an easy target for the professional.

"Auto thieves use several methods to defeat these locks," he said. "The 'dent puller' or 'slide hammer' provides the most frequent method used by professional thieves.

"After removal of any decorative ring, the screw at the end of the slide hammer is engaged into the key slot or a notch at the edge of the lock cylinder. The sliding weight is then slammed back against its stop, providing a tensile impact on the lock.

"Several such blows are sufficient in most cases to pull the lock cylinder free, exposing the mechanism to unlocking from the outside, typically with a screwdriver.

"Torsional Attack"

"Another method frequently used is the 'torsional attack' which is accomplished by inserting a blank key in the steering column lock to raise the tumblers and then to twist the key with pliers to break the tumblers and thereby allow the unlocking and starting of the vehicle.

"Another method is 'lock impressioning' which uses a locksmith's tool to decode the lock," he added. "This has been reported as a common method of theft, particularly by professional criminals."

Firms' Ledgers To Show Coal Strike Effects

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Untold millions of dollars that have been lost in the nationwide coal strike will begin to show up next month on first quarter ledgers of a wide spectrum of U.S. corporations.

"The fact is that anybody who derives the bulk of his earnings from coal is going to get butchered," said Joel Price, an analyst with the New York-based brokerage firm of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

"Everybody who is a UMW company is going to lose money in the first quarter. That's a safe statement."

One of them is Cleveland-based North American Coal Co. More than 90 percent of its production was shut off during the strike, idling most of its 7,000 employees.

"The effect on us is fairly severe," said sales vice president H.A. Cashion. "We're not diversified. We don't have other profit centers to protect us."

Some operators will be able to absorb the losses from the United Mine Workers longest strike better than others, however.

Coal is not an industry owned solely by businessmen with stock in energy's once and future king. Owners include oil and steel giants, utilities, chemical and fertilizer producers, aircraft manufacturers and insurance companies.

Six corporations, including Boeing Co. and Equitable Life Assurance Society, have a stake in earnings of Peabody Coal, the nation's largest producer.

Even the owners of Brinks security trucks have put some of their money in the resurgent industry, which President Carter hopes to make a keystone for national energy programs.

So just as the industry has a mixed bag of owners, the impact of idled mines on them will be varied.

The dent barely will be noticeable at Gulf Oil Corp., for example. Pittsburg & Midway Mining, its coal subsidiary, contributed a scant $16 million to profits of $752 million in 1977.

Gulf is a newcomer to the coal. But some big coal operators will also be cushioned against the consequences of almost four months without production, sales or revenues.

"As a company that's diversified, we'll feel it less than a company strictly in the coal business," said Lou Kasdan, spokesman for AMAX Inc.

The company's AMAX Coal subsidiary is the nation's third-largest producer. Its UMW mines yielded 14 million tons in 1977 despite wildcat strikes and winter weather problems.

"Basically, we're losing approximately 1.5 million tons a month in production, and we're losing approximately $7 million a month in earnings," Kasdan said.

AMAX Inc. sold $1.4 billion of products from ores to aluminum in 1977. Coal, including about 13 million tons from a non-union mine in Wyoming, accounted for 22 percent of the total.

Other major operators likely will be hurt severely. One of them is Pittston Co., owner of Brinks Security Transporation and mines that place it among the top 10 coal producers nationally.

"We are the largest exporter of coal in the United States," noted spokesman Hugh Flaherty in a telephone interview from the company's Connecticut headquarters.

Eighty-one percent of Pittston's 1977 operating profit was derived from coal, although coal accounted for slightly less than half of the company's sales. The strike shut all of its 73 mines.

"Without coal production, we don't have coal earnings," said Flaherty.

Also hurt will be Continental Oil Co., which claims to rank third in the United States in total energy production measured in BTUs, or British Thermal Units.

Conoco owns Pittsburgh-based Consolidation Coal, the source of about 13 percent of its revenues and nearly 30 percent of its 1977 profits despite wildcats strikes and bad weather.

Based on 1976 coal earnings, the last year without overwhelming labor and weather problems, Conoco has lost production earnings of about $3.3 million a week during the nearly 16-week strike.

But the real loss will be more when Conoco and other owners add up the strike's indirect costs, from payroll for secretaries without enough to do to slowed coke ovens without enough coal to bake.

"We lose money two ways," said a spokesman for a corporation, who asked that his firm not be identified.

"First, we lose revenues. Then we lose money because we have continuing fixed costs. You don't just plug up mines and mothball them. Non-union people are not laid off, so they have to be paid."

Recovery could be quick for many, however. Utilities and other coal users will need to rebuild stockpiles and demand is expected to grow for many types of coal.

Moreover, it is conceivable that production in the remainder of 1978 could match 1977 output as walkouts and snowstorms also interrupted a substantial portion of last year's operation.

An exception could be metallurgical coal, used extensively in steelmaking. It's in abundance now, and Price said he believes some suppliers may be forced out of business.

Otherwise, he said, the prospects beyond the coal strike are good.

"No one is going to be hurting at the end of this year," he predicted.

Consumer Group Asks Delay In Offshore Oil Lease Auction

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer energy organization said Sunday it has asked Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus to delay the planned auction of petroleum leases in the Atlantic off New England, and revise the government's leasing practices before rescheduling it.

James F. Flug, director of Energy Action, released a letter addressed to Andrus, charging that the Interior Department's offshore leasing procedures do not guarantee that the public receives the fair value of the leases allowing private companies to find and process oil and natural gas.

Flug also contended the procedures were inadequate to preserve competition among petroleum companies in the offshore areas.

He did not directly threaten legal action to block the sale slated for Tuesday, but said that without the changes he urged, leases awarded in that sale might be legally questionable.

The federal government owns the seabottom area known as the outer continental shelf, which lies more than three miles offshore and under water no more than about 600 feet deep.

For many years, the government has leased outer continental shelf areas in the Gulf of Mexico and off southern California to petroleum companies which have drilled exploration and production wells.

More recently, offshore leasing was extended into the Gulf of Alaska and, for the first time, to the Atlantic Coast with a sale of leases off New Jersey and Delaware last year.

The second Atlantic coast leasing was to take place this Tuesday, involving undersea tracts in the Georges Bank area off New England, a rich commercial fishing area.

The Interior Department has been awarding offshore leases primarily by competitive bidding in which successful companies pay the federal government substantial bonuses to win the leases as well as royalties on any oil and gas production.

But Flug said the Interior Department has consistently underestimated the value of the offshore areas and petroleum companies have regularly submitted bids far higher than the department expected.

Flug said although the companies were bidding higher than the department's own estimates, this did not necessarily mean they were bidding what the offshore leases are really worth, since they know the department underestimates the value and may accept bids which it would reject if only it knew better.

Flug said the department should postpone the Georges Bank lease sale long enough to improve its value-estimating system and make other changes in the procedures.

He did not specify how long the delay should last, but said it "need not be prolonged nor interfere with the urgent need to develop vital resources" on the outer continental shelf.

Carter Urban Policy Reportedly Offered At $3.7 Billion Cost

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The new urban policy, which President Carter will unveil Monday, has a $3.7 billion price tag attached to it, it was reported Sunday.

The New York Times said the proposed policy will call for new federal programs costing $3.7 billion and adding $1.7 billion to the federal deficit in the form of tax breaks for companies operating in depressed areas.

Carter will spell out the specifics of the policy Monday, when he is expected to ask for "new urban partnerships" among federal, state and local governments to end urban America's fiscal distress.

More than 50 mayors were gathering in Washington to be on hand for the unveiling of the long-awaited plan.

Details of the main elements of the policy were given to reporters in special briefings Friday, but the final cost was not stated at that time. The Times said it obtained the figures from "informed administration officials."

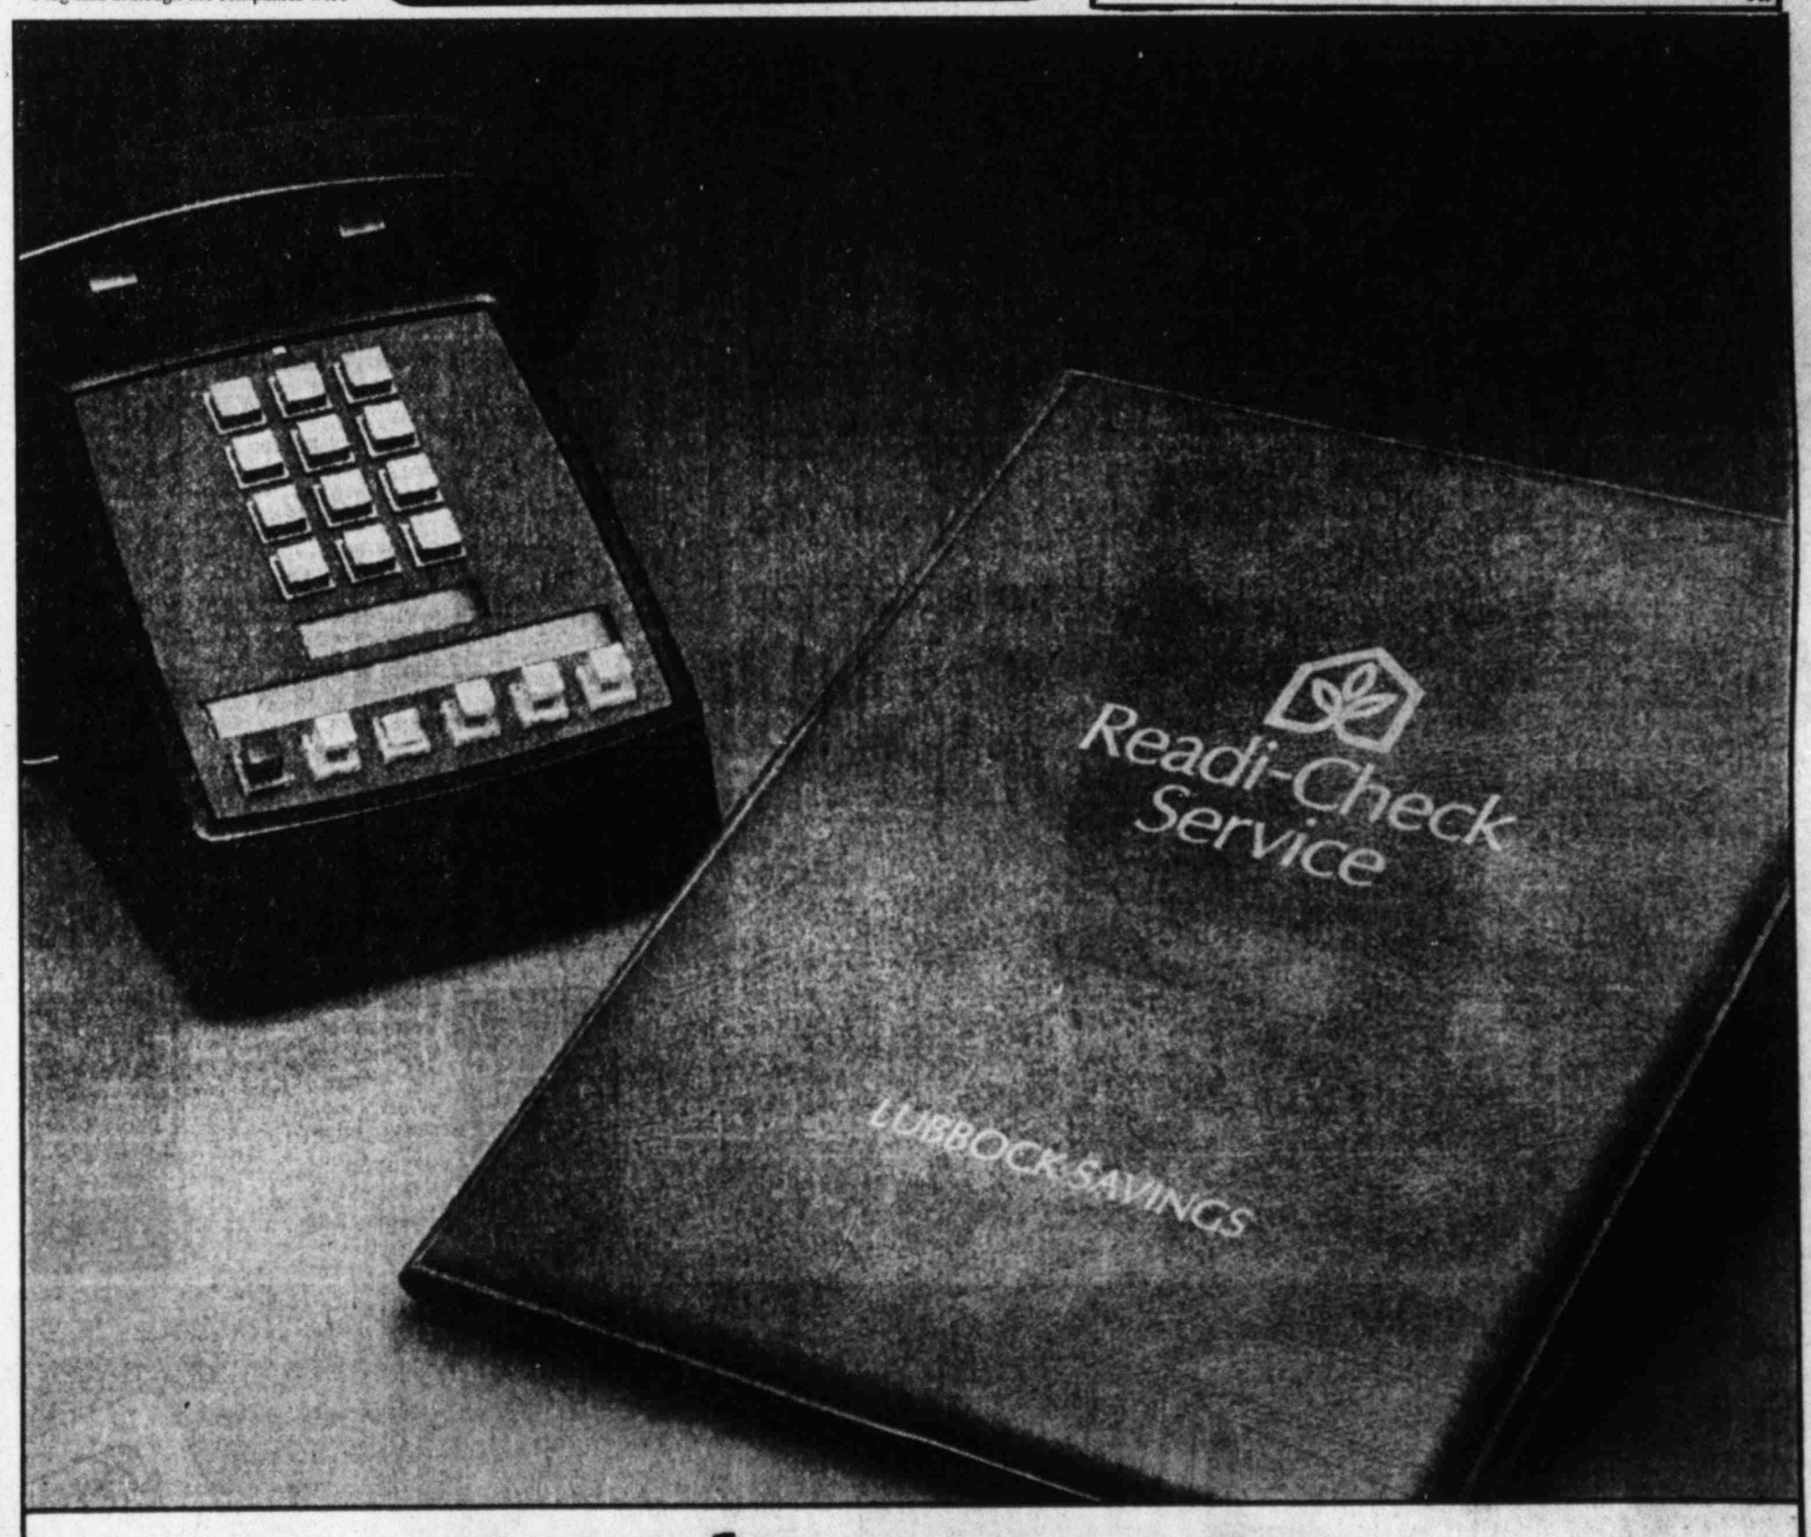

It also reported that Carter had tentatively decided Friday to eliminate four of the proposed programs, costing $1.5 billion, but later in the day was persuaded to restore them. These included: a program for "soft public works," creating jobs filling potholes, insulating buildings and other urban maintenance projects; plans to beef up aid for housing rehabilitation; to enhance social services; and to provide a tax differential for busineses willing to operate in distressed areas.

FREIGHT CARS DERAIL

MAUPIN, Ore. (AP) — More than 40 fishermen and campers were evacuated from the rugged canyonlands northeast of here Saturday after a freight train carrying two apparently empty chlorine gas cars jumped the tracks.

INTEREST IN SHROUD — This is an unenhanced picture of the face on the Holy Shroud of Turin, supplied by Don Janney, Los Alamos Scientific Laboratory scientist, through the courtesy of the Holy Shroud Guild, New York City. Scientists at the Los Alamos, N.M., laboratory, who are interested in the ancient shroud, say a burst of energy like that scripturally associated with Christ's resurrection may have left the puzzling image of a human figure. (AP Laserphoto)

Religious Relic Pondered

NEW YORK (AP) — Some scientists interested in the ancient Shroud of Turin say a burst of energy like that scripturally associated with Christ's resurrection may have left the puzzling image of a human figure.

The type of imprint, they say, seems impossible to duplicate even with present-day technological knowledge.

A group of scientists at the Los Alamos Sceintific Laboratory in New Mexico has cited these factors, and wants a chance for further tests on the shroud to try to resolve some of the problems about it.

Traditionally said to be the burial shroud of Jesus, it is to be publicly exhibited this fall for the first time since 1933. Some technical investigators were allowed to examine it in 1973.

They reported they were unable to date it with certainty or to determine the cause of the image, claimed to be that of Christ. It is kept guarded in a Roman Catholic chapel in Turin, Italy.

The Los Alamos group, working with other scientists in analyzing pictures taken of the shroud, says it's convinced the 14-by-4-foot shroud is an authentic burial cloth, woven of linen typically used in Jewish burials in the Holy Land about 30 A.D., approximating the date of Jesus' crucifixion.

But whether it ever covered Jesus' body, and what produced the strange image, still are to be resolved, and the scientists are seeking permission for an international team to make non-destructive tests to try to pin down some answers.

As for the mystery of the image, Ray Rogers, a physical chemist of the Los Alamos design engineering division, says "I am forced to conclude that the image was formed by a burst of radiant energy — light if you like."

That view squares with scriptural references to a shuddering and brilliance from heaven and the singular transformation of Christ at the moment of resurrection on Easter Sunday after three days in the grave.

A statement from the Los Alamos Laboratory, operated by the University of California for the U.S. Department of Energy, says one scientific hypothesis "draws an analogy between the mysterious images on the shroud and the fact that images were formed on stones by fireball radiation from the atomic bomb at Hiroshima."

The scientists say the shroud was not painted, since the image is not absorbed into the fibers, and was not produced by ordinary heat since such process scorches the fibers, unless applied in extremely short bursts.

"There is really no way we can explain the image, but we do know it was not painted and it was not produced by slow heating," Rogers says.

