Child detonates police grenade

ARLINGTON (AP) — An 11-year-old boy was treated for minor injuries received when he detonated a grenade dropped by police in his neighborhood.

Arlington police spokesman Dee Anderson said the boy was treated for superficial burns and marks from gravel that apparently hit the child when the grenade exploded on the ground.

One of the department's tactical sergeants accidentally dropped it Monday night when officers chased a suspect in the neighborhood, Anderson said.

Anderson said the grenade is a diversionary device meant to distract a suspect. He said the grenade has a small powder charge to make a loud noise and a flash.

"It's like a large firecracker," said Anderson.

When the suspect jumped from the second-story window, the sergeant took off his vest to chase the suspect and the grenade apparently fell from it.

No fatalities in plane evacuation

DALLAS (AP) — Five passengers aboard a Delta jet received minor injuries during the plane's evacuation at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

The plane was evacuated Tuesday because the jet's captain thought an engine might be on fire.

However, no fire existed and a turbine malfunction was the cause of the problem, said Henry Conley, Delta spokesman.

The 140 passengers and eight crewmen on the Boeing 727 bound for Seattle, were evacuated just after noon when instruments indicated a possible fire in the Number 2 engine, Conley said.

Airport police, fire and medical personnel responded, Angel Biasatti, airport spokeswoman said.

Tough times forcing Robstown to sell city hall

ROBSTOWN (AP) — For sale:

City officials struggling to beat a $1 million budget deficit are putting the building up for sale.

"When you have to do it, what can you do?" asked mayor Julio Garcia.

City council in the community of

13,000 just west of Corpus Christi approved the City Hall sale Monday, along with a $2.9 million budget and a long-term management program.

Garcia said he did not know anyone who wanted to buy the building but also said he was confident a prospective buyer could be found. City Secretary Ricardo Rodriguez previously suggested eliminating his own job to lower deficit spending by the city, but council members rejected the idea.

Putting City Hall up for sale has been one of the options in cost-cutting proposals at city budget workshops during the past few weeks.

"That's tough," Rodriguez said recently about the possibility of selling the building. "When you sell your home ... it's a bitter pill to swallow. It's a genuine sacrifice."

The sale of the building is expected to bring more than $197,000, according to final budget projections.

The mayor said merging the administrative offices would give the city an opportunity to mend a rift that developed two years ago when the utility system sued the city over who controlled the utility system's collections.

Richards says she's closing gap on Williams

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Democrat Ann Richards repeated her call for tougher regulation of the insurance industry, and said she is narrowing the lead her Republican opponent holds with only three weeks left in the governor's race.

Richards also agreed Tuesday to be interviewed by a panel of reporters on "Decision '90," a television special produced by KERA-TV in Dallas. The announcement came a day after Williams agreed to a separate half-hour interview by the same panel.

The State Board of Insurance,

Richards said Tuesday in Brownsville, relies too heavily on insurance companies for rate-setting data.

The Insurance Board's rate figures should come "from their own employees, not from the employees of the insurance industry itself," she said.

Republican Clayton Williams has been endorsed by The Independent Insurance Agents of Texas.

Williams in Houston on Tuesday

joined two other Republican candidates for statewide office in calling for limits on the terms of legislators and state administrators.

He appeared at the Empire Broom and Mop Manufacturing Co. with lieutenant governor candidate Rob Mosbacher and attorney general hopeful J.E. "Buster" Brown.

"We are going to make a clean sweep on the ballot in November," Williams said while pushing a broom across the broom and mop company's warehouse. "We're going to sweep out the Austin insiders."

Richards, however, said she is closing in on the lead Williams has commanded in the polls.

A recent Gallup poll commissioned by several Texas media organizations shows Richards has closed to within 5 percentage points of Williams.

The telephone poll of 1,006 registered voters shows 45 percent supported Williams, with 40 percent supporting Richards.

Fifteen percent of the voters said they were undecided.

"And we are going to peak on election day and win this race for governor," she said.

Richards on Tuesday picked up endorsements from 34 South Texas mayors.

In other developments Tuesday: • GOP lieutenant governor candidate Rob Mosbacher promised to serve no more than two terms if elected next month. Joining the call for limiting terms of statewide officeholders, Mosbacher said, "Holding office must, once again, be what it was originally intended — as a public service. When it becomes a lifetime career, then our elected officials are driven more by what is required to stay in office than what is in the best interest of the state of Texas."

• Bob Bullock, the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, suggested that his Republican opponent, Mosbacher, debate GOP gubernatorial hopeful Williams over plans to expand the state welfare department. "Williams has cited the welfare department — where Mosbacher is chairman of the board — as an example of needless fat in government with its 15 layers of management and managers who manage only two people," said a statement issued by Bullock.

• The largest statewide law enforcement organization endorsed Democrat Dan Morales for state attorney general and dismissed criticism from his Republican rival J.E. "Buster" Brown that he doesn't have enough courtroom experience to handle the job. Ron DeLord, president of the 8,500-member Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas, said Morales was best qualified to represent the state in court battles over education and prisons.

• The Univision television network released results of a poll on the Texas gubernatorial race. The Oct. 5-8 survey of 406 Texans, with a margin of error of plus or minus 4.5 percentage points, showed Williams leading Richards by a 56 percent to 36 percent margin.

Nobel science awards announced

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Two Americans and a Canadian won the Nobel Prize in physics today for finding the first evidence of quarks, and an American won the Nobel in chemistry for developing simpler ways to make complex chemicals.

Americans Jerome I. Friedman and Henry W. Kendall and Canadian Richard E. Taylor showed that protons and neutrons, once thought to be fundamental particles, were made up of smaller components called quarks. Quarks are now believed to be basic building blocks of matter.

American Elias James Corey won the prize in chemistry for research that simplified the production of plastics and other artificial fibers, paints and dyes, pesticides and drugs.

The Swedish Academy of Sciences, which awards both prizes, said theories and methods developed by Corey "have contributed to the high standards of living and health and the longevity enjoyed... in the Western world."

New civil rights bill clears Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civil rights leaders plan a fresh appeal to President Bush after a major bill to combat job discrimination cleared the Senate, but without the support needed to overcome his threatened veto.

"I am convinced this bill will have the effect of forcing businesses to adopt quotas in hiring and promotion," Bush said Tuesday. He said that if the measure reached his desk, he would "be compelled to veto it."

The Senate on Tuesday night approved the measure, 62-34, short of the two-thirds support that sponsors would need to override the threatened veto.

Fifty-three Democrats and nine Republicans joined in supporting the measure, while 34 Republicans were opposed.

Civil rights forces said they could count on the votes of three absent senators and thus needed only two more to reach the 67 required for an override. But the roll call revealed that despite many concessions they had gained no new support since July 18 when an earlier version cleared, 65-34.

The House was due to vote today on the bill, which would effectively overturn six Supreme Court decisions handed down last year. It has been the civil rights movement's top priority on Capitol Hill in recent months.

The administration and business critics of the bill say employers would adopt quotas as a ready-made defense in case they were taken to court. Sponsors of the bill scoff at this notion.

Children barred from courtroom

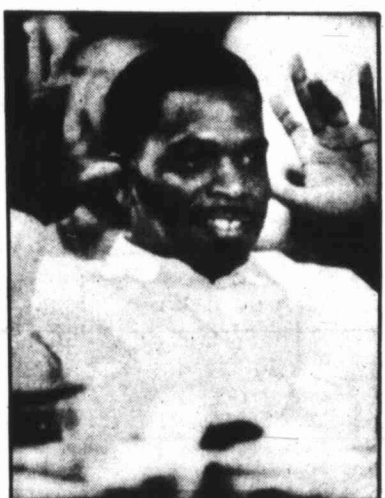

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Sheriff's deputies are under orders to check IDs at the courtroom door to keep youngsters from listening to the obscenity trial of the rap group 2 Live Crew.

Broward County Judge June Johnson also ruled Tuesday that jurors cannot have transcripts of the raucous adults-only concert last June that prompted the rappers' arrest and set up a legal test of the limits of free speech.

Instead, they'll have to try to make out the dirty words on a murky audio tape of the 45-minute concert that police tried with little success to enhance.

Johnson closed the trial to observers under age 18, to the disappointment of some fans.

"I listen to 2 Live Crew in the car and at home but now they say

LUTHER CAMPBELL

I can't listen to it in the courtroom," 13-year-old Lisette Lopez said after she and four friends were told to leave.

Campaigners use new fund-raising tactics

WASHINGTON (AP) — Political fund-raisers are asking voters to do more than mail in their checks as Election Day draws near.

GOP Senate hopeful Claudine Schneider is sending out fund-raising letters by certified mail — a method which requires the addressee to sign for a letter or make a trip to the post office if no one is home at the time of delivery.

A Republican group has been mailing voters $25 checks which, if cashed, entitle the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee to withdraw $12.50 from the recipient's bank account every month.

New gimmicks for financing elections are hitting the campaign trail as the old standby, direct mail, is bringing in fewer returns.

"The universe of contributors is shrinking and voters are becoming more skeptical about what arrives in their mailboxes," says Art Kropp, president of People for the American Way. "There is such desperation out there, everyone is looking for the magic bullet."

But some of these bullets are backfiring.

Schneider's mailing drew complaints when recipients arrived at the post office and discovered the letters were part of a fund-raising drive. One woman was so angry she immediately wrote out a check to Schneider's opponent, Democratic Sen. Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island.

The check-cashing scheme brought a lawsuit against the Republican committee when the daughter of a 76-year-old woman in Alabama complained that her mother had been prepared to cash the check without examining it.

The committee agreed to discontinue the practice, but the checks prompted complaints around the country and officials in New Jersey and Illinois have filed suit.

"People are looking for more ways to make money," says Howard Schloss, spokesman for the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee. "But you can't mislead or fool the voters, that's crossing the line from being creative to being deceptive."

Some campaign strategists hoping to capture voters' imaginations — and their money — are using technology to advance their cause.

Sen. Joseph Biden's challenger, Republican M. Jane Brady, recently sent videotapes to 40,000 homes in Delaware — a tactic that's catching on in areas where voters are likely to own VCRs. Brady's cost was about $75,000, and that's cheaper than advertising on television.

"Even respectable campaigns are looking for the hot new thing," says Kropp, "and the 900 number seems to be it." He adds, however, that that strategy, too, has raised legal questions and is unlikely to replace direct mail.

Palestinians boycott Hurd meeting

JERUSALEM (AP) — Palestinian leaders today boycotted a planned meeting with British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd and denounced Israel's refusal to accept a U.N. investigation of last week's Temple Mount killings.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir has appealed to President Bush to "put the Temple Mount incident behind us" but again rejected a United Nations probe of the killings at the sacred site, a spokesman said today.

The Security Council voted unanimously on Friday to condemn the fatal police shootings of 19 Palestinians on Oct. 8 on Jerusalem's Temple Mount. The resolution ordered a three-member investigation team to be sent to Jerusalem.

The appeal to Bush to repair torn U.S.-Israeli ties came in a letter sent after Shamir's Cabinet turned down the U.N. probe, said Shamir spokesman Avi Pazner.

Israel's refusal to meet a U.N. investigating delegation has increased tension in U.S.-Israel relations, but a senior official said Israeli leaders were privately seeking a compromise.

Gorbachev introduces fourth plan

MOSCOW (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev's plan for switching to a free market economy backs off from the 500-day timetable embraced by the Russian republic, whose leaders condemn it as an attempt to preserve Soviet bureaucracy.

Gorbachev's 66-page compromise blueprint, introduced Tuesday, is at least the fourth in a confusing and complicated series of plans for salvaging a failing economy.

It would transfer to the 15 Soviet republics much of the authority now exercised by the central government in running the nation's economy, free many prices from government regulation and allow private ownership of businesses.

But it sets no timetable for switching to a market system, putting Gorbachev on a collision course with Boris Yeltsin and other leaders of the country's largest and most populous republic — Russia.

They have already endorsed the most radical plan put forward for scrapping communist central planning and converting to a market-based economy and say they'll begin implementing it on Nov. 1.

The plan, which includes the 500-day timetable, is named after its chief architect, economist Stanislav Shatalin. It differs from Gorbachev's plan in several key respects.

Defeated general's funds frozen

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — President Elias Hrawi's government has ordered local banks to freeze defeated Gen. Michel Aoun's funds and is also seeking to have his deposits abroad frozen, a newspaper reported today.

The prestigious An-Nahar, which attributed the report to unnamed government officials, did not disclose further details.

Police said government and Syrian troops were moving back into Aoun's former enclave in the Christian heartland to consolidate control of the 80-square-mile area northeast of Beirut that is home to about 150,000 people.

No fighting has been reported since Saturday, when the forces bombarded Aoun out of his headquarters and sent him fleeing to the French Embassy.

Gas. It's A Natural For Reliability.

America's reserves of natural gas are vast. Unlike oil, which increasingly comes from foreign sources, virtually all of our natural gas is produced right here in North America.

From an environmental standpoint, gas is the cleanest burning of all fossil fuels. Increased use of gas can help reduce atmospheric pollution such as acid rain. So, gas can be relied upon to help clean up the environment.

What's more, gas is a reliable way to save money on heating your home and providing other forms of household energy. For example, over five years a gas water heater saves on average, hundreds of dollars in energy costs. In addition, natural gas heats water faster than electricity.

Finally, gas is always readily available. Think about it. When is the last time your natural gas went off?

Crisis in relationship

The crisis in the Persian Gulf has propelled the United States and Israel down diverging paths. The recent slaughter of at least 21 Palestinian demonstrators on Jerusalem's Temple Mount has served only to broaden the gap between American and Israeli interests.

Because of the Israeli government's deplorable handling of this tragedy, it may mark an unfortunate turning point in America's special relationship with the Jewish state.

The bloodletting on the Temple Mount was avoidable, regardless of whether the rioting was spontaneous or cleverly engineered by the Palestine Liberation Organization.

For both Moslems and Jews, the Temple Mount is a sacred spot. Consequently, demands by Jewish militants to build a temple at the site of the Al Aksa Mosque provided emotional fury for the 3,000 Palestinian demonstrators who hurled rocks and bottles at Jewish worshippers gathered at the Western Wall below.

Plainly, the violence was instigated by the Palestinians, who bear ultimate blame for sparking this episode.

Yet the Israeli authorities surrendered the moral high ground by recklessly employing lethal force for crowd control (instead of the water cannons, rubber bullets and tear gas that have been used so effectively on hundreds of other occasions).

After the Israeli police opened fire with live ammunition, more than a score of Palestinians lay dead and more than 100 were injured — the heaviest one-day casualty toll since the Palestinian intifada began nearly three years ago. There apparently were no injuries among the Jewish worshippers, who fled the scene before the police shooting began.

Senior officials of the Israeli government greatly compounded this affront to human decency by defiantly proclaiming it to be fully justified. Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir defended the brutal police assault as necessary to counter "a Satanic scheme." Such comments underlined the moral double standard that equates all Palestinians with terrorists in the minds of many Israelis.

There is evidence that the riot was orchestrated by the PLO, perhaps at the behest of Saddam Hussein, Iraq's calculating dictator. If in fact Saddam planned the incident to drive a wedge between the United States and its Arab allies in the Persian Gulf, his strategy proved extraordinarily successful.

It also proved extraordinarily injurious to Israel's already battered reputation around the globe.

In the vital effort to contain Saddam's aggression, Washington has staked everything on the support of a frail coalition of Arab states. Israel's use of excessive force to smash the Palestinian demonstration on the Temple Mount has threatened to fracture the anti-Iraq coalition. To shore up strained Arab support for U.S. policy in the gulf, President Bush promptly condemned the Israeli action and is pushing for a balanced resolution of censure by the United Nations Security Council.

