Hostages Airborne To Freedom

By The Associated Press

A plane carrying the 52 American hostages, freedom bound after 444 days of captivity in Iran, took off today from Tehran's Mehrabad Airport, the official Iranian news agency Pars and a policeman at the airport reported.

The departure was shrouded in confusion, with conflicting reports on the takeoff, and no official announcement from the Iranian or United States governments saying that the harrowing ordeal for the American captives had ended after 14½ months.

The departure came after negotiations that wrapped up final agreement exchanging the hostages for Iranian assets frozen by the United States.

The 3,000-mile flight to Algiers would take 6 to 10 hours, depending on whether refueling stops were made. It was expected that the hostages would go on to a U.S. Air Force hospital in Wiesbaden, West Germany, a 1,000-mile flight from Algiers that normally takes 2½ to 3 hours.

There were reports from Western sources monitoring the hostage situation in Ankara that flight plans filed by the Algerian aircraft included a refueling stop in Ankara or Damascus, Syria, Rome, or Athens.

The report on the hostages' departure came in the final hour of President Carter's term of office. He had tried to complete an agreement with Iran on Monday, but as the hours slipped away, Carter was deprived of a chance to greet the hostages before he left office.

Thus, the reported freedom for the Americans — 50 men and two women — coincided with the end of the Carter presidency as power was transferred to Ronald Reagan at inauguration ceremonies in Washington.

The hostages were seized Nov. 4, 1979 by young Moslem militants who stormed the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. They said the hostages would be released if the United States handed over Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, then undergoing medical treatment in the United States. The shah found refuge in Egypt and died in Cairo on July 27, 1980.

Release of the hostages would end 14½ months of negotiations, American economic and diplomatic pressure and the failed attempt last April to send American commando teams to Tehran to free the hostages by military action.

Tuesday update

To Appeal Bilingual Decision

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General Mark White says the Legislature — not a federal judge — should set state policy on bilingual education.

White said Monday he would appeal U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice's decision requiring the state to expand the bilingual education program in public schools.

Justice's ruling "opens the door to requiring the state — as a constitutional right — to teach anyone who shows up at the schoolhouse door in any language they desire," White said.

State Pay Raise Proposed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Feeling "a little time pressure," Sen. Lloyd Doggett has proposed an emergency pay raise for state employees that would cost $109 million over the next seven months.

Doggett's proposal — scheduled for a hearing today before the Senate Finance Committee — is twice as much as a proposed pay hike submitted by Gov. Bill Clements. It would become effective Feb. 1.

Chiles Now Glad, Not Mad

WASHINGTON (AP) — The presidential inauguration of Ronald Reagan has prompted Texas conservative Eddie Chile's to change his tune from "mad" to "glad."

"Just say I'm in my glad period, that's all," the Fort Worth businessman said Monday at a Texas inaugural celebration.

Chiles campaigned for the Reagan-Bush ticket and his "I'm Mad Too, Eddie" bumper stickers became a common sight in Texas.

He claimed there was a strong turnout of Texas and Oklahoma Republicans for the inauguration because of the conservative bent in those states.

"They are looking forward to a good conservative regime," Chiles said.

The SDN Column

We saw more television sets in operation while making our routine rounds Monday than ever before. In fact, we saw televisions going in places where we did not even know there were televisions, indicating that some people may have brought their smaller sets with them to work Monday to keep up with the hostage situation in Iran.

And, after making several stops and returning briefly to our own desk, we found a bunch of our colleagues anxiously peering into the tube in Publisher Roy McQueen's office. This particular set is seldom used, except when young Marc McQueen is on hand and uses it to keep up with some of his favorite programs.

But it was attracting plenty of attention Monday morning as the networks were trying to keep pace with the situation in Iran.

Everyone was holding his or her breath, so to speak, because there have been so many times in the past when it seemed that progress was being made toward freeing the hostages, only to have the Iranians dash it all. For this reason, most of us here at the SDN office were not willing to consider them freed until their plane landed safely in a neutral country.

The hostages will have a place in history. And it should be interesting to see how the historians a century later treat this incident---or even in the next decade. Lots of people had ideas about how to get them out, but nobody could guarantee that they could be freed unharmed, or even alive. Of course there was no assurance that they would remain unharmed or alive in captivity, but every day that passed without injury was regarded as progress, and it finally paid off.

It also appeared, especially in recent weeks, that President-elect Ronald Reagan and President Jimmy Carter were pretty much in accord on the negotiations. It is certain that Carter wanted to get them home, or at least out of Iran, before he left the White House, and that Reagan did not want this problem dangling when he entered the White House.

But, whatever the reason, and whoever deserves the credit, Americans obviously are glad to see it end.

Ray Peveler, chief appraiser for the Scurry County Appraisal District, attended a session in Austin the other day and came back convinced that this county was wise in establishing its county-wide appraisal district last year, despite the fact that it did not become mandatory until 1981. Many counties that waited are having problems, it seems. Some reported that some of their taxing entities were declining to participate. But they were told in Austin that they have no choice, that is if they want to assess and collect taxes. Nobody can levy any property taxes now without using an appraisal district's valuation figures.

Peveler also was sympathizing with a chief appraiser from another county who took a couple of his appraisers with him to the meeting because he thought it would be of benefit to his district. The two underlings were hired away from him by other counties before they got out of Austin.

Peveler didn't take any of his staff with him to the session. He took John Reed, chairman of the county board.

Price Daniel Jr. Death Shrouded By Mystery

LIBERTY, Texas (AP) — Price Daniel Jr., former Texas House speaker and son of a former governor, U.S. senator and Texas Supreme Court justice, was shot to death Monday night in his Liberty home.

The prominent politician also was a great-great grandson of Sam Houston, first president of the Republic of Texas.

Sheriff Buck Eckols termed the case a homicide. An autopsy was conducted today in Houston.

Only Daniel, his wife, Vickie, 33, and three children were home at the time of the shooting, and Mrs. Daniel had filed for divorce at the first of the year, The Associated Press learned.

Mrs. Daniel called for an ambulance after the shooting. Ambulance attendants found Daniel dead and notified the sheriff's office.

Mrs. Daniel was hospitalized shortly thereafter and doctors said she was suffering from shock.

"When we found her, she was real hysterical," Eckols said.

Eckols said he would question her when doctors approved and when her lawyer was with her.

Eckols said it appeared Daniel had been shot "above and to the right of his navel and possibly in the face." "We're waiting to see just how many times he was shot," Eckols said. "There was a lot of blood around the mouth and nostrils. It was hard to tell."

Daniel, 39, an unsuccessful 1978 candidate for Texas attorney general, also was a nephew of Bill Daniel, former governor of Guam.

The body was found in a hallway in the ranch-style Daniel home a mile north of Liberty and Eckols said a shotgun, rifle and two spent rifle shells were recovered. He said no signs of a break-in were found.

Zeke Zbranek, a Liberty lawyer, family friend and former legislator, said he was shocked.

"I can't believe it," he said.

Daniel was a member of the Texas House from 1969 through 1975 and served only one term as speaker.

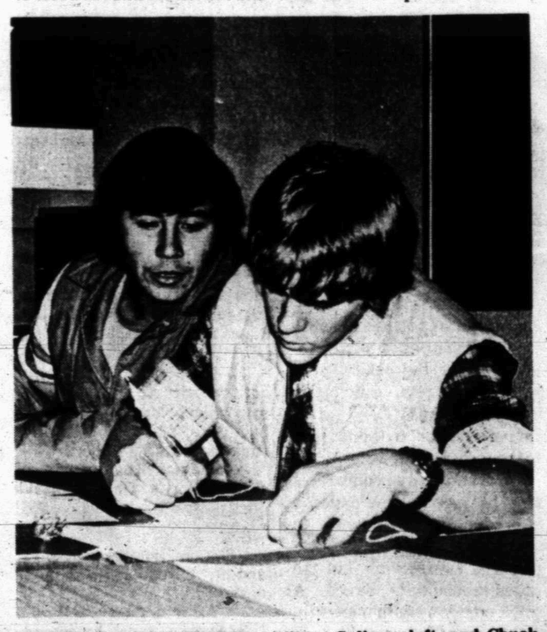

Registration Continuing At WTC Today

Registration for the 1981 spring semester was continuing today at Western Texas College.

Freshmen were registering this morning, and students who had not signed earlier were to register this afternoon. Sophomores registered Monday afternoon and registration for evening classes was held Monday night.

Students who could not be present to register Monday or today may take advantage of the evening hours tonight and are asked to go to the administration building after regular office hours.

Students who register on Wednesday morning or afternoon are to go first to the student center.

WHERE DO YOU START?—Gilbert Salinas, left, and Chuck Wheeler, were among sophomores registering for the Spring semester at Western Texas College yesterday between 1 and 5 p.m. Freshmen registered for classes this morning from 9 a.m. until noon.

Reagan Inaugurated As 40th President

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan was inaugurated 40th President of the United States today, summoning Americans to "an era of national renewal" amid bells and cannon, music and pageantry that became a celebration, too, for 52 American hostages reported freed at last from Iranian bondage.

A Tehran airport policeman said the hostages were out, but as he walked to the inaugural stand to yield office, outgoing President Carter said, "Can't say yet."

At the stroke of noon, power passed from James Earl Carter Jr., Democrat, to Ronald Wilson Reagan, Republican, conservative, veteran of Hollywood, governor of California, overwhelming choice of his countrymen.

Denied a second term, Carter watched as Reagan raised his right hand, put his left on a family Bible, and swore the simple, 35-word oath of office. A 21-gun salute boomed out over the Capitol and the marble monuments of American government.

Moments before, George Bush had taken the almost identical oath of vice presidential office.

"With all the creative energy at our command, let us begin an era of national renewal," Reagan said in his inaugural address. "Let us renew our determination, our courage and our strength. Let us renew our faith and our hope. We have every right to dream heroic dreams."

Reagan said Americans are entitled, for they are themselves heroes, "you, the citizens of this blessed land.

"Your dreams, your hopes, your goals are going to be the dreams, the hopes and goals of this administration, so help me God."

Reagan's invocation to his new administration began with a pledge to confront and handle "an economic affliction of the worst proportions. We must act today in order to preserve tomorrow. And let there be no misunderstanding — we are going to act beginning today."