The scientists say the front and back images on the cloth are anatomically correct in every detail if a crucified man had been wrapped in it. They show a tall man, with majestic countenance, his hands crossed, with the imprints of nails through the wrists and feet, the right side of the chest pierced — as was Jesus' side.

The scientists say the image bears the mark of lacerations from scourging on the back, the right shoulder appearing chafed as if from bearing a rough, heavy burden and puncture wounds around the head, and a pronounced bruise on one cheek. The chest cavity is expanded as if from an agonized attempt to draw air into the lungs — as occurs in crucifixion.

Don Janney and Roger Morris, two Los Alamos physicists, say X-ray florescence analysis and photographs in wave lengths from ultraviolet to infrared could yield much data about the shroud, and would be non-destructive.

Already they and scientists at other laboratories have done a variety of experimental photographs, bringing out considerable detail, and say better pictures could add much more. Carbon-14 methods for determining age have been greatly refined, Rogers notes, and could verify dating of the shroud.

Permission for such tests would have to come from the Roman Catholic Church, which has charge of the relic, and from the legal owner, the deposed ex-king Umberto II of Italy, whose family acquired it in 1452.

Its history can be clearly documented only since 1353, but there are scattered references to it in early church writings going back to the first century.

Two scientists, John Jackson and Eric Jumper, professors at the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado, used computer technology generally applied in mapmaking to determine that the shroud images contain three-dimensional data.

Asked if they were convinced the shroud once wrapped Jesus, the Los Alamos scientists gave varying replies. "I'm uncertain," says physicist Janney. "I only know that it is a genuine, fascinating archeological object. If these tests were made I think I would change my mind."

Physicist Morris says, "I personally believe it is the shroud of Christ, and I believe this is supported by the scientific evidence so far. I think we can prove it is an authentic shroud from the time of Christ, but perhaps we will never be able to prove scientifically that it is Christ's burial shroud."

Chemist Rogers says he believes it is Christ's shroud and adds that it represents the eternal question of whether or not man can achieve immortality. He said:

"If Christ was resurrected from the dead, then the gospels are truth and eternal life — immortality — is offered to all of us. What better way, if you were a deity, of regenerating faith in a skeptical age than to leave evidence 2,000 years ago that could be defined only by the technology available in that skeptical age?"

Tests Show Earlier Signs Of PBB

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.(AP) — PBB may have been present in Michigan livestock feed 16 months earlier than previously thought, court documents indicate.

Until now, there has been consensus among authorities that the fire retardant entered Michigan's food chain due to an accidental mixup in May 1973.

But at least eight tests involving feed made before May 1973 showed signs of PBB, according to documents submitted during the state's first trial involving contamination by the chemical.

The oldest feed showing up with PBB was manufactured Jan. 8, 1972.

Rhea's Crafts Presenting Jean Ing Tuition-Free Wednesday Workshop

Don't miss Jean Ing's two workshops this Wednesday, March 29, at Rhea's Crafts, 2831 34th St.!

Attend and take home a "critter" — owls, hounds, or lions — as delightful planters or candle holders.

Learn to paint with acrylic paints, dry brush and sponge techniques.

And the only cost is a $1 fee to cover cost of the planter! The Deep Flex Corp., represented by Jean Ing, supplies the paints, sponges, brushes and instructions!

What an opportunity!

Also learn the all-new Deep Flex marbelizing technique, using materials and methods recently developed to cut the involved cost and time by about two-thirds!

Sessions for the workshops are from 10 a.m. until 12 noon, and from 2 p.m. until 4 p.m. Wednesday.

Space and material are limited, and it is wisely urged that those interested should call or come by Rhea's today to be sure of a place in one of the workshops.

Those taking advantage will actually be able to take home a finished piece upon completion of a workshop session.

Jean Ing, West Texas sales representative of the Deep Flex Corp., has historically met with enthusiastic response to her workshops in Lubbock and Rhea's is especially enthused about the Wednesday appearance of this authority in craft techniques.

Exceptional Store

Rhea's Crafts, long and favorably known for its craft supplies and ideas for the creative person, has other situations of interest:

Fresh, new stock augments the already-huge selection.

Rhea's makes each craft project fun (satisfying and economical, too)!

Always-ready assistance is a big factor in the services rendered at Rhea's Crafts, with individual instruction absolutely free when one purchases there.

The long-standing rule is that anyone buying supplies there is welcomed and even encouraged to come in, sit at the big work-table and even use the big spray paint room, completing the selected project without any further charge!

Personal Assistance

Rhea Abbott is on hand to "show you" just how the project is done.

What an opportunity always for uninterrupted pursuit of a craft project, with free instruction!

Everything for decoupage, including one of the largest selection in the area of beautiful prints, is stocked.

Rhea's has a full selection of pastel chalks, some may not yet realize.

Macrame Supplies

Of course, there are macrame supplies for every need.

And Mirro-Magic, too. With this process, one can open "windows" in mirrors to display and frame cherished prints, photographs, decorative paintings or those special mementos.

With this technique, mirrors become frames to reflect and protect fine prints, heirloom photos or decorative painting. All materials are available at Rhea's.

Check also regarding the multiple ways to finish plaster, including antiquing, bronzing, marbelising, acrylics and pastel chalk.

Rhea's not only has ideas by the scores, but stocks all necessary supplies in kit or individual piece form.

Spray paints and base coats are included in the wide stock.

Glass beads, bangles, etc. are provided.

Get the idea: Rhea's knows the needs of the hobbyist, and stocks — and serves — accordingly.

Whether the desire is for participation in a workshop, for the new stock arrivals, the decoupage supplies, plaster or plaster molds, acrylics, even crockery and scores of other goodies, Rhea's likely has "just what you have been seeking."

Ed's Wagon Wheel Western Wear Tells Drastic Price Cuts For Rodeo Sale

Just in time for the ABC Rodeo and for those hot summer days soon ahead, Ed's Wagon Wheel Western Wear is staging a big Rodeo Sale, beginning today!

Ed's, at 1636 13th St., shows very plainly that it appreciates cowpokes and city folks alike, with its big sale that includes the following among drastically marked-down items:

One group of men's boots by Justin and by Sanders is marked from 25 per cent to 50 per cent off!

One group of ladies' Justin and Sanders boots, your choice, is marked at $35 pair!

Then, one group of infant boots, sizes 4-8, values to $14.95, are sale marked at $8.95. One group of boys' boots, broken sizes, are $10!

All Boots Reduced

And as a Rodeo Special, Ed has reduced all boots in stock 25 per cent! This includes all exotic leather such as elephant, sea turtle, shark, alligator and lizard, to name a few.

Jeans

All perma-press checked jeans by Lee, Levi and Wrangler, values to $12.95, are now $8.95.

Long and short sleeve shirts are 10 per cent off!

And straw hats (a really huge selection) are 10 per cent off.

Cowboy cut Wranglers, 100 per cent cotton, regular $15.95 values, are now just $10.99.

One group of men's knit pants, broken sizes, in values to $22.50, are now just $5!

For Square Dancers

For the square dancers, buy a square dance dress at regular price and receive slip and petipants absolutely free!

(Some may not realize Ed's stocks numerous apparel items and supplies for the square dancer, including towels, towel holders, shoes, accessories, etc.)

Also, choose during the sale from a select group of ladies suits, pants and blouses at one-half price.

With the ABC Rodeo near (April 5, 6, 7, 8) and with other rodeos scheduled within the area in forthcoming months, and with the many other occasions calling for western apparel one can wear with pride, Ed's makes it all easy with selection, quality and price, stressing that "we appreciate you."

Rodeo tickets are available for one's convenience at Ed's.

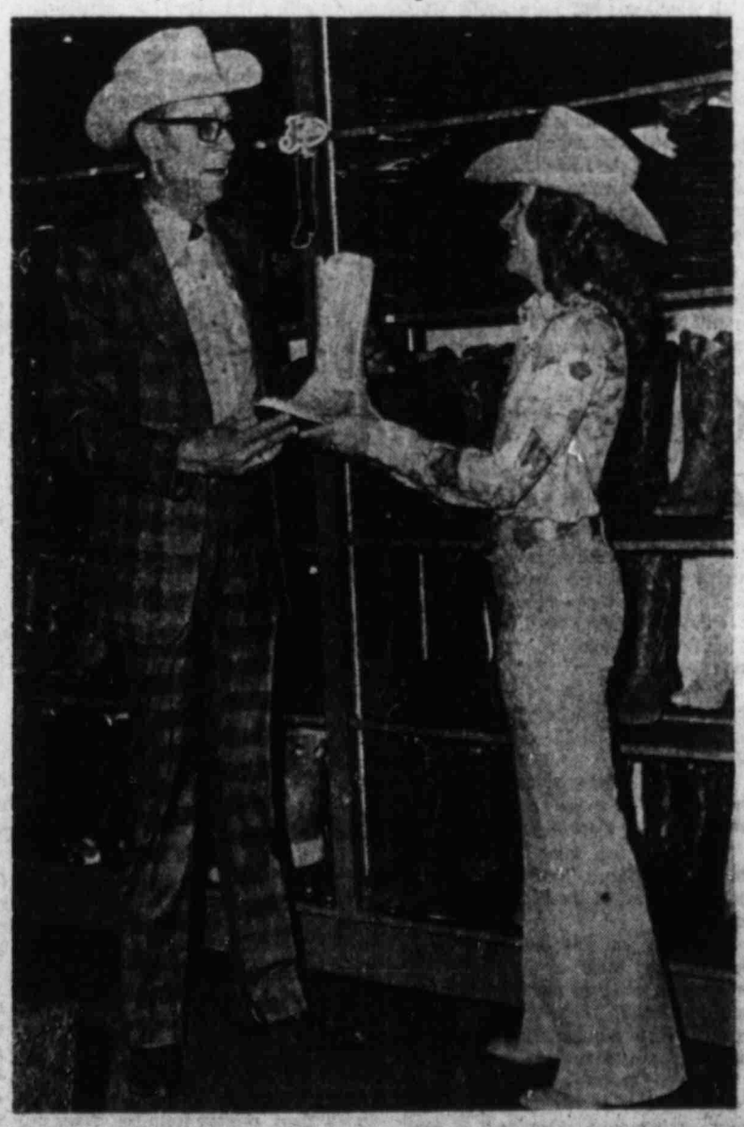

Store hours are 9 a.m. until 6 p.m., six days a week, with extended Thursday hours until 9 p.m.

Master Charge and Visa purchases are welcomed.

Located at 1636 13th St., phone 762-4445, Ed's Wagon Wheel Western Wear stocks apparel for every member of the family . . . everything for the working cowboy and the rodeo participant alike, and everything for folks who just appreciate the best in western wear.

Ed's continually adds to its stock in its modern store to justify its motto of "The Hub of the Western Wear Field in Lubbock."

"Come in at any time, and especially during this very timely sale, if interested in exceptional savings in merchandise for the new season; browse and select at leisure, with assurance that you will be well dressed when wearing apparel from Ed's Wagon Wheel Western Wear."

SPECIAL EVENT BEGINS TODAY — Ed Barclay and Vicki Whisenhunt call attention here to boots that are among the outstanding sale buys at Ed's Rodeo Sale involving items from every department of the big near-downtown Ed's Wagon Wheel Western Wear store.

PRACTICAL, BEAUTIFUL SOLUTION — Brenda and Ben Powell of Spring Crest Draperies of Lubbock are shown at one of the displays within the attactive Briercroft Center store. Check the story below to discover the "difference" in Spring Crest for the home.

Spring Crest Draperies In City Outlines Galaxy Of 'Plusses'

Surely, Spring Crest Draperies of Lubbock has a place in your springtime decorating and remodeling plans! Right?

"If you are looking for something pretty, something better, something of value, and for convenience in maintenance, then draperies from Spring Crest, 5302 Ave. Q, are in order.

Opened last July by the very knowledgeable and personable husband-wife team, Ben and Brenda Powell, this home-owned and home-operated firm has much that is new in this area.

This relatively new but well received drapery store is exclusive dealer for the quality Spring Crest hardware in the Lubbock region. It is a franchise dealership and consequently passes on the advantages of mass buying power and the 18-year experience of nationally-known Spring Crest to its customers.

'Difference' Outlined

Why is Spring Crest different?

"Actually, Spring Crest Spring-Pleated Custom Draperies are the neatest hanging drapes in the world because they hang from a steel spring inserted in the top hem, with no crinoline headers to get soft and fall apart.

"They are inexpensive to clean, in comparison with the pinch-pleat drapes, one can readily understand. They keep their shape through numerous cleanings, with no pleats to press in, without the tendency for cracking."

Furthermore, aside from their beauty and simplicity, they are competitively priced.

Spring Crest Draperies of Lubbock stocks a complete line of drapery fabrics. One of the more complete selections of fabric samples in Lubbock is found here.

Fashion Colors

The firm has House & Garden fashion colors, being officially enrolled in the House & Garden color program.

Spring Crest Draperies of Lubbock is open every weekday, including Saturday hours of 10 a.m. until 2 p.m.

Credit terms are available, and Master Charge and Visa use is welcomed.

Woven wood shades and the Riviera mini-blinds are further products and services of the Lubbock firm in the Briercroft Shopping Center, with shutters and laminated shades also provided.

Free estimates are gladly given.

Drapery hardware for do-it-yourseff projects is stocked.

No Long Wait

It is pointed out that only three to four week delivery time is involved for the custom-made drapes.

"No matter what your style, Spring Crest can dress your windows better; these custom draperies add elegance to the most formal setting, but also can be the perfect finishing touch to a casual room. May we show you?"

Basic Cake Decorating Classes Among Early Events At Enlarged Cake Place

It is pre-registration time for exciting classes announced by The Cake Place, 5423 Aberdeen.

Almost equally significant is revelation that The Cake Place is now in larger but adjacent quarters, having moved from 5421 Aberdeen one door south. This means that twice the room is occupied, enabling much larger classroom, together with expanded stock and better display.

It all is made possible by the rapidly expanding business and appreciative customers. The Cake Place has come a long way since its opening in December 1976, and the owners want to thank every customer.

Class Schedules Told

A Basic I Beginner class in basic cake decorating techniques for the homemaker will be conducted April 4. Both morning and evening sessions are being arranged, and the fee is a modest $20.

Then on April 6 and again on June 12 and June 13, Beginner classes will be staged.

Classes are limited to 12 participants, so early registration is strongly urged.

On May 13, mini classes will be conducted with a Marzipan 3-hour session at $10 (no supplies required, with one taking home the projects made in class) and a $6 Buttercream Flowers 3-hour session.

Free candy molding demonstrations will be conducted April 22.

Inquiry regarding all the classes at The Cake Place is welcomed.

It is announced that a local cake show will be conducted at South Plains Mall April 13, 14, 15, and the folks at The Cake Place invite participation, with full details gladly given.

The Cake Place owners Carol Laird and Earleene Moore continually stay abreast of latest techniques in cake decorating, of course.

In January they attended the Edith Gates decorating school in California, taking a course in the Lambeth method. Attendance is planned for the September international show in Hawaii.

Custom Baking, Decorating

Store hours at The Cake Place are 10 a.m. until 6 p.m., Mondays through Saturdays, and visits to the big display area and the spacious classrooms are invited. Likely all will be a revelation as it is probably that have not realized the unique type service and the wide product list carried there. Select from all needed supplies including pans, paste colors, tips, bags, wedding ornaments, novelty items, separator plates, books, and more.

Cake decorating supplies for every occasion, custom baking of cakes, free club or group demonstrations, and the specialized classes all are part of the operation at The Cake Place, 5423 Aberdeen (Just off 55th Street and Slide Road).

Gary's Frozen Foods Products Add Zest, Nutrition To Season's Picnics

"What does it take to make those early picnics of the season a success? Balmy days? Yes. Pleasant surroundings? Yes. Family and friends? Yes."

But there still is another very necessary ingredient: Food to enjoy!

Then depend on Gary's Frozen Food items, great for picnics, snacks, schooltime meal or for unexpected guests, and all.

For sure, a good meal can become an outstanding one if Gary's Frozen Food products have a place on the menu.

"We're hearing some mighty good things about Gary's Bar-B-Que Flavored Delight, newest of the Gary's family of products!"

"Shouldn't you find out for yourself how this and other of the firm's fine products fit into your menu for finest in nutritious food? Discover how Gary's provides the best in barbeque, corn dogs, super dogs, custom cooking, and more.

Custom Cooking

Gary's is glad to custom prepare any meat, at any time, whether it is wild game or whatnot.

Or one may simply discover that the Gary's Frozen Food label in a favorite grocery or supermarket opens the way to variety and nutritious goodness.

Select from Gary's Barbeque Flavor Delight, Gary's Corn Dogs, Gary's Bar-B-Que Beef Brisket in bar-b-que sauce, and Gary's super dogs. Whether the occasion is a festive meal, a Sunday dinner or even a snack, or a birthday party, one can profit from dependance upon the home-owned, home-operated Gary's Frozen Food firm and its products.

The Bar-B-Que Flavored Delight is newest of the Gary's family of labels, and it is oh-so-good. A beef, beef suet and textured vegetable protein product, it is a new experience in delicious eating. Keep it frozen, and just heat to eat.

This new product is available in the area, distributed to retail stores and to institutions. Look for the label.

The 10-pack Corn Dogs have met with exceptional response.

Consisting of batter mix around a frankfurter, partially cooked in pure vegetable oil, these, too, are easy to prepare. Simply thaw, remove from bag, place in 375-degree oven for 12 to 15 minutes or deep fat fry.

Also, one still can get the delicious Gary's Barbeque Beef Brisket in a favorite grocery or supermarket.

The many quality products and services from Gary's has made possible the continued growth of the firm, thanks to loyal customers who appreciate good food and Gary's sincere desire to please.

The barbeque brisket, super dogs and other quality items from Gary's Frozen Foods, 109th Street at South University Avenue, make many a West Texas meal something special — whether for a special event or simply a change of pace.

These products, long recognized as the finest obtainable, are prepared in the modern, enlarged, functionally attractive quarters for Gary's, specifically designed and built for service, in south Lubbock.

Every Gary's Frozen Foods product is an experience in goodness! School children, their parents and a lot of other people (unexpected guests included) can attest to the deliciousness of Gary's Super dogs, corn dogs — and the Gary's Bar-B-Que package available on retail basis.

Gary's Frozen Foods products are U.S.D.A. inspected every day, insuring the use of the best meats and finest in preparation.

TICKLETOES, ZIPS AND ALL — Kids love the way they look; mothers love the way they fit and wear. Stride Rite sandals and sneakers, that is! Pictured with a selection of this new-season footwear at Gilberts Shoe Store in Indiana Gardens are Maburn Thompson, Polly Gilbert, Deanna Johnson and Rhonda Howell, part of the very capable staff at Gilberts.

Gilbert's Shoes Staging Spring Parade Stride Rite Footwear

Spring, summer and sandals . . . they go together like sun and surf!

For the warmer days upon us, who wants to keep toes "indoors" in closed shoes? Certainly no little girls, who, just like their mothers, want the free and easy feeling of sandals.

And this is where Gilberts Shoes, 3434 34th St., in Indiana Gardens, comes in!

Tickletoes Sandals

Stride Rite has created Tickletoes, the sandals that outlast summer, and now available at Gilberts. They're light, airy, with the cool barefoot look that kids love. But their quality construction insures long wear; and they have that special Stride Rite fit, in more sizes and widths than any other children's sandals!

