GOP Airs Plan On Energy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional Republican leaders today proposed creation of an energy czar with sweeping powers, saying Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger is unable to cut through red tape and is shackled by an "impossible energy policy."

Senate minority leader Howard Baker of Tennessee and his House counterpart, Rep. John Rhodes of Arizona, also said

(Related Story on Page 14, Sec. A)

President Carter should emerge from today's meeting with top aides at Camp David with a plan to lift all remaining price controls on oil and natural gas.

"The only way the United States is going to get out of this energy crisis is to produce our way out," Baker said. He said existing federal controls discourage the search for new domestic energy supplies.

Baker and Rhodes told a news conference they are filing in their respective chambers a resolution urging the administration to draw up within 90 days a new, production-oriented energy plan.

The plan should establish a new office of energy administrator with enormous powers and full access to the president, the GOP leaders said.

"This would be a person with the power to cut through red tape. We had to take the initiative because nobody seems to be minding the store," Rhodes said.

They said they were making such a proposal in light of the complex federal regulation which stands in the way of all major energy projects.

They cited last week's decision by Standard Oil of Ohio to abandon — because of years of permit delays — a proposed major pipeline to bring surplus Alaska oil from California to Texas.

"If we have gasoline rationing this summer — and we may — and if we have $1-a-gallon gasoline, it will be a commentary on the complete failure of the Carter administration energy plan," Baker said.

The Republican leaders coupled their propsal with praise for Schlesinger, publicly declining to join the bandwagon of those in Congress seeking his resignation.

"Jim Schlesinger is a competent, capable man. The administration has given him an impossible task. He's trying an impossible job, administering an impossible energy policy laid down by the Carter administration," Baker said.

"Schlesinger is doing what he's told, in my opinion. The confusion is not his ...."

Would Schlesinger have to report to this new "energy czar?"

The Republicans said the new administrator would be able to ride herd over the rest of the president's Cabinet on energy issues.

Israelis Near Final Action On Treaty

By The Associated Press

Israel's Cabinet today approved the peace treaty with Egypt, leaving ratification by the Israeli Parliament as the only remaining step before a historic signing ceremony in Washington — as early as next Monday — ending 30 years of conflict between the two nations.

The Parliament debate is scheduled to open Tuesday and the vote may come Wednesday or Thursday. As with the (Terms Of Peace Treaty On Page 3, Sec. A)

Cabinet, the Parliament's approval is considered a foregone conclusion.

Cabinet Secretary Arieh Naor said the ministers voted 15-2 "to approve the peace treaty between Egypt and Israel, including its annexes."

The Cabinet debated the pact, engineered by President Carter on his Mideast peace mission last week, for five hours before voting. Israel Radio said those casting the negative votes were Agriculture Minister Ariel Sharon and Transport Minister Haim Landau, both of whom have been "hawks" throughout the peace process.

Minor disturbances were reported today in the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River, focus of Palestinian demands that an independent Palestinian state be established.

Slogan-chanting Palestinian youths demonstrated in the towns of Nablus and Kalandia, Israeli military spokesmen reported, and in Hebron high school students burned tires and blocked a road before being scattered by Israeli troops. No injuries were reported.

Autonomy for the Palestinians of the West Bank and Israeli-occupied Gaza Strip will be the most troublesome issue remaining after Egypt and Israeli sign their treaty.

Right-wing ministers wanted the Israeli Cabinet, before approving the treaty, to work out its demands for protecting Israeli interests in the negotiations for Palestinian autonomy. As a compromise, the Cabinet established an 11-minister committee to study the issue.

The West Bank-Gaza negotiations are to start one month after the treaty is signed.

The Israeli Cabinet session was largely a formality, since each article and clause of the treaty was studied and approved during a half-year of negotiations capped last week by President Carter's Mideast trip.

Israel's Haaretz newspaper predicted the treaty would win 100 votes in the 120-seat Parliament, or Knesset. The date for signing by Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat is not likely to be announced until after the Knesset votes.

Naor said Begin would be accompanied to the signing ceremony in Washington by his senior Cabinet ministers, former Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, Parliament Speaker Yitzhak Shamir and opposition Labor Party leader Shimon Peres.

Deputy Prime Minister Yigael Yadin said after the Cabinet session that "a few bilateral problems" remain to be worked out between Israel and the United States, which is underwriting part of the costs of Israel's withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula.

In Washington, Egyptian Defense Minister Kamal Hassan Ali and Israeli Defense Minister Ezer Weizman were still haggling over the timetable for Israel's Sinai pull-out.

The Cabinet approved the treaty annex dealing with the Sinai withdrawal on the assumption that there would be little trouble working out the details. Weizman

Storms Roam West Texas

A-J News Services

Heavy thunderstorms erupted to the south and east of Lubbock this morning, prompting flash flood warnings or watches for a vast region stretching from the Permian Basin into North Central Texas, and forecasters said storms could pop up again on the South Plains this afternoon and tonight.

The National Weather Service listed a 30 percent probability of precipitation this afternoon in the Hub City area, increasing to 50 percent tonight and 40 percent Tuesday, as a series of upper level disturbances move over the region.

Major activity this morning was centered in the San Angelo and Abilene areas. Heavy rains caused the weather service to issue flash flood warnings for Reagan and Irion counties.

Just before noon, heavy thunderstorms battered the region from south of Abilene northward to Albany and eastward to Callahan County. Thunderstorms moving through Abilene dumped 1.27 inches of rain in just 90 minutes, with some small hail reported. Abilene police were monitoring some roads.

Flash flood watches also were issued late this morning for Borden, Howard and Glasscock counties.

State Highway 163 was reported washed out between Barnhart and Sterling City. Barnhart received 4½ inches of rain in a few hours.

Earlier today, thunderstorms stretched from the Midland-Odessa region northeastward to Lamesa and on to Guthrie.

Showers also fell over much of the Panhandle this morning, but activity there had largely moved out by noon.

Additional rainfall today may hamper the recovery efforts in Crosby County, where a tornado Saturday night toppled numerous utility lines and seriously damaged several homes in an 11-mile stretch from southwest of Crosbyton to the edge of the Caprock.

Crosby County Sheriff Fred Owen this morning estimated the tornado damage in Crosby County to be $750,000, not including the snapped utility poles. He said most of the damage was to farm equipment, rural homes and irrigation equipment and wells, adding that the twister advanced to within 200 feet of the west Crosbyton city limits. Crosbyton homes suffered approximately $30-35,000 in damages, mostly to roofs, the sheriff said.

In Northeast Lubbock, which also received the slap of tornadoes Saturday night, the victims are still in the process of estimating the damages.

A spokesman for Chupik Corp., which owns a warehouse at 303 NE Loop 289 damaged by the high winds, said this morning that company officials and insurance representatives were meeting today to calculate the extent of the damages. The tornado collapsed the building's roof, allowing rains to flood the interior.

Alberta Loggins, who with her husband Willie Loggins lives at 1521 E. Auburn St., spoke today of her first encounter with a tornado.

"Just as we drove in from church at about 11:45 p.m. (Saturday), I got this funny feeling and saw this thing coming in from the west," she said. "Just in a minute's time, it happened. It happened so fast."

The tornado caused only slight damage to their home, Mrs. Loggins said, but it

Supreme Court Accepts Military Petitions Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court agreed today to decide whether members of the U.S. armed forces always must obtain approval before circulating petitions.

Acting on government appeals, the justices voted to review rulings by two lower courts that the prior-approval requirement violates federal law and the Constitution's First Amendment.

Justice Department lawyers told the court that the rulings threaten the "discipline, readiness and morale" of U.S. armed forces worldwide.

At issue are three separate cases of military personnel seeking support to express dissatisfaction with government policy.

In each case, military policy was invoked to deny permission to circulate petitions among armed services members or to punish persons who had circulated them without permission.

Two of the cases involve efforts to petition Congress — and raised the issue of whether the prior-approval requirement violates a 1951 federal law.

The third case involves efforts to petition the secretary of defense and raises the broader issue of whether the requirement infringes on individual free-speech rights.

All three cases were decided against the military and in favor of individual service members.

In other action today, the high court:

—In a case of great importance to organized labor, agreed to decide whether labor unions may be held legally responsible for unauthorized wildcat strikes.

—Left intact a lower court ruling that allows police to search a person's garbage left for the trash collector, refusing to hear an appeal that such searches violate a person's privacy.

—Refused to hear the appeal of a California man seeking legal permission to have his mentally retarded daughter sterilized. The justices left intact rulings that the courts do not have authority to grant such permission.

—Called into question a New York law that subjects some fathers — but not mothers — to pay all legal costs involved in child custody fights.

—Agreed to review a ruling which the government contends will hamper its ability to prosecute persons who lie to grand juries. The case involves a Philadelphia man whose conviction of lying to a grand jury was overturned on the ground that grand jury testimony was used against him even though he had been granted immunity from prosecution.

The military petitions case involved virtually identical regulations imposed by the Navy, Marines and Air Force.

Truce Stops Fighting In Iranian City

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — A cease-fire stilled fighting between Kurdish rebels and Iran's revolutionary government today in northwestern Iran, Radio Iran reported. The truce, arranged by Moslem and military leaders, ended 24 hours of violence in which at least 170 persons were reported killed.

One source reached by telephone said rebels took over a military headquarters building, the police barracks and the radio and television stations and were laying siege to the military barracks at Sanandaj, 250 miles west of Tehran, when the cease-fire was declared..

"Four helicopter gunships are spraying the attackers with machine-gun fire," the source said.

Another informant said the hospital and clinics in the Kurdish town were packed with wounded and there was a shortage of blood plasma.

Fighting also was reported in towns around Sanandaj.

Most Kurds, who want autonomy for their region, belong to the Sunni Moslem sect. The Islamic forces of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary government belong to Iran's dominant Shiite sect.

It was not clear what sparked the fighting. By some accounts, it was triggered by the appointment of Shiites to key civil posts in the heavily Sunni region after the overthrow of Iran's monarchy.

Khomeini, the Shitte Moslem patriarch who led the Islamic revolution that drove Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi from the country, appealed repeatedly by radio for the Kurds to halt their attack.

He accused "foreign-inspired agents" of provoking the fighting and said: "The people in Kurdistan should know that we have no differences with our Sunni brothers."

The 31 million Shiites are the dominant religious faction in Iran, but the collapse of the monarchy revived hopes of autonomy or independence among the 2 million Kurds in northwest Iran. However, Khomeini and his revolutionary committees are no more sympathetic to the Kurdish cause than the shah was, and there have been several clashes between the Kurds and the army and revolutionary forces.

Local press reports said the fighting in Sanadanj started after the local revolu-

Tax Office Warns Of Exemption Deadline

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

If you fail to file promptly for property-tax homestead exemptions this spring, you may be out of luck.

In past years, the Lubbock city-school tax office has been liberal about late exemption applications. In fact, the office went so far as to give rebates to persons who, after paying their taxes, realized they could have had an exemption.

But because of questions raised by officials at the state level, local assessor-collector John Brooks has had to put an "administrative hold" on the rebate policy.

"If a tax is voluntarily paid, there appears to be some question whether part of the tax is rebatable without specific legislative approval," Brooks said.

Due to the uncertainty, Brooks said the City of Lubbock-Lubbock Independent School District tax office can no longer automatically grant requests for rebates for persons who neglected to secure an exemption before paying their taxes.

Instead, such requests must be considered on a case-by-case basis, he said.

Questions about the rebate policy underscore the need for persons to file for homestead exemptions on time, Brooks added. "People can remove any doubt about whether they can get an exemption by applying for the exemption before the April 30 deadline."

Application forms for exemptions were mailed to Lubbock homeowners last week. Many already have been completed and returned to the tax office.

The forms allow persons to apply for a new $5,000 market-value exemption available to all homeowners for school-tax purposes; and for various exemptions available to homeowners age 65 or over.

"In the past, court cases have said that if taxes were paid under duress, they were refundable," Brooks said.

His office interpreted that as liberally as possible, he added. An elderly person who paid taxes without first filing for an exemption was "eligible for a rebate," Brooks said.

But a "state of flux" in the rebate policy has developed for two reasons, Brooks said.

He said legislation has been introduced that would prohibit such tax rebates. Also, the state School Tax Assessment Practices Board, which monitors local tax offices, told Brooks that "a tax paid without protest is not refundable," he said.

"Until these questions are cleared up, we have had to put the (rebate) policy on hold," Brooks said.

Betty Ford Criticizes Doctors

NEW YORK (AP) — Former first lady Betty Ford, who overcame dependence on tranquilizers and alcohol, says doctors are too quick to prescribe pills for women under stress.

MRS. FORD

"Doctors have a strong tendency to overmedicate women," she said in an interview with People magazine. "It is easy when a woman suffering from stress comes into their office to write a prescription for a tranquilizer."

Frequently, what is bothering the woman is boredom or alienation, she said. But sometimes the doctor "is running an hour and a half behind with his patients and it's a lot easier for him to say, 'Take this prescription — it'll make you feel better.'

"I think any women — or men — who are on prescription drugs should sit down with their doctor and discuss exactly what those drugs are for, what they're doing to them and what the side effects are," she said.

Cardin In China For Shows

PEKING (AP) — French designer Pierre Cardin has arrived in Peking with what he calls "the Superman-Peking roof look."

On his third visit to China, Cardin is scheduled for three shows to let the Chinese know what he has in mind for their export line.

Cardin said during his last visit that he was impressed with the soaring roofs of Peking's temples. He put that type of design together with the craze for Superman and the result is something "large and soaring."

A member of Cardin's party wore one of his male creations, a jacket with exaggerated shoulders that seemed to take off in space. It resembled more the zoot suit craze of the 1930s than Superman or Peking's famous roofs.

Cardin brought four male and four female models for the shows set for tonight and Tuesday. He said he also will use three Chinese models to illustrate tiny Chinese sizes.

Marvin Trial To Resume Tuesday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Michelle Triola Marvin's lawyer says he has up to 20 witnesses waiting to testify in the landmark property rights trial involving actor Lee Marvin.

The trial, dealing with the issue of property rights of an unmarried couple, enters its 10th week when testimony resumes Tuesday.

Superior Court Judge Arthur Marshall said he will give Marvin's lawyers a few hours to wrap up testimony about the actor's finances before officially resting their defense on Tuesday. He said he wants all evidence in by March 28.

The former showgirl is suing Marvin for $1.8 million, half of Marvin's estimated net income during the years they lived together.

German Prefers Bangor

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — Erwin Kreuz, the vacationing West German who mistook Bangor for San Francisco and got a hero's welcome in both cities, has returned home after turning down a $480-a-month job.

Kreuz decided he didn't want to be a janitor at a shopping mall.

The 51-year-old Kreuz, who doesn't speak English, thanked his many new friends as he departed Saturday from his third visit to the United States. He said he would try to return to Bangor each year and would make learning English one of his top goals.

Kreuz lost a $750-a-month job as a Bavarian brewery worker last November. The custodian's job was the only offer he received while in Bangor three weeks.

In October 1977, Kreuz hopped off a San Francisco-bound charter flight here, thinking it was the end of the line. He realized his mistake four days later when he asked a cab driver for a ride to the Golden Gate Bridge.

A German couple in Bangor befriended him, introduced him to the governor and drove him all over Maine. When news of his plight hit San Francisco, the San Francisco Examiner paid Kreuz's way there, but Kreuz later said he preferred Bangor.

Mrs. Shcharansky Rebuffed

NEW YORK (AP) — Avital Shcharansky was rebuffed by Soviet Mission officials in front of several hundred supporters when she tried to arrange for her wedding ring to be delivered to her husband, Anatoly.

He is a Jewish activist imprisoned in Russia on treason charges.

Guards at the mission told Mrs. Shcharansky on Sunday that the mission was closed and to make an appointment.

"I want to send this (ring) to my husband because the KGB (secret police) took his when he went to prison two years ago," said Mrs. Shcharansky, clutching a box containing a simple gold band.

Before attempting to deliver the ring, Mrs. Shcharansky attended a rally across the street from the Soviet mission, which commemorated the second anniversary of Shcharansky's arrest on March 15, 1977. The 31-year-old mathematician is serving a 13-year term for treason.

Mrs. Shcharansky has not seen her husband since she was forced to leave the Soviet Union on July 5, 1974, the day after their wedding. She now lives in Israel.

That became apparent to building manager Everett Jones when he got no response from a notice he posted saying electrical power would be shut off Saturday from 6 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Jones said later, "We meant 'least inconvenience,' of course.

"The funny thing is, I didn't hear anything from our tenants. I guess it just proves they don't read our memos. Or maybe they think we do arrange these things for the most inconvenience."

Inflation, Food Prices Form Vicious Circle

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Trying to figure out who — or what — is to blame for inflation and rising food prices is a little like trying to solve that old riddle about the chicken and the egg: Which came first?

Inflation leads to increases in food prices. And increases in food prices lead to inflation. Which leads to more increases. And more inflation. And on. And on.

The problem was spotlighted recently at a conference sponsored by the Food Marketing Institute, an industry group. Speaker after speaker, from cattle rancher to supermarket executive, talked about how inflation is boosting prices.

J.W. Swan of the National Cattlemen's Association said that inflation is one of the factors that is causing uncertainty on the part of some ranchers, making them reluctant to expand. If the ranchers don't build up their herds, the supply of beef will continue to decline. And prices will continue to soar.

Stephen D'Agostino, the head of a New York supermarket chain, said that "due to inflation, our costs have increased dramatically (in the past 10 years). Utility costs are up 225 percent, labor, 171 percent; supplies up 166 percent."

And USDA economist William T. Boehm said that "as long as the food system continues to rely so much on inputs purchased in the general economy, food price increases at about the rate of inflation can be expected," he said.

Agriculture Department figures show that in 1978, the farmer got about 32 cents of every dollar consumers spent on U.S., farm-produced food. (The statistics don't cover imports or non-farm foods like fish.) The remaining 68 cents went for processors' and retailers' marketing costs — 32 cents for labor, 8 cents for packaging, a nickel for transportation and 23 cents for taxes, rent, advertising, profits, interest expense, repairs, etc.

The USDA expects food prices to rise about 8½ percent this year. About one-third of the boost will be due to a 10 to 11 percent rise in prices paid to farmers, according to Boehm. Most of the rest will stem from an anticipated 9 percent boost in marketing costs.

Food prices went up almost 12 percent last year and Boehm says that preventing the same kind of double-digit boost this year depends on "some progress in the overall fight to control inflation."

Goods and services measured in the Consumer Price Index are weighed according to what proportion of a family's budget goes for each item. Food prices are third, behind shelter and transportation. Food, eaten at home and in restaurants, accounts for about 18 percent of the overall index, meaning that a 10 percent boost in food prices adds 1.8 percentage points to the CPI.

In a speech late last year, Howard W. Hjort of the USDA said that from 1950 through 1978, food prices — on the average — contributed less than one percentage point a year to the rate of inflation. The picture since 1972, however, is much less encouraging. "Only once since them — in 1976 — have food prices contributed less than one percentage point," Hjort said.

He noted that the Consumer Price Index does not actually measure the cost of living; it does not take into account changing buying habits that follow price increases. "Regardless, because food purchases are made weekly and because changes in food prices are highly visible, consumers are especially sensitive to price movements," he said. "And, whether justified or not, changes in food prices are often used by many as a psychological bellweather to signal the strength of inflationary pressures in the general economy."

Consumers can get caught in the middle of the cycle. And Esther Peterson, the special assistant to the president for consumer affairs, says people have to learn to be more flexible, if they want to save money. "As a rule, our purchasing habits are very rigid," she said. "This rigid purchasing power is as much to blame as are supply shortages for violent price swings."

Bank President Confirms Bad Check Allegations

ATLANTA (UPI) — Robert Guyton, president of the National Bank of Georgia, says he has heard allegations that a former bank officer held checks drawn on the peanut warehouse owned by President Carter's family, but he has no first-hand information on the matter.

Former bank officer Robert Flynt, now living in Jacksonville, Fla., has been accused of keeping checks written on the Carter warehouse in a desk drawer until there was enough money in the account to cover the drafts. Guyton also allegedly kept a ledger on the activities of a commodity loan.

Guyton said that even if he knew Flynt was guilty of the allegations, he "wouldn't want to comment publicly" on the matter. "Both matters are being looked at by investigative agencies and our bank is cooperating."

It was reported in the New York Times that fomer NBG President Bert Lance pressured Flynt to hold checks until there were enough funds to cover drafts on the Carter warehouse account.

Bank officials, who asked not to be identified, said Flynt kept a record of the warehouse's short-term borrowings against its peanut inventory. They also claimed several checks bound with a rubber band were kept in his desk drawer until the account contained enough money.

An initial report by the FBI, which is now in the hands of the Justice Department, said the bank's handling of the loans to the Carter warehouse indicated there had been "technical" violations of federal banking laws, the newspaper said.

Egyptian Newspaper Publishes Text Of Treaty

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — The semi-official newspaper Al Ahram on Sunday published what it said was the complete text of the peace treaty between Egypt and Israel expected to be signed in Washington next week. Israeli officials later said there were errors in the Al Ahram version, but would not say what they were.

The following is an unofficial Associated Press translation of the published Arabic text:

Treaty of peace between the Arab Republic of Egypt and the State of Israel, the government of the Arab Republic of Egypt and the government of the State of Israel,

PREAMBLE:

Convinced of the urgent necessity of the establishment of a just, comprehensive and lasting peace in the Middle East in accordance with Security Council resolutions 242 and 338;

Reaffirming their adherence to the "Framework for Peace in the Middle East agreed at Camp David," dated September;

Noting that the aforementioned framework is intended to constitute a basis for peace not only between Egypt and Israel but also between Israel and each of its other Arab neighbors, as concerns it, which is prepared to negotiate peace with it on this basis;

Desiring to bring to an end the state of war between them and to establish a peace in which every state in the area can live in security;

Convinced that the conclusion of a treaty of peace between Egypt and Israel is an important step in the search for comprehensive peace in the area and for the attainment of the settlement of Arab-Israeli conflict in all its aspects;

Inviting the other Arab parties to this dispute to join the peace process with Israel guided by and based on the principles of the aforementioned framework;

Desiring as well to develop friendly relations and cooperation between themselves in accordance with the United Nations Charter and the principles of international law governing international relations in times of peace,

Agree to the following provisions in the free exercise of their sovereignty, in order to implement the "framework for the conclusion of a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel."

ARTICLE I

1. The state of war between the parties will be terminated and peace will be established between them upon the exchange of instruments of ratification of this treaty.

2. Israel will withdraw all its armed forces and civilians from the Sinai behind the international boundary between Egypt and mandated Palestine, as provided in the annexed protocol (Annex I), and Egypt will resume the exercise of its full sovereignty over the Sinai.

3. Upon completion of the interim withdrawal provided for in Annex I, the parties will establish normal and friendly relations, in accordance with Article III, paragraph 3.

ARTICLE II

The permanent boundary between Egypt and Israel is the recognized international boundary between Egypt and the former mandated territory of Palestine, as shown on the map at Annex II, without prejudice to the issue of the status of the Gaza Strip.

The parties recognize this boundary as inviolable. Each will respect the territorial integrity of the other, including their territorial waters and airspace.

ARTICLE III

1. The parties will apply between them the provisions of the Charter of the United Nations and principles of international law governing relations among states in times of peace. In particular:

A. They recognize and will respect each other's sovereignty, territorial integrity and political independence.

B. They recognize and will respect each other's right to live in peace within their secure and recognized boundaries.

C. They will refrain from the threat or use of force, directly or indirectly, against each other and will settle all disputes between them by peaceful means.

2. Each party undertakes to ensure that acts or threats of belligerency, hostility, or violence do not originate from and are not committed from within its territory, or by any forces subject to its control or by any other forces stationed on its territory, against the population, citizens or property of the other party. Each party also undertakes to refrain from organizing, instigating, inciting, assisting or participating in acts or threats of belligerency, hostility, subversion or violence against the other party, anywhere, and undertakes to ensure that perpetrators of such acts are brought to justice.

3. The parties agree that the normal relationship established between them will include full recognition, diplomatic, economic and cultural relations, termination of economic boycotts and discriminatory barriers to the free movement of people and goods, and will guarantee the mutual enjoyment by citizens living under the other party's jurisdiction of the due process of law. The process by which they undertake to achieve such a relationship parallel to the implementation of other provisions of this treaty is set out in the annexed protocol (Annex III).

ARTICLE IV

1. In order to provide maximum security for both parties on the basis of reciprocity, agreed security arrangements will be established, including limited forces zones in Egyptian and Israeli territory, and United Nations forces and observers, described in detail as to nature and timing in Annex I, and any other security arrangements the parties may agree upon.

2. The parties agree to the stationing of United Nations personnel in areas described in Annex I. The parties agree not to request withdrawal of the United Nations personnel and that these personnel will not be removed unless such removal is approved by the Security Council of the United Nations, with the affirmative vote of the five permanent members, unless the parties otherwise agree.

3. A joint commission will be established to facilitate the implementation of the treaty, as provided for in Annex I.

4. The security arrangements provided for in paragraphs 1 and 2 of this article may at the request of either party be reviewed and amended by mutual agreement of the parties.

ARTICLE V

1. Ships of Israel, and cargoes destined for or coming from Israel, shall enjoy the right of free passage through the Suez Canal and its approaches through the Gulf of Suez and the Mediterranean Sea on the basis of the Constantinople Convention of 1888, applying to all nations. Israeli nationals, vessels and cargoes, as well as persons, vessels and cargoes destined for or coming from Israel, shall be accorded non-discriminatory treatment in all matters connected with usage of the canal.

2. The parties consider the Strait of Tiran and the Gulf of Aqaba to be international waterways open to all nations for unimpeded and non-suspendable freedom of navigation and overflight. The parties will respect each other's right to navigation and overflight for access to either country through the Strait of Tiran and the Gulf of Aqaba.

ARTICLE VI

1. This treaty does not affect and shall not be interpreted as affecting in any way the rights and obligations of the parties under the Charter of the United Nations.

2. The parties undertake to fulfill in good faith their obligations under this treaty, without regard to action or inaction of any other party and independently of any instrument external to this treaty.

3. They further undertake to take all the necessary measures for the application in their relations of the provisions of the multilateral conventions to which they are parties, including the submission of appropriate notification to the secretary-general of the United Nations and other depositories of such conventions.

4. The parties undertake not to enter into any obligation in conflict with this treaty.

5. Subject to Article 103 of the United Nations charter, in the event of a conflict between the obligations of the parties under the present treaty and any of their other obligations, the obligations under this treaty will be binding and implemented.

ARTICLE VII

1. Disputes arising out of the application or interpretation of this treaty shall be resolved by negotiations.

2. Any such disputes which cannot be settled by negotiating shall be resolved by conciliation or submitted to arbitration.

ARTICLE VIII

The parties agree to establish a claims commission for the mutual settlement of all financial claims.

ARTICLE IX

1. This treaty shall enter into force upon exchange of instruments of ratification.

2. This treaty supersedes the agreement between Egypt and Israel of September, 1975.

3. All protocols, annexes, and maps attached to this treaty shall be regarded as an integral part hereof.

4. The treaty shall be communicated to the secretary-general of the United Nations for registration in accordance with the provisions of Article 102 of the Charter of the United Nations.

Done in triplicate in the Arabic, English and Hebrew languages, each text being equally authentic. In case of any divergence of interpretation, the English text shall prevail.

Al Ahram also published what it said was the complete text of interpretive documents attached to the treaty, as well as identical letters exchanged between Egypt and Israel on the question of the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Following is an unofficial Associated Press translation of the published Arabic text of the interpretive documents and the identical letters:

Agreed interpretive document on Articles One, Four, Five, Six and Annex I of the peace treaty:

ARTICLE I

The return of Egypt's complete sovereignty over Sinai, stipulated in paragraph two of Article I, covers every region as soon as Israel pulls out of it.

ARTICLE IV

It is agreed that a review of the stipulations of paragraph four of Article IV will be done at the request of any of the (two) parties, with this (review) to commence within three months after the request has been made, but no modification shall be introduced without bilateral accord.

ARTICLE V

The second sentence in the second paragraph of Article V cannot be interpreted as reducing what the first sentence of that paragraph states. This cannot be interpreted as negating what is stated in the original sentence of the second paragraph of Article V, which states the following:

"The two parties respect each other's right to navigation and air passage to reach any of the two countries through the Strait of Tiran and the Gulf of Aqaba."

ARTICLE VI (paragraph two)

The stipulations of Article VI are not interpreted contrary to the stipulations of the Middle East peace framework agreed upon at Camp David.

And this is not interpreted as negating the stipulations of Article VI (paragraph two) of the treaty which states the following:

"The two parties pledge to implement in good faith their commitments emanating from this treaty irrespective of any action or abstention from action by any other party and in a manner independent from any document outside this treaty."

ARTICLE VI (paragraph five)

The parties agree that there are no claims that this treaty supersedes other treaties and agreements, or that other treaties and agreements supersede this treaty.

This is not interpreted as negating the stipulations of Article VI (paragraph five) of this treaty which states the following:

"In accordance of Article 103 of the United Nations Charter the parties agree that in the event of a contradiction between their commitments under this treaty and any other commitments, then the commitments emanating from this treaty will be binding."

ANNEX I

Article VI (paragraph eight) of the first annex provides for the following:

The parties agree on the countries that form the United Nations forces and observers, provided these are not drawn from countries that are permanent members of the U.N. Security Council.

The parties agreed on the following:

In the event of no agreement between the parties on matters related to the stipulations of paragraph eight of Article VI of the first annex, then they will pledge to accept and support what the United States of America proposes regarding structuring the U.N. forces and observers.

A letter exchanged by Egypt and Israel regarding self-rule procedures:

Dear .....:

This letter affirms that both Egypt and Israel have agreed on in the following manner:

The governments of Egypt and Israel recall that they agreed at Camp David and signed at the White House on 17 September 1978 the attached documents which bear the title "A Framework for Achieving Peace in the Middle East" and "A Framework for a Peace Treaty between Egypt and Israel."

In the interest of reaching a comprehensive peace accord in line with the two frameworks mentioned above, Egypt and Israel start the implementation of the stipulations related to the West Bank (of Jordan) and the Gaza Strip.

They agreed to start negotiations with a month after exchanging ratification documents of the peace treaty. In line with the "Framework for Establishing Peace in the Middle East," the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan is invited to participate in these negotiations.

The delegations of Egypt and Jordan may include Palestinians from the West Bank and Gaza, or other Palestinians to be agreed upon by the two parties.

These negotiations are to be aimed at achieving agreement prior to holding elections on arrangements for elected self-rule authority (the administrative council), and defining its responsibilities and authorities, and agree on other matters in this connection.

If Jordan decides not to join the negotiations, then the negotiations will be conducted between Egypt and Israel.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Not Then, Now Or Ever?

A CONSERVATIVE drift in Israeli public opinion, signaled two years ago by the victory of Menachem Begin's Likud party in the Knesset elections, "is likely to continue," a Tel Aviv University political scientist predicted last week.

Asher Arian, writing in a new study published by the American Enterprise Institute, says although no single party has ever gained a majority in the unicameral Knesset, in 1977 the winner was clear:

"To the surprise of most observers, the Likud captured 43 seats and 33.4 percent of the popular vote, while Labor, pushed out of power for the first time since the foundation of the state of Israel, dropped from 51 to 32 seats, with 24.6 percent of the vote.

INITIALLY THE Likud built its governing majority coalition with support from the religious parties and a few minor groupings, only later did members of the Democratic Movement for Change join, says Arian.

Benjamin Akzin, professor emeritus at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, writes: "Hardly anyone had foreseen so complete a change in the political landscape as a Likud victory large enough to enable it to form a government without help..."

Several of the study's 11 authors, nine of whom are from Israel, describe the events that converged to defeat Labor.

Inflation, which the voters identified as the nation's most pressing problem, was running at an annual rate of 35 percent during the campaign. The Yom Kippur War, which had claimed 3,000 Israeli soldiers, had left a deep residue of bitterness.

FURTHERMORE, Labor was plagued by a succession of major scandals eventually forcing the resignation of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin himself. Some disillusioned Labor leaders and voters defected to the reform-minded Democratic Movement for Change—which polled 11.6 percent.

Myron J. Aronoff, associate professor at Rutgers University, concludes: "The party that had dominated Israeli society for 50 years had lost its ideological or moral dominance by becoming arrogant in power and by ceasing to respond to the public."

Even then, as now, writes Bernard Reich of Georgetown University, all major political parties were in general agreement with the Likud's basic stand on defense: "No return to the lines of June 4, 1967, no negotiations with the PLO, and no independent Palestinian state on the West Bank."

Weeds For Lunch

LEAVE IT TO Perfessor Ralph Durham to find a beautiful potential in the weed that has made Lubbock ugly.

The Texas Tech researcher told the A-J's Kathleen Harris the other day that the railroad weed which infests alleys, rights of way and vacant lots here is a nutritious cattle feed.

Beauty part of it is, he says, that the blamed thing is drought-resistant, disease-free, insect-impervious and self-sowing.

THOSE ARE THE very attributes that have caused the Kochia—as we scientists call it—to thrive shoulder-high while growing through the cracks of downtown Lubbock sidewalks.

Durham says the weed, spread through this region from railroad cars 40 years or so ago, even thrives in salty soil to the point that cattle which graze on it don't need a saltlick.

He even says it's so high in protein that the seed might be good for human consumption.

That's where I draw the line. I'll be danged if My Sweet Wife is going to get out of fixing dinner by telling me to go gnaw on the weeds in the alley!

THE PUSH NOW on to repeal the Texas right-to-work law won't be successful this year, but it pays nonetheless to unmask the false propaganda as we go along lest the claims take their toll.

Those who would repeal the law, and thus give union bosses the power to require a worker to pay union dues in order to hold a job, pretend that they are interested in helping the poor.

Actually, Louisiana is a case in point proving the opposite.

Louisiana outlawed compulsory unionism in 1976 after lagging far behind Texas in economic growth.

AFTER FOLLOWING Texas' lead, though, industrial expansion in Louisiana soared to a total investment of $2.3 billion in 1977—"a 100 percent increase over the previous five years," according to Lt. Gov. James Fitzmorris.