The new president said the nation's economic ills - "will not go away in days, weeks, or months, but they will go away ....

"In this present crisis, government is not the solution; it is the problem," Reagan said, a line sounded day after campaign day in the quest that won him the White House by landslide last Nov. 4.

Ask Us

Q.—Is it true that if a student misses 10 days of school, he is automatically flunked?

A.—Snyder High School has a rule that a student cannot receive credit for a course if he or she misses 10 class sessions or more, says Jack Gorman, assistant superintendent-personnel. State regulations say that students must attend school 165 days per year. Snyder has 175 classroom days on its calendar, which means if this rule was followed strictly, only five absences per semester would be allowed if a student receives credit. However, Gorman says most schools are a little more lenient than the state recommends, and this includes Snyder. Ten days, of course, means two weeks on the school calendar, and a student who misses that much in a single semester could hardly expect to qualify for credit. In cases of prolonged illness, or handicaps, arrangements may be made for "homebound" instructor service, and in these cases the student is considered to be in class.

Two Promoted By WTS Bank

JOHN GREENE

EVELYN McCOMMON

West Texas State Bank has announced two staff promotions and declared a 50 percent stock dividend following its annual stockholders' and directors' meetings.

Martin Brooks, president, said that all present officers were re-elected and that John Greene, a vice president, had been promoted to the post of executive vice president, a position that had been vacant. Evelyn McCommon, executive secretary, was promoted to the position of assistant cashier.

West Texas State Bank declared the ninth stock dividend in its 30-year history after Brooks reported that the bank had enjoyed a good year in 1980.

"Considering the general economic conditions, it certainly was a satisfactory year," said Brooks. "We are hopeful that conditions will improve further in 1981."

Brooks said that the new year already was off to a good start. In its year-end statement of condition, West Texas State Bank reported an all-time high of slightly more than $48 million in deposits. Since the first of the year, this figure has increased by more than $2 million, putting the bank's deposits over the $50 million mark for the first time in history.

Directors re-elected at the stockholders' meeting include Wayne Boren, honorary chairman and advisory director; H. W. Cargile, chairman of the board; Martin Brooks, president of the bank; Harold Denson, automobile dealer; Herman Doak, investments; Bill Eiland, rancher-stockman and vice president of the bank (inactive); Greene; Charles H. Henderson, vice president of the bank; Holman Odom, rancher-stockman; R. C. Patton, manager of Higginbotham-Bartlett Lumber Co.; and Dale Stuard, senior vice president of the bank.

Other bank officers re-elected are Syble Bley, vice president; Don Head, vice president; Derwin Thompson, vice president and cashier; Robert M. Beard, Bess Callaway, Benny Hollis, Barbara McGee and Shirley Miller, assistant cashiers.

messages from mars

Now hear this... And because thousands of private individuals did hear and heed a call for assistance, Earth is going to continue to hear regularly from Mars for at least a bit longer than scheduled.

A check for $60,000 was delivered to space program officials in a quiet ceremony early in the new year at the Smithsonian Institution's Air and Space Museum in Washington, the first installment in what the organizers of the Viking Fund hope will be an annual contribution of at least $100,000. The purpose will be to keep the robot landed on Mars in the Viking I mission in the planetary information business.

There's no problem with the robot itself. It has been transmitting radiophotos and other information back to Earth without a hitch since planet-fall July 20, 1976. But in an era of tightened budgets and dwindling interest in space, it appeared early in 1980 that the receivers of Earth might have to be turned off. Funds had run out for the processing of Viking's reports, now pouring unevaluated into the computer banks.

A distressing possibility, in the view of some space-oriented private individuals convinced the public would not be getting full value from the billion of its dollars expended in getting Viking to Mars if the few thousands necessary to continue monitoring the probe could not be scraped up.

Hence the Viking Fund, taking at its words a section of NASA's charter from Congress providing for private as well as government funding of space projects.

Viking has been transmitting on a restricted schedule since last August, when its relay station in Mars orbit ran out of gas — literally, the steering compound that had kept cameras and scanners pointed at the Martian surface and antennas trained at Earth having been exhausted after four years. But the surface robot is still good for weather reports and occasional pictures for years to come, possibly through the end of the century.

Providing funds continue to be available to keep the receivers operating and to process data. Which is the task the Viking Fund has set itself. Contributions are being received by the American Astronautical Society at its San Francisco branch, P.O. Box 7205, Menlo Park, Calif. 94025. Checks should be made out to the Viking Fund.

The space program people consider it well worth the effort even though they are not anticipating any more big discoveries on the red planet. On the other hand, there's always the faintest possibility that a hibernating Martian might awaken and decide to take a stroll in Viking's vicinity.

instant business

It's not easy finding anything to smile about in the simmering Polish revolution, but a wire dispatch turned up with a light moment the other day.

The successful — to date — movement to establish independent unions has created an instant business. It is in posters — and buttons and T-shirts and calendars and, who knows, maybe eventually bumper stickers. And it is thriving.

All these items extol the new non-government union, Solidarity, featuring its name in bold red script on white background — Poland's national colors. They are, it was reported, seen everywhere, even on employees of state enterprises.

It is reminiscent of the spin-off from the anti-war, anti-establishment agitation in the United States of the 1960s that appears to have become a permanent part of the national pop culture.

"Only in America" might once have been said of that praticular phenomenon but now it's also a case of "even in Poland."

Unfortunately, however, probably still "never in the Soviet Union."

my turn

by john dunnam

"Next time you're going to be late for dinner, call," is how one of the hostage's wives plans to greet her husband when he finally gets back to civilization. It will be easy to laugh about the matter once its over and hopefully by the time you read this it will be. But you can bet your persian rugs it won't be forgotton.

Maybe I've lived in West Texas so long that I've become a hardcore redneck, but I think that once the hostages are off the planes, the planes should be loaded with bombs (52 would be an appropriate number) and sent back to Iran.

There would really be no body to stop us. The Ruskies have their hands full with Afghanistan and Poland, and I really don't think the Chinese would give a hoot.

We could explain to the United Nations that, "We don't get mad, we get even."

The sad fact is, the situation is a thousand times more complex than that. We would be helping the Iraqis who are more or less backed by the Soviets and as much barbarians as the Iranians. The answer, I think, is compromise. We should drop one 52-ton bomb, with Khomeini painted on the side, squarely on our Embassy. After all, it is our property.

With the hostages home, most Americans may want to just forget Iran like it was a bad dream. However it is there to stay and like it or not we will continue to have to deal with it, unless we can find an alternative for its oil.

Our revenge may come when Iran seeks spare parts for its American made war machine. As twisted as it seems, it may actually be in our interest for Iran not to be totally defeated by Iraq. Of course that doesn't mean we can't delay, sit on our hands and price gouge to our heart's content when it does get in a bind. Maybe we could tie the price of parts to the price of oil.

That may not as be as much fun as bombs but it may have to do. At least for now.

thoughts

A "suit" was a combination of an under and an outer garment. The Hebrews possessed many suits. The number received or kept in store for gifts formed one of the sources of wealth in the East. On special occasions the host offered handsome robes to his guests. "To have clothing" meant possession of wealth and power. Isaiah prophesies that the Lord will take away the leaders from Jerusalem and Judah and babes shall rule. A man will urge his brother to rule.

"When a man shall take hold of his brother of the house of his father, saying, Thou hast clothing, be thou our ruler, and let this ruin be under thy hand." — Isa. 3:6

needed medicines banned

When government controls medicine -- as when it controls anything -- the tendency is to over-control.

Where public health is at issue, the bureaucrat's safest recourse is to say "no."

And thus has the hyper-caution of our government's Food and Drug Administration deprived Americans of some medicines which have benefited Europeans for many years.

Physicians, like the rest of us, are subject to advertising, to commercial influence. Most of them welcome a government review of pharmaceutical products as extra insurance against inappropriate prescriptions.

But has the snoopervision of bureaucrats become counterproductive? In short, does Europe now have better medicine?

Does it make sense, for example, to keep Aspartane -- an artificial sweetner -- off the American market, because in huge doses in lab animals it may be carcinogenic, while we allow diabetics the use of saccharin which as been identified with the same predisposition?

Does it make sense to outlaw a drug like Verapamil, a calcium blocking agent used in managing coronary disease, despite 18 years of experience in Europe where its benefits are widely heralded?

In a convincing case for relaxing FDA restraints, Dr. Sanford Kaplan of Yonkers, N.Y., suggests that drug firms might be permitted "partial introduction of a new, apparently safe and effective drug in a limited and controlled marketplace while carefully monitoring, scrutinizing, evaluating clinical experience."

As is -- avoiding any semblance of human experimentation -- lab scientists have been choking mice with gargantuan quantities of suspect compounds which, understandably, are intolerable.

Critics of the FDA's standards like to remind us that if penicillin were developed today, because of its toxic effects in certain allergic individuals, it would never have been allowed on the market.

The defenders of the FDA will protest that the patient must be given the benefit of any doubt. And while that may sound sensible, it ignores the accepted margin of calculated risk in any medical procedure or prescription.

Aspirin can be deadly.

Dr. Kaplan's proposed "limited clinical test" suggests one option. Here is another: If Europe has elected to be less severe with its veto of new drugs, why don't we at least accept as valid evidence their experience?

It makes no sense for a drug to be proved both safe and effective for 15 years in 15 other countries and banned here.

dangerous precedent

NEW YORK (AP) — Having devised two of the more complex financing deals ever attempted by the U.S. government — the Chrysler rescue plan and release of the Iranian hostages — the Carter administration retires.

But that doesn't mean the problems also retire. Instead, lawyers will be dealing with the agreements and precedents for years to come, and foreign and domestic policies could be affected in subtle ways.

The hostage settlement, for example, might satisfy the governments involved, but it may not be as acceptable to the institutions and individuals connected with the late Shah's frozen assets.

And if the Chrysler agreement is approved by bankers and workers, it could set a pattern for companies avoiding bankruptcy courts and instead reorganizing under the protection of government guarantees.

In each instance the public praise is overwhelming, because immediate and pressing goals have been satisfied, but over time the settlements could begin to look like expedients rather than sound policy-setters.