They're hard-working, faithful playmates that kids wear exclusively. See them now at Gilberts where they're fitted by professional shoe specialists.

Zips Sneakers

"And have you seen the Zips, the sneakers made by Stride Rite, and also at Gilberts?

Zips are tough outside, but soft inside. They're sneakers that are really good for kids' feet. They're even fitted like all Stride Rite shoes . . . by professional shoe fitters.

"Mothers, you'll be happy to know that Zips wear and wear, because Stride Rite puts only the best of everything in them."

It is quite a Spring parade of shoes by Stride Rite for boys and girls that is now presented at Gilberts Shoes. The new styles are really super, with luscious colors and leathers included. "Neat" as your kids will say.

Luggage, Shoe Repair

Announcement also has been made by Gilberts that in addition to being a complete juvenile shoe store offering the only in-store orthopedic shoe service (in most instances the same day), the popular shop now has added, by popular demand, a luggage repair service in conjunction with its shoe repair department.

More about the field of children's shoes:

Gone are the days of the indispensible Oxford in staid black or brown. Children's shoes are walking and running in most unexpected new directions; molded soles, Plantation crepe bottoms, jogger toes and heels, racing stripes, and a whole new world of "bottom" interest in specially imprinted shoes.

What was once called the special purpose shoe now goes everywhere. Leathers shine in a rich range of colors. Even pre-school shoes reflect the new fashion trends. From tiny tots to older children, "fashion" is the key word.

Stride Rite shoes are styled in all the new fashion trends.

For the finest in juvenile shoes, for in-store orthopedic shoe service, for the latest in season fashions for the young set . . . and even for boot and shoe repair, Gilberts invites and merits full consideration.

"Gilberts is the only juvenile shoe store between Dallas and Albuquerque that offers you a complete in-store orthopedic shoe service; in most instances prescriptions are filled in two or three hours!"

Let's introduce the staff at Gilberts Shoes ... both those who are trained and those others who are in the training program:

Lewis Gilbert is owner and has over 20 years experience and more than 50 hours training under orthopedic surgeons in the filling of your doctor's prescriptions.

Maburn Thompson is manager with over 30 years of fitting experience in juvenile and adult shoe needs, plus working with several orthopedic surgeons and pediatricians in the proper fit and type of shoe needed for difference prescriptions.

Polly Gilbert, co-owner, has with her husband been in the shoe business in Indiana Gardens for 20 years, and needless to say, has many years of fitting experience and training.

Also on the staff are Jerry Chilton, Deanna Johnson, Jean Lingo, and Rhonda Howell.

"Although we have stressed orthopedic shoes and service, because we feel this is a very integral part of our business, Gilberts would like for you to think of us as a complete juvenile shoe store offering a complete selection of children's shoes and maintaining a complete repair department.

"For best in fitting and brands, you can rely on Gilberts Shoes."

Hearing Aid Award, Special Guests Mark Sonotone – Lubbock Anniversary

'Twas quite a day!

The 26th Anniversary Event at Sonotone-Lubbock, 2318 Broadway, on March 15, brought together friends of long standing, many with common interests and with common hearing problems . . . folks who have benefitted from better hearing the Sonotone-Lubbock way!

"We are truly appreciative of every one of our loyal friends of years past, and the blessings of our 26 years make us most humble," Louise Bills, manager, emphasizes. She is joined in her expressions of appreciation by staffmembers Ralph Huntington and Pat Nixon.

(Ralph, long on the job, was to go into the hospital late last week for open heart surgery, Louise reports, adding that his large number of friends would be interested in knowing of this.)

A big birthday cake was served at the Anniversary celebration, favors were given, and a new hearing aid was awarded.

Receives Grand Prize

Roland Bell, who works for the post office in Littlefield, is recipient of the new aid. He presently is wearing a hearing aid fitted by Ralph Huntington in 1974.

On hand as honored guests throughout the day was a mother-daughter team, Mrs. Martha Knoles (who will be 102 years of age come July 2) and her daughter, Malissie Peak (see the picture accompanying this article).

The folks at Sonotone-Lubbock cherish all their friends; their loyalty and confidences are treasured.

A veteran in hearing aid sales, service and achievement, Louise Bills has been accorded honors year after year, from manufacturer and customer alike.

And each staffmember exemplifies the firm's concept of service in every contact.

"Professionalism with a human touch" at Sonotone-Lubbock is the rule. Small wonder these people at 2318 Broadway, phone 762-5469, have made life richer for hundreds throughout the region.

Individual hearing test, at no obligation, personalized fitting, frequent checkups and the interested care of a Sonotone consultant is the service one can expect without exception at Sonotone-Lubbock.

"If you have a hearing problem or suspect that you may have one, that visit or call you make to Sonotone-Lubbock may be the most important one you will ever make."

NEWEST, LARGEST OF LUBBOCK MARTINIZING FACILITIES

Pillow Cleaning, Ozone Odor Removal Among Martinizing Cleaners Services

"There is a Martinizing Cleaners easily accessible to you, no matter your Lubbock location.

"For the finest in drycleaning and related services, choose from the all-new Martinizing Cleaners, at 3322 83rd St. (just one block east of Indiana Avenue) in south Lubbock, or the 49th & Knoxville facility, or the 30th Street & Slide Road location most conveniently serving far-west Lubbock."

The new plant south of Loop 289 actually is the largest of the three and is one of the most modern in a wide West Texas region.

Identical services are available at each of the three Martinizing Cleaners in Lubbock, each owned by long-time Lubbock drycleaner Gordon Mahon.

Capable staffs man each facility.

Among these are Scott Rickman, manager of the new plant; with Billy Griffin as drycleaner. Griffin has been in the business for 31 years, all in Lubbock, with this as only his third association, which speaks quite well for his ability and following. At the Slide Road location, Johnnie Bates is manager, with Noah Reeves as drycleaner; and at the Knoxville plant, Sam Caddell is manager and Charlie Jones is drycleaner.

All are most qualified and thoroughly experienced.

With the change of seasons, several situations are presented that make dependence upon the Lubbock Martinizing facilities advisable:

Summer box storage for winter goods is available.

Wedding Gown Care

Cleaning of wedding gowns is a specialty, with the utmost care exercised. Then, boxing of these for preservation as cherished keepsakes, or even for later gift to daughters, sisters, etc., is a thoughtful and appreciated service.

Ozone Odor Removal

Then, there is the ozone smoke odor removal services available at One Hour Martinizing. Organic odors are oxidized, and treatment is enabled for clothing, even homes and autos (as the firm has a portable unit).

Each Martinizing facility here serves as a pick-up station for laundry, too, with City Steam Laundry being utilized.

Drive-in window service is afforded at each of the locations.

Hours are 7 a.m. until 6 p.m., Mondays through Fridays, closing one hour earlier at 5 p.m. on Saturdays.

Cleaning is accepted until 11 a.m. Saturdays for completion on the same day.

Quick service is gladly given when requested, at no added charge.

Pillow cleaning is a very important and specialized service afforded by the Martinizing Cleaners here, whether foam rubber or feather bed pillows.

In the pillow cleaning process, all feathers are removed from ticking and the contents are individually sanitized. Refluffed and clean, they are put into new ticking, returned soft and buoyant as new.

Ozone gas is utilized in deordorizing the feathers. New ticking plus added feathers as desired are part of the finished operation. (You get your own feathers back, with added ones as asked.) A choice of ticking in coloring and patterns is available, with all guaranteed fast color 100 per cent new cotton that is feather-proof and down-proof.

More about the care of your clothes from these knowledgeable cleaners:

Attention is given to tailoring, zippers, pockets, reweaving, box storage, shower proofing, moth proofing, re-sizing, dry cleaning of draperies, wash 'n' wear, blankets and bedspreads, for example.

"Most damage to garments in the drycleaning process comes from overheated temperatures in the process," said Mahon. And One Hour Martinizing in Lubbock has done something about it!

Now, safe and efficient cleaning is provided for bonded fabrics, knits, most plastics even, fur-lined and trimmed garments, leather, suede and even jeweled garments and pile coats!

"The new system," according to Mahon, "provides the most up-to-date cleaning techniques available for today's wide variety of fabrics."

Manufactured by Du Pont, "Valclene" is the world's first flurocarbon to be used in drycleaning. It consists of a flurocarbon solvent and a special detergent, a combination that supplies unique drycleaning properties and high performance benefits.

The installation at One Hour Martinizing features a highly sophisticated Universal 75 Super machine. Minimum heat (less than 100 degrees) is involved in the new cleaning process, assuring no damage, shrinkage or bleeding (color loss).

"Many tumblers operate at 160 degrees," Mahon explains, "and many fibers and adhesives will not stand tumbling while wet with even 140 degrees as dangerously high. And imagine, our new process, solvent and equipment keeps the heat at less than 100 degrees! Consequently there is no fire hazard, and its use is healthier, too. Low solvent and low temperature drying enables the versatile capabilities.

Special Care

One Hour Martinizing prides in being clothes care specialists, knowing fabrics and the special care many of them require ... how to remove spots and stains ... finish garments to look their very best.

Professional finishing can't be matched just by hanging something on a hanger or home touch-up. That's why it "shows" when one's clothes receive the expert professional care that Martinizing gives them.

W.M. Smith Electric Firm Affording Multiple Services

Well electrification . . . the W.M. Smith Electric Company way . . . is heartily recommended!

"Let us explain how we can serve you, as we likely have aided your neighbor, with vertical hollowshaft, v-belt drive, tumble-shaft drive and all the other advantages."

Well electrification by W.M. Smith Electric Co., 1911 Clovis Road, has further advantages, such as rodent protected, all-weather and temperature sensing control panels, flanges for tumble shafts, compact base gearhead mountings, high service factor engineering drives, all name-brand equipment and top resale value.

Free estimates on well electrification are featured, and one can be assured of service around the clock, quality in installation, wiring, material and workmanship, and for correct modifications in well set-ups.

Compressor Values

In-stock compressors at extra low prices are one of the company features in Lubbock.

Hoists

Sales and service for all makes of hoists, including the Budget line, is another key segment of the business.

Motors

W.M. Smith Electric is distributor for three major lines of electric motors: General Electric, U.S., and Baldor, in all sizes.

Furthermore, the firm has parts for everything it sells, offering service on everything sold, also.

IF WEIGHT IS A PROBLEM — Rita Pence of the Diet Center at 4902 34th St., aptly says: "Don't weight, call 793-5211 today for details regarding a great dieting program."

Diet Center, In Terrace Location, Tells 'How To Win At Losing Game'

Take it from folks who know:

"Happiness is a counselor who really cares; she's been there!"

So . . . meet Rita Pence, counselor and owner of the already-acclaimed Diet Center, Terrace Center in Lubbock (in Suite 306, 4902 34th St.).

Rita, a lifelong Lubbock resident, points out that the Diet Center she heads was established here in early January, with purpose of helping people lose weight quickly, stabilize their weight at the desired goal and to teach them how to maintain this weight loss.

Response has been most heartwarming, as dozens have benefitted in the short weeks since the firm's founding.

Rita is the daughter of Lubbock businessman Jack Ridpath who is a partner in the firm. A graduate of Lubbock High School in 1969, Rita attended college in Rexburg, Idaho, and while there became acquainted with the revolutionary but very practical Diet Center program that actually was initiated in Rexburg.

"With a weight problem myself, I tried several methods, only to be disillusioned or disappointed . . . until I learned of the Diet Center plan which I heartily recommend from first-hand experience."

What better testimonial or recommendation could be given?

Rita Pence followed through by taking extensive training in the Diet Center home office in Rexburg, and she returned to Lubbock to establish her own center and to assist a rapidly expanding clientele here.

(Find out for yourself how Rita Pence and the Diet Center at 4902 34th St. can help you, too, to win at the losing game. Multiple-length programs are available, and there is no obligation to full inquiry. Come by the Terrace suite or call 793-5211 for appointment at earliest convenience; it could open a whole new world for you as it has others.)

'It Works'

Why is the Diet Center so successful, aside from Rita's own knowledge and interest? It is because the diets work!

"Our diets are especially designed for a sensible weight loss. A carefully planned combination of protein, carbohydrates, fats, minerals and vitamins goes into our diets. Thus, they are not fad diets, and are designed to establish and maintain good eating habits."

A four-phase program is involved:

(1) The conditioning diet helps prepare the dieter for the reducing diet.

(2) On the reducing diet, trained counselors see you on a daily basis, checking the food intake each day, the weight loss being recorded and graphed.

(3) The stabilization diet consists of a high protein diet designed to stabilize your new weight, and counseling is continued twice weekly for three weeks.

(4) Then, a maintenance program involves weekly weigh-in classes instructing regarding nutrition, exercise, relaxing, buying and storing foods.

'Feel Good While Dieting'

How long does it take to lose weight at the Diet Center, 4902 34th St.?

This, of course, mainly depends on the extent of one's weight problem. On the average, one can expect to lose six to 10 pounds in two weeks, 11 to 15 pounds in 25 days, and 17 to even 30 pounds in six weeks! This is for women; men average one pound per day.

"If you recognize that happiness is feeling good while dieting, then by all means make the initial step now of getting full details from Rita Pence, a counselor who really cares, at the west-Lubbock Diet Center, 4902 34th Street, Suite 306, in the Terrace Center, phone 793-5211."

Cowling Furniture Prides In Selection, Sensible Pricing

With an enlarged, yet most discriminating, selection offered, Cowling's Furniture, 1210 Ave. Q, has "what's right and what's quality" for every furniture need.

Opening in late 1975, Cowling's has become recognized as a good firm, with good merchandise, with integrity and with a quality-savings combination to be appreciated.

With so very much presented in its selection, it is impossible to enumerate all, but these arrivals likely should come in for special note:

The best selection of sofas yet stocked by Cowling's is currently presented.

Rattan Now Stocked

New groupings for every room of the home are available.

Some extremely good quality Rattan furniture has been added to the extensive stock.

A very good supply of credenzas, consoles, bedroom and dining room groupings is another present situation, all in readiness for one's Spring redecorating.

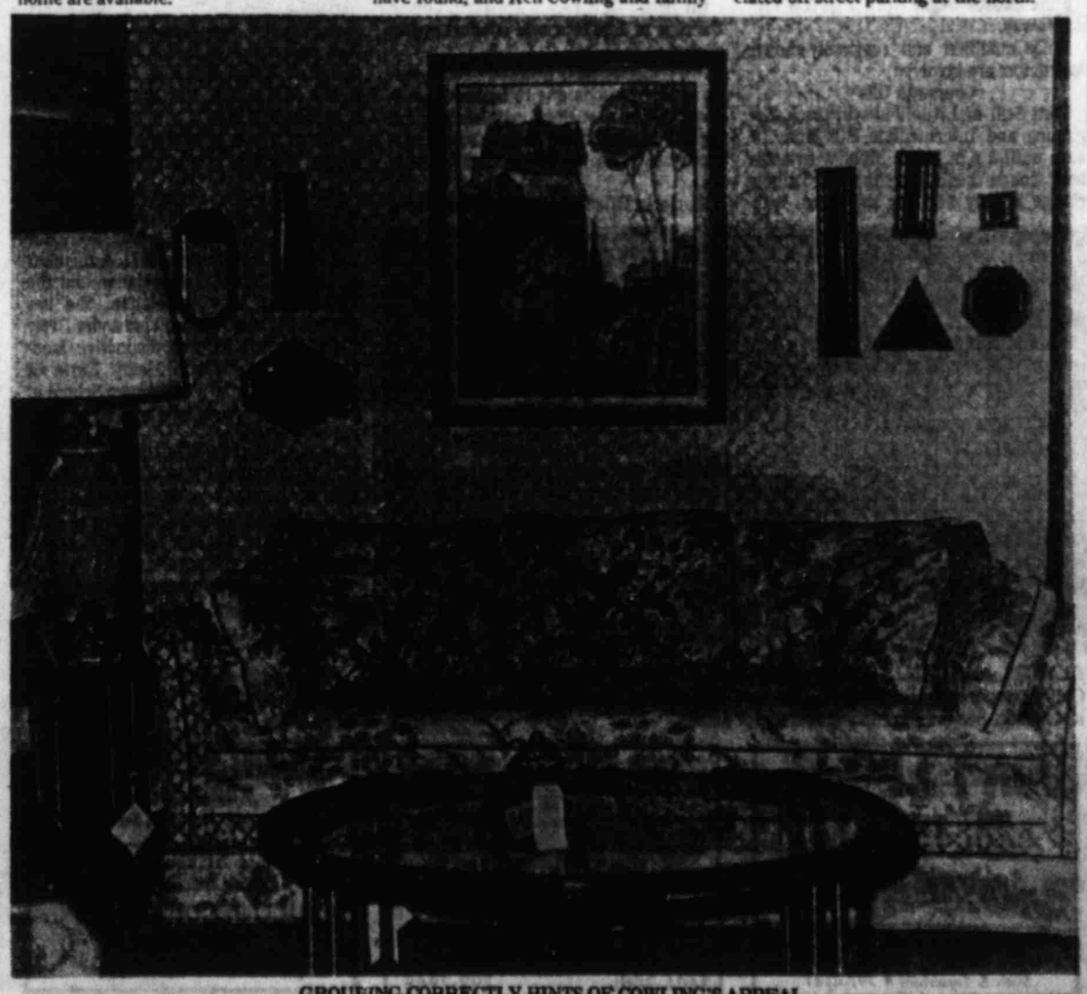

All in all, Cowling's has the largest stock yet; they have continually stocked good lines and are staying with these respected and well-known brands.

Both investment art and just "plain pretty art work" is stocked in a beautiful array of selective paintings, tastefully arranged throughout the attractive store.

"This is an out-of-the-ordinary furniture store," more than a few customers have found, and Ken Cowling and family want the opportunity to personally show this as the truth. Modest on the outside, the big store is most impressive within; actually, entry is into a whole new world of quality furniture at prices to please.

"If it is all-around good taste that you appreciate, then let Cowling's friendly family staff serve you. The firm is a family store, family owned and operated, with each member doing his and her best to bring your own family the very finest home furnishings to fit your budget."

Financing is available, and personal attention in every visit and transaction is a watchword at Cowling's, just south off Broadway, on Avenue Q. Both an east and north entry is provided, with appreciated off-street parking at the north.

Business & Industrial Review

HATS, HATS, HATS — Lynch Hat Works, 1106 Ave. J, is one of Lubbock's oldest businesses. Hats indicative of changing styles of every decade are grouped for this picture at the downtown city firm, with Mrs. Virginia Lynch, Karen Lynch and Willie Henderson standing behind this most interesting assortment of period hats. Pick the Stetson, stovepipe, gaucho, riverboat gambler, slouch, 4-dent, forest ranger, etc., most of which were actually made up in the Lubbock shop.

Lynch Hat Works' Capabilities Aid Newcomer, Oldtimer Alike

"Students, new residents to Lubbock — whatever your occupation, we hope you'll soon learn something that old-timers here have known for a long time — that Lynch Hat Works can perform services for you found nowhere else!"

Since 1923 Lynch Hat Works has been on the job, under a single-family ownership, serving hat needs throughout the southwest.

Now, with a new season of the year, one surely wants to be ready for all the rodeos and outdoor activities, wearing a hat of which he or she can be proud ... one that says "West Texas"!

Then, Lynch Hat Works, 1106 Ave. J, should enter the picture, for it has a most comprehensive service — new hats from stock, custom built hats "just for you" and hat renovation and styling.