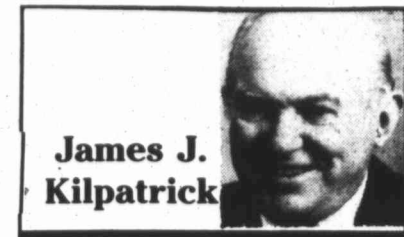

The crackdown on the Temple Mount played right into the hands of Arab extremists, forcing the United States to choose between its new Arab allies and its old friend, Israel. For the Bush administration, the choice was clear. For the Jewish state, the long-term implications of pursuing a path that diverges increasingly from that of the United States are grim indeed.

By JAMES J. KILPATRICK
WASHINGTON — When a reporter interviews a source and reports statements as direct quotations, what is the reporter's ethical responsibility? Must the quoted words be exactly what the person said?

Those of us in the news business grapple with the question all the time. Now the U.S. Supreme Court will have a go at it. The high court last week agreed to review a long-pending libel suit against The New Yorker magazine. The suit turns on precisely this issue.

Attorneys for Dr. Jeffrey M. Masson, a renowned psychoanalyst, put it this way: "The question is whether, and to what extent, the First Amendment protects the publication of deliberately altered and manufactured quotations that are attributed to and defame a public figure."

The suit stems from a two-part article that appeared in the magazine in December 1983. Masson had been fired as projects director of the Sigmund Freud Archives. Janet Malcolm, a freelance writer with excellent credentials in the field of psychiatry, asked and was granted a prolonged interview. She taped their formal conversations over an extended period and made notes of their other, casual talks.

James J. Kilpatrick

After the interview appeared, Masson sued for libel. He charged that the quotations attributed to him made him appear "unscholarly, irresponsible, vain, lacking in honesty and moral integrity."

A U.S. District Court in California granted the magazine's motion for summary judgment. Last February the 9th U.S. Circuit affirmed by a divided vote.

This was the kind of thing complained of. Malcolm quoted Masson as saying he had changed his middle name from Lloyd to Moussaieff because "it sounded better." What Masson actually said was, "I just liked it."

Within the arcane realm of psychoanalysis, the place of Sigmund Freud is paramount. Malcolm quoted Masson as saying that Freud was guilty of "moral cowardice." What he actually said was that Freud was "a man who just lost his courage."

More to the point of libel, Malcolm quoted Masson on an aborted invitation to live in Anna Freud's house in London: "I would have made it a place of sex, women, fun." What Masson actually said was, "I would have had some fun."

Malcolm quoted Masson as saying that Anna Freud and Kurt Eissler regarded him as "an intellectual gigolo." In their eyes, "You get your pleasure from him, but you don't take him out in public." What Masson actually said was: "They felt I was a private asset but a public liability. They liked me when I was alone in their living room."

For purposes of summary judgment, the rule is that a plaintiff's charges must be taken as true. Thus the lower courts assumed that Malcolm had in fact deliberately altered the direct quotations she attributed to Masson. The larger issue was whether these alterations were significant. Did they rise to the level of "actual malice," that is, did The New Yorker publish the material with knowledge that it was false, or with reckless disregard of whether it was false or not?

In throwing out the suit, the 9th Circuit found that the alterations were fair. The quotations attributed to Masson were "rational interpretations" of what he had said. The quotes did not alter "the substantive content."

On the most serious complaints, the court looked at the whole record. Masson may not have described Anna Freud's apartment literally as a place for "sex, women, fun," but the taped interview abounded with his boasts of sexual prowess. Masson claimed to have bedded a thousand women before he became a psychoanalyst.

The court agreed that Masson had not said on tape that he was regarded as an "intellectual gigolo," but the vivid comment appeared in Malcolm's notes. Further, the tape contained numerous statements that were the substantive equivalent of "intellectual gigolo." In any event, to call a public figure an intellectual gigolo is not defamatory.

Judge Alex Kozinski filed a devastating dissent. In his view, quotation marks count. They convey a publication's pledge that a person actually said what he is directly quoted as saying. These are the speaker's own words; they are not words put in his mouth by a reporter. To trifle with this rule is to open the way to wholesale distortion.

I have been a reporter for more than 50 years. Judge Kozinski's uncompromising rule is the best rule. Except for the most minor editing, we ought to put in quotation marks only those words that actually have been spoken. Otherwise, at a substantive level, we aren't reporting facts. We're writing fiction.

The creation of a work of art

By BILL AYRES
City Editor

When I was growing up, I was fortunate to have a grandmother who wanted all of us to develop a taste for what she called "the finer things in life."

She made sure the four of us learned proper manners when talking to adults. It was important, she would say, to know how to behave in public. The proper respect for one's elders was constantly stressed.

The woman had the patience of a stone. Imagine taking four children to a nice restaurant. You know the type, the customers have to be as nicely dressed as the waiters. The kind of place where they put your napkin in your lap, butter your baked potato and bring pepper in this big wooden deal, called a mill. Really nice. Maybe "plush" is a better word.

Anyway, she never had any trouble with us. Frankly, if I remember right, we were too scared to move, let alone, get in to any trouble.

Some of my better memories are of my grandmother taking me to a concert, a show or the ballet. I was privileged because I was the oldest. Thus, I was the most civilized.

On special occasions, my grandmother and I would go to the art museums. There were always exhibits featuring a known artist, or the work of a rising young artist.

Being young, my idea of viewing art was to see as many as possible in the shortest amount of time, and head to the next gallery. Why waste time, the paintings weren't going anywhere.

But not my grandmother. Her

For what it's worth

idea of viewing art was to sit and look at the paintings. Can you imagine, "Sit!"

Well, I have to admit it was nice. Museums are quiet and you can sit and study the works of art. Before too long I discovered something unique about the paintings. They seemed to have depth. The mountains in the background appeared to be far away. As you looked deeper into the painting, you seemed to be drawn in as well.

It felt like you were leaving the real world, being sucked into a fantasy world of pigment and canvas.

I did learn to appreciate the beauty of art, but I always felt one had to have some inner talent to be able to create something like that.

So I did the next best thing. I became a photographer. After all, I reasoned, all you had to do was push a button to capture the beauty of a landscape or sunset.

Painting had to be much more difficult. You had to know how to mix your pigments, how to blend your shades and tones, plus be able to take all that color and make it resemble something on a canvas.

In photography, nature supplied the colors and the film became the canvas.

Over the years I have toyed with the idea of taking art lessons, but never found the time. Of course I always found an excuse to put it off.

That was until last Friday. I was asked to participate in the Celebrity Paint-off. I agreed, but then panic began to set in. I didn't know how to paint. What was I going to do at this event, just sit?

I thought, maybe I can turn in a blank canvas and claim it's an igloo in the middle of a blizzard. Or maybe I could draw a happy face. Needless to say, I was very concerned. I didn't want to be the only one there to turn in something better suited for a dorm.

Anyway, I went to the pocket park, was handed a piece of canvas, a brush and a pallet with the basic colors. I was then instructed to sit down, paint a picture and have a good time.

Were they kidding? Not really. I sat down, took a few moments to consider what I might do and then put the brush in the paint.

The next thing I knew, I was blending colors to get the shade I thought looked best. I couldn't believe it, I was painting.

Time flew, and yet stood still. While I was concentrating on the canvas, nothing seemed to matter around me. I was merging with the canvas.

I finished the project and sat there when one of the local artists helping at the park said, "sign it." Sign it, my lord. Sign it. He looked at me with a smile and said, "That is an original, there will never be another, so be proud and sign it." And I did, because he was right.

The finished product may never hang in any gallery or on someone's wall, but it is an original. I painted a picture I wish my grandmother could see it.

And that's for what it's worth!

'Never-ending funeral'

DEAR ABBY: They call Alzheimer's disease "the never-ending funeral," and since my husband has been going on for a long time.

He no longer recognizes me, and it is still heartbreaking to go to see him in the wonderful place that now takes good care of him.

But I am free, for the first time in years, to try to lead a somewhat normal life. Therefore, it was with great happiness that I read your column and found that you addressed a very real problem that involves many caretakers who are still married, but really have no spouse.

Bless you for your upbeat and non-judgmental attitude for people who have finally found a little companionship and happiness after so much sorrow and loneliness. No one can truly understand the depths of despair that goes with caring for one of these victims of this dreadful disease. Any small amount of happiness should be theirs no matter what the neighbors or unfeeling family members think. — THE LONESOME CARETAKER

DEAR CARETAKER: Thank you. I needed your support. Many wrote to express a critical view of my "unfeeling" attitude, but those few who "blessed" me were caretakers who knew firsthand the loneliness and heartbreak of one who is married but has no spouse.

DEAR ABBY: Please keep encouraging your readers to go back to their class reunions.

In 1922 (yes, Abby, 68 years ago), I dated a pretty girl when we were both in high school in Mitchell, S.D. We never saw each other again until 1974, when we met at a college class reunion. I lost track of her until last fall, when she read in a college alumni bulletin that I had lost my wife. Coincidentally, she had lost her husband four years ago.

She called me to chat. I called her back to chat some more. We exchanged several letters and got even better acquainted. More phone calls. (Our telephone bills were outrageous.)

To make a long story short, on July 14, these two 83-year-olds got hitched, and we plan to have as many years together as the good Lord gives us. — TEEN-AGERS AGAIN IN CALIFORNIA

Trial attorney shares wild game and seafood recipes

By LYNN HAYES
Lifestyle Editor

The sixth annual Big Spring Woman's Club's Cooking School, conducted Thursday evening in Garrett Hall at First United Methodist Church, raised nearly $1,000 to be donated to various non-profit organization's throughout Big Spring, said Donna Tune, ways and means chairman.

More than 100 people were entertained by trial attorney Drew Mouton who prepared seafood and wild game recipes and shared a few of his culinary tips. He was assisted by his wife, Glynn, also a practicing attorney.

Guests feasted on smothered doves and rice, baked duck, baked fish fillets, fish in vermouth, seafood gumbo, hot pineapple jelly and french bread.

"This year's cooking school was a lot of fun. It was different," Tune noted. "Drew kept the audience entertained throughout the evening."

This week's Recipe Exchange includes dishes served at the cooking school.

AL'S SMOTHERED DOVES

18-24 doves
Salt and pepper
Flour
1 cup chopped onion
3 to 4 cups hot water
3 tablespoons Worcestershire Sauce
1 teaspoon Tabasco sauce
1/2 teaspoon Louisiana Red Hot Sauce
1 cup red wine
Rice

Salt and pepper doves and roll in flour. Brown birds thoroughly in hot grease, then remove from skillet and brown one cup chopped onion. Replace browned doves and add 3 to 4 cups hot water, 3 tablespoons of Worcestershire Sauce, 1 teaspoon Tabasco and 1/2 teaspoon Louisiana Red Hot Sauce. Cover and cook on medium heat approximately 15 minutes, then turn fire down and add 1 cup red wine and simmer until tender, approximately two hours. Add water if needed to give gravy desired consistency. Serve with rice.

BAKED DUCK

2 ducks
Dry mustard
Kitchen Bouquet
1 large onion
1 celery stalks
6 cloves garlic

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Ducks are very fat and they are efficient self-basters. Wash and dry ducks and season inside and out with salt and pepper. Rub ducks with Kitchen Bouquet then coat with dry mustard to form a paste on the ducks. Fill the cavity with large pieces of onion, celery and garlic. Wrap both ducks together in extra-heavy foil, seal securely and leave space between ducks and top of foil. Place on a cookie sheet in 450 degree F oven for one hour, reduce heat to 300 degrees F and cook two additional hours. Cool 15-30 minutes before carving.

BAKED FISH FILLETS

1 fish fillets
Salt and pepper to taste
Paprika
2 lemons
1 stick butter
1/4 teaspoon Worcestershire Sauce
2 dashes Tabasco Sauce
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
Place fillets on greased cookie sheet, sprinkle with salt, pepper and paprika. Squeeze juice from one lemon over all fillets and let stand one hour. Melt butter, add juice from remaining lemon, Worcestershire Sauce and Tabasco Sauce in pot on stove. Place fillets in 350 to 400 degree F preheated oven. After 5-10 minutes pour hot lemon butter sauce over fillets, let cook about 10 additional minutes or until done. Turn oven to broil and cook for a few minutes to brown top slightly. Sprinkle with chopped parsley. Serve immediately.

FILLET OF FISH IN VERMOUTH

4 fillets
6 tablespoons dry vermouth
6 tablespoons butter, melted
2 teaspoons tomato paste
Salt to taste
1/2 teaspoon allspice
6 tablespoons heavy cream
2 teaspoons parsley

Place fillets in a well-buttered, non-stick skillet. Blend vermouth, butter and tomato paste, then pour over fillets. Season to taste with salt and allspice. Cook over high heat until fish flakes easily with a fork. Add cream and simmer gently for 2-3 minutes, shaking the pan continuously so that the sauce will thicken gradually. Place fillets on a warm platter and pour over sauce; sprinkle with parsley.

SEAFOOD GUMBO

First you make a roux: Mix together 1/4 cup bacon grease or oil and 2 1/2 cups flour. Brown slowly over medium heat, stirring constantly. Stir all over the bottom so it won't stick in spots. Roux is done when it is generally the color of peanut butter, which takes 30-40 minutes of constant stirring. When done, slowly add 2-3 cups of hot water, stirring constantly until all lumps are worked out. Next, stir in 4 cups chicken broth. Season with 3 teaspoons salt, 1/4 teaspoon black pepper, 1/8 teaspoon cayenne, or to taste. Add 1/4 teaspoon liquid crab boil. Turn fire to low and allow to simmer.

6-8 slices diced bacon
1 large onion, chopped
2 bunches green onions, chopped
2 cups celery, chopped
2 cloves garlic, pressed
1 cup parsley, minced
2 cans tomatoes, cut up, with juice
2 packages cut frozen okra

Fry bacon in heavy skillet until crisp; add onions, green onions, celery, garlic, and parsley and cook until done (5-10 minutes), then add to roux. Then add tomatoes and okra to roux. Continue to simmer at least one hour. Add crabs, shrimp, oysters or chicken and continue to simmer, (crabs — 1 hour; chicken, oysters or shrimp — 30 minutes). When making chicken gumbo, first boil cut-up chicken until tender, using enough water to get your chicken broth. When making oyster gumbo, strain and add the liquor to gumbo.

Thirty minutes before end of cooking time, add 1 to 3 tablespoons file. Serve over rice.

This dish is better the day after it is cooked, or after it has been frozen for a time. To freeze, stop when it is time to add seafood and file and freeze. When thawed and reheated to serve, add seafood, file and simmer for the necessary time. It is better to simmer it too long than not enough.

HOT PINEAPPLE JELLY

2 1/2 cups unsweetened pineapple juice
3/4 cup cider vinegar
5 1/2 cups sugar
1 teaspoon each: Red ground pepper, salt, onion powder, and beau monde seasoning

Blend above ingredients in large pot. Bring to boil and boil 8 minutes. Remove from heat and let stand 10 minutes. Add: 1 bottle Certo and 1/2 teaspoon yellow food coloring. Let stand another 10 minutes, then pour into seven 6-ounce jelly jars. Delicious with poultry, pork, ham, and all wild game.

BAKED EGGPLANT

2 eggplants
1 medium onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, pressed
Salt and pepper
4-5 slices bacon, cooked and crumbled
1 egg
1/4 cup bread crumbs

Peel and cube eggplant, removing as many seeds as possible. Cook in boiling salted water until tender. Drain, mash and set aside. Cook diced bacon until crisp; add onions and garlic and saute until limp. Pour contents and bacon into mashed eggplant. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Add beaten egg and 1/4 cup bread crumbs and mix well. Pour into buttered casserole. Add a thin layer of bread crumbs over top, covering thoroughly. Dot with butter and bake (about 30 minutes) in 350 degree F oven until golden brown

VENISON POT ROAST

1 venison ham or roast
1 stick butter
3-4 tablespoons Worcestershire
1 bottle beer
1 onion, chopped
1/2 bell pepper, chopped

Salt and pepper venison, then brown in hot skillet of Dutch oven (cast iron). Mix all other ingredients and pour over meat, cover and cook in 350 degree F oven with meat thermometer. Turn meat every 30-45 minutes. Meat is done when thermometer read 160 degrees F. Do not overcook. Remove meat, strain sauce and thicken with paste (flour or arrowroot).