In 1978, Louisiana led the nation in industrial expansion with a total investment of $2.5 billion creating 8,200 new permanent jobs and 31,000 construction jobs, he said.

"You can talk all you want about giveaway programs but they don't pay the bill," he added. "Jobs do."

Holmes Alexander:

Who Will Cast The Last Stone?

WASHINGTON—One of President Carter's propagandists at the Washington Birthday Foreign Policy Conference mistakenly thought he was clinching the Senate's ratification of SALT II with an argument that climaxed somewhat like this:

"If the ratification vote is close, senators are going to shrink from the fear that one of them might cast the 34th vote against ratification—the one that would rook SALT for good and all."

But is not an opposite proposition the true one?

I realize that the 34th anti-ratification vote could not take place without 33 others to deny Carter the necessary two-thirds majority.

Nevertheless, a certain glory would attach, as it did to Senator Dennis DiConcini for plugging a loophole in the Panama treaties of last year.

NUMBER 34, let us say, was the tide-turner, the brave and thoughtful chap who saw for himself, and convinced at least one-third of his mates that this whole commotion about peace-or-holocaust through SALT has been a gross deceit and swindle for more than a decade.

The idea that disarmament equates with peace has never earned so much as a toe-hold on reality. It would be redundant to go back over the events that followed the well-meant, ill-considered Washington Naval Treaty of 1922.

Suffice is to recall that its chief result was to beach and dry-dock the navies of America, Britain and France, while the German and Japanese turned to the same sort of artful dodging that the Soviet display in our time when they devise another trick to surpass the agreed limitations.

THE 34th SENATOR could not escape being a heretic to the gospel that armament is the cause, not the mere by-product of international conflict.

I can't resist following Prof. Eugene Rostow in his sapient quotation of the historical Thucydides who observed that justice among nations is possible only when the necessity of it is equally divided.

"They that have the odds of power extract as much as they can," Thucydides declared, "and the weak yield to such conditions as they can get."

I have reached the conviction, after learning how Russia under SALT steadily increases its war-power, that our best move is to drop SALT entirely and produce missiles, ships, tanks and high explosives, with the built-in accuracy of Assured Destruction (but not MAD—mutual assured destruction, the McNamara suidice-pact) as fully and as fast as we can.

We have been warned by Paul Warnke and other propagandists for SALT that refusal to ratify the Treaty would cost us $100 billion in a 5-year program.

There is some undocumented disposition among pro-SALTists to the effect that the American taxpayer would not stand for such extravagance, and that the profiteers of the military-industrial complex would be the only winners.

But the 34th Senator would have all the winning arguments on his side.

There would be the one about death before dishonor, for dishonor is what Russia seeks to force upon some American President to make an accommodation we cannot live with except on our knees.

There would be the shattering argument that there is no price in billions for the lives and freedom of taxpayers, no matter how hard their pocketbooks are hit.

Finally, there is the argument of confidence which assures us that we can out-produce the socialist economy of Russia, and end up on top of the world that scientific genius is trying to create.

The hero of our age? Why, that 34th Senator, of course.

Sylvia Porter:

'Too Good To Be True' Deals... Usually Are

STARTING THIS July 1979, any franchisor who asks you to pay or commit yourself to pay $500 or more to set up a local outlet for any product ranging from face cream to ice cream must give you almost as much information as you would get in a securities prospectus required from sellers of new issues of stocks to be listed.

The franchisor also will be prohibited from making any claims about how much money you can make from the franchise unless it provides you with a pack of facts about the past track records of the company's other franchisees.

If a franchisor violates the new rules (adopted recently by the Federal Trade Commission), it will be subject to penalties of $10,000 for each failure to comply.

WHILE LESS serious than the criminal penalties in the securities laws, these $10,000 fines can add up to hefty sums if the violations occur over a span of time.

Is this new "truth in franchising" rule a new Magna Charta for you, the small investor, putting your life savings into what could be an exceedingly risky venture without knowing it?

Or is this so detailed a disclosure step that it will bury you, the franchisee, in a mass of detail which may be incomprehensible to you while raising the cost of franchising activities?

Make no mistake about it. This problem of ignorance among franchisees about what they're getting into is extremely serious.

And franchising is increasingly popular among the millions of small investors trying to achieve the American dream of "being your own boss."

BUT WHAT if you don't get the disclosures to which you are entitled under the new rule—or if the disclosures are false and you are injured? Then, says the FTC, you can bring a private lawsuit.

It is likely, though, that violations of a rule of this complexity will be far greater than the number of enforcement cases the FTC will bring.

And the fact is that franchisees normally do not dare complain at the beginning of a franchise relationship—or do not complain at all until they are losing money.

By that time, the franchisor, if fraudulent, is probably out of business. And if this is the case, the mail fraud statute rather than the FTC may be the only practical means via which the small investor can pursue whatever culprits are involved.

THE QUESTIONS raised by this virtually unknown FTC rule are varied and complicated.

For instance, how much can your franchisor control what products you, the franchisee, will sell? How you conduct the business? Whether (a hot one!) any competing goods can ever be sold?

And under the Sherman Antitrust Act, how much influence on the prices charged by the franchisee to us, the consuming public, can the franchisor try to exert—without violating that law?

Some court decisions have held that as long as you, the franchisee (local outlet), do whatever has to be done to maintain quality up to standard, the franchise cannot under the antitrust laws control the sources of supply which you choose to use.

And in instances where a group of sellers using the same trademark got together to agree on prices, this was held a violation of the Sherman Act.

In the 1950s, there were many of what the experts called "TBA" cases—referring to tires, batteries and accessories sold by gasoline service stations.

These cases involved charges that oil companies which leased stations to local owners used their economic clout to compel the stations to sell "TBA" items approved by the oil company or sold by it.

The practice was generally condemned as illegal in the decisions.

However you view it, conflict between the franchisee and franchisor seems as inevitable as is the potential benefit to both. It's only when the fighting becomes unfair that the outside power of the law should be called into action.

As obvious unfairness has been the failure of the franchisor to give essential information to the franchisee.

WHETHER THE rule goes too far in that direction and will tie up even small franchises in a bundle of red tape will be an issue for a long time.

Meanwhile, if you are considering entering into a franchise after July, be sure you read the information that must be given to you.

Do not assume the rule means the FTC has checked out and approved the franchise. It hasn't! And the disclosures should stress that.

Above all, keep in mind the basic guide, that if it seems too good to be true, the deal almost surely IS.

James J. Kilpatrick:

Dousing A Fire-Alarm Frenzy

WASHINGTON—A special committee of the National Academy of Sciences came up with a delightfully encouraging report. The encouraging thought is that at long last, elements of reason and rationality may be restored to the regulation of food and drugs.

If so, that pleasant condition will have been a long time coming. For more than 20 years, from the time that Congressman James Joseph Delaney of New York added a little amendment to the Food and Drug Act, federal regulators, food processors and consumers have been trapped in the rigid language of the Delaney Clause.

Delaney's contribution was to say that every food product or food additive must be banned absolutely if after appropriate tests, it is found to induce cancer in man "or animals."

MANIFESTLY, SO inflexible a rule leaves no room for scientific or political judgment. Under the Delaney Clause, it is immaterial if a particular product, such as saccharin, is of incalculable value to victims of diabetes.

It is irrelevant that repeated studies have failed to prove that saccharin causes cancer in human beings.

All that counted in the matter of saccharin was that one Canadian test indicated that massive doses of saccharin could cause cancer of the bladder in rats. The iron gates of Delaney clanged shut.

Well, not quite shut. Congress intervened to prevent the Food and Drug Administration from taking the drastic action the Delaney Clause would have required.

Congress also directed the National Academy of Sciences to study and report on the whole situation. It was this report that appeared a few days ago.

WITH ONLY seven of its 37 members dissenting, the academy's ad hoc committee denounced the "rigidity" and the "complicated, inflexible and inconsistent" requirements of the Delaney Clause.

In its place, the academy suggested that consideration be given to new risk classifications for foods and food additives: high, moderate and low risk. And why not?

The idea makes great good sense. It accords with old ideals of personal responsibility, and it ties in with the idea of cost/benefit ratios.

Yes, the academy's approach would require value judgments from key people in the FDA; they no longer could lock themselves safely within the iron bars of Delaney.

THE PROBLEM of saccharin comes first to mind. The FDA's idea, in sedulous obedience to Delaney, is to ban the artificial sweetener altogether from diet foods and drinks.

The unusual Canadian experiment, involving massive doses of saccharin to two generations of rats, did induce tumors in male animals.

But studies involving thousands of diabetics (and different thousands of bladder cancer victims), have established no correlation between saccharin and cancer in humans. The FDA's decree is irrational.

The academy committee's moderate recommendations echo the position that is constantly urged by the independent, non-profit American Council on Science and Health.

Headed by Dr. Elizabeth N. Whelan, a research associate at the Harvard School of Public Health, the council provides a cool, intelligent counterweight to the fire-alarm frenzies of those who see cancer scares everywhere.

DR. WHELAN and her associates certainly do not pooh-pooh cancer as such—not when 400,000 persons die every year from the disease.

They do criticize the hysteria that has invaded public debate on the relationship between cancer and the environment.

They are skeptical of the evidence most often adduced to "prove" that such-and-such a chemical "causes" cancer in humans.

Over the past 30 years, while the use of new chemicals has increased, the incidence of cancer actually has declined.

What is most urgently needed in this whole emotional area is a measure of common sense.

Whether we are talking about nitrites in bacon, or red dye in maraschino cherries, or cyclamates in soft drinks, or saccharin for a diabetic, the government's primary role should be to publicize the risk, the cost, and the benefit—and let the people find their own way.

"Everybody's relationships are changing so much these days, I'm PENCILLING everything in the address book."

Hospital Cost Controls May Mean Medical Care Rationing

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's largest trade organization for physicians says consumers would face rationing of medical care if Congress passes the administration's plan for standby controls on hospital costs.

Two American Medical Association spokesmen also leveled a bitter attack Wednesday at Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr., accusing him of acting with "sheer hypocrisy" in portraying the bill as a major way to fight inflation.

Dr. James H. Sammons, AMA executive vice president, and Dr. Robert B. Hunter, chairman of the AMA's board of trustees, made their assertions against Califano at a news conference after testifying before the Senate Finance Committee's health subcommittee.

The dew point is the temperature at which air becomes saturated.

The administration program would "quickly result in a reduction in availability of care — a rationing of care according to the financial whims of the secretary of HEW," Hunter told subcommittee chairman Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga.

"It's very, very real," Sammons stressed later while talking to reporters about the possibility of a cutback in the amount of medical care in response to a federal cap on hospital income.

Pressed to be specific on the types of cutbacks, Sammons replied they would likely occur in such areas as cardiac and emergency room services as well as newborn baby facilities.

Hunter said people may "have to wait in line" to be admitted for surgery or other medical treatment.

If the hospital cost containment bill is adopted and the cutbacks occur, Sammons said, the AMA plans to publicly lay the blame "at the feet" of Congress and the administration.

The administration's legislation would impose federal mandatory controls on most hospitals Jan. 1, 1980, if they failed to voluntarily hold down their expenditures during 1979.

Carter is asking the hospital industry to keep its increase in spending this year to about 9.7 percent. Each subsequent year, the HEW secretary would recalculate the percentage increase that hospitals would be allowed. The idea is that holding down hospital expenditures will hold down patients' bills.

"The administration proposes to substitute a Rube Goldberg apparatus into an industry that is already cleaning up its own house," said Sammons. "This is political grandstanding to cover up their inefficiencies in the rest of the economy."

He said, "Califano's proposals won't save a penny," and added that the HEW secretary "is the worst briefed individual" in the area of health that "I ever saw in my entire life."

For example, he said, the administration's "ridiculous" plan to exempt the wages of non-supervisory hospital personnel from the bill would "simply add fuel to inflation."

Sammons said the only way that cost containment can occur in hospitals without disrupting the quality of care is for doctors and the staff to work on the problem together.

Hunter said hospitals have voluntarily held off increases in their spending by several methods over the past few months.

For instance, he said, hospitals have pared down their staffs without reducing services and, among other things, have tried to make better use of testing procedures.

House To Consider Emotional Issues

AUSTIN (AP) — The kind of issues that light the emotions come before the House and its committees this week.

State representatives were expected to mark the halfway point in the legislative session this afternoon by voting final passage to a bill (HB1060) implementing the 1978 Tax Relief Amendment.

Next step will be committee hearings in the Senate, some of whose members object to the House's method of reimbursing school districts for more than $630 million in revenue losses caused by tax cuts.

With that formality out of the way — the real debate preceded tentative approval last week — House members plunge into a calendar that includes conjugal visits for state prison inmates.

It is the top priority bill of Rep. Sam Hudson, D-Dallas, a prolific sponsor of legislation who fasted for weeks in 1977 to protest lack of committee action on his program.

The House Committee on Security and Sanctions approved the bill more than two weeks ago, against the wishes of its chairman, Rep. Jimmie Edwards, D-Conroe.

A perennial issue that taps both religious feeling and pocketbook interests goes before the House Committee on Business and Industry following today's floor session.

Committee members expect a large crowd for a hearing on four bills to repeal the state's 1961 "blue law" that prohibits merchants from selling about 40 different kinds of goods on consecutive Saturdays and Sundays.

Discount houses have failed in repeated efforts to have both state and federal courts declare the law unconstitutional and are mounting their most determined effort ever to have the Legislature repeal the law.

When the law was passed 18 years ago, sponsors readily admitted the drive behind it was from established department stores who resented the sales they lost to the fledgling discount houses, which stayed open all weekend.

Committee plans called for interruption of testimony early in the hearing so a wedding could take place.

Rep. Ralph Wallace, D-Houston, received permission last week to be married in the House chamber, where the blue law hearing was also to be held.

The House Public Education Committee holds its long-awaited hearing on six school finance plans, most of them including teacher pay increases, Tuesday in the House chamber.

Dead Man's Identity Corrected

Police today say they erred in the identity of a man found fatally shot Saturday in front of a service station in the 2800-block of Clovis Road. They now say the victim is Robert Lee Johnson, 57.

The man, shot during an apparent dispute at a clubhouse near the service station, was first identified as Burl Jones, 73. However, police this morning, after taking a closer look at the victim's fingerprints, said the man actually is Johnson, whose last known address was 3305 E. Baylor St.

Police early today still had not heard from relatives or friends of the dead man.

Officers found Johnson lying unconscious in front of the station at about 7:40 p.m., with two bullet wounds — one in the chest and another in the abdomen. A .32-caliber slug reportedly was found lying between the victim's legs.

Johnson died at Health Sciences Center Hospital about 30 minutes after he was found. Justice of the Peace L.J. Blalack, who pronounced the man dead, ruled the death a homicide and ordered an autopsy.

Police say a woman, described as in her late 40s, and a man of about 35 are suspects in the shooting. The suspects had not been arrested this morning.

Witnesses said Johnson and the male suspect were arguing outside the club when the woman came out and shot Johnson. The pair reportedly ran south after the shooting.

The woman was said to be heavy-set and wearing a brown or green coat. Her companion was described as about 6 feet tall, stocky and wearing a light-blue short-sleeved shirt with a flag emblem on the right sleeve.

Agency Faces Possible Cuts

Facing a possible budget cut of up to 20.8 percent in some programs over the next two years, Department of Human Resources administrators in Lubbock want to find out how the community thinks DHR services should be ranked in order of importance.

Services expected to be affected by the budget cut are protection for abused and neglected children, day care for children, family planning, employment and care for the aged, blind and disabled.

At a public meeting from 1 to 5 p.m. Tuesday in the Garden and Arts Center, 4215 University, administrators from the state agency will present a brief overview of the programs facing curtailment of funds.

A representative of each program will be available following the general session to discuss programs on a small group or individual basis.

Primate Research Of Vaccine Begins

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A zoologist says a birth control vaccine that has been successful in dogs and lower mammals will be tried on primates.

The research that starts today could lead to its use in humans in eight to 10 years, says Dr. Alex Shivers of the University of Tennessee. Shivers, who said the vaccine is derived from a pig's egg cells, said that preliminary estimates indicate a woman inoculated with the vaccine would be immune from pregnancy for two to 2½ years.

Lubbock Pair Charged In Burglaries

Two Lubbock men have been charged with home burglaries in Idalou and rural Lubbock County.

Natavidad Cantu, 37, and Antonio Chapa Chavez, 34, both of 2419 E. Broadway, No. 18, are accused of a March 11 burglary in Idalou, in which a watch, digital clock and some clothing were taken. They are charged with a March 10 burglary on Route 3, in which a sewing machine, a stereo, and some firearms were stolen.

The two men are also charged with burglary of a vehicle in the reported March 13 theft of a battery from a car parked near their apartment complex.

Other charges filed by the Criminal District Attorney's office include one against a 22-year old Lubbock man for burglary of a habitation with intent to commit rape. Melquaider Savina Montano, address unavailable, is accused of breaking in on a Texas Tech University coed March 16 in Weeks Hall dormitory.

Raymond Craig Freeman, 21, of 1704 E. 14th St. was charged with rape in reported March 1 assault on a 19-year-old woman at her 36th Street apartment.

Larry James Carson, 18, and Johnny Richard Carson, 18, both of 1605 Ave. D, No. 51, were charged with burglary of a habitation in the reported Feb. 27 theft of a stereo-record player from a 1700 E. 15th Street home.

Robert Lee Dobbins, 41, of 320-A Vernon St. was charged with aggravated assult. He is accused of shooting at a 31-year-old woman and hitting her with a pistol March 15 at his apartment.

David L. Esparaza Jr., 23, Route 9, Box 8, was charged with felony possession of marijuana.

Thaddeus Allen Moyer, 19, of 220-A Ave. S was charged with credit card abuse.

Felony theft charges were filed against three persons. They are Thomas Earl Wells, 21, addressed unavailable, who is accused of stealing a car from Villa Olds March 15; Martha Modkins of Amarillo, accused of stealing 286 wrench ratchets from a Lubbock man last Nov. 9; and Erasmo DeLeon, 24, of 216 Texas Ave., accused of stealing a car March 16 from Lone Star Leasing.

LOCUSTS BREEDING IN AFRICA

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — Swarms of locusts capable of devouring 500 tons of crops a day are breeding in the Rukwa Valley in western Tanzania, the government-owned Sunday News reported. Zambian Agriculture Minister Alexander Chikwanda said a swarm covering four square miles was forming in the valley and threatening crops in Tanzania, Malawi and Zambia.

Brazilian Farm Colony Maintains Isolation

By RICHARD W. FOSTER

POSSE, Brazil (AP) — A farm colony founded by blacks 36 years after Brazil freed its slaves remains today pretty much as it was when its settlers arrived in 1924. Except, that is, for its first well now being dug.

Severino Pereira da Silva was one of the original settlers. He is the oldest surviving member of the colony who migrated to this cattle region north of Brasilia from the sugar and slave state of Bahia in Brazil's drought-ridden northeast.

"We heard it was a rich land, that the corn stalks were 10 feet high. But it was worse here than where we came from," the 69-year-old Severino said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Along with 80 other people, comprising 16 families, Severino, then 14, walked the 300 miles to this land along an ox-cart trail, crossing rivers on balsa ferries. One child died of snakebite during the 40-day trek, he said.

Fifty-five years later dozens of his descendants live in mud shacks and lean-tos, scratching a living out of poor soil on a 1,200-acre farm called "Bac-Pari" after a fruit tree that grows in the region.

According to Severino and other elders of the black colony, the migrants began farming as sharecroppers west of Posse, a farming center of 30,000 people 200 miles north of Brasilia.

"Somewhere along in the 1940s," said colony elder Ambrosio Cipriano Rocha, "a group of community leaders bought title to the land. But it was in one man's name and he died and we don't have it any more."

There are stories in this dry cattle country of central Brazil of other black colonies, living apart from whites, intermarrying and maintaining African culture and language.

But blacks on the Bac-Pari farm no longer perform African dances, called "congadas," and they do not speak Brazilianized African dialects said to exist in some black colonies.

The principal traces of slavery and a distant African past on this farm are an abysmal poverty and a racial purity that is the result of generations of interbreeding.

Community elder Rocha, asked about the colony's marriage customs, said: "It's easier this way. We all know each other. It's all one family and the marriages are good ones." With few exceptions since they came from the town of Macoaba in Bahia, cousins have married cousins within the colony.

No one at Bac-Pari could explain why the group maintained its physical and cultural isolation, or why the settlers had originally chosen not to mix with the populations around them. The decision may have been a reaction to the hardships of slavery but the Bac-Pari elders were reluctant to talk about what they remembered of Brazil's immediate post-slavery period.

Severino, who was born 22 years after emancipation, was asked whether his father was a slave. "No," he replied proudly. "He caught the Law of the Monarchy and married, a free man."

The "Law of the Monarchy," Brazil's emancipation proclamation, was decreed in 1888 by Emperor Dom Pedro II. In the following year the emperor was overthrown by the army and Brazil was declared a republic.

Severino gave up only one recollection of the Bahia sugar plantation in the aftermath of slavery. "They had stocks," he said. "They never put us in them but one time the owner put his son in after the boy got drunk and acted up."

Because of the primitiveness of the agriculture they practice, Bac-Pari blacks live virtually outside the market economy. They grow rice, beans, corn, manioc and even coffee but rarely have enough to sell in the markets of a country that is the world's second largest farm exporter after the United States.

While the government recently expanded its rural-extension services, offering advice and financing for new farming methods, Bac-Pari remains an island of misery amid Brazil's agricultural prosperity.

There is no public school on the farm but children get a primary education in a one-room mud shack where the teacher, wife of a Bac-Pari farmer and the mother of three children, attempts to drill 40 students in the basic subjects.

For the first time, a well is being dug on the farm with help from the local government. Since they arrived from Bahia, Bac-Pari women and their daughters fetched water from streams, carrying it in clay jugs and five gallon cans on their heads, the way their great-great-great grandmothers did in Africa.

Metcalf Named Publisher Of Daily Paper

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI) — Michael P. Metcalf, who first worked for the newspapers as a college student, has been named publisher of the Providence Journal and Evening Bulletin.

Metcalf's appointment was made by John C.A. Watkins, chairman and chief executive officer of the Providence Journal Co.

Watkins stepped down as publisher after 25 years in the post —longer than anyone in the newspapers' 150-year history.

Metcalf also was re-elected president and chief administrative officer of the newspapers.

The Metcalf family has been closely linked to the Journal and Evening Bulletin for decades. His grandfather, Stephen, stepped down as president in 1941 and was succeeded by Michael's father, George Pierce Metcalf, who held the post until his death in 1957.

The new publisher is a native of Providence, a graduate of Harvard and the Stanford University School of Business Administration.

UPI Names Fields As Bureau Chief

CHICAGO (UPI) — David Fields has been named manager of United Press International's Illinois capitol bureau at Springfield.

The appointment was announced by Robert Kieckhefer, Illinois editor for UPI.

Fields, 28, a native of Peoria and a graduate of Bradley University, replaces Tom Laue, now UPI's Kentucky editor.

Fields joined UPI in 1973 at Chicago and transferred to Springfield in 1975.

Fields is married to the former Melissa Pomeroy, a department store executive and free-lance artist.

Tourists Urged To Take Precautions In Moscow

MOSCOW (AP) — Muggings, murders, looting, rape, burglaries, grand larceny and — of course — the age-old crime of prostitution.

Like every major city, Moscow has a crime problem. It is less visible than in big American cities, and the Soviet press tries to perpetuate the image that the capital is almost crime-free.

But many Western diplomats and tour groups who run trips here are now urging foreign tourists to start taking more precautions against Moscow street crime, especially since more than 300,000 foreigners by Russian estimates will visit here during the 1980 Olympics.

Several months ago, a woman on a U.S. university exchange program here was walking home from the subway stop near Moscow State University late one night. Because of Moscow's reputation as a "safe" city, she felt little fear about traveling without a friend.

Then a middle-aged man attacked her and tried to force her to the ground. She began screaming, and the man fled — but not before he bashed her in the mouth and stole her pocketbook.

"It was a mugging, just like you'd find in New York," she said.

Despite such incidents, crime in Moscow is nowhere as prevalent as in similar-sized cities in the United States, partly because of a strong police presence to look after juvenile delinquents, drunks and other anti-social elements in the population of 7.8 million.

U.S. Chief Justice Warren Burger was told during a trip here that there is one uniformed policeman for every 3,000-4,000 people. And some 8 million people around the country are so-called "public order volunteers" who aid police and have powers to arrest.

The traffic cop can be found on almost every Moscow street corner during the day. But, like most big cities, a policeman is hard to find late at night except for the occasional patrol car. There is an emergency police number that Muscovites can telephone for help — 02 — and get a swift response.

The government-controlled Moscow media rarely report crime stories except occasional cases aired to warn citizens away from anti-social behavior. Each article contains the stiff punishment meted out by the courts to the criminial.

But it is the philosophy here that violent crime is an example of the class struggle in capitalist societies only. Asked to compare crime statistics for New York and Moscow, city head Vladimir Promyslov told a Soviet interviewer not too long ago:

"Comparison is practically impossible ... There is a whole range of crimes, though widespread in capitalist society, including the United States — New York in particular — which is simply impossible in the U.S.S.R. The very nature of the socialist system has eliminated such crimes as bank robbery, kidnapping people for ransom and a few other crimes."

He noted, however, that "Moscow has not eliminated cases of hooliganism, misappropriation of socialist property, arson and other offenses against the law."

Many Western analysts here believe Moscow's rapid urbanization has led to a significant rise in crime in recent years.

But it is impossible to verify, since Soviet crime statistics are hard to come by — partly because none was kept from the 1930s to the 1950s under orders of Soviet leader Josef Stalin. It wasn't until the 1960s that records were kept of "negative behavior."

According to official statistics obtained from various sources: property crimes and hooliganism make up 60 percent of all crimes; some 63 percent of all crimes are committed by drunks; and crimes against persons, murder, rape and assault accounted for 15 percent of the 835,000 convictions logged in 1970.

One Soviet sociologist pointed out that seven out of 10 murders here are committed in apartments, showing what she said was an "alarming" tendency towards more crimes in every-day places.

And when crimes comes so close to home, Muscovites get nervous. Signs have begun appearing in some Moscow apartment buildings urging residents to take turns "guarding" the houses. This would have been an unheard-of request 10 years ago, residents say.

But a recent newspaper article reported that a burglary ring robbed more than 20 apartments around Moscow before the three thieves were caught and sentenced to seven years' hard labor.

An unprecedented instance of looting also took place recently. Residents of one Western Moscow district told The Associated Press that looters moved in after 3,000 people were evacuated from their apartments because of no heat or hot water during a severe cold wave.

Petty theft is common around Moscow. Many Western residents are initiated when they find that the windshield wipers, sideview mirrors and tape-decks from the cars have been swiped.

But grand larceny also is around. A recent news story reported that two men were sentenced to death after one of them shot and killed a female cashier at the Moscow Institute of Chemical Machine-Building on payroll day. The killer was carrying a "homemade" gun.

Nor is Moscow without its sensational crimes — a 1969 assassination attempt on three cosmonauts, a 1976 terrorist subway explosion, last May's hostage-taking at the Finnish airline office.

The bloodiest attack on foreign visitors in recent years took place last June when a 24-year-old Soviet night watchman axed to death three Swedish tourists outside the Intourist Hotel here.

And a recent bizzare murder has come to the attention of Westerners here. Six weeks ago, police reportedly found a woman's torso stuffed in a suitcase abandoned on a Moscow tramcar. Another suitcase was found, containing the woman's other remains.

Brazil's Killer Bees Lose Much Of Sting

SAO PAULO, Brazil (UPI) — Killer bees are pushing through Venezuela and nearing the Colombian border at a rate that could get them into Texas by 1985.

But prepare yourselves for a disappointment, American killer bee fans and other prophets of doom. The well-publicized insect has, if you'll pardon the pun, lost a lot of its sting after two decades in the decadent New World.

"The killer bee is no longer a killer," flatly declares Dr. Helmuth Wiese, president of the Brazilian Confederation of Apiculturists.

Wiese should know. Brazil is where the little devils got their start in this part of the world, and most of the beekeepers in the south of the country have been raising the insects uneventfully for the better part of a decade now.

It seems the killer bee has simply bred most of its famed nastiness right out of itself through insatiable mating with more even-tempered Brazilian models.

It has become a respectable citizen of Brazilian hives, producing honey so abundantly that "most beekeepers wouldn't switch if they could," Wiese says.

But make no mistake, the killer bee is still more aggressive than the Brazilian varieties it overcame.

"They are dangerous" if improperly handled, says geneticist Lionel Goncalves of the Medical School of Ribeirao Preto outside Sao Paulo.

He says the killer instinct varies greatly among the many hybrids of killer bees now in Brazil, but that even the most good natured ones are more irritable than the bees Americans know.

The meanest of them will still attack in furious swarms and could kill a person by repeated stings or suffocation. But these types are so rare today that a Brazilian's chances of running into them are about as good as an Aoerican's chances of encountering a rampaging grizzly bear.

"You have more chances of being killed by a mad dog" than a bee, Goncalves swears. He has been studying the killer bee since a colleague at medical school brought them to the New World in 1956.

The killer bee saga began that year when geneticist Warwick Kerr transported selected queen bees of the "apis mellifera adansonii" family from Africa to Brazil — at the request, he is quick to point out, of the Brazilian government.

Agriculture officials were intrigued by reports the African bee produced up to twice as much honey as Brazilian varieties.

It had one slight drawback: an inclination to attack people, animals, tractors and anything else in its path. The idea was to breed a mutant to combine the most desirable characteristics of the New and Old World bees.

Before this could be done, a careless worker removed the screen from one of the test hives in Ribeirao Preto in 1957, allowing 26 queen bees to escape.

It is presumed the man lost his job in the ensuing havoc.

The oversexed African queens seduced every shapely Brazilian bee in their path, and before long their descendants spread from Sao Paulo throughout Brazil.

By the mid-1960s the horror stories and death counts began coming in.

The bees killed animals and farmers in the wilds of western Mato Grosso state. They took on funeral processions and even entire buses in eastern Rio de Janeiro. By 1977 they had killed, according to unconfirmed press reports, at least 200 people.

And the bee had a love for travel to match its love for destruction. Killer bee offspring — already mutating drastically — spread from Brazil south and west to Paraguay, Bolivia and Argentina, north to Guayana and Venezuela and now, Colombia.

At its rate of tavel, the killer bee should hit Texas by 1985, unless the Panama canal stops it first.

The killer bee became an instant media star and American institution.

Breathless TV network crews recorded bee attacks on miles of film. Esquire magazine instituted a killer bee watch, faithfully reporting the bee's last known position every year. The "Saturday Night Live" TV show introduced a running killer bee sketch.

In the United States, where bee pollination is important to $7 billion worth of crops, agriculture experts worriedly began a rash of research programs aimed at stopping the killer bee.

But as the bee conquered new terrain, the terrain conquered it.

Couple Decides To Fight Ruling By Liquor Board

NO DIVORCE — George and Phyllis Evans have decided not to get a divorce. Instead they'll fight the Washington Liquor Control Board which refused a beer and wine license for her store because he is a beer truck driver. Liquor Board Chairman L.H. Pederson says he hopes the Legislature will amend the conflict of interest rule in the 1933 law. (AP Laserphoto)

SEATTLE (AP) — Phyllis Evans says she's not going to give up her husband or her store to satisfy the Washington State Liquor Control Board. Instead, she'll stand and fight.

Mrs. Evans and husband George had decided to divorce because the liquor board said her Allentown Superette's license to sell beer and wine would be in jeopardy unless George — a Teamster for 17 years — quit his job as a beer truck driver, or Mrs. Evans sold the store.

State law forbids anyone "financially interested" in liquor wholesaling from having an interest in retail outlets, and the board said that included Evans.

But, says Mrs. Evans, "Why should he switch jobs? That's ridiculous. It's a 1933 law; well, this is 1979. There are a lot of 1933 laws that need to be changed."

The Evanses filed for divorce Friday, and said they would continue living together after the legal separation. Phyllis, 35, and George, 44, who live in a mobile home, have been married 13 months.

A local newspaper story during the weekend brought support from all over the state, and the Evanses changed strategy.

"We've run into so many people who have other problems with the liquor control board it's unreal," she said. "People are behind us. They want to start a fund, sign petitions. People are sick and tired of the liquor board being dictators.

"We don't know what we'll do, but we will fight them. So many people are behind us we can't let them down."

Liquor Board Chairman L.H. Pedersen of Tacoma said in a telephone interview Sunday he doesn't want to fight the Evanses. He said he hopes the Legislature, which meets in special session Wednesday, will change the law.

"We hope this could be resolved to the satisfaction of everybody," Pedersen said. "She needs the attention of the Legislature. They're the people that set the policy. We just carry it out. We get criticized for not being more hard-nosed. We're always the bad guys, you know.

"The liquor laws have been changed in the past and should be changed again. At one time women couldn't sit at a bar, and that's been corrected. At one time there was no liquor on Sunday and that's been corrected."

Mrs. Evans has been trying to get some relief from the board for more than a year. She tried forming a corporation, and putting the store in her mother's name, but nothing worked.

She said the store, located three miles south of Seattle, was a "tiny hole-in-the-wall" place "right across the street from the Dwamish River" near Tukwila. Steelhead and salmon fishermen are regular customers.

"I love this store. Fishermen drink coffee in the morning and retired people drop in to talk. It's my thing."

Mrs. Evans said the liquor board is "in trouble because I'm not giving up. This has got my blood flowing."

Subway Security Beefed Up

NEW YORK (AP) — The city beefs up security on its nighttime subway trains and on most station platforms beginning tonight in an effort to curb an onslaught of subway crimes.

"We will bring these goons to a grinding halt," says Mayor Edward I. Koch.

A uniformed police officer will ride each of the city's 600 nighttime subway trains and most of the 460 station platforms will be patroled.

The stepped-up police presence will be in effect from 6 p.m. to 2 a.m. daily on the trains and from 4 p.m. to 2 a.m. in the stations.

The new deployment of the Transit Police force has involved virtual elimination of detective, tactical and other plainclothes units, extensive overtime and the eventual rehiring of laid-off officers.