It all is at Lynch's, with its time-proven capabilities . . . where a friendly atmosphere prevails, together with the best of hat attention, antique machinery but modern technology.

Lynch Hat Works qualifies in every sense of the word, as it has the distinction of serving superbly in the same location in Lubbock for 45 years . . . a pioneer business in the center of downtown, serving even a multi-state area (mail service is given, too).

The Lynch story could fill a volume, but at this particular time, just before the big ABC Rodeo, it might be well to list some of the key services at random:

Straws and felts, in many styles, shapes, sizes and prices are stocked.

Renovation is a specialty, with the complete cleaning, blocking and styling processes utilized.

Hats are styled to one's desire and taste. Brims are cut to preference.

Hats at Lynch Hat Works are "made to fit your head." No two heads are alike, as one may be longer, wider, thinner in front or back, a bump on one side, etc.!

Sizes can be changed.

Accessories are available to make one's hat something special . . . such as fan feathers in assorted colors, feather bands, leather bands, small feathers, etc., or bring in your own ribbon and Lynch's will be happy to put it on.

"Keep your hat looking nice with a hat brush, hat cleaner, hat saver in which to put your hat in the car or pickup and keep it clean, keeping its shape, and even rain hat covers.

"To make your hat the right size, we have hat stretchers."

Let Lynch Hat Works even change the look of the hat, changing the crease, installing a new band or re-doing the edge.

Gift certificates are afforded any time of the year for any amount. Layaways are welcomed.

Service Still The Rule

Throughout the years the sincere word from Lynch Hat Works has been:

"It always is our pleasure to serve you."

Yes, Lynch Hat Works was founded back in 1923 and has continued as Lubbock home-owned and home-operated hat works within the same family. The same service that was acclaimed by early-day cattlemen and farmers still is the rule at Lynch Hat Works.

"We would be most pleased to serve you in any of your hat needs and to visit with you," Mrs. Virginia Lynch emphasizes. "Or maybe we could assist you in some way by phone, at 765-7171. You will always find friendly faces and willingness to help you in your needs. We are open from 8:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m., Mondays through Saturdays."

Straw Hats, Too

"Right now, we have an excellent selection of hats in a variety of sizes, shapes and prices.

"This is an excellent time to bring in your favorite felt hat and let us renovate it — clean it and block it, put in new trimming and reshape it."

Mrs. Lynch and her staff do most of the work, ironing it just right, putting the right finish on it, putting the trimmings on, by handcreasing the hat.

"We would be happy for you to mail your hat to us if you are unable to bring it, and we will mail it back when completed."

Cactus Alley Art Gallery Expands, Now Offering Oil Classes, Supplies

The Cactus Alley Art Gallery, home of quality paintings by award-winning artists, has made an announcement of special significance:

Now, not only will the Gallery continue making these paintings available, but instruction schedules are being initiated in oil painting.

First classes begin April 3, just a few days away.

Fully qualified and regionally-known instructors are involved.

Course In Oils

Mutt Still of Littlefield will teach Beginning and Intermediate Oils from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m., each Monday in a 20-hour course beginning April 3. Tuition charge is only $40. for this class, with the artist demonstrating landscape and still life techniques during course of the instruction.

Materials for this and other impending classes and workshops are being stocked by the Cactus Alley Art Gallery, affording maximum convenience.

Oil Workshops

On April 18 through April 21, Louise Deering of Lubbock will conduct workshops in oils.

Pre-registration is necessary for courses and workshops due to limited enrollment. Class participation totals will be kept at a small number to assure maximum attention to each student's progress.

Marjorie Hitch, director of the Cactus Alley Art Gallery, at 2610 Salem Ave., invites inquiry for full details of these and other planned classes.

The stock within the shop remains most intriguing and selective.

Prints, Also

Not only are original oils, acrylics, pastels, watercolors, and pen/inks featured, but the gallery has limited-edition prints including the New Mexico Suite collection advertised in Decor magazine and the Wall Street Journal, featuring the works of Gorman, Hurley, Rippel, Sandoval and Steinke.

The gallery is open from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m., Mondays through Fridays.

Marjorie Hitch brings a host of individual qualifications to her directorship. A native of Lubbock, she was away for some years, returning in 1971. A member of the Lubbock Art Association and the Texas Fine Arts Association, she has studied in Laie, Hawaii; also under Betty Fettig known for her distinctive landscapes, from William Henry Earle of Connecticut; from the Froman School of Art in New Mexico, and from Fred Samuelson of Mexico.

"It is a real pleasure to provide the type shop that the Cactus Alley Art Gallery is designed to be," Marjorie explains. "I not only am glad to provide "paintings to enjoy" for my Lubbock friends, but I am glad to report "affordable prices" without resorting to the "mass production" mill that produces pictures unlikely to increase in value."

"Everything at the Cactus Alley Art Gallery is legitimate," Marjorie correctly emphasizes.

CLASSES, MATERIALS ADDED — Marjorie Hitch, director of the Cactus Alley Art Gallery, not only continues display and sale of quality art, but has arranged specialized instruction. See the accompanying story for details.

Lawn, Garden Needs Considered Fully In Woolco's Huge Stock

Woolco's Garden Center offers more than ever!

When one considers that it now is springtime, outdoor time, time for gardening and lawn care . . . and that Woolco provides a huge selection of needs at low Woolco prices, then why delay?

Featured is a wide assortment of plants, shrubs and trees for one's landscaping desires.

Woolco plants are packaged in gallon containers and potted.

Also in the Garden Center are all the related items of fertilizers, garden tools, spreaders, mowers, tillers and edgers.

Statuary

"We offer a very good choice in statuary for the yard and garden. Included are fountains, bird baths and numerous yard ornamental designs.

Stocked is a wide variety of one gallon nursery stock at low prices in the outdoor display. And there are quality high-grade yard shrubs from Bordier Nursery in California.

Sale Items

Woolco presently is having a clearance sale on all bulbs, packaged goods and perennials, with up to 50 per cent savings posted.

Then, in the center aisle of the big store is featured a tremendous display of pots and macrame from D & D Floral. Also there is a wide selection of plastic and ceramic pots in the Garden Center.

The famous Ortho line of insecticides and weed killers is stocked.

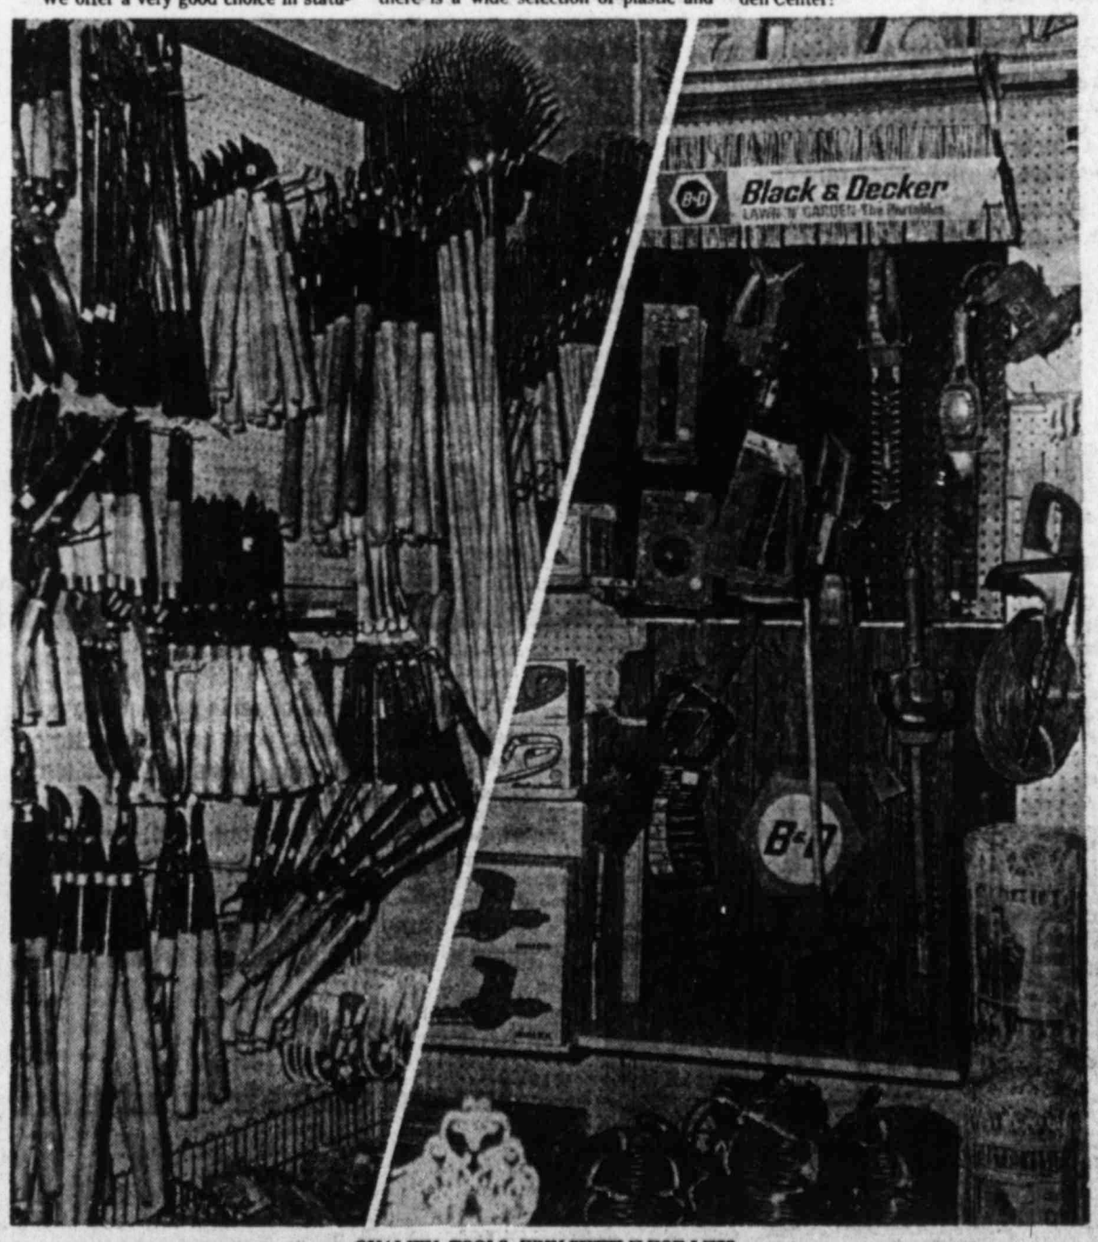

Names To Trust

In the power equipment category, brand names include the respected lines of Black & Decker, Briggs and Stratton, and Diston. One can select from both electric and gasoline operated equipment.

These power machines are backed by a full 90-day warranty.

(Woolco also uses a local authorized small engine repair shop for needed repairs.)

"See you at the one-stop Woolco Garden Center!"

Carter Signature Expected Soon On Retirement, Debt Limit Bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two key bills boosting the retirement age limit and freezing the national debt limit were sent to President Carter as Congress recessed for Easter and a week-long spring vacation.

With the lawmakers due back at their desks April 3, here is the status of major legislation:

Retirement Age

— A bill generally hiking the mandatory retirement age to 70 for most American workers is expected to be signed into law by Carter.

The measure, which backers call a milestone for those who want to stay on the job until age 70 rather than being forced to quit at 65, was passed 391 to 6 by the House and 62 to 10 by the Senate.

Debt Limit

— Carter is expected to sign legislation that freezes the present temporary $752 billion limit on the national debt through July 31. If not, it would fall at midnight Friday to a permanent $400 billion level that would be far below the actual debt.

Because such a drop in the debt level would cut off the U.S. Treasury's legal borrowing power, the House passed the limit-freezing legislation, by 233 to 172, and the Senate approved it by voice vote.

Panama Canal

— Senate leaders set an April 26 deadline for a vote on the second Panama Canal treaty in the two-document package by which the United States would give Panama control over the waterway at the end of this century.

With one vote to spare, Carter won by 68 to 32 in the Senate's showdown on the first pact, involving canal neutrality terms. Vice President Walter F. Mondale postponed a scheduled trip to the South Pacific because of pending Senate action on the second treaty, covering the canal transfer.

Agriculture

— A Senate-approved major agriculture income aid bill, called emergency legislation by backers, including a group of striking farmers, was sent to congressional compromise-seekers last week as an amendment to a House-passed measure on raisin marketing practices.

Last September, Congress passed and Carter signed a wide-ranging, $11 billion-a-year measure to boost grain farmers' income, revamp food stamp programs, and expand agricultural research through 1981.

Energy

— Congressional energy compromise efforts, almost a year after Carter offered a range of plans for a national program, are concentrating on settling differences on natural gas pricing issues. Involved are attempts to lift price controls by the mid-1980s.

Proposals by both Senate and House sides are on the bargaining table, with Carter saying he is willing to accept a compromise package including a phased deregulation of natural gas prices. The lawmakers still face decisions on major energy tax disputes.

Urban

— Carter's new urban program recommendations are set to be delivered soon to Congress, where he and the lawmakers agreed last October on legislation aimed at helping improve the quality of life especially in older communities and among lower-income persons.

Employment

— The Senate is to consider House-approved legislation that would set a national economic target of so-called full employment by 1983, which would mean a four percent jobless rate by then compared with the present 6.1 percent.

— In an effort to aid hard-core unemployed Americans, Carter is recommending a program of jobs and training for more than four million persons through a four-year extension and expansion of public service job activities.

Weapons

— Carter is pressing for congressional approval of his proposed $4.8 billion Middle East package sale of jet fighters to Egypt, Saudi Arabia and Israel, although key foreign-relations leaders in the Senate and House want him to postpone the deals.

Welfare

— Three House committees are to vote on Carter's proposed welfare changes and various alternative plans being recommended by lawmakers. However, Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., head of one of those panels, the House Ways and Means Committee, says a shortage of time will prevent Congress from producing a full package this year.

Taxes

— As they put together their revenue-raising program for the budget year that starts Oct. 1, tax-writers in Congress are weighing assorted proposals for reducing income and Social Security payroll taxes. The legislators indicate they will cut taxes up to $10 billion more than the $25 billion amount backed by Carter.

— Congress passed and Carter signed laws last year that generally cut income taxes $34 billion over three years and hiked Social Security payroll taxes $227 billion during the coming decade.

Equal Rights

— Supporters of the proposed Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution are advocating action in Congress to extend the March 22, 1979, deadline for states to ratify the controversial measure to guarantee equal rights for both sexes. With passage by 38 states needed for approval, ERA has won support of 35 and legal battles developed in some states over efforts to rescind approval.

Health

— The House Ways and Means Committee is to work on hospital cost-control plans urged by the health subcommittee that narrowly approved a voluntary approach rather than Carter's mandatory program.

— The President intends to send a national health insurance program to Congress for consideration but he says there will not be enough time this year to produce a law on this issue.

Budget

— For federal fiscal year 1979, opening Oct. 1, Carter is calling for spending about $500 billion and operating with a deficit of around $60 billion.

'Life Celebrations' Offered By Company

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Shirt sleeves, dogs and tap dancing. Anything goes at a funeral today, as long as it reflects what professional eulogy writer Jules Maitland calls the "theme" of the deceased's life.

Maitland, a former newsman and writer, runs Personal Words, a Los Angeles firm that offers personalized eulogies, or "life celebrations," for $75.

Maitland, 55, says he's been involved with death since he was a child, when he sat in on funerals on the way home from school — to hear the music.

Through interviews with family and friends, Maitland searches for the unique aspect of a person's life.

"Some people feel funerals are hypocritical," Maitland said, because a person who never went to church is mourned in a religious atmosphere. "We try to style these (eulogies) to the people's life style and still give them hope," he said.

"We try to show them that there's a purpose, whether they know it or not," Maitland said. "We build a theme of love ... love makes the whole thing work whether people know it or not. There is no, what I call, 'breaking of the thread.' Everything goes on."

Customers are referred by funeral parlors, he said.

Most of his clients have no church affiliation, he said, and some want to avoid any religious reference at all in the eulogy.

Donn McKnight, owner of A.M. Gamby Mortuary in suburban Lomita, called the eulogies "an answer many people are looking for, are needing. A lot of ministers aren't doing anything personal. There are a number of good ministers around, but they are rare."

Maitland said the eulogies, read by actors, stress the person's goals and accomplishments. After one service, Maitland said, friends and relatives of the deceased finished a cabin the man had worked on in his spare time. "Even though he was gone," Maitland said, "they finished the cabin for the wife and children, because that was his dream."

Services often are conducted before mourners in casual dress. Once a pair of Great Danes stood beside the casket. Another service featured a tap-dancing granddaughter.

Maitland, who has been writing eulogies professionally for about 1½ years, said he does about five services a week. But he would like to expand the business to 50 a week and offer the service outside Los Angeles.

Although McKnight said Maitland's eulogies may be more expensive than the average, he said Maitland puts more research and thought into the services than some ministers.

"He helps people put the pieces back together and go on ... get over the first hurdle and get back into the mainstream," McKnight said.

Entries Sought For ABC Rodeo

Local entries in the 36th annual ABC Rodeo, slated April 5-8 in the Municipal Coliseum, will be accepted today and Tuesday at the Trailer ticket office located in the Town and Country Shopping center parking lot.

Lubbock and area residents may sign up for competition from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. today and from 9 a.m. until noon on Tuesday.

The rodeo, to headline country music singing star Jody Miller, is sanctioned by the professional Rodeo Cowboys Assn. Performances are set at 7:30 p.m. daily.

Tickets are available at the ticket office or at all western wear store. They are priced at $3, $5, $6 and $6.50.

JUMP RECORD SET

ZEPHYRHILLS, Fla. (AP) — Fifty skydivers successfully formed a record free-fall jumping formation called a "50-man Penta-Wedge" in the sky here Saturday, a spokesman said.

Think what your neighbors will say when you install Gas air conditioning...NOW!

Your neighbors may talk a bit and raise a few eyebrows when they see Gas air conditioning installed at your house on a cold, wintery day. Let 'em! They will appreciate your good judgement on the first warm days when your home is cool and comfortable while others are still waiting for installation. Call us now for a free cooling survey. No obligation.

Think what they'll say in 10 years... when it's still going strong, still in warranty!

10 YEAR NO SWEAT WARRANTY

*Manufacturer's ten year limited warranty covers all defects in material and workmanship on the sealed refrigeration unit for ten years from date of installation of the air conditioner when it is installed in a single family residence. All other parts are warranted for one year from date of installation.

After a decade of seeing you enjoy cool, comfortable, trouble-free summers, your neighbors can only say "Wow!" Gas air conditioning lasts and lasts without any loss of cooling capacity. There are fewer moving parts . . . and no compressor . . . to wear out. And, Gas air conditioners are built by craftsmen using more stainless steel than in any other unit. Those are the reasons why we can offer a ten-year warranty*. Install Gas air conditioning now and forget about expensive maintenance to your cooling system for at least 10 years!

Install Gas air conditioning now.

AT FENNER'S PLACE

5 REASONS WHY PLYMOUTH VOLARÉ IS AMERICA'S 1ST CHOICE IN WAGONS OVER THE PAST TWO YEARS.

1. HIGH RESALE VALUE.

One reason why Volare is America's first choice in wagons over the past two years is that its resale value is higher than its competition at both Ford and GM.*

*% of return of original sticker price for one year old wagons on a competitive model basis. Based on recent Automotive Market Report publication.