New ant species finds sanctuary in office

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the World Wildlife Fund, Kathryn S. Fuller, has ants in her plants.

So do lots of people. But the insects Fuller noticed crawling across her desk last year apparently are a brand-new species, never before seen by ant experts.

This means scientists at the fund, which is dedicated to preserving wildlife and its habitat around the globe, have a new task right in their own Washington headquarters — making sure the ants survive.

The story began when E.O. Wilson, a zoology professor at Harvard University and a leading authority on ants, visited Fuller's office. Wilson, a World Wildlife Fund board member, had just completed an exhaustive work entitled, "The Ants."

Fuller asked Wilson to check out her ants.

"Ed's eyebrows just shot up when he saw them," Fuller says.

"He immediately identified the ants as members of the genus Pheidole, a neotropical group on which he has specialized. We traced the ants to their colony in a potted plant behind my desk."

The two collected some worker ants in a vial so Wilson could study them in his lab. Later he asked that some soldier ants be collected and sent to him at Harvard to aid in species identification.

"This is a very surprising find and certainly distinctive," Wilson said in a statement issued Monday by the fund.

If the preliminary results are confirmed by final taxonomic tests, WWF officials said, the new species could wind up being called "Fuller's Ant."

"I will feel a very personal sense of responsibility for these ants, whether or not they're named after me," the fund president said.

The potted plant where the ants live was a palm tree, identified by World Wildlife Fund botanists as a Dracaena reflexa. The ant colony could have come with the palm from Florida, or possibly was imported with another plant and migrated to the Dracaena in Fuller's office.

On advice from Wilson, Fuller is feeding the ants sugar water and apple cores, along with cheese, cookies and an occasional Danish.

Fund botanists have added to the planter with the host palm tree some neotropical flora that secrete a substance harvested by similar ants in the wild.

"I'm telling people I'm creating a complete tropical ecosystem in here," Fuller said. "It shows you how little is known about diversity in the world, how many species are unknown."

The World Wildlife Fund describes itself as the largest private conservation organization, with projects in more than 140 countries to protect wildlife and its habitat.

So its leaders are determined to save the ants.

"I've given the plant company strict instructions not to touch my plant," Fuller said. "The caretaker told me most of his clients want their plants ant-free. I was the first person to ever tell him to leave the ants alone."

Vets trained to treat pet fish

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Hooked on that pet fish of yours? Want to keep him in the swim of things as long as you can? Just send him to the fish doctor for a checkup.

More people are doing that these days, said Hugh Bishop, editor of Pets Supplies Marketing magazine, as word spreads that veterinarians can now treat fish with both solutions and shots and even perform surgery on them.

"Fish are obviously something people do develop an affinity for and would look for some help if they develop a problem," Bishop said.

He also noted that some people pay as much as $1,000 each for exotic fish.

John A. Shadduck, dean of Texas A&M's school of veterinary medicine, said fish studies have been added to his school's programs.

"It's part of our overall attempt to do two things: diversify veterinary medicine and address a societal need," he said.

Water everywhere — too much, say troops

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — When drillers first started looking for oil in the kingdom in the 1930s, King Abdul Aziz secretly hoped they would find water.

Talk to some of the U.S. soldiers required to quaff more than two gallons of water daily, and you get the impression they might prefer drinking gasoline.

"We kind of force them to drink it. They have no choice," says Capt. Kelly Marunale, 30, of Woodstock, Ill.

One of the first tasks of soldiers in the desert every morning is to collect a box of six bottles of water equaling a day's supply.

The rule still holds despite the easing in temperatures, down at least 15 degrees from the summer highs of 120 degrees.

Repeated inquiries on the number of bottles consumed by the 200,000 troops in the region were not answered by the armed forces.

But the average consumption of water per soldier in September ranged between five and 11 gallons per day, including showers and washing.

The expense and logistics of distributing the water — bottled water must be purchased — has prompted the military to begin using water taken from oasis wells and processed from the sea.

"Those plastic bottles are just a logistical nightmare if you haul yourself around," said Col. Dan Grigson, public affairs officer for the Army's 101st airborne division. "So we hope to wean soldiers off the bottle."

The troops have no great love for the chlorinated water produced by mixing the oasis water with chemicals in great plastic bladders.

"It's like drinking the swimming pool," said Sgt. Joseph Copley, 25, of Mansfield, Ohio.

Forced to guzzle their daily requirement, the water is a constant topic of conversation.

Even in the midst of night maneuvers, two soldiers were overheard discussing the subject.

"I drank that water for two weeks before they started putting in the chlorine and I never got sick," said one.

"It made you ugly," the other joked in answer.

"No, that came from eating MREs," said the first soldier, referring to the military's field rations called "meals-ready-to-eat."

Troops get packages of flavored powder such as lemon-lime or grape in the MREs which they dump into the water, but don't have enough to disguise the full ration. Sometimes they use the cocoa.

"Here it is 120 degrees outside and the water is so hot they would rather drink hot cocoa than hot water," said Marunale, a company commander with the Aviation Brigade of the 24th Mechanized Infantry Division.

The soldiers have started wrapping their bottles in socks or other clothing and putting them aloft to catch the desert breeze.

But dehydration is one of the main problems treated by field hospitals as soldiers are prone to ignore their daily ration.

The early media reports on the amount of water soldiers drank clearly made an impression back in the United States.

Ten-year-old Hannah Bergstrom of Loveland, Colo., wrote to an officer saying: "I wouldn't like to be in Saudi Arabia drinking six gallons of water a day, but I guess somebody has to do it."

Bullock says education must be improved

By PATRICK DRISCOLL
Staff Writer

Democratic candidate for Lt. Governor Bob Bullock said that if he had to choose the number one issue in Texas right now, he would say it is lack of a quality and efficient education system and equitable financing for it.

The state needs to accept more responsibility, including a larger share of financing of public education in order to help insure a long-term solution to an increasing prison population, as well as a well-trained work force to deal with new technologies, said Bullock, who faces Republican Rob Mosbacher, chairman of Texas Department of Human Services, in the Nov. 6 general election.

"For years Texas has basically neglected the school children of Texas. I want to see equity in the school system," said Bullock, a five-term state comptroller, during a press conference at Mid-

Continent Inn Tuesday afternoon. "To actually solve the problems that Texas has, is to turn them (students) into a bunch of opportunists."

The $528 million school refinance law passed by the Legislature in June in an effort to equalize funding for poorer school districts is not the solution, he said. A state district judge in Austin recently ruled the law unconstitutional.

If elected as the leader of the Texas Senate, Bullock said he would push legislation to have local school district property taxes lowered, more local control of schools, more flexibility for teachers and administrators and competitive wages and benefits.

Also, he said, pre-kindergarten should be expanded to include three-year-olds, summer vacation should be redistributed throughout the year to help the learning process and provide curriculum flexibility, and elementary students should advance by subject matter instead of grades for the benefit of students that are gifted and those needing extra help.

High school students should be allowed to begin taking college courses in the 11th and 12th grades and when students are ready to enter college, scholarships should be available to needy students capable of performing in college, he said.

"Education will be at the top of the list if Bob Bullock is elected lieutenant governor," he said.

Bullock, a member of the state's Select Committee on Tax Equity, does not deny or advocate increasing taxes but does say a well designed, long-range, system is needed. The current tax system is outdated, relying too heavily on industries such as oil and hard goods.

A sales tax should be broader-based, but still leave out food, medical care and shelter, he says. There should be incentives for investments, such as expanding trade zones.

"Business wants stability in government and a set, fair tax structure they can depend on," states a press release.

His ideas to assist state economic development include expanded funding for small business development centers located in state universities and seeking more federal funding and business partnerships for university research projects and the commercialization of products developed in laboratories.

On prisons, he said more are needed right now but the long-term solution is better treatment facilities and drug abuse education. "Texas has done precious little for drug and alcohol abuse," said Bullock, who himself has been a recovering alcoholic for 10 years. He said Texas spends eight cents per person compared to $1.50 in California for such programs.

But meanwhile, he said more prisons are needed for now and he supports funding 10,000 more beds when the Legislature meets this spring and another 16,000 in the next two years.

On health issues, Bullock says state officials need to seek federal funding to attract doctors to rural areas and assist rural hospitals in finding alternative revenues through such facilities as alcohol and drug treatment centers.

On the environment, he advocates the creation of a Texas Environmental Protection Agency, a state plan for dealing with chemical and oil spills and more investment in state parks.

Bullock, who has been endorsed by all seven major daily newspapers in the state, says he is very comfortable with his lead in the polls. A Gallup poll of registered voters Friday and Saturday shows him ahead of Mosbacher 52 percent to 38.

Board talks about excellence award

By MARSHA STURDIVANT
Staff Writer

The Coahoma Independent School Board held its regular monthly meeting Monday night and discussed the Governor's Educational Excellence Award, approved a junior high dance and appointed the text book committee for the 1991 school year.

The Coahoma Junior High was awarded $10,000 from the Governor's Educational Excellence Award. Principal Al Phillips will travel to Austin Oct. 20 to receive the award. A committee will be appointed consisting of teachers, parents, staff, Phillips and student representatives to consider how to spend the money. The only restrictions placed on the $10,000 is that it not be used to pay salaries or for athletics. Gary Rotan, superintendent, said.

Appointment of new board member Ricky Stone, who was named to replace Daryle Coates at a special meeting called on Sept. 21, was approved, as were the minutes of the special meeting. Stone will serve the remainder of Coates' term, which expires in May, 1991.

The Board also consulted with an attorney for an interpretation of statute 21.031 and policy FDA.

Gary Rotan, Coahoma ISD superintendent, said, "This is in regards to parents who are separated or divorced and one moves to Big Spring's school district and the other is in the Coahoma school district. The student may attend school where either parent resides. They have the option of attending either district. Those children are not considered a transfer."

The Coahoma ISD text book committee consists of 12 persons, who are: Gary Rotan, Al Phillips, Jane Begy, Sue Neff, Mark McLean, Marva Pruitt, Jane Spears, Dean Richters, Sherry Rowden, Jenelle Nelson, Gary Kirkland and Sue Tindel. The textbooks scheduled to be adopted include elementary math and science, business, computers, career investments and industrial technology. Rotan said.

Parents of some junior high students requested the board give permission for use of the school cafeteria for a dance. The request was approved, and the dance is scheduled for Nov. 3.

Enrollment for the 1990-91 school year is down 50 students from last year, 904 compared to 954 for 1989-90, Rotan said.

The Board met in executive session for about 10 minutes, but no action was taken.

The meeting was adjourned at 8:15 p.m., Rotan said.

Jury still out for BSHS

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

After Big Spring's district-opening 49-6 win over the San Angelo Lake View Chiefs, the jury is still out.

It's hard to tell how dominating the Steers are from that contest. Lake View is rebuilding with a new coach and a new system. We already knew the Chiefs didn't have much of a defense, so Big Spring was going to move the ball.

One question, however, was if the Steer defense could shut down the sometimes explosive Lake View offense.

That also was hard to tell because Lake View's big play man, wide receiver Kevin Dumas, was out with a sprained ankle.

Even if Dumas had played, the Steers would have won handily, simply because Lake View couldn't stop Big Spring. At times it looked like men playing against boys. The offensive line made holes so big I think I could've run for first downs.

I can always remember my coaches telling me that if everyone did their job on a play, your team would score a touchdown. I thought about that on the Steers' first play from scrimmage. Jermaine Miller ran through a hole so big, it was incredible. Maybe one Lake View defender got a hand on him — but one hand isn't going to stop Jermaine.

Big Spring did have some success throwing the ball; quarterbacks Gerald Cobos and Abel Hilaro were seven of eight for 186 yards.

This week Big Spring hosts Fort Stockton for homecoming. This will be another tough game to gauge the Steers because Fort Stockton and Lake View are probably the weakest teams in the league. I foresee another 500 yard-plus game for the offense.

The next week we'll get the real test — the Sweetwater Mustangs, who could be beaten up after playing in Monahans. One thing to remember — the Steers humiliated the Mustangs last year at Mustang Bowl. Nobody's done that since I was in high school, way back when. Sweetwater hasn't forgotten.

The jury might be able to rest its case after that game.

Talk about high-powered offenses, how about the Garden City Bearkats?

In their last two games the Bearkats have averaged 72 points and 488 yards offense. Even more importantly, the yardage has been evenly spread out — 531 on the ground, and 345 in the air.

One of the main reasons for the big offensive surge is tailback James Soles. Soles had been playing mostly defense until the last game. Coach Sam Scott felt he was needed at linebacker.

But Scott decided to put Soles, who gained more than 1,800 yards last year, back at his old tailback spot. In his first full game he responded with 255 yards on 26 carries and five touchdowns.

This week the Bearkats should get a good test against the Bronte Longhorns. But it's kind of scary to think what the Bearkat offense may do with a week of rest.

Changing to sputtering offenses, how about the Stanton Buffalos?

The Buffs, who are coming off two straight playoff years, are trying to avoid a winless season. Stanton Coach Dale Ruth has tried several different offenses and personnel changes. He currently has running back John Paul Barry playing quarterback, and recently tried wide receiver Kenny McCalister at tailback.

Here's an interesting fact: Before last Friday's 29-14 loss to McCombs, the Buffalo offense had scored three touchdowns in five games. In Garden City's last game — a 68-7 win over Roscoe — kicker Jody Bradford scored 20 points. He booted eight extra points, returned an in-

Lady Steers still in playoff hunt

By STEVE BELVIN
Sports Editor

The playoff hunt continues.

The Big Spring Lady Steers kept their hopes alive for a playoff berth by defeating the San Angelo Lake View Maidens 15-10, 15-9 Tuesday night at Steer Gym. With the win Big Spring raises its district record to 5-5. Sweetwater is in second with a 5-4 record, while Andrews stands at 4-4.

Thursday, district leader Pecos plays Fort Stockton, and Andrews plays Monahans.

The Lady Steers relied on power volleyball to gain this victory. The Maidens finally crumbled under the hard hitting of Teveyan Russell, Marta Mathews and Kerry Burdette. Mathews and Burdette had extremely good net games. Mathews downed nine of 11 kills while Burdette grounded six of 9. Russell killed nine of 24. As a team the Lady Steers downed 28 of 52 for 54 percent.

"We had some good spots, and we had some not-so-good spots," said Big Spring Lady Steers Coach Lois Ann McKenzie. "It might not have looked like Teveyan had a good game, but she played pretty good. She had trouble hitting the

"Amber and Kerry had the best games they've had in a long time, and Marta had a good game."

In the opening game Big Spring jumped out to a 4-1 lead, only to have the Maidens reel off the next six points. The teams traded points before Big Spring started its comeback. With lake View leading 8-5, Cassie Underwood served a point when Russell blocked Angi Brown's dink attempt. Then Fannin served three points when Underwood set Mathews and Amber Grisham for kills, and a Mathews and Burdett followed with points, pushing the Lady Steers' lead to three. Lake pulled to within 11-10 on service points by Angie Torres, but the Lady Steers ended the game when Underwood and Russell served two points each.

The Lady Steers wasted little time in taking control in the second game. Lake View scored the first point, but Big Spring followed with four straight points. Burdette and Russell served points and Under-

Reds strand A's in game one, 7-0

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds didn't have to be nasty in Game 1 of the World Series. They were in more of a methodical mood.