In the Chrysler case especially, the precedents are obvious:

—The executive branch rather than the courts can now be used in corporate hardship cases. Without federal aid Chrysler would be bankrupt, operating under court-appointed officers.

—Assets that belong to all the people might under some circumstances now be assigned for the benefit of a particular few, such as management and shareholders, without the consent of the people.

—Uncompetitive companies may be saved at the expense of production. The intent is to save Chrysler so as to save jobs and competition, but the opposite could be saved: A weak company with uncertain employment.

Whatever, and despite differences, the deals are huge accomplishments, especially in the human terms expressed by Walter Mondale. "We've got some right here to put those hostages and their families at a very high priority," said the vice president. "We want them home."

Much the same thing was said in the Chrysler situation, and with some justification, but then the comparisons end.

Some 140,000 jobs are said to be at stake in the Chrysler situation, which means at least a half-million family members. And perhaps that many more jobs are involved in related supplier industries.

Chrysler still might become strong again, and should it do so it would solidify the precedent of a corporation turning to the government rather than the courts. If one can do it, then why not another?

In fact, the possibility would seem to exist that sometime in the future a corporation might present government with the ultimatum: Financial guarantees or the company and all it workers go under.

It wouldn't be true, of course, as it is in the Iranian hostage deal, but you can almost place your bets now that it will happen, if it hasn't already.

Berry's World

donald f. graff

It does not make encouraging reading.

Amnesty International has issued its annual report on the state of human rights throughout the world. In 408 pages, the London-based organization reviews the performance over the past 12 months of 110 nations and finds almost all wanting.

Torture, detention without trial, summary execution, persecution of racial and religious minorities, kangaroo courts, suppression of political dissidence, police brutality and other forms of repression continue to be the rule rather than the exception in the conducts of governments toward their own citizens in much of the world.

Examples are all too numerous. In the Soviet Union during the year "inmates of... penal institutions were still being subjected to a regime of chronic hunger, inadequate medical care and difficult, often dangerous compulsory labor."

The Soviets are also found guilty of "the arrest, trial, imprisonment or forced detention in mental hospitals of many dissenters." And in the five years since the signing of the Helsinki accords that supposedly guaranteed certain basic rights to even Soviet citizens, some 500 have been jailed for political offenses.

Most of the Soviet East European allies are similarly taken to task, the East Germans and Romanians specifically for jailing people attempting to leave the countries without permission.

In the Mideast, Iran, understandably, receives special attention for, among other revolutionary practices, "sentences of death and flogging... imposed even when they were not required by Islamic law." Iraq is charged with mass arrests and "routine and systematic torture of political detainees." Similarly Syria, while long-term detention without trial characterizes the administration of justice in Jordan, Saudi Arabia and in North Africa, Morocco and Libya.

Moving on to Latin American, "violations of human rights seemed to be a permanent feature of government policy in dealing with dissent" in Argentina, Chile, El Salvador, Guatemala, Uruguay and Paraguay.

In Asia, Bangladesh is indicted for holding political prisoners for years without trial, Vietnam for herding tens of thousands into "re-education" camps.

All of the above may come as no particular surprise. Rights violations, however, are far from limited to the Communist regimes and the politically underdeveloped Third World. The problem the report observes, cuts across national and ideological boundaries. The West and its associates are not spared.

Israel is criticized for arrest and conviction of "prisoners of conscience, the use of administrative measures to physically restrict individuals without due process of law, including detaining them without trial, the lack of effective safeguards to ensure that the basic rights of those in custody are protected."

When it comes to police brutality, Amnesty International finds its employ against ethnic minorities is not only widespread and severe, but "officially tolerated." In the United States.

There is more, unfortunately all too much more. What it all says is that despite centuries of efforts to spread the concept of the rule of law and wars fought partly in the cause of preserving and expanding human freedom, ours is still not a world where basic human rights are secure or even widely observed.

The incoming American administration may, as advertised, de-emphasize concern for rights as a determining factor in U.S. policy toward the rest of the world. But that does not mean the transgression of rights is going to be any less of a reality and a problem throughout the world. And thus for that administration.

Your Birthday

January 21, 1981

Opportunities to advance your education or to gain new knowledge will present themselves this coming year. Take advantage of them, because you will find ways to put them to immediate uses.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Doing your own things and being your own person has its compensations, but today you will fare better by being a team player. Strive to be cooperative. Find out more of what lies ahead for you in the year following your birthday by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph. Mail $1 for each to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth date.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Much can be accomplished today if you're not subjected to outside pressures. Do what needs doing in your own quiet way, free from interfering influences.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Today will be more enjoyable if you avoid pushy pals. You won't be in the mood to be told what to do, or when or how to do it.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) For the sake of peace on the home front today don't invite or introduce outside opinions into family matters. Settle issues among kith and kin.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Today some of your ideas may be challenged but try not to let this irritate you. Think of it as an opportunity to prove your points and you will.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Financial conditions could be a mixed bag for you today. In areas where you have control, you should show a profit. Where others are involved, it's another story.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) In an important one-to-one relationship today you may have to deal with a person who holds strong opposing views. Tact will win him over, testiness won't.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You may be asked to do something for another today which could initially cause you to feel imposed upon. Just recall what this person did for you. It'll sooth your feelings.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You may experience some peer pressure today to do something with which you're not in accord. Instead of overreacting, finesse your way out.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Major achievements are possible today, but not necessarily on the first try. You can accomplish what you hoped to do by taking an alternate route.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This can be a very successful day in your dealings with large organizations, provided you don't act impulsively or jump to conclusions. Slow down.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Something could occur today which at first glance may cause you to feel you're getting the short end of the stick. It can be renegotiated, however, so that all will be treated equally.

YELLOW RIBBONS—Leisure Lodge staff members, Linda Cortez, left, and Pat Featherston, went out in the cold yesterday to decorate the outside of the building with yellow ribbons to celebrate the impending release of the hostages from Iran.

SPEECH—Linda Reese, a resident of Leisure Lodge, gave a short speech yesterday during a party there saying it was wonderful to have the hostages coming home after over 14 months in Iran.

Lodge Set To Welcome Hostages Back Home

The residents and staff at Leisure Lodge celebrated the imminent release of the American hostages in Iran yesterday at 3 p.m. with a party in the lobby.

Two staff members spent a few cold hours outside tying yellow ribbons on the trees, posts and doors and residents made yellow yarn ribbons all day to wear and to pin on all visitors that come during the next few days.

"We are asking everyone to join us in wearing yellow ribbons to bring attention to these brave Americans," said Linda Reese, a Lodge resident, during a short speech she gave.

The record, "Tie a Yellow Ribbon," was played during refreshments.

Dear Abby

If Housewives Were Paid, They'd All Hire Maids

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: ANONYMOUS MOM needs to learn a few things. She scolded her son for leaving his bike in the middle of the street, saying, "If it gets stolen, I'm not buying you another one." Then her smart-mouthed kid shot back, "You didn't buy me the first one —Daddy did!"

She said that made her realize that because she wasn't a wage earner, she had not contributed much to the household.

Well, according to Family Circle magazine, the value of the average full-time homemaker's work is $793.79 a week — or $41,000 a year!

The magazine stated that the average homemaker performs at least 22 separate functions with child care being the function that takes the most time — 186 hours a week on the average. (At a token $1 an hour, this would amount to over $9,000 a year.)

The seven or more hours a woman spends cleaning house, at a minimum $3.21 an hour, adds up to at least $22 a week; 13 hours as a cook at $4.75 an hour is another $62 a week. The three hours a week (average) that a wife spends acting as a maid or hostess for her husband, at $20 an hour, adds another $60 to her "wage bill," notes the magazine.

How about that?

ELIZABETH S.

DEAR ELIZABETH: Thanks. And if the magazine didn't figure in the other duties performed by mother, such as nurse, chauffeur, seamstress, tutor, referee, hand-holder, confidante and counselor — it should have. Now for a kid's-eye view:

DEAR ABBY: That kid who sassed his mother when she told him to take his bike out of the street, or she wouldn't buy him another one, needs a whipping. That's what I would get, and I wouldn't be allowed to ride my bike for a week. I know, because it happened to me.

DEAR ABBY: You were right in advising GETS LOST A LOT not to be ashamed, that some of our brainiest people get lost a lot. I wonder, however, if you are aware that those of us who have difficulty in remembering directions could be victims of "dyslexia" — a condition which has nothing to do with intelligence.

In addition to losing our way, we have difficulties learning to read, to spell and to do the simplest problems in math. Einstein, Edison and Nelson Rockefeller were dyslexic. There is no known cure, although early diagnosis is helpful in giving a child special training so he can learn to cope with his condition.

I understand this runs in families.

ALSO GETS LOST A LOT

DEAR ALSO: My twin and I were not dyslexic, but we got lost more than any two people we knew. Why? Because when directions were being given, we were always talking instead of listening.

DEAR ABBY: The quandary of LOVERS FOR SURE calls for a word of encouragement.

Having married my own cousin, I concluded after 27 years of domestic bliss and six perfectly normal children that cousins in fact bring a commonality of background and outlook to a marriage that contributes to an early strengthening of the conjugal bond, and remains a permanent uniting influence.

As for the genetic lottery, it's not only for relatives; everybody is in it!

UNREPENTING COUSIN

DEAR UNREPENTING: Granted, everybody is indeed in it, but the risk of hereditary diseases and tendencies toward them are greatly increased when cousins marry.

I repeat, genetic counseling is good insurance. Everyone may not be as lucky as you.

Ron Reagan Ads Revived

NEW YORK (AP) — President-elect Ronald Reagan is preparing to take over the reigns of power, but on the ad pages of three national magazines this week he's shown twisting, twirling, bending and curling a shirt collar.

Van Heusen Co. dusted off 27-year-old ads showing then movie actor Reagan wearing its Century shirts with the "new revolutionary collar (that) won't wrinkle ever" as a way to congratulate the new president.

Singer Gibbs Says Blindness Helps

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Terri Gibbs believes her perception as a blind person has helped her become a country music star.

Miss Gibbs, blind since birth, has a Top 10 country hit, "Somebody's Knockin'," which also is getting airplay on some rock 'n' roll radio stations.

"I feel you feel things more deeply (when you are blind)," she says. "I'm sensitive. You have to look on the inside (of people) because you can't see them.