2. PASSENGER ROOM.

Hauling cargo is important, and so is hauling people. Volare seats six comfortably and gives more passenger room than all the new down-sized GM intermediate wagons based on eight key interior dimensions.

3. BIG CAR RIDE.

Volare is the only wagon in its class with a special front isolated transverse suspension system. The system of unique design that delivers a remarkable ride like a big car.

4. LOW PRICE.

You could pay more for some wagons with all the room, comfort and ride of a Volare. Compared to its GM competition, Volare's low price will surprise you.

5. SMALL CAR ECONOMY.

Volare offers big passenger room and spacious cargo area and still does a remarkable job of giving down-to-earth economy, especially in gas mileage.

25 / 18*

*Based on EPA estimates. Volare wagon with manual transmission. Your actual mileage may differ depending on your driving habits, the condition of your car and its optional equipment.

Volare Wagon shown with Value Bonus Package and optional custom exteriors.

NOW SAVE UP TO $250 ON VOLARÉ WAGON VALUE PACKAGES DURING PLYMOUTH'S SALE OF THE YEAR!

Now you can save up to $250 off the regular sticker price on our Value Bonus Packages by paying only $413 for $663 worth of options included are AM radio, digital clock, special light package, and much more. And you can still upgrade or order other options, too. See your Chrysler-Plymouth Dealer for details today!

Value Bonus Package requires optional power steering.

Memories Of Air Disaster Linger For Couple

LAGUNA HILLS, Calif. (AP) — It's been a year of painfully slow recovery for 65-year-old Paul Heck, who jumped off the wing of a burning jumbo jet in the Canary Islands to escape the worst disaster in aviation history.

Heck and his wife, Floy, were among 70 persons aboard the Pan American Airlines Boeing 747 who lived to tell the tale of their brush with death; 581 persons died on their plane and the KLM Royal Dutch Airlines 747 which slammed into it on the Tenerife runway.

The legal, fiscal and investigative aftermath of the March 27, 1977, disaster still drags on. Airline officals are tight-mouthed about the number of lawsuits pending and any settlements with survivors and families of victims. A Pan Am spokesman said all legal action is in limbo pending the outcome of the Spanish government's investigation into the crash.

Spanish officials are to brief American and Dutch aviation officials in Madrid next month on their preliminary findings; a final report is expected sometime after that meeting.

Heck's most vivid memories of last March 27 are of the horror-struck faces of his fellow passengers moments after the KLM plane shaved off the roof of the Pan Am craft, sending streams of burning jet fuel into the passenger compartment.

"It was like something out of a nightmare," he recalled. "Here was the plane going down the tubes, and all those people were sitting there immoveable, like figures in a wax museum ... I knew that life on that plane was going to be measured in seconds."

The Hecks and eight other survivors live in the Orange County retirement community of Leisure World, some 50 miles south of Los Angeles. They were among 37 community members on the Pan Am flight who were returning from a Mediterranean cruise tour.

No special observances — apart from an annual Easter Sunday sunrise service — were planned at Westminster Memorial Park, where 117 crash victims, 114 of them unidentified, are buried in a special plot donated by the cemetery.

Heck said the excruciating pain of his burns stayed with him for months after his three weeks in the hospital.

Heck, who weighed 162 pounds before the crash, dropped to 125 pounds after a bout with hepatitis in January, which he attributes to residual effects from pain-killing drugs he took for months after the crash. He is now 138 pounds, but says he is optimistic that he will regain his strength and health.

"There are so many things Floy and I want to do," he said, smiling.

"We're more appreciative of being alive, more appreciative of each other, more appreciative of our family and friends," Mrs. Heck added.

Many of the survivors are reluctant to discuss the experience. As Byron Ellerbrock said, "It's a lousy way to get publicity."

Ellerbrock, who suffered pelvis fractures, a broken wrist and an eye injury, told the Leisure World community newspaper he had a stock reply to people who ask him if he would fly again.

"I say I've flown hundreds of thousands of miles, but I never got hurt flying — just jumping off of wings."

Drill Ship To Begin Operations

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Engineers and surveyers aboard the Exxon drill ship Glomar Pacific took readings from satellites Sunday in an effort to position the ship within 250 feet of a spot they hope will become the first East Coast oil well.

Exxon spokesman Joseph Tucker said if poor weather predictions held, it would be late Monday before they could begin drilling at the site 101 miles out in the Atlantic Ocean.

"It may appear that we're having problems, but actually this operation is going very, very smoothly," said an Exxon engineer who asked not to be identified. "You're very lucky if you can go in there and drill right away."

Officials had hoped the Glomar Pacific, which arrived offshore shortly after midnight Thursday, could begin drilling sometime Saturday. The drilling operation is costing Exxon $110,000 a day.

Heavy seas and radio interference with five navigation satellites have slowed efforts to precisely position the 451-foot ship within feet of a spot geologists say is the most likely to hold oil and gas deposits.

Engineers said federal regulations require clear radio readings from at least 20 satellite passes to determine the location of the ship.

Eight huge sea anchors are firmly holding the Glomar Pacific to the sandy bottom 398 feet below the sea's surface. The anchors are designed to hold the vessel steady during drilling.

When the survey crews are satisfied of their location, they must then position the vessel on the precise spot they want to drill by tightening and loosening cables to the ship's anchors.

The positioning operation was being slowed by rising 12-foot seas and wind gusts up to 20 miles per hour. Exxon officials said they expected winds and seas to worsen as a low-pressure rain storm headed offshore.

The first step of the drilling will be the lowering of a 12-foot square steel box to serve as a guide when crewmen finally lower a 36-inch drill bit to punch the first hole in the ocean floor. The first well is scheduled to take 90 days to drill to a depth of 14,000 feet.

Experts predict that 1.4 billion barrels of oil and 9.4 trillion cubic feet of gas may lie under the seabed off New Jersey and Delaware. Oil industry experts say it may take up to two years and dozens of such exploratory wells before they know if the predictions are accurate.

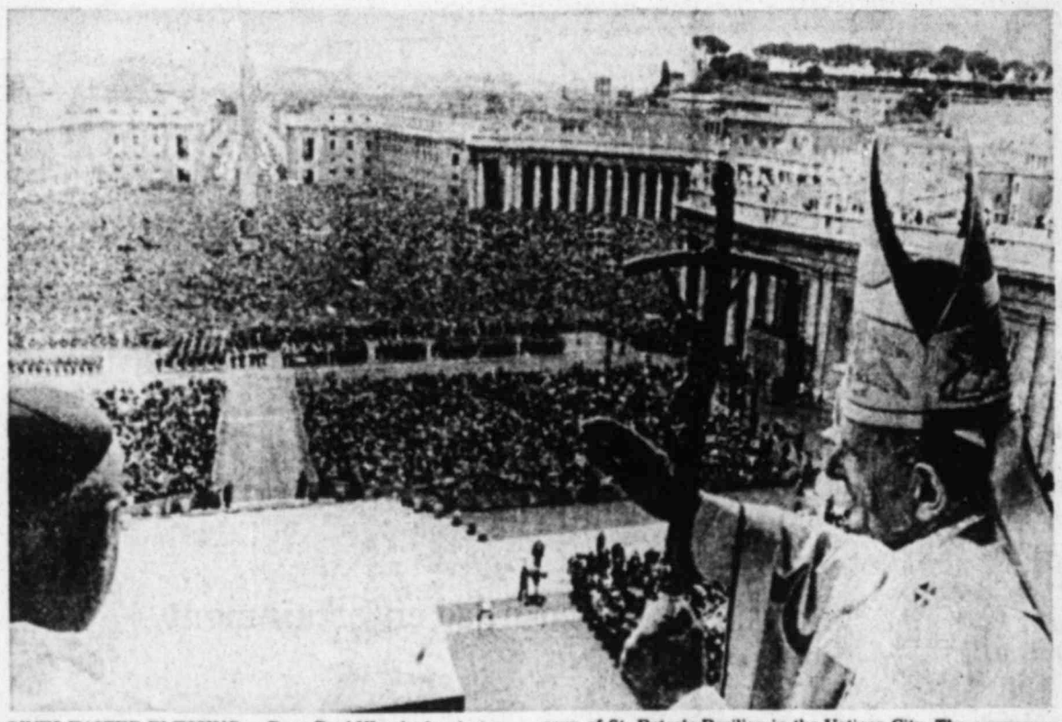

The oil industry had paid $1.1 billion to the federal government for the right to look for energy deposits on 93 offshore tracts. Exxon paid $72.1 million for the one 9-square-mile tract where the Glomar Pacific is anchored.

Conoco and Shell are scheduled to begin their own exploratory drilling in April with other oil companies expected by the end of spring.

Fringe Benefits Taxes Eyed By Internal Revenue Director

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's top tax collector said Sunday individuals are paying an increasing proportion of taxes compared with corporations, but he still wants to tax employee fringe benefits and tighten restrictions on personal business deductions.

Fringe benefits are taxable under the Internal Revenue Service code, IRS Commissioner Jerome Kurtz said, but because of administrative problems his federal tax collection agency has yet to draw up regulations covering the issue.

"The Internal Revenue Service does specifically exempt the biggest fringe benefits — group medical insurance, pension plans, group life insurance. We're not talking about that," Kurtz said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

"We're talking about the ones which, under the IRS code and under the court cases, are pretty clearly taxable."

Such fringes appear to include free use of automobiles, price discounts for clerks and subsidized dining rooms. Kurtz said many fringes are "very small and not worth the trouble" for IRS auditors, but that he would propose regulations this summer to make it clear that the large items are taxable.

Kurtz pushed the administration's proposal to eliminate deductions for the "three-martini" business lunch, and said other deductions also should be stopped. Under existing law, Kurtz said, "there are wide areas of permitted travel and entertainment, which as a matter of policy, appear inappropriate."

He said under current law it "certainly is possible for someone to have deductible business lunches 300 days a year."

Kurtz argued that such a lunch, "even where it has a relationship to business, does satisfy personal need" and should be taxable.

The commissioner conceded that combining Social Security taxes and income taxes, individuals now are paying "a higher proportion" of income taxes than corporations.

"This has come about gradually over the years, but it is certainly a trend," Kurtz said, pointing out that tax reforms have lowered corporate tax rates.

But for an individual, he said, "the total federal tax bite is not significantly higher today than it has been in the last 20 to 25 years."

Asked about tax dodgers, Kurtz said he repeatedly is denied more enforcement manpower to audit tax returns. He disputed estimates that unreported income in the United States now totals $200 billion, but added: "If those estimates are right, then there is cause for some concern."

In a copyrighted interview in U.S. News and World Report, Kurtz also said he wants to reduce the number of itemized deductions for individual taxpayers and to require taxes to be withheld on dividend and interest income.

He also said there is one chance in 40 that an American taxpayer's income tax return will be audited this year. But for those earning $50,000 to $100,000, the audit odds are one in six.

"I think there will be more movements toward cutting down on deductions and reducing rates correspondingly," Kurtz told U.S. News.

He said most taxpayers report dividend and interest income accurately, but if such taxes were withheld, "we think compliance would be much better still."

As a result of 1974 returns, he said, dividend and interest taxes collected from nonreporters and under-reporters was $100 million.

Four Contest Seats On Cooper Board

Four persons will vie for two spots on the Lubbock-Cooper School Board in Saturday's election.

Incumbents include Leland Pinkerton, 41, a chief switchman for the phone company, and Eugene Bednarz, a 38-year-old farmer.

Gayle Langston, a 36-year-old housewife, and Wildred Matheny, 40, a warehouse foreman, are also competing for the two positions.

Ex-House Aide Asks For Public Hearing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Suzi Park Thomson, linked in news leaks of congressional testimony with Washington operations of the Korean CIA, says she has become a "prisoner" in her home and wants a chance to challenge the stories in public.

Mrs. Thomson, a Korean-born U.S. citizen, accused Rep. Donald Fraser, D-Minn., of "character assassination" and said she has asked to testify under oath in an open hearing before his House international organizations subcommittee.

The subcommittee is one of several congressional panels looking into alleged Korean influence-buying operations in Congress. Mrs. Thomson was an aide to House Speaker Carl Albert of Oklahoma for five years until his retirement in 1976.

In an interview, she cited Fraser's release of summaries of intelligence reports suggesting she was "connected" with the Korean Central Intelligence Agency.

"Connected!" she exclaimed scornfully. "Connected how? They should prove what kind of connections."

Such allegations, she said, had deprived her of work on Capitol Hill and of many of the friends she used to entertain in her Southwest Washington apartment.

She said she had been "harassed and persecuted" by investigators for two House committees — the House Ethics Committee and the panel chaired by Fraser.

"I'm a prisoner in my own home," she said. "I can't go out — I'm harassed by everybody."

She said she had testified under threat of contempt of Congress in a closed session of the Ethics Committee after her lawyer's request for a public hearing was denied.

Fraser's subcommittee has not asked her to testify in either a public or closed session despite its "leaks" of damaging information, she said.

Mrs. Thomson was interviewed in her apartment overlooking the Potomac River.

It is a comfortable "prison" — decorated in Oriental style, with wall-to-wall white carpeting which she keeps clean by asking guests to remove their shoes at the door.

Seated on a low couch, she quietly told how the doubts raised by leaks, rumors and unproved allegations have changed her life.

Despite all the friends she made in her 12 years on Capitol Hill, no one will give her a job.

"I'm a good secretary," she said. "But everyone says 'you're too controversial — wait until the investigation is over.'

"When the investigation is over, I won't need them, because then I'll no longer be controversial."

Finally, a Korean friend who manages a Polynesian-style restaurant in fashionable Georgetown put her to work three nights a week as a hostess.

"I guess he just has the guts to give me a job," she said.

She admits some of the Korean officials she invited to parties attended by members of Congress and congressional aides may have been KCIA agents.

But she denies knowing they were agents at the time.

"They were just friends," she says. "They never asked me to do anything."

"My parties had nothing to do with the KCIA," she says. "They never paid for my parties. They never asked me to have parties. They never told me who to invite."

A letter she has written to Fraser, asking for a public hearing, concludes: "I look forward to an early opportunity to show the violations of my own human rights here in the United States and to be afforded the same consideration that you express on behalf of others in far-off lands."

Hustle Vs. Muscle In NCAA Finale

ST. LOUIS (AP) — It's Kentucky's muscle against Duke's hustle in the finals of the NCAA basketball playoffs tonight but both teams agree that pressure will be the biggest factor in the big game.

Kentucky shoulders what Coach Joe Hall considers an almost unbearable burden while Duke looks at the title game nearly in terms of a holiday.

"We've been under a tremendous amount of pressure to win this year," said Hall at a news conference Sunday. "So much has been expected of this team from the start of the year that it has been a season of little celebration even though we won the Southeastern Conference championship. It has eliminated any possibility of success except for one accomplishment — winning the NCAA championship. We have a lot of stored-up celebrating to do if we win this thing."

The pressure has become so intense, it seems, that Hall himself might be squeezed out of his job. Asked if would consider resigning after these playoffs, Hall hedged, but left the door open.

"I couldn't possibly answer that now," noted the bespectacled Kentucky coach.

Pressed on the subject, Hall answered," I don't know ... I just don't know."

Tradition aside — and Kentucky has plenty of that — the Wildcats have been rated the country's No. 1 team most of the year and reached the NCAA playoffs in that lofty capacity. It's a senior-studded team of many accomplishments, including players who have been part of SEC championships and winners of the National Invitation Tournament.

"There have been very few rewards for this team so far," Hall insisted, "because everyone has expected us to win. Why, even when we came home after winning the SEC championship, there was little noise. I would have given anything for someone to even throw a firecracker of something. This team has won many championships, but a lot of Kentucky people won't call the season a success unless we win the NCAA title. That's the kind of pressure we're under in this game."

Duke, on the other hand, has had no such albatross around its neck. The Blue Devils had no reputation to live up to, and as a result have had a more relaxing season. As a result, the Atlantic Coast Conference champions come into the NCAA title game at the Checkerdome "loose and having fun," according to the Duke people.

"We've just enjoyed the season so far," said Duke's floor leader, Jim Spanarkel. "You might as well enjoy basketball while you're playing it. So preparing for the championship game, we've been very, very loose.

"I don't think there's a game so far this season where we've actually felt any pressure before game time. We have this philosophy: Five minutes before the game, we get serious. But it's only a 40-minute game, and if you worry about it, it only takes away from the fun of the game."

'Cat Boss May Hang Up Sneakers If Team Wins

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Kentucky Coach Joe Hall hinted Sunday he may retire if his top-ranked Wildcats beat Duke Monday night for the NCAA basketball championship.

At a news conference, Hall made bitter references to the win-or-else pressure many Kentucky fans place on him and his team and said, "This season was without celebration for us."

Afterward, he was asked if he might retire if Kentucky wins Monday night.

"I couldn't answer that right now," he said.

"But you aren't saying definitely that you will not retire," he was told.

"I just don't know," he said.

Hall succeeded the legendary Adolph Rupp six years ago and has averaged almost 22 victories per year. His Wildcats are making their fourth appearance in the NCAA tournament and this year were ranked No. 1 by The Associated Press most of the season.

"It's an unusual thing for a coach to be involved in," he said. "To be ranked No. 1 and have all that pressure. We've got a lot of stored-up celebrating to do.

"We won the Southeastern Conference championship and when we came back to Lexington, we didn't even celebrate then. The only way we can succeed this year is for us to win the NCAA championship."

A quiet, unassuming man, Hall endured rumors of his impending dismissal last year when Kentucky lost to North Carolina in the finals of the East Regional.

This week in St. Louis, hindreds of Kentucky fans have sported buttons proclaiming, "I'm a Joe B. fan."

"It's strange in an academic setting to have this kind of pressure," said Hall. "There are people out there who just can't shoulder defeat. We're a winning club. We can handle defeat if we have to. But some people can't."

In spite of Kentucky's 29-2 record, Hall believes a large segment of the Kentucky following would write off the season as a failure if the Wildcats lose to Duke.

"They start out the first day of the season saying, 'We know you're going to win the national championship,'"

Green Fights Elements, Wins Heritage Title

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Hubert Green, unruffled in the whipping winds that destroyed the frontrunners, thought first of the man he beat Sunday after a solid, 4-under-par 67 in the Heritage Golf Classic had brought him his second title of the year.

"I feel sorry for Larry Nelson," Green said of the quiet little guy who was trying so desperately to win his first tour title. "This is the hardest golf course in the world to hold a lead on. He got some bad breaks, got dead behind some trees. It's a very hard golf course to try to win your first tournament on.

"If you lose your composure, you can shoot some high numbers."

But Nelson wasn't alone in his wind-blown miseries. Hale Irwin, Lanny Wadkins, Ben Crenshaw, Lou Graham, Australian David Graham all fell victim in one of the great collapses in recent golf history.

"Some fine, quality golfers had their troubles out there. I couldn't predict the scores they would shoot, of course," said Green, who called himself the lucky beneficiary.

"But I always thought I could win. I think I can win in every golf tournament. I never give up until I'm finished," Green said. "It's the kind of golf course, if you shoot a decent round, you can pass some folks."

And he did just that. His 67 was the best of the chilly, windy day. He came from five shots off the pace and won easily. He made up nine strokes on Nelson. He won so convincingly he had it in his hands with three groups still on the golf course.