In a stunning combination of power and pitching, the Reds destroyed Dave Stewart and the Oakland A's 7-0 Tuesday night.

Following a run of overpowering postseason performances, Stewart entered the game with an air of invincibility about him. But it didn't take long for the Reds to blow him away on this night.

Eric Davis hit a two-run homer in the first inning and the rout was on at Riverfront Stadium.

"That's the first time I can recall Dave not pitching well in a big game," Oakland third baseman Carney Lansford said. "But he's human."

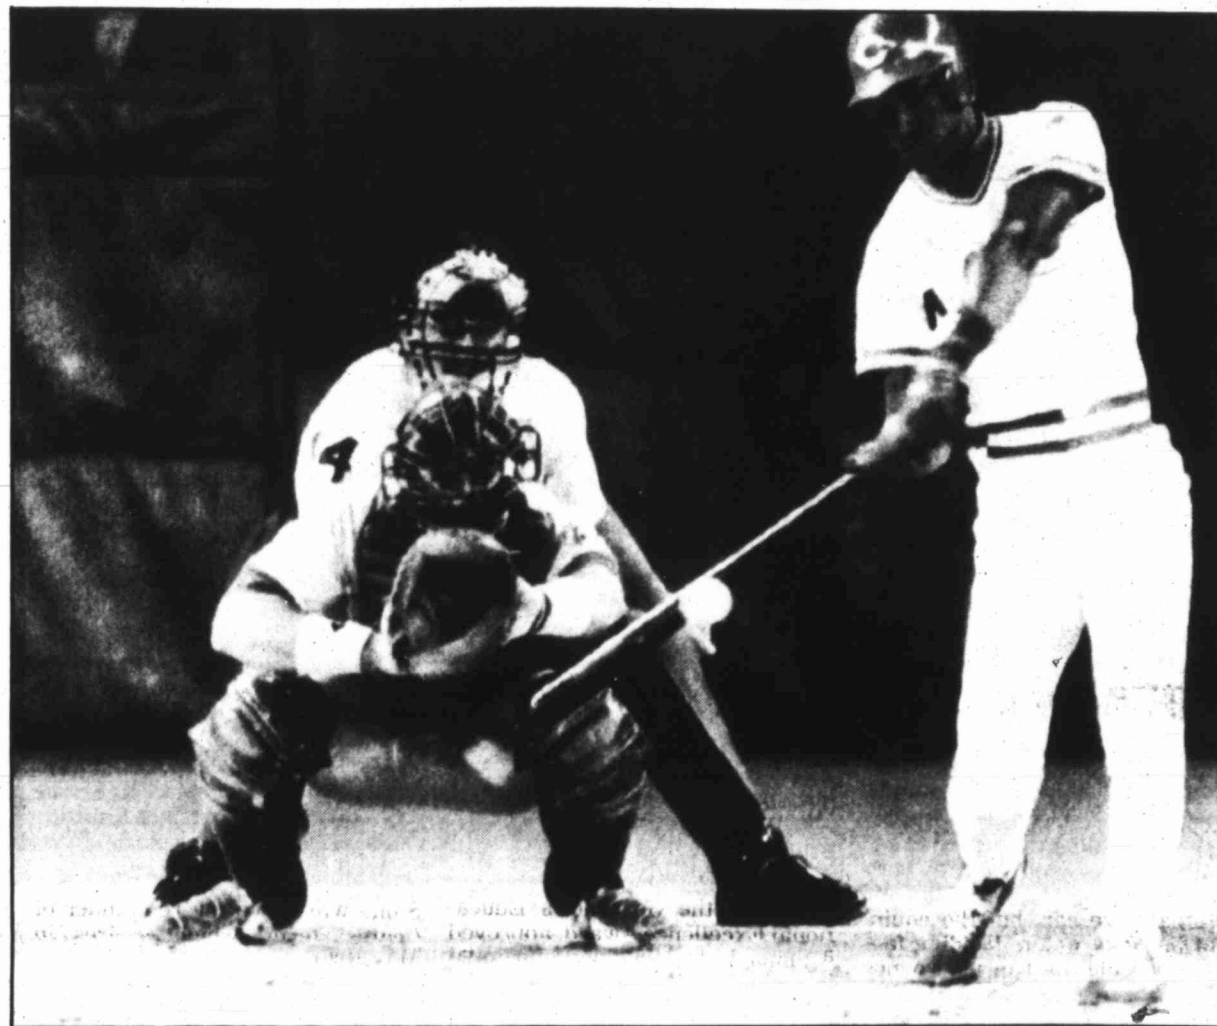

Some were beginning to wonder, though.

Stewart entered the game with a 7-1 record and a six-game winning streak in postseason play. He was the World Series MVP when Oakland swept San Francisco last season, and the A's never trailed in any of the four games.

"That was probably my worst performance in a big game," Stewart said. "I lost the mental edge in the first inning and once you do that you lose the battle."

In Game 1, the Reds were the team doing the intimidating. Davis drove in three runs, Billy Hatcher scored three and Jose Rijo, Rob Dibble and Randy Myers combined on a nine-hit shutout.

When it was all over, the A's 10-game winning streak in postseason play was history and they seemed just a little shocked by the whole thing. They also knew Game 2 is tonight when 27-game winner Bob Welch is scheduled to

"People have to understand this is not going to be a walkover," Lansford said. "I know that it's easy to look at our team and everything that we've accomplished and expect that we're just going to step on the field and win. I've played on too many good teams, too many championship caliber teams, and it just doesn't happen that way."

The way it happened in Game 1 was a little surprising considering Davis was just about falling apart, with a sore shoulder and aching wrists and ankles.

Davis was 4-for-23 in the playoffs, with no homers or RBIs and nine strikeouts. Manager Lou Piniella even asked him to think about leading off during the series.

But after Hatcher walked with one out in the first inning, Davis hit a drive deep over the fence in left-center field.

"We can feel confident when we get a lead off a tough pitcher like Dave Stewart," Davis said. "But it's a team effort and if it wasn't me, someone else would get a big hit. That's the way it's been all year."

The Reds led the NL West wire-to-wire and then beat Pittsburgh in six games for their first pennant since 1976. The current Big Red Machine, however, often does it with spare parts.

Stewart gave up two more runs in the third on Hatcher's RBI double and a run-scoring grounder by Paul O'Neill. The A's beaten right-hander departed after four innings, giving up four runs, three hits and four walks.

"Everybody has bad days," pitching coach Dave Duncan said. "Next time, he'll probably be back in Dave Stewart form."

The Reds made the A's think just a little more with three runs in the fifth off Todd Burns. Davis had an RBI single and Chris Sabo added a two-run single.

"It was very important to get this first one," O'Neill said. "Everyone gets tired of hearing that we need to play one game at a time, but that's the truth in a short series like this."

Rijo pitched around Jose Canseco twice and got out of a bases-loaded jam in the fifth when Mark McGwire popped to second. The A's were 0-for-8 with runners in scoring position.

"It was a slider and, honestly, was not one of my better pitches of the night," said Rijo.

New number one team full of familiar names

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — On this afternoon, the Rev. Jesse Jackson gladly gives up his high-profile professional life for a chance to assume the role of a proud parent.

Clad in jeans, sneakers, sweat shirt and a baseball cap, the former Democratic presidential contender blends in with more than 44,000 other fans at Scott Stadium for Virginia's football game against North Carolina State.

A former college football standout himself, Jackson pays particular attention to No. 51 for Virginia, linebacker Yusuf Jackson.

As Virginia finished off Saturday's 31-0 victory, the elder Jackson made his way out of the stands and prepared to greet the youngest of his three sons with a warm hug.

Later, Jackson joined several other relatives of Virginia players and visited the dressing room of the undefeated Cavaliers, who two days later would be elevated to the top of The Associated Press poll.

"It is so, so special," Jackson said of the chance to watch his son succeed at Virginia in the classroom and on the football field. "When I went to college, African-Americans couldn't attend U.Va. My wife is from Newport News. She couldn't attend. So it's really a special delight to me to see the opportunities of this day be taken advantage of."

Jackson seems particularly proud of his son's ability to blend in on a team that has several sons of celebrities.

"I delight in that the coaches have respect for him, but his teammates have such high regard for him as well," he said. "To me, that is the real mark, because if you come into a situation like this where you're well-known because of your parents, you're under a more critical eye. So when these coaches and players give him the reputation of being one of the hardest hitters on the team, that's really something to me."

"He handled the transition from being Jesse Jackson's son to U.Va.'s linebacker very well."

The Virginia roster also includes Bill Curry, son of Kentucky coach Bill Curry; Derek Dooley, son of Georgia athletic director and former coach Vince Dooley; Scott Griesse, son of NFL Hall of Fame quarterback Bob Griesse, and Rickie Peete, son of PGA Tour member Calvin Peete.

But while most of those players' fathers have been unable to attend many games, Jackson is becoming a regular at Scott Stadium.

"It's important for family and friends — people who love you — to be a support mechanism. That's one thing a player needs," Jackson said. "Plus, I'm a big fan."

Yusef, who went on the road for a period to help his father during the 1988 presidential campaign, said he enjoys having him at the games.

"He's my father," he said. "To me, he's not a politician. I expect him to be at all the games if he can make it."

And while some players say performing in front of relatives makes them nervous, this is not the case with Jackson.

"We've played in front of 85,000 people," he said. "One man is not going to make me nervous, especially not my father. My coach makes me more nervous than he does."

After being redshirted in 1988, Jackson saw considerable action with a group of veteran Virginia linebackers last year before injuring his right knee in the fifth game. Surgery sidelined him for the rest of the year.

The injury slowed his start this season, but he has come on strong in the last four games and is fifth on the team with 23 tackles.

"We're a better team with him in there," coach George Welsh said.

Netters whitewash Lamesa

HERALD STAFF REPORT

The Big Spring tennis team geared for its district championship match with Andrews by drumming Lamesa 17-0 here Tuesday afternoon in non-district play.

The win raised Big Spring's overall team tennis record to 8-2. Big Spring is 5-0 in district play, as is Andrews. The two teams square off Saturday at 11 a.m. in Andrews. Both teams are assured of state playoff spots.

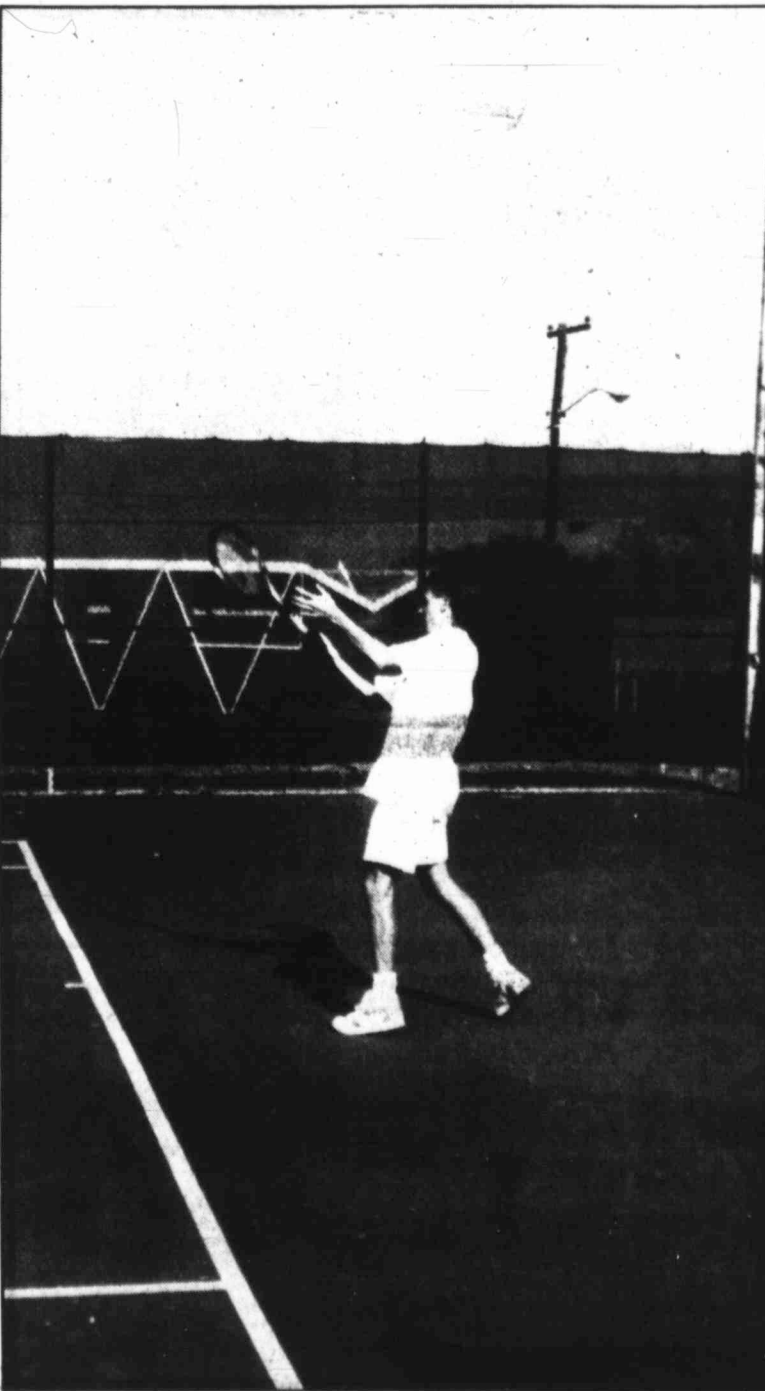

Counting exhibition matches Tuesday, Big Spring outpointed Lamesa 24-1. The only match the Tornados won came in boys singles play. Lamesa, of District 2-4A, is heading to the state playoffs, finishing second behind Snyder.

Big Spring coach Don Lawrence said it was good for his team to get in some competitive playing time. "We just wanted the kids to play some matches," said Lawrence. "At this point, three days of workouts is not doing us any good."

"I think we did real good considering (Steve) Sims was out with the flu, and (Kevin) Nichols didn't play doubles. We didn't play bad, we played pretty well in spots. We didn't play real emotional tennis but we expected that because it was a non-district match. The kids went out and played hard; not exceptional, not bad, just average."

Lawrence then turned his thoughts to Andrews Saturday. "I think it will be a tough match simply because it's for the district championship. I think we can win — whether we do, we'll just have to wait and see. I like our chances, the kids feel they can win."

Sands still 7th in 6-man poll

LUBBOCK (AP) — A changing of the guard took place this week in The Lubbock Avalanche-Journal six-man high school football poll as two-time defending state champion Fort Hancock wrestled the No. 1 spot from Christoval.

Fort Hancock gained five first-place votes and 68 of a possible 70 points in the weekly poll of seven Texas sports writers.

The Mustangs have not allowed more than 14 points in a game all season and have outscored their opponents 332-41. Christoval, by comparison, has outscored its foes 299-161. The Cougars, however, have played a more difficult schedule, one that includes state-ranked Sands and Zephyr.

Christoval beat Panther Creek 63-49 Friday.

The third through seventh spots remained unchanged, with Guthrie, McLean, Bosqueville, Rule and Sands, respectively.

Jayton and Zephyr jumped one slot apiece to eighth and ninth, respectively.

Unbeaten Covington cracked the rankings for the first time this season at No. 10.

Borg plans comeback at 34

LONDON (AP) — Bjorn Borg says he's serious about a tennis comeback but is not yet ready to play against top-flight competition after six years on the sidelines.

The 34-year-old Swede told two British newspapers, the Daily Mail and the Times of London, that he needed much more work before considering a return to tournament play or exhibitions. He said he would make no move until next year at the earliest.

Borg said only he would make the decision on if or when to return.

In the bad luck department, how about the Colorado City Wolves?