"You have to be an actress to feel the story of a song," she says.

Miss Gibbs, from Augusta, Ga., has been singing professionally for nine years. For the past two years, she has been doing songs like "You Needed Me," "Lookin' for Love," "The First Time Ever I Saw Your Face," "Love the World Away," "Wayfaring Stranger" and "The Rose" at a supper club in Augusta. For seven years before that, she worked with bands.

Slender and rather reserved, she has an unusually low voice for a woman, which gives her a distinctive style.

"Nothing was that hard about it," she says of her developing career. "Some people think the blind can only do this or do that. But what does seeing have to do with singing?

"Being blind is a challenge. I want to do everything I can, and people don't expect that. The hardest part is simply not being able to see."

She had vowed to give up her career if she hadn't made progress by age 26. She's 26 now.

"It was a close call," she says, chuckling. "I kept hanging in there because I have a love for music."

Although she's been singing professionally for nine years, "Somebody's Knockin'" is her first record.

It came from a demonstration tape she made, which producer Ed Penney heard and liked. Before she realized what was happening, she'd signed a recording contract with MCA and the song was a hit.

"It's unbelievable," she says. "You usually don't get successful with your first record. I'm thrilled."

Her first album will be released soon.

In October, she realized her biggest thrill when she sang on the stage of the Grand Ole Opry House for hundreds of visiting disc jockeys.

"I've been listening to the Opry all my life," she says. "I never figured my first (Nashville) performance would be there."

Knapp Club Installs Officers

The Knapp Extension Homemaker's club met for the first time this year at the Knapp Community Center recently as new 1981 officers took over.

New officers are: Alice Guerra, president; Gladys Huddleston, vice president; May. Shaffer, secretary; Agnes Sorrells, treasurer and Virginia Drake, council delegate.

Pearl Wheeler presented a program during the meeting titled, "What TEHA has to offer in programs for 1981."

Club representatives were chosen to head this year's projects. Ms. Huddleston will work the yearbook, Erika Blankenship will act as club delegate to District in April and Ms. Huddleston volunteered to take charge of the Livestock Luncheon in Feb.

Ms. Sorrells volunteered to head "Taste of Spring" in March and Ms. Shaffer will be in charge of the Council Christmas party in Dec.

As hostesses, Ms. Guerra and Wanda Horn served coffee, cookies, cheese rolls and crackers to the eight members attending the meeting.

One new member, Therese Burchall, was voted into the club.

The club's next meeting will be Feb. 5 when Valeri Dunn will be hostess.

One advantage of a strong preemptive opening bid such as South's four spades is that the opponents get no information. A corresponding disadvantage is that you get no information from them.

Anyway, you open four spades in third seat and after everyone passes West opens the king of hearts and continues with the ace which you ruff.

You have nine top tricks and a two-way finesse for the queen of diamonds or a possible squeeze or end play for the 10th. You have all sorts of possible ways to play the hand but assuming your opponents know how to discard you are going to come down to a guess at the end.

You decide to temporize by leading your 10 of clubs. East wins with the queen and leads a third heart. You ruff and play four rounds of trumps to leave you with just one. Your two discards from dummy are clubs and each opponent throws a club and a diamond. You can lead a fifth trump but the conservative play is to go after the diamonds right now and be sure not to go down two.

Maybe you have gained some impression from the way those little diamonds were chucked. If not you have an all important guess to make. You know you won't go wrong having looked at the East-West hands by now but at the table in a tough match-point game you could still be flying blind in a fog with only a 50 percent chance.

CITED FOR RSVP WORK—RSVP members who give their time to deliver meals for the Senior Center's home delivery program were cited recently as the program ended its third month. Seated are Santos Ortiz, Polly Phillips and Estelle Gary. Standing are Marsha Krenek, RSVP director, M. W. Pilcher, Odis Snelgrove, John Wiman and Gloria Shaw, Senior Center director.

RSVP Members Cited For Community Work

Retired Senior Volunteer Program members who donate their time to the Senior Center's home meal delivery program were praised for their work by Marsha Krenek, RSVP director, and Gloria Shaw, Senior Center director, at an informal coffee.

Meals for homebound senior citizens are prepared in the Senior Center kitchen and delivered by RSVP members. Delivery requires two volunteers, one to drive the van and one to carry the food from the van to the residence.

The program now serves about 18 shut-ins, Mrs. Shaw says, although the number varies from week to week as some people are dropped when they become able to prepare meals for themselves and others are added as their needs dictate. Senior citizens who are able to leave their homes are invited to join others at the Senior Center for a noon meal each week day.

The home meal program was added to meet the needs of a special part of the the senior citizens, Mrs. Krenek and Mrs. Shaw stressed, and this need could not be met without use of volunteer workers.

RSVP AT WORK—Members of the Retired Senior Volunteer Program help with registration at Western Texas College each semester, and Vera McClanahan and Ruby Anderson from RSVP were on hand to issue parking permits and to validate ID cards as spring semester registration opened yesterday. Shown with them is E. H. (Dan) Dever Jr., WTC registrar, who helped set up their work table in the lobby of the administration building.

Men and women 60 years of age and older who would like to give time to community projects through RSVP are invited to talk to the RSVP office personnel. The RSVP office is in the Senior Center at 2603 Ave. M.

RR Commissioner Says More Engineers Needed

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace called today for America to begin a crash program in research and development of energy resources and the training of engineers.

Wallace told a statewide meeting of oil and gas executives the United States graduates only one engineer to every six graduated by the Soviet Union.

He said 45 percent of the doctoral degrees awarded in engineering in this country last year went to foreign students.

Also last year, he said, the United States imported almost seven million barrels of oil per day.

"We sit anxiously and await the latest word on Middle East oil production. We are paying whatever costs they levy," he said.

"The rebirth of the spirit of our nation to get us out of this mess depends not on debate, discussions, and more laws," Wallace said. "Rather it depends on the will of the American people to set about building an energy base.

"To do this, I am calling for our country to invest in a crash program of research and development, and for the training of engineers."

"Outside of bread and water, I know of nothing more important to our existence than our energy resources," he added.

Wallace spoke after the Railroad Commission had routinely set the statewide oil allowable for February at 100 percent. As usual, however, the production in the East Texas Field was restricted to 86 percent to avoid possible waste.

Commission Chairman Jim Nugent noted that crude and petroleum products imports into the United States averaged 6,834,000 barrels per day for the four weeks ending Jan. 2, down 1.7 million barrels per day from the same period last year.

Major purchasers of Texas crude oil submitted nominations for 2,567,731 barrels a day next month.

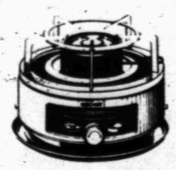

Here are major purchasers' nominations for Texas crude in February, in barrels per day, with any changes from January in parentheses:

One American Still A Captive

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Free-lance writer Cynthia Dwyer, a 49-year-old mother of three, has been sitting in an Iranian jail cell since May.

She won't be coming home with the 52 hostages seized in the 1979 capture of the U.S. Embassy, but her husband says an agreement for their release gives him new hope that she too will be home soon.

"It certainly doesn't make me pessimistic," John Dwyer said Monday. "It's just one of those situations where you just have to take it step by step and carefully, but I think possibly their release has brought a resolution to this crisis."

Dwyer, chairman of the English department at Buffalo State College, said he was "delighted — and I know I can speak for my wife" at the news that an agreement had been signed for the hostages' release.

He has not seen his wife since she left for Iran on April 10, planning to sell stories to Buffalo newspapers and other publications when she returned.

On May 5, Mrs. Dwyer was arrested at her hotel and accused of spying for the Central Intelligence Agency, an accusation Dwyer denies.

State Department officials say that securing the hostages' freedom would brighten the picture for other U.S. citizens held in Iran, if only because negotiators would be bargaining for a smaller group.

"Fourteen months ago, and ever since, we've been wondering how we were going to get out the 52 hostages," State Department spokesman John Trattner said.

"We figured out a way to do that, and I feel confident we'll figure out a way to do it in her case as well," he said in reference to Mrs. Dwyer. "We're continuing to keep as close an eye on her as we can through our (Swiss diplomatic) channel."

Swiss diplomats have visited Mrs. Dwyer several times in her cell — the last known time around Christmas — at Evin Prison in Tehran. Dwyer has received two letters in which his wife said she was doing well.

He said he and the couple's children, Benjamin, 13, David, 11, and Suzanne, 8, have followed every step of the hostage bargaining even though Mrs. Dwyer is not included.

"I've talked to the State Department a couple of times today," Dwyer said. "They have nothing more to report. She is basically in the same situation. They're doing all they can."

Two others held by Iranians are Mohi Sobhani, a naturalized American who was born in Iran and reportedly was running a business there when he was arrested last September for unknown reasons, and Afghanistan-born Zia Nasri, arrested 10 months ago.

Trattner said the State Department's next step was to find out why Mrs. Dwyer was being held. Dwyer said the fact that his wife had not been formally charged increased his belief she would be released.

"In effect, she's been detained for an investigation that is, presumably, continuing," he said. "She's not a spy."

The Dwyers' wedding anniversary is June 19, and Dwyer said he hoped his wife would be home by then.

Rosy Future Predicted For U.S. Coal Mining

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forecasting a rosy future for U.S. coal exports, a government task force predicts the United States will be supplying 38 percent of total world demand by the end of the century.

The Interagency Coal Export Task Force appointed by President Carter said this rapid increase is possible with very little federal aid.

The United States supplied about 6 percent of the 76.5 million tons of coal sold on the world market in 1979, the task force said in a report Monday.

It forecast that would triple to 18 percent in 1985, increase to 25 percent in 1990 and hit the 38 percent figure by the year 2000.

Meanwhile, the report also forecast a rapid rise in total coal sales as more countries looked for an alternative to expensive and unreliable supplies of oil.

The report estimated the world coal market excluding Communist and developing countries would increase to between 475 million and 565 million tons by 2000.

The problem of clogged port facilities which added an average of 40 days waiting time for ships seeking U.S. coal in 1980 should begin clearing up in mid-1983 and be totally alleviated by 1985, the task force said.

Approximately 23 million tons of new coal loading capacity annually is already being built at the nation's ports and there are plans for another 160 million tons, according to the report.