The order putting several hundred detectives and members of other special units back in uniform has prompted spokesmen for the plainclothesmen to call for Transit Police Chief Sanford Garelik's resignation.

Freeze-Dry Plan Saves Wet Books

PALO ALTO, Calif. (AP) — More than half of 45,000 books Stanford University librarians feared were lost to a flood will be back on the shelves next month — saved by a freeze-dry process usually reserved for coffee.

"The results have been exciting, when you consider we had masses of pulpy paper and it looked hopeless," said Sally Buchanan, a Stanford librarian in charge of the book restoration project.

Miss Buchanan said 65 percent of the books will be returned to the graduate library after dirt and mud have been removed and 25 percent of the books will need rebinding. The rest — 10 percent — need extensive repairs and a small number will be replaced.

"We may lose some covers, but the paper has come out beautifully," Miss Buchanan said.

The books were soaked when a water main broke and flooded the basement stacks of the Stanford library on Nov. 4. Most of the damaged books were classics, religion, art, music, philosophy and architecture books.

After the accident, the books were immediately frozen, among vegetables and fruit, at Modern Ice & Storage in San Jose, Calif., which is owned by a Stanford alumnus.

The books remained there until Lockheed volunteered to freeze-dry them in a vacuum chamber that had been used in training for space ventures.

It took three days to freeze-dry each load of 5,000 books. The process began Feb. 5 and was completed March 12, Miss Buchanan said.

The books were first subjected to mild heat in the stainless steel vacuum chambers, which measured 18-by-18-by-35 feet.

Through a physical reaction called sublimation, the ice crystals turned to vapor without getting the books wet. The vapor collected on a special cold panel in the form of ice and the books came out "dry and brittle," Miss Buchanan said.

Before they are returned to the shelves April 1, the books are being kept in a high humidity environment so that they absorb moisture.

A similar process was used to restore smaller numbers of books from the Corning Glass Museum and Library in Corning, N.Y., the Klein Law Library at Temple University, and the Federal Record Center in St. Louis.

"There was no way to get 45,000 books dry before they mildew and rot," said Miss Buchanan. "The books were guinea pigs for this new freeze-dry process. But we're not complaining. It worked."

Follow-Up

Affirmative Action Delays Nominations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration's desire to increase the number of blacks and women on the federal bench is delaying efforts to fill 152 new federal judgeships, Attorney General Griffin B. Bell says.

"Running an affirmative action program is one of the most difficult things I ever got into," Bell told a House budget hearing last week. The administration had hoped to have most of the new judges on the bench by April 1, but so far only 15 have been nominated by President Carter and none has been confirmed by the Senate.

Dignitaries Respond With Scripture

MANCHESTER, England (UPI) — A bishop appealing to fellow dignitaries for the return of his new cloak which disappeared at his consecration ceremony is getting nothing but the Bible in response.

"And if any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also" — Matthew, 5:40, said the only replies received by the Bishop of Manchester.

People's Temple Survivors Salvaging Lives

By PIETER VAN BENNEKOM

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (UPI) — Outside the roomy, two-story, yellow brick house in the Georgetown suburbs stands a grey Volkswagen minibus with the lettering "Peoples Temple."

It is one of the few surviving signs here of the cult headed by Jim Jones, who died along with 913 of his followers in the Guyana jungles last Nov. 18.

Inside the house, once the Temple's headquarters in the Guyanese capital, five survivors from the sect are trying to put their lives back together.

"We really don't know what were going to do," says 48-year-old Charley Touchette, former project manager for Jonestown who hails from Indianapolis, Ind., but moved to California with the cult in the early 1970s.

"Our lives have been planned for us for so long that it's hard to adjust to having to make it on your own," Touchette said. "Right now, we might think that we're all going to be living happily together ever after, but I have no idea whether we'll stay together. The Peoples Temple is dead, of course — finished."

Touchette survived Jonestown because he was on assignment in Trinidad, along with Philip Blakey, a young black from California who now helps Touchette run an inter-island Caribbean freight service using the Albatross, a 350-ton freighter.

The boat escaped a government embargo on all Temple assets because it was registered in the name of another company, although another small Temple freighter is tied up at the dock of the Guyana Defense Force, the nation's small army.

The other survivors still in Guyana are Paula Adams, a former member of the Temple board of directors from Ukiah, Calif., and Touchette's son Mike and Mike's wife Deborah.

Deborah cooks and cleans the house where Temple member Sharon Amos and her three children were killed by having their throats slashed the same night as the jungle suicides. Paula, Mike and Deborah happened to be in Georgetown the night of the tragedy.

Mike Touchette is "trying to run a freight hauling service in Guyana with a Temple truck which the government has not yet laid hands on. But MIKE AND Deborah have been forced to sell off clothes, furniture and books for living expenses.

"I suppose eventually we might all have to get jobs — if anybody will hire us," Deborah says.

Deborah visits the Georgetown prison where two other Temple members await trial for murder. They are Larry Layton, the 32-year-old conscientious objector from San Francisco charged with the shooting deaths of Rep. Leo Ryan, D-Calif., and the three newsmen and a Temple defector, and Charles E. "Chuck" Beikman of Indianapolis, Ind., the cult's illiterate 45-year-old shoemaker, accused in the Amos killings.

Deborah visits Beikman twice at week, the maximum allowed. She has lost contact with Layton, whom she says always was "a bit out of it" and has become even "stranger" since the incident. She holds Layton "kind of responsible" for the death orgy which she says she didn't want.

The five survivors say they really don't have anything to go back to in the United States. Like all the others, they donated everything they had to the "church."

All say they want remain in Guyana for the outcome of a lawsuit they filed, along with the two murder suspects and Jones' son Stephan, for the sect's money and other assets, frozen by the Guyana government since the demise of Jonestown.

But they are realistic enough to know that will take a long time and there may be nothing left when the legal battle ends.

"It might take a lifetime," Deborah says.

"Nobody knows how much money there is strewn about because the only people that would know are dead," says the elder Touchette. "I've heard anywhere from $13 million to $66 million. But after the government gets through taking its share of it — who knows?"

The U.S. government has filed suit in California to recover the estimated $4.5 million cost of flying the bodies out of Guyana. And the Guyana government is suing here to recover its costs in what it called "abating a public nuisance."

"I feel that everybody who survived Jonestown is entitled to the money," says Touchette. "We're the ones that earned the money."

Touchette thinks he might stay in Guyana — "I like the climate, I like the people" — and never go back to the United States. That is, if the Guyana government will let him.

The last time he came back into the country from a feight-hauling trip to the Caribbean islands, he found his permanent resident's status in Guyana canceled because of the closing of Jonestown. He's here now on a temporary visa.

However, he cannot be expelled from the country while he is suing the government, his lawyers have told him, and the same goes for the other survivors.

Touchette says he used to purchase supplies for Jonestown and "every time I run into one of my old acquaintances again I have to relive the whole tragedy. I suppose I'll have to do that for the rest of my life."

He says he has found no hostility towards him or any of the other survivors from neighbors or acquaintances in the wake of the incident that shocked the world.

"In fact everybody's been very sympathetic. They realize we put our whole hearts and bodies into building Jonestown. We really believed in what we were doing. We didn't want that tragedy up there.

"At one time, it was a very beautiful place to live. There was no racism, no sexism and no elitism.

"It took a great many young people out of drug addiction. It took senior citizens that had nothing to do and gave them security.

"It's just so ironic that it all had to end in death."

Bird Illness Resurfaces In California

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Government officials announced in 1973 that dreaded and deadly Newcastle disease had been eradicated from California.

Since 1971, the highly contagious bird disease had resulted in the death of 12 million birds. It cost $56 million to fight the epidemic, which wreaked havoc within the state's enormous poultry industry.

Newcastle disease is again racing through Southern California, and this time it is taking not only an economic toll, but an aesthetic one as well.

The state's poultry ranrhes have thus far been spared, but thousands of rare, beautiful and exotic birds have been destroyed by health officials this year in hopes of controlling the outbreak, which has also been traced to Las Vegas and Tucson, Ariz.

When the disease is discovered in a pet store or "bird farm" the entire stock of birds is destroyed by health officials. They say it is only way to control the spread of Newcastle Disease.

On Friday, federal, state and local health officials from a recently established 124-member Newcastle Task Force carried out the largest single eradication of birds since the disease was confirmed in Southern California early this year. The entire stock — 1,463 birds — of the Fleming Bird Farm in Pedley, Calif., was destroyed.

Dr. William Dieterich, a veterinarian working with the task force, said all the original confirmed cases of the disease were found in birds sold by Parrot World, a store in Garden Grove, Calif.

He said the task force is now trying to trace 450 birds sold by the store since Jan. 1 and investigating the shop's sources for the exotic birds.

Dieterich stressed that the disease is extremely contagious and he said while in its incubation period a bird infected with Newcastle disease appears normal. But once it strikes, death is the only result.

Infected birds appear to have a cold. They begin to sneeze and sputter. Their heads begin bobbing and weaving and they stretch their necks, gasping for breath. Their throats are clogged with phlegm and their eyes are sealed shut by drying fluid from inflamed eye sockets. In about three days they die.

Dieterich said the pet shops and bird farms are "innocent victims," adding most dealers are cooperating fully with health officials.

"I have to give them credit," Dieterich said. "On the other hand, there are certain bird dealers — without mentioning any names — who are not above offering birds at bargain prices when they know they're sick or suspect they are."

McGovern Asks Bell To Probe Sugar Payments

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. George McGovern, accusing sugar processors of possible fraud in the receipt of government funds, has asked Attorney General Griffin Bell to investigate the payment program for the 1977 sugar crop.

"The USDA's own interim report sets forth glaring and serious abuses in the payment and loan program," said McGovern, D-S.D., the ranking Democrat on the Senate Agriculture Committee.

"It appears that possible fraud on the part of certain processors may have existed as well as serious administrative weaknesses," he told Bell in a letter.

Abuses were revealed in an Agriculture Department inspector general's audit which McGovern released Jan. 31.

The internal audit was given to McGovern as an interim report by the General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress. The GAO will complete its own report shortly.

In light of revelations in the Agriculture Department report, McGovern recommended to the attorney general that "initiate an immediate investigation of this program."

McGovern issued a statement in which he denounced administration sugar policy. He said he was opposed to direct federal payments to sugar producers, which the administration supports.

The audit said:

—Four sugar processors received $58.5 million in loans for ineligible sugar from prior years because local Agriculture Department offices did not have data needed to compute how much sugar was eligible in 1977.

—The Agriculture Department's Commodity Credit Corporation lost more than $272,000 through June 30, 1978 on interest on those loans.

—Seven unnamed participants in the program overclaimed at least $10.4 million in support payments.

—Officials made an administrative decision which permitted participants in the sugar program to claim $8.9 million in payments for prior years' sugar and communicated the decision verbally so that not all participants were aware of it.

—Regulations allowed a special deduction on gross proceeds of one processer so payments to all participants were increased by more than $9 million.

—Program reporting errors resulted in more than $430,000 in excess claims for support payments.

McGovern indicated that these problems could be avoided if the sugar bill before the Congress did not include direct payments to producers. The House Agriculture Committee mas begun work on a sugar bill, which likely will be what President Carter seeks.

The president supports achieving a 15.8 cent per pound raw sugar price for 1979 with fees and duties, and quotas if necessary, and adding another half-cent direct subsidy.

McGovern disagreed with that approach, saying that higher duties and import fees on sugar imports, which make up about 45 percent of domes5ic supply, should be the only mechanism to support domestic sugar prices.

Increasing import fees by a half-cent per pound would reduce the budget deficit by $50 million.

An alternative means of raising prices, with half-cent per pound direct federal subsidies, would increase the budget deficit by $60 million, he said.

McGovern accused the administration of policy failures which are undermining the president's stated objective of having a viable and strong domestic sugar industry.

He said the president's objective is not reflected in the reality of an 11 percent reduction in planting intentions by domestic sugar beet growers, with four-fifths of the decline comingnfrom Colorado, Idaho, Utah and Washington, where five sugar beet plants will closc.

The senator attacked the failure of sugar policy to achieve a 15-cent market price for raw sugar, which Vice President Walter Mondale promised last October after a sugar bill failed in the House.

An Agriculture Department report indicates U.S. sugar imports this year will rise to 5 million to 5.5 million short tons, instead of a preliminary estimate of 4.6 milion tons for 1978.

The report attributed rising imports to reduced domestic sugar beet production, government acquisition of significant amounts of sugar and substantial amounts of domestic sugar placed under government loans.

"The increased imports will add to the balance of payments deficit about $150 million, thus weakening the value of the dollar," McGovern said.

The government has an investment of about $785 million in sugar which remains stored in warehouses while customers of domestic sugar are buying sugar imports.

"This is not a policy — it is market abdication," McGovern said. "It is adding to the budget deficit and to Treasury borrowing."

Fatal Virus Transmitted To Woman

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government scientists have confirmed that an Idaho woman died of rabies in the first known instance of the deadly virus being transmitted through a cornea replacement, the most common of transplants.

The report published in the New England Journal of Medicine said the finding should spur added caution in selecting organ donors, especially in light of the 10,000 cornea transplants done annually.

The only other reported case of a fatal virus of any kind being transmitted through a transplanted cornea was disclosed by doctors at Columbia University four years ago. It involved a woman who died from an obscure, slow-acting, nerve virus known as Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease.

She apparently had caught it two years earlier when she received a cornea from a New York man later found to have died of the disease.

In the Idaho case, Constance Wesselman, a 37-year-old Boise woman, died last October about 50 days after receiving a cornea. The donor, Frederick Stone, a 39-year-old rancher-forester from Baker, Ore., died in August.

Stone had been flown to St. Alphonsus Hospital in Boise after contracting a mysterious, paralytic illness.

Tests conducted at the National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke confirmed that both the donor and recipient had rabies that was not diagnosed at the time of their illnesses.

After rabies was confirmed as the cause of death in the woman, 70 persons in Boise and 11 in Baker — mostly family members and health care workers — got a series of anti-rabies vaccinations as a precaution. No other cases were reported.

Dr. Sidney A. Houff and other scientists said a diagnosis of rabies can be missed easily because in up to 20 percent of the cases, symptoms mimic Guillain-Barre syndrome, a neurological disorder characterized by progressive paralysis.

"Since both of these patients had predominantly paralytic symptoms and had no history of an animal bite, the possibility of rabies was not considered," the report said.

The scientists said the incident shows the importance of considering rabies as a possible diagnosis in cases of progressive paralysis that appear to be Guillain-Barre syndrome.

Patients should not be considered as donors if they have a nerve disease suspected of being caused by a virus, or if they have inflammation or degeneration of peripheral nerves, the authors said.

Human rabies cases, which are almost always fatal, are rare in this country. The U.S. Center for Disease Control in Atlanta says there are normally just one or two deaths each year from the disease, although there were four in 1978.

Approximately 35,000 persons receive anti-rabies treatments each year as a precautionary measure when exposed to the disease, usually through contact with a suspected animal.

Mrs. Nureyev Ill, Wants To See Son

LONDON (AP) — Sir John Gielgud and other luminaries in the arts appealed to Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev on Saturday to allow ballet star Rudolf Nureyev's mother to visit her son in the West.

"She has been trying unsuccessfully for the past 15 years," actor Gielgud and others said in appealing to Brezhnev through the letters column of the Daily Telegraph.

"Mrs. Nureyeva is 74, she is suffering from serious eye trouble and her only wish is to see her son once more," said the letter.

Nureyev, a one-time star of Leningrad's Kirov Ballet, sought political asylum in the West while he was in Paris in 1961.

Besides Gielgud, the letter was signed by playwrights Alan Ayckbourn and Tom Stoppard, violinist Yehudi Menuhin, orchestra conductor Andre Previn, film director Ken Russell, actors Paul Scofield and Sir Ralph Richardson and ballet directors Dame Marie Rambert and Beryl Grey.

Some types of commercial bottled water include drinking waters that come from a well or spring, specially prepared water with minerals added, and fluoridated water used to prevent tooth decay.

Carter Studies Key Issues

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter met at Camp David today with his top advisers to review the administration's policies on energy and inflation.

Carter, Vice President Walter F. Mondale and top White House and Cabinet officials began what was to be a day-long session at the Marine-guarded retreat in Maryland's Catoctin Mountains.

One of the principal items on the agenda was what to do about federal price ceilings on domestically produced oil, which are scheduled to expire May 31.

The White House hotly denied a published report that Carter was virtually certain to eliminate these controls and allow the price of domestic oil to rise to world levels.

"The president has made no decision on the course of action he will pursue," press secretary Jody Powell said in a statement. "Speculation about what that decision will be is idle and uninformed."

Among those summoned to the meeting were Energy Secretary James R. Schlesinger, Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, Commerce Secretary Juanita Kreps and budget director James McIntyre.

Also attending were Carter's chief anti-inflation strategist, Alfred E. Kahn; Charles Schultze, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers; White House domestic policy aide Stuart Eizenstat; trade ambassador Robert strauss and Assistant Secretary of State Julius L. Katz.

Besides energy, the agenda was expected to include the administration's semi-voluntary wage and price guidelines, which so far have shown little effect in the face of an unexpectedly strong business performance.

Officials said no hard decisions were expected to made made at today's session, which instead was devoted to a broad review of current conditions.

Under discussion were mandatory thermostat controls and a long list of other ideas packaged in a proposed "Iranian Response Plan," designed to cope with the pinch on supplies that is just beginning to be felt as a result of the Iranian revolution.

The president and his aides also were likely to grapple with the conflict between his pledge to let U.S. oil prices rise to world market levels and his top-priority policy to fight inflation.

Administration sources, who asked not to be identified, have said Carter would probably reveal his energy plans in a national television address sometime this month.

By then the Iran-caused oil shortage, which has seemed only a threat so far, may be felt at gasoline stations where restricted allocations for March are beginning to dwindle.

Schlesinger says the Iranian shutdown, which started in December and has only recently begun to ease, may cost the United States 2.5 percent of its oil, or 500,000 barrels a day. And he says that could eventually rise to 800,000 barrels a day.

The United States has also promised its partners in the International Energy Agency to cut oil consumption, perhaps by as much as one million barrels daily by year's end.

The question facing Carter was how to do that without shocking the nation's economy.

He also faces a May 31 end to congressionally imposed price ceilings on U.S.-produced oil. On that date the ceilings become discretionary, left up to decisions by the president.

Carter could simply let the controls die, allowing the average price of oil in the United States to jump about $2 a barrel to match world prices — an immediate increase of about 5 cents a gallon if averaged over all petroleum products.

Because of the inflationary impact of such a move, other possibilities have been proposed, including a two-stage removal of price controls to gradually raise U.S. prices to world levels by late 1981.

The administration has been concerned, under either type of "decontrol," about avoiding windfall profits for oil companies. So Carter must decide whether to ask Congress to impose an excess profits tax, if controls are removed, or perhaps a "plowback" provision requiring oil companies to re-invest higher profits in the search for more oil.

One way around that briar patch might be a partial decontrol.

Carter could remove price controls from newly-discovered oil and "marginal" wells, as a profit incentive for new development and continued production from wells producing only a trickle.

He could then continue price controls on "old" oil and thus avoid handing windfall profits to companies that drilled those wells when costs were lower.

The removal or easing of controls and the resulting price increases would presumably lead to reduced oil consumption eventually.

Whatever form of controls Carter might opt for, all controls would end Sept. 30, 1981 under the legislation that gives Carter discretionary powers as of June 1.

But in the short run, Carter needs policies to deal with the continued shortage of imported oil as Iran's oil fields produce scarcely one-third of their pre-revolutionary level.

Although the administration was not formally publishing the "Iranian response" proposals, many have been discussed publicly.

Carter has already asked Congress for standby authority to impose heating, cooling and hot water limits on commercial and public buildings, but not on residences.

He has also asked for authority to order complete or partial weekend service station closings, and to ban unnecessary advertising lighting.

Ford Critical Of Carter On B-1, Mobile Missile

TOKYO (UPI) — Former President Gerald Ford said today it is "imperative" for the United States to modernize its arsenal of strategic weapons and that the Carter Administration should do so "to the limit" permitted under a new arms limitation agreement with the Soviet Union.

Ford spoke of SALT and the Soviets, the B-1 bomber controversy, the oil crisis and next year's presidential elections in a news conference held toward the close of a speaking tour of Japan sponsored by an Osaka television station.

He said he was not seeking the Republican presidential nomination himself, but assured his audience that "it won't be dull in the United States in 1980."

The former president said he would not take a position either for or against the new strategic arms limitation (SALT II) agreement with the Soviet Union until it has been finalized and he has had a chance to analyze it.

But he appeared to side with critics who fear that the Carter administration has dulled America's edge of strategic superiority by cancelling production of the B-1 bomber and holding up development of the MX mobile missile.

"There are many people in the United States who believe the new administration, by cancelling the B-1 strategic bomber program and extending the life span of B-52s from the current 25 years to 35 to 40 years, made a serious mistake.

"Many disagree strongly with our future reliance on an aircraft (the B-52 bomber) that is not modern, nor as effective as the B-1," Ford said.

Ford said he agrees with Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker, R-Tenn., that Congress should judge the SALT II agreement in the wider context of U.S.-Soviet relations, and not solely on its merits as an arms pact.

"I strongly believe," he added, "that it is imperative dor the United States to keep modernizing its strategic weapons ... We should go to the limit permitted under any international or bilateral agreement we have."

Ford also said the Republican Party is "not lacking candidates" for next year's presidential elections, adding, "I'm not one of them."

"We have many now, and more will appear. I happen to think that's good ... It won't be dull in the United States in 1980," he said.

Ford also said he thinks Congress should lift its ban on exporting Alaskan crude oil and sell some of it to Japan.

He said the "situation has changed dramatically" since Congress approved construction of the Alaskan pipeline on the condition that the oil pumped through it be used only within the continental United States.

"The U.S. Pacific Coast cannot refine the total Alaskan oil production. About 40 percent of it now goes through the Panama Canal to the East Coast, at an added cost of about $1.50 per barrel.

"At the same time, oil is being taken from Mexico and delivered to Japan at extra cost. It would be more economical for Alaskan oil to be delivered to Japan and Mexican oil to the United States," Ford said.

Chinese Want To Start Peace Talks March 28

TOKYO (AP) — China proposed today that Vietnam open peace talks with it March 28, five days after the date proposed by Vietnam, to restore normal relations after their four-week border war, China's official Xinhua (Hsinhua) news agency reported.

Xinhua said the Chinese Foreign Ministry sent a note to the Vietnamese Foreign Ministry proposing that vice foreign ministers from each government meet on a rotating basis in Hanoi and Peking.

The note said the Chinese government was prepared to send Vice Foreign Minister Han Nianlong (Han Nien-lung) to Hanoi for the first round of talks "to show the sincere desire of the Chinese side."

China proposed that their representatives discuss "measures for the restoration of normal relations between the two countries and preservation of the traditional friendship between the two peoples." The note also proposed that they "consult on ways to ensure peace and tranquility in the areas along their border and then proceed to settle the boundary and territorial disputes and that they settle the other disputes existing between the two countries."

The other chief issues between the two governments are the Vietnamese government's treatment of ethnic Chinese residents of Vietnam and the Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia that overthrew a pro-Chinese government.

Vietnam proposed last Saturday that talks begin in Hanoi on Friday, March 23. The Vietnamese said earlier that negotiations could begin one week after all Chinese troops left Vietnamese soil, and today Hanoi claimed that all Chinese troops had not withdrawn from Vietnamese territory as the Chinese claimed.

Vietnam also warned China's leaders not to forget the lessons America learned in the last Indochina war.

"Like the United States in 1966, Peking is asking itself how to withdraw from Vietnam without losing face," said a commentary today in the Vietnamese Communist Party newspaper Nhan Dan. "Thirteen years later, China is forgetting the lessons (of American involvement in Indochina)."

Nhan Dan challenged Chinese Foreign Minister Huang Hua's assertion last Friday that China had pulled its "entire" force out of Vietnam. It said China's leaders are "experts at making white seem black," adding, "The Chinese have not completely withdrawn their troops and are continuously threatening to carry out aggression again."

Huang told reporters in Peking some Chinese troops might still be in some border areas claimed by both governments. He said only a few square miles were in the disputed areas.

Vietnam said Saturday it was ready to open negotiations with China next Friday to settle the border disputes.

Moslem Sects Clash In Northwest Iran

tionary committee and its military forces refused to give the Kurds ammunition.

Meanwhile, thousands of army troops and police marched through the streets of Tehran and other cities today to demonstrate their support of Khomeini and the revolution. The demonstration apparently was designed to counter demands by revolutionary guerrilla organizations that the armed forces which were the chief bulwark of the shah's regime be replaced by a new people's army.

As the soldiers and police paraded through Tehran carrying portraits of Khomeini, helicopter gunships flew overhead dropping leaflets. People along the streets applauded, stuck flowers in the troops' gun barrels, showered them with candies and then marched along with them.

"Islam is victory, communism is communism, God is great," the soldiers and civilians chanted.

Earlier today, the Khomeini regime expelled American feminist leader Kate Millett after holding her overnight in a small room at the Tehran airport.

Accused of "provocations" against Iran's Islamic revolution, the 44-year-old author of "Sexual Politics" and a woman companion, Sophie Keir, were put aboard an Iranian airliner on a flight to Paris.

After disembarking in the French capital, Mrs. Millett said they had been harassed during their detention but she indicated she had never been physically harmed.

"I've never been so terrified in all my life," Mrs. Millet said at an impromptu news conference at Orly Airport outside Paris.

The two women said they intended to stay in Paris "for a day or two" before returning to the United States.

Two immigration officials took the women from their downtown Tehran hotel Sunday morning and delivered them to the airport after a stop at the Foreign Ministry. They were detained in a small room equipped with a couch and a camp bed and were not allowed visitors. But reporters were able to get through by telephone, and Mrs. Millett said they were not mistreated.

She arrived in Iran two weeks ago, saying she had come at the invitation of Iranian women's groups campaigning for equal rights with men under the revolutionary regime. She took part in several street marches by women protesting new restrictions on their freedom. She said she also was gathering material for a book and a film.

On Thursday, Deputy Prime Minister Abbas Amir Entezam accused her of "provocations" against the revolution and said she would be deported.

The new government has abolished the family protection law under which women had equal property and divorce rights with men. Khomeini has also urged women to trade Western dress for the traditional Moslem chador, a head-to-toe black veil that is regarded as a symbol of modesty.

While some Iranian women welcomed Mrs. Millett's support, others were angered by her interference.

"Women's lib Western style is irrelevant, inapplicable, unacceptable and distasteful in our country," woman journalist Minou Moshiri wrote in an article addressed to Mrs. Millett. "Our women are perfectly capable of taking care of themselves, thank you."

Khomeini urged the Iranian people to "join hands" to rebuild their nation after the year-long rebellion that drove Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi from the country.

In his first major speech about the shattered economy, Khomeini said: "We must join hands to rebuild this slum. ... Our difficulties are big ones. The Islamic government has many problems."

The speech, made Thursday to a group of Boy Scouts and Girl Guides, was made public Sunday.

It has been more than five weeks since the revolutionary government took power in Iran, but civil services and most industries have not returned to normal.

SPRING IS HERE — Liz Parker, 15, left, and Lisa Hahn, 16, were so elated when the temperature at Louisville, Ky., rose into the 70s Sunday that they went wading in Beargrass Creek at Cherokee Park. More warm weather is forecast in the area today, although a new winter storm in the Rockies soon may end the frolicking. (AP Laserphoto)

Israeli Cabinet Approves Pact

had recorded his affirmative vote for the treaty before leaving for Washington last week.

Publication of the treaty text by the Israelis was expected later today.

Over the weekend U.S. presidential envoy Zbigniew Brzezinski failed to win Saudi Arabian and Jordanian support for the Egyptian-Israeli treaty, but he said he is "more convinced than ever" the pact will be the "beginning and cornerstone" of peace in the Middle East.

The Saudi royal family and Jordan's King Hussein still demand a "comprehensive peace" that would end Israeli occupation of all Arab land taken in 1967, including East Jerusalem, and would meet Arab demands for Palestinian self-rule, officials in the capitals of the two countries said.

Brzezinski, President Carter's national security chief, led a U.S. delegation in weekend meetings with Saudi King Khaled in Riyadh and Hussein in Amman. Then he flew to Cairo to tell Sadat about his talks.

Brzezinski said his talks with the two monarchs were "constructive and useful" and he was "encouraged." He would not elaborate, but there was speculation the Saudis indicated they would not cut off their financial support of Egypt.

Brzezinski was flying back to Washington today, while Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher was going to Western Europe to brief leaders there on the proposed treaty.

Although foes of the treaty are calling for a pan-Arab economic boycott of Egypt if Sadat signs the pact with Israel, it would hurt the Egyptians only if the Saudis joined in.

Less than 4 percent of Egypt's exports go to other Arab countries, and Egypt is itself an exporter of oil. But Saudi Arabia gave Egypt nearly $1 billion in aid last year and banks about $1.6 billion in Egypt. Diplomats here predict the Saudis will continue to "straddle the political fence."

West Texas Gets Flood Warnings

tore down a backyard fence, littering debris across the yard.

Several other homes in that area also received damage to roofs and fences.

Despite the threat of thunderstorms this afternoon and tonight, Lubbock temperatures were forecast to climb to the upper 60s today under partly cloudy skies.

Temperatures tonight will cool to the mid 40s, the NWS said, and continue warm Tuesday, with the high in the mid-60s.

The Hub City Sunday recorded .31 inches of rain and an afternoon high of 67 degrees, according to reports.

Cloudiness with showers and scattered thunderstorms was the forecast for much of the rest of the state today as well. Temperatures were expected to range from the 60s and 70s in northern sections of Texas to the 70s and 80s in the southern portions.

The South Plains extended forecast for Wednesday through Friday shows a continued chance of showers and thunderstorms and temperatures remaining in the 60s and 70s during the afternoons and dropping to lows in the 30s and 40s.

Flooding also posed a threat to much of the Midwest region today, while a new winter storm dumped a foot of snow on some areas of Wyoming and northern Colorado.

Water Group Plans Change In Name

WASHINGTON (AP) — The president of the Water Pollution Control Federation has predicted that the organization may change its name in the next decade to reflect change in the field of water quality.

Martin Lang, in an article published recently in the federation magazine, suggested the organization change its name to the "Water Quality Federation" by 1990.

Such a name change, he said, would be symbolic of a new awareness that "our essential mission is ... to preserve and enhance water quality," not just treat wastewater.

Minority Veterans Use Home Loans

WASHINGTON (AP) — GI home loans are more popular among minority veterans than among ex-servicemen as a whole, according to a survey by the Veterans Administration.

VA Administrator Max Cleland said minority veterans, who comprise 11 percent of the total veteran population, obtained more than 15 percent of the VA loans guaranteed during 1978.

Alan Henry Backs Tax Proposal

AUSTIN (Special) — Legislation which would allow Texas political subdivisions to reduce property taxes by increasing other taxes may be the "most meaningful property tax relief yet proposed to the Legislature," Lubbock Mayor Pro Tem Alan Henry told a House committee this morning.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Chase Untermeyer of Houston, would permit local voters to decide whether to raise sales taxes or levy alternative taxes on tobacco or alcohol so local property taxes could be lowered by the same amount.

At a House Ways and Means Committee hearing, Henry said the bill "would provide relief where relief is needed.

"It would allow citizens the opportunity of choosing alternative sources of revenue to reduce the dependence of their cities on the property tax," he said.

Responding to demands for lower property taxes, the Legislature has granted exemptions, Henry noted. The Legislature has proposed to reimburse school districts to some extent for the lost revenue, "but until now, cities have been faced with lost revenue and no source of income to replace it," he said.

Untermeyer's bill would allow Lubbock citizens to "decide which type of tax they prefer" and spread the tax burden, if voters approved the measure.

By increasing the city's sales tax from one percent to two percent, property tax revenues could be cut by the $7 million the tax increase would generate.

However, Henry noted property owners would be paying only $5.6 million in sales taxes, with the remaining $1.4 million paid by non-property owners.

The "most important" advantage of the bill, Henry said, is that it "allows property tax relief without drastic cuts in essential services and the recreational and cultural programs most supported by the taxpayers."

Court Rejects Christian's Request

JERUSALEM (AP) — In a verdict that comes to grips once again with the age-old question of who is a Jew, Israel's high court of justice rejected an Israeli citizenship request by a Connecticut woman who believes in Jesus.

Eileen Dorflinger, 35, insists that she is a Jew, born of Jewish parents who are active in the Connecticut Jewish community.

In court, the ministry showed evidence that Mrs. Dorflinger had undergone baptism at the Congregational Chruch in Harwinton, Conn.

Mrs. Dorflinger contended that she undertook a purification rite with water but denied this was baptism.

In Harwinton, Rev. Warren Hedrick of the church said today that she was baptized in September 1975 and taken into church membership the following June.

"There must have been 80 people witnessing the ceremony," he said. "That's why I was surprised when I received her letter (last November) asking me to say that she was not a member."

He said he was not surprised at the verdict. What she seeks to do "just isn't kosher," he said.

For years the issue of who is a Jew has split Israeli governments, caused riots by religious Jews and brought anguish to many people whose faith does not tally with the strict definitions of a Jew laid down in Israeli law.

"A Jew," says the law, "is one born to a Jewish mother or converted to Judaism, and who does not adhere to any other religion."

Only by meeting those criteria can a Jew receive automatic Israeli citizenship under Israel's Law of Return.

Mrs. Dorflinger arrived in Israel in October 1976.

Divorced from her Christian husband, she came here with her two children, assisted by Israeli immigration authorities in Boston and New York.

But her son had difficulty settling into school, and she decided to take the children to their father in the United States.

Vance Heads Efforts To Settle Dispute

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — Secretary of State Cyrus Vance today headed a last ditch effort by the Western powers to create an independent Nambia in South West Africa by conducting free elections and setting up a constituent assembly under U.N. supervision and protection.

Vance, British Foreign Secretary David Owen and representatives from Canada, France and West Germany met with U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim for 90 minutes Sunday at U.N. headquarters on the Nambian problem.