The Wolves are licking their wounds and for good reason. In the last three games they've lost a total of 10 players to injuries.

Wolves mentor Tom Ramsey said it was the most injuries his teams have ever suffered in his 20-year coaching career.

Grady QB, Coahoma LB head Honor Roll

By STEVE BELVIN
 Sports Editor

Grady quarterback Len Garza made the most of his playing time against the Dawson Dragons last Friday night.

Garza only played a little over a half in Grady's 66-54 win. In the first half Garza led Grady to a 48-14 advantage. In the second half the Grady reserves played most of the time, and Dawson made the game close.

Garza, a 5-10, 150-pound senior, had a field day against the Dawson secondary. He finished the contest with 10 completions in 18 attempts for 298 yards. He threw scoring passes of 45, 68, 44 and 40 yards. For his effort he is the Crossroads Country Honor Roll Offensive Player of the Week.

In Coahoma's 32-3 win over the Forsan Buffaloes, the Coahoma defense completely swarmed the Forsan offense. The Forsan offense managed only 103 total yards. The leader of the Coahoma defense was linebacker Mike Hernandez, who made 15 tackles. For his efforts, the 5-foot-7, 160-pound senior, is the Defensive Player of the Week.

Other top defensive performers were:

• In Borden County's 44-13 win over Hermeligh, linebacker Clint Kemper led the Coyotes with eight tackles in one half.

• In Stanton's 29-14 loss to Ozona, linebacker John Paul Barry had to play cornerback because of injuries and made 12 tackles.

• In Sands' 36-0 win over Wellman, safety Charles Rhodes intercepted a pass and made five tackle, and cornerback Aaron Cowley made five tackles and picked off a pass.

• In Coahoma's win, safety Rusty Ginnett made 13 tackles, and end Sam Justiss mmade six stops.

Thompson said OU coach suspected drug use

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Charles Thompson says Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer rightfully suspected him and another former Sooners quarterback of using cocaine.

Thompson, serving a two-year sentence at the Big Spring Federal Correctional Institute, for selling cocaine, testified Monday and Tuesday in the federal trial of two former Oklahoma athletes. Jury deliberations in the trial were scheduled to continue today.

John Green, 25, and Lamont Harris, 23, are accused of supplying Thompson with cocaine in January 1989. Thompson later sold the cocaine to an undercover FBI agent, leading to his arrest and conviction.

Green and Harris are charged with conspiracy to distribute cocaine and cocaine distribution. Harris faces an additional charge of use of a telephone to facilitate a drug transaction.

Thompson testified Tuesday that he and former quarterback Jamelle Holieway used cocaine several times together. Switzer, then the Oklahoma football coach, ordered both players to undergo drug tests in the spring of 1988 because Switzer suspected them of using the drug, Thompson testified.

When they failed to take a test, Switzer personally visited their apartment and ordered them to do so, Thompson said. He said he failed that test and was ordered to see a psychologist.

Thompson said he was ordered to undergo a five-day drug rehabilitation program after testing positive three times in the spring and summer of 1988, and his parents were notified. The alternative was to be kicked off the team, he said.

Thompson testified that during the time he was making cocaine deals, he also spoke to younger football players and school children about the evils of doing drugs.

"I never said I didn't do drugs, I said they should say no to drugs," Thompson testified.

When he was arrested, he said Holieway expressed concern on several occasions that his name might surface. Asked why Holieway was concerned, Thompson said, "Someone may have had it in for him, too."

Defense attorneys questioned Thompson about some accounts included in his book, "Down and Dirty: The Life and Times of Oklahoma Football."

Referring to one passage, Thompson said, "I guess he (the co-author) took it upon himself to add a spice of dramatics." He said one other passage was wrong.

On Monday, Thompson said he sold cocaine to undercover FBI agent Floyd Zimms at the behest of Green, a former teammate, and Harris, a former track star.

Zimms said he had several meetings with Thompson before obtaining the cocaine Jan. 26, 1989.

wood scored two points. With Burdette, Russell and Mathews dominating the net, Big Spring went on a 6-3 run, taking a commanding 10-4 advantage.

Behind the serving of Deanna Higdon, who served consecutive aces, the Maidens battled back. Fannin finally ended the rally with a kill, but the lead was cut to 10-9. Russell served an ace Higdon couldn't handle, upping the lead to 11-9. Fannin ended the match by serving the final four points. Twice sheaced Lake View's Vern Allen; the other two points came when Underwood set Mathews and Burdette for kills.

Lake View downed a respectable 50 percent of its kills (17-34). Allen led the attack with eight of 13, while Higdon was four of seven.

"There were a couple of spots we had letdowns," said McKenzie. "There were a couple of times the kids went brain-dead. Basically we played good enough to win."

The Lady Steers, 8-9 for the season, will be in action Saturday in their home finale against Andrews. Frshmen start at 12:30 p.m., followed by junior varsity at 2 and varsity action at 3.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Bill Cosby has dropped a colorful mural shown during the opening credits of "The Cosby Show" in a dispute with a teacher whose Harlem students inspired the artwork.

The dispute involves a mural painted on a Harlem building by children at the Creative Arts Workshop for Homeless Children, and a similar painting shown on the top-rated NBC series.

Workshop director Brookie Maxwell said the children who painted the original "Street of Dreams" should get credit on the TV show and be paid if the idea is marketed.

"I've ordered it taken off the show. It has nothing to do with the kids. Has to do with this woman, who is trying to hold us up," Cosby said Tuesday.

"It's the principle of the thing," said Cosby, the highest-paid entertainer in the world.

NEW YORK (AP) — Carly

Simon's so vain.

The 45-year-old singer said she's trying to "come to terms" with getting older but acknowledged it's been difficult.

"In five years maybe I won't be so attractive. People won't whistle at me on the street anymore," she said in an interview for the TV show "Personalities."

"I'm not above having those fears or apprehensions about losing my attractiveness, or whatever," Simon said. "Even though inside I know that sexuality is something to do more basically with who you are ... than how old you are."

Oil jumps again in wake of crisis

By CHRISTOPHER BURNS
Associated Press Writer

Oil prices climbed higher after U.S. and exiled Kuwaiti officials ruled out a possible compromise solution to the Persian Gulf crisis in which Iraq would withdraw from most of Kuwait but be permitted to keep some key real estate.

Top U.S. and Soviet officials were on the road today discussing the gulf crisis. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney was in Moscow, while Oil on Tuesday closed just short of $39, up nearly $1. The rise was attributed in part to signs of a hardened U.S. position toward Saddam Hussein.

Soviet Middle East expert Yevgeny Primakov was on a trip to Europe and the United States.

"The Soviet leadership believes that if there is a smallest chance to settle the conflict peacefully that chance should be used to the ultimate," Gorbachev spokesman Vitaly Ignatenko said in Moscow on Tuesday.

At the United Nations, meanwhile, diplomats said Britain was drafting a measure to make Iraq pay war reparations, and the United States was seeking to have the world body oversee the resupply of Western diplomats who have refused to quit their countries' embassies in Kuwait City.

Senate begins work on deficit reduction

By JIM LUTHER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — The Senate began work today on a bipartisan deficit-reduction bill that doubles gasoline taxes and differs sharply from a House approved hit-the-rich version opposed by President Bush.

"This requires moderate sacrifice for all Americans," Sen. James Sasser, D-Tenn., chairman of the Budget Committee, said of the Senate plan. "It exempts no citizen. It is sound, sensible and supportable."

The Senate bill, unlike the House plan, wouldn't tamper with income tax rates. However, it would raise the 9-cent gasoline tax by 9½ cents; limit itemized deductions of people with incomes over $100,000; and raise some Medicare premiums slightly more than the House approved.

Sasser sounded the same theme that marked a long, partisan debate in the House on Tuesday: The well-to-do gained most from government policies in 1980s and should be required to pay more to reduce the deficit.

Other Democratic senators were writing amendments that would make the wealthy do even more, trying to make the Senate bill look more like the House plan and hoping to bring Bush along by tacking on part of his long-sought cut in capital-gains taxes.

Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico, senior Republican on the Budget Committee, called the Senate measure fair.

"I will try to dispose of the notion that we are not taxing the wealthy enough in this package," he said.

John Sununu, Bush's staff chief, said on the "Today" show on NBC: "The White House is ready to receive the bipartisan package similar to the Senate package. Get it to the president's desk and he'll sign it."

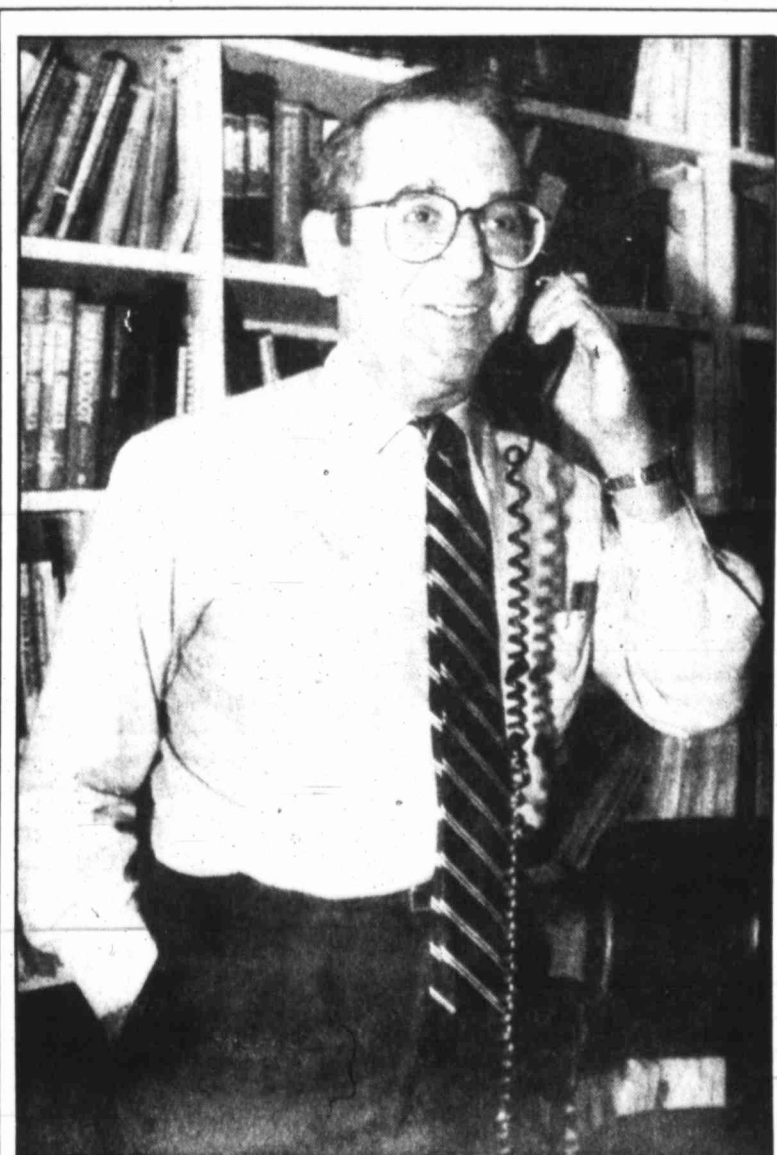

Congressional leaders are trying to complete action on the tax increase — the second largest in history — before the government runs out of money at midnight Friday. Bush has vowed to let the government shut down if Congress does not approve a deficit-reduction plan he can accept.

The House voted 227-203 Tuesday night for a plan that would raise taxes for all but the poorest Americans.

Wealthy people would fare worst. Middle- and lower-income families would face income tax increases totaling $36 billion because they would lose next year's automatic inflation adjustments in tax brackets and personal exemptions.

"All America is looking at us today and they are expecting action," said Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas. "A no vote means no budget. They are going to be madder than an old wet hen if we don't do something today."

But House Republican Leader Robert Michel of Illinois criticized

Juniors work on fundraisers

By TYSHAWN BARNES

Stanton High School's junior class and their parents are working the concession stands for all home games on Thursday and Friday nights to raise money for the Junior-Senior banquet.

Students will be taking orders for homecoming mums. Orders will be accepted until Wednesday, Oct. 24. The class will receive 25 percent of the money collected for mum sales.

The sales are being sponsored by Sue Christon, owner of Stanton Flowers. "We are trying to keep prices as reasonable as we can," Christon said.

Orders may be placed with any student of the junior class. However, orders must be on the red and gray-colored form for the juniors to receive their percentage.

Plans underway for homecoming

By CHRIS BARNHILL

Homecoming is getting closer and the excitement is mounting. This year, Band Director Kirke McKenzie has organized a door decorating contest. Every section of the Buffalo Band has been assigned a door.

It will be up to the section to cover the door any way they want, but it must be decorated in a school spirit motif.

The junior class has begun selling mums and the homecoming pep rally will be community-wide. It is scheduled to be held at Buffalo Stadium.

Harriers travel to Plains

By INNET BROWN

This past weekend, the Stanton High School cross-country team travelled to Plains to compete against Sundown and other schools.

Sundown, one of the best cross-country teams in the state, won the event. Jeremy Stallings received the best score for Stanton. He finished in 11th place.

The team consists of: Chris Barnhill, Jeremy Stallings, Joe Cazares, John Eric Wyckoff, Kenny McCalister, Blaine Hall, Peter Holst, Michael Arrendondo, Debbie Hinojosa and Mitzi and Reagan Koonce.

"Sundown looked impressive; they won the contest hands down. They looked as if they were floating right through the competition," Barnhill said.

Juniors, seniors elect officers

By HEATHER NEWMAN

Stanton High School elected class officers for the junior and senior classes. Elections were held differently from years past.

Each class met during activity period. The floor was open for nominations, which then were reviewed and votes were cast.

The votes were counted the next day and the winners were announced to the student body. Senior officers are: Angie Bundas, president; Monica Garcia, vice president; Heather Newman, secretary; and Michell Rios, treasurer.

Junior class officers are: Grant Woodfin, president; Blaine Hall, vice president; Tyshawn Barnes, secretary; and Crystal Payne, treasurer.

by CRYSTAL PAYNE

Arriba! And off he goes into the exciting city of Acapulco.

Stanton High School student Pat Ramirez recently took a trip with his family to Mexico. During his week there, he got the chance to see and experience many things, such as swimming in La Auebrada at Acapulco, the famous cliff-diving spot.

There also were fiestas, along with a bullfight. "The bullfights weren't as exciting as I had planned, but the food was good and the scenery was beautiful," he said.

Pat also said that the people were very friendly and if he had a chance to go back, he would.

Child detonates police grenade

ARLINGTON (AP) — An 11-year-old boy was treated for minor injuries received when he detonated a grenade dropped by police in his neighborhood.

Arlington police spokesman Dee Anderson said the boy was treated for superficial burns and marks from gravel that apparently hit the child when the grenade exploded on the ground.

One of the department's tactical sergeants accidentally dropped it Monday night when officers chased a suspect in the neighborhood, Anderson said.

Anderson said the grenade is a diversionary device meant to distract a suspect. He said the grenade has a small powder charge to make a loud noise and a flash.

"It's like a large firecracker," said Anderson.

When the suspect jumped from the second-story window, the sergeant took off his vest to chase the suspect and the grenade apparently fell from it.

No fatalities in plane evacuation

DALLAS (AP) — Five passengers aboard a Delta jet received minor injuries during the plane's evacuation at Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

The plane was evacuated Tuesday because the jet's captain thought an engine might be on fire.

However, no fire existed and a turbine malfunction was the cause of the problem, said Henry Conley, Delta spokesman.

The 140 passengers and eight crewmen on the Boeing 727 bound for Seattle, were evacuated just after noon when instruments indicated a possible fire in the Number 2 engine, Conley said.

Airport police, fire and medical personnel responded, Angel Biasatti, airport spokeswoman said.