"The development of new piers and associated coal loading equipment is not the responsibility of the federal government, but rather that of private industry, the states and local governments," the report concluded. "Their response now appears to be entirely adequate."

The report said the long delays in 1980 at such harbors as Baltimore and Hampton Roads, Va., were caused by strikes in two other principal coal expoting countries — Australia and Poland — which increased demand for U.S. coal beyond all previous forecasts.

The task force proposed deepening the principal coal loading harbors to 50 feet instead of spending $1.5 billion to deepen four harbors to 55 feet. There is support among various members of Congress to deepen the ports of Baltimore, Hampton Roads, New Orleans, and Mobile, Ala., to 55 feet.

"The battles to be fought over port deepening will be some of the most heated of the next Congress and may preclude any port being deepened," said Bernhardt Wruble, executive director of the task force.

Shelburne Offers Extra Value Through Gulf States Buildings

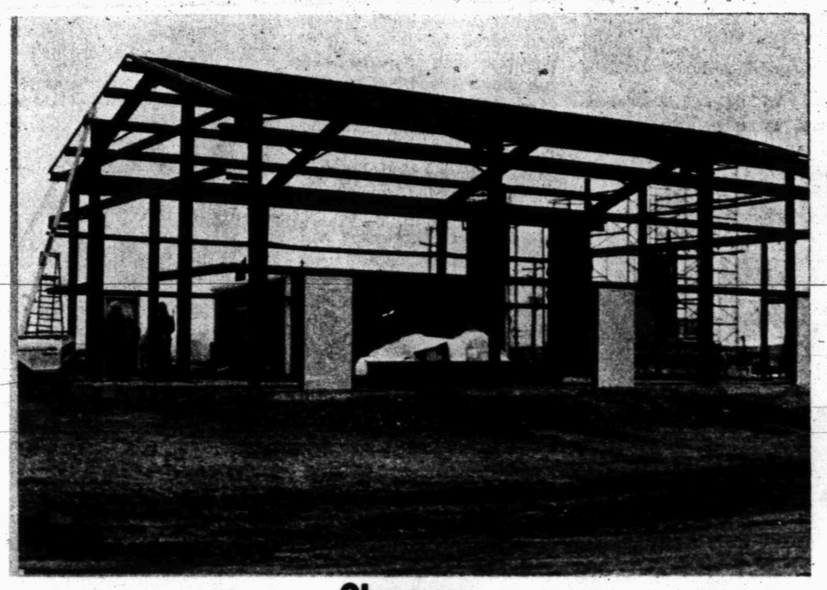

When planning a building, the smart businessman, industrialist or institutional leader always looks for extra value. And T.E. Shelburne and Son Construction offers it to a remarkable degree in Gulf States buildings. This value includes up-to-the-minute design, superior construction of steel components, fast delivery and prompt on-the-job erection service.

Industrial customers have chosen T.E. Shelburne and Son and Gulf States because the designs adapt easily to their particular requirements. Overhead cranes, special roof systems, extremely high eave heights and other special requirements are routine for Gulf States designers.

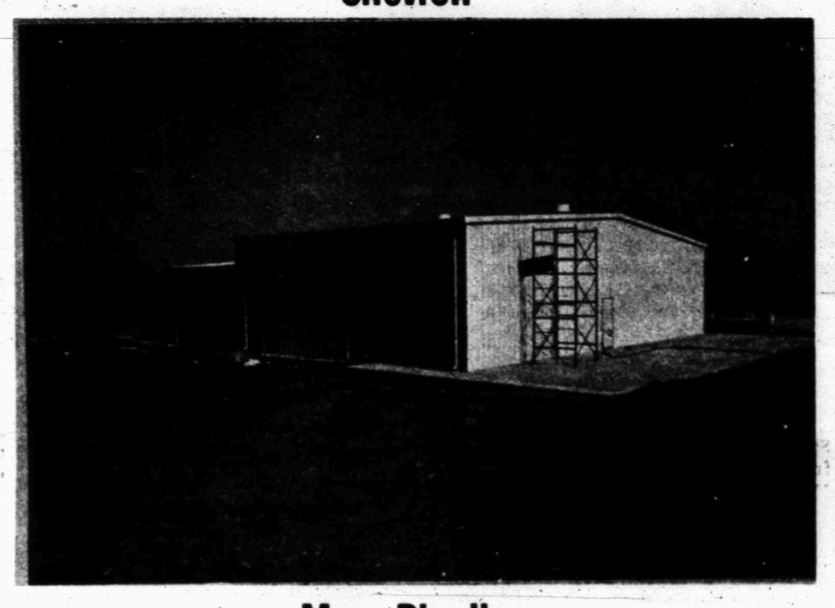

Drug Stores, auto parts houses, dress shops, banks, restaurants, giraffe houses, golf cart storage, doughnut shop, veterinary clinic, amusement arcade, tool and die shop, apartment house, quail house, clock houses, nursery, antique car shop, barber shop, aircraft wash and paint shop, hog farrowing barn, entomology head house, tackle shop, bakery shop, and city jails are housed in Gulf States buildings. Let Shelburne design a building for your specific needs.

Churches, schools, gymnasiums, medical centers, nursing homes, clubs and funeral homes are just a few of the institutional uses of Gulf States buildings. The square footage cost and ability to alter interior space for changing needs make the buildings right for your institution.

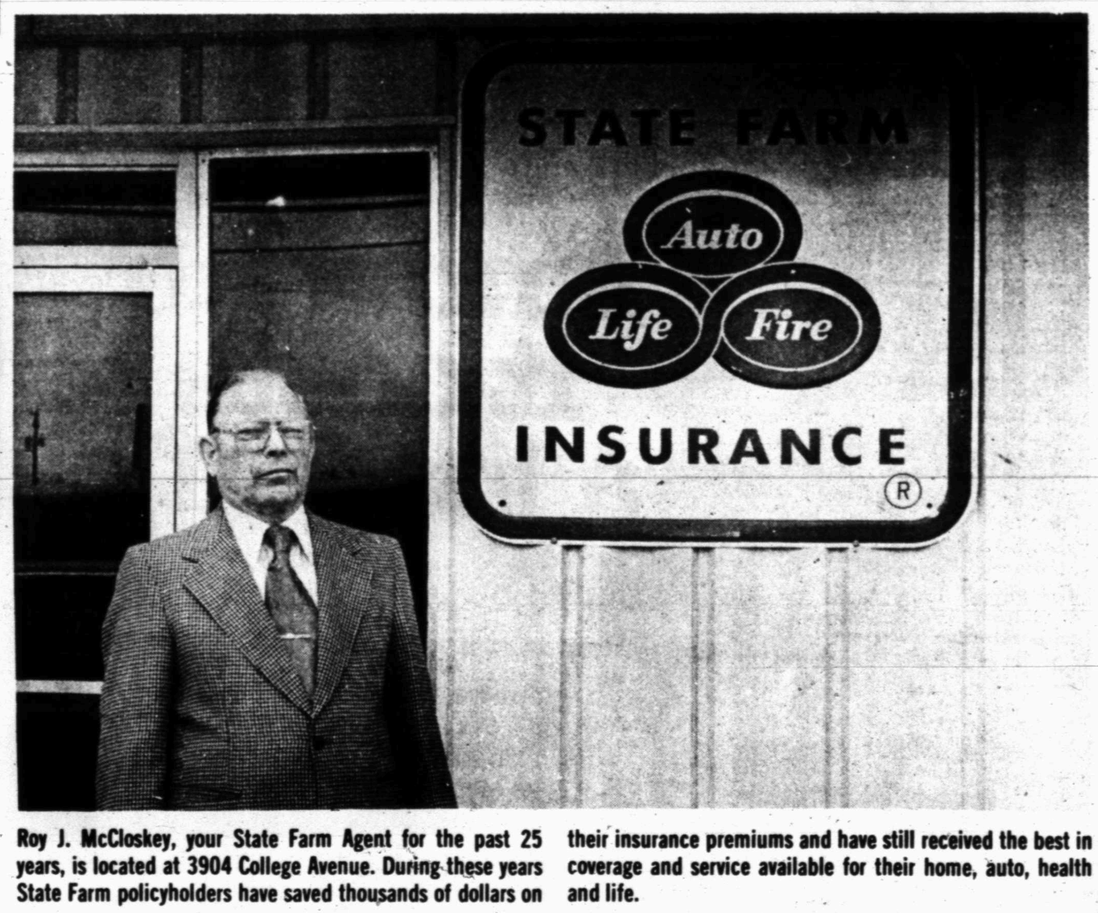

The folks at T.E. Shelburne and Son will be glad to help you plan the building that is right for you. Stop by and see them at 1611 24th St. or give them a call at 573-6359.

Westerners Win Another Squeaker!

By BILL MCCLELLAN

Western Texas College Coach Larry Dunaway has been preaching team basketball since the day he arrived here, and his sermons no doubt converted doubters last night.

Amarillo College's Maurice Bradford set fire to the nets for a whopping 45 points and Don Gandy added 32, but the rest of the Badgers managed only 24 together and a balanced Westerner attack held up for a 106-101 victory.

Good news for Westerner fans walks hand in hand with the bad, however, as Dunaway reported this morning that key player Chuck North might be out "I'd guess at a week to 10 days" with a severe ankle injury. The West Covina, Calif. native was to have the ankle examined by a doctor this morning.

The win puts WTC over the .500 mark for the first time this season in WJCAC play, at 4-3, and gives the team a 13-5 record for the campaign. The Westerners now gear up to host the nation's No. 12 ranked team, Frank Phillips College, at 8 Thursday in the coliseum.

Western Texas led 83-79 mid-way through the second half here, until the Gandy-Bradford duo came on with their super hero show. Bradford trimmed WTC's lead to one on a three-point play, then Gandy snapped off a steal and laid it in for an Amarillo lead, 84-83. Bradford, who hit 13 of 16 from the line for the night, tossed in a pair of freethrows with 7:21 left and Raymond Horton added two more Badger points for an 88-83 advantage.

"Two more points might have finished us," recalled Dunaway after the game. "But the kids sucked it up and didn't give in. They reached down deep and they kept their composure."