Green won by an impressive three shots with a 277 total, 7 shots under the listed par on the wind-swept Harbour Town Golf Links, a 6,655-yard layout that ranks among the most subtly testing, unforgiving courses the tourists encounter all season.

It was Green's second victory in this event, rapidly becoming one of the most respected in the game. He collected $45,000 from the total purse of $225,000 and, with $117,499 for the year, moved ahead of Tom Watson in second place on the season's money-winning list.

It also stamped Green as a prime contender in the Masters and enabled him to become the 16th man in history to win $1 million playing this ancient game. Green now has $1,013,195.

Front-running Larry Nelson, Lou Graham and Australian David Graham (no relation), all held or shared the lead at one time or another. But all fell victim to the demands of Harbour Town and the chilly gales off Calibogue Sound.

Another starry group — Hale Irwin, Lanny Wadkins, Ben Crenshaw — got close from time to time. All disappeared.

Green moved into sole control of the lead with a brilliant shot to the 17th that set up a short birdie. Moments later the struggling Nelson, the third-round leader playing well behind Green, chopped up the par-5 15th, flailing from trees to marsh to more trouble, eventually 3-putting for a double-bogey 7.

Nelson also drove into trouble on the 16th and Green was a winner with almost a half-hour of the tournament to be played. It was simply a matter of waiting while the last groups finished — and sweating out a late-afternoon thunderstorm that threatened to disrupt the closing moments. The final groups finished in a heavy rain.

Irwin, a two-time winner of this event, eventually claimed second with a 70-280.

"I'd like to thank my fellow competitors," Irwin said, tongue firmly planted in cheek, "for falling on their butts and allowing me to finish second. I don't feel like I deserve it, but I'll accept it."

Baylor Facing Key Tilt

By The Associated Press

The Baylor Bears, who represented the Southwest Conference in the NCAA college baseball World Series last year, and defending regular season champion Texas A&M tangle this weekend in a critical three-game series at Waco.

Baylor is 8-4 after a doubleheader sweep of Houston 4-1 and 14-11 Saturday, putting the Bears just a half-game ahead of inclement-idled Arkansas and the Texas Aggies, who throttled Rice in a three game series.

Arkansas is 6-3 with games scheduled Monday and Tuesday against Texas Christian in Fayetteville. Wet grounds postponed a weekend series between the Razorbacks and the Horned Frogs.

The Aggies, who received shutout pitching from lefty Mark Thurmond and righthander David Pieczynski, beat Rice 4-0 and 5-0 to move to 6-3.

Texas Tech, now 6-6 in SWC play, split a double-header with Southern Methodist (3-6) over the weekend.

The University of Texas jumps back into league play this week after dividinga doubleheader with Southern California. The Longhorns are hurting with a 3-6 ledger and need to win in a big way against Rice University on the road Friday andSaturday.

Houston is 7-5 after the double-dip disaster against Baylor and is at TCU Friday and Saturday.

Baylor's Burl Coker throttled the Cougars on five hits in the opener then Ken Koklhorst and Mike Johanson each knocked across four runs in the second game.

Giants Whip Milwaukee 3-1

By The Associated Press

John Montefusco and Bill Madlock, who had a clubhouse scrap early in spring training, pooled their talents Sunday and led the San Francisco Giants to a 3-1 exhibition baseball victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Montefusco became the first Giants hurler to pitch seven innings and Madlock hit a solo home run.

Meanwhile, the Los Angeles Dodgers posted their fourth consecutive triumph, pounding the Houston Astros 12-1 as Steve Garvey drove in four runs and Burt Hooton worked six innings, allowing three hits and an unearned run.

The New York Yankees erupted for six runs in the bottom of the ninth inning to beat the New York Mets 9-6 and snap a four-game losing streak. With two out and a runner on first, Roy White and Cliff Johnson doubled, Fred Stanley singled and Paul Blair cracked a game-winning three-run homer.

Ted Cox' three-run homer in the eighth inning lifted the Boston Red Sox over the Chicago White Sox 4-3 and two-run homers by Darrell Porter and Clint Hurdle helped the Kansas City Royals outslug the Baltimore Orioles 13-8.

Claudell Washington's sacrifice fly in the seventh inning gave the Texas Rangers their fourth triumph in as many one-run games, a 3-2 decision over the Cincinnati Reds, and Dave Johnson doubled home the winning run in the eighth inning as the Philadelphia Phillies edged the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2.

Minnesota's Rob Wilfong, who homered in the second inning, tripled home the decisive run in the 11th, giving the Twins a 7-6 triumph over the Atlanta Braves. Dave Roberts, Paul Reuschel and Dennis Lamp held the San Diego Padres to six hits and pitched the Chicago Cubs to a 3-0 victory.

The St. Louis Cardinals nipped the Detroit Tigers 3-2 on Ted Simmons' pinch single in the 11th inning and Chris Speier delivered a run-scoring pinch single in the 13th as the Montreal Expos shaded the Toronto Blue Jays 5-4.

Chaps To Host Kearney

Lubbock Christian College is within striking distance of its school record for consecutive victories, but coach Larry Hays cautions that today's and Tuesday's doubleheaders with Kearney State will not be easy outings.

"It's tough to open on the road like they're doing," Hays explained. "We've done it before and I know exactly what they're going through. They didn't play that badly at all in the Abilene Tournament, but just seemd to run out of pitching."

Kearney finished last in the six-team field with a 1-4 record and will bring a 1-10 mark into today's 1 p.m. Chaparral Stadium doubleheader. LCC, on the other hand, won the Abilene Tourney and owns a 17-game winning streak and 20-9 record. LCC will use these four games as a tupe up for a return to Texoma Conference action this weekend. Plus, a sweep of the series would break the old mark for consecutive wins by one.

The Nebraskans beat only Coe College of Iowa at Abilene. Kearney lost a doubleheader last Sunday to Midwestern and Monday dropped a pair to Texas Wesleyan. Tuesday saw Eastern Michigan win a pair;, then the season-opening trek saw losses to Abilene Christian, Hardin-Simmons, UT—El Paso and LCC in the Abilene meet.

But Kearney led 3-0 at one point against LCC in that contest and that has Hays worried. "Their pitcher (Terry Shean) was a control pitcher and had us off stride much of the time and I'm sure we'll see hime again here. People may be misled by their record, but I know what type program they have and I know they've got a good unit."

Kearney won the District II (NAIA) last year, unseating perennial champion Emporia State and Dave Murray's lineup will, like LCC, boast a predominately left-handed flavor.

The Chaps will go with Oscar Acosta (5-0) in today's opener and then come back with southpaw Mickey Crump (2-1) in the nightcap. Tuesday, John Ross (3-1) and Dick Battle (2-2) will get the call.

TEXOMA NOTE: LCC's Friday-Saturday conference doubleheader with Dallas Baptist have been switched from Dallas to Lubbock. After this series, LCC will face 12 consecutive conference outings on the road.

DBC pitcher Moose Cook and Texas Wesleyan's Donne Schell reaped pitcher and player of the week honors. Cook hurled a four-hitter , winning 3-0 with no walks and 8 strike outs Sunday and came back with a three-hitter, walking two and striking out 3 in a 2-1 win over Kent State.

Final Cage Tilt Set For Tonight

ted "nervous type," encourages the relaxed atmosphere.

"Actually," said Foster, "These players have been able to relax me."

Setting the tone of the "loose" feeling expressed by Duke, Foster joked: "I didn't tell my players we were coming to St. Louis for the NCAA playoffs. I told them we were coming here to watch the Cardinals play."

Intangibles aside, both teams will have formidable problems to deal with in the title game for the 40th NCAA championship. Simplistically, some observers have boiled it down to a matter of styles — Kentucky's power game vs. the swiftness and finesse of the Duke attack.

That's a good, overall picture, but of course it's much more than that.

"Kentucky has been represented as a power team because of their big frontcourt players," said Foster, "but I'm impressed with their quickness and their pressure defense. They overplay on defense very well and did a great job this way against Arkansas, one of the quickest teams that you'll see."

Duke's speed is the Blue Devils' most talked-about quality, but the Wildcats are wary of their board strength headed by teenage terrors Mike Gminski and Gene Banks.

"Duke enjoys contact," noted Rick Robey, one of Kentucky's frontcourt players who enjoys dishing it out as well. "They're a tough, all-around team."

Digger Phelps, whose Notre Dame team meets Arkansas in the preliminary consolation game for third place, feels the championship game will be decided in three areas.

"The team with the least turnovers, the most rebounds and the best foul shooting at the end will win," said the Irish coach.

The Wildcats, who won four NCAA championships under the legendary Adolph Rupp, will be making their seventh appearance in the finals. Duke will be making its second appearance in the NCAA championship game, never having won the title.

Of course none of these historical elements will have much of a bearing on the title game. The Blue Devils will be playing with the exhuberance of kids on a lark, the Wildcats with the grim determination of men on a mission.

Starting Lineups

Duke

Jim Spanarkel(34) 6-5 junior guard — The elder statesman of the youthful Blue Devils, Spanarkel is considered Duke's finest defensive player ... highly intelligent ... a floor leader as well as play-maker ... scored 30 or more points four times this year and once hit 32 straight from the foul line.

Gene Banks(20) 6-7 freshman forward — Nicknamed "Tinkerbell" because of his grace and effervescent personality, Banks proved himself one of the greatest freshman in the country by averaging almost 17 points and nine rebounds per game ... possesses a variety of moves ... loves to dunk ... also capable of scoring from long range ... scored in double figures 23 times during the regular season while fouling out just once ... a key to the Duke hopes.

Mike Gminski(43) 6-11 sophomore center — One of the brightest collegiate athletes in the nation, he graduated from high school a year early and still is just 18 years old ... Duke's top rebounder, with more than 11 per game, while scoring almost 20 points ... will have the burden of battling Kentucky's strong, experienced big men ... possesses a deft touch inside but can also hit from long range.

John Harrell(22) 6-0 sophomore guard — Not a great shooter, except at the foul line, where he hit 32 of 40 this year for an .800 average ... value lies in his ball-handling and defensive prowess ... rang up 29 steals this year.

Kenny Dennard(33) 6-7 freshman forward — Started every game as a freshman and was third in assists with 57 and second in steals with 38 ... shoots seldom, but accurately ... hit .545 percent from the field this year and averaged almost nine rebounds ... a fiery competitor who's been known to let his aggressiveness get him in foul trouble.

Kentucky

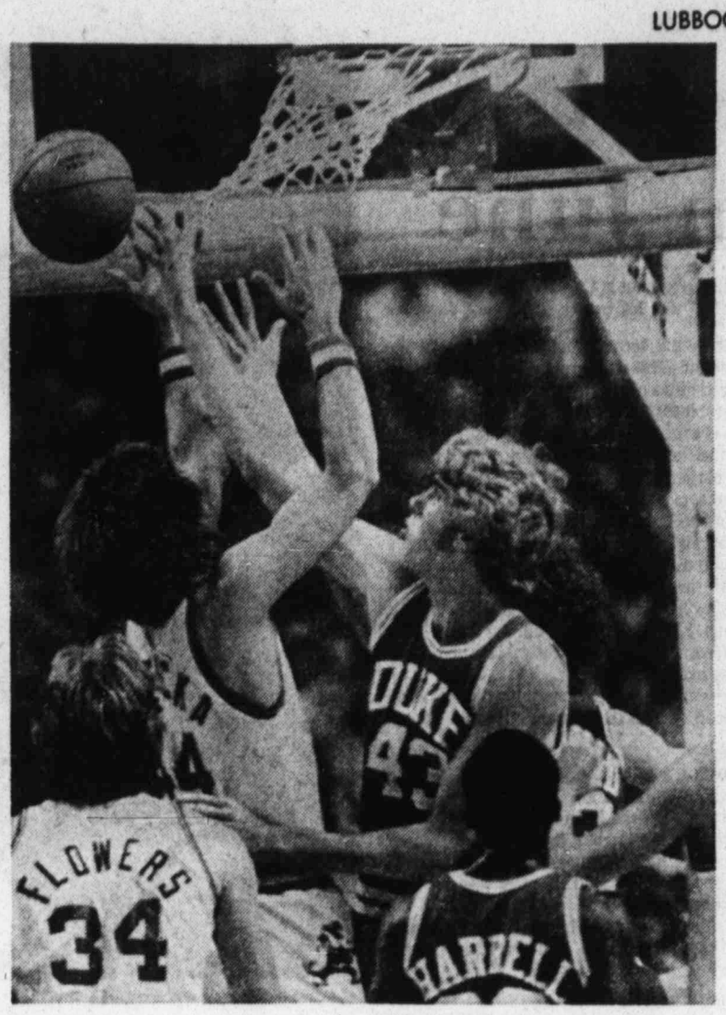

Jack Givens(21) 6-4 senior forward — Will cap a brilliant college career against Duke ... a three-year starter and Wildcats' No. 2 all-time scoring leader ... strong and quick, the southpaw-shooting Givens led the Wildcats this year with 17.7 points per game and was second with 6.7 rebounds and 72 assists.

Rick Robey(53) 6-10 forward-center — A streaky player who was disappointing the first half of the season and sensational the second half ... did not play up to expectations in the semifinal game against Arkansas ... extremely agile for a big man, he handles the ball almost well enought to be a guard ... was Kentucky's second-leading scorer with 14.8 per game and top rebounder with 8.4.

Kyle Macy(4) 6-3 sophomore guard — A slick ball-handler who can get hot and dominate a game ... possesses one of the surest touches at the free-throw line in the nation, missed setting a Kentucky record with one miss in his final game ... his 13-point scoring average was third on the team and he hit almost 55 percent from the field ... set school assist record in first 25 games with 156.

Mike Phillips(55) 6-10 senior center — One of the most agile big men in the game, Phillips shot a blistering 59.9 percent from the field ... loves to hook, and can do so with either hand ... Like Robey, blows hot and cold, but played well against Arkansas ... being counted on to help the Wildcats dominate Duke on the boards.

Truman Clayter(22) 6-1 junior guard — Has battled Jay Shidler neck-and-neck all year for starting job at guard ... averaged only seven points, but dished out 61 assists ... would seem to be overmatched against Duke's Jim Spanarkel.

Gminski No Joke With Blue Devils

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Then there's the one about the 6-foot-11 Polish guy who reads books and magazines to stay current on Polish jokes.

Nobody wants to tell him one to his face.

But Mike Gminski, Duke's phenomenal 18-year-old center, loves them anyway.

"I collect Polish jokes," he said Sunday on the eve of Duke's NCAA championship against Kentucky.

"If you can't laugh at yourself you can't laugh at anything."

Duke's opponents this year saw little humor in the 591 points Gminski scored against them or the 302 rebounds he hauled in while establishing himself as one of the top centers in the nation.

In Saturday's semifinal match with Notre Dame, Gminski, battling the rough-and-tumble one-two punch of Bruce Flowers and Bill Laimbeer, poured in 29 points. His matchup against Kentucky's equally robust Mike Phillips and Rick Robey looms as one of the most fascinating sidelights in Monday night's nationally televised national finals.

"Notre Dame was very tough, very physical, and I expect Kentucky will be ready to mix it up too. But that's the way basketball is, expecially underneath the boards. Guards are out in the open where the officials can keep an eye on them. But we (centers) aren't so easy to see."

Had he followed the normal course of human development, Gminski would just now be completing his freshman campaign. But after his junior year at high school, he decided to rush things and, cramming two years of academic achievement into one, graduated from high school at the age of 16.

"For one thing, I kind of wanted to avoid all the pressures of big-time recruiting, but mostly I was in a hurry to play major college basketball."

The transition offered him little challenge. He carries a B-plus grade average in addition to starring in athletics.

At the age of 11 most observers were predicting a career in footbal for him. That year he won the national Punt, Pass and Kick competition at the Pro Bowl in Los Angeles.

"But I kept growing," he laughed, "and I decided my knees were too inviting a target for those short, heavy-set football players."

Kentucky knows that Duke has little depth at center and may devise strategies to put Gminski in foul troubles. If they get him to foul out, it will make a grand total, in his high school and college career, of one.

"I've had four fouls on me twice in college," he said. "It's just a matter of finesse and staying with the flow, the tempo of the game and the officiating. I go into every game with a lot of confidence."

As if his physical tools were not already ample, he figures he's still growing — about a quarter of an inch a year.

Four years from now, will anybody want to walk up to a seven-foot Gminski and tell him the latest Polish joke?

McGuire Recalls NCAA Cage Tourney Victory

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "The NCAA championship was my moment on the stage," said Al McGuire. "That's the thing you work for. For me it was like a happening. It was like destiny, you know? That sounds like a phony word but I really believe it. It's something I'll never forget."

McGuire knows what Kentucky's Joe Hall and Duke's Bill Foster are going through as they prepare their clubs for Monday night's title game. He was there one year ago wih a Marquette team that many, including McGuire, felt could never capture college basketball's top prize.

But win they did, providing a Cinderella finish to McGuire's coaching career. Today the scrappy street kid from Brooklyn hands out business cards identifying him as "Alfred J. McGuire, Vice Chairman of the Board" of Medalist Industries Inc., manufacturers of athletic equipment. And he moonlights as a commentator on NBC's college basketball telecasts.

Last year in Atlanta McGuire prepared for the biggest night of his career by getting away from it all.

"I just got on my motorbike Monday morning and took off," he recalls. "I drove out into the country. The wind, the smells, you got the helmet on so nobody knows you. You can fade out. I looked for antiques, I love stained glass. I just didn't want to be in the atmosphere of sports.

"To be a success you've got to be rested, you know? You can't get involved all the time with everything. I can't worry about getting my suit pressed or where to get tickets for someone. I can't be bothered with getting the oranges for halftime.

"You go crazy with all that stuff. I just got away."

McGuire got back to town in time to soak in a hot tub — "I just like to let the water run" — then went for a long walk out by the Omni, site of the championships.

"I walked about two miles," he said. "I ate by myself. The team ate somewhere else. I got to the gym late. I was always the last one. I can't let one of my players come in late and I sit around and wait. I never allowed that. I'm supposed to be the star so I come late. I mean, you're graduating and I'm staying so I have to be the star."

What kind of a pep talk did he give his players?

"I told them 'everyone you ever knew is gonna be watching tonight, your old girl friend, your CYO coach, everyone.' I said, 'You can't relive the past so don't have any excuses. I don't mind losing but I don't want any excuses."

Once he made it out to the floor of the Omni, McGuire made an effort to keep cool.

"I sat on the bench by myself and kind of hung my arm over the railing, you know, with my fingers dangling real loose like I didn't have a care in the world. I figured I might intimidate the opposition and take some pressure off our guys. You don't want to spread tightness around your ballclub. If you're tight, they'll be tight.

"Then, during the Natonal Anthem, I said to myself 'Be a coach, not a spectator' and 'Don't miss the obvious.'"

McGuire didn't miss much, obvious or otherwise, and after the game, the NCAA title safely tucked away, he wept openly. "It was a very emotional thing, you know? It was a dream and it came true. What can I tell you?"

Afterwards, after the cheers and the interviews and the praise and the handshakes, McGuire remembers going out to the parking lot for the bus ride to the airport.

"The thing that was very special after the game was the bus ride. I've always wanted to sit in the front of the bus and that's where I wanted to sit.

"I always made it a point to sit in the front when I was a coach. After the game I told my wife, Pat, I wanted to stay over in Atlanta because Milwaukee would be a zoo after we won. But I changed my mind. We walked out to the bus and it was mobbed. I mean people were standing in the aisle. But they left the frony seat empty for me.