Bush gets broom

Tough times forcing Robstown to sell city hall

ROBSTOWN (AP) — For sale: City Hall.

City officials struggling to beat a $1 million budget deficit are putting the building up for sale.

"When you have to do it, what can you do?" asked mayor Julie Garcia.

City council in the community of

13,000 just west of Corpus Christi approved the City Hall sale Monday, along with a $2.9 million budget and a long-term management program.

Garcia said he did not know anyone who wanted to buy the building but also said he was confident a prospective buyer could be found.

City Secretary Ricardo Rodriguez previously suggested eliminating his own job to lower deficit spending by the city, but council members rejected the idea.

Putting City Hall up for sale has been one of the options in cost-cutting proposals at city budget workshops during the past few weeks.

"That's tough," Rodriguez said recently about the possibility of selling the building. "When you sell your home ... it's a bitter pill to swallow. It's a genuine sacrifice."

The sale of the building is expected to bring more than $197,000,

according to final budget projections.

The mayor said merging the administrative offices would give the city an opportunity to mend a rift that developed two years ago when the utility system sued the city over who controlled the utility system's collections.

Richards says she's closing gap on Williams

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Democrat Ann Richards repeated her call for tougher regulation of the insurance industry, and said she is narrowing the lead her Republican opponent holds with only three weeks left in the governor's race.

Richards also agreed Tuesday to be interviewed by a panel of reporters on "Decision '90," a television special produced by KERA-TV in Dallas. The announcement came a day after Williams agreed to a separate half-hour interview by the same panel.

The State Board of Insurance,

Richards said Tuesday in Brownsville, relies too heavily on insurance companies for rate-setting data.

The Insurance Board's rate figures should come "from their own employees, not from the employees of the insurance industry itself," she said.

Republican Clayton Williams has been endorsed by The Independent Insurance Agents of Texas.

Williams in Houston on Tuesday

joined two other Republican candidates for statewide office in calling for limits on the terms of legislators and state administrators.

He appeared at the Empire Broom and Mop Manufacturing Co. with lieutenant governor candidate Rob Mosbacher and attorney general hopeful J.E. "Buster" Brown.

"We are going to make a clean sweep on the ballot in November," Williams said while pushing a broom across the broom and mop company's warehouse. "We're going to sweep out the Austin insiders."

Richards, however, said she is closing in on the lead Williams has commanded in the polls.

A recent Gallup poll commissioned by several Texas media organizations shows Richards has closed to within 5 percentage points of Williams.

The telephone poll of 1,006 registered voters shows 45 percent surveyed supported Williams, with 40 percent supporting Richards.

Fifteen percent of the voters said they were undecided.

"And we are going to peak on election day and win this race for governor," she said.

Richards on Tuesday picked up endorsements from 34 South Texas mayors.

In other developments Tuesday:

• GOP lieutenant governor candidate Rob Mosbacher promised to serve no more than two terms if elected next month. Joining the call for limiting terms of statewide officeholders, Mosbacher said, "Holding office must, once again, be what it was originally intended — as a public service. When it becomes a lifetime career, then our elected officials are driven more by what is required to stay in office than what is in the best interest of the state of Texas."

• Bob Bullock, the Democratic candidate for lieutenant governor, suggested that his Republican opponent, Mosbacher, debate GOP gubernatorial hopeful Williams over plans to expand the state welfare department. "Williams has cited the welfare department — where Mosbacher is chairman of the board — as an example of needless fat in government with its 15 layers of management and managers who manage only two people," said a statement issued by Bullock.

• The largest statewide law enforcement organization endorsed Democrat Dan Morales for state attorney general and dismissed criticism from his Republican rival J.E. "Buster" Brown that he doesn't have enough courtroom experience to handle the job. Ron DeLord, president of the 8,500-member Combined Law Enforcement Associations of Texas, said Morales was best qualified to represent the state in court battles over education and prisons.

• The Univision television network released results of a poll on the Texas gubernatorial race. The Oct. 5-8 survey of 406 Texans, with a margin of error of plus or minus 4.5 percentage points, showed Williams leading Richards by a 56 percent to 36 percent margin.

New poll shows Richards gaining DALLAS (AP) — Clayton Williams' off-the-cuff remarks are costing him voter support, especially among Texas women, who view his comments as insensitive, according to a recent Gallup poll.

A survey of registered voters conducted Friday through Saturday reveals that Williams leads his Democratic opponent, Ann Richards, by only 5 points, down from a double-digit lead recorded in September.

"Williams has been his own worst enemy," said Larry Hugick, who directed the survey for the Gallup organization.

"Politically, the voters seem a great deal more comfortable with Williams, a conservative, than they are with Richards, who is more liberal. But he keeps diluting his advantage with his sexist actions and language."

The telephone poll of 1,006 registered voters shows 45 percent surveyed supported Williams, with 40 percent supporting Richards. Fifteen percent of the voters said they were undecided.

New ant species finds sanctuary in office

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the World Wildlife Fund, Kathryn S. Fuller, has ants in her plants.

So do lots of people. But the insects Fuller noticed crawling across her desk last year apparently are a brand-new species, never before seen by ant experts.

This means scientists at the fund, which is dedicated to preserving wildlife and its habitat around the globe, have a new task right in their own Washington headquarters — making sure the ants survive.

The story began when E.O. Wilson, a zoology professor at Harvard University and a leading authority on ants, visited Fuller's office. Wilson, a World Wildlife Fund board member, had just completed an exhaustive work entitled, "The Ants."

Fuller asked Wilson to check out her ants.

"Ed's eyebrows just shot up when he saw them," Fuller says. "He immediately identified the ants as members of the genus Pheidole, a neotropical group on which he has specialized. We traced the ants to their colony in a potted plant behind my desk."

The two collected some worker ants in a vial so Wilson could study them in his lab. Later he asked that some soldier ants be collected and sent to him at Harvard to aid in species identification.

"This is a very surprising find and certainly distinctive," Wilson said in a statement issued Monday by the fund.

If the preliminary results are confirmed by final taxonomic tests, WWF officials said, the new species could wind up being called "Fuller's Ant."

"I will feel a very personal sense of responsibility for these ants, whether or not they're named after me," the fund president said.

The potted plant where the ants live was a palm tree, identified by World Wildlife Fund botanists as a Draceana reflexa. The ant colony could have come with the palm from Florida, or possibly was imported with another plant and migrated to the Draceana in Fuller's office.

On advice from Wilson, Fuller is feeding the ants sugar water and apple cores, along with cheese, cookies and an occasional Danish.

Fund botanists have added to the planter with the host palm tree some neotropical flora that secrete a substance harvested by similar ants in the wild.

"I'm telling people I'm creating a complete tropical ecosystem in here," Fuller said. "It shows you how little is known about diversity in the world, how many species are unknown."

The World Wildlife Fund describes itself as the largest private conservation organization, with projects in more than 140 countries to protect wildlife and its habitat.

So its leaders are determined to save the ants.

"I've given the plant company strict instructions not to touch my plant," Fuller said. "The caretaker told me most of his clients want their plants ant-free. I was the first person to ever tell him to leave the ants alone."

Water everywhere — too much, say troops

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia (AP) — When drillers first started looking for oil in the kingdom in the 1930s, King Abdul Aziz secretly hoped they would find water.

Talk to some of the U.S. soldiers required to quaff more than two gallons of water daily, and you get the impression they might prefer drinking gasoline.

"We kind of force them to drink it. They have no choice," says Capt. Kelly Marunale, 30, of Woodstock, Ill.

One of the first tasks of soldiers in the desert every morning is to collect a box of six bottles of water equaling a day's supply.

The rule still holds despite the easing in temperatures, down at least 15 degrees from the summer highs of 120 degrees.

Repeated inquiries on the number of bottles consumed by the 200,000 troops in the region were not answered by the armed forces.

But the average consumption of water per soldier in September ranged between five and 11 gallons per day, including showers and washing.

The expense and logistics of distributing the water — bottled water must be purchased — has prompted the military to begin using water taken from oasis wells and processed from the sea.

"Those plastic bottles are just a logistical nightmare if you haul yourself around," said Col. Dan Grigson, public affairs officer for the Army's 101st airborne division. "So we hope to wean soldiers off the bottle."

The troops have no great love for the chlorinated water produced by mixing the oasis water with chemicals in great plastic bladders.

"It's like drinking the swimming pool," said Sgt. Joseph Copley, 25, of Mansfield, Ohio.

Forced to guzzle their daily requirement, the water is a constant topic of conversation.

Even in the midst of night maneuvers, two soldiers were overheard discussing the subject.

"I drank that water for two weeks before they started putting in the chlorine and I never got sick," said one.

"It made you ugly," the other joked in answer.

"No, that came from eating MREs," said the first soldier, referring to the military's field rations called "meals-ready-to-eat."

Troops get packages of flavored powder such as lemon-lime or grape in the MREs which they dump into the water, but don't have enough to disguise the full ration. Sometimes they use the cocoa.

"Here it is 120 degrees outside and the water is so hot they would rather drink hot cocoa than hot water," said Marunale, a company commander with the Aviation Brigade of the 24th Mechanized Infantry Division.

The soldiers have started wrapping their bottles in socks or other clothing and putting them aloft to catch the desert breeze.

But dehydration is one of the main problems treated by field hospitals as soldiers are prone to ignore their daily ration.

The early media reports on the amount of water soldiers drank clearly made an impression back in the United States.

Ten-year-old Hannah Bergstrom of Loveland, Colo., wrote to an officer saying: "I wouldn't like to be in Saudi Arabia drinking six gallons of water a day, but I guess somebody has to do it."

Vets trained to treat pet fish

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Hooked on that pet fish of yours? Want to keep him in the swim of things as long as you can? Just send him to the fish doctor for a checkup.

More people are doing that these days, said Hugh Bishop, editor of Pets Supplies Marketing magazine, as word spreads that veterinarians can now treat fish with bath solutions and shots and even perform surgery on them.

"Fish are obviously something people do develop an affinity for and would look for some help if they develop a problem," Bishop said.

He also noted that some people pay as much as $1,000 each for exotic fish.

John A. Shaddock, dean of Texas A&M's school of veterinary medicine, said fish studies have been added to his school's programs.

"It's part of our overall attempt to do two things: diversify veterinary medicine and address a societal need," he said.

ran Kuwait nearly 12 weeks ago.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, a key market for oil and oil products, the price of benchmark light sweet crude for November delivery closed at $38.89 a barrel, up 94 cents from the Monday closing price.

After Primakov's recent trip to Baghdad, Soviet media reported over the weekend that Iraq might be prepared to pull out from most of Kuwait in exchange for keeping the Rumailah oil field that straddles the Iraq-Kuwait border as well as several strategic islands in the Persian Gulf.

Kuwaitis, fleeing into Saudi Arabia said the Iraqis were setting up fences that separate most of Kuwait from the Rumailah field, which Saddam accused the Kuwaitis of overexploiting before he invaded and annexed their country.

A report Tuesday in the newspaper of Saddam's ruling party set an uncompromising tone, however, saying Iraq "will not give it (Kuwait) up even if we fight for it 1,000 years."

Al-Thawra, the newspaper of the ruling Arab Baath Socialist Party, said control of Kuwait "is our final decision, a decision that all Iraq defends and guards by 6 million fighters."

Iraq's army newspaper, Al-Qadisiya, discounted the possibility of war before Christmas between Iraq and the U.S.-led multinational force of more than 300,000 troops that has massed in the region to counter Saddam.

It said Bush was likely to allow American soldiers to come home in coffins during the holiday season.

In Washington, Secretary of State James A. Baker III rejected any concession to Baghdad, saying the United States will settle for nothing less than a complete Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait.

"We are unwilling to engage in a search for partial solutions," he said.

Baker said Saddam evidently was interested "in a negotiated arrangement that would enable him to claim benefits from his unprovoked aggression against a small neighbor."

In Jiddah, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait's crown prince and prime minister told a news conference that Iraq's occupation of his emirate will "never force us to make any concession."

"We will never give up any part of our country, not even one inch," said Sheikh Saad al-Abdullah al-Sabah.

A U.N.-ordered embargo on trade with Iraq, enforced by a multinational flotilla, has caused shortages in Iraq but has so far failed to force Saddam to back down. The Pentagon says some 430,000 Iraqi troops are in Kuwait, and have been building roads and fortifications.

Soviet envoy Primakov was to meet with Italian President Giulio Andreotti, then fly to Paris before heading on to Washington.

"Then the special representative of President Gorbachev is to leave for Washington where a meeting is planned with President Bush," spokesman Ignatenko said.

He denied reports the Soviet government was prepared to give the United States military intelligence on Iraq.

A Cheney aide, speaking on condition he not be further identified, told The Associated Press in Washington that the defense secretary would press the Soviets for intelligence on Iraq.

Cheney, in Moscow for a four-day visit, began talks Tuesday.

Last month, KGB Chairman Vladimir Kryuchkov told the AP Board of Directors that his agency was prepared to share such information with the U.S. government.

Also Tuesday, Honduras said it would send a military force to Saudi Arabia to join the multinational force. Argentina was the first Latin American nation to pledge military personnel to the force.

Democrats for "economic McCarthyism — the savage cry of class warfare. No (GOP) member... could even consider voting for this plan."

During the rancorous, seven-hour House debate, Republicans said reduced spending was the only way to cut the deficit, while Democrats blamed 10 years of GOP presidents for the red ink.

"The statute of limitations on blaming Jimmy Carter (for economic problems) has run out — but it hasn't run out on Ronald Reagan," said Rep. Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif.

GHOSTLY GOOD HALLOWEEN FUN!

For a Monster-ously Fun Party...

- Remember to shop early for food and paper goods. All of our tasty recipes can be made ahead of time. The day before the party, you can prepare Chocolate Caramel Nut Bars, Caramel Apple People can be made early in the day or the children can make and decorate their own Caramel Apple People during the party.
- Let the kids make simple, scary party invitations. Just cut out Halloween shapes like pumpkins, cats and witches' hats from orange and black construction paper. Write party specifics in crayon.
- Use miniature pumpkins, about the size of oranges, as place setting markers. Just write each guest's name on a pumpkin with a felt-tipped pen. For extra fun, carve the pumpkins first, fill with caramels and you've got easy, festive, take-home treat cups.
- Blow up orange balloons. Draw jack-o-lantern faces and tie on black and orange streamers (ribbons) for spooky, floating decorations.
- Let each guest decorate his or her own Zap an Apple™. Provide candy corn, nuts, hard candy, raisins, etc. to create chewy, gooey Caramel Apple People.
- Serve Caramel Crispy Treats. Use a pumpkin cookie cutter to cut the Crispy Treats into fun Halloween shapes.
- Make a pin-the-tail-on-the-black-cat game. Draw a large black cat (without a tail) on a piece of poster board or a cut and flattened paper grocery bag (use tin foil for gleaming eyes, uncooked spaghetti for whiskers, etc., if you like). Cut out several paper "cat tails" or create by braiding pieces of black yarn. Attach a small piece of tape to each tail and let blindfolded guests take turns at "pinning" on the tail.
- Host a treasure hunt. Hide caramels, plastic toy spiders and bats, gold candy coins, etc. in your yard. Give each player a flashlight to search for the treasure. The one who finds the most wins!
- Create a pumpkin pinata. Blow up a large, round balloon and cover with paste-soaked strips of newspaper (paste can be flour and water, diluted glue, wallpaper paste, etc.). Let dry for two days, paint orange and black, pop the balloon and fill with caramels and other treats. Hang the pumpkin up and let each guest take turns striking the pinata with a plastic bat. Watch the treats come raining down!
- Play the Mummy Wrap. Divide guests into teams. One guest (the mummy) holds the end of a roll of toilet paper while the other guests take turns unrolling it around him or her to create a mummy. The first group done wins!