Details of the talks were not disclosed.

Billed as "proximity talks" between South African and the leaders of nationalist black Namibian guerillas, the negotiations in the next two days were aimed at overcoming the existing hardcore obstacles to the U.N. plan for transition to independence.

At hand for the talks were Foreign Minister Roelof Botha of South Africa and Sam Nujoma, President of the militant South West Africa People's Organization, which controls the gserrilas.

Since the two refuse to negotiate face to face, the Western powers must act as go-between in the talks, which are to be held at the U.S. Mission to the United Nations.

Besides Waldheim, others invited to participate inclade the five African "front line" states — Angola, Botswana, Mozambique, Tanzania and Zambia — as well as Nigeria, black Africa's most populous and economically strongest nation.

In the past weeks, South Africa bitterly complained about what it believes is a Western attempt to change the plan under pressure from SWAPO and the black Africans.

The $300 million project, providing for a peane-keeping force of up to 7,500 men, was worked out by Britain, Canada, France, West Germany and the United States in almost two years of negotiations and approved last year by the U.N. Security Council.

Botha has categorically declared South Africa had given its final approval to the original version of the plan and would not be pressured into any further concessions.

He insists that the plan provided U.N. surveillance of SWAPO military camps in the front line states.

Amin Visits Bloody Battlefront

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Uganda's President Idi Amin visited the front and found his soldiers "ready to fight until the last man," Uganda radio said today.

Amin's visit to the battlefront far from his capital of Kampala came after Tanzania and Uganda both claimed they won the largest battle of their nearly five-month-old war, a clash in which hundreds of troops were reportedly killed on both sides and several warplanes shot down.

Uganda Radio said in a broadcast, monitored in Nairobi, that Amin traveled to Mbarara, 150 miles southwest of the capital, which it described as "the front line" with an invasion force from its neighbor, Tanzania.

The Mbarara area was reported captured by Tanzania in alliance with Uganda exile forces some three weeks ago.

The radio said Amin "was delighted to learn that Ugandan soldiers are at a high morale and prepared to fight to the last man to liberate Ugandan territory from the invaders."

The radio said Amin held a one-hour meeting with officers of the Simba and Tiger battalions based at Mbarara, a major Ugandan garrison town. They discussed a "new strategy to uproot the enemy completely from Ugandan territory," the radio said.

The Simba and Tiger battalions were among those which Ugandan exiles said had mutinied last month and gone over to Amin's opponents.

Quake Shakes Southwest Mexico

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A moderate earthquake shook much of southwest Mexico including the capital Sunday afternoon, swaying high-rise buildings and panicking residents. There were no reports of injuries or major damage.

The Seismological Institute at the University of Mexico said the quake registered 5.5 on the open-ended Richter scale and lasted about a minute.

Last Wednesday a Mexican quake registering 7.9 killed five persons, injured 46 and damaged more than 600 buildings.

The epicenters of both quakes were near Acapulco, a Pacific resort area.

A quake registering 5 on the Richter scale is capable of considerable damage in a built-up area.

POTATO STOCKPILE BIGGER

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's stockpile of potatoes on March 1 was an estimated 129 million hundredweight, according to the Agriculture Department. That was six percent more than was on hand a year, the department said.

Cable Car Operator's Conviction Upheld

BOLZANO, Italy (AP) — Italy's Supreme Court has upheld the manslaugher conviction of the operator of a cable car that crashed, killing 42 persons.

Only one person survived the March 9, 1976 accident at Cavalese in the Dolomite Mountains.

An appeals court will set the sentence for Carlo Schwaitzer, who was found to have let the cable car run too fast. The court reversed a lower court conviction of officials of the firm that manufactured the cable car.

Pistachio Crisis Sparks Concern

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with the prospect of long lines at beer halls and ice cream parlors, the Carter administration and Congress are considering stringent action to end America's dependence on imported pistachio nuts.

The crisis atmosphere developed when Agriculture Department officials disclosed that Iran is the source of about 65 percent of the pistachios consumed in the United States.

In the best of times, Iran supplies the United States with 39,000 pounds of pistachios daily. An Agriculture Department official said that because of recent unrest, imports from Iran have dropped 28 percent since the first of the year.

And no one at the State Department could say when, if ever, the new Iranian government will restore pistachio nut production to the high levels of recent years.

All these factors have spurred efforts to reduce American dependency on imported pistachios.

But, so far, progress toward pistachio independence has been uncertain. In California, 30,000 acres of pistachio trees produced nine million pounds of nuts in 1977, but poor weather conditions last year cut the California crop to seven million pounds.

There is talk on Capitol Hill of encouraging higher domestic production by boosting the price of pistachio nuts beyond the anti-inflation guideline set by the administration.

"We can't let pistachio ice cream become a casualty of the war on inflation," said an advocate of price increases.

However, President Carter is understood to oppose deregulating pistachio prices.

Administration sources say the president believes that once Americans become aware of the gravity of the crisis, they will voluntarily cut back on consumption.

While emphasizing that no final decisions have been made on proposed voluntary standards, administration officials said the one most often mentioned is one nut to a glass of beer.

There are sharp differences within the administration over the question of whether it is possible to eat one pistachio nut.

Members of Congress who doubt that a voluntary program would work want the administration to take stronger action.

They are pressing Carter to form an interagency task force, under strong leadership, to coordinate governmental efforts to combat the crisis.

Joseph A. Califano Jr., secretary of health, education and welfare, is being mentioned as a likely pistachio czar.

The first job of the task force would be to draw up an allocation system to ensure that no area of the country is deprived of a fair share of the nuts. Some members of Congress, most notably the Wisconsin delegation, want allocations based on beer consumption. However, the ice cream lobby has vowed to fight any such plan.

A variety of voluntary and mandatory controls also are under consideration.

They include banning the sale of pistachio nuts on weekends and after 6 p.m., the times when consumption goes up. If that failed to reduce consumption significantly, the administration might ask Congress for authority to ban the sale of pistachio nuts during the World Series and Super Bowl.

Administration officials deny rumors that the Food and Drug Administration has drafted an order that would allow sale of pistachio nuts only to people with a prescription from a government agency set up to administer the pistachio program.

They also deny reports that Califano favors giving non-smokers higher allocations than smokers.

Trustees Defend Busing Decision

By JEFF SOUTH
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock school trustees insist they had no choice but to use busing to desegregate the city's public schools. And trustees say charges to the contrary are ridiculous.

"Allegations that we have been 'soft' on busing cannot be supported. The school board has merely followed the dictates of the courts," board President Charles Waters said in response to charges by the local chapter of the National Association for Neighborhood Schools.

"If we followed the advice of the people in the anti-busing movement, it would be a disaster. If we refuse to bus, the courts would take over the school system — as happened in Boston," he said.

"As a result, we would lose all local control over our schools."

NANS last week accused the Lubbock Independent School District's seven-member board of trustees of not doing enough to fight court-ordered busing.

The association announced it will run anti-busing candidates for the board in April, 1980, when the terms of trustees Waters, Harold Harriger and Jose Ramirez expire.

The Avalanche-Journal learned there may be wide-open races for each of the three school board positions.

Waters, who has served on the board since 1968, says he definitely will not seek re-election.

Harriger, elected school trustee in 1974, said it is "highly unlikely" he will run again.

Ramirez is undecided on a re-election bid. "It's a little early. I don't know yet," he said.

The NANS allegations and political plans, however, did not seem to be a factor in the three trustees' considerations. Trustees are confident in defending their record on busing.

"We have acted as responsibly as we can within the framework of the law" to resist busing, Harriger said.

A court order, such as the one the school district is under, is tantamount to law, he added. "We had no choice but to follow the order."

The school board is "not enthusiastic" about having to bus children for desegregation purposes, Harriger said. But since busing must be used, the board wants to promote a peaceful acceptance of it, he said.

Ramirez agreed. Moreover, he noted that the board "went on record against busing" by unanimously passing a NANS-suggested resolution last year. The reso-

Only God Knows People's Burdens

By ROSALYN HART FINCH
Westerville, Ohio

As I took the cookies from the oven, David exploded into the kitchen.

"How come old lady Stoner hates me? — I never did anything to her," he shouted. "I was only smelling her old lilacs and she ran out and yelled at me to get away from her bushes. Yesterday I was just walking by and she hollered at me!"

MRS. FINCH

"Not old lady, Mrs. Stoner," I said.

"How come she hates me?" my 10-year-old repeated. His questions stirred memories.

"She doesn't," I said, turning over the past in my mind.

When I was 9 I cherished my relationship with the lady across the street, Louella Summers. My love for her was simple and complete; she liked me and thought me worthy of respect and attention. And these I needed badly, for having five brothers and sisters made such things hard to come by at home. Every day, I bounded over to Louella's to eat homemade treats, play with paper dolls or simply to chat of many things.

But Louella's husband was another matter. When I spoke to him he either nodded, grunted some unintelligible reply or said nothing. Often when I was around, he'd be working in his colorless, tidy yard pushing the lawnmower or digging and clipping around ttthe evergreens.

His solemn face would seldom turn in my direction, though I tried many ways to trick him into attention. "Look here!" I'd cry, examining an evergreen bud, or, "What happened to this?" I'd ask over a drooping branch. But a momentary glance was usually all I got for my efforts.

Yet, loving Louella as I did, it seemed necessary for me to at least be friends

Consul Calls Treaty 'Gamble'

By RHONA SCHWARTZ
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The peace treaty between Egypt and Israel is "no guarantee" that troubles will cease between Israel and her Arab neighbors, the Israeli consul general warned here Sunday.

Calling the treaty "only the beginning," Yitzak Laor of the Israeli consulate in Houston told about 30 persons at Congregation Shaareth Israel, "It's a gamble we took with President (Anwar) Sadat by putting all the eggs in one basket."

Laor, in Lubbock as the guest of Trinity Church, said Israel agreed to the peace treaty "because we believed we arrived at the point where we got the maximum we could in terms of establishing total normalization in the Middle East."

But, he warned, "we are not sure how long Sadat will survive. There is no successor, no heir in line. A successor may not honor what President Sadat signed.

"We should pray that Sadat will be strong and live long until the time when we can reach the Egyptian people on a wider scale," Laor said, explaining it then would be harder for another leader to turn the Egyptians toward a path of war with Israel.

Under the treaty's terms Israel is to return the Sinai Peninsula — its buffer zone — plus all lands acquired in the 1959 and 1967 wars, the oil contained within these areas and offer autonomy to the Palestinians living in these occupied territories.

By agreeing to these concessions, Israel is putting itself back in a position of "unbelievable vulnerability," Laor said.

"We had to make tangible concessions to Egypt, giving back oil and land, and in return we get from Egypt pieces of paper and promises," Laor said. Israel only hopes Egypt will renege on those promises, he added.

Israel's situation with Egypt is more or less the same dilemma the United States had with Iran, Laor said. "It is extremely dangerous for a country like the U.S. to rely on leaders who are friendly and cooperative and who rule millions of people who are not free and democratic."

The soft-spoken Israeli diplomat said he thinks the danger of another war in the Middle East is greatly diminished because with Egypt, the strongest of the Arab countries, "out of the ring of hostility, the (other Arab) nations will not have a military credibility and will think twice before subjecting the other countries to a war."

Although Syria reportedly was considering an armed confrontation over the Egyptian-Israeli pact, Laor does not expect it to occur. "We don't foresee a prolonged war with Syria," he said, although he added that border skirmishes were a possibility.

As far as the other Middle East nations are concerned, Laor said, "Saudi Arabia is more a problem to the United States than to Israel, and Iran is more a ceremonial and theatrical antagonist to Israel than a military one."

One way Iran can work against Israel, Laor said, "is by proxy. Their options are extremely limited and are no threat or great danger to the State of Israel."

At Wit's End...

By ERMA BOMBECK

I know you're all looking to me for leadership in the war of disappearing socks, but I can't handle it.

Last week, my husband confronted me with eight mismated socks that had gone into the washer as happy couples and emerged as swinging singles and said, "Tell me again how the Bermuda Triangle in the utility room works again."

They don't believe us, you know. Back when I started doing family wash, I tried to keep from talking about it too much. I'd say, "The other sock probably fell behind the washer," or, "Maybe you forgot and only wore one." I wanted to believe that.

When they continued to disappear, I found myself suggesting ways to compensate for the loss by wearing one foot in a cast or painting one foot with an acrylic paint that washed off in the shower.

In time, I was forced to level with the family and tell them there were forces in a washer and dryer that were beyond human control. I equated it with the same force that makes a cake fall when you are having company. Or when you want your kids to play a song on the piano that they've driven you up the wall with and they look at you and say, "I don't remember it."

The family didn't buy it.

When other women shared their frustration with me, I started the first New York Sock Exchange where we would all bundle up our mismated socks from all over the country and try to resolve the differences. In seven years, we were not able to match up a single pair of socks.

This country is wonderful at finding answers to phenomena. We have theories on where flying saucers come from. Theories on why the fish aren't biting. Theories on human behavior and why there are wars.

We need an explanation on why socks disappear somewhere between fill and spin dry. Where do they go? Why? What is it trying to tell us?

We know the effects. Husbands irritable, annoyed and demanding. Woman looking at herself in the mirror, wondering if her bulb is indeed dimming. Children going out into the world with feet that don't match.

We are going to settle this problem once and for all. Anyone with a theory on disappearing socks is asked to send it to this column in care of this newspaper. A board chosen by me will decide on the most reasonable theory that we will all stick by.

Your Mental Health Association thanks you, and so do I.

Q.1—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble.	1 ◇	2 ♠
Pass	2 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—With your unbalanced hand, you should prefer a suit contract to no-trump. Just describe your hand to partner and let him decide where to play. He probably has four hearts for his takeout double, so bid three hearts now to offer him a choice of game contracts.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	Dble.	1 ♡	1 ♠
Pass	1 NT	4 ♠	?

What action do you take?

A.—Opposite a vulnerable takeout double, you have a good hand. Don't let the opponents preempt you out of the auction. You quite probably have a game somewhere, so show your second suit—bid four diamonds and wait for partner's reaction.

Q.3—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠A ♡95 ◇J873 ♣KQJ874
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♠	2 ♣	2 ♠
2 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Unless partner holds the ace of clubs, your hand could be worthless to him at no trump—the opponents are surely going to lead a spade, knocking out your only side entry. You should warn partner of this by retreating to three clubs—he can still go on if he has a club fit including the ace.

Q.4—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	1 ♠

What action do you take?

A.—Your defensive prospects do not look all that bright. But from the auction you do know that partner is unlikely to have more than a singleton heart, so the prospects for a reasonable save seem good. We would opt for four spades—who knows, it might drive the opponents to five hearts, a level at which we would prefer our defensive chances.

2 ♠	Dble.	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A.—Partner has doubled in an auction which might not yet be completed. Therefore, his double is for penalties, not takeout—he did not double at his first opportunity because he held spades! Pass, and expect a sizable profit because of your defensive values.

Q.6—North-South vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠10873 ♡AQ6 ◇AKQ1095
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East

What do you bid now?

A.—Despite the fact that you have only 15 points in high cards, your hand is pretty good—you can expect to take seven or eight tricks on your own. We suggest you tell partner of this by jumping to three diamonds.

Q.7—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠J4 ♡AQ83 ◇AQ10 ♣AQJ10
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠
Dble.	3 ♠	Pass	Pass

What action do you take?

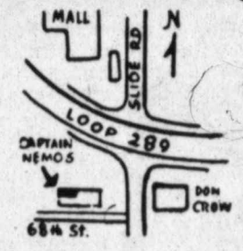

A.—We do not like to be consigned to the role of defender when we hold 20 points, but what can we do? We have advised partner of our strength by doubling, yet he has shown supreme disinterest in the proceedings. To bid now would be to court disaster.

Q.8—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠AK764 ♡A93 ◇105 ♣J87
Partner opens the bidding with three diamonds. What action do you take?

A.—At this vulnerability, partner shows seven tricks with his preempt. With our three, that makes ten, and we should be safe at the four-level. We would bid three spades, just in case partner has three spades and can raise to game. If he simply returns to four diamonds, the auction is over.

The Slim Gourmet

By Barbara Gibbons

In the Irish Catholic neighborhood where I grew up, every day was St. Patrick's Day. ... if the pungent perfume of corned beef and cabbage could be taken as a sign! In our house, the corned beef was usually brisket, well-larded with layers of fat. It was simmered in water till tender, along with potatoes and cabbage. The vegetables served as a calorie-sponge, absorbing all the fat that cooked out from the meat. No wonder everyone in our family was fat!

Today, I still like to celebrate St. Patrick's Day the traditional way, but without those traditional calories. My "recipe" for slimming down this hearty ethnic dish begins at the meat counter: by choosing lean "corned beef round" instead of brisket — it's seasoned the same way, but the cut of meat is much leaner, under 700 calories a pound instead of 1,300!

LEAN CORNED BEEF WITH CABBAGE (AND POTATOES)

1 corned beef round (not brisket)
water to cover
optional: potatoes

Remove the corned beef round from its wrapper. Drain and discard the packing brine. With a sharp knife, trim away and discard fringe fat. Put the corned beef in a large kettle or Dutch oven. Add water to cover. Don't add any salt. Heat to boiling. Skim foam from surface. Lower heat to a simmer. Cover tightly and allow to simmer very gently until meat tests nearly tender with a fork (about one hour per pound; a typical 3-to 4-pound corned beef round should be tender in about 3 and one-half hours). Use a bulb-type baster to skim all the fat from the surface of the cooking liquid. Add peeled whole potatoes, cover and simmer 15 minutes. Meanwhile, quarter a small head of cabbage into wedges, so that the cabbage leaves remain attached to the core. (If you are using a large head of cabbage, cut it into eight equal wedges.) Add the cabbage to the pot. Cover and simmer another 10 minutes, on ly until cabbage is tender-firm. Drain meat, potatoes and cabbage. Slice the meat thinly against the grain and surround with vegetables. Each serving: 3 and one-half ounces of corned beef, 185 calories; 1 medium boiled potato, 85 calories; 1 cabbage wedge, 20 calories.

SPICY CORNED BEEF

2 or 3 cloves garlic
3 or 4 bay leaves, or 2 tbsps. mixed pickling spice
water to cover
optional: potatoes, cabbage

Follow preceding directions; add the garlic and bay leaves or pickling spices to the cooking water.

You don't have to be Irish to like corned beef. All you need are some Yankee relatives to claim this corned beef dish as a family tradition:

NEW ENGLAND BOILED DINNER

lean corned beef round (not brisket) about 3½ lbs.
water to cover
4 potatoes, peeled and quartered
12 small whole onions, peeled
1 lb. small white turnips, halved
1 lb. carrots, pared, cut in chunks
1 large cabbage, in 12 thin wedges

Trim fat from a corned beef. Cover corned beef with water in a kettle. Heat to boiling and skim foam. Cover and simmer over low heat until nearly tender, about 3 and one-half hours. Skim fat from broth. Add vegetables, except cabbage. Cover and cook 10 minutes. Add cabbage, cook 8 to 10 minutes. Drain meat and vegetables. Slice meat thinly against the grain and surround with hot vegetables (sprinkled with parsley, if desired). Serve with horseradish and mustard. Makes 12 servings, about 265 calories each.

DEAR ABBY

DEAR ABBY: Did you ever determine for certain the author of that beautiful poem, "Slow Me Down Lord"?

You said 92 people claimed to have written it. Didn't the original author ever copyright it?

Curious In Winnipeg

Dear Curious: The author of "Slow Me Down, Lord" is Wilferd A. Peterson. He wrote it in 1952 but failed to copyright it, which made it very easy to plagiarize. Three people forwarded "documented" proof claiming authorship. Each sent me a slightly altered version of Peterson's poem, insisting that they originated it. (One even set it to music and is planning to record it!)

When I asked Peterson why he didn't sue these frauds, he said, "I'd rather write than fight."

Peterson is now 78, and perhaps the Lord has answered his prayer and HAS slowed him down a little, but he continues to be a fast friend and faithful correspondent.

DEAR ABBY: The questions arose in your column whether a woman who had borrowed $200 from a friend should pay interest when nothing was said about interest at the time she borrowed it. (It took her 14 years to pay it back).

You said the person who lent the money should be glad to get the $200 back after 14 years — never mind the interest.

When a loan agreement is silent with regard to interest, the law usually imputes an interest rate into the agreement. (In Ohio, a six percent interest rate is imputed.)

In any event, inasmuch as prices have more than doubled over the last 14 years, the creditor should have received at least $400 in return.

Ohio Attorney

Dear Attorney: What a person is legally entitled to is oftentimes a far cry from what he gets. I maintain that, after a 14-year wait, the lady was lucky to see her $200 again.

DEAR ABBY: A woman writes to Dear Abby and says, "This guy I am writing about is a real louse. I will call him Paul."

My name happens to be Paul. Why does she have to drag my name through her filth? If he's a louse, let her use HIS real name — not mine!

Second question: What is all this garbage about equal rights for women? If women get any more rights, I'm changing my lifestyle from Paul to Pauline.

TRUFFLES

2 tbsps. butter or margarine, softened
1 egg yolk
⅔ cup unsifted confectioner's sugar
1 pkg. (4 oz.) sweet cooking chocolate, grated
1 tbsp. rum
¼ cup (about) flaked coconut, chocolate sprinkles or colored sprinkles

Cream butter. Blend in egg yolk. Gradually beat in sugar, blending well. Stir in chocolate and rum. (You may substitute 2 teaspoons water plus 1 teaspoon rum extract for rum).

Shape into ½-inch balls or 1-inch rolls. Roll in coconut or sprinkles. Place on wax paper and chill for several hours. Makes about 24 balls.

Memphis Musician Sid Selvidge 'Sunlights' As Anthropologist

By MARIAN FOX

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — When he isn't singing Mississippi Delta blues in a local bistro, you might find Sid Selvidge at the zoo teaching an orangutan sign language or in a college classroom describing Mbuti Pygmies.

"I've got one foot in the ivory tower and one foot in the streets," Selvidge says. "That's the way I like to maintain my life."

Selvidge, 35, is a blues musician who sunlights as an anthropology instructor at Southwestern at Memphis, a private college. He once felt drawn between the books and the blues.

"It's very schizophrenic I've been trying very hard over the years to figure out how I was going to balance academia and the artistic life."

About six years ago, about to write his doctoral dissertation, Selvidge decided he'd rather sing the blues. "I had to make a choice between full-time teaching or music. The music was getting neglected."

For Selvidge, a relaxed, witty man, married and the father of five, the choice was a natural.

"I crawled on the stage when I was 6 years old in elementary school in Greenville, Miss., and played 'Ole Black Joe' on a harmonica. I loved it. Certain people like to get up in front of other people ... and I'm one of them."

Still his interest in anthropology persisted, and, between recording himself and Alex Childress, former lead singer of the Box Tops, on his own Peabody label, Selvidge teaches six hours a week.

"I'm teaching at Southwestern for an academic base, to do research projects I'm interested in," he says. "And teaching is similar to performing. You've got a body of information you've got to get across so people like it and want to come back."

Although he's had some national exposure, the name Sid Selvidge is not universally known. He'd like it that way, but he wants fame on his own terms and, above all, he wants his music to be fun.

Selvidge's laid-back approach is apparent when he plays with a group called "Mud Boy and the Neutrons."

"We're all neutrons and we try to get Mud Boy, a mythical figure, to rise up out of the Mississippi River mud and transform the situation," he says.

"The closest we've come is a little figure made out of beer cans covered with mud with pop tops for eyes. Really, it's just an excuse to get together and have a good time."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

By Bernice Bede Osol

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) The compassion you always show to others is the exact ingredient you need tomorrow to win. A gentle stream can wear down the hardest rock.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You believe in your ideas and show such faith in your capabilities to implement them that others can't help but be supportive tomorrow.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The tenderness and generosity you display toward all whom you're involved with tomorrow returns to you tenfold. What you sow will yield a fine harvest.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Let those you care about have their way tomorrow. It'll give you much pleasure to watch them have so much enjoyment from such a simple gesture.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Spend your time and energy over labors of love tomorrow. A fulfilling day can be yours when you combine that which is both creative and constructive.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You feel so relaxed tomorrow, there isn't too much that could upset you. In fact, you'll turn the workaday world into an enjoyable one.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This is a good day to put those loving hands of yours to work at home. Your creativity could save the family a tidy sum.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) There's a good chance you'll be seeing someone you haven't been in touch with for awhile. Either they'll pop in on you or you'll get the urge to contact them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Something that could be profitable and that's been right under your nose all the time may show itself tomorrow. Be responsibe.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Matters close to your heart have a very promising chance for success tomorrow, provided you handle them yourself. Don't trust them to others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Guide your affairs with kind words and gentle ways tomorrow. Your associates will be more responsive to these tactics than to demands.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Your winning ways could charm even the most hard-nosed tomorrow. You do all the right things to evoke a positive reaction from others.

Orphaned Lambs Require Care

SOUTH HADLEY, Mass. (AP) — A dog attack wiped out more than half of Thomas Honan's sheep, so he's had to turn his 40-acre farm into a nursery to care for 34 orphaned lambs.

He and his family began bottle-feeding the lambs after he discovered Thursday that 25 of his 44 sheep had been killed. He estimated the loss at more than $1,200. He said some of the lambs were getting weak because they were accustomed to "feeding on demand," and were resisting bottle feeding.

The town's animal control officer said Friday that any dog found running loose in the area of Honan's farm "will be picked up and destroyed on the spot."

Are the gloomy forecasters about food shortages right?

Lubbock's Own Chimney Sweep Seen Aiding Spring Cleaning

"Have you recognized that cleaning of the chimney should be a vital part of your Spring Housecleaning operation? And have you realized just how simple, easy and economical this can be . . . if Al the Chimney Sweep is involved!"

Al Manny (Al the Chimney Sweep), though a longtime Lubbock resident and professional man, established his chimney sweep operation in mid-September of last year. Welcome response was immediate.

His background and work experience "opened his eyes" to the need of such services in Lubbock and area. Associated in the insurance business here for 18 years, he has seen the effects of unclean chimneys that resulted in fire damage.

"In fact, 31 fires in chimneys and flues were reported in Lubbock in a recent year," Al quotes from figures released in an annual Lubbock Fire Department report.

"And you should see some of the debris we find in chimneys! We have recovered tennis balls, cups, even a football, and countless charred birds, all a distinct hazard in fireplace chimneys, together with the soot that is saturated with creosote."

The solution?

Flat Fee

Let Al clean your chimney! Call 795-1789. The cost is a modest and set fee of only $40 per chimney (with multiple units in one building cleaned on a graduating scale).

Inspection Advised

If one thinks a chimney needs cleaning but is not sure, Al is glad to make an inspection, promising an "entirely honest, straightforward report" if or if not cleaning is warranted. A $5 inspection fee can be applied at any time within 18 months on an actual cleaning operation.

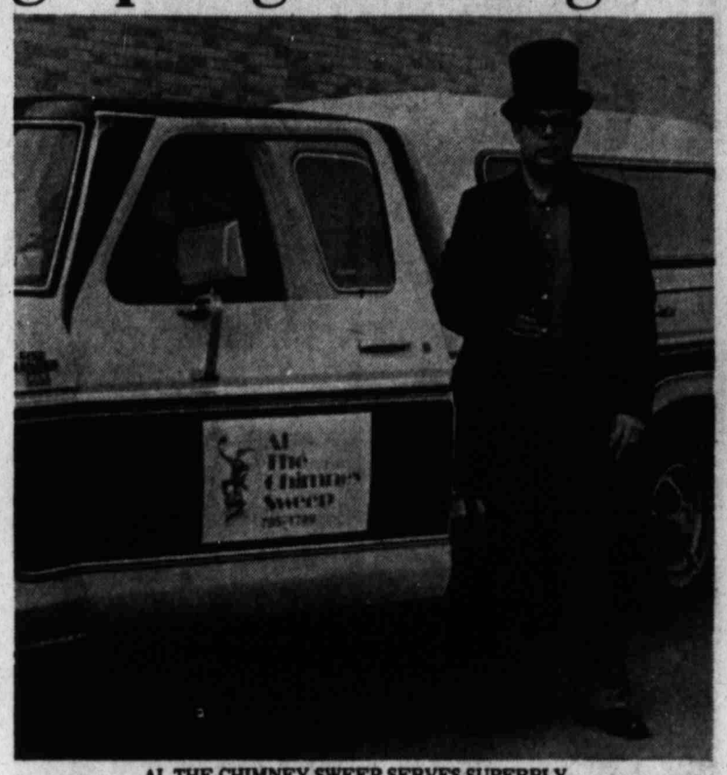

No mess is involved in the cleaning, Al Manny emphasizes. And the time, most usually less than an hour!

Manny and his helpers are available for appointments evenings and Saturdays. They will clean anywhere in the area (for out-of-town calls, Al suggests that at least five chimneys be involved in the affected community to warrant a trip there without prohibitive cost.)

Adequate related insurance is maintained by Manny for customer protection, including liability, property damage and completed operations coverage, and the entire job, remember, is personally done or personally supervised by Al, and takes likely less than an hour . . . with no fuss or bother on your part! Best August West Systems equipment is used.

And Manny wears a top hat to the job! It is his traditional symbol of the trade.

For full details or for appointment, call now to Al the Chimney Sweep, phone (806) 795-1789, Lubbock.

Readiness For Easter, Spring Evident At City's Baby World

Easter is near!

It is hard to think separately of Easter, children, pretty frocks and suits, smiling faces . . . and Baby World and Lue Ree's Children's Shop!

Yes, Easter is in the air, with the anticipation of related "dress up" and happy occasions accentuated by the prettiest stock ever for the little folks . . . at Baby World, 4918 50th St., and at its sister shop, Lue Ree's, under same ownership, in Briercroft Shopping Center.

Select at Baby World for new-season apparel in girls sizes infants through 6x and boys in infants through 7.

Furniture for the children's rooms is stocked in a most complete and delightful selection at Baby World.

Rare Opportunity

And at Lue Ree's, there is special news:

Special values have been arranged at Lue Ree's, including close-out of preteens and junior sizes at 25 per cent off (and this is on new spring and summer wear, take note!);

And there is a rack of apparel at up to 75 per cent markdown!

Select at Lue Ree's for girls and boys sizes through 14.

Not only have all the new Easter fashions and materials arrived, but there are lots of delightful stuffed, cuddly Easter-related toys at both stores.

It is a fun time for shopping!

From day to day, even with the very large stock, new arrivals are in evidence, with spring and Easter needs receiving special attention at this time.

Accessories, Furnishings

Accessories are stocked at both the stores owned by Vickey and Johathan Hoffman who are most appreciative of the trade that has made possible the continuous growth and service of their stores.

Possibly best known for the apparel items and accessories, Baby World is truly outstanding in its presentation of furniture for the little folks, with the Simmons products stocked.

"Everything for the nursery" is the correct image of Baby World, area shoppers have found.

"After all, your baby deserves the best . . . and from a wide selection."

Everything at Baby World and Lue Ree's . . . the merchandise, decor and friendly service conveys that exciting offerings are the rule, with the customer given every consideration.

One may select with confidence from top lines, from today's fashions, at prices to please.

The ownership loves children . . . and stocks accordingly!

Cake Place Classes, Impending Show Meriting Full Attention

Three situations at The Cake Place, 5423 Aberdeen, are worthy of special note at this time, so read further!

(1) This may be the last opportunity before next fall to participate in the popular and most informative classes for which The Cake Place is known. Check further in this report for specific topics and dates, and make arrangements now to be included in one or more!

(2) The South Plains Regional Cake Show is slated April 6-7 in South Plains Mall sponsored by The Cake Place and by the Friendly Frosters Cake Decorating Club. Ribbons and trophies will be awarded, including the "people's choice" trophy, with the public vote determining the winner. Check now with The Cake Place, 5423 Aberdeen, phone 792-5730 or 744-2057, for entry rules, explanation of divisions, categories and all facits of the intriguing show.

Awards Garnered

(3) Owners-operators Earlene Moore and Carol Laird of The Cake Place are experts in their field (as many of us have recognized for some time), and this expertise has most recently been accorded recognition with show wins in both Wichita Falls and El Paso. In a recent Wichita Falls competition (two weeks ago), at a Creative Cake Decorators Show, the local duo took both first and second awards, together with other recognitions!

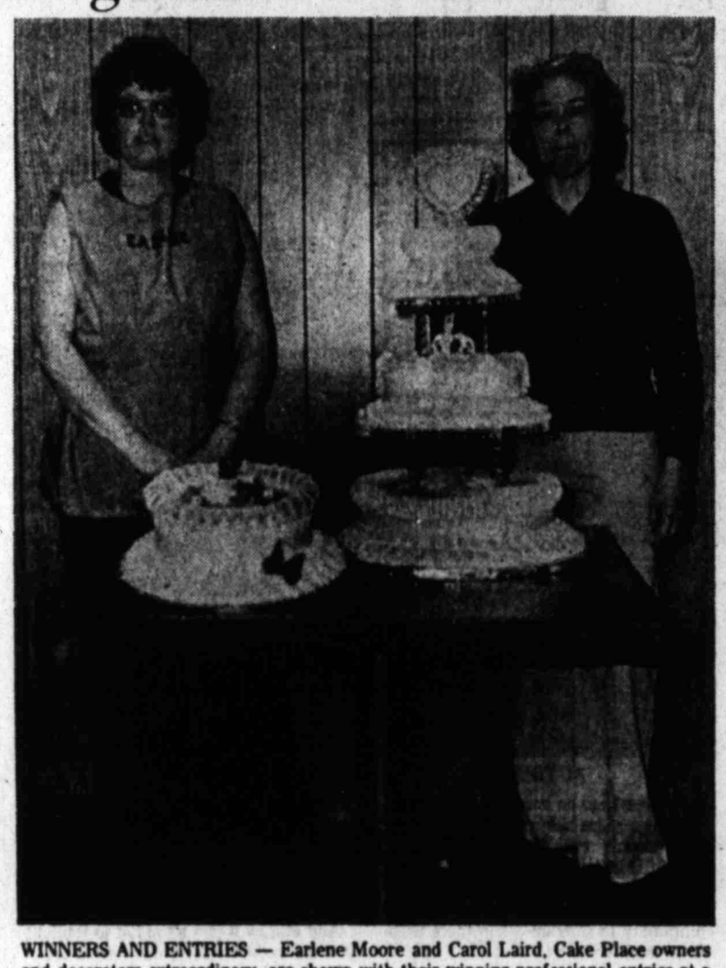

Then, at the big show in the El Paso Civic Center on March 11, Carol and Earlene copped numerous awards including the first and second prizes in the professional category. Some 400 cakes were entered in the show judged by Norman Wilton, head of Wilton Enterprises and nationally known as suppliers to the profession.