The teams traded buckets until a Dwain Dickey ceiling-stretcher and a Horton freethrow left it at 95-91 with 4:16 to go. North then stuck up two points, cutting Amarillo's lead to two. The 6-4 sophomore was fouled on the play and though his followup freethrow didn't fall, Keith Denis rebounded and flipped the ball to Brian Baker, who tied the game up from 17 feet out.

Bradford put the Badgers back on top 98-55 with a three point play, but momenteum was with the the Westerners, and three charity shots by Caesar Scott - coming with 3:11 and 2:42 remaining in the game - locked the totals again at 98-98.

Western Texas got the ball back on a traveling call and North put in the go-ahead points with just over two minutes left. Another AC turnover gave the hosts possession again, and Dunaway's charges ran the clock from 1:56 to 36 seconds when Scott got behind the Badger defenses for a bucket and a 102-98 lead.

Bradford retaliated for the visitors via a pair of free shots after Scott was whistled for his fourth foul with 24 seconds left. Scott, a 6-4 freshman standout from San Diego slammed the doors on Amarillo moments later however, when he got loose on the fast break to lay up a 104-100 lead for the Westerners. He was called for a charging foul on the play, sending Bradford to the line once again with 14 seconds left.

Bradford made the first end of the bonus situation to get the Badgers within three, 104-101, but his second effort bounded away. Darren Lee pulled down the big rebound to cap the game for the home team, and North's freethrows with eight seconds left served to ice the cake.

Scott's 30 points were high for Western Texas, but four players landed in double figures and eight scored in the game. North added 24 and Lee and Denis had 17 each. Baker and Donald Warren hit 6 apiece.

Westerners (106)-- Dickey 2 0 2 4; Lee 6 5 4 17; Denis 8 1 4 17; Stevenson 1 0 4 2; Scott 12 6 5 30; North 11 2 3 24; Warren 2 2 1 6; Baker 3 0 0 6; Totals 45 16 23 106.

Amarillo (101)-- Bradford 16 13 2 45; Loftis 1 0 1 2; Swevill 3 0 4 6; Horton 2 3 4 7; Wilson 3 0 3 6; Suggs 1 1 2 3; Gandy 16 0 4 32; Totals 42 17 20 101.

FPC Upsets Midland; Tries HCC Tonight

MIDLAND -- In a shootout of nationally ranked foes, No. 12 rated Frank Phillips College, 17-0, upset No. 1 Midland, 69-67 here last night. The outcome, coupled with a Howard County College defeat over Odessa, 67-62, leaves the Plainsmen and the Hawks locked for the men's WJCAC lead at 6-0 each.

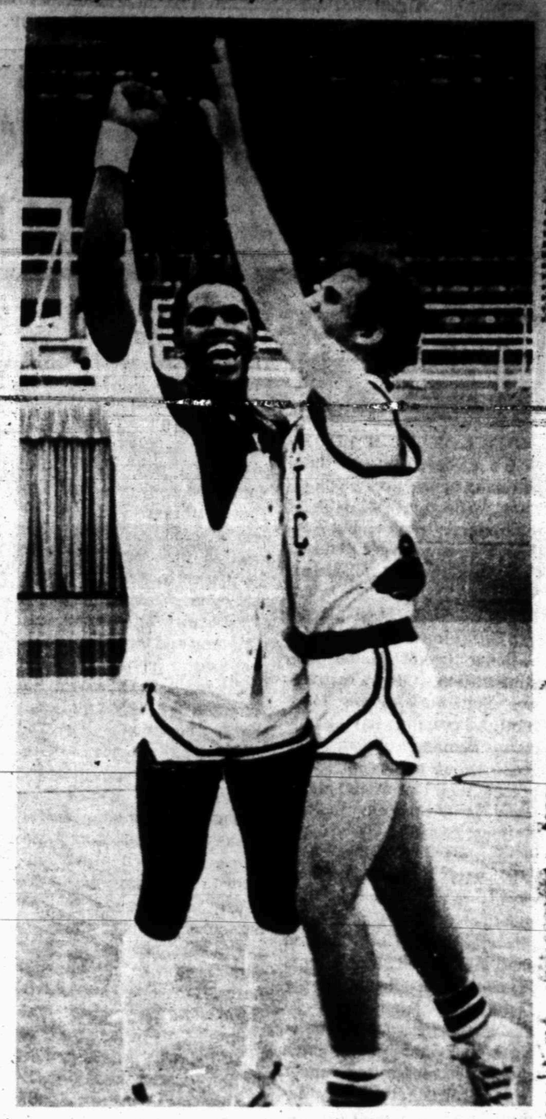

That situation comes to a head tonight as Frank Phillips and Howard tangle at 8 in Big Spring's Dorothy Garrett Coliseum.

Elsewhere around the league, Western Texas defeated Amarillo 106-101, New Mexico Junior College defeated South Plains at Hobbs, N.M., 115-92, and NMMI defeated Clarendon College at Roswell, 65-62.

Current WJCAC men's standings show FPC and HCC atop the post at 6-0 each, MC at 5-2, WTC and NMJC at 4-3 each, SPC and CC at 3-4, OC and AC at 1-5 and NMMI at 1-6.

In the only women's games played last night, Amarillo defeated Western Texas 79-74, Howard defeated Odessa in Odessa, 71-65, and Wayland JV beat South Plains, 76-66 in a non-conference tilt.

Complete women's records were unavailable, but Odessa leads with a 4-1 mark, followed by Amarillo at 3-1, Howard at 2-1, WTC at 3-2 and Clarendon at 2-2. SPC has three conference losses while FPC has four.

SWEET VICTORY -- Western Texas College teammembers Caesar Scott, left, and Chuck North celebrate last night's heart-stopping win over Amarillo College as the final buzzer sounds. WTC won the game 106-101 after falling behind by five late in the game. In another note, North, who played the entire second half with an injured ankle, may be out for a week to 10 days. A report from the doctor is waiting. (SDN Staff Photo)

Lady Badgers Outlast Western Texas Dusters

Amarillo College's Lady Badgers crowded in eight straight points with about six minutes to go, then hung on to defeat the Western Texas College Dusters here last night, 79-74.

WTC, 17-5 on the season and 3-2 in WJCAC play, will host Frank Phillips College in the Coliseum Thursday at 6 p.m.

While Coach Joe Cushing was obviously not pleased with the loss, he was already looking to the future.

"This by no means puts us out of anything," he said. "We're not going to let it get us down. We'll have a shot at them again (in Amarillo) and, if anything, we play better on the road than we do at home."

Western Texas, utilizing a fast break and solid defense, matched point-for-point with the Badgers until late in the first half when Linda Holubec and Valorie Wells teammed up offensively. The Dusters moved out to a nine-point lead with 2:11 left. Amarillo was down at halftime, 39-30.

But the tide turned early in the second half. Marcy Dale, 6-1 freshman, led the Badgers from inside, while 5-6 guard Mitzi Marquart begin tossing in 25-footers with amazing accuracy.

Two buckets by Marquart put the Badgers ahead 47-45 with 12:38 left. Though WTC got three points from Stella Bickley and Shari Teal to regain the lead, Amarillo quickly got it back and never lost it.

AC's biggest advantage came at the 5:06 mark when Jones, Rhonda Kimbrough and Jessica Wiley combined for eight consecutive points and a 69-59 lead. It stayed between 6-10 points until WTC managed a rally with three minutes left.

Olivia Jones fouled out and Shari Teal answered with two freethrows, and Cindy Maddox hit a pair of 25-footers to cut the lead to two, 73-71.

Marquart retaliated with another top-of-the-key bomb at 47 seconds, and though Wells made it two again for WTC, time was running out for the hosts.

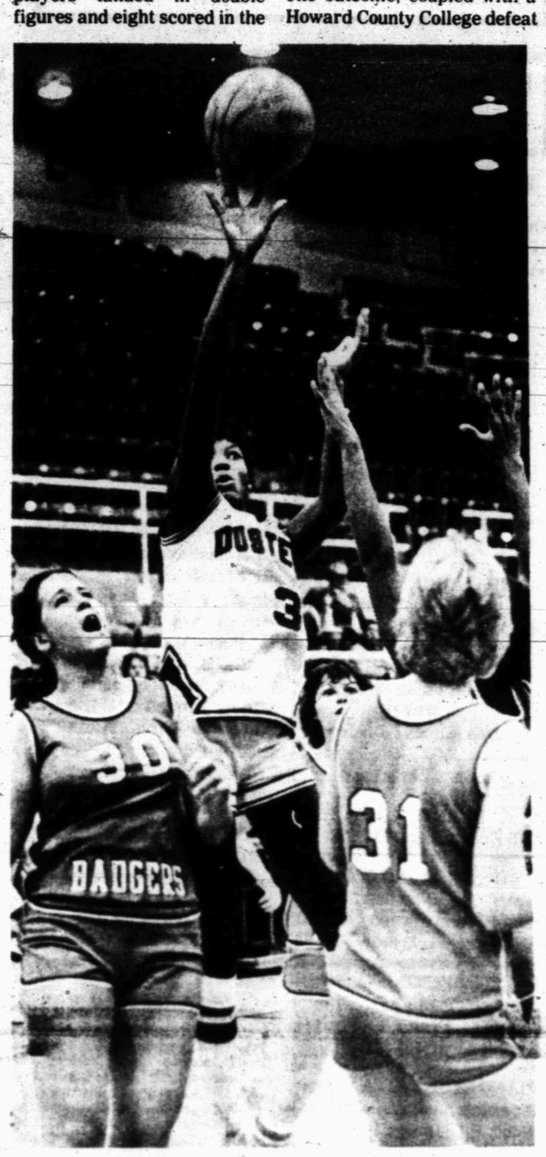

With 20 seconds left, a freethrow attempt by Doretta Ramaekers bounded from the rim, but 6-2 freshman Nancy Kocurek got the rebound back and put it up for the clincher.

Marquart's 20 points - 16 in the second half - was high for the Lady Badgers. Dale hit for 18 and Kocurek, Jones and Wiley all added 10 each. The visitors hit a searing 52.4 percent from the field in the second half.

Wells led Western Texas with 16 points, 17 rebounds and two blocked shots. Holubec got 16 points, but only four in the second half, while Teal scored 14 and Maddox added 10.