Spooky spooks, ghoulish ghosts, wicked witches. Entertaining the little goblins this Halloween doesn't have to be scary. All it takes is a few simple tricks to create a monster-ously fun party with delicious caramel and marshmallow treats from the KRAFT kitchens.

Everybody loves Halloween, so why not bring the fun inside! Invite children and even some grown-up ghouls into your home this year. Put on a costume, carve up a jack-o-lantern and get ready for a silly, scary party, complete with easy-to-prepare, festive goodies your guests will howl about! We've even included a bagful of simple party tips, guaranteed to make your celebration a scream!

One crunchy, gooey bite from a KRAFT Caramel Zap an Apple™, a nibble from a rich and chewy Chocolate Caramel Nut bar, or a taste from any of the hauntingly good recipes listed below and your guests will be bewitched.

So make sure you prepare plenty of these simple, goblin-good Halloween treats...because with ghostly guests in the house, they are sure to disappear like magic!

Mastering the art of preserving: Understanding basic techniques

Whether you purchase produce from the local market or have the good fortune of enjoying the rewards of your own garden, the harvests of late summer and early autumn offer a bounty of delectable fruits and vegetables.

For years, cooks have known that the just-picked flavor of nature's delights has year-round appeal, and have set about capturing these flavors by preserving and pickling, canning and freezing.

Although it once played a significant role in the cycle of seasonal cookery, preserving is no longer an undertaking performed routinely in American households.

However, with the current revitalization of interest in wholesome foods and the processes by which they are prepared at home, the art of "putting by" is attracting a new generation of aficionados.

Preserving is an excellent way to process fruit without relying on chemical preservatives, and even inexperienced cooks need not be intimidated by the prospect of making jellies and jams at home.

For instance, in some cases it is not necessary to seal the jars of the finished product by placing them in a boiling-water bath, and first-time preservers may prefer to opt for recipes which do not require this additional step.

Whatever method you choose, it is important to understand the basic principles and techniques of preserving and to have the appropriate utensils available before you begin.

If possible, start with freshly-picked fruit which is ripe—but not too ripe—and free from fungicides and other chemicals.

The ideal time to pick fruit is early in the morning, as soon as possible after the sun has dried the dew.

If you are using fruit that has been treated with chemical agents, it must be rinsed thoroughly, but an effort should be made to avoid prolonged contact with the water, which may damage the fruit and/or cause its fresh flavor to diminish.

Citrus fruits, however, always should be scrubbed under running water to ensure that all traces of fungicidal sprays have been removed from their pores, and this will have no negative effect on flavor or texture. For untreated fruit, wiping with a damp cloth probably will be sufficient for removing obvious dirt.

Achieving the correct proportion of fruit to sugar is vital, because sugar acts as the preserving agent. Too little sugar eventually may cause a layer of mold to grow on top of the jam, while too much may cause the jam to crystallize.

Recipes for preserving are designed to accommodate the natural sugar content of each fruit, so even this variable should pose no significant problem for the beginner who follows directions carefully.

Some recipes also call for preserving sugar, which contains small amounts of pectin and acid, which help the jam or jelly to set properly.

Pectin occurs naturally in the skin, seeds, peel and cores of some fruits, including apples and quinces, and is also available in commercial form for addition to jams and jellies which do not include sufficient natural sources of this important ingredient.

When using this product, it is vital that the fruit/sugar/pectin mixture be allowed to boil as long and as hard as directed.

Start timing when it reaches a full, rolling boil (indicated by bubbles across the entire surface of the mixture that you cannot stir down), and boil for the exact amount of time specified.

It is best to use a large (eight to 10 quart) kettle—of copper, stainless steel or enameled cast iron—with a flat, broad base to provide a wide surface area for moisture evaporation while the fruit is cooking.

To be sure that the boiling contents do not spill over the sides of the pan, never fill it more than one-third full.

During the boiling process, it may be necessary to remove a layer of foam from the top of the fruit mixture. The recipe you are following will indicate when this should be done. For this procedure, all you need is a long-handled metal spoon or a special long-handled skimmer.

In addition to this implement, you should have: Several wooden spoons for stirring; a wide-mouth funnel for pouring hot preserves into jars; a ladle (preferably with a spout) for lifting hot fruit from the kettle to the funnel; a clock with an easy-to-read second hand for timing jellies and jams made with extra pectin, and pot holders and dish towels within easy reach.

Always remember that the hot fruit mixture should be sterilized before being filled. In Joy of Cooking (Signet), authors Irma S. Rombauer and Marion Rombauer Becker offer these directions: "Fill glasses or jars $\frac{1}{2}$ full of water and place them, well apart, in a shallow pan partly filled with water. Simmer the glasses 15 to 20 minutes. Keep hot until ready to fill. If the lids are placed lightly upon the glasses, they will be sterilized at the same time."

The jars or jelly glasses that you will be using should be sterilized before being filled. In Joy of Cooking (Signet), authors Irma S. Rombauer and Marion Rombauer Becker offer these directions: "Fill glasses or jars $\frac{1}{2}$ full of water and place them, well apart, in a shallow pan partly filled with water. Simmer the glasses 15 to 20 minutes. Keep hot until ready to fill. If the lids are placed lightly upon the glasses, they will be sterilized at the same time."

The recipes below are particularly well suited for the novice preserver. Reproduced from The Illustrated Book of Preserves (Doubleday) by Simonetta Lupi and Angelo Sorzio, the recipes for Pear Preserve and Apple and Orange Jam are delightfully straightforward.

The authors recommend using late summer pears for the first recipe, and note that the Apple and Orange Jam, particularly good as a filling for doughnuts, fritters and baked puddings."

PEAR PRESERVE

Ingredients

$\frac{2}{3}$ lb/1 kg sound, ripe pears
2 cups/1 lb/500g preserving sugar
2 cups/16 fl oz/450ml water
1 lemon
1 tablespoon marc or liqueur

Method

Buy or pick the pears before they are quite ripe and set one aside to test for ripeness; it should not feel soft but should be very juicy when cut. Peel and core the pears and chop into a large bowl of cold water acidulated with the lemon juice.

Drain the pears and place in a preserving pan, adding the sugar and water. Bring slowly to the boil while stirring. When tender, break the fruit up by stirring well with a stainless steel whisk. Continue boiling gently until the preserve is thick enough.

Transfer the hot mixture into prepared jars and sprinkle the surface of each jar with a few drops of pear marc, liqueur or brandy to add more flavour. Seal tightly and keep in a dark, dry place.

APPLE AND ORANGE JAM

Ingredients

$\frac{7}{8}$ lb/350g juicy oranges
 $\frac{1}{2}$ lb/200g peeled, cored, sliced apples
 $\frac{2}{3}$ cups/1 $\frac{1}{2}$ lb/600g sugar

Method

Pare off the rind of the two oranges, taking care to leave behind all the white pith, which is very bitter. Chop quite finely. Peel all the remaining oranges and remove all traces of pith from each orange. Cut the oranges into pieces, discarding the seeds and the fibrous strips from the thin edge of each segment. Place the flesh and juice in a non-aluminum saucepan and add the apples (these provide extra pectin to ensure a good set) and the sugar.

Bring the mixture to the boil and keep it boiling for 5 minutes without skimming.

Once the apples are cooked, remove from the heat and put the mixture through a sieve or food mill (or a processor).

Return to the pan, stir in the chopped peel and simmer slowly. Removing the scum now and then. When the jam has thickened to the consistency of honey, remove from the heat and ladle the hot jam into jars. Seal tightly and keep in a cool, dark place.

In Blue Ribbon Pickles & Preserves: 75 of the Most Mouth-Watering, Award-Winning Recipes from America's State, County, and Local Fairs (St. Martin's Press), Maria Polushkin Robbins has collected a delectable assortment of recipes, ranging from unusual Honeydew Chutney and Tomato Pineapple Preserves to traditional offerings such as Peach Jam and Farm-Fresh Strawberry Jam.

The two recipes from this volume which are reproduced below are so easy to execute that both experienced and inexperienced cooks are sure to be delighted.

Irene Haas's recipe for Blueberry Freezer Jam requires no cooking, which not only eliminates what can be a time-consuming part of jam preparation, but also ensures that the jam retains a fresh, fruity taste.

Crock Pot Apple Butter, from Alice P. Thiele, also may be placed in airtight containers and frozen. Or, if you prefer to try your hand at traditional canning, just follow the instructions for sterilizing jars and rings, and process filled jars in a boiling-water bath.

BLUEBERRY FREEZER JAM

$\frac{1}{4}$ cup powdered fruit pectin
2 tablespoons sugar
1 cup blueberries, mashed
 $\frac{1}{4}$ cup sugar
2 tablespoons corn syrup
2 tablespoons lemon juice

Combine pectin and 2 tablespoons sugar. Stir into blueberries in a mixer bowl. Add remaining ingredients. Beat at low speed for 7 minutes. Pour into jelly jars and cover. Let stand overnight at room temperature. Store in freezer.

CROCK POT APPLE BUTTER

Apples
Sugar
Cinnamon

Core and slice apples, but do not peel. Cook apples, covered, in a large pot, over very low heat, until they are tender. Do not add liquid; they will make their own. Strain apples through a sieve or press through a food mill, to remove peeling. Measure the apple sauce, then measure sugar to equal 1 cup more than half the amount of applesauce. For example: For 10 cups applesauce, use 5 cups sugar. For 8 cups applesauce, use 5 cups sugar. Add cinnamon to taste, about 1 tablespoon. Combine applesauce, sugar, and cinnamon in crock pot and mix well. Cook uncovered on high for 5 hours (well on a crock pot is 300°F).

Sterilize canning jars and lids according to directions below.

Ladle apple butter into hot, sterilized jars, leaving $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch headroom, and seal with sterilized lids according to manufacturer's instructions. Process in a boiling-water bath for 10 minutes. Or put in airtight containers and freeze.

Yield: 8 cups of applesauce will yield about 5 pints.

Sterilize jars and lids: Wash all canning jars and lids in warm soapy water. Place jars in a large pot, cover with water, and bring to a boil. Boil for 15 minutes to sterilize. Place lids and screwbands in a smaller saucepan. Bring to a boil and boil for 15 minutes to sterilize. Leave jars and lids in hot water until ready to fill.

QUINTESSENTIALLY AMERICAN in style, this patchwork shawl collar pullover from Crossings for fall, 1988, is made from a blend of wool tweed and cotton. It's worn over a cotton basket stripe mock turtleneck.

WHAT DOES "CKD" MEAN? IT MEANS YOU'RE HIRING AN EXPERT

The initials "CKD" after the name of a kitchen remodeling professional stand for "Certified Kitchen Designer."

To become a CKD, a kitchen designer must demonstrate his or her technical understanding, knowledge and ability to communicate ideas during a stringent examination conducted by the Society of Certified Kitchen Designers, according to Bill Mathisen, CKD, administrator of the professional organization.

"The certification program was created by the National Kitchen & Bath Association to establish a set of professional standards to advance the design segment of the kitchen industry and to provide the consumer with the assurance of professionalism," Mathisen said.

"Every CKD is committed to a code of professional conduct covering the highest standards of personal and professional conduct, ethical business practices, knowledge of applicable laws, building codes and other legal requirements," Mathisen added.

There are nearly 1,000 CKDs in the U.S. and Canada.

For a free, city-by-city list of CKDs, write the Society of Certified Kitchen Designers, 124 Main St., Hackettstown, NJ 07840 or call (201) 852-0033.

Capitalize on plentiful vegetable harvests of late summer

Just before the breezes of autumn turn chill, the harvest is at its most abundant. The fruits of summer—tomatoes by the bushel, foot-long zucchini, glossy purple eggplant, and peppers in a rainbow of hues—tantalize with their flavor and fragrance, brightening both garden and table in a final burst of color before the leaves turn and fall off the trees, and the first hint of snow nips in the air.

This is the time to take advantage of summer's last generous bounty, to prepare an array of dishes which capture the season's fruitfulness as winter's barrenness stares us in the face.

It's also a perfect opportunity to make use of the barbecue before it's put away for the winter, the savory-charred flavor of the food leaving a lingering taste of summer in the mouth.

Many of the summertime vegetables are Mediterranean in origin; these, at their sweetest and most colorful as the season draws near its end, harmonize with each other in a myriad of dishes, as well as standing flavorfully on their own, or enhanced by such herbs as basil and rosemary, sage and thyme.

Eggplant is a vegetable which, staple to the Mediterranean region, yet has had only limited acceptance in North America. Yet its versatility, no less than its sweet, slightly smoky flavor, makes it a particularly appealing summer vegetable.

And, because it is substantial, in certain recipes it makes a perfectly acceptable alternative to meat.

The recipes below, for Roasted Pepper and Eggplant Dip and Grilled Eggplant with Caper and Anchovy Sauce, demonstrate different aspects of this culinary chameleon. Both are reproduced from The Joy of Grilling (Barron's), by Joe Famularo.

ROASTED PEPPER AND EGGPLANT DIP

Serves 4 to 6 as dip,
1 to 2 as vegetable

Ingredients

- 1 large eggplant
- 1 to 2 garlic cloves, halved lengthwise
- 2 red or green bell peppers
- 2 teaspoon coriander seeds
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 4 to 6 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 to 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice

1. Preheat oven to 425°. Make knife slices in the eggplant and tuck in the garlic deeply. Grease a baking sheet and place the eggplant on it. Bake for 20 to 30 minutes until the eggplant is soft.

2. Place the peppers directly on the grill or over a gas flame and turn until skins are blackened all over and the peppers are soft and cooked. Wash the charred skins off under running water. Halve the peppers, removing the seeds and core. While the peppers are cooking, roast the coriander seeds in a heavy dry skillet over medium heat until fragrant, then grind them. Peel the baked eggplant, removing all the skin.

3. Place the prepared eggplant and peppers in a food processor and puree. Add the salt and coriander. With the machine running, trickle in the oil, which will be absorbed as in a mayonnaise. Adjust the seasoning, add lemon juice to taste and turn puree into a bowl. Serve warm or cold.

GRILLED EGGPLANT WITH CAPER AND ANCHOVY SAUCE

Serves 6

Ingredients

- 2 small eggplants (about 12 ounces each)
- Salt
- 1/2 cup olive oil

Sauce

- 1/2 cup olive oil
- 1/4 cup red wine vinegar
- 1 anchovy
- 2 garlic cloves, minced
- 1/4 cup chopped parsley
- 2 tablespoons chopped shallot
- 2 tablespoons drained capers
- Freshly ground pepper

1. Cut the ends off the eggplants but leave them unpeeled. Stand each on end and cut lengthwise into 1/4-inch slices. Salt lightly, lay in colander and allow to drain for about 30 minutes. Dry each slice. Brush oil on both sides and grill slices over a medium-hot fire until tender, turning once; do not char. Remove slices as they are cooked and roll up each one. Set on a platter.

2. For the sauce, combine oil and vinegar, then mash in the anchovy. Add garlic, parsley, shallot, capers and pepper. Pour over eggplant rolls and let marinate at least 30 minutes. Serve at room temperature.

Tomatoes are the quintessential summer vegetable, and one of the best ways to use up quantities of them is in a fresh tomato soup. Fragrant with fresh herbs, the following recipe for Provençal Tomato Soup, is reproduced from Fresh from France: Vegetable Creations (E.P. Dutton), by Faye Levy.