So . . . doesn't all this add emphasis to the value of instruction . . for you . . . at The Cake Place? We think so.

Classes Outlined

About these comprehensive new classes for which pre-registration is advised at earliest date possible:

A Basic I Beginner Class in basic cake decorating techniques for the homemaker is scheduled to begin April 16 (a.m.) and April 17 (p.m.). Cost is $20 plus equipment.

WINNERS AND ENTRIES — Earlene Moore and Carol Laird, Cake Place owners and decorators extraordinary, are shown with their winning professional entries at a just-concluded El Paso show.

An Intermediate Class in fancy borders, royal icing techniques, wedding cake, panorama egg, and color flow, begins April 16 (p.m.) with cost of $25 plus equipment.

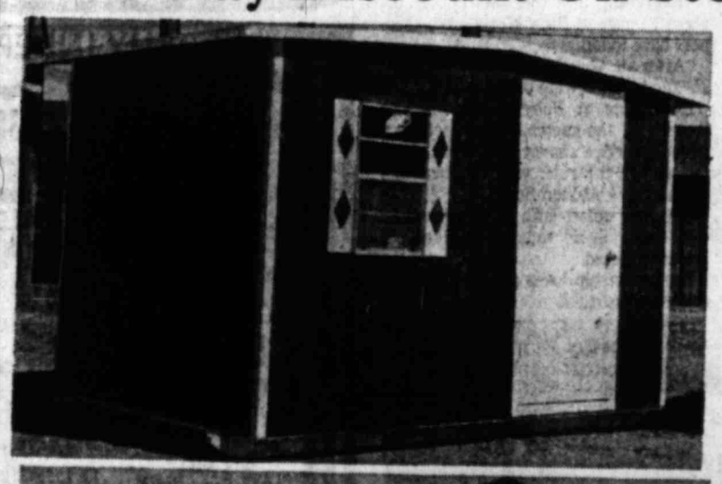

Both above are five-week courses.

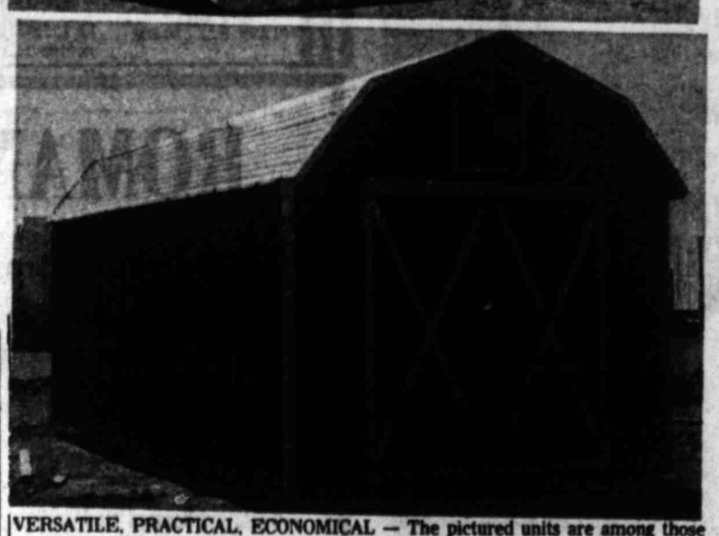

Other classes begin in April and May, including Buttercream Flowers, Cocoa Painting and Rolled Fondant demonstration.

Get complete details on each at The Cake Place, 5423 Aberdeen (just off 55th and Slide).

For any baking or cake decorating project ahead, get supplies in cake decorating needs for every occasion.

Dura' Bilt Portable Buildings Sets Two-Day Discount On Stocked Units

VERSATILE, PRACTICAL, ECONOMICAL — The pictured units are among those on the Dura' Bilt lot specially priced for today and Tuesday.

"It is a 2-Day Special you shouldn't pass up . . . at Dura' Bilt Portable Buildings, 6415 Ave. H, just south of the Tahoka traffic circle in south Lubbock, phone 745-2891!

With already-low prices (tomorrow's buildings at yesterday's prices), the sale prices today and Tuesday enable extraordinary savings.

For these two days, a full 10 per cent discount from regular low price is effective on every building on the big lot at Dura' Bilt. Included are more than 30 units, from size 6 x 8 to 12 x 24.

"You'll surely find the building you need, and at a price that can't be passed up. But don't delay; take advantage of the 2-Day Special."

Locally Built For Savings

"Dura' Bilt Portable Buildings are manufactured locally to better serve you. Whether the need is an office, barn, garage, storage, warehouse, hobby shop, mobil-home add-on or a field office, as example, Dura' Bilt can be the economical and practical answer."

Features include pre-finish masonite exterior that requires no paint or maintenance; it is of best quality and available in various colors.

Strong steel roofing guards against hail.

Exterior grade plywood flooring is utilized, with floor joists on 16-inch center to assure further quality.

Baked-on enamel aluminum trim in lovely colors is another feature.

And rubber closures in the eaves to guard against dust.

Options Available

On the finished building, Dura' Bilt offers 3½-inch rockwool insulation and lovely wood paneling. Many "extras" can be added to assure a building that meets your particular needs and preferences.

Bank financing is available.

Dura' Bilt also provides delivery of the units.

Call or come by (especially while the sale prices are posted). Remember the location, 6415 Ave. H, phone 745-2891, in Lubbock.

Southwest TV & Appliance, at 3415 82nd St., is all new . . . and great!

Opening in spacious, convenient, modern quarters in January, the business has been heartily received.

"Names to trust" have been one of the key factors in the firm's popularity, with a really huge stock on the floor, and with selection enabled from RCA television and video tape recorders, Litton microwave ovens, Frigidaire kitchen and laundry equipment, Sony stereos, Sanyo Stereos, and Harwick gas ranges.

Where is all this? At 3415 82nd St., just west of 82nd and Indiana.

Business & Industrial Review

EXPERTISE IN HAT CARE, RENOVATING, CUSTOMIZING — Mrs. Virginia Lynch and daughter, Karen, are shown in a work area of the historically unique but most efficient Lynch Hat Works in downtown Lubbock. Sale of new hats, together with the multiple services and accessory stock available there, makes the shop especially attractive at rodeo time, at change of seasons and just any time expert hat fitting is the need.

Dealing Exclusively In Hats, Lynch's Serving Area Needs For Over 50 Years

"Your favorite hat is soiled, has grease on it, as well as spots. What to do?

"Take it to Lynch Hat Works!

"Your favorite hat is a little too small or too large, or just does not feel right. What can you do?

"Take it to Lynch Hat Works!

"Your hat or the new one you got for Christmas or on your birthday does not suit you: the crease needs to be changed or the brim needs to be cut down some. What to do?

"The answer still is to take it to Lynch Hat Works!"

Yes, there is a business in downtown Lubbock that deals exclusively with hats.

Lynch Hat Works, at 1106 Ave. J, is a family-owned business that is interested in you and your hat needs.

Half-Century Record

Mrs. Virginia Lynch and her staff are there to help and serve in all your hat needs. During the firm's 50-plus years in business, its equipment has been expanded and knowledge of the personnel has grown.

One will find styles of blocks and flanges as they have changed over the years. In fact, it is most interesting just to visit the store that is "like a step into yesteryear." The equipment is antique, and Mrs. Lynch takes care of all equipment. That is why Lynch's can handle almost any hat situation or give helpful advice. They always are happy to visit with you in person or over the phone, 765-7171.

"Hats is their business" and the staff at Lynch Hat Works does its best on each hat. No two hats are the same, and each is given special attention by hand. The skilled staff can renovate one's hat, put new trimmings on it and crease, if desired, or can leave it open crown and let you put in your favorite crease.

Lynch Hat Works is equipped so that they can change the size of your hat, making it larger or smaller. If the brim is too wide, they can cut it to the width desired. The crease in one's hat also can be changed.

"Come in today and let us discuss your hat problem."

New Felts, Straws

In addition to renovating hats, Lynch Hat Works carries a stock of new hats in various styles, for sale. These include both straws and felts.

A new hat is a welcomed gift anytime of the year . . . and likely especially so here at rodeo time.

Gift Certificates

"If you are not sure regarding which hat to choose, Lynch Hat Works also has gift certificates.

"To take care of your hat, we carry hat brushes, hat savers (to put your hat into while driving), rain hat protectors, hat stretchers and hat-spotting powder.

"Maybe you would like to dress up your hat by choosing a feather hat band, a silver band, wide snap-on band or a feather or two!

"Remember, for all your hat needs, come by 1106 Ave. J, or phone Mrs. Lynch at 765-7171. She and her staff really mean it when they say 'making you a satisfied customer is our goal.'"

A-1 Nursery's Mind Boggling Sale Easing Costs Of Season

That Mind Boggling Sale continues at A-1 Nursery!

This means that A-1, at 7500 82nd St., has posted scads of fantastically-low prices "to get your attention and to save for you as spring and summer landscape work enters the picture"!

(And if the prices on the newly-arrived red and live oak do not get your attention, we don't know what would!)

Just arrived are four big loads of multi and single red oaks and live oaks, and while they last these regularly priced $149.95 trees are going at only $67.48, a 55 per cent markdown!

And pinon, both contorted and straight, also at 55 per cent reduction;

Pecans, too (bagged) at 55 per cent off marked price during the sale!

Extraordinary Value

A very special economy buy is the Arizona Cypress, one-gallon size, regular $5.99, but sale priced at $2.39, a 60 per cent savings if one hurries!

There are numerous one-gallon shrubs, regular $5.99, going at $1.97!

All tropicals are at least one-half off, with some reductions to 75 per cent.

Mind-Boggling, isn't it!

All clay pottery is 35 per cent off list.

Bulk, Packaged Seeds

Savings are available, too, on bulk garden seed. (Pack seed also is stocked).

Special savings on fertilizers make further news.

Such as Zipp 16-8-8 with iron and zinc, coverage of over 2,000 sq. ft., regular $6.99 but sale priced at $5.88 or two for $11.

Ammonium sulphate 21-0-0, 50 lb, covering 2,500 ft., regular $5.99 but on sale at $4.79 or two for $9;

Ironate, 40 lb sacks, very good for coloriate conditions, at only $7.89; Fertiloam gardeners special, 75 lb on sale at $7.95, and Fertiloam Weed and Feed Special, 40 lb, $8.95. A host of ornamental trees are marked at 50 per cent savings.

Onion plants, regular 99 cents per bunch, are only 69 cents.

Red and white seed potatoes, regular 25 cents, are only 15 cents per pound.

There are great buys on yaupon holly, Austrian pine and blue spruce, grass seeds, shade trees, and more; only a personal visit and inspection, and comparison, can truly reveal just how specific savings at A-1 Nursery can make yard and garden projects economical even in these inflated times. A-1 is doing its part to help every customer save.

Check for spring bulbs, pansies, and more, at drastic savings.

Open Every Day

A-1 Nursery is open from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m., Mondays through Saturdays, and on Sundays from 1:30 until 5.

Prices are cash and carry, pickup at nursery at its 7500 82nd St. location just southwest of the city.

A-1 has a tremendous selection in its every department . . . well worth the drive to view and select . . . and save!

Area residents long have benefitted from the landscape design, installation and maintenance services of A-1, plus such benefits as the new shipments and the unheard-of sale here at beginning of the season.

Long On Scene

For more than 20 years, area folks have been assisted by the services of Winfred Self, owner and operator of A-1 Nursery, since 1973 at its present expanded quarters.

Everything at the modern nursery is coordinated for the very best in service. A complete line is stocked including trees, shrubs, vines, fertilizers, insecticides and numerous other nursery supplies.

The "know how" of Self and his experienced staff possibly is the biggest asset of A-1, however, as hundreds of customers can attest to the superior help there through the years.

"Come on out and see for yourself how A-1 Nursery can meet your individual preferences and needs, at a price you'll appreciate!"

Week-Long Anniversary Sale Beginning At Onell's Apparel

It is Anniversary Sale time this week, March 19-24, at Onell's Apparel, 4818 Louisville, headquarters for square and round dance supplies for men, women and children.

During the sale this week, there is a full 10 per cent off on all items in the store except those already reduced in price.

Festival Time

It is pointed out that it is high time to get ready for the 20th Annual Spring Festival of the Lubbock Area Square and Round Dance Federation, March 30, 31, in the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. Advance tickets are available at Onell's.

Further Specials

A special "close-out" price presently is posted at Onell's on tennis dresses . . . going at just $5 each!

One rack of dresses is reduced to $20 each, with some fantastic buys.

New square dance dresses, skirts, blouses, jumpers and petti pants are arriving daily, enabling a large selection from which to choose.

New Mandy Shoe

And Onell's has stocked the new Mandy Shoe featuring the two-inch heel that has been so widely accepted on the dance floor. The Mandy is stocked in white, black, silver and gold in both medium and narrow widths.

Cloggers

"For the 'cloggers' we have in stock the new Clogger, made especially for those who are in the clogging program. It is designed to take the taps and heavy pressure of clogging. The upper is a high-gloss man-made patent, and the heel is solid and covered to match the upper. Outsole is full grained leather, and available in sizes 6 through 10, narrow, and 4 through 10 medium, with half sizes. Colors are black or white only."

'Happy Feet'

Onell's also stocks the Happy Feet (innersoles) that are designed to give a cushion of water and foam between your feet and the hard surfaces on which we stand and walk. They also provide a flexible and controlled arch support. The heavy duty, ultrasonically sealed polyvinyl is guaranteed to never spring a leak under normal wear.

It all is at Onell's, 4818 Louisville, where the big sale is underway this week. Store hours are 10 a.m. until 5 p.m., Monday through Saturday.

Conservation Of Energy, Money Comes Easier With Welch Help

Lellem Welch Inc., at 1401 Ave. J, is one of the largest Arctic Circle dealers in this part of West Texas and consequently stands ready to help one enter the warmer season in a manner to save money and conserve energy.

"Let Lellem Welch Inc. give you the facts regarding economical, effective evaporative cooling, supplying complete units or parts as desired."

Stocked are pumps, padding, belts, motors, dollies, shafts, blowers, grills and sides for evaporative cooler repair or update.

Multiple Sizes, Types

Stocked are evaporative air conditioners from the 2,000 cfm to 12,500 cfm, including roof, window and gable type coolers, even mobile home coolers are available.

Parts play a very important part, so Welch tries to stock as many different parts as possible for the many different types of coolers on the market.

Help is available from Welch for the "do-it-yourselfer" who wishes to do the installation.

Saving Pinpointed

And for savings, the Welch firm points out added savings if units are purchased before the price increases of April 15.

Evaporative coolers offer the ideal solution to a variety of residential, commercial and industrial cooling needs, anywhere that affordable cooling will increase comfort and improve work efficiency.

"Evaporative coolers from Lellem Welch Inc. keep you cool . . . without keeping you broke!"

As for maintenance and repairs on evaporative coolers: the home handyperson can easily handle an evaporative cooler's simple maintenance — and pocket the savings on costly service calls. An occasional cleaning and a simple pad change once or twice a year are usually all that is required. When "old faithful" requires repairs, a full line of parts is available at Lellem Welch Inc. right here in Lubbock, 1401 Ave. J, phone 762-8797.

Of course Welch stocks much more than evaporative air conditioning . . . such as Eljer plumbing fixtures, Payne heating, Bradley faucets, Aprilair humidifiers, Space Guard air cleaners, and more. But with the balmy days fast approaching, emphasis is rightly focused on serving today's needs of the public that has learned to appreciate and desire the advantages of evaporative cooling, the Arctic Circle way.

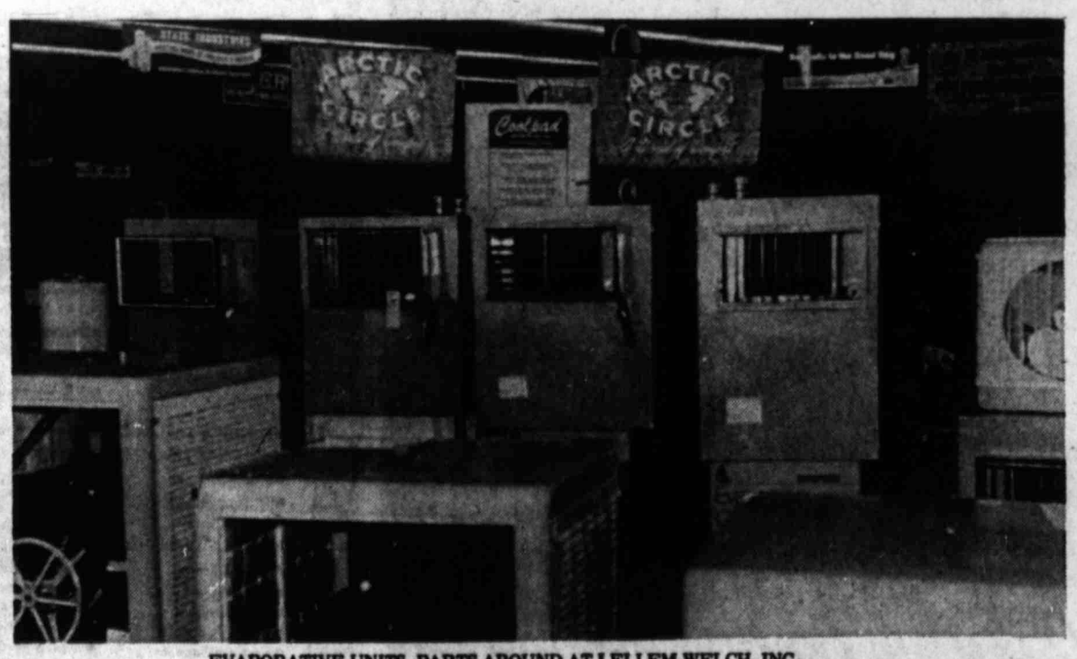

"Lellem Welch Inc. is on the job to help you; may we have the opportunity."

And remember . . . evaporative cooling offers significant environmental advantages, as well as cost savings. Constant cool air movement pushes heat out, along with stale air, smoke, odors and pollution. The high volume of fresh, cool air helps one's body ventilate naturally. Evaporative cooling helps maintain natural humidity levels, so wood furniture and fabric fibers do not dry out prematurely. Since coolers do not require an airtight structure for maximum operating efficiency, you can leave doors or windows open; your house can "breathe".

With energy being so precious, and with the public now learning the implications of this, it is pointed out by Welch that "an evaporative cooler consumes only a fraction of the electrical energy required to operate refrigerated air conditioning. A typical residential evaporative cooler requires two small electric motors totalling between one-half and three-quarter horsepower; a comparable refrigeration unit requires three electric motors with a combined three and one-half horsepower".

A report on evaporative cooling notes that evaporative coolers presently installed in the western United States are estimated to save approximately 6-million barrels fuel oil equivalent per year in comparison to alternative cooling systems!

"Isn't now the time to install Arctic Circle evaporative cooling or to repair your present evaporative cooler for summer efficiency, savings and enjoyment?"

Holt's Shoes Greatly Expands Women's Fashion Lines, Stock

For the young, for the young at heart, for those with a "Spring" attitude, the trek to Holt's Shoes was never more exciting than now!

The accent there is one of high fashion in women's shoes, a trend that has been most pronounced at Holt's during the past year. In fact, Holt's has made giant strides in recent months, even more noteworthy than its long continuous record of serving the public in exceptional manner.

Late in 1977 Holt's Shoes made a very significant announcement . . . that the firm was in new, expended, modern quarters in Sunshine Square, 4519 50th St.

The public's response was instantaneous and enthusiastic.

Then, last year owners-operators Mr. and Mrs. Joe Haire told of drastic expansion of their stock of women's fashion shoes.

That accent on fashion wear consequently has gained more laurels and more friends for Holt's.

New Fashion Lines

And now comes announcement that still more high-fashion lines have been added in women's shoes.

New lines include the prestigious and so-beautiful Van Elli, Bass, Shoes 'n Stuff, Adores, Jack Rogers, Fanfares, Footworks, and also Fanfares Yo-Yos.

Also select from Cherokee and Carressa among the gorgeous, chic arrivals just right for Easter, spring graduation and all the delightful occasions of the season.

Boutique Room

Then there are still more . . . shoes by Miss America Footworks, Socialite and Socialite and Cobbies by Red Cross, plus standbys such as Revelation Exclusive, "the most comfortable shoes in the world," the famous Scholl lines, with casual wear still stocked fully even with the fashion wear taking precedence in the new boutique room.

Holt's has served for well over a decade in Lubbock, and customers throughout the area know of the quality-fashion rightness that is the rule at Holt's.

Not only is the current shoe presentation the most complete in Holt's history but experienced show fitters round out the picture of service, a tradition at the firm. Expert fitting is assured, and this can be extremely important for footwear enjoyment.

Both Visa and Master Charge purchases are welcomed.

"Won't you pay us a visit as a proper entry into the new season, and share in our pride of the type establishment afforded, with expanded footwear fashion for women, the boutique room and the genuine customer interest evident at Holt's, now at 4519 50th St.? We think you'll like what you find, a Holt's with even greater capacity for service."

Shopping For Special-Occasion Gifts Simplified At Unique PKM Jewel Salon

It would seem that PKM Jewel Salon was designed and stocked with this exciting season of the year particularly in mind!

After all, where but PKM can one find, in one location, the uniqueness, quality and selection so conducive to shopping for those important events . . . graduation, Mothers Day, bridal events, and all?

Truly "different," PKM Jewel Salon, at 4509 50th St., phone 793-3291, is a one-of-a-kind establishment, proving in all aspects of its image and service that PKM is for "Now"!

Visits to PKM are especially invited at this time, as its capable and dedicated owners and staff know that they can greatly assist in the gifting needs of this significant time of year . . . for events calling for absolutely the "right" and "wanted" selected. Why settle for less than such consideration; why settle for less than PKM?

Wide Gift Line

It is possible that some area residents, though recognizing PKM for the finest and most-desired jewelry presented there, have not discovered that the firm stocks a most discriminating choice in accessories for the home. A distinct department and room is devoted to art objects, brass items, crystal, etc., each item personally selected by PKM owner Ron Morgan as worthy of the firm and the clientele it serves and appreciates.

Gifts suitable for the man receive full attention, as for others of the family and for the home.

And jewelry — PKM is thoroughly worthy of its name as a Jewel Salon!

Custom Creations

Re-designing of family heirlooms is a specialty. And there is lots of work, too, with gold fashion jewelry, new stock items and custom creations.

Pearls are strong in style, and more emphasis is noted on colored stones, among the trends noted by PKM that stocks and serves accordingly.

Special showings are arranged throughout the year, and one is invited to inquire for full details and dates for such showings as rubies and sapphires from Burma and Australia, custom mountings, custom-designed jewelry by masters of the art (known world-wide), and more.

Ron and Leesa Morgan, the husband-wife team owning PKM, seem to have left nothing undone in providing a store and service to be appreciated.

(Decor alone could well be reason for a visit to PKM, but add to this the stunning arrangements and selections of diamond and gold jewelry, rare jewels, precious stones, loose diamonds, etc., at a "more affordable price" and one readily can recognize this as a store on which to rely . . . in any season.)

WITH APT SUGGESTS FOR SEASON — Donna Golightly and Leesa Morgan call attention to unique and extraordinary gift items available at PKM for season events such as graduation, weddings, birthdays and more. Not only is the merchandise outstanding, but arrangement and decor at PKM is "near fantastic".

Storkie's Maternity/Baby Shop Presents Adorable Affordables

Owners Faye Spoth and Genny Judd relate that Storkie's Maternity and Baby Shop (34th and H) is "bustin' out all over" with pretty Easter dresses, pant suits, swimwear, shorts, cool tops and loads of blue jeans including regular styles as well as the straight leg (extra long) jean for the tall girls.

Also in the Maternity Department one will find a good selection of nursing bras, gowns, robes and the new nursing smock tops that are really great.

"We have a very nice selection of maternity wear ranging from size four to size 24."

"The larger girls can now find smart looking pants, tops, pant suits, dresses, gowns, etc. If we don't have it at Storkie's we will try to get it for you. We're here to serve you and we are receptive to your hints and suggestions; so keep talking, shoppers, we're listening!"

Storkie's Baby Department is becoming a very popular place for selecting those "extra special" things for newborns through 24 months. Yes, we're adding to our baby line, thanks to you shoppers.

"You've been asking for 'adorables' at 'affordables' and believe you me, we have them! One trip just to compare price and quality will convince you."

Storkie's has convenient layaway plan, and Master Charge and Visa use is welcomed.

"So shoppers, please believe us when we say we're trying hard to be your favorite store. If you haven't been to Storkie's as yet, let us entice you one again; bring this story for a 10 percent discount on any one item in our store; this offer good through Saturday of this week. You'l be glad you came!"

Note: Storkie's has cute springtime caftans! (You don't have to be expecting to wear these). So if you're needing a new long caftan, try Storkie's!

"Aren't you glad there is a Storkie's in Lubbock?"

W.M. Smith Electric Adding Singl/Screw Compressor Line

W.M. Smith Electric Co., 1911 Clovis Road in Lubbock, scores again!

In keeping with its track record of making news . . . to the customers' benefit and profit, W.M. Smith Electric announces its designation as authorized distributor for the revolutionary Singl/Screw compressors from Chicago Pneumatic.

Along with the many other services and products, including other compressors, for which the Lubbock firm has long been known, the new addition simply increases capacity for the firm's benefit to area industry . . . of any size.

With the entire Chicago Pneumatic Equipment Division compressor line available, Smith presently has 50 hp and 75 hp units in stock. The line involves a spread from the 40 hp 230/460 volt, 3 phase, 3550 rmp motor to the big Model 1160, a 250 hp 460 volt, 3 phase, 1775 rpm motor.

"Uncommon skill in the technology of air compression" is the record of Chicago Pneumatic that has built its Equipment Division on innovation and excellence in industrial air compressors. From its first steam-powered unit, built over 70 years ago, to today's revolutionery Singl/Screw, these have been the Division's primary commitment. Advantages of this new compressor line include simplicity, balanced pressures, low friction, efficient oil flow without a pump, lower operating temperature, no gears to pay for or maintain, new low in quiet operation.

"Let W.M. Smith give full details and help you in your own personalized compressor needs."

"You can depend on W.M Smith Electric Co. long serving industry throughout West Texas, New Mexico, Colorado, Oklahoma and Louisana. (The Lubbock branch was established back in 1952.)

Smith is a master distributor for the complete Campbell Hausfeld line of compressors and accessories.

And also distributor for the complete overhead traveling bridge cranes manufactured and marketed under the trade name of SECO.

Smith is a major distributor for crane and hoist components and parts bearing the distinguished trademarks of Dresser Industries, Detroit, Wright, Demag and David Round.

Multiple Services

Among the many products and services afforded are air compressors by Campbell Hausfeld, Gardner-Denver and Kellogg-American. They are available in both tank mounted and stationary type, and new or rebuilt ones are stocked up to 150 hp.

Smith rebuilds all makes of compressors, from the smallest to largest.

Sales and service for all makes of hoists is another key segment of the business.

Motors

W. M. Smith electric is distributor for three major lines of electric motors: General Electric, U.S., and Baldor, in all sizes.

Furthermore, the firm has parts for everything it sells, offering service on everything sold, also.

A staff of qualified mechanics and trouble shooters is maintained at all times.

Wire-in and installation of irrigation motors is another area-appreciated service provided by the company.

Pick-up and delivery is provided, and service men are on call day or night. Facilities in the shop enable prompt attention and repair in any emergency need.

History Recounted

Herb Witcher is vice president and manager of West Texas operations of the company. In fact, it was in August, 1952, when he opened the Lubbock office as a one-man operation.

"There was just a trickle of business at first. But as Herb's old Chevy pick-up truck became a familiar sight on the streets and roads in and around Lubbock, business picked up — fast. Night and day service at a fair price, which was what Herb offered, was a way of winning friends! By spring of 1953, Herb had four men working for W.M. Smith Electric Co., Lubbock branch."

And how the firm continues to grow!

"The people of Lubbock and a wide surrounding area have been mighty nice to W.M. Smith Electric Co., Witcher says, "and we appreciate it more than we can tell you."

The present large, all-brick building of the firm at 1911 Clovis Road was constructed in 1957, and facilities within it were designed for maximum service.

"And possibly some of this service meets a need for you, in your own industrial or farming operation."

Motors, Generators

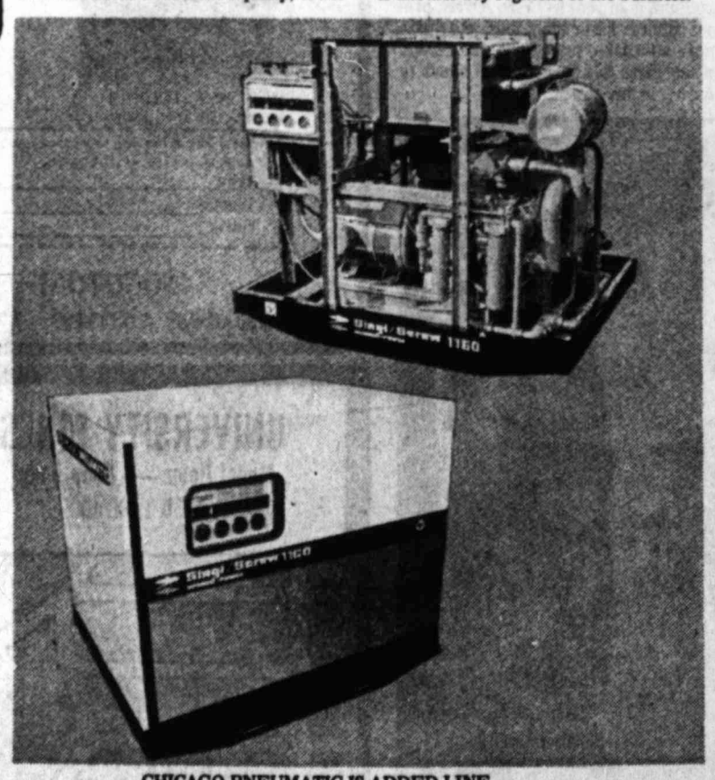

Sale and rentals of motors and generators is a popular service, as is repair and installation of electric motors, controls, rectifiers, pumps, transformers, etc.; machine and metalizing, dynamic balancing and other services.

"Chances are you already have used one or more of the services of W.M. Smith Electric Co. if you have ever had need of air compressors, electric motors and equipment or the related parts and supplies."

As the W.M. Smith Electric Co. pointed out in an Avalanche-Journal advertisement upon opening of the present offices in 1957:

"If you're willing to work you 'can't hardly' miss in a dynamic, fast-growing city like Lubbock. Under Herb Witcher's leadership, our Lubbock office has doubled its volume of sales and service each year since 1954."

"This same brand of service continues — and can save for you, too."

Only God Knows People's Burdens

with her husband. As months went by with little progress in that direction, my one thought became that of making Mr. Summers like me.

One day, seeing Mr. Summers digging around his evergreens, I dropped to my knees beside him on the lush grass carpet and said, "Why don't you have any flowers in your yard?"

Mr. Summers turned abruptly and looked me full in the face, "I hate flowers! They're a lot of trouble, just like kids!"

The personal slight was almost lost on me, so shocked was I at anyone hating flowers. Jumping to my feet, I cried, "You're mean! I love flowers; so does Louella!" I flew out of the yard and across the street, not stopping until I was behind our garage where I flung myself down. Sobs tore loose from my chest.

A week went by before I went near Louella's house again. When I did, she wasn't home. I tiptoed around back, but Mr. Summers was nowhere to be seen, either. A neighbor told me, "They're at the hospital. Mr. Summers had another heart attack last night."

Though I went back every few days, I never found anyone home. When I asked my mother about the Summerses, she said that Louella's husband was still in the hospital and doing poorly. Then one day came the news that Mr. Summers had died.

After the funeral, Louella went to stay with some relatives. She asked my mother to tell me she'd be back in the spring. In the following months, whenever I passed Louella's house, I wondered if she missed our good times together as much as I did. I pondered the hows and whys of Mr. Summers and wished that my last words to him had not been angry.

The robins were back skittering on the grass and buds were bursting everywhere when word came that Louella was home and wanted to see me.

I skipped across the street and knocked at her door. Louella fed me ice cream and gave me a copy of Heidi to keep for my very own. Then she took my hand and led me out to the back yard. But what had happened? The place was alive with color! Brilliant tulips of every imaginable shade marched in and out, around the evergreens and along the sidewalk to the back fence.

"Mr. Summers did this just for you, Rosie, right before...." Louella hesitated. "He asked me to be sure and show you."

He did like me after all! The uncaring, sour man I thought I'd known vanished forever from my heart.

Louella touched my cheek. "He always liked you, honey. But he was ill and worried. Only God knows the burdens people carry inside."

That Louella year seemed to have covered ages when I lived through it, but the memory played out in my mind in seconds as I observed my son's dejected state.

"It must be sad to be old and alone," I said. "Let's try to remember that."

David looked up at me. "And Mrs. Stoner limps, Mom. Maybe she doesn't feel good, too. We could ask God to bless her, couldn't we, Mom?"

I smiled as I handed my son a cookie. "Yes, we could," I said.

School Board Members Defend Decision

lution asks Congress to pass anti-busing legislation.

The school system's present court-ordered desegregation plan, which took effect last fall, involves busing about 2,500 of the district's 30,500 students daily. Some of the riders are volunteers.

NANS officials contend the school board did not do enough to stand up to the courts. They also are unhappy with aspects of the board-designed, court-ordered plan. The plan requires some elementary pupils to change schools at midterm.