"That was it. The dream had become a reality, you know?

"You take that last ride to the airport, and then you gently pack it away."

Cats Hold Edge In Tradition

ST. LOUIS (AP) — In more ways than one, Kentucky is the grizzled veteran compared to the youthful newcomer Duke in Monday night's NCAA championship game.

Top-ranked Kentucky is making its sixth appearance in a title game, while the Blue Devils have appeared only once and didn't win.

The Wildcats, in their tradition-rich basketball history, won four of their six title games.

Under the legendary Adolph Rupp, the Wildcats won the NCAA in 1948, '49, '51 and '58. Rupp's teams whipped Baylor 58-42 for their first title and later downed Oklahoma State 46-36, Kansas State 68-58 and Seattle 84-72.

In 1966, Rupp's Wildcats bowed to Texas Western, now Texas-El Paso, 72-65, and in 1975 a UCLA powerhouse defeated Kentucky 92-85.

Duke will be making only its second appearance in an NCAA title game. In 1964, the Blue Devils were drubbed by UCLA 98-83.

Blue Sought

SUN CITY, Ariz. (AP) — Pitcher Vida Blue is being fined $500 a day for his absence from the San Francisco Giants training camp, a Giants spokesman said Sunday.

Public information spokesman Ralph Nelson said the fine was imposed Saturday after the ace left-hander did not turn up for practice.

Blue has worked out with the Giants only once since he was acquired from the Oakland A's 10 days ago. Giants officials have no idea where he is, Nelson said.

Evert Stymies King

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — U.S. Open Champion Chris Evert won her first tournament of 1978 in just over an hour with a 6-0, 6-4 triumph over Billie Jean King Sunday to garner the $20,000 first prize of the $100,000 Women's Pro Tennis Tournament at the Palestra.

It was the second week in a row Evert has topped King. Last week, in her first appearance after a four-month layoff, Evert defeated King in the semi-finals in Boston before losing to Evonne Goolagong in the finals.

King, who has won seven matches in 20 outings against Evert in her career, came back strong in the second set after loosing all the games in the first set.

Evert, 11 years younger than her 34-year-old opponent, captured the opening game after 18 points when King double-faulted twice in succession and netted a backhand drop shot.

The Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., native took the set on the second set point with a forehand down the line past the charging King.

Lengthy exchanges marked the second set as King attacked in the forecourt while Evert stayed back, delivering deep, sharply-angled passing shots, particularly from her two-handed backhand.

Evert broke service in the fifth game, forcing King into four straight errors to lead 3-2. Neither player could break service and King drew within 4-5 in the ninth game behind two straight aces down the middle.

Lemons, Foster Honored

ST.LOUIS (AP) — Duke's Bill Foster and Abe Lemons of Texas was named Sunday as co-coaches of the year by the National Association of Basketball Coaches.

Foster led the Blue Devils to the Atlantic Coast Conference championship and into the finals of the NCAA playoffs this year. Lemons' Texas team won the National Invitation Tournament last week.

Phil Ford, key figure in North Carolina's vaunted "four-corner offense," had been announced previously as the winner of the NABC's Eastman Award as the country's top collegiate player.

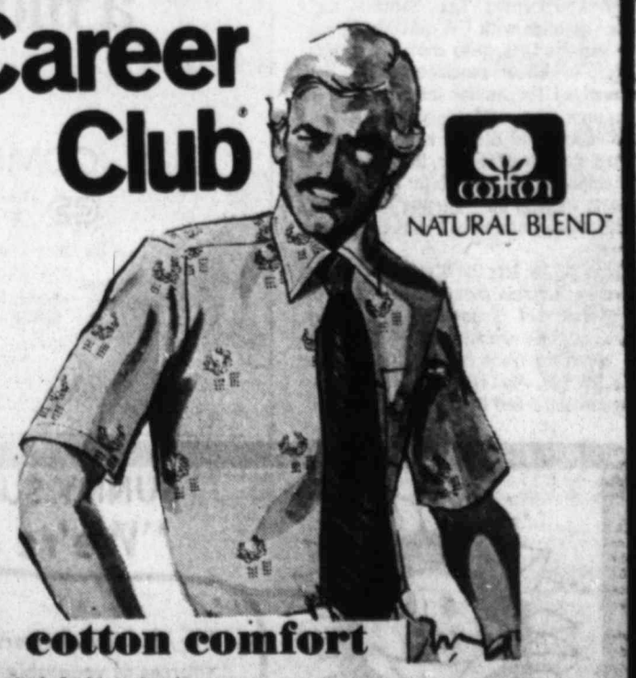

A hustling floor leader, the 6-foot-2 Ford broke the all-time North Carolina scoring record in his senior year, scoring 625 points for a career total of 2,290. Along the way, he was credited with 172 assists for another Carolina career high of 753.

In addition, the NABC selected John Chaney of Cheyney (Pa.) State as Division II coach of the year and Dan McCarrell of North Park (Ill.) as Division III coach of the year.

The awards are sponsored by the Eastman Kodak Co.

Norton, Holmes Set To Square Off In June

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Promoter Don King smiled like a cat who knew he had the mouse cornered. Someone had just joked that it was rumored he was going to make a title match between Larry Holmes and Ken Norton, the World Boxing Council heavyweight champion.

"In June," said King at a party following Holmes one-sided decision victory over Earnie Shavers Saturday.

"It would be on a Monday night in prime time," said Sid Gathrid, vice president in charge of entertainment for Caesars Palace. He added that ABC, which televised the Holmes-Shavers fight, wanted Holmes-Norton "but they might be outbid by NBC."

"Tomorrow," said Holmes when asked when he wanted to fight for Norton's share of the championship. Leon Spinks is still recognized as champion by the World Boxing Association, and he is headed for a rematch against Muhammad Ali in September.

"We'll fight whoever the WBC tells us to," said Bob Biron, Norton's manager, who attended the Holmes-Shavers fight with Norton.

If the WBC rules that Norton's first defense must be against the highest available contender, it will be Holmes, who was ranked No. 5 before his bout with the fourth-ranked Shavers.

The WBC now recognizes Norton's split 15-round decision win over third-ranked Jimmy Young last Nov. 5 as a title match and has ruled Norton's first defense does not have to be against Young. Of course, Spinks and No. 2-ranked Ali are not available.

"Ken Norton is the champion," said Holmes, now 27-0 as a pro. "Let Ken Norton live up to his status. I'm ready."

Biron said Norton is also ready. "There's bad blood between them," said the manager. "He (Holmes) talks too much," said Norton.

Holmes was brillant in his victory over Shavers in the nationally televised 12-round bout at Caesars Palace.

His biggest problem was his trunks. They split down the middle of the seat in the second round and between the fourth and fifth rounds, his cornermen huddling around him, Holmes changed into a new pair.

He was had no problems the rest of the way against Shavers, a puncher who is a threat until the final round.

"I just fought the toughest man I ever fought," said Holmes. "He hits harder than Norton, I feel. He do punch hard, but I can take a good punch. But that dude takes somes punches, don't he."

Shavers, frustrated and wild, pushed to desperation in the final rounds, took countless jabs, uppercuts, hooks, counters with both hands. In the closing seconds, a right hand sent Shavers into an awkward curtsy, his right knee staying off the canvas by an inch. Earnie came back up, but was in deep trouble in Holmes' corner as his tormentor slammed home six clean shots to the head.

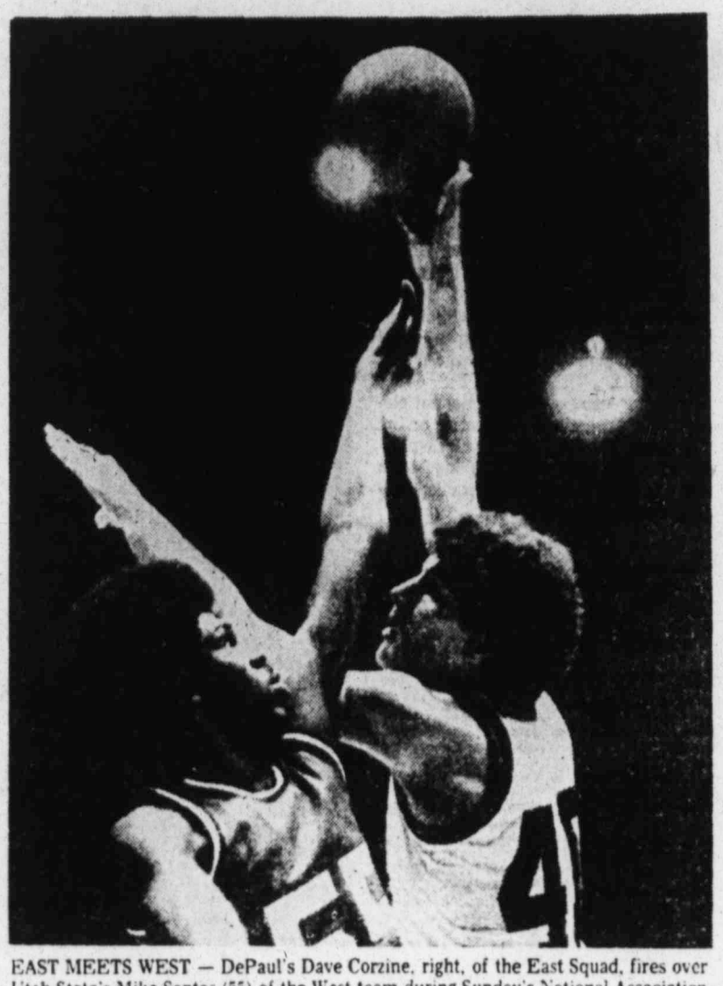

Clang. The bell saved Shavers but it probably didn't rescue the 33-year-old Ohioan's status as a major factor in the heavyweight division.

"Larry Holmes won the fight ... no doubt about it," said Shavers, who went 15 rounds in a losing title bout to Ali last Sept. 29. "You haven't seen the last of me yet," added the aging slugger who people don't fight if they don't have too.

Both men came out of the fight marked. Shavers was cut under the left eye in the fifth round. Holmes was cut over the left eye — cornerman Ray Arcel said by a butt in the eighth — and needed eight stitches. Holmes' corner did such a good job the wound was difficult to detect, and the cut never bothered Holmes.

Neither did the split trunks.

"I didn't care," he said about his faulty wardrobe. "I would have fought without trunks."

East Stars Win

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Marquette's Butch Lee went on an 18-point scoring spree in the last 11½ minutes and propelled the East past the West 93-87 despite a ragged performance in the 16th Coaches' All-Star basketball game Sunday.

The performance by Lee, the game's most valuable player with 29 points, steadied the East after the West overcame a 13-point deficit in the early minutes of the second half.

East Coach Frank McGuire rested the 6-foot-1 Lee, the collegiate player-of-the-year, as Bradley's Roger Phegley and Texas Tech's Mike Russell spearheaded a West surge after South Carolina's Coley Augustus gave the East a 50-37 lead.

Oregon State's Rickey Lee made a steal and a slam dunk that lifted the West to a 64-62 lead with 10:45 left.

Two foul shot by Kansas' Ken Koenigs and a shot from underneath by Rickey Lee provided the losers with a 68-65 edge before Butch Lee, began his late-game surge.

The game's MVP, who scored 1,735 points during his Marquette career, hit on 12 of 19 shots from the floor against a West team hobbled by 35 percent shooting.

Russell totalled 15 points, Phegley 14 and Portland State's Freeman William's 12 for the West, which was unable to take advantage of 27 East turnovers.

Butch Lee drove the East to a 10-4 lead with six points in the opening minutes, but his teammates needed the 12-2 surge midway through the first half to take a 44-33 lead at intermission.

Retired Marquette Coach Al McGuire directed the West squad, which employed a full-court press with a good degree of success while his former star pupil, Butch Lee, was off the court.

Foyt Nabs 'Easy' Victory

ONTARIO, Calif. (AP) — No. 1 qualifier A.J. Foyt, leading all but a handful of laps, took an easy victory in Sunday's 200-mile U.S. Auto Club stock car race, which finished under caution due to a three-car pileup on the final lap.

A 200-mile Indianapolis car race, in which Foyt also was scheduled to compete, was on the schedule later in the day.

Foyt, showing no ill effects of a shoulder injury he suffered in last month's Daytona 500, motored off from the rest of the 30-car field at the start to take his second victory in as many starts this season on the USAC circuit.

Jim Thirkettle, who spun out early in the race, fought his way to third at the end. He was elevated to second place, however, because second-place finisher Ivan Baldwin was penalized a lap — down to eighth place — for passing Foyt during the race-ending caution. Defending champion Jim Insolo was credited with third.

Parnelli Jones, making his return to oval track racing for the first time in a decade, finished an impressive ninth. He lost a lap early in the race due to a mixup during a pit stop. He ran side-by-side most of the race with sixth-place runner Dave Decker.

Foyt led all but eight of the 80 laps around the 2½-mile Ontario Motor Speedway oval, giving up the front only briefly while making regular pit stops. He was never passed on the track.

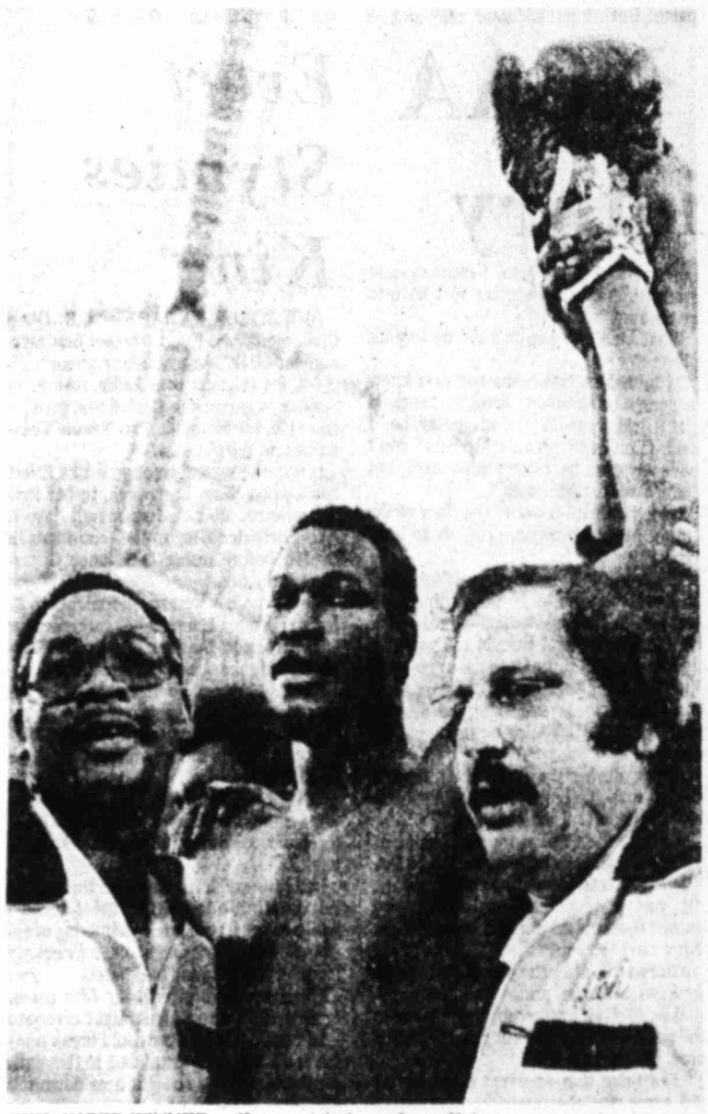

Foyt, driving a Chevrolet Camaro, averaged 122.938 mph in his 34th career USAC stock victory, moving him within one of second place on the all-time win list. The record speed for the distance is about 4 mph faster.

Foyt set speed records at every 10-lap interval in the race until just past the halfway point when frequent caution periods for minor spins and debris forced the average down.

Vail Dealt

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Outfielder Mike Vail, who once batted safely in 23 consecutive games, was sold by the New York Mets to the Cleveland Indians Sunday for an undisclosed amount of cash.

Vail, who was batting .143 this spring, became expendable because the Mets have a surplus of outfielders, with Steve Henderson, Lee Mazzilli, Elliott Maddox, Ken Henderson, Tom Grieve, Bruce Boisclair and Ed Kranepool all fighting it out for the three starting spots.

NT Boss May Reach Decision

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — North Texas State basketball Coach Bill Blakely was expected to say today whether he wants the coaching job at the University of Wyoming.

Wyoming Athletic Director George C. McMarty said Sunday that Blakely returned to Denton, Tex., Saturday night after meeting with UW officials. He said he expects Blakely to contact him Monday. No other candidates have been scheduled for similar interviews at the Laramie campus, McCarty said.

McCarty said Blakely had not been offered the job. However, he said, further attempts to find a coach for the Cowboys would depend on "whether or not he's particularly interested" in the Wyoming post.

Don DeVoe left the Wyoming coaching spot earlier this month to coach at the University of Tennessee. Jim Carey, coach at the University of Nevada at Reno, withdrew from consideration for the job for "personal reasons" after expressing initial interest in it.

Ellen Burstyn, Alan Alda Team Up In Movie Comedy

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Why do Ellen Burstyn and Alan Alda insist on being interviewed together?

"Because we both hate to do interviews," explains the actress. "At least if we do them together, we can entertain each other during the process. Besides, there is so little time. I leave my hotel at six in the morning and generally I don't leave the studio until 7:30 in the evening. I'm in bed by nine."

"I have a different impression on why we do joint interviews," added the actor. "It's just that we're working so hard on becoming the two characters we're playing that we want to stay tuned in to each other. By interviews together we can continue that process."

An interview did not seem high on their list of fun things to do, but Burstyn and Alda submitted dutifully during a lunch break at Universal Studio. They are virtually the total cast of "Same Time Next Year," which Walter Mirisch ("West Side Story," The Apartment") is producing and Robert Mulligan ("To Kill A Mockingbird,""Summer of '42") is directing.

Burstyn is repeating the role she created in the Broadway version of Bernard Salde's play. She appeared for nine months.

"It's an unnatural thing to play the same role every night for nine months," she admitted. "How you manage it depends on the actor's dedication. Some care, and that makes the work easier. Fortunately, I was doing the play with Charles Grodin, who cared."

Alda had the opportunity to appear in "Same Time Next Year," but couldn't accept because of his television duties in "M*A*S*H."

"I would like to have played it, if only for a few weeks," he said. "I think that would have helped me more explore the nooks and crannies of the character."

The plot of "Same Time Next Year" sounds like the concoction of a television comedy writer, which Bernie Slade has been. A New Jersey accountant and an Oakland housewife meet once a year for 26 years at a Northern California inn for a weekend of sex and self-searching.

It could have been merely a spicy comedy about long-run adultery, but Slade gave it much more. The conversation reflects the shifting morals and the national tragedies of the years 1951 to 1977. Produced in 1975 by Morton Gottleib, who is co-producing the film, the play is still running in New York.

The play had only the two leads onstage. Other people will be seen in the movie.

"We do go outdoors for a walk and we go to the dining room, where we say good evening to the waiters," Burstyn explained. "Also, we see Chalmers, he is sort of the manager of the inn. But otherwise it is just Alan and myself."

"Two character movies are not so unusual," Alda added. "There was 'Sleuth,' and 'The Fourposter' and that one about the two gays living together ('Staircase')." Also "Hell in the Pacific" with Lee Marvin and Toshiro Mifune.