PROVENÇAL TOMATO SOUP

Soupe de Tomates à la Provençale

Makes 4 servings

- 2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
- 1 large onion, thinly sliced
- 3 small garlic cloves, minced
- 4 pounds very ripe soft tomatoes, cored and cut in eighths
- Salt
- 1/2 to 3/4 teaspoon sugar
- 2 tablespoons coarsely chopped fresh basil
- 3/4 teaspoon minced dried thyme
- Freshly ground pepper
- 1 clove
- 1 bay leaf

Herb Oil

- 1 large garlic clove
- 1/2 cup loosely packed fresh parsley
- 1/2 cup loosely packed fresh basil
- 3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
- 1 tablespoon thin strips of fresh basil, or a few small whole basil leaves, for garnish (optional)

In a large heavy saucepan, heat oil over low heat, add onion, and cook, stirring often, about 20 minutes, or until soft and just beginning to brown. Add garlic and cook, stirring, 1 minute.

Add tomatoes, sprinkle them with salt, and stir. Add 1/2 teaspoon sugar, basil, thyme, and a pinch of pepper. Tie clove and bay leaf in cheesecloth, add to saucepan, and push into tomatoes. Bring to a boil, cover, and simmer over medium heat, stirring often, for 20 minutes, or until very soft. Discard cheesecloth bag.

Purée tomato mixture in a food mill, using fine disk. Push as much as possible through until pulp remaining in food mill is dry. Scrape off any mixture remaining on underside of disk. Rinse saucepan. Return purée to pan and bring to a boil, reduce heat to low, and simmer, uncovered, stirring often, about 15 minutes, or until soup is of desired thickness. (Soup can be kept, covered, 1 day in refrigerator.)

Herb Oil

In a food processor, chop garlic clove, add basil and parsley, and process until finely minced. Add oil and purée until blended. The mixture will not be smooth and emulsified. Transfer to a bowl and stir briefly to blend in oil.

Just before serving, reheat soup if necessary. Remove from heat and stir in herb oil. Taste and adjust seasoning, adding remaining sugar if desired. Serve garnished with basil.

End-of-summer zucchini tend to be large—good for stuffing with a savory meat mixture—but lacking in the flavor that the tender, young zucchini boast.

On the other hand, if you're culling zucchini from your own garden, and you remember to keep picking them, even at summer's end you should have an ample supply of small zucchini, which are perfectly suited to the following recipe, Zucchini Purée with Basil, which also is reproduced from Fresh from France: Vegetable Creations.

Try your hand at Chinese poker

Chinese poker has four to seven players, uses a standard deck, and is fun to play.

That's where the similarity ends.

When Saturday night poker is played in Beijing, no money is bet, each hand can have as many as six winners, and a single nine sometimes (but not always!) beats a pair of sevens.

These strange rules are the result of decades of isolation from the Westerners who first taught the Chinese game.

For 40 years, Chinese poker players handed down the rules by word of mouth, whispered behind closed doors during decades when card playing was a crime.

It's no surprise some interesting changes have taken place.

Chinese poker, pronounced pu-kur, has evolved into a blend of GI card games, including hearts and rummy, according to anthropologist Dr. Tony Hyman, who recently compared card games in various regions of China.

In American poker, each hand has a single winner (except split-the-pot games). Everyone else loses.

Chinese poker has a single loser, and everyone else wins. This emphasis on group success and individual shame is just one of many changes.

Cards aren't dealt; players pick their own. Play goes counter-clockwise. And at the end of the game, only the loser hasn't thrown in all his cards.

Or all her cards, since pu-kur is popular with women as well.

Chinese youth particularly enjoy pu-kur, and are eager to play cards with Americans. Hyman found himself invited to 2:00 AM card games with the hotel staff in city after city.

Even though each region played its own variations, pu-kur "is really simple once you know the rules," Hyman says, "and it turns out to be a great strategy game."

The hardest part was playing quietly so as not to wake other hotel guests. "Chinese play pu-kur with a lot of cheering," Hyman laughs.

Hyman's son Dan enjoyed pu-kur so much he began selling the rules for $5 at game conventions to help pay his college tuition.

Dan will teach you how to play Pu-Kur for only $2, he says, "if you pay in cash and include a self-addressed stamped envelope with your order."

"I know it's not businesslike to insist on cash," the 15-year-old honor student frowns, "but banks hassle kids who bring in a pile of tiny checks."

Dan's address is 1947 Chapman Rd., Claremont, CA 91711.

Chinese poker can be played with an ordinary deck of cards, Dan explains, but friends thought it would be "kinda neat" to play a Chinese game with Chinese cards.

So the enterprising high school junior now also sells pictorial cards imported from Tianjin, China, for $3 a deck. Rules and cards total $5, "plus a stamped envelope with your address already printed on it," Dan reminds, "as I'm only a one-kid company and that speeds response."

"Don't be surprised to see 'puke' printed on the box of cards," Dan laughs, "that's how the Chinese spell poker!"

Is there really a Loch Ness Monster?

About 90 million years ago, huge animals called dinosaurs roamed the land. We know that dinosaurs have become extinct, but we do not know for certain what happened to huge sea beasts such as the 40 foot long mosasaurs.

Could they have mahaged to survive?

In Scotland, people have been reporting seeing a monster since as long ago as 565 A.D. Pictures supposedly taken on the lake usually show either a series of humps or a small, snake-like head with a long neck on a 30 foot body rising out of the water.

Some people insist that these are only pictures of floating logs or groups of playful otters.

But until there is a more definite answer, there may well be a Loch Ness Monster!

Sipping and swinging to your favorite Rock & Roll

Time to brush off those old LP's and give the CD player a rest! Throw yourself back into the fifties, then jump into the sixties as you boogie through the decades with Seagram's 7 Crown. "The Seagram's 7 History of Rock & Roll" is a fact-packed and enjoyable 24-page free booklet that covers such early greats as Chuck Berry and Buddy Holly, the extraordinary impact of Elvis Presley and the Beatles, through MTV and the video age.

The brightly illustrated booklet makes for perfect reading, with detailed sections packed with anecdotes on the various stages of Rock & Roll's development. Arranged chronologically and by type of music, "The Seagram's 7 History of Rock & Roll" explores the sounds of the fifties, with Fats Domino and Sam Cooke, looks at the female groups of the early sixties, such as the Shirelles and the Ronettes, stops off at Motown with Martha and the Vandellas, witnesses the British invasion of The Beatles, The Stones and The Who, and takes a trip into psychedelic music with Jimi Hendrix, Pink Floyd and Cream. Heavy Metal, punk, and the video age are covered in detail, with sections devoted to each. In addition, each section features easy reference lists of influential pop stars and hit songs throughout the years.

"The Seagram's 7 History of Rock & Roll" provides rockers with fun bits of trivia and behind-the-scenes information on all the great groups of yesterday and today. For example, you'll learn that the Shirelles had recorded together for seven years before their first hit: 1963's "Tonight's the Night." And, did you know that two of Motown's most influential groups started out with the uninspired names of The Primes and their female counterparts, The Primettes? They went on to become The Temptations and The Supremes.

In addition to hot play lists and tons of trivia fodder, "The Seagram's 7 History of Rock & Roll" includes a coupon offer for the Seagram's 7 Crown Rock & Roll Classics Collection. This five-cassette set offers the greatest Rock & Roll hits from the '50s, '60s and '70s, including chart busters from such artists as Blood, Sweat & Tears, Mitch Ryder, Johnny Winter, and The Byrds. The entire collection is available for $15.95 through "The Seagram's 7 History of Rock & Roll." To receive a free copy of the "History of Rock & Roll" send a postcard with your name and address to: Seagram's 7 History of Rock & Roll, 301 East 57th Street, Suite 300, New York, NY 10022.

And, while you're groovin' to all your favorite tunes from way back when, enjoy one of the great Seagram's 7 cocktails, like the ever-popular "7 & 7," or the new taste sensation, the Seagram's "7th Heaven," made by pouring 1 oz. Seagram's 7 and 1/2 oz. amaretto over ice in a tall highball glass. Add orange juice, stir and garnish as desired.

JUST DESSERTS

It was discovered around 1,300 years ago in Ethiopia. Johann Sebastian Bach penned these words in praise of it in 1732: "Hail, thou most precious of blisses, choicer than ten thousand kisses, sweeter than muscatel wine! Ah! Ah!"

During the 16th century, it was known as the "wine of Islam." It was popularized in America after the Boston Tea Party and, today, Americans consume it at a rate of 450 million cups a day.

It is coffee. Coffee plants, actually small trees, are cultivated as bushes. They produce clusters of "cherries" which, when ripe, are bright red. Inside each "cherry" are two coffee beans. It is from these beans that all coffee products are made.

Whether fresh roasted, freeze-dried, brewed, instant or decaffeinated, coffee's pungent aroma and distinct full-bodied flavor are unquestionably unique.

What better way to warm both body and soul during the brisk days of autumn than with a cup of fresh brewed coffee?

However, there are other ways to enjoy coffee than in a mug. Why not consider baking with it? Coffee, as a flavoring, can be incorporated into cakes, pies, sauces, mousses, ice creams and even pastries.

The following recipes, culled from a variety of sources, exemplify the use of coffee in baking. The delicious aroma of coffee makes these desserts smell as good as they taste.

When cooking with coffee, instant (not freeze-dried) works best and, if you use brewed coffee, it is most effective when strong and concentrated.

Below are two recipes which combine the flavor of chocolate with the essence of coffee. Mocha desserts are as popular as they are delicious because the two flavors mingle perfectly.

The recipe below for Mocha Cheesecake is taken from Jennifer Lang's CASTINGS: The Best from Ketchup to Caviar (Crown Publishers Inc.).

In The Ma Cuisine Cooking School

Cookbook (Random House), Linda Lloyd, Toni Mindling Schulman, Patrick Terriall and Helene Siegel offer us another tempting dessert, City Chocolate with Coffee Crème Anglaise, created by Susan Feniger and Mary Sue Milliken of City Restaurant.

MOCHA CHEESECAKE

Makes one 8-inch cheesecake

- 1/4 cup graham-cracker crumbs
- 1 cup plus 1 1/2 tablespoons sugar
- 4 tablespoons unsalted butter, slightly softened
- 6 ounces semisweet chocolate chips
- 2 tablespoons heavy cream
- 1 1/2 pounds cream cheese
- 2 eggs
- 1 cup sour cream
- 1/2 cup prepared strong espresso coffee
- 1 1/2 teaspoons vanilla extract

1. In mixer or a food processor, blend the graham-cracker crumbs with the 1 1/2 tablespoons sugar and the butter and press this mixture onto the bottom of an 8-inch springform pan. Place prepared pan into the refrigerator to chill while preparing cake batter.

2. Melt the chocolate chips with the heavy cream over low heat; cool slightly.

3. Place the cream-cheese in the bowl of an electric mixer; add 1 cup sugar and eggs and beat until smooth, creamy, and well blended.

4. Pour batter into the prepared pan and bake in a preheated 350°F. oven for 45 minutes. Cool on a wire rack; cake will become firm as it cools.

CITY CHOCOLATE WITH COFFEE CRÈME ANGLAISE

Serves 8

- 3 tablespoons brandy
- 1 cup golden raisins
- 1 pound 2 ounces semisweet chocolate
- 1 1/4 cups (3 1/2 sticks) unsalted butter
- 10 eggs, separated

1. Line a 2-quart mold with enough plastic wrap to hang over the sides about five inches.

2. Warm the brandy over low heat. Remove from heat, stir in raisins and set aside to soak.

3. Chop the chocolate in small pieces and melt with the butter in a double boiler or bowl over simmering water. Remove from heat and whisk until blended in a large mixing bowl. Gently whisk in the raisins and egg yolks.

4. Beat the egg whites until soft peaks form. Stir a cup of the chocolate mixture into the whites. Fold the whites gently into the remaining chocolate mixture in three stages.

5. Pour into the prepared mold, smooth top and cover with plastic wrap touching the top. Refrigerate for 6 hours or overnight.

6. To unmold: Remove the plastic wrap on top. Invert the mold onto a serving platter. The chocolate should release easily when the mold is lifted. Peel off the plastic and smooth the chocolate with a spatula.

Coffee Crème Anglaise

- 2 cups milk
- 3 teaspoons instant coffee
- 8 egg yolks
- 1 1/4 cups granulated sugar
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

1. Mix the milk and coffee in a medium-sized saucepan and bring to a boil. Remove from heat.

2. Beat the egg yolks and sugar until a ribbon forms when the beaters are lifted.

3. Stir a cup of the milk and coffee into the egg mixture. Then pour the egg mixture into the remaining warm milk and cook over low heat for about 5 minutes, until the mixture coats the back of a wooden spoon.

4. Remove from heat and continue to stir and cool, about 5 minutes. Stir in vanilla. Cover and refrigerate until cold.

5. To serve: Spoon some Crème Anglaise onto eight dessert plates. Top with a slice of the cold chocolate dessert.

This next recipe, from Perfect Picnics (Salem House), by Catherine Redington, incorporates coffee in the frosting for a delightful French-inspired dessert, Coffee Choux Puffs.

COFFEE CHOUX PUFFS

Makes 10-12

- 1/4 cup butter
- 1/4 cup water
- 1/2 cup, plus 2 teaspoons all-purpose flour
- 2 eggs, beaten

Filling

- 1 1/4 cups heavy cream
- Few drops vanilla extract
- 2 tablespoons superfine sugar

Frosting

- 1 cup confectioners' sugar
- 1 teaspoon coffee extract
- 2 tablespoons crushed almonds

Place the butter and water in a small pan. Heat gently until the butter melts and bring to the boil. Add the flour all at once and beat, over the heat, for 2 minutes until the mixture comes away from the sides of the pan. Allow to cool slightly. Gradually beat in the eggs, adding just enough to give a fairly stiff, smooth glossy paste. Place in a large pastry bag fitted with a plain nozzle and pipe rounds the size of ping-pong balls onto greased baking sheets. Bake at 425°F for 20 to 25 minutes until very crisp and light. Cool on a wire rack.

To make the filling, whip the cream, vanilla and sugar until it stands in peaks. Split the puffs and fill them with the cream.

To make the frosting, blend the confectioners' sugar with the coffee extract and just enough water to make a thick glaze. Spread a little frosting over each puff. Allow to dry before packing in a rigid container. Chill before transporting.

Did you know that...

• British sanitation engineer Thomas Crapper invented a system which allowed a tank and toilet bowl combination to work together? Crapper subsequently received the highest honor bestowed by the British: Incorporation of his surname as both a noun and a verb in the English language.

• The first flushing "water closet" is believed to have been installed, circa 1700 B.C., in the Minoan Palace of Knossos on the island of Crete?

• Sir John Harrington is credited with inventing the first "washout closet" in the 16th century?

• The baths of Roman Emperor Caracalla covered a 28-acre site and contained more than 1,600 marble seats?

• Roman baths measured 10-12 feet in diameter and were three feet deep? A circular seat 10 inches from the bottom allowed the bathers to sit and wash themselves.

• American kitchens were not always part of the house? Up until the last third of the 19th century, slaves in the South prepared meals outdoors or in separate buildings, and served them in the dining room of the house.

• The American kitchen retail business is 25 years old? Many kitchen retail showrooms opened in the early 1960s, when retailers organized what is known today as the National Kitchen & Bath Association. Up until the early 1950s, there were few kitchen retailers that offered their clients a showroom where they could touch and see what they wanted to buy.

• Kitchen designers who earn certification as a Certified Kitchen Designer or CKD, must pass a stringent written examination and other requirements established by their peers to demonstrate their professional competency?

• Kelvinator introduced the first electric refrigerator for the mass market in 1914? In recent years, the brand was acquired by White Consolidated Industries, Major Appliance Group, a division of AEG Electrolux, the world's largest major appliance manufacturer.

• The first microwave oven in the U.S. was made by Raytheon in 1947, and was sold to hotels and restaurants for over $3,000? Tappan introduced the first model designed for home use in 1955.

• JennAir offered the first electric downdraft range in 1965?

• Hotpoint introduced the first automatic electric dishwasher in 1940?