Waters said the school board tried "as far as the law would allow to avoid busing." The plan devised by the board calls for only limited busing, he added. Lubbock has "less turmoil and less busing than any Texas city our size."

"There is no way anybody can say we are soft on busing," Waters said.

The board resisted busing by attempting to show U.S. District Judge Halbert O. Woodward that school segregation here has been the result of accidental housing patterns or situations the board cannot control. That argument was partly successful.

The U.S. Justice Department is appealing Woodward's rulings, asking a higher court to order systemwide desegregation.

Waters said the board would have been "irresponsible" to defy Woodward's orders for limited busing.

The anti-busing group "can afford to make statements of defiance. The school board cannot. We represent the community. We must be responsible to the law and to the people," he said.

Also, Waters said it would be inconsistent for the school district to defy a busing order while teaching children to be good citizens and obey the law.

Despite its resistence to busing, school trustees "got behind the desegregation plan when we saw it was inevitable. Our rationale was that if we must do it, we should carry it out harmoniously," Waters said.

"We are anxious to make busing work and to promote the busing that is required. This does not mean we agree with busing," he said.

In contrast to remarks of anti-busing parents, Waters and other school officials say most feedback about the desegregation plan has been positive. They said that while there have been some problems, the plan generally has been well accepted.

Jury To Recommend Sentence In Linda Burnett Murder Trial

BEAUMONT (AP) — Jurors who convicted Linda May Burnett, 31, of capital murder in connection with last summer's execution-style slayings of five members of a Southeast Texas family were asked to return to court today to recommend punishment.

The jury must choose between death by injection and a life prison term for the 31-year-old brunette housewife.

She stood trembling and then slumped in her chair when the verdict was read Saturday, and whispered to a reporter as she was escorted from the courtroom, "I'm not guilty."

Mrs. Burnett was convicted of murder in the death of 3-year-old Jason Phillips of Woodward, Okla., who was shot in the head and killed near Winnie last July 1, along with his parents and grandparents. Their bodies were found in a common grave July 10.

Another defendant in the case, Joe Dugas of Port Arthur, will be tried later in Corpus Christi.

District Attorney James McGrath will seek the death penalty for the mother of three. The prosecutor actually began his plea for punishment in the case during an emotional final argument Saturday, when he pointed at Mrs. Burnett and said when the legislature passed a capital punishment law "they had this woman in mind."

McGrath held up a picture of the inside of the boy's grandparents' house, showing a rocking horse, and described it as a toy Jason "will never ride again." At that point, McGrath had tears in his eyes, and at least one of the four women on the jury wept with him.

"Here sits a woman to whom life has no value at all," McGrath said. "Anyone who stands in her way gets wiped out."

He said Mrs. Burnett and Dugas used "the infant child Jason" to control the adults they were led to their grave and then methodically put to death.

The Phillips boy and his parents were visiting the elder Phillips' in Winnie last summer when they were abducted and slain. Dugas was previously married to a daughter of the elder Phillips.

Defense attorneys contended Mrs. Burnett, Dugas' lover during the mass killings, had no motive for the deaths, and that the state's case against her was based on "doctored, manipulated and altered evidence."

"There is no physical evidence linking Mrs. Burnett to this case," said defense attorney Charles Carver. He asked jurors to set aside any "feelings of hatred" they may have against Mrs. Burnett.

Lawyers had wrangled during the trial over admissibility of a tape recording which was finally allowed by the judge. On the tape, the voice of a woman — allegedly that of Mrs. Burnett — said it was a thrill to plan the executions of five people.

The tapes were made last November by a hynotist, who was hired by Mrs. Burnett's attorneys to interview her. But the state found out about the recordings and successfully subpoenaed them. Defense attorneys complained this violated client-attorney confidentiality.

During the taped interview the woman's voice said, "I was crazy for going along with it, but I was more vicious than he (Dugas) was, because I had the ability to convince these people that they would be perfectly all right."

She said while directing the victims to the grave site, "I talked to them constantly to keep them calm, telling them just to play along with him (Dugas), that I would kill him."

Peace Treaty 'No Guarantee'

ward the peace treaty "is beyond us," Laor said.

"(King Hussein) has jumped on the bandwagon for every war and now when he has the golden opportunity to just sit and talk and arrive at a good neighborly relationship, he's not there," Laor said. "He obviously feels secure enough to go against the United States. He goes with Syria and Iraq and navigates his country from one disaster to another.

"His country will pay the price."

One potential problem which Laor said "futurists have to take into account" as far as the Middle East is concerned, is the wave of Islamic orthodoxy which is sweeping not only the Arab countries but also Afghanistan, Pakistan, India and Bangladesh and others.

"This Islamic wave is ominous and is not healthy. It could be a very serious problem for the Jewish people and the State Of Israel," he added.

"They may eventually end up as the third world power," he said, adding those countries are "blessed with oil, natural resources, stategical locations and a vast section of land" which separates the Soviet Union and the Free World.

"This includes millions of peoples (who) have their own logic and blind extremism," Laor said. "Don't envy us having to negotiate with them."

FLYNT GOES TO TRIAL — Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt was surrounded by heavy security this morning as he arrived at the Fulton County Courthouse in Atlanta for the start of his trial on obscenity charges. The eleven counts of violating Georgia's obscenity laws were filed against Flynt over 18 months ago. A year ago Flynt was shot in Lawrenceville, Ga., while on trial there. The shooting left Flynt partially paralyzed. (AP Laserphoto)

Heavily Guarded Park Returns To Courtroom

MONROE, La. (AP) — Tongsun Park, protected because of reported threats on his life, spent the weekend at a secret location and was escorted by bodyguards today to the conspiracy, bribery and tax evasion trial of former Rep. Otto Passman.

Park, a key government witness, arrived an hour before the scheduled 9:30 a.m. trial start, and security at the federal courthouse was tighter than it has been.

Park had been staying at a local motel in a room next door to his lawyer, William Hundley.

"They took him Friday but I can't tell you where they took him," said Hundley. "I would imagine he's going to be staying wherever they are stashing him now."

Park, the South Korean businessman at the center of the congressional rice scandals, is under courtroom cross-examination for the first time. The questioning began last week and may continue through this week.

FBI agents and the U.S. marshal have refused to discuss security for Park. A Monroe television station has received telephone threats against the South Korean's life.

Defense lawyer Camille Gravel of Alexandria says he'll will continue to hammer at Park's credibility as a witness.

Park was granted immunity for helping the Justice Department in its case against the former congressman. Passman is charged with accepting $193,000 in cash to help the wealthy Korean keep a rice agent's job that garnered him nearly $9 million in commissions from 1972 through 1975.

"It's going the way I expected," said Gravel. He didn't say what it was he expected.

The 78-year-old Passman, the most influential member of Congress in foreign aid matters until his 1976 defeat, has denied taking any money from Park.

Park was a wheeler-dealer and political socialite in Washington for years and contributed to the campaigns of dozens of U.S.-elected officials.

He denied during the rice scandals investigation in 1977 that he gave contributions to congressmen. He changed his testimony a year later after being given immunity from criminal charges ranging from bribery to acting illegally as a foreign agent.

Gravel is trying to prove that in reality Park was telling the truth on the first go round, changing his story later to protect himself.

"I denied the fact (of giving contributions) because at the time I was not under oath and I was interested in minimizing problems of all my friends," Park testified Friday.

"In other words, I wanted to protect them. That's what a loyal friend would do."

But Park added, "In my heart, I wanted to give truthful testimony," and said he was under great pressure to do so from President Carter and the U.S. Congress.

Park testified that Carter had written two letters to the president of Korea urging Park's cooperation and that Congress had threatened to cut aid to his country.

Hart Jury Listens To Opening Words

PRYOR, Okla. (AP) — A packed and silent courtroom today heard prosecutor S.M Fallis Jr. explain how the state intended to prove Gene Leroy Hart killed and sexually molested three young Girl Scouts nearly two years ago.

Hart, 35, is on trial on three counts of first-degree murder in the June 13, 1977, slayings of the girls on their first night at a northeastern Oklahoma summer camp.

Hart at times talked quietly with defense attorney Garvin Isaacs as Fallis delivered his half-hour opening statement.

A six-man, six-woman jury and two alternates sworn in earlier by District Judge William Whistler listened intently. Members of the panel sometimes glanced toward Hart ane members of his family and toward members of the victims' families in the courtroom.

About 30 newsmen and 70 local residents crowded into the courtroom.

Fallis and Isaacs clashed several times during the 11 days of jury select on.

"Mr. Fallis is a silver-tongued orator," Isaacs told several prospecitve jurors as he interviewed them. "He is a lot older and more experienced than I am. I'm a little abrupt in my approach. A little rough around the edges."

A Girl Scout counselor was expected to be the first of perhaps 27 state witnesses. The teen-ager was expected to tell the six-man, six-woman jury about her discovery of the three girls' bodies.

Lori Lee Farmer, 8, Michele Guse, 9 and Doris Denise Milner, 10, were beaten about the head. One was strangled, and two had their hands bound behind them. All were sexually molested. Their bodies were found on a camp trail several yards from a bloody tent.

Although still at large, Hart was charged 10 days after the slayings. He was captured by state agents in April 1978 at a shack in the rugged Cookson Hills of eastern Oklahoma, some 50 miles from the Girl Scout camp.

At a preliminary hearing last summer, the state attempted to linked Hart to items found at a cave near the camp.

Publisher Returns To Georgia To Face Obscenity Charges

ATLANTA (AP) — Hustler magazine owner Larry Flynt says he is nervous about returning to Georgia for the first time since a gunman's bullet partially paralyzed him a year ago.

"We're taking security precautions we didn't take before," Flynt said from his Atlanta hotel room Sunday night. "Let's face it, when someone's running around who shot you, you have to look over your shoulder a little bit."

A tight guard was posted and all spectators were to be searched at the opening of Flynt's trial on obscenity charges today.

Flynt was paralyzed by gunshot wounds in an ambush during a break in a similar trial a year ago this month in Lawrenceville, Ga., about 30 miles northeast of Atlanta. The current trial also is at Lawrenceville.

The new trial is the result of a confrontation staged by Flynt in September 1977 to challenge Fulton County Solicitor Hinson McAuliffe's crackdown on Flynt's Hustler and Chic magazines.

Flynt invited his own arrest by renting a downtown Atlanta shop to sell copies of the sexually explicit magazines.

Sheriff Leroy Stynchcombe said Flynt's private bodyguards and county deputies would surround the publisher in the courthouse. At Stynchcombe's request, Judge Nick Lambros issued an order Friday authorizing personal searches of anyone entering the courtroom.

An attorney for Flynt, Herald Fahringer of Buffalo, N.Y., said he expects the trial to last a week to 10 days.

Flynt said he was optimistic about the trial's outcome.

"I got railroaded in Cincinnati, I got shot in Gwinnett County, I really haven't had my day in court," he said. "I think I can get a fair trial in Fulton County, and I think I'll be acquitted. If I'm not, I'll continue the fight."

Flynt was sentenced to seven to 25 years in prison after a 1977 conviction in Cincinnati. The sentence, fine and conviction remain under appeal.

After the shooting on March 6, 1978, a mistrial was declared, and Gwinnett County authorities dropped the case. Authorities have not arrested the gunman, who also wounded attorney Gene Reeves of Lawrenceville.

More Nurses Hired To Aid Baby Boom

By RAYNIE HARDESTY
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Twelve female nurses, two of them pregnant, worked almost around the clock — sleeping in the lounge and skipping coffee and lunch breaks — to deliver 1,105 babies in Health Sciences Center Hospital from November through February.

With more patients coming to the hospital from the outlying area each month and doctors referring their high risk patients to the center, the facility "has gone through the busiest months with the least amount of staff since we opened," said Belinda Brice, head nurse in labor and delivery.

But help appears to be on the way with more nurses hired in the last few weeks and additional recruitment underway.

The 12 workers covered three shifts for much of the four-month period. The nurses went weeks with only a day off and often put in 16 hours each day without coffee or lunch breaks.

"There's just not time," said the head nurse. "It comes to a matter of 'Do I have time to go eat lunch or take care of that patient?'"

The members of the small staff worked double shifts and then volunteered to work extra on their days off.

Many of them slept in empty patient beds or in the lounge on snowy days so that they would be available to patients almost immediately.

Others came in after a full day of work to help in deliveries requiring a Caesarian section be performed. Two of these women were pregnant during the recent siege.

One worked until two weeks before her own baby was delivered and another also worked until just days before her baby's birth.

The nurses "literally were running from patient to patient" in the facility which can accommodate up to 15 patients at a time, said Mrs. Brice.

At least three people were on the staff at all times, said the nurse, meaning that an employee would usually deliver between six and 10 babies a day.

Often 50 percent of those deliveries were high risk. Such patients require care on a one-to-one basis and remain in labor for two or three days.

Most normal patients remain in labor only about eight hours, said Mrs. Brice.

Hospital residents also aided the nurses during the "crisis," according to Mrs. Brice, who said "they saw our problem" and helped the nurses watch patients in the hall while they were working in the delivery room.

The perinatal regional center also offers "family-centered maternity care" to their patients, said Mrs. Brice. The program allows the parents "to participate as much as they desire in the birth of their children." The nurses try to allow the parents 15 to 30 minutes with their newborn infant after the delivery.

Standards established by the Nurses Association of American Colleges of Obstetricians and Gynocologists indicate a registered nurse should be present for every two high risk labor patients and another for every two high risk recovery room patients, according to Mrs. Brice.

The organization also says two licensed nurses must be on hand for every three normal delivery patients, and two qualified personel must perform surgical procedures.

But the staff is improving for the nine-room facility, said the head nurse. The hospital board has seen our "increase in patient flow and our anticipation for the coming year."

The perinatal center is delivering up to 30 more babies a month than when it opened, reported Mrs. Brice. "We expect to increase as much in 1979."

The board already has hired new nurses for the facility and has approved the hiring of 13 more staffers, according to the head nurse.

Flight Of Space Shuttle Postponed By Weather

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Heavy rains today forced space agency officials to postpone again the long-delayed flight of the space shuttle Columbia to its launching pad in Cape Canaveral, Fla.

The shuttle and its Boeing 747 ferry were to have taken off on a 30-minute test flight before dawn, then headed for Florida, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said.

"It's going to be raining quite a bit all day out there, and it might get some snow tomorrow," National Weather Service forecaster Don DePauw said this morning.

The Air Force base is in the Southern California high desert, only several hundred feet below the snow level, which was dropping fast early today as a Pacific storm intensified.

NASA spokesman Ralph Jackson said officials hope to squeeze in a test flight sometime today if the storm eases up. "But it is impossible the craft will begin their cross-country trip today," he added.

He also said it was possible the trip could be postponed beyond Tuesday because of the weather.

Last week, the flight to Florida was postponed when several squares of tile tore loose during a test flight. NASA officials believe they have overcome that problem with a stronger glue.

The Columbia's engine computers and other final touches will be added at Cape Canaveral. The ship's first space flight is tentatively scheduled for Nov. 9.

The Columbia, first of a planned fleet of four commuter space ships, was grounded March 9.

A test flight revealed problems with dummy tiles that filled temporary gaps in the shuttle's heat shield.

The collection of heat-resistant tiles that cover the shuttle's aluminum skin is to be completed when the Columbia arrives in Florida.

NASA said the temporary foam tiles were taped over the gaps to smooth the shuttle's surface and reduce drag on the trip east.

Tape came loose during the first test flight and some dummy tiles were lost. Technicians then spent several days ripping off the tape and again securing the 3,000 foam tiles, this time with a special glue. They had to wait nearly three days for the glue to harden.

NASA said the new arrangement was tested successfully Sunday when a plane carried two panels of the dummy tiles on a test flight.

Another Skeleton Identified

CHICAGO (AP) — Another of the 29 skeletons found at the home of John W. Gacy Jr. has been identified by the county medical examiner, but the remains of 15 young men and boys remain nameless.

Cook County Medical Examiner Robert Stein said Saturday the name of the victim, identified by dental charts as a Chicago youth, was being withheld pending notification of relatives.

The identification came one day after the 29th skeleton was found Friday under the floorboards of an addition to the Gacy home, located in an unincorporated area northwest of Chicago.

Stein said has received about 180 dental charts from relatives of missing persons. But he said more were needed or further identifications may be impossible.

Meanwhile, Gacy spent his 37th birthday Saturday sitting alone in his guarded prison hospital room. He has been hospitalized due to an alleged heart condition since his arrest just before Christmas.

Gacy reportedly told police he killed 32 young men and boys after having sexual relations with them, often against their will. He reportedly said he threw five bodies in the Des Plaines River.

Authorities have linked three bodies found in the river to the Gacy investigation.

Gacy has been charged with seven murders — the first six skeletons identified and for the slaying of 15-year-old Robert Piest, whose disappearance touched off the investigation. Piest's body has not been found.

Airlines, Union Reach Accord

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators for United Airlines and the union representing its mechanics reached tentative agreement today on a new contract after an all-night bargaining session, a federal mediation official announced.

The proposed agreement generally follows a settlement reached with Trans World Airlines in October that called for a 30 percent pay increase over three years plus cost-of-living adjustments, said Robert O. Harris, a member of the National Mediation Board.

The 18,000 United workers had rejected a somewhat similar tentative agreement earlier.

The two sides began their latest round of talks Sunday morning, pausing only for a brief break Sunday night, said Merredith Buel, a spokesman for the mediation board, which handles labor disputes in the airline and railroad industries.

The International Association of Machinists had threatened to go on strike at midnight Friday but agreed to return to the bargaining table at the request of Labor Secretary Ray Marshall. The union represents United's mechanics, ground crewmen and other workers.

United has 1,600 flights, carrying an average of 111,000 passengers daily between 109 U.S. cities.

Sohio Might Reconsider Oil Pipeline

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Standard Oil of Ohio official says the company might reconsider its decision to abandon a $1 billion oil pipeline if all obstacles to the project could be removed within six months.

But despite assurances from state and federal officials, F. Harlan Flint, Sohio's assistant director of government affairs, expressed doubts that the remaining permits could be obtained and court challenges resolved in that period of time.

Flint attended a meeting Saturday called by U.S. Sen. Alan Cranston in an effort to revive plans for the proposed supertanker terminal and connecting pipe system. Representatives from government agencies and private corporations involved in the project also attended.

In announcing cancellation last week of the project to ship Alaskan oil through a pipeline from Long Beach to Texas, Sohio chairman Alton Whitehouse said regulatory delays prompted the decision.

On Sunday, Cranston wired Whitehouse, asking the company head to meet with him and other California officials in Washington on Tuesday to reconsider that decision.

In his telegram, Cranston said that based on the information gathered during the weekend session, "I am convinced that your concerns over the future of the project may be resolvable."

Flint said the decision to kill the project was based on a belief that it would take at least another 1½ years to settle the litigation even if the company received all the permits still outstanding.

However, Cranston said he believed the process could go much more quickly — with completion within six months.

Swallows Fail To Return

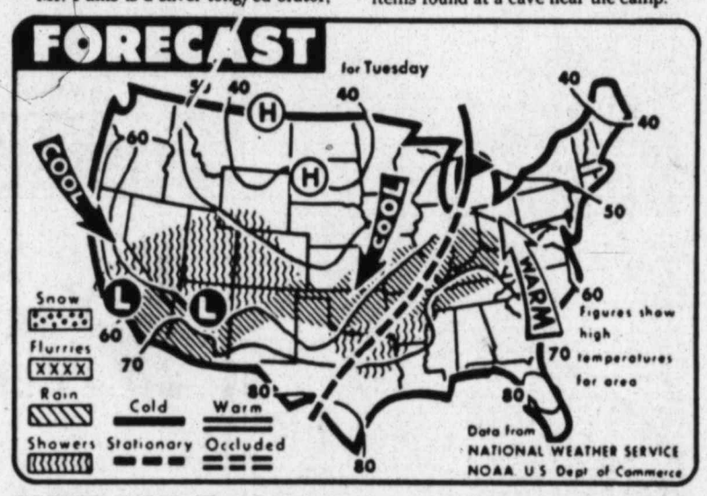

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Calif. (AP) — Shivering in a chilly rain, about 30 early-bird tourists waited outside the famous mission at dawn today for the legendary return of the swallows. But they spotted only seagulls, sparrows and pigeons.

Packing cameras, binoculars and food, the would-be swallow watchers eyed the cloudy skies, sending up occasional false sightings.

Bill Smith, publicity director for Mission San Juan Capistrano, said the swallows had begun their annual 7,000 mile flight north from Argentina later than normal.

"We haven't seen any yet. They're probably late. The weather must be keeping them back," said Paul Arbiso, the 83-year-old gardener of the mission.

According to legend, the fork-tailed birds return every St. Joseph's Day, March 19, to the mission in this rustic coastal town south of Los Angeles.

WEATHER FORECAST — Precipitation is expected for southern California, extending in a band across the nation to western Ohio and western Kentucky for Tuesday, according to the National Weather Service. Clear skies are forecast for the remainder of the nation. (AP Laserphoto)

Now It's On To Salt Lake As Final Four Decided

By BERT ROSENTHAL
AP Sports Writer

Talk about longshots ....

Take the teams in the NCAA basketball semifinals — Indiana State, Michigan State, DePaul and Penn.

Of the four, only Michigan State ever has gone this far, the Spartans finishing fourth in 1957. DePaul was among the final four teams in 1943, but at that time, only a total of eight teams were invited to regional games in the East and the West, with the regional champions meeting for the national title and no third-place game between the losers.

Of the four, only Michigan State was rated among the top 20 teams prior to the season, ranking seventh in The Associated Press poll. Indiana State was listed among the also-rans, and neither DePaul nor Penn got even a single vote among the 53 teams named by a national panel of sportswriters and broadcasters.

Of the four, only Indiana State was seeded first in its regional tournament, the unbeaten Sycamores being tapped to win the Midwest Regional. DePaul was ranked second in the West Regional, Michigan State second in the Mideast, and Penn ninth in the East Regional.

Of the team's four coaches — Bill Hodges of Indiana State, Jud Heathcote of Michigan State, 65-year-old Ray Meyer of DePaul and Bob Weinhauer of Penn — none ever has guided a team into the Final Four at any school.

In addition, no Ivy League school, such as Penn, has appeared in the Final Four since 1965 when Princeton finished third.

This year's Final Four reached that plateau over the weekend.

Saturday, top-ranked Indiana State, 32-0, won the Midwest Regional at Cincinnati, edging No. 5 Arkansas 73-71 on reserve Bob Heaton's field goal with two seconds remaining. No. 6 DePaul, 25-5, captured the West Regional at Provo, Utah, upsetting second-ranked UCLA 95-91 as Curtis Watkins and Gary Garland each scored 20 points.

Sunday, third-ranked Michigan State, 24-6, took the Mideast Regional at Indianapolis, beating No. 4 Notre Dame 80-68 behind Greg Kelser's 34 points and 13 rebounds and Earvin Johnson's 19 points and 13 assists. And 14th-ranked Penn won the East Regional at Greensboro, N.C., defeating No. 17 St. John's 64-62 on James Salters' two free throws with 23 seconds remaining.

This Saturday in the national semifinals, Indiana State faces DePaul and Michigan State plays Penn. The winners meet for the national collegiate championship next Monday night.

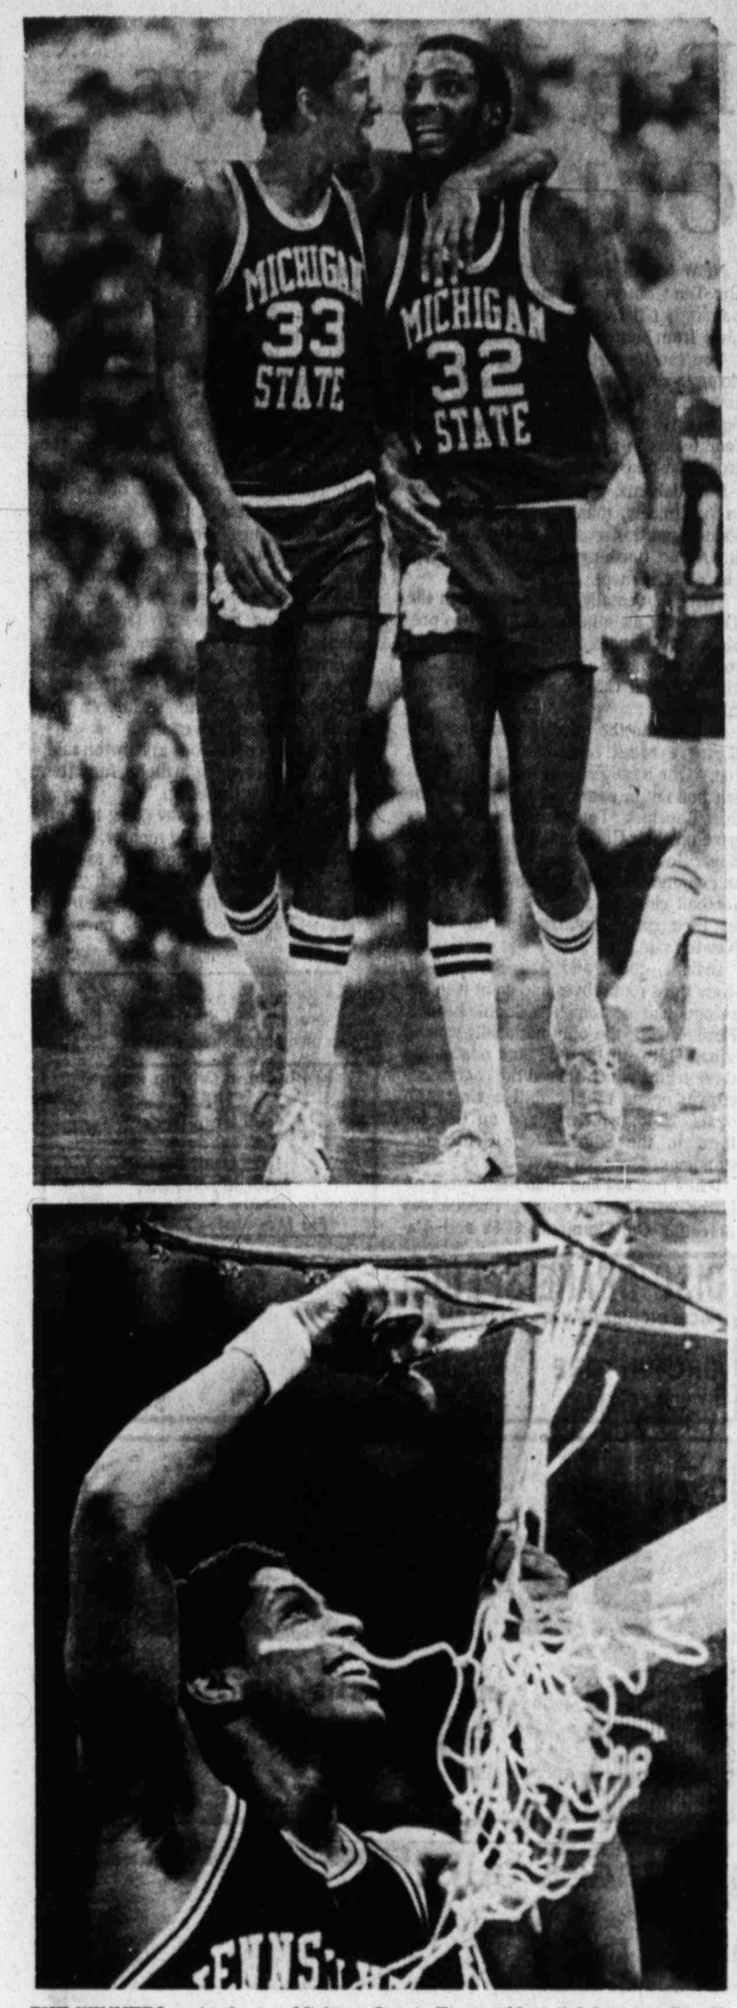

Perhaps the happiest coach of the surviving teams was the long-frustrated, grandfatherly Meyer, in his 37th season at DePaul, a little school in Chicago.

With a large green boutonniere shining from his lapel on St. Patrick's Day, he said with a broad smile: "Thank God, we are in the Final Four."

Asked if he was shocked at having beaten proud UCLA, the Pac-10 champion, Meyer replied: "Quite frankly, yes. So much so that I had to pinch myself."

Questioned about DePaul's matchup against unbeaten Indiana State in the national semifinals, Meyer said: "We play Indiana State? Well, the Bird will fly. We'll Magic Dazzles...

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — An unspoken signal, maybe just a brief glance, and Greg Kelser is on the way to the basket to slam in a lob pass from the magic hands of Earvin Johnson.

"We've been playing together for some time now," said the 6-foot-7 Kelser, whose 34 points led Michigan State to a suprising 80-68 victory over Notre Dame in Sunday's NCAA Mideast regional final.

"Anytime someone's overplaying me, I make a little eye contact with Earvin. He's confident that if the ball is anywhere near the rim I'm going to dunk it, and I'm confident he's going to get it there."

The 6-8 Johnson, a sophomore All-American, scored 19 points against the Irish, and his ball handling ability produced 13 assists, including three lobs to Kelser for slam dunks.

"I look for Greg because he's usually quicker than the man who's guarding him," said Johnson. "I just love to see him dunk. I get so fired up because he hangs so long. It looks just like a cartoon to me."

Notre Dame's Irish, who reached the NCAA Final Four for the first time last year, weren't laughing. And Michigan State's Spartans, whose only other appearance in the finals was 22 years ago, were nearly crying with joy.

"It feels so good," said Johnson. "I can't tell you how good. It's been a dream of mine to get to the Final Four."

The third-ranked Spartans, now 24-6, will play East regional champion Penn, 25-5, in one semifinal game next Saturday at Salt Lake City. Top-ranked Indiana State will meet DePaul in the other semifinal.

The Spartans quickly established their game plan against the Irish, who finished at 24-6, and Johnson's first assist, off the opening tip-off, produced a fast-break dunk by Kelser that set the tone for the entire game. After a 6-6 tie, Michigan State scored five staight points within 49 seconds and was on top the rest of the way.

The closest fourth-ranked Notre Dame came after that was 17-14 as reserve Tracy Jackson canned three quick baskets over the Spartans zone. Another 8-2 burst on four straight baskets by Kelser blew the game open.

"In the first half, we just weren't hitting good shots and were not getting of-

...Price Is Right

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Pennsylvania forward Tony Price is having a tough time coming to grips with the fact that the Quakers are going to represent the East for the NCAA national championship.

"We're in the Final Four in the nation," Price said Sunday, more to reassure himself than to point out the obvious to a group of well-wishers. "I just wanted people to respect us. I didn't expect this."

Earlier, the 6-foot-7 senior had scored 21 points, including a 15-point second half outburst, as Penn outlasted No. 17 St. John's 64-62 for the right to meet Michigan State in the national semifinals. Price was named the game's outstanding player.

The Quakers are the first Ivy League team in 14 years to reach the Final Four. Princeton finished third in 1965.

The nationally televised contest was sloppy in the initial period as each club committed a total of 23 turnovers — a dozen for St. John's and 11 for the Quakers.

"We didn't want to make mistakes," said Penn Coach Bob Weinhauer, whose squad ran its record to 25-5. "I think both teams were a little tight in the early going."

Penn nursed a 29-26 lead at halftime and St. John's, the last choice for the 40-team NCAA field, used Ron Plair's accurate field goals to take the lead for the first time at the midway point of the second half.

Plair finished with 21 points for St. John's, which ended its season with a 21-11 mark. He hit nine straight shots before missing with three seconds left.

"There's no post-mortem on my part," said St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca. "That team (St. John's) walked out of there with their heads up."

Only 7,216 showed up for the game,

Changing The Rules

NATIONAL FOOTBALL LEAGUE owners have been accused of everything from greed to stupidity in recent years, but they took a giant step in the right direction last week with a flock of rules changes to reduce injuries and eliminate the cheap shots.

Perhaps it was the pleasant holiday atmosphere at Honolulu, where the league moguls gathered for their winter meeting, but the often-maligned owners showed some concern for their gladiators. It may have been self-serving, because those guys wearing the helmets and shoulder pads are the major asset of any franchise. But whatever the reason, the result is the beginning of a new era in the NFL.

Some diehard traditionalists may scream that the game has lost its zing, with the elimination of knee-damaging cut-blocks and crackbacks. They probably won't like the protection for the quarterbacks and receivers against late hits, either. There always have been a few who thought football ought to be the survival of the toughest.

Nonsense! Pro football still will be a rough, contact sport. The new rules should result in a return to the shoulder tackle and block, which is where it all began many years ago. All that will be missing will be the shots at knees and ankles that have taken such a terrible toll in recent years, and the second and third hits on the quarterbacks and receivers.

Fans probably recall that the career of the Cowboys' great linebacker, Chuck Howley, was ended prematurely by one of those cheap shots in a game against Washington.

DALLAS COWBOY PRESIDENT Tex Schramm had a big hand in formulating the new rules, as a member of the league's Competition Committee. Miami's Don Shula is another respected member of the panel. Tex pushed the rules changes because of the problems arising from the longer season and the growing list of injured players.

The crippling injury suffered by Darryl Stingley and the loss of some of the top quarterbacks in the NFL, including Baltimore's Bert Jones, no doubt gave impetus to the league's action.

Foes of the Cowboys probably will claim that Tex was looking out for Dallas' interests, but the record doesn't bear that out. Tex was an advocate of the rule

Arkansas' Sutton Voices Complaints

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Arkansas basketball coach Eddie Sutton isn't joking when he says the calls went against the Razorbacks on Saturday.

According to Sutton, Indiana State's Bob Heaton walked before he fired the short shot in the last two seconds that resulted in the Sycamores' 73-71 triumph over Arkansas in the finals of the NCAA Midwest Regional at Cincinnati.

Sutton also says Arkansas guard U.S. Reed was fouled before he was issued a walking violation that turned the ball over to Indiana State for the final minute of the game.

"Carl Micks tripped him. It was not intentional, but it should have been a foul," Sutton said on his weekly television show Sunday. "Even if U.S. had traveled, which he never did, he did not lose that basketball game," he said.