Dusters (74)-- Maddox 5 0 4 10; Bickley 1 3 3 5; Holubec 7 2 2 16; Wells 10 3 1 23; Guyton 1 0 1 2; Anderson 2 0 0 4; Teal 5 4 3 14; Perkins 0 0 3 0; Totals 31 12 17 74.

Amarillo (79)-- Richardson 1 1 2 3; Marquart 9 2 1 20; Robinson 0 0 1 0; Wiley 5 0 2 10; Kimbrough 3 2 2 8; Jones 4 2 5 10; Dale 7 4 5 18; Kocurek 4 2 1 10; Ramaekers 0 0 2 0; Totals 33 13 21 79.

CANS A BUCKET -- Freshman Valorie Wells leaps high to score two of her 23 points on the night as WTC's Dusters fell just short of defeating pre-season favorite Amarillo College here yesterday, 79-74. Shown for the Lady Badgers are Marcey Dale (30), and Nancy Kocurek. The Dusters will host Frank Phillips College in the coliseum Thursday at 6 p.m. (SDN Staff Photo)

Baylor Keeps Rolling; Houston Defeats Hogs

by The Associated Press

Baylor basketball coach Jim Haller said he's beginning to get excited about his team's perch atop the Southwest Conference basketball standings following a victory Monday night over Texas Tech.

Baylor beat Texas Tech, 69-61, and Houston edged Arkansas, 57-54, in the only conference games Monday night. In non-conference action, North Texas edged Texas, 75-74.

Two SWC roundball games are on tap tonight. Southern Methodist travels to Fort Worth for a game with Texas Christian and Rice is at Texas A&M.

"I'm now beginning to get excited myself. I can't say enough about our team now," Haller said after the Bears beat the Red Raiders, 69-61, to move to 5-0 in conference play.

Terry Teagle had 24 points to lead Baylor scoring. Bubba Jennings was the leading scorer for the Red Raiders with 14.

Baylor had problems in the first half, falling behind early in the game, 10-0. They trailed, 26-21, at halftime but came back strong to outscore Texas Tech, 48-35 in the second half.

"That might have been the best second half of basketball Baylor has ever played," Haller said, "I know it is since I've been here. We were very patient with our offense in the second half."

Texas Tech coach Gerald Myers said Baylor appeared flat in the first half and said he believes it was caused by their big victory over Arkansas last Saturday.

Rob Williams had 22 points as the Houston Cougars handed the Arkansas Razorbacks their third SWC loss in a row, 57-54.

Snyder Challenges Lake View Tonight

Lake View and Snyder cagers are slated to match up at 8 tonight in a pair of key District 2-AAAA contests. Scurry County Coliseum will be the scene of the boys game, while Coach Ken Housden takes his Felines to San Angelo.

Both will be preceded by 6:15 junior varsity games. Tickets are $2 for adults and $1 for students.

Lake View promises to be a strong challenger for the Tiger teams, as the San Angelo teams have always provided intense rivalry and better than average competition for Tigers in any sport. Lake View's Chiefs come into the coliseum with a 6-10 season and a 1-4 district mark. The Maidens, who fought it out with Snyder in a 3-3A district playoff last year, are 9-7 and 5-4.

Lake View girls are 0-1 in second round district play, having finished the first round with a third-place, 5-3 record. Snyder concluded the first round in second place, at 7-1, and is 0-0 in second round play. Monahans, 30-20 winners over the Maidens last Friday, won the loop with an 8-0 mark, and is 1-0 for round No. 2.

Snyder teams will be trying to keep alive respective winning streaks tonight. Coach George Byerly's boys, at one time 3-12, have won six straight for a 9-12 look. The Tigers are 4-1 in 2-4A play, a half-game behind 5-1 Odessa Ector.

Housden's Felines, who have not lost since the second district contest of the season (vs Monahans), are riding a seven-game winning streak.

Other 2-4A boys games have Ector at 1-4 Pecos, 3-2 Lamesa at 4-2 Sweetwater and 4-1 Andrews at 0-5 Monahans. The girls all meet at opposite sites. Monahans, Pecos, Fort Stockton and Sweetwater are all 1-0, while Ector, Lake View and Sweetwater are 0-1 in second-round district action.

Tyler Chosen Coach For NTSU Gridders

DENTON (AP) — Bob Tyler, North Texas State's new head football coach and athletic director, met his team for the first time Monday and began trying to line up a coaching staff and begin a hurried recruiting campaign.

A selection committee that included regents, faculty, alumni and lettermen recommended the 48-year-old former Mississippi State coach. The announcement came just 15 days after his predecessor, Jerry Moore, resigned to go to Texas Tech.

Fred Pole, executive assistant to the president of NTSU, introduced Tyler to a roomful of sports writers from the Dallas-Fort Worth area and said he was "the unanimous choice" of the selection committee, which screened about 40 applications.

"I feel very fortunate about joining North Texas State. I feel good about their commitment to athletics, I like the idea of the kind of teams they want to play, and I like the idea of being in a media area," Tyler said.

Moore took several members of his coaching staff with him to Texas Tech, but Tyler said he would talk to the two remaining North Texas State coaches about the possibility of their staying over.

"I think we'll be moving fast on a couple of coaches and then fairly slow on some others," Tyler said.

"Most of my contacts are in the Southeast Conference, and we could fill the staff quickly entirely from the Southeast, but they might not even be able to pronounce the name of Texas towns, much less know where they are," said Tyler, who himself is unfamiliar with the state.

"We need some Texas people on our staff, and I think we will be able to acquire a couple from out of our past," he added, pointing out that the national letter-of-intent signing day is only a month away.

Tyler grew up in Mississippi, coached a couple of years in junior high and 11 years in high school before he became an assistant coach at Ole Miss, Alabama and Mississippi State. He had a high school record of 91-19-6.

SCURRY HONORED - County Judge Preston Wilson stands beside a painting of William Scurry, the confederate general from whom Scurry County is named. In a brief ceremony Monday at noon, Scurry and the Confederate legacy of Texas were honored. Similar observances, honoring other Confederate heroes, were held in about 200 other Texas Counties. Scurry's painting hangs in the second floor of the county courthouse. (SDN Staff Photo)

War Drags On In Middle East

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Iran and Iraq today traded ground attacks in Iran's snow-covered western highlands and artillery barrages in rain-mired marshes of Khuzistan, the Iranian oil province to the south, as the Persian Gulf war ground into its 120th day, military communiques reported.

Neither side reported any change in the positions of its forces along the 300-mile-long warfront inside Iran.

Iraq claimed 151 Iranian troops were killed in the fighting and conceded 20 Iraqi deaths. Iran claimed 56 Iraqi fatalities, but made no mention of any Iranian losses.

Meanwhile, U.N. special envoy Olof Palme headed for New York to report to Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim on his second, apparently unsuccessful effort to arrange a cease-fire in the four-month-old war at the northern tip of the Persian Gulf.

The Swedish socialist leader ended a six-day trip to Baghdad and Tehran on Monday, with both sides reporting no change in their political positions.

Iraq is demanding sovereignty over the Shatt al-Arab waterway, its only outlet to the Persian Gulf and the former border between the two nations until Iraq abrogated the border treaty and went to war to seize the estuary. Iran says it won't talk peace until all Iraqi troops leave its territory.

Palme also apparently failed in his efforts to gain freedom for the 70 foreign ships trapped at Iranian and Iraqi ports in the Shatt when war erupted.

The envoy reported a breakthrough last November, saying both countries agreed to let the ships sail under the flag of the International Red Cross, but the deal fell through when the Red Cross withdrew permission to use its flag.

Diplomats and shipping executives in the gulf states say the ships may be stuck for some time even if the combatants agree to let them leave.

The informants say silt, washed into the Shatt by winter rains, and debris from the war are threatening to block the waterway. They say that a wait of two or three more weeks could mean that many of the ships will not be able to clear the shallow waters until after a major dredging operation is completed.

Found Guilty Of Speeding

Charged with speeding, Sid Everton, 2803 47th St., was found guilty in a justice of the peace court trial Monday and fined $27.50. He was charged with traveling 70 miles an hour in a 55 mph zone.

Serving on the jury were June Greenway, Doc Griffin, Mary Bullard, Larry White, Howard Limmer, and Margaret Easterwood.

Class of '31 Plans Reunion

Members of the Snyder High School graduating class of 1931 have scheduled a meeting for Tuesday, Jan. 27, to make plans for a reunion.

The planning session has been set for 7 p. m. in the community room of Snyder Savings and Loan.

Those interested in more information about plans for a 50-year reunion of the class have been asked to contact Mae Brush at 573-6198, Emmitt Askins at 573-6836, or Leighton Griffin at 573-6248.

BIRTHS

Joe and Debbie Tubb of Lubbock are parents of a boy, Ryan Brandon, born Jan. 11 at Methodist Hospital in Lubbock. He weighed 6 lbs. 10½ oz.

Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Tubb of Blackwell and Mrs. Joe James of Snyder.

OBITUARIES

Tribute Paid William Scurry

Percy Hurst

Funeral arrangements were pending this morning at Bell-Seale Funeral Home for Percy D. Hurst, 55, who died at 9:45 p. m. Monday in Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

Surviving are three sisters, Frances Thompson and Floydell Johnson, both of Snyder, and Rachael Wiley of Dallas; and three brothers, R. V. Thompson and Buford Thompson, both of Snyder, and William Thompson of Sweetwater.

Mrs. Irving

Funeral service was held at 2 p. m. Sunday in the Bell-Seale Funeral Home Chapel for Enid Irving, 84, who died Saturday night in Cogdell Memorial Hospital.

The Rev. David Robertson officiated and burial was in the Snyder Cemetery, under direction of Bell-Seale Funeral Home.

She was a lifelong resident of Snyder. She was married on July 10, 1912, to Roland A. Irving, who preceded her in death on Feb. 2, 1961.

Surviving is a daughter, Enid, of the home, and a niece, Mrs. Bob Dublin Jr. of Laredo.

Piper Rites

Funeral service was held at 10 a. m. today in the Bell-Seale Funeral Home Chapel for Donald Bryan Piper, 61, who died Saturday afternoon.

The Rev. R. Virgil Mott officiated. Following the service here, the body was taken to the DeLeon Cemetery for burial.