"But do you know something?" said Burstyn. "Many people who saw the play told me they didn't think of it as having only two characters. It was more like six characters, because of how the two people changed in different periods of their lives and of our history."

Ellen Burstyn and Alan Alda had met briefly 10 years ago, but did not become acquainted until they joined for "Same Time Next Year." They rehearsed for a week in New York and another week here before leaving for locations at Mendocino, Calif.

"But we also rehearse before each scene, and in some ways the takes are rehearsals too," the actress added. Mulligan is filming in sequence, so the pair can age naturally.

"Alan looks the best when he is older," Burstyn observed. "I don't think that's fair."

BURSTYN AND ALDA — Ellen Burstyn and Alan Alda in a scene from Universal's movie version of the Broadway hit, "Same Time Next Year," a riotous romantic comedy about a love affair between two happily married (but not to each other) people who meet clandestinely once each year for 26 years. CAROL BURNETT — "I have very mixed emotions," Carol Burnett told the audience at the end of taping her final show recently. "This is like graduation. It's a sad time and a happy time." Miss Burnett's last show will be aired as a two-hour special at 7 p.m. CST Wednesday. (AP Laserphoto)

Abductions Stymie City's Tourist Drive

ZAMBOANGA CITY, Philippines (UPI) — A rash of kidnappings is threatening government efforts to revive tourism in Zamboanga, long known as the "city of flowers" in the Philippines.

The latest abduction-for-ransom was that of Pierre Huguet, 59, an official of the French ministry of culture in Paris, who came to Zamboanga on a holiday with his wife.

Huguet was taking photos of the houses on stilts in Zamboanga Bay when he was pushed into the water by three men, pulled into a boat and held captive for two weeks.

The Frenchman was released unharmed but authorities said the $150,000 ransom was not paid, although his kidnappers would be reimbursed an unspecified amount for "board and lodging."

Huget's kidnappers claimed to be members of the Moro National Liberation Front, which has spearheaded a Moslem secessionist rebellion in the southern Philippines over the past 5½ years.

The intermittent fighting has killed more than 70,000 persons, made half-a-million others refugees and all but turned Zamboanga, a major seaport and tourist center 500 miles south of Manila, into a virtual war zone.

Only four months ago, the rebels had threatened to attack Zamboanga, where the armed forces southern command is headquartered, and the city was crammed with troopers.

Tanks and armored personnel rumbled down the city streets. Troops were shuttled off to the city limits, and there were barricades and checkpoints in many places in the city.

But now the state-of-siege image is being removed.

The military claims it has been successful in its pacification drive against the Moslems who had resisted attempts at integration in the 400 years of Spanish rule, half a century of American occupation and the Japanese imperial forces in World War II.

Col. Cirilo Bueno, chief of the par-military Philippines constabulary and the Internal Defense Command of Zamboanga, attributes the new atmosphere to the successful "police actions" — a euphemism for search and destroy operations against the rebels.

Civilian authorities are mapping plans to revive tourism in Zamboanga. The city of 300,000 has been swept clean. Sidewalks and plazas have been given a fresh coat of whitewash. The venerable "Lantaka hotel by the sea" is adding a new wing to meet a hoped-for tourist influx. A casino has been opened at the Zamboanga Plaza, a newly constructed fivestar hotel nestled on a hill four miles from downtown Zamboagna.

The peace and order situation had improved so greatly that authorities last month lifted a midnight to 4 a.m. curfew.

But what is threatening to undo the tourism effort is the occasional attacks by guerrillas to kidnap tourists for ransom. Since 1975 eight Japanese, one British woman and a South Korean have been abducted. All were subsequently released unharmed.

There are tourists who are unfazed by these reports. As one French tourist who came in with a group from France after Huguet's abduction put it, "There probably are more kidnappings in Rome and Italy than anywhere else."

Washington Exhibition To Celebrate Lafayette

WASHINGTON (AP) — The fourth most popular figure of the American Revolution, if one is to judge by the number of cities, counties and towns named after him, is not an American but the French Marquis de Lafayette.

In tribute to his and France's contributions to this country's independence, the National Archives, with the cooperation of Cornell University, is opening to the public on Wednesday an exhibition entitled "Vive la Liberte: The Marquis de Lafayette on Two Continents." It will continue through Sept. 6.

More than 70 documents and objects will be on view, most of them lent by Cornell, the largest repository of Lafayette memorabilia in the world, surpassing any in France. It totals more than 10,000 items.

Lafayette was born Sept. 6, 1757, and christened Marie Joseph Paul Yves Roch Gilbert du Motier. He was the scion of one of the richest families in France. He gained his title after his father died when he was 2. His mother and her relatives died when Lafayette was 13; he was then reputed to be the richest noble in France. He also married into a wealthy family, but spent one-fourth of his fortune in support of the American cause.

Lafayette came to what is now the United States in 1777, asking only that he be allowed to serve as a volunteer and at his own expense. He was only 19, and had never been in battle.

Now there are more than 100 towns, cities and counties named for him, not to mention countless streets and parks, including one across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House. In such tributes, he is surpassed only by George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin.

The exhibition at the Archives is under the patronage of the French ambassador, Francois de Laboulaye, and the Cornell Club of Washington, an alumni group.

Females Run Egyptian Communication Industry

CAIRO (AP) — "I am television," Tamader Tawfik, perched behind a massive desk piled high with papers and manipulating a battery of telephones, declared. From her eighth-floor office overlooking the Nile, the 57-year-old dynamo with charcoal grey eyeshadow and heavy gold earrings directs a television staff of 4,500.

Three flights down, in another executive suite overlooking the Nile, 51-year-old Safia el Mohandis sorts out the problems of Egypt's 10 radio stations and a staff of 4,000.

The two women have risen to the top in the state-owned Egyptian electronic media in a part of the world where women have long been expected to defer to men, in a profession dominated world-wide by male decision-makers.

"It's a hell of a job," said Miss Tawfik, who has been president of Egyptian television for seven months. "I go into 2 million homes. Ten million people see me every day. People don't go out at night like they used to. They sit at home and watch me."

She was speaking figuratively, for she appears infrequently before the cameras. "Sometimes they drag me to a studio to ask me silly questions and get silly answers, like, 'What is happening to the Egyptian song? Is it going downhill? What am I doing to encourage new songwriters?"

"I never escape. Never! Does anyone who works in television ever escape? I go home at night and turn on two television sets and watch both channels.

"It is not easy, being head of television. The public! The Egyptian public! They tell me what they like and what they don't like. We are poor, we are uneducated, but we are very critical. And the poorest, the most uneducated, he is the most critical of them all," said Miss Tawfik, whose broadcast career spans three decades as announcer, newsreader, director and administrator.

She left radio in 1959 to help prepare for Egypt's entry into television in 1960. Before becoming president of television, she was secretary-general of the Union of Egyptian Radio and Television, which she described as a secretariat for Egyptian radio and TV and their engineering and commercial sections.

"I was snatched from there in spite of my better judgment, despite my likes and dislikes," she said with theatrical gestures and comical moans, not quite convincing anyone that she is not thriving on her new job.

Egyptian television has two channels, both government-controlled, which carry soap operas, old movies, concerts and sports in Arabic and news in Arabic, French and English. In addition, each night there is usually one American program, such as "Policewoman" or "Wagon Train," and one foreign film, usually American, British or French.

But although Egypt is a television pioneer in the Arab world and exports its programs to other Arab nations, Miss Tawfik envies the technology of American TV.

"When I was in New Yorkme equw what they have there. I'd like to see Egypt have the same equipment as CBS, ABC and NBC. I'd like to be able to charter a plane and just go. I'd like to have a ground station for a satellite and have the money to put a decent news bulletins on the air," she said.

Both Miss Tawfik and Miss Mohandis, president of Egyptian Radio, entered broadcasting as radio announcers and newsreaders in the late 1940s. Both graduated from Cairo University with degrees in English literature and were spotted by radio scouts while starring in Shakespearean plays presented by the university.

They were the first women announcers on Egyptian radio.

Today, about 65 percent of the 8,500 radio and television staffers are women. Women newsreaders and announcers outnumber men about four to one. But three decades ago, the first female voices on radio caused quite a stir in this Moslem country.

"All the people said, "Oh, there is a woman on the radio," Miss Mohandis said. "The sheikhs (religious leaders) said, 'It is illegal,' but it was not, of course not."

Miss Mohandis worked half a dozen years as a newsreader, "and then, as they say, I went up the stairs step by step until I reached the ... " she chuckled, leaving the sentence unfinished. In 1976 she became president of Egyptian radio, succeeding her husbandn Mohamed Mahmoud Shaaban, when he retired.

Miss Mohandis, a soft-spoken woman who wears softly tailored clothes and heavy-rimmed glasses, still tapes women's programs which are aired for half an hour every day.

She oversees the 10 channels of Egyptian radio, which include news channels, a religious channel, the "European channel" which plays Western music and broadcasts news in English, French, German, Italian and Greek throughout Egypt, the Voice of the Arabs, which beams to other Arab nations, and international broadcasts in 25 languages which reach Africa, Asia, Europe and the Americas.

Asked why women outnumber men in Egyptian broadcasting, she replied: "You see, our people are university graduates. Most of the men who go to the university go into the army for two years or more after graduation. I think that is why the female made an invasion into radio and television."

Miss Tawfik agreed and added, "The economic situation forces the women to work, because you can't get married and open a house on a single man's pay."

Both Miss Tawfik and Miss Mohandis earn about $4,000 a year, which seems low compared to television salaries in the United States. But in Egypt, where the average annual wage is $250, $4,000 is a good salary. Both women said they earn as much as a man would in the jobs.

Housewife Arrested In Chemical Attacks

OKEMOS, Mich. (UPI) — Chemical sabotage of homes and cars in this affluent Lansing suburb over the past three years may have been the work of a mother miffed about her children's music grades, authorities say.

Rosetta N. Reusch, 47, a mother of three, has been arrested in the latest of a series of incidents involving 20 Okemos families.

The link, police said, is music: all the victims were music teachers or students and most of the attacks occurred during musical events.

"If she is the one who did all this, you can create a pattern," Assistant Prosecutor Daniel McLellan said. "These were children who beat out her children for seats higher in the Okemos High School orchestra."

Mrs. Reusch is a microbiology research assistant at Michigan State University. Her husband, William, is an MSU chemistry professor.

Mrs. Reusch is accused of breaking and entering with intent to commit a felony at the home of Duane Smith, music coordinator for the Lansing school system.

Police said the woman was carrying a bag of powdered chemicals when she was surprised last Friday by Smith, who apparently anticipated the attack even though his home had not previously been victimized.

While his family was attending a music recital, Smith waited in his darkened, two-story colonial house. He reportedly took a photograph of the startled prowler.

Smith's two teen-agers hold the first chairs in the cello and viola sections of the Okemos High School orchestra.

At least 100 chemical incidents have been reported by Okemos families over the past three years.

Generally, chemicals were poured into the air and heating systems of cars and homes. Sometimes, powdered chemicals were dumped randomly about the houses or automobiles.

Police said several dangerous chemicals — including zinc, lead, arsenic and powdered mercury — were used in the attacks.

Although no one in the families was injured, two automobile mechanics working on one of the victim's cars were overcome by toxic fumes and had to be treated at a hospital.

Mrs. Reusch was arraigned Thursday — her birthday — and released on a $1,000 personal recognizance bond. If convicted, she could be sent to prison for 15 years.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By SAM SHULSKY

Q. In recent years we've heard a lot about "second tier" stocks and the theory that the old-line blue chips are finished. Do you subscribe to that?

A. I don't subscribe to any board scale generalizations about the stock market, except -perhaps -that the stock market will fluctuate; that it is as cyclical as hemlines on women's dresses; that it is a market of passing fashions (computer stocks one year, photo copiers the next, boat stocks the next, cable TV the next, etc. etc.); and that very often the time to 'buy 'em" is when nobody seems to want em.

As to blue chips: they, too, are subject to cyclical influences -both as to their market acceptance and as to their managements' ability to cope with their product market. It isn't likely that you'll lose your skirt in a blue chip -but you can hang around with it an awfully long time at no profit (and, often, at little dividend reward.)

However, it is no secret that many blue chips are now out of favor -and for that reason, if for no other, deserves some attention. First Albany Corp., A N.Y. Stock exchange member firm, points out that the 1973-4 market decline resulted in an average price drop of 41 percent in 30 popular growth stocks. Further, that even during the 1975-6 market recovery, few of those stocks were able to match their previous 1972 highs when they had enjoyed a price earnings ratio of 48.4 times earnings. In fact, at year-end 1976 they had inched back only to a p-e ratio of 18.3. Even though some have outperformed the market since then, the combination of more recent market price pressure and higher per share earnings has lowered the p-e ratio even further to a recent 13.8 times earnings.

First Albany's list of stocks:

American Home Products, American Hospital, Avon, Black & Decker, Burroughs, Caterpillar, Chesebrough Pond, Coca Cola, Corning Glass, Digital Equipment, Disney, Dow, Eastman Kodak, Halliburton, Hewlett Packard, IBM, International Flavors, Johnson & Johnson, K Mart, McDonald's, Merck, Minnesota Mining, National Semi Conductor, Philip Morris, Polaroid, Procter & Gamble, Schlumberger, Sears, Texas Instruments, Xerox.

And finally (of course) the inevitable disclaimer: It's not my list. I am NOT recommending purchase tommorrow morning. I am NOT predicting recoveries to 1972's pre multiples.

Simply -they are all quality issues.

On Credit Unions: The treasurer of a mid-West university's credit union writes (and most appropriately):

"In responding to a question about determing the soundness of a savings institution, you wrote: '... if it is insured by FDIC, FSLIC or a strong state insurance program...'.

"All federally chartered credit unions and the majority of state chartered ones are insured by the NCUA, an agency of the U.S. Government comparable to the FDIC and FSLIC."

Fair enough. And to pursue the matter further, the Credit Union National Association, 1617 Sherman Ave., Box 431 Madison, Wis., 53701, is a source of credit union information for any reader desiring same.

Q. We have accumulated about $17,000 worth of E bonds and wonder whether these should be exchanged for new E bonds. We plan to retire in a year or so.

A. DO NOT swap E bonds. All E bonds now outstanding are "alive" and earning interest at the rate of 6 percent a year. If you cash in old E bonds to buy new ones (there is no "exchange") you would have to pay income taxes on past interest accruals in the old Es. What's the point in doing that?

Heartline

HEARTLINE: I worked in the railroad industry and I presently draw my railroad retirement benefits. I am 66 years old. I have seen that the Social Security recipients can now earn more money and still receive their full benefits. Will people on railroad retirement get the same earning restrictions as those on Social Security? F.L.

A: Yes. Those railroad retirement annuitants subject to earnings restrictions (generally, retired employes and spouses who are also qualified for Social Security benefits and almost all survivor annuitants) can earn more before work deductions are made in 1978. Annuitants age 65 or over earn $4,000 in 1978 before work deductions are made; for annuitants under age 65, earnings of $3,240 in 1978 are allowed before deductions are made.

For annuitants over age 65, the annual exempt earnings amount increases to $4,500 in 1979, $5,000 in 1980, $5,500 in 1981 and to $6,000 in 1982.

HEARTLINE: I started drawing Social Security retirement benefits at age 62. I have been drawing benefits for 14 months. Now I have an opportunity for an exceptionally high-paying job, which will last for three years or four years. Can I stop drawing Social Security retirement now and start drawing again three or fours from now? F.R.

A: Yes, you may suspend your Social Security retirement benefits for the duration of your new job. But your age 62 reduction will NOT apply when your benefits resume after your high-paying job ends.

When a retired person age 62-64 recieves no monthly benefit or only part of a monthly benefit due to work deductions, these months are no longer counted at age 65 and a new reduction factor is computed. In your case, if you are 65 or older when you start drawing benefits again, your benefit would only be reduced by the 14 months you receive benefits and not 36 months. Thus, at 5/9 of 1 per cent per month, your benefit would only be reduced 7.8 per cent and not 20 per cent.

On top of this, your high earnings up to the year you stop work will be included in your benefit increases, depending on how high the earnings actually were. You should notify Social Secutity as soon as you start this job so that you are not paid benefits for your months of work, and then nofity them again when you stop.

HEARTLINE: I am going to be 65 years old this year. I have been drawing Social Security for three years now. When I turn 65, I will become eligible for Medicare. I am very undecided about buying a supplemental health insurance policy for Medicare. I am in excellent health and have not been to the doctor (except for a yearly checkup) in about 20 years. Everything I read says that a person's income and desires should dicatate whether they buy an insurance policy. Do you think a person's present state of health should have some bearing on this? K.F.

A: In some cases, health would be a determing factor, but normally you can be taking a big risk by letting your current state of health dictate when you buy a health insurance policy. Your health can change rapidly, and once you become unhealthy, it is then very difficult, if not impossible, to get health insurance and even more difficult to get a good Medicare supplement.

There are some Medicare supplements which will cover you for all preexisting health conditions immediately. Some people have been lucky enough to find such a policy after their health turned for the worse. Others have been less fortunate and have lost their life savings, home and all they worked for during their entire lives.

It is our opinion that even a person who is presently in very good health can still benefit from having health insurance. As we stated earlier, it can be risky and later on very expensive to not have a health insurance policy.

Heartline has developed a book on purchasing health insurance. Heartline's Guide to Health Insurance can be purchased for $1.50. Send your order to: Heartline, P.O. Box 11934, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Please allow six weeks for delivery.

Two Wolfforth Seats Contested

WOLFFORTH (Special) — Four persons will be vying for two positions on the Wolfforth City Council in the April 1 election.

Pat Turner, Kevin A. Hutson, George T. Scott and Melvin L. Powers are vying for seats held by Donald Preston and Michael Dunavant, both of whom chose not to run for re-election.

In the mayor's race, Bill Prestidge, a 56-year-old printer, faces no opposition. Kenneth Gene Patterson Jr. withdrew from the mayor's race March 10, citing a "conflict of interest." Patterson is employed by Southwestern Public Service Co.

Mayor James Vardy chose not to run for re-election.

Prestidge, a retired teacher, served on the Wolfforth City Council from 1972-1974.

Mrs. Turner, 32, is owner and operator of Pat's Place here. She is a member of the Wolfforth Volunteer Fire Department, secretary of Little Dribblers and president of the Wolfforth Softball League.

Hutson, 28, is an auctioneer and real estate broker for Herb Henderson Auctioneers and Associates. He is a member of the Wolfforth Lions Club.

Scott, 56, is an emergency maintenance technician for the Lubbock Independent School District. He was in the military 20 years and served in World War II, the Korean War and in the Vietnam War. He has lived in Wolfforth since 1968.

Powers, 50, is owner and operator of Powers Jewelry here. He has been director of the Wolfforth Lions Club for the past thee years. The Slaton native has lived in Wolfforth three years.

Naval War College To Open Museum

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — A former city poorhouse, which became the first building of the Naval War College, will soon be opened to the public as the college's museum.

Among the manuscripts on display will be an 1869 diary kept by Alfred Thayer Mahan, the school's second president and one of America's greatest naval strategists.

Several World War II naval heros will be memorialized in busts sculpted by Newport's Felix deWeldon, creator of the Iwo Jima memorial at Arlington National Cemetery.

The college was established in 1884, when Commodore Stephen Luce succeeded in getting the Navy Department to found a training center. Luce became the college's first president.