"It was one of the greatest basketball games I've ever been involved in. I'd just about pulled myself back up until I came down here and started studying the film," Sutton said.

"Calls that kill you are calls toward the end of a game. They say it all evens up, and over the course of a season, it does. But if the officials miss something at the end, you don't have a chance to come back like you do early or in the middle of a game.

"There were a lot of games during the season that the calls went our way. The decisions went Indiana State's way Saturday," he said.

"Larry Bird is the most protected player (by officials) I've seen since Bill Walton was at UCLA.

"I'm not saying he was overprotected in this particular game, but overall he was in the tournament, especially in the Oklahoma game," Sutton said.

Only Four Advance

have to devise some defense for him." He referred to Larry Bird, the Sycamores' Player of the Year in college basketball.

DePaul, decided underdogs against UCLA, a team that crushed the Blue Demons 108-85 in the season opener, raced to a 51-34 halftime lead, then withstood a second-half Bruins' comeback, led by All-American David Greenwood. Greenwood scored a career-high 37 points.

UCLA closed to 93-91 in the closing minute, but a basket by Garland clinched the victory.

Another proud coach was Hodges, in his rookie year at Indiana State, a team maligned all season because of its so-called easy schedule.

"All year long, we haven't cared what people said," Hodges said. "We didn't let the press or critics distract us or make us lose focus of our goal. We're going to Salt Lake City to win — and we're not going in awe of anyone."

The Sycamores finally gained respect after beating Arkansas, one of the nation's top teams.

"We didn't think we'd get this far and now we're here," Bird said proudly.

The Sycamores got "here" mainly because of Bird. He scored 31 points, grabbed 10 rebounds and had three assists against the Razorbacks.

They also got "here" because of Heaton, Bird's unheralded but clutch-shooting roommate whose last-second field goal broke a 71-71 tie.

"Once the ball went in the hoop, it was like the whole world crashed in on me," said Sidney Moncrief, the Razorbacks' scoring leader with 24 points.

Michigan State also was proud of its accomplishment.

"It feels great — I can't even say how great," said Johnson, the Spartans ballhandling wizard. "It was a dream of mine to make the Final Four and now we're there."

Johnson and Kelser combined to dazzle Notre Dame on offense, while Michigan State's zone defense throttled the Irish's vaunted inside game.

"Our defense never broke down as it has at times this season," said Heathcote, in his third season as Michigan State coach. "This is the best we've played for some time."

Meanwhile, North Alabama won the NCAA's Division II title, beating Wisconsin-Green Bay 64-50, North Park captured the Division III crown with a 66-62 victory over Potsdam State, and Drury took the NAIA championship with a 60-54 triumph over Henderson State.

fensive rebounds," said Irish Coach Digger Phelps. "We just didn't react. The first play of the game, the jump ball, set the pace for the whole game. We were flat-footed and didn't react. Then came the avalanche.

"In the second half, we made a spurt to get back in it, but they quickly adjusted. That's one thing about them, the way they can make the adjustment. Any time we made a run at 'em, we were just trading baskets."

Notre Dame pulled within seven points, 48-41, early in the final period, but Johnson scored 12 points and Kelser 10 from that point on and the Spartans steadily widened the gap.

"Our game plan wasn't to go inside but to hit the perimeter shots," said Irish forward Kelly Tripucka, held to just eight points by the tough Spartans zone. "But the shots didn't go in.

"We knew they would collapse the middle and we were hoping our outside shooting would open things up. We had them scouted pretty well, but we didn't play our game. The momentum is a big factor, and it didn't go our way."

Jackson and junior Bill Hanzlik, who was guarding Johnson, led the Irish with 19 points apiece.

"Now there are four teams left going to Salt Lake City, and there are some very good teams that are not going. Perhaps some of the teams staying home are better than those that are going. But it's not how good you are, it's how good you play.

"This was the best we've played since the tournament started," Heathcote said.

which had been expected to feature the Atlantic Coast Conference's best. But Penn disposed of North Carolina in the second round March 11 and the Redmen beat Duke for the second time this year later that day.

With 23 seconds left, Penn forward James Salters canned a pair of free throws to seal the victory.

After Penn upset North Carolina, Weinhauer brashly remarked, "We fear absolutely no one." As a nearby television set blared the Michigan State-Notre Dame game, he remained just as confident.

"I don't see any reason we should stop now."

Clovis Whips Mayfield

LAS CRUCES (Special)— Nelson Franse exploded for 32 points and the Clovis Wildcats captured their first AAAA state crown since 1952 here Saturday night by pasting Las Cruces Mayfield 70-55.

Clovis trailed Mayfield 18-10 after one quarter but went ahead 25-24 at the intermission. Then a Wildcat explosion in the final period sunk the host team for good.

Stewart McLean led Mayfield with 15 points and Bubba Jennings had 12 for Clovis. Jeff Faubian was also in double figures for the Cats, chipping in 13 points.

Both teams shot around 47 percent form the field but Clovis connected on 10 freebies to five for Mayfield. But overall there weren't that many fouls callled in the game as no one on either team fouled out.

Ironically the teams played almost to a standstill statistically, both had the same field goal percentage and Mayfield actually out-rebounded the Cats 37-36. But Clovis put the ball up more often than did Mayfield–which played with practically a home-court advantage at the Pan American Center

Big 10 Enjoys Old Home Week

NEW YORK (AP) — It's more like a Big Ten Conference playoff — but Alabama should feel right at home, being away from home for the holidays.

You can be certain the Big Ten won't do any worse than second in the National Invitation Tournament at Madison Square Garden, seeing as three of the four teams in tonight's semifinals come from that midwestern power conference.

But Alabama, the only "outsider," fits in very nicely, thank you. The Crimson Tide began this season's campaign in the Big Apple, finishing third in the Joe Lapchick Tournament.

That, incidentally, was better than the Tide's ever done in the NIT. In two previous appearances, Alabama has finished fourth. "Maybe the third time's a charm," said C.M. Newton, the Tide's coach.

And maybe the third time on the road during a break from classes will help, too. "Our boys gave up their Thanksgiving holiday to come here to play in the Joe Lapchick Tournament, then they gave up their Christmas holidays for the Sugar Bowl (a basketball tournament run in conjunction with the New Year's Day football classic), and now they've given up their spring holidays for the NIT," Newton said.

Indiana, 20-12, and Ohio State, 19-10, drew third-round byes and go at it in the second half of tonight's double-header. Purdue, 26-7, the only nationally ranked squad (15th) in the NIT and one of the three teams which shared the conference crown, opens the twinbill against Alabama, 22-10, which wound up tied for third in the Southeastern Conference standings.

While Indiana and Ohio State were relaxing last Thursday night, Purdue was defeating Old Dominion 67-59 and Alabama was whipping Texas AM 72-68 in third-round games.

Newton said he is not thinking yet about which team his Crimson Tide might face if it gets past the Boilermakers. "I'm not concerned about anything but Purdue and us," he said — and apparently he's very concerned. "I believe Purdue is one of the top teams in the country. Their record would indicate that. They are co-champions of the Big Ten, which is a feat in itself."

It's a good bet Newton won't be surprised by anything Purdue tries tonight. After all, the Boilermakers' coach, Lee Rose, was one of Newton's players during 1955-58 and, in the early 1960s, his assistant coach when they were together at Transylvania College. Their relationship, in fact, is a lot closer than that. Rose was a babysitter for Newton's children and Newton attended his wedding.

It's all very cozy — but as Newton said, "I'm sure everything will be forgotten when that ball is tipped up."

Rose feels the same way going into his first game against his old mentor. "He is the one person I have no desire to compete against as a coach," he said. "He's been like a father figure to me ... but I won't let that affect anything once the game starts."

New Zealand pensioner Clifford Clark has the answer to a bartender's prayer. It's an unsinkable swizzle stick.

McCumber Wins Doral

IN THERE — Mark McCumber uses a little body english to guide home his putt on the tenth green of the $250,000 Doral Open. McCumber won the tourney by a slim, one-stroke advantage for a $45,000 purse. (AP Laserphoto)

MIAMI (AP) — The magnitude of Mark McCumber's upset in the Doral-Eastern Open golf tournament, and the continuing severity of Jack Nicklaus' problems, could be illustrated by some figures.

As it worked out, McCumber — one of the longest shots in the field — could have given Nicklaus — the game's greatest player — three shots a day and still beat him by three.

The fact was that Nicklaus, grimly trying to get his game in shape for the Masters, simply never got in it. In fact, he's now gone 10 consecutive rounds without breaking par.

And McCumber, who required six tries at the PGA qualifying school before he even won his rights to compete on the tour, scored the major surprise of the season with a 1-stroke triumph over Bill Rogers in Sunday's final round.

"Unbelievable," McCumber told a friend over the telephone while clutching an invitation from Nicklaus to compete in the Memorial Tournament later this year.

It was only one of a number of dividends he collected after he rapped in a 6-foot bogey putt — the one he had to have — on the final hole. It finished off a final round of par-72 and gave the stocky, 27-year-old a 279 total, nine shots under par on the tough, 7,065-yard Blue Monster course at the Doral Country Club.

With it, he won:

- A spot in the Masters.
- A place in the Tournament of Champions.
- A prize of $45,000 from the total purse of $250,000.
- And a year's exemption from qualifying — which he had to do to get in the tournament field here.

In addition, the victory continued a trend that has become pronounced on the pro golf tour this season: the emergence of new names and new faces as tournament winners. In 10 tournaments this season, four have been taken by men scoring their first victories.

None were more startling than McCumber's.

After his long struggle to gain his playing rights, his record in eight previous tournaments this season showed the he twice failed to qualify for the tournament field, four times failed to qualify for the final two rounds and twice finished 72 holes.

But he showed the composure of a veteran in this one.

He pulled away from Alan Tapie and Rogers, who were making bogeys, with steady play down the back. He went to the 18th, probably the toughest finishing hole in golf, with a 2-shot lead. He needed only a bogey to insure the victory. And then, to heighten the drama, he put himself in a variety of interesting and unlikely positions — behind trees, under a concession stand and such like — before holing that 6-foot bogey putt.

"I just did what I'd tried to do all week — isolate each shot," said the talkative man from Jacksonville, Fla. "I tried all week to forget totals, not look at leader boards, just concentrate on each shot.

"I can't believe it, but I did it. I'd be a fool to ever go away from that philosophy."

Rogers also had a 72 to finish second at 280. Rod Curl, never in the title chase, shot 68-281. The groupiat 282 included Tapie, who closed with a 76; Mike McCullough, 67; Kermit Zarley, 71, and Gibby Gilbert, 68.

Nicklaus shot 72, with a double-bogey 6 on the final hole, and finished at 294 — 15 shots behind McCumber.

Ego Fuels Csonka

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Larry Csonka doesn't need the money. So why is he punishing himself by running 13 straight minutes under the baking South Florida sun?

"He has a big ego, and he wants to feed that ego," explained former Miami Dolphin defensive lineman Manny Fernandez. "All football players have that ego. It was deflated with New York and now he wants to finish a winner.

"He wants to give it one more year," Fernandez said of his friend.

Csonka is a multimillion-dollar-man trying for one last season in the sun.

"This is the first time in my career that I've worked this way. I have to because the minicamp is coming up and they expect you to be in shape by then.

"I have reached the point in my career where I have to work hard now. Coming back here, they'll expect a lot out of me immediately," Csonka said.

LCC Starts RoadStand

PHOENIX (Special)— It's not who's on first that concerns Lubbock Christian College coach Larry Hays as the Chaparrals prepare to launch a week-long ten game stand here today; rather, it's who's healthy.

Centerfielder Brady Brashear missed Saturday's sweep of Western New Mexico with a pulled groin and a case of the 24-hour virus. Bobby Doe, who had earned the starting leftfield job after Tommy Inman broke his leg, also sat out Saturdy with those two ailments.

Catcher Bob Nottebart did not play Friday because of the virus and it has since spread throughout the team, so Hays is concerned about that as well as other hurts. For example, second baseman Steve Brigante has a bad hamstring, Richard Bowles a pulled goin and Tim Leslie has been hampered by a sore right wrist, but is still leading the team in hitting with a 475 mark.

Today, the Chaparrals will face Northern Arizona University a at 1 p.m. CST. Hays has tabbed Dave Hanna, 2-1, 4.80 ERA, to go for LCC, which is 15-6.

NAU has won seven straight and now stands 10-5. One of those wins was an 11-7 decision over the University of Oklahoma—and former Monterey hurler Scott Gardner—Saturdy.

Baltimore Oriole Frank Robinson

Robinson Sees No Future

By WILL GRIMSLEY

MIAMI (AP) — "The black ball player might as well face it," said a disillusioned Frank Robinson. "When he gets through doing his thing on the field, he better look elsewhere — there is no other place for him in baseball. "It's sad, but it's true."

The words are an echo out of the past, from the lips of another man named Robinson — the late Jackie Robinson (no kin). A couple of decades ago, Jackie was rattling the game's foundations with the same explosive rhetoric.

It didn't change things then. It isn't changing them now.

Although most of the country's old racial barriers, in society as well as sports, have been erased — largely due to Branch Rickey's bold move of signing Jackie Robinson to a Brooklyn contract in 1947 — one bastion remains unsullied.

That, argues Frank Robinson, is that the black man was created to toil — whether it be on the river levees or on the athletic field — and never to direct or lead.

"Why don't we have black managers and black general managers in baseball?" he asked rhetorically. "Why aren't more retired black stars in radio and TV? Why aren't there more black quarterbacks in pro football?

"I'll tell you. It's a throwback to the slave days. There is a misconception that blacks don't have the intelligence to be leaders. They have muscles and speed and natural skills. When these skills wear out, they have nothing else to offer.

"So people think. That is what discourages me."

Robinson, still a lean, sleek athlete at age 43, was a standout player for the Cincinnati Reds for 10 years before joining the Baltimore Orioles, where he played on four World Series teams.

He is a certainty for the Hall of Fame. He was named to the all-star team 11 times. He is the only player to win the Most Valuable Player award in both leagues.

He became the first black man to manage in the majors. Late in 1974, he was traded by Baltimore to the Cleveland Indians and named to manage the team, starting in 1975. He held the post until June 18, 1977 when he was released. He had a fling last year at managing Rochester in triple-A International League but was not rehired after a losing season. He rejoined the Orioles as a coach.

"I don't intend to be a coach the rest of my life," he said. "If nothing comes my way, I must look somewhere else."

"Robby got a bad deal at both Cleveland and Rochester," an Oriole spokesman said. "He did a good job at both places with lousy material. I think the trouble was a clash of personalities."

Robinson indicates the motives ran deeper. They probably, he hints, had to do with the color of his skin.

"There are so many outstanding black guys in baseball who would make good managers," he insisted. "Maury Wills, Bill White, Larry Doby ... I don't like to name anybody because I'd leave some worthy person out. But the talent is out there. It ought to be tapped."

For years, baseball men plugged the Dodgers' late Jim "Junior" Gilliam as prime managerial material. People wondered why Hank Aaron, Ernie Banks and Willie Mays never got more than token front office posts.

Aaron, the home run king, never gave a hint that he had dugout aspirations. Hall of Famer Ernie Banks was regarded as too much of a "rah rah guy." Mays said, "I couldn't stand to manage — I'd be itching to play."

Frank Robinson is an exception. As a player, he was an inspirational leader, called "The Judge" by his teammates. Like Jackie Robinson, he is gutsy, strong-willed, respected, not afraid to be disliked.

He is managerial stuff. And he has a legitimate gripe.

Raiders Earn Doubleheader Split

The Texas Tech baseball team finally got a little co-operation from the unpredicable Lubbock climate Sunday afternoon and was able to complete it's homestand with the Texas Christian Horned Frogs.

Tech split the doubleheader with it's visitors, winning the first game 14-8 and dropping the nightcap 8-1, and defeated TCU 2-1 in the series.

The Raiders now head for the Dallas-Ft. Worth area for a seven game series. Tech will face the University of Texas at Arlington in a single game today at 3 p.m. Again the Raiders will meet UTA Tuesday in a doubleheader and then for a single game on Wednesday.

On Friday Tech will begin a three-game stand at Southern Methodist in an important Southwest Conference series. The Raiders are currently 4-5 in SWC play and 9-8 overall.

In the first game Sunday the Raiders took command early, scoring five runs in the first and three more in the second. The big blow came from Rusty Laughlin who smashed a three run homer in the first.

Besides Laughlin, Brooks Wallace drove in three runs for Tech and the Raiders got big plate performances from Larry Selby, John Keller and Randy Newton. They each had three hits in the high-scoring affair.

Tech led 14-1 going into the final frame but the Froggies exploded for seven runs in the final frame. Don Peterson slammed a grand slam in that wild inning.

TCU must have been buoyed by that strong finish in the opener because the Frogs took command of the second game from the outset. They scored once in the first, twice in the second and were never threated by the Raiders.

Scott Leimgruber drove in Tech's only run in the seventh.

Glen Pierce went the full nine innings for TCU, picking up his second win of the year and limiting the Raiders to only six hits. The Frogs now own a 3-3 SWC slate and are 13-8 on the year.

Mark Johnston was the winner for Tech in the opener, he's now 3-0 on the year. Steve Ibarguen was the loser in the nightcap, he dropped to 1-3.

prohibiting bumping the receivers downfield, but the Steelers have benefitted as much or more than the Cowboys. It has turned Lynn Swann loose on the hapless secondary men throughout the league.

The good teams will win most of their games, regardless of changes in the rules. Tex often has said that you cannot legislate equality and, being with a winner, he doesn't even want to try.

CHANGES IN ROSTER procedures will not get much attention from the fans, but they probably will have more impact on the championship races than the revised playing rules. The league has simplified matters for coaches, no matter how complex it sounds.

Now, thankfully, coaches will not have to go through that farce on the final squad cutdown before opening the regular season. Under the previous rule, they had to cut to 43 men, then later add two more who had gone through the waiver routine.

The idea was that the cut to 43 would give the have-not teams a chance to grab some talent from the big boys, since a coach presumably would retain his best prospects as long as possible.

But it didn't work out like that. The coaches cut some good players early, so they could hide them on the waiver list with the free agents from Panhandle State and Missouri Western. They also put a lot of players on injured reserve, rather than lose them to an opponent via the waiver route.

Now the coaches can cut to 45 players without the shenanigans and activate as many as three from the injured reserve list during the season.

THE COWBOYS WOULD have been helped by that procedure last season. Two of their top three draft choices, Todd Christensen and David Hudgens, were injured in training camp and had to be placed on the reserve list. That sidelined them for all of 1978, even though they were ready to play by mid-season.

The Cowboys also had to put tight end and special teams captain Jay Saldi on injured reserve when he broke an arm early in the schedule. He was physically able to play again just eight weeks later, in time for the stretch drive and the playoffs. But he had to watch from the sidelines while the Cowboys called a 38-year-old veteran out of retirement.

The owners and the Competition Committee have come up with a winner, it would seem.

Soccer Players Get Dope Tests

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — A select group of doctors, lawyers and soccer experts has been set up by the European Football Union, UEFA, to make spot doping checks before major European matches, the organization announced Monday.

A UEFA bulletin said the group's executive committee decided in Bucharest earlier this month to form the commission to make possible checks "at important UEFA matches."

UEFA press chief Rudi Rothenbuhler said the formation of the commission was not yet complete. He said it was hoped to publish a full list of members within two weeks.

Rothenbuhler declined to reveal the names of any members of the commission, but he said the group would include experts from both western and eastern European nations.

Hurt Pitcher Due Exam

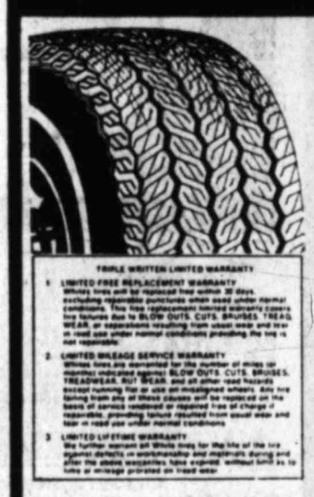

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — San Francisco Giants pitcher Greg Minton, in obvious pain and facing a career crisis from a mysteriously locked left knee, was scheduled to to be examined today by a Los Angeles orthopedic surgeon, Dr. Richard Kerlan, a specialist in athletic injuries.

Team doctors fear Minton, 27, who had a 7-4 record in 1978, may have suffered ligament damage which would require surgery.

Minton injured his knee a week ago after stumbling on a follow through during a spring training game.

Clippers Sailing Into NBA Playoffs

By The Associated Press

The San Diego Clippers haven't even clinched a National Basketball Association playoff berth yet but they're thinking bigger and better things.

"This team can go all the way," said Lloyd Free, who scored 15 of his game-high 31 points in the fourth period Sunday as the Clippers beat the New Jersey Nets 110-98. "I still don't think we're being taken seriously by everyone, but we're serious."

The triumph was the fifth in a row for the Clippers, who have won 13 of their last 14 games and 11 straight at home. The Nets have dropped five in a row and nine of 11.

The Clippers, who are locked in a battle with the Denver Nuggets and Portland Trail Blazers for the final two playoff berths in the Western Conference, led all the way, moving out to a 34-17 lead after one quarter when the Nets made only eight of 29 shots.

"This team started off playing better on the road than at home," Free said. "Then, all of a sudden we got tough at home and we're still tough. The reason we're so tough at home is we've established our offense early in the game and set the pace from then on."

New Jersey pulled to within three pkints late in the third quarter but rookie Freeman Williams led an 11-4 San Diego surge.

San Diego Coach Gene Shue had words of praise for Williams, who scored 15 points in 16 minutes.

"Freeman has been an outstanding offensive guard for us," Coach Gene Shue said of the rookie from Portland State, who was the nation's top collegiate scorer a year ago. "He's all that we expected and he's continually working on his defense. He has the tools to become one of the stars of the NBA."

Elsewhere, the Milwaukee Bucks whipped the San Antonio Spurs 147-127, the Washington Bullets outshot the Cleveland Cavaliers 126-112, the Kansas City Kings downed the Chicago Bulls 114-103, the New Orleans Jazz shaded the Phoenix Suns 121-117, the Los Angeles Lakers trimmed the Boston Celtics 122-111 and the Philadelphia 76ers trounced the New York Knicks 106-90.

Bucks 147, Spurs 127

Marques Johnson scored 34 points and Milwaukee pulled away in the second half. "We had a real non-effort in the second half," San Antonio Coach Doug Moe said of the Spurs' third consecutive setback. "For three games we've been struggling. If you're not after it 100 percent, you're not going to win games like this."

The Bucks scored 10 of the first 12 second-half points — six by Brian Winters, who finished with 25 — to pull away from a 67-66 halftime edge. Milwaukee then ran off nine straight points to build the lead to 89-74.

Bullets 126, Cavaliers 112

Bobby Dandridge and Elvin Hayes scored 24 points apiece snd Wes Unseld added 20 as Washington raised its home record to 27-7. The Bullets broke the game open midway through the third period, scoring nine straight points to pull away from a 72-72 tie. Both coaches, Dick Motta of Washington and Bill Fitch of Cleveland, were ejected in the opening period. Campy Russell led the Cavaliers with 35 points.

Kings 114, Bulls 103

Kansas City got 24 points from Bill Robinzine and 15 from Sam Lacey. It was the Kings' second straight triumph after losing seven of eight. "The more we play together, the better we're going to play," said reserve guard Lucius Allen, who contributed 10 points. "We got together and played like a basketball team today. We were shell-shocked there for a while."

Jazz 121, Suns 117

Jimmy McElroy scored 33 points and Rich Kelley grabbed 16 of his 20 rebounds in the second half. The Suns led 91-90 after three quarters but Kelley scored eight points in a row and the Jazz never trailed after that. The Suns got 29 points apiece from Walter Davis and Paul Westphal. Spencer Haywood scored 27 and Kelley added 20 for the Jazz. McElroy had 10 assists to go along with his game-high scoring.

Lakers 122, Celtics 111

Jamaal Wilkes scored 24 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 16 and pulled down a season-high 25 rebounds for Los Angeles, which led 50-49 at halftime and blew the game open by scoring 18 of first 24 points in the third quarter. Norm Nixon tallied 23 points and was credited with 10 assists for Los Angeles.

76ers 106, Knicks 90

Darryl Dawkins scored 29 points for Philadelphia and Steve Mix added 21. The lead changed hands 16 times before Doug Collins canned a pair of free throws 2:28 before the intermission to give Philadelphia the lead for good at 45-44. Ray Williams topped the Knicks with 27 points.

ANNOUNCING AN IBM SEMINAR ON SMALL COMPUTERS

If you're in charge of any kind of business, you've probably thought about how a computer could help with your expanding information needs.

Well, now there's a free IBM seminar designed for businessmen just like you. It features a discussion of the applications and benefits of IBM's small computers.

Small computers can handle a wide range of important jobs, including order entry, invoicing, receivables, payroll sales analysis, and inventory management to name just a few.

There are small, easy-to-use, low-cost IBM computers for the first-time user, available with programming already written for over twenty different industries. And there are small IBM computers that can be programmed specifically for your use.

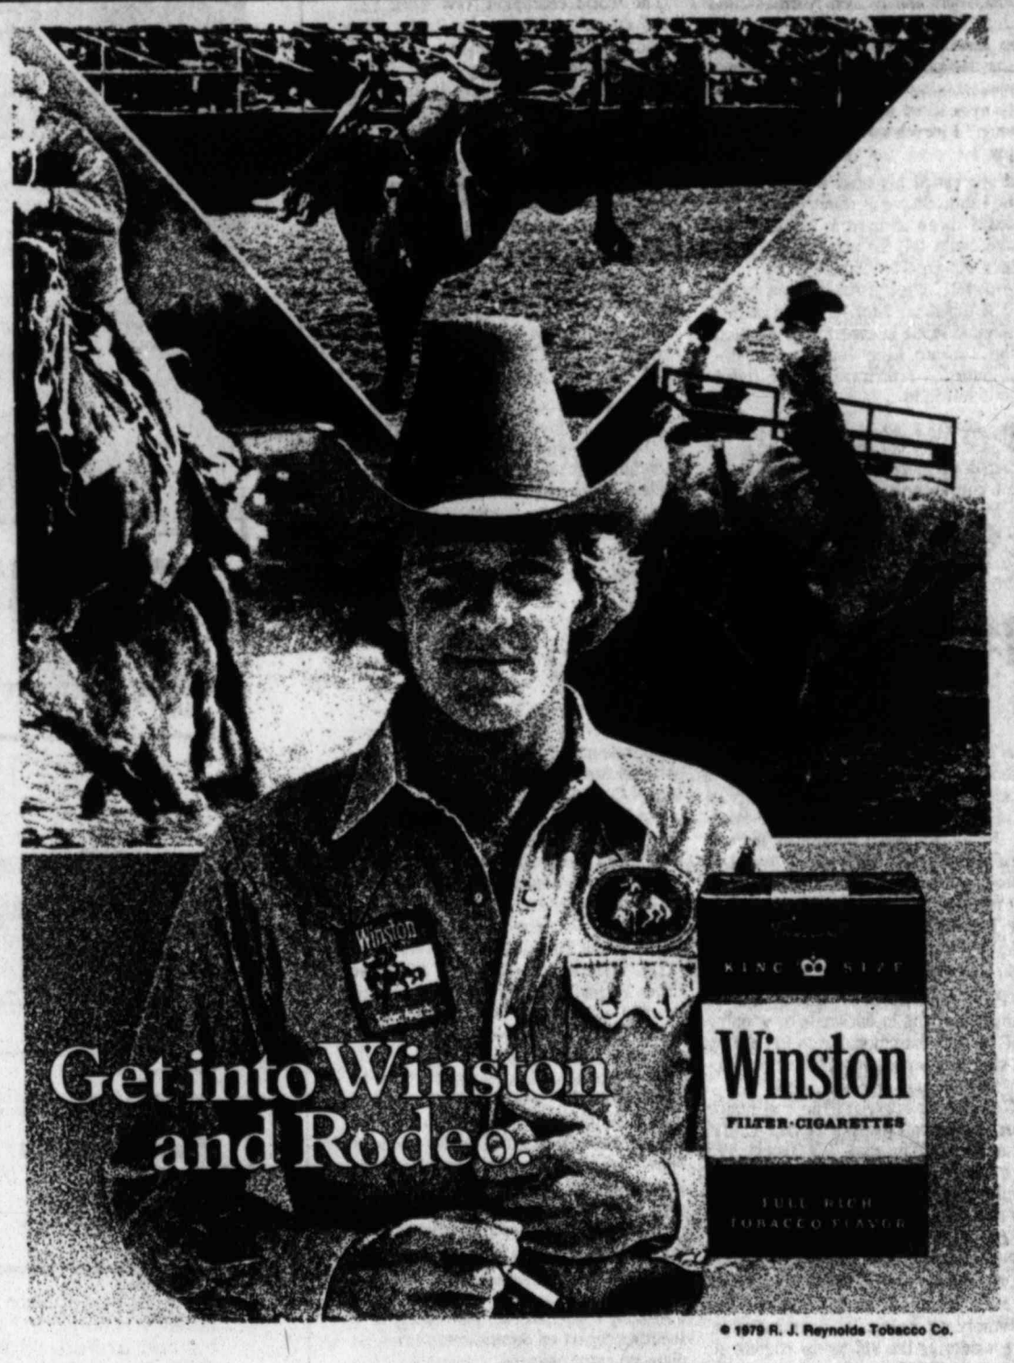

But whatever your data processing requirements, the IBM seminar on small computers can help you with the kind of basic information you need to make an informed decision about the role of a computer in your business.

If you'd like to attend this free IBM seminar, call your Lubbock —IBM General Systems Division Office ... Ask for Ronna Davis to reserve a seat.

Bird Winds Up Wing For Frame

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Mark "The Bird" Fidrych finally threw his first pitch of the spring Sunday and Pete Rose finally got his first hit.

The Philadelphia Phillies really weren't worried about Rose, who has 3,164 career hits and a .310 lifetime average. But the Detroit Tigers were awfully concerned — and probably still are — about the sore-armed Fidrych.

The Bird, who has been plagued by arm problems since he was the American League's Rookie of the Year in 1976, pitched in a game for the first time in eight months. Only an exhibition game, to be sure, but an encouraging outing nevertheless.

Fidrych worked the sixth inning of the Tigers' 14-inning 4-4 tie with the Texas Rangers. He threw all fast balls and retired the side on nine pitches — Jim Sundberg flied out, Mike Jorgensen grounded out and Nelson Norman flied out.

The Lakeland, Fla., crowd gave the popular 24-year-old right-hander a standing ovation.

"My eyes filled up when they started clapping," Fidrych said. "I felt happiness and joy."

Fidrych called his brief outing "okay. Maybe I didn't have as much control as I wanted. I threw as hard as I could." He said he could tell his arm felt good because "both arms feel equal."

Meanwhile, after grounding out twice, Rose snapped an 0-for-18 slump with a fifth-inning single in the Phillies' 12-4 loss to the Toronto Blue Jays at Dunedin, Fla., lining a 1-2 pitch from Jesse Jefferson into left field.

"It's always good to get the first hit," Rose said. "I'm not really worried about hitting down here early in spring training. I concentrate on trying to see the ball, make contact and not strike out. I'm feeling better and better each day. I just need to get more work hitting in the cage.

"You never really get enough batting practice. Play three, four, five innings, get up two or three times. That's why I'd rather not make some of these trips. I'd rather stay back and take a couple of hours batting practice.

"The fact that I'm playing a new position (first base) and I'm concentrating on taking different types of throws, I haven't had an opportunity to pay too much attention to my offense."

However, the Blue Jays unloaded on Steve Carlton and Rawly Eastwick, getting three-run homers from Otto Velez and Rick Bosetti and a solo shot by Dave McKay.

Elsewhere, Oakland's Mike Norris, still trying to battle back from a 1975 shoulder operation, allowed one hit in six innings as the A's beat the Chicago Cubs 7-4. The Cubs also signed first baseman Bill Buckner to a five-year contract extension for an estimated $1.3 million.

The world champion New York Yankees' dismal spring showing finally got to owner George Steinbrenner by losing for the 10th time in 11 outings, dropping an embarrassing 3-2 decision to the New York Mets when ex-Yankee Elliott Maddox singled home the winning run in the seventh inning.

That triggered a Steinbrenner crackdown on violators of the club's 1 a.m. curfew. "I'm not alarmed or upset," he said, "but every once in a while you've got to tighten the screws, and I think the time has come for us."

Gary Carter socked a three-run homer and Ross Grimsley pitched six scoreless innings, leading the Montreal Expos over the Los Angeles Dodgers 7-1.

The Minnesota Twins overcame a grand slam homer by Boston's Jim Rice in the first inning and beat the Red Sox 6-4 behind the shutout relief pitching of Pete Redfern and Mike Bacsik and Willie Norwood's two-run homer.

Dave Parker drove in three runs with a pair of homers as the Pittsburgh Pirates downed the Baltimore Orioles 5-2.

WTC In Nationals

By TONY BATT

SNYDER — Western Texas College doesn't buy the theory that dynasties in college basketball are a thing of the past.

The Westerners, champs of the Western Junior College Conference for five consecutive years and ranked twentieth in the latest national poll, will take their 32-3 record into the National Junior College Tournament in Hutchinson, Kansas and play tenth-ranked Southeastern Iowa (29-2) Tuesday at 9:30 p.m.

WTC earned its berth among the 16 teams competing in nationals by winning the Region 5 championship in Big Spring and knocking off Region 14 champ Panola last Wednesday in Waco, 68-66.

"We consider ourselves the best junior college basketball team in Texas," Coach Nolan Richardson said. "It seems like the other schools in our conference are recruiting now just to knock us off."

In the eight years WTC has been eligible for the national tournament, the Westerners have made it four times, winning the championship in 1975. This will mark the third consecutive trip for the Westerners to nationals, a remarkable feat considering the 915 teams eligible at the beginning of the season.

"We have a young team that has developed a lot of poise," Richardson said "The players are playing with the kind of composure you see on the major college level."