He is survived by his wife; three sons, Aubrey and Frank Piper, both of Odessa, and Albert Lee Piper of Artesia, N. M.; two sisters, Helen Weatherford of Danville, Calif.., and Isla Reid of Colorado Springs, Colo.; a brother, Chaney Piper of Hemet, Calif.; and two grandchildren.

Reverend Named Honorary Convict

OLEAN, N.Y. (AP) — The Rev. Timothy Quinn, a sociology professor at St. Bonaventure University, has friends at Northeastern Federal Penitentiary in nearby Lewisburg, Pa.

Father Quinn visits the prison regularly and takes classes there. He recently celebrated a mass at the prison and later delighted 60 inmates and 28 civilian guests with jokes and anecdotes.

His visit was so well received that Father Quinn was named an "honorary convict" by the inmates.

William R. Scurry, the confederate general after whom Scurry County is named, was honored in a brief ceremony yesterday at noon on the courthouse grounds. The occasion was Confederate Heroes' Day, a part of the Texas Heritage Project.

Similar observances were held at the same time in an estimated 200 other Texas counties.

Staging the event locally was the Scurry County Historical Commission. Brud Boren, an active participant in the commission, was in Austin attending ceremonies there.

Jean Everett, chairman of the local historical commission, said the purpose of the project is "to pay tribute to the pioneers, settlers, and brave soldiers who went ahead of us."

Paul Sizemore, project cochairman, said, "It's just like we celebrate their birthdays. It's worthwhile to recognize them."

A yellow rose was placed on the Confederate marker on the north side of the courthouse and the Gospel Airs, a senior citizens' group, sang "The Yellow Rose of Texas."

Scurry, born in Tennessee, came to Texas in 1840. He served in the Mexican War and, during the Civil War, was elected Lieutenant Colonel of the 4th Texas Cavalry. He rose eventually to the rank of brigadier general. Scurry was killed in the battle of Jenkin's Ferry on the Saline River in 1864.

The invocation for the ceremony yesterday was delivered by Wayland G. Holt, 132nd District judge for Scurry County. The Gospel Airs is composed of Marvin Gary, Blanche Arnold, Mildred Lewis, and Virginia Whitson.

Drought Declared In New York City

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward Koch, warning of a "calamity" unless New Yorkers save water, has declared a drought emergency in the nation's largest city.

In declaring the emergency Monday, Koch ordered a ban on watering golf courses and ordered that water meters be installed on all air-conditioning units over two tons. He also put a ban on washing cars and trucks and operating ornamental fountains.

Meanwhile, in the wealthy New York suburb of Greenwich, Conn., a water-crisis ordinance was enacted, and the water company serving the town imposed a water-use limit.

Koch urged New Yorkers to cut back on their water use and said the key to conservation "is in the bathroom."

If individual conservation during the first phase of the emergency does not reduce the city's daily water consumption from 1.5 billion to 1.25 billion gallons by April 1, a second phase would be declared banning lawn watering, filling of private swimming pools or use of spray caps on fire hydrants.

Eventually, the city could order a third phase into effect, reducing pressure in mains, limiting air conditioning and curtailing the flow of water to individual buildings.

Oil Firms Challenging Injection Wells Rules

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Lawyers for 40 oil companies fighting millions of dollars in government fines and penalties have begun a federal court battle with a lawsuit challenging U.S. Department of Energy regulations governing injection wells in 15 states.

About 24 lawyers jammed into the front of U.S. District Judge Frank Theis' courtroom on Monday to participate in the opening day of the trial. The judge consolidated numerous separate cases on the same issues on May 26, 1977.

Joseph W. Kennedy, who represents the oil companies, delivered an opening statement claiming DOE officials exceeded their statutory authority when they issued a rule excluding water injection wells from the calculations of stripper well production.

Theis ruled in January 1978 that the then-Federal Energy Administration failed to follow the Administrative Procedures Act when it implemented the injection well exemption and he struck it down.

But the U. S. Court of Emergency Appeals, a panel formed in Washington, D.C., to hear energy cases, reversed Theis' opinion in November 1978 and sent the case back to Wichita for trial.

Marginal oil wells are sometimes removed from production and used to inject water into underground oil-bearing rock formations in hopes of creating pressure that will produce better flows at other nearby wells.

The oil companies in the case want to be able to count the injection wells as producing oil wells when calculating average daily production. "Old oil" wells that produce 10 barrels or less a day are considered stripper wells and qualify for higher decontrolled crude prices. When water injection wells are removed from the calucations, many wells wouldn't be eligible for stripper prices and would instead be covered by the ceiling price for "old oil."

Kennedy said besides exceeding its statutory authority, the DOE acted in an arbitrary and capricious manner by eliminating a practice that had been accepted industry-wide for 40 years.

He said injection wells still are counted as producers by state regulators in Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana and New Mexico.

"The man who wrote this regulation didn't even know what an injection well is," Kennedy said.

The states where wells involved in the litigation are located are Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma, Kentucky, Illinois, Arkansas, Louisiana, Montana, New Mexico, California, Colorado, Michigan, Nebraska, Utah, and Wyoming.

Producers in Kansas were the first to become involved in the litigation and have a great deal at stake since Kansas has proportionately more stripper wells than any other state in the U.S.

Many of the companies involved in the lawsuit have been fined or ordered to pay back hundreds of thousands of dollars in alleged overcharges because they calculated stripper production using water injection wells in the producing well total.

Independent oil men who tried to determine whether injection wells could be counted in production averages got conflicting answers from federal agencies, Kennedy said.

The use of injection wells in stripper calculations isn't a dodge to avoid federal regulation, but instead it is a bona fide production practice, he said.

"The agency made an error in 1973 and 1974 and they have been desperately trying to justify it ever since," Kennedy said.

The plaintiffs began presenting witnesses Monday afternoon, with most of the initial testimony dealing with the geological mechanisms by which oil is formed and trapped underground.

Reduce fat in diet

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — My 17-year-old daughter is 5 feet 2 and weighs 136 pounds. She is very solidly built. She is the only member of the family who is overweight. I have been trying to help her diet (without nagging) for the last six months. I took her to a doctor and she has no health problems. I was very disappointed in his advice. All he told her was to cut down on carbohydrates. Would you please send me your Health Letter, Weight Losing Diet? Will she lose weight on it if she follows it faithfully? She will exercise for a short time and then give it up. I think if she would get more exercise this would help. She has too much weight on her stomach and legs.

DEAR READER — There seems to be a national kick on cutting down on carbohydrates. It is often a misguided effort. The most calories in most American diets are from fat — not carbohydrates. A gram of fat contains nine calories while a gram of carbohydrate only contains four. Beyond that, the biggest factor affecting the calories in food is the water and fiber content. Many carbohydrate foods are low calorie foods because they contain lots of water and bulk. Most vegetables are in this category and certainly most salads — unless you add a fat-containing salad dressing.

Your doctor should have advised your daughter to eliminate the fat in her food wherever possible. You can help in this by preparing foods without significant amounts of fat.

Of course, sweets and concentrated starches should be avoided. Why? Because they contain very little water or bulk and that causes them to be high calorie foods.

Your daughter will lose weight if she follows the diet in The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. She should not try to lose too fast, and should be content with about a pound a week.

I am a great supporter of exercise but unless a person is able to do a great deal of exercise, losing weight that way is a slow process. A sensible goal is to plan to increase the level of exercise enough to use an additional 250 calories a day while decreasing the diet calories about 250 calories a day. On such a sane program a person can lose about a pound a week. Walking, swimming, jogging, tennis and sports one enjoys are the best ways to increase calorie use.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Can a woman's body suffer from the cessation of the injection of sperm following the death of her husband, especially when that injection has been frequent? If so, is there medication that can assist in providing the nourishment that possibly came from the sperm?

DEAR READER — No. A woman derives no nourishment benefits from sperm cells. There have been some research studies that have suggested that semen contains some chemicals that protect against infection or improve body defenses. If you should have an infection, of course, it can be treated. The nourishment that is lost is emotional nourishment and that can be quite important to a person's emotional health.

Just Plain folks Stealing Millions

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The bartender who "forgets" to ring up every sixth drink, the clerk who wraps four dresses and charges a friend for one, the waiter who neglects to list items on a diner's check — besides being crooks, these people have something else in common.

They're mostly ordinary Americans, plain folks who have families and homes, who watch television and go to work — where they steal an estimated $15 billion a year from their employers.

A man dedicated to reversing the sting of these thieves is Steve Long, president of Triad Consultants Ltd.

"I'll bet you that any 10 people you see on the street — nine of them stole something once," says the salty, Bronx-born private eye.

Long calls himself a "crook-catcher" and reckons he and his 21 operatives, aided by lie-detectors, recovered nearly $500,000 of $3 million in employee thefts they investigated last year.

"I'm convinced that people never steal out of necessity," he said. "I never met a man who stole a loaf of bread because he was hungry. A lot of theft is spontaneous. People steal because it's there."

Long estimates "80 percent of all shrinkage in retail businesses is attributable to internal factors — not shoplifters."

He said bars are a favorite target of crooked employees, and much of his business comes from owners who can pay in the neighborhood of $450 for eight hours of surveillance and polygraph tests.

"I remember a club, no longer in operation, and a bartender there who once commented that the boss wanted good 'pour-costs.'

"That means a short pour of a drink," Long translated. He quoted the bartender as admitting, "'...If I take (steal) every fourth drink, it's still going to make my pour-costs look good....I'm just going to cheat the customer a little bit more.'"

Long chortled over the restaurant worker who was finally caught after stealing hundreds of eggs.

"The amount was enormous. He stole every day. It turned out his wife had this religious ritual. She bathed in eggs."

He once caught a restaurant official who didn't think he was stealing, although he cost his boss $20,000 in 10 months.

"What he did was buy drinks (for customers), and he continued buying them drinks and buying them drinks and make them feel guilty, and they would give him a very big tip."

Employees, Long said, "will steal anything....If I want to get rid of my garbage all I have to do is put it in a neat paper bag with a staple on top of it, and put it in front of my door. And the garbage will be stolen."

Movie theaters are regular targets of employee theft, Long said, explaining that the ticket-seller often works with the ticket-taker.