Against Southeastern Iowa, Richardson plans to start Dwight Williams, a 5-9 sophomore from El Paso, and Joe Mendoza, a 6-5 sophomore from El Paso, in the backcourt. On the front line, Richardson intends to go with Greg Stewart, a 6-9 freshman from the Bronx, Paul Pressey, a 6-5 freshman from Richmond, Va., and Michael Smith, a 6-4 native of Wilmington, N.C.

But Richardson considers his bench to be the team's strongest asset. He will not hesitate to use 11 men in a game. Melvin Patrick, a 6-5 sophomore from El Paso and Dale Patterson, a 6-4 freshman from Harrisburg, Pa., are two of the subs sure to see action Tuesday night.

The various hometowns on the Westerner roster attest to the thorough recruiting job Richardson has done in his two years at WTC. The bottom line is a two-year coaching record of 62-11.

Richardson gets many recruits from El Paso, where he played at UTEP. He also spends time on the phone to lure schoolboy players from such exotic spots as New York City. He admits to a Don Haskins influence, but insists that he has his own style in coaching.

"My coaching philosophy is what I call the PRE style. Press, run and execute. I don't stress defense as much as Haskins does."

Although Richardson has received a scouting report on Southeastern Iowa, he plans no great changes.

Tradition is a big thing at our school," he explained.

TODAY'S STOCK PRICES

Stock Mart Gathers Strength

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market rose today, continuing to gather strength from robust performances by oil company issues.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial issues was up 4.77 to 857.59 at noon, continuing the surge that added 9.96 points to the Dow last week.

Advancing issues outnumbered those that declined by better than 2-1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts said the oil issues were being helped along by speculation about President Carter's meeting today with several senior aides to discuss energy and the economy. In addition to formulating ways to deal with possible energy problems and rising inflation, the group is expected to consider plans to decontrol crude oil prices, which would be a boon to oil company profits.

The market also was encouraged by the news that Israeli cabinet had given its approval to the Arab-Israeli peace treaty, paving the way to a possible signing of the pact within a week. But analysts expressed uneasiness about the hostility shown the treaty by some Arab nations.

Gulf Oil led the most-active list, up ¼ to 27. A 150,000-share block traded at that price.

The NYSE's composite index of more than 1,500 common stocks was up .27 to 56.82 at noon. On the American Stock Exchange, the market value index gained 1.50 to 174.27.

Noon volume on the Big Board was 15.48 million shares, compared to 11.98 million shares at the same point in Friday's session.

Among the oil issues, Texaco was up ½ to 26¾, Occidental Petroleum rose ⅜ to 21¼, Standard Oil of Ohio went up 1 to 51¼ and Exxon gained ¼ to 54¼. On the American Stock Exchange, Houston Oil & Minerals rose ⅝ to 18½.

English Treat Benji Like Ordinary Dog

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Benji, the rag tag movie-TV mutt, is definitely an underdog in an off-screen battle royal with the British lion.

Benji wants to work in London but the English are treating him as if he were an ordinary flea-ridden cur looking for a handout.

Her Majesty's authorities won't allow Benji entry unless he wastes away in a quarantine cage for six months like any other canine.

The British are very stiff upper-lipped about allowing any dog into their tight little islands for the excellent reason there's never been an outbreak of rabies in that nation.

On the other hand, Benji is not just any dog. He is a genuine, gold-plated star. So was Lassie and she never got around the tough British quarantine restrictions at the height of her popularity.

Closest anyone has come to beating the restrictions was Elizabeth Taylor in her heyday with Richard Burton. They parked their yacht in the middle of the Thames in the heart of London.

Aboard were several of Elizabeth's pampered pooches. The Crown solemnly announced Miss Taylor's pets could remain on board provided they didn't set paw on sovereign ground.

There was some sort of brouhaha when the actress or one of her janizaries attempted to smuggle one of the little darlings ashore just for the hell of it. But the British, perhaps the most ardent dog lovers of all civilized nations — excepting those where dog is not an uncommon menu item — were not amused.

Benji is not in the battle alone. Most of the fight, in fact, is being waged by Joe Camp, president of Mulberry Square Productions, who is producing Benji's third film, "Oh Heavenly Dog."

Camp, a Tennessean whose film headquarters are in Dallas, produced "Benji" four years ago and has since made the lovable mutt a $75 million property, including movies, TV, merchandising, personal apiearances et al.

While Benji is owned by animal trainer Frank Inn, the name Benji belongs to Camp who works closely with Inn in promoting and developing the dog's interests.

In "Oh Heavenly Dog," Benji portrays another dog, not himself. Not that he will extend himself to portraying a Doberman pinscher or Russian wolfhound. He will still look like Benji but assume a different personality.

"You could say Benji is branching out," said Camp. "The story was written with an English setting and we want very much to shoot the picture there. So far the British have been implacable about making Benji take the six-month quarantine.

"They're afraid of setting a precedent. If they bend the rules for Benji, they're afraid they'd open the floodgates for all dogs.

"We're trying to convince the ministry of agriculture that Benji is different because he's a working dog, not a pet. Making a $6 million picture in England would be an economic boon to the country.

"We've offered to pay a quarantine officer to spend the next six months with Benji here in the United States to guarantee that he doesn't come in contact with any rabid animals and to make sure his vaccinations are proper.

"If they allow him in England, we'd guarantee he would not leave Elstree Studios except for predetermined locations and that Benji would have no contact with other animals or human beings except those involved in the film.

"It wouldn't cost England a dime for their quarantine officers. We'd pay for everything. As for precedent, we said if we met all these prerequisites, then others would have to do the same. And how many people would go to that much trouble and expense to bring a dog into England?"

Why, Camp was asked, doesn't he just ship Benji to England now and let him suffer through the quarantine?

The bespectacled producer was aghast. Would we ask Sir Laurence Olivier to hang out at Ellis Island for six months? Would we demand a saliva test of Anwar Sadat's camels?

One must keep in mind that Benji is a star. Between now and the time his new movie begins Benji has many personal appearance dates and preparations dor two television specials. He also is undergoing training for his new role.

Outstanding Acting, Direction Make 'Spokesong' Worth Seeing

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — If you're up for a lively night of Gaelic whimsy, song, the broods, despair, courage and often brilliant bits of humor, go inspect a new two-wheeler play called "Spokesong" here.

It's set in and around a bicycle shop in troubled Belfast, Ireland, ranges from the early 1970s to the late 1800s, and officially rolled in Thursday at the midtown Circle in the Square theater.

It's flawed, but features superb acting by Tony-award winner John Lithgow, Virginia Vestoff and Joseph Maher, with fine emoting also provided by John Horton, Maria Tucci and Josef Sommer.

Its start is deceptively simple. Public hearings are to be held about a planned motorway through downtown Belfast. The road would require demolition of many old buildings there.

Such angers Frank (Lithgow), a young, pixie-humor guy who runs a bike shop his grandfather (Sommer) began in 1895. His shop would be torn down for the road, for "the commuters, the gabardine swine."

He's anti-car, pro-bicycle. As he boozily notes later, "You can't despair for the human race when you see someone on a bicycle."

The richly textured play, by Belfast-born Stewart Parker, pedals through eras, mixes them at times, from 1895 innocence to World War I follies to the fear, love and violence of modern Belfast.

We see Frank fall in love with Daisy (Vestoff), a lovely, red-haired teacher with a bike needing restoration. To her, he outlines his plan to beat the motorway: The city should provide 50,000 free bikes.

We learn his folks died in the Nazi bombing of London in World War II. And that he has a brother, Julian (Horton), a shallow, glib journalist based in London and in town to report on bloody Belfast.

On the yesteryear front, we learn his grandad met and wed a pioneer feminist (Tucci), but not before she archly informed him: "I have resolved not to give the world a child until it gives me the vote."

Maher, a silver-haired veteran actor, serves to link eras with bits of song, and as various characters in each era — a minister, an Army officer, a hood, a magician and more.

The dialogue, like that to be heard in Irish pubs, gets morbidly funny at times, as when a pet shop across the street from Frank's store is bombed. Julian reports, almost rhapsodically:

"For one magic moment, it was raining real cats and dogs."

It gets wry, too: Daisy enters Frank's shop, obviously with bad news, and he sighs: "It hasn't been my day this year."

The plot — well, there's love, a wildly comic Army bicycle drill, brotherly hate, treachery, extortion, hope and boos for progress.

With crisp direction by Kenneth Frankel, the first act is light and gay, the second is progressive gloom with glittering dialogue, and the finale is upbeat, puzzling and not at all convincing.

In 1969, European industries and services were paralyzed by a major epidemic of influenza.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Monday, March 19, the 78th day of 1979 with 287 to follow.

The moon is approaching its last quarter.

The morning stars are Venus and Mars.

The evening stars are Mercury, Saturn and Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Pisces.

Famed Scottish explorer David Livingstone was born March 19, 1813.

On this day in history:

In 1906, the last word in modern hotel appointments was found at the new Hotel Traymore In Atlantic City, N.J., which advertized: "Twenty-five private baths; capacity 450."

In 1917, the United States Supreme Court ruled the Adamson Act was constitutional. It provided for an eight-hour workday on American railroads.

In 1920, the Versailles Treaty establishing the League of Nations was rejected by the United States Senate.

In 1942, all men in the United States between the ages of 45 and 64 — about 13 million — were ordered to register with the draft boards for non-military duty.

A thought for the day:

Three-time presidential nominee William Jennings Bryan, born on this day in 1860, once said, "The humblest of all the land, when clad in the armor of a righteous cause, is stronger than all the hosts of error."

'Maude' Finally Dies Despite Changes In Actors, Storylines

By PETER J. BOYER

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Remember Bea Arthur as "Maude," the kneejerk liberal who preferred serving causes to serving breakfast? Well, a funny thing happened to "Maude."

In a weird metamorphasis, "Maude" became three other shows, and its last incarnation was killed just three days before airdate by a group of black congressmen. It died in the name of social conscience, axed because it didn't present a proper image of blacks.

Sounds strange. It is strange.

Consider the peculiar case of "Maude," also known at various stages of its metamorphasis as "Onward and Upward," "Mr. Dooley" and "Mr. Dugan":

When last seen, at the end of the '77-78 TV season, "Maude" had been elected to Congress. The show was to be totally revamped for the new season, with Maude in Washington as a bull-in-the-China-shop freshman congresswoman.

But Bea Arthur decided that, after six years as "Maude," she'd had enough of television for awhile. She wanted out.

But CBS and Norman Lear's TAT Productions, which made "Maude," decided they liked the idea of a renegade minority congressman, and decided to do the show without Bea Arthur.

So, instead of a sitcom about a liberal housewife elected to Congress, CBS had a show about a black football player elected to Congress. This was the "Onward and Upward" stage of "Maude," and it starred John Amos.

Amos, you might recall, was the actor who walked out on Lear's "Good Times" three seasons ago. He did it again this winter, walking out on "Onward and Upward." That gave way to "Mr. Dooley."

But "Mr. Dooley," it seemed, was the name of a popular newspaper column, and to avoid possible legal complications, "Mr. Dooley" became "Mr. Dugan." Cleavon Little became the football hero-turned-congressman, and "Mr. Dugan" seemed set to go.

This is where the social concience comes in. One week before "Mr. Dugan" was to air on CBS, TAT Productions screened the show for "a dozen black friends." The dozen black friends had reservations about the show.

So, on March 6, five days before airdate, Lear, TAT President Alan Horn and Marguerite Archie, the show's technical adviser, flew to Washington, D.C., to show "Mr. Dugan" to the congressional Black Caucus. Thumbs down again.

On March 8, three days before airdate, TAT announced it would not deliver "Mr. Dugan" to CBS. The network, which had heavily promoted the show in on-air spots, said it was prepared to broadcast "Mr. Dugan," but TAT said no-go.

How did this happen?

"We simply made a mistake," say Horn. "Our objective was that ... a black congressman would be portrayed in a positive and meaningful way. Evidently, we were not attentive enough to that.

"The way it came off, in the final product, was that the congressman's staff looked like they were pushing him around too much. It made the congressman look a bit buffoonish, and we were not pleased with it.

"We simply made a mistake."

So, after four transformations, three actors and two storylines, the sundry incarnations of "Maude" finally died.

Gee, and I thought all a show had to do to get canceled was get lousy Nielsen ratings.

Feds Risk Breaking Security

MILWAUKEE (UPI) — To prove a threat to national security, the federal government runs the risk of disclosing what it is trying to keep secret while trying to stop The Progressive magazine's article on the workings of the hydrogen bomb, an officiel of a national journalism group says.

"How does the government prove within our system there is a real danger in this article without revealing to the public the information itself," Scott Aiken of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi, said recently.

The judge could hold hearings in secret, Aiken said, "and that in itself goes against the basic nature of the system."

"I think it is up to the government in open court to prove this article, in fact, would tell non H-bomb powers how to put one of those infernal devices together."

The case may become the second court test of the priorities of constitutionally guaranteed freedom of the press vs. national security considerations. The government lost the first test in the Pentagon Papers case of 1971.

The Progressive magazine, published in Madison, and freelance writer Howard Morland last Friday were temporarily restrained from disclosing the article's content or talking about its contents.

The magazine editor, Irwin Knoll, says that is "peposterous," that the information in the article could be gathered by ay competent journalist and that the government is trying to "throttle the press."

James Schlesinger, secretary of the Energy Department, said in a deposition that publication of the article could step up the threat of thermonuclear war.

Aiken, chairman of Sigma Delta Chi's freedom of information committee, and the Milwaukee Journal in an editorial warned both The Progressive and federal Judge Robert Warren not to act hastily.

"If the evidence is clearly sufficient, we trust The Progressive will not pursue the case further," the newspaper said. "If the editors misjudge — perhaps because of insufficient technical advice as to whether the article could cause grave harm — they could lose the case in such a way that a damaging precedent could be set for future censorship."

Aiken said: "Society has to insist on constitutional processes being respected and that means a hearing on the merits."

However, he said he wondered why the magazine decided to ask the government to read the article if its editors were sure they had not stumbled onto some priority secrets.

DR. LAMB

Skin Problems

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — As common as this problem may sound, I have yet to get any helpful advice for it, and I would appreciate any you may have.

My daughter is 12 now and is moving into teen-age skin problems. I have tried several of the skin products on the market advertised for teen-age problems but nothing seems to work. My daughter washes her hair every day since most of her problem is in her forehead and around her hairline. She also uses alcohol after washing her face. Is there anything she can do to help keep blemishes under control until she outgrows this problem?

DEAR READER — As you know, acne or pimples and such related conditions commonly occur at puberty in both boys and girls. It is severe more frequently in boys than it is in girls, but both sexes have their problems. It's directly related to the active sex glands and the formation of sex hormones beginning at that stage of life.

The skin undergoes a lot of changes. Literally, parts of it get a lot greasier because of the oily skin glands start secreting a lot of oil. Those oil glands are really sex glands. And you're right, the forehead area is a favorite location.

It sounds to me like your're doing about as much as you can expect to accomplish on your own. For additional help, you will probably have to take your daughter to a doctor. There are basically three approaches to solving these problems, all of which may be necessary in in difficult cases.

The first is to try to prevent the oily skin glands fromm secreting so much oil — to literally dry up the skin. Of course, simply washing the oil away and using alcohol is a help, but sometimes that's not enough.

The second approach is to improve the proper drainage of these oily glands so they won't cause acne and skin blemishes. This may involve using a skin peeling agent which literally peels off the surface of the skin, and in so doing opens the drainage of the oily glands. A good example here is vitamin A acid, a prescription item which can be applied to the surface of the skin.

By the way, it's not the same thing as the vitamin A you swallow, so I'm certainly not recommending taking vitamin A as a treatment for acne. Some cases of vitamin A toxicity have been reported in teen-agers who took large amounts, thinking vitamin A would cure their acne. It won't.

The third approach is to eliminate tiny bacteria that live in the pores of the oil glands. That's why the tetracyclines are used. These bacteria split the fat that's formed by the oily gland and in so doing cause the fat to become an irritating chemical. This is part of what causes the inflammatory reaction of the skin.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 8-2, Acne Can Be Treated. Other readers who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

I hope you get some help from this information but I would, again, strongly advise that you take your daughter to your doctor so she can have medical supervision in controling her acne problem. Adequate treatment at this age in life can prevent scarring and problems that could concern her for the rest of her life.

CBS Executive Given Special Polk Award

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS News President Richard S. Salant called on the media Wednesday to fight "vigorously and sensibly" for freedom of the press.

Salant, who will retire in a month after 16 years as head of CBS News, spoke at the 31st George Polk Awards luncheon where he was presented a special award for a career distinguished by concern for integrity and independence in newsgathering.

The awards were established by Long Island University in memory of a CBS correspondent who was murdered in 1948 during the Greek Civil War while trying to reach a guerrilla leader for an interview.

"What the tragedy of George Polk reminds us is that the time is now, and we must fight and speak both vigorously and sensibly," Salant said. "And then use our freedoms as conscientiously and as wisely as we know how."

Two of the Polk Awards presented by Donald H. Elliott, chairman of LIU's board of trustees, were made posthumously to NBC News correspondent Don Harris and his television cameraman, Bob Brown, who were killed while covering the Jonestown, Guyana, slaying of Rep. Leo Ryan of California.

The News Photography Award went to Eddie Adams of The Associated Press for covering the civil war in Rhodesia. It was his third Polk Award.

The Public Service Reporting Award went to Jane Shoemaker, Thomas Ferrick Jr. and William Ecenbarger of the Philadelphia Inquirer for investigation of corruption in the Pennsylvania state Legislature.

Other awards went to John F. Burns, John Darnton and Michael T. Kaufman of The New York Times, for foreign reporting; Ronald Kessler of The Washington Star, national reporting; The Dallas Times-Herald, local reporting; Russell Baker of The New York Times, commentary.

Also there were awards to Golden West Television Productions for the film documentary, "Scared Straight;" Southern Exposure, regional reporting, and The Chronicle of Higher Education, education reporting.

Microprocessors Begin Dawn Of Information Age

By JON STEWART
And JOHN MARKOFF

They are virtually invisible to the naked eye, a spider-like network of tiny lines etched on a flake of silicon less than half the size of your fingertip. Yet packed into these computers-on-a-chip — known as micoprocessors — is more computing power than was possible in the first large electronic computer, ENIAC, built in 1950.

Today, microprocessors are invading virtually every aspect of life in America. They are changing the way we work, play and even think. And a new wave of computer-on-a-chip applications and innovations is poised on the horizon. It is leading industry experts and social scientists to openly proclaim the dawn of a new social revolution, the "Information Age."

Robert Noyes, president of Intel Corporation, the world's largest producer of microprocessors, argues that the development of the microprocessor is equivalent to the development of the cotton gin or the printing press, which sparked earlier social revolutions.

"The first industrial revolution involved amplifying muscle power so that things could be physically moved more efficiently. Our revolution amplifies the ability to handle information," he says.

Already, according to government researchers like Mark Porat of the Department of Commerce's Office of Telecommunications, we are living in an "information economy." Porat's data indicates that around 1955, information-related jobs surpassed manufacturing jobs, and information activities became the dominant sector of the U.S. economy.

As a result of the invention of the microprocessor, first produced by two American high-technology corporations, Intel and Texas Instruments, a headlong rush toward more computerization and more automation is now taking place.

The computer-on-a-chip combines such amazing powers of memory and computation that it has immediate applications almost everywhere: from universities to automobile engines, from corporate offices to farms, from hospitals to satellits. Any routine work or process can now be taken over by machines controlled by a powerful microcomputer that has shrunk to less than 1/30,000 the size of its original predecessor.

The microprocessor revolution has come about so quickly that, to many, it still is mysterious. Movies like 2001: A Space Odyssey, in which an all-seeing computer turns on its human masters, and Demon Seed, a B-movie in which actress Julie Christie is raped by the world's most advanced computer, are fantasies. But they also express the fear of intellectual inadequacy that humans feel before immensely complex electronic objects.

The number of these objects around us has risen dramatically. Many Americans find themselves performing everyday tasks with the aid of tiny black boxes they know little about. In the 1950's, there were no microprocessors and only 1000 computers existed in the United States. By 1976, the number of computers had risen to 220,000 and three-quarters of a million microprocessors had been produced. By 1980, the projection is for more than 10 million microprocessors.

Behind the increase in numbers and applications has been a steady decline in both the size and the cost of microprocessors. Noyce points out that the cost has fallen by a factor of 100 in the last decade, opening vast new markets for the microprocessor industry.

For example, the American automobile industry now intends to rely almost exclusively on the microprocessor to meet federally imposed pollution standards in the 1980s.

The new microprocessor inventions will monitor the temperature and pressure of automobile engines and then provide different controls based on commands from the driver to go slower or faster. Electronic engines will have precise control of air-fuel mixtures and timing which will allow the best possible fuel economy and the lowest emissions.

"It is quite clear that the whole bet of the American automotive industry in meeting the 1980 standards for fuel efficiency rests with microprocesor control inventions," states Tom Hinkleman, vice president of California-based Semiconductor Industry Association.

First In A Series

"These devices will be universal in cars by the mid-1980s. There is just no other way of doing it," Hinkleman states.

Others think the impact will be even more far-reaching. Dr. Les Earnest, the associate director of Stanford University's Artificial Intelligence Project, says "microprocessor technology is going to change the way in which people communicate and it will facilitate them working from their homes if they choose."

Home computer terminals, he says, will be common and will make it possible for people to gain access to a wide range of information services through electronic communication networks. "These will be used for many kinds of interaction. Electronic newspapers and even classified ads will be available in the home," he says.

Working at computer terminals is already widespread in the highly techology industries. The ratio of computers to engineers at Intel is now nearly one-to-one, according to Noyce, and he feels that it will ultimately rise far above that.

Earnest says that one of the dominant uses of the home computer in the next ten years is likely to be electronic mail. He already gets an average of 25 messages a day on his computer terminal from research colleagues around the world through a Department of Defense computer network.

"What will happen is that various computer centers will have a mail service in the future. You will say, 'my mailbox is such and such a computer' and people who want to leave you mail will call up that computer from their terminal. You will be able to log in with your computer to see which messages have been left," he states.

He also feels that America is on the verge of a great mushrooming of computer information services for the home.

"Right now there are a large number of people with home computers, but these devices do not, for the most part, connect with telephone lines. Rather they do self-contained operations, like playing games and helping to calculate income tax.

"Within several years there will be a flowering of competition to offer information services of various sorts, news services, the latest television listings. You'll have little fly-by-night store front operations that will put a service on a small computer and make it available at a reasonable price."

Noyce argues that the ultimate consequence of the proliferation of microprocessors may be to make cities less important: "The consequence of the microprocessor is that the ready availability of information that now largely exists in the city can be dispersed."

But shadowing the bright future that microprocessor advocates envision are expected bitter struggles over the massive displacement of jobs they are sure to cause.

In West Germany the introduction of the microprocessor has already caused widespread layoffs in industries making teleprinters, sewing machines and cash registers. And in the well-established clock industry, employment has been cut almost in half in less than eight years through competition with less costly electronic clocks and watches.

At Volkswagen, despite the current boom in auto sales, no extra workers are being hired because of the introduction of 70 robots at one large plant.

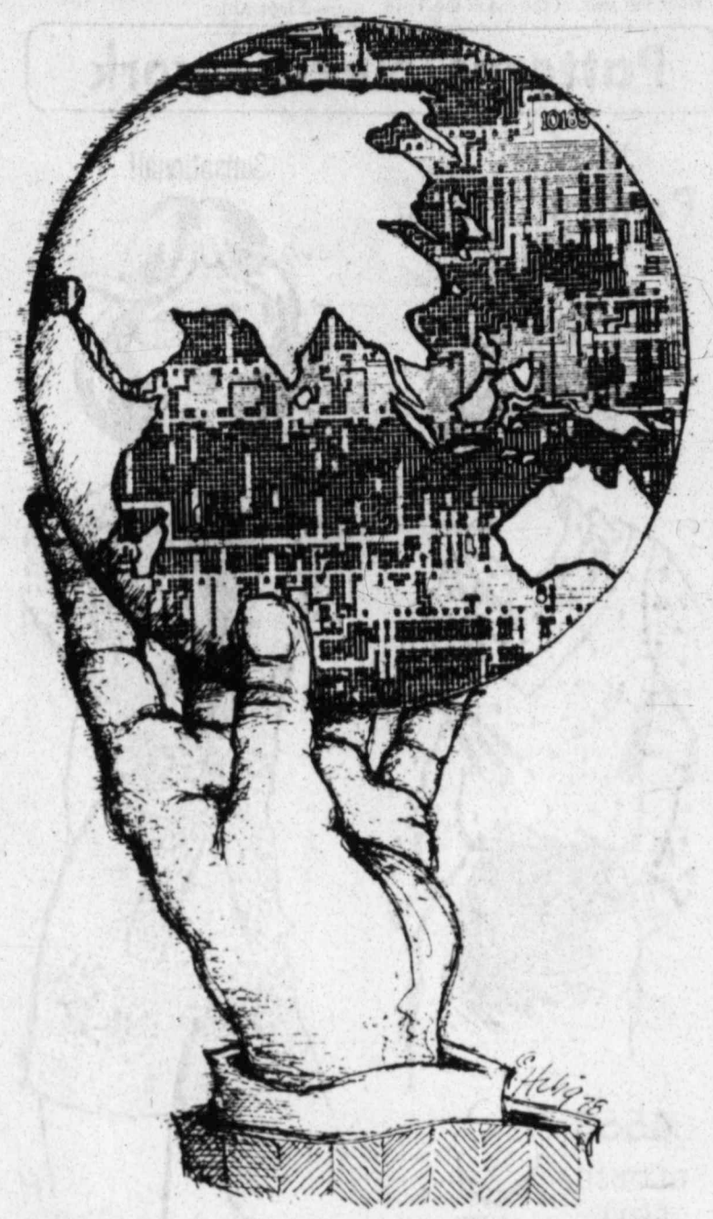

Industry, as might be expected, is taking an optimistic view of all these changes:

"Whether we see the widespread changes that are taking place in the American workplace as positive or negative in their effects depends on whose ox is being gored," says industry lobbyist Hinkleman.

"It also depends on how long a view one takes. Nobody misses the blacksmith or the buggywhip manufacturer. Today they have no real place. We have to take the longer view."

Kerosene Pinch Only Starting

By PHILIP GREER
And MYRON KANDEL

The fuel shortage that's forcing airlines into wholesale flight cancellations figures to get worse before it gets better. Although the airlines — United, TWA, Delta and National among them — have announced cutbacks only through the end of this month, sources in the oil industry say the pinch in jet fuel isn't going to ease any time soon.

The cutback was touched off by the shutdown of oil fields in Iran, at least indirectly, but it's likely to be prolonged for reasons that are mostly political and economic.

Most jets fly on JP4 fuel, which is made from kerosene. The fuel is refined from crude oil and it comes from somewhere in the middle of the refining spectrum, sandwiched in by gasoline at one end and heating oil at the other.

When refiners get their shipments of crude oil, they have to decide how to split it up into the various refined products. In order to make gasoline, for instance, they have to cut down on heating oil or other products. Sometimes, the quality of the crude itself plays a big part in determining the end product. The crude just beginning to flow again from Iran, for example, is a heavy grade, more suited to heating oil than lighter products like gasoline.

"They have to get rid of that stuff before they start shipping new oil from their fields," one source explained.

The severe winter in many parts of the country created a strong demand for heating oil. That meant the refiners had to cut down on something else, with the choice largely between gasoline and kerosene.

As oil company executives see it, they have to keep supplying gasoline (or as much as they can) for fear of a reaction from the driving public that would produce a flood of indignant letters to congressmen. Oil men can't get the idea of gasoline rationing out of their minds ("they're paranoid about rationing around here," a source at one company told us) and as long as nobody is talking about it seriously they would rather keep it that way.

That means that refining of products in the middle of the range had to be squeezed down. Kerosene is one of them and the airlines started to suffer. As a source at one big producer put it, "airline pilots have very few votes, so we don't have to worry much about them. Automobile drivers have a lot of votes and they yell loud. What's more, the common perception is that a lot of airline travel is for pleasure and non-essential, so you don't figure to get as much of a reaction from a cutback in flights."

Until recently, the oil companies were happy to produce as much kerosene as they could, for a simple economic reason. Kerosene prices are not controlled and gasoline prices are, so the profit potential was greater in kerosene.

Two weeks ago, the Department of Energy changed its rule to allow a "tilt" that's expected to drive gasoline prices up as much as 5 cents a gallon. Until now, refiners had to allocate their production costs across all their products.

Under the new rules, the costs (which are used in determining how much can be charged for gasoline) are assigned to the specific product for which they're incurred. That will lift the cost of gasoline, push up the price at the pump, eliminate much of the refiners' economic problem — and take away a small part of the incentive for turning out kerosene.

Oil people say they don't know when the supply of crude oil will again be large enough to meet the demand for all petroleum products. "They'll be lucky if it's restored by June," one observer said, adding "and if gasoline stations don't start running out before then."

There's general agreement, though, that when the kerosene starts flowing again, it's going to cost a lot more than it did before the shortage. In December, airlines paid an average of about 40 cents a gallon for jet fuel; in some places, the price now is over $1 a gallon and climbing. Several airlines have applied for fare increases to cover the higher costs.

It's likely that the chief victim of the supply and cost squeeze is going to be the discount fares that have sent airline traffic booming. Many of those plans will expire anyway as the weather warms up and pleasure travel increases — and a lot of them won't be back next year.

Inmate Escapes From Hospital

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — A prisoner, wearing only leg irons and a hospital gown, escaped from University Hospital Sunday, where he was being teated for a stomach complaint.

"I sure hope that gown was tied shut down the back," quipped Nancy Nunnley, information officer for the Oklahoma Corrections Department.

Kenneth R. Rider, 29, was able to walk away while a guard was distracted by a disturbance caused by another inmate being admitted to the hospital's security ward, Miss Nunnley said.

She said Rider was brought to the hospital Wednesday from the McAlester prison, where he was serving a 20-year sentence for armed robbery.

Running Gunbattle Leaves One Dead

HOLDEN, W.Va. (AP) — A running gunbattle through the rugged hills of West Virginia left one man dead and three police officers wounded.

Officers said the incident began Saturday afternoon when two Mingo County sheriff's deputies stopped to check a parked car near Holden, in southwestern West Virginia. Deputies said a man, accompanied by a woman, fired at them from a hillside, striking the patrol car and shattering its windshield. The first state trooper to respond to the deputies' call for help was shot in the leg. Two other troopers were wounded as they pursued the pair. The gunman, identified as Troy "Chris" Canterbury Jr., 31, of nearby Delbarton, was found dead when police closed in, and police speculated he was shot during the shootout. The woman was taken into custody.

NUTRITIOUS MEAL

Fall From Truck Saves Petunia

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Petunia the Pig met her good fortune by falling off a truck on its way to the stockyards.

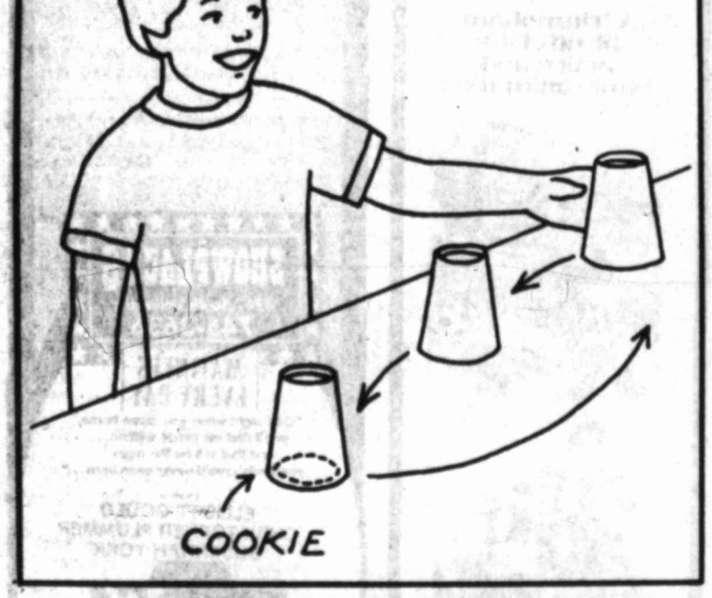

The policemen who found the 250-pound pig couldn't find the owner, so they took her to an animal hospital. Still no one claimed her and she was offered for sale at an auction.

Lloyd Moorhead, a veterinary technician at the hospital, found a soft spot in his heart for the pig.

"The fall off the truck was enough trauma for her," he said. "She's had enough misfortune."

He bid $113.50 and was awarded the pig.

He keeps her on the farm of another hospital employee. "She'll live happily ever after," he said.

Old Shell Game Becomes Magic

(c)1979, Los Angeles Times Syndicate

You've heard of the old shell game, haven't you? Here's how you can play it as a game or as a trick.

Start with three big paper cups and one cookie. Place the cookie under one of the cups and switch the cups around so that your friends can't tell which cup covers the cookie. The game is this: whoever can guess where the cookie is can keep it.

That'll be fun for your friends — but here's the way you can make it magic, and it'll be even more fun for you:

Glue a single hair from your head to the lip of one cup. No one will see it, but you can then keep your eye on where that cup is placed. Place the cookie under that cup, and then let your friends rearrange the cups as quickly as they can, trying to confuse you. Yo will always be able to tell exactly where that cookie is! It's not exactly a hair-raising trick, but it ain't bad!

Today's Brain Twister: A dead man is discovered in a room swinging from a noose. He has just hung himself: There is absolutely nothing in the room but a puddle of water on the floor. Can you figure out how the man managed to hang himself when there was nothing else in the room to stand on? (Look for the answer in tomorrow's Kids-Only Club column.)

ENDANGERED SPECIES?

Is the American farmer going the way of the Whooping Crane? We think not. Fewer in number, perhaps. But producing even more food and fiber from every acre.

Today, the American farmer feeds and clothes 58 people. He pumps billions of dollars into our economy each year. Buys nearly 20 percent of the products produced in the city. And helps balance our foreign trade payments with his exports.

Funk Seeds International is proud to salute the American farmer, not only on Agriculture Day, but 365 days each year.

As leaders committed to new product research for more than three quarters of a century, Funk's will continue to provide farmers with improved seed and agronomic assistance.
